THE LYSISTRATA

INTRODUCTION

"In the autumn of 413 B.c. the news of the overwhelming catastrophe in Sicily reached Athens, and the Lysistrata was written in the year 412, at the very darkest period of the Peloponnesian War, the darkest, that is to say, before the ultimate disaster of Aegospotami, and the consequent fall of Athens. It was produced at the commencement of the year 411 B.c., but whether at the Lenaea or at the Great Dionysia, and with what success, the scanty record which has come down to us contains nothing to show." a

In spite, however, of their difficulties, the Athenians determined that they would not give in; they would build a new navy in place of the fleets they had lost. The sum of 1000 talents, held in reserve, was voted to build the new fleet, timber and oar-spars being amongst the articles most sorely needed, and amongst other measures, "they appointed a Board of Ten Probuli, a sort of Committee of Public Safety." (In the play the Probulus commands the Scythian archers, whom elsewhere we find attending upon the $\beta ov \lambda \eta$; he comes to the Acropolis to obtain the means of rebuilding the fleet; he directs the $\beta ov \lambda \eta$ to send plenipotentiaries to treat with the Spartans.) "It was in a period of hopeless despondency that Lysistrata developed her own original scheme for a general pacification of the warring Hellenic states."

^a Rogers, Introduction, p. x. ^b Ib. p. xi. ^c Ib. p. xviii.

INTRODUCTION

The Acropolis is an isolated rock, rising to a height of about 500 feet above the level of the sea; the levelled top measures some 1000 feet by 450 at the widest part. This plateau the Pelasgians "surrounded by a wall (τὸ Πελασγικόν), which lasted, apparently unaltered, till the time of the Persian invasion." Then the wall was thrown down, and it was rebuilt by Cimon; the southern part is called Cimonian, the rest Pelasgian. "The entire Acropolis was holy ground; and the numerous temples which crowded it were all dominated by the triple presentment of Athens as the Πολιάς, the Παρθένος, and the Πρόμαχος." b The Erechtheum was the most ancient temple in Athens, and it contained the sacred serpent and the ancient wooden statue of Athene, to which the Peplus used to be offered at the Great Panathenaea. The Parthenon contained the famous gold-ivory statue of Athena, by Pheidias. In the hinder cell of this temple was the Athenian treasury. The Promachus was a colossal image of bronze, which stood in the open air, representing Athene armed and holding a spear. There were many other temples and shrines in the precinct.

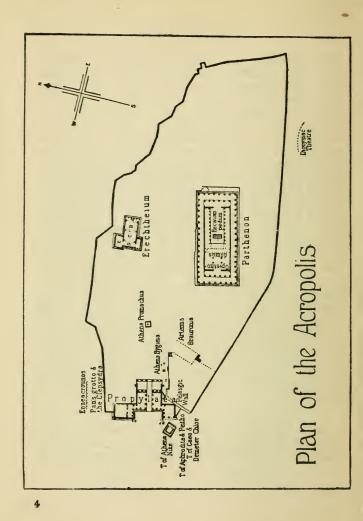

The Acropolis was approached by a sloping road, which led to the Propylaea, or entry, of five gates. Near this, outside the wall, was an intermittent spring known as the Clepsydra and the grotto of Pan. The statues of Harmodius and Aristogeiton stood near the foot of the slope.

In this play Mr. Rogers prints text and translation not side by side but separately, the translation for obvious reasons being in many places only a paraphrase.

^a It is daybreak at Athens; and Lysistrata, a young and beautiful woman, is standing alone, with marks of evident anxiety in her countenance and demeanour. The scene represents the sloping hill which rises from the Lower to the Upper City. In the background are the Propylaea, the splendid portals of the Athenian 6

LYSISTRATA. Now were they summoned to some shrine of Bacchus,

Pan, Colias, Genetyllis, b there had been No room to stir, so thick the crowd of timbrels. And Now!—there's not one woman to be seen. Stay, here comes one, my neighbour Calonice. Good morning, friend.

CALONICE. Good morn, Lysistrata.

Why, what's the matter? don't look gloomy, child. It don't become you to knit-knot c your eyebrows.

Ly. My heart is hot within me, Calonice,
And sore I grieve for sake of womankind,
Because the men account us all to be Sly, shifty rogues,

ca. And so, by Zeus, we are.

Ly. Yet though I told them to be here betimes,
To talk on weighty business, they don't come,
They're fast asleep.

ca. They'll come, dear heart, they'll come.

'Tis hard, you know, for women to get out.

Acropolis. Lysistrata is on the look-out for persons who do not come, and after exhibiting various symptoms of impatience, she suddenly begins to speak with abrupt and indignant emphasis.

Ly. Ah! but they've other duties still more pressing

Well but, Lysistrata,
Why have you, dear, convoked us? Is the matter
A weighty subject?

LY. Weighty? yes.

CA. And pregnant?

LY. Pregnant, by Zeus.

CA. Why ever don't we come, then?

LY. No, it's not that: we'd have come fast enough
For such-like nonsense. 'Tis a scheme I've hit on,
Tossing it over many a sleepless night.

CA. Tossing it over? then 'tis light, I fancy.

- Ly. Light? ay, so light, my dear, that all the hopes Of all the States are anchored on us women.
- ca. Anchored on us! a slender stay to lean on.
- Ly. Ay, all depends on us: whether as well the Peloponnesians all shall cease to be—

CA. Sure and 'tis better they should cease to be.

Ly. And all the dwellers in Boeotia perish-

ca. Except the eels; do pray except the eels.

Ly. But about Athens, mark you, I won't utter Such words as these: you must supply my meaning. But if the women will but meet here now, Boeotian girls, Peloponnesian girls, And we ourselves, we'll save the States between us.

A. What can we women do? What brilliant scheme

Can we, poor souls, accomplish? we who sit

Ah, friend, you'll find them Attic to the core: LY. Always too late in everything they do. Not even one woman from the coast has come. Not one from Salamis.

O they, no doubt, CA. Will cross this morning, early, in their boats.c

And those I counted sure to come the first, My staunch Acharnian damsels, they're not here-Not they.

And yet Theagenes's wife CA. Consulted Hecate, d as if to come. Hi! but they're coming now: here they all are: First one, and then another. Hoity toity!

Such jests seem to have had some special connexion with Salamis; cf. 411, E. 38.

We must abstain—

MY. Well! tell us.

Will ye do it?
MY. Do it? ay, surely, though it cost our lives.

Ly. We must abstain—each—from the joys of Love.
How! what! why turn away? where are ye going?
What makes you pout your lips, and shake your heads?
What brings this falling tear, that changing colour?
Will ye, or will ye not? What mean ye, eh?

Ly. You, too, Miss Turbot? you who said just now You'd cleave, for Peace, your very self in twain?

ca. Ask anything but this. Why, if needs be, I'd walk through fire: only, not give up Love. There's nothing like it, dear Lysistrata.

LY. And what say you?

MY. I'd liefer walk through fire.

No women! women! O our frail, frail sex! 274
No wonder tragedies are made from us.
Always the same: nothing but loves and cradles.
O friend! O Lampito! if you and I
Are of one mind, we yet may pull things through;
Won't you vote with me, dear?

'Tis sair to bide your lane, withouten men.
Still it maun be: we maun hae Peace, at a' risks.

LY. O dearest friend; my one true friend of all.

ca. Well, but suppose we do the things you say,
Pray Heaven avert it, but put case we do,
Shall we be nearer Peace?

For if we women will but sit at home,
Powdered and trimmed, clad in our daintiest lawn,
Employing all our charms, and all our arts
To win men's love, and when we've won it, then
Repel them, firmly, till they end the war,
We'll soon get Peace again, be sure of that.

LA. Sae Menelaus, when he glowered, I ween, At Helen's breastie, coost his glaive awa'.^b

ca. Eh, but suppose they leave us altogether?

Ly. O. faddle! then we'll find some substitute.

^b After the fall of Troy, Menelaus, about to slay Helen, was softened by the sight of her beauty. See Tennyson's Lucretius.

c Lines 158-163 are: "Then, as P. said, canem excoriatum excoriare." "Those imitations are rubbish. But what if they drag us into the room by force?" "Cling to the door." "What if they beat us?" "Yield with a bad grace, for there is no pleasure in what is taken by force."—Pherecrates is unknown. The words κύνα δ. δ. were used as a proverb $\epsilon \pi i \tau \omega \nu \mu \Delta \tau \eta \nu \pi \sigma \nu \sigma \nu \nu \nu \nu$, but there is a reference to the penis coriaceus of 109.

As the City Castle by force to hold, With block and bolt and barrier vast, Making the Propylaea fast.

