IV.—RISE AND PROGRESS OF BUDDHISM IN TIBET.¹

CHAPTER I.

Hail to that all-yielding gem, the prince of power, the holy religion of Buddha that came from the precious country of Aryávarta! By the kindness and generous acts of pious princes, learned Pandits and Lochavas,² it was brought to this snow-girt country of Tibet. Let its brightness enlighten all hearts and the copious shower of its blessings and usefulness ever excite wonder! Be it adored, being placed on the top of the banner of faith!

The Buddhism of Tibet is divided into two main periods:

- 1. Na-dar or Earlier Buddhism.
- 2. Chhyi-dar or Later Buddhism.

1. Earlier Buddhism.

During the reigns of twenty six generations of kings, counted from Naḥ-thi-tsanpo the first of the Tibetan kings to Namri-sron-tsan, Buddhism was unknown in Tibet. During the reign of Lha-tho-thori-nan-shal, who was well known as an incarnation of Samanta Bhadra, there fell on the top of the king's palace, from heaven, several volumes called Pan-Kon-Chhyag-gya.3 The meanings of their contents being unknown, they were adored under the name of "Nan-po-san-wa." This was the nucleus of Buddhism in Tibet. The king learned in a vision that their contents should be known in the fifth generation. Accordingly, during the reign of Sron-tsan-gampo4 the reputed incarnation of Chenréssig,5 the minister Thon-mi-Sambhota visited India to study the various sciences and Buddhism. He became well versed in the classical sciences of the Indians. After his return to Tibet, he framed the Wuchan,6 or "characters provided with heads," of the Tibetans after the model of the Nágarí, and the Wumé? characters after the Wurtu⁸ letters, and thereby founded the alphabetic system of the Tibetans. Sron-tsan-gampo brought the image of Akshobhya9 from Nepál and that of S'ákya Muni from China, which were the first Buddhist images in Tibet. In order to accommodate these upholders of Tibet, he erected the great Temple called Rasa-thul-nan-kitsug-lakhan. 10 He engaged Thon-mi Sambhota and his colleagues to translate Sanskrit Buddhist works into Tibetan, writing them in the newly formed alphabet. phalpo-chhell and other books were the first translations which formed the germ of Tibetan Buddhism.

During the reign of Thi-sron-de-tsan¹² who was celebrated as an emanation of Manju-Ghosha,¹³ the great sage S'anta Rakshita and Pandit Padma Sambhava and several other Indian Buddhists and philosophers were invited to Tibet.¹⁴ Among the first seven monks, Vairochana¹⁵ was the chief. Originating from them, the ancient Tibetan Clergy of the "orange raiment" began to multiply. Then, there sprung up a host of Lochavas—those versed in two or more languages—among whom were Lui-wanpo, ¹⁶ Sagor Vairochana, ¹⁷

Rinchhen-chhog,18 Yeśe Wanpo,19 Kachog shan,20 &c., who translated the Sútras, Tantras and meditative sciences from Sanskrit into the Tibetan S'ánta Rakshita undertook the charge of explaining to his pupils the sacred literature, from the Dulva (Vinaya) to the Mádhyamika philosophy. Padma Sambhava and his colleagues taught the Tantras to a few intelligent pupils, which enabled a few pious persons to obtain sainthood. Then a Chinese sage named Hwashan-Mahayana came to Tibet to preach a strange form of sophistry. He held that the pursuit of evil as well as of good binds men equally to a course of recurring existence, and therefore affords no means of emancipation. In illustration of this theory he observed-" your condition remains all the same whether you are bound by an iron or a golden chain; you are not liberated". Wherefore if the mind can be purged of all thoughts, deliverance from recurring existence is secured. The doctrine which he thus promulgated was accepted by all Tibet; and for a time the Darsana and doctrines of the former Indian Pandits such as S'ánta Rakshita were displaced. For he vanquished all in disputation by his powerful logic. The followers of S'anta Rakshita and other Indian philosophers diminished in number. In order to refute the philosophy of Hwashan, king Thi-sron-de-tsan invited Kamalasíla, one of the most learned Indian sages of that age. Hwashan was defeated in disputation, and his fallacies were exposed by Kamalasıla who wrote three series of books on meditative science and thus re-established the Indian school, its ritual and philosophy.

During the reign of Ralpachan, Pandit Jina Mitra and many other learned sages were invited, who, having translated many Buddhist works into the vernacular language, arranged them so as to be accessible to the general reader. Both Sánta Rakshita, and Kamala S'íla belonged to the Svatantra-mádhyamika school. Thi-sron-de-tsan who was a devout follower of S'ánta Rakshita, prohibited his subjects by royal proclamation from following Hwashan's theories under penalty of death. He commanded all to follow the Mádhyamika school. Although certain Indian Pandits of the Yogáchárya school had visited Tibet, yet they failed to displace the anciently propagated Svatantra school, which prevailed in Tibet till the accession of Landarma to the monarchy of Tibet, when the last vestige of Buddhism disappeared from Tibet. The Buddhists of the earlier period or Na-dar followed S'ánta Rakshita and Kamala S'íla, i. e., the Mádhyamika Svatantra.

2. LATER BUDDHISM.

At the time when Landarma was actively prosecuting the destruction of Buddhism in Tibet, three saintly recluses from Pal-chhen-chhu-vo-ri fled towards the Amdo country, where they became pupils of the abbot Lama Gón-pa-rab-sal.²¹ They were followed by ten other Tibetans headed by Lume-tshul-thim who took the vows of monkhood and were admitted as pupils of the same High priest. After the death of Landarma, they all returned to Tibet to their respective monasteries and estates, and increased the number of monks. Thus from the country of Amdo the dying flame Henceforth, Buddhism commenced to spread of Buddhism was rekindled. again, and all quarters of U' and Tsan were refilled with many classes of congregated Lamas, who actively engaged in the teaching of Buddhism. For this result the inhabitants of the snowy country (Himavat) are indebted to the two Amdo Lamas Gón-pa-rab-sal and Lume-tshul-thim. the reign of Lha-Lama, Yeśe-hod the celebrated Lochava-Rinchhen-Ssanpo visited India to study the sacred literature and philosophy of the Indian After acquiring great proficiency in those subjects he returned to Tibet and translated many Sútra and Tantra works. He thus established himself as a great teacher of Buddhism.

(Revival of Buddhism by the Lamas of upper Tibet and Ladak called sTod-Latak.)

A goatherd named Kargyal, under inspiration from a certain Nága of the same name, preached a strange religion (a form of Bonism) which was inimical to Buddhism. Rinchhen Ssanpo overcame him, and also suppressed some of the Tántriks who were in the habit of abusing the Tántrik ritual by committing obscenities under the garb of religion. Thus by purifying the sacred religion, he gained the sincere love and confidence of the dwellers on the snowy mountains. Lochava Shon-nu-pal of Gos remarked that it was owing to the exertions of this great scholar that pure Tántrikism became more diffused in the later than in the earlier period. Towards the end of his life he betook himself to asceticism and, having attained to saintliness, he entered the abodes of the gods. This great Lochava belonged to the Prasanga Mádhyamika school.

The same prince Lha-Lama invited Pandit Dharma Pála with three of his principal disciples named Siddhapála, Guṇapála, and Prajñá Pála, from the eastern quarter of India. From these, Gyal-wai-śerab of Shañ Shuñ took the vows of monkhood and afterwards went to Palpa in Nepál to learn Vinaya and philosophy from the Hínayána sage named Pretaka. His spiritual descendants, named Paljor-śerab Chyañ-chhub-señgé &c., were known by the name of Tod-dulva or the up-country followers of the Vinaya.

During the reign of king Lhade the illustrious Kashmirian Pandit S'ákya S'rí was invited, who by translating many of the Sútras and S'ástras greatly promoted the diffusion of Buddhism. The ritual vow introduced by him was called Panchhen Domgyun. In the same manner that introduced by Lachhen of Amdo was called Lachhen Domgyun. By persecution the enemies of Buddhism had only succeeded in putting down the external observances and ritual of the clergy, while the real Dharma and moral discipline continued to be secretly practised under adverse circumstances. The basis of Buddha Dharma being Vinaya or moral discipline, the system of Dom-gyun is only necessary as an external observance.

3. Growth of various dogmatic Schools.

Thus by the mercy of the victor (Jina) and his spiritual sons (Bodhisatvas), by the kindness of Dharma Rájas and Panditas and Lochavas, and by the moral merits of the people in the Himavat country, the Buddhist religion progressed more and more, so as to branch out into numerous different sects as the result of its extraordinary growth. These, like the eighteen divisions of the Vaibháshika school of ancient India, were designated after the names of their Some of the Tibetan Lamas respective teachers and places of origin. who had derived their religious knowledge from Indian Pandits, feeling great veneration for the theories themselves, named their respective sects after them. They did not follow the Indian patriarchs in their nomenclature, for all the Indian Buddhist schools were designated after the general sense of their philosophies. For instance: the Sakya-pa, Jonan-pa, Shan-pa and Diguñ-pa sects of Tibet were designated after the names of the localities where they were taught and originated: the Karmapa and Bulúg-pa sects, after the names of their respective teachers: the Kahdampa, Dsógchhen-pa, Chhyag-chhen-pa, and Shi-chye-pa sects after their respective rituals or external Kriyá.

All the various Buddhist sects of Tibet are classed under two schools:

- (1) The Ancient school.
- (2) The Gelug-på or Reformed school.

The ancient school includes seven sects, viz., Ñiĥ-ma-pa, Kaḥ-dampa, Kaḥ-gyu-pa, Shi-chye-pa, Sakyapa, Jonaĥpa and Ñi-tshc-pa.²²

In the ancient school there are two general divisions. The earlier Ninma-pa and the later Ninmapa called Sarmapa. It has been asserted by Tibetan historians and philosophers that the difference between the earlier Nin-mapa and the Sarmapa exists in the Tantras. In the Sútras there is no doctrinal difference. In the earlier and later periods of Buddhism there were certain dogmatic differences in the Sútras, which justified the distinction. All the Tantras that were translated into Tibetan prior to Pandit Smriti's advent, are designated by the name of ²² (1) rÑiĥ-ma-pa, (2) bKaḥ-gdams-pa, (3) bKaḥ-brGyud-pa, (4) Shi-byed-pa, (5) Sa-skya-pa, (6) Jonaĥ-pa, (7) Ñi-tshe-pa.

Saĥ-ĥag Ñiĥma,²³ and those that were translated by Rinchhen-Ssaĥ-po and other later writers are known by the name of San-nag-Sarma.24 But although this distinction of Ninma and Sarma Tantras is recognized by many authors, yet there exist some irregularities in the application of the terms. For instance the Manjuśri-múla Tantras which were translated during the reign of king Thi-sron are also accepted as Sarma Tantras. In the face of such irregularities Rinchhen Ssanpo has been universally admitted as the founder of the Sarma Tantras. Dogmi Gos and Marpa Lochava are credited as Sarma teachers. The first revival of Buddhism after the death of Landarma, known as the Later period, commenced with Loton-dorje Wan chhyug when Thi-Tashi-tseg-pa, son of Pal-khor-tsan, ruled the kingdom of Rulag. His three sons Pal-de, Hod-de, and Kyi-de requested Loton to send two learned Lamas who could revive the Buddhist religion in Tibet. Accordingly S'ákya Shon-nu and Yese-tsondu were sent, who re-established the clerical congregation in Tibet. Again that great sage, in consultation with those princes, sent Dogmi and Tag-Lochava to India to study Dulva, S'er-chhyin25 and Tantras which are respectively the basis, essence and pith of Buddhism. Tág Lochava, having devoted his time chiefly to pilgrimage, failed to become a learned teacher, but Dogmi succeeded in his mission and became a great scholar of Buddhism. He introduced the system of Tantras called Mátri Tantras and thereby diffused the teaching of Buddhism. Lochava Rinchhen-Ssanpo elucidated Prajná, Páramitá, Mátri and Pitri Tantras and above all made the Yoga Tantras accessible to the Tibetans. Gos had introduced the Samája Guhya and spread the system of Nágárjuna. The great Tantrik sage Marpa taught the Guhya Samája according to Pitri Tantras, the ritual of Mahámáyá according to Mátri Tantras, the ritual of Vajraharsha and Sambhara. By imparting instructions in several kinds of mysticism, he filled Tibet with learned men. These great Lochavas having charged themselves with these works, Tántrik Buddhism opened a new era in the religious history of Tibet, known as the Sarma system of the later period or Sarmatanpa or Gyu, the same as Navya Tantra.

CHAPTER II.

RISE AND PROGRESS OF ÑIÑMAPA SCHOOL.

In the beginning king Sron-tsan-gampo, himself a professor of Buddhism, taught his people the series of scriptures known as "Kyerim" and "Dsog-rim" delivered by Chenressig. All Tibet paid homage and prayed to that merciful Bodhisatva for protection. Sron-tsan, in whom was an emanation of Chenressig's spirit, first taught the six mystic syllables, "Om-mani-padme-hum," and their significations and recital. He invited the Indian teacher Kusara, S'ankara Bráhmana, the Nepalese Pandit S'ilamanju and others who, having translated many Tantras, first taught the Tibetans the first principles of Buddhism. The accounts of the first introduction of Buddhism and a few Tantric works were discovered within a stone pillar called Ka-khol-ma, in which Sron-tsan-gampo had hid them for the use and benefit of posterity.

In the fifth generation from Sron-tsan the illustrious king Thi-sron invited the great Indian Pandit S'ánta Rakshita who introduced the observance of the "ten virtues" and Dharma which teaches the real state of the eighteen physical and corporal regions with the eight prohibitions as killing, the taking of what is not given, the commission of foul actions, lying, drinking, dancing and singing, and sitting on lofty seats. When the mighty local gods and genii² who delight in sin found that men were prone to virtue, they became enraged, and one of the most wrathful among them named Nen² -chhen-than hurled a thunderbolt on the Marpori hill. Another frightful demi-god named Yar-lha-shanpo cast down the palace of Phan-than of Yarlun. The twelve female spirits called "Tanma" spread plagues and murrain all over the country. Under such circumstances thinking it urgently necessary, first of all to overcome these evil spirits and goblins, to ensure the safety of Buddhism, S'ánta Rakshita requested the king to invite Padma Sambhava the great Tántrik of Uddayana. Accordingly the king sent messengers to India to invite that illustrious sage. By his gift of foreknowledge knowing what was required of him, Padma Sambhava had already started for Tibet. The messengers met him on the way. He obliged all the evil and wicked genii and demons to bind themselves under solemn oaths not to work evil nor stand in the way of the pious. Sitting on a cross made of two Dorje,³¹ placed on a clear space, he purified a spot on which he built the great Vihára of Ssan-yad Migyur-Lhun-gyi-dubpai-tsugla-khañ or the shrine of the unchanging, self-grown working. The king together with twenty six of his saintly subjects, by sitting in three kinds of yoga, became possessed of wonderful learning and obtained saintly power, perfection, and, finally, emancipation.

The names and the exploits of the twenty six Tibetan Buddhists who obtained sainthood and worked with the king are the following:

- (1.) Nam-kha-ñin-po could mount the rays of the sun.
- (2.) Sangye-yese could drive iron bolts into hard rocks.
- (3) Gyalwa-chhog-yan, by transforming his head into that of a horse, neighed three times.
 - (4.) Kharchhen Chhogyal brought the slain to life.
 - (5.) Pal-ki-yeśe turned three sylvan goddesses into his slaves.
 - (6.) Pal-ki-Senge made slaves of demons, nymphs, and genii.
 - (7.) Vairochana obtained the five divine eyes of knowledge.
 - (8.) Naḥ-dag-gyalpo obtained Samádhi.
 - (9) Yu-drúñ-Ñiñ-po acquired divine discrimination.
 - (10.) Jñána-kumâra performed miracles.
 - (11) Dorje-Dun Jem travelled invisibly like the wind.
- (12.) Yeśe-Ñañ went over to the fairy world travelling through the void space.
 - (13.) Sogpu-Lhapal (a Mongol) could catch ferocious wild beasts.
 - (14.) Na-nam-yeśe could soar in the sky like a bird.
- (15.) Pal-ki-Wan-chhyug could kill his enemies by the flourish of his fists.
 - (16.) Den-ma-tse-Wan obtained unfailing memory.
 - (17.) Ka-Wa-pal-tseg could tell the hearts of other men.
 - (18.) Shu-bu-pal-sen could make water run upwards.
 - (19.) Khe-ḥu-chhug-lo could catch a flying bird.
- (20.) Gyal-Wai-Lodoi raised the ghost of the dead and turned the corpse into solid gold.
 - (21.) Tenpai-namkha tamed wild yaks of the northern desert.
 - (22.) Ḥodan-Wan-Chhyug dived in water like fish.
- (23.) Ma-thog rin Chhen could crush adamant into powder and eat it as meal.

- (24.) Pal-ki Dorje passed through mountains and rocks.
- (25.) Landod Kon-Chhog could handle thunderbolts and drive them away.

(26.) Gyal-Wai-chhan-chhub could sit cross-legged on empty space.

There also arrived many Indian Pandits among whom Dharma Kírti, Vimala-mitra, Buddha Guhya, S'ánti Garbha and others were eminent, Dharma Kírti introduced the Tántrik ritual of Vajra-dhátu-yoga. Vimala-mitra and others taught mysticism based on Buddhist Tantrikism to their trusted pupils. They did not teach the principal works on differential and atomic philosophy, and metaphysics generally, to any but one or two of their favourite pupils. Tantrik principles being very subtle, intricate and holy, their diffusion was very limited.

The translation of some scriptural treatises such as Kun-chye Gyalpo Do-gon-du, eight series of Gyu-thul, and Dupaido, Vyákarana and Upadeśa were executed by Vairochana, Ma-Ñan-Nub and other translators after Tantrik interpretation. Padma Sambhava concealed many profound religious treatises underneath rocks, mountains and beds of lakes, for the use of future generations, and afterwards retired towards the southwestern quarter called Na-yab-lin or the land of genii. From this it will appear that during the reign of Sron-tsan-gampo the Tantrik Nin-mapa made only a beginning, but in Thi-sron's time spread widely over the country. Padma Sambhava was its greatest teacher, and other teachers were his pupils and followers. Numerous biographies of him are extant, all of which give different accounts of his life. Though the biography of this great teacher is worthy of being treated at large, yet, as numerous historians give different accounts of his life, I refrain from writing about him. of the ancient writers state that he resided but for a few months in Tibet, during which time, by the power of his divine knowledge and purity, he subdued the demons and evil spirits of Tibet and founded the monastery of Samyé (Ssan-yad32). After the departure of Padma Sambhava a certain Bráhmana impostor having dressed himself in Urgyan-Sahorma³³ fashion, came to Tibet to pass for that great teacher and spread the different divergent Nin-mapa theories. This assertion has been rejected by many of the best writers of Tibet who suppose it to be simply a fabrication to scandalise the Nin-mapa sect. There are others who believe that the Ñiĥma doctrine had its origin in Guru-chho Waĥ. The kind of costume, now known by the name of Urgyan-Sahorma, is said to have been introduced by Chho Waĥ, who discovered some of Padma's works and flourished at a subsequent date and was a Terton (discoverer of sacred volumes.)

³³ The fashion of dress anciently in vogue in Uddayana, the tract of country from Gazni to Bactria including a portion of Persia.

There are nine principal divisions of the Nin-ma doctrine:-

- (1) Ñan-tho (4) Kriyá (7) Kyepa Mahá-yoga
- (2) Ran-gyal (5) Upa (8) Lun Anu-yoga
- (3) Chyan-sem (6) Yoga (9) Dsog-chhenpo Atiyoga.

The first three divisions were delivered by the Nirmáṇakáya-S'ákya Muni (Buddha S'ákya Siṃha) and are called the general or common yánas.

The second three were delivered by Sambhogakáya-Vajra Sattva. They are called the external Tantra-yánas or Báhya tantra-yánas.

The last three are attributed to Dharmakáya-samanta Bhadra or Kuntu Ssañpo. They are called the "Anuttura" antara-yána-traya (according to the Ñiĥmapa school). Kuntu Ssañpo is the great and supreme Buddha, while Vajradhara is the Chief Buddha in the Gelugpa school. Again Vajra Sattva is second in the Ñiĥma school, and S'ákya Siṃha, being an incarnate Buddha, holds the third place.

Of the Báhya (external) Tantra S'reni and Antara (internal) Tantra S'reni, the external ritual or Kriyá tantras were delivered by Buddha S'ákya Simha himself. The "Upa" or Karma tantra and Yoga tantras were delivered by Buddha Vairochana, one of the five Pancha Jati Buddhas. The Antara (internal) or Anuttara tantras were delivered by Vajra Dhara (Dorje-chhan) from his celestial mansion of "Chho-Jun-Yanpa," the spacious mansion of Dharma-dhatu.

The Anuttara yána was taught by Dharmakáya Samanta Bhadra, (Kuntu Ssanpo) in his self-created form of Sambhoga Káya. When seated in one of the purest of Bodhisattva Bhúmis at great ease, by his omniscience, he taught incessantly in four times,³⁴ without error and falling into fallacy.

 - (2.) Melon-ta-bui-yese.
 - (3.) Nambar-Ned-ki-yese.
 - (4.) Sosor-togpai-yeśe.
 - (5.) Gya-wa-dupai-yeśe.

These five Jñánas being in themselves abstractions or vacuity cannot be active unless they are impersonated. They are therefore represented by

- (2.) the five Pancha Jati Buddhas or Dhyani Buddhas, named respectively:
 - (1.) Akshobhya;
- (3.) Ratna Sambhava; (5.) Amogha Siddha.

Numberless precepts and instructions, wide enough to bear comparison with the sky, were delivered, out of which a few were brought to Jambu dvípa by Gah-rab Dorje, S'rí-Siddha Mána-pura, Vimala, and Padma Sambhava. These Vidyádharas who had obtained perfection clearly elucidated the different theories of Ñiâma religion. There are nine classes of Ñiâma Lamas:—

Gyal-wa-goñ³⁵ are the Buddhas, such as S'ákya Siṃha, Kuntu-Ssan-po, Dorje Semba, Amitábha.

Rig-dsin³⁶ are the learned saints that from their infancy cultivated their faculties, and grew learned by their own industry and assiduity. Afterwards they were inspired by Yese Khaḥdoma or the fairies of learning,³⁷ Padma Sambhava, S'rí Siṃha, Mánapura, &c. and other Bodhisattvas.

Gañ-sag-ñan³⁸ or the uninspired saints who carefully preserved the secrecy of their mysticism.

Kah-bab-lun-tan³⁹ are the Lamas who obtained divine inspiration according to former predictions in dreams, and therefore did not consult any teacher as usual.

Le-tho-ter⁴⁰ are the Lamas who, accidentally discovering some shidden scriptural treasures, became learned without any help from teachers or anybody else.

Monlam-taĥ-gya⁴¹ are the Lamas who by dint of their prayers obtained sacred light.

(3.) The five Dhyani Buddhas being the personifications of the five Manas or divine perfections of Buddhahood are ideal personages. They were never born like S'ákya Muni, as understood by many scholars of Buddhism.

When it is said that such and such a Lama or S'ramana was the incarnation of such and such a Buddha, it is meant that he acquired an emanation of a portion of divine perfection so personified. Therefore every Buddha is a combination of five Divine perfections or five Dhyani Buddhas; for instance, the Taśi Lama is an incarnation of Amitábha, or the 4th Dhyani Buddha.

- 38 Gan-Ssag sÑan,

- 40 Las-hkhro-gter.

These six are the higher order of Lamas; besides these, there are three which are of a practical nature. They are called Rin or distant order, Ne or nearer order, and Ssabmo or deeper order:—

1. Rin Kaḥma. 2. Ne-terma. 3. Ssab-mo-dag-nan.

The Kahma are subdivided into three classes:

1. Gyu-thul. 2. Dupai-do. 3. Sem-chhog.

Kahma-Gyuthul.

This class spread all over U'-Tsañ and Kham, being first founded by the Indian Pandit Vimala Mitra, who handed it down to his pupil Rin-chhen Chhog. Dophuñ Lama was one of the chief leaders of this sect. One of his pupils carried it to Kham, and another towards Dan-bag north of Lhasa and upper Tsañ, called Mañar, and upper Laddak. Again a third pupil of Dophuñ Lama, named Kaḥ-dampa, erected a monastery on a place which was of the shape of the letter ∇ka at the foot of the Bombar mountains on the Di-chhu, the great river of Kham Dirgi, in consequence of which his followers were called Ka-thogpa Lamas.

Dupai-do.

This dogmatic sect has only two true scriptural volumes, Múla Tantra or Kundu-rigpai-do, and Vyákhyá-Tantra or Dogoñpa Dupa. The Indian Pandit Dána-rakshita first taught them to the two Nepálí Pandits named Dharma Bodhi and Basu-dhara, King Ru-chhe tsan of Brusha (Dusha) country translated them into the Dusha vernacular and spread them to the country of Thogar, upper Bactria and the Pamir.

Sem-chhog.

This sect was taught by Ron-sem-Lochava who was believed to have been an incarnation of Pandit Káláchárya of India. He was a profound scholar of Buddhism; being eminently versed in all the branches of sacred literature, he was unrivalled for learning in his age. There are eight ceremonies prescribed to this sect:—Jampal-ku, Padma-srun, Thugma-du-tsi, Yontan, and Phur-pa-thin-le, the five series of ceremonies, by which birth in this world can be avoided; and Mamo-bo-tan, Mod-pa-dag-nag and Jig-tan chhod-ten for worldly good, consisting purely in propitiating demons. Of the first five ceremonies, those of Tam-den and Phurpa were instituted hy Padma Sambhava who induced king Thi-sron to invoke the former and his Queen to propitiate the latter. Tamden (in Sanskrit Hayagriva) is a Tantrik god of wrathful temper, who vanquishes the demons. Phurpa is another deity who has a human head, and a body which is of the shape of a pin, standing on its apex. They are generally selected by Ninma Lamas as their tutelary deities.

The Tantrik ceremony of the worship of Jampal-ku and his attendants was instituted by Pandit S'ánti-garbha. This is the mystic representation of Manju-śrí, who here loses all his amiable, benign and wise character, and is made to assume a very terrible and hideous shape, with several heads, and clasping a woman obscenely in his arms.

The Tantrik ceremony of Yaĥ-dag was introduced by a Tantrik sage named Huĥkara, and that of Du-tsi by Vimala Mitra. The propitiating of Mamo, Modpa-dag, Jigta-chhonteĥ and other local demons was intended by Padma Sambhava for the protection of the country, as they were bound by a solemn promise to contribute to the service of the world.⁴²

THE ORIGIN OF TERMA-WORKS.

With a view to preserve the sacred writs that they might not be spoiled by water or other agencies, Padma Sambhava and other illustrious sages, for the use and disciplining of future generations, concealed them under rocks. By their divine power they commended those hidden treasures to the care of the vanquished demons who were now made guardians of the land and of Dharma, and prayed that they should be discovered only by the pious and fortunate. They specified the time, name, race and signs of the discoverers in the preface of the books concealed, also, in mystic characters and language, where and when they might be known, on rocks and in other books. Such treasures as were brought to light by men thus specified, were called Ter-chho or hidden treasures. are accounts of the discovery of such sacred treasures taking place in ancient India. The uninformed only may hold that with the exception of the Ninma schools no other religious sects possess "hidden treasures;" for many illustrious Lamas of other sects, actuated by the same motives as Padma Sambhava, had also hid volumes of their respective creeds. were also instances of many impostors, who composed works with foul doctrines, and, to attach importance to them, hid them under hollows of rocks and old trees, and after the lapse of a few years, themselves brought them out to deceive the unwary and credulous.

The legendary biography of Padma Sambhava called Than-yig is the chief work from which many hints about the hidden religious works were drawn out by Sangye-Lama, Da-chan and others which led to many valuable discoveries. Similar discoveries were made by other writers, about whom no mention was made in any of the ancient predictions. The greatest number of discoveries were made during the reign of King Wande who at one time invited many of the discoverers to one place and examined their respective pretensions. The discoverers of hidden scriptures were not required to take lessons in theology from any superior or spiritual guide. The mere discovery of the books obtained for them immunity from pupilage. Among those who acquired celebrity by such means, Nimai-hodsser of Gyal-tse and Guru Chhoikyi-Wan-chhyug were the most eminent. They were the arbitrators of the claims of the discoverers. Non-sebar was a zealous Lama who discovered many volumes of hidden scriptures and established one hundred and eight religious institutions for the discoverers, of which the one at Ta-than was well known. Among his discoveries were four medical works which were a great boon to the country, by reason of their diminishing human misery through their healing efficacy.

SSAB-MO-DAG NAÑ.

There were some Lamas who rose high in clerical dignity in this order. Some of them are said to have seen the face of the Supreme god who taught them religion. This class is common to other Buddhist schools of Tibet, but it obtained great celebrity in the Ninmapa school.

Of the Anuttara system of the Ninmapa, the Dsog-chhenpa sect is by far the most important and philosophical. In fact it is the chief of the surviving sects of the once most flourishing school of Tibet and Nepál. It is well known by the name of Dsog-chhenpa Lana-me-pai gyu. Atiyoga is its distinctive dogma. It has three divisions, Semde, Lónde and Mannag.

There are eighteen volumes of Semde scriptures out of which five are attributed to Vairochana and thirteen to Vimala Mitra. The Lo'nd scriptures, altogether nine in number, were by Vairochana and Panmipham-gonpo. The Tibetan Lamas Dharma-boti of Jé and Dharma Senha were the most distinguished among the teachers of this theory. Nin-thic or Man-Nag-de is the most metaphysical of the three. It was first taught by Vimala Mitra to king Thi-sron and to Tendsin-ssan-po of Myan. The latter founded the monastery of Ui-rushva where he concealed many of his works. At his death he left hints respecting his works to Brom-rinchhen-bar. Buddha Vajra Dhara first delivered this theory to the Indian Pandit Gaḥrab dorje (Ananda Vajra) who left it to his pupil S'rí Siṃha from whom Padma Sambhava obtained it.

I.

SUBHU'TI, THE STHAVIRA.

Subhúti was born in the city of S'rávastí of a wealthy and accomplished Bráhmana father, named Bhúti. In his former birth, he is said to have been a Nága from which he transmigrated to man. In his youth he acquired great proficiency in the six Bráhmanical Acts (Chárya) and the several sciences. Following the inclinations of his former life, he resided in sandel-wood forests which were filled with innumerable serpents, whence he was conducted before Buddha² by a truth-observing god.³ He was ordained a priest by Buddha's spiritual power.4 By his knowledge of the Dharma S'ástras, he suppressed sins and thereby obtained the rank of an Arhat. When, by his fore-knowledge, he saw that in his former life he had been a Nága, his heart became greatly grieved. He, therefore, taught morality to 500 Nágas and 500 eagles who fed on the former, by converting them to the Bauddha faith. Buddha also had remarked that "among the galaxy of the learned, Subhúti shines like Venus (the Morning Star)." When Buddha delivered the Prajña-Páramitá on the top of Gridhrakúṭa Parvata, Subhúti served him as chief catechist (the inquirer as well as the solver of doubts by reference to Buddha).

Although, outwardly a man, yet by these means he obtained the Bodhisattva perfection of the Maháyána and became one of the principal disciples of Buddha S'ákya Simha.

II.

Manjuskí Kírti.

Manjuśri Kirti was born in the opulent city of Sambhala in the north, of royal parents. His father, king Deva-Indra, was said to have been the incarnation of the Bodhisattva Súnyagarbha. His mother's name was Kauśiki. Six hundred and seventy-four years after the death of Buddha, according to Buton,⁶ in the year 159 B. C., Manjuśrí Kírti ascended the throne of S'ambhala. His sovereignty extended over hundreds of petty princes and a hundred thousand cities. During his youth he acquired great proficiency in arts, sciences and magic. It is recorded that within his kingdom there lived 300,510 followers of the heretical doctrine of the Mlechhas.⁷ Among these, there were many sages whose religion consisted in the worship of the vehicle of the sun (Nimai S'inta). Manjuśrí Kírti banished the whole infidel population from his dominions, but afterwards, on their embracing the sacred pitakas, he listened to their humble prayer to be permitted to return to their former homes. For the welfare of all living beings and especially of the people of S'ambhala, he explained the Kálachakra system. At last in the year 59 B. C., bequeathing his throne to his son, Pundaríka, he passed away from the world of sufferings, and entered the Sambhoga-káya of Buddhahood.

III.

LEG-DAN JYAD.

This great teacher was born of a Kshatriya family in Eastern India to the east of Magadha. Being possessed of great natural talents, he very early learnt the principal systems of the Buddhist schools, promulgated by Nágárjuna and other Indian saints, and by his great knowledge of sacred literature became prominent among the learned. He was ordained a priest by Nágárjuna and wrote a commentary on the Múla Prajña of Nágárjuna and named it Prajña dípa. He reduced Nágárjuna's reflections into Svatantra and thereby founded the second schismatical sect of the Mádhyamika school, called Mádhyamika Svatantra. He also found fault with Buddha Pála's commentary or tíká on the Múla Prajñá. There arose many followers of this great teacher, who greatly extended the Svatantra school.

Abhayakara Gupta was born in the middle of the 9th century after Christ in Eastern India near the city of Gaur.⁸ When he grew up to youth, he went to the central country of Magadha, where he learned the five sciences and became well known as a pandit. It was here that he entered the priesthood. During his time there reigned in Magadha king Ráma Pála, in whose palace he was appointed to conduct the religious By his modesty and liberal accomplishments he greatly pleased the monarch. During the first two watches of the day he used to write Sastras. In the third watch he used to explain Dharma. Up to midnight, sitting in the Himavana cemetery, he used to propitiate his gods, and, during the latter part of the night, to take rest and sleep. One morning a Dákiní disguised in a girl's habit, approached him with presents of meat and wine. Abhayakara, a man of stern morality, did not pay any attention to her, and the woman soon disappeared, and no one knew where she had gone. Afterwards he became anxious in his mind as to who and what she might have been, and searched for her in every direction, but without success. Penitent, he now confessed his mistake, when the selfsame girl once more made her appearance. He asked forgiveness and prayed to be endowed with foreknowledge, whereupon the divine girl, now resplendent in angelic beauty, thus addressed him: "Abhayakara! as in your former birth you were wanting in the faculty of discrimination, so will you continue to be during this life also; but as you have confessed your error, you will obtain foreknowledge during the interval between your death and re-birth. As a step towards its acquirement you must write many works on the Dharma S'ástras." After drawing his attention to the practice of constructing Mandalas (in Tibet Kyilkhor) or the ritualistic circular figures of the Tantriks, she disappeared. Following the advice of this Khahdoma, he composed several commentaries, lo besides criticisms on other commentators. Once he visited the city of Chara Simha, ruled by a Chandála king, who, a believer in the foulest sort of heresy, was preparing to make one hundred human sacrifices to his horrid god. Moved with compassion for the sufferings of these unfortunate men who were bound to the sacrificial pole, he prayed to god for 11 their deliverance. All on a sudden a hideous Koluber Nága coiling round his body, extended its hood This dreadful sight so terrified the Chandála king that, over his head.

at the request of Abhayakara, he at once set the victims free. During the reign of Ráma Pála, under the leadership of Abhayakara, the sacred religion of Buddha received a fresh impulse. There were three thousand monks at the Vikramasilá Vihára, and one thousand at Vajrásana (Buddha Gaya). At great religious festivals and sacrificial occasions more than 5,000 monks generally assembled. Out of the one thousand monks of Vajrásana, 40 of the Maháyána and 200 śrávakas who were resident members of the monastery, received their food from the king's store. The Srávakas were so numerous in every place, that at times of religious prayer-gatherings their number generally exceeded 10,000. At the monastery of Otanta Puri there were 1,000 monks, including the members of the Maháyána and the S'rávaka sects. Over the former Abhayakara presided. The S'rávakas also venerated him for his great knowledge and practice of discipline (vinaya). wrote numerous works on Buddhism, several of which are said to be extant even to the present day. He was succeeded in the High-priestship by Ratnákara S'ánti. King Ráma Pála after a successful reign of 40 years abdicated the throne in favour of his son Aksha Pála. Abhayakara died before the abdication and Ráma Pála departed this life three years after it.

In the city of Sukhávatí there were many hunger-stricken beggars whose sufferings Abhayakara allayed by giving them food and drink from his mendicant platter, which was miraculously supplied from heaven. During his residence in the Vihára of Vikramaśilá, under the protection of the son of king S'ubhaśrí of Eastern India, 12 the Turushka war 13 took place. In this war Abhayakara played an important part. 14 Afterwards he cured many poisonous snake-bites and arrested numerous bandits and robbers by the spell of his mantras. He achieved many wonders, the last of which was the bringing to life a dead child in the great cemetery of Himavana.

life also, he learned the sacred scriptures from Thog-mi Lochava and others. He went to India where he served 72 religious teachers some of whom were most noted. He also learnt the sútras and the mantras, more particularly the system of Tantrik ritualism called Guhya Samája (Sañwa-du-pa). By these means he earned for himself the name of an eminent scholar. After his return to Tibet he became a saint. As he had the power of seeing the celestial mansion of the thirty-two mystical gods, he was called Shal-ssig-pa or the "god-seeing recluse." He promulgated the Guhya Samája system of Tantrikism in Tibet. He had a great many pupils of whom four were well versed in the Mátri-Tantra and Upadeśa. Having done his utmost to further the cause of holy religion and the good of living beings, he passed away from the world in righteousness and piety.

VI.

SAKYA PANDITA KUNGAH-GYAL-TSHAN.¹⁷

This eminent scholar was born at Sakya in the year 1182 A. D. of the noble family of Sakya Jam-yan-gon. His father's name was Pal-chhenhod-pa and that of his mother Ni-thi-tsam, and they gave him the name of Paldan-Ton-dub. During his boyhood he learnt the Sanskrit, Lanja, Wartu (the language of Bactria and Kafirstan probably) and Du-sha languages. He was admitted into the holy order by the venerable Tag-pa-gyal-tshan who gave him the religious name of Kungaḥ-gyal-tshan. From him he obtained instructions in the Sútras and Tantras. Other Pandits taught him other branches of science and sacred literature. By his great proficiency in the five great sciences, namely the mechanical arts, medicine, grammar, dialectics and sacred literature, as well as in the minor sciences of rhetoric, synonimics, poetry, dancing and astrology, in short, almost all the sciences, and chiefly by his studying and translating the theological works of the orthodox and the heterodox schools, he acquired the name of Sakya Pandita. He obtained a world-wide celebrity in India, China, Mongolia and Tibet. At the age of twenty-seven he went to the great Kashmirian Pandit S'ákya Srí, by whom he was ordained a priest and instructed in the sútras and mantras. On the return journey he visited Kyi-ron where he entered into disputation with a Brahmanical S'ástrí, called Samkara dhvaja (?), and defeated him by his logic and quoting of authorities. The S'astri who had staked his life, now fled by means of his magical powers towards the sky, but Sakya Pandita by the charms of his Mantra Vidyá brought him down tied, and subsequently converted him to the orthodox faith and obliged him to promise to take the sacred vows of priesthood. Desiring to shew the Tibetans the curious and peculiar religious dress of the Brahmanical priests of India he brought the S'ástrí to Tibet in his Brahmanical dress and signs,—an act which gave great umbrage to the twelve demigods and demons who are the sworn guardians of Tibet. They killed 19 the S'ástrí by making him vomit blood and tied his head to the pillar of the great temple of the Sakya monastery, which still exists. After this, Sakya Pandita received an invitation from the Emperor of Hor (Mongolia) whose dominion extends to the north. He was told by his former teacher Tag-pa-gyal-tshan²⁰ that there lived in Hor21 a race of men who differed greatly in language from the Tibetans, and who were hawk-like hats, and shoes resembling the snout of pigs. teacher advised him not to harbour any doubts or fears about the people in his mind, but to go straight to that country to further the cause of religion and the well-being of living beings, in accordance with the prophecies of old. At the age of thirty-three²² he started from Sakya for Hor, and after a tedious and protracted journey of three years, reached the court of Goyugan the Emperor of the Tartars. He instructed the Emperor in religion and frequently discoursed on religion with him. Thus the barbarians who disbelieved in the sacred tenets of Buddhism were converted by him. The Maháyána system was introduced there.

The Nága²³ princes being pacified by the beneficial influence of the Buddhist religion, there was plenty of rain and water. Maladies of men and murrain were prevented from raging in the country. In Hor, the people lived in plenty and reared much cattle. Buddhism was made as powerful as the sun in dispelling darkness. In the city of Gyu-ma, at the age of seventy, in the year 1252 A. D., in the month of September, during the middle watch of the day, he quitted this mortal coil and entered the mansion of purity, solemnly escorted by a procession of fairies (dákinís).

Tantrik priest²⁵ of the race of Lan. In his youth, he received instruction in the mystic Ñinma system from a learned Lama named Dub-ten-S'ákya Phel. From his seventeenth year he received instruction from many other Lamas²⁶ of the Ninma school. Becoming a powerful charmer, he subdued the eight demigods and genii of the spiritual world. At the request of the Emperor Goyugan he visited China. Here he was engaged in conducting the religious services and ceremonies, by which means and more particularly by his moral merits he showed the path of spiritual liberation to others. Afterwards he returned to Tibet where he performed many acts of virtue. Being earnestly pressed by his mother, he took a wife and at the age of twentyeight got a son. At the age of twenty-nine, seeing that worldly existence was illusive, he broke off the bondage and went before the teacher Tag-pashon-nu by whom he was ordained a priest and given the name of Dorje-pal. He also heard sermons on Buddhism from Ranjun dorje, Wuton-shag Khanpo-Yeśe, and others. He established many religious institutions, such as Phenpo-ri-vo-chhe, Garmo-chhojun, Taśi-jon-kha, Chho-din, and Taggya-dorje-phodan,²⁷ and wrote many books on the ancient and modern schools of Buddhism, called Ninma and Sarma respectively. Yugde Panchhen and others were his pupils. At the palace of Tag-gya dorje, in the ninety-second year of his age, in the year 1376, he entered the mansion of rest and peace.

KHA-DUB-GELEG-PAL-SSAN.

This illustrious scholar was born in the year 1385 A. D. at Dag-shuñ. His father's name was Kungaḥ Taśi, and that of his mother Pudongyalmo.

He took the sacred vows of priesthood from the learned sage Senge-gyal-tshan and received the religious name of Geleg-pal-ssan. He obtained the title of Master of Vidyá by studying logic and sacred literature at the monastic colleges of Sakya and Namrin. In the 16th year of his age he commenced a controversy with the celebrated Pudon Panchhen which resulted in the defeat of the latter. From this time Geleg-pal-ssan became well known for his learning. He also learned many Sútras and Mantras from Je-tsun-Rendah and other learned Lamas. At the age of eighteen he visited the great Reformer Lo-ssan-Tag-pa, 28 from whom he heard many discourses on the vast and profound teachings of Buddha. On one occasion Tson khapa had remarked of Geleg-pal-ssan that he (the young and intelligent novice) would one day prove a great promoter of Buddhism. From the twenty-second year of his age for a period of thirteen years he studied under the great Reformer and mastered the Sútras and the Mantras. He read the excellent and most learned aphorisms, and embraced the reformed doctrines of Tson khapa with unbounded faith. He was invited by Rabtan Kunssan, King of Gyal-tse,29 to hold a disputation with the venerable Chho-je-Rin-Chhen. The controversy, however, did not take place on account of the latter withdrawing from the contest. Aided by the patronage of Rabtan he succeeded in founding the great monastery of Gyal-tse, which with its eighteen Tvasan (schools) still exists. At the age of forty-six he was exalted to the golden throne of Gahdan vacated by the death of the immediate successor of Tsonkhapa. He met with great success in extending the Gelugpa system and thus promoting the work of reformation. In the fifty-fourth year of his age, in the year 1439 A. D., he passed away from mortal existence, to rest in the mansion of purity.

IX.

SONAM-CHHO KYI-LAÑPO.

This scholar was born in the year 1439 A. D. of humble parentage on the boundary of Tsan-ron. His complexion during childhood being very pale, his parents used to call him Pahu (calf). When he grew up he was taken to the presence of Gahdan Thipa (the great abbot of the Gahdan monastery) and other professors of religion. When the abbot demanded his name, he said that it was Pahu. The abbot smilingly said, "from this day your name will be Sonam-chhyog-kyi-Lánpo (the bull of Fortune) as one day you will grow to be a Lán or bull". He then admitted him into his monastery. At Gahdan, Sonam learnt the different branches of Buddhism, such as Abhisheka, Vyákarana, Sútra, Tantra, Meditation, Criticism and Upadeśa. He then returned to Tsan where he got many pupils. plaining to them the Dharma S'ástras he obtained the title of "the Lamp of religion." Consulting his tutelary deities he came to know that he would be required to construct a bell-metal image of Buddha full one cubit high. He constructed many images and also built the Udin Gonpa. Convinced that moral discipline and purity of conduct are the basis of all religion, he enforced the greatest strictness in the behaviour of his pupils. the latter part of his life, he sent sixteen of his pupils to Taśi-lhunpo and Gephel monasteries. With a view to accomplish the object of his life he retired into solitude, where, free from the confusion and clamour of monasteries, from inattention and idleness, and all anxieties of life, he could concentrate his attention on meditation and study. By his great erudition, application, and reflection he composed many elegant aphorisms and S'ástras. His tutelary deities granted him several interviews. Having obtained boundless Abhijñána he could find out supernatural secrets. At the age of sixty-six, in the year 1505 A. D., he quietly passed away from this world of pain and sorrow.

GYAL-WA TON-DUB.

This great scholar was born in the year 1505 A. D. at Lha-khu-phupen-sa situated on the north bank of the great river Tsanpo, near the famous monastery of Chamalin, in the district of Da-gya in west Tsan. His father Sonam Dorje, and mother Jomkyi belonged to the family in which some of his illustrious predecessors were born. No sooner was the child born than it manifested its compassion for the misery of all unborn and migrating living beings, by uttering the six mystic syllables "Om-mani-padme-hum," at which uncommon occurrence the inmates of the house, with wonder thinking that the infant must be some saint or divine personage, gave it the name Gonpo-kyab. From his childhood, Gonpo-kyab had been fond of solitude. He is said to have seen the faces of Buddha and Tson khapa, from whose hands he received benediction. When only eight years old, he saw in a vision, that, dressed in a white satin tunic and adorned with precious gems, he sat with a bell and a dorje in his hand on the disc of the full moon which rose refulgent from the top of the Segri mountain, and that the sound of the ringing of the bell filled the world. At the age of eleven he became a pupil of Je Tag-pa Ton-dub, abbot of Lha-tse monastery, from whom he received the vows of priesthood and the religious name of Lo-ssáñ Ton-dub. He also heard sermons on Kálachakra, Bhairava, and the Bodhisattva Marga. He received instructions in the S'utras, Mantras and the system of mysticism called Guhya-Thereafter coming to Taśi-lhunpo he became a pupil of the abbot Lo-ssan she-Nen in logic, but soon becoming disgusted with his subtle but trifling and useless system he gave up his connection with his teacher. At the age of seventeen he became a pupil of the sage Chhokyi Dorje and fully mastered the volume of precepts called Gahdan-Nen-gyud. Afterwards returning to Tsan he resided at the temple of Pamachen near the Panám-Chomolha-ri.³⁰ Here his teacher the sage shewed him the volume of illusive mysticism. Lo-ssan composed four volumes of Nen-gyud, (pleasing Tantras). During his residence at the castle of Ta-gya-dorje he acquainted himself with the terminology and signification of the classical writings both in the melodious Sanskrit and the insipid Tibetan. In this manner when his life and sainthood were uniformly flowing onward, at the age of sixty-five in the year 1570 he passed away from mundane suffering.

This great Lama was born in the year 1391 A. D., at a place called Gun-ru in the Dok-pa³² country between Sakya and Taśi-lhunpo. mother's name was Jomo-namkye, and his father's Gonpo-dorje. They gave him the name of Pemá Dorje. Unlike other children, he was very handsome and of an amiable and pleasing disposition. When a child he used to collect around him a number of children of his age, and talk to them gravely, as if he were their religious teacher. His sports consisted only in making images of Buddhas, erecting chhorten, shrines, altars and viháras. By his command his playmates used to raise stone piles as if to repair the school walls. He seldom engaged in such sports as other children delighted in. At the age of seven he entered the Narthan monastery, where he prosecuted his studies up to the fifteenth year of his age. Within this period he learnt the Tibetan, Hor (Tartar), Chinese, Wartu and Lanja³³ (ancient Buddhist Sanskrit) languages. In his fifteenth year he was admitted into the holy order by Dubpa-S'erab, abbot of Narthan, and given the name of Gedundub-pal. He now acquired great proficiency in grammar, polite learning, poetry, arithmetic and other sciences, and also became well acquainted with the Sútras and Tantras. At the age of twenty he took the vows of priesthood at the hands of the same abbot, and became famed for his strict observance of vinaya or moral discipline. By his perseverance and assiduity he became an attentive śrávaka, a powerful thinker, and an excellent meditator. Unmindful of his personal convenience and temporal aggrandisement, and always thoughtful of furthering the cause of religion and the well-being of living beings, he went at the age of twenty-five to the province of U' to see the great reformer Tsong khapa, from whom he received much religious instruction, and who was greatly pleased with his conduct. Gedun-dub also received religious instruction from the two great Buddhist scholars Semba-chhenpo Kun-ssan and the venerable S'erab-senge. Being well acquainted with theology and meditative science he performed many religious ceremonies and observances for the good of all living beings. At the age of thirty-six he returned to the Tsang province where his reputation as a great scholar in theology, disputation and sacred literature was unrivalled. At the age of forty-three he constructed an exquisitely fine image of Buddha Maitreya in the vihára of At the age of fifty-six he was directed in a vision, by Paldan-Lhamo (the goddess S'rí Deví), to establish a religious institution. Accordingly he founded the great monastery of Taśi-lhunpo and furnished it richly with images and books,—an act which greatly extended the Buddhist faith. In the latter part of his life, while labouring under pressure of spiritual business, he succeeded in constructing several thousands of images of Buddha, Maitreya, Tárá, and the Bodhisattvas, besides working a gigantic piece of tapestry. His reverence for the congregation and devotion to the Triad was immense. He wrote five large volumes of commentaries on the Sútras and Mantras. He is said to have held communion with his tutelary deities, such as Bhairava, Tárá, Sarasvati, Manju-Ghosha and S'rí Deví, from whom he occasionally received prophecies. The purity of his morals made him adored by gods and men. At the age of eighty-four, in the year 1478 A.D., on the morning of the 12th month he was delivered from mundane existence. Amidst showers of flowers and music of cymbals and drums he was conducted before Maitreya the regent of Sukhávatí, the paradise of the Buddhists.

Pan-Chhen Lo-ssañ-Chho-kyi gyal-tshan.³⁴

The important town of Lhen, containing 600 families, is situated on the confines of Tsañ-roñ. It was in the house of a wealthy noble of this town, where formerly many illustrious Lamas were born, that in the year 1569 A. D., Chho-kyi Gyal-tshan was born. His father's name was Pon-tshañ-tsheriñ Paljor and that of his mother Tso-chan. The Abbot Tshem-ta named him Chho-gyal paldan-ssañpo. Even in his childhood he is said to have given many proofs of his wonderful memory: while only three years old he was found able to recite the Manju-S'rí náma nidhi. At the age of thirteen he was initiated into the holy order by Kha-dub-yeśe and given the name of Chho-kyi Gyal-tshañ. Under the tutorship of this Lama, he learnt the mystical worship called Guhya-samája. At the age of fourteen he was placed at the head of Weñ-gon monastery. He propitiated Yañ-chen-ma, the goddess of learning, for seven days, at the end of which he saw her face, and welcomed her by singing seventeen hymns. The goddess in return presented him with a cup of gem-like fruits, by virtue of which divine gift, within the course of a month, he learnt by-heart five volumes of Tsonkhapa's precepts. During this period, one night, he saw in a vision the image of Buddha, as high as a mountain, shining with the brightness of myriads of suns, and approaching him to confer benediction. At the age of seventeen he entered the Thosamlin college of Taśi-lhunpo, where he studied psychology and logic, and obtained the high degree of Master of learning. At the age of twenty-two he was ordained priest by Pan-chhen-Yar-phel. In the latter part of the same year, he went to U' to visit the sacred images. Here he saw several happy and auspicious omens. Going to Gahdan he disputed with the learned in argumentative science, and seeured for himself a world-wide celebrity. At the age of thirty-one he was raised to the sacerdotal chair of Taśi-lhunpo, during his tenure of which he ably turned the wheel of Dharma to promote the diffusion of the sacred religion. He was the first to introduce the annual prayer-fair at Taśi-lhunpo, executed twenty-three satin embroidered pictures, numerous tapestries, paintings and copper and clay images. He richly furnished the recluses' monasteries with religious necessaries. He ordained afterwards the Dalai Lama Yon-ton Gya-tsho into the priesthood and taught him the Kálachakra ritualism. As a punishment for their internal dissensions, he employed the monks of Taśi-lhunpo in erecting three lofty chhorten within the monastery walls. He entertained the monks of Será, Dapuñ and Gahdan several times, distributing gold pieces among them. At the invitation of the Rájá of Gugé he visited upper Tibet. At the age of forty-four he applied to the collected body of monks to be permitted to retire from the abbotship of Taśi-lhunpo, but their earnest entreaties dissuaded him from the resolve. After the death of the Dalai Lama, the Gelugpa church having waned greatly, he was invited to Lhasa where the Synod of the Lamas under the presidentship of the abbots of Será and Dapun appointed him to the pontifical throne of Gahdan, which high office he meritoriously filled. During his ineumbeney there arose a quarrel between the southern Mongolians and the Tibetans, which ended in the invasion of Tibet by Thingirtho, the nomad king of Khokhonur.³⁵ Thinger-tho's armies slew 500 Tibetan soldiers. The armies of Tsan and U' consisting of nearly 100,000 soldiers assembled at the foot of Chagpori in the suburbs of Lhasa. Immense hordes of nomad warriors reinforced Thingir-tho's armies which were thus enabled to besiege the Tibetans and cut off their supplies. Unable to bear the sight of the distress of his countrymen, Chho-kyi Gyal-tshan sued for peace and delivered his country from the hands of the enemies by the payment of a large quantity of gold and silver. At the age of fifty-three he initiated and subsequently ordained to the priesthood the successor incarnate of Yonton-Gya-tsho. It was during this period that he deputed Se-chhen-chho-je to the court of Thai-tsun-bogto-khan,36 the first of the Manchu Emperors of China, praying him to assume the protectorship of Tibet. The Emperor gladly accepted the offer and sent him return presents of great value and rarity. Counting from the Emperor Shunchi, his son and successor, all the Emperors adhered to the Gelugpa church. This wise step which was calculated to save Tibet from the hands of the fierce and bloodthirsty Mongols, proved a failure; for, a few years after, the warlike Guśri-khan, the son and successor of Thingir-tho invaded Tibet, dethroned all the petty princes of Tibet, of Tsan and U', and brought all its eighteen provinces under his single sway. He greatly admired the vast learning and moral purity of Chho-kyi Gyal-tshan, whom he afterwards appointed his spiritual guide. Chho-kyi Gyal-tshan immediately before his death received an embassy from the Emperor of China which brought him a letter written in gold and many precious and choice presents. It was the noble and generous conqueror Guśri-khan who made a present of the sovereignty of Tibet to the fifth Gyal-wa Lo-ssan Gya-tsho, thenceforth called Dalai Lama.

Besides delivering Tibet from many political vicissitudes and clerical crises, he did a great many acts of social and religious utility. He wrote five volumes of sacred aphorisms, and introduced the Kham-tshan.³⁷ He classified the monks into orders. He received into monkhood more than 50,000 novices, and performed the ceremony of final ordination over nearly 100,000 monks. His charities amounted to 3 lakhs of gold sáńs, or 18 millions of rupees.³⁸ Among his spiritual sons, the 1st and the 2nd Dalai Lamas were the most eminent; and among his lay-pupils, mostly princes and nobles of the country, Guśri-khan was the most renowned. At the age of ninety-three, at 12 A. M., on the 10th of the 2nd lunar month, in the year 1662 A. D., he passed away from this world, after a glorious and most successful career, one of Tibet's most illustrious personages. The Chhyag-Jo³⁹ of Taśi-lhunpo and the rich patrons of religion in Tibet conjointly subscribed 600,000 Rs. (10,000 sans) to erect a gilt copperroofed tomb over his remains.

De-chhen-gyalpo and his mother's S'erab-Dolma. Being at once recognized as the incarnation of the late Pan-chhen, he was conducted to Taśilhunpo in great pomp and procession, on the anniversary of the emancipation of Tsonkhapa, on the 25th of the 10th lunar month. He easily learnt to read and write, and soon became versed in rituals. At the age of eight, he visited Lhasa, when, from the Dalai Lama Lo-ssan Gya-tsho, he received the vows of monkhood and the name of Lo-ssan-Yese. After his return to Taśi-lhunpo, he was made the president of the grand prayermeeting called Tshó-chhen. Even in his boyhood he won by his amiable and engaging behaviour the affection and reverence of all men. He heard many of the Dalai Lama's sermons. At the age of twenty he was ordained by Kon-chhog Gyal-tshan. At the age of thirty-two he sent a congratulatory deputation to Pekin. The Emperor in reply addressed a letter to him inviting him to Pekin, but he begged to be excused for fear of smallpox. At the age of thirty-five he gave the vows of priesthood to the incarnation of the Dalai Lama and named him Lo-ssan Rin-chhen. At the age of forty he ordained him to the priesthood, but this Dalai having died shortly after, an incarnation was discovered who received at his hands the vows and the name of Lo-ssan Kal-ssan. In the year 1713, he received a letter written in gold in three different languages, Tibetan, Mongol and Manchu, from the Emperor of China couched in friendly terms. The Imperial seal-keeper Ja-sag-Lama accompanied the Envoy, carrying with him the Imperial Insignia and a large Thamka or golden seal in which was inscribed the title Pan-chhen Erte-ni.40 The Panchhen-Rinpochhe returned a suitable reply with excellent presents for the Emperor. He subsequently ordained the 3rd Dalai, Kal-ssan Gya-tsho, and the grand Imperial Lama of Pekin, Chan-kya-Rinpo-Dorje⁴¹, and taught them sacred literature. By the faithful assistance of king Lha-ssañ of Tsañ, Tsheriñ Ton-dub of Jungar and Pese-bá-dur,42 the exertions of this Panchhen in promoting the cause of human good bore excellent fruits. In the year 1728 the Emperer sent Ali-há Ampan to settle the boundary between U' and Tsan. It was at this time when the kingdom of Tibet was about to fall into the hands of prince Sonam-Topgye, after the abdication of king Miwan-Pholha, that the Imperial Commissioners requested the Panchhen Rinpochhe to accept the sovereignty of all the provinces of Tibet lying between Khambala and Kailása mountain. The Panchhen declined the offer several times on the plea of old age.

⁴¹ Called Changay Lama by Bogle.

⁴² In Mongolian Bahdur means a warrior or hero. Bahdur is probably the same as the Hindustání Bahádur.

