A little over fifty years ago the family of a coal merchant of Leeds, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, was increased by the arrival of a blue-eyed boy. He was christened John. When John was 15 years of age he was apprenticed to a firm of millwrights and engineers in his native town. Eight years later he obtained a leading position in some locomotive and steam power works in Leeds, and then took to himself a wife, the daughter of a town councillor.

North perished about this time, and John, with his young wife, went to the west coast of South America. He got a position as engineer on a railway in Chili, and while he was working there heard about the nitrate districts of Peru. To Peru he betook himself.

In a small way he began to purchase nitrate, and before the war broke out between Chili, Bolivia and Peru he had made a fortune and had started immense commercial enterprise, capital obtained in England, in Tarapaca and other places. The fame of his wealth had preceded him, and when he returned to the old country he became one of the lions of the day among that class in England which is always ready to dine and wine with one who has what is termed in London "cof."

One of the first things he did when he returned to his old home was to build a magnificent country house at Eltham, in lovely, hop-growing Kent. Then he got presented to H. R. H. and Randolph Churchill taught him all he knew about the turf. He paid 800 guineas for the famous greyhound Fullerton and won the Waterloo Cup three or four times with him.

Not That Columbus.

The bootblack at the corner stand on C street was looking for a customer. He was black as the ace of spades, and as he carelessly dusted off his stand with the stump of a corn brush, he occasionally paused and rolled his eyes hungrily up and down the street.

Presently a tall, raw-boned, middle-aged man, with a considerable length of goatee and but a little breadth of hat rim, stopped and glanced at the stand with some show of interest.

"Have a shine, boss?" said the owner of the stand, giving his chair a parting slap with his brush. "Shine 'em up in half a minnit, sah. You'll jist have time to glance over the mornin' papers."

Without deigning to answer, the lank chap climbed into the seat before him.

"Whar yer a rollin' them pants to?" was his first remark after the proprietor of the stand began to operate.

"All right now, boss. We mustn't muss 'em, you see. It's all feasible now, sah."

"Wall, perced to business."

"It's a movin', boss; It's a movin', sah!"

"Wall, see that you keep a-movin'."

"De people of de Souf," said the bootblack, cocking a cunning eye up at his customer, "de people of de Souf [another look of the eye] most all gives us pore cullud boys any little feasible jobs dey's got."

"You think I'm from the South?"

"It's from de Souf myself, sah."

"Likely."

"It's from de Souf, sah—from ole Kaintuck, sah."

"Indeed!"

"Sartin, boss. It's from Lex'nton, Kaintuck, sah," scraping away with an old case-knife at the mud on his customer's boots.

"I'm from Kentucky myself, and from Lexington," said the man, beginning to look interested. "So you are from Lexington, eh?"

"Jess so, boss. Practically I was born dar, sah."

"Like you, I was born thar."

"Nice ole town, boss."

"Very."

"I golly, boss, ef I didn't think from de fust dat I saw in you de rare ole Kaintucky gentleman. You've got a good deal of de cut of some o' dem law and midcin students dat used to be about de ole Transylvany 'Varsity; but you's aged a little, boss—aged a leetle grain more dan was de boys in dem days."

"I've often seen the old University."

"It wuz a fine ole town, too. De main street wuz more dan a mile long; dar wuz beautiful trees 'long de streets, an' de orphan 'sylum an' de baggin' factorys, de wire works an' de—"

"The lunatic asylum."

"Yes, boss; shore 'nuff, dar wuz de lunatic 'sylum."

"And the river."

"An' de ribber; I golly, dat fust big bend in Town Fork of de Elkhorn, up 'bove de city—practically dat wuz a mighty feasible proposition for catfish."

"Amazin'."

"I say, boss, practically you never happened to know a cullud boy named Columbus Parsons, as lived out on de road to'ards whar ole Harry Clay was borned—out to'ards Ashland—did yer, sah?"

"I knew a colored boy named Columbus Parsons that rode old Woodpecker against Ploughboy down at the Blue Grass course, and won the purse."

"De Lord loves us! Wuz you dar? De great hokey! Practically, I am dat same Columbus Parsons what rode ole Woodpecker an' won de puss down dare to Blue Grass!"

"The Columbus Parsons I knew used to be a great fiddler; played for all the balls and parties for miles around."

"Dat wuz me, sah. I wuz de boy. Now you's a beginning to know me."

"The Columbus Parsons I used to know was a great singer—was lightnin' at all the nigger camp-meetings."

"Dat wuz me, boss. I'm identically an' practically dat same Columbus Parsons. You's got de most feasible memory dat ever I saw, sah."

"The Columbus Parsons I knew went down to Frankfort and run on the River as steward of the Belle Wagner."

"Yah, yah! You knows me—you knows me, boss! You knows me like a hudder, sah! In dem days didn't I put on de apparel? Wasn't I attired? Practically, sah, you's got de most feasible memory dat I ever saw, sah!"

"The Columbus Parsons that I knew, the Columbus Parsons that rode old Woodpecker, the Columbus Parsons that used to sing at campmeetin's, the Columbus Parsons that was steward on the Belle Wagner, that Columbus Parsons hustled open the trunk of a passenger, stole a thousand dollars and was sent to the State Prison at Frankfort for five years."

"Practically, boss, you's got a powerful feasible memory, but dare wuz anoder Columbus Parsons down dare 'bout Lexin'nton and Frankfort—partic'larly Souf Frankfort, 'cross de chain bridge—dat wuz a boss rider, a fiddler, a singer an' a steamboater, an' he wuz a low-flung harum scarum, no account feller; I guess he wuz a bin de Columbus Parsons what you knowed, sah."

"You think so?"

"Sartin sure, boss; but don't say nuffin 'bout de feller heah, sah. You see, practically, it mout injure my good name, sah!"—Virginia Enterprise.

The Early Hambletonians.

Ever since Rysdyk's Hambletonian became famous as a sire, a very large number of his descendants, as well as more or less which were not, have been given some form or combination of the name "Hambletonian," evidently by owners who expected thus to profit by the family popularity. Whenever the name is now used with no qualifying or explanatory word it is taken for granted that Rysdyk's Hambletonian is meant, but the name was as much copied, borrowed, or, as some would express it, appropriated by Mr. Rysdyk when he named that now famous horse as in any of the subsequent cases.

The first prominent American horse named Hambletonian was a thoroughbred, foaled forty-five years earlier than his distinguished Orange county descendant and namesake. He was in several respects the best son of imported Messenger, and at Granville, Washington Co., N. Y., established a reputation as a very successful sire of trotters and roadsters. While at Granville, and until he died, which was in 1834, he was owned by Isaac Bishop, so that he is almost invariably referred to as Bishop's Hambletonian.

Among his get were several quite famous old-time trotters, such as Sir Peter, which sixty-five years ago took a three-mile harness record of 8:16; Whalebone, a remarkably handsome horse, sixteen hands, three inches high, which made a three-mile harness record soon after of 8:18, took a four-mile saddle record in the famous race with Topgallant of 11:06, and afterward trotted thirty-two miles in two hours; Trouble, two miles, to harness, 5:15; Shakespeare, three miles, saddle, 8:16, and Rattler (?) which in 1838 in a two-mile race under saddle beat Lady Suffolk and Dutchman, winning the second heat in 5:13. He won several other important two and three-mile races. After winning many races on the different American courses he was taken to England, where he proved decidedly the best of that day.

Bishop's Hambletonian was also sire of the dam of that grand old trotter Topgallant, which Woodruff pronounced as "one of the best and stoutest that ever looked through a bridle." When twenty-two years old Topgallant trotted and won a famous four-mile heat race, where four heats were required to decide the contest, Whalebone having won the first heat and made a dead heat of the second. The time of the four heats was 11:16, 11:06, 11:17 and 11:15, making a total of 44 minutes and 54 seconds for the sixteen miles, an average of 2:52 1-8, which Woodruff no horse before or since in his twenty-second year has ever done or been capable of doing. Topgallant had a three-mile saddle record of 8:11, made in the second heat of a race, and he also trotted twelve miles in harness in 38 minutes. His saddle record, which was at the rate of 2:43 2-3, was made carrying 150 pounds, which was then the minimum weight in trotting races.

A son of Bishop's Hambletonian, foaled twenty-six years previous to the Hero of Chester, was also named Hambletonian, and for distinction is known as Harris' Hambletonian, Russel Harris of New Haven, Vt., having been his last owner. He was one of the first represented in the 2:30 list, and was certainly, opportunity considered, one of the very best trotting sires of his day. He got the fast pacer Hero (2:20), wagon record 2:29, two miles 5:02), and also the trotters Lady Shannon (2:28), Green Mountain Maid (2:28), wagon record 2:34, two miles 5:08), Sontag (wagon record 2:31, two miles 5:31), Grey Eagle (2:35, two miles 5:34, saddle record 2:31) and Vermont (2:33, two miles 5:09), three miles 8:02). There were also several others by the "New Haven Grey" with records nearly or quite as fast.

The horse for which the Bishop's Hambletonian was named and as far as we are able to learn the original horse named Hambletonian, was a famous English horse, foaled in 1792; by King Fergus; dam by Highflyer, grandam by Matchem. Hambletonian won 1355 guineas and a gold cup valued at 100 guineas in six races as a three-year-old. The following year in the August meeting at York he won a subscription purse of 27 pounds 10 shillings and the next day the lady's plate. At Doncaster in September he won the gold cup of 100 guineas value, and in November a match over the Beacon Course for 1,000 guineas.

As a five-year-old he won 1770 guineas in five races and received one forfeit of 250 guineas and another of 100 so that his winnings for that year amounted to 2120 guineas. The next year he was not started on account of being slightly lame. As a seven-year-old he won a famous match for 3,000 guineas, beating the noted race horse Diamond. This race was at Newmarket, and occasioned so much interest that the attendance was the very largest ever at Newmarket up to that time. It was a close match, and was won by only about half a length. At Doncaster the same year he won 160 guineas, beating eight of the best horses then in England.

His last race was in the year 1800. He was then eight years old and won the great subscription stable at York with 50 guineas added by the city. Once as a five-year-old soon after starting in a three-mile contest he ran out of the course, and once when out of condition paid forfeit which was to Sterling, but throughout his whole career he was never beaten.

On being retired from the turf he was placed in the stud at what was then very close to the top price and has proven successful also as a sire. Among his descendants which have been imported to America may be mentioned to some distinguished sires as Imported Margrave, Imported Tranby, Imported Leamington, Imported Australian and numerous others to which many fast and game performers on the trotting, as well as the running courses trace.

There have been several quite famous thoroughbred horses in America with names nearly the same, but spelled differently. One was Hamiltonian, named, it is said, for Alexander Hamilton. There was another named Hambletonian, but those described above are the only particularly noted ones we can now recall, preceding the now famous trotting progenitor, named Hambletonian.—Vision, in Horse Breeder.

Advice Regarding 2:40 Stallions.

This is the advice given by an editor of a stock paper, and he follows up with the assertion that a stallion, to do much business in the future, must have a record.

Speed is what patrons must have. While we admit that many go wild on the record business we doubt the soundness of the advice given above, and do not think the records of the past will justify such a course. It is well enough to have your stallion show, either to sulky or to bridle, that he possesses speed and a gait that is to be desired in his progeny, but arguments and statistics in favor of the horse that has been trained down fine or campaigned season after season for a fast record is abundant, and the well-bred young horse that is siring a uniformly well-gaited lot of youngsters but has no record, for the reason that his owner has not the means necessary for his development, should not be passed by for one no better and not as well bred, simply because his owner could send him to independence or to some other good track in charge of a good trainer and procure a scratch record.

Too many stallions in the list bear the familiar brand: the star prefix and the figure I suffix.

Do the records show that the most successful speed producers are the ones that have shown by their performances or records that they possess speed? And are the bowlers justified in belittling the qualities of the horse without a record? While we take as much pride as any one in such successful sires George Wilkes, Nutwood, Onward, Alcantara, Guy Wilkes, Gambetta Wilkes, Sidney and others, are we justified in saying that they would not have been as successful had their records remained a 2:35 or 2:40, or even had they never been given a record? When we look at the long list of the old pioneer, Hambletonian 10, at the unequalled number of good ones by the undeveloped Electioneer, the list of Red Wilkes, Mambrino King, Egbert, Happy Medium, Dictator, Mambrino Patchen, Harold, Switzer, Strathmore, Jay Bird, Volunteer and many other truly great, but undeveloped, sires, we conclude that the demand for a fast record in a stallion, regardless of other qualities, is unfounded and hasty. Not only in the number, but in the quality of the turf performers, the sires with slow records prove superior.

The unequalled Nancy Hanks was by a sire not in the 2:30 list, and her dam was by another not found there. Stamboul was by a horse with a record of 2:24, while Kremlin, his adversary, was by a sire with no record. Dare anyone say the quarter second claimed by the former is due to the faster record of the sire? Sunol, the queen of 1891; Maud S., Jay-Eye-See, St. Julien, Rarus, Dexter, Goldsmith Maid, Flora Temple, Lady Suffolk, all of the champions were by undeveloped sires, or those credited with slow records. Every one of the champion stallions are credited on the side of the slow sires, so the stickler for extreme speed has no grounds to condemn the undeveloped sire, while there is occasion to doubt seriously the advisability of long campaigns and the hard training generally given the fast stallion. In many cases we find the undeveloped sons of extremely fast sires prove better sires than their fast brothers, or even their sires, which may be used as proof by those who contend that campaign work saps the breeding qualities. The quality of the broodmares cannot be accountable for this, as the best mares are always rushed to the fast horse, giving him the advantage in this respect.

In the matter of broodmares the fact is singularly apparent that the champion mares and those most successful on the turf have proved comparative failures when placed in the barn. The great broodmare table is conspicuously free from the names of the most familiar campaigners, while many of the best in that table were seldomly harnessed and never trained. The argument that like produces like and speed must be developed in the breeding stock is met here with an obstacle that is hard to circumvent.

It is a well-known fact that a mare that has been campaigned to any extent is a shy breeder, seldom getting in foal, and many a man has had the sad experience of taking his regular breeding mares to a stallion with a fast record, paying good money and getting no foal. It is a fact that a horse, during or after a heavy campaign, is not a sure foal-getter. Such being the fact, might not his work prove detrimental instead of beneficial to the foals he does sire?

Don't condemn a sire if he is bred in fashionable and speed-producing lines because he has no record. Judge a horse by his stock and his work in the stud, not upon the track. When his colts shown no sign of speed it is soon enough to shun him; even take the precaution to investigate the breeding qualities of his faster competitor before rushing to him on account of his fast record.—Fairweather in Horse Review.

The Late D. D. Withers' Old Farm.

A rumor has been flying around all the week to the effect that the famous Brookdale Farm of the late D. D. Withers had been sold to Mr. Thompson, who is prominent in the lead trust. The rumor was affirmed, denied and confirmed. The true state of affairs is that the gentleman did negotiate in a mild way for the farm, and the heirs, as usual, told it in the Knickerbocker Club with the strictest injunctions of secrecy, and, as is usual in such cases, the recipients of their confidence could not keep the thing to themselves. A secret burns most men. Anyhow, the affair soon got about and was heralded in the newspapers before it was consummated. The gentleman in question has always been a trotting-horse fancier, but, like many others, he has possibly taken the racehorse fever. He seeks the breeding of racehorses as a diversion for himself and his sons.

That the Withers heirs were disposed to sell Brookdale and the stock was a surprise. Their sale of yearlings last summer was a big success, averaging over $1000 per head, and at its conclusion the heirs said they thought it a good investment, and would rather breed than sell. Events which followed should have strengthened this resolve, as one by one the Withers horses sold at the breaking up of the deceased's racing stable last March began to show high form. Parvenu, Pactolus, Stonenell, St. Michael and Copyright swept all before them. Never during Mr. Withers' lifetime had his stock such success, and horsemen who had formerly reviled his stock agreed that it could not be the blood, but it was defective rearing and handling that had made his horses all crazy, wrong-headed beasts. The Brookdale yearlings next year are sure to sell at terrible prices—they are the rage. Probably the heirs to the estate reason that it is the proper time to sell while the stock is at flood-tide of popularity.

The Brookdale Farm comprises some 800 acres, located four miles from Red Bank, N. J., and six from Monmouth Park, and is one of the most practical affairs in the world. The outbuildings are the reverse of showy, but are models of solidity. A feature is the enclosed buildings, one for colts and the other for fillies as yearlings, where they are put as soon as they are weaned, and can run about all winter long instead of being in box stalls. The stallion stables each have a paddock, and the broodmare boxes and paddocks are models. The grass is good and the water the finest. There is a training track and also an inclosed winter track of over a quarter of a mile, over which horses can be exercised smartly in cold weather.