Press on, Philurgus, towards the heights;

we'll pile a great amazing

Array of logs around the walls,

and set them all a-blazing:

And as for these conspirators,

a bonfire huge we'll make them,

One vote shall doom the whole to death,

one funeral pyre shall take them,

And thus we'll burn the brood accurst,

but Lycon's wife a we'll burn the first.

No, never, never, whilst I live,

shall woman-folk deride me:

Not scatheless went Cleomenes,b

when he like this defied me,

And dared my castle to seize: yet He, A Spartan breathing contempt and pride, Full soon surrendered his arms to me,

And a scanty coat round his loins he tied,

And with unwashed limbs, and with unkempt head, And with six years' dirt, the intruder fled;

So strict and stern a watch around my mates and I were keeping,

In seventeen rows of serried shields

before the fortress sleeping.

And THESE, whom both Euripides

and all the Powers on high

Alike detest, shall these, shall these,

my manly rage defy?

THE LYSISTRATA, 287-309

Ere we reach our goal at the Castle keep,

We've still, with our burdensome load, to creep.

And how to manage that blunt incline Without a donkey, I can't divine.

But still right onward we needs must go,

And still the cinders we needs must blow,

Else we'll find the fire extinguished,

ere we reach our journey's end.

Puff! Puff! Puff! O the smoke! the smoke!

O royal Heracles! what a lot Of fire came raging out of the pot, And flew, like a dog, at my eyes, red hot. 'Twas a jet from the Lemnian a mines, I ween,

It came so fierce, and it bit so keen, And worried, with persistence sore, my two poor eyes, inflamed before.

On, Laches, on! to the castle press, And aid the God in her dire distress; Surely, if we e'er would help her,

Puff! Puff! Puff!
O the smoke! the smoke!

Thank heaven the fire is still alight,

and burning beautifully bright.

So here we'll lay our burdens down,

with eager hearts delighted,

And dip the vine-torch in the pot,

and get it there ignited.

^b "As they approach the Acropolis they have full in view the Temple of the Wingless Victory, otherwise Athene Nike": R.

c During the last few lines the Men have been completing their preparations, and the air above them is now growing lurid with the smoke and the flame of their torches. As the Men relapse into silence, the voices of Women are heard in the distance. They come sweeping round from the north side of the Acropolis, carrying their pitchers of water, and singing, in turn, their entrance song. The two Choruses are for the present concealed from each other by the north-western angle of the Acropolis.

THE LYSISTRATA, 310-329

And if our summons they reject,

and keep the barriers shut,

We'll burn the very doors with fire,

and them with smoke we'll smother.

So lay the burdens down. Pheugh! Pheugh!

O how this smoke does bother!

What general from the Samian a lines

an active hand will lend us?

Well, well, I'm glad my back is freed from all that weight tremendous.

O pot, 'tis now your turn to help:

O send a livelier jet

Of flame this way, that I to-day

the earliest light may get.

O Victory, immortal Queen,b assist us Thou in rearing

A trophy o'er these woman-hosts,

Redly up in the sky

the flames are beginning to flicker, Smoke and vapour of fire!

come quicker, my friends, come quicker.

Fly, Nicodice, fly,

Else will Calyce burn,

Else Critylla will die,

Slain by the laws so stern,

Slain by the old men's hate.

Ah, but I fear! I fear!

can it chance that I come too late?

Trouble it was, forsooth, before my jug I could fill,

All in the dusk of the morn.

MAGISTRATE. Has then the women's wantonness blazed out,

b At this crisis the tumult is stayed for an instant by the appearance on the stage of a venerable official personage, one of the Magistrates who, after the Sicilian catastrophe, were appointed, under the name of Probuli, to form a Directory or Committee of Public Safety. He is attended by four Scythian archers, part of the ordinary police of the Athenian Republic. The Women retire into the background.

LY.	Keeping the silver securely in custody,
	lest for its sake ye continue the war.
MAG.	What, is the war for the sake of the silver, then?
LY.	Yes; and all other disputes that there are.
	Why is Peisander a for ever embroiling us, why do the rest of our officers feel
	Always a pleasure in strife and disturbances?
	Simply to gain an occasion to steal.
	Act as they please for the future, the treasury
	never a penny shall yield them, I vow.
MAG.	How, may I ask, will you hinder their getting it?
LY.	We will ourselves be the Treasurers now.
MAG.	You, woman, you be the treasurers?
LY.	Certainly.
	Ah, you esteem us unable, perchance!
	Are we not skilled in domestic economy,
	do we not manage the household finance?
MAG.	O, that is different.
LY.	Why is it different?
MAG.	This is required for the fighting, my dear.
LY.	Well, but the fighting itself isn't requisite.
MAG.	Only, without it, we're ruined, I fear.
LY.	WE will deliver you.
MAG.	You will deliver us!
LY.	Truly we will.
MAG.	What a capital notion!
LY.	Whether you like it or not, we'll deliver you.
MAG.	Impudent hussy!
LY.	You seem in commotion.
	Nevertheless we will do as we promise you.
MAG.	That were a terrible shame, by Demeter.
LY.	Friend, we must save you.

Well we perceived your mistakes and mismanagement. Often at home on our housekeeping cares, Often we heard of some foolish proposal you made for conducting the public affairs. Then would we question you mildly and pleasantly, inwardly grieving, but outwardly gay; Husband, how goes it abroad? we would ask of him; what have ye done in Assembly to-day? What would ye write on the side of the Treaty stone a? Husband says angrily, What's that to you?

Treat them as clots in the wool, and dissever them, lopping the heads that are forming therein Then you should card it, and comb it, and mingle it, all in one Basket of love and of unity,

Citizens, visitors, strangers, and sojourners,

all the entire, undivided community.

Know you a fellow in debt to the Treasury?

Mingle him merrily in with the rest.

Also remember the cities, our colonies,

outlying states in the east and the west,

Scattered about to a distance surrounding us,

these are our shreds and our fragments of wool;

Hippias, the last tyrant, after his brother Hipparchus had been killed by Harmodius and Aristogeiton, was expelled by the Alcmaeonidae with the help of Cleomenes, king of Sparta. Cleisthenes is "a fitting intermediary between the Athenian women and the Laconian men, as partaking of the nature of both": R. See Thesm. 576.

THE LYSISTRATA, 614-634

M. CH. This is not a time for slumber;

now let all the bold and free,

Strip to meet the great occasion,

vindicate our rights with me.

I can smell a deep, surprising Tide of Revolution rising, Odour as of folk devising

Hippias's tyranny.a

And I feel a dire misgiving,

Lest some false Laconians, meeting

in the house of Cleisthenes,

Have inspired these wretched women

all our wealth and pay to seize,

Pay from whence I get my living.

Gods! to hear these shallow wenches

taking citizens to task,

Prattling of a brassy buckler,

jabbering of a martial casque!

Gods! to think that they have ventured

with Laconian men to deal,

Men of just the faith and honour

that a ravening wolf might feel!

Plots they're hatching, plots contriving,

plots of rampant Tyranny;

But o'er us they shan't be Tyrants,

no, for on my guard I'll be,

And I'll dress my sword in myrtle,b and with firm and dauntless hand.

Here beside Aristogeiton

resolutely take my stand,

Marketing in arms beside him.

This the time and this the place

^a Unexpectedly suits the action to the word. A similar result takes place at the end of the three succeeding speeches.

b These are the distinctions which a young Athenian girl might hope to attain. Four girls, between the ages of seven and eleven, were chosen yearly from those of noble birth to serve Athene for a year in the Erechtheum; they were called $d\rho\rho\eta\phi\delta\rho\omega$ because they carried certain mysterious objects in caskets. The $d\lambda\epsilon\tau\rho i\delta\epsilon$ s were of ten years and upwards, also of noble birth, selected to grind on the holy mills $(i\epsilon\rhool~\mu\nu\lambda\delta\nu\epsilon)$ grain for the sacred cakes. The crowning honour was to carry a basket in the great Panathenaic procession; A.242, B.1551, E.730. Each Athenian girl, before marriage, had to "play the bear" at the festival of Brauronian Artemis, wearing a yellow robe in place of the ancient bearskin:

The separation of the sexes has now become insupportable to both parties, and the only question is which side will hold out the longest. THE LYSISTRATA, 821-845

Ly. Ho, ladies! ladies! quick, this way, this way! F.w. O what's the matter and what means that cry?

Ly. A man! a man! I see a man approaching
Wild with desire, beside himself with love.

F.W. O lady of Cyprus, Paphos, and Cythera, Keep on, straight on, the way you are going now! But where's the man?

Ly. (pointing) Down there, by Chloë's chapel.c

F.w. O so he is: whoever can he be!

LY. Know you him, anyone?

MY. O yes, my dear, I know him. That's Cinesias, my husband.

