Cleveland, O., Dec. 24, 1899.
 Clerical objections to the more realistic in bill board advertising are not well taken, since it is not the bill boards, but the stage boards that bring out the really obnoxious features. It is true, the bill board acts as magnet and feeds the susceptible mind, but the pure-minded all things are pure. Honi soit qui mal y pome, is as true of the suggestive theatrical poster as any other medium of so-called questionable import or drift. The theaters would be filled without the risque poster as attraction. The modern craves the suggestive and sensational; hence the de-naturalization of the art dramatic. You can not reform the character of the poster without first reforming the character of the plays and personae dramatic, and, better still, the human mind in general.

The spite fence may be made more attractive by painting it over with advertisements.

An itinerant billboardist removed all the Post No Bills' injunctions from a fence, and then plastered the remaining space with bills. He was duly hauled up, but proved to the satisfaction of the court that no such signs were visible. There being no witnesses that he removed the sign, he was discharged.

Decreasing revenue may ultimately induce telephone and telegraphic companies to lease their poles, or go into the advertising business themselves. The modern tendency to nothing go to waste will sooner or later strike home in this direction also.

The idea of city street waste franchises is certainly timely. These waste receptacles should be conveniently placed along the sidewalk curbs. They would furnish a new field to the ad exploiter, and ideally serve the un-systematically distributed gutter-dodger.

A few wagon manufacturers have undertaken to sell the farm-wagon privileges themselves, making it plausible to the farmer that he thus buys at a certain discount. Well, some farmers are "easy picking."

The question of placing express and moving agents in traffic-congested cities has always been a sore one. A billhoardist now offers to build a shed in a central location, equip with a perfect call-service, providing the city permits him to use the exterior of the building for advertising purposes without franchise fees. The offer looks practical, and should meet little opposition.

As a new method to carry on vehicular advertising, it is suggested to construct a trailing board over the wheels, thus practically enclosing them. The boards would thus serve two-fold purpose-as a mud-guard and advertising board. Of course, the idea must be carried out so as not to interfere with the motion of the wheels. A stout canvas may be a good substitute.

Interior street car advertising is now being generally accepted as a current medium. There is now a man who suggests a lateral frame on the outside of the cars below the roof, which may be made so ornamental as not to disharmonize the view. These signs may be illuminating or not, as per carrying out of idea. They may be placed under glass or of a material proof against the ravages of the weather. The illuminating idea, however, interests most.

A billhoardist has undertaken to supply all neck and expressmen who apply, with storm umbrellas free of charge. These umbrellas are of a water-proof material, of richly lacquered white and black, the advertisements imprinted thereon in corresponding color.

The advertising cap has gone somewhat out of use since the tobacco companies have gone out of the campaign business. Few other manufacturers ever used them as extensively, in its place, an enterprising distributor offers newspaper bag to newsboys which is weather-proof throughout and has compartments for lunch and other things. The newsies approve of the bag, for those offered by the newspapers "do not keep out the wet."

A manufacturer has come out with a dinnerail in the shape of a field flask, the lower half to be used for salads, the upper for liquids. It is roomy enough to hold the average white man's dinner, and yet looks neat and compact. It is provided with a strap and cycle attachments. There is no ad. on the merchandise, as it may be called. It can only be obtained in stores selling a certain article, and every one knows what that article is. The device is fully protected by patent rights.

The blotter advertisement business is now as perfect as the railroad folder service; in fact, it's become part of the latter service.

Calendar or almanac advertising is not nearly so popular as a few years ago, the insurance and patent medicine factors alone verdoing the thing. The decadence is chiefly due to the flood of cheap productions of no specific character. They were calendars—that's all. The houses sending out really artistic things, with the advertisement assimilated without offending the critical eye or bringing out the fist-on-the-eye view, are still popular, and have at least one chance in ten of being preserved, or holding their positions in the home, office, store or factory for the year they present. The oneness in calendars is doomed. Cleverly executed original ideas of compact form and handy, is what is wanted in the calendar line for all purposes.

A distributor offers to furnish stained glass transoms, which automatically display the month, day and date. The glass is furnished by a manufacturer co-operating in the scheme on shares.

A distributor has obtained a permit from the Council to trot through the streets, advertising charlottes drawn by goats, reindeers and dogs, handsomely togged up with advertising mantles, headpieces, breast shields and such. The animals are warranted to be humanely broken in and used.

Theater entrances ought to be portcoled over the sidewalks to distinguish them from the common facade line.

One of the surest and best methods for bill posters to avoid trouble with city councils and selectmen is to hire land from private individuals on which to erect their boards. Then crook them back from the street limit and not over the heights proscribed by the fire regulations.

North Adams, Mass., has a new distributing, bill posting and advertising company. New boards have been placed in the city and suburbs, securing considerable space.

Boycotters and Intimidators Enjoined.

Union labor all over the country has been greatly interested in the fight between the Sun Printing and Publishing Company and Typeographical Union No. 6.

All of our readers are probably acquainted with the origin of the difficulty, which arose from the fact that the "Sun" decided to convert the office into an "open," or "non-union" one. Thereupon the members of the union abandoned their positions, and have since engaged in a boycott on the "Sun" Company, which has been carried on up to the time Justice Bookstaver, in a special term of the Supreme Court, granted an injunction pending the trial of the "Sun's" action against the striking printers and allies. The prayer for relief covered the following points, restraining the officers of the various labor organizations from advising or requesting advertising customers to desist or refrain from advertising in the papers named, and, second, from resorting to any species of threats, intimidation, force or fraud for such purposes, or procuring other persons so to do, and from preventing or attempting to prevent news-dealers from selling such papers; third, from making any requests, giving any advice or resorting to any species of persuasion, threats, intimidations, force or fraud to bring about such result; from "picketing" the establishment of the plaintiff or any of its branch offices, and by request, advice, persuasion, intimidation, threat, force, fraud or defamatory publications, inducing its employees to quit the employment of this plaintiff; and, fourth, from, in any other manner or by any other means, interfering with the property, property rights or business of the plaintiff.

Nelsonville, in the Hocking Valley, was recently visited by two enterprising men, who went to advertise their "Olympia" brand of whisky. During the night they covered bill boards in town with immense posters setting forth the merits of the liquor. The advertisements for "Rolled Oats," "Tobacco," "Medicines," etc., were blotted from view. The town bill poster had them arrested, but the matter was compromised, and the original ads replaced. By that time, however, everybody in that part of the country knew all about "Olympia."

The judgment which Mrs. Fitchett, administratrix of the estate of her deceased husband, George H. Fitchett, obtained against the officers of the American Bill Posting Co. of Brooklyn, has been reversed by the supreme court, because the evidence was defective.

R. P. CRAWFORD—AT HOME—SULLIVAN, IND.

NOTES.

The Buffalo "Times," in one of its recent issues, printed the following: "The Pan-American Bill Posting and Distributing Company promises to revolutionize the business in Buffalo. The incorporators are John H. Sewall, M. Icolm J. McNiven, Joseph Mayer and James Stell." On reading this notice, we immediately wrote to Mr. Filbrick's company, asking him about it. The gist of the reply which we received is as follows: "We have been doing bill posting and distributing in Buffalo for the past twenty-five years, have never had any opposition; do not know of any at present, and do not expect any." If the new company is organized, it must be keeping itself very well under cover, or it would have been found by the ever watchful eye of the Whitmire & Filbrick Co."

Last month "The Billboard" got hold of a rumor that was being circulated among the knowing ones that the Iryans were likely to get Columbus after all. It was only a rumor, and it seems was not a very substantial one, at that, for Mr. George L. Chenail, manager of the Columbus Bill Posting Company, writes that there is no possible chance for such a thing to happen; that the stock company which has been formed with $20,000 capital has rebuilt the entire plant and is still adding to it by building new boards every day, and that ever since the present management has taken hold, the business has been excellent.

Mr. C. G. Gillum is no longer in the bill posting business. He has sold his plant at Salida, Cal., to Mr. Swem, who is connected with the Salida Opera House.

The lion and the lamb supped together and made merry in each others company December 14th, in New York.

Silly Lowden and Alex. Clark, of the New York Bill Posting Co., were enjoying a splendid spread at the Astor House, when who should walk in on them but Barney Link, O. J. Gude and Sam Pratt. The flow of soul and good fellowship which resulted from the accidental meeting, lasted late into the night. Which party stood for the lion and which for the lamb, deponent sayeth not.

There is a bill posters' union in Buffalo, which numbers twenty members. They hold a charter from the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. F. C. Zehring, of Lincoln, Neb., states that he has bought out the plant which was formerly managed by Mr. W. L. Spar. This leaves the Zehring City Bill Posting Co., with no opposition. They now have 8,000 feet of bill boards in choice locations and $6,000 to read them.

The bill posters' directory is more popular than ever, and no wonder—for it costs but one dollar to be in it, and it gives ten times that amount in good substantial advertising.

A good plan, and one which is being carried out by a number of bill posters, is the placing of a projecting board on the top of their bill boards. This ledge does much toward preserving the paper from the snow and rain, and answers much the same purpose as a heavy moulding.

Mr. J. D. Gray, of Painesville, O., has purchased the interest of Mr. Reiter, who was formerly associated with him in the bill posting and distributing business, and will personally look after the distributing and packing.

Nelsonville, in the Hocking Valley, was recently visited by two enterprising men, who went to advertise their "Olympia" brand of whisky. During the night they covered bill boards in town with immense posters setting forth the merits of the liquor. The advertisements for "Rolled Oats," "Tobacco," "Medicines," etc., were blotted from view. The town bill poster had them arrested, but the matter was compromised, and the original ads replaced. By that time, however, everybody in that part of the country knew all about "Olympia."

The judgment which Mrs. Fitchett, administratrix of the estate of her deceased husband, George H. Fitchett, obtained against the officers of the American Bill Posting Co. of Brooklyn, has been reversed by the supreme court, because the evidence was defective.

A new trial was granted, however, with leave to apply for an amendment of the complaint.

The Rochester Bill Posting Company has been having its troubles with the City Council over big bill boards on North St. Paul Street, for which they did not secure permission, from the Common Council, to build.

The passing of anti-billboard ordinances has become an epidemic in California. The papers of that State have howled continually for the past few months about the unsightly bill boards. One glance at their advertising columns is sufficient. It will tell the reason quicker and more effectually than words can possibly do. It will also convince one that it was about their turn to howl.

The "Times-Mirror," one of the papers which used its influence to have the bill board, banner and sign ordinance passed in Los Angeles, now seeks exemption from the latter, for their skeleton electric-letter sign which is suspended across the street, and for all similar signs suspended at a height of at least twenty feet, provided that the signs be not more than four feet in height and securely fastened. The petition was signed by several influential firms, but, contrary to expectations, this amendment did not go through as they would have liked, and it is not at all improbable that the paper will yet have to take a little of the medicine which they helped to manufacture for others, and which was intended to kill the opposition to their advertising columns.

Mitchell, Ind., is a thriving little town at the crossing of the B. & O. S. W. and the Monon Railways. W. M. Munson manages a bill posting and advertising sign company there, which has 8,000 feet of bill board surface.

A Billposters' Trick.

"Of course we used to put up small bills wherever they'd catch the eye," said a bill poster who traveled with a circus making one-day stands, "and one thing we used to do that always pleased folks was to hang a bill from a ceiling. You had to have a wooden ceiling, to start with, and then all you wanted, besides the bills, was a tack and a silver dollar. It took practice to do it, but when you'd got the knack, it was very simple and easy."

"You attached two bills together, one at the foot of the other, so that it would hang down when the first one was attached to the ceiling. Then you folded the bills up, with a tack, thrust point upward through the top fold of the upper bill, with a silver dollar under it, up against its head and between it and the other folds of paper under it."

"Then, some time when the room was full of people—this might be a hotel office, or perhaps a bar-room—you tossed the bills up, and there was weight enough in the dollar to drive the tack into the ceiling far enough to hold. Then the weight of the paper itself and of the dollar would open the bills out, and the coin would drop and you would catch it as it fell, and the chances are that not one man in five would see it fall. The bills would be seen, fastened up there somehow, most of the people wouldn't know how, and opening out with the lower bill hanging so you could read it."

"This was not the greatest thing in bill posting ever was, but, as I said before, always pleased folks."—New York Sun.

Strike at Buffalo.

The bill posters' union No. 41, the membership of which is composed of the bill posters in the employ of Whitmire & Filbrick, recently decided to institute a strike, and the members agreed to stick together and not return to work until all grievances were redressed.

Mr. Filbrick had been having some new hours created, and some of the regular bill posters had been set to digging post-holes. Of course it was necessary to procure men to carry on the regular posting work, so two extra men were hired, but were laid off at the end of the week, when there was no further use of their services.

The regular employees had complained several times about being compelled to work on Saturday nights at posting the announcements of coming attractions before the theaters and places of amusement, and one Saturday night did not show up, according to the usual arrangement.

On Monday the situation was explained to Mr. Filbrick, who met the men in the workroom and told them to state their grievance. They said that they wanted him to employ regularly the two men who had been discharged, so that they would not have to work at night. It was explained that night work was a necessity, since "shifting the dabs" could not be done before 10 o'clock at night. The men would not listen to reason, so they were discharged, and only those whom Mr. Filbrick selects will be taken back.

The leaving of the men in a body forced Mr. Filbrick himself to take up the work of posting, in the midst of which he was discovered by some of his friends, among whom was Mr. H. F. McGarrie. This gentleman, after watching operations for a few minutes, offered to let Mr. Filbrick a while supper that he could post a stand quicker than Filbrick could. The bet was immediately taken, and the contest was held that afternoon, with Andy Nirschel who holds "The Billboard" medal as the champion bill poster of America as referee, and Harry Ferren as time keeper. The contest consisted of the posting of 60 sheets. The actual time of the two contestants is given, for Filbrick nineteen minutes and seventeen seconds, and for McGarrie twenty minutes and five seconds. Mr. McGarrie, when interviewed, gave as a reason for his defeat that he had failed to train properly.

A Warm Ball in New York.

A club of so-called bill posters of New York, the members of which are dubbed the "Snipers," recently held a decidedly interesting and lively ball at Tammany Hall—in fact, it became so lively that about 4 o'clock a. m. the revel was abruptly broken off, which resulted in the manager of the hall and one of the dancers receiving urgent invitations to attend the morning session of the police court. This is how it all happened: The tickets for the affair were twenty-five cents each, drinks not included. Up to midnight everything went along smoothly. About 150 persons were present. After midnight several small fights occurred, which caused the music to stop and the dancing to be interrupted, but were not serious enough to break up the ball. Those preliminary bouts were merely skirmishes, and it looked as if they were to lead on to greater and more important engagements. The feeling at this time existing between the management and the participants can best be understood by the following oration, which was delivered the day after by one of the Snipers: "Dry run a snide game on us." "Wat t'ell, of course we let out a cough when dey charged 75 cents for a round of drinks. We was no Waldford-Aster coterie, wid silk dips an' fat check-books. We couldn't stand for 75 cents a round without hocking our diamon's and 'potheccatin' our bank stock, an' we didn't come to the ball prepared to do dat. It was a put-up game to do us, an' I knew it long before de trouble kom ter a head (phonetic spelling)." About 4 o'clock the prospects for a sure enough "rough house" were elegant. The manager tried to get the dancers to leave, but they refused to go, determined to stay until daybreak. A policeman was called, but he could do nothing. Then the manager turned out the gas, and some one shouted "Rouse mit the Irish." Everybody got out—how, nobody knows—and, marvellous to relate, only one man was found unconscious after it was over. He claimed that he had been clubbed by the manager, but the court decided that he was merely intoxicated and fined him $3—such is the irony of fate!

San Francisco.

An example of pure American enterprise, calculation, energy and up-to-dateness exhibited in the bill posting world, the firm of Siebe & Green, of San Francisco certainly stands forth as a model one. It has long been the largest bill posting and advertising concern on the Pacific Coast, and has offices in many towns throughout California. They have spread and spread, and many times it seemed that the limit had been reached, but they have continued to grow, until now, like Alexander of old, they must go in search of new fields for conquest.

Honolulu, H. I., U. S. A., is their latest acquisition. They have purchased the leases for most of the valuable space for advertising there, and early in the year 1900 Siebe & Green, "everywhere seen," will decorate the tops of sign boards in that city.