As to the stock at Brookdale, it never was first-class, but it is good. There are eight stallions: (1) Uucas, bay horse, 1876, by Lexington, dam Coral, by Vandal. (2) Imp. King Ernest, bay horse, 1869, by King Tom, dam Ernestine, by Touchstone. (3) Imp. Stonehenge, bay horse, 1890, by Blair Athol, dam Conubra, by Kingston. (4) Imp. Macaroni, chestnut horse, 1871, by Macaroni, dam Songstress, by Chanticleer. (5) Ventilator, chestnut horse, 1872, by Vandal, dam Caroline, by Imp. Scythian. (6) Imp. Stalwart, bay horse, 1883, by Sterling, dam Sea Mark, by Adventurer. (7) Kinglike, bay horse, 1880, by King Ernest, dam Minnie, by Imp. Eclipse. (8) Centaur, brown horse, 1886, by Sensation, dam Imp. Faverdale, by The Palmer. There are fifty-four mares, including Cadence, Imp. Cyclone, Imp. Sweet Home, Imp. Abundance, Nell, Laura Gould, Imp. Michaelmas, Retribution, Minority, Maxim, Adage, Trill, Necromancy, etc. The above are the dams of Pactolus, Cynosure, Major Domo, Gregory, Stonenell, Kinglet, St. Michael, Contribution, Nonange, Charlie Post, Crochet, Melba and Parvenu, which is saying a great deal.

England Needs American Blood.

It is something exceedingly rare for an English turf writer to confess that America possesses any thoroughbred strains superior to those of that country. But now and then the truth crops out, as may be seen by a perusal of the following article, taken from a recent issue of the London Sportsman:

"Leaving that subject for the time being, with a hope that some others of my readers will favor me with their views, I turn to the question of neglected lines of blood in stud horses. Often and often we have had to regret the absolute extinction, so far as this country goes, of some invaluable blood, and perhaps the case of Glencoe is the most regrettable. It cannot be disputed that it would be well for us if we could have in this country some tall male descendant of the sire of Pocahontas, and I remember looking covetously on the great American horse, Hanover, whom I saw win three races in 1887. He could have been bought well within his value a year or two later, but now he is a fixture at Mr. Milton Young's McGrathiana Stud.

Referring to a book entitled "The Thoroughbred Horse," which the author, Col. S. D. Bruce, has kindly sent me, I note that the pedigree of Hanover is a very interesting one, and just the sort to have made him a successful sire in this country. He is a son of Hindoo, who descends from Glencoe through that horse's best son, Vandal; and this same Vandal is maternal grandsire of Bourbon Belle, Hanover's dam. Bourbon Belle herself is by Bonnie Scotland, a son of Queen Mary, so that on this score alone Hanover would have suited many English mares, while his inbreeding to Glencoe, through Vandal, would have enabled him to bring back the lost blood to us in very potent form. What a good horse he was may be inferred from his record, which is set out in full in the book above-mentioned, as also that of every other well-known American stallion, and in it I note that as a three-year-old Hanover started twenty-seven times and won twenty. It is no use trying to secure him now, but he and his sire, Hindoo, are both flourishing at the stud, and perhaps some one will have sufficient enterprise to bring a good colt or two of theirs to this country. I feel sure that such a venture would be well rewarded. Another line which we have lost is that of Leamington, and for two years past that line has headed the winning sires in America. For 1892 Iroquois, a son of Leamington, occupies the post of honor, and in 1891 old Longfellow, by Leamington, was at the top. Again, glancing at Col. Bruce's book, I see that Longfellow is twenty-six years old, and it is indeed a rare thing for a horse of such an age to be so well represented on the turf. The average age, however, of the American stallions appears to be greater than that of ours. Longfellow is remarkably bred on his dam's side, being closely crossed into Diomed (our first Derby winner), twice through Duroc and twice through Sir Archy. It is worthy of notice, by the way, that Diomed was twenty-nine years old when his son, Sir Archy, was foaled, and twenty-eight at the birth of Duroc. He must have been a wonderful old horse, for it may be remembered he was not sent to America until he had attained an age when most horses nowadays are either dead or useless. We have strangely little of the Leamington blood even on the maternal side in this country. Theophilus, who is out of a granddaughter of Leamington, is the best representative of it at the stud, so far as I can call to mind. It may be hoped that some Iroquois colts will find their way to England to resuscitate the breed."

Breeding Fillies.

In nearly all cases where proper care has been taken in the feeding and management to secure a steady growth and development, it will be best to breed the fillies when they are two-years old, says a writer in The Husbandman. One reason for this is that they will foal their first colt at three years old, with less danger to themselves than when four or five, and in many cases where good care is given a better development will be secured. One advantage with a young filly is that her foal will be smaller, and her bones and muscles will not be knit so closely together, she will have less difficulty or trouble, and there will be less risk of loss.

With fillies as with stock, very much depends upon the earlier management, as it is very often the case that one animal will be in a much better condition to breed at two years than another at three. So the growth and development must always be considered. Of course it is always best to supply such conditions as are best to secure a good growth and development from the start, and when this is done the filly should be bred at two years. However, in nearly all cases it will be best not to breed early. Let them foal after grass has made a good start to grow in the spring, in fact in many cases it will be better to have them come a little late rather than too early. The objection to early foaling is that the young mare will not be able to supply the quantity of milk necessary to secure a good growth of the foals. Grass is one of the very best materials that can be given to breeding animals of any kind to induce a good flow of milk, and breeding so the colts will be foaled when there is plenty of grass, will add materially in this.

Fillies should always be bred to well-matured stallions that have had at least one good season's service. This is a good rule to follow with all classes of stock, mating young dams with older, more matured sires and using the young sires with the more matured dams.

While as a rule it is not desirable to breed a filly at two years when she is not properly developed, it is questionable whether it is advisable to breed an older filly, one that has not made the growth and development that she should, at all. The market for the lower grade of horses is overstocked, and there is no inducement to increase the number, and unless there are good reasons it is questionable if, all things considered, it will not be best not to risk breeding a filly that has been so stunted in her growth and development that she is not fit to breed at what the majority of good breeders considered the best age.

Prospective Stallion Races.

The large number of fast stallions which participated in the regular class races of last season, or obtained fast records against the watch, has opened up a brilliant prospect for a series of great contests during the coming season confined exclusively to stallions. Already four associations are out with large purses or stakes for the free-for-all class, and the leading persons interested are eagerly canvassing the possibilities and the probabilities of the two great time champions of last season meeting in the merry conflict of the race. There can be no doubt that a match between Stamboul and Kremlin, or a race in which they both started, would make the fortune of any meeting. Kremlin's magnificent racing career is a guarantee that he will hold his own in any company. The fact that Stamboul has been sent to Budd Doble's stable would seem to indicate that his owner intends to give a crushing reply to the attacks which have been made on the horse's record. But if this great pair are left out of the calculations there is abundant material, not only for a great free-for-all series, but also for a 2:15 class, in which the time made would be nearly as fast and the contests equally exciting.

The ex-champion, Allerton, 2:09 1/2, is receiving a little work on the snow, and should the bulldog son of Jay Bird stand training he will be out for both greenbacks and glory. His owner is a genuine sportsman, and though he does not like to take his great horse away from home he would probably do so for a big event. It may be looked upon as a certainty, the monarch of Maine, the bandsome Nelson, 2:10, will be eager for battle. Many good judges believe his speed limit has not been touched, and it must be remembered that his record of 2:10 was made to an old-style sulky. What will he do with a bicycle sulky on a good track? Moquette, 2:10, by Wilton, will be a five-year-old. His owner will naturally want him to emulate the five-year-old career of Kremlin, and if so he will have to take his chances in the free-for-all. Arion, 2:10 1/2, is now four years old. He is bred on first-class trotting and staying lines, and if trained for racing should be one of the brightest stars of the season. The bay stallion Lobasco, 2:10 1/2, the race stallion champion, will be a formidable foe in a race, and may yet add fresh laurels to his fame. A competitor of the highest rank is Directum, 2:11 1/2 as a three-year-old in a race. He will be again to the front this season, and young as he is, he will give the fastest of the aged brigade a great race. To these champions and ex-champions must be added Delmarch, 2:11 1/2; Monbars, 2:11 3/4; Fred Wilkes, 2:11 3/4; Regal Wilkes, 2:11 3/4; Constantine, 2:12; Truman, 2:12; Charleston, 2:12 1/2; Czar, 2:12 1/2, and a dozen others between that time and 2:14. There is certainly abundant first-class material for the free-for-all stallion class.

A glance at the speed eligible for a 2:15 stallion class will show that it should result in a great race or a series of races if closed early in the season. Cbeyenne, 2:14 1/2, by Nutbourne, is a true and game performer. Bonny Wilmore, 2:14, by Wilmore, should also be a strong candidate. Then there are Inca, 2:14 1/2, by Inca; Faustino, 2:14 1/2, by Sidney, and Dr. Sparks, 2:14 3/4, all below 2:15. At 2:15 there are Alcyon, by Alcyone; Balkan, by Mambrino Wilkes; Pennant, by Abe Downing; Daly, by General Benton, and Simmocolon, by Simmons. At 2:15 1/2 there are Grelander, Sprigue, Golddust and George St. Clair. From this time up to 2:17 there are a dozen more well-bred stallions which will probably be put in 1893. Here are two classes which should fill well at the big meetings. Where, however, owing to location, clashing dates or other special reasons, there is a reasonable doubt of filling these stallion classes, if the ordinary classes are substituted a fair proportion of stallions will be secured and the mares and geldings will do their full share in filling up the lists.—Spirit of the Times.

WESTERN critics claim that the two-year-old crop of this year will prove exceptionally strong, and that the list of nominations for the Melbourne Stakes, at Lexington, contains the names of several that will, barring accidents, surely make their mark. Pearl Long (full brother to Pearl Set); Fondolin, by Fonso, dam Mandolin, owned by Byron McClelland; the gray colt by Longfellow, dam Aconite, and Aileen, by George Kinney, dam Allegro, are specially mentioned as being extremely promising. Among the other animals Major Thomas' three-year-old Longfellow filly, Rejection, is said to have wintered particularly well. That she showed good private form was amply evidenced by the fact that it was thought worth the trouble and expense to bring her East for the Futurity, though she was not among the starters because she contracted cold on the journey. Elizabeth L. also flatters Mr. Landeman, and bids fair to do fully as well in her three-year-old as in her two-year-old form.

J. O'NEILL, a Western bookmaker, arrived here from San Francisco during the week, and will probably make a book at the track later on. He tells me the betting on the races at San Francisco is heavier than it is here, money being more plentiful, while some of the speculators out there are plungers. O'Neill is interested in the American Derby book recently opened in Chicago, Joe Ullman being another partner. It looks as if there would be a big play in the book, judging by the investments already made.—New Orleans Cor Daily Spirit.

Ripans Tabules cure colic.

A Successful Breeder's Observations.

Looking over the articles that appeared a few years ago with reference to breeding the trotter one cannot but smile at the different theories accounting for extreme speed. One of the first to attract special attention was the imp. Messenger craze, when pedigrees were tabulated with but one object in view, viz., to see how many times his name appeared in them. Then came the thoroughbred and anti-thoroughbred advocates. Still later the pacing cross was thought by many to be absolutely necessary. One enthusiast discarded pedigrees altogether and took a tape-line to make his selections. Others insisted on developed speed in both dam and sire. With these different theories advocated by brilliant turf writers is it any wonder the beginners were confused in locating and selecting?

One prominent writer a few years ago attributed Kentucky's superiority in speed producing to her blue grass and limestone water, but California stepped to the front without them, not because of her superior blood or methods, but on account of her climate being adapted to early maturity.

This season Nebraska has proven by better care and training her ability to send out two world-beaters and a yearling trotter to beat 2:30, even if prairie hay and grass are used.

Like most other theories in the trotting horse business, to the dismay of the Messenger advocates, along came Karus without his blood and took the world's record from Goldsmith Maid. Then Palo Alto (one-half thoroughbred) set the stallion mark at 2:08 $\frac{1}{2}$, to again be lowered by Stamboul (no thoroughbred) to 2:07 $\frac{1}{2}$, while Jay-Eye-See took the world's record for geldings, and proves he is pacing-bred by taking a pacing record of 2:06 $\frac{1}{2}$.

To more confuse the theorists we find Mascot, by a son of Hambletonian, hold's the world's record for pacers, with Direct in third place, Flying Jib fourth and Jay-Eye-See fifth. Direct is by a son of a full brother to Dexter. Flying Jib by a son of Almont and Jay-Eye-See by Dexter's brother.

Continuing we find the one and two-year-old pacing records held by the get of Shadeland Onward, 2:18 $\frac{1}{2}$, the three-year-old by a son of Nutwood, 2:18 $\frac{1}{2}$, and four-year-old by a son of Steinway, 2:23 $\frac{1}{2}$, out of a daughter of Anteeo, 2:16 $\frac{1}{2}$. Here are instances where each one's theories are correct, and again proven incorrect.

It would seem as though the developed speed advocates have the best of it, but if we admit this theory the correct one all novelty in the breeding business would be lost, for if the fastest sire when coupled with the fastest mare would produce the fastest foal it would only be a question of dollars and cents who owned the stake-winners. This certainly shows the wisdom of Divine Providence, as it gives the breeder with limited capital an equal chance with the wealthy one.

Before we can breed extreme speed to a certainty we would have to have the laws of nature changed, so that each foal of the extreme speed-producing dam would be of the same size, with bone, muscle and vital organs to exactly correspond. Then they would speed just the same, as watches or locomotives built at the same manufactory.

Science is no more likely to reveal secrets of this kind than it would be to delegate the power to man to control sex, and we can readily see it was never intended to give us in this way the opportunity to breed any family of domestic animals from the face of the earth. We have read many well-written articles with reference to controlling the sex, but about the time the second or third party was giving his experience, we find the results were just the opposite to the theory.

The weather prophets have just as short runs of popular favor, for common sense teaches us that if we could foretell storms or dry weather accurately, that the poor man would be at the mercy of the rich, as they could employ all the spare help and put in their crops in good condition while the poor one would loose or have his damaged. The same would apply to our steamship and rail service. In good weather they would be overtaxed and in bad compelled to run at a loss. Old Prob, with all the modern appliances assisted by electricity, makes many mistakes even in guessing for one day. Likewise the trained eye of a practical horseman may select what in conformation and gait may warrant extreme speed, but nothing but the skilled hand of a trainer will prove just how much it has, and while the most likely place to find extreme speed is in families possessing it, it is nothing but a lottery, and the capital prize will continue to be distributed to different individuals each year. This is just what makes the business fascinating.

There are some things connected with the trotting-horse business that should be corrected. One of the most important being time records. The more common anything becomes the cheaper it can be purchased. If the present number of 2:30 performers increases proportionately each year there will be one for each road-driver in a short time. The standard craze has been the inciting cause for taking records without a consideration, and if we mistake not the time has arrived when most men will wish they had them off. There are but two sources of revenue left for speed horses—service money and purse winnings—and those without records will be of the most value, especially for the foreign markets. The breeder who shapes his business to meet the change in times will be likely to reap a rich harvest. Use the knife, then one-tenth part of the money required to develop speed will shape the gelding for a useful road horse. To do this drive him regularly and long enough at a time to quiet him, that he may learn to speed without pulling; make him familiar with steam and road use in cities, so that he can be driven by ladies or gentlemen. In this way road-driving would be made fashionable, as nothing drives away family or business cares like a spin behind a speedy family horse in a friendly contest. At present it is next to impossible to get a safe, handsome, well-broken driving horse with speed at a reasonable figure, as they are generally knocked to pieces in trying to make campaigners, and in most instances wind up by taking a tin-cup record and a place in a combination sale.

Every horse should be compelled to take his record in races over an association track employing a professional starter, supplied with a timing clock with a large dial to be hung in front of the judges' stand in full view of spectators, started by him when the word is given, and stopped by him at finish of mile. This would not only keep many out but place all on an equal footing and above suspicion, as the starter would have to be competent and honest to get future engagements.

While we are making suggestions as to timing, would also suggest that one judge decide the heats and race. Give him assistants with field glasses, and clerks to note positions, breaks, etc., then if any complaints are made the clerk's book would show the number and length of breaks, so that positions could be assigned in accordance with them.

A very important position is that of patrol judge. The past season we have seen the dust so dense on the first stretch of a kite track that it was impossible from the judges' stand to tell whether a horse was running or trotting, and owing to the incompetency of the patrol the horses had to be placed as they finished, much to the disgust of those who trotted all the way.

Another source of dissatisfaction is the power giving judges the right to decide when it is too dark to trot. If sundown was made the time to suspend trotting for the day, except by mutual consent of all interested, it would stop many bitter wrangles.—Edward Pyle in the Horseman.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SANTA ROSA, Feb. 20, 1893.—The sporting event here last week was the great football game at South Park base ball grounds, between the Napa team and the Santa Rosa team. Each team was composed of picked men, and the game came off Saturday in the presence of a big crowd. That it was pretty hotly contested is seen from the fact that neither side scouted a point. The Napa team comprised Harry Roberts, Nathan Coydon, Chas. King, Ed. Clark, Joe Head, D. Davis, Chas. Van Winkle, Craf Mackay, Will Emery, Frank Horstmeyer and Lester Drake. The Santa Rosa boys treated our visitors well and may play them a return game in the near future.

A large number of our sports turned out to see Peter Jackson, the Australian fighter, make his debut as an actor here this week. They agree that he is a better actor than Sullivan, the erstwhile champion.