Ly. O then 'tis yours to roast and bother him well; Coaxing, yet coy: enticing, fooling him, Going all lengths, save what our Oath forbids.

MY. Ay, ay, trust me.

IY. And I'll assist you, dear;
I'll take my station here, and help befool
And roast our victim. All the rest, retire.d
CINESIAS. O me! these pangs and paroxysms of love, is again a short pause. Suddenly the voice of Lysistrata is heard calling eagerly to her friends.

^c Near the Acropolis. Demeter was called Chloë after the first cı. I.

LY. A man?

CI.

LY.

LY.

CI.

CI.

A man, no doubt.

Then get you gone.

ci. Who bids me go?

I, guard on outpost duty.

cr. O call me out, I pray you, Myrrhina.

LY. Call you out Myrrhina! And who are you?

ci. Why, I'm her husband, I'm Cinesias.a

Ly. O welcome, welcome, dearest man; your name
Is not unknown nor yet unhonoured here.
Your wife for ever has it on her lips.
She eats no egg, no apple, but she says
This to Cinesias!

O, good heaven! good heaven!

Ly. She does, indeed: and if we ever chance To talk of men, she vows that all the rest Are veriest trash beside Cinesias.

ci. Ah! call her out.

LY. And will you give me aught?

ci. O yes, I'll give you anything I've got.

Ly. Then I'll go down and call her.

Pray be quick.

I have no joy, no happiness in life,
Since she, my darling, left me. When I enter
My vacant home I weep; and all the world
Seems desolate and bare: my very meals
Give me no joy, now Myrrhina is gone.

They'll no be couthie wi' the laddies mair
Till a' mak' Peace, and throughly en' the War.

The analy react, and throughly the the war.

This is a plot they have everywhere been hatching,
These villainous women: now I see it all.
Run home, my man, and bid your people send
Envoys with absolute powers to treat for peace,
And I will off with all the speed I can,
And get our Council here to do the same.

INTRODUCTION

The Greeks celebrated two great festivals in honour of Demeter and Persephone. "In the Eleusinia were unfolded the Mysteries of the Four Last Things—Death, Judgement, the Reward of the Good, and the Punishment of the Wicked—mysteries which were naturally open to the queen of the unseen world below. In the Thesmophoria, the Mother and Daughter were worshipped under quite a different aspect, as the Civilizers of the visible world above." a They were the $\theta\epsilon\sigma\mu\sigma\phi\delta\rho\sigma\iota$, the givers and guardians of Home, of the social laws $(\theta\epsilon\sigma\mu\acute{a})$, the rights of property, the laws of wedlock, and the family.

The festival was held "at the fall of the year, when the Daughter once more descended into the lower world, to return four months later in all the freshness of immortal youth to greet the Mother again." b Only women took part in this festival. At Athens it occupied four days towards the end of October, Pyanepsia 10th to 13th. The days were named (10) Thesmophoria, (11) $K\acute{a}\theta o \delta o s$, (12) $N \eta \sigma \tau \epsilon \acute{a}a$, (13)

Καλλιγένεια.

On_the first, the women went up to the Thesmophorion, which stood on an eminence (hence the title $\mathring{a}\nu o \mathring{o}os$, and $\mathring{a}\nu a\pi \acute{\epsilon}\mu \psi a\iota$, T. 585), and there made the necessary preparations.

^a Rogers, Introduction, p. x. ^b Ib. p. xi.

THE THESMOPHORIAZUSAE

The second commemorated the Descent of the Maid into Hades.

The third was given to fasting and mourning, with torchlight ceremonials. Being placed between the Descent and the New Birth, it was also called $\dot{\eta}$ Mé $\sigma\eta$, "not the Middle Day of the festival, but the Intermediate Day," between these two.^a

The fourth day was the New Birth or Resurrection. It is the third day, the Fast, on which the events of this play occur.

The comedy has no didascalia; hence the date is not known for certain. But it seems clearly to belong to the year 410, after the disappearance of the Four Hundred. The happier tone of this play, as compared with the Lysistrata (411 B.C.), supports this view: constitutional government had been restored, and Alcibiades was once more serving his country; the Peloponnesian fleet had been defeated in a great battle at Cynossema, and a greater still at Abydos. The allusion also in ll. 808-9 speaks of the oligarchical revolution of 411 as "last year"; and there are other indications pointing the same way.

Whether the comedy won the prize we do not know.

The plot is as follows. The women are to hold an assembly, in which they will debate what punishment is to be inflicted on Euripides for his slanders made against their sex. Euripides, accompanied by Mnesilochus, a connexion by marriage, visits the poet Agathon, to induce him, being a man of effeminate appearance and manners, to attend disguised as a woman, and to defend Euripides. Agathon declines, but lends a selection of women's garments from his wardrobe for the disguise of Mnesilochus, who is shaved and sent off. While he makes his attempt, the effeminate Cleisthenes appears, and warns them that a traitor is amongst them. Mnesilochus is discovered and bound to a plank. Various schemes, based on certain incidents in the tragedies of Euripides, the "schemer," are tried for his rescue. Euripides himself appears, and with Mnesilochus makes his escape. Three tragedies in particular are drawn on: the Palamede, the Helen, and the Andromeda.

(1) The Palamede suggests, that as Palamede's story was carved on oar-blades, which were cast into the sea, so the present victim's plight may be carved on the votive tablets which are to hand.

(2) Mnesilochus, lamenting over his sad case, wittily parodies (855 ff.) the Prologue to the Helen, in which Helen, sitting on the tomb of Proteus, explains the state of affairs. When Menelaus enters himself and tries to persuade an old woman, who kept the doors of the palace of Proteus, to let him in, he gives a model for the dialogue between Euripides and Mnesilochus, with the woman-guardian intervening (874 ff.). The meeting of Menelaus and Helen is used later in the same dialogue (905 ff.). Details are given in the notes.

(3) Andromeda bound to the rock, and lamenting her coming fate, sings a hymn to Night, and is softly answered by Echo; presently a chorus of maidens enters, and sorrows with her. This scene is parodied by Mnesilochus (1015-1055), bound to his plank, and Echo's part becomes highly ludicrous. So Euripides to the rescue plays on the part of a Two elderly men are discovered, when the Play opens, pacing along an Athenian street. In one, both by his gait and by his language, we at once recognize a Philosopher and a Genius. His companion is a garrulous and cheery old man, evidently tired out by a long promenade. They prove to be the poet Euripides, and Mnesilochus, his connexion by marriage, in the translation inaccurately styled his cousin. The latter is the first to speak.

Aias of Sophocles.

^a "In the original, Ether is the creative agent throughout; she parcels herself out; she herself gives birth to the breathing and moving creatures. She is always put forward by A. as the chief Euripidean deity; see F. 892": R.

THE THESMOPHORIAZUSAE, 13-31

When Ether ^a first was mapped and parcelled out, And living creatures breathed and moved in her. She, to give sight, implanted in their heads The Eye, a mimic circlet of the Sun, And bored the funnel of the Ear, to hear with.

MN. DID SHE! That's why I'm not to hear or see!
I'm very glad to get that information!

SERVANT. All people be still!

Allow not a word from your lips to be heard,
For the Muses are here, and are making their odes
In my Master's abodes.

Let Ether be lulled, and forgetful to blow, And the blue sea-waves, let them cease to flow, And be noiseless.

EU. There's a great danger brewing for my life.a

MN. O, tell your cousin what.

EU. This hour decides
Whether Euripides shall live or die.

MN. Why, how is that? There's no tribunal sitting. No Court, no Council, will be held to-day. 'Tis the Mid-Fast, the third Home-Festival.'

EU. It is! it is! I wish enough it wasn't.^c
For on this day the womankind have sworn
To hold a great assembly,^d to discuss
How best to serve me out.

MN. Good gracious! Why?

EU. (with the mild surprise of injured innocence)

Because, they say, I write lampoons upon them.

MN. Zeus and Poseidon! they may well say that. But tell your cousin what you mean to do

EU. I want to get the poet Agathon To go among them.

MN. Tell your cousin why.

EU. To mingle in the Assembly, perhaps to speak On my behalf.

MN. What, openly, do you mean?

EU. O no, disguised: dressed up in women's clothes.

MN. A bright idea that, and worthy jou:
For in all craftiness we take the cake.

EU. O, hush!

^e The cake was the prize for the man who kept awake until sunrise in a drinking bout. A proverb. Cf. F. 1214, K. 277.

By a contrivance very common in ancient theatres, a portion of Agathon's house is here wheeled forward, turning on a pivot, so as to disclose the interior of an apartment. The poet is discovered, surrounded by the most effeminate luxuries, and in the act of writing a tragic play. He has just composed, and is now about to recite, a little lyrical dialogue between his Chorus and one of his actors.

