INTRODUCTORY NOTE

READING

THE required reading of the course on the History of the West at Harvard University is at least 120 pages a week. This may be selected from the references here given. As a rule, the reading should be done in advance of the lecture. The General Readings consist, for the most part, of the more accessible general works useful for following the lectures. Starred titles, for various reasons, are those preferred. Usually, but not always, the books are named in the order of their usefulness for the purposes of the course.

The topical references and bibliographies afford material for thesis work and for additional study. As a rule, citations under General Readings are not repeated for the special topics, though often important. Frequently, the special references are more valuable than those of the General Readings, as they are often essays, monographs, or books dealing more directly and effectively with the subject. They obviate the necessity of dictating citations of authorities for statements in the lectures, and enable the student to enlarge his information.

All the members of the class are advised, therefore, to combine some special with the general reading each week.

FORTNIGHTLY PAPERS

Each undergraduate member of the course is expected to write a paper at every regular fortnightly exercise, and there exists no system of "make-ups." In the half-year and final grades, the record of these fortnightly tests and of the theses is especially important.

LIBRARIES

There are at present two libraries at Harvard University which should be consulted:

- (1) History 17 Reservation in the Reading Room.
- (2) Harvard College Library.

The student should not rest content with the collection of books in (1), which are similar to those of a small college, when he has at his service the resources of the great libraries of Harvard College, the Boston Public Library, etc.

A Student Collection of Books

There is no text-book or hand-book satisfactory for the whole course. The following are required:

List of References on the History of the West.

A. K. Lobeck, Physiographic Diagram of the United States. (Small scale edition). published by the Wisconsin Geographical Press, Madison, Wisconsin.

Single sheet relief map of the United States, published by U. S. Geological Survey.

One dozen small outline maps of the United States.

The following additional list constitutes a useful library for the student to own in connection with the course:

Channing, Hart, and Turner, Guide to American History (edition of 1912; cited later as Guide).

F. J. Turner, Frontier in American History; and Rise of the New West; and The Sections and the Nation, United States, 1830-50. (In preparation.)

✓ Bolton and Marshall, Colonization of North America.

F. Parkman, France and England in North America. (Selections, e.g., The Conspiracy of Pontiac.)

T. Roosevelt, Winning of the West.

A. Henderson, Conquest of the Old Southwest.

G. S. Callender, Selections from the Economic History of the United States.

Bogart and Thompson, Readings in the Economic History of the United States.

I. Lippincott, Economic Development of the United States.

P. J. Treat, The National Land System, 1785-1820.

R. G. Wellington, Political and Sectional Influence of the Public Lands, 1828-42.

G. M. Stephenson, The Political History of the Public Lands, 1840-62.

J. Ise, United States Forest Policy.

C. Goodwin, The Trans-Mississippi West, 1803-53.

G. Emerson, New Frontier.

C. W. Merriam, American Political Ideas, 1865-1917.

Statistical Atlas of the United States.

Agricultural Atlas of the United States.

G. P. Garrison, Westward Extension, 1841-50.

K. Coman, Economic Beginnings of the Far West.

T. C. Smith, Parties and Slavery.

F. L. Paxson, Last American Frontier; and Recent American History.

C. R. Van Hise, Conservation of Our Natural Resources.

Recent brief surveys of the history of the United States useful in this course are the following:

M. Farrand, Development of the United States.

A. C. McLaughlin, Steps in the Development of American Democracy.

Carl Becker, United States, An Experiment in Democracy.

A. Schlesinger, New Viewpoints in American History.

The volumes of the American Nation series and of the Chronicles of America often contain useful surveys of topics treated in the course. One of the more recent school geographies of the United States will be found helpful for maps and description of the geographic regions.

THESES

Thesis subjects must be selected by October 10. Every undergraduate member is further required to sign for a conference period both in October and November when lists of appointments have been posted outside the lecture hall. At the second conference a preliminary draft of the thesis should be presented for discussion.

The thesis must be presented on or before December 19, and petitions for extensions will not be entertained unless for sickness or equally valid excuse.

The thesis should be about 3000 to 5000 words in length, and should include an analytical table of contents, foot-note or marginal citation of authorities, giving volume and page for each important statement and a classified bibliography of books used with comments on the usefulness of each; it should be in general good form.

Directions for note taking, thesis writing, style of manuscript, etc., are in the following works (History 17 Reservation — Bibliography):—

- Channing, Hart, and Turner, Guide to the Study and Reading of American History, 223-226, 232-235.
- S. S. Seward, Note Taking.
- G. M. Dutcher, Directions and Suggestions for the Writing of Essays or Theses in History (Middletown, Conn.).
- R. G. Thwaites, Typographical Style Book (State Historical Society of Wisconsin, Bulletin of Information, No. 62).

In addition to this List of References the following bibliographies are useful in finding data for theses:—

- Channing, Hart and Turner, Guide (1912). (Use table of contents, index, §§ 21-26, and references under the particular topic.)

J. N. Larned, Literature of American History. (Annotated.)

J. Winsor, Narrative and Critical History of America. (Critical chapters; useful chiefly prior to 1787.)

American Nation Series. (Bibliographical chapters in the respective volumes.)

G. G. Griffin, "Bibliography of American Historical Societies" [etc.], in American Historical Association Report, 1905, II.

Writings in American History. (Annual since 1906.)

Poole's Index to Periodical Literature.

Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature.

The three references above together with national, sectional, and local periodicals, especially American Historical Review; American Economic Review; American Political Science Review; and Mississippi Valley Historical Review, enable the student to use recent publications.