Our horsemen are waking up again. Not that they have been very much asleep lately, but the fine weather and a good track "enthusies" them greatly and their pent up enthusiasm breaks loose in the form of a red-hot little race at the track, now and then. Once a week the habitues of the track get together to witness a race between some local "phenoms," and, judging from some of the ponderous observations we hear, they extract considerable solid comfort from the smart little contests.

William McGraw has moved Silas Skinner and the rest of his stock to his stables on E street. His Skinner Jr. is one of the most promising young horses seen hereabout for some time.

I. DeTurk has not yet taken his trotters from their splendid cycloramic stables near his big winery to the track. By the way, the boys say that Locke is shaping up Myrtle, 2:19 $\frac{1}{2}$, Yulupa and John L. rapidly. The last two named are stallions by Anteeo, and they are both good movers.

Sunset, 2:29 $\frac{1}{2}$, has a very promising representative in John Scroggans three-year-old. It is to be hoped Sunset will be put to training again this season. The last season he was trained he showed himself to be heroic, and for the work he had made excellent time.

March & Robinson have sold their gilt-edged colt, Illustrator, by Illustrious. He is now the property of ex-Senator Fair, and has been taken to his ranch near Sonoma. This colt will be heard from.

Stone's yearling by Illustrious, dam Tilton Maid, grandam by John Nelson, is a remarkable animal. It is 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ hands high, is only nine months old, and trots like clock-work. Stone's four-year-old by Illustrious, dam Irene, by Irwin Davis, is said to be very speedy.

John Pender bought two good ones a few days ago. One is a three-year-old, sired by Director. She has been worked a little and seems to be full of speed. The other is a five-year-old, sired by Dexter Prince. This is a very handsome filly, and goes away like the wind.

Mart Rollins has an equine gem in Edith Mc, a filly sired by Mountain Boy, dam Lou Milton. This filly is clean-cut enough to suit the most critical, and when she reaches the age for business Mr. Rollins will certainly have a bit of horse-flesh worthy of any breeder's pride. Mr. Rollin's great colt, Red Chief, is developing finely. This fellow is built for speed and to stay the route and has enough vim and energy for two common horses. His owner says he goes so fast that he is almost afraid to hustle him.

Mr. Rollins has great faith in Silver Bow. This faith has been strengthened since he took hold of Allen's Silver Bow two-year-old, dam by Alliance. This youngster had not been driven but a few times before she reeled of a quarter in forty-two seconds.

Dr. Long's horses are all in good condition. The Montana Wilkes have a good many admirers in and around Santa Rosa.

We took a look at Pierce Bros. recent additions one day this week, piloted by Richard Breeze, the young man who came here with the horses from the Hobart stock sale. "Dick," as he is called, is an exceptionally well-posted young horseman. He has been "around" a good deal and is anything but a tenderfoot. But he is modest and retiring and lets his work talk for him. He looks after a large number of the new arrivals, and one after another he showed them to us. A number of the new arrivals are expected to foal this week, and from the number of mares in foal on the grounds we think Superintendent Bonner and his men will have a very lively time welcoming the youngsters this spring. The mares all have nice comfortable quarters and receive the very best of attention. Pierce Bros. certainly have some very superior stock, and they are showing their faith in the trotting horse in a very substantial way.

We have recently had the pleasure of observing the method adopted by Geo. W. Bleil in preparing youngsters and other horses for public auction. He is now preparing the Asylum track for the sale at the Bay District track. "Shorty," as he is known to turfmen, was educated in his trade, and proceeds with the same methodical certainty in subduing the colt to his desire and breaking him to lead as a watch-maker prefers a watch that he knows will run. He does most of his training from his riding horse, and the little fellows seem to know that it is their place to be right up along or slightly in front of the galloping driver, but maintain their natural-bred gait. Those who attend the sales will enjoy a treat in witnessing the skill of Mr. Bleil in showing up the stock.

There is, indeed, some royally-bred stock among the 150 to be sold: Fillies by Simocolon, Stamboul, Sable Wilkes, Balkan, Dawn, Rupee, Gen. Benton, Alcona Jr., Oaknut, Privater, Grand Moor, Eclectic, Director Jr., Gaviota, Soudan, Silver Bow, Almonition, James Madison, Ulster Wilkes, Secretary and others. And broodmares! Well, there is Pansy, bred by General Withers of Kentucky, (by Cassius M. Clay Jr., from Lady Richelieu), dam of Almonition, King Orry and a two-year-old that Mr. Salisbury has entered in all the richest Eastern stakes the coming season. Then there is Veronica, record 2:29; Kittie Almont, 2:22 $\frac{1}{2}$; by Tilton Almont, and Gracie by Werner's Hamlet. Also Fan, dam of Cricket, 2:32, and Patchwork, 2:30; Fancy, the dam of Gus Wilkes, 2:22; Kate, the dam of Joe, 2:29 $\frac{1}{2}$; and Alden W., 2:29, and many trained roadsters and choice broodmares near foaling time by many of the best stallions of the State. PUBLICS.

Sundries.

[Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

Everybody seems to admit, more or less, "that the bottom has dropped out of the trotting-horse business." I wish to insist that it has not. I believe I have made the same claim in a former article, and my apology for saying it a second time is that the truth cannot be told too often. The earning capacity of the trotter is greater than it ever has been, and the earning capacity of the trotter is on the increase, that is, more of it. If, under such conditions, the bottom would fall out of any business, "truth would be a lie." The scales have fallen from the eyes of some people and more people. The horse breeder, as well as the small breeder, has learned that he cannot raise a thousand-dollar colt from a two-hundred-dollar mare, and he has learned that a filly sired by the great sire who has twenty-five performers in the list out of a mare whose pedigree is explained by an invitation to "take some clams," is not the thing to raise a stock horse from. The day of $500 to $1,000 for weeds at a weeding-out sale is past, but that has nothing to do with the price of real trotters. It is true that a well-bred weed will produce a trotter, but it is a misfortune to a man to get one that way. It is just as much a misfortune to a man to get a success from a poorly-bred horse with a record, because it will start him on a hunt that will bring him twenty failures to one success. Many people, by seeing so many weeds sell at low prices, will be deterred from breeding this year. But if they have mares that are not ultra-fashionable, now is the best time that they will ever see to breed up, because stallion services never were so low, quality considered, and it is as it were starting into the business when prices are at the bed rock. They should not be expecting to get high prices for their colts, but the fillies will be worth breeding to the best in the land if they breed right this year. One of our bright young breeders, lately returned from the East, remarked that a gelding was worth than a stallion unless he was first-class or near to it.

That is one of the most encouraging facts. But it will still remain that the owner of the ordinary stallion will persuade himself that his horse is a great one, and the world will know it in due time. A man had much better breed one mare and pay $100 than to breed three and pay $50 each. If he has three mares he had better sell two of them and breed one. If he can't keep a good one out of the three, let him sell the three and get one good one. Our great friend, Wallace, has advised us to do that for five years past. He foresaw what has come, that it was a great law of nature—"the survival of the fittest." The small breeder must do just what the large breeder does. He must discard his trash, no matter about the price, and let me say right here that many a man will drop the business and in a few years see that now was the very time he should have kept on. A man can take a catalogue of some of the great sales and look it over carefully and see what there is in it that he would buy at a price, say of $500, for a young mare as filly. Reject all that do not come up to that estimate. Then let him sit down and honestly analyze his own pedigrees. A man never gets into so good a position as when he gets right on his own business. I should like to speak of some horses and the prices they stand at, but people are so sensitive that I would stir up a hornet's nest, but I will speak of some characteristics. There are horses that have broad, full heads that look like stud horses, as far as you can see them. If they are well-balanced, good pedigree and trotters, they will produce trotters. But if a full brother to this horse has a delicate head and looks all over like a gelding, he will produce few trotters.

There are many such trotters of low records that are indifferent producers, and their produce will breed on with more indifference. All the great producers are eminently strong-looking horses. The most deceitful thing in a trotter to tie to is a record. There are but four sons of Hambletonian 10 of any pretensions as producers that have standard records. He did not have one himself. He has twenty great sons without standard records. Severe campaigning is the worst of all accomplishments for a stallion to have. There are a few who have lived down the affects of it, but look at the blasted hopes of those who have bred to the great campaigners as a rule. If you can't breed to a producer, breed to the son; aye, and the grandson of a producer, an even-sized horse, strong and compactly built, with a strong, broad head and a bright, prominent eye. He who breeds to a light-barreled horse will regret and wonder why he don't succeed, and even if he get fair results from the first generation he will lose on the second. Large legs and sharp backbones shun as you would the razor-backed hog—although that type of hog is the fastest known, it will never do in a stallion. There are such horses standing in this State for service, and many more growing up. Be strong in the belief that he who weeds out till he has nothing but what is well-bred and a good individual left, and breeds to the best (in the light of the rule of producers), be the individual strong and compact, will get a price that will be remunerative by the time his colt is old enough to put on the market. PRO PUBLICO.

MR. CHARLES G. FAIR left for San Francisco last night. Yesterday he backed his two American Derby candidates Dare and Floodgate, in the Ulman-Eckert book, backing Dare to the tune of $500 to $12,500 and Floodgate $250 against $10,000. Other transactions in the book yesterday were $30,000 to $60 against Hasty, laid to his owner; John Gray, $6,000 to $30 Johanna, $10,000 to $100 Boundless, $15,000 to $5 Oak Forest, $5,000 to $50 Buck McCann, $3,000 to $40 The Baron, $1,200 to $20 Spartan, $3,000 to $150 Hugh Penny, $2,500 to $40 The Reaper, $5,000 to $100 Evanatus, $900 to $15 Eltham Queen, $5,000 to $10 Antrim Acid, $2,800 to $70 Lookout.—Chicago Inter Ocean, Feb. 12.

A COUPLE of thoroughbred brood mares, belonging to Mr. James R. Keene, were shipped from Lexington, Ky., last week, to Tennessee, to be bred to imp. St. Blaise. They were Lilly R. by imp. Glenelg, out of Florence, by Lexington, and Ella T. by War Dance, out of Bonoie Kate, by imp. Knight of St. George. These are two of the most noted brood mares in that locality. Lilly R. was the dam of Chaos, who won the Futurity in 1889, and Ella T. produced Banquet, Tea Tray and other fine performers.

How to Breed Them

It is a well-known fact that success in breeding horses cannot be attained in each and every case by approved and judicious crossing. But the great examples that have been left to us by the records prove that certain crosses in a large majority of cases have brought forth the greatest performers as well as the greatest producers.

Waxy, the first Derby winner from the Eclipse—Pot-8-os line, and who is the head of the Stockwell and Touchstone families, was an Eclipse and Herod cross, his dam being Maria, by Herod.

Whalebone, his best son, was Eclipse and Matchem cross, his dam being Penelope, by Trumpator; his son Camel was Eclipse and Herod blood, his dam being a daughter of Selim.

Touchstone was by Camel, dam Bunter, by Master Henry. Here we have the doubling of Eclipse blood, coming down on the dam's side through King Fergus, Beningsbrough and Orville.

Newminster and Lord Clifden both were Eclipse and Matchem crosses. Orlando was Eclipse and Herod, and so was Hermit, being out of Seclusion, by Tadmor, running back to Sir Peter, by Highflyer, by Herod.

Musket, the greatest sire in the Touchstone line since the days of Newminster, was Eclipse and Matchem blood, his dam being a daughter of West Australian, who was the greatest performer of the Matchem line.

Whalebone's greatest producing offspring was Stockwell, an Eclipse and Herod cross, being out of Pocahontas, by Glencoe.

Bend Or, the sire of Ormonde, is Eclipse and Herod or Matchem blood, his dam being Rouge Rose, who was by Thormanby, who was by Windhound or Melbourne.

Ormonde is Eclipse and Herod, being out of Lily Agnes, who is by Macaroni, by Sweetmeat—Gladiator.

Faugh-a-Ballagh was Eclipse and Herod cross, his dam being Guiccioli by Bob Booty. Leamington, his best performer as well as producing son, was the Eclipse and Herod cross, his dam being by Pantaloom—Castrel, Buzzard, Woodpecker and Herod.

Iroquois, winner of both Derby and St. Leger, who must be looked upon as the best performer of Leamington's sons, is the Eclipse and Matchem cross, his dam being Maggie B. B., by Australian, by West Australian.

Longfellow is Eclipse and Herod cross. Bonnie Scotland was the Eclipse and Herod cross, being out of Queen Mary, who was by Gladiator, and his best son, Luke Blackburn, is Eclipse and Herod blood.

Glencoe was Eclipse and Herod cross, his dam being Babta, who was by the great Kingston, who was by Venison, one of the greatest horses of his time.

Billet was an inbred Eclipse, being of the Eclipse—Blacklock line, and his dam, Calcutta, by Flatcatcher, by Touchstone on to Eclipse through Whalebone and Pot-8-os.

King Ban was Eclipse and Herod or Matchem. His dam, Atlantis, was by Thormanby, who was by Melbourne or Windhound.

Ban Box was Eclipse and Herod blood. Australian was Matchem and Eclipse; Harry O'Fallon, his best bred son, is Matchem and Eclipse, his dam, Sunny South, being by Birdcatcher.

Spendthrift is Matchem and Herod, and his son Kingston is Matchem and Eclipse; his dam, Kapanga, is in the Touchstone line, the same cross that produced West Australian, and Lamplighter is bred the same way.

Darebin is Matchem and Herod blood; the sire of Darebin is the Peer, who was by Melbourne, and his dam is by Traducer, by The Libel, by Pantaloon.

Glencoe was the Herod and Eclipse cross, and his best son, Vandal, was also an Herod and Eclipse—his dam going back through the Blacklock strain to Eclipse, while the dam of Glencoe traced to Eclipse through Tramp.

Hanover is Herod and Eclipse—his dam being Bourbon, Belle, by Bonnie Scotland. Galopin, the great performer and the greatest producer of any of his progenitors from King Fergus down, is the produce of inbred Eclipse on Herod blood. His sire, Vedette, was Eclipse on bottom and top, and his sire, Voltigeur, was also Eclipse on both sides, while the dam of Galopin, Flying Dutchess, was by Flying Dutchman, by Bay Middleton—Sultan.

Salvator is Eclipse and Herod blood, while his sire was an inbred Eclipse, being by Blair Athol, and his dam was Eastern Princess, by Surplice, a son of Touchstone.

Most of the great brood mares and those that raced as well have been the produce of outcrosses.

Penelope, the dam of Whalebone, Whisker, Web and Wire, was Matchem and Herod blood. Eleanor, the first mare to win the Derby, was Eclipse and Herod.

Pocahontas, the dam of Stockwell, Rataplan, King Tom, Anracaria and Ayacanora, was Herod and Eclipse.

Cobweb, the winner of the 1,000 Guineas and Oaks, and the dam of Bay Middleton, was Herod and Matchem cross.

Crucifix, winner of the 1,000 Guineas and Oaks, and the dam of Surplice, was of Eclipse and Herod blood. Martha Lynn, dam of Voltigeur, was Eclipse and Herod cross and Queen Mary was Herod and Eclipse, and her daughter, Blink Bonny, winner of the Derby, and the dam of Blair Athol, a Derby winner, was Matchem and Herod cross.

Reel, the dam of Lecompte, Priores and Starke, was Herod and Eclipse cross.

If these records prove anything, it is that the best results have been from outcrosses between the blood of Eclipse, Herod and Matchem, and that the best performers as well as producers from the Stockwell line have come from Herod mares, and the Melbournes have come from mares of the Touchstone blood, as West Australian, Kingston and Lamplighter.

The grandest performer living in the Touchstone line is Carbine, and he is an inbred Eclipse, but Nordenfeldt, who was a first-class performer and has proved himself a first-class producer, is an Eclipse and Herod cross, his dam being Onyx, by Angler, by Fisherman, and, with the exception of Carbine, the best of the Touchstone line have been from outcrosses, like Newminster, Lord Clifden, Orlando and Hermit.

The greatest racers in the Herod line, with the exception of Bay Middleton and Wild Dayrell, who were inbred, have been outcrosses, such as Venison, Glencoe, Sweetmeat, Kingston, The Libel, Fisherman, Buccaneer and See-Saw. The fastest of the line was Buccaneer, who was Herod and Eclipse through Tramp. Buccaneer ran a mile thirty years ago in 1:38. Venison and Fisherman were probably the greatest. Venison was Herod and Matchem, and Fisherman was Herod and Eclipse, through his dam, Mainbrace, by Sheet Anchor, Lottery and Tramp, the same breeding as Buccaneer.

If outcrossing is the best, how necessary is it then that we should preserve the blood of Matchem and Herod in the different descending lines, and in the purest of blood, for it has been the custom for the last thirty years, since the blood of Eclipse has swept everything before it, to drop the inferior blood of Matchem and Herod; but good and healthy breeding cannot be kept up without these outcrosses.