EU. Do, pray, be silent; he's just going to sing.b MN. Is it "the Pathway of the Ants," o or what?

AGATHON. (As actor) Move ye slowly, with the holy Torchlight dear to Awful Shades,

Singing sweetly, dancing featly, Yes, and neatly, freeborn maids.

(As Chorus) Whose the song of festal praise? Only tell us, we are zealous Evermore our hymns to raise.

Sing of Leto, sing of Thee too, (As actor) Archer of the golden bow, Bright Apollo, in the hollow Glades where Ilian rivers flow, Building buildings, long ago.

(As Chorus) Raise the music, softly swelling To the fame of Leto's name, our loveliest hymns, O Phoebus, who awardest the sacred guerdon in our fair musical celebrations. Sing too the Maiden in the oak-bearing mountains, the huntress Artemis. I follow on with songs of praise, blessing the exalted child of Leto, the stainless virgin Artemis. Sing too of Leto, and the smiting of the Asian lyre, keeping time with the dance of the Graces, the whirling dance rhythmical to the Phrygian style. I worship Leto the Queen, and the lyre the mother of hymns, with notable masculine song: by which, and by means of our suddenly raised voices, light flashes from eyes divine. For this cause magnify King Phoebus. Hail to thee, Leto's blessed son ": R.

A minstrel's lute, a maiden's netted hair, Girdle and wrestler's oil! a strange conjunction. How comes a sword beside a looking-glass? What art thou, man or woman? If a man, Where are his clothes? his red Laconian shoes a? If woman, 'tis not like a woman's shape. What art thou, speak; or if thou tell me not, Myself must guess thy gender from thy song.

AG. Old man, old man, my ears receive the words
Of your tongue's utterance, yet I heed them not.
I choose my dress to suit my poesy.
A poet, sir, must needs adapt his ways
To the high thoughts which animate his soul.
And when he sings of women, he assumes
A woman's garb, and dons a woman's habits.

MN. (aside to Eu.) When you wrote Phaedra, b did you take her habits?

AG. But when he sings of men, his whole appearance Conforms to man. What nature gives us not, The human soul aspires to imitate.

MN. (as before) Zounds, if I'd seen you when you wrote the Satyrs!

AG. Besides, a poet never should be rough,
Or harsh, or rugged. Witness to my words
Anacreon, Alcaeus, Ibycus,
Who when they filtered and diluted song,
Wore soft Ionian manners and attire.^d

AG. That's bad indeed, but how can I assist you?

Eu. Why, every way. If you'll disguise yourself,
And sit among them like a woman born,
And plead my cause, you'll surely get me off.
There's none but you to whom I dare entrust it.

AG. Why don't you go yourself, and plead your cause?

EU. I'll tell you why. They know me well by sight;
And I am grey, you see, and bearded too,
But you've a baby face, a treble voice,

THE THESMOPHORIAZUSAE, 377-402

What shall be done about Euripides, How best to serve him out; for that he's guilty We all admit. Who will address the meeting? F.W. I wish to, I.

Put on this chaplet first.^a
Order! order! Silence, ladies, if you please.
She's learnt the trick; she hems and haws;
she coughs in preparation;
I know the signs; my soul divines
a mighty long oration.

F.w. 'Tis not from any feeling of ambition
I rise to address you, ladies, but because I long have seen, and inly burned to see
The way Euripides insults us all,
The really quite interminable scoffs
This market-gardener's son^b pours out against us.
I don't believe that there's a single fault
He's not accused us of ^c; I don't believe
That there's a single theatre or stage,
But there is he, calling us double-dealers,
False, faithless, tippling, mischief-making gossips,
A rotten set, a misery to men.
Well, what's the consequence?

The men come home ^d Looking so sour—O, re can see them peeping In every closet, thinking friends are there. Upon my word we can't do anything We used to do; he has made the men so silly Suppose I'm hard at work upon a chaplet, Hey, she's in love with somebody; suppose I chance to drop a pitcher on the floor,

^c Lit. "he does not be mear us with."

^d From the benches of the theatre.

And straightway 'tis, For whom was that intended? I warrant now, for our Corinthian a friend. Is a girl ill? Her brother shakes his head; The girl's complexion is not to my taste. Why, if you merely want to hire a baby, And palm it off as yours, you've got no chance, They sit beside our very beds, they do.b Then there's another thing; the rich old men Who used to marry us, are grown so shy We never catch them now; and all because Euripides declares, the scandal-monger, An old man weds a tyrant, not a wife.c You know, my sisters, how they mew us up, Guarding our women's rooms with bolts and seals And fierce Molossian dogs. That's all his doing. We might put up with that; but, O my friends, Our little special perquisites, the corn, The wine, the oil, gone, gone, all gone for ever. They've got such keys, our husbands have, such brutes. Laconian-made, with triple rows of teeth. Then in old times we only had to buy A farthing ring, and pantry-doors flew open. But now this wretch Euripides has made them Wear such worm-eaten perforated seals, 'Tis hopeless now to try it. Therefore, ladies, What I propose is that we slav the man, Either by poison or some other way; to connect all they did with absent lovers; cf. L. 856. The dropped pot gives a comic turn to this custom.

We'd been but three days married; I'm abed, Husband asleep beside me; when my lover (I'd been familiar with him from a child) a Came softly scratching at the outer door. I hear; I know "the little clinking sound," And rise up stealthily, to creep downstairs. Where go you, pray? says husband. Where! say 1, I've such a dreadful pain in my inside I must go down this instant. Go, says he. He pounds his anise, juniper, and sage, To still my pains: I seize the water-jug, And wet the hinge, to still its creaking noise, Then open, and go out: and I and lover Meet by Aguieus and his laurel-shade, Billing and cooing to our hearts' content. (With vivacity) Euripides has never found out that. Nor how a wife contrived to smuggle out Her frightened lover, holding up her shawl To the sun's rays for husband to admire.c Nor how we grant our favours to bargees And muleteers, if no one else we've got. Nor how, arising from a night's debauch, We chew our garlic, that our husbands, coming Back from the walls at daybreak, may suspect Nothing amiss at home. Then what's the odds If he does rail at Phaedra? Let him rail. What's that to us? Let him rail on, say I. Phaedra indeed! He might come nearer home. I knew a woman, I won't mention names, Remained ten days in childbirth. Why, do you think? Because she couldn't buy a baby sooner. Her husband runs to every medicine-man

MN. Nor how when late your servant bare

a child as well as you,

You took her boy, and in his stead

your puling girl you gave her.

F.w. O, by the Two, a this jade shall rue her insolent behaviour.

I'll comb your fleece, you saucy minx.

MN. By Zeus, you had best begin it.

F.w. Come on!

MN. Come on!

F.W. You will? you will?

(Flinging her upper mantle to Philista)

Hold this, my dear, a minute.

MN. Stand off, or else, by Artemis,

I'll give you such a strumming— b

сн. For pity's sake, be silent there:

I see a woman coming.

Who looks as if she'd news to tell.

Now prithee both be quiet

And let us hear the tale she brings,

without this awful riot.

CLEISTHENES. Dear ladies, I am one with you in heart;
My cheeks, unfledged, bear witness to my love,
I am your patron, aye, and devotee.
And now, for lately in the market-place
I heard a rumour touching you and yours,
I come to warn and put you on your guard,
Lest this great danger take you unawares.

CH. What now, my child? for we may call thee child, So soft, and smooth, and downy are thy cheeks.

^c The supposed woman turns out to be the notorious Cleisthenes, of whom we have already heard. The reader must imagine the feelings of Mnesilochus duzing the ensuing dialogue.

cL. Euripides, they say, has sent a cousin, A bad old man, amongst you here to-day.

CH. O, why and wherefore, and with what design?

cl. To be a spy, a horrid, treacherous spy, A spy on all your purposes and plans.

CH. O, how should he be here, and we not know it?

cl. Euripides has tweezered him, and singed him, And dressed him up, disguised in women's clothes.

MN. (stamping about with a lively recollection of his recent sufferings) I don't believe it; not one word of it;
No man would let himself be tweezered so.

Ye Goddesses, I don't believe there's one.

cl. Nonsense: I never should have come here else, I had it on the best authority.

CH. This is a most important piece of news. We'll take immediate steps to clear this up. We'll search him out: we'll find his lurking-place. Zounds, if we catch him! r-r-r! the rascal man. Will you, kind gentleman, assist the search? Give us fresh cause to thank you, patron mine.

CL. (to F.W.) Well, who are you?

MN. (aside) Wherever can I flee?

CL. I'll find him, trust me.a

MN. (aside) Here's a precious scrape!

F.w. Who? I?