He said that the government of so large a country and its responsibilities were too great for him to undertake, and that he would content himself with his ancient possessions. But the Commissioners insisted on his acceptance, saying the Imperial mandate could not be disobeyed. He, therefore, consulted the then nominal king of Tibet, as to whether his compliance with the Emperor's commands would not clash with his interests. The king who was a pious prince advised him to accept the offer. The Panchhen, therefore, assumed the sovereignty of the whole of Tibet lying to the west of Panám, including the districts of Lha-tse, Phun-tsholin, Namrin, Jonkha, Ki-ron, Nari-kor-sum, and relinquished the possession of Phari, Gyal-tse, Yar-dotsho, and other places to the government of Lhasa. He wrote eighteen volumes of sacred hymns and precepts. The number of monks that received the vows from him was very great. Thus devoting his life to the good of humanity and living beings he departed from this world at the age of seventy-five, on the 5th of the 8th lunar month. A tomb with a gilt copper dome, like that of his predecessor, but somewhat larger, was erected to his memory, at a cost of 12,000 sans or Rs. 720,000.

Pan-chhen Lo-ssañ Paldan-Ye-se.43

This great sovereign Lama was born at Taśi-tse, a village of Shang⁴⁴ in Tsan. His father, named Than-Lha, was distinguished for his wisdom, courage and frankness. His mother Jom-kyi was an honest and good natured woman. Previous to his birth there appeared to his father in a vision a golden chhorten, glittering with lustre, and his mother saw in a vision Panchhen Lo-ssan Yese presenting her with a life-reviving vessel and some consecrated pills. There appeared rainbows, refulgent with five variegated hues in all directions, five yellow flowers growing out of a single calyx and corn bearing five pods and three ears. All men were singing and dancing with spontaneous mirth and joy. Amid such auspicious and happy prognostics, at dawn, on Saturday, the 11th of the 11th lunar month, in the year 1737, Panchhen Paldan Ye-se was born. The extreme fairness of his person, and above all his lovely face attracted the notice of all men. At the end of the 2nd month the child lisped Om mani.45 As he grew up, he was observed to delight at the sight of the monks of Tasilhunpo. Whenever he saw an Achárya (Indian Buddhist) he used to say Bhálá, Bhálá⁴⁶. Sometimes holding the dorje and bell and at other times with joined palms, he used to sit in a pensive mood, as if to read or write. He was never known to delight in or amuse himself with ordinary and vain sports like other vulgar boys. When only three years old, he was found continually engaged in worshipping a bright and handsome image The fame of this wonderful child reached Taśi-lhunpo, when the Don-Ner Lo-ssan Tson-du was assured by many of the reappearance of the soul of the late Panchhen in the person of the said child. Accordingly, he equipped himself with some of the personal properties of the late Panchhen Rinpochhe, such as the rosary, dorje, and bell, the articles used in consulting gods, mixed with several imitation sets, and arrived at Tasi tse. On being subjected to the ordeal of finding out the real properties, the princely child easily and unerringly picked out all that belonged to the late Panchhen, and moreover called Don-Ner by his name though he had never heard it before. This excellent manner of acquitting himself established beyond doubt the identity of his soul with that of the late Panchhen. The princely child, now four years old, was therefore brought to Taśi-lhunpo with great pomp and procession. The Dalai Lama Kalssan Gya-tsho gave him the name of Lo-ssan Paldan Ye-śe. On this occasion the Emperor of China, most of the Mongolian princes, the Táránátha Lama of Khalkha, the government of Lhasa with its dependent chiefs, and the three great monasteries of Será, Dapuñ and Gahdan sent him innumerable presents of various sorts. About this time a shower of flowers fell from the sky, which glittered with many a rainbow and conical halo of light. The atmosphere was laden with sweet fragrance. On a background of variegated clouds, the shapes of a lion, a tiger, an elephant, a horse and a man under a canopy of radiance, surrounded by innumerable flags, were manifest to the eyes of all. During the sixth year of his age he was carefully instructed in aphorisms and mysticism by his chief spiritual minister Lo-ssan Yon-dsin,47 from whom he received the vows of monkhood when only seven years old. In the 10th lunar month of the same year he took his seat on the chair in the grand worship hall. On this occasion also, the Emperor of China, the Dalai Lama, the king of Tibet Miwan Sonam-tob and the different Mongol princes sent him presents, which amounted to more than 30,000 pieces of horse-hoof shaped silver, 5,000 gold sans, 10,000 pieces of satin, and 20 porters' loads of precious stones, such as turquoises, corals, cat's-eyes, onyx, amber, and pearl: so that Taśi-lhunpo overflowed with riches. The young Panchhen gave sumptuous dinners to all the monasteries of U and Tsan about 700 in number and distributed alms consisting of silver pieces to all the monks. At the age of eleven he came to Lhasa to visit the Dalai Lama. Although he received instruction in the S'ástras from the Dalai, yet he was seated on the right hand side on a throne as high as the Dalai's own. After a short stay at Lhasa he returned to Tsan. At the age of fifteen he again visited Lhasa, heard some of the sermons of the Dalai Lama, made offerings to the two sacred images of Akshobhya and Gautama, entertained the Será, Dapuñ and Gahdan monasteries with tea and soup meal and distributed a great deal of money for charitable purposes. At the age of twenty he visited Lhasa a third time and received ordination to the priesthood from the Dalai Lama Kal-ssan Gya-tsho. This time his great liberality in religious donations and endowments, offerings to the sacred shrines, and alms of a silver san (Rs. 2½) to each of the monks of Será, Dapuñ, Gaḥdan, Potálá, Radiñ and various other monasteries, numbering 118 in U and 370 in Tsang, made his name famous far and wide. There were few beggars who did not partake of his bounty. He also spent immense sums of money in administering medicines to the sick. The twenty-first year of the Panchhen's age was inaugurated by the advent to Taśi-lhunpo of Chankya Rinpo-chhe, the Emperor's spiritual guide, the greatest of the Imperial high priests of the celestial Empire, to see the Vicegerent of Buddha in the person of the Pauchhen Rinpochhe. He made innumerable kinds of presents among which the following were the principal ones: 6 rosaries of pearls, coral and amber, 20 horse-hoof silver plates, 100 suits of Tartar robes of the very best China satin and numberless scarves. Chankya Rinpochhe stayed at Taśi-lhunpo for several months, and received from the Panchhen lessons in the Sútras and Tantras. In the year 1759 the Panchhen Rinpochhe sanctified the golden tomb of the late Dalai Lama, whose soul was reported to have appeared in the person of the child. the special request of the Emperor, he visited Lhasa. On examination he found that the incarnation was unmistakeably genuine, and gave him the name of Lo-ssan Jampal Gya-tsho. After lavishing alms on the various monasteries he returned to Taśi-lhunpo. Three years afterwards he again visited Lhasa to place the young Dalai on the throne of Potálá He commemorated the occasion by giving grand dinners to the temporal and spiritual lords of the country. The amount of gold and silver expended on this occasion could not be estimated. During the return journey to Taśi-lhunpo he visited Gyal-tse the monastery of which place he richly endowed. At Taśi-lhunpo he administered the vows of monkhood to several thousand novices. At the ege of twenty-eight he visited Lhasa and initiated the young Dalai Lama into the priesthood. In the year 1766 he received a deputation from the Emperor of China, consisting of Asákhan Kwañ Ampan, the keeper of the grand seal Nag-wañ Paljor, a 3rd grade mandarin Khi-ya-thelen, together with twenty other officials. They brought him the Emperor's letter written on thirteen gold tablets, each an inch thick, 3 inches broad and about 20 inches long. The following are the contents of the letter:

"The commands of the all-powerful Hwan⁴⁸ (Emperor) derived of old from heaven, extend over all the world. The four great oceans alone encompass the reign of his excellent laws which are essential for the well-being and happiness of mankind. Throughout all the quarters in all ages, the fame of Hwan's merciful and generous protection is proclaimed. He adores and venerates the sacred creed of the yellow hat of sublime precepts, whose saints, pre-eminently holy in the moral virtues, have toiled according to the canonical rules. Thou, O precious Panchhen! having fully comprehended the teachings of that sacred creed, sittest over the head of the Dalai Lama. Thy illustrious predecessor has obtained sainthood. Thou, too, during this sojourn in the world by the observance of discipline and moral rectitude, shouldst obtain sanctity. Till now thou hast grown more and more exalted. By this grant of a golden diploma and seal the all-powerful Hwan respectfully appoints thee to the dignities and offices of thy spiritual ancestors, to be the sovereign, spiritual and temporal, of the great province of Tsan. For the propagation of the sacred religion over all the earth, and for the spread of thy holy fame far and wide, thou wilt as of old have a general authority over all Tibet. Vouchsafe the blessing of thy mercy and prayers over us in this central dominion! The 4th day of the 1st winter month, in the 30th year of the reign of the Emperor Chhin-Lun⁴⁹ (of Nam-kyon or celestial protector)."

To this the Panchhen returned a dignified reply. In the year 1770 he was invited to Lhasa to supervise the education of the young Dalai Lama. This time also he lavished his bounties over the monks and the beggars of the country. "In the year 1771 he received an embassy from the Duk-desi (Deba-Rájá) of Bhutan named Shidar (प्रवे५६) which brought him presents of some value. The Panchhen in return deputed one of his secretaries to Bhutan with a letter of advice. Being informed of the misconduct of the Deba Rájá towards the Ghatika Rájá (Rájá of Cooch Behar) whose territories had been invaded by the Bhutanese and who had himself been led in chains to the capital of Bhutan, the Panchhen sent a messenger to Bhutan urging the immediate release of the captive Rájá. The Deba wrote him to say that he (the Deba) implicitly obeyed the command of the Lama by at once setting the Rájá at liberty. The receipt of this letter greatly delighted the Panchhen. In the meantime the armies of the Ghatika Rájá had applied for help from the owner of Bangala (Warren Hastings), who having espoused the Ghatika Rájá's cause, 50 made certain proposals to the Deba, to which the latter did not agree. This difference gave rise to something like a war between the Lord of Bangala and Deba Shidar. It resulted in disasters being brought upon the Deba and in the occupation of a portion of his territory by the Lord To avert this calamity, Deba Shidar applied for mercy and intervention to this quarter,51 at which the Panchhen, unable to bear the miseries of a large number of afflicted people, sent a Deputy to the Court of the Lord of Bangala, entreating him to forgive the Deba Rájá his misconduct, to restore him his territories, and to put an end to further hostilities. Pleased with the mild and pacific tone of the letter, the Lord of Bangala at once complied with the Panchhen's requests. Thus by dispelling the causes of rancour and quarrel between the two powers, he established amity and peace, the direct consequence of which was the establishment of an unrestricted commercial intercourse between the different nations."

With a view to make offerings and oblations to the great Bodhisattva at Dorje-dan, 52 to the sacred cavern of Gayá-gauri, to the great city of Prayága, and the great river Nairanjana (now called Lilájan or Phalgu), he despatched to India Tun-rampa of Don-tse Lo-ssan tsherin,53 and three Lamas together with nine young monks. The three Lamas, being unable to stand the excessive heat of the country, perished on the way. The Tibetan travellers had to encounter many difficulties and fears arising from the immense distance of the journey, the burning heat of the country, the venomous serpents, the wild and ferocious animals, and more especially from the bands of robbers that infested the country at large; and to crown their troubles, the princes of the frontier states had stationed guards to stop foreign intercourse. Yet, depending on the efficacy of the blessing of their spiritual Lord,54 they succeeded in accomplishing their object. On declaring that they were the Taśi Lama's priests, sent on pilgrimage, the Rájás of the frontier states did not molest them. On the other hand they received friendly assurances and warm receptions from the different classes of people in India. The Bhúpál of Váránasí (now called Kásí), named Chete Sing Bahádur, 55 to whom they carried the Panchhen's letter, gave them a cordial reception. He kindly provided the travellers with passports and letters patent which enabled them to travel in wooden conveyances, 56 as respectable parties. The same prince, having furnished them with convoys, they reached Dorje-dan in a fortnight from Váránasí At Dorje-dan they made grand offerings and performed divine services of five kinds before the image of the Mahá Bodhisattva, and paid reverence to the Tírtha-dharas, and S'ivaridhi. They gave dinners to priests, beggars and other men. At this time, hearing that the Maháguru Taśi Lama's offerings had reached Dorjedan, people from different quarters assembled near the spot to see the sight.

These spectators, full of faith, joining their palms, paid homage to the Supreme dispenser of mercy according to their own religious They also made presents of edibles and various sorts of persuasions. articles to these Tibetan worshippers. The travellers, having made their offerings at other important places of pilgrimage, arrived before the Prince of Váránasí who, according to the Maháguru's commands, conducted religious services at the Buddhist shrine of Váránasí. He showed much hospitality and kindness to these Gelons⁵⁷ with readiness and pleasure. At last, in order to pay homage to the Mahaguru Tasi Lama, Chete Sing Bahádur deputed his general Lálá Kaśmírí Mall and two of his officers, Gusankshi-puri and Sopa-ram, to Taśi-lhunpo. Accompanying the Gelons they safely arrived before His Holiness. The account of the successful termination of this perilous pilgrimage, the offerings and oblations made to the sacred places and shrines, the hospitality of the natives of India, Chete Sing Bahádur's cordial reception of the monks and more particularly the arrival of the Indian envoys, with presents and letters, transported His Holiness with joy. Chete Sing's letter which was written in Nágarí, when translated into Tibetan, ran thus:-

"To the most precious and exalted personage, the all-knower who sits like the parent of all living beings that inhabit the region encompassed by the heaven and earth.

"We are in receipt of your favour, the perusal of which has afforded us as much pleasure as could be derived from an actual meeting. The enclosure consisting of satin and gold has been placed by me on the crown of my head as the best of blessings. In accordance with your request, I arranged for the comfortable journey of the Gelons sent hither by you. They visited all the important shrines and places of pilgrimage, such as Dorje-dan, Prayága and others. I provided them with letters of recommendation and passports as required by them, by means of which they travelled from place to place, well received by all men. After fulfilling their mission they have returned here. The bearer of this letter Lálá Kaśmírí Mall is my faithful minister and general. I entreat you to be kind to him as well as to his companions, Gusankshi-puri and Sopa-ram, who are also my favorite and trustworthy servants. Every act of kindness and benevolence rendered to them will be gratefully acknowledged by me. I also entreat you to bless me now and then with your kind favours. We shall also send letters to your Holiness. All news about this quarter will be communicated to you by my minister General Kaśmírí Mall and the Gelons. This letter of mine written in Nágarí I despatch with the accompanying presents, consisting of a model temple of the Mahá-Bodhi-Manda of Dorje-dan, an excellent watch studded with precious stones, a mirror, tusks of elephant, yanti (jade) and many other curious articles."

His Holiness was exceedingly pleased with these presents and expressions. On the 11th of the 10th lunar month a gentleman, named Bogle Saheb (George Bogle), with a small retinue arrived in Tibet from Bangala (Bengal). After making presents which consisted of many curious articles of glass and toys, he solicited an interview with His Holiness. He was well received, admitted into the hall of audience and seated on a state cushion. After tea was served, His Holiness and Bogle Saheb conversed together on different topics in the Nágarí language. On the day of the full moon of the same month, Bogle Saheb's party were entertained at a grand dinner and received many presents. The Panchhen often entered into long discourses with Bogle Saheb and evinced great delight at his answers and His Holiness's kind attachment to Bogle Saheb resembled that of a spiritual guide to his disciple or of a Lama to his almsgiver. account of his conversation with Bogle Saheb, and his correspondence with the Lord of Bangala will be found elsewhere. On the 7th of the 3rd month of the following year, after a residence of five months in Tibet, Bogle Saheb accompanied by Dagdor Saheb (Dr. Hamilton) and retinue, after attending a dinner given by His Holiness, started for Bangala. Making the usual salutation by prostrating themselves before His Holiness, loaded with excellent presents consisting of silk apparel and other things, and furnished with the Pauchhen's reply to the letter of the Lord of Bangala, they rode off. A few days afterwards His Holiness dismissed the Envoy, General Kaśmírí Mall, with two of his assistants loading them with presents, and furnishing the Envoy with a letter for the Prince of Váránasí in the Aryavarta.

In the year 1777 the Panchhen visited Lhasa and administered the vows of ordination to the Dalai Lama. He also distributed alms to the different monasteries of Lhasa. At the age of forty-two, in the 1st lunar month of the year 1779, he received an invitation from the emperor of China. The letter was written on a gold tablet, and inclosed was a pearl rosary. After compliments and enumeration of various titles, the emperor continued "Most precious Panchhen Erteni, I beg thee to honour me with a visit. I long to see thy face." The Panchhen in reply wrote thus, "I too long to gratify myself by the sight of the golden face of your Imperial Majesty. Accordingly I have resolved to start for Pekin." On the receipt of this, the Emperor in the course of a few months sent three letters one after another, thanking His Holiness for the promised visit. On the 17th of the 6th lunar month, on a Friday, at noon, His Holiness left Taśi-lhunpo for Pekin, little thinking that he would never return to his own country. At Yan pa-chen great preparations were made for his reception. Here the Dalai Lama, the king of Tibet Thi-chhen Erteni Noman Khan, the two Ampan, the four ministers of State, the Lamas, princes, nobles and householders of the realm assembled together to welcome His Holiness and pay him farewell They all approached him with their parting offerings which consisted of gold, silver, blankets, ecclesiastical vestments, ponies, mules, yaks, jo,58 and countless other things. The Dalai accompanied him to a distance of 8 days' journey, after which he returned to Lhasa from a place called Taśi-thañ.

He met⁵⁹ with his messengers on their way back from Pekin at Lhundubphug, a place on the west of Chha-dan-La in the Kham country. Here he made a halt of three days which he occupied in conversation with the messengers. The emperor, in making inquiries, is said to have observed "How is the health of Panchhen Erteni? How is that of the Dalai Lama? Is the Dalai Lama making fair progress in gaining accomplishments? Request him, in my name, not to fail to honour me with a visit next year, by which time a great temple, like that of Potálá, will have been erected here in China. This year, also, I have raised a monastery like that of Taśi lhunpo for him.

"My mind is eagerly waiting for the day when the Panchhen Ereteni's advent will sanctify this place. I am occupied with that thought alone. When His Holiness arrives in the vicinity, I shall send Wang and the chief ministers of state to escort him hither. My heart will overflow with joy, when he will arrive here to converse with me. The very sight of his thrice-sacred face will increase my moral merits ten thousandfold."

So saying he handed over to them his portrait to be presented to the Panchhen as a token of his deep respect for him. When the letter with the enclosures and the portrait were laid before the Panchhen, he was transported with joy. He paid great reverence to the portrait, keeping it always before him. Then, by slow marches he reached Ku-bum.60 Here he stayed till the 10th of the 3rd lunar month, residing in the new palace erected by the emperor of China at a cost of Rs. 2,50,000. Here in the Amdo country, there were 50,000 monks in all the monasteries, whom he entertained with food, besides distributing alms of one san to each monk. From the date of his starting from Taśi-lhunpo to the date of his arrival at Pekin, not a single month passed in which he did not receive five or six letters with gold tablets and rich presents. The Emperor's arrangements for his comfortable accommodation and convenience were complete. Each halting station was furnished with 2,000 pack-ponies, 100 dromedaries, 40 Mongol felt tents, 100 cotton tents, stuffed seats and cushions, chairs, and other furniture and utensils. A daily allowance of Rs. 3,325 was allotted from the Imperial exchequer to meet the daily expenses of the Panchhen's party. At each station there waited a chamberlain, a master cook, a Don-Ñer,61 a store-keeper, several purveyors, a chaplain, a Dorjelopon or master of the ceremonies, a physician, a chief of the grooms, orderlies, cooks and key bearers. The Panchhen Rinpochhe's party consisted of 500 monks, 100 soldiers or guards, 800 servants, 100 clerks, besides a few Indian Acháryas⁶² Mongols, Chinese and Tibetan deputations, consisting of Le-hu Ampan, a few officers of the Ampan's staff, Eerteni Nomankhan, Tá-lama⁶³ and many other officers of State. A large convoy of provisions also accompanied them. The Emperor sent for him his own private dress, belt, fur hat, and other necessaries of a journey. Fruits and many sorts of dainties, and delicious dishes, and a few fish some of which were about thirteen feet long. The latter, though considered very delicious by the Chinese, were scrupulously avoided by the Panchhen and his party.⁶⁴ All the Lamas and chiefs of Amdo and Kham, the laity and the clergy, together with the princes of the 106 Mongol principalities, and the governors of the thirteen provinces of China proper, came to pay him obeisance and receive benedictions from his hand. Even on the way he gave the vows of monkhood to three lakhs of novices. By these kind and generous acts he won the affection of all people. He started from Kubum on the 10th of the 3rd month, and reached Silin fort, from which by slow marches he arrived at a place called Pelokhé, where a deputation from the Emperor, consisting of the High Commissioner Ta-phu, high Lama, S'erab dorje, and others waited upon him. They brought him the following reception presents; a yellow sedan chair with golden spire, a pair of yellow and red umbrellas, a pair of red and yellow fans, embroidered with figures of dragons in gold, and numerous other things. Then slowly marching on he arrived at Taika,65 where the Imperial high priest Chaîkya Rinpochhe, accompanied by the Emperor's 6th son, also arrived to receive him. The meeting was an event of great joy and happiness to both parties. After exchanging presents, the high priest presented the Panchhen with the Emperor's letter written on a gold tablet, accompanied by a Lama crown studded with pearls, pearl rosaries, one of the best steeds from the Emperor's stable, a Yan-te (jade) saddle, gold pots, and fine sorts of dresses.

From here he started off in advance 2000 loads of Tibetan articles, consisting of images, blankets, shawls, &c., and travelling slowly on he arrived on the shore of Dolonor⁶⁶ where he halted for 8 days. Here more than a million of Mongols assembled to receive benediction from his hands. He was then invited to a big monastery belonging to the Chankya Rinpochhe, where, after giving dinners to the monks of 12 monasteries, he distributed alms to the mendicants. Proceeding on by slow marches, on the 22nd of the 7th month, he arrived at Ye-hor.67 Here he was met by the chief ministers of state, ordered to be in attendance for his Holiness's reception. Party after party of the nobles and chiefs of the empire arrived, all of whom dismounting from their horses, thrice prostrated themselves before His Holiness. After the usual presentation of a khátag they received benediction from his hands. The procession of these nobles was a pretty sight indeed. At midday they conducted his Holiness to the top of a hill to show him the scenery of the surrounding country. His Holiness was delighted with the extreme beauty of the place. green mountains and valleys, according as they were near or distant, resembled heaps of emerald or sapphire. The disposition of the natural obelisks of rocks, resembling so many piles of chhorten, and the fine verdure, with rows of juniper and birch, round numerous gardens, ravished his eyes. On all sides, there were bowers and orchards bearing varieties of flowers and fruits. The green corn-harvest that filled the country, the endless springs, and silvery cataracts that poured forth their foaming water from the neighbouring mountains, and the charming serenade from the warbling groves greatly

First they presented him with the Emperor's khátag68 and with tea. He was then conducted, carried on a State sedan, towards the palace gate, the left and right sides of which were lined with innumerable banners and umbrellas, amidst the solemn and imposing music of drums, cymbals, and clarionets. The Emperor, descending from his throne, came to the door of the reception-room to welcome As soon as he saw the Emperor's face, the Panchhen was His Holiness. attempting to kneel down, when the Emperor stopped him. Then the Emperor, presenting the auspicious khátag, softly touched his hands and said—"Welcome, Lama! Is your Holiness's health all right? account of the length and tediousness of the journey, I believe your Holiness has become exceedingly fatigued?" "By your Imperial Majesty's mercy and kindness," replied the Panchhen, "no fatigue or weariness could do me harm." After a copious exchange of sincere and polite expressions, the Emperor, holding his hand, conducted him to the top of a spacious throne where, seated confronting each other, they conversed as intimate The Emperor added, "Your Holiness has arrived here at a very happy and auspicious time. To-day is the 70th anniversary of my birth. I am exceedingly delighted." After a few minutes' stay here, the Emperor conducted him to the great palace, where seated as before, they both refreshed themselves with delicious tea and engaged in conversation. On this occasion the Emperor took off from his own neck the necklace of pearls of inestimable value,—each pearl as large as an apricot—and put it on the Lama's neck. He also presented His Holiness with a yellow satin hat, the top of which was adorned with a pearl as large and regular as a hen's egg. Presently, they went to the new monastery of Taśi-lhunpo where a grand and sumptuous dinner was served. As soon as it was finished, the Panchhen's presents were laid before the emperor. consisted of a silver mandal, images of Buddha, Tsonkhapa and Sambhara wrought in solid gold, one thousand gold sans,69 1000 saddle ponies, turquoises, corals, and amber, besides incense sticks, To European broadcloth, Tibetan broadcloth, and shawls, all of which formed 100 horse-loads. The Jasag Lama's⁷¹ presents to the Emperor were half as much as those of his master the Panchhen Rinpochhe. The Sopon-Chlenpo and chamberlain⁷² also made presents, each half as much as the above. The Emperor, at the first meeting, had made the following presents: Mandals of gold and silver, three excellent embroidered pictures of the three Tantrik systems, Guhya-Samája, Sambara Chakra, and Bhairava Chakra, a few of the finest gold painted China cups, a gold mendicant's platter, a gold spittoon, a gold water-sprinkler, a pair of gold vases, a gold incenseburner, a square brocade carpet studded with turquoise; many articles of jade and crystal, 500 scarves, 500 gold san, 50 of the very best satin robes, 9 tiger skins, 9 leopard skins, 9 fox skins, 1000 white ermine skins, 1000 beaver skins, and 1000 lamb skins of the finest fur. The Jasag Lama and others also received suitable presents. The next day the emperor went to return visits at the Panchhen's residence at Ye-hor Taśilhunpo. From the 23rd of the month for two days they met each other twice or thrice daily and talked on various topics, each time exchanging presents. From the 25th for 12 days they spent their time in witnessing magical and illusive feats and performances, wonderful sights, horse-racing, dances, operas and theatricals. During his residence at Ye-hor the Panchhen did not forget his religious duties. He initiated many thousands of monks, made offerings to all the temples and viháras, and distributed alms to the congregation of monks. All these acts of piety and virtue raised 'him high in the Emperor's esteem. One day the Emperor presented him with a seal of yanti (jade) and a diploma written on golden tablets. In his conversation the Emperor expressed great anxiety for the welfare of the Tibetans—"How is the Dalai progressing in his studies? What interest does he shew in hearing religious sermons? Does he possess intelligence and talents? Does he show parental love and affection for his subjects? What is his age? What are the religious accomplishments of the Panchhen himself?"—were some of the points of his enquiries, to all of which excellent answers were given by his Holiness. The Emperor, in accordance with the custom of his ancestors, presented the Panchhen with the Imperial Diploma and seal, appointing him the sovereign of the whole of Tibet,73 advising him to exert himself well to promote religion and the welfare of his subjects. Panchhen then addressed the Emperor:

"O Heaven-elected sovereign, incarnate Manju-ghosha! 74 Thou who art like the parent of all moving beings inhabiting this earth and the illuminated firmament, especially of China, Tibet and Tartary (Hor), hast vouchsafed to show so much kindness to such a petty Lama as my humble self. Wherefore we shall gratefully apply ourselves to praying to the three Holies to prolong your Imperial Majesty's life and happiness. There is nothing more to convey to your Majesty than the expressions of our sincere thanks and assurance of serving your Majesty to the best of our power in all spiritual matters." On the 28th of the 8th lunar month they bid good-bye to Yehor. On the 1st of the 9th month the Panchhen arrived at the yellow shrine of the Imperial palace of Pekin where he took up his residence. The Emperor paid him a visit at the palace of Kema park. On the 10th he was invited to the Emperor's palace, where he spent three days. time both he and the Emperor conversed in private, for 6 hours. Afterwards he visited all the palaces of the Emperor, conversed with the chiefs and nobles of Pekin, sent offerings to the 28 temples of the Emperor, and distributed alms and food to about 10,000 monks. The Emperor entertained him with several dinners and theatricals, and at times he heard his sermons. Even at Pekin his Holiness did not fail to administer the vows of priesthood to several thousand monks.

On the night of the 25th he felt a strong headache and irritating pains in his nose. In the morning he communicated his ailment to his servants. Next morning Sopon Chhenpo asked him how he felt during the night. Nothing very serious, replied the Lama. On the night of the 26th he did not take any food and said that he ailed very much. He also complained of colic and biliousness. All these symptoms of approaching danger alarmed the Sopon Chhenpo who at once communicated his fears to his colleagues. The Chankya Rinpochhe and some of the Emperor's physicians, came to feel They declared, that except some disorders and bodily agitations, they saw nothing so serious in his pulse as would tend to endanger his life. On the 27th his Holiness performed the service of Mahákála for the Emperor's benefit. Hearing of the illness of his Holiness from the Chankya Rinpochhe, the Emperor requested him to take a few days' rest. The Panchhen himself also thought that a short cessation from labour might do him good. After a few days' rest, he seemed to recover. During this time he performed many pious acts, giving alms to 7,500 beggars, and ransoming 3,00,000 animal lives. His illness again returned. The Emperor, unmindful of ceremonies, privately attended him with two of his chief physicians who administered medicines to him. After this, his sprightliness to some extent increased, and his cheerfulness revived.

⁷⁴ The Emperor of China is the incarnation of Manju S'rí or Manju Ghosha, the Lord of learning and wisdom.

He was always merry when in the company of Chankye Rinpochhe and the Emperor's fifth son. Outwardly, there were no traces of indisposition, but it was apparent that his usual temper and appearance had undergone some change, and his friends and servants when they saw that he could take no food at all became very uneasy at heart. Once, Sopon Chhenpo, drawing up his sleeves, saw an eruption resembling small-pox on his arms. He at once showed it to the Jasag Lama.

Being informed of this, the Emperor immediately sent his best physicians to attend his Holiness. Examining the pulse, they found nothing ominous, but could not mistake the eruption as other than that of small-They gave him some medicines, but to no effect. He soon succumbed. On the 1st of the 11th month, he sent for the two Indian Pandits who had accompanied him in all his travels from Taśi-lhunpo, one of whom happened to be absent, but the other, named Purnagir, came. Seeing Purnagir's face, his Holiness's became cheerful, and his last words were addressed to Purnagir in the Arya language. In the afternoon, sitting up in a cross-legged posture like Buddha Amitábha, he passed away from this world. A few minutes after, his person, still retaining its former brightness, contracted to the size of a boy. During this portentous interval there appeared many auspicious omens and sights. This melancholy event cast the whole of Pekin into mourning. The Emperor overwhelmed with sorrow, did not come out of his chamber for many days. The Sopon Chhenpo, Jasag Lama, Chankya Rinpochhe were the chief mourners. Emperor preserved the corpse in a coffin of gold and made offerings to it for 100 days. The Emperor and the government of Tsan distributed immense alms to the mendicants and the destitute for the benefit of the departed. Offerings were sent to all the monasteries and religious establishments of China, Amdo, Tibet and Hor for the increase of the moral merit of the deeply lamented Panchhen, which cost 32 millions of Rupees. Emperor constructed a chhorten of gold at a cost of 42,000 Rupees or 7,000 gold san in which the coffin was placed. On the 12th of the 2nd month, in the following year he sent up this massive tomb to Taśi-lhunpo, engaging 500 conveyors. The Chankya Rinpochhe and the 6th prince accompanied the remains as far as three days' journey. Great honours were paid to the remains of this deeply lamented and illustrious guest by all classes of men of the celestial Empire. The arrangements for the reception of the remains were equal to what were made for the Panchhen during his journey. command of the Emperor the Ampan and many of the generals accompanied the remains to Taśi-lhunpo. Immense offerings were made to the coffin on the way. Headed by the Dalai Lama, all the Lamas of U and Tsan came to make obeisance to their late beloved spiritual guide and sovereign whose remains reached Taśi-lhunpo on the 21st of the 6th month.

All the earnings of the deceased were spent in pious services. About 200,000 silver san were expended in alms to the poor, and all the presents, made by the Emperor, together with those obtained from other sources, of the estimated value of 4,15,665 san were spent in erecting his tomb and in decorating and adorning it with precious stones and satin flags on which were woven such mystic phrases as Ye-dharma-hetu, &c. This was the greatest and noblest and perhaps the wisest of the sovereign Lamas that ever appeared within the snow-girt realm of Tibet. Equally wise and noble was his friend the great Chhinlun, the Emperor of the celestials.

VI.—LIFE AND LEGEND OF TSON KHAPA (LO-SSAN-TAGPA), THE GREAT BUDDHIST REFORMER OF TIBET.

Tson-khapa was born in 1378, A. D.¹ in the town of Tson kha (or Onion valley) in Amdo in Eastern Tibet. His father's name was Lubum-ge, and that of his mother Shin-ssah-a-chho. The house in which he was born was overhung by a sandal-wood tree rich in foliage. It is said to have borne a hundred thousand leaves, on every one of which was visible the naturally grown picture of Tathágata S'engé-na-yo (Simha dhvani). There having spontaneously appeared on the bark of that wonderful tree the mantras sacred to Manjuśri, the protector of the three classes of beings, viz., men, suras and asuras, the men of the place erected a chaitya at its foot. A large monastery containing 10,000 monks was established near it and called the monastery of Kubum Chambalin. It is said that the marvellous leaves of the selfsame sandal tree are even at the present day observed by pilgrims to bear the Tathágata's image inscribed, as it were, by nature.

When three years old, Tson-khapa received the first initiatory sacrament from the celebrated Karmapa Lama Rolpai-dorje, who gave him the name Kun-gaḥ-ñinpo. At the age of seven the young novice is said to have been miraculously visited by Vajrapání and the Indian saint Dipánkara Srí-jñána (called Atisa in Tibet), from whose hands he received benediction. Having attained his eighth year, he received the second sacrament of novices from the sage Ton-dub Rinchhen who changed his name to Lo-ssantagpa or Sumatikírti in Sanskrit. From the same Lama he received instruction in the Sútras and Tantras. His study-room is said to have been filled with sacred volumes, the lustre of which served him for light. At the age of sixteen he visited Tibet proper, where in the principal monasteries of U and Tsan, such as Dewa-chan &c, he studied the sacred literature of the Buddhists under such eminent scholars as Lama Wumapa, Je-tsun Ren-dah-va, the hermit of Lho-brag named Lakyi-dorje, Taśi-sengé At the age of twenty he took the monastic vows from Tshul-thim Rinchhen, when he manifested a very powerful memory. He was able to recite at a time about 553 slokas of the Dulva without a mistake. was afterwards initiated into the vows of Bodhisattva and others of the strictest kind appertaining to the Tantras. He now acquired the right to confer benediction on others. He also propitiated the divine mother Tárá called Dolma in Tibet, Dugkar-samája Guhya, Sambara, Bhairava and others of his tutelary dieties. The great Indian teacher, Nágárjuna, S'rí Saraha and the all-knowing Buton, besides many other Indian and

On the 10th lunar month of the year, bearing the name 'fire-bird,' of the 6th cycle in Tibetan chronology.

Tibetan Buddhists miraculously visited him at the time of his studying their metaphysical works. Of all these divine visitors Manjuśri, the god of learning and wisdom, was his greatest friend. In fact he acquired great proficiency in all classes of science then known in India or Tibet. In the whole of Kańchan or the Himavat country, he was unrivalled amongst the learned. Gonpo-chhag-dug or the six-armed Bodhisattva (Vajrapání), Pehar Gyalpo, Vaiśramaṇa, the lord of death called Tam-chhen S'injeśé and other guardians of the world became his friends and helped him uninterruptedly in the work of Dharma and the preservation of moral discipline and purity among the clergy.

Even from his boyhood Tson khapa used daily to commit sixteen pages of his text-books to memory. In Tibet he studied up to the thirtysixth year of his age, when he mastered the Tibetan translation of the Sanskrit Buddhist scriptures and the śástras, the greater and smaller vehicles of law, the ancient and modern versions of Buddha's precepts, and the philosophies of the various heretical and Buddhist schools. By these accomplishments he became matchless in learning in Tibet. After finishing his studies he devoted himself to writing various commentaries and works, such as aphorisms, Lam-rim, Nag-rim, Tantras, Vinaya, Páramitás and logic. At the time of his commenting on the Tantrik work called Sambara-múla tantra, the god Sambara is said to have miraculously appeared before him and remarked—"Tson khapa! even in India such excellent commentaries and synopses as yours were never made." At the time of his commenting on the "Kálachakra," its reputed author, the celebrated Chandra Kírti, Emperor of S'ambhala, is said to have inspired The Yeshé-khadoma (the fairies of learning) are said to have miraculously transported him to S'ambhala before the presence of that deified emperor.

At the age of thirty-seven he bethought himself of paying a visit to India and invoked Manju-śrí to advise him on the matter. Manju-śrí personally appeared before him and said, "If by remaining in Tibet, through the medium of yoga, you invoke the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, great good will accrue to living beings. If, for that particular purpose which can as well be attained by residence in Tibet, you visit India, your life will be shortened, consequently you will ultimately do less good to the world. I therefore exhort you to follow Nágárjuna and Chandra Kírti in doctrinal theories, and Atisa in meditative science, and Upáli in ritual and religious observances. O saintly Tsońkhapa! let your school be diffused over the whole of Jambudvípa and let mankind abide by its teaching!" On hearing this, Tsongkhapa gave up the idea of visiting India. After thirteen years of meditation (yoga in solitude) he obtained samádhi, after which he saw several of his tutelary deities. Even the fairies of learning came in visible form to pay their respects.

He acquired great proficiency in argumentative philosophy and vyákarana. Once, in the course of twenty days, he finished reading 100 volumes of Sútras and Tantras, and in thirty days he unravelled the intricacies of those books. His acquirements in the Alankára Vidyá (rhetoric) and in Upadeśa were considerable, for he was found capable of explaining three volumes of such works daily. He was possessed of rare gifts of elocution. In fact, being an inspired orator, in the midst of a crowded assembly consisting of several thousand men, he could make himself heard to the satisfaction of all. His delivery is said to have been uniform and engaging, being without variation in the pitch of his voice. Being free from any kind of disease either of mind or body, he preached with untiring zeal in the daytime and during the night time. He used to sit in yoga in communion with Buddhas and Bodhisattvas. "Such rare talents and assiduity" remarks a Tibetan author² "have never been noticed in any of the Tibetan Lamas of ancient or modern times." The works composed by Tsonkhapa are replete with sense and profound reasoning. Excellence of style, perspicuity and conciseness are their never-failing attributes. Few authors can boast of such excellencies as embellish his extraordinary writings. They are scrupulously free from errors and blunders of any kind. Arrangement and judicious order are no unimportant characteristics of his writings. His works are faultless in the qualities called anga, pratyanga and múla, in consequence of which they are easy and intelligible to the general reader. In Grammar and Dialectics his reputation stands unrivalled in High Asia. He held long discussions with the learned philosophers of Tibet and Amdo. The well known Dharma Rinchhen and Gé-legpal-ssang were forced to acknowledge his superiority. He discussed the merits of the prasanga mádhyamika school with the celebrated Tag-tshang-Lochhava and Sherab Rin-chhen whom he vanquished by his powerful logic and obliged to compose 80 slokas or verses in his praise. From that date his fame spread all over the country. The pride of rival savants was humbled when they came in contact with him, and they prostrated themselves before him in reverence and awe. These were the causes which led to the wide diffusion of his reforms. Prior to his advent, Buddhism, though widely spread in Tibet, had greatly degenerated through having assimilated much of the Bon heresy, and especially on account of the clergy having shewn some disregard for moral discipline and the teaching of Buddha. Every one behaved as he pleased under the shelter of its corrupt doctrines, and practised diabolical acts in the name of the Tantras. There were few among the Tibetan clergy who abstained from women and wine. It was Tsonkhapa who preached strict observance of the laws of the Dulva (vinaya or moral discipline), and by thus conforming to the precepts of Buddha, he revived the purest kind of Buddhism. Tsonkhapa introduced reforms in every direction. In his reformed school was to be found the essence of the Sútras, Tantras and Dháranís of the Maháyána and Hinayána schools. One who is well versed practically in the Vinaya teaching of the Hináyána school, and who acquires the Maháyána or Bodhisattva dháraní, can become a good Gelugpa.

After S'ákya Siṃha, no teacher of Buddhism was so eminent as Tson-khapa. Even in the Arya-deśa, no such refined school as that of Gelugpa was known to exist. In Tibet, Tsonkhapa is called the second Buddha, a title which Nágárjuna, the founder of the Mádhyamika philosophy, enjoyed in ancient India.

At the age of fifty-three, in the year 1429 A. D., he founded the great prayer assembly consisting of 70,000 monks well known by the name of the Monlam Chhenpo of Lhasa. It was held annually, and the practice continues up to the present day. Tsonkhapa on that occasion adorned the head of the image of Jovo (lord) S'ákya Muni with a diadem of lapislazuli, pearls, rubies and other precious stones, at a cost of 500 gold sran (or 30,000 Rs), and prayed that the sacred religion might continue for ever without being corrupted or degraded. Immense offerings were A hundred thousand edibles were placed in heaps to the height of a man's stature. A hundred thousand lamps, fed with butter in huge caldrons, with wicks as big as the largest handkerchiefs rolled up, were lighted, so that the whole city of Lhasa was illuminated. The glare was so great that the residents of Lhasa could hardly distinguish the stars in the sky. Frankincense, joss-sticks, myrrh, and flowers were offered in great profusion. There were present on the occasion, under human guise, all the gods and demigods, Nágas and yakshas that were friendly to Buddhism, together with the four classes of genii called Gyalpo with the great Pehar at their head. All these, disguised in human shape, took part in the proceedings. khapa observed similar ceremonies in subsequent years. In the same year, the great reformer founded the famous monastery of Gahdan. In the course of the next ten years, he turned the wheel of Dharma with unprecedented zeal.

In the sixty-third year of his age, knowing that his end was drawing nigh, he entrusted his principal disciples Gyal-chhab-je, Kha-dub Chho-je, Je-śerab-sengé, Jam-vyan Chho-je, and Chyam-chhen-chho-je, with the charge of protecting Buddhism. He also charged the lord of death, called Tam-chhen-śinje-chhoikyi-Gyalpo, with the defence of the sacred creed, thus exhorting him:—"O thou, the lord of Dharma, in this country of Kan-chan (Himavat), may thy religion so long as animal life remains unextinct, be defended by thee! Thou, together with thy retinue, shalt drive away all enemies, whether internal or external, and the warlike foes of the border lands; thou shalt extinguish all kinds of heretics, who may try to injure the religion." The statue of this dreadful lord of death, who is the sworn guardian of Gahdan inspires terror in the minds of sinners who, even to the present day, tremble at his name. It was, according to the popular belief, by the might of this dreaded deity that the progress of the Gurkha armies beyond the boundary of Tsan was arrested. On the 25th day of the 10th lunar month of the same year, Tsonkhapa's person having been contracted to the size of a boy of eight, and placed in a mansion encompassed by the radiance of the rainbow, prepared to start for the land of bliss. On that occasion innumerable Suras, Asuras, fairies, gods and goddesses played instruments of music in his honour, showered flowers, and with flags and umbrellas joined in a pious dance for full seven days. On the morning of the seventh day, when by the act of his will he was lost in yoga, his soul, leaving its mortal frame, was absorbed Sambhogakáya of Buddhahood. Thence forward Tsonkhapa, under the name of Jampal Ninpo, sits by the side of Maitreya the Regent of Tushita (Gahdan). His remains, wrapped in cloths inscribed with texts from the Dháranís,3 were preserved in a Chaitya of gold. tomb is a lofty edifice, with a gilt roof, and a golden Chaitya inside.

The Tibetans have the following account of Buddha's prediction respecting Tsonkhapa:—In ancient times, when Bhagaván S'ákya lived, a Bráhman boy prayed to him after presenting him with a crystal rosary. Bhagaván, in return, drew from his right side a white conch shell and gave it to him, saying, "Oh Bráhman boy, in time to come thou shalt work for my religion; when it shall spread in the Himavat country, thou shalt be the president of the Dharma." The same conch shell was then concealed in the hill called Brogri, in Tibet. It is now to be found in the Dapun monastery and is said to be possessed of miraculous powers.

³ The mystical writings, called Dháranís, were brought from India during the Sakya hierarchy in the 10th and 11th century A. D. The inscriptions were prepared in Tibet.

The three wheels of the Buddhist doctrine spread over various countries, large and small, such as Kashmir, Nepal, Persia, Champaka, Kiśkindá, Sermig, Gyugma, Ramma, Siam, Singala, Priyanku, Yamuna, Chandra dvípa, Makha, Kaśa, Gyi-Jaĥ, Shaĥ-Shúĥ, Brusha, Ḥasha, Sumpa, Sahor Miĥug or Burmah, Jaĥ-yul, Yugur, Thogar, Orgyan, Doḍípa, Lodpa, Chola, Kalinka, &c., &c. Various accounts are given of the rise and decline of the sacred creed in these countries in converting all living beings universally and partially, according as Karma permitted. In those countries many heretical doctrines also existed, which will not all be described here. It will be enough to describe the propagation of Buddhism in Sog-yul (Mongolia).

There is no account of the introduction of Buddhism in Hor by any Pandits or saints from India. The first light of Buddhism came from Tibet—and that from the Sakyapa school. Chhingis Khán who turned the wheel of might (became a mighty conqueror) visited Tibet. subjugating Nari-kor-sum, U' and Tsan, Lho, Kham and Gan, he sent an envoy to Tsan, offering large presents to the learned Kun-gah-Ñinpo, the hierarch of Sakya, and appointed him his spiritual guide, and subsequently invited him to visit Hor. He obtained from Tibet some images, sacred volumes and Chaityas, from which the Mongols imbibed faith in Buddhism and commenced to adore Kon-chhog or the Supreme Being. During this time some Mongols also took the vows of Upásaka &c., whence they got hold of Dharma. This took place in the fire-hare year of the 4th cycle or 2041 of the Buddhist era, if Buddha's Nirvána were calculated from the year of the same name; but if it be calculated from the iron-dragon year, the introduction of Buddhism in Hor must be placed in 2097 B. E. From the fire-hare year to the iron-dragon year of the 10th cycle 503 years elapsed. During the reigns of Goyug and Gútan, the two grandsons of Chhingis Khán, Buddhism was formally introduced into Hor. Gútan whose capital was in Lan-du, hearing the fame of Sakya Pandita, sent an envoy to Tibet with rich presents to invite him to visit Hor.

Sakya Paṇḍita had been previously told by his tutor Sonam-tse-mo about a prediction, that he should be invited to propagate Dharma by a border race who wore hats like falcons and shoes like a hog's snout. The prophecy being now realized, Sakya Paṇḍita accepted the invitation. Accompnied by his nephew Phag-pa and Chhyagna he set out for Hor and met the king in the year fire-sheep of the 4th cycle (this date corresponds with A. D. 1248). The king was laid up with a disease called sadag (leprosy), of which Sakya Pandita cured him by the mystical invocation of the Simhanáda dháraní. The king and his ministers heard from him the mystical worship of Gye-va-dorje.

He secured to himself their sincere faith by performing various miracles. Prior to this period the Mongolians possessed no written language. Pandita became desirous of designing a new alphabet for them. he observed a certain woman rubbing (softening) a piece of hide with a piece of timber of the shape of the teeth of a saw. He shaped the Mongolian characters after the teeth of that implement. By arranging the letters, divided in masculine and feminine characters,* with hard or tight, loose or slack, and weak or soft powers he invented the system of writing of the In the year iron-hog (corresponding with A. D. 1252) both Sakya Pandita and the king died. The remains of the former were deposited in the Chhorten of Dulpai-dé outside the fortress of Lan-ju. Subsequently in the reign of Munkhe, Karma Bakshi and others from Tibet visited Hor. Munkhe's younger brother named Khúblai became very powerful. He conquered China, Tibet, the whole of Hor, and about half of India up to the furthest boundary of Kashmir. He invited Phagpa-Lodoi-Gyaltshan, the nephew of Sakya Pandita, from Tibet. On his coming to Hor in the year water-ox, the Emperor met and held long discussions on religious matters with him, and imbibed much faith in him. Previous to this, he had showed much attachment to Karma Bakshi. Although Phagpa's acquirements in grammar and sacred literature were great, on the other hand the acquirements of the bearded Lama, as Karma Bakshi was called, in judicious learning were eminent. Once under the secret advice of the Emperor, the Empress, named Jema-ssanmo, who revered Phagpa above all, asked him to enter into competition with Karma Bakshi in the performance of This was done with a view to amuse the Emperor. The parties having agreed to the proposal, the Bakshi, in the presence of the Emperor and his ministers, mounted the sky where he sat cross-legged, as in yoga, and passed right through mountains, &c. Phagpa also performed miracles by decapitating himself, then severing the five limbs and turning them into five Dhyáni Buddhas. He afterwards accomplished their re-union to restore to himself his own body.

† Arya Mati Dvaja.

Within the fortress of Lanju (or Landu) there is a tomb called the Chhorten of Karma Liśi which is identified with the tomb of Karma Bakshi, Karma Liśi being a mere corruption of the name Karma Bakshi. In the face of this account, the Debther Nonpo and other works say that Karma returned to Tibet where he died.

Previous to the Emperor's taking spiritual vows, the Empress observed the mystic ceremonies of Kaidorje. He inquired what kind of vows When the Empress uttered the words of the vow, were to be taken. he remarked, "Although I might take some of the vows, yet being a sovereign, I cannot say that I will not violate the words of my spiritual guide" The Empress removed the objection by observing, that in worldly matters the Emperor's authority should be supreme, whereas in spiritual affairs the Lama's command should be paramount. The Emperor, satisfied with the suggestion, observed 24 ceremonies, called Thub pai Khor, together with the invocation of Gyeva-dorje. On the occasion of initiation, Khúblai presented the Lama with two large mandalas (circular heaps of precious things) of which the one on the right-hand side was full of pearl balls without pinholes and as big as sheep's droppings, placed in bundles; the other on the left consisted of heaps of gold. Besides these, immense presents consisting of horses, mules, camels, silk robes, silver and gold, &c., were made to He decorated him with an exalted order which in Chinese is called "Sinsin tákausri," meaning the spiritual king of the three worlds, and conferred on him the city and country of Lishim and subsequently the entire sovereignty of Tibet and Tsholkha (Khokonur). Although the Emperor ordered that all the Bande of Tibet should adopt the Sakyapa theories, yet the most estimable Phagpa, thinking it fair to let them pursue their anciently adopted doctrines, showed toleration. He returned to Tibet in the year tree-ox and in the year earth-serpent of the 5th cycle revisited Hor. In the year iron-horse he framed the square shaped form of the Mongolian characters, and introducing the system of worship, meditation, and propitiation among the Mongols, furthered the cause of Dharma and living beings. The Emperor having obtained the sacred relies of Buddha, images and sacred books and chaityas from India, erected temples and monasteries by which Buddhism was greatly promoted. The square shaped characters, called Khorig, having failed to answer the purpose of translating the sacred books, the Mongolians made use of the Yugur character in writing their language as a medium for the expression of the sacred hymns. During the reign of king Olje, the Sakyapa Lama named Chhoikyi-hodsser came to Mongolia and perfected the saw-teeth shaped characters invented by Sakya Paṇḍita by adding tails to the letters. The Mongolian characters were thus fit to be used in writing translations from foreign languages. Subsequently in the reign of Hai-san-khúlug portions of the Kah-gyur and grammar were translated into the Mongolian language. In the reign of Poyanthu, Jam-yang the pupil of Rigral the Prefect of Narthan, who during his visit to Narthan had incurred the displeasure of his Lama by appearing before him in a mask, paid a visit to Hor. Subsequently Jam-yan pleased his master by sending him large presents for a copy of the Kahgyur collection. Among the presents there was a small box full of Chinese ink which delighted Rigral very much. On his return to Narthan, Jam-yan resided in the house where the Kahgyur was copied and which was called Jam-yan Lhakhan.

In this manner, the way being opened, the copies of the Kahgyur gradually increased. After Jam-yan, Karma Ran-Ju-Dorje visited Hor and be came the spiritual guide of one of the Hor kings, who, it appears, was named Thogan-themur (the last Emperor of the Mongol dynasty), the well-known descendant of Chhingis Khán, invited Karma-Rolpai-dorje who accordingly in the 19th year of his age in the year earth-dog came to During the fourteen reigns from Chhingis Khán to Erteni Chhogthu, many Sakyapa and Karmapa Lamas visited Hor, some of whom received the honour of the order of Ti-sri. The introduction of the Gelugpa church in the spiritual relation of Mongolia commenced at this time. During the reign of Thumer-kyi Althan Khán, the third Gyal-van (Dalai) named Sonam Gyatsho visited Hor and abolished the worship of On-gvad (the chief Demon) and the practice of offering animal sacrifices to demons. He introduced the Gelugpa (yellow-hat) school of Buddhism in Hor where he died, and his incarnation named Gyal-van Yonton Gya-tsho appeared in Mongolia, for which reason Buddhism became greatly diffused over that country, and all the Mongols were converted to the Gelugpa church. Afterwards Shere-thu-guśri translated the three yum (vulgarly called bum) into the native Mongolian language. In the days of Chhahar-leg-dan Khuthog-thu several translators headed by Kungah Hodsser translated the whole of the Kahgyur into Mongolian. The last of the descendants of Chhingis Khán named Santhu-gusi (called Legdar in Tibetan), a petty prince, was so degenerate that he failed even to rule over his own country and his dynasty passed off from power. In the reign of Sunchi (De-Kyi) the translation of the Kahgyur in Mongolian was revised and partially printed. It was in the reign of the Emperor Chhinlun (Kyen-long), the incarnate Manjuśri, that the entire Kahgyur and Tangyur were for the first time printed in the Mongolian language. Then also the all-knowing Chankya-Rolpai Dorje prepared the Khapai-Junné, a compendious grammar of the Mongolian language, which was indispensably necessary to facilitate translations (lit., which served as an eye to the future translators.) Asuthu, king of Khálkhá, had met the Gyal-vañ (Dalai Lama) Sonam Gya-tsho during his sojourn in Mongolia and erected the temple of Erteni Jovo.

At that time the incarnation of Tárá Nátha (Je-tsun-dampa) named Lo-ssan-tanpai Gya-tsho in the person of the son of his grandson Dorje Thushi-ye-thu Khán, was acknowledged as the supreme head of the seven Khálkhá Khanates. The Emperor of China greatly exalted his position by conferring on him high distinctions. The great monastery of Urga called Rivo-ge-gye-lin was founded, and from that time the incarnations of Tará Nátha successively appeared. Jaya Pandita Lo-ssán-thin-leg, who was the pupil of the fifth Gyal-van and Panchhen-Lo-ssan Chho-gyan, and Erteni Pandita Lo-ssan tan-dsin founded many monasteries and promoted the spread of Buddhism in Hor. From this period the land of the Khálkhá became filled with priestly congregations, sages and saints of immaculate birth, and sacred study and saintly communion were greatly diffused. The Prefect of the Goman College of Dapun, named Ton-dub Gya-tsho, who was famed to have attained the 2nd stage of Bodhisattva perfection, introduced Buddhism into the Thorgwod country, the progress of which was, however, impeded by the surrender of the country to the Russians (Orrus). Subsequently, when the country was brought under the Emperor of China, the chiefs were re-instated in their respective states and the practice of the precious religion revived. Hashag-chhe-chhu Khán, the reigning chief of the four great tribes of Œ-loth, also called Orod, was defeated and dethroned by Boshog-thu Khán of the tribe of Tshoru who had grown powerful, in consequence of which the whole of the Œ-loth kingdom came under his possession. He established many schools for the instruction of monks in the Sútras and Tantras (aphorisms and mysticism). Thereafter Erteni Jorig-thu khun tho-che-Tshe-van-rabtan encouraged Buddhism in general and especially the Gelugpa church. He by turns invited the Mahámantrí of Taśi-lhunpo named Geleg-rabgya, and Paljor-gyatshog, and latterly by inviting Tampa-rabgya of Washul from the Dapun monastery and many others, introduced domestic priesthood and service (like that of the Upásakas) among the Mongols. He founded the monasteries of Nam-tse-din and the system of imparting instruction to neophyte monks, and established moral discipline and training. Although he failed to establish schools for the study of dialectics, yet by teaching the higher and lower (simpler) Lamrim of Tsonkhapa, he introduced the secret way to Bodhisattva (perfection). Like the celebrated Ralpachan sovereign of Tibet, he allotted three families of tenants, 6 camels, 40 cows and horses and 200 sheep &c., for the maintenance of every monk or neophyte. After him his son Gahdan-tsherin Wanpo invited the celebrated professor and sage Paldan-Yeśé, the learned principal of Thosam lin of Taśi-lhunpo, the Vinayic ascetic Lo-ssan Phun-tsho from Dapun, who held the office of the Prefect of the Goman College, and Ge-dun-leg-pa the Prefect of the Será monastery, of whom the last succeeded in opening classes for the study of metaphysics and dialectics. He erected many monasteries and filled them with images, sacred volumes, and chaityas by which he filled the Chungar country. By conferring distinctions and endowments on the scholars of philosophy, he greatly diffused Buddhism.

Afterwards when the kingdom was overthrown by internecine wars, all the religious edifices were demolished, the effect of which even now survives in the desolate aspect of the country like the fields of autumn (after harvest). From one of the four famous tribes of Orod, the celebrated king, the upholder of religions, called Guśri Khán, son of the Khán of the Hoshad, was born in the year water-horse. His name was Thorol-bá-dur. According to the prophecy of Ti-me Lhun-dub the obtainer of sacred treasure, he is said to have been the miraculous emanation of Chhyagna Dorje (Vajrapání), and according to the revelation of the Kahgyur, he was a religious king who obtained one of the Bodhisattva perfections. At the age of thirteen he assumed the command of the army of the Gokar (white heads), numbering 10,000, and went on an expedition against Hoi-Hoi (Tangyut). He gained a complete victory in the fight, for which he became eminently During this time Buddhism was not spread in the Oeloth In other Mongolian countries the Gyal-van (Dalai-Lama) country. Sonam-gya-tsho, at the invitation of Althan Khan, had visited Khálkhá. By reason of their spiritual relation Buddhism flourished there. khán, on only hearing its name, imbibed faith and veneration for Buddha. He made many salutations by repeated prostrations towards that sacred country (Tibet), thereby hurting his forehead. When he was twenty-five years old, his mother died. In order to celebrate her funeral and for her salvation, he distributed a large quantity of gold and silver as alms to the poor. On a certain occasion there arose a dispute between the Orod and Khálkhá. Being overpowered by compassion, he came before the Khálkhá assembly to plead for the amicable settlement of the matter, removed their differences and, having brought the contending nations to terms, returned to his own country. At this Ton-khor Chho-je and the princes and ministers of Khálkhá became greatly delighted. They gave him the title of "Tai-kausri." During the Dalai Lamá Sonam Gya-tsho's visit to Mongolia, an Orod came to reverence him. He saluted and presented him a book called Serhod Tampa. On being asked the name of the book, the Orod replied, "Lord! this is called Althan-kerel."* The Gyalvan (Dalai), then accepted the man's alms and predicted that in the land of Orod after twenty years Buddhism should be introduced. ing to this prediction, Guśri-khán introduced Buddhism by translating Serhod-Tampa and many other volumes after a lapse of twenty years.

^{*} From althan, gold, and keral (Sanskrit kiran), ray of light, golden light.

During this time king Chha-Har having embroiled the six great principalities in internal wars, one of the princes took refuge among the Khálkhá tribes. The Khálkhá princes not agreeing to shelter the refugee, fell out among themselves. One of their chiefs named Chhog-thu, banished from his own country, took possession of the Amdo province. No sooner had he established his power over the Amdo people, than he began to injure Buddhism in general, and more particularly the Gelugpa church. When the report of his evil doings reached Guśri-Khán, he became greatly enraged. In order to succour particularly the church of Tsonkhapa, he left his native place at the head of a large army, and in the year fire-ox arrived near Khokhonur where he inflicted a signal defeat on Chhog-thu and slew 40,000 soldiers in the field. The whole of Amdo now passed under his power.