We have now in the country three stallions from the Matchem line who have no blood of the bush stock in them at all; they are Darebin, Harry O'Fallon and the new importation, Oddfellow, by Barcadine, and there are some roald ones from the Herod line, such as Discourt, by Discord—See-Saw—Buccaneer; Sir Modred, by Traducer—The Libel—Pantaloon; Dutch Skipper, by Dutch Skater, on to the Flying Dutchman, Bay Middleton and Sultan.

The Ute Chief, by Maximilian, Macaroni—Sweetmeat—Gladiator and Partisan, and his dam is in the line to Pocahontas, being Angela, by Lord Lyon, out of Lady Inglis, by Ely, a son of Kingston out of Heroine of Lucknow, by Nutwith out of Pocahontas.

ST. GEORGE.

Decision of Board of Appeals.

In the matter of the Stamboul record of 2:07 1/2, made at Stockton November 23, 1892, and other records made between October 13, 1892, and November 23, 1892, investigated by the Board of Appeals for the Pacific District of the National Trotting Association.

We find that the meeting held at Stockton between October 13th and November 23, 1892, inclusive, was duly and regularly advertised to commence on the 13th and to continue as long as the weather would permit, that there were two purses hung up by the Association, and entries duly made for the record races; that the races were regularly adjourned from day to day and the announcement of adjournment made from the judges' stand; that notices of the races were in the daily papers; gate money collected at the gate, judges regularly on the stand, drivers weighed in and out, and the rules of the National Trotting Association faithfully observed.

That on November 23d, the day on which Stamboul made the record of 2:07 1/2, was an adjourned meeting, that on that day gate money was charged at the gate, the judges were in the stand, two timers, Mr. Covey and Mr. Thompson, men of unquestioned reliability, were selected and acted as timers, that the race was after 10 A. M., and the reported time, 2:07 1/2, was justly and fairly made, and so reported and announced from the judges' stand, that the driver of Stamboul carried the required weight, and that after the race no doubt was expressed or objection made as to the correctness or fairness of the time.

We find that the judges' book was signed by Langford and Parker, and by La Rue for Kearney by authority given La Rue by Kearney, shortly after the time was announced and before the parties left the track.

We believe that the effort subsequently made to discredit the time was made for a malicious and dishonest purpose, and we find the charge is not supported by any reliable evidence, but that parties active in making the charge are implicated in a conspiracy to levy blackmail.

We find that the record of 2:07 1/2 made by Stamboul at Stockton on November 23, 1892, together with all other records made at Stockton between October 13, 1892, and November 23, 1892, as shown by the judges' books of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Association, were justly and fairly made under the rules of the National Trotting Association, and all such records must stand as true and correct records, and it is so ordered.

It is further ordered that John A. McCloud and John S. Kearney be and are hereby suspended, and that Henry M. McHugh be and is hereby expelled.

Dated this 17th day of February, A. D. 1893.

N. T. SMITH, Chairman, J. D. CARR.

[Attest] FRANK SHAY, Secretary.

Australian Notes.

Baccleigh, by Goldsborough, won the New Year's Gift. Warara, by Goldsborough, won the Welter Handicap at Sydney.

Norbert, by Goldsborough, won the Hopetown Cup at Melbourne. Twenty-one starters.

Brookleigh, by Goldsborough (sire of Merriwa), won the Welter Handicap of $1,000 at Sydney.

Nihilist, by Suwarrow, won the Ladies' Bracelet, Rosehill, Sydney. One mile. Twelve starters.

Moscow, by Suwarrow (W. O' B. Macdonough's), won the Welter Handicap at Maribyrnong, Melbourne.

Lord Coxcomb, by Chesterfield, ran second in Williams-town Hurdle race, one and a half miles; 127 pounds. Second in hurdle race, Moonee Valley.

Templestone, by Chesterfield (Dr. Bowhill's), ran fourth in Standish Handicap (one of the great events) in a field of eighteen, and third in the Lyndhurst Handicap.

Brookleigh, a three-year-old colt, by Goldsborough, carried 131 pounds at Sydney, and won a seven-furlong dash (on a turf track, of course), in 1:28 1/2—one of the best performers on record in Australia; weight and age considered.

Gaytime, by Newminster (son of The Marquis, sire of Loyalist and Chesterfield), dam Pastime, won a seven-furlong race at Sydney; also, a mile selling race and the Disposal Stakes, seven furlongs; won the Bookmakers' Purse, Rosehill, one and one-half miles, one hundred yards, and second Moorefield Handicap, one and one-fourth miles.

Veno, by Idalion (A. B. Spreckels'), ran second in the Villiers Stakes, Sydney, in a field of ten, beaten by three-quarters of a length. Six furlongs. Second in Carrington Stakes, $3,750, in a field of twenty-seven, beaten by a head; six furlongs; 1:16 1/2. Third in New Year's Gift Handicap in a field of twenty-six; six furlongs in 1:16; one length between first and third. These are among the most important stakes run at Sydney.

The death of the famous sire Sylvia, the dam of Robin Hood, Martini-Henry, Goldsborough, and other good performers, is reported from New Zealand. Sylvia was bred by Mr. Hurtle Fisher in 1864. She was got by imported Fisherman, her dam imported Juliet, by Touchstone out of Lancashire Witch, by Tomboy—Kite (grandam of Orlando, by Bustard). Goldsborough was her first foal, and was dropped in 1870, Robin Hood in 1872, and Curlew (dam of Whimbrel) in 1874. After her purchase (with Onyx) by the Auckland Stud Company at the figure of £3,000, she produced Martini-Henry to Musket in 1880. Martini-Henry was sold to the late Mr. J. White for 1,250 guineas, and he made himself famous by winning the V. R. C. Derby and Melbourne Cup in 1883.

THE GUN.

Retrospection.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

When weary and worn with the rowing,
Against the swift current of Time;
Whose billows in anger are showing,
Their tiger-like spirit of crime;
In deep sullen growths all about me
Are leaping with snarls upon deck
And glare in their ferocious and mock me
And claim my frail craft for a wreck.
Yet, 's'p'ite of it all I am fearless,
Though catching no gleam from the shore;
About me all threatening and cheerless,
I love to cease pulling, my oar.

To drift idly backward and leeward
And lie again calmly at rest,
Where youth's favored winds, blowing seaward,
Awoke fondest hopes in my breast,
Again through the woodlands and sea-lands,
To wander in peace all alone,
Or, down on the bright golden sea-sands,
To list to the wild hillows moan;
To lie in the meadows and smother,
Regrets with the clover blooms sweet,
Where often in youth with another,
Love rendered our wand'rings complete.

There again to watch the kine nipping,
The grasses hejeweled with dew;
The barn-swallows gracefully dipping,
In the waves where the pond-lilies grew.
To stroll o'er the lawn 'neath the arches,
Where clambered the sweet-blooming vine;
With footsteps to slow-measured marches,
While drinking of memories' wine.
If years with their burden of sorrows,
Do naught but endear the fond past,
How sweet will be all of the 'morrrows,
With old scenes preserved 'til the last.

How painfully sweet to my vision,
Are all the loved scenes of my youth;
I knew them when every decision,
Was founded alone upon truth.
Before the foul dust of long travel,
Had ground its way into my soul;
Before the rough stones and hard gravel
I'd trod, on the way to the goal,
And I love my youth's innocent viewing,
Forgetting the pain and the tears;
Which followed my young life's undoing—
The rape of my innocent years.

On the Great Plains.

It was in the spring of 1867 that a number of restless and adventuresome spirits concluded that the uneventful ways of peace were all too tame for their love of excitement, which had been engendered by the four years' service through which they had but recently passed in the active service of the rebellion. It was agreed by seven of us, all old comrades in the army, that we should cross the plains and visit the world-renowned fields of fortune in California. The early spring found us at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on the Missouri. Here we remained for some weeks awaiting the starting of an overland train, for in those days it required quite a body of men to traverse the plains together in order to be able to protect themselves against the Indians, who, at the time of which we speak, were bent on murder and plunder whenever opportunity was afforded them, or, in other words, whenever a band of emigrants were found in numbers small enough to insure the red devils a victory. The Indian is a cautious, cowardly sneak, and in those days would never attack a party of whites unless every circumstance favored them.

In the course of some three weeks some thirty teams had collected, numbering about three men to the team, all well armed and in every way equipped for the long and arduous effort which lay before us. Many of the teams were composed of six, and even eight, cattle, while a majority were of horses and mules. The start was delayed so that the grass might afford good grazing for the stock as we moved along.

Our immediate party had two teams and two extra saddle horses, and we were fitted out in every way complete for the journey, and owing to the fact that we had all "smelled powder," were looked upon by the rest of the company as very important factors in the contemplated journey. At length the time for movement arrived, and our first day was spent in crossing the turbulent and muddy Missouri and drawing our heavily loaded wagons through the horrible streets of Omaha. This latter place was as tough and uncouth a frontier town as ever the continent has known. The streets were literally quagmires, and the low, rambling shanties were little more than excuses for shelter where outfitting goods and poor whisky was furnished for about the only good thing in the town—prices.

The muddy condition of the streets, if such they may be called, recalls the humorous lines of John G. Saxe, the poet, who visited the place about this time, and who gave expression to his impressions of the place as follows:

"Hast ever been to Omaha,
Where rolls the dark Missouri down;
Where four strong horses scarce can draw
An empty wagon through the town?"

"Where prices take your appetite
And bedbugs break your rest profound;
Where all the shanties are about,
And all the stonemasons are aground?"

"'Tis as a warning that I speak,
In truth this is just as I found it;
Stranger, if it lies in your way,
For God Almighty's sake, go around it!"

Omaha's appearance to-day gives a radically different impression from the above, but the above was true of that day. It was a weary and tired lot of men, to say nothing of the condition of the women and children of the party, when that evening we encamped in a hollow to the west of the town, but camp was soon struck, and in short order the ever-ready camp coffee was boiling and sending out its most welcome odor.

Supper over and the order for the night being arranged, the camp was soon asleep. It was just as necessary for a guard at this time as at any time during our journey, for the robbers and cut-throats hanging about frontier towns were as greatly to be feared as the wild devils of the plains.

The first few days of our journey were uneventful, about the only diversion found was in an attempt to counteract and nip in the bud, so to speak, the development of that peculiar form of cussedness which hardship is apt to develop in many natures which, under other circumstances, would never be known to exist.

We established a rigid military code of laws for the government of the train, and they were executed to the letter, as one man at least could attest were he reincarnated and could remember the transaction in which he played unwillingly the leading part, being hung from the points of two wagon tongues, the wagons being run close together so as to give sufficient elevation to the tongues when forming an inverted V. The crime for which he was hung was for stealing provisions when we were all on short allowance, and for breaking open the medicine chest and drinking the only remaining flask of liquor which was being sacredly preserved for medicinal purposes.

Severe measures are necessary under such circumstances and not a tear was shed for the wretch who committed, what to us then seemed and what I still believe under the circumstances to have been a crime of the most heinous nature and very properly punished with death. We were camped by a small diverging stream which led into the Platte but a short distance below. Here we were resting for a day in order to permit our worn horses and cattle to secure a much needed rest and recuperate their wasted energies by grazing on the excellent grass which there grew in abundance. We were scattered about camp each busy in his own way when our attention was called, by one of the more observant of our party, to some moving objects to the northward. Mounting one of the substantially covered wagons, I turned my field glasses upon what appeared but little else than a cloud of dust, waving along the ground. In an instant I discerned that the dust-cloud was raised by a frantically moving herd of buffalo which were being pursued by hunters on horse back. I at once conveyed the startling news to all about, and the order was given to secure and corral our stock at once. The danger, nay, certainty that it would join in the wild stampede of the buffalos and he trapped to death or irretrievably lost. This was soon accomplished and everything in the nature of a weapon was secured ready for slaughtering some of the royal game should the opportunity occur.

On came the buffalo, the thunder of their tramping rolling over the prairie for thousands of yards ahead of the dashing herd. Nearer and nearer they came and now we could distinguish the separate animals and hear the quick, sharp reports of the carbines in the hunter's hands who were harassing the flanks of the herd and pouring in the deadly shot as rapidly as possible.

Now they come thundering down toward our camp but are seen to be going to our right, where they struck the stream about fifteen yards from us. Down upon them we rushed and as they were compelled to climb an abrupt bank of several feet in coming out of the stream we were given a good opportunity to shoot them. There were some twenty of us with rifles all within thirty-five or forty yards of the struggling animals and we kept up an incessant fire at the broad sides of the animals thus presented. Something like thirty must have crossed the stream at this point, the majority of the herd swerving lower down. How many shots did we fire? I can form no definite conclusion, but we fired as often as possible. I must have fired at least twenty-five shots and the balance to a man were doing the best they could to get in an extra shot.

How many buffalo do you suppose we got? It will surprise you when you learn; we had only seven dead and disabled buffalo. Countless others were hit but unless you know where to shoot a buffalo and are skillful enough to reduce that knowledge to practice, shooting them produces but little noticeable effect.

After the herd had passed by, leaving a long, low-lying cloud of dust marking their trail, we were treated to an exhibition of the marvelous vitality of one of the stragling hulls of the herd. Two of the hunters that were after the herd when we first noted them were riding hard after the great shaggy animal and at close quarters were pumping the lead into him at every jump. Finally the buffalo fell, but a short distance from our camp, and going over to where it was we found not less than thirty bullets had been fired into its body.

Our trip leading up to Pike's Peak was an eventful one; several times our train was threatened by the Indians but we were never attacked, probably on account of our numbers. At each camp, after nearing the mountains, especially, we were annoyed by the sneaking coyotes invading our camp and chewing and destroying any and everything to which they could gain access.

The greatest sport presented was the pursuit of the antelope which ranged the plains in great numbers. They were shy and it required some considerable skill and patience to kill one of them, yet our camp was rarely without antelope steak, as some half dozen of our party were constantly well mounted and on detail for the purpose of supplying us with fresh meat. Jack rabbit, sage hen and antelope were the staple articles relied upon for fresh food.

Of that band but few are yet living, that is, of those whom I cared to keep trace of, and as I write and recall those days of adventure I realize that they formed one of the most rounded periods of my life's fitful fever.

KARL.

The enthusiasts on small shores are predicting that the sixteen-gauge gun will rapidly win its way into the trap-shooting contingent both as to live bird contests and in shooting inanimates. As to the former part of the proposition we have serious doubts. In shooting at inanimate targets we believe that in skillful hands the smaller gun may become quite the favorite weapon but doubt their effectiveness in shooting live birds at the trap.

The sportsmen generally, who love trap shooting, are outlining a more than usual programme for the season's sport in this line. A broad-gauged policy has been adopted by many of the clubs looking to a more equitable adjustment of the honors to be won at the trap. This will encourage the sport and is in the line of true sportsmanship.

The plumb evinced by some sportsmen just before the contest at the trap opens in striking contrast to the evidence presented by the score card after the shooting is over.

The E. C. powder is becoming quite the favorite with many of our local sportsmen.

The Pacific Queen.

Poor Liliuokalani! Poor Queen! How sad her situation! Rohbed of her throne; her crown dashed from her brow; her royal robes torn from her form and trampled in the dust; her wand of power shivered in her grasp; her kingdom wrested from her rule! What a picture! What a wreck! The halls of her palace are deserted; the pomp and splendor of her court are seen no more; alien hands hold the reins of the government of her former kingdom, and armed warriors pace before her dismantled courts and palaces of power to enforce the edicts of a foreign land. Situated thousands of miles from all other powers, resting like a beautiful gem upon the bosom of the Pacific seas, her kingdom might reasonably have been conceived to be free from the greed and avarice of other powers. But its location, its beauty, its marvelous fertility, were potent charms which led to its conquest and to the outrage committed on its queen and on her people.

The sea waves, as they break against the shores of her late kingdom, where she sits in exile, surrounded by a faithful few of her own simple people, must sing to her in notes weighted down and dripping with a sadness, than which a greater, the human heart is seldom called upon to know. The brightness and beauty of the tropical scene must rise and mock her griefs. The soft, sweet winds which have played with the foaming billows all day and come heating with their soft wingings against the lattice of her window at evening can bring her now no refreshing hours of rest. Day by day, night after night, she sits looking away across the white-capped hillows toward the region of the morning, the birthplace of light, hoping and longing for the news which shall restore to her her crown and kingdom, but as day after day wears away and weeks draw their slow lengths along and no reply comes to her appeal for justice from those upon whom she has come to look as the embodiment of noble principals her heart must sink lower and lower, and the ashes of hope lie over all in a bosom which is now a sepulcher for every fond aspiration.

Poor Liliuokalani; poor Queen, while sad and unmourned your fate, you are but passing through one of the great decrees of nature. The lesser gives way to the greater, for in nature might is right.

Natural Game Preserves.

Unquestionably but little can be done by man, in the furtherance of any project, unless his efforts be directed along the lines suggested and provided by nature for the development of the particular project in hand.