CL. Yes, you.

F.w. Cleonymus's wife.

CL. Do you know her, ladies? Is she speaking truth?

Second? Drank again. MN. F.W. Somebody's told you this. But what was third? MN. Well, third, Xenylla had a drop too much.a F.w. Ah, that won't do. Here, Cleisthenes, approach. This is the MAN for certain.

And dared defend Euripides like that!

O, villain, villain.

Miserable me! MN.

I've put my foot in it, and no mistake.

F.w. What shall we do with him?

CL.

CH. Light we our torches, my sisters, and manfully girding our robes,
Gather them sternly about us,
and casting our mantles aside

On through the tents and the gangways, and up by the tiers and the rows,

Eyeing, and probing, and trying,

where men would be likely to hide.

Now 'tis time, 'tis time, my sisters, round and round and round to go, Soft, with light and airy footfall, creeping, peeping, high and low.

Look about in each direction,

make a rigid, close inspection,

Lest in any hole or corner,

other rogues escape detection.

Hunt with care, here and there, Searching, spying, poking, prying,

up and down, and everywhere

For if once the evil-doer we can see,^a
He shall soon be a prey to our vengeance to-day,
And to all men a warning he shall be
Of the terrible fate that is sure to await
The guilty sin-schemer and lawless blasphemer.
And then he shall find that the Gods are not blind
To what passes below;

Yea, and all men shall know
It is best to live purely, uprightly, securely, discover any man, who unperceived by me, has perpetrated this sacrilegious act," or (2) "if we fail to detect him, yet the gods will not leave him unpunished."

b Just as the Chorus are concluding their search, Mnesilochus snatches the First Woman's baby from her arms, and takes refuge at the altar.

^a Lines 673 to 685 are literally: "He shall show to all mankind that they should reverence the gods, and following after what is holy, and studying what is lawful, should do the thing that is right. And if they do not so, this shall follow: when one of them is caught doing what is impious, blazing with madness, distraught with frenzy, if he should do aught . . . it shall be manifest to all women and mortals that God suddenly avenges all impious and unlawful acts."

THE THESMOPHORIAZUSAE, 677-696

It is best to do well, And to practise day and night

what is orderly and right,

And in virtue and in honesty to dwell.

But if anyone there be who a wicked deed shall do In his raying, and his raging,

and his madness, and his pride,

Every mortal soon shall see,

aye, and every woman too, What a doom shall the guilty one betide.

For the wicked evil deed

shall be recompensed with speed,

The Avenger doth not tarry to begin,

Nor delayeth for a time,

but He searcheth out the crime, And He punisheth the sinner in his sin.^a

Now we've gone through every corner,

every nook surveyed with care,

And there's not another culprit

skulking, lurking anywhere.b

F.w. Hoy! Hoy there! Hoy!

He's got my child, he's got my darling, O!

He's snatched my little baby from my breast. O, stop him, stop him! O, he's gone. O! O!

MN. Aye, weep! you ne'er shall dandle him again,^c
Unless you loose me. Soon shall these small limbs,
Smit with cold edge of sacrificial knife,^d
Incarnadine this altar.

F.W. 0!0!0!

Help, women, help me. Sisters, help, I pray.

c Lit. "feed on sops and morsels."

d Lit. "here over the sacrificial meats, his bleeding veins smitten by this knife."

Charge to the rescue, shout, and rout, and scout him.

Don't see me lose my baby, my one pet.

CH. Alas! Alas!

Mercy o' me! what do I see? What can it be?

never, never, never, end?

F.w. Yes, indeed, they're very dreadful, and he's got my baby too.

Doing such deeds, and I vow and declare
Never minding or caring—

Never again shall you wander away;
Wander away, glad to display
All the misdeeds you have done us to-day,
But dear you shall pay.

I shall find your words untrue.

Very fast.

Why, if we're really a Plague,

you're so anxious to have us for wives;

And charge us not to be peeping,

nor to stir out of doors for our lives.

Isn't it silly to guard

a Plague with such scrupulous care?

Zounds! how you rave, coming home,

if your poor little wife isn't there.

Should you not rather be glad,

and rejoice all the days of your life,

Rid of a Plague, you know,

the source of dissension and strife?

If on a visit we sport,

and sleep when the sporting is over,

O, how you rummage about;

what a fuss, your lost Plague to discover.

Every one stares at your Plague

if she happens to look on the street:

Stares all the more if your Plague thinks proper to blush and retreat.

Is it not plain then, I ask,

that Women are really the best?

What, can you doubt that we are?

I will bring it at once to the test.

We say Women are best;

you men (just like you) deny it,

Nothing on earth is so easy

^a The Council of Five Hundred had surrendered their office to the usurping Four Hundred. Eubule was the name of one of the three daughters of Leos, who died to save Athens, to whom the Leocorion was erected; Aelian, V.H. xii. 28. The speaker then cites five names of women which suggest superiority to men. Charminus, who was defeated in a naval engagement off Syme about a year before this play was exhibited (Thuc. viii. 41, 42), is therefore Ναυσιμάχης ήττων; Cleophon cannot cope with the notorious Salabaccho in vileness; Άριστομάχη, "best in battle," and Στρατομίκη, "conquering in war," cannot be matched;

^b Stenia and Scira were women's feasts. See E. 18.

^a The women wish to show their superiority to men by showing how much more carefully they have preserved their mothers' belongings, than the men have preserved what their fathers left them. They are still using the $\dot{a}\nu\tau$ ίον, or bar at the top of the loom from which the threads hung; the κανών, or weaving-rod; the καλαθίσκοι, or woolbaskets; and the σκιάδειον, or sunshade. But with the men, the κανών is the spearshaft, and the σκιάδειον, under the shadow of which the warrior fights, is the shield: these the men have thrown away. The climax of the whole passage is the σκιάδειον, 823, 828.

And we in domestic economy too Are thriftier, shiftier, wiser than you.^a

For the loom which our mothers

Where are they to-day?

Ye have cast them away

As ye raced, in hot haste,

One who in your fleets and armies

great heroic deeds has done,

Ought she to remain unhonoured?

ought she not, I ask you, I,

THE ECCLESIAZUSAE

INTRODUCTION

THERE is no direct evidence of the date of this Comedy; but the allusions made in the play itself, and the Scholiasts' comments, make it clear that it was exhibited in 393 B.C., when Eubulides was archon.

After the Peloponnesian War, Athens remained for about nine years, 404-395 B.c., in a state of humiliation and subjection to Sparta. The Spartans had behaved with great magnanimity, in refusing to destroy Athens utterly; but by so doing, they gave offence to Thebes and Corinth. These states never again supported the Spartan League; they refused to help in opposing Thrasybulus, and later in a war against Elis, nor would they join in the expedition of Agesilaus to Asia Minor; in fact, the Bocotians offered him a direct affront, when he attempted, in remembrance of the Trojan War, to sacrifice at Aulis. Hence in 395, when the Phocians appealed for help against Thebes. Sparta summoned her allies to invade Boeotia: Corinth alone refused. The Boeotians appealed to Athens to form a league against Sparta. "It must have been a time for great searchings of heart amongst the wisest Athenians; and Thrasybulus, then the most eminent leader of the people, seems to have been seriously perplexed and uncertain which course it would be most prudent to 244 adopt. For this was doubtless the occasion on which he first promised the Lacedaemonians to speak in their favour, and then, changing his mind, excused himself on the ground of sudden indisposition" (Eccl. 356).^a However, the League against Sparta was formed, and Athenian troops at once set out for Haliartus; arriving indeed too late for the battle in which Lysander perished, but in time to aid in driving out the army of Pausanias without another battle.

"Here then we find an alliance which precisely answers to the description given in the speech of Praxagora." b—At first all went well; but the great battle of Corinth (394) resulted in the defeat of the League. Agesilaus, returning from Asia, defeated the League again at Coronea. "It was at this juncture, at the commencement of the year 393, that Praxagora comes forward, in the play before us, to condemn the vacillating policy of the men, and to propose that the government of Athens should henceforth be entrusted to the women, as the more stable and conservative sex." c

A year later Conon, who had already in 393 won the naval victory of Cnidus, returned to Athens, bringing the Persian fleet and Persian gold; the Long Walls and the fortifications of the Peiraeus were restored, and Athens was delivered from her anxieties. This is why Conon's name is associated with the League; and why 392 B.C. is too late a date for the play.