The property that they have secured is situated on King Street, in the heart of Honolulu, and the extension of King Street, known as the Waikiki Road, which is the only driveway to the best residence portion of the city, as well as to the bathing resorts on the Waikiki beach. This road has the only car line in the city and, in addition to that, is traversed daily by nearly all residents of Honolulu in going to their homes or to the beach to bathe, which is a daily practice of almost every resident of Honolulu. It is their intention to erect boards upon which painted signs exclusively are to be placed, none of the surface being for bill posting. The boards erected are to be 10 feet high and any length desired, not to exceed 40 feet in length for any one sign. The fences, in sections of 10 by 10 feet, will be built in San Francisco, the matter painted on them in their shop in that city, and shipped to Honolulu ready to be put in place, thus insuring style and accuracy in the matter painted on the boards.

The large influx of people to the islands since they came into the possession of our Government, together with the increased yield from all products of the islands, makes that section decidedly thriving one, and one in which all American products should very shortly supplant any foreign articles now in that market.

Siebe & Green must be heartily congratulated upon securing this privilege, which is a tribute to their energy and far-sightedness. Added to this, we receive the news that Siebe & Green have invaded San Jose, which town is now controlled by the Mercantile Bill Posting Company. This company and the local merchants became alarmed at the invasion, saying that it would be the means of making San Jose merely a suburb of San Francisco, thus driving them out of business. These merchants were instrumental in having an ordinance passed by the Common Council, which fixes a license on posting, tacking, painting, etc., of $75 per quarter, violation of which ordinance shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $100 or by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days. Another ordinance bearing upon the same subject was passed, which provides that bill boards, signs, etc., may not be built to exceed ten feet in height. It was provided that the ordinances do not apply to any advertising firm already located in San Jose.

Siebe & Green entered protest, feeling that the ordinance was an unwarranted attack upon themselves, and that they had been legislated against through the influence of another corporation.

The ordinance can not stand the test of the courts, because it is a clear case of "discrimination against one portion of a business community that will not affect another, and therefore is illegal. Whether or not the ordinance stands, Siebe & Green have established a branch, and experience has taught us to say that where they go, they stay.

Sheehan, J. Busby and D. Myers, Trustees; D. Buckley, H. Myers and A. Rulland, Committee on Candidates; J. Holmes, Delegate; P. Curry, co-delegate.

A new bill board ordinance has been presented to the judiciary committee of Chicago. It licenses bill posters, restricts the height of bill boards to twelve feet, requires a license of $25 a linear foot, and prohibits the erection of boards near boulevards, so as to obstruct the view of the lake. Objectionable showings are also prohibited.

The Sioux City Journal for December 19 is a splendid special number. A. H. Beal, the proprietor of the bill posting plant and the manager of the Grand Opera House in that city, is given a fine send-off. Under his management the success of the play-house has been remarkable.

It is said that Paris is seriously considering the offering of rewards for the best posters on the city boardings. This might be the answer to the question, how to improve the appearance of the bill boards which has been worrying the "Seapa" societies.

Theatrical managers by no means smile at the prevailing fancy for highly colored lithographs, called the "poster craze." This whim of young women to paper the walls of their houses with posters has cost the managers lots and lots of money during the last few years. The craze has also been instrumental in getting many bill posters into trouble. The pretty window cards and half-sheets have a marvelous way of disappearing. People who would think it wrong to take anything from the counter at a store or even to ride in the street car without paying their fare, will roll up a poster and carry it home without their consciences troubling them in the least. With this fed in vogue all over the United States, and single-sheet lithographs costing between five and ten cents, one can see that it means no small loss to the theatrical managers.

Three meanings of the word "post" are: Post paper, post yourself and post a letter. All three of these the bill posters should and can do. Post a letter to "The Billboard" Publishing Co., Cincinnati, O., telling them to place your name on their subscription list and bill posters' directory. This will bring to you the means whereby you may post yourself and also post papers. If you don't believe it, try it. If you do believe it, do it.

No bill poster should be without a circular setting forth the advantages of bill posting as an advertising medium, to be sent to local merchants to pave the way for a personal call.

It is a very poor principle for bill posters to quibble with the advertiser over small things. Be willing to concede a point or two. It will pay in the end.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir: We have been very busy this month in spite of our competitor. If he only knew it, he is doing us lots of good. Following is a partial list of what we have done this month: 3,000 memorandum books for J. H. Zehn & Co.; 200 signs and posted 350 one-sheets for this same firm; 2,000 pieces for Mr. Chamberlain & Co.; 4,000 samples for E. E. Sutherland Mfg. Co.; also, posted 10 twenty-four-sheet stands for California Fig Syrup Co.

Have made several new contracts, and assisted several traveling men. "Seven Barks" almanacs were distributed here lately, service good. The following have also been distributed in our city: Street & Smith Tip Top Weekly (might have had better service), Kenton Baking Powder, Health Food Co. (ten and fifteen samples in a grocery, no house-to-house work). Crown Baking Powder received a very bad service.

C. I. Hood & Co. received the poorest distribution we have ever seen: simply stuck in gates, thrown in yards and on porches by a cripple. It seems strange that such a firm as C. I. Hood & Co. will pay a good price to have their matter wasted, when they could get a reliable service at the same rates.

Hoping I have not taken too much of your valuable space, and wishing success to "The Billboard" and my brother distributors and bill posters, I am, yours respectfully,

Newark, D. E. O. BURROUGHS.

The Grignard Lithographing Company has been incorporated at Jersey City, N. J., to do lithographing and printing. The capital stock is $125,000, and the incorporators are Alber Grignard, Marie Grignard, Isaac Potter, George P. Miner, all of New York City, and Henry Crowther, Ridgewood, N. J. The office is at 8 Montgomery street, Jersey City.

Fire recently visited the Louisville Lithographing Company, and resulted in a loss of about $2,500, which was fully covered by insurance.

The Lithotone Colotype Company, a recently incorporated concern, will do three-color printing by a new process. The proprietors are Warren F. Furbeck, Chas. Saalburg and William P. Allen. Mr. Saalburg is the inventor of the process, which is to be kept a secret. Mr. Allen was formerly associated with the Chicago Colotype Company. The capital stock of the company is $200,000, $125,000 of which is paid up, with $75,000 reserved, and no stock for sale.

The following demand was made by the Lonis Press Feeders' and Assistants' Union No. 43: "Journeymen cylinder press feeders on all presses 24 by 36 and over, $12 a week. Conditional members, $8 per week. Pony press feeders, $7.50 per week. Nine hours to constitute a day's work, six days a week's work. Time and one-half for overtime. Double time for Sundays and all legal holidays. Nine scale $13 per week. Five nights, ten hours per night, shall constitute a week's work. The journeymen press feeders have been paid $9.50 and were offered $11 by the employer, but the men held out for $11.50. Finally the matter was left to arbitration. A representative of each side was chosen, who were to decide upon a third person, whose decision was to be final.

The method and details of a new system of lithographic printing has just been disclosed by a series of fifty-one patents held under the following names: Paul G. Frateler, Wm. H. McEntee, Claude A. O. Reilly, Edward Hart and The American Lithographic Company, of New York City. The system is a modification of the zinc plate system, or zincography, which was tried some twenty-four years ago and proved a failure. The series of inventions include the following principal items: I. A zinc surface, formed by electro-deposition (electrotyping). A method of adapting such zinc surfaces to tubes that can be slid on and off printing cylinders. III. A method of registering color transfers on zinc surfaces, so that in multi-colored printing the machinery will automatically register colors. IV. A method of multi-color printing by which a series of colors can be printed from a roll, or from single sheets, without waiting for the dry of the ink. V. New and novel methods of inking from air-tight fountains, supplied tubes, under air pressure. VI. A means of doing poster printing in colors in one impression by supplying the color in minute spots to the ink rollers.

Poster printers will be interested in the article which appears in another column entitled, "Posters not Copyrightable."

The Donaldson Lithograph Company is overcrowded with orders. The mammoth orders of the big Buffalo Bill Shows, The Grand Wallaces Shows, The Sells-Floridan Show, The W. C. Fields Shows, Nickle Plate Shows, etc., are capable of taxing even the wonderful capacity of the greatest poster printer in the world.

The Bright Co. and the Siebert Lithograph Co., both of New York City, have combined

Uncle Sam is going to be a big printer before he gets through. The new Government Printing Office will cost about $2,000,000, as it is said that even after its completion will not be large enough to meet the demand upon it. The new building will be eight stories in height, and its floor space will be about nine acres. The floors will sustain a load of 5,000,000 pounds.

The building will be constructed in such a substantial manner that nearly the entire space can be filled with paper and books without injuring its stability in any degree. Access to the various floors will be obtained by twelve electric elevators. The building will be lighted with 7,000 incandescent lights. A refrigerating plant will furnish cold filter water on every floor for drinking purposes. A large crematory will destroy all the refuse material, and will add in heating water, etc.

PITTSBURG LETTER.

Editor of "The Billboard":
A few insignificant creatures have made visions of believing that the I. A. of D. is an organization run by one man. Now, in a number of this much accused and about association, and I say now and then that any person or persons who make a statement tell lies absolutely.
Now, for a man of such intelligence (?) as to try to make a statement of this kind, is certainly to say the least.

Wonder if his failure to secure the sovereignty influenced him in this matter?
Now for the sake of argument, let it be assumed that it is run by one man, or perfectly satisfied to allow this "one man" or any other, to run an organization
I hold membership in, if said organization will benefit me as much as the I. A. of D.
does. I took this agency when the former had been running it for several months, revenue only, and had driven most all the business away from it that he had ever controlled.
To-day this agency is doing all the distributing that is done in this section by and all of its former patrons, with one exception. Of course this has been made possible by giving a service that is unexcelled, it was the I. A. of D. that again attracted the people who had been driven away from him by reason of ill treatment. In this office abundant documentary evidence to sustain fully establish this position. Who would be willing to have a "one man," or "any organization," put him in a position to case his business from practically nothing to an average of 400,000 pieces per month, ave perfectly controlled the policy of this agency since February 1, 1899. What more evidence is needed to illustrate the benefits to be derived from membership in the I. A. of D.
Any man who says that it is run by "one man," is "either a knave or a fool," is perhaps both.

Don't worry, Brother Reid, because they have copied our Constitution; "imitation is the sincerest flattery," you know, and perhaps they had not the brains to construct one of their own. "Slow Annie Runey, "there's no room for it on paper," but with the largest swope ever constructed you will fail to them elsewhere.

I agree with "the only rule." No inserts me,

and by "The Billboard," boys, for it is done by us, and has always stood for truth and justice as against oppression and negligence.

He's to the "Champion" Steinbrenner;
his shadow never grows less. Confusion is his enemies.

He's to Reid; the grand old man of the
I. A. of D. May he be happy and prosperous.
He's to all of the "boys," and, yes, Bridg-shake, old boy. May you all be prosperous and never go back on the "only." I hope to live to see the time when each and every member will be notorious for his honesty.

J. W. McMANAMA.
Manager of the Twin Cities Distributing Agency.

Editor "The Billboard."

Dear Sir—On receipt of the November issue of "Billboard," I read the comments of both Mr. Reid and Mr. Steinbrenner relative to the stars cast at the I. A. of D., by the publishers of "Bill-Poster-Display Advertising." These gentlemen have put some very pertinent questions to Messrs. Runey and Stahlbredt, which I think those gentlemen will find quite difficult to answer without admitting they are that an advertiser had to send his own men out in order to get his distributing matter put out at all with any degree of certainty, to say nothing of having it put under the doors or into letter boxes, and if put out at all, was thrown in the yards or scattered over the streets. Why I have seen many a lot of nice booklets scattered over the floors of bill rooms throughout the country that it is quite likely advertisers had paid for being distributed.

There has been a radical change since the organization of the I. A. of D. Now an advertiser can send his distributing matter to a member of the I. A. of D., and can depend on getting it put out according to contract or being paid for any that may be wasted.
Now, such a system is a revelation to the advertiser who has been getting swindled for years by unprincipled distributors who were honest enough to even put the matter out alone do the work as they agreed to.

I met the Chicago member, Mr. Clough, on the street a few days since, and he had just time to speak to me and to say he was so very busy that he did not have time to be even sociable. He told me he had four or five large contracts on hand, and that he would be kept busy for several weeks with what orders he had on hand, yet he expected more shipments any day. Now, how do you account for Mr. Clough getting so much distributing work to do, I can tell you. Any advertiser can depend on getting just what Mr. Clough agrees to give him, and every advertiser is given the very best service possible. That is the secret of Mr.
Clough's business, and he is fully entitled to the I. A. of D. succeed, and it will, too, independent of any malicious stars that may be thrown at it. Its officers and members, by publication that we all know is printed in the interest of a very few.

Trusting you are sharing in the general prosperity, and wishing you every success,
Yours very truly,

S. M. BOND, Williamsport, Pa.

Mr. S. M. Bond, whose photo appears in this issue, is the distributor for the city of Williamsport, Pa. He is a charter member of the International Association of Distributors, and through the good influence of that organization, for honest and faithful work and to the interest he takes in behalf of the advertisers, he is gaining the confidence of all the leading advertisers throughout the country.

For the past four years Mr. Bond has worked unceasingly to build up an honest distributing business, and he is now reaping the benefit of his labor. The business men of the city recommend him very highly, and he is known to be an honest, conscientious man. All persons having distributing to do in Williamsport, Pa., will do well to have Mr.
Bond look after their interests.

NOTES.

E. S. Robinson, who held the I. A. of D. franchise at Chillicothe, O., died at his home on Dec. 29.

W. T. Thrill, of Lima, writes that his distributing department has done exceedingly well this last year, having placed 150,000 more pieces than he did in 1898.

We are in receipt of most convenient and desirable combined notebook, atlas and guide from Mr. R. D. Leonard, of the Leonard Advertising Agency, Boston, Mass. The book is well calculated to get close to the hearts, memories and pockets of the advertisers.

J. E. Streiter, who formerly held the I. A.
of D. franchise at Rockford, N. Y., has given up the distributing business, in order to engage in a more lucrative business.

Mr. J. V. Farier, distributor and sign tacker at Birkett, Mass., gets out a little circular, which is headed in this way:

TO ADVERTISERS
who can not afford to have their matter wasted, thrown away or destroyed, and who, instead of trying to see how cheap they can get their distributing, sampling and sign-tacking done, would rather have faithful and thorough service, and the most families reached for the money expended and amount of pieces used, this little sheet is respectfully addressed.

Bryan & Co. have been awarded the I. A. of D. franchise for Dayton, O., which town was left vacant by the retiring of Jas. McConnon.

In the folder entitled "Proper Distribution," issued by Dillon & Fogle, the Cross Road
Bill Posters and Distributors, of Normal, Ill.,
they state that they cover McLean, Tazewell,
Woodford, Livingstone, Iroquois and Ford Counties, travel 1,000 miles of selected public roads, work in 195 towns, 5,000 square miles of territory, with a population of 255,000 people.
They certainly have a big field, and one in which there is little competition.

James Witherspoon, who travels for Dr. W.
S. Burkhardt, speaks in the highest of terms of the service rendered him at Macon, Ga., by Mr. F. H. Powers.

Geo. Protzman, Roseburg, Ore., was sixty-six years old on Dec. 29, last, but he still gets around as lively as ever. There must be something in the outdoor life of distributors that keeps them so Hale and hearty.

A Warning.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir Through your columns we wish to warn firms doing distributing in Iremont against giving their work to Geo. Snyder.
He distributed several thousand circulars for the Boston Medical Institute of Chicago, Ill., and we found a market basket full hidden in the office on the Fair Grounds. Also, some of them had been torn and thrown along the road from the Fair Grounds to the town.
Yours respectfully,

DAVIS & KNOBLOCK,

Bremen, Ind.

S. M. BOND, holds I. A. of D. Franchise for Williamsport, Pa.

not sincere in their claims, that in attempting to organize a rival association they have only the welfare of their members and the interests of advertisers at heart.

Since when did the few that control the Bill Posters Association awake to the fact that advertisers were entitled to any protection from distributors. Strange they did not think of that long ago and not leave it to an independent organization of distributors to make the initiative.