He then started for U to pay homage to the Dalai, Taśi and Gaḥdan Thipa of whom the last was the spiritual father of the other two. He had an interview with the fifth Gyal-van (Dalai-Lama) and Panchhen-Lo-ssan Chhoi kyi-gyal-tshan whom he greatly venerated. At the time of his visit to the Gahdan monastery which took place during the night of the new moon, he saw the interior of the monastery by the light emitted from luminous pebbles on the floor and through the avenues. This event he considered very auspicious. In the year fire-ox during the winter season he returned to Khokhonur. In the mean time king Beri of Kham commenced to persecute the Buddhists, having himself become a proselyte to the Bon religion. Hearing this, Guśri-Khán marched towards Kham in the year earth-hare with a large army, commenced hostilities and annexed Kham to his dominions. King Beri was captured in the year iron-dragon, on the 25th of the 11th month and was thrown into a prison in Kham, while all the Lamas and chiefs of the Sakya-pa, Gelug-pa, Karmapa, Duk-pa and Taglun-pa sects were liberated, and sent to their respective monasteries. After defeating Beri, Guśri Khán turned his attention towards the conquest of Jan, the king of which country submitted to him without hostilities and agreed to pay him homage and tribute.

During this period the whole of Tibet was ruled by king De-si-Tsanpa whose fort was the castle of Shi-ga-tse. Having adopted the teaching of the Karmapa school, he tried to exalt it above all others and evinced much disregard towards the Gelugpa school. Guśri Khan took umbrage at this. Accordingly, to raise the prestige of the Gelugpa church, he invaded U and Tsan at the head of his army, defeated all the armies of Tsan and sent the vanquished monarch and his ministers captives to the prison house at Nehu, in U, and brought the whole of Tibet under his power. He was now acknowledged as the sovereign of the countries Tibet, Kham and Amdo. He organised an enlightened government. He extirpated all enemies and rivals of the Gelugpa The Indian king Rabo Sin, the king of Yambu (Nepal), and the Rájá of Nari and many other border kings sent him presents according to their national custom. Afterwards he made a present of the whole of Tibet proper to the fifth Dalai Lama in the year 1645 A. D., and thereby laid the foundation of the fame and dignity of the Court of the Dalai Even at the present day their earthly mansion Potálá or Gaḥdan Phodan is believed to be a counterpart of the celestial mansion of Gahdan or Tushitapuri (Paradise). Guśri Khán (Kauśri Khán) had ten sons, of whom Tayen Khan and his grandson Lha-ssan ruled successively in Tibet. Guśri's son, Tha-ákhu-taśi Bathur, became king of Khokhonur. Thus the descendants of Guśri Khán, though they ruled separately as independent princes, did not require to be directed by others, but, subsequently, on account of the war raised by Tan-zing Wan, they were weakened, when the Emperor of China subjugated them all and annexed their countries to his dominions. But he allowed them to retain their respective possessions, and permitted them to follow their religious observances, according to the Gelugpa principles. It became customary with a great number of Mongolian Lamas to enter the different monastic colleges of Tibet, to study sacred literature. On their return from Tibet they shewed themselves capable of teaching the sacred religion. They founded schools in their respective native places. Holy personages from U and Tsan, Amdo and Kham, having come to take their birth in Mongolia, the country of Hor has now become flooded with monasteries and chhortens and religious congregations. The study of dialectics also has been introduced there.

With the exception of Solonpa, Bargwad and a few other savage tribes, all the Mongols are Buddhists. The heretical Yavana (Lálo) religion decayed and passed away. The old schools of Sakyapa and Karmapa Lamas were abolished, and in their place the Gelugpa school flourished encompassing the land.

Memoir of the Author of the Tabakát-i-Násirí. By Major G. H. Raverty, Bombay Army (Retired).

Few materials exist for a notice of this author, and these are chiefly furnished by himself.

The first mention he makes of his family is to the effect that "the Imám, 'Abd-ul-Ķháliķ, the Júrjání, having, in his early manhood, dreamt a dream on three successive occasions, urging him to proceed to Ģhaznín and seek a wife, set out thither; and, subsequently, obtained in marriage one of the forty daughters of Sultán Ibráhím of Ģhaznín," who was in the habit of bestowing his daughters, in marriage, upon reverend and pious Sayyids and 'Ulamá, like other Musalmán rulers have continued to do, down to recent times.

By this wife, 'Abd-ul-Khálik had a son, whom he named Ibráhím, after his maternal grandfather, the Sultán; and he was our author's great-grandfather. He was the father of the Mauláná Minháj-ud-Dín 'Uṣmán, who was the father of the Mauláná Saráj-ud-Dín Muḥammad—who is called Ibráhím by some—who was known by the title of 'Ujúbat-uz-Zamán or "the Wonder of the Age." He was the father of the Mauláná Minháj-ud-Dín* Abú-'Umar-i-'Uṣmán, the author of the History entitled the Ṭabakát-i-Náṣirí, who thence often brings in his father's and grandfather's name, styling himself Minháj-i-Saráj-i-Minháj, the two izáfats being used to signify son of in place of the Arabic bin.

Our author's ancestors, on both sides, for several generations, appear to have been ecclesiastics of repute and men distinguished for learning. He states that he possessed, among the misál or diplomas granted to his maternal ancestors by the Khalífahs, one from the Khalífah Mustazí B'illah, conferring the Kází-ship of the fortress, or rather, fortified town, of Túlak, described in his work, together with that over the Kuhistán, and the Jibál—Highlands—of Hirát, upon his maternal grandfather, in conformity with the diploma previously held by the latter's father before him. His paternal grandfather also received an honorary dress from the same Pontiff; and our author says that he himself possessed the diploma which was sent along with it.

In the oldest copies of the text, and in several of the more recent, our author almost invariably styles himself 'the Júrjání' (جورجاني), as I have from the outset rendered it; but those MSS. noticed in the Preface to the Translation, which appear to have been copied from the same source as that from which the India Office Library MS. was taken, or from that copy

^{*} The title, Saráj-ud-Dín, means "The Lamp, or the Luminary of the Faith," and Minháj-ud-Dín, "The High-road, or the Way of the Faith." See "Translation," note², page 1295.

Since writing note⁷, at page 321 of my "Translation," giving an account of the Amír Mas'úd's inroad into the northern parts of Ghúr, when on his way from Ghaznín to Hirát, I have considered that the word given by our author referred to the tract of country described in that note as the Gúzgánán, or the Gúzgáns, by Tájzíks, but which Arabs, and people of Arab descent, who use $j \in \text{for the Tájzík } g$, turn into Júzjánán, and that the word he uses in connexion with his own name refers to one of the Gúzgáns, and that he should be styled 'the Gúzgání' or 'the Júzjání.' As the most trustworthy copies of the text, the best and most correctly written, had Júrjání, I considered it necessary to follow them as I had begun, and to mention the matter more in detail in the Memoir of the Author's life.

Gúzgán, as the native inhabitants styled it, and Arabs Júzján, is not the name of a single town, village, or fortress, but of two or more of the small districts or tracts of country among the mountains, on the northwest frontier of the country of Ghúr, and north of Hirát, beyond the Murgh-Ab—the Jibál of Hirát, as he himself styles it,—but its exact position, and the localities of most of the great fortresses mentioned by our author in the last Section of his work, are at present unknown to us. Gúzgánán, or Gúzgáns, were the appanage of the Amír Muhammad, brother of Mas'úd; and it was from thence that he was brought when he assumed the throne of Ghaznín after the death of his father. Notwithstanding the details which our author gives respecting the great fortresses of Ghúr, Gharjistán, and other parts, including the fortress of Túlak, which appears to have been his own place of residence at the time, and also the home of his maternal relatives (see "Translation," page 1066 and note5), which he helped to defend against the Mughal invaders, and which must have been situated in one of the Gúzgáns, he never once, throughout his whole work, refers to Gúzgán or Júzján, except in connexion with his own name. also notes to pages 186 and 232.

After the Ghúrís obtained possession of Láhor in 582 H., and they had seized the Sultán, Khusrau Malik, the last of the Sultáns of Ghaznín, our author's father was made Kází of the Ghúrían army stationed at Láhor, under the Sipah-Sálár, 'Alí-i-Kar-mákh; and twelve camels were assigned him for the conveyance of the establishment of his office, his tribunal, etc., on the line of march.

Our author was born after this, in the year 589 H., the very year in which Dihlí, of which, and of which Musalmán kingdom, he was subsequently to become the chief Ķází and Ṣadr, was made the seat of the Musalmán government in Hindústán by the Turk Mamlúk, Ķuţb-ud-Dín I'-bak, who was, in after years, to become its first Muḥammadan Sulţán. That our author was born at Láhor, as the Dágḥistání, referred to farther on, asserts, cannot be correct; for, from what he himself states respecting his arrival at U'chchah in 624 H. [see pages 541 and 722], that was the first time he set foot in Hind. Had he been born at Láhor, he would, doubtless, have mentioned it, and he would probably have been styled and known as the Láhorí in consequence.

The next mention he makes of his father is, that, when Sultán Bahá-ud-Dín Sám, ruler of Bámíán and Tukháristán, succeeded his father on the throne, he desired that our author's father, the Mauláná Saráj-ud-Dín Muḥammad, should take up his residence in his kingdom and enter his service. With the sanction of his own sovereign and patron, and Bahá-ud-Dín Sám's suzerain, namely, the Sultán of Ghúr, Ghiyáṣ-ud-Dín Muḥammad-i-Sám, the Mauláná proceeded to the Court of Bahá-ud-Dín Sám, and was made Kází of the kingdom of Bámíán and Tukháristán, with the judicial administration over its forces, was made censor, with full powers as regards ecclesiastical law, and entrusted with the charge of two colleges and their funds. This happened in 591 H., when our author was in his third year. He states that the diploma conferring these offices upon his father, in the handwriting of the Wazír of the Bámíán state, was still contained in the kharítah [a bag of embroidered silk for holding documents] containing his own diplomas, his banner and turban of honour.

The mother of our author was the foster-sister and school-mate of the Princess Máh Malik, the daughter of Sultán Ghiyás-ud-Dín Muḥammadi. Sám, mention of which lady will be found in several places in his History; and his mother appears to have continued in her service after her marriage. Our author distinctly states that his early years were passed in the Haram of the Princess, until the period of his entering upon adolescence, when, according to Musalmám usages, he had to be sent elsewhere. He speaks in terms of much gratitude of the fostering kindness and protection he received while dwelling in that Princess's household. Under these circumstances, Láhor can scarcely have been the place of his birth.

As early as his seventh year our author began to prosecute his studies; and used to attend that eminent teacher and Imám 'Alí, the Gharmaní, for the purpose of acquiring the Kur'án by heart.

When Sultán Takish, Khwárazm Sháh, withdrew his allegiance from the Khalífah Un-Náṣir-ud-Dín-Ullah, and the latter's troops had been defeated by him, Ibn-ur-Rabbí', and Ibn-ul-Khatíb, on two different occasions, came as envoys to the Courts of the Sultáns of Ghúr and Ghaznín to demand aid from those monarchs against Sultán Takish. In consequence, the Imám Shams-ud-Dín, the Turk, and the Mauláná Saráj-ud-Dín Muḥammad, the Tájzík, our author's father, were directed to proceed to Baghdád, to the Khalífah's Court, along with the envoys.* They set out for Baghdád by way of Mukrán; and, in some affray into which they fell on the road, they were attacked by a band of robbers, and our author's father was killed. Intimation of his death was received in a communication from the Khalífah to the Sultán Ghiyás-ud-Dín Muḥammad-i-Sám, in these words: "Furthermore, Saráj-i-Minháj perished in an affray on the road. The Almighty recompense him!"

Another of our author's relatives, his mother's brother's son, was Ziyá-ud-Dín Muḥammad, son of 'Abd-us-Sallám, Ķází of Túlak, who was left in command of the fortress of Tabarhindah, with a force of 1200 Túlakís, by the Sultán Mu'izz-ud-Dín Muḥammad-i-Sám, when that Sultán was about to retire from Hind before the hot season of 587 H., intending to return after it was over and relieve him. The Ķází of Túlak was to hold the place for seven months; but as the Sultán, just after this arrangement was made, was defeated by Ráe Pithorá and severely wounded in the battle, and an expedition into Ķhurásán soon after intervened, he was totally unable to come to the Ķází's relief, as agreed upon, in the following season, and, consequently, after having held out over thirteen months, the Ķází Ziyá ud-Dín Muḥammad had to capitulate.

At the time Sultán Ghiyás-ud-Dín Maḥmúd, son of Ghiyás-ud-Dín Muḥammad-i-Sám, was assassinated by the Khwárazmí refugees, in Ṣafar, 607 H., our author was dwelling at Fírúz-koh, and was then in his eighteenth year.

In 611 H., the year preceding the surrender of his capital Fírúz-koh, by the last of the Sultáns of the Ģhúrí dynasty, our author proceeded thither. Two years after we find him in Sijistán, at Zaranj, the capital, where he remained some time. At this period the whole of the territories which had formed the empire of the Ģhúrís, including the dominions of Ģhaznín, and extending east of the Indus into the upper part of the Sind-Ságar Do-ábah of the Panj-áb as far as the Jhilam, had fallen under the sway of the Khwárazmís. These events must, in some way, have been the cause of his sojourn in Sijistán for seven months, but he is quite silent on the causes which led him there. See page 195.

In 617 H., during the first inroad of the Mughals into Ghúr and Khurásán, before the Chingiz Khán himself crossed the Oxus with his main army, our author was living at Túlak; and, shortly after, in the same year, took part in the defence of that fortified town against the invaders, who kept prowling about it for about eight months. During a period of four years, from the above mentioned year up to the close of 620 H., during which the Mughals made several attempts upon it, he helped to defend it.

In 618 H., the year in which he says the Chingiz Khán crossed the Jíhún into Khurásán, and he was in his thirtieth year, he married the daughter of a kinsman of his own; and, in 620 H., he determined, as soon as circumstances permitted, to leave his native country, and proceed into Hindústán, not liking, apparently, to dwell in a country overrun by the Mughal infidels. In 621 H. he was despatched from Túlak, where he was then living, and in the defence of which against the Mughals he had just taken part, by Malik Táj-ud-Dín Ḥasan-i-Khar-post to Isfizár, after Khurásán had become clear of Mughals, and from thence into the Kuhis-tán—the Chingiz Khán had, at that time, returned homewards—to endeavour to arrange for the re-opening of the kárwán routes, which, during the Mughal invasion, had been closed, and the traffic suspended.

On a second occasion, in 622 H., he again proceeded from Túlak into the Kuhistán for the same purpose, at the request of Malik Ruķn-ud-Dín Muḥammad, son of 'Uṣmán, the Maragḥaní, of Kháesár of Ghúr, the father of Malik Shams-ud-Dín Muḥammad, the first of the Kurat dynasty, as the Tájzík—not Afgḥán, I beg leave to say—rulers of the fiefs of Hirát and Ghúr and their dependencies, who were the vassals of the Mugḥals, were styled. The following year he again set out on a journey into the Kuhistán, on the part of Malik Rukn-ud-Dín Muḥammad, that the kárwán route might be re-opened. From Kháesár he first went to Faráh, and from thence proceeded by way of Sijistán into the territory referred to, and returned to Kháesár again.

In 623 H., our author, who appears to have left Túlak and was residing at Kháesár, with the permission of Malik Rukn-ud-Dín Muḥammad went to Faráh in order to purchase a little silk required by him for his journey into Hindústán. Having arrived in the neighbourhood of Faráh, Malik Táj-ud-Dín Binál-Tigín the Khwárazmí, who then ruled over Sijistán, and was engaged in war with the Muláḥidah of the Kuhistán, induced him to undertake a journey into the latter territory, to endeavour to bring about an accommodation between himself and the Muláḥidah governor of that part, the Muḥtashim, Shams-ud-Dín. Our author was accompanied by the son of Malik Rukn-ud-Dín Muḥammad whose name is not mentioned, but, in all probability, it was the identical Shams-ud-Dín, Muḥammad, the founder of the Kurat dynasty. Our author succeeded in effecting an accommodation, but it does not appear to have been on terms acceptable to Malik Táj-ud-Dín Binál-Tigín; for he wished him to return to the Muḥtashim's presence and declare war again. This he declined to do, as he had several times put off his journey into Hind, and was now desirous of departing without further delay, and before the Mughals should again appear. Malik Táj-ud-Dín Binál Tigín was wroth at this refusal, and shut him up within the walls of the fortress of Ṣafhed of Sijistán. There he was detained for a period of forty-three days, but, Malik Rukn-ud-Dín Muḥammad having interfered in his behalf, he was set at liberty.

He did not allow the grass to grow under his feet after this; and in the fifth month of the following year—Jamádí-ul-Awwal, 624 H., [in another place he says it was Rajab, the seventh month, while in another place—page 612—he says it was in 625 H.], by way of Ghaznín and Baníán, he reached Uchchah by boat; and, in the following Zí-Ḥijjah, Sultán Náṣir-ud-Dín Ṣabá-jah, ruler of Uchchah and Multán, placed him in charge of the Fírúzí College at Uchchah, and made him Ṣází of the forces of his son, 'Alá-ud-Dín Bahrám Sháh.

Our author could distinguish the winning side, and preferred it; for, no sooner had Sultán Shams-ud-Dín I-yal-timish, ruler of Dihlí, Kabá-jah's rival, appeared before Uchchah, than he deserted Kabá-jah and the Fírúzí College, and went over to his rival. In the first place, our author presented himself before Malik Táj-ud-Dín, Sanjar-i-Gajz-lak Khán, who was in command of the van of I-yal-timish's forces; and, a few days after, I-yal-timish himself having arrived, he waited on him. He was favourably received, and was appointed to officiate, in his priestly capacity, within that Sultán's camp. After the fall of Uchchah, he accompanied I-yal-timish to Dihlí; and reached it in Ramazán, 625 H.

He subsequently accompanied the Sultán, in his priestly capacity, to Gwáliyúr in 629 H.; and, in the following year, after that stronghold was taken possession of, was made Kází Khatíb, and Imám of Gwáliyúr and its dependencies, under the governor, Rashíd-ud-Dín 'Alí. In the early part of Sultán Raziyyat's reign he returned to Dihlí, but he was not removed from office, neither was he a "forgiven rebel;" and, during his absence from Gwáliyúr, his Deputies acted for him. On reaching the capital, in 635 H., that sovereign added to his offices that of Superintendent of the Náṣiríah College at Dihlí.

In the year 639 H., in the reign of Sultán Mu'izz-ud-Dín, Bahrám Sháh, our author was made Chief Ķází of the Dihlí kingdom, and of the capital as well. In the disturbances which arose between that Sultán and his Amírs, our author, and other ecclesiastics, endeavoured to bring about a peaceful accommodation, but without effect. In Zí-Ka'dah of the same year, the Khwájah, Muḥazzab-ud-Dín, the Wazír, bribed a number of villains to murder him; and, after the conclusion of the Friday's prayers, on the 7th of that month, they actually attacked him in the Jámi' Masjid, but he escaped without hurt.

Soon after, on the accession of Sultán 'Alá-ud-Dín, Mas'úd Sháh, on the Khwájah, Muhazzab-ud-Dín, being re-appointed Wazír, our author, in 640 H., resigned the Chief Kázíship, and in Rajab of that year left Dihlí in order to proceed into the territory of Lakhanawatí. There he remained about two years, and there he acquired his information respecting it and its While residing in that country, he accompanied Malik Tughril-i-Ţughán Ķhán in his expedition against the Ráe of Jáj-Nagar, and was present at the attack on the frontier post of Katásin, in Shawwál, 641 H. On the removal of that Malik from the government Lakhanawati in 643 H., our author accompanied him on his return to Dihlí, and, in Safar of that year, presented himself at Court. Muhazzab-ud-Dín had in the meantime been put to death by the Amírs; and, through the interest and efforts of his subsequent munificent patron, Malik Ghiyás-ud-Dín, 'Balban (afterwards Ulugh Khán-i-A'zam, and subsequently Sultán of Dihlí), who held the office of Amír-i-Hájib, three days after his return, he was put in charge of the Násiríah College once more, and entrusted with the administration of its endowments, the lectureship of the Jámi' Masjid, and the Kázíship of Gwáliyúr, according to the previous grant. Subsequently, in the same year, he accompanied the army which advanced to the banks of the river Biáh for the relief of Uchchah when invested by the Mughals.

In 644 H., at Jalhandar [in the Panjáb], on the return of the army, on the occasion of performing the services prescribed for the 'I'd-i-Azḥá in the hall of the College there, the new Sultán, Náṣir-ud-Dín Maḥmúd Sháh, to whom his History is dedicated, and after whom it is named, presented our author with a cloak, a turban, and a richly caparisoned horse. In 645 H., he wrote a description, in verse, of the expedition against Talsandah, entitled the "Náṣirí Námah." The Sultán rewarded him for this with a yearly stipend, and Malik Ghiyáṣ-ud-Dín Balban, the hero of the poem, and commander of the expedition, give him the revenues of a village in the Hánsí province, which was that Malik's fief at that period. In 649 H., for the second time, the Chief Kázíship of the Dihlí kingdom with jurisdiction over the capital as well, was conferred upon him; but when, two years after, in 651 H., the eunuch, 'Imád-ud-Dín-i-Rayḥán, succeeded in his conspiracy for the removal from office of our author's patron, who had been raised to the title of Ulugh Khán-i-A'zam in 647 H., and he was banished the Court, our author, like others of the Ulugh Khán's clients and supporters, was removed from the office of Chief Kází, and it was conferred upon one of the Rayḥáni's creatures, notwithstanding our author stood so high in the estimation of the weak and puppet Sultán. In 652 H., matters improved a little: a new Wazír succeeded; and, while in the Kol district, whither our author appears to have accompanied the Sultán's Court, the title of Ṣadr-i-Jahán* was conferred upon him.

At the close of the following year the Rayhani was ousted from office, the Ulugh Khan-i-A'zam again assumed the direction of affairs, and our author, who, for months past, had been unable, for fear of his life, to leave his dwelling, even to attend the Friday's service in the Jami' Masjid, was in Rabi'-ul-Awwal, 653 H., for the third time, made Chief Kazi of the Dihli kingdom, with jurisdiction over the capital as before.

With the exception of his remark at page 715 of his History in winding up the events of the year 658 H., that if his life should be spared—he was then in his seventieth year—and aptitude should remain, whatever events might subsequently occur would be recorded, our author henceforward disappears from the scene, and we hear no more of him. At the end of his account of the Ulugh Khán-i-A'zam farther on, he does not renew that promise, nor does he do so when finally closing his History. The munificent rewards he received on presenting copies of his work to the Sultan and to the latter's father-in-law, the Ulugh Khán-i-A'zam, are mentioned at page 1294. He refers to his family casually, now and then, in his work, but, with a single exception, enters into no particulars whatever. At page 820 he says, with reference to the Malikul-Ḥujjáb [Head of the Chamberlains], 'Alá-ud-Dín, the Zinjání, that he is "his son, and the light of his eyes;" but he could not have been his son from the fact of his being styled "the Zinjání," that is to say, a native of Zinján in Khurásán. He may have been his son-in-law, or an adopted son.

When the emissaries from Khurásán were received by the Sultán, Náṣir-ud-Dín Maḥmúd Sháh, as related at page 857, our author composed a poem befitting the occasion, and this, he says, was read before the throne by one of his sons. He also, in one place, refers to a brother.

Between the time when our author closes his History in 658 H., and the Ulugh Khán-i-A'zam succeeded to the throne of Dihlí under the title of Sultán Ghiyás-ud-Dín, in 664 H.—the date generally accepted, although Faṣiḥ-í says it was in 662 H.—is a period of about six years; and, as no other writer that we know of has recorded the events of that period, it is a complete blank in Indian History, which, I fear, cannot be filled up. Ziyá-ud-Dín Baraní, in his Táríkḥ-i-Fírúz-Sháhí, which is not much to be depended on, says he takes up the relation of events from the time our author left off, but this is not correct, for he begins with the reign of Sultán Ghiyáṣ-ud-Dín Balban.

Our author died in his reign, but when cannot be discovered, neither can the place of his burial. Possibly some inscription may hereafter turn up which may tell us, but there is no record available in any of the works I have waded through in search of the information. Whether his health failed him; whether he grew out of favour with his old patron, the new Sultán; or whether circumstances arose which, as regards the Ulugh Khán's conduct towards the weak-minded, but amiable, Sultán Násir-ud-Dín Mahmúd Sháh, would not bear the light of day—for there are vague statements of foul play on the part of the Ulugh Khán, but no proofswho shall say? Some writers state that the Sultan died a natural death, which is most probable, and some further add that he, having neither offspring nor heir, nominated his father-in-law, the Ulugh Khán-i-A'zam, his successor, which was but natural, seeing that, for nearly twenty years, he had virtually ruled the state. That the Ulugh Khán-i-A'zam poisoned him appears unworthy of credence, since, had he desired to supplant him, or get rid of him, he might have effected either object many years before. See "Translation," note⁵, page 716.

The only mention I can find, after much search, respecting these years, between the closing of our author's History and the accession of the new Sultán, is the following from Faṣiḥ-í. "Sultán Náṣir-ud-Dín Maḥ-múd Sháh died in this year 662 H., and great anarchy and disorder arose throughout the territory of Hindústán. At last, since among the great Amírs of Hind, for prudence, counsel, wisdom, munificence, dignity, magnificence, and power, the Amír Ghiyáṣ-ud-Dín [the Ulugḥ Khán-i-A'zam] was preeminently distinguished, and as he had obtained his freedom previously—a matter never alluded to by our author—he, with the unanimous accord of the great nobles and grandees of the kingdom, ascended the throne of Dihlí in the beginning of this year, 662 H."

The Dághistání, previously referred to, in his Tazkirah under the letter s has the following:—"Saráj-ud-Dín-i-Minháj is the author of the Tabakát-i-Náṣirí, which he completed in the name of the Malik of Hind, Náṣir-ud-Dín. His birthplace was Láhor, and his origin was from Samr-kand."

This last sentence of the Dághistání's is sufficient to show that he is not entirely to be depended upon, in this instance at least. Our author's family was not from Samr-kand. The Dághistání also gives the following as a quatrain of our author's:—

"That heart which, through separation, thou madest sad;
From every joy that was, which thou madest bare of;
From thy disposition I am aware that, suddenly and unexpectedly,
The rumour may arise that thou hast broken it."

In the "Akhbár-ul-Akhyár"—a Biographical Collection of Notices of Saints—of 'Abd-ul-Ḥakk [he died 1052 H. = 1642 A. D.], the following will be found respecting our author:—"The Shaikh, Kází Minháj, the Jurjání, the author of the Ṭabakát-i-Náṣirí, was a saint, and one of the most learned and excellent of his time, and one of those who would become filled with religious ecstasies on hearing the singing at Zikrs or Tazkírs. When he became Ķází of Hindústán, that office assumed integrity and rectitude. The Shaikh, Nizám-ud-Dín,* states:—"I used, every Monday to go to his Tazkírs, until, one day, when I was present at one of them, he delivered this quatrain:—

"'The lip, in the ruby lips of heart-ravishers delighting,
And to ruffle the dishevelled tresses essaying,
To-day is delightful, but to-morrow it is not—
To make one's self like as straw, fuel for the fire.'

"'When I heard this verse,' says the Shaikh, Nizám-ud-Dín, 'I became as one beside myself; and it was some time, before I came to my senses again.'"

Our author appears to have been deeply imbued with the tenets of Súfí-ism, for a brief essay on which, see the Introduction to my "Poetry of the Afgháns." Professor Sprenger tells me that he was a notorious Súfí. A good account of these Zikrs, or Tazkírs, will be found in the notes to the Third Chapter of Lane's "Thousand and One Nights."

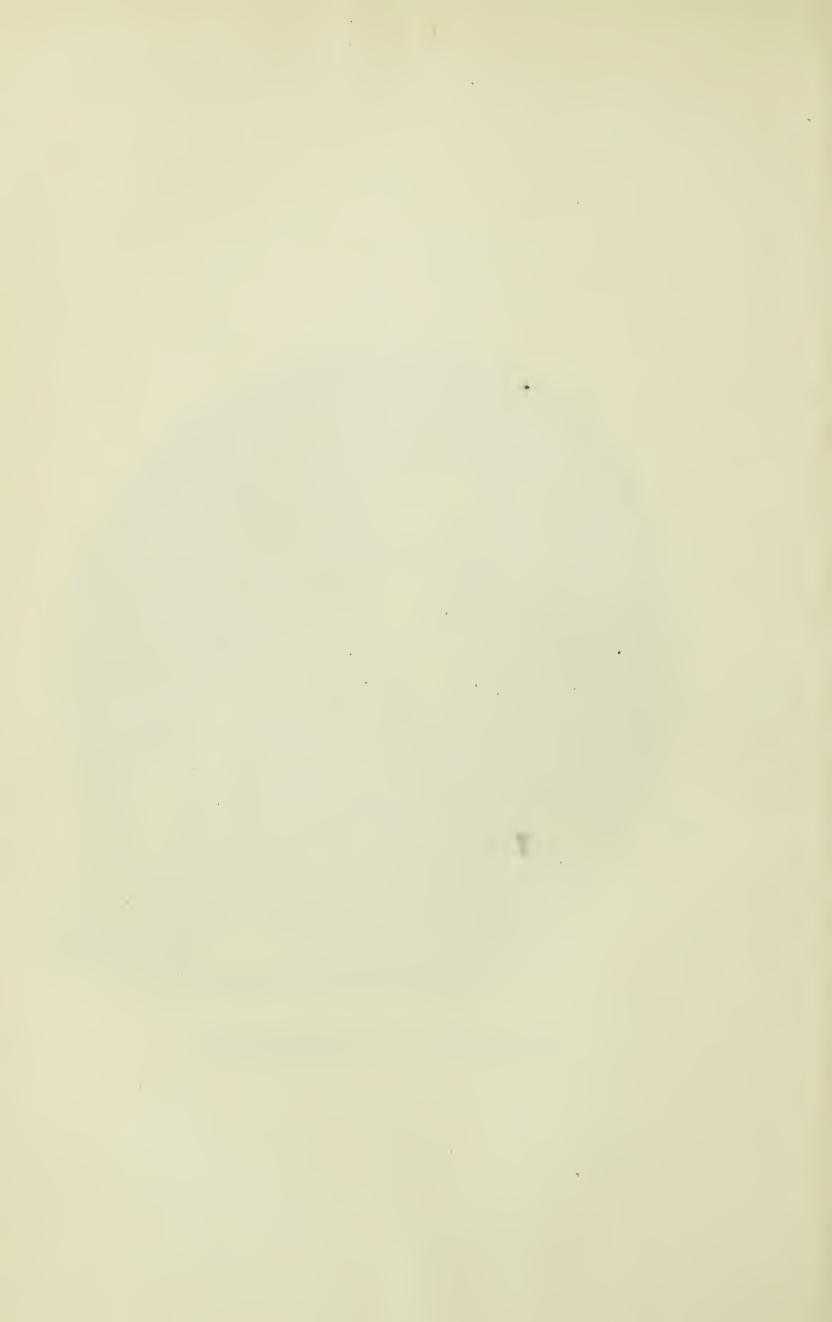

In the Preface dedicating his work to the Sultán Náṣir-ud-Dín Maḥ-múd Sháh, our author mentions the reasons which led him to write it, and this will appear as the Preface to the Translation of his History.

* This, probably, is no other than the celebrated saint of Dihlí.

VIII.—RISE AND PROGRESS OF JIÑ OR BUDDHISM IN CHINA.¹

CHAPTER I.

BUDDHISM INTRODUCED FROM INDIA.

Mé-tse religious sect.—Previous to the spread of Buddhism in China, there arose certain religious sects which possessed something in common with Buddhism. One of those sects was called Mé-tse after the name of its founder. It enjoined every man to devote himself to the service and welfare of others even at the sacrifice of his own interests, life and body; it also taught that the nature of the soul from the beginning is pure and immaculate, and that only at times it suddenly becomes perverted by admixture of impurities produced by evil thought and action.

Li-ye-tse religious sect.—The second in importance among the non-Buddhist religions is that of Li-ye-tse, who taught that all things depend for their existence and development on mutual coherence and support. During this period, there having existed no communication with India, not a word of Buddha's name or religion was known in China. But Li-ye-tse, by his power of foreknowledge, wrote in his own work that in the West there would appear a self-created noble sage, the performer of great deeds, capable at will of engaging in the highest degree of meditation, and passing beyond the region of speech, who would be called by the name of Buddha. By this prediction he first made known the sweet name of Buddha in the country of China.

Chwań-tse.—Again the founder of another religious sect, called Chwań-tse, saw in a vision that he was metempsychosed into a butterfly. After awaking from sleep, he reflected on the meaning of such a transient and empty dream which lavishes all on you and at last vanishes as a phantom, and inferred that life was an illusion.

Yu-s't.—Again another teacher named 'Yu-su' (meaning the lord of the world), who was famed as born of a rose, preached a religion which forbade the destruction of human lives and instituted the taking of vows for observing ten moral acts, similar to those of the Buddhists. It also taught that, the results of virtuous actions being multiplied, the pious should be born as gods to enjoy eternal happiness; that on the other hand, the perpetrators of sinful actions should be plunged in hell, to be afflicted with everlasting pains; and that despite their repentance or confession of sins, greater damnation would await those who had knowingly and deliberately transgressed.

All these different sects prevailed in China as can be gathered from the religious histories of China. They did not spread all over the country, nor did their influence guide men for any considerable length of time, but they paved the way for the reception of Buddhism in that vast country.

In the 26th year of the reign of Chou-Wan, the fifth of the Tehu Dynasty, there appeared, towards the south-western boundary of the kingdom, a halo of golden light, the lustre of which illuminated the realm. The king having witnessed this wonderful spectacle asked the astrologers what was meant by it. They declared that it presaged the birth of a saintly personage in that quarter, whose religion, after one thousand years, should be known in their own country (China). The king recorded this wonderful phenomenon in the Imperial debthers.2 It was in that very year3 that Buddha was born. Some authors believe that it was the 24th year of the Emperor Chou-wan's reign. At the age of twenty-nine Buddha entered on the life of a mendicant, on the 8th of the 2nd lunar month; he turned the wheel of Dharma between the 30th and 49th years of his age, and last of all it is mentioned in the works of Chinese Buddhists that he obtained nirvána4 in the 79th year of his age, on the 15th day of the second month.⁵ Buddha died in the 53rd year of the Emperor Moo-wan's reign. In the 8th year of the reign of the Emperor Mindhí-yun-phan of the great Hán dynasty, 1013 years after the birth of Buddha, Buddhism was brought to China. On an auspicious day, in the third year of his reign, Mindhi saw in a vision, that a saintly personage with a golden complexion, bright as the sun, full three fathoms high, approached his throne from the direction of heaven. In the following morning Mindhi communicated the night's dream to his ministers, one of whom named Fu-ye informed him, that there existed a certain prophecy about the appearance of a great noble sage in India, of the description that the king gave, and he begged to ascertain if it was not so. The king referred to the ancient records, and computing the dates, found that just 1010 years had elapsed. Exceedingly delighted with this remarkable coincidence, he despatched a messenger of the name of Wantsun to India, in search of the doctrine of Buddha. During that time, there lived in India two great Arhats, one called Mátanga who was born of the race of Kasyapa, and the other named Bháraṇa Paṇḍita. The Chinese messenger besought them to visit his country, in order to spread the benefits of Buddhism among the teeming millions of his countrymen. The Arhats welcomed the invitation and equipped themselves for the journey.

⁴ Died.

⁵ This does not tally with the more correct account of the Indian historians, as may be collected from several Tibetan chronologies.

A few volumes of sacred scriptures, chiefly of the Maháyána school, several portraits and some sacred relics, all of which they packed on a white horse for conveyance, completed the church necessaries with which they marched towards that distant land. They entered China by the southern route and were received by the Emperor at a place called Lou-yokhyi in southern China. Accompanied by Wan-tsun, the messenger, they arrived at the palace, while the king, with the greatest demonstration of reverence, approached to receive them. They presented to the king all that they had brought from their country. The king expressed himself well pleased with the presents, and especially with the image of Buddha which bore a striking resemblance to what he had seen in his vision. The Indian Arhats performed some miracles which served to strengthen the monarch's faith in Buddhism. He built a large temple called Péima-ssi and engaged his two Indian guests for conducting religious service therein. Seeing this, the priests of Lo-u-kyun,⁶ whose religion was then prevalent in China, remonstrated against the king's encouraging the new doctrine. They said that it would be improper to introduce an alien creed dissimilar to the ancient religion and practice of the country. They also exhibited many prodigies to convince the king of the superiority of their religion over Buddhism. The king, wavering much, at last decided that he should test the merits of both, by casting their respective religious scriptures into fire: whichever passed the ordeal successfully by being untouched by the fire, should have his patronage. It so happened that all the To-u-se⁶ books were burnt and the Buddhist volumes remained undamaged. The king being convinced of the impositions of the To-u-se priests, ordered that their high priests Selou and Chhushen should be burnt alive. The two Indian Pandits were extolled to the skies. The king with his ministers and a large number of subjects embraced Buddhism.

On this occasion of the triumph of Buddhism over the To-u-se religion, the king uttered the following verses:

In a fox are not to be found the virtues of a lion,
The torch cannot enlighten like the sun or moon,
A lake cannot encompass the earth like the boundless main,
The splendour of Sumeru is not to be seen in a mountain,
The blessed clouds of religion encompassing the world
Will rain upon and quicken the seed of universal good;
All that existed not before, will now appear.

From all quarters, ye moving beings, draw near the Victor (Jina)! In the great fortress of He-nan-fu, the king erected seven temples, of which the temple of Peimassi⁷ was the principal one. He also established three convents for the use of nuns. The king himself took the vows of an Upásaka (a lay devotee). More than a thousand men, headed by the ministers of State, entered monkhood. Once the king addressed the Indian sages thus,-" Venerable Fathers, within the environs of my kingdom, is there no saintly Being residing for the permanent good and protection of all living beings"? Mátaña replied: "Yes, Arya' Manjuśrí dwells in Revo-tse-na on the top of Panchágra parvata." He then gave an account of Manjuśri's chosen land, which, accompanied by his friend Pandit Bharana he now prepared to find out. After much search he reached the enchanted spot which he distinguished from others by his saintly knowledge. He then reported it to the king—"During the days of Buddha Kasyapa there lived a king of the name of Aśvakála who, with the help of demons, constructed 84,000 chaityas, one of which exists on Revo-tse-na containing a fragment of the genuine relics of Kasyapa Buddha." The Emperor, in order to preserve the ancient chaitya, built a lofty temple over it which is now called by the name Tábotha chhorten. Near it he erected the great monastery of Shen-thun-su. Among many other religious edifices that were built by this pious monarch, one is the "white chhorten" of Pekin (Pechin). The monastic establishment of Revo-tse-ña consisted of 620 monks and 230 nuns. The learned Arhat prepared an abridgement of the Hinayana Aphorisms and Sútrantas in the language of China. This work, the first Buddhist work in Chinese, is extant to the present day. Pandit Bharana also translated the five Sútrántas, such as Dasa-Bhúmi &c. but unfortunately they are lost. In course of time Arhat Mátanga and Pandit Bharana died. Mindhi's successor invited several other Indian Pandits. Among the first batch Arya-kála, Sthavira-Chilukáksha, Srámana Suvinaya, and five other Pandits were well-known. In the second batch

7 That is, 'the Lord of the white elephant.'

Pandit Dharma-kála and several other Pandits, well versed in Maháyána, Hínayána and Vinaya Dharma (discipline), were of great note.

The third batch of Indian Pandits, Ganapati, Tikhini and others. propagated Buddhism in Kinnan and other provinces of southern China, These, with the Pandits who appeared during the reign of Napo Naan, were the most learned translators and best linguists. Thereafter, during the reigns of the thirteen kings of the Han dynasty, fourteen kings of the Jin dynasty, several kings of Jin-Yugur Su and other dynasties, the Than dynasty of twenty kings, and eighteen kings of the Soong dynasty successively, Indian Pandits and sages were invited to China, all of whom exerted themselves to increase the stock of Chinese Buddhist scriptures. There also appeared a host of learned Hwashan⁸ (Chinese monks and S'ramanas), some of whom visited India to study Sanskrit and Buddhism. There were others who acquired great proficiency in Sanskrit without going to India. They were all profoundly read in Buddhism and wrote numerous elaborate works in the Chinese language, besides translating many volumes of Sanskrit Scriptures. They also wrote the lives of eminent Pandits of China, who laboured with wonderful energy for the diffusion of Buddhism. These are to be found in the Chinese works called "Histories of religion."

CHAPTER II.

BUDDHISM INTRODUCED FROM TIBET.

From the time of the establishment of the Tartar (Hor) supremacy in China, many Tibetan sages visited China and contributed more and more to the propagation of Buddhism. The number of translations of Buddha's teachings and S'ástras increased. Those that were translated after the reign of king Wendhu of the dynasty of Su were analyzed and catalogued. Twice during the reign of the Than dynasty and twice in that of the Soon dynasty, the scriptures were revised, and additions made to them. All the books that were subsequently written were furnished with tables of contents and indexes. Last of all during the reign of the Tartar Emperor, Sa-chhen, the Chinese scriptures were compared with the Tibetan collections of the Kahgyur and Tangur. Such treatises and volumes as were wanting in the Chinese were translated from the Tibetan scriptures. All these formed one complete collection, the first part of which consisted of Buddha's teachings (Kahgyur). To the second part 21 volumes of translations from Tibetan, the Chinese S'ástras, and the works of eminent Hwashan, comprising 153 volumes' were added. The whole collection consisted of 740 volumes. An analytic catalogue of all these books was also furnished. In this collection many S'ástras were found which did not exist in the Tibetan collections.

⁸ The same as Tibetan Lamas.

In China there were five Buddhist schools:

- I. The Vinaya or Hinayana school.
- II. The Mantra or Tantrik school.
- III. The Maháyána school.
- IV. The Gabhira Darśana school.
 - V. The Sárártha Tantra.

I. VINAYA OR HÍNAYÁNA SCHOOL.

The Indian sage Mátanga who first carried Buddhism into China was the first of this school in China. His successors, for a length of time maintained his school, but latterly it dwindled away when Kumára S'rí was invited to China. Kumára S'rí was a great scholar and deeply read in the He had also a great fame for sacred literature of the Buddhists. prodigies and foreknowledge. During this time Chandana Prabhu9 was also invited. King Hun-shi showed great reverence to him. Che-u-Hwashan and 800 other pupils of the Prabhu were engaged in the great work of translating the sacred scriptures into the Chinese language. Sermons and instructions in Maháyána philosophy were copiously given, and more particularly the vows of monkhood and of the Bodhisattva order were taken by many. Henceforth the Hwashan of China introduced the system of entering into the Bodhisattva order—a stage which is only attained after fulfilling the duties of asceticism of the first order. Kumára S'rí, together with Buddha Jñána, professor of Vinaya, Vimala Chakshu, and Dharmaruchi and the most eminent of his colleagues, translated the four Vyákaranas of the Vinaya portion of the sacred literature, and thereby succeeded in enhancing the teaching of the Hinayana philosophy to the monks. Sthavira Sánga Varma, another illustrious Buddhist teacher, came from India to this country (China). The system of the Vinaya school, introduced by Kumára S'rí and matured by Sánga Varma, still prevails in China.

There is an account of the arrival in China of a famous Sinalese nun named Devasará, accompanied by ten nuns from India. It is not known whether she was successful in her attempt to organize the convent system and of extending the vows of chastity and religious devotion to females.

In the four fundamental truths of religion and in works respecting the solution of disputes and doubts about them, the Chinese do not differ from the Tibetans. From among the large body of books of instruction they selected those which suited them most in respect of their habits and ways of life; in consequence of which they differ in some external observances from their co-religionists in other countries. They have their own peculiarities. Animal food is forbidden according to their custom. They do not ride nor drive such animals as are naturally intended for those purposes. They prefer the smallest kind of mendicant's platter to the larger sizes. The mendicant's raiment is sewn with depressions and loopholes, in the order and arrangement of birds' feathers. In China, in fact, there is but one class of Buddhists, in consequence of which there is no necessity for the Hwashan to put marks on their dress, like the Tibetan Lamas of the present day and the Indian Sramanas in ancient times, to distinguish the followers of one school from those of another.

According to the established laws of China, yellow is the sign of royalty, red being the colour reserved for the ministers and nobles. The kings of that age, not liking to alter the ancient usage and also to give a distinctive appearance to the monkish dress, prescribed scarlet for the clergy. In China, people consider it a shameful matter to appear in public with naked arms. So they did not choose to adopt the mendicant's raiment as prescribed in the sacred books. Unlike the Tibetan monks who are forbidden to use sleeves, the Chinese Hwashan wear them.

In later times when Tibetan Lamas visited China, the question of uniformity in clerical dress arose. The Tibetan Lamas succeeded in preserving their own uniform, owing to the supremacy of the Tartar¹⁰ Emperors over China who tolerated national practices. Up to the present day, those customs remain unchanged. The Chinese Hwashan dress in scarlet with sleeved jackets, and the Tibetan Lamas dress themselves in red and yellow, each according to their national practice.

II. TANTRIKISM.

The first of all the Tantriks who came to China from India was Sthavira S'rí Mitra. He diffused the knowledge of Tantrikism by translating the Mahámayúra and other Dháranís into the Chinese language. Although contemporaneously with him many other eminent Indian Tantriks came to China, yet very few books on Tantrikism were translated for the public. The sage Kumára S'rí also did not communicate his Tantrik lore to the general public, but only to one or two of his confidential disciples, so that Tantrikism made very little progress in China. The little progress that it made, was due to Vajra Bodhi, a learned Achárya of Málava, and to his pupil Amogha Vajra. These two arrived together in China during the reign of the Emperor Than-min hún. Vajra Bodhi instructed Shi-ye-she-thah-yé and Sherab-thah-ye, 11 the two great Hwashan, in mysticism. Amogha Vajra performed the ceremony of Vajra Garbha Mandala for the benefit of the king who, on account of his devotion to Buddhism, was given the religious name of "Repository of wisdom and knowledge of the triple pitaka." The astrologers having found that malignant stars were ascendant on the king's destiny, he averted the evil by performing a yajña as prescribed in Buddhist mysticism. Amogha Vajra also propitiated one of the guardians of the world called Vaisramana and thereby enabled the king to triumph over his enemies. Being pleased with him for his eminent services, the king made him a gift of a piece of land supporting three thousand tenants. He translated seventy-seven principal treatises on Tantrikism. After installing his pupil, Huilan, in his place as the high priest, or Vajráchárya, he retired to the region of peace. Although both these two great Tantriks and their pupils passed for saints and sages, yet Tantrikism did not flourish long but soon declined. During the reign of the Soon dynasty, Pandit Dánarakshita, Dharmabhadra and other Indian Pandits visited China, but, being very jealous of their mystic operations being known to the public, they only communicated the mantras to a selected few, under solemn promise of not revealing them to the people. The later Hwashan were taught in only a few of the Tantrik rites, such as the ceremony Amoghapása. It was owing to these several restrictions that mysticism made no progress in China.

III. VAIPULYA DARŚANA (MAHÁYÁNA SCHOOL).

The founder of this sect was Than-san, 12 one of the most famous Budddist teachers of China. He was a descendant of Tun-kún, the chief minister of Thán kin. He was admitted into the order of monkhood at a very early age. Being of saintly origin, in intelligence, quickness, sharpness of mental faculties and aptitude for learning, he was unrivalled by any boy of his age. While only 11 years old, he committed to memory the Vimala-kírti sútra of the Tangur and the Saddharma Pundaríka of Kahgyur, both of which he could reproduce from memory. mastered the Abhidharma pitaka and then studied all the volumes of the Kahgyur and Tangur collections. At the age of twenty-nine he became acquainted with the Prákrit language of India, and with a view to travel in that country, secured for himself a passport from the Emperor. Passing through different countries, he reached India, and travelled all over its central and border provinces, such as Kashmir, in all of which he visited numerous places of pilgrimage. He learnt many of the higher and lower yánas from several Indian Pandits. Jetári, an illustrious sage, was his chief preceptor. At the noble monastery of Nalendra, he learnt the Yogáchárya philosophy from one of its most learned professors, Dánta Bhadra or Dánta Deva, who was then in his 106th year. Some 12 Contraction of Than-Ssen-tsan.

writers identify him with the Achárya Dántasena, the pupil of Vinaya Deva. He met his chief preceptor Jetári a second time, from whom he again received instructions on the Yogáchárya tenets. Besides Jetári and Dántasena, there were other Pandits from whom he received instruction in Buddhist philosophy. He devoted one year and three months to hearing lectures on Maitreya's series of Dharma śástras. In the remaining nine months of the second year, he completed his study of Nyáya (Logic). Since then during a period of three years he studied Indian philosophies of various schools, and vanquished a certain Bráhmanist king in disputation. In refutation of heresies, he wrote a work based on Maháyána principles, called "The Extinguisher of Heresy," containing 6600 ślokas—the excellence of which struck all Indian wise men with wonder.

Again Pandit Haraprabha having written a treatise in refutation of the Yogáchárya tenets, Than-Ssan-tsan also wrote a volume containing 8000 ślokas, called Ekántasiddha, which he presented to his teacher Dánta-bhadra. All these works being written in the Sanskrit language, the Chinese philosopher became eminently famous. The people of Aryavarta gave him the name Maháyána Deva. Some of the Indian Acháryas became his pupils in Buddhist philosophy, and king S'íláditya and Kumára, and the king of Southern India called Dhátubhalra and several other princes treated him with great reverence. Among the numerous Hwashan teachers who visited India, Than-ssan-tsan was the only one who obtained the high dignity of Pandit and enjoyed the veneration of Indian kings. After an absence of seventeen years of which three were spent in the return journey, he returned to China. The reigning Emperor of China, Chen-ku-an, received him with the greatest demonstration of reverence and respect, and Than-Ssan-tsan presented him with more than 600 volumes of Sanskrit manuscripts written on palmyra leaves, relics of Buddha, images, portraits and different sorts of Indian articles. The king placed him at the head of the monastery of Hun-fussi, where he employed him, together with other learned Hwashans, in translating 607 volumes of Buddhism including the Sherchin Ashtasahasrika, chiefly of Maitreya Dharma, also in revising many of the ancient translations. He rebuilt the monastery of Tshi-ain-ssi or in Tibetan Chambalin. During that period there were 3,716 religious establishments in China, from all of which he recruited intelligent and well-behaved monks for his new monastery. He also admitted new monks. By these means he was enabled to establish a grand monastic establishment, containing 18,630 monks of which he became the abbot. After the death of Chen-ku-an, his son Ka-utsun became Emperor. He greatly patronised Thang-ssan-tsang and his monastery. To every fifty principal monks of Paimin-ssi he supplied four servants, namely, three apprentice monks and one neophyte. He made excellent arrangements for the support of the clergy and appointed the illustrious sage as bishop of the three great monasteries, Paimin-ssi, ¹³ Hunfussi and Tshi-an-ssi.

Thañ-ssan-tsañ introduced the three orders of priesthood and the five methods of meditation among the clergy, and wrote commentaries on the S'ata-sahasrika, according to the Yogáchárya method, eight treatises on his own system (Vipuláchárya), the Lankávatára sútra and many other sútrántas.

He also wrote many śástras in general, such as Nyáya Sangraha, Kriyá Sangraha, &c., &c., and devoted all his attention and energies to diffusing the Maháyána and Yogáchárya schools. He erected a lofty chaitya called Arya Pantha to the south of the monastery of Tshi-ain-ssi, in which he deposited palmleaf MSS. in Sanskrit of Indian scriptures and some sacred relics. He collected one million sacred images from various sources, ransomed 10,000 animal lives, distributed alms to 10,000 men and offered ten millions of lamps to sacred beings. Having worked for a period of nearly forty years to promote the well-being of all living beings, at the age of sixty-five he was emancipated from mundane sufferings. The Vipuláchárya doctrine of Buddhism, taught by him, was obtained by him from his teacher Dánta Bhadra. The following were the illustrious professors whom he followed:

- 1. Buddha.
- 2. Maitreya.
- 3. Arya Sanga.
- 4. Vasu Mitra.

- 5. Dharma Rakshita.
- 6. Ananda.
- 7. Vinaya Bhadra.
- 8. Dánta-sena.

It was Than-ssan-tsan who first introduced this system of Buddhism into China. The name Than-ssan-tsan means "the knower of the three Piṭakas in the kingdom of Than." From one of Than-ssan-tsan's pupils named Khuhu-ki-fuśi, Ti-yan-Shi-han-shehu (teacher of the S'únyatá philosophy) and other learned Hwashans received instruction, and handed down the system to posterity.

IV. THE SPREAD OF THE S'UNYATÁ PHILOSOPHY.

Buddha delivered this philosophy to Manju Ghosha¹⁵ who in turn delivered it to Nágárjuna. The following were the eminent teachers of this philosophy:—

1, Nágárjuna. 2, Árya Deva, also called Níla-netra, on account of his having two spots, as large as the eyes, on both his cheeks. His real name was Chandrakírti. 3, Svámí Prajñá-raśmi. 4, the Chinese sage Yeśe-pal who was miraculously visited by Nágárjuna. 5, Yeśe-Lodoi, from whom ¹³ Variously called Pai-massi or Pimaĥ-ssi.

¹⁴ He was a member of the Than royal family.

¹⁵ The same as Manjuśri.

Ti-chi-tasi learnt it. The last was an eminent scholar who first introduced this philosophy into China and by his piety and excellent accomplishments, promoted the well-being of his countrymen. In the knowledge of the Abhidharma, there was none in China to equal him. In the practice and observance of Vinaya, he is said to have been like a Bodhisattva (saint). He became spiritual guide to the second king of Thengur in Southern China and also to king Wendhi of the Su dynasty. In moral merit he was incomparably great. He erected a monastery called Kw-chhin-ssi, on mount Thé-an-tha, and another on the hill called Yu-khyu-wan. In these two he founded thirty-six schools, and furnished them with complete copies of the Kahgyur and Tangur. He constructed 800,000 images of Buddha and Bodhisattvas and miniature chaityas, in gold, silver, brass, sandalwood, &c. He ordained 14,000 monks and had 32 principal disciples, all of whom were versed in the S'únyatá philosophy. He wrote numerous commentaries on the various branches of Buddhism, besides notes on Buddha's precepts delivered at the Mrigarshi grove, the Mahávaipulya sútra, Prajñá páramitá and Mahánirvána tantra. He also introduced the study of a series of books called "The sacrament of offering obeisance by prostrations," "Tun-min," "Tse-yanmin," "Beema," a treatise on mysticism, "Má-ne," and "Sútránta Vidyá," a complete analysis of Dharma and perfection.

At the request of Kin Wen-dhi, he wrote forty religious treatises and fifty synopses of the Prajná-páramitá, Sadharma Pundaríka, Múla Prajná, 16 &c., for the use of students of Buddhism. After labouring for thirty years in endeavouring to propagate the Mádhyamika philosophy of Nágárjuna, at the beginning of the sixtieth year of his age, 17 in the 17th year of Khai-hu-an's reign, he sat absorbed in deep meditation to pass away from this life. He vanquished the "great god" of the Chinese, named Kwan-yun-chhan, 18 or "the lord of clouds and thunder," and bound him under a solemn oath to defend Buddhism in China. He had thirty-two principal disciples of whom the following were the most remarkable for their learning and purity of life:

- (1) Tan-an-tsun-che.
- (2) Fu-hu-wá-tsun-che.
- (3) Tun-yan-the-an-tsun-che.
- (4) Cho-shi-lan-tsun-che.
- (5) Kin-shi-tsun-che.

Among his spiritual successors, one named Tha-an-thai-tsun who spread his system in the southern province of China called Kin-nan, became very eminent, while the northern part called Tun-yu-an, adopted a different school. Commencing with Ti-che, spiritual father and son, and during the five spiritual successions—viz., (1) Dhi sin-fu-sun-da-shee, (2) Yun-huwa-ti-yan-dá-shee, (3) Shi-an-she-hu-fa-tsan-dashee, (4) Chhin-li-hanchhin-kwa-shee, and (5) Ku-hi-fun-chun-meedashee, the study "' Phal-chhen" was chiefly pursued by Chinese Buddhists. The same practice has come down to the present day and it must be admitted that Phalchhen is the favourite scriptural work of the modern Chinese Buddhists. The fourth chief Hwashan, named Chhin-li-han-kwashie also known by the name of Then-kwan, meaning Vimala-drishti or "clear sight" became the abbot of Revo-tse-na, for which reason he was called Chhin-li-han-kwashie. He flourished during the reign of Than-Min-hu-an, and was well versed in the ten branches of sacred literature as well as in the science of government. Through the religious sanctity and purity of his life, he obtained sainthood. Although he did not visit India, yet he had mastered the Sanskrit language and could fluently converse in it, nor did he require any interpreter to explain Sanskrit works. He had a gigantic frame, nine cubits high; his hands hung to his knees; he possessed forty teeth; his eyes were scarcely seen to wink; and the very sight of his monstrous person struck men with awe and reverence. Throughout the country of China he was famed as a Mahá Pandita, who had no rival. The illustrious Chankya Rinpochhe Rolpai dorje, the spiritual guide of the Emperor Chhin-lun, in his hymns on the story of Revo-tse-na describes this great Pandit as an incarnation of Maitreya Buddha. Other writers believe him to have been an emanation of Manju Ghosha. Among the Chinese, he was the greatest scholar in Phal-chhen, on which subject he wrote three large commentaries. Among his principal works the following are well known:—(1) "Vows," (2) "the Mirror of Dharmat," (3) "the Mirror of Lamp of S'ástras," (4) Bodhisattva Pancha Márga, and other synopses of the triple pitakas, (5) three hundred detached treatises of S'ástras. It is universally admitted that a greater scholar in Phal-chhen never appeared in China. He lived one hundred and two years, during which time he became spiritual guide to seven kings in succession, and taught the sútrántas several times. His school is known by the name of "Shi-an-she-hu." Its tenets differ very little from those of Than-ssan-tsans, the difference being in the ways prescribed. The 21st spiritual successor of this great teacher named Khu-an-fu thai-fa-shee became celebrated for his learning. He is said to have been miraculously visited by Maitreya, while going on a pilgrimage to Revotse-na. Although the school founded by Tishi, and his spiritual son, continued for a long time, yet it wrought very little change in the religious persuasion of north and south China.

V. FIFTH SÁRÁRTHA-VÁDI SCHOOL.

This is the most ancient school of India, derived from Buddha and handed down to his spiritual successors directly. The following is the order of succession in which it has come to posterity:

Buddha, Mahákaśyapa, Ananda, Shanabastri, Madhyamáhna, Upagupta, Dhitika, Arhat Krishna, Sudarśana, Vibhaga, Buddhánanta, Buddha Mitra, Panasha, Aśva Ghosha Mashaba, Nágárjuna, Aryadeva, Rahula-bhadra, Sangánanta, Arhat Ghanasa, Kumarata, and Sha-ya-ta.

IX. ANCIENT CHINA, ITS SACRED LITERATURE, PHILO-SOPHY AND RELIGION AS KNOWN TO THE TIBETANS.¹

The name of this great country in its own language is S'en-te-hu (S'en = God, Tehu = land) or the celestial country. Some authors identify it with the fabulous Continent of Lu-phapa.

