L.A. HOLMES, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

My Mother's Grave.

Tis a sweet flower—yet must right leaves to the coming tempest

And I could love to die—
eave untasted life's dark bitter stream
By thee, as crst in childhood lie;
And share thy dreams.

And must I linger here, tain the plumage of my sinless year And mourn the hope of childhoops With bitter tears?

And when the evening pale s like a mourner on the dim blue was I stray to hear the night winds wait Around thy grave.
