From Headley's ancient English Poetry. [1767.] FROM AN ELEGY ON HIS WIFE.

Seep on, my love, in thy cold bed,
Never to be disquested with cost when
The Little property of the Control of the Control
That they fare shall overstake;
That they fare shall overstake;
It so much loves, and fail the room
My heart Keeps enough in the speed
Desire can make, for storows breed;
And feelow thee with all the speed
Desire can make, for storows breed;
And every houre as step towards thee,
And inght when I testeke to rest,
Next men I rise never to my west
Of the faultes by eight houres sainle gale.
Than when sleep breathed his drowning less.

Thus from the Sun my bottom steares, And my dayes compass downward bears Nor laboor I to stemme the tide Through which to thee I swiftly glide.

Tis true, with shame and grief I vield, Thou like the wanne first took'st the field, And gotten hast the victory In thus adventuring to dy In this adventaring to dy
Before me, whose more years might crave
A just precedence in the grave.
A just precedence in the grave.
Beats my supermedit, tells these I come,
Beats my supermedit, tells these I come,
Beats my supermedit, tells these I come,
Beats my supermedit these I come,
Beats my supermedit these I come,
The thought of this bids me go on
And wait my dissolution
With hope and comfort, dwar, (forgive
The erime). I am constent to live
Divisited, with but half a heart
Till we skall meet and more part.

From the British Friend. THE QUAKER OF THE OLDEN TIME. The Quaker of the older time!
How caim, and firm, and frue,
Unspoiled by its wrong and crime,
He walked the dark earth through!

The lust of power, the love of gain I
The thousand lures of sin
Around him had no power to stain
The purity within.

With that deep insight which detects
All great things in the small,
And knows how each man's life affect
The spiritual life of all.

He walks by faith and not by sight,
By faith and not by law;
The presence of the wrong or right,
He rather telt than saw.

He felt that wrong with wrong partakes, That nothing stands alone, That whose gives the motive, makes His heather's sin his own.

And, passing not, for doubtful choice Of evils great and small, He listened to the inward voice Which calls away from all.

Oh! spirit of that early day, So pure, and strong, and true, Be with as in the narrow way Our faithful fathers knew.

Give strength the evil to forsake, The cross of Truth to hear, And love and reverence to make Our daily lives a prayer.