I don't think the good reputation of the officers or members of the I. A. of D. is going to suffer to any great extent from anything that may be said by a few jealous rivals, who have just found out that the distribution of matter from house to house was a form of advertising fast gaining favor among a certain class of advertisers, thanks to the efforts and members of the I. A. of D.
who have done so much to improve the services and demonstrate to advertisers that such work can and will be done honestly. I conclude, advertisers owe that association a debt of gratitude for what it has already accomplished in the way of improving the distributing service, and I am sure all the leading manufacturers of proprietary medicines appreciate their efforts. How long since was it every piece of distributing matter he gets.

So it is within the power of every distributor, particularly in the larger cities, to gain the confidence of leading advertisers, and not only secure all the work they have to offer,
but to induce them to increase their appropriation from house to house work. When a distributor once gets the confidence of an advertiser, he has a good foundation to build on, as he does not take long for other advertisers to find out that they can depend on getting good, honest service from the same sources, and they solicit the distributor's services instead of the distributor soliciting their business.

I am sorry to see Runey is endeavoring to organize a rival association, and that he could be so influenced as to give his association a name so similar to the International Association of Distributors. It looks like a bold attempt to deceive, and I do not believe Runey is responsible for the adoption of a name almost identical with that of I. A. of D. I give Runey credit for being more honorable than I, and I believe he is being led by a few that merely want to use him for their own selfish interests.

Advertisers who spend a great deal of money in house to house distributing, want to see

THE BILLBOARD

Who 'Tis Items.

The gall of some people is large enough to wreck a freight train. The Secretary of I. A. of D. related several instances to which I will endeavor to give in his own language. Several days ago I received a letter from a party asking me to write him up for a soliciting circular. The letter read by saying, "Business is good with us and we are doing well. We may surprise you some day by applying for membership in the I. A. of D. If this is not nerve, then I don't know what you would call it. The Secretary also states that he receives letters daily asking for information on different subjects and the tenth of the writers fail to enclose a stamp. In the future all such letters will be thrown in the waste basket without notice. If the information is not worth a stamp, it is not worth anything. Others fail to give state, city or any address whatever, and it is needless to say they never receive a reply. Others ask for special favors. For instance, 'Order me 500 letter heads and envelopes.' 'Go and see such and such a party and tell them this and that,' when they might just as well have written the party themselves. The Secretary is perfectly willing to assist all the members where possible, but when it is just as easy for them to address a party direct, he will not attend to the matter. Some even send him money to pay certain bills for them in the future all such money will be returned. He also wants it understood that he has no connection with 'The Billboard' Publishing Company, or any other firm in Cincinnati. When parties wish to remit to them, they are requested to do so direct. He also states that he has another class of correspondents, who, after someone else in their city has joined the I. A. of D., write and say, "We are entitled to that franchise. We are the only reliable people here. By giving this other party the franchise, you are putting competition in the field against us and by so doing are taking the bread and butter from our families." These same parties have been asked to join the association dozens of times, but have labored under the impression that they had their town "cinched" and discovered their error too late. If there are any distributors where the franchise is not taken, they had better make application at once, and thereby avoid any such experience.

Distributors all over the country have done an exceedingly good business during the year just passed. Indications are that 1900 will be even more prosperous. As January is the season for forming new resolutions, I would suggest that every distributor resolve to improve his service wherever possible during the coming year. Also, make up your mind to solicit more than ever. Times are good and advertisers are more liberal. You can get the business, if you will only be persistent and give a first-class service. You should consider a good reputation the most valuable stock in trade possessed. No matter if you have a large bank account, if your reputation is bad, the advertisers will not patronize you. On the other hand, if you are poor, but have a good reputation, you will get the business. Advertisers are not figuring on how much you are worth in dollars and cents. Your value to them is based on the results you obtain for them through your work.

Reports show that everybody has been busy for the last two months. All had one complaint to make, regarding help. Why it is difficult to obtain reliable assistance in the distributing business is something that puzzles most distributors. It seems almost impossible to get men who can be trusted at all times. They require constant watching. Most of the distributing agencies are paying more to their help than the average price of common labor, still they go wrong, and will lag. The man who can establish a system whereby he can keep his employees in the straight path and will give others the benefit of his knowledge, is entitled to the lasting gratitude of all those interested in house-to-house distributing. A distributor may do all right for six months or a year, then he seems to tire of his job and begins to do crooked work. In most cases he is caught in the first offense, but occasionally he will succeed in deceiving his employer for a time. The only remedy that can be suggested is to watch your men closely. Lead them to believe that you are trusting them. Drop in on them unawares, or give them any test you can think of, and if found dishonest, dispense with their services. The writer several years ago was working eight men, and finding one of them dishonest, he discharged the whole crew. This, in his opinion, was the only way to eradicate the evil. If you find any of your men going wrong, try it. Then you are sure that the others will not practice the trick learned of the other fellow.

Advertisers please take notice! A Mr. Osterlich, in business at Cairo, Ill., claims to be a member of the International Association of Distributors and makes that statement on his printed matter. For the benefit of all concerned, we wish to state that Mr. Osterlich is not, and never has been a member of the I. A. of D. A man who will deliberately try to deceive possible patrons by misrepresenting himself is not to be relied upon. The representative of the I. A. of D. for Cairo is Mr. H. F. Malinski.

A certain party not over a hundred miles from Detroit, holding the I. A. of D. franchise for his city, is offering same for sale. We wish distributors to understand that no individual can sell or transfer his or her I. A. of D. franchise to any one without the consent of the Executive Committee. Let this be a warning to any one thinking of purchasing something from some one else who does not own it. All franchises of the I. A. of D. belong to the association and not to the individual members. In other words, they are not transferable.

We have received circulars from the following distributors: W. M. Munson, Mitchell, Ind.; J. E. McCarthy, Kalamazoo, Mich.; J. M. Fisher, Terre Haute, Ind., all of which are good and should command the attention of the advertiser. Mr. Fisher also encloses a card giving list of drug dealers, both wholesale and retail, which is quite a convenience to advertisers who wish to call the attention of druggists to their especial line. We believe this idea is original with Mr. Fisher.

Patent Medicines may no longer be thrown about Streets.

The patent medicine ordinance, which has been lingering in councils since read in place in the select branch last June by Mr. Tolson, has at last become a law. It was sent to the Mayor after having received a passing vote in the common branch over two weeks ago and was yesterday sent back to the City Clerk, having become a law by the statue of limitations. The Mayor did not place his signature to the measure, but as it was in his hands over the required ten days, it will be enforced as a law as soon as the legal forms have been gone through with by the city.

The measure will be published for the first time to day. The ordinance does not allow any distribution whatever of samples of patent medicine. Heretofore it has been the custom for advertising agents and druggists to flood the town at their pleasure or whenever a drug manufacturer wished to extensively advertise some new nostrum, with samples of medicines in the form of pills, powders and small bottles of liquid. The ordinance will put a stop to this entirely. Under the new order of things the poisons can not be thrown on the streets and in doorways where they fall into the hands of little children and of persons ignorant of the effect of strong drugs on the system.

They may of course be sent by mail, but if any person sees fit to make a personal distribution he will make himself liable to a fine of ten dollars at the least or not more than fifty dollars or imprisonment for from ten to thirty days in jail, or both, at the discretion of the Alderman before whom the hearing was held.

Distribution of Medicines Prohibited.

Careless Work Causes Trouble at Lima, Ohio.

Through an accident resulting from the negligence of a traveling distributor, sampling of medicines has been stopped in Lima, Ohio. That he might have the work done cheaply, he engaged two boys, who did not know the nature of the samples they were placing, nor the importance of giving them to adults only. He left the boys, and they found it easier to throw the samples in the yards and on the porches than place them in accordance with his instructions.

A child in South Lima was made so sick from eating these samples, which were pills that the family physician had to be called. The father of the child immediately entered a protest against the sampling of patent medicines, and demanded that the practice be stopped. A petition was circulated among and signed by all of the local physicians and druggists. It was brought before the city council and resulted in the passing of the following ordinance:

"Be it ordained by the Council of the City of Lima, as follows:

"Sec. 1. That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to distribute, as samples, specimens, or otherwise, any drug or medicine, at any residence, or on any public highway, within the corporate limits of said city."

"Sec. 2. That any person or persons violating any of the provisions of Section 1 of this ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars ($10.00) nor more than twenty-five dollars ($25.00), or be imprisoned in the city prison not less than two (2) days, nor more than ten (10) days.

"Sec. 3. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and due publication.

"Pussed December 4, 1899.
"J. W. ROWLANDS,
"President of the Council."
"C. E. Lynch, City Clerk."

It is believed that the ordinance can not hold if the samples are handed to any grown member of the household and they are told what the sample is, and they accept the same. Of course this plan of advertising will cost the advertiser more money, but it will be worth the extra charge every time. This kind of work will cost at least $6 per thousand, owing to the amount of time lost in explaining what you have.

This matter of careless distributing should be watched closely by distributors in their respective territories. It would not do to get the above ordinance in force generally, for it would not be long until somewhere they would try to stop the distributing of samples and pamphlets of all kinds, as it would be a great help to the doctor trade. The passing of this ordinance may be taken as a lesson and as a warning.

Each one should see that his work is placed in the home or in the door jamb, so that it will not get in the yard and vex the residents. The habits of crossing the lawns, leaving gates open, and ringing door bells should be more closely watched, as all of these tend to disgust the public in general, and if the public were to become prejudiced against it, the whole system of distributing would have to go.

It Is Steam Power.

It is the momentum of advertising that carries a business along. It is like the steam power which carries along the railroad train. Cut off the steam and the train will move on for some distance without any perceptible diminution of speed. But gradually it comes to a full stop. It is the same way with advertising. The only way to keep the business engine going, whether the engineer be an individual or a combination, is to keep up steam. Schenectady (N. Y.) "Union".

Bert McCartney, McDonald, Pa.

We present to our readers the portrait of Mr. Bert McCartney, bill poster and distributor at McDonald, Pa. Mr. McCartney has been in the business only a couple of years, but he now has a large list of customers. He controls a circuit of towns which are situated in the heart of the coal mining and oil regions. This should be a fertile field for the advertisers, and judging by the orders Mr. McCartney has received, they are well aware of the fact. Mr. McCartney oversees all of his work, and in this way can guarantee his patrons the best of service.

C. O. Schenck, Dayton, Ohio.

In the above we present to our readers a picture of Mr. C. O. Schenck, the advertising agent of the Park Theater, Dayton, O. Mr. Schenck has a wide reputation as a distributor, and there are very few hall shows that do not know C. O. Schenck. He has been one of the leading distributors of Dayton, as he has handled all of the advertising matter for the Old Music Hall and the Grand Opera House, now known as the Victoria Theater. There is not a person who patronizes the

The New Year Has Begun.

To those who entertain that view, the new century has started, at any rate, the season for making good resolutions and for proclaiming your plans for the future is at hand.

We desire to announce that during the coming year, no pains, labor or money will be spared in the endeavor to keep "The Billboard" in the plane which it has risen, and to have it that a trades paper should be.

We believe that the object of a trade paper should be, not alone to inform the members of the profession of facts, events and matters in general pertaining to the trade, and to give suggestions that may be of use and value to them, but also to further their interests by making those who have dealings with the trade, acquainted with the doings of the latter.

A trade paper which only circulates among the members of the trade, therefore does not completely fulfill its mission. The advertising, to do any good, must extend outside of the limited circle of the trade. It must reach those who either have dealings with the trade or expect to have such dealings in the future. According to this theory, the contents of a trade paper should not only be interesting to the advertisers, but also to the readers of the advertisements—that is, the persons of the trade.

Although this has been the aim of this paper in the past, our efforts in the future in this respect will be more pronounced than ever. We will without abridging trade interests, endeavor to make our paper acceptable to a wide circle of readers.

The advent of "street fairs" into the arena of business enterprises, which collectively may be called expositions, as called forth more discussion and comment, both favorable and adverse, than any movement in the show world for many years.

The managers of county fairs, who declare that the street fair is a menace to morality, and of no special interest to any one but the fakirs, who, on every available occasion, seek through the medium of the agricultural and the daily press, to disgust the public with the new idea, evidently have in mind visions of failure and decreased gate receipts. They, instead of accustoming themselves to the inevitable, attempt to deride the street fair from the great popularity it enjoys.

The advantages of the street fair over the old style fair are many. They are held in the business center of the town. They afford new and novel amusements at a small cost; they relieve the monotony of trade, tend to bring merchants closer together, and promote concentrated action.

If the country shows hope to fight the gay street fair, with any chance of success, they must cast off their old foggy methods and contend with the new comer with equal weapons. They must add to their shows those features of the street fair which have made for it the place it holds—in the hearts of the people.

One disadvantage, and the only one which we can think of at present which the agricultural fair can not avoid, is in the matter of position. The fair grounds can not be moved—but after all, the situation of the fair matters but little, provided a large attendance can be secured, very little trouble is experienced in inducing merchants to exhibit where a crowd is assured. Then to draw the people is the question. Attractions will accomplish this feat. Experience has taught us that the more numerous and the better the attractions offered, the larger the attendance and the more satisfied the people will be.

The question arising from the indiscriminate distributing of samples of proprietary medicines have become most serious. Many have been the ordinances passed of late which render it unlawful to put out such samples. Although in most cases the ordinances can not hold, nevertheless they serve to show the general tendency and to point out in what light the public views this method of advertising.

These are but rumblings before the cyclone, the skirmish before the battles in which are found the warning to both distributors and advertisers. Should these cases of criminal negligence continue to occur with the frequency which they have of late, the whole system of distribution will be in danger. The blame can not be placed upon the shoulders of the professional distributors, who very seldom get into any trouble because of careless distributing. They know their business and have their prices, charging according to the kind of service expected by the advertiser.

The fault lies with the advertisers. It should and does rest alone upon them; not upon all of them, but upon those who in the vernacular would be called "short skates" or "cheap screws," men who to save a few dollars, send work to a town and allow it to be done by scab labor or boys, who have no reputation to uphold, and are therefore indifferent to consequences and every other consideration except the money they get out of it.

This practice not only places in jeopardy the lives of thousands of children, but also tends toward the abolishment of an advertising medium, which brings imminent returns to the advertisers of the country and gives employment to thousands of men throughout the entire land.

The remedy for this evil is found in these tradesmen employing reliable men, who follow this work as a profession paying them the necessary amount, "which in no case is exorbitant," to assure a good, honest, reliable service. This would in the end bring better results, and be of more benefit to these advertisers than have been obtained through the irregular methods heretofore employed.

The past year has been the most encouraging, the most prosperous and the most successful period in the history of the development of poster advertising.

The advertisers who at the present time firmly believe in the efficacy of bill posting, and are its loyal supporters, are numbered in the thousands. During the past twelve months hundreds of firms have been added to the list of active billboard advertisers, while but few, very few, have been the advocates of this medium who have ceased posting to try other methods. This general tendency of partiality towards bill posting has not been without its good effects upon the system, or its benefits to the bill posters.

The boards throughout the country have been so crowded that almost every posting plant proprietor has been forced to erect many new boards, while plants have been started in towns heretofore unable to support one.

The advertisers have received excellent returns from their posting, which resulted in the bill poster getting plenty of work; consequently enabled him to spend some of his earnings in developing and improving his service.

Bright as the past has been, the future appears even more radiant, for with all of the advantages of the past year still before them and no appreciable drawbacks, the bill posters of the country should in the ensuing year be able to prove to a host of advertisers that posting is a sure and quick method of securing trade.

A New Association.

The A.B.P.A. no longer to have a Monopoly.

For the last few months there has been whispering throughout the bill posting world that an association composed of bill posting plants now running in opposition to the Associated Bill Posters members (and maybe others) were to band themselves together for the furtherance of the bill posting interests. These rumors have spread enormously. Many bill posters who have heard of the movement but who have not been able to get hold of any particulars, have written to "The Billboard" for information, which until the present time was impossible for the paper to give, although nothing definite concerning the line of action of the new movement has been found out by the bill posters in general, enough is known at present by those most interested to present the shock of the great surprise from injuring their health—to cause many of them much joy and a number of others considerable anxiety.

