Letters From Local Men Who Are Serving at the Front.

The Times Correspondents With Strathcona's and First Contingent.

Writing from Bloemfontein, O. F. S., under date of April 11th, our correspondent with the first contingent, Capt. O'Dell, enters another protest against the stories which are being written by men at the front. He also refers to a statement which Private A. E. Cole, of the second contingent, made to Her Majesty the Queen at Netley hospital.

With Strathcona's Horse. The following poem was written aboard the troopship on which Strathcona's Horse went to the Cape, and was sung at a musicale aboard ship: Come all ye jolly soldiers bold and listen to my song.

It is all about Strathcona's Horse that sailed five hundred strong; They left the port of Halifax on a calm and balmy day.

They made old Sergeant Simons chief policeman of the boat; He had to wear his side arms, and likewise his great coat.

would commence shortly. The writer states that Capt. Bell, of the Scots Guards, who was formerly A. D. C. to the Governor-General, and who went out to South Africa in command of the maxims, had been ill, and as soon as he regained strength would leave for England.

Another letter was addressed to his father, and was dated April 8th from Bloemfontein. The writer states that his regiment had gone out on a couple of short marches after Boers, but they did not see anything, although the mounted infantry was cut up rather badly.

On board the Elder Dempster ship they call the Monterey. She's a Royal Canadian mail boat, so all the sailors say. But she rolls just like a surf boat, does the good ship Monterey.

When Neptune came aboard the boat to latter, wash and shave.

The officers swore no power on earth would Lieut. Tobin save; They threw him off the bridge deck, but he clung to their sleeves.

Mrs. Douglas Fraser, of Victoria West, has received letters this week from her two sons who are serving with Strathcona's Horse, both of them having recruited at Victoria.

Two Boer prisoners were shot a few days previous to the date upon which the letter was penned. They refused to halt when told to do so by the sentry and were dropped.

He sent home a small match-box supplied to Strathcona's Horse, which was worth over two pounds, while the Queen's chocolate boxes found ready purchasers at ten and fifteen pence.

Samuel Crocker, of the C. P. R. messenger service, has received a letter from Pte. J. Davey, of the 2nd Devonshires, who was a school boy chum of his in Victoria.

Federal Judge Morrow, of San Francisco, has granted an injunction to prevent the federal and local health authorities from discriminating against the Chinese in the matter of protection against plague.

Designs Circumvented

Vigilance of Authorities Discouraged Fenian Machinations During Celebration

Why the Site of the Fireworks Display Was Suddenly Changed.

The feeling of unrest which has been excited in Eastern Canada by the recent attempt to destroy a portion of the Welland canal has been duplicated in a modified form here through the persistent attempts which have been made for several months past to accomplish the destruction of portions of the Imperial fortifications at Esquimaux.

The greatest apprehension was felt in regard to the Queen's birthday celebration, threats having been made that the Fenians would be present in large numbers. As a result of this the police commissioners had a very large body of special constables sworn in before the celebration opened.

That the celebration passed off without any accident is believed to be due entirely to the vigilance of the authorities and the extraordinary precautions which they took to circumvent the designs of the state's enemies.

A BRIEF SESSION.

The City Fathers Disposed of Clive Business in an Expedient Manner Last Night.

The City Council held a very short session last night, the communications being confined to two or three and other business being expeditiously disposed of.

The Mayor, before proceeding to business, said: "I wish to express, on behalf of myself and colleagues, our grateful appreciation of the assistance rendered to us during the recent festivities of Her Majesty's birthday, particularly to Admiral Beaumont and the officers and men of Her Majesty's naval and land forces, for the splendid review at Macaulay Point, and subsequent valuable assistance at the regatta and aquatic sports at the Gorge; also to those who, at considerable expenditure of time, labor and money, succeeded in giving first-class entertainments at the arena freely given for that purpose, and realizing the handsome sum of over $800 to the patriotic fund; also to the chairman and members of the various committees who exerted themselves so energetically and successfully in their various departments; and last, but certainly not least, to the citizens generally for their generous response to our appeal for funds, and their hearty co-operation in making the grand parade so marked a success, the good effect of which may induce its repetition next year. I have reason to believe that our large number of visitors very much appreciated the efforts made to entertain them."

The Postmaster-General acknowledged the council's resolution regarding government ownership of telephone and telegraph lines. Received and filed. W. Langley asked that the concrete sidewalk being laid on Yates street be changed a short distance on Langley street and that the same be laid on the same side of the street as the sidewalk on Yates street. Referred to the engineers to deal with the request being acceded to under the usual conditions.

Tenders for sewer pipe were then opened as follows: Sylvia & Brinlson, feet 6-inch pipe at 35c, $140; 100 feet 10-inch pipe at 40c, $405; total, $545. The same firm offered to supply junctions as follows: 8x6, $1.25; 6x6, $1.40; 10x6, $1.80.

MAJOR YATES

Major said it was a mining journal and he thought the money would be well spent. We were riding out light under a bushel. Mr. Brydon thought that the last advertising scheme in which the city had embarked, viz., the Sun, Fraser and Wave, had not contributed to getting that light from under the bushel. He had heard a good deal of unfavorable comment on that publication.