The people of Aryávarta call it Mahá Chína, where Mahá means great and China is a corruption of Tshin. Among the sovereigns of China She-'hu-hun, king of the province of Tshin, became very powerful. conquered the neighbouring countries and made his power felt in most of the countries of Asia, so that his name as king of Tshin was known to distant countries of the world. In course of time by continual phonetic change, the name Tshin passed first into Tsin and then into Chin or China, whence the Sanskrit designation Mahá Chína or Great China. Tibetans call it Gya-nag, (Gya "extensive" and nag "black") or people of the plains who dress in black clothes: for all the Chinese dress in blue or black. So also the Tibetans gave the appellation of Gya-gar to the people of India, on account of their wearing white dresses. According to the ancient historical records, many religious schools and customs originated in China. Of these, three were the most important, viz., She-hu, Do-hu The first, She-hu, partakes more of a literary than of a religious and Jin. character. We shall therefore treat it as literature. According to Sambhota, the father of Tibetan literature, letters are the origin of all science and speech: they are the rudiments of words and their significations: to the formation of letters, religion owes its success: but for the principles of reading and writing, the progress of work, knowledge and science in the world would have come to a standstill.

The first sovereign of China, King Fohi, was a very accomplished prince, possessed of an intellect quick, powerful and discerning. With the aid of his wise minister Tshankye he first invented the art of writing and gave to the letters their form, power and inflection or orthography. troduced the system of writing on bamboo slates with waxen pencils. characters were of a rounded shape called Ton-tse, and it was during the reign of Tshin-shi-hún that his minister Li-si invented the running hand which were called Li-si after his name. His General Minthe-van invented the brush pen made of hare's hair, and with ink prepared from the smoke of pine-wood painted the characters on silk cloth. Afterwards Tshai-wan of Nag-rum invented paper. Then, by the invention of a neater sort of characters called khya-i-si (and the cursive called Tsho-u-si) a more convenient and easy method of writing was introduced which gradually displaced the earlier systems. Many works were written which illustrated the simple and childish character of the earlier people. . Li-si and Minthe's systems of slow and quick handwriting were found unfit and rude and so fell into disuse.

The first king Fo-hi wrote a large treatise on the art of divination and astrology called Khyen-shan which is the earliest work of the kind known. He also wrote a book on Ethics, called "The perfect and judicious behaviour." Then appeared the five literary and moral works called by the general designation of Ookyins, viz.:—Yeekyin Shee-kyin. Shoo-kyin, Lee-kyin and Chhun-chho-u. The authorship of Yeekyin is attributed to Fohi, the writers of the remaining four being unknown. She-hu is also a well-known term for that science which treats of the regulation of the customs and manners of a nation.

CHAPTER I.

ETHICAL PHILOSOPHY.

The works on this subject are very interesting. The founder of this philosophy was the famous sage Khuñ-fu-tse (in Tibetan Koñ-tse, the latinized Confucius). He was born not long after the birth of Buddha. In the latter period of the Te-hu dynasty, during the reign of Te-hu-wiñ, Khuñ-fu-tse was born in Shan-tu one of the thirteen great divisions of China. His biography is well known every where in China and he is universally believed to have been a particularly sacred personage. The present laws of China and the ethical works, so well suited to the welfare of all classes of men, are all founded on the Code of laws first drawn up by this great philosopher. From that time to the present day, for a period of more than two thousand and five hundred years, during which time China has witnessed many political changes and revolutions, the downfall and growth of many dynasties, the laws of Khun-fu-tse have continued to regulate and govern the manners and customs of the whole community from the Emperor to the meanest subject. So wise and excellent are those laws that they have undergone little change in the course of time. Being the first and wisest preceptor of the monarchs of China, the portrait and name of Khuñ-fu-tse are adored and venerated by every sovereign who succeeds to the celestial throne. This ceremony handed down from generation to generation has got the sanction of antiquity as a heritage to the Emperors of China. The descendants of Khun-fu-tse enjoy the second order of the Empire as an hereditary honour, in token of the high regard due to the memory of the wisest man born in China. The Tibetans believe that their celebrated Sron-tsan Gampo was an incarnation of Khun-fu-tseone of miraculous birth—in whom was manifest the spirit of Chenressig, Some authors conjecture that Khun-fu-tse was the inventor of astrology from the few verses bearing his name and praise, which head almost all the astrological works of China and Tibet. He is also believed by some people to have been the inventor of handicrafts, manufacture, technology &c. It was Khun-fu-tse who first taught philosophy and literature in China, but he wrote only a few works on those subjects. His pupils and followers made copious additions to and improvements on his works, which were revised and annotated. The works so annotated and revised which served as guides to the scholars of China, are four in number, viz.:-Tashe-u, Chun-yun, Loon-yu and Men-tse. The outlines of Ta-she-u, drawn up by Khun-fu-tse himself, were enlarged by his pupil named Chontse from hints taken from him. The second work Chun-yun was composed by Tse-se. The third work Loon-yu was attributed to the joint authorship of Tse-le-u Tse kyan and Tse-sha. The fourth work Men-tse derived its name from that of its author. These writers were either Khun-fu-tse's pupils or pupils of his pupils. From the time the Te-hu dynasty was founded, literature made rapid strides in China and the number of literary works greatly increased. There grew up during this time, (as afterwards), a number of scholars (not less than 100) who interpreted these works and wrote commentaries on them. The statutes and laws which uphold the government were drawn up during the reign of Hwanku by a learned scholar named She-u-hu, on the basis of Khun-fu-tse's works. A few years afterwards, Tse-u-fu-tse, a great philosopher, wrote many original works which, even at the present day, are considered as great authorities and works of reference. Again, there are five other works, called Kan-chen, which resemble the Deb-thers or Historical records of Thibet in subject matter; besides they contain many literary and philosophical notices which come more properly under the heading of She-hu, Astrology or the art of Divination.

The earliest written encyclopædia of Astrology is the chief repository of Yeekvin, the first of the Uhú series. The art of divination called Porthan which was brought into Tibet during the reign of the Than dynasty was obtained from this great work. In early times, as stated above, there reigned in China the Hun dynasty of three kings and that of Dhi of five kings. During the reign of Fohi (whose name is also written as Hpushy), the first of the Hun kings, there came out from the great river Hé in the province of Henan (modern Ha-nan) a monster called Lun-ma having the body of a horse and the head of a dragon. On the back of this hideous monster there were eight figures or Mudrás (called Pakwas in Chinese), curiously inscribed. The eight Pakwas being multiplied to 64 by permutation, a work was written under the name of Lyan-shan (chief work). The figures on the back of the monster were called Hé-tho-hu; tho-hu in Chinese meaning "figures" and Hé being the river from which the monster issued. This earlier account of the origin of the Pakwa is called the "First Heavenly System." Afterwards a learned man by the name of Sen-non wrote a work on the Porthan, called Ku-hi-tsan, based on the first work on divination. It is also said that it was brought down by an eagle from the mountain called Swan-ywan. It is related by some writers that there is a work which was composed from the cry of an eagle. The third monarch of the Hun dynasty named Yee-khyun (written as Yihi-shyin), by accurate observation of the heavenly bodies and by assigning the distinctive signs of male and female to the five elements, formed the ten fundamentals2 (and gave the names of mouse, bull, &c., to the twelve concatenations or Dendals3 named the divisions of time, viz.,—years, months and days). ² The five elements of astrology—called Hun-thyeu-yi constructed by him for the purpose. The clocks (Tsemen chin) and watches (Pe-yo-hu) of modern China are prepared after those illustrations. Moreover, the invention of chariots, boats, forts, ten sorts of musical airs and the use of arms were attributed to him.

The later heavenly system.

The fourth king of the dynasty of Te-hu named Yo-hu-tho-huthan-shi, was, in the year tree-dragon (the first of the heavenly years according to this system of calculating time), presented with a wonderful tortoise by a man from the south named Yui-shan-she. By carefully observing the figures and marks on the tortoise's shell, which were supposed to express the names of divisions of time, the king improved the former books on astrology and the art of divination. From that year to the fire-dragon year of the 12th cycle when the Emperor Chheu-lun ascended the throne, there elapsed 4092 years. There are legends which relate that a subject presented a wonderful tortoise to king Yo-hu, but there is no record of his utilizing the marks on the shell for the purposes of astrology. It is stated that king Shi-hu-yohi obtained a wonderful tortoise of miraculous origin from the River Loo of Hanan, and by reading the astrological symbols and marks known as Pakwa, found on its shell, wrote a large treatise on "divination." He gave the name of Loo-tho-u4 to it, from Loo, the river whence the tortoise came cut.

The period during which the heaven and earth remained one and undivided,⁵ was known as Nam Na, and the period when they became separated and distinct from each other, as Nam Chhyé. During these two periods, and also previously, the science of Pakwa or astrology and divination is said to have existed in itself, in consequence of which it is considered as ever unchangeable. It is not stated in the Chinese books that the "great tortoise" is the prime cause of all things, as is fabled by Tibetan writers on astrology and the black art, after the above account of the wonderful tortoise of the Chinese from whom undoubtedly they have derived their knowledge of astrology and divination. The following are the verses on which the Tibetans, after the Chinese, base all their knowledge of astrology and of the position of the earth.

⁴ Tho-hu meaning the book of symbols and signs.

Wen-wan father of the first king of the Chigur dynasty who was a saintly personage revived the first work on astrology written by Fohi. The later heavenly system of astrology, based on the symbols and marks on the tortoise's shell, was revised and improved by Che-hu-ween. Altogether there were three great works on astrology written at three different times, the first being Le-an-shan's, the second Ku-hi-tsan's and the third Wen-wan's-all well known in China. During the latter period of the Te-hu dynasty, the wicked and stupid king of Chhen-gur in utter ignorance of the worth of astrology, and apprehending danger from the existence of astrological works which in his eyes appeared ominous and fraught with evil, ordered them to be burnt. The first two works were destroyed, but fortunately Wen-wan's work survived, and it is on this that the modern astrological works of China are chiefly based. Wen-wan's son. Chi-hu-kyun, revised and illustrated his father's work. Khun-fu-tse is said to have improved upon the writings of his predecessors, but this is questioned by some writers who doubt if he ever wrote on the subject of astrology and divination. Another painstaking author wrote a small treatise on astrology, based on Che-hu-kyun's work. One of Khun-fu-tse's pupils is said to have drawn up some astrological formulæ under the name of Shi-chin, which were ascribed by some to Khun-fu-tse himself. Probably people mistake this book for Khun-fu-tse's. Among the ancient writers of China, Fohi Wen-wan, Chi-hu-kyun and Khun-fu-tse are famed as four saintly authors. Old men of Tibet believe that the art of divination was first discovered by Manju-śrí, the god of wisdom, on the summit of Revo-tse-na. Other accounts, stating that it was given to the world by the goddess Namgyalmo (S. Vidyá) and by Padma Sambhava, also obtain credit in Tibet, but are mere fabrications, having no more truth in them than those ascribing the origin of astrology to Buddha.

Medical Works.

The second king of the Hun dynasty named Yan-dheu-shen-hun-shi was the first who wrote on medicine. To feel and understand the pulse and to divine human destiny by an intimate knowledge of the fundamental elements were the principal subjects of his works. This latter science was unknown in India and other countries. The four great classes of Tibetan medical works are said to have been based upon the above named early Chinese works. The five fundamental elements of the Chinese are quite dissimilar to those of the Indians, being tree, fire, earth, iron, and water, while ákáśa has no place. Tree probably supplies the place of wind, but it is not easy to understand how iron could be imagined to be a substitute for ákáśa.

Music.

Yu, minister of King Shun, discovered the use of the five Khin or Sanskrit Tár and the twenty-five tones of music called Shee in Chinese or Sur in Sanskrit. He wrote a book on songs and musical performances called Sho-hu. The Tha-shi dance of Tibet of the present day was based upon this Chinese mode. There also appeared many original works on rhetoric (Alankára Vidyá) in both the periods. The number of figures of speech in the Chinese language is greater than in Tibetan.

Works on history, technology, selection of lands, physiognomy, and prognostication existed from an early age. The number of works on these subjects increased in latter times, but they are not classed as great works.

She-hu or an exposition and vindication of the Confucian philosophy.

With regard to religious faith among the She-hu scholars very few persons possess the "predisposition to piety" (according to Buddhistic principles). The majority of them, content to limit their aims to this life, are careless whether their future after death be one of happiness or damnation, while others look upon this life as the consequences of Karma and Phala. They argue that had it been true, Khuñ-fu-tse and King Fo-hi would have mentioned it in their works, which contain no such account. Both King Fo-hi and Khuñ fu-tse who were distinguished for their profound wisdom and learning were, no doubt, aware of those religious principles, but omitted them in their works, owing to the people of the age not having been so far advanced as to comprehend the triple piṭakas of Dharma. The works called U.hu-jin and Ssi-shi-hu, &c., treated of such matters of worldly utility as would meet the requirements of the age they lived in, and would pave the way for the future reception of Buddhism. Fo-hi and Khuñ-fu-tse did not speak a single word against Buddhism like the unprincipled Chárvakas who reject the theory of the transmigration of souls and the inevitable consequence of Karma and Phala. Once, one of Khun-fu-tse's pupils asked him what would be the state of man after death. Khun-fu-tse answered that he could not say that there was no future existence: that it was so mysterious and unknown, that he could not hazard any opinion on it: but would presently explain all that was conceivable and open to cognition. Again once while he was explaining some metaphysical points respecting the supreme being, one of his pupils, Wuen-fu-hu, questioned him thus, "Sire, if there is a great being as you mention, what and where is he? Is he so and so?" Khun-fu-tse having replied in the negative, the pupil asked if he (Khun-fu-tse himself) was not that being; "No, how could I be like that supreme being?" replied Khun-fu-tse. "If so" retorted the pupil, "where must be ?" Khun-fu-tse said, "such a being is born in the western quarter" (by which he evidently meant Buddha). In the works of these two personages there are some mysterious passages which appear like the aphorisms of Buddhism, capable of a higher signification than the mere earthly objects they are taken to mean-The text of Yee-kyin in some respects resembles the Tantrik philosophy of the Buddhists, as has been explained by the most learned Lama Chan-kya Rolpai Dorje. During the supremacy of the Jin dynasty, two eminent Chinese scholars named Hwa Shan Fo-shen and Dhu-hu-min, wrote commentaries on both She-hu and Dohu, in which they pointed out many striking resemblances to the theories of Buddhism. In a later work called "The History of the rise and progress of religion (or Chhoijun)" being an exposition of the works of the great She-hu teacher Khun-fu-tse, it is found that his teachings were akin to those of Buddhism. Khung-fu-tse's works avowedly treat on ethics and on public utility for the benefit both of individuals and of nations, but essentially they point to saintly wysa. Those who have studied Buddhism critically, can easily perceive the similarity between Khun-fu-tse's teaching and that of Buddha, but the general readers of Khun-fu-ste may not form any sound judgment in this respect. Of the classes which go by the name of U-hu-chin, five viz., Yin, Yee, Lee, Kyi, and Sheen, are the principal works. In the Chinese language they are called U-hu-chhan or one's own doctrine, behaviour, or morality. The first, Yin, inculcates mild and gentle behaviour; the 2nd, Yee, treats of affection, cheerfulness, and good humour; the 3rd, Lee, of manners and customs; the 4th, of wisdom; the 5th, of a calm and firm mind. The four well known ethical works called Ssi-she-hu are mere applications of these five subjects. Those who in China carefully master these five subjects are regarded as sages, those who can practise them, as saints.

Origin of Heaven, Earth and Men according to the "Ye-kyin".

In the beginning, before the formation of Heaven and Earth there existed nothing but "Hun tun" or void, which evolved of itself and was in a state of chaotic agitation from eternity, until it fell into utter confusion and In this state of chaos, the order, distinction, cognition, classification and nomenclature of things were unknown. The Chinese account bears a striking resemblance to the account as to the origin of the world in all Tibetan works on mysticism that in the beginning there existed nothing except void from which the world arose. In that chaotic state there was the virtue of "The-ji" that is, the supreme nature, matter and self-existent energy. Just as we have the innate power of distinguishing different things in ourselves, so the primeval chaos possessed the virtue of giving rise to distinct existences. From its internal agitation, it produced first of all Namba (species), and nature, which were like male and female. these being endowed with a virtue like the germination of the seed by the union of the male and female elements, divided themselves into the "Tsha-shin," i. e., the fourfold distinction into (1) great male, (2) little male, (3) great female and (4) little female. Afterwards from the union of those two species sprung the Pa-kwa or Tibetan Parkha and Choo-gun or the nine mansions with forty-five gods residing in them. Thereafter from the virtue of these two, light and clearness came forth. All light substances flew upwards from the ocean of chaos, the thin and attenuated things resting on the surface. When this separation took place the upper region or Heaven (or Thain) was produced. This was called the age of the formation of Heaven (Nam Nama). All heavy (Sanskrit guru), thick, unclean and ponderous substances sank to the bottom and formed the Earth called Tee. This is called the age of the Earth's closing. When Heaven and Earth were produced, the shining lustre of the former radiated from above and the bright effulgence of the latter rose upwards. These two, united together, produced "Man." This age was called the period of the formation of Man. Heaven, Earth and Man are possessed of three virtues or potential energies and three aims (designs). In works on mysticism a similar description is given. Heaven is said to have been anciently the father and Earth the mother. These two meeting together produced a sound, whence emanated Man. Tibetan "Nam" or Chinese "Thain" means both Heaven and potential Energy. Tibetan "Sa" or Chinese "Tee" meaning Earth is purely matter that has productive powers.

Again, the blue sky (or the middle illuminated atmosphere), and the Earth are both called the world. Vulgar people say that the Heaven is of dark blue colour and the Earth four-sided. According to this system only nine heavens are mentioned without a word about their disposition. The Tibetans alone hold that there are nine strata of earth, one above another and nine heavens in regular succession. The great period counted from the beginning of the formation of Heaven, Earth and Man till their destruction is called Yi-yvan (Ævum). The measure of time in one Yi-yvan is equal to 129,600 human years of the Hindu system or "kalpa." After the destruction of Heaven, Earth and Man, Húntúñ and Theji will be convulsed to form a second chaos, from which there will be a renewed formation of the world.

Man is like the effulgence or the essence of all conglomerate matter. The Chinese do not recognize the theory of the four ways of birth, viz., from the egg and the womb and the manner of production of insects and plants. According to them, man was not born in the beginning but formed after the manner above described. The earliest writers do not appear to hold that the Heaven, formed after the dissolution of Chaos. possessed any visible appearance or magnitude, nor do they explain what will be the state of man after death. They neither enumerate the six classes of living beings, nor describe how they were produced. eminent Chinese writer called Chou-tse, who was acquainted with the works of the Buddhists wrote as follows:—After death, those portions of the mind and soul or the spiritual effulgence, obtained from the Father consisting of the Three Pránas (called Sánhaon) fly towards the skies and became absorbed in S'en (divinity), while the six parts (consisting of spiritual emanations) obtained from the mother (Lehu-pho) go down towards the earth, and mix with the spirit called "ku-hi" or the devil. All the Chinese authors attributed the happiness and sufferings of this world to The-han (Thain) or Heaven. The same theory prevails now all over China, the Heaven of the Chinese bearing some resemblance to the idea of the Supreme Being. According to them, pigs, sheep and other animals (as well as herbs and vegetables) being designed for human consumption by The-han, there is no harm in killing them. The Chinese adore many gods endowed with a visible shape among whom Yoob-Hwan is well known. They also worship a multitude of devils. They pay homage to dead bodies and, under a belief that the manes of the dead, though in Hades, can enjoy earthly pleasures, offer them meats and other edibles. Some of their customs are formed by affinity with those of their neighbours the Lalos and To-u-se. There are also some customs which are evidently borrowed from the Buddhist creed.

Khuń-fu-tse's teaching compared with the doctrines of Buddhism.

Khuñ-fu-tse in his work on the fundamental formulæ called Ta-she-hu while describing the manners and attributes of a "Teacher" says, that liberal and enlightened accomplishments depend much upon clear judgment and understanding. The doing of good and contributing to ennoble others depend first on one's own goodness and excellencies. After the acquirement of knowledge it should be retained, when it is comprehended it should be practised. When it is practised it will produce happiness, when it has imparted happiness, it can be utilized in teaching others, when it is communicated to others, knowledge is acquired. Thus by progressing further and further from the origin or beginning of learning, the ultimate object can be obtained. It is easy to understand the apparent meaning of his words which generally relate to the enumeration of moral virtues pertaining to this life, but a mystic and deeper meaning pervades them all, which may be interpreted thus:—By enlightened knowledge he meant, the clear knowing of what the true and false ways (of religion) are, which he exhaustively illustrated in his chapter on the "duties of a Teacher." By ennobling others and leading them to good &c. he meant that, in order to be able to do good to all animate beings and to lead them to the real and true end of existence, one must first himself arrive at perfection. When he has first become good, others will follow him. Having himself obtained happiness, he will be able to conduct others to happiness, who have not already obtained it. After reaching perfection himself and bringing others to it, right discrimination is attained when he will know the means of emancipating himself from transitory existence. progressing further and further he will see the beginning and end of all knowledge. From this, it is evident that Khun-fu-tse's doctrines were akin to those of the omniscient Buddha. The maxim, "First mature yourself and after you have done so, try to mature others" and others of a like nature correspond with those contained in the Maháyána philosophies.

Although the name of Buddha was unknown to Khuñ-fu-tse, yet in saying "gone to the extreme limit of knowledge" he must have meant an exalted state of being, closely resembling that of Buddha.

Thus he approached very near to Buddhism in that twilight of civilization. The Chinese scholars who, by critically studying Khun-fu-tse's works became learned, are given the title of "Shyan-shen." For having mastered the ancient classics, they are called wise men. Above all, when they have mastered the above-mentioned five classical works and can elaborately elucidate the formulæ and riddles, they are styled Sho-hu-tsha or Chwan-Thus by studying the classics they become learned, and then by acquiring a knowledge of the laws of their country, they become possessed of a knowledge of things. Having acquired both kinds of knowledge, they discharge the duties of the administration of their country. Such learning qualifies them for preferment in the government of their country. Learning alone opens to them the chances of reaching the highest offices in the land including those of Governor and Minister of State. such literary distinctions that raise men in China to rank and position in utter disregard of birth or riches. All public offices in China are in fact open to competition.

Among the theological distinctions of China the three highest are—Shyan-shen equivalent to Tib. Ge-she = neophyte.

Sho-hu-tshahi ,, Tib. Kahchu = monk who has observed the 10 Command-Chwan-ywan ,, Tib. Rabchyam = superior monk. [ments.

As by proficiency in classical studies men are raised to governorships in China, so in Tibet scholars of sacred literature are placed at the head of all religious institutions as prefects and high priests. But now-a-days the number of such erudite scholars is very small both in China and in Tibet. There are some Khun-fu-tsist saints who being profoundly read in the great classical works of China, regardless of high preferment in government service, of commercial emoluments and of the pleasures and allurements of a worldly life, betake themselves to ascetism and a life of seclusion in caverns of hills or in the solitudes of the They take such students as are willing to accompany them, and do not care if they get none. These men are like Buddhist hermits who pass their days in solitude, devoting their lives to study, meditation, and asceticism, but it must be admitted that there are few such in both countries. It appears from his writings that Khun-fu-tse had veneration for Buddha although Buddhism was not in existence in his age. works he neither remarked as in prophecy that Buddhism was good or bad. Chau-fu-tse, another writer of fame, evidently had some knowledge of Buddhism. In his writings he speaks in commendation of it rather than with any dislike. Subsequently one Cho-u-tse wrote blasphemously of Buddha. He was happy in his discussions on other matters but not in those on Buddha. He argued thus:—As the prosperity and happiness of a nation arise from the king's virtue, it is the king's first and prime duty to treat his subjects kindly. One's own body being derived from his parents, they are his great benefactors. Among his subjects those who are intelligent, industrious, learned, able and powerful should help their king in the administration of the State and in war. The people generally should in return help him with tribute, revenue and presents. Again it will be the duty of all men to respect their parents besides supporting them and ministering to their wants; and after their death to honour and pay homage to their manes and bones.—Thus his moral sayings are excellent, but at the end he rushes into blaming Buddha:-"Afterwards one S'ákya Muni, unmindful of his duties towards his king and parents and forgetful of their kindness, quitted his home and preached a religion of which selfishness is the leading feature, inasmuch as it enjoins on each man separation from the world and care for only his own food and clothing. This religion being introduced into China during the reign of the Emperor Hwan-min-yun-phin, many a family became destitute and extinct. The excellent creed of ancient times faded away as the new one progressed." But, indeed, the religion of Buddha does not specify one's duties towards his parents and the king, but aims at a wider good,—the good and well being of all living beings of the world by freeing them from miseries and sorrows not only of this present life but also of all transitory existences. The aim of Buddhism is to know how to lead all living beings from misery and grief to a state of endless beatitude. So that there is a vast difference between the doctrines of Cho-u-tse and those of Buddha, the aim of the former being as small as the point of a needle, while that of the latter is as wide as the immeasurable Heavens. writings of Cho-u-tse with the exception of some vilifying expressions towards Buddhism contains not a word of argument and refutation. only contain some erroneous views besides some commonplace principles. Since the introduction of Buddhism into China to the present day all the monarchs, with the exception of one or two, were devoted followers of the Buddhist faith in consequence of which such insane observations as those of Cho-u-tse and other profane writers, have been as ineffectual in their aims as echoes returned by rocks. Nowadays there are some among the vulgar classes who obstinately follow these stupid writers who can show no reasons but bark like old dogs.

CHAPTER II.

To-U-SE OR THE BON (PON) RELIGION OF CHINA.

The chief god or teacher of this most ancient religion of China was Lo-u-kyun. He is both god and man. As a god he is called by the name "Thai-shan Lo-u-kyun" which in Tibetan means the chief lord of goodness. He is said to have appeared when, according to the Chinese account, Heaven and Earth were first formed. Some writers identify him with the god Brahmá, which conjecture is accepted by many. In the beginning of the formation of the world the great Brahmá formed the superb mansion of the gods and thereafter the Earth, which accounts agree with those given of Thaishan Lo-u-kyun as well as with the signification of his name "Brahmá built the world." Lo-u-kyun from that period to modern times is said to have sent forth 81 emanations among which the great teacher Buddha is counted as one, just as the Brahmanists reckon him (Buddha) as one of the Avatárs of Vishnu. The human Lo-ukyun was an incarnation of the divine Thai-shan Lo-u-kyun. He is believed to have been contemporary with Khun-fu-tse. After a stay of 82 years within his mother's womb he was born when all his hair had turned grey, for which reason he was called by the nickname Lo-u-tse or the grey-haired old man. His followers addressed him by the name "Lo-ukyun" the honorific equivalent for Lo-u-tse. Having obtained 72 chapters of what are called "heavenly scriptures," from a certain cavern of a hill, he became a religious teacher and preached the religion called "To-u-se." The famous Chankya Rinpochhe Rolpai dorje observed that this Lo-ukyun is identical with S'en-rab of the Tibetan Bonpo⁷. In Chinese a sage is called Shyan-shen of which the first syllable shyan by the phonetic laws of the Tibetan has been changed into shyen, whence "śen"; śeń means rab or "excellent." Ywon-shi-then-tsun another celebrated teacher of the To-u-se religion who appeared after the founder, is also considered as one of the 81 incarnations of Lo-u kyun. The pith of To-u-se doctrine as originating from Thai-shan Lo-u-kyun is similar to that of the religion of the god The To-u-se religion obtained its greatest diffusion under two of Lo-u-kyun's incarnation called Lo-u-tse and Ywon-shi-then-tsun.

To-u-se religious theories.

The supreme being is immaterial (Arúpa), shapeless and invisible. He is self-created and matchless and most noble.⁸ In the abridged To-u-se scripture there are mentioned many gods possessing a shape, being the presiding deities of the five great mountains of China, of the four great rivers and of wind, rain and lightning, besides many powerful demons, for whom several ceremonies are prescribed. At the time of propitiation (ascetic performances) the To-u-se hermit is required to purify himself by washing his body, mouth and tongue, before beginning the mantras. Purification of the body by ablution is the principal feature of the religious rites of the To-u-ses. Having prepared for the ceremony by careful ablution &c., the devotee sits and regulates the exhaling and inhaling of his breath. He then extols and praises his own rambling "spirit," abstracts his mind, absorbs himself in deep meditation and chants the sacred mantras. In this way there grew eight saints who obtained the power of working miracles according to their will. They are called Pa-dud-shyan-shin or the eight saints. Another saint named Tan thwen-shi by skill in mysticism subdued many demons and evil spirits, all of whom he bound by solemn oaths to guard the Imperial Palace of Pekin. These demi-gods and demons even at the present day are found to stand sentry round it as of old. The descendants of Tan-thwen when they approach the palace walls, are politely received by these spirit sentinels. There are also accounts of many who acquired superhuman powers such as that of performing miracles and illusions. There are mantras and incantations for performance of the lowest classes of samádhi. But notwithstanding all these, there is not found in their scriptures the true way of emancipation which can be obtained in Buddhism alone. Witchcraft, rites and ceremonies of mysticism and concatenation of time and circumstance, besides those which are used by gods and sages in the way of Tantrikism are numerous among the To-u-ses. Among them there are two classes, the lay-people and the monks. The latter take vows of piety and discipline which they scrupulously observe.

⁷ [See Vol. L, p. 187; also ibidem, p. 195, note 5. Ep.]

An Episode.

During the reign of the great Han, a heretical Pandit of Singala-dvípa called Mahá Bráhmaṇa arrived in China. He was warmly received by the king Yo-hu-chhañ, whom he exhorted to introduce his doctrine all over China. During this time the celebrated sage Hwashañ Dha-hu, who was versed in the Vedas of the Tírthikas was present. He held long discourses in most of the heretical S'ástras of the Tírthikas with the Singalese Pandit. The controversy was conducted in the Sanskrit language in which the Chinese sage debated with fluency and facility. The heretical Pandit was defeated, which he publicly acknowledged by prostrating himself before the learned Hwashañ. The king greatly rejoiced at the Hwashañ's triumph over the Singalese who was ignominiously expelled from the country. It was for this reason that Brahmanical doctrines obtained no footing in China. They are not known there even at the present day.

CHAPTER III.

Ho-u-se or Hoi-Hoi religion of China.9

During the reign of the Than dynasty in one of the wars, a large army was brought to China from the country of Tho-kar (Sita or Turkistan) which, unable to return to their homes, settled in China. Their descendants gradually multiplied and formed a large tribe who were known by the appellation of Housi or Hoi-Hoi. Again, the great warrior Jengis Khán after conquering the countries in the West when returning home brought with him a man of the country of Siyang which is an Island. This man, being versed in a kind of religion in which The-yau-nu the lord of Heaven was adored by all, taught the principles of the Hoi-Hoi which became their adopted religion. Their descendants followed this religion and much of the Chinese religion came to be mixed with it, but the Chinese though dwelling with them did not become a whit connected with them in their religion and manners.

Religious theories of the Hoi-Hoi people.

They believe that all happiness and misery, good and evil, are the doing of The-han. The god The-han dwells in Heaven and in all things. The Hoi-Hoi people will never act contrary to the word of The-han. do not take refuge with any worldly gods nor worship nor bow down before them. The souls of all the dead are collected by The-han, who ordains their second existence. They are to be re-born when this world will be re-created by him after destruction, and within this interval the souls of the dead will remain mixed with the void space of Heaven. Some among them also believe that men are born very often, and that all their senses and faculties are lost at each break of existence. They send the spirits of all animals killed by those who belong to their faith to The-han who takes charge of them. The spirits of those that are killed by others, who are not Hoi-Hoi are damned. A Hoi-Hoi will not eat the flesh of an animal that has been slain by outsiders. If they remain unclean The-han becomes displeased. It is therefore of great importance to them to wash and keep aloof from unholy things. Besides these they have no knowledge of the transitory state of existence, the misery, and the confinement and emancipation, of the soul. They possess not the learning of the Tírthikas, or the materialists, but resemble the Yavanas (Lalos). These wicked people certainly turn into pigs after their death for which reason they do not touch pork, the touch of which brings defilement, and the eating of which destroys their intellect and understanding.

⁹ This is a form of Muhammadanism.

X.—LIFE AND LEGEND OF NAGARJUNA.1

When the dynasty of Aśoka waned and gave place to that of the illustrious Chandras, Nágárjuna was born in Central India destined to play an important part in the religious history of Buddhism. According to the Tibetan historians who wrote on the authority of Indian historians, he was born a century before Chandra Gupta's accession to the throne of Magada. But to conform his age to the conjectural chronology of the occidental orientalists one would be required to bring that date more than a century later than Alexander's invasion of India. Nágárjuna's age must remain a positive uncertainty as long as we cannot get hold of the historical works of the Indian authors of the Buddhistic period. I am sanguine of being able to bring to light much about Buddhistic history from the works about Nágárjuna and other Indian philosophers. For the present I will only mention certain legendary accounts of Nágárjuna which I have gathered from detached sources.

A rich Bráhman of the Vidarbha country to whom no son had been born for many years, once saw in a vision, that if he gave alms to, and entertained one hundred Bráhmans, he could get a son. Accordingly he made offerings and prayers to the gods and entertained one hundred Bráhmans. After ten months his wife gave birth to a son. The rich man invited learned astrologers to predict the fortune of his child, but they found that it would not live more than a week. In all other respects the child was calculated to be fortunate. In consequence of this sad intelligence, the minds of the parents were overwhelmed with extreme sorrow, and in their deep anxiety they urged the astrologers to discover some remedy to save the child. The astrologers assured them that if they observed some religious ceremonies and paid money for virtue's sake, read religious books, and entertained one hundred Bráhmans, the child would live seven months, and if they entertained one hundred Bhikshus, it would live seven years, beyond which its life could not be prolonged by any means whatever. They accordingly underwent all sorts of ceremonies and observances calculated to prolong the child's life. When the seventh year was about to expire the parents were overwhelmed with grief.

To avoid the painful sight of their son's predicted death, they caused him to be removed to a certain solitary place in company with a few retainers. As the boy was passing his mournful days, one day the Mahábodhisattva Avalokiteśwar Khasharpana visited him in disguise and advised him to go to the great monastery of Nálendra in Magadha as the surest means of escaping from the hands of death. He accordingly repaired to that famous Vihára and arriving at the gate recited some gáthás. During that time the great sage S'rí Saraha Bhadra was the high priest of Nálendra. Hearing the gatha the sage sent for the boy who was accordingly brought to his presence. Saraha asked him who he was and what brought him there, on which the boy gave a faithful account of his life and the melancholy aspect which overhung his fate and which he was painfully anxious to The sage advised him to enter the holy order of monks, which act alone could deliver him from the hand of death. The boy took the vows of monkhood. Saraha, then invited him to the worship and service of Buddha Aparimita Ayusha and secured him his blessings. He required the boy to recite holy mantras and gáthas in honour of that Buddha from sunrise to sunset, within which time the fatal moment was predicted to The boy remained engaged in reading sacred books and reciting gáthas without falling asleep. The fatal moment passed. The messenger of death did not arrive or could not sieze his victim. This happy news was conveyed to his parents whose hearts now overflowed with joy. The great high-priest Saraha then ordained him a Bhikshu of the Nálendra Vihára. Here he prosecuted his religious studies under the tuition of that great sage. After a few years service he obtained the subordinate office of head steward of the congregation. During the first part of the tenure of office, Nágárjuna is said to have propitiated the goddess Chandiká, by whose agency he succeeded in providing the great body of priests with the necessaries of life. The propitiation took some time, after which the goddess presented herself before him in obedience to his call. Enslaved as it were by the force of the propitiatory rites of Nágárjuna, she submissively asked if she was to carry him to heaven. So saying she prepared to transport him thither. The sage not caring for his own happiness and ever mindful of his duties, exclaimed, "Bold goddess, I will not go to the celestial regions, I called you to help me in the propagation of Dharma on this earth." He then built a lofty stone temple in honour of Bodhisattva Manju S'rí, in the court of which he pitched a thick pointed wooden club to fix the goddess, as it were, to her appointed terrestrial duties by the spell of mystic charms. He then addressed the goddess Chandiká,—"O thou divine nymph, I bid thee to look to the supply of provisions for the great congregation. Thou shalt not leave thy post till this club becomes reduced to dust." Chandiká accordingly, in the guise of a beautiful damsel began her homely work. During her temporary residence within the environs of the monastery, the chief cook of the congregation was enchanted with her personal charms. He spared no pains or means to win her favour, with the sensual object of enjoying her person. The maiden refused his addresses several times, but at the end consented on the condition that he should reduce the said club The deluded cook not knowing the secret connected with the club, instantly burnt it to ashes. The maiden now set free from this bounden duty assumed her celestial shape radiant in angelic glory that was too strong for mortal eyes to bear, and ascended to her ethereal home, leaving the disappointed lover to stare at her with surprise. No sooner did this affair take place than Nágárjuna by dint of his divine eyes came to know of it. order to retrieve the loss, he visited the courts of kings, princes, and nobles of Magadha and other Buddhist countries, from whom he obtained annuities and donations for the support of the great body of monks at Nálendra. He constructed a gigantic image of of Mahákála whom he charged with the defence of his religion. During the latter part of his office the country was visited by a famine in consequence of which the monks fell into great The manager became very thoughtful about the terrible effects of the natural calamity. Distress and scarcity compelled the congregation more keenly to feel the necessity of money. The monks now determined to devise some means of acquiring treasures for the support of the famished congregation, and Nágárjuna accordingly started on an expedition to visit an island in the great ocean where lived a great saint well versed in the art of alchemy. As the sea could not be crossed by any earthly means, he, by dint of his divine learning, got two leaves of an enchanted tree, by means of which he crossed the ocean and miraculously visited the island and presented himself before the sage who was greatly surprised to see a human being arrived at his abode deemed inaccessible to mortal The sage earnestly inquired how he succeeded in achieving this wonder. Nágárjuna replied respectfully stating to him the reasons of his visit and the circumstances that brought him thither. He also showed him one of the enchanted leaves, concealing the other in his mendicant's platter. He begged him to teach him the art of turning metals into gold. The sage consented to the proposal, but not liking to let the wonderful art be known in Jambudvípa, he determined to detain him for ever in the island by depriving him of the enchanted leaf. To effect this, he said that he could teach the art of alchemy provided Nágárjuna consented to part with his leaf. Nágárjuna consented, and was taught the When it was fully mastered he flew towards the Indian Continent by the help of the remaining leaf. Returning to Nálendra, by means of his easily acquired wealth he supported the whole body of monks. By his religious practices he obtained siddhi (perfection). He refuted the theories of S'ankaráchárya and imparted religious instruction to the monks of Nálendra. The Nágas used to attend his sermons in the shape of young boys. They were so much interested in his teaching that they invited him to their abode where he spent three months. They entreated him to settle permanently in Nága land (the nether world) which offer he declined on the ground of his being required to preach the sacred religion in Jambudvípa, and erect religious edifices for the good of living beings. At the time of his departure he promised to return there some time in future. He returned to Nálendra loaded with costly presents and gems of inestimable value and also with the religious volume called Nágasahasriká. It was for this connection with the Nágas that he obtained the name of Nágárjuna.

In the country of Rádha he erected many chapels and chaityas. On his way to Uttarakuru, in the city of Salama or Salamana, he met with a boy named Jetaka, by examining the marks of whose palms, he predicted that the boy would one day become a king. Arrived in Uttarakuru he went to bathe in a river after placing his raiments on a tree. As he was making his ablutions he saw a native taking his clothes away, at which he stopped him begging him not to remove his raiments. The native greatly wondered that Nágárjuna should claim his clothes. For in Uttarakuru there is no distinction of individual property. There all property is In Uttarakuru Nágárjuna stayed for three months and instructed the people in the sacred religion. On his return he found that the boy Jetaka had become a king as he had predicted. Jetaka, having great faith in his saintly character, presented him with costly treasures. Nágárjuna returned to his country and erected many chaityas and temples, composed many works on science, medicine, astronomy and alchemy. After the death of Saraha Bhadra, the office of high priest fell upon Nágárjuna which he managed with great ability and indefatigable zeal. He matured the Mádhyamika philosophy which was only conceived by his illustrious teacher Saraha.

Although he was the head of the now wide-spreading faction, of the Maháyána school, yet he did not fail to exert himself for the well-being of the Srávakas or the followers of the Hínayána school, by which name the Srávakas henceforth came to be distinguished. They equally enjoyed the bounties of his saintly character. He established discipline among his own congregation by expelling eight thousand monks whose character, nay purity of morals, was open to suspicion. By these acts he became the recognized head of the whole Buddhist church. About this time the germ of a third schism was manifested among his followers which eventually developed itself as the Yogáchárya school.

During the presidency of Nágárjuna, Vajrásana (Buddha Gayá) was the head quarter of the Srávakas or the followers of the Hínayána (little vehicle) school, but having fallen into decay, Nálendra in wealth and splendour eclipsed the seat of Buddha's hermitage. Once a wild elephant was found to damage the sacred Bodhi-druma (tree of wisdom), when Nágárjuna caused two stone pillars to be erected for its support. This expedient answered well for several years, when, on the repetition of a similar injury, Nágárjuna surrounded the great temple Mahágandhola or the mansion of fragrance with a stone railing which he furnished with Vajragaváksha or the precious niches, and outside of which he erected 108 smaller chapels. He also surrounded the great shrine of S'rídhányakataka with railings.

Again, there having occurred an encroachment of the river Nairanjana on the east of Vajrásana which threatened the safety of the most holy spot, Nágárjuna constructed seven huge images of Buddha hewn from rocks, and placed them facing the river in order to make the river, out of fear, change its devastating course. During this period, Manja king of Otisha (Orisha) with one thousand of his subjects embraced Buddhism. In the west, in the country of Malva in the city of Dhára, king Bhojadeva with many hundreds of his subjects embraced Buddhism. These conversions are attributed to the saintly influence of Nágárjuna who wrote many volumes on the Mádhyamika philosophy, such as Múla Jñána, sixth assemblage of Vidyá, Dharma dhátu strotra, Sútra sangraha, &c. erected many viháras in Pratápesa, Otisha, Bangala, and the country of Ikshuvardhana. In the latter part of his life Nágárjuna visited Dakshina (Southern India), where he did many things for the preservation of the Southern congregation (of Buddhists). In the country of Drávida there lived two Bráhmans of the name of Madhu and Supramadhu, the fame of whose opulence had startled even the kings and princes of the day. They held a series of discussions with Nágárjuna on the four Vedas and the eighteen sciences of the Bráhmans, in all of which they found themselves infinitely inferior to the Buddhist disputants. At the end they remarked that they really wondered how a S'ramana of Sakya Simha could possess such profound knowledge in the Vedas and S'ástras. Nágárjuna replied—It was very easy to master the Brahmanical S'ástras, but the sacred Dharma was too profound to be comprehended. He at last succeeded in converting them to Buddhism. Madhu having propitiated the goddess Sarasvati, acquired great knowledge in the sacred literature of the Bráhmans and Buddhists; Supramadhu by propitiating Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth, obtained immense wealth with which he fed the Buddhist congregation. The former prepared many copies of Prajñá Páramitá. One hundred and fifty monks conducted religious service in their chapels. Thus the great teacher Nágárjuna being eminently versed in all the classes of sciences and the S'ástras, filled Jambudvípa with trophies of his pious deeds. His assiduity in asceticism, erudition in science, faith in Dharma, profundity in Yoga, acuteness in disputation, liberality in giving alms, constructing shrines and chaityas, and furnishing of food to the congregations were all incomparable. He is given the appellation of a second Buddha; for he consolidated what Buddha had only commenced.

Nágárjuna is said to have been a great friend of king De-chye (Sankara) of Southern India, whom he had converted to Buddhism. Both the friends took vows of meeting a common lot, i. e., to live and die together. Nágárjuna being a saint, no messenger of death ever ventured to approach him. The friends therefore attained to unusual longevity, during which time the king witnessed successively the death of his many wives, children and grandchildren. In his old age the king got a son who alone fortunately survived him. Once the mother of this prince (named in Tibetan Zon-nu-den-chye, i. e., "the throat-cutting young prince") prepared a handsome robe which she desired him to wear. The prince did not use it, saying, that he would use the robe when he became a king. The mother, with a deep sigh, exclaimed-"Son, how vain is that hope! Thinkest thou, my darling, that the king thy father will ever die. He has obtained immunity from death, which awaits all mortal beings but himself." The prince replied,—" Mother, must I not rule as a king since I am born as a prince? Live or die, I shall be a king." Seeing the son's resolution, the mother revealed to him the secret of her husband's death and said,—"Go and beg Nágárjuna's head, and that shall quicken thy succession to the throne." The prince accordingly went off at once in search of Nágárjuna and found him on the top of S'riparvata. Approaching the venerable S'ramana, he asked him to present him with his head. Nágárjuna, knowing what brought him there, consented.

The prince tried several strokes of his sword to cut the saint's throat, but in vain. Nágárjuna, seeing the ignorance of the prince, shewed him the secret which could effect the cutting off of his head, by saying, -" Prince, hundreds of such swords would not sever my head from the body, but go and bring that kuśa grass, which alone will effect it." In one of his former births Nágárjuna is said to have killed a worm by cutting its throat with a kuśa grass. On account of the inevitable consequences of Karma in this life, that very worm was born as the prince who severed his head from his trunk with the kuśa grass. At the time of death Nágárjuna told the prince that he would rise again in a future time and his head would again be one with his body. As the prince was carrying off the head, it was snatched away by a Yaksha who threw it to a distance of five miles, where the saint's remains turned to stone. It is mentioned in the Book of Prophecies that the head is now in the course of drawing every day nearer the trunk to effect its junction. Verily it may be said of Nágárjuna that when the junction takes place, the city of Gayá will be blown up by Gayásura or the demon of Gayá. It is said that Nágárjuna will again appear in India, and live one hundred years, to teach the sacred Dharma to men and gods.

XI.—DETACHED NOTICES OF THE DIFFERENT BUDDHIST SCHOOLS OF TIBET.

All the Buddhist Tantras that were translated into Tibetan under the auspices of king Khrisron-ede btsan and his successors till the advent of Pandit Smriti into Tibet, were designated gSan-snago sna-hgyur of rNyin mahi-rgyud or "the anciently translated Tantras." All the Tantras translated by Rinchhen-ssanpo and the generations of translators who followed him, were called gSan-snags phyi-hgyur or Sar mahi rgyud. For this reason it will be evident that the difference of rNin-ma and gSarma schools lies in the Tantras only, while the Sútras are the same in both.

The Tantras of the gSarma school are clearly analysed in the bKaḥ-hgyur, and the original of the rNinma Tantras composed in Aryávarta were rendered into Tibetan purely and faithfully. They are the following:

(1.) Rigs pahi-Khu-Vyug.(2.) Tsal-chhen-dKrugs-kyi-rgyud.

(3.) Khyun-chhen-ldiug-vahi-rgyud.

(4.) rDo-la-gser-shun-rgyal mahi-rgyud.

- (2.) rDorje-phur-pai-rgyud.
- (3.) rTa-mgrin-gyi-rgyud.

Also—

gSer-yid-chan; gyu-yig-chan; du \hat{n} -yig-chan, &c. of modern origin, make up thirty-five in number. Six volumes of bKa \hat{n} -hgyur treating of Tantras are also claimed by the \hat{N} i \hat{n} mapas.

Besides the above-mentioned there are said to be other Tantras which being concealed by ancient sages, are not known at present.

All these Tantras are said to have been delivered by Dharma Káyá, Kuntu-ssangpo (Buddha Samanta bhadra), Vajra Sattva, and Vajradhara, &c.

The Ñiĥmapas who all belong to the Yogáchárya school of ancient India observe Tantrik ceremonies exclusively. They have nine series of Jñána, and speak of thirteen Bhúmis or stages of sainthood, while the Gelugpa (or the reformed sect) speak only of ten Bhúmis.

The Ninmapas have various ceremonies for propitiating their tute-lary deities who are divided into two classes called Si (the mild) and Phro (the wrathful) Yi-dam-kyi-Lha. They have various other kinds of rules and ways of asceticism. All the Ninma Tantras being based upon the Man-nag scriptures, by their means numberless Indian and Tibetan (male and female) saints are said to have obtained the lowest class of perfection called "Thun-mon-gi-dnos grub."

In ancient India Achárya Káma Vajra, Buddha Guhya, S'rí-siddha, Padma-sambhava, Vimala-mitra, &c., many Pandits, many kings headed by Indra Bhúti, and many fairies were the most important personages; and in Tibet, king Sroñ-btsan sGampo, Khri sroñ-ede-btsan, together with his 25 saintly subjects, 108 gter-ston or discoverers of sacred treasures, Rah hbyams pa the professor of kLoñ-scriptures, Dharma gri the great translator, gYuñ-ston-rDorje-dpal, sLe-luñ bshad pai-rDorje, mGonpo rdorje of Yu-thog, Ka-thog rig-hzin-chhen mo, rDor-brag-Rig hzin, Lha-btsun-chhenpo, and others. Many sages of the Sarma school also had turned Niôma religionists.

The Ninma sages, who had fully studied the above mentioned Tantras, had prepared commentaries on them and left their own observations in works written by them for the benefit of coming generations. It was the sage of Orgyan¹ who wrote volumes on the rZogs chhen or Atiyoga sect of the Ninma school. It is mentioned in the histories of religion that that sage, having written his profound interpretation of the Buddhist Tantras, in a kind of fairy language, unintelligible to man, had concealed these books securely under rocks and pillars for the benefit of future generations of Buddhists. He had also left predictions, respecting the name and date of birth of the man by whom those books were to be discovered. After completing all that was necessary for the continuance of the Ninma school, he retired to the land of cannibals on the south-west. Afterwards in regular succession, as was predicted by him, a host of gTer-stons appeared and greatly contributed to the propagation of his school and the swelling of the Ninma scriptures, which altogether exceed five hundred volumes in number.

For these reasons it is believed that the rest of the Ninma school is extremely pure. But latterly some persons, calling themselves qTer-ston to gain notoriety and to be called sages, mixed many spurious and false theories with the ancient ones. Those pretended qTer-stons not agreeing among themselves, out of envy and enmity to each other, enjoined many obscene observances under the garb of religion. They gave out that the Tantras prescribed unrestrained libertinism as the easiest and surest mode of salvation. Female modesty was no consideration to them at all. For a time, by their influence, the teachings of the Sútras (Amdo-scriptures) were set aside in preference to those diabolical Tantras which were considered to be the direct means of Nirvána. For this reason the monks gave up taking the vows of celebacy and moral discipline. The laws of Dulva were entirely neglected. Particularly after Lan-darma's persecution of the Buddhists of Tibet, some Tantriks, in the heat of debauchery and drunkenness, had composed many spurious Tantras, putting into writing the ravings of their intoxicated brains. Again during the revival of Buddhism, when the Sarma system of schools was about to be diffused in Tibet, certain Tantriks composed several works in which many strange elements were introduced. In them the Thin-rje-chhenpo of the mNinmapas, the Brahma Tantras of the Brahmans, the mysticism of the Bonpo were mixed together, in consequence of which those works no longer resembled the ancient works on Tantras. From these sprung the ceremonies of Khregs chhod and Mun khrid, &c. Those who practised the magical sorceries founded on them were notorious for their arrogance and wicked impositions. When their wickedness was exposed by the great Reformer, the two Ñinma Lamas, named Pesna Linpa and Shakya-mchhog eDan, jointly conspiring against him, gave out to the world that Tsonkhapa was a real demon incarnate, whose sworn mission was the working of the downfall of Buddhism in Tibet.

The same two Lamas also wrote a volume of about 500 leaves about the reformations, charging Tsonkhapa with many kinds of blasphemies. They even went so far as to say that the crown which he put on the image of Jovo (Lord) Sákya Muni, was rivetted on its head with coppernails, that the flowers that were daily showered on it fell owing to the sorceries, as so many thorns. They predicted that on account of these impious acts, the Buddhist religion was destined to collapse after 500 years from that date, and that shortly the sun, moon and stars would fall a hundred (Tibetan) miles below their ordinary paths. To this work they gave sanctity by declaring that it was discovered to be a book of ancient prophecy, classed under Ninma Terma scripture. Many right-thinking and honest Ninma Lamas question the validity of this work, although the uninformed and the ignorant Ninma followers believe in its predictions and do not hesitate to slander the Gelugpa school. The Gelugpa writers successfully refuted all the charges contained in that work and exposed the malice of its blasphemous authors.

From that time, on account of the doctrinal differences between the Ninma and Sarma schools, especially between the former and the reformed school (Gelugpa), disputes and controversies commenced. Most of the eminent writers of Tibet are of opinion that the great body of Ninma scriptures were alloyed with strange and spurious writings, and there are very few books which have any pretensions to originality or antiquity. Among those which are said to be very pure may be classed the following:

- (1.) dKon-mChhog-spyi hDus, 6 vols.
- (2.) mKhah-hGro sNyin-thig.
- (3.) Lho-gTer.
- (4.) Bima sÑin-thig.
- (5.) kLón-Chhen-sÑin-thig.
- (6.) gYu-thog sÑin-thig.
- (7.) Byan-gTer-gyi Chhos skor.
- (8.) gTer-bDag-gLin pahi-chhos skor.
- (9.) Nam-chhos kyi-skor.
- (10.) rGyal-va-eNa vahi-rÑiĥ-vahi-chhos kyi skor.
- (11.) rTa-mgrin chhos-skor &c., and many others.

The study of the above-mentioned books is believed to be very efficacious to ascetics, in obtaining sainthood. In profundity of import these books are unrivalled by other religious works of the same school. Among the best and purest of Niînma monasteries are (1) sMin-grol gLiîn, (2) rDorjebrag, (3) Kham-ka-thog, (4) S'hi-chhen-rtsogs chhen, &c. and many others of less fame. In these monasteries, moral discipline and religious strictness are greatly observed, in consequence of which their resident monks are said to have great pretensions to purity of life.

The Nyingmas schools have voluminous works called Upaneshas on the subtlety of rites.

In the Sarma or modern school are included the following sects, b KaligDams pa, b Kah-brGyud pa, Sakya-pa, Karma pa, Jonañ pa, dGelugpa, &c. The principal theories and rules of these sects are:

- (1.) Constant meditation about the attainment of Bodhisattva-hood (sainthood).
- (2.) Uninterrupted attention to compassion towards all living beings.
- (3.) Reverence and adoration to the great and precious Holy Being, called dKon-mChhog.
- (4.) The renouncing of worldly enjoyments and business, and residence in solitude to limit the sphere of doing and desires.

- (5.) The external observance and conduct of life to accord with the laws of Dulva (Vinaya teachings.)
- (6.) Internally, the full comprehension of the metaphysical portion of the Tantras called bskyed rim and rtsogs rim.
- (7.) The practice of the meditative science or yoga, holding the theories of universal illusiveness and voidity (S'únyatá).
- (8.) The comprehension of the essence of the Mádhyamika philosophy by which the attainment of sainthood is ensured.

bKan-gDams pa Sect.

This sect was founded by the great Indian Pandit Dipánkara Srí Jñána (Jova-rje-dPal-edan Atiśa of the Tibetans). There are records of over three thousand Lamas of eminence and learning in the annals of this sect. Among them hBrom-ston-rgyal-vai-hbyuñ-gna Potopa the philosopher, and sPyan-mÑah-va, &c. were very celebrated.

bKan-broyud pa Sect.

Of this sect, the sages rDoje-hChha \hat{n} -chhen, Telopa, N \acute{a} ropa, Marpa, Mela Dvags po Lha-rje, &c. were the successive presidents. Marpa having obtained a good deal of religious instruction from Ati \acute{a} , mixed the bKa \acute{b} rGyud theories with those of the bKa \acute{p} -gDams sect.

The Darśana of this sect is called Mahá-mudra (Phyag-rgya-chhenpo). This is divided into two classes called Sontri-Mahámudra and Tantri-Mahámudra, the latter of which they reject. On the whole the significations of the Mahámudra resemble those of the S'únyatá theories.

Its meditative science is similar to those of the Prasanga Mádhyamika school of ancient India.

The chief Yedam or tutelary deities of this sect are the Lord of Guhya Samája-sbDemchhog (Sambhara) and rDorje-Phagmo, &c.

Its guiding instructions called Man-ñag were drawn up by the sage Náropa, for which they are called Náro-chhos-drug. Anciently this sect possessed the greater number of sages, ascetics and scholars, many of whom had obtained sainthood. At one time its monks numbered several hundreds of thousands. The Lamas of this sect pay more attention now to the meditative science, and less to Vyákaraṇa and other branches of sacred literature. Although at one time bKaḥ-brgyud pa Lamas were eminently famous for their knowledge of metaphysics and Darśana, yet now-a-days there are not many who can fairly claim the distinction of sages. In fact they more resemble the shadows of their predecessors. They generally mix with the Ñiĥma Lamas in perverse and forbidden conduct, such as female company, drinking intoxicating liquors, &c.

SAKYA SECT.

This sect derives its name from the name of the place of its origin. It is an offshoot of the bKah-brgyud pa sect in a reformed state.

The tutelary deities, generally invoked by the followers of this sect, are Kye-rdorje (Hé Vajra), Phyagna rDorje (Vajra Páṇi) &c.

That rotatory existence and emancipation from it are inseparable, is its chief theory. Leading instructions are taken from the works called gSer-chhos-bChug-sum. The Lamas of this sect are tolerably learned in sacred literature. The ancient monks of this sect are said to have obtained sainthood by propitiating the fairy Náro-mkhah sphyodma. The monks in general are known to be little strict in the observance of the laws of Dulva. They drink, and mix and live with women.

Gelugpa School.

This is at present the dominant school of the Buddhists in Tibet. It was founded by the celebrated reformer Tsonkhapa and obtained great diffusion under his chief disciples, one hundred and fifty in number, among whom the Regent Darma Rinchhen, the sage Gelegpalssan, Gedundub, &c., were most eminent. Tsonkhapa found that by the eccentricities of the Tantrik (Ninma), Buddhism in Tibet had greatly degenerated, so much so that it could hardly claim the name of Buddhism at all. Its divergence from the tenets of Buddha was too wide to enable any student of Buddhism to reconcile it with any sort of Buddhism that then prevailed in the north. With great pains he succeeded in organizing a reformation which struck the older schools by the root. His works on the different branches of the sacred literature were in accordance with the Kahgyur and Tanyur.

The Lamas and monks of his school were very accomplished in tenets, the observance of ceremonies and the science of meditation. Their moral discipline, behaviour and attention to study were exemplary. They were also experts in argumentative philosophy. Under Tsonkhapa's direction they made new annotations on the important portions of Kahgyur and Tanyur and the various works on Tantras. The great monasteries of Tibet, Sera dapunj, Guhdan Tashilhumpo, and those of Kham, Amdo-Mongolia and China, altogether numbering more than one thousand, adopted the reformed creed. Under his disciples and their disciples within a few years, more than 10,000 monasteries adopted the reformed tenets. The largest of these monasteries contained 10,000 monks, the smallest respectable ones not less than 800. In these Gelugpa monasteries, the study of Tantras, Mantras, Kálachakra, medicine, &c. was greatly encouraged. The Gelugpa religious ceremonies were conducted according to the prescribed directions of the sacred books. Such extraordinary success as attended Tsonkhapa's reformation was not known, not to speak of Tibet, in the annals of Ancient India since the Nirvána of Buddha.

