Why Wikipedia (and sister projects) and Libraries?

- * Mission of libraries and Wikimedia are natural matches.
- * Libraries are spaces and places for citizen engagement, preservation of cultural heritage and the sharing of open information, along with the traditional role of maintaining collections of print and digital media,
- * while Wikipedia's mission is to empower and engage people to collaboratively collect and develop open education content and share it.

“Libraries and Wikipedia both aim to bring knowledge to a wider audience, to create spaces where people can safely learn and find the resources they need” (Lubbock, 2018)

If Wikipedia is a virtual (online) door to knowledge, while libraries have been a real door (offline), the two communities should work together to provide new levels of access to information to humanity. It is a powerful tool for public libraries, especially in parts of the world where access to other resources is cost-prohibitive.

Think about this. How many patrons have you assisted in the last three months?

Wikimedia has served

- 30.6 billion average per month
- 1 billion average per day
- 11 574 per second

Wikipedia and Libraries

- supplements library resources with timely, useful information;
  ● acts as a tool for librarians answering reference questions;
  ● provides a pathway to primary and secondary sources and citations;
  ● helps patrons perform research;
  ● provides a vital platform for recording local knowledge, in local languages, not typically supported by the larger research and publishing industry

10 REASONS TO ENGAGE WITH WIKIPEDIA (IFLA) (1/2)

- Improves democratic access to reliable information
- Supplementary information resource including within library catalogues
- It is a means of teaching digital literacy
- Editing Wikipedia can advance discussion - so an education in information literacy
- A way of helping people get more engaged in a subject

10 REASONS TO ENGAGE WITH WIKIPEDIA (IFLA) 2/2

- Tool for engaging local communities
- Way of decolonising the internet
- A place to share public domain materials
- A way of advancing open linked data through a project called WikiData
- It’s a place to talk about your library and its collections.

Why Librarians should engage with Wikipedia According to ChatGPT

* Promoting Accuracy and Reliability
* Closing Information Gaps
* Enhancing Accessibility
* Sharing Specialized Knowledge
* Supporting Open Access to Information

Why Librarians should engage with Wikipedia According to ChatGPT

* Teaching Information Literacy
* Professional Development
* Collaboration and Networking
* Advocating for Information Quality
* Supporting the Public Good

In summary, librarians editing Wikipedia aligns with their professional values, expertise, and commitment to open access to information. It can have a positive impact on the quality and breadth of information available on the platform, benefiting both the librarian community and the general public.

WIKIPEDIA - SOME OF THE ISSUES/PROBLEMS

Like the thinking:

- That is is a one-stop shop for all information needs
- That anyone can edit and add content and that vandals deliberately change entries

BUT

- there is a western bias
- there is a gender gap
- Not all knowledges are represented.

BUT THESE LEAD TO OPPORTUNITIES

So there is an opportunity for Innovation, reinvention; using Wikipedia as a tool for knowledge diffusion and the decolonisation of the internet

- Africanisation
  - Adding content about Africa and Africans, written by Africans, in the languages of Africans
- For Librarians
  - add local content (National)
  - to add content in our official languages (not just English) either by writing in the languages or translating
  - adding local content to the sister projects
  - redirecting traffic to their own sites & collections

UNDERSTANDING WIKIPEDIA

We need to be familiar with the resource:

- know how Wikipedia collects, formats and disseminated information
- to understand the components of Wikipedia article
- to know about the policies and guidelines around the content and sources for Wikipedia articles : The notable topic, neutral point of view, no original research, references to solid, reliable, primary & secondary sources and links to other Wikipedia articles

WIKIPEDIA'S FIVE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES (agreed best practice)

- Wikipedia is an encyclopaedia
- Written from a neutral point of view
- Free content that anyone can use, edit or distribute
- Editors are supposed to treat each other with respect and civility.
- No firm rules, but guidelines and policies may change over time.

- Wikipedia is really all about community
- The culture of the Wikipedia community is the most important and difficult thing to learn. It takes a long time for everyone. Don’t be afraid to make mistakes but always learn from them.
- Disagreements happen, what is important is how we settle disagreements. That’s where the culture helps us!

Personal Section [ edit ] [ subscribe ]

Why is there no personal section to this article? There is one for every other ex-'Friends' star. What's the deal? 92.9.232.39 (talk) 17:58, 15 September 2009 (UTC) [ reply ]

You're right, there was one a few days ago, now it's gone... what happened? Felipe-11 (talk) 04:30, 24 September 2009 (UTC) [ reply ]

The personal section was a mess, which is why it was removed. First, there were virtually no citations for any of the information, per the Wikipedia guideline WP:CITE. Second, it was full of trivial information that is irrelevant to an encyclopedia, like his fling with Julia Roberts or certain bands he likes; that is information better suited to fan websites than to Wikipedia (read WP:TRIVIA). The only sourced information was to his well-publicized battle with substances; since everything else in the 'personal' section was pointless, uncited information except for that, I moved it under the biography section. Please don't add trivial information, and if you can't find a mainstream newspaper or magazine talking about whatever it is you wish to include here, it should not go here because that means it is either 1) not true; or 2) unimportant (the policies and guidelines for this are WP:Verifiability and WP:Undue weight). -->David Shankbone 14:19, 24 September 2009 (UTC) [ reply ]