Many of the passengers who daily pass and repass Goat and Angel Islands on the ferry to points across the bay will be more or less surprised when informed of the fact that these islands are far more extensive than any one would imagine who has not set foot upon them. The arroyos of these islands being timbered and filled with manzanita-tangles and a dense growth of copse and vines which afford the best possible protection for any of the feathered tribe that may be placed there. The fact that the islands are removed for a sufficient distance from the shore to insure the birds remaining on them settles an important question favorably. The fact that the islands are under the charge of the military of the United States insures the fact that no poaching will ever be there attempted. Uncle Sam tolerates no foolishness in such and kindred matters and there can be no question but that every pheasant or quail placed upon these preserves would at roll call be present or accounted for as far as lawless interference would be concerned. Some years since Goat Island was successfully stocked with quail; they grew and multiplied until the waves which sing constantly to the shores was answered by the merry whistle or call of the aristocratic little beauties. Cats and vermin, it is said, destroyed the quail until but comparatively few of them remain.

Since the question has come up recently as to the importance of stocking this State with Mongolian pheasants, the eyes of the Fish and Game Commission of the State have been directed to these islands and to their well-nigh perfect presentation as game preserves.

Mr. Crittenden Robinson has long cherished the plan as one which would solve the preservation of imported birds until acclimated and progogated sufficiently to permit of their being turned loose on the main land. In consultation with Commissioner William C. Murdock, the plan was presented in such a light by Mr. Robinson, that the Commissioner's sympathies were at once interested in this direction, and no doubt but that the beautiful and toothsome Mongolian pheasants will soon be at home on the islands above mentioned. This plan has the best precedents in the fact that the first birds brought over to this country were placed on an island, similar to these, in Oregon waters. The result is shown in the fact that thousands upon thousands of these birds may be found all over the State of Oregon and even in adjoining States. It is to be hoped that success will attend every effort of the Commissioners in this direction.

A telegram from Larchmont, New York, under date of the 16th inst., says: "The second pigeon shooting match of the series between the Larchmont Yacht Club and E. D. Bulford, the professional champion wing-shot, took place at the club grounds to-day and resulted in a victory for Fulford. There was fully as much enthusiasm evident upon Fulford's victory as there was when Mr. Work defeated the world's championship two days ago. The match was for $250. Modified Harlingham rules governed. The rise was thirty yards and the boundary was fifty yards. L. S. Thompson, who was selected to try conclusions with the crack professionals to-day, used both barrels sixty-one times and Fulford fifty-six times. Thompson missed the twenty-second, twenty-third, twenty-ninth, thirty-first, thirty-sixth, thirty-eighth, thirty-ninth, eighty-sixth, ninety-first and ninety-eighth—ten in all. Fulford missed the eighth, nineteenth, twenty-fourth, fifty-eighth, sixtieth, sixty-first, sixty-third and sixty-eighth birds—eight in all. Fulford shot a slow and deliberate but certain match, and finally won, with two birds to spare. Had Thompson been able to retain his nerve and coolness to the end, he would have won. He clearly outshot his opponent at the start, and at one time it looked like an easy victory. His nerve forsook him at a critical stage of the game, and he lost the match. It was by no means a walk-over for Fulford."

The outlook for a close contest in the senate on the game law is one which keeps each side of this interesting question on the alert. We hope the law looking to a close and rigid preservation of the game will be enacted.

The San Francisco Gun Club.

On Wednesday last the San Francisco Gun Club opened the sport of the season at the trap, for this Club. The day was one of California's brightest and balmy, as if the weather clerk were a loyal American and in honor of the "Cincinnatus of the West" had honored his birthday with the brightest and best of the days at his disposal. As the sportsmen steamed across the bay a most exhilarating scene was presented. Behind the city, from every spire and dome of which was flung to the breeze the brightest and most attractive emblem that ever rose and fell upon the pure air of heaven; about them, on every hand, the ships and sloops, rendered brilliant, in honor of the day, with the stars and stripes and gaily colored bunting with which they were decorated. The sun shone warm and cheerful on the waters, which were enridged with tiny wavelets fanned into being by a gentle breeze which came in from sea-ward, rendering the weather all the more agreeable to all those inclined to enjoy out-door pleasures. Goat Island had just put on a fresh robe of emerald, fringed about its sea-washed shores by the bare clay-banks, which were rendered as a golden border, fading into the blue-green waves, after passing the roll of swansdown created by the white lacing of foam formed by the beating of the waters against its rock-environmented steps. Countless numbers of sea-gulls fluttered about the boats, restless as the waves beneath, while every class of sea-fowl indigenous to this climate sat about in the waters, until disturbed by some passing vessel, when they evinced their fishy quality by diving beneath the waves or fluttered awkwardly away revealing the fact by their labored motion that they were not entirely adapted to aerial lines. Strange organisms these. Amphibians? -Yes, nearly so. See their rudimentary wings, they are compelled to beat the air with a humming bird's rapidity of motion in order to sustain their flight. This being particularly true of the guillemot or mair, the sea-pigeon and some others. Clang! Clang! There, we are across the bay and the train winds around the serpentine shore to the Oakland Shooting Park where we find that the number of sportsmen is upwards of twenty who belong to this club. The shooting opened and continued without interruption until high twelve when a rest is called for lunch, when all repair to the Hotel de Ben Wright, and enjoy a very acceptable luncheon, after which the sport at the trap is renewed and continued with but short intermissions until evening. The main match of the day resulted as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes names like W. J. Golcher, H. Babcock, J. K. Orr, Thos. Ewing, A. C. Tubbs, Howard Black, Chas. Laing, F. S. Butler, J. O. Cadman, Robt. Oxnard, J. H. Jellett, Wm. Levinson, H. W. Woodward, R. H. Sprague, Alex. Hamilton, J. M. Kilgari, J. Downey Harvey, F. D. Atherton, E. A. Chapin, F. R. Webster, F. W. Tallant, F. H. Sanborn, J. M. Eyre, R. B. Woodward, W. S. Kittle, Gen. Levison.

The birds were a fine lot, and many of them were never surpassed as swift ones at the trap anywhere. Messrs. Golcher and Babcock earned their laurels by some fine shooting. Being somewhat incapacitated, owing to a serious defeat which we sustained in a recent encounter with a falling skylight, we are unable to comment on the merits of the individual shooters or to note any of the special incidents of this very interesting match. A six-bird pool, $250 entrance, three moneys, resulted as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes names like Oxnard, Sprague, Tubbs, Eyre, Tallant, Babcock, Webster, Laing, Cadman, Harvey, R. B. Woodward, Jellett, Brown, H. W. Woodward, Orr, Butler, Hamilton, Golcher.

The gentlemen standing with five kills each were Messrs. Oxnard, Sprague, Tubbs, Eyre, Tallant, Babcock, Webster and Laing.

Then followed a "freeze-out," fourteen entries, in which Cadman and Harvey divided the money, with four kills each.

A second "freeze-out," eight entries, resulted in a tie between Messrs. Sprague and Laing.

The day was a most pleasant one, and will not soon be forgotten by the gentlemen in attendance.

The Game Law.

It may be that the opposition which has been brought to bear against the enactment of the Emeric bill in the Legislature at Sacramento do not fully realize the import of a failure to have some stringent measure crystallized into law at this session of that body. The results of a failure to carry some such measure as the Emeric bill would prove most disastrous to the game of the State. The situation as the law now stands is most deplorable. Something must be done in order to preserve the game. It is easy to object. Any one can do that, but if we as sportsmen wait until we shall all stand as one man in favor of all of the provisions of any one bill, it is needless to say that life would be spent in waiting and yet nothing be accomplished.

We must have protection for the game and we should not pause and quibble over the fact that there are some sections of the bill which has passed the Assembly and now rests with the Senate, which we wish were otherwise.

Let the Senate pass the bill as it now stands. Do not weigh it down with amendments so as to prolong the struggle, but pass it now and let it become a part of the law of the land.

Importation, propagation and protection should be the motto of every sportsman in California. Nothing should prevent the enactment of such laws as will secure this end, and any law that embodies this idea—that is focused to this point—cannot contain much of a collateral and non-conflicting nature that would be seriously objectionable.

What is the object of the opposition? It would seem to be wholly of a negative nature. This will not do. It is not in the nature of effort having for its object the good of the public. Surely such efforts will not find favor in the upper house of our Legislature. The points of the bill have been discussed over and over again and again, but little, if anything, new has been left to be said regarding the merits or the demerits of the proposed measure, suffice it to say that on no account can any other measure be presented and passed to effective standing by the present body. It is apparent to all that it must be the Emeric bill, as it now stands, or, probably, nothing in the form of law by this legislative body.

This we, as sportsmen, having the interests of the game of the State at large at heart, cannot sanction, and in order to avoid such a deplorable state of affairs, we earnestly entreat the Senate to pass the Emeric bill as received from the Assembly.

An Important Game Law Decision.

We take the following from American Field:

The case of the State of Maine vs. Eben Coffren for catching and having in possession a young deer during the close season, tried before the Calais Municipal Court in November last, caused considerable excitement and articles appeared in several papers of that State severely criticising the proceedings. The case was appealed to the Supreme Judicial Court, held at Machias on the first Tuesday in January, and there, after a thorough discussion of the law on the part of the defendant by Geo. M. Hanson, Esq., and on the part of the State by County Attorney Campbell, assisted by R. J. McGarrigle, Esq., the presiding Justice carefully considered the whole matter and gave the following decision sustaining the court below, and no exceptions were taken. The judgment of the Appellate Court practically settles the law, the construction of which has been so much discussed. No deer can be lawfully caught and held in possession during the close season. During this time, the seasons of breeding and growing, they are absolutely protected. The decision is as follows:

"Washington, SS, S. J. Court, Jan. T., 1893. State v. Eben Coffren, Aplt.

"This is a complaint for catching and having in possession one deer in close time, and the case comes to this court by appeal from the Municipal Court of Calais. The defendant now enters a plea of guilty, with an agreement on the part of the State that a nol. pro. shall be entered unless it is determined by the presiding justice that the act charged in the complaint is prohibited by the statute; if so prohibited, judgment to be entered for State.

"It is admitted that the fawn was caught by the defendant in the month of July, 1892, and kept in possession until October 15th, and then sold to some person in Massachusetts. Section 11, of Chap. 30, R. S., declares that 'Whoever has in his possession the carcass or hide of any such animal, or any part thereof, between the first days of January and October, shall be deemed to have hunted and killed the same contrary to law; * * * * but he shall not be precluded from producing proof in defense. This section was amended in 1891 (Chap. 95, Sec. 3) so as to read: 'Whoever has in possession any such animal or part thereof * * * * shall be deemed to have hunted, caught or killed the same contrary to law.' The substitution of the word 'animal' for carcass or hide in the first clause, and the introduction of the word 'caught' in the second clause, conclusively show an intention to make the statute applicable not only to the possession of inanimate things, but to the capture of living and moving ones. This is also in harmony with the manifest purpose of the law. It was obviously designed to afford protection to the deer and prevent their extinction, by giving them freedom to roam the forests untraced by man during the appropriate season of each year. If construed to permit their capture in close time, when more easily effected, and subsequent sale or appropriation in open time, the law would signify fail of its beneficent purpose, and be practically nullified.

"In the case at bar there is no suggestion in defense that the fawn was captured and temporarily held for any humane or lawful purpose. That inquiry was precluded by the final disposition of the animal. The decision of the court below was correct, and judgment must be entered for the State.

A Black Eagle Killed.

From Mr. Daly, driver of the stage running between Marysville and Nevada City, we learn, says the Marysville Democrat of the 9th inst. that he was shown by Louis Hickerson, of the Brady ranch, sixteen miles east of Marysville, a large jet-black eagle, the wings of which measured ninety-five inches from tip to tip. Mr. Hickerson noticed the eagle flying back and forth along the creek for several minutes; presently it made a rapid descent to the ground, and when the eagle had gotten within a few feet of the ground, he observed a rabbit running and the eagle following closely behind. Presently the great bird thrust its talons into the rabbit and flew up into a large tree near by. Mr. Hickerson got on his horse, and, with gun in hand, rode under the tree and shot the eagle. When it came down its claws were found to be tightly imbedded in the rabbit's body. It is seldom that black eagles are seen in this vicinity.

The many encomiums that we have received in reference to our editorial in last week's issue under the heading "Is the Emeric Bill Un-American," are very satisfactory indeed. We but voiced what to us appears to be the only just view of the question. We must have stringent game laws or we will soon have no game. It is far better to put up with a bill which contains some objectionable features than to miss the object for which we are contending entirely.

Which is paramount, your desire to have the game of the State preserved or to forward your own selfish pleasure by open shooting and unrestricted measures? Your position on the measures now before the Legislature at Sacramento will answer this question very effectually.

The gentlemen who love field sports are now out on their last hunt for quail for this season. A few more days and the field will be abandoned for the trap, until October next. We trust that all may have a pleasant final outing for the season.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Kindness To a Dog.

[From Our Dumb Animals.]

A long day's journey there lay before; I crossed the meadow at breaking morn; I saw the road wind by hill and dale— Beyond the bills was my distant bourne. I thought of the greeting I should win,— What was it moaned at my feet meanwhile? A poor old terrier, lame and thin; I stooped and helped him over the stile— Then would have crossed; hut a dreary yelp Arrested me, and I turned to view A limping poodle, whose need of help Was manifest, and I helped him too. Of every nation and tribe are they, And each has a fresh, resistless wile; Each says in his own peculiar way, "Just help a lame dog over the stile." They're greyhound, Skye, Pomeranian; They limp along in an endless file; They're smooth or curly, they're black and tan, But all are lame and would cross the stile. The shadows deepen o'er bill and glen, Dim is my pathway of many a mile— Yet will I renew my journey when The last lame dog is over the stile.

The approach of the dates for the bench show of the Pacific Kennel Club causes the Kennel men to evince a more active interest in that affair.

Who will be the judges of the next bench show in this city? As we go to press early in the week this question may be definitely settled by the time this gets before our readers, but at the time of this writing it is still an interesting question.

Mr. Wm. G. Layng, of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, sent, this week, his splendid Cocker Spaniel bitch Jessie up to the Country Club's Kennels to be bred to Mr. F. R. Webster's famous King Bee. The cross should produce some fine field Cockers.

We regret to announce that from the present advices it would seem that there is no hope of securing Mr. James Mortimer to judge the coming bench show to be held by the Pacific Kennel Club in May next. Mr. Mortimer has informed the committee of the club to that effect.

Entries for the bench show of the Westminster Kennel Club, of New York, held this week, foot up 1,492, which tops the club record. The most extensive classes are pointers, 150; St. Bernards, 149; English setters, 112, and smooth-coated fox-terriers, 108. It would seem that the kennel interests, if less sensational now than one year ago, are steadily on the increase. It is most encouraging to notice the fact of continued growth in the canine world.

The question of sanitary precautions at bench shows is now attracting more attention, and that justly too, than ever before. It is one of the first importance to the kennel world and one which has hitherto been seriously neglected as the many and serious cases of that dread disease, distemper, which have so often occurred after bench shows, attests. We are inclined to think that shows that are conducted as the ones have been and are as likely to be in this State are sure safe guards against this disease as any that could be devised. The benching is new for each show and in this lies an important factor. The next safe guard lies in thorough inspection and courageous rejection of any and all suspicious cases and then for the veterinary to keep a sharp lookout for any developments of disease after the show opens.

The efforts of the gentlemen who have been laboring with a will for the preservation of the game of the State by advocating protective laws at Sacramento should not be forgotten by the earnest sportsmen of the State.

ROD.

The Mountain Brook.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

From the fountain,
In the mountain,
Rushing ever to the sea,
Always, ever
And forever,
Voicing purest melody,
Glancing, dancing, foaming, prancing,
To a music all its own;
With a motion as entrancing
As its magic, mellow tone.

Night enshrouded,
Day beclouded,
Silvered with the moonlight's gleam:
In the twilight,
'Neath the starlight,
Or the sunlight's golden beam:
Nothing evermore can calm its Ceaseless efforts to unfold,
The pure spirit speaking from its
White-lipped waters sweet and cold.

Thieving and Ravenous Sharks.

One day last spring a party of four was made up at Biloxi, Miss., to take a trip after speckled trout (sea trout), the destination being the bridge of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad where it crosses an arm of the Gulf about two miles east of here, says a correspondent in the Angler. Our party was composed of Col. H. Metcalf, of Denver; Geo. L. Gilbert and his son Ray, of Chicago, and the writer. We stowed ourselves away in a very comfortable cat boat about twenty feet long, and with its owner, Loui Couvas, at the tiller, were soon plowing the clear waters of the Gulf in fine style, and a delightful sail of three-quarters of an hour brought us to the bridge. Having lowered sail and made fast to one of the piers, we climbed up on the little foot bridge, placed there for the benefit of the watchmen, and began casting net into the tideway.

Much to our satisfaction we found that the trout were not only biting freely, but were also running very large. Standing on the bridge with nothing to bother us, we had no end of sport. Whenever we hooked one of the speckled beauties we had a clear field to play him, and after he had given up the fight, we would lead him along the bridge to our boat, where Loui was standing in readiness with his gaff. As the tide began to slacken the fish stopped biting, and we were getting ready to climb down into our boat, when Loui called our attention to a lot of fish that he had just strung. Beauties they were; every one of them would have averaged four pounds. While we stood admiring them, Loui reached over the gunwale of the boat and dipped the string in the water to wash the fish off before stowing them away, when, quick as a flash of lightning, there came a surge from underneath the boat, and before Loui could lift his string out of the water, the head and open mouth of a very large shark appeared. With a snap like the coming together of a steel trap, the shark's jaws closed on the end of the string, taking with him five or six of the largest trout, and allowing the remainder to slip off the string into the water. I quickly slid down into the boat and grabbed a boat hook that lay bandily, intending to save some of the fish that were floating off with the tide, but before I had time to fasten the boat hook into one of the fish, a second shark put in an appearance so close to the side of the boat that I made up my mind to give him a clear field and let him have the fish.