The finance committee recommended the purchase of a tank for dipping blocks with tar. The tank used on Fort street had cost over $200 for rental. The cost would be about $400. The purchasing agent will be instructed to ask for tenders for such a tank.

The council then went into committee to consider a by-law to authorize the sale of part of lot 7, Spring Ridge, which passed its third reading with slight amendments. The council then rose.

EXPLANATORY

It is a standing joke in newspaperdom that the men in charge of the destinies of the press do not understand their business—the man in the street knows it all.

sions at which they have arrived by legitimate means. The Times said at the time Mr. Martin was called upon to form a government that it did not see how the Lieut-governor squared his action with the rules that have been laid down by constitutional authorities.

It has not been necessary to go outside the field of legitimate political discussion for evidence of the fact that the Premier is unworthy of the confidence of the electors and that His Honor made a mistake in selecting him for the post he now occupies.

taste of fighting that the enemy has had has proved to him that the tales of those in authority were not absolutely reliable and that modification of his opinions of the hated Roopeck was in order.

It has been asserted that the Semlin government was weak, but after the revelations of the last few days we believe no one will venture to maintain that the record of the late Turner government or that of the present administration exhales any evidence of weakness.

Mostly with plain bands of black, white or blue—fancy bands are not much in favor this year; and there are some pretty scarf effects. The Children's and Misses' Sailor Hats are particularly jaunty.

CURIOUS WOUNDS

Some Injuries Which Men Have Suffered Without Dying

A very eminent medical authority has been assuring us recently that the term "wounded" will soon cease to have the fearful significance which it once possessed. To be shot through the lungs, it appears, involves but little risk with proper surgical handling, and other wounds of the limbs count for almost nothing so long as expanding bullets are not employed; while wounds of the abdomen, the liver, and even the head, are far from being necessarily fatal. The present war has been prolific in curious wounds which have failed either to kill or to permanently disable the wounded.

It is interesting to note instances in which bullets have in the past remained in vital parts of the body for a long time. We were told not long ago of a case in which a bullet entered a man's skull just below the left frontal eminence. The man recovered, and came under medical treatment twenty months later with a discharge from the left nostril. Probing detected a hard substance, which was removed, and proved to be a mass of lead encased with a bit of khaki cloth. In another case a soldier Lived for Two Years and a Half after receiving a shot in the chest.

On his death it was found that the ball had actually traversed his body, wounding the lungs, kidneys, and other important organs, and had finally perforated the spine and lodged there. Almost as extraordinary was the course of another bullet which, moving with full velocity, entered a man's spine, came in contact with a rib, was thereby deflected in its course, and ran round under the skin to the opposite side of the body.

This last instance of narrow escape occurred on a battlefield; and, indeed, the annals of war contain very remarkable occurrences of much the same nature. During the Indian Mutiny a Man Did His Duty.

About this time, however, an abscess formed at the spot where he had been wounded, and on opening it a small dark object was seen appearing about above the skin. It proved to be half of the bullet, which when the wound was inflicted, must have been split on the bone, one half flying off, and the other half lodging within the orbit. The man lost the sight of his eye from the moment he was wounded, though there was no apparent injury to the brain; but, strange to say, the half-bullet, being under the eyeball never gave him the least inconvenience.

In the Soudan War a private had a bullet pass through the frontal bone of his head and Lodged in His Brain.

He was quiet sensible, and felt no pain, he said; the only inconvenience was an occasional dizziness. He was sent home, and is still alive.

Dr. O'Callaghan speaks also of an officer who got the breech of a fowling-piece, three ounces in weight, lodged in his forehead. It actually supported the right hemisphere of the brain for at least seven years.

Many a man is going about now with a bullet in his chest or leg, received in some action. As a rule, however, this kind of thing tells sooner or later. A soldier was shot in the forehead, and for nearly a year with a bullet in his forehead. The skin healed over it, and the man went about his duty feeling no inconvenience whatever. He fell down suddenly and died one day, and the bullet was found to be pressing right on the brain.

Another very curious thing, arising out of the excitement of the mind at the time, is that men are often or for the moment without feeling pain. We have in proof of this the case of the soldier whose limbs were carried off by a cannon ball, and who was not aware of the injury he had received until he tried to rise. In another case a soldier, advancing at a run, received a bullet into his mouth, which was open. The ball passed between the skin and the muscle which is attached to the angle of the jawbone, but the man was quite ignorant of the wound, and was astonished to find himself spitting blood, and to feel his jaw becoming stiff. The bullet was subsequently removed from beneath the skin at the back of the neck.

BLACK TURNING WHITE.

Many people are in the habit of taking stories of "hair turned white in a single night" with the traditional pinch of salt. As a matter of fact, there are numerous cases in record of fright or weird experiences bleaching a man's rays, eyelashes. In battle not a few soldiers have experienced the odd and unpleasant sensation of finding that within the course of a few days their raven or auburn "tatches" have become white as the driven snow.

Sir H. M. Stanley entered upon his great march across Africa with jet-black hair. He emerged from his series of adventures in appearance twenty years or more older, and with hair bleached pure white. It took nine years of anxious war correspondence and experiences to bleach the hair of the veteran "special," Mr. Archibald Forbes.