Without a personal section of any sort this article feels dodgy, like it's been air-brushed, which is weird since in interviews Perry is pretty open.Alistair Stevenson (talk) 00:08, 27 February 2010 (UTC) [ reply ]

This was a long time ago, but the content remains for people like me to still read it. That being the case, I would like to respond. First, this article now has a short Personal section. However, if someone believes an article is lacking specific content, then that person should do the research and add the content, being sure that content has reliable, reputable third-party sources. Anyone can come to a Talk page and complain about missing content, but if someone takes the time to start a topic to complain, then I submit that such time and effort is better used providing a solution rather than a complaint. We are all responsible for the content in Wikipedia and any editor has the authority to add content to a page. Why not do it yourself rather than complain and expect someone else to do it? I think that sometimes editors don't realize that they have that authority. Don't be afraid to add content. Jump in! You can do it! MarydaleEd (talk) 03:11, 29 October 2023 (UTC) [ reply ]

Very well said! 173.186.176.108 (talk) 02:06, 31 October 2023 (UTC) [ reply ]

I am struggling to figure out how to edit on wikipedia. Maybe someone who is stronger at this stuff than I am could do it for me. I thought it would mean a lot to Matthew Perry if we said he was known for his work to help people who struggle with addictions before the bit about his role as Chandler. Kind of like a thank you letter for all he did and who he was to millions

COMMUNITY PROFILING, DIGITAL LITERACY, JOHANNESBURG HISTORY

Abstract [ edit ]

City of Johannesburg (COJ) is a metropolitan municipality within Gauteng Province in South Africa (SA), with a population of more than 6 million citizens, almost 10 percent of the SA population. It is the biggest city in SA. COJ Library and Information Services (LIS), under Community Development, serves a multicultural community that consists of rural and semirural, and urban areas. COJ LIS is driven by this community profile, to promote lifelong learning, literacy, reading development, and social cohesion through free and guided access to information, focusing on early childhood development, educational support, information literacy, and digital literacy for all. The introduction of eLearning services in COJ libraries was part of the digital transformation process of libraries. eLearning services consist of the provision of free WIFI, ICT tools were possible and digital literacy programs. The use of digital platforms such as websites, apps, and ICT tools such as mobile devices and other technologies is necessary to transform libraries and provide access to

The Dzata Ruins (or Dzana ruins), an archaeological site in Dzanani in the Makhado municipality, Vhembe district, in the north of South Africa, is one of the national monuments in South Africa.[1]

Scholars who have made a study of the various legends and traditions associated with the ruins, find it clear that they are many contradictions.[citation needed] Archaeological evidence has shed some lights on these events, but a great deal of work still remains to be done. It is certain that Dzata was built at an earlier date than many people are willing to admit[citation needed]. Radiocarbon dates suggest a beginning shortly after AD 1700, with an end some 50 to 60 years later.[citation needed]

The South African Police Service (SAPS) is the national police force of the Republic of South Africa. Its 1,138 police stations[citation needed] in South Africa are divided according to the provincial borders, and a Provincial Commissioner is appointed in each province. The nine Provincial Commissioners report directly to the National Commissioner. The head office is in the Wachthuis Building in Pretoria.[1]
The Constitution of South Africa lays down that the South African Police Service has a responsibility to prevent, combat and investigate crime, maintain public order, protect and secure the inhabitants of the Republic and their property, uphold and enforce the law, create a safe and secure environment for all people in South Africa, prevent anything that may threaten the safety or security of any community, investigate any crimes that threaten the safety or security of any community, ensure criminals are brought to justice and participate in efforts to address the causes of crime.[2]
Amnesty International and others have expressed serious concerns about South African police brutality, including torture and extrajudicial killings.[3][4][5][6][7]

RULES FOR EDITING ON WIKIPEDIA

There are a few things you need to know when editing in Wikipedia:

1) STAY NEUTRAL (THIS TIME).

All Wikipedia articles and other encyclopedic content must be written from a neutral point of view, representing significant views fairly, proportionately and without bias.

2) MAINTAIN VERIFIABILITY.

Material challenged or likely to be challenged, and all quotations, must be attributed to a reliable, published source. In Wikipedia, verifiability means that people reading and editing the encyclopedia can check that information comes from a reliable source.

3) NO ORIGINALITY, PLEASE.

Wikipedia does not publish original thought or original research: all material in Wikipedia must be linked to a reliable, published source that is not you. New analysis or synthesis of published material that advances a position not not clearly proven by the sources is a no-no.

4) DON'T BE MESSY.

Sometimes being messy is fun, but not in the world of documentation. If you think you have a Conflict Of Interest (COI), don't create the article; post that someone else should create it on a related talk page[1]. Editors should never write articles about themselves or about where they work, for example. Articles about notable people that are clearly written by them are deleted all the time.

5) USE RELIABLE SOURCES.

If available, academic and peer-reviewed publications are usually the sources Wikipedia considers most reliable. Other reliable sources include university-level textbooks, books published by 'respected' publishing houses, magazines, journals, and mainstream newspapers.

6) TEST NOTABILITY.

Information on Wikipedia must be verifiable or checkable; if no third party sources can be found on the topic, then most likely any article created on the topic will be deleted[2].

7) KNOW YOUR STUB.

A stub is an article that, although providing some useful information, is too short to provide full view of a subject. If a stub has very little verifiable information, or if its subject has no apparent notability, it may be deleted or be merged into another relevant article.