For some time the promoters of the new organization have been considering the advisability of joining forces, but no definite plan of action had been mapped out. It seems that they have now come to an understanding, and the active work of organizing will begin immediately.

The men whose names are associated with this excellent movement are men who are known throughout the entire advertising field by bill posters and advertisers alike, as men of sterling worth, untiring energy, and absolute integrity, men whose names alone would insure the success of any undertaking with which they are associated.

That there is room for another association can not be doubted. With only one association in the field, a system has developed which is nothing short of blackmail, the victims being the entire membership of the association, outside of those who run matters and the general advertisers of the country. An advertiser may be discriminated against, and the billboard space of the members prohibited to him, simply because of the personal spite or the individual interest of the Grand Mogul. The interest of the members is never considered for a minute; they receive orders not to do this or to do that, and they are afraid to do otherwise, for fear that the solicitors will not send them paper, or that they will cut down the number of sheets which should be sent. Will not an association which will eradicate these evils be welcomed with open arms by the bill posters of the country? Will not an association which will accord to the advertisers fair and open treatment be endorsed by them?

But we are saying too much concerning why there should be another association, when the purpose of this article is merely to announce that there is a new association. That the association will have a big field in which to work, can be seen from the fact that opposition plants are now being conducted independently in San Francisco, Kansas City, Cincinnati, New Orleans, New York, and many other large cities. With all these, or a majority of these as centers, together with the hundreds of small towns where there are opposition plants or unaffiliated plants, a service can be offered which would suit any advertiser.

Notes From New York.

Sam W. Hoke was a "Billboard" caller Christmas week, and although he talked a great deal, the majority of what he said was distinctly understood not to be for publication. We presume, however, that he will not object to the publication of his statement that business with him never was better, and that future prospects for the Fifth Avenue Bill Posting Establishment is very bright.

He reports that at the time of his leaving New York, the New York Bill Posting Company's imprint boards had not yet appeared on the tops of the old Reagan, Clark and Munson billboards, but at the same time these boards seemed to be well filled with paper.

He gave it as his private opinion that before many moons there would be only one bill posting company in New York City, but he would not state whether he believed it would be "A. Van Hyen & Co." or "New York Bill Posting Co."

Mr. Hoke was fond in his praises of Sam Pratt's Suburban Bill Posting enterprises, such as the Newark Bill Posting Co., the Elizabeth Bill Posting Co., and all their ramifications in the thirty or forty towns surrounding Newark.

Hoke is now placing paper throughout America for the following articles: Jav-Mar-Mo Coffee, 16 and 8 sheets; Henry George Cigars, 16, 8s, and 16s; George W. Child's Cigars, all sizes of paper from 16 to 24; Gloria Cigars, 8-sheets.

He has new posters under way for a number of large concerns, among them being the Col. Astor Cigar, for J. L. Handly, Kansas City; the Early Bird Tobacco, for P. H. Hanes & Co., Winston, N. C., and some others which the advertisers are not yet ready to have announced.

Incidentally, Sam W. paid for his ad. in "Billboard," and had some money left, which seems to indicate that "Billboard" advertising does pay.

THE BILLBOARD

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—Business is fine here, and I have done all I can do. I find that I am getting new customers each season, and at the same time retaining all of the old ones.

I have now on the boards paper for Dr. N. C. Davis and Shiloh Consumption Cure, besides a great deal of local paper. Have distributed in the past few weeks for the following firms: Dr. N. C. Davis, Shiloh Consumption Cure, Peruna Drug Co., and Lydia Pinkham. Early in the fall, I had a very pleasant call from Mrs. E. H. Behan, representative of Mr. Kilmer's Swamp Root Co., Binghamton, N. Y. She left me a lot of material for two distributions.

I am going to rebuild some of my boards and will also erect some new ones. Although I run the opera house and consequently have a large amount of show paper, I never allow it to interfere with my commercial work, and when necessary I can get all the lumber I desire, and can also obtain good locations. Yours for business, H. E. ROOT.

Laramie, Wyo.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.; 2,500 for Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., and am waiting for the Sen-Sen Gum posters. We are expecting work from the following firms: Peruna Drug Co., Columbus, O.; Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass. Have signed contract with the Dr. Shoop Med. Co., of Racine, Wis. Wishing you a happy New Year, we are, truly yours,

VALLE & RITOS,

Brownsville, Texas.

Comstock, 2,500 almanacs for Peruna Drug Co., Columbus, O., 5,000 booklets for St. Jacobs Institute, Chicago, Ill., 500 samples for Church & Co., of New York City, and tacked 25 signs for Pabst Chemical Co., Chicago, Ill.

J. W. FOSTER,

Guthrie, Okla.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—Please send the Old Reliable for another year, for which you will find money easier for same. In the past month we have distributed work for the following firms: Peruna Drug Co., Columbus, O.; Dr. Chase Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—by the way, this is the fifth distribution we have made for this firm this year—Heers & Hawk, 150 Nassau Street, New York. We are expecting work every day from the J. C. Hubinger Co., Keokuk, Ia. Very truly yours,

JAS. H. CLAXTON & Co.

Hallstead, Pa.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—In the past few weeks I have distributed samples for Mr. W. S. Burkhardt, Cincinnati, O.; Mr. Miles Med. Co., Elkhart, Ind., and books for Dr. Chase Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis.

Am expecting work from the Providence Medical Institute, Chicago, Ill., The Dodds Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. Truly yours,

W. A. LOWREY,

Carthage, Mo.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—I never say much about my "would-be competitors" because I have none. There is no such person as Geo. Castner in Newcastle doing bill posting. He sold out to Mr. Jacob Gengler. The latter gentleman and myself control the city. I wish to state through your columns that I am a member of the I. A. of D. and not one of the I. B. A.'s. Respectfully yours, J. G. LOVINS, Newcastle, Pa.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—Your December number is a splendid paper. The distributor in Pontiac comes along rather slow. It is either all work or none. I have just finished some work for the Dr. Chase Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

A few days ago quite a number of boys came here from Detroit to distribute. I wish the advertiser employing them would follow them and see how their work is put out. I met one man and asked how much he was paid for his work, and he said, one dollar a day and carfare. He had 2,000 for the houses, and he told me he expected to get them all out. Now, I know that this is impossible, if a man puts out from 700 to 800 a day he is doing a very good day's work. How long will it be before the advertisers are convinced that if they want good returns they must pay good prices to have their samples distributed? This is a good field for advertising, and I hope the day is not far distant when the advertiser wakes up to the fact that it is the honest man who does the good work. Yours truly,

Pontiac, Mich.

S. J. BURGESS

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—Our copy of the December issue came safely to hand, and would say that I think it a very handsome copy. I notice that some one from our city has reported the Mr. W. S. Burkhardt's distribution of pills.

At the time of this distribution I was working on circulars for Peruna Winter Lectures on Catarrh, and noticed a crippled man coming down the street with a basket full of the barkings. He was casting them on the floor of the business houses and handing them to the people on the street.

Garfield Tow is now meeting with the same fate. Dr. Miles' Medicine Co. had a distribution made here early in the fall and I can find any quantity of them in corners of yards. Have just finished a 20,000 distribution for C. L. Hood & Co., Dr. Morse Indian Root Almanacs are being distributed by a representative, I suppose, and two negro boys. You may find these almanacs everywhere, and S. S. S. "Wonting the Enemy" was distributed the same way. Wishing you and my brother distributors a happy New Year, I am, yours truly,

JOSEPH S. ALFORD,

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—I am pleased to report the following work: J. W. Brant Co., Albion, Mich., 1,000 pieces; Chattanooga Med. Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., 2,500, two batches from Dr. Miles Med. Co., Elkhart, Ind.; one sample of Atom Farm Pills and the other booklet, making a total of 7,000. Dr. Chase Co., Philadelphia, Pa., 2,500, Saturday Evening Post local, 3,000 sample copies. John J. Milburn, Eaton Rapids, Mich., 2,500 pieces.

Am expecting work from the Central Publishing Co., Battle Creek, Mich.; also, W. H. Comstock, Morristown, N. Y.; John Murray & Co., Springfield, O.; The W. H. Hill Co., Detroit, Mich., has samples of Cascade Broads Quinine Tablets thrown around on steps and any old place by their traveling representative. This firm is one of your "cheap John" advertisers, and will not pay an honest distributor for doing good work. Since my last report, I have become a member of the old reliable I. A. of D. Wishing "The Billboard," the I. A. of D. and all distributors a happy New Year, I am, respectfully yours,

NELSON MATTESON,

Flint, Mich.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—I have distributed 20,000 pieces for Novelty Plaster Works, 1,000 for Dr. Miles Med. Co., 17 deliveries in Waterbury, Waterbury, Union City. Advertisers, I am the only distributor in this city now. The L. E. Pinkham Co. had some distributing put out here, but the majority was sent through the mails. The W. H. Comstock Co. has received the worst service I have seen in years. Their representative came here and hired two small boys, instructing them to leave two booklets in each house. This was done on one street, while on the next they left three in each house, throwing them on the veranda floor. Some advertisers expect good results, but they will not pay to have their work put out in the proper manner.

J. A. NEFF,

Waterbury, Conn.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—To give you an idea of what is going on in Williamsport, Pa., I enclose you my report. I distributed 15,000 for C. L. Hood & Co., $1,000 for the Dr. Chase Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; 5,000 for the Boston Med. Institute; $1,000 for the Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co.; 1,500 for Peruna Drug Co.; $1,000 for the Dr. Miles Medical Co., 8,000 for Foster-Milburn Co., and there are 8,000 samples on the road from the Kondon Mfg. Co.; also, same number from the Lydia E. Pinkham Co. for special delivery in January.

I am now working on 7,000 for the Wyeth Chemical Co. Their agent, Mr. Cowen, is on the ground to oversee the work, and he reports to me that his work is being done well and that it is perfectly satisfactory to him. Mr. Cowen is a gentleman, and he knows when work is well done, as he is an old distributor.

I take pride in knowing that work placed in my hands is being well done, and to the advertisers' best interests, whether they are on the ground to look after it or not. I employ only good, sober men (no boys), and I feel satisfied that if the advertisers could see how some of their printed matter is wasted, they would put an end to it. Some of this kind of distributing is given to advertisers who have sent out their own men, and the firm no doubt believes they are receiving good service, but they are not. If these advertisers were to inspect the work done by their men as zealously as they inspect that of the local distributor, they would find a vast difference between the two. I do not want to say that I am the only distributor doing good work, but I do know that my service is appreciated by the advertisers, if one can judge by the letters I receive from them. Yours for honest work,

S. M. ROND,

Williamsport, Pa. Member I. A. of D.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—We have arranged the dates of our fair for 1900 for July 31, Aug. 1, 2, and 4—four days in all, and intend to make the coming fair even better than the one held last year, which surpassed any we have yet held. 16,000 people attended on one day last year, and there was a large attendance on the other days. Four hundred members of the National Editorial Association of America were present on the last day. We attribute our large attendance to the fact that the exhibits were more numerous than in any previous year.

"The Western Manitoba Big Fair" is now looked upon as the Agricultural Fair of the West, and we intend by judicious increase in prize money and accommodations for exhibits and the general public to warrant the good opinion expressed on all sides. Our half-mile ink-shaped track has for some time held the record for trotting and pacing. At the last fair the time was again lowered by one and one-half seconds.

Each year, a large amount is expended on tree planting and arbor culture and other improvements on the grounds, and we expect to spend $5,000 this year on additional buildings. Our attractions and amusements are always first-class and refined. Yours truly,

F. J. CLARK, Mgr., Western Manitoba Big Fair, Brandon, Man.

Dear Sir—In my distributing department I have put out the following: 4,000 for Boston Medical Institute, Chicago, Ill.; 1,000 Schaefer & Miller, Ann Arbor, Mich.; 14,250 (four distributions) Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.; 9,000 Drs. Kennedy & Kergan, Detroit, Mich.; 4,000 Ohio Coffee & Spice Co., Columbus, O.; 9,000 Providence Med. Institute, Chicago, Ill.

Also have 150 sheets on boards for the Real Widow Brown, Wishing "The Billboard" and all my brother bill posters and distributors a happy New Year, I am, yours for business,

Dear Sir—Keep my name in the distributor's directory for another year, for "The Billboard," together with the I. A. of D., has been successful in bringing me a goodly number of the best advertisers in the country, and I would not "kick" if price was double the amount. I never knew the full worth of an advertisement until I had given same a fair trial in "The Billboard." I extend my best wishes for the continued success of "The Billboard" for 1900. I also extend my best wishes to the prosperity of all members of the International Association of Distributors for 1900. Yours truly,

A. Rogers, Ironon, O., advertising the "Walk-Over Shoe" for men and "Queen Quality" for women. Seven of these distributions were for firms for whom I have never done any work before.

The Globe Remedy Co., of New York, who have been in Ironon for two months selling and advertising their medicines by giving a sample to those who called on them, wound away. They promised to send me some work the first of the year.

Editor of "The Billboard":

Dear Sir—Business with us is on the increase, and will be much more so after the New Year. The trust has not absorbed our plant, nor is it likely to. We are working along nicely and attending strictly to business. We could increase the output of our poster department if the gang in this city would display more business acumen and not act like children.

We know of several good poster customers who have been queered by their unbusinesslike methods, and we have also talked with others out of Philadelphia who would use the bill boards here if they were treated with civility. We do not want to be classed as "kneecutters," but are only stating facts that can be proved.

The W. J. Morgan Co. posters have the call among the local merchants, and we have quite a lot of orders in view for spring trade. Our sign and wall departments are busy on work for Friend's Oats, Emerson Shoe, Pond's Extract, Blue Label Whisky, Douglas Shoe, Royal Blue Cigar, Oxus Cigars, Campbell's Soups, Mayer's Soap, etc., etc.

In our poster department we are now running one-sheets for Logue's Hats, Banks College, Active Grocers, nearly all the standard magazines, etc., etc.

If a little of the O. J. Gude gray matter was divided among the bill posters and sign advertisers throughout the country their paths would be among roses instead of thorns.

With best wishes for "The Billboard," I am, yours, etc., D. C. HUMPHREYS.

THE BILLBOARD.

ASSOCIATION

American Advertisers Meet—Organization Effected and Officers Elected.

(Special Correspondence.)

On January 21, 1898, a number of representatives of well-known manufacturers and advertisers met in New York, and discussed the advisability of forming a union of American advertisers, for the promotion of our common interests, especially to secure aids of the circulation of newspapers and periodicals. At this time Mr. A. Cressy Morrison and Mr. Frederick L. Perine, representing, Scott & Brown & Hall & Tucker, were appointed a committee of two, to consider thoroughly the whole question of the organization of other advertisers and port. This committee soon developed a more comprehensive scheme, namely, the organization of an association which should deal with all matters of importance to advertisers. A call for a convention was issued over fifty general advertisers, for June 5, at the Hotel Netherland, New York. Representatives from over half of those notified responded, and many—in fact, most—of the others were heard from through letters of approval. In these preliminary calls, advertisers at a distance from New York were not included, since it was too much to expect that they would attend the preliminary meetings and also come to the main meeting, at which permanent organization was to be effected. At this preliminary meeting it was voted that the Chairman appoint a Committee on Plan and Scope, which was to be made up of officers and three other gentlemen, who were to be named by the Chairman. The officers for the temporary organization were elected as follows: Chairman, Frederick L. Perine; Secretary, A. C. Morrison; Treasurer, James Ward. The other gentlemen who were appointed to act upon the committee were Joseph Leeming, of Thomas Leeming & Co.; George A. Priest, of the Singer Manufacturing Company, and E. Wyckoff, of Wyckoff, Seamans & Benedict. The date and place for the meeting for permanent organization was left to the committee. This meeting was called for Dec. 11, on which date the meeting was held. The following firms were represented: The American Cereal Co., Hall & Ruckel, Thomas Leeming & Co., Singer Manufacturing Co., World's Dispensary Med. Association, Hance Bros. & White, J. L. Prescott & Co., Smith, Kline & French, J. B. Williams & Co., Postum Cereal Co., Abbott's Effervescent Salt Co., American Baking Powder Association, W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Columbia Photographic Co., Dr. D. Jayne & Son, Marian Co., International Silver Co., Park Davis & Co., Passavant & Co., Ripon Chemical Co., United Shirt & Collar Co., Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., Scouring Co.