The bibliographical lists in monographs and books dealing with the topic of the thesis should also be consulted. The instructor and assistant at office hours will advise the student regarding material. The thesis should not be written entirely from secondary works, and never from one or two authors.

Thesis Topics

The following list is intended to be suggestive only. Students are encouraged to discuss other subjects and limitations of those here enumerated with the instructor or assistant. The scope of the thesis may be considerably narrowed where the treatment is more intensive and is based primarily upon original sources.

Indian relations of any one of the following colonies for a half century or less: Virginia; the Carolinas; Massachusetts; Connecticut and Rhode Island; New York; Pennsylvania.

The history of any one of the following Indian tribes in the period indicated: Powhattan Confederacy, 1607-1660; Pequots, 1620-1640; Nipmucks, Narragansetts and Wampanoags, 1640-1680; Iroquois, 1600-1689; Iroquois, 1689-1720; Iroquois, 1720-1770; Iroquois, 1770-1800; Iroquois, 1800-1830; Cherokee, 1660-1740; Cherokee, 1740-1789; Cherokee, 1789-1815; Cherokee, 1815-1840; Creek, 1740-1789; Creek, 1789-1815; Creek, 1815-1840; Choctaw, 1700-1790; Choctaw, 1790-1840; Shawnee, 1750-1790; Shawnee, 1790-1840; the history of any appropriate trans-Mississippi tribe during any period less than a decade since 1860.

The history of an appropriate Indian war, or campaign, or state or federal relations of Indians during a period to be agreed upon.

The West in the treaty discussions, 1777-83; the Mississippi Valley in diplomacy, 1783-89; 1789-96; 1796-1804; the boundary of the Louisiana purchase; the political influence of the Louisiana purchase; Genet's intrigue with the West; Spanish Western policy, 1777-96; English Western policy, 1781-1800; the Western aspects of Jay's treaty; Burr's conspiracy; New England's attitude toward the West, 1796-1816; the Oregon question to 1830; 1830 to 1846; the Texas question (to be subdivided); the California question; the West in the diplomacy of the Mexican war; the diplomatic influence of the Pacific coast at any appropriate period.

Education: the common schools of a Western state for one or two decades; history of higher education in a Western state for a decade; characteristics of education in a Western section for a decade, e.g., the North Central states; the origin of the State university; the history of a Western college or university; contributions of New England to Western education in an appropriate period; of the South.

Literature: the literary contributions of a Western state, e.g., Indiana, or California; a Western region in literature, e.g., the Prairies; the Great Plains; the Rocky Mountains; the Arid Region; the influence of the West upon an Eastern group of authors, e.g., Emerson, Whitman and Longfellow; Cooper, Sealsfield and Wister; Ohio Valley periodicals and newspapers prior to 1840; the work of western authors by groups, e.g., James Hall, Timothy Flint, and John Mason Peck; Joaquin Miller, and Robert W. Service; Bret Harte; Mark Twain; Howells; Edward Eggleston; Hamlin Garland; Frank Norris; Zona Gale; Sinclair Lewis; Booth Tarkington; Edgar Lee Masters; Vachel Lindsay; Sidney Anderson; Mary S. Watts; W. S. Cather; J. G. Neihardt; the West in New England books and periodicals in a given period; a comparison of New England historians of the West, e.g., Parkman, Winsor, and Roosevelt. Examine in these topics the correctness of characterizations, narration, local color:

Religion: Indian missions in a period, e.g., the Jesuits; the Moravians; New England Indian missions; missions in any Western state; the Home Missions movement during an appropriate period, or in a region; the Western activity of any denomination in an appropriate decade; Western religious institutions, e.g., the camp-meeting; the circuit rider; a denominational college; New England contributions to Western church activities in an appropriate period; Mormon history in any decade, e.g., the Mormons and irrigation; the expansion of the Mormons from Salt Lake City.

Geographical interpretations of Western history: the interpretation of a region in one or two decades, e.g., the Great Lakes; the Ohio Valley; the Gulf Plains; the limestone areas, etc. This group of topics is suitable for students who have taken a college course in geography.

Students are encouraged to propose specific Western problems as thesis topics: e.g., why did Douglas support the repeal of the Missouri compromise? What was Calhoun's attitude toward expansion, 1840-50? What was the attitude of northern Democrats in 1840-50 toward expansion? What was the origin of the Book of Mormon? In what fields did the children of pioneers distinguish themselves? (Use Who's Who for present day leaders.) In a given Congress, what do the biographies of its members show with reference to nativity and family migration?

Bibliography

See XV, Bibliography, above.

Note. Sections XVII-XXIV develop topically various aspects of the West, principally east of the Mississippi River to 1850. The student should review them in cross sections by periods, e.g., 1830-40, 1840-50, relating the separate subjects to the political and social history of the periods and correlating them with each other. For example, the relations between the public lands and settlement, banking, and transportation should be brought out. The relation of the production of a surplus in the different regions to internal commerce, transportation and internal improvement, currency and banking, and the tariff, should be clearly perceived and connected with the political events and stages of social growth in the successive periods. When this is done, the student will find certain dates which mark natural periods in the development of the West during these years.

See also the references under "Progressives," above. These citations are merely by way of suggestion. In Western poetry, fiction, essays, addresses, periodicals, newspapers, estimates of travellers (Guide, page 582), and art, there is abundant material for the study of this topic. It is also worth while to examine Eastern literature and art with reference to the influences of the West.