The Emperor of China, Princes of Mongolia, and other great patrons of Buddhism paid tribute to his honour. Tsonkhapa is said to have appointed under a solemn covenant a great number of gods, demons, demigods and fairies to defend the sacred religion. In the other sects, when an enemy invaded the sacred precincts, the monks generally used to escape by flight. Some of these sometimes killed their enemies by propitiating demons and evil spirits, and by the practice of sorceries and the black art. But such proceedings being contrary to the precepts of Buddha, the cursed perpetrators eventually had to go to hell.

The followers of the Sakya sect and the Gelugpas were free from the guilt of such infernal practices.

Manbodh's Haribans.—By G. A. GRIERSON, C. S. PART I.—Text.

The following poem is in the Maithilí dialect of the Bihárí Language. It was written by a poet named Man'bodh, or Bholan Jhá, the fourteenth and last of his race. He lived at Jam'sam, close to the well-known village of Pandaul in the Madhubaní subdivision of the Darbhangá-District. He married a daughter of one Bhikhárí Jhá, and died without issue about the year 1195 F. S. (circ. A. D. 1788). This date is borne out by the fact that a grandson of this same Bhikhárí Jhá died only four years ago, a very old man. Beyond the details of the names of his ancestors, which are kept by the Maithil genealogists, I have obtained no further information concerning him. He is said by tradition, to have translated the whole of the Harivamsa into Maithil verse, and extracts from the translation are current and extremely popular throughout northern Mithilá. I have never met with a complete copy of the whole work, and I fear the latter portion of it is lost beyond recovery. After some years' search I have been able, through the kind assistance of Bábú S'rí Náráyana Simha of Jogiyárá, to obtain accurate copies of two MSS., which I shall designate as A and B. A, which I have taken as the foundation of my text, is much the more correct of the two, and contains the first ten adhyáyas. B is not so carefully written, has one or two lacunæ, and only contains nine adhyáyas, the tenth being missing. A is therefore, my only authority for that portion of the text. With the exception of the lacunæ above-mentioned, the two MSS. agree very closely. Any important differences will, however, be duly noted.

The poem is deserving of special attention, as an example of the Maithilí of the last century, affording a connecting link between the old Maithilí of Vidyápati, and the modern Maithilí of Harkh'náth and other writers of the present day. It contains some forms which have survived from times prior even to Vidyápati, and which hence have especial interest.

I purpose at an early date to publish a translation, with notes illustrating and explaining the many grammatical difficulties which are found in it. I shall, therefore, not deal with the subject of Manbodh's Grammar at present, and, with regard to the subject matter of the text, it will be sufficient now to say that it contains the usual familiar legends of the incarnation and life of Kṛishṇa, from the first promise of Vishṇu to become incarnate, to the first defeat of Jarásandha. It thus corresponds roughly with a little more than the first half of the tenth book of the Bhágavata, or with chapters 57 to 93 of the Harivaṃśa.

The metre of the poem is uniform throughout. It is a variety of the Chaupái Chhand, containing fifteen instants in each half line, with a break after the sixth. The last three instants in each half rhyme with each other, and usually take the form of one long syllable, and one short, thus — U. Sometimes, however they take the form of three short syllables, thus U U : but in every case the last syllable must be short. Usually but not always, the eleventh and twelfth instants also consist of two short syllables.

I have used the signs \mathfrak{P} , \mathfrak{T} , and \mathfrak{T} , for the short vowels \mathfrak{E} , $\mathfrak{A}\mathfrak{I}$, \mathfrak{I} $\mathfrak{A}\mathfrak{U}$, peculiar to Eastern Gaudian languages. Their non-initial forms are $\mathfrak{E} = \mathfrak{A}\mathfrak{I}$, \mathfrak{I} , \mathfrak{I} , and \mathfrak{I} $\mathfrak{A}\mathfrak{U}$ respectively. These signs have already been used by me in my grammars of the Bihár dialects now being published by the Government of Bengal, and are not new, having (with the exception of \mathfrak{P}) been used by Dr. Hoernle for similar purposes in his Gaudian Grammar.

The use of the sibilants was very uncertain in the copies of the poem which were available; w and w, and again w and w being freely interchangeable without any system. I have therefore in every case taken customary pronunciation as the surest guide:—always altering uncompounded w to w, and uncompounded w to w. In a few foreign words like wit 'outcry,' w has been retained; and, out of deference to strong prejudice, I have allowed the customary spelling of the words w, and words to remain, though the present Maithil pronunciation, is certainly word, and from respectively.

The vowel Ξ is never pronounced in Maithilí, the sound $\widehat{\tau}$ being used instead; in fact, Ξ is, as often as not, not only pronounced but written $\widehat{\tau}$. Under these circumstances, I have adopted the less pedantic, and more rational spelling.

As regards the quantity of vowels for the purposes of scansion, with the exception of आ, they all tell their own tale when before a single consonant. In may be either long or short for metric purposes, but in the termination আই of the preterite it is always short.* There are many examples of short so throughout the poem: an example of the 1st class is used (1, 10), in which the so short: an example of the second class used (11, 2).

Short vowels can become long by position, but this is not an invariable rule. They are always short before the compounds $\overline{\epsilon}$ (e. g., $\overline{\epsilon}$), and $\overline{\epsilon}$ (e. g., $\overline{\epsilon}$). Before the nexus of a nasal and another class-consonant, they are common,—Example, $\overline{\epsilon}$, long in VII, 42, but short in VII, 53. Examples of vowels short before this kind of nexus are very common; and, in order to help the reader, when the preceding syllable is short I have denoted it by anuswára, and when it is long by the class nasal. Thus in $\overline{\epsilon}$ the first syllable will be read long, but in $\overline{\epsilon}$ it will be read short. So, $\overline{\epsilon}$ will be read with the first syllable long, but इंदर with it short. Of course, it must be understood that this anuswara is merely a compendium scripturæ, and that whichever way the word is spelt, the pronunciation is the same. Vowels before a nexus of the semi-vowel र and a consonant may also be short,—example, अर्जन (1, 24).

Before other conjuncts the vowel is generally long, but I have noted the words अखिन (1, 35), त्रिष्ट (v, 51), प्रधान (vi, 25), and सहस्र (vii, 26) as exceptions, and there are not impossibly others which have escaped my notice.

Anunásika never affects either metre or rhyme. For an example of the latter, see VIII, 41.

The first syllable in the word कंश is always long. As already mentioned it should be spelt क्रम.

The word केंचो 'any,' is frequently written बो.

The verbal termination of the third person নিং, is frequently written সান্ধি as a separate word; e. g., (11, 53) ইঅল্সান্ধি dĕkhala anhi for ইঅল্নিং dĕkhalanhi (dĕkhalanhi). This termination can also be used with the 1st or 2nd person; e. g., ঘ্ৰস্নিং (VIII, 45).

With the aid of the above remarks I hope that no difficulty will be found in reading and scanning the poem.

ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL.

Part I.-HISTORY, LITERATURE, &c.

Nos. III & IV.-1882.

Some Hindú Folksongs from the Panjáb.—By LIEUT. R. C. TEMPLE, B. S. C., F. R. G. S., M. R. A. S., &c.

I have a small collection of 64 songs and catches popularly sung in the Panjáb, especially in the Hill District of Kángrá and in the neighbouring small Hill State of Chambá. They are, as far as I can gather, genuine Panjábí Folklore and have not been previously reduced to writing. As they contain many strange idioms and apparently hitherto unrecorded phrases and words they appear to be worthy of a place in the pages of this Journal.

The language in some of them is Hindí, but many of them are in the current village Panjábí of the day. Those from Kángrá and Chambá, though containing dialectic words and forms, do not differ in the main in language from those from the plains of the Panjáb.

In the "Calcutta Review" for the present year I have treated these songs from a sociological point of view, giving metrical renderings of them all and endeavouring to show how they explain the manners, customs and thoughts of those who composed and sing them. I will therefore here confine myself to viewing them as specimens of language.

I give them here in the Roman character, being that in which they were recorded. I have been moved, moreover, to this course because of the unsatisfactory nature of "munshis" ideas regarding the "improvement" of the vulgarisms of folklore, which render it unsafe to entrust any of them, even natives of the neighbourhood, with the task of recording songs in Nágarí, Gurmukhí, or Persian characters.*

* In this paper adjunct consonants are distinguished from conjunct consonants by being divided by an apostrophe, thus mil'ná = सिल्ना, but unhán = उन्हाँ. [See Hoernle's Gaudian Grammar, §§ 3-6. Ed.]

These catches and songs refer to the following subjects, (1) religion, (2) religious customs, (3) love, (4) marriage customs, (5) home customs, (6) nursery rhymes, (7) localities, (8) riddles and facetiæ, (9) politics. I have divided them for convenience into the above heads, merely signifying at the foot of each song where I got it from.

Circumstances have obliged me to rest content with this small collection for the present, but I hope some day to be able to send the Society the fruits of extended researches in this direction.

To each song is attached a rendering and as full notes grammatical and linguistic as I am able to give; but before giving the songs themselves, I will add a few words on the more prominent points in grammar that occur. A short vocabulary also of the more important words to be found in the songs will be added. With regard to the grammatical peculiarities, however, I will not do much more than merely collect them and point them out. The numbers which will be found attached to the quotations refer to the numbers of the songs whence they are gathered, and will enable the reader to read the context at once.

A few quotations in their appropriate places will also be found marked R. R., which I have added from a MS. lately placed at my disposal, through the kindness of Mr. Delmerick of the Panjáb Commission. This MS. relates, in a series of disconnected tales, the legendary sayings and doings of Rájá Rasálu (R. R.), son of Rájá Sáliváhan of Siálkot and brother of Púran Bhagat, a personage of wide renown in Panjábí legends. The tales purport to have been taken down direct from the lips of Panjáb peasants, unfortunately by an ignorant munshí. They consist of prose stories interspersed with bits of village Panjábí verse. These last luckily the munshí could not mar and they are of great linguistic value, but the prose he has so injured with attempts at Urdú, very much Persianised, with which language he was apparently not very familiar, that it is useless for any scientific purpose. My notes were taken from the verses as my reading of the MS. proceeded.

Also a small tract on Panjábí grammar by a member of the Lúdiáná Mission, 1851, will be quoted occasionally as the Panj. Gram.

Grammatical Notes.

(a) The following pronominal forms occur:

Asán, we, I. 18, 60, etc., etc., this is ordinary Panjábí.

Appú, thou, you. 20: for áp.

Morá, my. 36: also found in Hindí.

Tún, thou, passim: this is ordinary Panjábí.

Tain, thou, passim. According to the Panj. Gram. tain is the inflected form of the case of the agent and = tú ne; thus, main, I. Ag. main, by me: asín, by us.

tún, thou Ag. tain, by thee: tusín, by you.

uh, oh, he. Ag. un, on, by him: unhín, onhín, by them.

ih, eh, this. Ag. in, en, ain, by this: inín, inhín, enhin, ainhín, by these.

jo, who. Ag. jin, by whom, (see also song No. 11). jinín, jinhín, by whom.

so, correl. Ag. tin: tinín, tinhín.

kaun, who? Ag. kin, by whom? kinhín, by whom? Cf. also Kellogg's paradigms: Hindí Gram. pp. 126—135.

sádá, our, my, 48: common Panjábí.

uh; he. 11. ordinary Panjábí.

unhán, those, them. 45. Panjábí.

eh, this. 9, 56. Panjábí.

tinhán, correl 45, these, those, the. Panjábí.

seh (= uh) that, he. 19, 45. There is also a Panjábí dialectic form so. kuní (= kaun), who? 56.

Of the above, tain, unhán, tinhán, morá should probably be looked on as inflections. The following are instances of inflected forms:*

maite, from me, 56: the Panj. Gram. gives mete and maithon as the regular inflections.

mainún, to me, 50. ordinary Panjábí.

min'jo, (main + jo). See below (c), to me. 56.

os, that, 29: according to the Panj. Gram. us and oh are the ordinary inflected forms.

jit, which, 25, 60. Similarly it, ut, kit? in the Kángrá Hills.

jih'te, from which, 50: ordinary Panjábí: Cf. Kellogg. Hind. Gram. p 132.

kit, which? 25. See above jit.

kus, which? 56: for kis?

kusí, any one, 56: for kisí.

Examples of pronominal adverbs are—jahlú-tahlú, 15: when-then.

kihán? how? 21, 56, etc., ordinary Panjábí.

kudhí, whence? 23.

kuthú, whither? 27.

kithe, where? 51: Panjábí.

tithú, there, 59.

kityo, wherever, 25: = kití, Panjábí.

* [Divide mai-te, me-te, mai-thon, mai-nún, jih-te; these are not inflected forms but contain the ordinary postpositions te, thon, nún; see Hoernle's Gaudian Grammar, § 374. Ed.]

kajo, why? 34: = (?) Hindí káheko? Thus, Hindí kyá in infl. becomes káhe: kyá Hindí = Panj. kí or kiá, which in infl. becomes káh or kás. Then kajo = káh + jo (see below (c) = Panj. káh'nún, = Hind. káheko.

The change of i to u in the words kus? kusí? kuní? kudhí? kuthú? is noticeable.

(b) The forms which occur in the songs of the inflectional postpositions of the genitive for the dá, de, dí, dián and díán of Panjábí are:

masc. dá, de, passim: den, 21, 45, 59: díye, 22: díyán, 23.

fem. dí, passim: diyá, 18: dyán 38: diyán, 40.

Thèse do not differ essentially from the usual custom, which is this: Masc. sing. dá: obliq. de: voc. de, diá: plu. de, dián: voc. dio: Fem. sing. dí: voc. dí, díé: plu. díán: voc. dío.

(c) A remarkable inflectional postposition of the dative and objective cases is jo, perhaps connected with dá, de of Panj. through the forms diá, die. It has been already seen in min'jo, to me, occurring thus in song 56.*

Hun min'jo kihán mil'ne? How can they meet me now? Also in kajo, why? occurring in song 34, thus tain kajo láí thí is kane prít? why did you bring your love to this one? I collect every other instance that occurs. Thus—

- (1) tote jo main dudh-bhat din'nín, mainán jo ghyo chúriyán: I give milk-and-rice to the parrot, (and) ghí and crumbs to the mainá. 5.
- (2) Sadásibe jo munáí láh: bring blandishments to the Eternal Siva 15.
- (3) Asán Gugge diyá játrá jo jáná, we must make a pilgrimage to Guggá. 18.
 - (4) Ammán jo puchhaní: asking my mother. 23.
 - (5) Sassú jo puchhaní: asking my mother-in-law. 23.
 - (6) Janghán jo jikk: shampoo my thighs. 23.
- (7) Asán jo kusí diyán nahín gar'ján? There is no necessity (غرض) of any one to me (I love nobody) 31.
 - (8) Kuttyán jo pánghí chúrí: I will throw cakes to the dogs. 45.
 - (9) Hațán jo dauryá: ran to the shops. 46.
 - (10) Aggí jo dauryá: ran to the fire. 46.
- (11) Unhán jo paí-gaí ap'ní: to them had befallen their own (troubles). 47.
- (d) The postpositions of inflection are used, but are as frequently dropped: see Kellogg, sec. 152, pp. 78, 79. I am assured that in the Kángrá Hills this is as common in every day speech as in the poetry. The agent with ne is by many ordinarily omitted, as ghoren khádhá, the horse eat:

^{* [}Compare the Sindhí genitive postposition jo masc., jí fem. On their derivation see Hoernle's Gaudian Grammar, § 377, p. 239. Ep.]

ghorián khádhá, the mare eat. The Panj. Gram. says that the agent with ne and the postpos. of inflection are frequently omitted in ordinary Panjábí.

(e) The following cases of nominal singular inflection are worthy of record:

Masc. in e.

bápúe puchhaní, asking father: 23.
ghare bich, in the house: 22, 38, 59.
báge díyán, of the garden: 23.
nimbúe dá chár, pickle of limes: 40; (but cf. nimbuá, 46).

ghíúe dá, of ghí (ghíú), 47.

rukkhe par, on a tree (rukkh), 63.

masc. in iye and ye.

pansáriyé den hát, the shop of the druggist: 21.

dárúye diyán katoriyán, cups of wine: 41.

but compare here bháiyá, brother, 48 and chírebáliá, gaily-turbaned, 60.

fem. in íyá.

dáliyá, in the hedge, 5.

tháliyá, on the plate, 23.

pag'ríyá, 20. objective: turban.

baryá, of a year, 32.

goriyá den háth, the hand of the beauty, 21.

pakhiyá, on the fan, 31.

chhamáyá, of six months, 32.

lárhiá satyá, threw it into the field, 47.

Voc. masc in iyá, and fem. in e.

The masc. occurs in 35 and the fem. in 23, 25, 32, 45, 48, 49, 58.

They are all ordinary Panjábí forms and require no further remark here.

(f) The ordinary Panjábí plural inflection of masc. nouns ending in a consonant in the oblique cases is án or ián; for those ending in a vowel it is án and for those ending in u it is wán. Cf. the Márwárí, Mewárí and Kumáoní custom: Kellogg. p. 80.

This custom is borne out by the plu. forms occurring in the songs, even in those cases where the agent with ne and the appropriate postpositions are omitted as above noted. See 22, 23, 39, 43, 44, 45, 46, 60.

As in standard Hindí, Panjábí nouns ending in nasalized vowels preserve the anuswára throughout the declension: otherwise masc. nom. and objective plural usually end in e. This is an exception.

kháyán, be bírá, bare bare gráhen, eat, O brother, large, large mouthfuls, 44.

It is probably, however, to be referred to the nasalized declension noticed below.

(g) The ordinary Panjábí plural inflection of fem. nouns ending in \dot{a} in the oblique cases is $i\dot{a}n$: for those ending in u it is $w\dot{a}n$, and for all others it is $\dot{a}n$. In the songs the fem. plu. forms are usually regular, even when the inflectional postpos. are dropped. See 5, 20, 23, 41. Here is an exception, rátín bariyán, (the) nights (are) long 5.

But like gráhen above, this should probably be referred to the nasalized declension.

(h) The usual rule of declension appears to be in Hindí and the allied tongues that anuswára is preserved in the singular inflected forms only when it is present in the nominative. In the Kángrá Hills, however, there appears to be a regular form of nasalized declension. We have seen signs already of it in ghoren khádhá = ghore ne kháyá, masc. and in ghorián khádhá = ghorí ne kháyá, fem.; also in den = Panj. de, of: and in rátín, nights, fem. and gráhen, mouthfuls, masc.

All the instances of masc. nasalized inflection are in en, perhaps a form connected with the infl. in e, above noted;* and it is to be noted that in nearly every case of it the agent with ne or the inflectional postpos. has been omitted.

bahí-já pinj'ren, sit in the cage, 15.
jáyán tún pánien, go thou for water, 23.
tere munhen dikhí-karí, seeing thy face, 26.
chacharúen dittá ták, the tick gave a bite, 38.
bágen gájar múlí, carrots and radishes of the garden, 39.
Rámen dárí, Rámá's wife, 39.

pețen țumb hoi, there has been a pain in (her) stomach, 40. bharo thand'ren pánien! fill with cold water! 44.

múlen liyá, ordinary Hill expression for mol líá, = Panj. mul líá, (I) bought, 46.

kothen charhi, climbing on to the roof (kothá = bálá khána), 46. soh'ren pak'rí dáng jethen mung'rí, father-in-law seized a stick, brother-in-law a mallet, 47.

chalyá muṇḍhen sab'j kumán, walked with a green bow on (his) shoulder, 48.

Gaddien andá air, the flock of the shepherd came, or (?) the shepherd brought his flock, 56.

Anjaniyán den melen, at Anjaná's fair, 59.

khinnuen dí, of the ball, 60.

Bhaunen diyán, of Bhaun (Kángrá), 60.

hathen sothi, a stick in (your) hand, 60.

* [The so-called nasalized inflection in en, as well as the inflection in e, are simply relics of ancient case-terminations: so also the ablative inflection on (p. 157); see Hoernle's Gaudian Grammar, pp. 230, 242, also p. 208, et passim. Ed.]

The ordinary masc. voc. in Panjábí ends in $i\acute{a}$ or \acute{a} , but in the songs in the case of an imported Arabic corruption $anusw\acute{a}ra$ is added.

muhímiyán be! O my brave one, 23.

The fem. nasalized infl. end in án, ín and íán, perhaps connected with the iyá above noted. Thus, of án.

mainán jo, to the mainá, 5.

ammán jo, to (my) mother, 23.

ammán den pás, near (my) mother, 45.

gálín kaddhe, should they cast out abuse, 22.

sar'kín sar'kín jáná, going along the road, 60.

of ián, iyán, iyán, etc.

láryán márí mirk, the wife made a sign, 38.

láríyán khádá, the wife eat, 40 (khádhá, káh'dá and khádá are common Panj. forms of the perf. indef. of kháuṇá, to eat). billián chhikkyá, the cat sneezed, 47.

Anjaniyán den melen, at Anjaná's fair, 59.

The following are instances of similar nasalization of fem. voc. inflections. The usual rule is in Panjábí that the voc. infl. has no anuswára unless it occurs in the nominative also. The fem. voc. sing. usually ends in e: the plu. in o.

soh'nien ní, O beauty, 15, 18.

bo bhainen, O sister, 45.

tún najo yánien, thou young beauty, 23.

bhainon, O sisters, 46.

(i) The Panjábí ablative inflection on is well known and is well exhibited in song No 46.

dhuron Láhoron nimbu áyá, the limes came from Lahore from afar.

It is commonly added to postpositional forms in an abl. sense; e. g., andaron, from within; uppuron, from above; sáh'm'nion (साइम्बिने), from in front of, &c. In song No. 58 it occurs in a very notable word as an intensive termination, nahínon, altogether not.

Gaddí terá ajj marhe bich nahínon, to-day thy husband (shepherd) is altogether not in the house, 58.

(j) A connected nasalization of postpositional forms (Kellogg's prepositions, pp. 272-274) is exhibited in kanen, with, 22: agen, in front, 45: pichhen, behind, 60.

And of enclitics and conjunctions in mhin (= = bhi), also, 20: ákhen, indeed, 59.

(k) The ordinary adjectival inflections in Panjábí, where they occur, are masc. sing. e; fem., i: masc. plu., ián; fem., ián. But in these songs the fem. infl. in iyá above noted in the nouns is found in the adj. as well Thus, bariyá parátí, a large plate, 44. meryá nimbuá, my little lime, 46.

Nasalized forms of this inflection are

fem. sing. bhukiyán, hungry and nangiyán, naked, 22. ap'niyán sassú, thy own mother-in-law, 45.

In song No. 25 two remarkable nasalized adjectival forms occur, gher'wán and pher'wán, which appear from the context to be indeclinable; as also perhaps garíb'nán, meek, 48, should be considered. Thaṇḍ'ṛen pánien, with cold water, 44, is a clear case of masc nasalized inflection.

The ordinary infl. in Panjábí for numeral adjectives is n and án, as usually in Hindí. Thus, bárán barhiyán, twelve years, 23.

(1) Mr. Kellogg, sec. 473, pp. 253-254, derives the modern Hindí diminutives in ak, ká, iká, kí; iyá, í; vá, wá; from the Sanskrit affix aka.* In the songs gad'wá, a little pot, 44, and nimbuá, a little lime, 46, occur, but also several undoubted diminutives occur ending in \hat{u} , which are (?) probably connected with the above.

chhok'rú (a little son) a widow's son, an orphan: used also in depreciation, 15.

gadokh'rú, a little goat, a kid, 15.

cholú, a little cloak, 19.

topú, a little cap, 19.

khinnú, a little ball, 51.

To this class also should probably be referred chacharú, a tick or flea, 38. maung'nú, a bug, 38.

bhandorú, a bee, 59.

Perhaps in the same connection should be classed the nouns denoting familiarity or terms of affection, such as the names Rámú, Par'sú, Chhajjú, &c., &c., and the Panjábí words piú, father; máún, mother; bharáú, brother, &c. In these songs occur—man-rakhú, keeper of the heart, lover, 25. chit-rakhú, keeper of the heart, lover, 27. appú, thou, 23. sassú, mother-in-law, 23. bápú, father, 23.

^{*} Many of Mr. Kellogg's statements are due to Dr. Hoernle's discoveries. I quote Mr. Kellogg because I have not Dr. Hoernle's works by me to refer to. [See his Gaudian Grammar, §§ 195-206, pp. 97-104. Ed.]

In the Panjáb there is a tendency to change nouns ending í to íú or io. Thus, ghí to ghíú, gheú and ghyo, 5. jí, life, to jíú, 25.

In R. R. occurs ghíú for ghí: gurú jíú for gurú jí: dhíú, daughter, for dhí. Piú, father, in ordinary Panjábí is sometimes also pe or pí, as mápe, mápí and mápián, parents.

In song No. 25 there is also a similar remarkable change in a pronominal adverb.

kityo for kití, wherever, 25.

(m) The dialectic verb must always be difficult of treatment. The following are attempts at solving some of the forms that occur in these songs.

Mr. Platt, Hindústání Grammar, p. 329, remarks that Panjábí regularly uses the gerund or verbal noun, (practically the infinitive in the modern Aryan languages of India), as a gerundive or verbal adjective, and that Sindhí has a distinct gerundive. Mr. Kellogg, pp. 308-310, sec. 595 (1) (2), shows the infin. being used both as a gerund and as a gerundive. In both works the infin. is the only form of gerund or gerundive.* The Panj. Gram. gives two distinct forms of gerund, (or gerundive according to syntactical use): one following the form of the infin. and the other usually that of the perf. participle. E. g., root, ghall, send; infin. or gerund, ghall'ná, to send; gerund, ghalliá, sending, to send. The two forms of gerund probably really exist, and for the present purpose I will call them the gerund in ná and the gerund in iá.

As instances of the use of the gerund in ná the Panj. Gram. gives—kachíchíán lainíán hon'gián, lit, gnashings of teeth will be (to be) taken.

khabar kar'ní, to make news (announce). dúr ho jání, to be removed (lit., to become far).

All of which show its use as a gerundive and curiously enough the Panj. Gram. gives no instances of its use as a pure gerund, though this is as common as in Hindí.

Of the use of the gerund in iá it quotes merá bharáú merí jamín utte hawelí páí cháh'ndá hai, my brother wishes a house to be built (páí, gerund in iá, fem. form from páuní, Panj., to place, build) on my ground.

* [See Hoernle's Gaudian Grammar, §§ 308-314, 315-321, pp. 145-154, where the identity of the so-called infinitive, gerund, gerundive and verbal noun in the Northern Indian languages is fully shown. Ed.]

asán pothíán parhiá kar'de hán, we are in the habit of reading books.

In the former it is apparently used as a gerundive, in the latter as a gerund. An example of the gerund in $i\acute{a}$ in the songs is main púrí chhakí líá, I took the cake to taste, (eat) 47.

Here chhakí agrees with púrí as a gerundive.

The above analyses may be thought wrong and the verbs merely looked on as compounds, like páyá cháh'tá hai, parhá kar'te hain and chhak lí, as they would appear in Hindí. But see Kellogg's doubts on the participial nature of the first terms of such compounds at p. 192, note, where he inclines to the belief that there is a gerund in á as well as in ná in Hindí.* His observation (c) on the next page 193, that cháh'ná and kar'ná with jáná take jáyá in place of gayá and with mar'ná take mará in place of múá, exactly bears out the analysis of the Panj. Gram. which makes jáiá the gerund and giá the perf. part. of jáuná and mariá the gerund and múiá the perf. part. of mar'ná. However, below will be exhibited many instances of a conjunctive participle in í in these songs and perhaps the above forms páí cháh'ndá hai and chhakí líá should be looked upon as instances of it.

Lastly I would quote the following every day idioms, which exist also in Hindí and Urdú, from the Panj. Gram. in support of the argument of the existence of the gerunds in $n\acute{a}$ and $i\acute{a}$.

mete khará honá nahín jándá, I cannot stop; lit. to stand still does not go (is not) by me.

mete kháiá nahín jándá, I cannot eat, lit. eating does not go (is not) by me.

- (n) The usual terminations of the perf. and imperf. participles in Panjábí are imperf. $d\acute{a}$ or $nd\acute{a}$ and perf. $i\acute{a}$, but the imperf. has also a form $n\acute{a}$,† which, according to the Panj. Gram. differs so far from the infin. in that it is always $n\acute{a}$, whereas the infin. is $n\acute{a}$ and alternatively $n\acute{a}$. E.~g., imperf. ghall'd\acute{a} or ghall'n\acute{a}, sending: perf. ghalli \acute{a} , sent: whence present imperf. tense, main ghall'd \acute{a} hán or main ghall'n \acute{a} hán, I am sending and present perf. tense, main (or main ne) ghalli \acute{a} hán, I have sent. A good instance of the imperf. part in $n\acute{a}$ is in song No. 60, where the same word occurs three times.
- * [These doubts are unfounded, the participial nature of the first term of such compounds, being clearly shown by the Prákrit; see Hoernle's Gaud. Grammar, § 539, p. 389. Ed.]
- † [These forms in ná (or aná) are probably nouns of agency. They occur in the Apabhramáa Prákrit (H. C. IV, 443). See also Hoernle's Gaud. Grammar, § 321, p. 153. Ed.]

pání hán main kúrá, I am throwing rubbish. pání hán bhamíriyán, I am throwing whirligigs. pání hán bhuáriyán, I am throwing brooms.

In each of these cases pání is for páundí (= Hind. form pátí).

The usual participial inflection is, nom. sing. \acute{a} , obl. e, fem. \acute{i} ; nom. plu e, obl. ián, fem. ián. And hence the following otherwise apparently inexplicable forms:

motiyán chog chugániyán, (I) feed with bird's food of pearls, 5. (gallán) je kar'nián, (as many words) as I make, (say), 18. koṭhí tán pániyán, I (fem) indeed build a house, 25. Unless, however, we look on this last as honorifically plural, it should be according to strict grammar koṭhí tán pání.

(o) A set of very curious forms occurring again and again in song 19 should probably be referred to the gerundive or participal construction in iá. They are formed from bigs'ṇá (Hindí bikas'ná) to be pleased. Thus, masc. in iá.

big'siá seh nái-bhái, pleased (is) the good barber. big'siá seh Jas'rat Ráe, pleased (is) Jasrat Rai. big'siá seh P'rohit, pleased (is) the Parohit.

fem. in i.

big'sí Kausalyá, pleased (is) Kausalyá. big'sí seh dáí-máí, pleased (is) the old nurse. big'sí seh náan, pleased (is) the barber's wife. big'sí seh búá-rání, pleased (is) the royal aunt.*

- (p) Kellogg, p. 188, sec. 347 (a), notices the tendency to add y to the root in causals in such compounds (?) as phenká dená. In Panjábí in the conjunctive participle of such verbs, whose infin. form is áuná (not áná as in Hindí), this y or i is regularly alternatively prefixed to ke, the usual termination. E. g., áuná, to come; áke or áike, having come: banáuná, to make; banáke or banáike, having made. In R. R. in one line the ke is dropped and we have pái or páe, having obtained. Six instances of this form occur in song 19 viz., naháeke, lagáeke, buláeke, láeke, lutáeke, páeke: and one instance in song No. 11, banáeke. This ike or eke may, however, be a double termination, like the kar'ke or kar'kar of modern times, formed of the old conj. part. terminations i and ke, of which more anon.†
 - * In the Hill Districts also thíá = thá: thí = thí. Also o = hai and ain = hain.
- † [The latter explanation is the correct one; the termination i or e being the older form of the ending of the conjunctive participle; see Hoernle's Gaudian Grammar, §§ 490, 491, pp. 328, 329. Ed.]

(q) The above forms take us imperceptibly to the conjunctive participle in i, which occurs so often in the songs from Kángrá as to show that it is dialectic, and indeed, it is as common in every day use as in the songs. It is probably nothing more than the old termination i of the conj. part. in the Rámáyan lengthened dialectically just as that used to be metri gratiá.* See Kellogg, p. 217, sec. 415. The Panj. Gram. notices it, but wrongly ascribes it to the idiomatic use of the perf. part. in the feminine form. Thus, ikk manukkh bojh laí turiá jándá sá, a man was going along with a load.

chár kulí manjá chukkí khare se, four coolies stood holding up a bedstead.

The following are all the instances that occur in the songs:

- (1) bahí-já pinj'ren, sit in the cage. 5. Hindí, baith jáo.
- (2) Mahádeb russí baithá, Mahádeva being angry sits (is angry). 15.
- (3) bahí kare gallán, sitting let us make words, (talk). 18.
- (4) motiyán run-jhun laí, having made (brought) a rattle of pearls (rattling pearls). 20.
 - (5) chalí rah'nge, we will remain going. 21. Hindí, chal rahenge.
 - (6) prán tají jánán, losing my life I must go. 22.
- (7) andar bahí-karí khánán, continuing to sit inside I must eat. 22. Hindí, baith-kar'ke kháná.
 - (8) tán suní-karí rah'nán, then continuing to hear I must remain. 22.
- (9) Amb charhí-karí koël bole, the cuckoo sings continuing to sit in the mango-tree, 23.
- (10) n'hoí, bo, dhoí, sej bichháí, áí-já, O, having bathed and washed and spread the bed, come, 23.
- (11) jahlú soí main jánghá, when I shall go to sleep, 23. Hindí, jab main so jáúngá.
 - (12) tere múnhen dikhí-karí, continuing to see thy face, 26.
- (13) tún hasí paí (painá, Panj. = par'ná, Hindí), you fell a-laughing, 26.
- (14) pakhí loch dí laí de, having brought the fan of my desire, give it, 31. Laí de = Hindi, lá do.
 - (15) áí milí-já, come and meet (me), 32. Hindí, ákar mil-jáo.
- (16) nimbú áí bikyá bajár, the lime having come was sold in the bazaar, 46.
- (17) kothen charhí-karí hakkán máryán, climbing on to the roof he called out, 46.
- * [The form i is simply a contraction of the Prákrit termination ia, while the form i is a curtailment of the same termination; see Hoernle's Gaud. Grammar, § 491. Ed.]

- (18) sás áí-rahí, the mother-in-law had come, 47.
- (19) neí kune satyá, taking it (neṇá for lená) I threw it into a corner, 47.
 - (20) áí-baithá thande bág, having come he sat in a cool garden, 48.
 - (21) murí dekh! having turned look, 60. (Turn round and look!)
- (r) The following forms of the honorific imperative are worthy of notice.

Káhaná, bariyán lakhán hoyán putrán sahetá!

Be, O Káhan, lakhs of years with thy posterity! 20.

Jugán tain jíyán, Káhaná! Live, thou O Káhan, for ages! 20.

Kháyán be! O do thou eat! 23, 44.

Tahlú jáyán tún! then do thou go! 23.

Ghariyán, lohárá, díúrá! make, O blacksmith, a brass-lamp! 44.

(s) The contingent future in Panjábí is thus conjugated.

root: ghall, send.

	Singular.	Plural.
1st person 2nd person 3rd person	ghallá n ghalle n ghalle	ghallye ghallo or ghalle ghallan.

Instances of it occur in songs 25 and 27.

(t) The plural form of the indef. perfect in Panjábí is well exhibited in the following:

Rúpe dáriyán gallán kítiyán, Rúpá's wife made words (spoke) dárúye diyán katoriyán pítyán, (she) drank cups of wine, 41. hakkán máriyán, (he) called out, 46.

- ghar ghar d'rekán phuliyán, (where) the drek trees flower at every house. This is an instance of the use of the indef. perf. for the indef. imperf., which is common.
- (u) Future forms are numerous and very irregular in dialectic Panjábí. The following are noteworthy specimens from the songs.
 - (i) jáh'ng (it) will go, 15: dih'ng, (he) will give, 15. I have also met with hog and howag, (he) will be.
 - (ii) rah'nge, (we) will remain, 21.
 - (iii) jánghá, (I) will go, 23: pánghí (I. fem.) will throw, 45.
 - (iv) bik'ge, (we) will be sold, 21.

There is in the Northern Panjáb a very common future form $s\acute{a}n$; infl., $s\acute{i}$, san.* E. g., hojásan, they will become: hosán, I will be: hosí, he will be. In the songs occur, bál'sán, I will burn, 44; ghol'sán, I will knead or mix, 44; áwasí, she will come, 44. In R. R. occur the following forms, tur'sán, I will go; desán (twice), I will give; lesán (twice), I will take; kar'sán, I will make; banásán, I will make; ban'sán, I will be made; khásán, I will eat. Also laisí, he will take; már'sí, he will beat; khar'sí, he will take; war'sí, he will enter; áwasí, he will come; ásí, he will come.

* [It also occurs in the old Panjábí and in the Marwárí; see Hoernle's Gaudian Grammar, § 509, p. 356. Ed.]

(v) The tendency to nasalise final vowels in nominal declension has been noticed. Instances are not wanting of it in verbal terminations. E. g., je koí sunen, if any one hear, 20. See (s). main ghar thamyán, I watched the house, 47. áwasín, she will come, 44. kar'sín, she will do, 44.

khinnuen dí ram-jham láin chírebáliá, the gaily-turbaned man brought the bouncing ball, 60.

main dudh-bhat din'nín, I (fem) give rice-and-milk, 5. din'nín is for din'ní = dindí, a common form of the imperf. part of dená, = detí in Hindí: din'ní is the alternative form; see (n) above.

A set of curious infinitive forms nasalized occur in song 22; jánán, rah'nán, lánán, kaṭ'nán, all in the sense of I must go, must stay, must bring, must bear with.* A stronger instance is to be found in song 47: mathá tek'nán, I had to make my bow.

(w) The tendency of Panjábí is to nasalize vowels before consonants; e. g., áundá = átá; jándá = játá. In these songs several instances occur of the opposite custom of dropping anuswára, where it exists in Hindí and usually in Panjábí as well.†

hasí for hans'kar, laughing, 26. has'ná for hans'ná, 56. pakhí for pankhí, a fan, 31, 48. khich'dá for khainch'tá, drawing, 43. úchián for únchá, tall, 44.

- * [These nasalized forms in nân correspond to the forms in naun in the Braj and non in Marwárí. See Hoernle's Gaudian Grammar, § 320, p. 153. Ed.]
- † [These two cases are not parallel. The n of the pres. part. is a consonant, and it is organic, i. e., it forms an original element of the Sanskrit and Prákrit participial suffix anta; it is preserved in Panj., but dropped in Hindí; see ibid. §§ 300, 301, 143, 146. But the n in hans'ná, etc. is not a consonant, but a mere nasalization of a vowel, and it is inorganic, i. e., forming no element of the original Sanskrit or Prákrit word. These nasalizations are common to all Gaudians, and are especially frequent before s and h; see ibid. § 67. Ed.]

dughiyán for dúnghián, deep, 45. chhikkyá for chhínká, sneezed, 47. ákhán for ánkhán, 50. gawáyá, 3, and ganwáyá (= ḍálá), 5.

1882.]

The absence of anuswára in the above words is very puzzling to the ear.

- In R. R. nagí occurs for nangí, naked: and sás and s'wás for sáns, breath.
- (x) The insertion of r and r after t and t is not uncommon in the Panjáb.* In the songs occur thaṇḍ'rí for thaṇḍí, 42, 45. thaṇḍ'ren for thaṇḍe, 44. áṭ'rá for áṭá, flour, 44.

In R. R. bet 'rá for betá, son, occurs several times; and weh't 'rí, wedded wife, for byáh'tá, dialectic beotar. Instances of r after other consonants are mukh'rá for mukhá, face, 42. práhunán and páhunán, guest, 44. In R. R. occurs ráj'rá for rájá, king.

RELIGIOUS SONGS.

Tún bhaj-lai Rám dá Nám, Jithe tain jáná hai. Tún kar'ní kar-lai nek, Phal hath áuná hai.

Panjáb.

Repeat thou the Name of Rám,

To whom thou hast to go.

What is to be done do thou well,

And the fruit will come to thy hand.

Notes.

Rám dá Nám. Rám represents the deity in the Sikh religion: vide Trumpp. Adi Granth xeviii. Here the expression would be in Christian phraseology 'Pray always to God.'

Jithe. Panj. where: here it means 'to whom.' Tain. Panj. thou.

Tere bin kaun haregá merí pír? Tere bin kaun haregá merí pír? Main pápí dín hún Tere dar ká, Nir'dhan aur faqír.

Panjáb.

Without Thee, who will take away my pain? Without Thee, who will take away my pain? I am a sinful servant at Thy gate, Without wealth and poor.

Notes.

This is an obvious address to the Deity: perhaps traceable to some Bhagat. It is in Hindí.

Faqir: here in its proper sense of a poor man, a beggar.

Rám'jí ká bhed kisí ne nahín páyá, Sárá janam us'kí yád men ganwáyá. Rám Rám ke káran, sádho, Dhuṇḍat shakal jahán: Rishí, muní aise hí hogae, Kho diye hain ap'ne prán.

Panjáb.

No one has found the secret of Rám,
(Though) his whole life be spent in the search.
For Rám's sake, my friend,
They search the whole earth:
Sages and saints have gone thus
And lost their lives.

Notes.

 $R\acute{a}m'j\acute{i}=R\acute{a}m$, the Sikh name for the Supreme Deity: God. See former song.

Yád, search, lit., remembrance, calling to mind.

Ganwáyá; ganwáná, gawáná; Panj. verb, to lose, to spend; also used as an intensive like dálná.

Sádho, my friend: sádh, a holy man, saint. Shakal = sakal, all, the whole = (?) Sag'rá, q. v.*

Dwáre mere áyo bahman'jí,
Subh bachan sunáyo bahman'jí.
Bahman báche patr'ká,
Aur subh subh sodh sunáe:
Jo chintá man men rahe,
So sunte hí mit jáe.
Bahutí chintá kar gae
Aur kat gae din rain:

^{* [}The identification is correct; see footnote on p. 170. Ed.]

Dekhat dekhat mar gae, Aur andhe kar liye nain.

Bipr rúp ká bhes kar, Jo áyá mere pás:

Main char'non par gir pará, Jo púran hogayí ás.

Bahman bahman karat hain,

Jo bahman uttam ját:

Jo us'ká sim'ran kare, To sang rahe din rát.

Allá Allá karat hain

Jo zát us'kí hai pák:

Biná prem ríjhe nahín, Jo ghis-dáro sab nák.

Al Muhammad hogayí,

Aur kuchh nahín húí aulád:

Jo qismat men likh diyá, So sab páwen dád.

Jo likhá hai bhág men, So pahile hí pahuncháe:

Bálak rah'tá pet men,

Aur dúdh chúnchí men áe.

'Ali Muḥammad hogaye

Jo bahut thá un'se lár:

Akhir ko we bhí mare,

Aur mittí men diye gár.

Panjáb.

A brahman came to my door, Glad tidings the brahman told me.

The brahman read the scripture,

And told me good news:

What care was in my mind

Disappeared on hearing it.

Much care have men taken

And spent their days and nights:

Watching they have died

And made their eyes blind.

He put on a brahman's form

Who came to me:

I fell at his feet

As my desire was fulfilled.

They call him brahman

Who is brahman of the highest kind:

Who worships him,

With him will he remain day and night.

They call him God (Allah)

Whose nature is good,

He is not pleased without love,

Though you rub away your whole nose.

Muhammad had female posterity

And no male posterity.

What is written in fate

Will all obtain justly.

What is written in fate

Is already arrived:

(As) the child lies in the womb,

And the milk comes into the breasts.

'Ali and Muhammad have been,

Who were much loved by him (? God):

In the end they too died

And were buried in the earth.

Notes.

This is a remarkable song in its way. It came to me as a Brahman song and was given me by a Brahman from Kángrá. It is remarkable for its cosmopolitan nature and allusions to Muhammadanism. It is in pure Hindí excepting the Panjábí word $b\acute{a}ch'n\acute{a}$,* to read, and is therefore probably a wholesale importation from Hindí literature, perhaps straight from the writings of some free-thinking poet or Bhagat.

Báche: Panj. bách'ná, to read.

Sodh: Hindí, news: not in the Dictionaries.

Patr'ká = patrí; almanac, scripture, holy book.

Ját, zát. These words are now synonymous in common parlance to mean 'caste.' Ját is Sansk. in origin from root jan, to be born, and zát is probably a Munshi's corruption of the word to make it fit in with the Arabic is essence, which, however, in Persian also means 'tribe, clan, sort.' Here we have both senses: ját applied to the Brahman and zát applied to Allah, God.

Jo us'ká sim'ran kare: (?) ought this to be translated "who worship him (God) in the Brahman's form."?

 $Bin\acute{a}$ prem etc., i. e., Allah (God) is not pleased with mere outward show.

* [The word bách'ná or bánch'ná is a very common pure Hindí word; in fact parh'na is more Urdú, than Hindí. Ed.]

Jo ghis-dáro sab nák is in allusion to the Musalman custom of touching the ground with the nose (or forehead) in prayer. \dot{D} áro = dálo.

Al aulád: progeny. A'l, female descendants are not looked upon as so honorable as male descendants, hence the point here is—whatever is fated will ensue, for even Muhammad left no male line.

 $l\acute{a}r = l\acute{a}d$; love; fondness; affection.

Ambe dáliyá totá bole; mainá bole bárhiyán.
Bhajo Rám'jí: din thore, rátín bariyán.

A, mere toto, bahí-já pinj'ren, motiyán chog chugániyán.

Tote jo main dudh-bhát din'nín; mainán jo ghyo chúriyán.

Kángrá.

The parrot screams on the branch of the mango tree; the mainá chatters in the hedge.

Repeat the name of Rám: the days are short, and the nights long. Come, my parrot, sit in the cage, I feed you with pearl-food.

I will give milk and rice to the parrot; and crumbs and ghi to the maina.

Notes.

bárhí, fence, hedge, = bár, bárí.

din thore, rátín bariyán. This may be explained thus. The days (time for prayer) are short: the nights (no time for prayer) are long: hence utilize the time for prayer.

bahi-ja, bah'ná and báh'ná, common Panj. = baith'ná, tọ sit. See song No. 18.

motiyán chog, lit., bird's food of pearls, i. e., the very best of food. The superstition is that the hansá swan (mentioned in another song q.v.) feeds on pearls by the sea-side, which is therefore considered the very best of food.

Tote jo; mainán jo; jo in the hill dialects of Kángrá and Chambá = ko, to.

dudh-bhát: milk-and-rice is the usual food given to caged parrots.

ghyo chúriyán: balls made of bread crumbs and ghí. Chúrí is the broken grain from a mill: crumbs. ghyo = Panj. ghéú = Hind. ghí. cf. song No. 25. This is the usual food of caged mainás.

Pinj'ren, motiyán, mainán. This nasalisation of such final syllables is very common in Panj. village poet: dialects, especially in the hills. en, ián or iyán are respectively the masc. and fem. form of general inflection common in these songs: án is in mainán another form of ián.

Main tán hogáí swámí ká charan'hár: Tum páp karo mere sag're pár.

Kángrá.

I have become indeed obedient to my lord: Save me from all my sin.

Notes.

The story goes that a woman went to a temple to pray, but the god said she must first learn to obey her husband: whereon she went home and presently came back to say she was now very obedient and wished to be forgiven; whence the above song.

swámí ká. This makes charan'hár masc. which as the singer is a woman, must be explained by her being compared to charan'hár garland of the feet.

charan'hár: obedient. The deriv. given me is charan, the foot + hár, a garland of the feet. sag'rá = sárá, the whole.

 $p\acute{a}r~kar'n\acute{a}$: the trans. form of $p\acute{a}r~hon\acute{a}$, to be forgiven; lit., to be across (into the next world).

Re, kachche dam ká nahín hai bharosá. Re, kachche dam ka nahín hai bharosá. Ayá na áyá: áyá na áyá. Re, kachche dam ká! (bárí)

Kángrá.

Alas, there is no confidence in this life. Alas, there is no confidence in this life.

It comes and it comes not; it comes and it comes not.

Alas, this life! (da capo)

Notes.

Kachehá dam is a very curious expression: lit., it is deficient breath or life. It is used in the hills for this life, this world.

bárí: again, da capo. The word as used in the hills I cannot find in the Dicts.; it has two senses, one as an enclitic, indeed, surely, verily and one in music, 'sing again from the beginning,' in which it is found at the end of verses or songs as here. It differs from our 'da capo' which is merely a musical direction, whereas 'bárí' appears to be actually sung: thus they will sing through the song and then sing 'bárí' and commence again. The deriv. is obvious, cf. bárí, a turn: bárí-bárí, turn by turn, alternately. See song Nos. 24, 59.

Karam-gat ṭárí nahín ṭare:
Karam-gat ṭárí nahín ṭare.
Ráwan Kans sab'hí hogáe bárí,
Akhir sab'hí mare.
Dushṭ ko máre phir us se táre;
Bhagat kí rachhyá kare:
Karam-gat, be, ṭárí nahín ṭare.

Panjáb.

The decree of fate moves not for putting away:
The decree of fate moves not for putting away.
Rávaṇas and Kanśas have all indeed been,
And in the end they all died.
He (? God) kills the wicked and then saves him;
The saints he (? God) preserves.
Oh, the decree of fate moves not for putting away.

Notes.

Karam-gat, the decree of fate: the order of fate. gat is lit., state, condition.

tárí, tare = tálí, tale. tal'ná is to vanish, disappear: tál'ná, to put off, remove.

Ráwan, Kans: typical tyrants in Hindu mythology. Rávana was the demon king of Lanká or Ceylon who abducted Sítá and was finally killed by Ráma. Kansa was a tyrannical king of Mathurá and was eventually killed by Kṛishṇa. He performed Herod's feat of a general massacre of male infants.

bárí, enclitic, indeed. See song No. 7.
táre; to save, give salvation.
rachhyá = rakshá, preservation.

RELIGIOUS SONGS. TUKS.

9.

Tur'ná hai, rah'ná nahín:Eh jag kúrá wekh.Bhág dá likhyá páwaná,Mite na karam dí rekh.

One must go hence, one cannot stay:

This world appears to be vanity.

What is written in fate must be received,

The lines of fate will not be blotted out.

Notes.

Wekh or vekh, Panj. to see, to seem. Hind. pekh'ná.

Páwaná or páuná, Panj. form of the infin. páná, to receive.

Rekhá, rekh. The lines on the forehead (Fallon's New Hind. Dict. says on the palm of the hand) supposed to be the lines of fate (karam).

10.

Satt Nám ik mantar hai;
Jape soé phal páe:
Kot jatan kar'ke mare,
Likhyá bhág dá kháe.

Panjáb.

The True Name is a charm;
Who repeats it will reap the fruit:
Making innumerable plans they die,
And obtain (only) what is written in fate.

Notes.

Satt Nám, the True Name: the Name of God. A Sikh expression. Kot = karor, lit., ten millions, innumerable.

11.

Jin súe hare kíte han,
Ate sáunle kíte kág,
Dhaule hans banáeke
Sabh rang mor, ate rág:
Uh Swámí ik satt hai,
Ate kúrá sabh Sansár.
Jo kar'ní mánas kare,
To pár utáran'hár.

Panjáb.

He who made the parrot green,

And made the crow black,

Made the swan white

And the peacock many-hued and their song:

He is the one true Lord

And the whole world is vanity.

If a man do his duty

Then will he be saved.

Notes.

Sáunlá, properly dark-brown: dark complexioned: swarthy: here evidently black.

Hans: a swan, goose, but with the majority of Panjábís a mythical bird which lives by the sea-side entirely on pearls and on no other kind of food. It is said to be the whitest thing known, as we say 'white as snow.' See song No. 5.

Ate rág: a very elliptical expression, the verb being left out; the sense is 'gave to each his song.'

Pár utáran'hár: much used idiomatically in the sense of 'will obtain salvation', 'will be saved.'

12.

Honá hai, so ho rihá!

Ate an'honá nahin hoe!

Wade wadere jatan kar

Prán gáe han khoe!

Panjáb.

What is to be, is now going on!

What is not to be, could never have been!

Great forefathers make plans

And lose their lives.

Notes.

Honá hai etc. Cf. Fallon's New Hind. Dict. art. an, an'honí hotí nahín, aur honí howan'hár, what is not to be is not, and what will be is being. The doctrine of fatalists.

Wade wadere: Panj. words. Wadá = bará, great: waderá (also wadárú) an ancestor, forefather; said to mean also 'a wise man.'

RELIGIOUS SONGS, CUSTOMS.

Ajjí main ne Gangá naháne jáná; Suno, main ne Jam'ná naháne jáná. Gangá naháná, Jam'ná naháná, Sar'jú men ghotá lagáná.

Panjáb.

To-day I must go and bathe in the Ganges; Listen, I must go and bathe in the Jamná.

> Bathe in the Ganges, Bathe in the Jamná,

I must dip in the Sarju.

Notes.

This is a pilgrim's song sung in the mornings on the road to the sacred rivers.

The Sar'ju River is in Audh; but it is here said to be used for the Ghag'rá River in Audh which runs past Faizábád, etc., and is very sacred. The song is in Hindí.

ghotá, غوطه is a corruption of ghota غوطه Arabic, ghota lagáná is to dip, dive. The usual word in this sense is jhakolá. See art. jhakolá in Fallon's New Hind. Dict. Gotá जोटा is the usual Hindí form of this word, but ghotá चोटा is what the singer said was correct here.

Ud, ud, kúnjáriyo!

Aní Máe, pínghán jhútan jáná;

Aní Máe, pínghán jhúṭan jáná.

Aní merí Mán, ho! (bárí)

Kángrá.

Fly, fly, O wagtails, yes!

O mother, the month of Sawan has come;

O mother, the month of Sáwan has come.

O my mother, ho!

Fly, fly, O wagtails!

O mother, we must go and swing;

O mother, we must go and swing.

O my mother, ho!

(da capo)

Notes.

This song, very popular in Kángrá, is only sung during the month of Sáwan (July-August). The festival of the Doll Fair (minjaron or gurion ká melá) is held in Sáwan throughout Northern India. Local customs regarding it differ. In Kángrá, they are as follows: every man, woman and child goes to the river-side near the fort at Kángrá, at least once during Sáwan, on a Sunday, Tuesday or Thursday, which must have been previously fixed on by a kind of mental vow. On this occasion they must wear a doll at the breast which is thrown into the river while the above song is frequently sung. The object of the custom is to procure ease of mind during the coming year; for, as the doll is cooled by going into the water so is the mind cooled (eased) by the act.

The custom of the Sáwan swinging, which is done for luck and is alluded to in the song is of course well known. One of the signs of Sáwan or the very wet weather, are the kúnjarís, which I believe are our 'waterwagtails.'

Kúnjáriyo: kúnjárí or kúnjarí, a bird said to appear only in Sáwan, the rainy season. The word appears to be local in Kángrá: cf. Hind. khanjan, a wagtail, and the wagtails do appear with the rains in the hills. Kúnj is the coolen goose, but that can hardly be meant Ní, aní: Panj. vocative exclamations used towards women, = Hind. rí, arí.

 $H\acute{a}$ n, yes, here apparently merely enclitic.

Pinghán jhúṭan, to swing. Hind. ping or pingh, is the act of swinging high; Panj. a swing suspended. Jhúṭan, to swing; cf. Hind. jhúl'ná, to swing: jhoṭ, a swing, and Panj. jhúlá, the sweep of a swing. The festival here alluded to is called the jhúl'ná-játrá in the North-West Provinces and Fallon, s. v., jhúl'ná, has a very pretty song about it, (q. v.), besides others under the same article. Under art, ping, he quotes some more something to the same purport as that here given.

bárí; da capo, over again. See note to song No. 7.

Mahádeb russí baithá,
Mangadá gadokh'rú:
Tahlú rosá mittí jáh'ng,
Jahlú dih'ng chhok'rú.
Tún tán Sadásibe jo
Munáí lah, soh'níen ní.

Chambá.

Mahádev is angry,

And demands a kid.

When his anger has vanished,

Then he will give you a boy;
So do you to the Eternal Siva

Bring conciliations, O beauty.

Notes.

russí, rosá, anger: cf. Panj. rossá, ros anger: Hind. ros, rásá: Sansk. $\sqrt{\text{rush}}$, $\sqrt{\text{rush}}$, $\sqrt{\text{rish}}$, $\sqrt{\text{rish}}$, $\sqrt{\text{rukh}}$: Hind. and Panj. rus'- ná; Hind. ruth'ná, to be vexed, angry. Russí baith'ná; hill dialect, to be angry.

mangadá = máng'tá, desires.

gadokh'rá, the large hill goat: dim. gadokh'rú, a kid, hill dialect. jahlú-tahlú, when-then, hill dialect.

 $j\acute{a}h'ng = j\acute{a}hang = j\acute{a}ve(n)g\acute{a}: dih'ng = dihang = deve(n)g\acute{a}; cf.$ Panj. forms such as hosan, jásan, hog, howag, etc. all future forms. See song Nos. 23, 44.

chhok'rú, hill dialect, a widow's son = orphan. It is used as a form of abuse among women and children. The hint is that the speaker wishes the other's father to die. It is the same as the Hindí mur'há, about which Fallon quotes 'Mur'há gárí daí gayo, gúiyán; kaun náte?' May he become an orphan, my dear; what relative was he? i.e., that he should jest with me.

Sadásibe = Sadá Siva, the Eternal Siva.

jo = ko, the objective case. See song No. 5.

munái láh, bring coaxings, conciliate.

That my lust might increase.

Woman. I have no second object; Say and I will take the name of Bhag'wán.

Jogi. Sit down here and take your rest, Call always on the name of Bhag'wán.

Woman. This is the custom of this world:

No one has love for any one.

Jogi. Every one desires what he sees,

No one is of benefit to all.

Have patience and do you thus,

Repeat the name of Bhag'wán.

In the end you must go to him,

No one can be saved in this world.

Forget not, keep him in remembrance,

For this you have reason.

All are strangers, no one is a friend;

This world is all a dream of the night.

Your duty is your companion,

When the Angel of Death takes you.

Notes.

This song is purely Hindí, but is known everywhere in the Panjáb.

Andar báhar ek'hí rít: lit., inside and outside he is one custom: his mind and body are the same.

Khwár kar'ná, to disgrace; bring into disrepute.

Jis se kám merá barh jái: that my lust might be increased. kám, lust: Káma, Cupid, the Hindú god of love.

Bhag'wán, the Blest: the Supreme Being: God. Us'ke nikaţ: lit., near him.

Jo kar'ní kar lo (yeh) hai sangí: elliptic construction and therefore difficult to analyse. Do what you have to do (this) is your companion. The first sentence is treated as a noun in apposition to the last words hai sangí. Jo kar'ní kar lo, is now always almost a noun in the sense of 'duty, but more especially 'charity.' The idea of the sentence is 'your charity is your companion, when' etc.

Dút Frangí, lit., the English messenger: a curious and notable phrase. 'Frangí' here means 'the all-powerful,' a metaphorical sense given the word in allusion to the overwhelming power of the British: the 'all-powerful messenger' is the 'Angel of Death.' Frangí or English is now constantly used in common current phrase for what is irresistible, all-powerful. Angrez Bahádur dí doháí! the protection of the all-powerful. Qaid Farangí, imprisonment from which there is no escape.

Chhama chhama pújan chalí Mahádeb ko; Chhama chhama pújan chalí Mahádeb ko: Tel kí kachaurí charháí Mahádeb ko; Tel kí kachaurí charháí Mahádeb ko: Ghí kí kachaurí khiláí bánke yár ko!

Kángrá.

Tinkling she went to worship Mahádev; Tinkling she went to worship Mahádev: Cakes of oil she offered Mahádev; Cakes of oil she offered Mahádev: Cakes of ghí she offered to her lover.

Notes.

The point is that the girl goes with her offering of cakes to the temple, but the choicest she offers to her lover.