Other firms signifying their desire to become members were:

The articles of association, as prepared by the committee, were adopted as read. They are:

NAME.

This organization shall be known as the Association of American Advertisers.

OBJECTS.

It shall bring together those who are directly responsible for the advertising policies of its members, that they may, by mutual interchange of ideas and by co-operation, advance the interests of the membership. It shall develop a means of ascertaining accurately the circulation of publications which accept advertising; secure better service in poster, display, street car, outdoor and inland advertising; perfect a system of economical and certain house-to-house distribution; assist in obtaining a reduction in the total rates on circulars and packages; further the equitable adjustment of all questions relating to express and freight rates and the classification of advertising matter; promote effective advertising for the development of a trade to foreign markets; correct customs abuses; secure adequate protection of trademarks, trade-names and copyrights; and take such other active means for advancing the interests of general advertisers as may properly come before such an association.

MEMBERSHIP.

Membership shall be limited to general advertisers who manufacture or control products which are recognized standards in the markets of the United States. Enrollment shall be in the name of the firm and its products. Each member shall be entitled to one vote. Applications for membership shall be referred to a sub-committee of five on membership, and approved by the board of control before being submitted to the association for election. Three negative votes shall disqualify.

The board of control shall govern the affairs of the association when the association is not in session. The assenting votes of a majority of the members of the board shall be required for the passage of all resolutions involving the expenditure of money, the making of agreements and of any change in the policy and direction of the work of the association, except as otherwise provided in these articles of association or the amendments thereto. Five shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of all other business by the board. There shall be an actuary who shall be appointed by the board of control, whose salary shall be fixed, and duties defined by the board.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Officers and members of the board of control shall be elected at the annual meeting of the association. The officers shall be elected to serve for one year, and four members of the board of control shall be annually elected to serve for two years, except at the first election, when eight members shall be elected, four of whom shall serve for one year, and four for two years.

DUES.

Membership dues shall be $100, payable upon election, and annually in advance thereafter. No assessment shall be levied unless first recommended by the board of control and approved by a two-thirds vote of the members attending any regular meeting of the association, due notice of which shall have been given at least ten days prior to the date set for such meeting.

MEETINGS.

The annual meeting shall be held in the month of November. Formal reports from the President, Treasurer, Recording Secretary, Actuary and the Chairman of each committee, shall be submitted for the approval of the association at the annual meeting. Regular meetings of the association shall be held bi-monthly, excepting June, July, August and September, due notice having been given in writing by the Secretary not less than ten days prior to the date of meeting. All meetings shall be held in New York City, unless otherwise provided for at any regular meeting or by the board. Special meetings may be called by the President at his option, and must be called by him upon the written request of five members of the association. The object of all special meetings shall be specifically stated in the call, and all such calls shall be mailed at least ten days prior to the date of meeting.

The President shall be ex-officio Chairman of the board of control.

RULES OF ORDER.

Cushing's Manual shall be the guide for procedure at all meetings.

AMENDMENTS.

These articles of association may be amended by a two-thirds vote of the members present at any meeting of the association, provided due notice of such meeting and a copy of the proposed amendments have been read by the Secretary at the meeting of the association next preceding the meeting at which action is to be taken, and provided also that both notice and copy of the amendments have been mailed by the Secretary to the membership.

The officers for the permanent organization were elected. They are:

Frederick L. Perine, President; E. G. Wyckoff, Vice President; A. Cressy Morrison, Recording Secretary, Mr. Leeming, Treasurer. A board of control was formed, which is constituted by the officers and H. K. Welch, J. H. Williams & Co.; W. Henry Maule, Maule Seeds; J. M. Bangs, Walter Baker & Co.; John P. Reynolds, Walter Lowney & Co., for a term of one year, and A. E. Rose, J. C. Ayer Co., Dr. V. Mott Pierce, World Dispensary Med. Association; E. P. Mower, American Cereal Co.; Hon. T. L. Woodruff, Maltine Co., for two years.

After discussions upon many points of interest, especially upon the purpose of the organization and the Post cheque plan, the meeting was adjourned to meet in January

Adapted Proverbs.

Dare to advertise.

Be what you seem to be.

Review your past advertisements.

A good ad. will shine forever.

Be always at leisure to advertise.

Victory increases by advertising.

Fortune succeeds by advertising.

A little ad. brings much dust.

Fools make a mock at advertising.

As you advertise, so shall you profit.

A good bargain will tempt a saint.

A man is known by the medium he uses.

Better to advertise late than never.

Constant advertising prevents failure.

Deceive not your ads. with lies.

Common sense is essential to good advertising.

After-wit is everybody's wit.

Defer not when thou intendest to advertise.

You must make your ads. fit your purse.

He that will steal an ad. will steal a better thing.

Confide not in advertisers who have once deceived you.

False grammar does not spoil a deed, but it does an ad.

Nothing is more beautiful in advertising than truth.

One man's fault is another man's lesson.

Constancy in advertising is the fountain of fortune. Advertisements ought to follow, not precede thought.

Advertisements are like sun-dials—no one looks on them if they are in the shade.

Advertising Notes.

Pest—Paint—Distribute. What a world of meaning these three words may be made to have. Taken in the literal way, as they are found in the dictionary, their meaning is understood by all. They have, however, to the advertiser and the advertisers' agent—the bill poster and distributor—entirely different meanings. To post, paint and distribute, to the bill poster means that the work of posting, painting or distributing is actually performed by him or his men, that he has the work to do and is doing it. But to the advertiser it means that he is giving work out, that he is using the bill board bulletin or distributing system of bringing his goods before the public. These are merely definitions of the words as they are technically known to the advertising profession. Back of these simple definitions there are, how much larger, more important thoughts! Led by these three words, one who would indulge in a little retrospection and review the growth of these methods of advertising, would see that they had changed in comparatively a few years from almost unknown quantities in the seeking of publicity, to the greatest and most important factors in the race; from work offering only a scant means of livelihood, to professions giving steady and remunerative employment to thousands of men.

Diversified and distinctive advertising is the kind that pays best. There must be a certain characteristic about the advertisement, no matter whether it be in a poster, in a booklet, on a calendar or in a newspaper ad. It must contain certain marks, so that people will at a glance recognize the matter as coming from you.

From numerous examples we also learn that the greatest successes have been made and are being made by advertisers who use more than one medium. True, the most pronounced successes of late years have been made through posting, but the entire credit can not be given the poster, for distributing and paper advertising in each case have both been used to help out—but in each instance the posters have been the main weapons of attack, the other methods have been but secondary batteries.

Certain classes may be best reached by distributing. When you wish to address the whole public, use posters.

If the advertisers who flounce and fume about getting out the copy for their paper advertisements, and those who pay goodly sums to advertising experts, would try using the poster, they would be relieved of all anxiety concerning whether their ad. would be read by the subscribers, and how many subscribers there would be to read it. One glance, and the poster's work is done. The bill poster in a town of fifty thousand can not say that by posting the town the advertiser will reach one hundred thousand. It must be evident to all that the question of circulation does not bother the poster advertiser—padding is impossible.

The L. E. Waterman Company, manufacturers of Waterman's pens, are now offering prizes to those who can give the best example or definition as to what their $1,000 phrase, "Waterman's Ideal, the fountain of pen satisfaction," is intended to convey. At the time when the prize phrase was announced many thought that the company did not get their money's worth, but these later developments have shown that the company knew their own business best, and that a very capable and long-headed man is at the head of the advertising department of that concern.

The Johann Hoff Malt Extract posters are good. Their three styles posted on one board make a fine combination.

Cubanola Cigars are being extensively advertised throughout the United States.

Another brand of coffee is being placed upon the market. It is called Honor Bright. It looks as if coffee and tobacco were about two laps ahead of all other commodities in the number of brands, and that tobacco leads by a length.

Just at this season, when the sun goes in so early and the shoppers stay out so late, the searchlight plays an especially important part in the advertising campaigns of the large retail and department stores. A light placed on the corner of a building where the rays may be thrown up and down the street is bound to attract much attention and create much comment.

Mr. D. H. Hayes, manager of a flour mill at Little Rock, Ark., is the perpetrator of a neat advertising scheme, in which he introduced the brand of flour made by his mill into the homes of many families. It is in the shape of a scented and neatly worded letter, with a sample piece of ribbon, to the head of the family, from "Clara," and has been opened, but not read (?) by his better half. The letter admonishes her "Dear" not to forget to buy the ribbon, and particularly, "Dear," insist on having Way's Crest Flour when you order the groceries." With an obtuse or overly judicious wife, "dear" is liable to have a rather sultry time. Practically the same scheme has been brought to light through the city post-office at Newport News, Va. A number of men there received letters post-marked Cincinnati and addressed in a feminine hand. Each letter had been opened and in the lower corner was written the words, "Opened, but not read." Inside upon tinted paper, written in a clear, womanly hand, was an affectionate epistle which wound up on the second page by recommending a Cincinnati whisky. A number of persons complained that their mail was being opened—the very object of the dodge—some threatening to carry the matter to headquarters. In consequence, the whisky is receiving a considerable amount of advertising.

On the first floor of the Court House at DeBiance, O., a regulation clock has been placed by the Railroad Advertising Company. The clock is operated by the telegraph time service, which insures its correct regulation. The clock costs the county nothing, and is quite a convenience to the public. The only payment received by the advertising company is that which comes from the privilege of posting a placard, on which there is room for twelve advertisements.

An enterprising cigar company of Grand Rapids lately introduced quite a novelty in the way of street advertising idea. A man, made up, in a wonderfully life-like manner, to represent "Oom Paul Kruger," was driven through the streets in an open carriage, drawn by horses gayly bedecked with colors of the South African republic. The front seat was occupied by a driver in livery and a bugler in costume which gave the turn-out a decidedly martial appearance. This is one of the numerous ways the new nickel cigar, "Oom Paul," is being introduced.

At a county fair in Illinois an acrobat who was going to make an ascension was hired by a liquor firm to take along with him a large number of sample bottles of their standard wine. During the ascension he would throw these bottles out, each bottle having previously been attached to a diminutive parapet. Eager crowds were below, awaiting the arrival of the bottles, and a "free for all" was indulged in when they came within reach. This great scramble of course caused excitement, and it was not long before every person on the ground knew what it was that was being thrown from the balloon and what firm was furnishing the samples.

The Freeman Perfume Company, of Cincinnati have been doing some very good advertising of late. Their automobile, elegantly painted and run by a colored man in a suit of livery, has attracted much attention, and makes a very good novelty to help out their street car ads.

This Board Speaks for Itself.

THE BILLBOARD.

The Consolidated Railway Advertising Company has been incorporated at Memphis, Tenn., with a capital stock of $200,000. The operators are R. G. Collier, J. C. Ramsey, M. Holler, of Memphis; A. D. Newby, of Atlanta, Tenn., and J. F. Mahon, of Chicago.

No shorter a business announcement is to be the longer will be the list of people who have time to read it.

Another infants' food is in the field. It is manufactured by the Wagner Food Co., 157 Broadway, New York, and is starting its advertising in the papers.

"Faust Blend," a Mocha and Java mixture made by the C. F. Blanke Tea & Coffee Co., St. Louis, is to be extensively advertised. $100 worth of publicity has been contracted for through an agency.

The J. T. Ayer Co., of Lowell, Mass., will shortly advertise a new hair tonic called Kymatome. Papers will probably be used.

It is rumored that W. W. Smith, of Leipzig, Ill., will hereafter place the Peruna advertising.

Here is an advertisement from an old copy of an English provincial journal. "Wanted, for a sober family, a man of light weight, who fears the Lord and can drive a pair of horses. He must occasionally wait at table, join the household in prayer, look after the horses and read a chapter of the Bible. He must, God willing, arise at 5 o'clock in the morning, and obey his master and mistress in all lawful commands, if he can dress hair, sing psalms, and play at cribbage, the more agreeable. Wages, 15 guineas a year."

F. A. Mills, music publisher, of New York, Boston and Chicago, who handles the popular compositions of Kerry Mills, is advertising Kerry's latest oak-walk march, entitled "Impetuous Davis." He sends out sample copies to musical editors of papers and magazines, and in this way receives free reading notices. It is claimed that the advance sale of this piece has reached the unprecedented number of 265,000 copies.

A clergyman who uses the newspapers on Saturdays to advertise his church, says in a letter to publishers: "The question of the propriety of church advertising may be raised, yet the gospel is of greater value than much that is advertised in your columns. The successful business man advertises. I believe that the church that would be successful in extending its influence must do the same."

New York and other Eastern States have a law which provides that any person advertising by written announcements in any newspaper, book, periodical, or other publication by bills, signs or cards, goods which he has not in stock, or represents goods to be other than they are, or offers them at prices which he does not sell them, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

In the cars the ads. seem to be much the same. The old advertisers present the largest and best cards. The J. T. Ayer Company is still in evidence. Carter's pills are there with the same old ad. The familiar Heinz pickle is to be seen, but The Snyder Company has double space, pushing their catsup. Amasisk and Neasrillik are both the only substitutes for silk worth having. "Hydane" says, "Look Here, Don't Be Foolish," and Funk & Wagnalls' cards, telling about their literary digest, are very cleverly worded. S. H. & M. Skirt Binding has the same coil of their "brush edge" and Nubian Black Linings still attract attention. Quaker Oats and Friends oats still vie with each other, and last, but not least of the national advertisers comes Sapsago, which "secures land and sea."

Our Doings, a booklet by Lord & Thomas, of New York and Chicago, is meant to interest present or prospective advertisers in their ability to prepare and place profit-bringing public announcements on any subject in all media best suited to their requirements. It is filled with familiar ads., gotten up by that company. It should serve its purpose.

The Enterprise Printing Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, sends us a little booklet, entitled "The Point of View." The cover is unique, and the printing is excellent. The arguments, however, are not as specific as they should be to assure good results.

This office is in receipt of one of the Pope Manufacturing Co.'s desk calendars, advertising their chainless Columbia bicycles. We desire to express our appreciation of their advertising enterprise and our thanks for such a useful gift.

The Gunning System of Advertising is again made plain in their circular about Quaker Oats. The circular advertises both the American Cereal Co. and the Gunning system, thus performing a double purpose.

"Sunsent," the magazine published by the passenger department of the Southern Pacific Company is a very creditable work. Besides being an excellent advertisement, it contains some good reading matter.

The "Truth" calendar for 1900 is truly a work of art. The one on the wall of our office looks especially nice.

The booklet sent out by the Hanning Advertising Agency, St. Paul, Minn., is filled with info of their various departments. From these one can get an idea of the immense amount of business they carry.

Admirer, the ad-writer, of Des Moines, Iowa, says "An ad. is the truth told with type to stand business."

The best argument that can be advanced in favor of poster advertising is the result obtained from well placed paper.

Booklets are good trade-pullers, if they are good, but unattractive booklets are merely a waste of money.

If you will notice, the advertiser who gives in the bill boards to try other mediums, like the proverbial cat, always comes back.

Pitts' Antiseptic Invigorator is a new remedy in the field. It is made at Thomson, Ga. Cards and posters will be used to bring it into prominence.

Swauchell & Co., of Mundie, used to advertise the Wellsbach burners—a tag, which they attach to the doorknobs of every house in the city by means of a string. The plan is expensive, but brings good returns.

The L. Gerstle Co., of Chattanooga, Tenn., famous for their St. Joseph's remedies, will use two-sheet posters to boom their Female Paracelsa.

Window cards are to be used by the Dr. Reeder Family Medicine Co., to promote their herbal remedies.

Lincoln Proprietary Co., of Ft. Wayne, Ind., are interested in poster advertising this winter.

Canada is to be covered thoroughly by The Alfonzo H. Bliss Company, Washington, D. C. They carry "Our Native Herbs." Posters will be used.

The Emerson Drug Co., Manufacturing Chemists, Baltimore, Md., are not doing any bill posting at present.

At a negro dance recently, one of the dancers lost his watch. The announcement of his loss was profusely illustrated with cuts.

Some one who has evidently been smoking a new brand, reports that the big wholesale clothing houses of Chicago will discontinue the single sheet posters, which have long been a feature of their country advertising. This they will not do until that method fails to bring the customers, which time will never come in our day.