We have yet to discover why Praxagora, the apostle of conservatism, develops in this play "a scheme so startling and so novel, as to throw into the shade the wildest extravagances of the men. It is a scheme of naked socialism, involving the community of goods, the abolition of marriage, and (what is inaccurately called) the community of women." a It seems "impossible to doubt that the cause is to be found in the appearance, whilst Aristophanes was engaged on the Ecclesiazusae, of the Republic of Plato, or at all events of that part of the work which now constitutes Books II. to V. (inclusive) of the Republic." b Aristophanes was not the man to let pass such a delightful subject for caricature. Many similarities of thought and diction will be found. At the same time, of course, the comedian alters or exaggerates to suit his purpose; thus the Platonic communism was confined to the φύλακες, or Guardians of the State, and there is nothing in Plato resembling promiscuous intercourse between the sexes, until the members of this class had passed their prime.

a "The stage represents an Athenian street, with three houses in the background, the houses of Blepyrus, Chremes, and the husband of the Second Woman. The hour is 3 a.m. and the stars are still visible in the sky. A young and delicate woman, clad in masculine attire, is standing in the street, hanging up a lighted lamp in some conspicuous place. The woman is Pravagora, the wife of Blepyrus, who has just left her husband asleep within, and has come out wearing his garments, with his sturdy walking-stick in her hand, and his red Laconian shoes upon her feet. And the lamp is to serve as O glowing visage of the earthen lamp, On this conspicuous eminence well-hung,— (For through thy fates and lineage will we go, Thou, who, by whirling wheel of potter moulded, Dost with thy nozzle do the sun's bright duty)-Awake the appointed signal of the flame! Thou only knowest it, and rightly thou, For thou alone, within our chambers standing, Watchest unblamed the mysteries of love.b Thine eye, inspector of our amorous sports,^c Beholdeth all, and no one saith Begone! signal to other Athenian women who have agreed to meet her here before the break of day. No one is yet in sight: and while she is expecting their arrival, she apostrophizes the lamp in mock-heroic style, using such language as in tragedy might be addressed to the sun or moon or to some divine or heroic personage. According to the Scholiast the poet, in this opening speech, is glancing at some passage in the tragedies either of Agathon or of Dicaeogenes": R.

The place of its celebration seems to have been a spot on the Sacred Way just outside the gates of Athens, where was the tomb of Scirus, the Dodonaean seer; and near it a Temple of Athene Sciras. It was attended by the priestess of Athene, the priest of the Sun, and the priest of Erechtheus who came down from the Acropolis bearing the sacred white parasol, $\sigma \kappa \iota d\delta \epsilon \iota o \nu \lambda \epsilon \iota \kappa \delta \nu \delta \nu \delta \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \tau a \Sigma \kappa \ell \rho o \nu$; Scholiast. Therefore our plans will we confide to thee,
What at the Scira a we resolved to do.
Ah, but there's no one here who should be here.
Yet doth it draw towards daybreak; and the Assembly
Full soon will meet; and we frail womankind
Must take the seats Phyromachus assigned us

What can the matter be? Perchance their beards
Are not stitched on, as our decree commanded,
Perchance they found it difficult to steal
Their husband's garments. Stay! I see a lamp which Aristophanes gives a new turn by saying $\epsilon \tau a \ell \rho a s$. Probably $\epsilon \ell \mu \epsilon \mu \nu \eta \sigma \theta' \epsilon \tau \ell$ was part of the speech; it is not appropriate here.

^c She conceals herself: enter woman with lamp.
^d Praxagora reappears.

"" The women who during the next sixteen lines keep dropping in, either singly or in small groups, are in my opinion all members of the Chorus making their way to the orchestra. They are probably twelve in all, forming a semichorus, and representing that section of Praxagora's followers which dwelt within the city walls. The other section, the women from the country, enter in a body, infra 300, singing their entrance song. Then the two semichoruses coalesce and become the full Chorus of the play. And the speaker of lines 54-56, and a few other lines in the conversation, is in my opinion the Coryphaeus, who enters with the first semichorus": R.

d Lamias, her husband, was a jailer; and the mention of his name and "club" $(\sigma \kappa \dot{\nu} \tau a \lambda o \nu)$ suggests a coarse allusion to the ogress Lamia, of whom Crates wrote in a comedy $\sigma \kappa \nu \tau \dot{a} \lambda \eta \nu \not{\epsilon} \chi o \nu \sigma a$ $\dot{\epsilon} \pi \dot{\epsilon} \rho \delta \epsilon \tau o$. See W. 1177. In 79-81 the wife emphasizes her cleverness in escaping him by saying he was a veritable Argus (δ $\Pi a \nu \delta \pi \tau \eta s$); but instead of "keeping watch" $(\beta o \nu \kappa o \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\nu})$ over Io, she makes him watch over the "public executioner" $(\tau \dot{\nu} \nu \delta \dot{\eta} \mu \iota o \nu)$.

Originally struck between Thebes and Athens, it was quickly joined by Argos, Corinth, and other important states, and became so powerful that the military leaders proposed at once to march upon Sparta and 'destroy the wasps in their nest.' You won't find them, I warrant, in a hurry Trying new plans.^b And would it not have saved The Athenian city had she let alone Things that worked well, nor idly sought things new? They roast their barley, sitting, as of old: They on their heads bear burdens, as of old: They keep their Thesmophoria, as of old: They bake their honied cheesecakes, as of old: They victimize their husbands, as of old: They still secrete their lovers, as of old: They buy themselves sly dainties, as of old: They love their wine unwatered, as of old: They like a woman's pleasures, as of old: Then let us, gentlemen, give up to them The helm of State, and not concern ourselves, Nor pry, nor question what they mean to do; But let them really govern, knowing this, The statesman-mothers never will neglect Their soldier-sons. Whatever was it though that brought together So vast a crowd so early?

Twas determined
To put this question to the assembled people,
"How best to save the State." So first and foremost Came Neocleides, groping up to speak.
And all the people shouted out aloud,
What scandal that this blear-eyed oaf, who cannot
Save his own eyesight for himself, should dare
To come and teach us how to save the State.
But he cried out, and leered around, and said,
What's to be done?

Pound garlic up with verjuice, a
Throw in some spurge of the Laconian sort,
And rub it on your eyelids every night.
That's what, had I been present, I'd have said.

CHR. Next came Evaeon, smart accomplished chap,
With nothing on, as most of us supposed,
But he himself insisted he was clothed.
He made a popular democratic speech.
Behold, says he, I am myself in want
Of cash to save me; yet I know the way
To save the citizens, and save the State.
Let every clothier give to all that ask
Warm woollen robes, when first the sun turns back.
No more will pleurisy attack us then.
Let such as own no bedclothes and no bed,
After they've dined, seek out the furriers, there
To sleep; and whoso shuts the door against them

Why not tell me first,

Before you went?

PR. Not haste to help her in Such straits, my husband?

BL. After telling me.

Something's wrong there.

Just as I was; the wench who came besought me
To lose no time.

You did not put your mantle on? You threw it Over my bed and took my overcloak,
And left me lying like a corpse laid out; a Only I'd never a wreath, or bottle of oil.

PR. The night was cold, and I'm so slight and fragile,
I took your overcloak to keep me warm.
And you I left well snuggled up in warmth
And rugs, my husband.

BL. How came my staff to form
One of your party, and my red Laconians?

PR. I took your shoes to save your overcloak; b
Aping your walk, stumping with both my feet,
And striking down your staff against the stones.

You've lost eight quarts of wheat, I'd have you know, Which the Assembly would have brought me in.

Your soul philosophic, that knows So well for your comrades to fight. For all to our happiness goes The project your tongue will disclose, As with thousands of joys you propose The citizen life to endow. Now show us what things you can do! It is time; for the populace now Requires an original new Experiment; only do you Some novelty bring from your store Never spoken or done heretofore. The audience don't like to be cheated With humours too often repeated. So come to the point, and at once; for delay Is a thing the spectators detest in a play.

PR. I've an excellent scheme, if you will but believe it;
But I cannot be sure how our friends will receive it;
Or what they will do, if the old I eschew,
And propound them a system erratic and new.
This makes me a trifle alarmed and faint-hearted.

BL. As to that, you may safely be fearless and bold: We adore what is new, and abhor what is old.

This rule we retain when all else has departed.

PR.^b Then all to the speaker in silence attend,

^a The interruption exasperates P., who retorts, "You shall eat muck before I do" (595). Blepyrus affects to suppose this to be part of her scheme, and innocently inquires whether her communistic system extends to the muck, so that she will share it with him. "No," she says, "but you interrupted me by asking a question which my next words would have answered (596)."

THE ECCLESIAZUSAE, 589-603

And weigh and perpend, till you quite comprehend, The drift and intent of the scheme I present.

The rule which I dare to enact and declare,
Is that all shall be equal, and equally share
All wealth and enjoyments, nor longer endure
That one should be rich, and another be poor,
That one should have acres, far-stretching and wide,
And another not even enough to provide
Himself with a grave: that this at his call
Should have hundreds of servants, and that none at all.