The song is purely Hindí.

tel ki kachauri; ghi ki kachauri: kachauris made with oil are indigestible and unpalatable, whereas those made of ghi are the reverse and much more choice.

Chham chham is the noise made by anklet-bells of the women in full holiday dress.

Asán Gugge diyá játrá jo jáná, soh'nien ní! Asán Gugge diyá játrá jo jáná, bo! Battá bich bahí kare gallán, bo, je kar'nián, Sárá dukh chite dá miṭṭáná, soh'nien ní. Asán Gugge diyá játrá jo jáná, bo!

Kángrá.

I must make a pilgrimage to Guggá, my beauty!
I must make a pilgrimage to Guggá.
Sitting by the roadside I will talk, and while I talk,
All the sorrow of my heart will disappear, my beauty!
I must make a pilgrimage to Guggá.

Notes.

The játrá or pilgrimage to Guggá is performed only in honour of some vow being fulfilled and not otherwise. The successful suppliant collects as many people as he can afford and takes them on a pilgrimage to one of the numerous shrines to Guggá in the Kángrá valley, where he entertains them at his own cost for some days. As may be readily imagined the more frolicsome of the women, when tired of the monotony of home life, invent a fulfilled vow for the sake of the outing. Gurú Guggá or Gogá seems to have been a Rájpút hero who died in his attempts to stem the last invasion of Mahmúd of Ghazní in 1026 A. D. He is now a sort of saint with miraculous powers over snakes and able to give sons to the barren, and is much believed in by the lower orders of the Panjábís. (See my notes to 'Folklore in the Panjáb'—No. XII, Indian Antiquary, 1882.)

Asán, Panj. we, used like the Hindí ham, for I. jo = ko, to, also the sign of the objective case.

bo and abo, hill dialect = Panj. vo, an exclamation; oh! you! my dear, my friend.

battá = Hind. bat and bát, a road, path, hill dialect.

bich == Panj. vich, in, cf. Hind. bich, between.

gallán $kar'n\acute{a}$, lit., to make words, to talk. gall, Panj. a word = Hind. $b\acute{a}t$, in all its numerous idiomatic senses.

bahí, sitting. Cf. Hind. baith'ná, bitháná, bais'ná, baisáná, baisáeb, to sit, set. See song No. 5. To sit by the roadside and talk to passers by is about the most outrageous thing a native woman can do. See song No. 41.

Notes.

This song or hymn is sung at births by Doms and also by Ḥijras, a class of eunuchs, who dress up as old women and obtain a living by singing such songs at births and marriages. They are I think dying out. They go about generally three together with a drum.

The song purports to congratulate Jas'rat Ráe, i. e., king Daśaratha on the birth of Ráma Chandra; there is, however, a mixture of mythology in it, as Subhádrá was not the sister of Ráma but of Kṛishṇa. But the legends of Ráma and Kṛishṇa are often mixed up in popular song.

Badháí baj'ná, to make congratulatory music: to congratulate.

Big'siá, big'sí: Cf. Hindí bikas'ná, to be pleased. Observe peculiar masculine form big'siá, and the peculiar fem. big'sí.

Kausalyá was the mother of Ráma Chandra.

seh, hill dialect, he, the = Hindí woh, Panj. so. See song No. 45.

 $d\acute{u}bh = d\acute{u}b$, the $d\acute{u}b$ grass, synoda dactylus. Cf. sab and sabh, all. Dúb grass, is presented at weddings and auspicious occasions by the lower orders for luck.

búá-rání, the royal aunt, father's sister.

cholu, topu, dim. forms; the little cloak and cap. Friends or relatives always present and put the first clothes on to a baby. Parents never do so, as it would be unlucky.

Kanth lagáeke, embrace, lit., apply the throat or neck. lanká lútáeke: lit., rob the store: distribute gifts among the poor. ánand páeke, lit., receive pleasure; to be paid fees or dues.

Pahilá phul'jí tún Náen ká! Dújá nám Náráyaná.

Pahilá Chait suháuná, Je koí sunen agetá.

Appú síye, Káhaná, pag'ríyá Motiyán run-jhun láí,

Jugán tain jíyán, Káhaná; bariyán lakhán Hoyán putrán sahetá.

Kángrá.

The first flower is thine, O Name.

The second name Nárávana.

The first of Chait is lucky
If any one hear it first.

Do thou, O Kṛishṇa, with turban sewn With rattling pearls,

Live on, O Krishna, for ages and thousands of years With thy posterity.

Notes.

This is a notable song as illustrative of the worship of 'The Name'. Náráyaṇa or Ráma is here used for the deity as is usual in Sikh countries. $N\acute{a}m$, $R\acute{a}m$ $N\acute{a}m$, $R\acute{a}m$ $d\acute{a}$ $N\acute{a}m$, the name of God is generally held to be greater than Râma (God) himself.

The custom is to dedicate the first spring flower seen on a tree to Nám, and the second to Rám, thus giving Nám the first place. Observe the canonized form phul-ji for this first flower.

This song is sung by Doms, as they wander from house to house on the first of Chait (March-April), which in many parts is considered New Year's Day in the place of the first of Baisákh (April-May). It is considered very unlucky to mention the name Chait on this day, until one has heard it from the Dom.

The worship of Ráma and Krishna is again mixed up in this song.

 $N\acute{a}en = n\acute{a}m = Panj.$ nán. The Name: the Name of God.

Agetá, Panj. before the time, prematurely. If he hear it before (he speaks it): if he hear it first.

 $App\acute{u} = \acute{a}p$, may est thou.

Run-jhun, rattle, tinkle. Cf. Panj. run-run, tinkling, rattling: jhan'jhanáná, Hind. and Panj. to rattle.

Bariyán, year. barí, vare, barhí, Panj. hill. dial. = Hind. baras a year. See song Nos. 23 and 32.

Sahetá, with; also heth, Panj. hill. dial. = Hind. sáth. Sansk. sahita.

Kángrá.

The sunshine is growing hot;
O Rai Mamólu.
How shall we go along the road?
O you have captured my heart.

You be the horse, I the carriage;
O Rai Mamólu,
We will go along together:
O you have captured my heart.

You be the looking-glass, I the looking-glass ring;
O Rai Mamólu,
Looking pretty on beauty's hand:
O you have captured my heart.

You be the champá, I the mál'tí flower;
O Rai Mamólu,
Standing together in the garden (? only together)
O you have captured my heart.

You be the clove, I the cardamom;
O Rai Mamólu,
We will be sold in the druggists' shop,
O you have captured my heart.

Notes.

The point of this song lies in the antithesis of the masculine and feminine terms used by the girl to herself and her lover. This is very finely worked out; thus, ghorá is masc. and pál'kí, fem.: sísá, masc., and ár'sí fem.: champá, masc. and mál'tí, fem.: lóng, masc. and iláyachí, fem.

paí = parí, fell: common Panj. form. See song Nos. 26, 47.

tar-tikh'ni, very hot, burning; used of spices. It probably means fresh and hot; tar, fresh, + tikh'ni, Panj., hot, pungent. Cf. Panj. and Hind. tikhi. Here it is applied to sunshine (dhip).

Ráe Mamólu, apparently a fanciful name attached only to this song. Perhaps for the common name Mólu (Mall). Mamólá is the pied wagtail.

bo: see song No. 18.

rah'nge, rah'ndí; cf. jáh'ng, dih'ng; see song No. 15.

ik'ṭiyo, in one place, together. Cf. Panj. ik'ṭhaur, ik'haṭṭá, ikattar: Hind. ik'haṭṭa, ik'ṭhá, ik'ṭhaurá, ek'ṭho. The deriv. is ek, one + ṭhaur or ṭháon, place.

ár'sí, the ring worn by women on the thumb containing a small looking-glass.

baní rah'ndí: ban rah'ná, to look pretty, to be nice, to look well. Ban'ná can itself have this sense. See Fallon, art. ban'ná, 17.

den = de, Panj.; cf. nasalized inflection. See song No. 5.

goriyá, a beauty, belle. Poet., lit. fair.

champá, a shrub with yellow-scented flowers: Michelia champaca.
(?) yellow oleander.

mál'tí, a white highly-scented flower. Aganosma roxburghii, (?) frangipani.

ik'tiyo bágh, I am nearly certain from the rhyme of the song that this is wrong, and that the line should run khare rah'nge ik'tiyo sáth.

My love is a physician, all the world is sick;
He knows not the pulse, how will the sick live?

I am wounded,
My friend, in my heart
I am wounded.

My love goes away, I too go with him: Casting out my heart, giving up my life.

I am wounded,
My friend, in my heart
I am wounded.

If (food) be dear, I will not remain hungry; Sitting in the house I will eat leavings.

I am wounded,

My friend, in my heart

I am wounded.

If (clothes) be dear, I will not remain naked; Sitting in the house I will wear coarse cloths.

I am wounded,
My friend, in my heart
I am wounded.

If they abuse I will remain listening; Sitting silently in the house I will bear it.

I am wounded,
My friend, in my heart
I am wounded.

Notes.

nabaj = nabz, the pulse: it is a curious word to use here when $n\acute{a}r\acute{i}$ and $n\acute{a}ry\acute{a}$ baid, a pulse-doctor, are available terms.

mhín, hill dialect = bhí, also, too, = Sansk. api: Panj. ví.

mhín, kanen, jánán, bhukhyán, rah'nán, etc. All specimens of the nasalized inflection. See song No. 5, etc.

kaddh'ná, Panj. to cast out. See song No. 33.

taj'ná, Panj. to give up.

missá-kissá, lit. mixed, food made from the leavings of various grains: frugal diet: coarse food.

bahí, sitting, see song No. 18.

gálí kaḍḍh'ná, Panj. to abuse: lit. to cast out abuse.

kať nán, to bear with: put up with: Panj. Cf. the expressions, din kať ná, to pass the day: kaid kať ná, to bear imprisonment.

bich = Panj. vich, inside. See song No. 18.

Amb charhí karí koel bole, bol'dá sabad suháuní. "Bágán díye koele,

"Luchiyán pakáuní, tháliyá páuní, upar sóyán dá ság, Kháyán be, muhímiyán be."

"N'hoí, bo, dhoí, sej bichháí, áí-já, tún nájo yánien!

Kángrá.

The cuckoo called, sitting in the mango tree, making a sweet call. "O cuckoo of the gardens,

The beauty's husband has returned home after twelve years;
He asks for fennel; whence shall I give it?

Asking my mother, asking my father, I will go

To the market-gardener's garden; O to the market-gardener's garden.

Asking mother-in-law, asking father-in-law, I will go

To the market-gardener's garden; O to the market-gardener's garden."

"The fennel is sown, my beauty, the leaves are small,

The fruit is like pearls; how can I cut it?"

"The thin cakes are cooked and placed on the plate, the fennel on the top:

O eat them, O my brave one!"

"Bathe, my dear, and wash, spread the bed, and come, thou young and graceful one!

Shampoo my thighs: when I go to sleep, then go you for water."

Notes.

This is a difficult song to follow, owing to the confused way in which it is put together. The woman first addresses the cuckoo about her husband's return: the market-gardener then addresses her, then she her husband, and lastly her husband answers her.

Sabad, sab'd, Panj., a word, speech.

bágán, bág, báge, common corruptious of bágh, a garden.

díye, díyá, díyán, Panj. inflected forms of dá, dí, de = ká, kí, ke; of. bárán, soyán, ammán etc., all specimens of the nasalized inflection above noted. See song No. 5, etc.

bárán barhiyán, this term of twelve years is a sort of conventional expression to mean 'a long while.' It had its origin in the twelve years apprenticeship supposed to be undergone by saints and jogis. barhí, Panj. a year. See song Nos. 20 and 32.

kand = kanth, a husband.

soyán dá ság = soá, fennel, anethum sowa, a much-valued relish.

kudhí? hill dialect: whence? See song No. 27.

ammán jo, sassú jo, soh're jo, janghán jo, in all these cases jo = ko, to. See song No. 5.

 $r\acute{a}iy\acute{a}$ n = $r\acute{a}i$ n = $ar\acute{a}i$ n, Panj. a caste of Muhammadans who are market-gardeners.

chhuṭiyán lar'ján, lit., small fringes (chhuṭiyá = chhoṭá), used for small leaves of a young plant.

motiyán de jhunje; jhunjá or jhúnjá, dialectic = fruit. 'Fruit like pearls', means that the fruit or flower is still white and beaded, looking like beads on the plant, i. e., the plant is still very young.

kihán? Panj. how?

luchiyán = Hind. lucháí, a soft thin cake fried in butter.

 $p\'{a}un\'{i}$ (also $p\'{a}n\'{a}$) in Panj. = commonly Hind. p\'{a}n\'{a} to get; but also frequently in these songs = dal'n\'{a}, to place, put, cast, throw.

muhimiyán, muhimi, a brave man, a warrior; a village word corrupted from muhimm, Arab., a difficult thing. In Hind. it means a military exploit, a brave and difficult accomplishment.

bo, my dear, my love. See song No. 18.

nájo yánien, young and delicate beauty; nájo is a Hind. poet. corruption of $n\acute{a}zuk$, Pers. delicate.

jahlú-tahlú, when-then. See song No. 15.

jánghá, fut. form; I will go, cf. pánghí, I will throw (páná) in song No. 45. See also songs Nos. 15, 21. soí main jánghá, I will go to sleep. Cf. song 44.

áí, soí, seems here, as in several other places, to be a termination of the conjunctive participle.

The address to the cuckoo commences with "bágán díye koele": the market-gardener speaks at "báhe the soe": the woman addresses her husband at "luchiyán pakáuní;" and the husband answers at "n'hoí, bo, dhoí."

Notes.

Pan'ghat = pání-ghát, the place by the river or well side, where women go for water.

ját, common vulgar Hindí form = játá, játí.

bat = bat = Hind. bát a road, see song No. 18.

man-rakhú, lit., keeper of the heart, lover: cf. chit-rakhú song No. 27.

 $b\acute{a}r\acute{i}$, enclitic, indeed, altogether: see song No. 7. $k\acute{a}l'j\acute{a}=$ kalíj \acute{a} , the heart (liver). $s\acute{a}h\acute{i}$, hill dialect = s \acute{a} , like.

The house I have built is large, my dear,

In it I have built walls with doors all round, my love.

Wherever I enter, wherever I go out; ah, my dear, Nowhere is any one for me to love, my love.

Notes.

tán = tá, Panj. = to, Hind. indeed.

tán, pániyán, gher'wán, pher'wán, etc., observe the nasalization. Cf. song No. 5, etc.

pániyán; kothí páná (or páuná), hill dialect, to build a house: cf. Panj. word páná and páuná, to place, put, throw. See song No. 23, etc.

gher'wán, pher'wán. Gher'wán = gherá, gher'wá or gher'dár, in Panj. and Hind. lit, surrounding, enclosing, as applied to a dress means large, ample, full; in the hill dialect it is applied, as here, to a house or dwelling, to mean large, commodious. Pher'wán, lit., surrounding, hill dialect, is applied to a house whose doors open from room to room all round. Thus a European bungalow in India would be described by a Kángrá hill-man as $gher'w\acute{a}$, large and $pher'w\acute{a}$, with doors to every room. The point here is that "the house I have built is large and comfortable."

bo, my dear, see song No. 18.

jit-kit, inflected pron. forms Panj. = jis-kis: it and ut = is and us are similar ones.

bo múiye, also múiye bo and múiye. In the hill dialect used by women as an exclamation, hi! come here! I say! oh you! Also used sorrowfully, ah, my dear! alas, my dear! The Lúdiáná Panj. Dict. gives the following curious explanation of this word: "múiye, O dead one! spoken to a woman chidingly."

kityo = Panj. kití, anywhere.

 $ji\acute{u}=j\acute{i}$, life, the heart. Cf. Panj. forms ghyo and ghe $\acute{u}=gh\acute{i}$ (see song No. 5) and kityo = kit \acute{i} , above. Ji lag'n \acute{a} is an idiom, to be fond of, to be enamoured of, to love.

26.

Tere munhen dikhí karí Main bhatoí gayá. Tún tán hasí, bo, paí Maite riyoí gayá. Seeing your face
I became mad.
Then you laughed, my dear,
And tears fell from me.

Notes.

munhen, a strong example of the final nasalization frequently noted above.

bhatoí, mad. (?) = Hind. bhutáhá, possessed of a devil. hasí paí = hansí parí, laughed. See song Nos. 21, 47.

riyoí, it is said that there are two verbs: roná, to weep, ríyoná, to weep involuntarily.

maite = maiton and maithon: Panj. from me.

27.

I cannot find my love.
Searching everywhere I have seen,
(That) the keeper of my heart is not found.

Notes.

 $J\acute{a}$ n, a notable form = $j\acute{a}$ nasalized.

Kuthú? = kithú? hill dialect. whither? cf. kudhí? where? in song No. 23. In the hills tithú is in that place; uthú, in that place; kithú? in what place? etc. The Panj. forms are ethe, kithe, etc. Cf. also the form kusí (hill dial.) = kisí, any one: song No. 31: and kus? song No. 53.

Chit-rakhú, lit., keeper of the heart, a lover. See song No. 24 where the expression is man-rakhú, with precisely the same meaning.

Notes.

Ap'ne begáne: ap'ne, one's own people; begáne, people of other castes: the expression means 'friends and acquaintances.' Cf. song Nos. 16 and 36.

My dear, I have heard
They have married you off, dear:
My love, O what have they done?
Come to me, Phulamún.

There is the return after the year and the six months:
My love is for you:
Come and meet me, my dear,
Come to me, Phulamún.

Notes.

The custom in the Panjab is for the bride to return home to her parents awhile, after she has been married six months, and again after a year. The lover here reminds Phulamún (a common hill name for girls) of this custom, and says it is nothing to him that they have married her to another, if she will come to him when she comes home again.

bo, my dear. See song No. 18. kítá, common form of the past tense of karná in Panj.

múiye bo, come here. See song No. 25.

Notes.

 $n\acute{a}l$, Panj. with = se.

nihorá, Panj. and Hind. nihorá, favour, kindness.

ganwáná, gawáuná, Panj. to lose, waste. Janam ganwáná = Hind. janam bigárná, to spoil one's life, to be ruined for life. See song No. 3.

Kaddh kaleje, Panj. lit., casting out my heart, giving up my heart. See song No. 22.

hájar karní, (hazar = házir, présent) to make present; give up. putar paráyá, lit., a stranger's son, a stranger, estranged.

chun chun kaliyán, etc. It is not uncommon for the rich to have belá (jasmine) flowers picked and spread into a bed, over which they spread a sheet. This is done in Sáwan (July-Aug.) when these flowers are plentiful. Similarly rose leaves are used in Phágun (March-April.) Fallon New Hind. Dict. art. sej, gives a riddle which commences exactly as this verse.

Chun chun kaliyán sej bichave, Kadhí na pí ke nere áve; Jab dekhe pí ankh ughár, Chanchlá chálí, anchlá jhár.

Be muṇḍiyá, tain nún Chírá rangáwán gule nár dá: Terí kaglí dí ajab bahár, we! Be laṛke, be laṛke, Kanjaṛ-kháne dá jáná chhoṛ de!

Kángrá.

Ah my boy, for thee

I will dye a turban like a pomegranate flower:

Ah! the wondrous beauty of thy aigrette!

Ah my boy, ah my boy,

Leave off going to the prostitute's quarter!

Notes.

This song is sung by the young women attending the barát or marriage procession, and is addressed by way of chaff to any man, young or old, they may happen to meet. It is said that the use of such children's terms as be, mundiyá, and larká to grown men is a severe hit.

be, Panj. women's expression used to young children—Ah! Oh you, O. chirá, a fine turban of many colours.

gule nár, gulnár, pomegranate colour, is a favourite dye—see Leitner, Linguistic Fragments, Panj. Secretariat Press, 1882.

kaglí, hill dialect, the brush-like ornament used in turbans, an aigrette. It is a corruption of the Turki word kalghí. Kaglí is used to mean also a reward of honour from the old practise of giving aigrettes as a military reward: in this sense too it is used ironically, thus; tijju barí kaglí lagí gayí! (hill dial.) a fine reward you have got; a fine thing you have made of it.

kanjar, kanjar, a mat-weaver; in the Panj., however, the prostitute class (kanchan). Kanjri, Panj. a prostitute; this sense is said to have arisen from the very loose character of the Kanjar women.

Bábal morá re, naiyar chhutá jáe; Chár kahár morí jí, doliyá le-áo, re: Apná begáná chhutá jáe.

Kángrá.

Ah my father, I must leave my house;
Four bearers, dear, have brought my palanquin; alas!
I must leave my friends and acquaintances.

Notes.

This song is sung when the bride leaves for her husband's house. Fallon New Hind. Dict. art. apná quotes from the North-West Provinces this song in words almost identical with the above. He calls it the Departure Song or chálí ká gít.

Apná bigáná chhutá jáe! Bábal re, morá naíyar chhutá jáe!

naiyar, Hind. poet. for naihar, the father's or parent's house, one's home.

apná begáná, friends and acquaintances. See song No. 28.

Bedardí swámí ne mujhko
Phúlchhariyon se márá, re:
Chhariyon se márí ná marúngí;
Bolan se ati márá, re.

Kángrá.

My hard-hearted husband

Beat me with flower-sticks, alas!

Beaten with flower-sticks I will not die;

(But) he beat me much with words, alas!

Notes.

On the 4th day after the marriage it is the custom for the bride and bridegroom to fight a duel with light sticks covered with flowers.

Phulchharí, chharí, a light stick covered with flowers used for the purpose of this duel. The duel is of course a sham one and has led to a proverb quoted by Fallon, New Hind. Dict. art. chharí. Main ne is ke phúl kí chharí bhí nahín márí, I never touched him at all.

ati is pure Sansk. very much, much, = Hind. atká, atkí.

Chacharúen dittá ták,
Ki maungnún khúb laryá;
Súbe dyán láryán márí mirk,
Keh yár ghare bich baryá.

Kángrá.

The tick gave a bite,

At the same time the bug bit well;

(So) Súbá's wife made a sign,

So that her friend entered the house.

Notes.

In the Kangra District, when the bridegroom goes to claim his bride, it is nearly a universal custom for his bride's female relatives to sit him down to a dinner. They then sit round him and proceed to chaff him about his relatives. Among the rich nothing that is considered indecent is allowed; among the poor the songs are so broad as to be untranslateable. The above and the three next songs are those sung on such occasions in rich and well-to-do houses.

Súbá is here merely a generic name and represents any relative of the bridegroom who may happen to be married. Any other name can be inserted.

The point of this song is that Súbá's wife makes the bites of the ticks and bugs which infest her person the excuse for letting her lover into the house. The song is valuable as expressing what the rich in Kangra consider inoffensive chaff, and as showing their excessively dirty personal habits.

chacharúen: chacharú, hill dial., a tick, flea = Hind. and Panj. chichrá, chichrí. en, nasalized inflect. See song No. 5.

dittá, Panj. = diyá, gave.

ták, hill dial., bite of flea or tick.

ki, explained to mean in the hill dial. 'ussi wakt,' at that very moment.* I am inclined, however, to consider it is connected with or represents the Panj. conjunction ke, or.

maungnún, hill dial., a bug.

láryán, hill dial., a wife, cf. Hind. and Panj. láḍ, láṛ, love, endearment: Hind. and Panj. láḍlá, láḍlí, darling, dear; Hind., láḍo, pet; Panj. láḍu, love; láḍulá, darling; láḍo, favourite daughter; Hind. and Panj. girl's name, Láḍo: Panj. láṛí, bride.

mirk márná, to sign to, beckon, hill dial.

bich, inside, into. See song No. 18.

^{* [}ki in this sense, "when," "just when," is a wellknown idiomatic expression in Hindí. Ed.]

Bágen gájar múlí, Merá man boldá:

Rámen dárí muṇḍhán dí gajúlí, Merá man boldá.

Kángrá.

The carrot and radish of the garden My heart desires:

Ráma's wife, wanton from the beginning, My heart desires.

Notes.

This is the second of the four chaffy marriage songs. See song No. 38.

bágen, Rámen, good instances of the nasalized inflect. See songs 38 and 5, etc.

gájar múlí is a common idiom to signify anything worthless; hence the sting of this song.

man boldá, idiom, lit., my heart speaks; I desire, wish for, want.

Rámen, as Súbá in song 38, this is merely a generic name, any other would do.

dárí, hill dial., wife. Cf. Hind., dárá, a woman; dárí, slave-girl, concubine; whence Hind. and Panj. dárídár, a bastard. The Lúdiáná Panj. Dict. says dárí is a female slave taken in war, but is used as a term of sportive abuse. Perhaps 'Ráma's woman' would be the best rendering here.

muṇḍhán, Panj. muṇḍh, muḍḍh, the beginning. Cf. Panj. and Hind. muṇḍ, the head: Hind. muṇḍh, muḍḍh, chief, head.

muṇḍhán dí, from the beginning.

gajúlí, hill dial. (lit., itching) wanton.

40.

Rámen diyán láríyán khádá nímbwe dá chár. Peten tumb hoí.

Chambá.

Ráma's wife eats lime pickle, And has a feeling in her stomach.

Notes.

This is the third of the chaffy marriage songs. See song No. 38. It is a double entendre.

Rámen, pețen, nasalized inflect., see previous song. láríyán, wife. See song No. 38. chár = áchár or achchár, pickle. tumb, Panj. touch, feeling.

41.

Rúpe dáriyán
Batte bich gallán kítiyán;
Sun, kítiyán, jí!
Dárúye diyán katoriyán pítiyán;
Sun, pítiyán, jí!

Chambá.

Rúpá's wife
Sits by the roadside talking,
Listen, talking, Sir!
Drinking cups of wine,
Listen, drinking, Sir!
Notes.

This is the last of the chaffy marriage songs. See song No. 38. To sit by the roadside and to talk to the passers by is considered the height of impropriety in a woman (see song No. 18), and here it is added to by drinking wine.

dáriyán, wife. See song No. 39.

batte bich gallán kítiyán. See song No. 18, where almost the same expression occurs in the same sense.

To-day I must go to my own country:

Making myself handsome, making myself smart.

(There) the water is pure, and the wind is cool,

And the faces beautiful to look upon.

To-day I must go to my own country.

Notes.

 $ajji = \acute{a}j$, to-day. $b\acute{a}r\acute{i}$, also, moreover. See song No. 7.

thand'ri = thandi, cold. The insertion of r and r in such words is not uncommon. See song Nos. 44, 45.

bes, (a curious word) the best. Fallon, New Hind. Diet. has bis, adj., better, more excellent.

43.

"Ní kuryé, já tún sauh'rián piṇḍ!"
"Dúngí khúí te ghará nahín khich'dá."

. Panjáb.

"My daughter, go you to your husband's village!"

"The well is deep and the water-pot does not draw."

"Take a small water-pot in your hand!

My daughter, go to your husband's village!"

Notes.

This song is a hit at the hard work, young wives are made to do in their husband's houses, and their unwillingness to leave their own homes.

ní, vocative exclamation used towards women. Panj.

kurí, Panj., a virgin; but used by parents to their daughters, married or unmarried.

sauh'rián piṇḍ, sauh'rá, father-in-law, sauh'rián, Panj. parents-in-law.

piṇḍ, Panj. a village. Sauh'rián de piṇḍ, Panj. parents-in-law's village = husband's home.

te = ate, Panj. and.

wich = vich = bich; inside, in. See song No. 18. $khich'd\acute{a} = khainch't\acute{a}$, draws. Cf. úchián, next song.

44.

Gharyán, be tún chhail lohárá, U'chián ḍaṇḍián díúrá, be. Díúrá bál'sán sammak-rátí, Aṭ'ṛá ghol'sán baríyá parátí: Main ghar bír práhunán, be. Bh'ro, bh'ro, be gad'wá, thand'ren pánien; Bír dharyáyá ghar gayá, be.

Kháyán, be bírá, bare bare g'ráhen, Sas'rí áwasí karkasá, be.

Awasín, áwasín, merá kyá kar'sín? Ik gharí pal páhunán, be.

Kángrá.

Forge me, oh thou good blacksmith,

A lamp with a tall stem, O.

I will burn the lamp all night,

And I will mix flour on a large plate;

I entertain my brother in my house, O.

Fill, fill, O cup, with cold water;

My brother goes thirsty to the house, O.

Eat, O brother, large mouthfuls,

Mother-in-law will come scolding, O.

She will come, she will come: what will she do to me?

I am only entertained an hour, O.

Notes.

The nasalized inflect. so often above noted is very strongly marked here. Gharyán and kháyán are imperatives; again in úchián-ḍaṇḍián we have the fem. form of it, and in thaṇḍ'ren pánien the masc. form. See song No. 47.

 $\acute{u}ch\acute{a}=$ unch \acute{a} , tall. Cf. songs Nos. 31, 45, 50, 47; 43.

dandí, the beam of a pair of scales: the stem of the tall kind of Indian brass lamp.

diúrá = diurá = diá, a lamp.

bál'sán, ghol'sán; fut. forms masc.: áwasín, áwasí, kar'sín; fut. forms masc. Cf. song Nos. 15, 21, 23.

sammak-ráti, Panj., all night. sammak, all, the whole, is only found in this phrase: (?) connected with sab, sabh, all.*

 $\acute{a}t$ 'r \acute{a} = $\acute{a}t\acute{a}$: thand'ren = thande: $pr\acute{a}hun\acute{a}n$ = $p\acute{a}hun\acute{a}n$. All instances of the insertion of r and r. See song No. 42.

práhunán, páhunán, to entertain: páhu, a guest.

bh'ro, bh'ro = bharo, bharo; fill, fill.

gad'wá, Panj., a small brass drinking vessel (loṭá).

dharyáyá, hill dial., thirsty. Cf. Panj. tis, tih and treh, thirst: tiháí, thirst and tiháiá, thirsty. (?) dharyáyá = treháiá, thirsty.

g'ráhen, mouthfuls: garáh or garás, a handful of food as eaten by the hand, a mouthful.

[* It is a semitatsama word, for Sanskrit samyak. Ed.]

"Ghar ghar d'rekán phuliyán; Tinhán d'rekán dí thaṇḍ'rí chháún,

"In front the dogs bark;
Remain with your mother-in-law;
O sister, remain at home."
"I will throw cakes to the dogs;
O brother, take me.
Take me to my mother:
O brother, take me.

Notes.

d'rek = bakáyan; the Persian lilac, melia composita. It is almost the shadiest tree in India, better even than the ním, its relative. It is also related to the tún and the mahogany. It bears large bunches of lilac flowers, and may be seen along the roadsides in several Panjáb districts. Fallon, New Hind. Dict. wrongly calls it the oleander (see art. بكاين) the proper name for which is kaner or kanail and the scientific name nerium odorum. Fallon by the way (art. كنير) renders kaner, too, by oleander.

tinhán, Panj., those, they, the.
thand'rí; see song Nos. 42, 44.
chháún, Panj. = Sansk. and Hind. chháyá, shade.
seh, he, she, it, that, the. See song No. 19.

Taking a knife I sat down to peal them; I cut them in four; I bought juicy limes,

Taking the limes I made a relish (with them); the smell reached the bazaar;

I bought juicy limes.

Taking him my husband's sister taught her brother, 'Turn my brother's wife out of the house.'

I bought juicy limes.

Taking a stick he began to beat me: he turned the brother's wife out.

I bought juicy limes.

Taking flour he sat down to knead, and he made it watery.

I bought juicy limes.

Getting on to the roof he shouted out, 'come, my house-wife.'

I bought juicy limes.

Taking the ladle he ran to the fire: the people cried shame;
I bought juicy limes.

Notes.

dhuron Láhoron, Panj. inflect. from afar, from Láhor.

áí-bikyá, áí conj. part.; see songs Nos. 32, 23.

ras'liá = rasílá, juicy.

múlen liyá, common hill phrase, bought. múlen, inflected nasally from Panj. mull or múl, price (= Hind. $m \delta l$).

ánde, Panj. form of áte = lit. came. Here used idiomatically for 'to get.' See song No. 56.

hatán jo = háton ko, to the shops.

p'rát'ri, in the hill dialect, a paring knife or instrument. parátí and parát is a large dish usually, and Panj. parát'rá is a wooden kneading trough. See song No. 44. This word p'rát'rí is a curious one.

chír'ná, to peal = Hind. chhíl'ná.

chhamk'ná, Panj. = Hind. chhaunk'ná, to fry spices in butter. Hind. bagkár'ná, = Panj. tur'kh'ná, means to pour hot butter on to spices. All these words have the sense of to season. The seasoning here referred to, called in Panj. neurá, is thus made. Chillis or spices are mixed with oil or ghí and fried till the mixture burns, slices of lime are then thrown in. While cooking the smell is so pungent as to make all near it cough and sneeze, and so penetrating as to make the neighbours unpleasantly aware of what is going on.

musak = mushk, smell, odour.

kaddh búhe báh'r, cast her beyond the threshold; Panj. $kaddh'n\acute{a}$, Panj. to cast, throw. $b\acute{u}h\acute{a}$, Panj. threshold. $b\acute{a}h'r = bahir$, outside, beyond.

 $n\acute{u}$ n, Panj. (= ko) to.

 $pan's\acute{a}r$, watery, thin. (?) $P\acute{a}n\acute{i}$, water, (in Panj. in composition, pan) + $s\acute{a}r$, all.

koṭhá (koṭhen, masc. nasal. inflect, see above, passim) the upper story (bálá khána) of a house, the roof.

hakkán mar'ná, hill dial., to shout out, call out.

kar'chhi' = kar'chhi, a brass ladle, aggi jo = ág ko, to the fire. jo, see song No. 5.

 $lok\acute{a}n = logon (log), people, (they).$

phat'kár, blame; usually a curse, malediction. phat'kár dená, to cry fie or shame on, to blame.

Sisters, father-in-law seized a stick, brother-in-law a mallet, sisters!
Sisters, father-in-law's thigh was broken and brother-in-law's finger, sisters!

Sisters, each of them got his own (troubles), I eat the cake, sisters!

Notes.

Bhainon, see song No. 45.

koṭhí, (cf. koṭhá, in previous song) an inner (or upper) room in native houses used as a storeroom; larder, granary, store-room.

kúpá ghíúc dá, the leathern ghí vessel. ghyo, ghíú, gheú, Panj. = ghí; see song No. 5. Kupá, kúpá, kuppá, the large leathern vessel used for keeping ghí.

chátá, the vessel for receiving the juice of the sugarcane as it comes from the mill. chátá gure dá the molasses pot. For an accurate description of gur and the native processes of sugar-making, see Carnegy's Kachahrí Technicalities, art. úkh.

 $p\acute{u}r\acute{a}$ $b\acute{a}hy\acute{a}$: I put the cakes to bake: I put it on the fire. $rot\acute{i}$ $b\acute{a}h'n\acute{a}$, to put bread on to the fire, is a common expression; lit., to make the bread expand. This sense of $b\acute{a}h'n\acute{a}$ seems to have escaped the Dicts. The $p\acute{u}r\acute{a}$ is a sweet cake made of $gh\acute{i}$, gur and flour.

chhikkyá: chhikk'ná, Panj., = Hind. chhínk'ná, to sneeze. Cf. pakhí = pankhí, song No. 31. And dughá = dúnghá, song No. 45; úchá = unchá, song No. 44. The sneezing of a cat (or in fact any sneezing) is considered a bad omen in India. Cf. song No. 50.

pares'ni = parosan, a female neighbour: my neighbour became inquisitive.

tawá, Hind., an iron plate for baking bread, a griddle. Fallon.

jhúnđá (Panj. jhunđ, Hind., chádar), a cloth worn by women over their heads and faces to conceal them.

mathá tek'nán, lit., I struck my forehead; I prostrated myself. The Kángrá custom is for young wives or the girls of a family to prostrate themselves and touch the feet of any old female relative on seeing her for the first time in the day. The mother is excepted.

pírhíyá, pírhí; a low stool with a high straight back used by native women.

neí (conj. part., see song Nos. 23, 32) from Panj. nená (= lená, Hind. n for l), to take.

satyá; saťná, hill dial., to throw.

bhur'khyá (lit. jumped, leapt), used of a rat or mouse, to scratch, pull at, make a noise.

lárhí, lárí, lah'rí, lárhiá, hill dial, the field adjoining the house, the home-paddock, the compound.

mung'rí, hill dial., a small wooden mallet used for patting earth.

bhaj'ná, Panj., to be broken. Cf. Hind. bhich'ná, to be crushed Sansk. root, prich.

unhán jo, to them, vide supra.

paí-gaí, had befallen. On them their own (troubles) had fallen. painá Panj. = Hind. par'ná, see songs Nos. 21, 26.

chhakí, conj. part. (see neí, above), from chhak'ná, Panj., to eat.

billián chhikkyá and soh'ren pak'rí. These are good examples of the nasal inflect. so frequently noted above. Here in both cases used for the agent with ne; $i\acute{a}n$, fem. and en, masc. This is very common in the hills. E. g., as familiar examples, ghorián khaí liyá, the mare eat it: ghoren khaí liyá, the horse eat it. See song Nos. 44, etc.

Kángrá.

Move in and out, my fan, as the snake turns and twists:

My brother has gone to his wedding with his green bow on his shoulder.

My brother has returned married, and sits in a cool garden.

Come together, maids,—to go and see our sister-in-law.

What is there to see in our sister-in-law? She is nut-brown and full grown!

Our brother is meek: our sister-in-law is tricky.

Notes.

pakhíye, pakhí, = pankhí, a small fan. See song No. 31.

lap lap kar'ná, to twist in and out, to wriggle along: hill dial. Cf. Panj., laph, a wave, surge, billow; Hind., lap jhap chál, a rapid awkward gait; lip'na, to bend as a cane.

mundhen sab'j kumán: green bow on shoulder, fully armed or dressed. Mundhen, nasal inflect., on the shoulder. In the old days in Kángrá, the carrying of a green bow was the sign of being fully got-up for a holiday occasion. Green is the usual colour for luck in India.

 $muty\acute{a}r$, Panj., a fully developed girl: grown-up girl: a girl of the age of puberty. Also $= mot\acute{a}$, fat, stout.

sádá, Panj. = asádá, our.

chak-chál, hill dial., clever, sharp, tricky. Cf. Hind. chik'ná, oily; chik'ní-chup'rí bát, oily speech, flattery: chak'má, a trick.

Where shall I go and smell?

Notes.

khinún, khinnú, khiddú, khiddo, Panj., a small ball or plaything: a child's bouncing ball.

we = be, O!
kithe? Panj., lit., in what place? where?

52.

A, re koko; já, re koko!Jangal pakke bér:(Merá bíbí sone máng'tá;)Dam'rí ke do ser.

Panjáb.

Come, O crow; go, O crow!

The wild-plums are ripe in the jangal:

(My baby wants to sleep;)

Two sers for a pie.

Notes.

This and the next three songs are sung by my ayahs, Panjábís, to my son aged about a year, to send him to sleep. They seem to be standard songs for English babies, but I do not know for certain if they are sung by the women to their own children.

koko; a crow, child's bugbear: bugaboo. ber, the wild-plum: Zyziphus jujuba.

bibi, a little baby, applied to any European baby, male (as here) or female: probably it is a corruption of the English word 'baby.'

dam'rí, a pie: a nominal coin: for nothing, for a song.

Nindí, nindí, bíbí! Roți, makhan, chíní!

Panjáb.

Sleep, sleep, baby!
Bread, butter and sugar!

Notes.

This is a song in English nurseries. See song No. 52.

nindi = nind, sleep. Nindi is the usual form of the word in nurseries. E.~g.~Nindi~karo, go to sleep, is a very common expression by ayahs towards very young children.

bíbí, baby. See song No. 52.

54.

Merá bíbí sotá, Bilátí pankhá chal'tá hai : Merá bíbí sotá, 'Arab ká pání pítá hai :

Panjáb.

My baby sleeps,
The thermantidote is working:
My baby sleeps,
And drinks pure water.

Notes.

An English nursery song. See song No. 52.

bíbí, baby. See song No. 52.

Bilátí pankhá = Viláyatí pankhá or English pankhá, which is the ordinary Hind. and Panj. term among the servants of the English for the thermantidote.

'Arab ká pání, this is a puzzle. It has been explained to mean, 'sweet water' or 'pure water.' In Arabic 'arab and 'arib are used to mean 'much pure water,' or as verbs, 'having much water' (of wells, rivers, etc.) This may account for this expression, but the derivation seems doubtful. Perhaps the expression should be adrak ká pání, ginger water or gingerade.

Alang-palang ká pál'ná, Resham lágí dorí; Kábul se mughalání áí Kharí jhuláve pál'ná; Nindí, nindí, bíbí! Nindí, nindí, karo.

Panjáb.

A swing-cradle for your bed,
Hung with silken ropes;
The nurse has come from Kábul
To make the cradle swing:
Sleep, sleep, my baby,
Sleep, sleep.

Notes.

This is the last of the English nursery lullables. See song No. 52. $p\acute{a}l'n\acute{a}$ and palan, a swing-cradle, cradle. $l\acute{a}g\acute{i} = lag\acute{i}$, fastened.

mughalání, properly a female Mughal (Moghul): used for an attendant in the women's apartments in Musalmán houses; a maid, housemaid, maid-servant, nurse.

Kángrá.

How shall I get them now?

The shepherd's flock has come

And the goats have eaten all the leaves,

And the squirrels have eaten the wild-plums.

This (tree) will not flower now.

Who will live? who will die?

Who will do this again?

How shall I get them now?

Who will live again a whole year?

With what friend shall I laugh (and play)?

This (tree) will not flower now.

Notes.

The tenor of this song is rather elevated for small children; it is, however, very popular. The child is supposed to arrive at a favourite ber tree (wild plum, Zyziphus jujuba), and finds that all the fruit and leaves have been destroyed by goats and squirrels.

hun, Panj., now.

min'jo, hill dialect, to me; = main + jo. See song No. 5.

"Come and take service in Chambá, friend; Come and take service in Chambá, friend."

"That difficult pass, that difficult path; That difficult pass, that difficult path:

A young child in my arms, friend;

A young child in my arms, friend."

"Come and take service in Chambá, friend;

Come to service in Chambá.

Notes.

This is one of the songs of the Gaddis or Hindú shepherds of the Kángrá mountains (see song No. 56). Service under the Chambá Rájá is looked on as very remunerative in Kángrá, because, though the pay is insignificant, the room for exaction is unlimited. The mountains, however, into Chambá from Kángrá are very high and difficult.

Fallon. New Hind. Dict., art. وياتي quotes a 'hymn' in almost the exact words of this song.

O shepherdess, O come and have a slide!

O shepherdess, O come and have a slide.
Thy shepherd to-day is not at home;

O how will happiness be in thy heart?

Notes.

This is another song of the Gaddís (see song No. 56). A slide down the sides of the snow-clad mountains is a common amusement. This is a woman's song.

Gadeți, a Gaddi women, a Gaddi's daughter; shepherdess. Eți, hill dial., is a common termination to signify the daughter or woman of a tribe or caste. Cf. Khatreți, a Khatri woman; Brahmaneți, a Brahman woman; Chamareți, a Chammar woman; etc.

bo, O, See song No. 18, etc.

ghasútarí, hill dial., a slide in the snow: a slide down the snow-clad mountain side: toboganing. Ghasútarí kháná, to slide, to have a slide.

Gaddí terá, lit., thy Gaddí, thy shepherd: among the Gaddís it is used for husband, but not for any other male relative. Gaddí terá, thy husband: Gaddí merá, my husband.

marhe; Panj., marh, marhí, a Hindu tomb or monument: hill dial., a monument or temple on a hill top: among the Gaddis a house, a hill-side hut.

Into his house.

My dear, the bees stung at Anjaná's fair, O.

Notes.

The monkey god Hanumán was the son of Anjaná, wife of Kesarí, a monkey, by Vayu or Pavana, the Wind; whence his metronymic Anjanéya. At Gurk'rí, four miles from Kángrá town, there is a temple to Anjaná, and a fair is held there in her honour in October. The story goes that many years ago a man at the fair accidentally disturbed a bees' nest, and the bees dashed out and stung all the people, who ran into the thick jungles in the neighbourhood.

Kángrá.

O, when I heard that bouncing balls were at the ferry:
O, I paid the fare and had a bouncing ball brought across.
A gaily-turbaned man brought the bouncing ball:
The bouncing ball!

I am throwing rubbish into the rolling Ráví.
O don't take my hand! my bracelets break.
A gaily-turbaned man brought the bouncing ball:
The bouncing ball!

I am throwing twirly-whirlies into the rolling Ráví:
The water-carrying girls of Bhaun have ruined the country.
A gaily-turbaned man brought the bouncing ball:
The bouncing ball!

I am throwing the brooms into the rolling Ráví:
The potter-women of Bhaun have ruined the country.
A gaily-turbaned man brought the bouncing ball:
The bouncing ball!

O, you walk the roads with kawwá-stick in hand:
Turn and look back! O your wife is standing (there)!
A gaily-turbaned man brought the bouncing ball:
The bouncing ball!

Notes.

This song is very popular among young married women, and exhibits the peculiar habit many of them have of playing with children's bouncing balls (khinnún, see song No. 51). They try and see how often they can bounce them up and down without a fault.

Bhaun is the city part of the town of Kángrá, and Rái stands for Ráví, which, however, does not flow past Kángrá, but on the other side of the Dhaulá Dhár or Outer Himálayan Range.

The first things a native wants in a new place are water and a ghará. These at Kángrá are supplied by the jhírís and the kumhárís who hawk them about to strangers. They are of notoriously loose character, hence the allusion in the song.

Asán, bo, je sunyá: cf. song No. 32: when I heard. Je = jo, when: usually it means if, in Panj.

majúrí, vulgar for majdúrí = mazdúrí, a labourer's pay. I have heard majúr'ní used for a female cooly in the Panj. Courts.

The peacock caught a snake.

When the thunder rolls,

If the peacock makes his cry

Then the snake slips from his mouth.

Notes.

The above is a play on the several meanings of the word sárang; viz., (1) a peacock, (2) a snake, (3) thunder, (4) the peacock's cry: sárang also means (5) a musical measure or rág sung at midday, (6) a cloud, (7) a frog.

Fallon, New Hind. Dict., quotes the Hindí version of this song; art. سارنگ.

Panjáb.

The goat says, "I! I! I! I!"

And in saying "I!" is killed.

The mainá says "I am nothing! I am nothing!"

And sitting (at ease) is fed with sugar.

Notes.

Here we have a play upon the word "main" and the bleating of a goat at the shambles: and also a play upon the words "maina" and "main na". The catch has a moral to it, "the proud man has a fall and the humble gets good things."

Note on some earthen pots found in the alluvium at Mahesvara (Mahesar).

—By P. N. Bose, B. Sc., F. G. S., Geological Survey of India.

(With two Plates.)

Mahesvara is the capital of the southern portion of Holkar's territory known as the Subhá of Nimar, and is situated on the Narmadá some 40 miles south of Indore. Modern Mahesvara rose into importance during the reign of Ahalyá Bái who made it the seat of her government. As containing the ashes of that remarkable and venerable woman it is largely resorted to by pilgrims.

Captain Dangerfield in his paper on the Geology of Malwa* mentions having been shewn in the alluvium at Mahesvara large "earthen vessels and bricks," which were stated "to have been, at a very remote period, overwhelmed by a shower of earth." Since Dangerfield's time, however, —and he wrote more than 60 years ago—no one has taken any notice of them. I happened to pass through Mahesvara last April, and wanted to avail myself of the opportunity to examine the antiquities in question. I was located in a bungalow to the west of the town. (Pl. XIV, fig. 1.) The upper 6 feet of the alluvium upon which the bungalow stands, is composed very largely of broken pottery, and I extracted a nearly whole urn-shaped earthen pot, quantities of more or less damaged cup-shaped vessels, fresh water shells, fragments of lower jaw and bones of Ruminants, &c. The pottery remains had evidently been carried by the river from some place higher up; and I learnt on inquiry, that at the eastern extremity of the town, there were to be seen by the river side the remains of an ancient city turned upside down; as my informant stated, through supernatural agency. the Narmadá at the place (known as the "Mandal kho") are some 65 feet high. Approaching it by boat, one sees from a distance two well-defined beds of unequal thickness, the upper (about 20 feet) remarkably light. coloured, and the lower (about 45 ft.) of a brownish hue. On getting to the place, my guides pointed out towards the base of the upper bed portions of pottery-work, no doubt as they had been pointed out to Dangerfield threescore years ago, and are described by him as large earthen vessels. The pottery-works appeared to enclose round wells, of which I counted half-a-dozen. They are all more or less inaccessible, and it is not without considerable difficulty that I managed to clamber up to one.

The two zones of the alluvium just mentioned are separated by a thin stratum of very dark-coloured clay which to all appearance formed the soil of the now inhumed city. The lower portion (6 ft.) of the light coloured upper zone contains bits of charcoal and fragments of pottery in abundance. The presence of the former would lead one to infer a large admixture of ashes. Pieces of human and cattle bones, small pebbles, bricks and a few large rolled pebbles chipped off artificially were obtained from this bed. The overlying alluvium (about 14 ft.) is characterised by the entire absence of these, and the occurrence of large rolled pebbles and freshwater The pottery-work seen from below is found on examination to be composed of very thick, closely fitting circular pieces open at both ends, measuring $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. vertically, and with a diameter of a foot and a half. From the well enclosed by this pottery I dug out a very large number of earthen pots of various shapes and sizes piled up with their mouths downward, some quite empty, others filled partially or entirely with an argillaceous material. The length of the vessels varies from 11 to 7 inches, and the diameter from 8 to 6; the diameter of the mouth which is without a lid ranges between There is no ornamentation except an unsymmetrical fur-5 and 3 inches. row or two an inch below the neck. See Pl. XIV, XV, fig. 2-5.

The contents of the pots when not empty are an indurated marl presenting a vesicular appearance, and containing bones of birds and small mammals and fragments of charcoal. The vesicles are irregularly elongated, and are encrusted over with a thin yellowish-brown substance which Mr.
Mallet of the Geological Survey (who very kindly analysed a specimen) considers to be the remains of some decomposed vegetable matter. Large numbers of ribs probably of goats and sheep and some teeth were got mostly from the interstices between the pots. The entire absence of human bones or human teeth from inside the well is notable.

The well dug into (g in Pl. XIV, fig. 1) goes down about 10 ft. into the lower zone of the alluvium, though the boundary-work of pottery is carried only 2 feet downward. Earthen pots were found from top to bottom all, as remarked before, with their mouths directed downward.

As the other wells were quite inaccessible, they could not be opened up without excavations on a large scale for which I had no time. If similarity of appearance might justify us in inferring anything we would infer them to contain earthen vessels also similar to those obtained from the well just described. It would be extremely desirable to examine them, especially as excavations may lead to important discoveries and throw some light on the early history of India. I may mention in this connection that I noticed at one end of the section, at "Mandal koh," two rows of bricks (k in the diagram), as if they enclosed the door of a house.

The points which present themselves for determination are—

- (1.) The age of the inhumed town.
- (2.) The purpose for which the well described in this paper was constructed, and the earthen vessels placed in it.
 - (3.) The cause of inhumation.

I have not been able to settle any of these important questions to anything approaching satisfaction. I shall, however, throw together a few notes in the hope that they may be of some service to the archæologist.

The shape of the earthen vessels is quite peculiar, and the potters of the district have long since ceased to make anything like them. When we consider, besides, the thickness of the alluvium covering the wells, and of the pottery-bed below the bungalow, as well as the age of modern Mahesvara itself which is built upon these deposits and is at least some four centuries old,* we can have no doubt about the antiquity of the inhumed town. That there was an ancient city of the name of Mahesvarapura or Mahesa-Maṇḍala, there is fair historical evidence to prove.† It is possible that the relics now discovered mark the site of that city.

Cautley in his account‡ of an ancient town discovered near Saharanpur speaks of a well near the site of that town from which "a great quantity of gharás or waterpots were taken out whole, as if," says he, "they had fallen into the well and sank." He does not, however, describe them or their contents, nor does he tell us how they occur. Their large number, and the circumstance of their having been taken out whole, make their occurrence by mere accident extremely improbable, and incline me to suspect that they were, like the earthen pots under notice, placed in the well by human hands, and for one and the same purpose. But what could this purpose be? In the present instance certainly, the wells could not have been village wells, for in that case there would not have been so many of them close together especially so near the river. Nor could they evidently have been meant for irrigation purposes. The most eligible hypothesis that has presented itself to me is, that the gharás were dedicated to the dead, some with the ashes after cremation, and others with cooked cereals and The ashes would explain the presence of bits of charcoal in the marly contents of the gharás. The vesicular texture of these contents, and the peculiar lining encrustation of the vesicles could be satisfactorily accounted for by the mixing up of the cereal grains with marl brought into the pots by infiltration and their subsequent decomposition. evolution of gases during this process would, as observed by Mr. Mallet, cause the vesicles to be diverse and irregular; and such is found to be the case. Some at least of the bones found are probably the remnants of dishes of animal food.

^{*} The inscriptions at Kálesvara and Mátamgesvara, the two oldest temples at Mahesvara bear the dates Samvat 1622 and 1623 respectively. An inscription in a mosque near the fort deciphered to me by a Munshi gives 800 Hijra as the date of its erection.

[†] Maheṣvara has been identified by Cunningham with the Mohishifalopulo of Hiouen Thsang. ("Ancient Geography," p. 488.) The 'Mahíṣa Maṇḍala' to which a Missionary was sent by Aṣoka in B. C. 240 (Turnour "Maháwaṃso," pp. 71-73) is probably present in the names Maheṣvara and Maṇḍaleṣvara which are only four miles apart.

[‡] Journal of the As. Soc. of Bengal, Vol. III. for 1834, p. 225.

Preserving the ashes after cremation and supplying the dead with cooked food, were practices in vogue with many tribes, both Indian and extra-Indian. Major Mockler, for instance, describes some earthen pots from Makrán,* in which he says the dead were supplied with cooked food. But in this and similar cases the urns or pots occur in well recognizable and indisputable graves. In the instance at hand, however, the pots are extra-ordinarily numerous, and their mode of occurrence quite peculiar.

The Thero Mahádeva who was sent by Asoka in B. C. 240 to Mahísa Maṇḍala† is reported to have made 40,000 converts to Buddhism, and ordained 40,000 more as priests. Hiouen Thsang, however, describes the people of the kingdom of Mahesvarapura as heretics, the most numerous being the Páṣupatas.‡ So that if the well had anything to do with Buddhist funeral rites, it must have been sunk either before or during the earlier centuries of the Christian era. But as the Buddhist topes hitherto discovered are to my knowledge of a quite different structure from the well-tope at Maheṣvara (if tope indeed it be), I am inclined to think that the latter was the work of some non-Buddhist Scythian tribe in which case too the date could not be later than that just surmised.§ I have not, however, discovered any certain traces of such a tribe. The Bheels, the aboriginal people of the district, burn their dead, except infants and adults who die from unnatural causes.

Dangerfield speaks of a shower of earth as the cause assigned for the inhumation; I was told that the place had heen overturned. These traditions probably point to an earthquake which would cause submergence, as in the case of the fort and village of Sindru on the Indus.

The collections consisting of gharás, bones, &c., have been presented to the Indian Museum.

- * Proc. A. S. B. for July 1877. The vessels found by Major Mockler now in the collection of the Indian Museum are not unlike those which form the subject of this paper.
 - † See note, ante p. 228.
 - ‡ "Hist. de la vie de Hiouen Thsang" pp. 414-415.
- § James Prinsep from an examination of the coins discovered by Cautley assigns the early centuries of the Christian era as the date of the destruction of the ancient city near Saharanpur.

THE MAITHILÍ LANGUAGE.

This reading book contains nearly all the Maithilí Literature I have been able to collect. I hope that every word in it will be found in the Vocabulary; special precautions having been taken to secure this object.

The prose will be found much the purest, being practically written according to the rules laid down in the grammar. The poetry is not so pure, poetic license admitting many Hindí and Braj forms and words. These will be found noted in the Vocabulary. Of the poets, the worst sinner in this respect is Fatúrí Lál, in the song of the Famine. Bidyápati or Vidyápati, as he is indifferently called, is comparatively pure, but, as might be expected, archaic forms and words appear in his poems, and he is frequently obscure ar 'almost always difficult. Often he exhibits a neatness of expression and conciseness worthy of Martial. I hence put him near the end of the reading book, though his songs are the first which I collected and reduced to order.

The first piece given, is a letter copied verbatim et literatim from a letter filed in my court; only names of persons and places have, for obvious reasons, been changed, and a few signs of punctuation added.

TRANSLATION OF A LETTER WRITTEN BY DURMIL JHA' TO MUSAMMA'T CHAMPA'BATI',

After compliments, may you live for a long time. My good wishes to Champábatí: Moreover, I have learnt both from the mouth of Lachhuman, and from your letter that you are all well, and my heart has been pleased thereby. Lakshmí Debí has had a little child, and we must make arrangements for its support; she has no mother, and I hope that you will keep an eye on her, and see that she gets every thing necessary (lit. oil and pots). I have sent you a box herewith, it is for you, keep it. In the box there are six rupees, and some Kábulí* fruits; open the box, and give two rupees and half the fruit to Lakshmí Dái, but give it privately. You will keep two rupees, the remainder of the fruit, and the box; I have sent them for you. Don't be unhappy about anything: all your property, which has been spoilt, will be recovered for you; and then only will I be easy in my mind.

My compliments to the father-in-law. Moreover, it is a long time since you have pressed Bholá Sáhu to pay the money he owes. You know what sort of temper my son has, so realize the money quickly, or you will repent afterwards. He has sold all the paddy in the granary. When will the fool get decent wisdom?

My good wishes to Gobind Bábu.

^{*} The word masálá usually means "spices." I am, however, assured that here it must be translated as above.

The next piece selected is the song of king Salhes. It is most popular throughout the district amongst the low caste people, and is printed word for word as it was taken down from the mouth of a Dom. Salhes was the first Chaukídár, and is much worshipped by Dusádhs, a caste whose profession is to steal and to act as Chaukídárs, preferably the former. Throughout Tirhut, Salhes astháns can be seen under the village pipal tree, composed of a raised mud platform surmounted by mounted figures made of clay, representing the various characters of the song. Here the Dusádhs worship him.

Although a song, it is written in prose, and is chanted, rather than sung. Note that, throughout, Transitive Verbs in the past tense frequently take inflections which properly belong only to Neuter Verbs.

TRANSLATION OF THE SONG OF KING SALHES.

- 1. Morning came, and, Lo, Dauná Málin stands in the doorway, and with clasped hands prays reverently unto the gods and saints: "Hear me, Ye fifty-six krors of gods of heaven, and Thou, O Indra, who hast given me birth, and who in my birth-chamber on the sixth night thereafter didst write (in the book of fate) that I should wed one like unto Salhes. For him have I kept my bosom covered with my body-cloth, nor have I ever cast eyes upon another man, nor from my birth have I adorned me with vermilion. For such a spouse, have I built a bridal chamber of fresh bamboos. I have made and adorned a scarlet bed, and on it spread a well swept mattress for him. With a split reed have I applied silver spots to my brow, for the sake of my spouse."

 Refrain—"O fair one, will he come?"
- 2. Lo and behold, morning came, and as the cuckoo sings, she stands in the doorway, and reverently with clasped hands prays unto the fifty-six krors of gods: "Hear, O Ye companions of Indra in heaven, and Thou who didst give me birth, and who, in the birth-chamber on the sixth night thereafter, didst write (in the book of fate) that I should wed one such as Salhes. From my girlhood have I kept my bosom covered with my body-cloth, nor have I ever cast eyes on another man, nor from my birth have

I adorned the parting of my hair with vermilion. For him have I built a bridal chamber of fresh bamboos, and on a crimson bed have I spread a mattress of varied colours. And with a split reed have I applied silver spots to my brow."