Ayer's pills have lately been trying to make up some of the ground lost during the last two years. Carter's had stolen quite a lead through their persistent advertising.

Merchants who mark their goods $5 worth $10, have long ago been put down by the public as deliberate liars.

Morse, Steebe & Co., of the Manufacturing Pharmacists, of Mt. Vernon, Ill., advertise Morse's Pain Anodyne, Electric Liniment, Red Liver Pills and Storer's Eye Salve.

Great tact is put in the properly worded and printed poster by the Kinney Medical Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., who handle a rheumatic and kidney remedy.

Cheapness in posters shows the same as cheapness in anything else. The advertiser should look around and get the best possible paper for his money. This is a point too often neglected.

Posters at Church Doors.

A curious difficulty has arisen in Buckinghamshire in reference to the usage of church and chapel doors as notice boards. Generally speaking, in the past, the announcements have been such as have not been regarded as objectionable; but, by order of the County Council, large posters have been displayed relative to the control of unsecured bulls, and stating that such animals must be led through the streets or any public place without a ring, a rope, and a pole being attached to their noses. Indignation has been aroused and at Penn, near Amersham, the Parish Council have had the question under consideration, and have resolved to communicate with the local government board in the matter. Publicity.

Distinctive Colors.

Just at present some very extensive advertising is being done in the East, which embodies a novel and striking idea, not often employed namely, the use of a pronounced and distinctive color in the work. The same plan has been successfully adopted in other directions, the result invariably being a bold and effective advertisement. For instance, the merchant pastes a peculiar green-colored label on every package that goes out of his store, the result that his goods are as easily distinguished from those of other stores as a telegraph blank is from a pile of other papers. It is also pointed out that it is a good plan to adopt a certain distinctive color for bills, envelopes, etc., as colored stationery enables one to pick a certain bill or letter out of a pile with great ease, thereby saving considerable time. How Callers Are Received.

E. T. KEVSEY.

The elevator stopped at the forty-fourth floor and I emerged.

Walking a few steps down a marble-paved corridor, I was about to knock at the door—I mean oxidized bronze gates, when I passed a beautiful youth in costly raiment, training a Gatling gun on me with one hand while with the other he pushed toward me a silver salver on the end of an ebony rod.

"Halt and give the countersign," observed the youth, in a menacing tone.

"Give the what?" I queried, in a shaking voice.

"Fill out the card," he explained, pitying my ignorance.

Thus enlightened, I noticed, nestling in the corner of the salver, a card of heaviest brass decorated with a coat of arms and edged with gold. On the card were printed the following questions:

1. What is your name?
2. How old are you?
3. What is your weight?
4. Are you suffering from any contagious disease?
5. Have you ever suffered from any contagious disease?
6. What brand of soap did you use this morning?
7. Please state your reasons for using this brand.
8. How much are you worth?

"Please specify how much in real estate, how much in personal property."

9. How much could you probably borrow at a bank?

10. What do you wish to see me about, at this hour?"

Keeping a wary eye upon the attendant who was carelessly playing with the lock mechanism of the Garling, I filled out the information card to the best of my recollection, and blithely dropped it back in the tray.

The youth disappeared through a doorway and as the Turkish curtain fell behind him I sank on a divan of Russian leather, overjoyed by the magnificence which surrounded me and read the following embossed placards on the hand-painted walls:

"Advertising Solicitors received between 8:15 and 8:30 a. m."

"Advertising Writers given audience from 8:30 to 8:45 a. m."

"Poets, Artists and other mendicants referred to the Bureau of Charities and Correction. See City Directory."

"Advisors with money to burn will sit in their bank books as a means of identification. They may occupy two chairs while balance is being proved. All others remain standing."

Waited by the last regulation, I sprang my feet, just as the gate-keeper returned.

"His High Learnedness will be graciously pleased to see you at four in the afternoon next week after next," he announced.

Lutting up my coat, I stepped toward the door.

But again the salver advanced in my direction.

"Five dollars and ninety-eight cents wear and tear on the furniture, please," said, tearing my pocket-book from my coat. I threw it over the rail and fled.

I had saved my watch and lost forty minutes.—Fame.

Mail Order Business.

A Matter of Selection.

In Julian Hawthorne's ten-thousand-dollar New York Herald prize story, "A Fool of Nature," occurs this passage: "They renewed their jests of wit at fashionable dinner tables, not saying many radically new things, but giving a fresh turn to the old, trustworthy ones."

Give a fresh turn to the old.

Here is the quintessence of successful advertising for the retailer.

Stirring incidents in the most successful plays staged to-day, are derived from old half-forgotten dramas, stories, or incidents of ancient times.

An eminent divine of to-day was but recently accused of plagiarism, because a sermon found his sermon contained the same sentiments inscribed in hieroglyphics upon stones of ancient Egypt.

Twentieth century ideas are ideas of ages gone. There is nothing absolutely new under the sun. Things may be new to us, but our thoughts, our likes, our loves, our passions, were those of our ancestors—new to us, new to them, but old to the world.

A few years since, I was doing some insurance advertising for a local agent, when I exulted, as I supposed, the phrase "Right if I write it." While rummaging in an "Old Curiosity Shop," on the Bowery recently, I glanced over a stack of old papers published in 1872, and behold my original? a phrase boldly displayed as a headline to an advertisement.

The man who sits down to write an ad. with the ideas firmly rooted that he must produce something new and original, in order to produce an effective ad., is the man who fails the least in his attempts.

Better results would accrue if the retailer would copy more, and seek to originate less in his advertising.

One man in a thousand can write a good ad.

One man in a hundred can tell a good ad. when he sees it.

It requires just as much labor to write a poor ad. as to write a good one.

It is more essential that you be able to select a good ad. than to write either. Wm. Huston in the "Optical Journal."

There is no stopping place on the road of advertising. You must be a constant traveler or you will be left behind among the unknowns. Mail Order Journal.

A great many business men complain to people who should patronize their stores so their orders to adjacent cities, or buy from the large mail-order houses. There is nothing strange about this tendency of the people send away for things which are properly advertised. The only way to offset such a tendency is by letting the people know that you have the goods for which these mail-order houses ask a price that will enable them to make a profit. Let them know you could sell to your customers for less money than we are charged for the same article if ordered by mail or express, after they have paid transportation charges. No business man could prevent all the people of his town from ordering goods from the mail-order houses but many of the business men could materially decrease the volume of this business that went outside of their town, if they entered into the matter with persistent advertising.

Tell about the goods they have, the prices they ask and the reasons they have for thinking their stock more attractive than the city houses. It is because of excellently advertising these mail-order people can get the people of a locality to send for goods.

is by conscientious, excellent advertising. A local merchant could prevent much of his business going out of his town. Advertising World.

Messrs. Smelser and Garvin

We are publishing in our columns photos of Messrs. Smelser & Garvin, the proprietors and distributors at Whiting, Indiana. They have at present 600 running feet of boards and are building more. Owing to urgent demands for space, they can not erect boards fast enough. Their locations along the railroad and street car lines are among the best to be found in the State. They are young and enterprising, and are very popular among the agents and traveling men.

Within the past few years a corps of so-called advertising experts have sprung up who think they know a halloval about business, but aside from having mastered the fact that no business can succeed without advertising in one form or another, they are utterly impossible for a man to predict the results of a certain advertisement as to whether it will bring in a fortune. Boot and Shuster.

THE BILLBOARD.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION

Entered in the U. S. Court, in favor of The Donaldson Lithographing Co., of Newport, Ky.

On June 10th last, the Courier Lithograph Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., instituted a suit against the Donaldson Lithograph Co., of Newport, Ky., for infringement of certain copyrighted circus posters. The case reached a hearing in the United States Circuit Court at Covington, Ky., December 12th, and resulted in a pronounced and sweeping victory for the Donaldsons.

Poster printers in general will be interested in the details, which were as follows, viz.: In 1898, The Courier Co. executed certain contracts for B. E. Wallace, proprietor of the great Wallace Shows. The posters in question were what is technically known as "special work," that is to say, they were designed to advertise certain acts and features of the Wallace Shows, and were made at the order and after ideas furnished by Mr. E. Wallace.

After the sketches were approved, the Courier Co. undertook to copyright them in order to secure an undue advantage on future orders of reproductions.

During the summer of 1898, Mr. Wallace had nature reproductions in electrotypes made on the copyrighted designs for use in newspaper advertising, and used said cuts without hindrance from the Courier Co. during the remainder of the season, despite the fact that credit for the designing was withheld from the Courier Co., and no notice of copyright appeared on the electrotypes.

The enterprising Donaldson Co., however, secured the Wallace Show contract for 1899, and all of the copyrighted posters were resigned, but the electrotypes used during the previous year for newspapers were furnished to Donaldson's for use in the programmes, the cuts were scrutinized, and no notice of copyright appearing on them, they were used as ordered by the Donaldsons.

The Courier Co. sold some 23,000 copies of these programmes, and sued for $23,000.00, one dollar per copy, the penalty prescribed by statute.

Without hearing any testimony of the defendant or even allowing defendant's counsel to present argument, Judge Evans, who occupied the bench, instructed the jury to find for the defendant. The verdict carries with damages, which the Donaldson's will recover from the Courier Co.

The charge was too lengthy to be given in full in these columns, but its main features are about as follows, viz.: A poster is an advertisement, and hence a utensil and not a work of art" within the meaning of the statute.

In other words, the copyright law, in the opinion of the court, was passed to encourage artists and designers in the production of original "works of art." A poster, therefore, could not be an original work of art, because it was designed to advertise something (in this case, an act) which had been previously conceived and originated in the mind's eye of the showman.

An artist working under the orders and at the direction of some one else, can not be said to be originating within the meaning of the statute.

In this connection it was observed but not said that the act itself might be copyrighted by the person that conceived it, but not the advertisement of the act.

There was much rejoicing among showmen in Cincinnati over the triumph of the Donaldsons. The firm is deservedly popular, and the precedent established is regarded as possessing much value to showmen. The action was generally considered a malicious suit, and the outcome as a well deserved boomerang.

Mr. Wallace himself was ready and willing to testify that the ideas were his, and that the cost of designing sketches, etc., were figured into the price that he paid for the first edition of the posters. Ergo, he considered the designs his, and his right to order reproductions from whom he chose, unquestionable. Other showmen held that the government, in case the plaintiff had been sustained, would tend to itself to the restriction of competition in trade.

About Ourselves—By Others.

A few of the bouquets we have received lately:

Enclosed please find necessary amount to secure your most valued paper reaching me regularly during 1900. "The Billboard" is a most welcome caller each month, and I am always anxious to look it over, as I find a great many interesting communications from my friends among the bill posters and distributors, as well as much valuable information that I could not possibly get from any other source. When speaking of a paper published in the interests of bill poster, distributor and advertiser, I know of none that covers the field as thoroughly as "The Billboard" or one that is more fair and honorable, statements to the contrary notwithstanding, and I am sure your prestige or circulation will not suffer to any great extent through any malicious or unscrupulous assertions from a source where falsehood and unfairness predominates.

Your Christmas number was truly a work of art and you have no doubt received many complimentary letters from advertisers and subscribers, commanding you on your enterprise. Wishing you continued success and many compliments of the season, I am yours truly,

D. R. TALBERT,
Chicago, Ill.

I would not be without "The Billboard" five times the amount of the regular subscription price, for in addition to its being an official organ, it is a stalwart champion of the right. I am well aware that justice and right do not always conquer, neither does truth—almighty though it may be—always prevail, but with the little foresight vouchsafed me, I am confident that corruption will not prevail this time. Wishing you the success that you most certainly deserve, I beg to sign myself your admirer and upholder,

J. T. McMANAMA,
Pittsburg, Pa.

Your paper has been very useful in the past year, and I heartily endorse it for the future, wishing you and your paper a merry Christmas and prosperous New Year. I am, etc.,

Enclosed please find $1.00 for the continuation of my subscription to "The Billboard." I would be lost without your valuable paper and only wish that you could issue twice a month, instead of once.

Continue my name in the directory and my subscription for the ensuing year. The Christmas number received, and it is a dandy in every particular. Business has been first-class this season, and I attribute it to "The Billboard" and my membership in the L. A. of D.

DAN R. ROBINSON,
Agent for Gentry Bros.' Dog and Pony Show.

"The Billboard" Christmas number is fine in every sense of the word, and is bristling with good things for the advertisers, bill posters and distributors. They should all start the New Year by subscribing for "The Billboard." They will find it money well spent.

I have just received your Xmas number. It is a fine production in both cover and reading matter, but for that matter every number is good, and I could not do without it.

GEO. PROTZMAN,
Rossburg, Oregon.

A novel poster was seen by a recent sojourner in Nova Scotia. It was printed on rough paper with red paint, in a childish hand, and was tacked to a telegraph pole in a conspicuous position:

"There will be a concert and fair in Mrs. Parson's sitting room to-day, July twenty, at two o'clock sharp. Admission—Adults, five cents; children two cents; babies, two for a cent. Youth's Companion."

The Manufacturing Club of Cincinnati, of which Mr. Viborg, of the Ault & Viborg Linc Company is president, is agitating the question of holding an exposition in this city next year. The hotel men and the prominent merchants have declared themselves as in favor of the plan, and are willing to support the movement, but as yet nothing definite has been accomplished.

The Magazines for 1900.

THE CENTURY.

The Century Magazine will, with the coming year, celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of its existence. One of the most promising features announced is a life of Cromwell by John Morely. It is to be accompanied by portraits, many of which have never before been in print. Mark Twain is to contribute auto-biographical articles and Mr. Richard Whiting will send a number of papers from the Paris Exposition, under the caption of "The Paris of To-day."

SCHIRMER'S.

Schirmer's Magazine will contain articles of great interest, contributed by well-known literary stars, such as the War in the Transvaal, the Paris Exposition, College Life, Omdurman and the Sudan, Greenland, and many others of wide and cosmopolitan interests.

HARPER'S.

Harper's will produce two great novels in the coming year, one by Mrs. Humphrey Ward and one by L. Zangwill. Humorous stories by Mark Twain, Frank Stockton and others will appear. Among other contributors are Frederic Remond, Stephen Crane, Rudyard Kipling and Marie Van Vorst.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The Cosmopolitan is a delightfully pictorial magazine, and occupies a field peculiarly its own. It will, as usual, appeal to the readers of bright literature; and will publish portraits of celebrities and pictures of the events of the stage.

PEARSON'S.

Pearson's Magazine was originally an Enblished youth are to be discussed on the moral side by eminent divines and on the practical side by eminent financiers. Theodore Stanton will write on the Paris Exposition as it compares with the Chicago World's Fair. "The Domestic Life of the Boers," by Oliver Schreiber, the author of "The Story of an African Farm," will be published immediately, and other African stories will follow by Sir Henry M. Stanley, Rider Haggard and Sir H. H. Johnston, formerly British High Commissioner in Central Africa.

ST. NICHOLAS.

St. Nicholas will publish a number of long stories, each complete in a single number, as an attraction for 1900. Among them will be "Happy Pickaninny," by Ruth McEnery Stuart; "The Kid," by Elizabeth Custer, widow of General Custer; "From Pier to Pyramid," by Mary Mapes Dodge, the editor of St. Nicholas; "A Boy of Galatia," by Samuel C. Scoville, Jr., a story of an athletic contest of ancient times by the author of "The Making of a Mascot"; "Christmas in the Home Station," by Anna E. Rogers, author of many stories of United States naval life abroad; "The Doubtful Member," by the late Mary E. Bradley.

TRUTH.

The prospectus for Truth is most promising, as it is to be full of interesting contributions, and the illustrations up to the standard, and it is an acknowledged fact that Truth is pictorially and typographically a work of art.

FRANK LESLIE'S.

The list of contributors to Frank Leslie's for the New Year is a very extensive one, and ensures its readers many interesting and edifying articles.

AINSLEE'S.

Ainslee's Magazine is to contain sketches of Kentucky life by Triple Read. This is to be one of the treats that this popular magazine has in store for its readers, besides articles that cover international interests.

CASPER WHITNEY'S NEW MAGAZINE.