The sharks certainly could not have been less than ten feet long, and they made the water foam as they dashed after their prey, and their dorsal fins cut the water with a "whiz." We watched them for a few moments and they then disappeared.

The remainder of our party crawled down into the boat taking good care not to make a false step, as they were not particularly anxious to fall overboard with any such company as we had seen but a few moments before. We had hoisted sail and were just about casting loose, when a sudden jar was felt, evidently coming from underneath our boat. On looking over the side we saw one of our late friends swimming slowly across the tide not over two feet under water. Intending to give the gentleman a lesson, I grabbed the boat hook the second time, and drove its sharp point into the shark's head as hard as I could drive it. The next second it was jerked out of my hands and thrown fully ten feet by the first dash of the now thoroughly enraged fish. We did not lose any time getting away from that place, and after we were under way we saw both of the sharks following in our wake, nor did they leave us until we had gotten into shoal water, where they were evidently afraid to follow.

On our arrival at the hotel the fishermen all told us that the sharks would not have bitten a man if he had jumped overboard after the fish, but I would rather have them try it. There is one thing very certain, when we go out fishing again none of our fish will be put overboard.

The writer has passed two seasons at Biloxi, and it is a matter of great wonder to him how it has happened that so few gentlemen from the North who are fond of fishing visit this coast. We have as fine fishing as can be had anywhere in either North or South. Sheepshead, spotted trout, channel bass, Spanish mackerel and all kinds of smaller fish can be caught by the hundred, and although the writer has visited Punta Rassa, Punta Gorda and other points in Florida, after that king of all fish, the tarpon, he has yet to find a place where as many of these fish can be caught as right here at Biloxi. If the Nestor of tarpon fishermen, Mr. Wm. Wood, could be induced to visit Biloxi during the months of August, September or October, I am very sure that for the future his fishing grounds along the Florida coast would be forsaken.

A novel invention is "Graves' Live Fish Bait," lately put into the market, which is no doubt deadly to the fish, but hardly up to the mark of high sportsmanship. By it a live minnow is placed into a glass tube, so arranged as to magnify the fish, with a hole in each end, through which the water passes, keeping the lure alive. Of course several gangs of hooks appeal from the device, and the innocent quarry is harried if it comes within an inch of the lin-fishing minnow.

Fish and Fishing in America.

One of the most interesting fishes of American waters is the "Johnny Grindle" or dog fish (Amia calva) says Wm. C. Harris in the American Angler. Its characteristics are striking and its life history, so far as we know it, is curious and entertaining. It is said to bark like a dog; to be as voracious as a shark; more tenacious of life than an eel and nearly as much so as a crab; to guard its spawning bed and protect its fry with the parental courage of a bronze-backer; to swallow its young on the approach of danger; to jump like an athlete and fight like a bulldog. But with all these attractive qualities "Johnny" is absolutely without savor and worthless as a table fish, and as such he has been tersely described by an old Michigan guide, who, upon looking at a great pile of Grindles which a couple of guileless Eastern anglers had caught, exclaimed:

"Naw, them's dogfish; a Norveg'in wouldn't eat them; their meat's like mush; bang 'em in running water and it'll wash all the flesh off'n the bones 'n then wash their bones away; lay 'em in the sun half an hour an' ther'll only be a puddle left. Throw 'em out! Throw 'em out!"

Notwithstanding the distaste that the ordinary white man has for the flesh of the dogfish, it is highly relished by the Indians and the Southern blacks, all of whom will readily sell their choice catch of mascalonge, bass, etc., but hold the "Johnnies" above the market price.

The Amia calva is a fish not only of interest to anglers, but doubly so to ichthyologists, fossil remains having been found in the tertiary deposits of Wyoming. This interest is increased by the peculiar habit of the fish, described by Wilder, of rising to the surface and, without emitting any air bubble whatever, opens its jaws widely and apparently gulps down a large quantity of air. These acts of respiration are more frequently performed when the water is foul or has not been changed, and Gunther says there is no doubt that an exchange of oxygen and carbonic acid is effected as in the lungs of aerial vertebrates.

There is but one species of Amia, and that is peculiar to America waters, where it is not over abundant, except in the swamps, sloughs, lakes and sluggish streams of the Mississippi Valley. It is also found in the Great Lakes, and a few are caught in the streams of Western Vermont and in those of the Atlantic Coast south of the Neuse River in North Carolina. It is abundant in the small rivers flowing into the Gulf of Mexico.

"Johnny Grindle," known as such in the Mississippi Valley and along the streams flowing into the Gulf, has as much baptismal nomenclature as a Luxemburg prince, and might be pardoned, if of our ilk, as a learned professor of the "Hub" frequently has been, for forgetting his own name. In addition to the somewhat over-familiar greeting of "Johnny Grindle," he answers equally prompt to "mudfish" and "sauger" in the great Lake region and on the South Atlantic Coast; to "bowfin" and "dogfish" in the Mississippi Valley, and promiscuously to "plunger," "grass fish" and "marsh fish" in Michigan waters. In some of the Western States, so saith H. H. Thompson, of musical fame, it is frequently called "the lawyer," and, as Dr. Kirkland once told Dr. David S. Jordan, for the alleged reason that it will bite at anything and is good for nothing when caught; again, because they are slippery fellows and bill headed. Fred Mather was interested in the baptism of "Johnny," and wrote:

"We fancy the Southern name of 'Grindle' for the Amia for several reasons, one of which is that no other fish bears it, and another is its striking oddity. Its other names are all shared with other fishes. But who was old Grindle, anyway?"

For the benefit of our readers and that of Mr. Mather particularly, we will let out the secret of "who was old Grindle, anyway?" Among the negroes of every plantation of the South there existed, before the war (and doubtless does now), a representative darkey whose striking traits made him a marked character among his fellows. Living on one of the bayou plantations of Western Louisiana, a black octogenarian, too old to work, spent most of the days, and, indeed, most of the nights, in fishing for catfish. His master's name was Grindle, that of the old darkey was Johnny, and in those days a grindstone in that section bore the now obsolete name, given to it in Ben Johnson's time, of "grindle." The old slave one day caught for the first time an Amia, a fish that had never before been taken in the bayou. Bringing it home, the plantation negroes crowded around the old man's prize, and the air was filled with exclamations. "What's dat?" "What you got?" "Whar you got 'im?" "Whoop! old man, cook 'im for supper!" "Dat's de big fish, sure!" "What you call 'im?" etc. The fish was cooked and a choice portion sent to the "old massa," and our octogenarian angler awaited in the dining room for the verdict with some anxiety. The planter tasted the fish, rolling the morsel around his mouth, rather pleased with the flavor, as most people are with that of a tough fish before biting it, then closed his molars upon it and chewed! chewed! chewed! without making headway—the harder he masticated the tougher it grew, until, chagrined and disgusted at his idle efforts and the savorless fish, petulantly cried out:

"Here, Johnny, put this fish on the grindle. We never can eat him until he is ground into fish mush."

That settled the matter. The synonymy of the master's name, that of the grindstone and the baptismal one of the old darkey fisher, evolved the local name of the fish. "Johnny Grindle," or, more aristocratically, "John A. Grindle, Esq.," by which the fish is known in some sections of the South, that being the patronymic of the darkey's owner.

Dr. Morris Gibbs sent me, some months since, some very interesting notes on the Amia calva, which we give entire, as the doctor has devoted many hours to the study of this fish, resulting in many new and valuable facts as to its life history:

"The bowfin, as it is often called, is also known by several names, as is quite common with many species of fish, a condition arising from the nomenclature adopted by the people in different localities. In Michigan it is known entirely by the name of dogfish, while to the South the name mud fish is usually given. Plunger and grass fish are other names not rarely heard. The name mud fish appears more proper to me, as it is almost invariably found in muddy sections, and can, I think, live in quarters where any other species would quickly succumb. Edges of ponds, marshes around lakes, the sluggish ditches and overgrown trenches are preferred, and in such locations, at the proper season of the year, great numbers may be heard plunging about in the mud and sloughs. Especially is this noticeable when a boat is forced through rushes, scrub-grass and cat-tails, when the dogfish is disturbed in the slay wait for frogs, young birds and small fish, perhaps, in the clear water near. The dashes of these fellows, some of which are very large, make a great noise, and often startle one rowing about in the rank grass.

"The name dogfish, which seems inappropriate, is given, I understand, from the habit accorded it by ignorant people, who claim that the fish half emerges from mud and water and barks much after the manner of the dog. That this is false I have no doubt, but that the fish has a power to make a peculiar noise is, I think, a fact. Although never having heard the sound, many friends, some of whom I have confidence in, assure me that the dogfish can make a fairly loud noise.

"They often grow to the weight of five or six pounds, and occasionally are taken as heavy as seven or eight lbs., I am told, but those usually seen about here weigh three to three and a half pounds. I have never observed the immature fish from two inches up to a foot, and have only seen the very young and full-grown specimens. The parents give evidence of considerable reasoning, unsurpassed by any fish of my acquaintance, and thereby raises itself in my mind to the position of being wisest of fresh-water fishes. The eggs may be deposited in the mud, as has been claimed, but not all are thus deposited, or else the exceptions referred to were in cases where the young were removed from the mud beds to other quarters soon after hatching, for I have twice found young broods occupying the edges of the lake in clear water with a sandy bottom. A very unlikely place for an adult, and the chance is quite fair when we say that the fry was removed there by the parent fish. Further in substantiation of this idea of removal, I think that the old one may carry the young, when small, in her mouth. The energy with which a parent protects her young, the female probably performing the patient and brave task, is surprising and extremely interesting. I once spent considerable time in watching an adult, evidently with her brood of young. The little fish was nearly an inch long, very slim in body, with a large and tentacled mouth and head, and much more resembled what we could expect to find as young bullheads.

"The fry, perhaps fifty in all—unfortunately I was not exact as to number—were crowded into a space three feet by two by the indentation of the lake shore by a small imperfect V-shaped jag in the bank, while in front next the lake the old fish maintained guard. I sat within three feet of the brood, and still the parent, although undoubtedly frightened, remained, and only dashed away for a couple of yards or so and immediately returned when I poked about with a small stick. Whenever the fry attempted to escape from the small partial enclosure, the old dogfish moved about sideways, and, with her body occupying nearly all the front, would sweep the young back into the indentation. As the water was only about four inches deep, this the mother fish very easily accomplished. I expected to see her swim off with the fry following, or to have them seek a retreat within her mouth, but neither event occurred, and when I finally went on the lake fishing the interesting group was still there, the mother with extremely graceful movements and long, restless dorsal fin preserving order and propriety with her young brood.

"The dogfish lies in wait for its prey and undoubtedly eats many frogs, even the largest bullfrog having no show against its large and powerful jaws. It occurred to me that the mature dogfish, knowing of the bullfrog's tendency to devour small fish, removed her brood from the muddy bottom to the clearer water with sandy bottom.

"On one occasion I observed a small speckled tortoise (Naremys guttata) in the grip of a fair sized dogfish, and, although the fish could neither swallow the chelonia whole or tear in pieces his prey, still the unhappy fellow was undoubtedly doomed from the manner of the attack and the lacerated appearance of its legs.

"I have eaten this fish once. The meat is coarse and soft. I do not call it good, but the Indians all prefer it to the black bass, so far as I can learn from them, and I have asked a number. Very few white people eat the dogfish in the northern part of the Union, and it is pronounced poisonous by the ignorant and those who talk to hear themselves."

The bowfin grows to a length of two feet and a weight of twelve pounds. A good eight to ten-ounce black bass minnow rod, a nine thread Cuttyhunk line and a No. 1. o Limerick hook baited with a live minnow, meat, "a gob of wums," or any edible thing living or dead, will lure them. They are often seen jumping, turning full somersaults when in the air, but, as my experience is limited in fishing for the bowfin, I cannot say that they leap in the air under the restriction of the line. They sometimes take the spoon, but a live frog is a great lure for them. "Their teeth are so sharp and their jaws so strong that they have been known to bite a two-pound fish clean in two at the very first snap. The young, when about six inches in length, make a famous bait for pickrel and pike. To use it, run the hook into the mouth right up through the center of the head, through the brain, cast a hundred times, catch several fish, and at the end of three to six hours your bait will kick like a mule."

The bowfin spawns in May or June among the grass and weeds of the sloughs, if the depth of water permits. Dr. Estes, who has made quite a study of this fish, writes that as soon as the spring rise comes and connects the island sloughs of Lake Pepin, the fish run up and over into the sloughs, deposit their eggs and remain near the beds and young just as long as they can without being shut in by the receding water. The eggs hatch in eight or ten days, the parents remaining by the brood two or three weeks, if possible, but will leave much sooner if necessary to save themselves. The young will not make any effort to escape until the next season, when, if an opening occurs, they come down in countless numbers.

But few fish escaped the observation of Seth Green, and the howlin was not an exception. He wrote to me that he received a specimen fish packed in shavings, and that it was several hours en route. He took it out of the box and placed it in an aquarium, in which it lived nineteen days without a change of water in warm weather. In this connection Dr. David S. Jordan states that this fish is more tenacious of life than even the catfishes. "I once kept a specimen alive, out of water, in a warm room, for a whole afternoon, in order to make a water color sketch of it. Its lung-like bladder enables it to breath air so long as its air passages are kept moist, and, when out of water, it dies only after the shrinkage of its gelatinous and pasty muscles, due to the water they contain. The susceptibility to evaporation of the fleshy parts is one of the peculiar characteristics of this fish."

Referring to the vocal utterances of this fish, a personal correspondent writes: "I have often heard the peculiar sound they make when landed, but have never heard it when they were jumping. It is neither a bark, a grunt nor a groan, but a compound of all three. It is not loud, but may be heard fifteen or twenty feet distant, and when a number of them are together they will keep up a constant rumble, or whatever it may be called. I have often thought the sound was not produced by respiration, but by the rubbing together of the jaws or some other parts."

Winning Thoroughbred Sires, 1892.

IROQUOIS.

Iroquois easily heads the list of American winning thoroughbred sires of 1892, and the total amount gathered by his progeny last year nearly equals the largest amount ever credited to a sire in this country, says The Horseman.

Table with columns: HORSE, DAM, Times First, Times Second, Times Third, Unplaced, Winnings. Lists various horses and their performance statistics.

The following stakes were won by the get of Iroquois in 1892: Tammany—The Withers Stakes, one mile, time 1:40, value $7460, Morris Park; the Realization Stakes, one mile and five furlongs, time 2:51 2-5, value $23,475, Sheephead Bay; the Lorillard Stakes, mile and three-eighths, time 2:20 1/2, value $17,570, Monmouth Park; the Jerome Stakes, mile and a half, time 2:36 1/2, value $18,415, Morris Park.

Col. North's Horses.

The steamer Tauric, with Colonel North's horses on board, arrived Saturday morning after being five days overdue, says the New York Sporting World.

The horse that the most was expected from—El Diahlo—was not among those which arrived, although he was supposed to be among the lot.

Mr. Hatfield, who is in charge of the horses, said that they stood the trip remarkably well and after the first couple of days at sea took their meals regularly.

The names of the horses and their pedigrees are as follows: Iddesleigh, ch g, 7, by Uncas—Mosque, by Pero Gomez.

High Commissioner, br or h h, 6, by Lowland Chief—Consolation, by Julius.

Rough and Ready, hr g, 6, by Quicklime—Rufford Maid, by Wingrave.

Arturo, h h, 5, by Petrarch—Belle Agnes, by King Tom.

Sir Frederick Roberts, h h, 5, by Wisdom—Candshar, by Honiton.

Eltham Queen, ch f, 3, by Swillington—Thuringian Queen, by Thuringian Prince.

Landslip, h f, 3, by Lowland Chief—Wendree.

Ben-my-Chree, h m, 1887, by Galopin—Ulster Queen, in foal to Lowland Chief.

Early Morn, h m, 1885, by Silvester—Late Nights, in foal to Saraband.

The horses are a very ordinary lot of sprinters. Last year Iddesleigh won the Doncaster welter plate over the Sandall mile, heating Chesterfield and Task.

High Commissioner, with 131 pounds up, ran second to Sly Fellow in the Dewarrene Handicap at five furlongs, decided Lewes.

After this he won the Westmoreland Stakes over the Sandall mile at Doncaster, heating Veau d'Or and Gavotte to whom he was conceding high weight handily.

Colonel North's trainer in England is R. L. V. Sherwood, Jr., Chetwyn House, Newmarket.

Denver's Racing Affairs.