Refrain—"O fair one, he will come."

- 3. "From childhood was I brought up, and all these riches did I collect in mine house, yet still my spouse Salhes came not. For him did I plant a garden, and set therein flowers of varied hue; the Beli, Chameli, Bulkunj, Newár, Tekhari, did I set in the garden for Salhes. I prepared rolls of sā'chi betel, and medini and gā'jā, but still Salhes came not to Morang. Without a spouse how can I pass my days? Weeping and mourning for him will I leave the kingdom of Morang. I will go to the heart of the land and seek my husband; when I meet my lord Salhes, with him will I enjoy the kingdom. If I meet him not, broken-hearted will I turn, and in sorrow and affliction will I drown myself, nor ever will I return to Morang. From my birth have I been melting gold for ornaments, yet never have I worn them; to-day would I wear them, and look upon myself in a mirror, that I may behold of what sort is my beauty."
- 4. The Málin adorned herself in her jewels and sat down, and beheld her beauty in the mirror. "My face is very lovely, but the parting of my hair longeth for one grain of vermilion." So she left the house in anger, and tied up all her jewels in the edge of her garment, and departed. "I will leave the city of Guzrát, and will enter the heart of the land and seek Salhes, where I may find him. When I meet My Lord, with him will I come back to the kingdom of Morang. If I meet him not, brokenhearted will I return. And in sorrow and affliction will I drown myself and die."
- 5. As dawn became morning, weeping she leaves her home, and gazes in every direction: she stands on the road and laments,
 - "I meet no traveller on the way,
 - "Nor do I meet my comrade,
 - "By whom shall I send my news?"

Broken-hearted went Málin; weeping did she go in search of her spouse. Step by step she went. She went a league, and reached her garden; when she beheld the flowers she fell upon the earth, and fainted, and then rolling on the ground she began to weep. When they heard her sobs, her companions, friends, and sisters came, even at dawn, to her garden. And one said to another, "Go, and ask our friend 'What sorrow is thine; that thou weepest in the garden'. Hath she been abused by her father and mother, or have the neighbours blamed her; that she hath come in sorrow to the garden?"

- 6. Then Champá asks her "Why didst thou leave thine house?" and Dauná Málin replies, "For one Salhes did I leave mine house. I left mine house for my spouse Salhes." "Let us five friends (including Dauná) go to the banks of the Kamlá, where thy spouse Salhes will come to water his elephant. If we find thy lord Salhes there, we will tempt him and take him by magic. We will bring him to thy garden and will build a bridal bower and marry him to thee. Only thou of us wilt behold his face, we will scatter til and kuś* upon him, and give him to thee." Then the five sisters went to bathe in the Kamlá, and arrived at the river bank just at midday. They stood and gazed upon the road to see whence Salhes would come. Then they took off their apparel, and laid them there, and floated an offering of sweet oil upon the Kamlá.
- 7. They float the offering on the Kamlá, and reverently with joined hands they pray, saying, "O Kamlá, cause Salhes to come quickly that we may behold him." Having said this, the five sisters dived into the waters of the Kamlá. Then the seats of the fifty-six krors of Indra and the gods shook, and they went and rushed into the Kachahari, in which Salhes was sitting, and charmed him. They told Salhes the whole story, how "For thee five sisters for twelve years have kept their bosoms covered. They have prayed unto us 'Tell him to come to the bank of the Kamlá that we may see our Lord.' " The news reached Salhes, and he replied, "I will not go, I will send my parrot, and he will bring me a beduli, that I may shew to my friend as a token of my love." And so this news was told Salhes, and immediately he ordered his man Jhinmá to bring his parrot from his palace. His man Jhinmá has gone; the cage is hanging within seven palaces (one surrounding the other). He took the cage, and brought it, and laid it before his master in the midst of the Kachahari. He took the parrot out of the cage, and let it fly. The parrot abandoned the surface of the earth and the sky above, and taking the middle regions it flew in circles, and departed for the bank of Kamlá. The five sisters sported madly in the Kamlá, and above them the parrot flew in circles. Now it gazed around on all sides, and now with half closed eye at the beauty of the damsels, and again it would cast a glance upon the beduli. Of a sudden it swooped down, and fled off with a beduli. It took it from the forehead of Dauná Málin. The parrot took the road to Pakariá, through the Sál forest; and there in the kingdom of Pakariá, it laid the bedulí between the two friends in the midst of the Kachahari. When he saw the beduli he was mightily pleased in heart. "If the beduli is so fair, how fair must be the woman who owns it."

^{*} This is the procedure adopted in making an irrevocable gift.

[†] A spot of silver leaf worn by women on the forehead.

- 8. Saith Salhes, "Hear, O parrot, whose beduli thou hast taken, if she pursue thee (and find it here) our fair fame will be destroyed: Let not that be so: Haste thee, and take it to the Sál forest." The parrot went to the Sál forest, and sat upon an aśok tree. The sisters gazed and gazed till their hearts broke: four of them turned, and went heart-broken to their homes, but Dauná Málin lay there despairing.* When dawn appeared, the parrot flew and came to her, and gave her the beduli. "Take it, O Málin; go thou to Morang, and sit in thy garden, and I will send to thee Salhes."
- 9. Dauná Málin returned to her garden, and at dawn Salhes arrived. He travelled the long night through to the garden in the kingdom of Morang. As morning arose Salhes arrived in the garden.
- 10. Morning came, and the cuckoo sang. Up rose Málin, and taking a flower basket, she stood in the garden. She plucked the flowers, and tied a necklace for Salhes. At that moment there came a thief from a strange country. His name was Chuhar Mál, and his home was in the fort of Mokámá. At midday he roamed from house to house. He wandered through Pakariá, noting houses, but in Pakariá he could not find a house worthy of him. He searched and searched, and found the palace of king Bhím Sain. Chuhar Mál noted the palace and went away, and rested in the jangal two or three kos off. He commenced to meditate on Asávarí, his family goddess: "I have worshipped thee in the fort of Mokámá from my birth up. Throughout my whole life I have never committed a theft, but I heard that the young Salhes hath been born in Pakariá. He is a great man, and hath undertaken the guardianship as chaukidár of fourteen kos in Pakariá. Such fear is there of his prowess that no one's foot is firm to commit a theft in his beat."
- 11. It was hearing this report that Chuhar Mál had come to attack Salhes. He tied his pig-tail into a tight knot, and his body-cloth tightly round his waist.† On every limb he tied tens of thousands of knives, and by his side a shield. First he took a knife in his hand, and sat upon the earth. Then he took his position, and lying upon his belly on the ground, began to dig a mine (sendh). He kept under ground for a distance of two or three kos, and as he dug he arrived within the kingdom of Pakariá. As morning dawned he began to dig into the king's stronghold, and as he dug he broke in at the quiet room in which Queen Hansábatí was sleeping on a golden bed. It was there that Chuhar Mál the thief entered. Close to her head he broke into the room, and Chuhar Mál rested against the bed. Trust not the caste of Dusádhs! He raised his head and Hansábatí sleeping on the golden bed, and tens of thousands of jewels on her limbs. Chuhar Mál looked at them, and considered what thing he should take. "I will take two things, the golden bed, and the necklace on the neck of the queen." As he said this morning came, and therefore he cut the necklace from the neck of the queen, and, lifting her up, laid her on king Bhím Sain's (empty) bed, and took the golden bed upon his head.

- 12. As morning broke he made off through the mine for four kos, and then emerged from it in the midst of the forest. Immediately he dressed himself as a traveller, and forcibly went off with his booty to Mokámá fort. As he came to the meeting of the rivers on the Ganges bank, a watch of the day had passed. Then he addressed the Ganges thus, "Hear, O Gangá, I have committed theft, and come to thee, and it is from the kingdom of the hills, and from the fort of king Bhím Sain, and from the beat of Salhes, that I bring the booty. If ever Salhes come in search of me, let him not pass over thee. If ever thou bearest him across, at that hour will I be enraged, and by the power gained by my virtues, will I bind thy streams with a dam." He spake so far and crossed the river into the land of Magadh, and from the land of Magadh, went to Mokámá fort, and buried his booty within the inmost of seven houses. All this time the sleep of the queen in her palace was not broken, nor did any In the palace the first to wake was the damsel Salkhí. one wake.
- 13. She bore a broom and swept the court-yard, and then stood in the verandah of the palace. Then she began to think to herself about the queen, "How can a woman stay so long in bed when her husband is not with her." So she dropped her broom, and ran into the inner chamber, and opening the door awakened queen Hansábatí. "Rise, Lady, Rise, thou sleepest soundly; some thief hath come and dug a mine into the house." As she spoke, Queen Hansábatí arose, and seeing the mine, cried out aloud. By that time all the servants had run up, and surrounded the house on all sides, searching for traces of the thief, but nowhere could they find them. Then Queen Hansábatí began to weep, and weeping to call on the name of the king. At length, weeping and weeping, she tore her upper garment for paper, and rubbed off the collyrium of her eyes for ink. She pared the little finger of her left hand for a pen, and began to write a letter. "I would tell king Bhím Sain about a theft. A theft has taken place in the fort. From his birth Salhes hath been its Chaukidár, tell him to produce the thief and his booty. Till then let him not be set at liberty." Such a letter did she write, and told the damsel to call a man-servant, and sent the letter by him to king Bhím Sain.
- 14. About midday the letter reached the king. He saw the letter, and flew into a rage. At once he told all his Banaudhiá peons to arrest Salhes, and bring him before him. Away ran all the Banaudhiás, but Salhes hid himself, and nowhere could they find a trace of him. Then they searched throughout Pakariá, and through the swamps and marshes. They searched through the mountains of Tarenganá, but nowhere did they find a trace of Salhes. Broken-hearted they sat in a fallow field, and began to hang their heads in shame. Just then an old woman traveller passed along the road, and began to ask them why so many Banaudhiás were hanging down their heads. They replied that they were hanging down their heads through shame at the name of one Salhes, and asked her to give them a trace as to his whereabouts. The old woman said, "I saw Salhes somewhere. He was drinking spirits at the still of a spirit-seller, and rolling $g\tilde{a}'j\acute{a}$ in his hands. He had a dark blue turban on his head, and a brown stick in his hand, and had besmeared his body with damp earth, (like a gymnast)." Immediately all the Banaudhiás ran to catch Salhes, and surrounded the distiller's still. Then they went up to him, and arrested him, and tied his arms behind his back. Then Salhes began to ask the Banaudhiás, "Tell me what fault have I committed that ye have bound me." The Banaudhiás replied "Come to the Kachaharí, king Bhím Sain will tell you the reason why. We do not know." Before and behind went the Banaudhiás, in their midst went Salhes, till they got to the Kachaharí, where the former presented Salhes in the Kachaharí and with clasped hands all the Banaudhiás exclaimed, and (asked the king) to take charge of the prisoner.

15. Then with hands clasped Salhes stood before the king, and said, "From birth have I been thy slave, and never even have I been branded by a flower. To-day what has happened that I am bound in chains?" Then king Bhím Sain said "In thy presence a theft has taken place in my palace; arrest the thief with his booty, then thou wilt be released. Till then thou wilt not be set free." Then said Salhes "I am responsible for the guardianship of fourteen kos of Pakariá, but I have found no trace of the thief. Bring paper and I will write a bond for the value of the stolen property, and through all my future lives will I pay it off. I cannot (find) the thief and his booty." Then king Bhím Sain was enraged in heart, and ordered his Banaudhiás thus, "Take Salhes away from my presence, and tie his hands behind his back. Lay nine maunds of the trunk of a tree on the top of him. Skin his back with a split length of green bamboo. A Dusádh by caste will never confess." Then into affliction fell Salhes, and he began to cry, "Now my life will not escape. I must die in the end. Fate cannot be wiped away. I have not seen my own brother Motírám, nor have I seen my wedded wife. I have not even seen my old mother." He began to think upon Asávarí, the goddess of his family, saying "Go, and tell my wife, the faithful Dauná, with whom I have eloped, where she is sleeping on her bed in the garden. Tell her to come to the Kachaharí to see me."

- 16. When Dauná Málin heard the news she arose and gazed round in horror. She stood in the way, and smoothed a cubit and a quarter of the ground with cowdung, and, having called upon all the gods and saints, asked for a sign from the sun.* "O sun, tell me a true true sign, (that I may know) in what kingdom the thief dwelleth. Whose son is he, and whose nephew, what is his name? Tell me all this." (The sun told her) and when she heard the sign she arose and went into the midst of the garden. She adorned herself in all the sixteen graces, and made a magic flower basket. She began to pluck flowers, and plucked them of varied hues. She plucked fresh cloves and cardamoms. She then went to look for her lord, and entered into the midst of the Kachahari. With clasped hands, she said humbly to king Bhím Sain, "Very tender is my lord Salhes. He cannot bear a beating, unloose his bonds for a time, and I will bring the thief and his booty from wherever he may be." Then in a rage the Prime Minister said "Whence can a woman bring a thief and his booty? Until thou bringest them, I will not release him." Then said king Bhím Sain, "I will have him released, but write a bond in my favour. 'I will bring the thief and his booty on the eighth day from this. If I do not bring him within that time, then, O king, I will marry thee.' Write a bond to that effect." And so he made her do. Then Dauná Málin said "Within seven days will I bring the thief and booty." And so each party ratified the bond.
- 17. Then up rose Málin, and unloosed her lord's bonds with her own hands, and they went away one behind the other. Then Salhes asked Málin how she had got his bonds unloosed; and she said, "I gave my chastity in bond that Salhes would bring the thief within eight days. Thus I got thee unloosed." Then Salhes asked her who the thief was, and she told him it was Chuhar Mál, who lived in Mokámá, the nephew of Jagat, who had committed the theft. "Act like a man, Salhes, that thou mayest arrest the thief with his booty. He can be caught by no ordinary means; I tell thee an artifice. Go thou to the quarter of the nats, and borrow all their goods and chattels, a drum, a club, a hoe, a jhilam, a bed, a chair, a tent, and buffaloes." Salhes then went and borrowed all those things, and made them over to Málin. Then said Málin "All these further stratagems I tell thee. Shave off the pig tail from thy head, and let thy hair be short. Wear a tight silk waist cloth; put on thy head a fine coloured cap; smear thy body with moist earth, and exercise thyself* three or four times, that thou mayest appear a true nat."

- 18. Then Dauná Málin apparelled herself in garments of the south, arranged her hair flat over each temple, applied collyrium to her eyelids, and between each of her teeth she inserted black dye. She put on a tight fitting boddice, and an armlet on her arm, around her feet anklets, and on her forehead silver spots like the moon surrounded by stars; and thus she made herself appear a real dancer. The two then began to sing the song of Alhá and Rudal (after the manner of nats). Hearing the cry of Alhá all the people of the Morang came, and surrounded them, and began to see the show: and behold, those whom they knew were unrecognized by them. Then the two lowered their tent, and went to catch the thief, and arrived at the Ganges bank. In the meantime the Ganges heard of the advent of Salhes, and all along its banks it sunk the boats, and taking its proper form of a Brahmaní woman mounted its highest bank. They reached the bank of the river, and asked her to show them where they could find a boat, that they might cross the river. Then the Ganges said "All the boats have been borne away by the stream, return ye, then, to your own house." "We will not return, but will cross the river as if it was dry land." She took off her necklace, and laid it upon the water, and the nat and the natin mounted on it; away floated the necklace, and upon it the nat and natin crossed the river into Magadh. From Magadh they hastened to Munger, and travelling the whole night arrived at Balawe, and selecting a grove in the village of Mokámá they fixed upon it for their lodging, and hung up all their property, and pitched their tent.
- 19. Then Salhes rested himself and sate himself down, and the natin putting a bundle of beads on her head went to sell them in the bazar. "Buy, O mistress, buy my beads," cried she. Then selling and selling beads she arrived at Chuhar's outer gate. He was sleeping the sleep of seven sleepers within his seven houses, and Málin herself stood at the door, and by her magic awoke him. He woke with a start, and gazed around in wonder, and opening the doors of the seven houses, he came outside asking the Málin why she had come to his house. "I am by caste a natin, I have come to thy house for two or three pice." Then said Chuhar Mál "In my house there is no mother, nor sister, nor wife. How therefore canst thou expect any present from me?" The natin replied, "Last night I saw in a dream in my tent that in thy house there is a necklace. Give me that as a present, and I will fulfil all thy heart's desires." Now when he saw her beauty he went and brought the necklace, saying, "I stole this from Fort Keolá, from the palace of king Bhím Sain, and from the beat of Salhes. This necklace I give thee for a gift." She replied "Come to my tent, and upon that golden bed of thine will I fulfil thy heart's desires." Front with the golden bed upon his head went Chuhar, and behind him the națin, to her tent.

- 20. In the meantime Salhes had left, and went to call his brother Motí Rám and his nephew Kárí Kant, and taking with him seven hundred male elephants with small tusks, surrounded the tent with them. While he was doing this the natin spread the bed, and making Chuhar Mál to lie upon it, applied sweet-oil to his body. By this time morning dawned, and Salhes arrived with all his army, and surrounded the tent, in which Chuhar Mál was sleeping. His goddess Asávarí awoke him saying "For the sake of a woman, thine enemy Salhes hath come." On this he arose and looked around, and, tying his sleeping cloth around his waist, stood up. In his hand he took a knife. He gave one jump, and flew into the air to a height of fifty or a hundred cubits. He fell outside the circle of elephants, and began to fight with Salhes. He leaped even as a wolf doth into a flock of goats. Wherever he jumped there he slashed an elephant. He cut down at once the seven hundred male elephants with small tusks. For three days and nights the fight lasted, and then he pursued the three brethren in a fallow field. Up rose the Málin, and caught the arm of Chuhar Mál. "I am by profession a dancer, and many are the travellers who come to me. If thou fight with them, my earnings will all diminish. Cease thine anger; come to the tent, and I will fulfil thy heart's desires." Chuhar Mál then returned to the tent and lay upon the bed and slept. She put him under the influence of Ahidrá the goddess of sleep, and called to king Salhes, and Motírám, "Come and bind your foe."
- 21. When they heard this they came and tied the thief and his booty to the bed, and within the seven days, the nat and the natin hastened to the bank of the Ganges with him. In the Ganges the seven hundred elephants returned to life, and by magic the natin (and her husband) crossed the river, and travelling by night, arrived in the day time in Rájá Bhím Sain's Kachaharí and made over to him the thief with his booty. When he saw the thief, the king could not restrain his surprise. Then they unloosed Chuhar Mál, and he told the whole story; how he had indeed committed the theft, hearing of Salhes's reputation, and from Salhes's beat. When king Bhím Sain heard this, he was pleased in heart, and gave Salhes a complete suit* of clothes, five weapons, and his own special mare; after giving him these presents he allowed him to depart. Thereafter, with Dauná Malin, king Salhes remained in the garden of king Bhím Sain, and guarded it for the rest of his life.

This concludes the prose part of the reading book.

The first poetical piece given is four songs of the Marsiá, celebrating the death of the brothers Hassan and Husain, and sung by Muhammadan boys at the Muharram. They are good examples of the Musalmán dialect of the country, which differs little from that of the Hindus. They are written exactly as dictated by a choir of little boys whom I picked up two years ago in an outlying village. It is noteworthy that they also sung songs in Urdú, which they knew by rote, but could not understand. The boys were quite uneducated: they did not know how to read or write, and had never left their native village.

 - 2. Through the fear of the infidel, the Sayyad hid himself in a well.
- 3. The lizard has spoken malicious words, and (at his instigation) the spider has spun his net.

The next songs are purely women's songs. In the month of Bhádo (August and September), that is, in the height of the rains, when snakes abound, the poor women of the village go about begging at the houses of their richer neighbours, and singing these songs. They are all in honour of the Snake god, and contain some peculiar ideas. The language is most colloquial, and full of diminutive terms of endearment. As printed, they are exact copies of what the women sung.

TRANSLATION OF THE NA'G SONGS.

Sung in the rains by low caste women as they go about begging, to propitiate snakes.

The mill, the mill was of stone, and the handle, the handle of Bel and Babul wood. The Bráhman's daughter sat down to grind, and the serpent hissed, (O Serpent, sweet Sir). If I had known that a snake would be ground up, I would have swept the mill-stone with my bodycloth, (O Serpent, sweet Sir). She who gives alms of wheat for the sake of the serpent, will play with a lovely, lovely son, (O my sweet Serpent). She who hides alms from the serpent, will lament throughout the months of Srában and Bhádo, (O my sweet Serpent). She who gives alms of Maruá (a cheap grain) for the sake of the serpent, will play with an ugly, ugly son, (O my sweet Serpent).

(2)

1. The serpent went off to bathe in the Ganges, and his wife commenced to weep, (My sweet snake).

2. His wife collects the refuse of the rolls of betel, which the serpent eats, (My sweet snake).

3. The serpent sleeps on a lovely bed, and his wife lies on the ground near his feet, (My sweet snake).

4. His wife collected the cloves from the clove tree on which the serpent sat, (My sweet snake).

(3)

I go, and go, and my feet are weary, and the proud lady gives me no alms. Where is the yillage Paţwári and what has become of him?

The proud lady gives me no alms. Where is the village Goráit? Make the lady give me alms at once. The serpent has sat at rest throughout the whole year, and in Bhádo he has made us wander about for alms.

The serpent sat on the mound of a tank, and made us ask for alms. The serpent eats rolls of ripe $p\acute{a}n$, and his wife prepares them. If I had known that the $J\acute{a}mun$ fruit would complain (to you, O serpent, of being neglected by us), I would have given up mangos, and would have eaten $j\acute{a}mun$. If I had known that the barhar fruit would complain, I would have scattered my jack fruits away (in present), and would have eaten the barhar. The serpent has sat upon a sandal wood tree, and has made us wander about for alms.

Next follows the Song of the Famine by Phatúrí or Fatúrí Lál, a living poet. It is a description of the Famine of the Faslí year 1281 (1873-74), and was written by a man of the people. It is worth noting this fact, for it praises both the English and the Mahárájá of Darbhangá in no measured terms, and speaks of native peculation in tones of grim and unsparing satire. I can certainly say that the Mahárájá of Darbhangá had never seen it, and that certainly no Government official had ever heard of it, till I brought it to notice. Hence, it cannot have been written in a tone of false flattery, but must be a really and truly sincere production; that it chimes with the feelings of the people is shown by its immense popularity with the lower orders, and I may take it as proving that a lively gratitude is felt in the hearts of the natives of Tirhut for the efforts of Government and of the Darbhangá Ráj in the disastrous year 1874.

As already mentioned the language is not pure Maithilí, being mixed with several Braj forms.

TRANSLATION OF FATU'RI' LA'L'S SONG OF THE FAMINE.

- 1. Hear the tale of the year 1281: On every side a famine fell.

 In that year the rains wasted away; how can I tell all that happened?
- 2. Rohaní is the first asterism of the rainy season: but, as it came, so it departed (without rain). Mrigśiras fulfilled our hopes, for it gave a few drops of rain and departed.
- 3. Aradrá passed by with great majesty, thundering on every side; Pukh saved the face of the earth, but became the end of the rains.
- 4. Punarbas is a very holy asterism, but it was also a miser. All the seed in the seed-beds would have been utterly destroyed if blessed Aślekhá had not rained.
- 5. Who in the world does not know that $Magh\acute{a}$ became like a Magadh beggar? $Purb\acute{a}$ $Ph\acute{a}lgun\acute{t}$ did not prove its premises. Which asterism can I praise?
- 6. Utrá arriving found its home ready and abode there (i. e., came at its proper season); but it did not give even a drop to swear by. Hathiyá concealed his trunk in his mouth, and the woodworm attacked him, (and left him empty).
- 7. Chitrá lost his senses and went mad, even he became a robber and a murderer. All the asterisms had their noses painted red (as a penance), and Swátí put his tail between his legs.*
- 8. All the Pandits who came from Banáras, after studying astronomy; though they calculated the position of the planets, and knew all about geometry and algebra; even their word turned out false.
- 9. By the mercy of $R\acute{a}m$, through whose mercy everything happens, they did not know the truth. If any one asked them the prospects of rain, even as they spoke, they (were shewn to be liars and) were put to shame.
- 10. When the rivers and streams did not fill, then there came a certainty of drought. For want of water, nothing grew on the earth. The land became as if it were burnt up.
- * I have slightly altered the original here, which is very indecent. This and the five preceding verses contain a series of puns on the names of the various lunar asterisms, which it is impossible to translate.

- 11. The cultivators knew the approach of drought, and exclaimed, 'Fate is against us; he has turned his face from us, and has cut off the paddy by the root.
- 12. "Neither the rice in the muddy low lands, nor the maruá on the high lands has grown; nor has sámá grown. Gambharí and gadarí have dried up in the field. God indeed has turned aside his face.
- 13. "In the world of mortals who can save us, where can we go, whither can we fly? Hell itself is dried up. There is no moisture on the soil, and even heaven has taken fire.
- 14. "Shame on the life of king Indra, who caught hold of the rains and stopped them. Living creatures became distraught upon the earth. They lost all pride in themselves.
- 15. "Spring crops, mustard, $m\tilde{u}'g$ (Phaseolus mungo), and chiná (Panicum italicum), not one has sprouted. In house and house are men and women mourning. Now indeed are our days woful."
- 16. On the other hand all the rich men were pleased in heart, and stored up many heaps of grain. They drew rupees into their houses in armfuls, for the ser of food was now dear.
- 17. Some who had cowries bought a field of kurthi (Dolichos biflorus), or even flesh. But how many held a continual fast, and only saw food in dreams!
- 18. How many men united together and bought a field of faner (a tall species of millet, and a food given to cattle), while the poor men sat and looked on! In the whole world there came like medicine to men, ráhar, and Indian-corn.
- 19. Truly a dreadful famine fell in Tirhut, for so did the winds blow. In house and house men and women tossed into their mouths parched Indian-corn, and thought themselves happy.
- 20. All the land-owners and bankers had in many houses heaps of grain. But, to deceive the people, they gazed about with faces like those of poor men.
- 21. The shop-keepers saw the times, and were at their wits' ends, and in terror closed their doors. The cities were full of empty shops, and all the grain markets were empty too.
- 22. Men's bodies were all shrivelled up, and their very speech was halting. How many things they had to bear! Men and women ceased adorning themselves and sold their ornaments.
- 23 and 24. Mangtikás (forehead ornaments), khútis (ear ornaments), and tarkis (ear-rings), nakmunnis (small nose-rings) were no longer seen in their proper places. Katsari (necklets), bichhiá (toe-rings), jhim-jhimis (tinkling toe ornaments), bájús and bã'ks (two kinds of armlets), chandrahárs, haikals, sikaris (three kinds of necklaces), and ghamauris (seed necklaces), sútis (neck rings), navagrahs and pachkhārís (two kinds of armlets), and lasunís (bracelets) were all expended.

- 25. Then not even brazen utensils escaped; for the people's fate became still worse. Water-jars, small jars, and spittoons, and rice-pots of every kind.
- 26. Cups, bowls, betel boxes, and plates for eating in. Neither drinking cups, after the fashion of Mádhab Sĩh, nor even small drinking cups were saved.
- 27. None of the household wealth escaped. All went to the pawn-broker; still hunger did not desert them, and their bellies became as it were pits.
- 28. Then the "Company" took the form of a portion of the deity, by the help of Rám. When she heard that the city of Mithilá was about to be drowned, she ran up to save it.
- 29. She bought food and filled sacks and loaded them in ships. Special native soldiers and white soldiers from Wiláyat were entrusted with the duty.
- 30. To Hájípur there came thousands of hundreds of thousands of bags, and many hundreds of thousands to Patna; and in the granaries of Bázitpur and Sultánpur, I cannot tell how many there were.
- 31. Waggons, bullocks, carts and camels carried all kinds of grain throughout Bihár. The place where they were told to meet was Kanhaiá Miśra's tank (in Darbhangá).
- 32. Mahárájá Lakshmeśvar Sĩh, Mahárájá of Mithilá, the immovable Lord of Darbhangá, the lord of Lakshmí, relieved the distress.
- 33. Thousands of lákhs of carts and bullocks became entangled together; the first golás (granaries) were those at Madhubaní, Bhawárá, Jafrá, and Arer.
- 34. I sing also of Benípaṭṭí, and the Pach Mahalá, Kumhraulí, and Kamtaul: Hariharpúr, Piṛáruch, and much work was there in Bariaul.
- 35. I sing of Bári Pokhari, and Birsáyar. And who does not know Paṇḍaul? Nabahad (Lohath factory), Sarisao (Surso), and Bhaṭpúrá, and to the south of it, Ujain.
- 36. I sing of Jhanjhárpúr, Mahrail, Kanhaulí, and especially of Madhepúr. Benípúr, Kamán (Kewan factory), Narahiyá (Naraya), and Phúlparás.
- 37. Jhamná is a place renowned in the world, and so are Mahthá and Bachhaur, and the relief circuits extended from them to Duhabí, Mahináthpúr, and Jainagar (on the frontier).
- 38. I sing of Baldebpúr, and Dhangá, and Mirzapúr where there is a small market, Síbípatí and Kápsíá and the chief golá at Sauráth.
 - 39. The Hákims came into Tirhut and relieved the poor. If they had not done so, how many men would have dried up, and died with their little ones!

- 40. How many corpses would have lain in the dust (uncared for). Innumerable lives would have been lost. Even no respect would have been shown to sons-in-law,* nor would a son have remained to perform the funeral obsequies for his father.
- 41. Nearly every one was driven to throwing up earth on embankments, tanks and roads. Only the learned Soti Bráhmans, Káyasths and western Thákurs escaped (from this indignity).
- 42. Some (of these last) made themselves overseers, and some Muharrirs, and others mates. In a holy cause they robbed the Government of money, and got their deserts for it.
- 43. Some who had friends among the court officers got off by giving bail: some got caned and had their backs scarified, and thereby expiated for all the sins of their former lives.†
- 44. Some wasted away in confinement awaiting their trial, and a great many were committed for trial. And their parents, wife and relations wept, saying, "The $B\acute{a}b\acute{u}$ has gone to jail."
- 45. Some of the wicked Muharrirs and mates had their houses searched by the police. Some had to blubber in the Civil Court, and others had their moustaches pulled out (by peons).
- 46. When the Hákims heard all about this, they flew into a rage; and therefore (stopped daily work and only) gave work by contract. And all the Muharrirs had their noses painted red, and a white patch of lime painted on their foreheads.‡
- 47. Jogs, Bikauás and other Bráhmans of reputable descent, who had performed all their various duties, and were of good family, mortgaged their groves, bamboo clumps, oxen, buffaloes and land.
- 48. When they had spent all the money got by this, they borrowed money from the Court of Wards; and therefrom many family disputes arose, and brothers and nephews parted from each other.
- 49. The Lord Bahádúr (Sir Richard Temple) also came to Darbhangá, and held a Committee there with the Bábús (i. e, the relations of the Mahárája).
- 50, 51, and 52. Here follows a long list of names of native gentlemen who attended the Committee, which is not worth translating.
- * It is considered a great disgrace for any father-in-law to go to his son-in-law's house for help.
- † उही is properly weariness, and it is taken away (उत्र जाइहे हि) by shampooing. Here the poet calls their sins a weariness, and says it was taken away by a shampooing with a rattan.
- ‡ I. e., they were put to shame. Painting a man's nose red, and his forehead white is a favourite zamíndárí way of disgracing a man.

- 53. All these sat on the Committee. The actions of Government are wonderful: for then a Railway came to Tirhut.
- 54. The Railway started from Bájitpur, and came along at a great rate, and, after making a bridge near Haheyá (Haya Gháṭ) across the Gaṇḍak, it came straight across the marshes.
- 55. The virtuous and mighty Company knows who is the Almighty, and made a Railway Station (in Darbhangá) near the Lakshmí Ságar tank.
- 56. The Great Lord of Calcutta (Lord Northbrook) accompanied by the goddess Durgá, and by the Little Lord Bahádúr of Agrá,* came and sat together, both being white men, (and hence undistinguishable to the crowd).
- 57. The Commissioner and Collector met them there, and spoke in a language we could not understand (English). These five sat on the ijlás together, with a Joint Magistrate of the same caste.
- 58. The news was published in the Newspapers, that this was the condition of Mithilá, saying, "Hear, O People of England, lend your ears, and wipe away this net of sorrow."
- 59. They gave orders to the two Lords, "Hear our words. Help the poor cultivators. Why are you sitting at ease?"
- 60. The great Lord caused two heroes to arise, a Sáhib, and a General, and also Majors, Magistrates, and Collectors, and Colonels of the same caste.
- 61. They collected food from every country, and paid the price of it as well. They brought $m\tilde{u}'g$, wheat, and rice, $bajr\acute{a}$ and $gr\acute{a}m$.
- 62. From Delhi, Patna, Bhatsáre, and Ajmer, Agrá, and Kánhpúr, and from wherever there was plenty of grain.
- 63. From these places grain was sent to Tirhut, on waggons and bullocks, elephants, horses, donkeys, and carts, with soldiers in brilliant uniform.
- 64. The soldiers were by caste Chhatrí, Paithán, Mughal, and Rájput, excellent heroes. I cannot tell their splendour, which was like that of Hanumán the messenger.
- 65. In front went Sappers and Miners, and the young heroes of fighting regiments, wearing lances and swords, and with bows and arrows in their hands.
- 66. With their Jamádárs they mounted horse and paraded. Although I have seen their colours at the time I cannot describe their splendours.
- 67. They did their duty everywhere and all the plunder was stopped. They levelled mounds and groves, and made roads and bridges.
- * This must mean the Lieutenant-Governor of the N. W. P. But if it does, it must be a mistake, as Sir John Strachey did not come to Darbhangá.

- 68. In the districts of Patna and Bhaṭsáre, in Parganá Mahsaur, there lived a good man, into whose house the goddess of prosperity had come in haste.
- 69. Dwáriká Praśád by name, virtuous and wise. He was special Tahsildár for the Court of Wards, and knew the whole world.
- 70. Deputy Collector Bábú Isrí Prasád came to Madhubaní, and he went into every petty village, and gave orders to the relief superintendents.
- 71. People borrowed maunds of grain and were pleased at heart, and many took alms. Bless the noble Englishmen, for every one's limb became fat.
- 72. The poor, the rich, and the wretched alike cried: "Victory to the Company;" and the Bráhmans blessed her, and they prayed to the Lord of Raghu (God) that her reign might increase on the throne for a hundred thousand years.
- 73. Phatur Lál has told this tale of the famine. The Government, and the noble Governor, preserved Tirhut.

We now come to the Poems of Vidyápati Thákur. The name of this celebrated poet is a household word throughout the whole of Bihár and Bangál. I had intended at first to prefix to the following collection of his songs, a succinct account of him and of his times, but space forbids me. Suffice it to say that he was born at Bisphí* in the Madhubaní Sub-Division of the Darbhangá District, not far from Dámodarpúr, the birth-place of the still more celebrated Kálidása, in the latter half of the fourteenth century. He was the first of the old Vaishnava master-singers who spoke and wrote in the language of the people; and his short hymns of prayer and praise, soon became exceedingly popular. They became great favourites of the more modern Vaishņava reformer of Bangál,-Chaitanya, and through him, songs purporting to be by Bidyápati have become as well known in Bangálí households as the Bible is in an English one. And now a curious circumstance arose,—unparalleled I believe in the history of literature. To a Bangálí, Bidyápati wrote in a difficult and strange, though cognate language, and his words were hard "to be understanded of the people": so at first a few of his hymns were twisted and contorted, lengthened out and curtailed, in the procrustean bed of the Bangálí language and metre, into a kind of bastard language neither Bangálí nor Maithilí. this was not all,—a host of imitators sprung up,—notably one Basant Ráy of Jessore, who wrote, under the name of Bidyápati, in this bastard language, songs which in their form bore a considerable resemblance to the matter of our poet, but which almost entirely wanted the polish and felicity of expression of the old master-singer. These songs gradually took a form more and more Bangálí, and the latest can hardly, so far as the form of the language goes, be distinguished from, the antique Bangálí of Chandí Dás and the Bidyá Sundar: they thus naturally became more popular amongst the Bangálí people than the real songs of Bidyápati, and speedily crowded out the latter from their memories. These spurious songs of Bidyápati have been more than once collected. They can all be found in that large heterogeneous mass of Bangálí poetry called the Pada Kalpa Taru, and have been republished in a connected form by Akshay Chandra Sarkár at Chinsura in a series of volumes called the Práchína Kávya Sangraha, in the Bangálí year 1285 (A. D. 1878-79). Another expurgated edition has been published by S'áradá Charana Mitra,* (B. S. 1285 = A. D. 1878-79) to which is prefixed an excellent Bángalí introduction bringing up to date everything that was then known about the real Bidyápati of Bisphí. In the latter work, however, the editor is still under the impression that the poems he is editing are the work of the Tirhut poet, while nothing could be further from the fact. I have gone carefully through every poem in both these collections, and am in a position to state that not more than five or six of them altogether show even a resemblance to songs admitted up here to be the work of Bidyápati.† Even these are so distorted, both in language, and in rhythm, that identification is by no means easy. The songs in the Bangálí recension will not even scan according to Maithilí rules of prosody, much less can they be brought within the bounds of any rules of Maithilí Grammar.§ fact is that both these Bangálí collections are most interesting as showing the influence of Bidyápati over the Bangálí mind, but in no way can they be considered as containing more than a very few lines really written by himself.

The songs here given are, I believe, very nearly all that are known of Bidyápati in Tirhut. A glance at them will show how different they are from their Bangálí fellows. The majority of them have been collected from blind singers, and others whose profession it is to sing these Vaishnava songs, but I am also indebted to the Mahárájá of Darbhangá for many of them: I have, however, searched everywhere for them that I could consistently with my official duties, and I regret that these prevented my directly having much communication with Bidyápati's present descendants. I have, however, learnt sufficient to be satisfied that they have no collection of their ancestor's songs.

- ‡ Compare Prá. Ká, San. p. 15, No. 17, (= No. 17, in S'áradá Charana Mitra's edition), with No. 1, in the present selections; and these two recensions, (the Bangálí, and the Maithilí), correspond much more closely than any other similar pairs noted.

For further information concerning Bidyápati and his times I must refer to the books above mentioned, and to an excellent article in the Bangálí Magazine the "Banga Darsaṇa," for 1282 (B. S.), Vol. IV. p. 75. Mr. Beames' article in the Indian Antiquary for October, 1875, Vol. IV. p. 299, also contains all that is important, and gives a resumé of the contents of the article in the Banga Darśaṇa, with his own most valuable criticisms thereon. In another article in the Indian Antiquary (Vol. II. p. 37) Mr. Beames also gives an interesting account of the Bangálí recension of the Pseudo-Bidyápati.

It now remains to consider the matter of Bidyápati's poems. They are nearly all Vaishnava hymns or bhajans, and as such belong to a class well known to students of modern Indian Literature. They cannot be judged by European rules of taste, and must not be condemned too hastily as using the language of the brothel to describe the soul's yearnings after God. Now that the Aphorisms of S'ándilya have been given in an English dress by Mr. Cowell, no one need plead ignorance of the mysteries of the Indian doctrine of faith. "God is Love" is alike the motto of the Eastern and of the Western worlds, while the form of Love proposed is essentially different. The people of a colder Western clime, have contented themselves with comparing the ineffable love of God to that of a father to his children, while the warmer climes of the tropics have led the seekers after truth to compare the love of the worshipper for the worshipped, to that of the Supreme Mistress Rádhá for her Supreme Lord Krishna. It is true that it is hard for a Western mind to grasp this idea, but let us not therefore hastily condemn it: the glowing stanzas of Bidyápati are read by the devout Hindú with as little of the baser part of human sensuousness, as the Song of Solomon is by the Christian priest.

For further particulars as to the Vaishnava poets of Bangál (including Bidyápati) see Indian Antiquary for 1873, Vol. II. pp. 1, 37 and 187 where Mr. Beames elaborately discusses the whole question, and Dr. Rájendralál Mitra's preface to the Chaitanya Chandrodaya.

As regards Bidyápati's prosody, it is needless to say that no rules are in existence: Pingala's Prákṛit Sútras which are said to apply to Braj Bháshá will not apply here, for I have tried them. I have therefore been compelled to analyse the metres for myself, and on another coccasion

The following schemes of metre may be noticed. Each column gives all kinds of feet allowable in this position.*

1st foot.	2nd foot.	3rd foot.	4th foot.
or — U U	$or - \circ \circ$	or — U U	Rhyme or — —	or — —
or U — U	or \cup — \cup
or U U —	or U U —	·
$or - \cup +$	- 0 0 0
	$or - \cup +$
	$or \cup \cup \cup +$

The principal rule in this metre is that the third foot must end with two short instants.

In one instance, ($Vide\ LX$), the fourth foot is simply one long syllable instead of a long and a short. The above metre is very common.

- (2.) Varieties of the above, not so common, have the fourth foot —, —, or — .

1st foot.	2nd foot.	3rd foot.	4th foot.
			or — 0
	5th foot.	6th foot.	7th foot.
Cœsura.		or — UU	Rhyme.

In this metre the fourth and sixth feet must end with two short instants.

There are other metres, but the above three are the commonest. It must be observed, however, that, by poetical license, the last couplet of a poem, called the Bhanitá, is not bound by the rules of the preceding lines. Moreover, the last syllable of a line or phrase is not common; on the contrary it is frequently lengthened or shortened by poetic license for the sake of metre.

As regards the quantity of syllables, a vowel short by nature, and also by position, is always short, but a vowel short by nature, and long by position, or a vowel, or even a diphthong, long by nature, may be considered either long or short for the scansion of a verse. In fact accent has quite as much to do with scansion as prosody, and the result of the two combined is that, as Mr. Beames rightly observes, the verses "trip off the tongue with a lilt and grace which are irresistible."

According to native custom, I have grouped the songs into classes, according to the subjects of which they treat; one class, for instance, treating of the first yearnings of the soul after God,—another of the full possession of the soul by love for God,—another of an estrangement of the soul, and so on. To understand the allegory, it may be taken as a general rule that Rádhá represents the soul, the messenger or dútí the evangelist or else the mediator, and Krishn of course the Deity.

The following genealogical table of Bidyápati and his ancestors and descendents has not been published, and will be found useful in fixing his date.

- 8. Vishņuśarmá Thákur; of Bisapí, founder.*
- 7. Haráditya Thákur.
- 6. Karmáditya Thákur.
- 5. Deváditya Thákur.
- 4. Dhíresvara Thákur.
- 3. Jaya Datta Thákur.
- 2. Gana Pati Thákur.
- 1. VIDYÁPATI THÁKUR.
- 2. Harapati Thákur.
- 3. None, alias Ratidhar Thákur.
- 4. Raghu Thákur.
- 5. Viśva Nátha Thákur.
- 6. Pítámbara Thákur.
- 7. Náráyana Thákur.
- 8. Dina Mani Thákur.
- 9. Tulá Thákur.
- 10. Eka Nátha Thákur.
- 11. Bhaiá Thákur.

12. Nanú Thákur. 12. Phaní Lál Thákur.

13. Banamálí Thákur. 13. Badrí Náth Thákur.

Nanú Thákur, and Badrí Náth Thákur are alive at the present time. The latter is a mere boy, his father having died quite lately.

In conclusion it may be useful to note that Bidyápati mentions the following persons in his poems:

- 1. Rájá S'ib Sĩh (or Sibáy Sĩh).
- 2. Lakhimá Thakurání.
- 3. Rúp Náráyan.
- 4. Modabatí Deí.

^{*} In the oldest documents, including those contemporary with Bidyápati, the name is spelt Bisapí. Now-a-days, however, it is spelt Bis'phí (বিষদ্দী).

- 5. Prán'batí Deí.
- 6. Rághab Sĩh.

The first of these—Rájá S'ib Sĩh—was king of Sugáoná in Tirhut, and was the representative of a line of kings which has left its mark upon Mithilá. When it became extinct, this line was succeeded by that of the present Mahárájá of Darbhangá. The line of kings as given by the hereditary genealogists of Mithilá is as follows:

The seventh of his family and third of his dynasty was—

3.	Bhab Sĩh who came to the throne	A. D.	1348
4.	Deb Sĩh,	"	1385
5.	S'ib Sĩh,	"	1446
6.	Padm Sĩh,	"	1449
7.	Lakhimá Debí,	"	1451
8.	Biśvás Debí,	"	1460
9.	Darp Náráyan,	"	1472
10.	Hirday Náráyan,	"	1478
11.	Hari Náráyan,	,,	1513
12.	Rúp Náráyaṇ,	"	1527
13.	Kãs Náráyan,	22	1542*

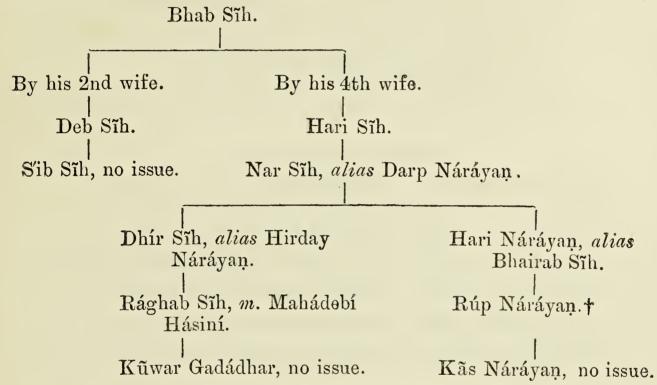

Of these, Nos. 5, 7, and 12 are according to universal tradition the first three persons in the list of those mentioned by Bidyápati. With respect, however, to Rúp Náráyan there are grave reasons for doubting the tradition. A grant of land is in existence, showing that Bidyápati was a celebrated Pandit in the year 1400 A. D., and Rúp Náráyan did not die till 1542. So that to assume that Bidyápati and Rúp Nárávan were contemporaries, assumes a most improbable longevity for both of them. Mr. Beames suggests that the Rúp Náráyan of Bidyápati is simply an alias or family name of Sib Sih. Although not borne out by tradition, there are several good reasons, which (as the case has been fully argued elsewhere) I need not repeat here, for agreeing with this suggestion. It is certain that many kings of Sib Sih's line had aliases ending in Nárávan. Concerning Modabatí and Prán'bati, I have no information to offer. I can find no clue to their identity in any of the genealogical lists, and Badyápati himself, gives either contradictory accounts of Modabatí, or else refers to two ladies of the same name. In Song 75, he calls her the beloved of king Sib Sîh, while in 76, she is styled the wife of Rághab Sĩh. Local tradition makes her the wife of Bidyápati. Who Rághab Sĩh was, we shall see bye and bye. In Song 37, Prán'batí is called the necklace of Rúp Náráyan, and that is all the information available concerning her.

^{*} The names above given may be taken as correct. I have taken much pains in searching the most authentic records. The list differs considerably from those of former writers, but these can all be traced back to Ajodhyá Prasád's History of Tirhut in which the names are written in the Urdú character, and incorrectly. The dates given are those currently reputed to be correct: but I have several reasons, which I need not here repeat, for believing them to be untrustworthy. However, for want of better ones, they are given.

Rájá S'ib Sĩh had six wives,* all of whom died without issue, and two of whom, Lakhimá Thakurání and Debí Biśvás, succeeded S'ib Sĩh upon the throne.

The following table, abstracted from the genealogists' records, available in this subdivision, will show the relationship between Sib Sih, Rúp Náráyan, and Rághab Sih; (if, as I doubt, the popular tradition making them three distinct persons, is correct).

It thus appears that both Rúp Náráyan and Rághab Sĩh were first cousins twice removed from S'ib Sĩh. With Kãs Náráyan the line of Bhab Sĩh became extinct. The family is now-a-days represented only by the present Mahárání of Sugáoná and Chapáhí, who married a descendant of a collateral branch of the family, and who has no son. With her, therefore, an old royal family in Mithilá will become extinct.

But, admitting the above table to be correct, as it certainly is, the same doubt arises concerning Rághab Sĩh, as that which arose concerning Rúp Náráyaṇ. They must have been contemporaries, and that being the case, it is just as improbable that Rághab Sĩh could have been contemporary with Bidyápati as Rúp Náráyaṇ. Who then was the Rághab Sĩh mentioned by Bidyápati? His name occurs in two songs (Nos. 61 and 76), and in one of them he is called the lord of Modabatí. I hesitate at suggest-^{*} Mahádebí Biśvás, M. Sajháiní, M. Rat'ná, M. Lakhimá, M. Umá, M. Guná.

[†] Married, (1.) M. Anumatí, (2.) M. Bhánumatí, (3.) M. S'áití, (4.) M. Medhá, (5.) a lady, name unknown.

ing a second alias for Sib Sĩh, but it is a remarkable coincidence that in Song 75, a woman called Modabatí is called the wife of Sib Sĩh. But here another difficulty has to be met; Sib Sĩh it is true, had six wives, but we know their names, and none of them was called Modabatí, and to make matters still more complicated, there is a tradition current in Mithilá that Modabatí was the name of the wife of Bidyápati himself. It is worth noting that the Rághab Sĩh of the genealogists had only one wife, and her name was not Modabatí. On the whole, then, we have too few and too contradictory materials to our hand, to assume anything positively concerning either Rághab Sĩh, or Modabatí.

TRANSLATION OF THE SONGS OF BIDYA'PATI THA'KUR.*

CHAPTER I.

Young Love.

(1.)

- 1. O pretty one, (haste and) bathe thyself. Lo, love searched for me and smote me on the heart.
- 2. The limp garments cling to thy body, and thou becomest as one who arouseth the passions of saints.
- 3. The water falleth down in rivers through the locks of thy hair, and it seemeth to me dark as a moonless night.
- 4. Thy bosom is like two fair chakwás.† Cover them, O cover them with thy lotus hands.
- 5. And if thou dread entangling them in the snare of thy arms, (fear not, but) hold them fast. (Else assuredly) will they fly away to heaven.
 - 6. Bidyápati saith, a good husband will never be a fool.

- 1. In the midst of thorns the flowers are blooming. The bee is confounded, and cannot distinguish the odours.
- 2. Though the bee wander, and sport everywhere; without thee, O jasmine, he cannot get rest.
- 3. Its life dependeth on honey, and thou art full of honey. Keepest thou the honey stored up within thy heart through modesty?
- 4. Consider well in thine heart; If the bee die, who will be guilty of his death?
- 5. Bidyápati saith, as long as it sip the nectar of thy lower lip, so long will it live.

(3.)

- 1. Who doth not do his own work? Who doth not serve his own master?
- 2. Every one seeketh his own interest; he is a good man who carrieth out his task to the end.
- 3. O friend, his life is precious, who willingly rendereth assistance to others.
- * The following translations are not always so literal as the preceding; as all difficulties have been explained in the vocabulary.
 - † Anas casarca.

- 4. If one who is injured take refuge with thee, do not disappoint him as long as anything remaineth to thee.
- 5. (If thou disappoint him), he may perhaps obtain his desire from another, but still regret will remain in thy soul.
- 6. Bidyápati saith, do not proclaim thine indigence. Only the great can comply with great requests.

(4.)

- 1. O friend, O friend, speak not of aught else. Now Krishn daily desireth thy virtues more and more.
- 2. For no apparent reason he is continually coming near thee, and thou perceivest it in thine heart, though thou conceal it through shame.
- 3. Even when he is going elsewhere, he casteth a glance at thee; no one can turn aside a greedy eye.
- 4. He is full of devices, and so art thou; like two flowers tied upon a single stalk.
- 5. Bidyápati the necklace of poets saith, with one arrow Love hath smitten two hearts.

Rádhá addresses Krishn at a river crossing.

- 1. "Catch my hand, and cross me over, I will give thee, O Kanhaiyá, a matchless necklace.
- 2. "All my friends went off before me, and left me alone. I know not by what path they have gone.
- 3. "I will not go with thee, but along the deserted bank of the river."
 - 4. Bidyápati saith, O damsel, pray to God.

CHAPTER II.

THE COMMENCEMENT OF RÁDHÁ'S LOVE FOR KRISHN.

(6.)

- 1. The charming season of Spring is come. The southern wind bloweth gently.
- 2. In a dream a form said to me, "Remove the cloth from before thy face."
- 3. Even though the creator tried his best, the moon could not be equal to thy face (in beauty).
- 4. Though he cutteth (the face of the moon) several times, and shapeth (it) anew, still it cannot equal (thy) face.

- 5. The lotus could not obtain the excellence of thine eyes; who in the world doth not know it.
- 6. Driven to shame by (the beauty of) thy lotus eyes, he went and hid himself in the water.
- 7. Bidyápati saith, hear O pretty one, such women are like Lakshmí in beauty.
- 8. I say this in the presence of king Sib Sih, Rúp Náráyan, and Lakhimá, his queen.

(7.)

- 1. O Mádhab, appease the fair one.
- 2. What other damsel hath ever offered caresses such as she hath.
- 3 and 4. The clouds pour rain, and fill the earth with water, and the night is dark and fearful, still she hath remembered thy virtues, and hath come. There is no bound to what she will bear for thee.
- 5 and 6. She who trembleth at a picture of the king of serpents on a wall, hath come smiling to thee, sweet as she is, veiling her jewel face.
- 7. Thy beloved hath foresworn her husband's love, and come to thee in spite of all the censure of her relations.
- 8. The Lady is intoxicated with the sweet wine of thy love, and hence careth not for aught else.
- 9 and 10. Bidyápati, the wise poet and appreciator of the pleasures of love, hath sung this. When Desire and Love are together in a person's heart, what crime will be not commit.

(8.)

- 1. I saw the graceful form of the lotus-faced one. For awhile, how much love arose in her heart.
- 2. Her love is fresh and the shame thereof is great. Her affection is visible (on her face), still she trieth to conceal it.
- 3. Now she approacheth him, and now retreateth. She neither yieldeth to embraces with all her heart, nor doth she shew aversion.
- 4. Her eyes remain not steady, and when she is caught by her hand, she concealeth her face.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, I sing the pleasure of love; the bride, by these actions, giveth others to understand her willingness.

(9.)

A Riddle describing Rádhá's condition.

- 1. Add the third vowel* after the third one† to the vowel‡ which is
- * 5
- † द
- ‡ আ; আ + জ = আজ which means "come."

to the left of the third vowel. The body of the damsel hath become like the third* after three.

- 2. The blooming damsel uttering only three letters† hath at length become angered; for Mádhab is like the third day‡ after the third one.
- 3. She uttered the three letters† and stood up. The witness of that fact is, O Mádhab, the third after the third day.‡
- 4. Bidyápati saith, the affection shown in all these 'threes' is that of a damsel for her love.

(10.)

- 1. O Mádhab, the pretty one can live no longer.
- 2. The beautiful girl hath made over everything to those from whom she took them.
- (3 and 4.) Overcome by the pangs of love, she hath returned her moon-like face to the moon, the play of her eyes to the fawn, the locks of her hair to the chámara.§
- (5 and 6). Her teeth to the seeds of the pomegranate, her speech to the cuckoo, and the form of her body to the lightning. I have learnt all this, and have come here.
- 7. She lieth upon the earth waking the whole night, and riseth uttering the name of Hari.
- 8. The damsel keepeth reciting thy love with all her heart, and only for this doth she live.
- (9 and 10). Bidyápati saith, "Hear, O Mathurápati, do not longer delay, but make her drink the honey-like ambrosia of thy lower lip. Then only can she be restored to life."

(11.)

- 1. My Creator hath become pleased with me. Rám hath favoured me with a visit.
 - 2. I saw his charming face, and the desires of my heart were fulfilled.
- 3. The five-arrowed God of Love awoke within my heart, and my wisdom could not remain in subjection.
- 4. Bidyápati singeth that a good husband will never drive his wife to extremities.

(12.)

- 1. Tell me, Sweet-heart: why conceal it? I see thee adorned in costly garments.
 - * पाँच, 'five,' = पंचबान i. e. Kandarp the god of love.
 - † साध्व the name of her beloved.
 - ‡ दृह्स्पति = जीव which means her life.
 - § Borassus Flabelliformis.

- 2. Thou hast scented thy limbs with musk. Who is the happy one to whom thou art about to yield thyself?
- 3. Thou art continually rising, and gazing towards the west; seeking to learn how far the day has gone, and when the sun will set.
- 4. Thou hast tied the tell-tale anklet, high above thine ankle (to prevent its tinkling being heard). Thou hast girded up thy raiment dark as the dark night itself.
- 5. With a smile dost thou rise, distilling nectar from it. O, the dark night is pleasant.
- 6. Bidyápati singeth, hear, O good Lady, keep patience and Murári will meet thee.

(13.)

- 1. Fair one, conceal not thyself.
- 2. If any one is so happy as to obtain thy love as the fruit of his former virtuous acts, great will be the accomplishment of his love to-day.
- 3. Thou hast anointed thy forehead with musk and aloes, and cunningly arranged thy nut-brown garments.
- 4. Thou art watching the eyes of thine elders, and, gazing towards the west, art wishing that the night may come.
- 5. Without a wherefore thou comest and goest in the house; closing thy lotus eyes (in shame).
- 6. Thy body is quivering with excitement, smiles cover thy face without apparent reason; and full of delight, hast thou arisen from thy couch.
- 7. Bidyápati the poet saith, her excuses are not probable to any one in his senses.
- 8. 'Rájá S'ib Sĩh, Rúp Náráyan understandeth the pleasures of every grade.'

CHAPTER III.

RÁDHÁ'S BEAUTY.

(14.)

- 1. O Mádhab, how shall I tell the beauty of the lovely one.
- 2. With great efforts the Creator hath adorned her, and I have seen her with mine own eyes.
- 3. Her feet are beautiful as a pair of lotuses, and her gait is stately as that of Airávat.*

^{*} Indra's elephant.

- 4. (Her thighs are like) a golden plantain, over them he placed a slim lion's (waist), and over that a mount Meru.*
- 5. Over mount Meru he made two lotuses to bloom, and, though without a stalk, they overflow with loveliness.
- 6. Her diamond necklace is like the stream of the Gangá; and thus those lotuses are not dried up.
- 7. Her lips are red like the $Bimb\acute{a}$ fruit, and her teeth like pomegranate seeds. The sun and moon† rise near them.
 - 8. Ráhu‡ dwelleth afar, and doth not approach to devour them.
- 9. She hath eyes like a deer (sáranga), and the voice of the koil (sáranga), (and her brows are like) a bow (sáranga).
- 10. And over the bow appear ten bees (sáranga) who playfully sip the honey (of her brow).
- 11. Bidyápati saith, hear, pretty one, there is no other in this world so beautiful as she.
- 12. I say this in the presence of king S'ib Sĩh, Rúp Náráyan, and Lakhimá, his queen.

- 1. O friend, I saw a wise, and clever, and blooming damsel on the way.
- 2. O friend, the Creator made her like unto a golden creeper, and brought her here.
- 3. O friend, her gait was stately as that of an elephant, and she appeared like a princess.
- 4. He who will obtain one such as her for his bride, will have obtained all the four blessings, (viz., wealth, virtue, desire, and salvation).
- 5. O friend, she wore a blue dress, and loosened the braids of her hair.
- 6. Over the loosened hair, O friend, a bee sat with open wings imbibing nectar.
- 7. O friend, her waist is like that of a lion, and her eye like the lotus.
 - 8. Bidyápati sang this, O friend, truly she hath gained every grace.
- * Alluding to the stomach which has three wrinkles, and is therefore supposed to be rugged like a mountain.
 - † Her two eyes.
 - The short hair of the forehead, personified as the demon of eclipse.
 - § The short hair of the forehead.