Mr. Casper Whitney, whose work as a general correspondent and as a brilliant supporter of all that is best in American sport in Harper's Weekly have been widely appreciated, is to retire from that journal on January 1. Mr. Whitney is to have a magazine of his own, or, rather, to use his own words, will found a home for the literature of the "free people," as Kipling happily calls them, which will include not only the publication of books on sport, travel and adventure, but a monthly magazine devoted to the same subjects, and when the season advances, a weekly paper to cover current comment, news, criticism, etc. Mr. Whitney's magazine will undoubtedly be one of the most interesting creations of the new season.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

The Ladies' Home Journal has arranged a programme for the forthcoming year that promises to eclipse anything that that popular monthly has ever attempted and patrons of magazines know what that means. Among the leading contributions will be a series on the theater, in which Franklin Fyles will give descriptions of the play, the players and the theater, their means and management, their trials and tribulations. A pictorial feature will be one hundred illustrations of the most interesting and picturesque places in America by Linton L. Holden. A. B. Frost has been secured to give a series of pictures of country folk that will be among the best that this popular artist has ever produced.

DAN R. ROBINSON.

Dan R. Robinson, whose portrait appears in this issue though a man of long and wide experience in the show business, is comparatively a new comer in the firmament of star agents.

It is only within the last few years that he has devoted himself to advance work, but his success has been so marked and the work has proved so congenial that it is safe to say that he will devote himself to it entirely in the future.

His ability in his new field first attracted general attention when he was ahead of the Sipe & Black show. He demonstrated then that he not only possessed sound judgment, but remarkable executive ability as well.

Last year, with the tiptops, he strengthened his claims of managerial favor by many brilliant advertisements. He proved himself an excellent judge of country, a splendid railroad contractor and an indefatigable worker.

His work has shone him up into very fast company, but no one doubts his ability to hold his own in the new class.

W. E. FRANKLIN.

William Emory Franklin, well and favorably known from ocean to ocean as the genial agent of the great Wallace Shows, is the subject of our frontispiece this month. He enjoys the reputation of being one of the most aggressive and thorough billers in the show business. His work last season ahead of the Wallace Shows demonstrated conclusively the advantages of heavy billing both in and out of opposition. Colonel Franklin has a wonderful knowledge of country and railroads, in fact, he is the ideal general agent a fact which is further attested by the salary he draws—the largest, it is said, ever paid to a circusagent.

Although a very exacting man, he is a prime favorite with his lieutenants in the advance force, and is held in high esteem by all of his friends and associates without exception.

In private life he is known as Watska Bill.

The Illinois Press Association will hold its annual meeting at the Lexington Hotel, Chicago, during the first week of February. Chas. Patterson, of "Newspaperdom," New York, has been invited to deliver an address on "Display Advertising," illustrated by a stereopticon.

The Iowa Press Association elected the following officers for the ensuing year at its meeting, held in Des Moines, Ia.

THE BILLBOARD

About The Big Expositions.

Extracts from President McKinley's Message to Congress.

Philadelphia Export Exposition.

In accordance with an act of Congress approved Dec. 21, 1888, and under the auspices of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, a most interesting and valuable exposition of products and manufactures especially adapted to export trade was held in Philadelphia from the 11th of September to the 1st of December, 1889. The representative character of the exhibits and the widespread interest manifested in the special objects of the undertaking afford renewed encouragement to those who look confidently to the steady growth of our enlarged exportation of manufactured goods, which has been the most remarkable fact in the economic development of this United States in recent years. A feature of this exposition which is likely to become a permanent and increasing utility to our industries is the collection of samples of merchandise produced in various countries with special reference to particular markets, providing practical object lessons to United States manufacturers as to qualities, styles and prices of goods such as meet the special demands of consumers and may be exported with advantage.

In connection with the exposition an international commercial congress was held, upon invitation of the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, transmitted by the Department of State to the various foreign governments for an exchange of information and opinions with the view to the promotion of international trade. This invitation met with general and cordial acceptance, and the congress, which began its sessions at the exposition on the 11th of October, proved to be of great practical importance from the fact that it developed a general recognition of the interdependence of nations in trade and a most gratifying spirit of accommodation with reference to the gradual removal of existing impediments to reciprocal relations without injury to the industrial interests of either party.

Paris Exposition.

The death of President Faure in February last called forth some sincere expressions of sympathy which beset the relations of two republics as closely allied by unbroken histories as are the United States and France. Preparations for the representations of the industries, arts and products of the United States at the world's exposition, to be held

Paris next year continues on an elaborate and comprehensive scale, thanks to the generous appropriation provided by Congress and to the friendly interest the French Government has shown in furthering a typical exhibit of American progress.

There has been allotted to the United States a considerable addition of space, which, while placing our country in the first rank among exhibitors, does not suffice to meet the increasingly urgent demands of our manufacturers. The efforts of the Commissioner General are ably directed toward a strictly representative display of all that most characteristically marks American achievement in the various arts and most adequately show the excellence of our natural productions.

In this age of keen rivalry among nations for mastery in commerce, the doctrine of evolution and the rule of the survival of the fittest must be as inexorable in their operation as they are positive in the results they bring about. The place won in the struggle by an industrial people can only be held by unremitting endeavor and constant advance in achievement. The present extraordinary position in every line of exportation, and the continuing increase in the volume and value of our share in the world's markets, may not be attributed to accidental conditions. The reasons are not far to seek. They lie in our national character and find expression, year by year, in every branch of handicraft, in every new device whereby the materials we so abundantly produce are submitted to the artisan's will and made to yield the largest, most practical and most beneficial return. The American exhibit at Paris could, and I am confident will, be an open one, whose lessons of skillfully directed power, unadulterating energy and consummate performance may be read by all on every page, thus spreading abroad a clearer knowledge of the worth of our productions and the justice of our claims to an important place in the markets of the world. To accomplish this by judicious selection, by recognition of paramount merit in whatever walk of trade or manufacture it may appear, and orderly classification and attractive installation is the task of our commission. The United States Government Building is approaching completion, and no effort will be spared to make it worthy to represent our nation. It has been suggested that a permanent building of similar or appropriate design be erected on a convenient site, already given by the municipality, to serve in commemoration of the part taken by this country in this great enterprise as an American national institute of our countrymen resorting to Paris for study.

I am informed by our Commissioner General that we shall have in the American section at Paris over 7,000 exhibitors, from every state in our country, a number ten times as great as those which were represented at Vienna in 1873, six times as many as those in Paris in 1855, and four times as many as those who exhibited in Paris in 1889. This statement does not include the exhibits from either Cuba, Porto Rico or Hawaii, for which arrangements have been made.

A number of important international congresses of special topics affecting public interests are proposed to be held in Paris next summer in connection with the exposition. Effort will be made to have the several technical branches of our administration efficiently represented at those conferences, each in its special line, particularly at the congresses of public charity and medicine.

Pan-American Exposition.

The act to encourage the holding of the Pan-American Exposition at the Niagara frontier within the County of Erie or Niagara, in the State of New York, in the year 1893, was approved on March 3, 1889.

This exposition, which will be held in the city of Buffalo, in the near vicinity of the great Niagara Cataract, and within a day's journey of which reside 40,000,000 of our people, will be confined entirely to the Western Hemisphere. Satisfactory assurances have already been given by the diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, Mexico, the Central and South American republics and most of the States of the United States, that these countries and States will make a unique, interesting and instructive exhibit, peculiarly illustrative of their material progress during the century which is about to close. The law provides an appropriation of $500,000 for the purpose of making an exhibition at the exposition by the government of the United States from its Executive Departments and from its Smithsonian Institution and National Museum, the United States Commission of Fish and Fisheries, the Department of Labor and the Bureau of American Republics. To secure a complete and harmonious arrangement of this Government exhibit a Board of Management has already been created and charged with the selection, purchase, preparation, transportation, arrangement and safe keeping of the articles and materials to be exhibited. The board has been organized and has already entered upon the performance of its duties as provided for by law.

I have every reason to hope and believe that this exposition will tend to cement more firmly the cordial relations between the nations on this continent.

Fair Managers' Meeting.

The annual convention of the American Association of Fairs and Expositions was held in Chicago, Nov. 21 and 22. The purpose of the convention was the discussion of matters pertaining to the management of fairs and expositions and the consideration of new propositions for the betterment and enlargement of the work. The first session was largely given to the usual preliminary business in the way of official reports, admission of members, etc. The second session was devoted to the program, which consisted of papers and addresses under the following titles:

"The Influence of the Fair and Exposition in Promoting the Horse Industry," by H. Wade, of Toronto Exposition, and Registrar of the Shorthorn Breeders' Association; "Advertising the Fair," by E. W. Randall, Secretary of the Minnesota State Fair; "The Relation of the Fair to the Railways," by J. Irving Pease, of Chicago; "The Proper Condition of Show Animals," by A. J. Lovejoy, of the Illinois State Fair; "The Special Relation of the Fair to the City in Which Held," by H. S. Grimes, of the Ohio State Fair; "The Fair and the Speed Horse," by J. H. Steiner, Secretary of the American Trotting Association.

In the selection of dates for the State fairs in 1890, the result was as follows:

Eastern Circuit—New York, Aug. 27 to Sept. 1; Ohio, Sept. 3 to 8; Indiana, Sept. 17 to 22; Illinois, Sept. 21 to 29; St. Louis, Oct. 1 to 6; Western Circuit—Iowa, Aug. 21 to Sept. 1; Minnesota and Nebraska, Sept. 3 to 8; Wisconsin, Sept. 10 to 15; thence to Indiana and Illinois; Toronto, Ont., Sept. 3 to 15.

Officers were elected as follows: President, A. J. Lovejoy, Roseve, Ill.; Vice President, W. F. Harriman, Hampton, Ia.; Treasurer, Wm. M. Liggett, St. Anthony Park, Minn.; Secretary, James W. Fleeting, Columbus, O.

Live Stock Show.

As a result of recent action in Chicago by the breeders' organizations, an International Live Stock Exposition is assured. Dec. 1 to 5, inclusive, are the dates set for the display, and among the main features will be the following:

1. A grand breeders' prize exhibition of cattle, hogs and sheep, with daily sales of all breeds.

2. A great fat stock show, surpassing even the renowned annual Smithfield shows of England, in which the royalty and aristocracy of that country take such pride as exhibitors and interested visitors.

3. A fine display of draft horses and horses for general use, not as a society show, but as a utility show.

4. An exhibition of dressed meats and meat food products of all kinds, and refrigerator appliances for preserving the same.

5. Animal by-products, showing the complete utilization of all parts of the slaughtered animals not directly used as meat foods.

6. An exhibition of packing-house methods and appliances, and Government inspection of meats.

7. Transportation appliances and methods, public inspection of live animals, sheep dipping, etc.

8. Slaughter tests, to determine the results of different methods of preparation for market, and effects of different foods.

9. Meetings of breeders' and stockmen's associations, with able papers and discussions by the foremost representatives of the live stock interests of the world.

In fact, every one interested, from the cattle breeder to the consumer, will be represented. It will be a complete exposition of everything pertinent to the live stock world.

A Memory of The Centennial.

In the December number of "The National Magazine," a writer gives some reminiscences of the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876, and says:

"What tricks memory plays us! How often, as the stored-up films of the brain are unwound by thought, the reverie is made strange by a picture long forgotten and seemingly cut off all keeping with others on the roll. Recollections of the great exposition of 1876 should be of the national splendor there evinced; the marvelous display of other lands; the wondrous beauty of it all. But I see first a negative showing a swarthy oriental, radiating in a purple turban, flowing robes of silk and flashing jewels, who one morning found his pathway in the grounds disputed by some plain Americans. In their haste the visitors pushed the gorgeous vision off the walk. Shaking his fist at the rude disturbers of his dignity, the walking rainbow exclaimed in good Celtic-Saxon: 'Begorrah, does ye take me for a real Turk?'"

Fair Notes.

During the week following Jan. 20, a cycle and automobile show will be held at Madison Square Garden, New York City. It will be the first opportunity that has been presented to see a full line of motor vehicles under one roof. A large number of makers have applied for space, and there is every indication that the fifth annual exhibition, conducted by the company formerly known as the National Exhibition Company, will surpass all others. Space has been limited to those products that will be of interest to the cycle and motor vehicle trade. All the concerns which are now a part of the American Bicycle Company have contracted for space, which will of course force the independent makers to participate on a large scale. It is acknowledged that the automobile part of the show will be the largest of its kind ever held. The show is under the management of Frank W. Sanger.

We are in receipt of the Rules and Premium List of the seventh annual exhibition of the Vermont State Poultry and Pet Stock Association—the show to be held at Woodstock, Vt., Jan. 2, 3, 4 and 5. Rule 1 reads: "The premiums of this association are open to the world," and they are worth going after, too.

In all probability there will be no trotting and pacing meetings at Louisville in 1900. The loss to the Louisville Fair and Driving Association on the fall meeting was in the neighborhood of $20,000. The blame for this loss has been laid at the door of the two or three-heat plan which Louisville was persuaded to try. These kind of races, especially when the heats are not broken, are not nearly as satisfactory as to divide the money at the end of the fifth heat, according to the rank in the summary.

A rough estimate shows that the Greater American Exposition Company at Omaha will have to pay about $130,000 to laborers and others to make it square with the world. It was just another case of an attempt to repeat a good thing. The show was unpopular with the towns around and consequently failed to draw their patronage.

Many merchants and industrial expositions assign their floor space in this manner—a fixed price is set for so much room; everybody is given the same rate; then when nearly all of the space has been taken the choice locations are auctioned off; the merchant or firm desiring first pick will have to bid his price for it, this charge is added to the regular price; second choice is disposed of in the same manner; and so on down to the last.

Jan. 18 to 23 are the dates set for the first annual exhibition of the Ohio State Poultry Association. It will be one of the greatest shows of the middle west. Charles McClure, of New London, O., is Secretary and Treasurer.

The Alabama State Fair this fall offered prizes for the two best weeklies in the State, Twenty-two papers entered the contest, which was held under the auspices of the Birmingham Press Club. The Committee of Award gave the first prize to the Opelika Industrial News, and the second to the Pratt City Herald.

It is reported that George Pangalo's company, backed by Buffalo capitalists, has subscribed $75,000 for the Midway privilege at the Pan-American Exposition. Ben Yakari, who is also supposed to be backed by capitalists of Buffalo, is also a bidder. Pangalo will, in all probability, get the concession.

The International Motor Carriage Exposition held at Berlin last fall included forty different models and types of motor carriages for one passenger or more; thirteen exhibitors showed motor wagons for freight; twenty-six firms exhibited exhibits of motor cycles and trail carts belonging thereto; sixteen exhibited motors and parts of the same; twelve showed only springs and wheels for motor carriages; fifty-one firms exhibited various miscellaneous parts, fixtures and materials for motor carriages not included in the preceding classes, and five exhibitors displayed the literature, drawings, maps and models which the new science of automobile has thus far developed.

The exhibition proper was made by 120 firms and companies, of whom 81 were German, 16 Belgian, 12 French and 2 from Switzerland. Not a single American or English maker was represented in his own name, although there were tires, driving chains and other machine parts of English origin exhibited under the names of their German agents, and three of the most noticeable and admired electric motor carriages on exhibition were from the works of the Pope Manufacturing Company, of Hartford, and exhibited by the Motorfahrgesellschaft, of Marienfelde, a suburb of Berlin, which firm has acquired certain patents of the American company.

The Sportsmen's Show for 1900 will be held in Boston, Mass., Feb. 22 to March 10, inclusive, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Sportsmen's Association. The successful exhibit of this exhibition in 1896 marked a new era in sporting interests, and lovers of all kinds of exercise, and to the great general public which seeks to be entertained, as well as instructed. In addition to the many varieties of live game, strange and rare specimens of live fish, which only the larger aquariums afford, Indian customs exemplified, etc., the management has arranged for a full program of water and gymnastic sports directed by leading exponents, which will, with many other notable features, form an exhibition long to be remembered. The advertising for this exhibition throughout New England will be under the able supervision of Mr. R. D. Leonard, proprietor of the R. D. Leonard Advertising Agency, of Boston. Mr. Leonard also has entire charge of the coming exhibition of the Boston Poultry Association. That both shows will be successful can not be doubted.