DENVER, Col., February 8, 1893.—In spite of the experiences of last year the people interested in racing here are making plans for the sport this spring, says a correspondent of The Horseman.

At the beginning of the year the association was reorganized with the following officers: President, N. M. Tabor; Vice-President, T. H. Hardcastle; Treasurer, C. L. McIntosh; Secretary, C. B. Rhodes; Executive Committee: W. H. Bush, C. G. Codman, T. H. Hardcastle, B. H. Duhois, J. F. Sanders, G. H. Esterbrook, C. B. Rhodes, A. H. Fowler, S. V. Farnum, N. M. Tabor, J. H. P. Vorhies, C. L. McIntosh.

According to the crude plans now being put in shape there will be eight days of racing, beginning May 30. It has been decided to have alternately two running and three trotting or pacing races on one day, and three running and two trotting or pacing races the next.

The runner will by no means be neglected. At the spring meeting each year the Colorado Derby and Overland Handicap are run. These are generally worth from $1000 to $2500 to the winners, and they have proved to be very attractive races in the past, and will no doubt be equally so this year.

There is a change in the active management of the park. J. H. Temple has retired as superintendent and gone back East.

Mr. Rhodes has been in the East for a month past calling on racing men and telling them what a fine time they can have if they will only come to the city at the foot of the Rockies this spring with their horses to race for the prizes put up by Colorado people.

In former years it has been found that Californians going East for the season have found Denver a very convenient place to stop over. It is just about half-way, and it breaks the monotony of the long trip in a most agreeable way.

The trotting feature will have a tendency to improve matters very much. Colorado men who have gone to other tracks during the Overland meetings will have no excuse for remaining away now. In the past they have shown a consistent desire to be here, and will be on hand this spring as of yore.

Value of Pedigrees.

The value of a pedigree was for a long time over-estimated, and that is what kept the prices for trotting bred stock far above what they should have been for so long a time. It must be remembered that the trotting horse breed is only a few years in its formative period.

Asylum Stock Farm Sale.

Next Thursday and Friday will be a memorial in the history of the trotting horse industry from the fact that the largest sale of standard-bred trotters ever seen in California was held on those days.

Wait For the Chicago Sale.

From present indications F. J. Berry & Co.'s grand spring sale, March 27th to April 1st, will prove the most brilliant collection of trotting stock ever placed on the Western market.

Hon. J. L. Rose has returned to the ranks of racing men, we are happy to say. This week he purchased of Colonel H. I. Thornton that good-looking and exceedingly promising black two-year-old colt Bordeaux (brother to Oporto), by imp. Mariner, dam Eufaula, by Monday; second dam Lillie Reis, by Longfellow, etc.

BELLE OF THE LAKE, by Wheatly, dam Janet, by Woodburn, was brought down from the Biehler ranch to Oakland last Wednesday, to be mated with the young Australian stallion, Merriwa, who, by the way, is attracting much attention from owners of thoroughbred mares throughout the State.

SEE the advertisement of the Capital Turf and Driving Club in another portion of this paper, and make your entries in their liberal stakes.

TURF AND TRACK

The Sulky.

W. B. FASIG considers California the greatest place on earth to breed trotters.

ROBERT STEELE, of Philadelphia, is to sell all of his trotting stock with the exception of Epanlet, 2:19.

THE attention of our readers is called to the synopsis of the list of trotters to be sold at Napa on the 8th of March.

STAMBOUL has gained fifty pounds since arriving at Terre Haute.

C. J. HANLIN has decreed that twenty of the get of Chimes must enter the 2:30 list this season.

THE colt Chief Thorne (2), 2:20, will be in Barney Demar set's string this year.

It is said that Yolo Maid, 2:12, is being trained now at Denver, and that she will be out for the money next summer.

NOTICES have been sent from this office to all subscribers who are delinquent. It is hoped that many returns will be received through these reminders at an early date.

LINDALE, 2:20, as a two-year-old, is one of the half-dozen good ones that Wm. Corbett is going to send East to John A. Goldsmith this summer.

SINCE the weather cleared the trotting horse trainers and drivers at Lodi, San Jose and Sacramento are quite busy handling youngsters for the coming meetings.

THE principal topic among horsemen is the sale of horses which will take place next Thursday and Friday at the Bay District Track.

THE Arabs had few if any horses until the seventeenth century after the Christian era, from which time we have fairly a connected history of the Arabian horse.

PURE castor-oil is highly recommended as the best preservative of harness leather, for, while it keeps it silky and supple, it will not soak in, like neatfoot or lard oils.

RANDALL'S HORSE REGISTER is the name of a new turf paper published at Indianapolis, Ind. It is edited by N. A. Randall, and is worthy addition to turf literature.

IN our list of 2:30 trotters, published a few weeks ago, we unintentionally omitted the game trotting mare Kitty L., that got her mark of 2:27½ while heavy in foal to Alcona, Jr., 2:19.

PAULIN & Co., the well-known horseman of Fresno, contemplate leasing a farm in San Mateo to which they will transfer all their stock of stallions, broodmares, colts and fillies.

E. E. CHRISMAN, "Kennesaw," well known to the trotting turf as a reporter for several trotting-horse papers, is now training a stable of runners at Cumberland Park race track in Nashville.

THE Anteo stallion Antares that was in J. Corcoran's string at Napa last spring, is now one of Orrin A. Hickok's most promising youngsters. He is a very pure-gaited trotter and will enter the 2:30 circle at the first opportunity.

ORRIN A. HICKOK has his string of trotters at the Bay District track, but regrets exceedingly that he will be compelled to move to some other track as the "bang-tails" are beginning to occupy the box stalls.

CAPT. B. E. HARRIS' fine stallion Marvel, that got a record of 2:24 under that name, has been registered as Melvar 22,130; his sire, Stanford, is now known as Fordstan 22,129. Brown Jug is also registered; his number is 21,985.

EVERYBODY must try and attend the sale of the Asylum Stock Farm trotters on the 2nd and 3rd of March at the Bay District Track. The crowd promises to be larger than at any sale ever held in this city.

GOOD roads are not like great men. They are not born, they must be made. The fact that we have none is easily explained when it is remembered that our country people do not know what a good road really is.

FORTY-SEVEN nominations have already been made for the 1898 trotting Derby of Italy. Of these horses, eleven are by Hambleton, 2:26½, seven by James G., 2:20, six by Amber, five by Atlantic, 2:21, and three by Elwood Medium, 2:24½.

BONNIE MCGREGOR (2:13) at $1700 sounds like one of the greatest bargains of the year. A gentleman who knows him, however, says that his feet are not above suspicion. "No foot, no horse." No horse, no big price, nowadays.

THE attention of horse owners is called to the advertisement of the Northwestern Association of Trotting and Pacing Horse Breeders in another column. Over $100,000 are offered in stakes and purses. Entries will close next Wednesday, March 1st.

RAY PRINCE, by Stamboul, 2:07½, owned by George Collins, of Fresno, is dead. The animal's oofs were pared too closely lately and it was impossible to give him the exercise to which he was accustomed and the result proved fatal. His owner refused $24,000 for him.

REMEMBER the largest sale of choice standard-bred trotting stock ever held in this city takes place next Thursday and Friday at the Bay District Track. The catalogues are printed and will be sent free to all applicants. It will pay every horseman in California to attend this sale.

AS A. H. MOORE now owns both the sire and dam of Direct (2:18, pacing 2:05½), there is no reason why additional "Black Whirlwinds" should not be produced, for Echora (2:23) and Director (2:17) will hereafter be mated. The two cost their present owner $77,350.

THROUGHOUT his whole trotting career, Rarus was never distance but once, which was in his first race in 1875. It was at Grand Rapids and was won by Molly Morris, the fastest heat being in 2:30, which was the one in which Rarus was first, and that heat was won by Gen. Grant, a chestnut horse by Waspie (2:25), a half-bred son of Green's Boslaw. The following season Gen. Grant reduced the record to 2:21.

THE Detroit Driving Park, now a member of the grand circuit, is to have a new track in place of the old course at Hamtramck. It was decided at a recent meeting to increase the capital stock to $250,000. It was also decided to hold running meetings as well as the scheduled events for trotters.

BETSY AND I, the dam of Moquette, 4, 2:10, died at A. H. Moore's Cloverdale Farm, Colma, Pa., on the 2d inst., at the age of twenty-one years, of congestive colic. She was a bay, by Ericsson, 2:30½, out of the thoroughbred mare Mollie Lincoln, by imp. Australian; second dam Laura Bruce, by Star Davis.

THE attention of horsemen is called to the advertisement of James E. Berryman, the well-known driver and trainer. His work on the circuit last year with Lenmar, 2:16½, is well remembered. Jim handled Felix, 2:18, and Westmont (2:01½ with running mate), Socrates, 2:16½; Peter Whetstone, 2:27½, Charley West, 2:19½, and a score of others.

JOHN KINNER has quite a string of young trotters at his training farm just below San Mateo, among them several that are very fashionably bred. Mr. Kinner is the owner of Littlefoot, a Patchen stallion with a record of 2:31, but this is no mark of his speed, so he will be extensively entered in the purse races this summer.

GEORGE W. INGRAHAM, the well-known horseman, died recently of paralysis. He was the owner of Del March, record 2:11. Among the horses he has driven to their records are Robert McGregor, Roy Wilkes, Nat Kirkwood and Wilkes Bryno, a full brother to Del March. Deceased was fifty years old.

J. M. LEARNED, a well-known farmer and stock-raiser, died last week at Stockton. Mr. Learned was 73 years of age. In early days he brought the largest band of horses across the plains ever gathered by one man. He had old Poscora, sire of the dam of Poscora Hayward in this string, and until the day of his death, loved to speak of the wonderful game qualities of this horse and his descendants.

THERE are over one hundred grand looking geldings at the Vina Stock Farm; it is Superintendent Covey's intention to have them all trained thoroughly for use as roadsters. Among the lot there are over twenty splendidly matched teams. There is one thing very peculiar about the progeny of Electioneer and his sons, the majority resemble each other in color, gait and disposition.

W. B. FASIG reports that the prizes offered to those who can come nearest the price Sidney will fetch, have inspired a perfect avalanche of guesses from all parts of the continent. These have been coming in at the rate of about 300 a day, so that there will be 25,000 or more altogether. They range from $205,000 down to one absurd prediction of $3,000, but the average estimate is about $75,000.

THE grand-looking trotting stallion, James Madison, 2:17½, is at the Oakland race track. It is stated that his colts and fillies are the finest-looking, strongest-formed and most perfect trotters seen when compared with those by any other sire. There will be a number entering the 2:30 list this fall. His service fee is only $50, and at this price there is no better horse in California to day.

MUCH is expected at the races at Santa Ana this season. Many enthusiasts are urging that the Orange County Fair Association give a three days' spring race meeting. There is little doubt but that such a meeting could be successfully held in that city, for with the number of race horses now in the county they could hold a pretty fair meeting should no outside horses enter.

ODDWOOD, the two-year-old pacer owned by S. A. Goldstein, of Santa Ana, is a youngster that much is expected of in the near future. He is the son of Silkwood, 2:07½, and his dam is Ricetta, the great race mare, now in Los Angeles. There are many other youngsters coming on that promise well, and some world-breaking records may be looked for the coming season.

A BILL before the Ohio Legislature is to prevent the use of unsound stallions in the stud. It provides that the Probate Judge in each county of the State shall appoint a veterinary surgeon to examine and qualify stallions, for which owners shall pay a license of $8. Of this amount the examiner is to get $2, and the remainder to go to the State.

THE humiliating position of the Sacramento Bee, since the decision of the District Board of Appeals in the Stamboul case, has almost driven Kearney, McHugh and McCloud into the Salvation Army with the new hymn:

"How doth the little flighty Bee
Delight to bark and bite;
It gave us such notoriety
That we've dropped out of sight."

THE air was full of horse talk in Santa Ana on the 16th inst., for horsemen were there from all parts of Southern California, to attend the auction sale of standard-bred horses at the Plaza ranch. The sale was not a success, for the horses were in very bad condition and bidding was light. However, Mr. Willets has decided to hold these sales annually, at a more opportune season.

SILKWOOD, the great pacer, will again be put into training and go for a record this year. Knowing ones in this county always had serious doubts that the black beauty was to go into retirement, and so the announcement did not create any surprise. It is safe enough to say that the horse will not only be driven for a record, but will also be seen in races during the coming campaign.—Los Angeles Herald.

OVERLAND, bay stallion, died at Lakeview, Or., January 10th. He was about twenty-five years old, and was a vigorous and well-preserved horse at the time of his death, which was caused by an accident in the barn. Overland was brought to California about 1869 by L. J. Rose. In his prime he was one of the fast ones. The horse was well known in Northeastern California and Southern Oregon. He was owned by S. N. Rehart, of Lakeview, for many years.—Rural Spirit.

T. H. GRIFFIN alias "Major Griffin" left Los Angeles for the East last Tuesday. He must have been a wonderful driver and trainer for he actually claims to have given Little Albert, Maud, Nimrod, Pearl, Dr. Swift, Edwin C., Redwood, Maudee and Holly their best records. The reporter to whom he imparted this information never knew the "Major" as well as the people of Santa Rosa, Napa and Petaluma; if he did, he would never have published the above item.

IN the combination sale to take place on the 15th of March T. C. Snider, of Sacramento, will send five very choicely-bred young mares and fillies. We understand that among them is a filly by Director, 2:17, out of Grace (dam of Creole (p), 2:20), by Buccaneer 2656, second dam Mary (dam of Apex, 2:26, Sterling, sire of six in the list; Letta, dam of Wayland W., 2:24, etc.) by Flaxtail 8132; third dam by Bright Eyes, son of Boanerges. This filly is a pure-gaited trotter and perfect in form, and with this breeding ought to be a very valuable mare either on the track or in the harem.

THE stakes for the autumn meeting of the Cumberland Park Association, Nashville, Tenn., have filled to repletion. The Glen Mayo Stake for yearling trotters has 45 entries; the Melrose Stake for two-year-olds, 80; the Ewell Stake for three-year-olds, 37; the Hermitage Stake for four-year-olds, 20, and the Oak Hill Stake for trotters eligible to the 2:18 class, 25 entries. The class stakes have filled as follows: 2:28 class, 34; 2:23 class, 30; 2:24 class, 32; 2:19 class, 17; 2:25 class, pacing, 34; 2:15 pacing class, 22; two-year-old pacing, 24; three-year-old pacing, 16. The total list of entries for the thirteen stakes foot-up to 417.

THE barns and stables at the Sonoma Stock Farm are completed, but the new mile track will not be in readiness for working this summer, consequently the owner, J. G. Fair, will send the trotters to the Petaluma track. The three stallions at the farm will be given race records this fall there. One is Vasco, by Harold out of Magic, by C. M. Clay; Tarc, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, dam Madame Baldwin, by The Moor 870, and Sarguna, by Stamboul, 2:07½, out of Oakland Maid, 2:22. There are several very promising colts and fillies among the youngsters that will be seen on the circuit this fall. R. D. Crawford, the superintendent, has them looking splendidly.

DR. SALE, the owner of Temple Bar, 2:17½, who with his horse, was expelled at the Grand Circuit meeting at Cleveland in 1891, has sued the Cleveland Driving Park Company for damages to the extent of $110,000. This is a slight let down in the figures, as he has a suit for $150,000 pending against the National Trotting Association for its action in confirming the decree of the Cleveland Association. The trial or trials will be looked forward to with a good deal of interest by owners of stallions with records of from 2:16 to 2:18, as they will doubtless be eager to learn how such a horse can be made to earn that amount in a year. Before these two suits are over it is quite on the cards that the Doctor will learn the truth of the old adage, that a certain class of people rush in where angels fear to tread.

FROM a geographical standpoint, Oregon and Washington should have two racing circuits, says the Rural Spirit. That portion lying east of the Cascade range would make a most desirable circuit by commencing at Baker City, thence to La Grande, from La Grande to Pendleton, thence to Walla Walla and Spokane and Moscow and other points, while this portion could form a very convenient circuit by commencing at some point on Puget Sound, Vancouver, Portland, Salem, Independence, Albany and other points south. We do not mean by this to divide the racing interest, for we believe the breeders throughout the district should be united even more than they are at the present time, but our territory is so large that local interest would be advanced by having two circuits with stakes and purses open to all horses throughout the district.

THE executors of the Valen-in estate completed arrangements with Martin Carter, of the Nutwood Stock Farm, for the leasing of Direct Line 22,117, for the season of 1898. It is quite an honor for a horse to be placed in the position of honor so long held by Sidney, 2:19½. Direct Line will have opportunities in the stud unequaled by any horse in California, that he will prove worthy of them no one who has ever seen him or studied his pedigree will deny. Direct Line's sister, Zeta Carter, was selected by Monroe Salisbury on account of her wonderful speed; he entered her for several $10,000 stake races. Direct Line is by Director, 2:17, dam Lida W., 2:18½ (dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½), by Nutwood, 2:18½; second dam Belle, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31; third dam Rebel Daughter, by Williamson's Belmont. He is one of the finest-formed stallions in this State, and although never worked for speed he has shown his ability to get a low record. He will be trained by Millard Sanders this fall.