All this I intend to correct and amend: Now all of all blessings shall freely partake, One life and one system for all men I make.

BL. And how will you manage it?

First, I'll provide
That the silver, and land, and whatever beside
Each man shall possess, shall be common and free,
One fund for the public; then out of it we
Will feed and maintain you, like housekeepers true,
Dispensing, and sparing, and caring for you.

BL. With regard to the land, I can quite understand,
But how, if a man have his money in hand,
Not farms, which you see, and he cannot withhold,
But talents of silver and Darics of gold?

PR. All this to the stores he must bring.

But suppose
He choose to retain it, and nobody knows;
Rank perjury doubtless; but what if it be?
Twas by that he acquired it at first.

Come all, come quick, straight to your chieftainess. There cast your lots; there fortune shall assign To every man his destined feasting-place.
Come, for the tables now are all prepared And laden heavily with all good things:
The couches all with rugs and cushions piled!
They're mixing wine: the perfume-selling girls Are ranged in order: collops on the fire:
Hares on the spit; and in the oven, cakes;
Chaplets are woven: comfits parched and dried.
The youngest girls are boiling pots of broth;
And there amongst them, in his riding-suit,
The gallant Smoius licks their platters clean.^d girl. It is the case contemplated in Praxagora's speech, supra 693-701, but the proceedings do not exactly follow the lines there shadowed out. For one thing, both the girl and her young lover are in full revolt against the regulations of Praxagora. For another no Gaffer Hobnail, no snub-nosed Lysicrates, comes to claim precedence over the youth. It is difficult to feel absolute certainty as to the stage arrangements, but in my judgement the Hag is peeping out through the half-closed door (P. 980, 981), whilst the girl is looking from the window overhead: "R.

THE PLUTUS

INTRODUCTION

AT the time when this play was exhibited, Athens had made a remarkable recovery from her defeat. Under the leadership of Conon, she had made head against Sparta, and she had already a considerable fleet. Doubtless the Persian gold which Conon had brought was the beginning of her recovery; but the Athenians must have made great sacrifices themselves. "And very welcome to the whole audience must have been the restoration of Wealth, at the close of the Comedy, to his long-deserted home in the Athenian Treasury." a

Aristophanes had produced a Plutus in 408 B.C.; but it probably had "an entirely different plot carried out in an entirely different manner." b present Comedy was exhibited in the spring of 388. It was the last which he brought out in his own name; but "there seems every reason to believe that he afterwards revised it, and exhibited the revised edition in the name of his son Araros." c There was no third Plutus, but only a double representation of the second, revised and touched up. The allusions imply the same general situation in politics as those of the Ecclesiazusae.

"Everywhere in the play before us we find tokens of the change which is passing over Athenian Comedy. The stately Parabasis is gone; the beautiful lyrics which elevated the whole performance into a higher and purer atmosphere have altogether disappeared; the great historical personages, literary and political, the poets, the philosophers, the demagogues, the generals, who moved through the earlier scenes of the Aristophanic drama, have faded not only from his own satire, but almost from the very recollection of his audience: we are no longer amidst the pomp and glory, the boundless activities of Imperial Athens with her Imperial instincts and her splendid ambitions; comedy has become social instead of political; the performers might almost be treading, so to say, the boards of some provincial theatre." a

The idea on which the play turns is that ancient problem, Why do the ungodly prosper, while the righteous are needy and poor? The question is answered with a jest: it must be that Wealth is blind. He is restored to sight, and the tables are turned. The scenes described as taking place in the sanctuary of Asclepius are close enough to the facts, if rather farcical. We know a good deal about what happened at the great shrine in Epidaurus; there are important remains—the temple, the dormitory, a Rotunda, a stadium, a great theatre, and various shrines; above all, a long series of inscriptions describing the cures, which often illustrate the play, as when serpents come out of their holes and lick the patient's sores. At Cos also the remains of a temple and precinct of Asclepius have been found; and the Fourth Mime of Herondas describes a scene in that place.

But for my son, my only son, to ask
If, changing all his habits, he should turn
A rogue, dishonest, rotten to the core.
For such as they, methinks, succeed the best.

CHR. To bid you "welcome," fellow-burghers, now
Is old and musty; so I—"clasp" you all.
Ye who have come in this stout-hearted way,
This strenuous way, this unrelaxing way,
Stand by me now, and prove yourselves to-day
In very truth the Saviours of the God.

CH. Fear not: I'll bear me like the God of War.
What, shall we push and hustle in the Assembly
To gain our three poor obols, and to-day
Let Wealth himself be wrested from our grasp?

CHR. And here, I see, comes Blepsidemus too.

Look! by his speed and bearing you can tell

He has heard a rumour of what's happening here.

BLEPSIDEMUS. What can it mean? Old Chremylus grown wealthy!

Then whence and how? I don't believe that story. And yet by Heracles 'twas bruited wide Amongst the loungers in the barbers' shops That Chremylus had all at once grown rich. And if he has, 'tis passing wonderful That he should call his neighbours in to share. That's not our country's fashion, anyhow.

CHR. I'll tell him everything. O Blepsidemus,
We're better off to-day than yesterday.
You are my friend, and you shall share in all.

BL. What, are you really wealthy, as men say? CHR. Well, if God will, I shall be presently.

But there's some risk, some risk, about it yet.

BL. What sort of risk?

He might fancy, I ween, it were madness or e'en the sport of some mischievous sprite. So often the best of the world is possessed by the most undeserving of men, Who have gotten their pile of money by vile injustice; so often again The righteous are seen to be famished and lean, yea, with thee as their comrade to dwell. Now if Wealth were to-night to recover his sight, and her from amongst us expel, Can you'tell me, I pray, a more excellent way of bestowing a boon on mankind? Pov. O men on the least provocation prepared to be crazy and out of your mind, Men bearded and old, yet companions enrolled in the Order of zanies and fools, O what is the gain that the world would obtain were it governed by you and your rules? Why, if Wealth should allot himself equally out (assume that his sight ye restore), Then none would to science his talents devote or practise a craft any more. Yet if science and art from the world should depart, pray whom would ye get for the future To build you a ship, or your leather to snip, or to make you a wheel or a suture? Do ye think that a man will be likely to tan, or a smithy or laundry to keep, Or to break up the soil with his ploughshare, and toil the fruits of Demeter to reap, If regardless of these he can dwell at his ease, a "At the feasts of Theseus, in token of the unity which he introduced into the Athenian commonwealth, the poorer classes were entertained at a meal, apparently not of a very sumptuous character, provided at the public cost. The meal seems to have consisted of porridge and barley-bread; and the guests hollowed out bits of the bread as scoops wherewith to eat the porridge. A scoop so made was called μυστίλη, and μεμυστιλημένοι means 'ye who have scooped up your porridge'; $\ell\pi'$ $\delta\lambda\iota\gamma\iota\sigma\tau$ os $\delta\lambda\phi\iota\tau$ os, 'on tiniest rations of barley-meal.' These workhouse meals, as we may

Here's joy, here's happiness, old friends, for you CA. Who, at the feast of Theseus, a many a time Have ladled up small sops of barley-broth! Here's joy for you and all good folk besides.

How now, you best of all your fellow-knaves? CH.

You seem to come a messenger of good.

With happiest fortune has my master sped, CA. Or rather Wealth himself; no longer blind, He hath relumed the brightness of his eyes, So kind a Healer hath Asclepius proved.

CH. (singing) Joy for the news you bring.

Joy! Joy! with shouts I sing

Aye, will you, nill you, it is joy indeed.

CH. (singing) Sing we with all our might Asclepius first and best.

To men a glorious light, Sire in his offspring blest. WIFE. What means this shouting? Has good news arrived?

For I've been sitting till I'm tired within Waiting for him, and longing for good news.

Bring wine, bring wine, my mistress; quaff yourself CA. The flowing bowl; (you like it passing well).

I bring you here all blessings in a lump.

WIFE. Where?

That you'll learn from what I am going to say. WIFE. Be pleased to tell me with what speed you can.

b Lines 635-6 are from Sophocles, Phineus fr. 644. The sons of Phineus were blinded by him, or by their stepmother; Phineus himself, blinded, had to endure the assaults of Harpies until Asclepius restored sight to his sons. Line 638 is some tragio fragment or parody: Schol.

WIFE. Not on my head, I pray you.

CA. Not the blessings

We have all got?

Not all that striking business. WIFE. Soon as we reached the Temple of the God CA. Bringing the man, most miserable then, But who so happy, who so prosperous now? Without delay we took him to the sea And bathed him there.

O what a happy man, WIFE. The poor old fellow bathed in the cold sea!