A mammoth Printing Exposition is to be held at Grand Central Palace, New York from May 2 to June 2, 1900. The exposition was announced but a short time ago by Typographical Union No. 6, and a wonderful trade interest has already developed. The purpose of the show is to give a broader knowledge of the trades, to create new interest and to advertise the exhibitors. Mr. M. Nathan, who had charge of the electrical exposition in New York, has been engaged as director. He has already commenced to advertise, and neither money nor pains will be spared in getting good crowds and attractive displays.

The dates of the Western Manitoba big fair, at Brandon, Manitoba, have been set for July 31 to Aug. 3, 1900.

Cloverdale, Cal., the Orange City, will hold its annual citrus fair in February. The prospects thus far for the fair can be said to be brighter and more promising than ever. A big crop of fruit is expected, and the Orange City will more than sustain the reputation she has gained by reason of the citrus fairs held within her gates.

The Phoenix (Ariz.) Cowboy and Indian Carnival opened Dec. 4 and continued for five days. $6,000 had been subscribed by the merchants of the city. Add to this the money resulting from privileges, etc., and you will see that the coin supply was ample. The crowds were tremendous, and the entertainment superb. The officers who worked so faithfully for the success of the carnival must be congratulated. They were: S. M. McGowan, Director General, S. J. Michelson, Secretary; L. E. Hoffman, Corresponding Secretary, and S. Oberfelder, Treasurer.

The trustees of the Chamber of Commerce of Portland, Ore., are contemplating the establishment of a permanent exhibit of the products of the State. The amount required to carry out the idea is about $2,500, which is very little when compared with the amounts contributed annually for the same purpose by San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal. California has profited immensely through the permanent exhibits at these two cities, and Oregon argues, what is to keep her from enjoying the same benefits, through an exhibition at Portland? In the effort to maintain the exhibit, the trustees have received offers of support from railroads, business men and State institutions.

In the building all the industries of Oregon will be represented—agriculture, horticulture, forestry, lumber, fisheries, mining, etc. The different State boards, Agriculture, Horticulture, Food and Dairy Commissioner, etc., and the Chamber of Commerce will maintain their offices in the institution, and all members will be expected to give some attention and volunteer information regarding these industries, to all visitors.

This plan of the trustees of the Chamber of Commerce is considered timely by the majority of Portland's business men—and is expected to do much for the town and the State.

HORTICULTURE GROUP.

Pan American Exposition.

The Board of Architects of the Pan American Exposition, which will be held at Buffalo, N. Y., on the Niagara Frontier during the summer months of 1901, is composed of eight members—three residents of New York, two Boston and three of the city of Buffalo. The architects of the three buildings hereinafter are: Mr. Walter Cook, of the firm of Cobb, Cook & Willard, of New York; designs, e. Stadium, the screen in front of the railway station, and the Entrance of the Midway; all of these forming the Plaza. Messrs. Cobb, Cook & Willard are the architects of the New York Life Buildings in St. Paul, Montreal, Minneapolis and Kansas City. They are now building a new residence for Andrew Carnegie on Fifth Avenue, New York. Mr. Cook is President of the New York Chapter Architects, and was the only American on the commission which met at Antwerp and in Francisco to decide the competition for plans for the University of California. Mr. Cook studied under Vaudremer.

Mr. R. S. Peabody is a member of the firm Peabody & Stearns, of Boston, who were the architects of Machinery Hall at the world's Fair. They built the Union League Club Building in New York and the Old Dutch Church in Boston. Mr. Peabody studied in Dumaine's atelier. He has designed the Horticulture, Graphic Arts and Forestry Buildings for the Pan American Exposition.

Mr. Edward P. Green is a member of the firm of Green & Wicks, of Buffalo. Among their works are the new Buffalo Savings Bank, Allbright Memorial Library at Scranton, Pa., and the Syracuse University Buildings at Syracuse, N. Y. They are the designers of the Machinery and Transportation and Electricity Buildings of the Pan American Exposition.

The Machinery and Transportation Building, 500 by 350 feet, faces on the Mall. This building is designed in a type of Spanish Renaissance, with initial inspiration in the Mission Buildings found in Mexico and California, supplemented by later examinations of Renaissance work in Spain, modified to fit the conditions of the exposition with its gay and festive surroundings.

An early traveler writes: "The mission building is in the form of a hollow square, on the front of which a gallery extends, the edifice, a single story high, is raised a few feet above the ground. In the interior is a court adorned by a fountain and planted with trees. For the erection of the buildings, logs were transported from the mountains, and the Indians taught to burn lime, stone and make brick and tile."

Briefly stated, the Machinery and Transportation Buildings form a hollow square, the arcades on all sides. In the interior is a court 100 by 200 feet, adorned by a long pool of water, with a fountain surrounded with tubs and flowers, artistically planted. This pool of water, with its calm reflection and atmosphere of quiet restfulness forms one of the many little oases planned for the refreshment of the weary sightseer.

If we add to the traveler's description that the roofs are of red tile, the walls of cement, the work is more ornamented, the structure varred with glowing colors, we have briefly correct description of this building.

The facades present an arched effect corresponding in appearance to mission cloisters; the eaves, with great overhangs, add to the crenelated effect. Each facade is broken by an important architectural feature, and each corner flanked with low pavilions, the design being large, plain surfaces for color, while the eaves give deep shadows.

The color scheme is made up in reds and browns, light in tint. The loggias, balconies, pavilions and other places are to be ornamented with shrubs, trees and flowers, blending with the coloring of the building.

The openings are gridded with specimens of wrought-iron "pasas," or grill screens, such as are seen in examples of Spanish architecture of the sixteenth century.

The building has numerous entrances, the principal ones being in the center of the four facades. Once inside the structures, the size will be appreciated.

All the towers, pavilions, and other proper places are to be brilliantly illuminated and gay with banners and flags.

HORTICULTURE, GRAPHIC ARTS AND FORESTRY.

The three buildings for Horticulture, Graphic Arts and Forestry, of which Messrs. Peabody & Stearns are the architects, form a crenelated group at the end of the West Garden.

COPYRIGHT, 1899, BY PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION CO.

HORTICULTURE GROUP.

The largest of these, the Horticulture Building, stands between the other two on an axis with the Garden. The Forestry Building is on the north side, the Graphic Arts on the south, adjoining the lake. Arcades connect the three buildings, forming in front a semi-circular court. Between the arcades the ground rises slightly to the level of the Fountain of the Seasons.

The area of the Horticultural Building is 45,000 square feet. The Graphic Arts and Forestry Buildings each cover 30,000 square feet, and are similar in design. In plan, the Horticultural Building is square, with central lantern, rising to a height of 240 feet at the intersection of the four arms of a Greek cross, which includes in its angles four small domes. On the center of each facade is a deeply-recessed arched entrance.

The Graphic Arts and Forestry Buildings have four corner towers, and on the east facade a vaulted loggia of three arches forms the main entrance. Above the red roofs of Spanish tile, numerous lanterns, pinnacles and Venetian flagpoles, from which float gay-flags, have been given to Messrs. Cobb, Cook & Willard, of New York, and the style adopted a very free version of Spanish architecture, which has been given it. The central portion of this square is occupied by a terrace only very slightly raised above the surface of the square, and surrounding a sunken garden, in the middle of which is a band-stand. The terrace, as well as the garden itself, will afford a large space for listeners who attend the concerts which it is proposed to give.

Outside, and at the north of the Plaza, is the railway and trolley station, from which it is supposed the greater number of visitors will enter the exhibition grounds. The railway station itself is masked by a colonnade flanked at either end by two colossal arches, one for those entering the exposition, and the other for those leaving it. This colonnade bounds the Plaza on the north. It is surrounded by a trellis, which it is proposed to cover with vines of various sorts.

The west side of the Plaza is bounded by a building which is to serve as a large restaura-

tory, and at the south of the Plaza, a quarter-mile running track and a sufficient large space in the inside of this for any of the athletic games. Great attention has been paid to having a large number of aisles to reach the seats, and, in addition to the principal entrance on the west, there are provided seven large exits. These exits are made of sufficient breadth and height to admit, in case of need, the largest vehicles or floats, as it is proposed to use the Stadium for certain pageants. Exhibits of automobiles in operation, judging of horses, live stock, agricultural machinery, road machinery, etc. No exhibitor has ever had such a splendid arena in which such exhibits can be displayed, and the Athletic Carnival to which the Stadium is particularly devoted is expected to be one of the most interesting features of the exhibition. The space under the seats is to be used for exhibition purposes, and is in itself the equivalent of a very large building.

The total length of the Stadium, including the building which forms the entrance, is about 800 feet, and the breadth about 500 feet.

Kansas City Carnival.

The closing year has been very prolific in street fair and one door expositions. There have been more fairs and expositions held during 1899 than has ever been known in the history of America. Every town, city or hamlet held them with excesses and without. As a rule, public celebrations are held for the purpose of celebrating some event, but this year, traditions were thrown to the winds, and the energy of the American merchant in desiring to sell his goods readily displayed itself through the latest advertising novelty that of fairs and expositions. The street exposition is the name of artistic outdoor advertising in America.

Among the many cities that held street expositions, Kansas City, Mo., is the largest city at the present writing to hold a street exposition. It heads the list as the largest one ever held in America. It had the largest number of square feet covered by booths, the greatest number of live exhibits, the greatest number of manufacturers giving a reproduction of their plants ever held in any city outside of an international exposition, the largest number of daily visitors and the largest midway ever given in a street exposition.

The receipts received by the merchants and traders were enormous. In all previous years, the visitors returned to their homes at night. This year, however, they remained for days at a time, and many nights during the exposition. It was impossible to obtain a room in a hotel or lodging house. The weather during the fair was all that could be desired.

The fire-tors of the Karnival Krewe, under whose auspices the street exposition was held, ate a body of broad-minded gentlemen. They gave a great deal of credit to Col. DeGarmo Gray, the well-known fair promoter, and are exceedingly grateful to him. They proudly furnish statistics from the banks and merchants, showing that nearly two millions of dollars in cash were brought into and left in the city in exchange for the attractions offered.

The parades of a Karnival nature, were more original and contained a greater number of floats than ever before. The reason of this was that Col. Gray, who was Director of Amusements at Nice and Monte Carlo for a number of years, gladly gave the merchants of Kansas City the advantage of his many years of experience in Karnivals there.

The pinnacle of success was achieved when the first "Grand Bal Masque," which closed the festivities and the exposition was held, Convention Hall was the chosen place. It was a subscription ball, and the elite of society not only of Kansas City, but of all the surrounding towns within a radius of 20 miles were present. The fun and frolic lasted until 2 a.m., when the theatrical companies playing in the city, started the Grand March from the roof garden to the main floor, making a circuitous tour of the great building. Matthew & Tulger's celebrated Farce Comedy Company led the march.

In the last issue of "The Billboard" there appeared an article headed Leon County Fair, stating that Mr. Roberts, of Indianapolis, had absconded on the third day and defrauded the association out of $50 due for privileges. We beg to correct this, since we are in receipt of a letter from Mr. Roberts, in which he says that he was not near Marquez, Texas, nor in Leon County, at the time of the fair, and that he had not been for about twelve months. He contracted for the gaming privilege at the fair, but did not fill the contract. He sold the privilege to another man, who is probably responsible for the trouble.

ly-colored banners, add a festive picturesqueness to the sky-line.

The broad, white wall surfaces are ornamented with colored bas-reliefs. Arabesques of twining vines of fruits and flowers, among the branches of which are children and birds, decorate the numerous pilasters of the facades and arcades. Above the eastern entrance of the Horticultural Building are two colored compositions representing Ceres, the goddess of the harvest, bearing in her arms a sheaf of golden wheat. Her chariot is drawn by three lions led by Flora and Primavera.

The decoration of the Graphic Arts and Forestry Buildings is chiefly confined to the vaulted ceilings of their loggias, where the brilliantly colored decorations remind one of the famous example of the Villa Madama.

THE PLAZA

The northern part of the exhibition ground is occupied by a square about 300 feet from east to west and 350 feet from north to south. The buildings bounding three sides of this square and the arrangement of the square itself has been given to Messrs. Cobb, Cook & Willard, of New York, and the style adopted a very free version of Spanish architecture, which has been given it. The central portion of this square is occupied by a terrace only very slightly raised above the surface of the square, and surrounding a sunken garden, in the middle of which is a band-stand. The terrace, as well as the garden itself, will afford a large space for listeners who attend the concerts which it is proposed to give.

Outside, and at the north of the Plaza, is the railway and trolley station, from which it is supposed the greater number of visitors will enter the exhibition grounds. The railway station itself is masked by a colonnade flanked at either end by two colossal arches, one for those entering the exposition, and the other for those leaving it. This colonnade bounds the Plaza on the north. It is surrounded by a trellis, which it is proposed to cover with vines of various sorts.

The west side of the Plaza is bounded by a building which is to serve as a large restaura-

A World's Fair in Rome.

According to Italian newspapers, there is a movement on foot in Italy to hold a World's Fair in the Eternal City in the year 1910, which shall eclipse everything shown in that before, even the Paris Exposition of 1900; till then it is expected to have all the public buildings finished, which could not be completed for a lack of capital; the new bridge over the Tiber will also be finished, and several new bridges are projected. A new and Opera House will also be built, and a gigantic memorial to King Victor Emanuel on the Capitol Hill, which will also be finished by that time, is expected to prove one of the greatest attractions for visitors. It is expected to raise the money needed by subscription.

Fair Notes.

The American Street Fair and Exhibition Co., with offices at 1432 Broadway, New York, is the name of a new concern organized to promote street fairs and carnivals.

On Wednesday night, December 22d, the Chicago Athletic Association gave a full-fledged circus. Many circus performers who were wintering in Chicago were secured, and a circus was announced by regular bona fide circus posters. Although it was an indoor affair, it was an immense success, and is more like a real circus than many of the tented shows.

The Commercial Club, of Lewiston, Idaho, recently passed resolutions, which were in substance as follows: That a fair be held about Oct. 15, 1900; that the expenses be defrayed by donations from county, city, business men and privileges; that grounds be held, exhibits secured, premiums offered; amusement provided, etc. The board means business, and have taken an early start, which argues well for the success of the undertaking.

The Los Angeles Industrial Exposition is to be held at Hazard's Pavilion, from Feb. 20 to March 13, 1900, inclusive. Besides the textile and manufactured products of the city, there will be a citrus fair and an exhibit of mineral resources of Southern California. One of the novel features of the Portland (Ore.) Exposition was the war museum for benefit of the fund being raised to erect a monument to the memory of the Oregon volunteers who lost their lives in the service of their country. The receipts resulting from the experiment amounted to $1,112.45. The following is the financial result of the 1899 exposition, compared to that of 1898:

Expenses, 1898	$26,427.15
Expenses, 1899	25,480.34
Decrease	$ 946.81
Admission ticket sales, 1898	$22,068.55
Admission ticket sales, 1899	15,626.25
Decrease	$ 6,442.30
Concessions, 1898	$ 1,738.40
Concessions, 1899	1,842.34
Increase	$ 103.94

From this it may be seen that the exposition did not receive the patronage it should, but the non-attendance may be laid to the door of the two weeks of bad weather during the fair. However, the exposition certainly gave an excellent entertainment, and managed to pay the subscribers 27 per cent. of their money back, besides donating money to worthy charities—which is very satisfactory to everybody.

The catalogue of the Northern Illinois Poultry Association Show, to be held at Belvidere, Jan. 15 to 19, has reached this office. A grand prize of $20 in gold and many other valuable premiums are offered. We also note that the premium list has exceptionally good advertising patronage.

Expert Assistance = Billposting

When a Business House

Wants to place fire insurance they send to their insurance broker. If they want to do any newspaper advertising they send for the newspaper ad agent. In this way they save time, trouble, annoyance and expense.

For the Same Reasons Exactly

These same men send for me when they want to do Billposting.

I have Studied Billposting

For years and am in touch with all the best billposters of the country, and can attend to your billposting from beginning to the end—which never comes when properly begun.

In "From the Beginning"

I mean from the first unfinished sketch on to the completed sketch and finished poster. Many well-planned billposting campaigns have been ruined completely because the poster was not of the right kind. Some are too dainty to be readable on the billboards, and some are too coarse to be pleasing.

Begin Right,

And you will never desert billposting. LET ME START YOU RIGHT.