But in not a few cases has the strange transformation come suddenly. There are some who insist they have reason to know that in those last terrible days at Khartoum the hair of valiant General Gordon went snow-white. More authentic is the case of a young lieutenant whose red locks were suddenly streaked with white on the eve of his first battle, which was against the Zulus in 1879.

A commissioner in one of the London banks tells how his hair was changed from brown to iron-grey within a week as a result of his galling experiences during the Indian Mutiny. One of the most eminent French generals became an old man, in appearance at any rate, when he was but twenty-two, after taking part in one of the most sanguinary battles in the Franco-Prussian war. And there are several cases, authenticated by officers and surgeons, of Crimean soldiers whose hair changed color during that trying campaign.

LIFE RETURNED.

To a Suffering Dyspeptic, When He Used Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Always Have This Result—They Positively Cure Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliaryness and all Kindred Stomach Complaints.

Without exception, the dyspeptic is the most miserable being in existence. He can't enjoy his meals. There are no dainty, enjoyable lunches, after the theatre for him. No outings, no pleasant excursions with jolly friends.

He must mope at home, nursing his misery, while his friends are enjoying themselves, making the most of life.

"Recently" there was a young man in this position. He suffered greatly from Dyspepsia. He was virtually a close prisoner. He got no joy out of life.

One day he read about Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

He bought a box—cost fifty cents.

He used the Tablets as directed, one after each meal.

Result—Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cured him in a few days.

He appeared among his friends again, took part in their pleasures, and overflowed with life and good spirits.

His friends could not understand the change. They questioned him.

He answered: "Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets did it all."

"I simply took one Tablet after each meal I ate, and my food was a pleasure and nourishment to me. It was promptly digested, whereas, before I began to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, it used to lie in a hard lump in my stomach, and cause me agonizing pain."

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets always have this effect. They cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia by removing the cause. They digest the food and tone and strengthen the stomach.

No one knows better than those who have used Carter's Little Liver Pills what relief they have given, when taken for dyspepsia, biliousness, pain in the side constipation, and disordered stomach.

MAHOGANY-CUTTING.

The mahogany-hunter in Central America is the most important and best-paid laborer in the service, for upon his skill and activity largely depends the success of the season. Mahogany trees do not grow in clusters, but are scattered promiscuously through the forests and hidden in a dense growth of underbrush, vines and creepers, and it requires a skilful and experienced woodsman to find them. No progress can be made in a tropical forest without the aid of a machete, for the way must be cut step by step. The mahogany is one of the largest and tallest of trees, and the hunter, seeking the highest ground, surveys the surrounding country. His practised eye soon detects the mahogany by its peculiar foliage, and he counts the trees within the scope of his vision, notes directions and distances, and then, descending, cuts a narrow trail to each tree, which he carefully blazes and marks, especially if there is a rival hunter in the vicinity. The axemen follow the hunter, and after them come the sawyers and hewers.

To fell

A Large Mahogany Tree

is one day's task for two men. An account of the wide spurs which project from the trunk at its base, scaffolds must be erected and the tree cut off above the spurs, which leaves a stump from ten to fifteen feet in height—a sheer waste of the very best part of the tree and one which American ingenuity would certainly devise some means to prevent. While the work of felling and hewing is in progress, other gangs are busy making roads and bridges over which the logs may be hauled to the river. One wide "taxiway" is cut through the forest, and the centre of the district occupied by the works, and branch roads are opened from this main avenue to each tree. The trucks employed are clumsy and antiquated affairs which no American would think of using; the axes and boxes are imported from England, while the other parts are made upon the ground. The wheels are of solid wood, made by sawing off the ends of logs and sawing boxes in the centre, no spokes or tires being used. New wheels are in constant requisition, and repairs cause frequent and expensive delays. Most of the trucking is done at night by torch-lights of pitch-pine. The oxen are fed on the leaves and twigs of the bread-nut tree, which gives them more strength and power of endurance than any other obtainable food. The trucking being done in the day, the logs are collected on the bank of the river and made ready for the floods. On the longest rivers these begin in June and July, and on others in October and November. The logs are stacked and added, and when they reach the water are caught by means of booms. Indian loggers—usually Caribs—follow the logs down the river in order to release those which are caught by obstacles. No little is required to determine at what exact stage of the flood the logs should be set adrift. Should the water rise to what is called "roughland" level before the logs reach the boom, many of them would be carried over the banks and left high and dry in cane-brakes and thickets, or covered up by sand and rubbish. From the boom the logs are rafted to the embarkadero, and "manufactured" for shipment.

Mahogany trees give from two to five logs each, measuring from ten to eighteen feet in length and from twenty to forty-four inches in diameter after being hewed. The "manufacturing" process consists in sawing off the log ends which have been bruised and splintered in transit down the river, and in re-lining and re-hewing the logs by skilful workmen, who give them a smooth and even surface. The logs are then measured, rolled back into the water at the mouth of the river, and made into rafts, to be taken to the vessel anchored outside the bar.—From the Self Culture Magazine.