A Riddle describing Rádhá's beauty.

- 1. O Mádhab, I saw a fair one on the way.
- 2. Her gait is pleasing as that of the conveyance of the father of the friend of him who sits on Garuda.
- 3. Like in beauty to the wife⁵ of the son⁶ of the sister⁷ of the husband⁸ of the fourth daughter⁹ of Daksh.
- 4. And on account of that more beautiful than the enemy¹⁰ of the husband¹¹ of the daughter¹² of the foe¹³ of the king¹⁴ of the Gods.
- 5. Her face is beautiful as that which comes fourth¹⁵ after the preceptor¹⁶ of the enemy¹⁷ of the sons¹⁸ of Aditi.
- 6. She hath arranged a necklace of the treasure of the children¹⁹ of the food²⁰ of the son²¹ of a pitcher.
- 7. The slimness of her waist is like that of the conveyance²² of the daughter²³ of the wife²⁴ of Nand.
- 8. Her breasts are round like the fruit²⁵ beloved by the lord²⁶ of the husband²⁷ of Kám Dhenu.
- 9. Bidyápati saith, hear, O fair ones, the tint of her form is wondrous.
- 10. By performing a penance like that of the father²⁸ of the wife²⁹ of the enemy³⁰ of Rában a man can attain to such as this.

The Same.

- 1. O Mádhab, to-day I saw thy beloved.
- 2 & 3. "In her I see the resemblance of the son³¹ of the father³² of the wife³³ of the father³⁴ of the father³⁵ of the husband³⁶ of the daughter³⁷ of the son³⁸ of the king³⁹ of the earth.
 - ¹ Airávat. ² Indra. ³ Arjun. ⁴ Krishņ.
 - ⁵ Rati. ⁶ Pradyumna, i. e. Kámdeb. ⁷ Rukmiņí, i. e. Lakshmí. ⁸ Som. ⁹ Rohiņí.
 - 10 Kámdeb. 11 S'iva. 12 Párvatí. 13 Himálaya. 14 Indra.
 - ¹⁵ Monday, i. e. the moon. ¹⁶ S'ukra, i. e. Friday. ¹⁷ Daityas. ¹⁸ Gods.
 - ¹⁹ Pearls. ²⁰ The sea. ²¹ Agastya.
 - ²² A lion. ²³ Máyá, i. e. Durgá. ²⁴ Yasodá.

 - ³¹ Moon. ³² Ocean. ³³ Lakshmí. ³⁴ Krishņ. ³⁵ Pradyumna,
 - ³⁶ Aniruddh, ³⁷ Ushá. ³⁸ Bánásur. ³⁹ Bali.

- 4 & 5. "The moon faced damsel hath adorned herself with the sixteen* (graces) and other (charms), and seeketh for thy fullest love. O. Mádhab, thy beloved is of this nature.
- 6 & 7. This song is extremely complicated in its meaning, and hence it is an object of study for the learned, and hard as a stone for the ignorant. Bidyápati saith, they are wise who can understand it correctly.

The same.

- 1. "O Mádhab, I saw a fair damsel on the way.
- 2. "The spot of vermilion on her forehead was surrounded by a ring of silver stars, and her locks of hair were graceful as the chámara‡ and incomparable.
- 3. "Her face shone like the son of ocean, and her teeth were like a line of pomegranate seeds.
- 4. "Her breasts were like two bel fruits born upon a golden creeper, which God had created of varied hue.
- 5. "The sweet lady walked gracefully as the animal|| on which the enemy¶ of the son of the goat rideth.
- 6. "The pretty one adorned herself with the sixteen graces, and went to her husband's house."
- (7 & 8.) Kṛishṇ's gait (with excitement became devious) as that of the daughter†† of the enemy‡‡ of the son§§ of the king||||| of the stars, and he bull-like searched for and gazed upon the damsel. The poet Bidyápatí sang this.
- * i. e. two, or half the number of Brahmá's four faces, being added to the numbers of the quarters of the earth and the vedas.
 - † See vocab. s. v. गोरख धन्हारी.

CHAPTER IV.

MEETINGS.

(19.)

- 1. The clouds have become a demon of eclipse, and swallowed up the sun. We can hardly find our way even in the day-time.
- 2. "If it were not for the rain we should have no opportunity for love. Now none of the people of the town are moving abroad.
- 3. "Sweet one, haste and adorn thyself. To-day we can meet in the day-time.
- 4. "Put away all fear of thy elders and relations. A desire is never accomplished without courage."
- 5. In this world the one thing they yearn for is a meeting even for a moment: which is to them like a life-long love.
- 6. Bidyápati, the necklace of the neck of poets, saith, day-time caresses can never take place.

- 1. Though there were boats to cross the river, I came secretly on foot. How many thousands of serpents clung to my feet.
- 2. The night demons came along with me, and it was but a happy chance that none of them caught me by the hand.
- 3. I threw away my life to come hither, and yet I did not see my Mádhab.
- 4. He hath not studied the ways of love. He hath believed the words of slanderers.
- 5. The messenger, and the two consorts are all foolish. Action and idleness are much opposed to each other.
- 6. Bidyápati saith, hear O good woman, keep patience, and Murári will meet thee.

(21.)

- 1. As she was coming out of the arbour Girdhárí stopped her.
- 2. "O Mádhab, thou dwellest in one city with me, commit not highway robbery.
- 3. "O Kanhaiá, let go the cloth that hideth my bosom. My new veil will be torn to pieces.
- 4. "Do not make me naked, the disgrace thereof will run throughout the world.
 - 5. "My comrades have gone ahead. I am a woman and alone.
 - 6. "The lightning is flashing and the night is dark.
- 7 & 8. Bidyápati saith, I sang this. Hear O sweet lady. Simple indeed thou art. There need be no fear in company with Hari.

- 1. I heard with mine ears that Krishn was in the forest, but something else happened to me.
- 2. While searching for (Kṛishṇ), the enemy of S'iva* seized me. What am I to say concerning his wisdom.
 - 3. I wrote him sevent and five t in many varying terms.
 - 4. But my lord agreed to five \(\), out of which he rubbed out two. |
- 5. I anointed my moon-like body with sandal, but it increased the excessive burning.
- 6. Tempted by my lower lip, (my hair like) a venomous serpent slipped down and wished to bite it.
- 7. Bidyápati saith, the minds of both are filled with joy; the bee coveting sweet honey, seeketh after amorous dalliance.
- 8. How could the tender damsel bear what was intolerable? Yet the night passed and gave her life.

CHAPTER V.

THE BRIDAL NIGHT.

(23.)

- 1. "Full of curiosity, I went, O friend, to the bridal chamber surrounded by ten (bride's-maids).
- 2. "In the midst, I, in my beauty, shone, (and thought), O my friend, that Murárí himself would meet me in the house.
- 3. I adorned myself, O friend, with jewels and the sixteen (arts of love), and wore a dress of perfect colour.
- 4. "Looking at me the minds of all were filled with love, even, O friend, the souls of saints became disturbed.
- 5. "O friend, I covered¶ my body with blue garments, I had a sárí for covering my head like a veil.
- 6. "When I first approached my husband, O friend, he closely clasped me in his arms.
- 7. "All the bride's-maids accompanied me to his house, and then returned without me.
- 8. "My husband caught hold of my hand, drew me near to him, and undressed me.
 - * The God of love.
 - † विख खाय सर्व, "I will take poison and die," see Vocab.
 - ‡ नहिं आएब, "will you not come," see Vocab.
 - १ निहिं आएव, "I will not come."
 - ∥ नहिं, " not."
 - ¶ Lit. surrounded.

- 9. "Standing before me, the bridegroom spake in accents of desire.
- 10. "In the season of new pleasure, O friend, the minds of us both were filled with joy."
- 11. Bidyápati sang it, O friend, this is the way of tasting new pleasure.
- 12. The age of both, and their minds are the same, and the hearts of both are suited to each other.

(24.)

- 1. Happy are the consorts, now that their childhood has fled. The wantonness of their feet hath taken refuge in their eyes.
- 2. The eyes of both are become love's messengers. The fear, and the bashfulness of the damsel add a new ornament to her beauty.
- 3. He continually layeth his hand upon the cloth which hideth her bosom, and at the action, and in the presence of her bride's-maids, she hangeth her head in shame.
- 4. "Hear, hear, O Krishn, I have determined how I shall fight my fight. Do thou, my love, be careful of thyself.
- 5. "My eye-brows shall be my bow, strung with a line of collyrium; and the well feathered darts which will strike thee, will be the (glances of) my eyes."
- 6. Bidyápati the poet singeth a song of love, and Rájá S'ib Sĩh understandeth it.

- 1. Haste, haste, O lady, as if the day were propitious. Make no delay, for fear thine object be not accomplished.
- 2. The damsel was all distracted with fear, and her husband was tender. How could her friend comfort her and promise (a speedy) termination (to her woe).
- 3. Her friend comforted her, and seated her upon the couch; and her glad love arose, and took her in his arms.
- 4. "Nay, nay" she said, and her eyes flowed with tears; and she lay down to sleep at the further side of the couch.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, O Prince, there is no modesty so great as that of a down-cast eye.

(26.)

- 1. The beautiful one went to the house of her husband. All her friends caught hold of her hands, and surrounded her.
- 2. As she entered the house she felt the fear of love, even as the moon trembles in fear of Ráhu.

- 3. She had hardly entered the room before her necklace was broken, and her ornaments and clothing became disordered.
- 4. The collyrium of her eyes was washed away by her tears, and she wondered as the vermilion over her brow was rubbed off.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, I sang this. She gained pleasure through enduring pain.

(27.)

- 1. The damsel went for the first time to her love, and there was great shame and fear in her heart.
- 2. The damsel stood motionless; like a golden statue she uttereth no sound with her mouth.
- 3. The husband caught hold of her two hands, and made her sit by his side. The damsel was displeased, and bore a melancholy face.
- 4. The bee uncovered her lotus face, and looked, but she covered it again; and then he took the lotus-faced one into his lap.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, sweet one, pay attention; for the monarch understandeth the delights of love.

(28.)

- 1. "O friend, take me not (to the bridal chamber). I am a child, and my husband is full of passion."
- 2. "She encouraged me with consoling words, and took me with her, and made me sit on my husband's bed.
- 3. "All my friends left the house one by one, and my husband fastened the door tightly.
- 4. "Then my glad husband became as it were aroused from sleep, and I caught hold of my clothes fearing that my life would be put to an end.
- 5. "I continued saying 'no,' 'no,' and tears flowed from my eyes; but the bee commenced to struggle with the young lotus."
- 6. As the water on the lotus-leaf is trembling, so is the body of the damsel.
- 7. Bidyápati saith, hear, O great poet. If thou light fire, thou must put it to its use.

(29.)

- 1. "O Mádhab, the pretty one is like a siris* flower.
- 2. "The clever bee tempted by (her sweetness) seizeth his opportunity; and diving into, drinketh the new honey.
- 3. "The damsel is in her first youth, and the first meeting with (her husband) taketh place in the first watch of the night.

^{*} Acacia sirisa.

- 4. "If the anxious husband is now so jealous (of her delay), what will he do when she admitteth him to enjoyment."
- 5. Hari caused her to sleep on his lap, and took off her clothes from every part of her body.
- 6. He pressed the lotus-like pretty one as in anger, and laid her on the earth.
- 7. She put one (hand) on her lower lip, and the other on her kirtle; but two (hands) cannot be three.
- 8. How can she, therefore, conceal her breasts, on each of which arose five (finger marks like) moons.
 - 9. Her speech was broken, her shrinking eyes were filled with tears.
- 10. Cupid caught a fish, (i. e. her eye swimming in tears) with his hook, and its body, (i. e. the eye) struggled (i. e. rolled about) in all directions.
- 11. Bidyápati saith, the minds of both are filled with joy; the bee, coveting sweet honey, seeketh after amorous dalliance.
- 12. How could the tender damsel endure what was intolerable, yet the night passed and gave her life.

(30.)

- 1. She first showed anger, and then entreated, and finally agreed, and was persuaded by her friend to go to her husband's chamber.
- 2. The damsel slept with her face turned from her husband, nor did she smile upon him. No one can rally a defeated army.
- 3. The bridegroom is full of passion, and the bride is young. If thou wert to spend millions of gold, thou couldst not procure a union of these two.
- 4. Under the cover of her garments she concealed her face, as the moon is hidden under the cloud.
- 5. Though her elders and relations bid her not deny her beloved one; she doth not dare to do so, for her treasury of love is still closed with a seal.
- 6. Bidyápati saith, Ráy Sib Sĩh, and Lakhimá know this way of love.

(31.)

- 1. "When Hari snatched away my bodice, how I struggled with my limbs against him."
- 2. The story of that moment is untellable; the sweet-faced damsel became silent through shame.
- 3. The light could not be put out as it was too far off from her hand. But still she did not die of shame, for maidens cling to life.

- 4. Who can bear such warm embraces. He strained the ribs over her tender heart.
- 5. Bidyápati the poet saith, no friend of hers was there to tell her that morning would come.

(32.)

- 1. "I tried to cover the orbs of my bosom with my hands, but thou canst not cover a mountain of gold with a lotus.
- 2. "With pleasure I gazed upon my face, and, delighted, my body assumed various forms of beauty.
- 3. "Hari then took away my veil, and the sweet lace of my bodice slipped down.
- 4. "Last night, O friend, I dreamt a dream, but my modesty forbiddeth my relating it.
- 5. "My eyes were filled with the tears of delight, and (watered by them) my seedling love hath put forth leaves."
- 6. Bidyápati singeth of love, and Rájá Sib Sīh understandeth the pleasures of it.

(33.)

- 1. "How am I to tell, O friend, of his wantonness. My husband desired unlawful pleasure.
- 2. "He pretended that my twin breasts were two delicate mountains; and he laid his hands upon them, lest they should fall upon his heart (and crush it).
- 3. "I was intoxicated with love, and my modesty deserted me; (nor cared I that) my girdle of bells, and my anklets, kept continually tinkling.
- 4. "Beads of perspiration added an enhanced brilliancy to my face; like pearl-fruit forming on a golden lotus.
- 5. "I cannot tell the words that issued from my husband's lips. We gazed in each other's faces, and both our hearts laughed."
- 6. Bidyápati singeth sweet words. "Thou knowest, O damsel, that nectar which is chosen; drink it."

- 1. "To-day, my friend, I see thee very melancholy, and that thy face is woe begone.
- 2. "Hath any one used reproachful words to thee? Thou dost not tell me any thing."
- 3. "Last night I passed in suffering. Kánh wickedly sported with me.
- 4. "He did not consider my good or bad qualities; but dimmed, like Ráhu, the circle of the moon.

- 5. "My lower lip he made dry, my hair he put in disorder, and perspiration washed away the mark over my forehead."*
- 6. The young damsel knew not how to enjoy dalliance (in moderation), and allowed the vermilion on her forehead to become besmeared.
- 7. Bidyápati saith, hear, O pretty woman, why should I not tell such things?
- 8. The present her husband gave her, she concealed in her garment, in the fear of being detected and ridiculed by her comrades.

(35.)

- 1. "O Hari, Hari, hear me patiently. Now is not the hour of dalliance.
- 2. "The stars which glittered in the sky, are no more to be seen; and the cuckoo uttereth his voice at her appointed time.
- 3. "The partridge and the peacock have already finished their songs, and are silent. The lip of the moon is growing dim.
- 4. "The village cows are wandering forth to graze upon the road. The bees are settling on the water-lilies.
- 5. "My lips stained red with betel have lost their brilliant colour. This is not the time for enjoyment."
- 6. Bidyápati saith, this is not a good action, the whole world will ridicule thee.

(36.)

- 1. The stars of the sky are set; still who careth to cease caresses.
- 2. What is another's, he pretendeth is his own; and lovingly presseth it between his hands.
- 3. Her necklace of pearls had been broken; and in the dim day-light the wounds of the love-conflict were visible.
- 4. She uttereth "Nay, nay, nay," but still he striveth to gain his object with ten million devices.
- 5. Bidyápati saith that amid the three (the lover, the damsel, and she who brought them together) the last is the cleverest of all.

(37.)

- 1. The fair bridegroom hath finished his caresses, and sleepeth with his hand upon her bosom.
- 2. It is as if he were worshipping a golden image of Sib, and were covering the lotus which surmounted it with his hand.
- * A तिल्क can only be worn by a man. Hence the word here must mean the त्रंगार or other mark used by women on their foreheads.

- 3. O friend, such is the dalliance of Mádhab.
- 4. Like a bee which hath enjoyed the jasmine, he bendeth his head, and watcheth in the hope of further pleasure.
- 5. He approached his face to hers, and placed it on it; as it were the moon upon a spotless lotus.
- 6. Both the bee and the mountain partridge are weary, after drinking the nectar of ambrosia.
- 7 & 8. Bidyápati saith, hear, O king S'ib Sĩh, Rúp Náráyan, and Pránbatí who is his necklace, the wondrous tale of Krishn and Rádhá.

(38.)

- 1. "In his warm embrace, blind with intoxication he gave me pain. I have escaped (from a great danger), through the virtuous actions of my former life.
- 2 & 3. "My necklace of pearls was broken and scattered, and my garments,* fell to the ground. My two breasts were torn with his nails, as a lion teareth the forehead of an elephant.
- 4 & 5. "When I see the marks of biting on my lower lip, my heart trembleth, as when Ráhu obscureth the circle of the moon. All night appeared to me like the fathomless ocean, and I asked myself when the sun would arise a friend to me.
- 6 & 7. "I shall not go again to my husband, if he thus cast my life away with love." Bidyápati saith, cast away fear and shame, for if thou once light fire, thou must put it to its use.

CHAPTER VI.

A COWHERDESS, A FAVOURITE OF KRISHN,

OFFERS FALSE EXCUSES TO HER SISTER-IN-LAW, ON HER RETURN FROM AN ASSIGNATION.

(39.)

- 1. "My friend, how can I satisfy my husband.
- 2. "At the birth of that† which (is to-day) I left my house, and did not return until its death.
- 3. "That‡ for which I went, came of itself; and therefore I took shelter under a tree.
- 4. "When it ceased, I brought it home; and am I therefore to be considered improper.
 - * See पनार in the Vocabulary.
 - † The sun.
 - † The water.

- 5. "As soon as I got (to the water) I broke the stem of a lotus, and wished to bathe.
- 6. "(When I bathed in) the pond, (the water) splashed, and the bees rushed forth and stung my lip.
- 7. "When I put the full jar (upon my head) I drew a long breath, and it fell slipping down my hair.
- 8. "Ten friends went with me before and behind, and (in the crowd) I was suffocated and could not speak."
- 9. Bidyápati saith, hear, pretty one, keep all these things concealed in thine heart.
- 10. Daily thy love for thy sister-in-law will increase, and thou shouldest speak so that these (secrets) should be never revealed.

- 1. "O sister-in-law, thou suspectest me of being guilty, simply from my appearance.
- 2. "Do not say hastily that I have been faithless to my husband, nor make my mother-in-law angry.
- 3 & 4. "In sport I broke a lotus stalk, and wished to make an earring of it. Angered at this a bee flew at me from the lotus-bell and stung my lower lip.
- 5. & 6. "As I returned I did not see the thorn shrub on the road from the $gh\acute{a}t$; the path was narrow, and I missed my way and the thorns tore my bosom.
- 7. "The water jar was heavy, and I could not keep my head steady; —hence my dishevelled hair.
 - 8. "I fell behind my companions, and hence my panting breath.
- 9. "On the way the slanderers cast reproaches at me, and I answered them on the spot.
- 10. "I am very foolish, and could not keep patience with them, and hence my words are broken."
 - 11. Bidyápati saith, Hear, O damsel, keep all this secret.
- 12. "Conceal the ways of love from thy sister-in-law, and reveal not that which is concealed.

CHAPTER VI.

LOVER'S QUARRELS.

(41.)

- 1. O Mádhab, act up to thy words.
- 2. Knowing thee to be mighty I took refuge in thee, and thought thou wast like ocean with all its lakes.

- 3. I wandered and wandered throughout the wide world, and every where heard of thy fame and greatness.
- 4. I have considered, myself, and have learnt from others concerning thy virtues and thy honour. Thy virtues cannot be even described by me.
- 5. At first every one speaketh of a man's gentleness. But not till the end will the fruit be known.
- 6. The words of a great man never change, even as the natural affection of the moon and the deer.
- 7. Bidyápati saith, hear, O good woman, this quality is not to be found in any excepting Mádhab.
- 8. I say this in presence of Ráy S'ibai Sĩh, Rúp Náráyan, and his queen Lakhimá Daí.

(42.)

- 1. A great man even when angered with one he loves, doth not give up his love for him.
- 2. The crow and the cuckoo are of the same kin. The beetle and the bee resemble each other.
- 3. Gold and turmeric are (alike in colour), but yet how different. I distinguish the good from the bad by their qualities, and not by their appearance.
- 4. Though a jewel be covered with mud, still its qualities are not destroyed.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, take it for granted, that a good husband will not drive his wife to extremities.

(43.)

- 1. I took him for a fragrant sandal tree, and serving him, thought, O friend, that all my desires would be accomplished.
- 2. I had a meeting with my love, and enjoyed his embrace, but in the end I find him out a *semal tree, (without fragrance or fruit).
- 3. Though Mádhab dwelleth in the same village with me, he hath become the slave of the wives of others.
- 4. Though I am a damsel endowed with such excellent beauty, I have lost all my charms and my pride.
- 5 & 6. O friend, the fresh lotus flower (of myself), as it lieth in the basket made of the (bitter) ním† branches (of separation), is withered; and yet (my rival) the (scentless) wild rice hath become sweet and blooming.
- 7. It hath chanced that my love should come to-day, after spending so many days there.
 - * Bombax heptaphyllum. †
 - † Azadirachta Indica.

- 8. Why shall I admit his embraces. My heart doth not believe in him.
- 9. Bidyápati saith, O friend, I sang what was proper. The appreciator of the good will come.
- 10. Arise, O friend, and feast to thy heart's content. To-day thy husband will come home.

(44.)

- 1. "Thine eyes are red; I know the great secret. They tell the grave scandal of a moonlit night.
- 2. "O Hari, make no excuse; go thou to her with whom thou hast spent the night.
- 3. "A bosom full and round as a kumkum* hath left its impress over thy heart. It is as if love had painted thy dark skin fair.
- 4. "Thou wearest ornaments not thine own, betraying the tale that thou hast been with another."
- 5. Bidyápati saith, even speaking thus is forbidden. When a great man committeth an injustice, bear it in silence.

(45.)

- 1. Lotus loving bees are many in this world, but amongst all he is great who hath discretion.
- 2. "O proud lady, haste and yield to thy love's caresses. Opportunity is short, and the benefit is great.
- 3. "Thou gavest him no honey, though thou hadst no lack of it. Only that wealth is wealth by which others are benefited.
- 4. "Thou spakest rashly to him, and thereby didst put a flame to his heart which will only be extinguished with his death.
- 5. "It is not thou who art base, but thy actions. Evil communications corrupt manners."
- 6. Bidyápati saith, the messenger told her privately. One cannot gain one's own without another's loss.

CHAPTER VII.

SEPARATION.

(46.)

- 1. Happy are the days of youth and love. For a few days equal passion is seen in both.
 - 2. Cruel fate turneth good to evil. What can it not cause to happen.

 * See note to No. 76.

- 3. This determination of thine is not good. Be not obstinate, and depart not from thy former love.
- 4. Tell me the truth, whither do the eyes of thy hope gaze? Dost thou remember the meetings with thy beloved?
- 5. Thine eyes flow with tears. Thou payest no heed unto thy garments nor dost thou wear thy necklace.
- 6. Though the moon be a hundred thousand leagues away still the water-lily rejoiceth in it.
- 7. Mutual love increaseth the more distant the beloved ones are separated from each other.
 - 8. Bidyápati the poet singeth, a good husband will keep his word.

(47.)

- 1. In what wood doth Maheś dwell? No one can tell me.
- 2. Maheś dwelleth in the forest of penance, and is undergoing fear-ful hardships.
- 3. With earring in his ear, and bow in hand my husband, O friend, is saying sweet things in that forest.
- 4. In the (dense) forest, where even reeds are motionless, doth my husband laugh and talk.
- 5. One single word came between us, and so my husband arose and departed.
 - 6. Bidyápati saith, sing the actions of Rádhá and Krishn.

(48.)

- 1. Once on a time there was a young love, like the love of fish for water.
- 2. One word came between us, and my love smiled and did not even reply to me.
- 3. Kánh was on the same bed with me, but it seemed as if he were in a far country.
 - 4. In the forest where none can move, doth my beloved laugh and talk.
 - 5. I will don a hermit's weeds, and search for my love.
 - 6. Bidyápati saith, a good husband will not drive thee to extremities.

(49.)

- 1. I came here searching for thee in remembrance of our love, but as I arrived thou satest with thy face turned away.
- 2. Thou didst not even reply to my first words, and with the glances of thine eyes thou tookest away my life.
- 3. O moon-faced damsel, be not too proud. I, like a bee, am uneasy in my heart.

- 4. Thou gavest me hope. Do not therefore disappoint me. Be gracious, and fulfil my desire.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, take it for authority, in the heart of both was born the arrow of separation.

(50.)

- 1. O proud one, shew not anger now.
- 2. Nature seemeth so lovely now, that it is as it were the God of love but just awakened.
- 3. The night is cool, and the moon shineth. No other season is comparable to this.
- 4. Only she who hath enjoyed them knoweth the delights of a husband's caresses at such a time.
- 5 & 6. Other damsels, with many smiles and caresses, and offering sweet draughts of nectar of their lower lips, have yielded themselves up to their husbands' embraces. I alone entreat and am hungry.
- 7. Thy navel resembleth the whirlpool at the union of the Ganges and the Yamuna, with three soft wrinkles for its waves. And (on the banks of the rivers) are thy breasts like two images (lingas) of S'iva.
- 8. Thy mourning husband yearneth for the gift. O sweetheart, bestow upon him them all.
- 9 & 10. Bidyápati saith, ye are a light and an (unlit) lamp: If ye come together, your hearts will no longer retain their calmness. Keep your patience under subjection. The pangs of pent up love are very pitiful.

(51.)

- 1. Mádhab did not consider this rightly.
- 2. Should be, whose wife is like love in beauty, indulge in debauchery?
- 3. I love him more than even my life, and value him like unto the necklace over my heart.
- 4. I never look on another man's face. What wisdom hath he when he doth so?
- 5. No one praiseth a miser* husband, and the whole world ridiculeth him.
- 6. Who while having his own wealth doth not make use of it, but hopeth (to use) another's wealth.
- 7. Bidyápati saith, hear, O Madhurápati, this is an improper action.
 - * One who being not satisfied with his own wife, looks after another's.

100

8. If the wealth obtained by begging from (others) be an everlasting one, of what use is our own?

(52.)

- 1. "What fault have I committed to-day? Why, O Hari, dost thou not east even half a glance upon me?
- 2. "On other days thou claspedst my neck, and broughtest me within the house, to tell me thy love in varied words.
- 3. "My husband was annoyed in his heart and slept. The heart of a husband should not be of this nature."
- 4. Bidyápati saith, hear words of truth. When love increaseth self-respect is lost.

(53)

- 1. O Mádhab, what can I say of thy wisdom?
- 2. When I called thee "Dear husband" thou wast annoyed, and didst shut thine ears with both thy hands.
- 3. When the time of separation approached; my sleep did not break, and so I could not ask him anything.
- 4. There is, O friend, no one so unfortunate as I. The precious jewel hath departed from my hand.
- 5. If I had known that my husband was so cruel at heart, I would have made my breasts mountains of gold.
- 6. And cunningly with the palms of my hands, and with my arms, like creepers, would I have bound him firmly and kept him here.
- 7. When I remember this, if I do not die, my heart can only be of stone.
- 8. The poet Bidyápati saith, O daughter of the Himálaya, keep the feet (of thy husband) on thine own heart.

(54.)

- 1. O friend what can I say of my folly; I passed the whole night in pride.
 - 2. When my heart was softened, the cruel dawn arose.
- 3. The elders awoke, how could I yield his caresses? As I hid my body I was much confused.
- 4. I wished to shew my cleverness, and only made myself foolish. I tried to obtain my interest, and lost even the principal.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, it was a fault of judgment that at the time of love thou shewedst anger.

(55.)

- 1 & 2. O Mádhab, go not thou to a far country. Thou wilt take with thee all my happiness, and what wilt thou bring me in return?
- 3. As soon as thou enterest the forest thou wilt change thy mind, and thou wilt, O my lord, forget me.
- 4. I will not beg for a diamond, nor a pearl, nor for a ruby, but for thee, my love.
- 5. When thou, my love, didst depart, mine eyes were filled with tears, nor could I even see thee.
- 6. Though (he) dwelleth with me in the same city, my love is the slave of others. How will he fulfil my desires.
- 7. Fair women when with their husbands, like stars around the moon, are happy in their love.
- 8. Bidyápati saith, hear, O good woman, keep the True Essence in thine heart.

(56.)

- 1. My husband hath left me and gone to a far country, with whom shall I pass my young life?
- 2. My bed is soft and scented with flowers. How thirsty my bee must be where'er he dwelleth.
- 3. Remembering, remembering, my heart will not remain still, and my body is burnt in the fire of love.
- 4. Bidyápati the poet saith, Victory to $R\acute{a}m$. What can a husband do when the fates are against him.

(57.)

- 1. The damsel, in her desolation, went to her bed-chamber, saying, "What hath God written in my destiny?"
- 2. She rose distraught, and sat with bended head, and looking round her, became ashamed.*
- 3. My beloved one hath gone; and I used to play with the two hands of my husband.
- 4. Bidyápati saith, O wondrous love! according to the length of separation is new love produced.

(58.)

 - * i. e. awoke from a dream about her absent husband.

- 3. O God! my fate hath been reversed. My husband hath given up his former love (for me).
- 4. The grief of my heart is like an arrow, but how can one feel the pain borne by another?
- 5. Bidyápati the poet saith, Victory to Rám. What can a husband do when the fates are against him?

(59.)

Rádhá enigmatically describes her woe.

- 1. O Mádhab, O Mádhab, be attentive (to my words). Separated from thee I will take poison.*
- 2. My face like the first, twenty-fifth, and twenty-eighth (letters),† hath been withered by snow.
- 3. The twenty-fifth, eighteenth, and twentieth (letters) thurn my body. The third after the son of earth taketh my life away.
- 4. Remember, O Mádhab, the affection of those days when the lion¶ went to the house of the fish.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, write the letters in alphabetical order. The wise can explain them.

The same in the form of a letter.

- 1. "The grove is full of flowers, and I sit apart: I use the collyrium of my eye for dark ink.
- 2. "I write upon the leaf of a lotus with my nails these seven letters."
- 3. First she wrote the first day of spring, secondly, she wrote that the third day was passed. ††
- * The number of भुवन or "worlds" is fourteen, and that of रितु or "seasons" six; and fourteen and six are equal to बीस "twenty" = बिष "poison."
 - † कमल or "lotus."
 - ‡ सद्न "Love."
 - § वहस्पति, see Vocabulary, s. v. तेसर.
 - || संगल.
- ¶ Any word commencing with स (here सस्तक) is represented by the सिंह राधि; and any word commencing with प (here पर) is represented by सीन राधि. Hence the sentence means "when you put your head under my foot."
-  जुसुसित कानन. There is here a play on the word जुसुसित, vide Vocabulary s. v. अनज.
 - †† Cf. प्रथमेऽइनि चांडाली दितीय चर्मकारिणी. लतीय रजकी प्रोक्ता चतुर्थं खानमाचरेत्॥.

- 4. She could not write the one which followeth spring, for the first sentence was putting her life to an end (through remembrance of her husband).
- 5. Bidyápati saith, count the letters. Those who are wise can tell the purport.

(61.)

- 1. My mind is distraught, and my husband is in a foreign country. When I gaze upon the moon, flames rise in my body.
- 2. The pains of love penetrate to the bottom of my heart. To whom shall I tell my distress, for my husband is in a far country.
- 3 & 4. My kirtle remembering his love, and that he is not come home, and (hearing) the intolerable songs of the frogs and cuckoos, is slipping down to-day. My love is great, but I cannot find my husband.

- 6. "I am one jewel here, and there are many jewels scattered about.

 And my husband slept there."
- 7. The Lord of Lakshmi kissed her lotus eyes, and pressed her to his heart with the strength of Kumbh Karan.
- 8. Bidyápati, meditating on the feet of Hari, singeth the lament of Rádhá and Krishn.

CHAPTER IX.

MISCELLANEOUS.

(78.)

Prayer addressed to the Ganges.

- 1. How sweet are the boons I have obtained upon thy bank. As I leave thee mine eyes fill with tears.
- * Kumkum is the sealing-wax sphere filled with red powder used at such festivals as the Holí, by the holiday-makers, to throw at each other.

- 2. With clasped hands I adore thy pure waves. Holy Gangá, may I see thee once again.
- 3. One fault of mine thou knowest, and wilt pardon. I have touched, O mother, with my feet, thy water.
- 4. Why need I perform silent prayer, or penance, devotion, or pious meditation. I look upon them as equally ineffectual, for my life hath been blessed by thee.
- 5. Bidyápati saith, my prayer to thee is this, forget me not in the hour of death.

(79.)

A comical song, in which a wife complains about the tender age of her husband.

- 1. My husband is a child, and I am a full blown damsel. (In a former life) what penance did I insufficiently perform, that I am as his mother.
- 3. My friend, I dressed myself in garments of the south; but when I saw my husband my body became burnt up with disappointment.
- 5. I took my husband in my lap and went to market, and the market people asked "What is he to you?"
- 7. "He is not my husband's younger brother, nor is he my little brother. In my former life it was written that he should be my husband.
- 9. "O wayfarer on the road, you are my brother. Go on a message to my father's house.
- 11. "Tell my father to purchase a milch cow, that he may give his son-in-law milk to drink, and nourish him.
- 13. "I have no money, and no milch cow. How am I to bring up his little son-in-law?
- 15. Bidyápati says, hear O woman of Braj. Have patience and Murári will meet thee.

A song of Intrigue.

- 1. "O fair one, you are wise and clever; I am dying of thirst, give me a drink of water."
- 2. "Who are you, and of what family? Without previous acquaintance, I give no man a seat, or water."
- 3. "I am a traveller, and a Rájpút; and, separated from my love, I wander over the world."
- 4. "Come, and be seated, and drink water. Whatever you ask for I will give you.
- 5. "My father-in-law and brother-in-law are gone to a far country, and my husband has gone to search for them.

- 6. "My mother-in-law is in the house, but she is blind and cannot see. My child does not understand my speech."
- 7. Bidyápati says, O wondrous love! according to the length of separation new love is produced.

(81.)

S'IVA'S MARRIAGE.

A friend of Umá laments her lot.

- 1. One who wanders in every house from the beginning of his life. How can be be married?
- 2. We are going now to make him the bridegroom of Gaurí. How can this be allowed?
- 3 & 4. Where is his house? Where is the courtyard thereof? Who are his parents? He has no fixed home. Who will take him for a son-in-law?
- 5 & 6. Who has settled this marriage (with Siva)? None is his relation. The genealogist who fixed this marriage is a contemptible one.
- 7. He has neither a family nor relations. His dependents are ghosts and demons.
- 8. Considering this my body burns, who can bear the thorn in my heart?
- 9 & 10. Bidyápati says, O pretty one, keep this in your mind. He who is destined to be your consort will become your husband.

A friend of Umá addresses her mother, on the occasion of S'iva's coming to marry her.

- 1. O mother, such a wilful bridegroom have they brought, the Himálay blushed as he gazed on him.
- 2. Such a fool is he that he cannot even ride a horse, even a fully equipped one.*
- 3. He has spread a tiger's skin over a bull, and tied it with a snake for a girth.
- 4. Patter, patter, goes his tabor, and rattle, rattle go the bones in his body.
- 5. Gobble, gobble, he gorges himself with Indian hemp, and smack, smack go his cheeks thereat.
- * Mr. Fallon translates sin here by 'pace', but I do not find this meaning of the word current in Mithilá. sin is elsewhere in Mithilá used to signify equipment.

- 6. He has painted himself with sandal-wood, and has smeared his whole body with ashes.
- 7. He has collected a great army of ghosts and goblins, and down from his head flows the Ganges.
 - 8. Bidyápati says, hear Manáin,* it is the god Digambar Bhang.

Next follow a few poems by Harkh Náth, or Harsha Nátha, a living poet. They are Vaishṇava poems in the same style as those of Bidyápati, and are in the modern Maithilí dialect.

TRANSLATION OF THE SONGS OF MARKH NA'TH.

The messenger describes the charms of Rádhá.

- 1. I saw a young damsel, slender as a line of gold, upon the way. It was as if the god of love had formed a desire for the conquest of the whole world.
- 3. The lightning flashed with its own peculiar brilliancy, and displayed its loveliness; but, when it saw her matchless beauty, it became ashamed, and again and again returned to its own abode.
- 5. Who can liken what to the loveliness of her curling locks, and of her eyes. They were as if Cupid himself had caught two fish with his hooks.
- 7. The charming boundary of her lotus face, gave her a peculiar brilliancy. It was like the full autumn moon surrounded by lightning. Harkh Náth the chief of poets, lendeth his heart and singeth this and King Lakshmíśvar Sĩh* understandeth its nature.

A cowherdess relates to her friend the charms of a lady.

- 1. I saw a sweet damsel, O friend, radiant as a flash of lightning. My eyes were satisfied as I gazed upon her matchless form.
 - * The present Mahárájá Báhádúr of Darbhangá.

- 3. Her lovely face shone, and still more her two eyes. They were as it were a pair of beauteous bees, resting upon a lotus.
- 5. From below her navel there came a serpent line of hair as if desiring to devour her bird-like* eyes. But when it saw her nose (standing watch over her face) like Garur the enemy of serpents, it stopped like a lovely picture at the foot of the mountain of her bosom.
- 7. New anklets tinkled on her feet, and sweet they were to hear. It was as it were an intoxicated soul-abiding bee, humming o'er a lotus leaf.
- 9. Harkh Náth, the worshipper of the feet of the mother of the world sang this, and King Lakshmísvar Sĩh understandeth its nature.

(3.)

One cowherdess relates to another the beauty of Rádhá.

- 1. The fair damsel went to her bridal-chamber, attired in a dark blue garment. She appeared brilliant like a golden creeper, desired by many clustering bees.
- 3. A spot of chalk, and another of vermilion shone over her forehead, like the sun and moon risen at once upon a lotus leaf.
- 5. Who can tell the charming brilliance of her teeth or the fresh lotus of her lower lip. 'Twas like a meeting of innumerable white kund† flowers, beneath a blossom of the red bandhuk.‡
- 7. Her two feet were painted, and o'er them shone a charming pair of thighs; which resembled the trunks of two elephants extended eager for two fresh lotus shoots.
- 9. Harkh Náth, the worshipper of the feet of the mother of the world-sang this, and King Lakshmísvar Sĩh understandeth its nature.

The messenger describes the charms of Rádhá. (She shone.) (Refrain.)

- 1. With love filling her heart, the sweet bride went along with her friends.
- 2. Slowly, slowly she progressed, as if wearied with the weight of her bosom.
- 3. Her eyes half-closed, she hardly saw clearly, like a chakor § full of intoxication.
 - 4. Gently she spake and laughed, as it were the moon raining nectar.
 - 5. When I remember those delights, my whole body thrilleth.
- 6. The poet Harkh Náth telleth, and the King of Mithilá knoweth its essence.
 - * The Khanjan, Motacilla alba, is a bird to which eyes are frequently compared.
 - † Jasminum grandiflorum.
 - ‡ Pentapetes phœnicea.
 - § The Greek Partridge, Perdix rufa.

(5.)

The messenger relates the charms of Rádhá to Krishn.

- 1. O Mádhab, I saw a matchless beauty. When I saw her I knew that my birth had obtained its fruit, and that the desires of my eyes were fulfilled.
- 3. I forbid the lightning (to compare itself to her), for it is fickle in its brilliancy, and the golden creeper, for it is hard. When he formed her body, Brahmá at length exhibited his full skill.
- 5. When Love's bow was burned by the eye of Siva, and only a filament of ashes remained, Brahmá searched for them, and divided them into two, and out of them he formed her eyebrows.
- 7. Her eyes, equal in brilliancy, destroy the pride of the Khanjan,* and of the dark eye† of the deer. Brahmᇠloved the lotus, and laid his foot upon her bosom, (and took up his abode there).
- 9. When it saw her spotless lotus face, the brilliancy of the nightly moon became dimmed: and when it gazed upon the pride of her two golden orbs, the pomegranate broke its heart.
- 11. Brahmá formed her teeth of pomegranate seeds, and (her lower lip), which concealed them, of the bandhuk§ flower. King Lakshmísvar Sĩh understandeth her charms, and Harkh Náth singeth them.

The Poet describes the beauty of a lady.

- 1. To-day I saw a fair one; and lo, when it beheld her dark garments so like dark clouds, a sudden flash of lightning played around her.
- 3. The moon though shining amid the fire of S'iva's eye became ashamed, when gazing on her face. For a great man cannot bear to be disgraced.
- 5. When the Khanjan saw the play of her eyes, which put to shame the leaf of the spotless lotus, it became ashamed itself, and took up its abode in the forest.
- 7. She knoweth that young lovers would continually steal the gold above her heart, and so she hath tightly bound her twin bosom 'neath a bodice.
- 9. Harkh Náth declareth with all his heart that the lady is matchless. "When I saw her beauteous eyes, I knew I had done so as the result of penances performed in former births."
 - * The Khanjan Motacilla Alba, is a bird to which eyes are frequently compared.
 - † Lit. collyrium.
 - ‡ Brahmá is said to have been born in a lotus.
 - § Pentapetes phœnicea.
- || The poet fancifully attributes the wildness of the khanjan to jealousy caused by the play of her eyes.

(7.)

Rádhá laments her separation from Kṛishṇ, and charges the seasons with adding to her pangs.

- 1. Friend, friend, how can I keep my patience? See, see, how the southern wind hath watched till my Lord had gone to a far country, and now consumeth my body.
- 3. The rays of the moon, the leaf of the champak,* and sandal, have given me sorrow, and passed away. Even the winter consumeth my body entirely; no one is friendly to one whose husband is away.
- 5. A flowery grove consumeth mine eyes, and the voice of the cuckoo mine ears; How can I bear the unbearable pangs of love;—Every instant my life departeth from me.
- 7. The hot season hath passed, and the rains have begun. On all sides the clouds are piled: at such a time as this my lord remaineth stead-fastly in a foreign country, and to-day hath not returned to his home.
- 9. Be firm. Before long thou wilt meet thy lord, and the (sun of) thy separation will set. Harkh Náth the poet singeth, and king Lakshmíśvar Sĩh understandeth the meaning.

Rádhá laments her separation from her beloved to her friend, and accuses the moon of aggravating her pangs.

- 1. O friend, O friend, help me against them, else my soul will be distracted, and my body continually burned; for the moon-beams are irresistible.
- 3. The moon is beloved of the water-lily, and was born in the milky ocean; it and the (pure-white) jasmine flower have the same effect. But still it continually consumeth my body and of a truth I find that its heart is black.
- 5. Why did not the ocean conceal it in its bosom, as he doth fire† in his heart. Why did not the god of love drink him off, as Siva swallowed the deadly kálkút.‡
- 7. Even though Ráhu, the demon of eclipse, swallow him, he still surviveth and woundeth the heart of her who is far from her Lord; behold, the ill-natured, cruel, pain-giving one, is he who is irresistible.
- 9. Be firm. Before long thou wilt meet thy lord and the moon will be sweetly cool. Harkh Náth the poet singeth what hath been revealed unto King Lakshmíśvar Sĩh.
 - * Michelia champaca.
 - † Allusion to sub-marine fire.
 - I A deadly poison swallowed by S'iva at the churning of the Ocean.

(9.)

Krishn entreats Rádhá to relent.

- 1. Let not thy heart be hard. Forgive my faults; be pleased with me, O lady, and fulfil my heart's desires.
- 3. When I beheld thy face mournful, lady, I wandered restlessly o'er the world. Thy face is like the moon, and my heart like the chakor,* which findeth not surcease of woe therein.
- 5. As I searched for thee, my heart melted; for even the moon-beams, the champak† leaf, sandal, and the music of the cuckoo in the fifth scale, were as fire unto me.
- 7. O wise one, think well and turn not aside thy face from a suppliant. If the honey-loving bee desert the honey and turn back in fear of thorns, the loss is that of the ketki‡ flower.
- 9. The night is passed and dawn hath come. Even now, lady, give up thy pride. King Lakshmíśvar Sĩh understandeth her charms, and Harkh Náth singeth them.

(10.)

Krishn entreats Rádhá to relent.

- 1. Why sittest thou with averted face? Put aside from it thy veil, my pretty one, and with pleased heart cast one glance upon me.
- 3. Put aside my faults, and utter but one word. Let not thy face be melancholy. Scorn not thy devoted love, but bestow upon him the nectar of thy lip.
- 5. Without thee, lady, my heart is never for a moment at rest; yet in spite of ten thousand endeavours, thy heart, hard as adamant, doth not change.
- 7. If the fault is mine, pretty one, why hast thou put aside thy necklace? Who would decide that one should suffer for another's fault?
- 9. The night is past and dawn hath come. Even now, lady, give up thy pride. King Lakshmísvar Sĩh understandeth her charms, and Harkh Náth singeth them.

Congratulations sung on the birth of Krishn.

- 1. The dancers, warriors, and astrologers, all at once obtained their desires in the shape of horses, elephants, chariots, gold, rubies, jewels, and pearls upon their heads.
- * The Greek Partridge, Perdix rufa, said to be enamoured of the moon, to subsist upon moonbeams, and to eat fire at the full moon.
 - † Michelia Champaca, a tree bearing a fragrant yellow flower.
 - † Pandanus Odoratissimus.

- 3. Indra with the gods appeared in the atmosphere with glorious pomp, and saw the Loveliness of the house of Jadu.
- 5. The gods, pleased at heart, and their limbs thrilling with joy, rained flowers, and in the sky played propitious melodies upon the drum.
- 7. Great was the wealth given to the midwife who cut the navel cord: and the wives of the cowherds in their joy sang the sohar.*
- 9. In joy the fair ones of the city sang, and captivated the minds of gods and men; when birds and beasts heard them they became motionless, and even saints desisted from their contemplation.
- 11 & 12. Harkh Náth saith with all his heart, May Hari be propitious, and bless king Lakshmísvar Sĩh with increase of wealth and subjects.
- 13. May Jadu Náth, the refuge of the three worlds, satisfy Harkh Náth's request, and fulfil the heart's desires of the Lord of Mithilá.

Kṛishṇ implores Rádhá to relent.

- 1. Show not exceeding anger, love; but think, and find some means (of forgiving me). If I am guilty, bind me tightly with the creeper of thine arms.
- 3. Let (the sun of) thy pride set, and drawing the bow of thy fair young brows, strike me suddenly with the adamantine arrows of thy eyes.
- 5. Take the golden mountains of thy bosom, and cast them on my heart and crush it: with sharp teeth rend my lower lip, nor shed a tear drop (in pity) as thou doest it.
- 7. Ne'er will I disregard thy words, my love; and if thou doubt this, cause me to place my hand upon the Siva image of thy bosom (that I may swear thereby).
- 9. The night is passed and dawn hath come. Even now, lady, give up thy pride—King Lakshmíśvar Sĩh understandeth her charms, and Harkh Náth singeth them.

The messenger describes the charms of Rádhá.

- 1. A lovely brightness putteth the lightning to shame, as the damsel moving stately as an elephant, entereth.
- 2. Her charming countenance is adorned by curls, as the moon, the spotless abode of snow, is surrounded by clouds.
- 3. Her lower lip is playful, and her nose of exceeding beauty; resembling a parrot sitting over and desiring a red bimba fruit.
- 4. When it saw the glory of the lotus of her twin bosom, a line of hair sprang up towards her navel, like a line of bees.
 - * A congratulatory ode at birth, such as the present song.

- 5. Continually her ankles tinkle, like Sáma Vaidik priests singing the victory of love.
- 6. Harkh Náth the poet singeth with all his heart, and king Lakshmíśvar Sĩh understandeth the meaning.

Rádhá laments her separation from Krishn.

- 1. The time is spring, and my love is in a far country. How much intolerable agony of separation must I bear.
- 2. When I bring my Lord to remembrance, I cannot contain myself; for my body is consumed by love's fire.
- 3. The flowery grove humming with its bees, seemeth to my eyes like a heap of fire.
- 4. A cool garland of lotus and the *champak flower consumeth my heart, like a mass of poisonous serpents.
- 5. The soft, low song of the cuckoo burneth my ear; even the beams of the moon are like fire to my frame.
- 6. Harkh Náth the poet singeth with all his heart, and king Lakshmisvar Sĩh understandeth the meaning.

(15.)

The first love of Krishn and Rádhá described.

- 1. Can I tell their first loves.
- 2. Until they gazed on each other for the first time, how many varied pleasures continually awoke in the heart of each;
- 3. But when once the cruel arrow of love had pierced their bodies, but one desire dwelt in both their hearts.
- 4. When their hearts are united, they will remain so for ever; now only shame separateth them.
- 5. Conceal not in your hearts the cruel defeat sustained through the fire of love.
- 6. For the trembling eyes of both declare that the damsel is no longer mistress of herself, and that the youth is devoted to but one object.
- 7. Both their bodies are wasting away under the touch of the breeze of Malaya, the beams of the moon, and the lotus leaf.
- 8. How long will they bear the unbearable? will they remain thus agitated for ever? neither is master of himself.
- 9. Neither telleth the other his desires, for the hearts of both are proud.
- 10. Harkh Náth the poet singeth, and King Lakhshmísvar Sĩh understandeth the meaning.
 - * Michelia champaca.

Rukminí, wife of Krishn laments his absence in the spring time amid the cowherdesses.

- 1. O friend, O friend, the king of seasons hath arrived.
- 2. The groves are adorned with the soft low song of the cuckoo and blooming with fresh lotuses.
- 3. Many are the brilliant creepers with their wanton flowers made tuneful by the swarms of bees.
- 4. At such a moment my lord remaineth far away careless (of love). What can I say for his wisdom?
- 5. How can Jadubál (Kṛishṇ), lord as he is of the daughter of a king, sport with the damsels of the cowherds.
- 6. Is that darkness in which he was enveloped by the daughters of the cowherds everlasting? Surely those days are passed.
- 7. Jadupati (Kṛishṇ) hath deserted me, and hath done what might have been expected of him, for (as his complexion is dark) so must his heart be.
- 8. The (dark) cuckoo deserteth its own dear ones, and the (dark) crow deserteth the young leaf, even though it has known it long.
- 9. Be firm. Before long thou wilt meet thy lord, and the (sun of) thy separation will set.
- 10. Harkh Náth the poet singeth and King Lakshmísvar Sĩh understandeth the meaning.

PREFATORY NOTE.

This Vocabulary does not pretend to be a complete dictionary. It contains, I believe, every word and form occurring in the Chrestomathy, and, besides a large number of words collected by me in the country and in Court and not hitherto found in dictionaries, a great many indigenous proverbs. It may claim to be entirely original, and in no way a compilation, not a single meaning having been taken from any dictionary, other than the mouths of the people themselves. At the same time it must be admitted that it is for this very reason liable to many errors, from which a mere compilation would be free. Consideration is asked for such as exist.

Nouns are given in their Nominative form, and Verbs in their Root form. Under the latter will be found many colloquial, poetical, and archaic forms not given in the grammar.

দাব (2), v. a. to cross, to pass over:
In Bangálí this root is used in the sense of to be able; Paṇḍits say that it is not so used in Maithili; but I differ from them on this point, having noted three passages in Vidyápati in which it is used apparently in this sense. They are (1), IV. 3. ल्ब्धल नयन इटय के पार, which I translate "who can turn aside a greedy eye" Pandits make पार a verbal noun and translate "who turns aside the crossing of a greedy eye," which is an awkward translation, and hardly makes sense: (2), XXXIII. 5 कहिन्र न पारिश्र पड मख भामा, which I translate "I cannot tell the words of my love" Pandits make कहिन् a noun, and translate "the telling is not crossed, i. e., attained to" which is practically yielding the position: (3) XXXI. 4 आकंप किं कि सहय के पार, which Pandits translate "who bears warm embraces to their utmost limit (पार)?", but which seems to me much more nearly to resemble the Bangálí श्राकम्प कठिन सहिते के पारे, "who can bear warm embraces?": anyhow, in modern Maithilí, I have not met uit in the sense of "to be able."

पार (3), Vid. V, 1, पारे for metre), पार्ब, the act of crossing: पार कर, to cross a person over a stream.

हा, (1), interj., alas!

ইা (2), verb. subst.; Great confusion exists in Mithilá concerning the conjugation of this verb, owing to the irregularity of its past participle, and also to confusion with another root অভ or অভ, also meaning, to be: অভ, and ইা are both not improbably derived from the same Skr. root, but in Maithili they must be treated as distinct: Forms derived from the past part. of It cannot be used as auxiliaries; forms derived from चुड or चंद्र are used either as auxiliaries or as simple verbs substantive meaning, to be, while other forms of & are either used as verb substantives meaning, to be, or to become, or as auxiliary verbs, exactly like the verb हाना in Hindí: According, however, to Maithil pandits, the existence of the root चह or अझ is ignored altogether, and all forms are referred to the root हा: the following forms have been noted; A., derived from the root অহ or অফ; 1 Simp. Pres. है। 3 खहि, है। (है & हैं which appear frequently in F. are Kanaují or Hindí): 1 fut. इैंब; 3 केत, हैत, हैतेक, हैतड: Pres. Part. इत, हैत: B., derived from the root हा; 1 Simp. ADDENDA AND CORRIGENDA.

The following omissions should be supplied, and corrections made. They are printed on one side of the paper only to allow of easy correction.

A. Grammar.

§ 65. The genitive of में is given as मार or मारा. Subsequent research has shown me that the form मोरा is an oblique genitive form, only agreeing with nouns in an oblique case: and that all pronominal genitives can take a similar oblique form. Thus, we get—

Direct genitive.	Oblique genitive.
इसर	च्या
ते । इर	वेा इ र ा
श्रप्प न	चपना
एकर	एकरा
जनिक	चनिका. etc.

These oblique genitives cannot be used with nouns in the form of the Nominative case, but only with nouns in one of the Oblique cases.

Closely connected with the above, I have noted the following words, not pronouns, which also take an oblique form in sq

Direct.	Oblique.
पहिल, 'first.'	पहिला
देासर, 'second.'	देासरा
वेसर, 'third.'	वेसरा
बड़, 'great.'	बङ्ग
पहर, 'a guard.'	पहरा साँ, from (so and so's) guard.
वद्स, 'exchange.'	बद्ला, 'in exchange.'

There are doubtless many others which I have not noted yet with certainty. Compare the oblique forms of verbal nouns in § 189.

The following examples will make the above remarks clear. The matter will be found treated at greater length in an essay shortly to be published in the Asiatic Society's Journal.

a.—Genitives agreeing with Nouns in the Nominative form, i. e., Direct Genitives.

जकर बेडु ली लाएज, तकर केडन सुरखी, how wonderful must be the beauty of her whose beduli you have brought.

नेकर बेटा (see के in Vocab.), whose son is he?

इसर रोज इरज होदत, my means of livelihood will be spoiled.

इनक कानव सुनि, having heard her lamentations.

तकर अकरार लिखि दाखिल करह, write and file a bond to that effect (lit. of that) चपन सभ धन उड़ाए, भिखारि भे गेल, having wasted all his substance, he became a beggar.

b.—Genitives agreeing with Nouns not in the Nominative form, i. e., Oblique Genitives.

अपना चड़ेक घोड़ी देख, he gave his own riding mare, (lit. the mare of his own riding).

संग समाज सखी आद्दि ज्ञनका फुलवाड़ी, her companions and friends came into her garden.

इसरा सिरकी मँ, in my hovel.

तीहरा घर मँ, in thy house.

इसरा दरवाजा से ओकर दरवाजा बिं दूरि अकि, his doorway is very far from mine.

ग्रहस्त अपना मन मँ कहलक, the farmer said to himself (lit. in his own heart).

§ 136. The 3d Non-Hon. Pres. has a common form देखद्दी, not noted in the grammar.

§ 157. Another common form of the Perfect of the Intransitive verb runs as follows:

Honorific.Non-Honorific.(1) स्तन्न की,स्तन्न की,

(2) स्ताल की, स्ताल कह, (3) स्ताल कथि. स्ताल खिर.

(3) स्तत्त कथि, Fem. स्ततिस सी, &c.

As usual any other optional form of the Auxiliary may be used.

B. Chrestomathy.

I have attempted throughout to represent all b-sounds by \overline{a} , and all w-sounds by \overline{a} , but several errata have crept in, especially in the Song of Salhes, and the first few lines of the Famine Song. The Vocabulary is, I hope correct in every case, and when there is any doubt, reference should be made to it.

People who write Maithilí have a bad habit of writing anunásik for anuswár, in words in which the latter is the more correct. Thus they write सिंह instead of सिंह or सिंह, and सँस्य instead of संस्य or सन्स्य. I have frequently followed this custom, and now regret that I have done so. Many, but not all, have been corrected in the Vocabulary. The commonest word in the text is सिंह (Sih, on pp 39 and 40) which should everywhere be corrected to सिंह (Singh) which represents the correct pronunciation.

The following corrigenda should be made. Some are printer's errors or broken letters, and others are actual corrections of mistakes of mine or preferable readings.

                      अन्तापक.
                 Title of 8th chapter: READ = FOR 9.
XLVIII
               1 read पिरीति.
              4 केचो is almost certainly incorrect for चिकिचो (cf. XLVII, 4). केश्रो which always has both syllables short will not scan.
              1 read गेयाने for ज्ञान.
    LIII
  LVIII
              4

              4
                      परख.
  LXVI
              1
                      गेला for गेलाइ.
              2
                      परतौति, भेला.
               5
  LXVII
               5
                      होए is required for हो, by metre.
  LXIX
               1 This line will not scan. The insertion of इस after जना would complete the metre, but has no authority.
              4 read पड़ for अड़.
              8
                      किट.
   LXX
              5
                      किंगर.

              3
                      चमरि.
LXXIV
              4
                     निशासे.
  LXXV
              1
                      परवस.
                      मेटाबिअ.
              8 This line barely scans.
                 Title of 9th chapter: READ & FOR C.
              2 read चीर.
LXXVII चिर.
                 Title of 10th chapter: READ ? o FOR &.
 LXXIX
                 The metre of this song is hopeless: it may (by a little forcing) be classed as a Thumari.

4 read कें.

LXXX	3	धनिक विचे।गे, संसार
LXXXI	4	केकर for ककर.
	8	सहे for सहय.
LXXXII	1	देखि लगद्कि.
	6	चढ़ाविथ.

Translation.

Song 14 9 read 'and she hath stretched her brows like a bow.'
16 footnote 27, read Yaśodá; 29, Sítá.

22 4 footnote ||, read नहिं.

23 2 read Murári.

5 omit marks of quotation, and read 'she' for 'I,' and 'her,' for 'my.'

38 4 & 5 read shoreless for fathomless.

6 The translation is that of the paṇḍits, and was the best I could get. I have since found that के। इके। इल्डिंग ए ज means 'very angry,' and that the whole line may be translated 'the bees rushed forth very angrily, and stung my lips': compare other words of the same form इनइनाएल, घनघनाएल, चलचलाएल, &c.