Then to the precincts of the God we went. CA. There on the altar honey-cakes and bakemeats Were offered, food for the Hephaestian flame. There laid we Wealth as custom bids; and we Each for himself stitched up a pallet near.

Were there no others waiting to be healed? Neocleides b was, for one; the purblind man, CA. Who in his thefts out-shoots the keenest-eyed. And many others, sick with every form Of ailment. Soon the Temple servitor Put out the lights, and bade us fall asleep, Nor stir, nor speak, whatever noise we heard. So down we lay in orderly repose. And I could catch no slumber, not one wink, Struck by a nice tureen of broth which stood A little distance from an old wife's head, Whereto I marvellously longed to creep. Then, glancing upwards, I behold the priest Whipping the cheese-cakes and the figs from off The holy table; thence he coasted round To every altar, spying what was left.

And everything he found he consecrated

Into a sort of sack; so I, concluding This was the right and proper thing to do, Arose at once to tackle that tureen. Unhappy man! Did you not fear the God? WIFE. Indeed I did, lest he should cut in first, CA. Garlands and all, and capture my tureen. For so the priest forewarned me he might do. Then the old lady when my steps she heard Reached out a stealthy hand; I gave a hiss, And mouthed it gently like a sacred snake.a Back flies her hand; she draws her coverlets More tightly round her, and, beneath them, lies In deadly terror like a frightened cat. Then of the broth I gobbled down a lot

Till I could eat no more, and then I stopped. wife. Did not the God approach you?

Not till later.

And then I did a thing will make you laugh.

For as he neared me, by some dire mishap My wind exploded like a thunder-clap.

WIFE. I guess the God was awfully disgusted.

CA. No, but Iaso b blushed a rosy red

And Panacea turned away her head Holding her nose: my wind's not frankincense.

WIFE. But he himself?

CA. Observed it not, nor cared.

WIFE. O why, you're making out the God a clown!

CA. No, no; an ordure-taster.

WIFE. Oh! you wretch.

So then, alarmed, I muffled up my head,
Whilst he went round, with calm and quiet tread,
To every patient, scanning each disease.
Then by his side a servant placed a stone
Pestle and mortar; and a medicine chest.

WIFE. A stone one?

CA.

CA. Hang it, not the medicine chest.

WIFE. How saw you this, you villain, when your head, You said just now, was muffled?

Through my cloak.
Full many a peep-hole has that cloak, I trow.
Well, first he set himself to mix a plaster
For Neocleides, throwing in three cloves
Of Tenian garlic; and with these he mingled
Verjuice and squills; and brayed them up together
Then drenched the mass with Sphettian vinegar,
And turning up the eyelids of the man
Plastered their inner sides, to make the smart
More painful. Up he springs with yells and roars
In act to flee; then laughed the God, and said,
Nay, sit thou there, beplastered; I'll restrain thee,
Thou reckless swearer, from the Assembly now.^a

WIFE. O what a clever, patriotic God!

CA. Then, after this, he sat him down by Wealth,
And first he felt the patient's head, and next
Taking a linen napkin, clean and white,
Wiped both his lids, and all around them, dry.
Then Panacea with a scarlet cloth
Covered his face and head; then the God clucked,
And out there issued from the holy shrine
Two great enormous serpents.

O good heavens! WIFE.

And underneath the scarlet cloth they crept CA. And licked his eyelids, as it seemed to me; And, mistress dear, before you could have drunk Of wine ten goblets, Wealth arose and saw. And those who lay by Wealth, imagine how They blessed and greeted him, nor closed their eyes The whole night long till daylight did appear. And I could never praise the God enough For both his deeds, enabling Wealth to see, And making Neocleides still more blind.

WIFE. O Lord and King, what mighty power is thine!

But prithee where is Wealth?

CA.

He's coming here, With such a crowd collected at his heels. When first I'm entering with my sight restored Into a house, 'twere meeter far that I Confer a largess rather than receive.

wife. Then won't you take the welcoming-gifts I bring?

WE. Aye, by the hearth within, as custom bids.
So too we 'scape the vulgar tricks of farce.
It is not meet, with such a Bard as ours,
To fling a shower of figs and comfits out
Amongst the audience, just to make them laugh.

WIFE. Well said indeed: for Dexinicus there Is rising up, to scramble for the figs.^a

How pleasant 'tis to lead a prosperous life, CA. And that, expending nothing of one's own. Into this house a heap of golden joys Has hurled itself though nothing wrong we've done. Truly a sweet and pleasant thing is wealth. With good white barley is our garner filled And all our casks with red and fragrant wine. And every vessel in the house is crammed With gold and silver, wonderful to see. The tank o'erflows with oil; the oil-flasks teem With precious unguents; and the loft with figs. And every cruet, pitcher, pannikin, Is turned to bronze; the mouldy trencherlets That held the fish are all of silver now. Our lantern, all at once, is ivory-framed. And we the servants, play at odd-or-even With golden staters; and to cleanse us, use Not stones, but garlic-leaves, so nice we are.

^a They all enter the house: henceforth Cario and Chremylus come out by turns; they are never on the stage together. Some interval elapses before Cario's first entrance. The Schol. says the scene is modelled on the Inachus of Sophocles, where the entry of Zeus and Wealth brings plenty.

What were the things he asked you to supply? CHR.

Not many: so prodigious the respect O.L. In which he held me. 'Twould be twenty drachmas To buy a cloak and, maybe, eight for shoes; b Then for his sisters he would want a gown, And just one mantle for his mother's use, And twice twelve bushels of good wheat perchance.

CHR. He was no fool: he knew the way to eat The goodly substance of a fond old dame.

O then, my dear, the God is much to blame. O.L. He said he'd right the injured, every one.

What shall he do? speak, and the thing is done.

He should, by Zeus, this graceless youth compel O.L. To recompense the love that loved him well; Or no good fortune on the lad should light.

Did he not then repay you every night? CHR.

He'd never leave me all my life, he said. O.L.

CHR. And rightly too; but now he counts you dead. My dear, with love's fierce pangs I've pined away O.L.

CHR. Nay rather, grown quite rotten, I should say.

O, you could draw me through a ring, I know. O.L.

CHR. A ring? A hoop that round a sieve could go.

O, here comes he of whom I've been complaining O.L. All this long while; this is that very lad! Bound to some revel surely.

So it seems. CHR.

At least, he has got the chaplets and the torch.a YOUTH. Friends, I salute you.

O.L. Eh?

Mine ancient flame, YOUTH. How very suddenly you've got grey hair.

O me, the insults I am forced to bear. O.L.

CHR. 'Tis years since last he saw you, I dare say.

What years, you wretch? He saw me yesterday! O.L.

CHR. Why then, his case is different from the rest;

When in his cups, methinks, he sees the best. o.L. No, this is just his naughty, saucy way.

^b The inner cell of the Parthenon, used as a treasury.

c Enter Old Lady from the house.

a "From this point to the close of the play Chremylus is arranging a great religious procession for the purpose of escorting Wealth in triumph to his proper home in the Athenian Treasure-house. There was not much wealth in the Treasury now, owing to the cessation of the tribute paid by the Allies, and to the enormous expenditure occasioned by the adhesion of Athens to the anti-Spartan League": R.

THE PLUTUS, 1191-1209

CHR. So we'll at once install—but bide awhile—
Wealth in the place where he was erst installed,^a
Guarding the Treasury in Athene's Temple.^b
Hi! bring me lighted candles. Take them, you,
And march before the God.

PR. With all my heart.

CHR. Call Wealth out, somebody.

O.L. And I?

CHR. O, you.

Here, balance me these installation pots ^d
Upon your head, and march along in state.
You've got your festive robes at all events.

O.L. But what I came for?

CHR. Everything is right.

The lad you love shall visit you to-night.

o.L. O, if you pledge your honour that my boy Will come to-night, I'll bear the pots with joy.

CHR. These pots are not like other pots at all.

In other pots the mother 'e is atop,

But here the mother's underneath the pot.

ch. 'Tis the end of the Play, and we too must delay our departure no longer, but hasten away, And follow along at the rear of the throng, rejoicing and singing our festival song.

^d Pots of boiled pulse were offered at a dedication of altar or temple. ^e γραῦς means (1) "old woman," (2) "scum" on the surface of milk, boiled vegetables, soup, etc. So "mother" is applied to scum on boiling liquids, mould on fermenting jams, yeast, and the like (English Dialect Dictionary, iv. 175).

In the rear of the actors. The actors would depart from the stage, the Chorus, with dance and song, from the orchestra; but all are supposed to be combining in one great triumphal procession to the Acropolis, there to install Wealth, as a perpetual resident, in a place with which he had once been familiar, but to which he had long been a stranger, viz. in the Treasury of the Athenian Republic at the back of Athene's Temple.