MANY pedigrees have been clearly and correctly traced after having remained forgotten for years, of which perhaps that of Waxy, grandam of Sunol (2:08½), is one of the most notable. There are other cases, like that of Shanghai Mary, grandam of Electioneer, Mrs. Candler, dam of Ericsson, grandam of Clark Chief, great-grandam of Lyle Wilkes, great-grand-grandam of Sultan, etc., where no clue has ever been obtained upon which any one placed the least confidence. There are numerous other instances, many of which will probably never be known, where, after remaining untouched for years, the wrong trail has been taken and a pedigree correctly traced which was not the pedigree of the animal in question, but the true pedigree of some mare which had been owned by the same person, but which, perhaps, had never been bred at all, and quite likely was of entirely different breeding from the one whose pedigree it was the intention to trace. There is always more or less doubt about the correctness of the extension of any pedigree which has remained long untraced, but more particularly so if finally different from the version which, though unverified, has all along been given.

NANCY LEE foaled Nancy Hanks, 2:04, when she was eight; Fleetwing foaled Stamboul 2:07½, when she was fourteen; Evantide foaled Kremlin, 2:07½, when she was fifteen; Waxana foaled Sunol, 2:08½, when she was eight; Nell foaled Belle Vara, 2:08½, when she was nine; Miss Russell foaled Maud S., 2:08½, when she was nine; Dame Winnie foaled Palo Alto, 2:08½, when she was eleven; Gussie Wilkes foaled Allerton, 2:09½, when she was five; Atlanta foaled Alix, 2:10, when she was five; Midway foaled Jay-Eve-See, 2:10, when she was thirteen; Betsy-and-I foaled Moquette, 2:10, when she was sixteen; and Gretchen foaled Nelson, 2:10, when she was fifteen years of age. The age of Ella, the dam of Martha Wilkes, is not recorded, but as her sire, Clark Chief, died in 1871, and the champion race mare was foaled in 1883, she must have been at least eleven years old. This completes the list of 2:10 brood mares, from which it will be gathered that Atlanta, dam of Alix, and Gussie Wilkes, dam of Allerton, divide the honors as the youngest dam of a 2:10 performer at the time of foaling, while Betsy-and-I, Moquette's dam, was the oldest. The average age of the mares named, except Ella, at the time their famous sons and daughters were foaled figures out at eleven years.

The Saddle.

YO TAMBLEN is making a fine winter, and is now in the best of condition.

STARTER FERGUSON has engaged to start at the Louisville spring meeting.

It is said that that good race horse, Poet Scout, will not stand training this year.

It is expected that nearly 100 horses from this portion of the State will take part in the Los Angeles meeting.

ED. CORRIGAN has signed Bob Hoggett to ride for him this year at 105 pounds. Hoggett was J. M. Brown's first jockey last year.

ROBERT SMITH, the well-known horseman, is expected to arrive here soon with a big string of horses from Hugh Kirkendall's place near Helena, Mont.

MRS. JOHN M. CLAY, of the Ashland Stud, Lexington, Ky., claims the name Bright Phebus for the yearling colt, by Falsetto, dam Buff and Blue, by War Dance.

JOHN E. MADDEN, Lexington, sold to W. B. Jennings Washington City, two three-year-old chestnut fillies, Beautiful Bells, by Onondaga and Deception, by imp. Deceiver, for $3,500.

D. SWIGERT, of Kentucky, has sold to James McLaughlin, the ex-crack jockey, the bay colt, two years old, by Glenelg, out of Malaya, and the brown colt, two years old, by Tremont, out of Kith.

THE Hamilton Jockey Club has been organized with J. M. Latrige president. A running meeting will be given the first three days in June when purses and stakes aggregating $2,000 will be offered.

G. D. WILSON, of Lexington, Ky., has sold to R. A. Swigert the black yearling colt Potsdam, by Portland, out of Ann Fife, dam of Tremont. Theyoungster is said by good judges to be a wonder.

"MARTY" and "Mike" Bergen, the well-known jockeys, are to become horse-owners. They have been considering the matter for a long time, and propose to gradually acquire a string of runners.

JOSEPH J. BURKE has been appointed presiding judge for the great Washington Park meeting and C. H. Pettingill starter. These men are considered to have no superiors in their respective lines.

Among the promising two-year-olds at Sacramento are a Cheviot filly out of Frisa, by Flood; a Joe Hooker filly from Trifle, by Dasher, and a Greenback filly owned by E. S. Paddock, of Forestville, Cal.

CHARLES KERR, of Bakersfield, has ten horses in training at his private track on Antrim Stock Farm. It is expected that several of them will race at the Los Angeles meeting, which begins March 18th.

DROMEDARY races have become quite popular in Algiers. A breed of white dromedaries is being developed for the sport. In the French colony at Algeria there are frequent trotting and running races for horses.

H. TAYLOR, now riding at Oakland, is clearly the best jockey at the Athens of the Pacific, having a good seat, excellent hands and feet, and besides is a good judge of pace. His percentage of winnings is very high.

PHIL DWYER has a two-year-old full brother to Hanover that is said to be a perfect picture of the old horse. The youngster showed some clever work last fall and it is expected will cut quite a figure in this year's racing.

DR. BOWHILL, of Chesterfield Farm (the old Hinkston ranch), drives the neatest turnout in this vicinity. He has a genuine English dog cart with docked-tail runner, harness and everything to match.—Sonoma Democrat.

SPECIMENS of the work of the jockeys and stable boys who attend the night school at Guttenberg are to be bound in a neat volume and sent to the World's Fair. The school has been a success under the direction of Professor A. J. Demarest.

SEAMSTRESS, by Three Cheers—Una, by Daniel Boone, has been bred to imp. Merriwa, while others recently booked to the young Australian horse are Edna K. (dam of Duke Stevens), by Thad Stevens, and a mare by Joe Hooker, dam Nellie W.

The death of Barcaldine meant a loss of $8,000 on the present season to his owner, Lady Stanford. Colonel Barlow originally bought the horse for her for $7,000, and she objected strongly to the price, but at the stud Barcaldine earned this sum many times over.

JOCKEY GEORGE MILLER and his friend Joe Magee returned from Paso Robles last Sunday night much improved in health, and the former went right to work helping to get the Williams horses in George Covington's charge in shape for the coming campaign.

COL. CALEB DORSKY, Oakdale, Cal., has sold to Willie Spence, the chestnut yearling colt Derby, by Cyclone, dam Wanza, by Thad Stevens; second dam Marie, by Spectre; third dam Lady Melrose, by Melbourne Jr., etc.; consideration private. The youngster is exceedingly promising.

EDWARD CORRIGAN says that the Coney Island Jockey Club is ready to revoke the order barring his entries at Board of Control tracks, provided he will dismiss the Huron case for payment of second money claimed to be won in the Futurity. Mr. Corrigan adds that he will only settle through the courts.

THE death is announced of the English stallion, Bertram (sire of Robert the Devil), whose late owner, Mr. A. C. Barclay, died only a few weeks ago. Bertram was foaled in 1869, and had become so infirm that it was found necessary to destroy him. At the stud he was a failure, except in getting Robert the Devil.

WALLY WEAVER, a well-known Colorado jockey who was ruled off at Hawthorne lately for the little pleasantry of lingering too long at the post, is now in Denver running a club room in the opera house. He will make an effort to be reinstated at the next Overland meeting. This idea of being sent over the road for life is rough on professional jockeys.—Denver Field and Farnu.

LONGSTREET seems to be better in his feet than at any other time of his life, and his legs are giving his trainer little concern. It is generally conceded that he will stand training. He is now in the aged division, having passed his seventh year. This will be his last season on the turf.

THE erratic and sulking Duke of Milpitas, debarred from starting for about a month, is once more in the good graces of the club, and started twice during the week, winning his second essay in very easy fashion. He acted moderately docile at the post in New Orleans compared with former exhibitions.

TENNY is now at the new Dixiana farm in Kentucky, where he is to enter the stud. Mr. D. T. Pulsifer's great racer was five years on the turf and won $90,290 in stakes. Out of sixty-five starts he was first twenty-five times, second sixteen times and third twelve times. He was unplaced only twelve times.

THAT James R. Keene is going into the business of breeding thoroughbreds on a large scale can be judged by the fact that he has already purchased through English commissioners thirty mares and has authorized the purchase of twenty more. What stallion he will have at the head of his stud, however, is not at present known.

ISAAC MURPHY will be seen in the saddle on the Western tracks this year, but he evidently realizes that his days for riding are nearly over, and is forming the nucleus of a strong stable. Such an entirely competent judge of the capacity of horses should in time become a really great trainer, just as he has been a really great jockey.

A BILL has been introduced in the New Jersey Legislature proposing to prohibit racing in that State between the first day of November in any year and the first day of April of the succeeding year. It provides imprisonment and heavy fines for violators of its provisions, and has caused consternation in the ranks of the adherents of the winter tracks.

ISAAC MURPHY, the well-known colored jockey, has purchased of Mrs. Ed Israel the following bred two-year-olds, for a reported price of $4,200; Valiant, ch. c. 2, by The Chevalier, dam Placid, by King Ernest; Norvin, b. c. 2, by George Kinney, dam Tourmaline, by Sensation, and Enid, br. f. 2, by Chevalier, dam Little Emily (for. Little Maude), by Foster.

SAN RAFAEL, by Gano, out of Glenita, by imp. Glenelg, a four-year-old, died at the training stable on the Santa Anita ranch on Saturday, the 10th inst., after a brief attack of colic. He was a rather good-looking colt, but had never won a race, yet high hopes were formed of him, as he had never been right till this spring. He died before anybody knew anything about him.

A SPECIAL from New Orleans, dated February 17th, says: Richard Croker, the Tammany chief, uncovered his reason for coming to New Orleans yesterday. Before the races he called on John McCafferty at the grandstand and offered him $30,000 spot cash for his filly. Helen Nichols, 3, by Irquois—Orphan Girl. McCafferty told Mr. Croker that he was flattered, but could not sell Helen Nichols.

THE first foal at Mr. Marcus Daly's Bitter Root Stock Farm, Hamilton, Mont., was dropped January 4th, by Clara (dam of Clarendon), by imp. The Ill Used, to imp. Inverness. This is also the first foal of this stallion, who, it will be remembered, was a high class two-year-old in England and was bought for a very large price. The climate proved too warm for him here, and he was in consequence relegated somewhat prematurely to the stud.

THE foals are coming very thickly at the Santa Anita farm and the matrons are looking splendidly, says "Hidalgo" in the Los Angeles Herald. There are five already by The Hook, four by Emperor of Norfolk, three by Gano and two by Verano. Ogarta, the handsome daughter of Longfellow, has been mated with Emperor of Norfolk. The pick of the foals to my eye is the one by The Hook, out of Miss Ferd The one out of Glenita by the same sire, is 43 inches high at one week old, but there is too much daylight under him.

A NEW YORK dispatch dated February 21st read as follows: "White Hat" Dan McCarty's judgment by default for $10,000 against the Altonwood Stock Farm was set aside to-day by Justice Andrews in the Supreme Court. In his order the Judge intimates that he believes that the suit is not defended in good faith. He orders the default opened only on condition that the defendant pay $100 to McCarty's attorney, that he try the case when it is reached upon the calendar, and that if McCarty has gone home to California in the meantime, the defendant shall pay his expenses to New York and pay for his maintenance here during the trial. McCarty is as mad as a hornet, but he can't help himself.

THE New York Spirit writer on turf superstitions got out a very readable article on that subject, some two weeks ago, but he is "away off" on supposing that the mile record-breaker, Salvator, took his name from a brand of beer. Mr. Haggin's father was a small planter and stock-grower in Kentucky, but bred a very select type of shorthorn cattle. Everybody had slaves in those days, and one of the elder Haggin's favorite body servants was an old negro whose name was Salva-tor, with the accent on the second syllable as if it spelt "vay." He planned the boyish sports of the now famous copper millionaire, and half a century after the faithful old slave's death, the country rang with the praises of a horse named in his honor. It is a poetic spot in the nature of a man in whom the love of money seems to have absorbed all other feelings.—"Hidalgo" in Los Angeles Herald.

DR. GIDEON L. KNAPP, who is one of the owners of G. W. Johnson, is confident of the colt standing the necessary preparation, but he had him fired and blistered so as to make doubly sure. Harry Campbell, who has charge of Don Alonzo, says the big son of Long Taw is all right, and wintering superbly. Don Alonzo is the cause of more heated arguments than any other horse on the turf, some claiming that, while fast, he is a coward of the most ardent type, while others urge his right to be considered the greatest race horse of his age out last year, utterly forgetting or overlooking Morello. The colt had no stronger supporter last summer than Mr. John A. Morris. "I could make him beat any two-year-old that's out as far as you can throw a rock," was his way of putting it one day at Monmouth Park, when, after leading by several lengths at the half-mile pole, he barely staggered home in front of St. Michael. Mr. Morris thought the colt carried too much flesh in his races. In Michael F. Dwyer's stable he will not carry too much flesh when he goes after the money.—New York Sun.

C. BRUCE LOWE, one of the most popular and well-known Australians, and who selected Sir Modred and Darebin for the Rancho del Paso stud, will arrive in this city from Sydney early in the month of April. He will at that time bring from the land which has produced so many racers and sires two of the most noted animals on the Australian turf, bred in the purple and fit to grace any stud in the world. In fact, we are informed that these stallions will be the equals if not the superiors of Sir Modred and Darebin in every particular. The truly wonderful showing that Sir Modred and Darebin have made in this country as sires should be a guarantee that the horses Mr. Lowe will bring to California will be something to enthuse over, and his coming will be awaited with interest by our breeders, if not those of Kentucky and Tennessee.

A LOCAL contemporary, speaking of good racehorses from Oregon with lots of Printer blood in their veins, mentions Misty Morn in the list. The speedy mare has not a drop of this quarter-horse blood in her make-up, being by St. Paul (son of Alarum and Lady Salyers, by Longfellow), dam Why-not, by George Wilkes (son of Asteroid and Emma Wright, by imp. Margrave); second dam Flora A., by Tom Bowling (son of Lexington and Lucy Fowler, by imp. Albion); third dam Florence I., by imp. Australian; fourth dam Charlotte Buford, by Lexington, her dam the great broodmare Kitty Clark, by Glencoe, and on through the Miss Obstinate and imp. Cub mare families to twenty-second dam, Layton Barb mare. There is no Printer blood in this, as far as we can see, but more Lexington than one can find in most pedigrees. The grandam of St. Paul was by Lexington, George Wilkes was by Asteroid, son of Lexington, Tom Bowling was by Lexington himself, as was Charlotte Buford, Misty Morn's fourth dam—four crosses in all.

FROM the present outlook Detroit will have two new tracks next year, although one of them is not determined upon as yet. The Detroit Driving Club will surely lay out a track with all modern improvements and it will be more complete than any of the Grand Circuit courses. The plan of Washington Park, the finest in the West, is regarded as a good model now, and within a very short space of time the club will have settled upon all the details. The new track will be so built as to accommodate both harness and running horses, as experience at Washington Park shows that records can be broken at any gait on that fast course. The Driving Club has done much in the way of giving Detroit a reputation as a racing center, and the repeated dividends, while other clubs had all they could do to come out even, show the appreciation of the people. Better racing has not been seen on any track than at Hamtramck, and the club will endeavor to make this, the closing year of the old course, a fitting wind-up of a long and prosperous existence. Horses will be here from all quarters of the country, and the indications are that the triumph in the stake race will be even brighter than that of any of the four horses that have carried away thousands of dollars on account of their superior speed.

THE reinstatement of Tom Loates, the English jockey who has been refused a license by the Stewards of the Jockey Club during the past two years, seems to have been the cause of considerable discussion in the English sporting papers, though the general tone of the press favors the act. Tom Loates was one of the most brilliant and popular light-weight jockeys of his day, and his return to the pigskin will be warmly welcomed by the race-going public at large. Two other excellent jockeys, W. Warne and Martin, have been reinstated, the present scarcity of first-class jockeys in England having had a great deal of weight in causing the stewards to relent in their cases, as well as that of Tom Loates. The friends of Charles Wood, who was deprived of his license five years ago, were hopeful that his name would be found among the list of those from whom the bar had been removed, but such proved not to be the case. Wood's case seems peculiarly hard, for he has borne his punishment like a man, and it has been a most severe one, when it is remembered that Wood's income for legitimate riding fees was proved on the trial to be $15,000 per annum, while the legitimate presents given him by owners amounted to $10,000 more.

THE phrase, "That beats Boh Tail" is not uncommon even now in many parts of the country, especially in the South. Its origin is traceable to a race which occurred about 1840, or shortly before that year, on the famous Fairfield track on the Mechanicsville turnpike, near Richmond, Va. In those days Boh Poindexter lived in Richmond. He was a sporting man, wore fine clothes and owned a number of horses. Among his animals was one he named Pizarro, a plain bay gelding, with black mane and tail, the latter bobbed short. There was nothing extraordinary about the horse, and nobody looked upon him as a racer. But Poindexter took a notion that he could run. He used to drive Pizarro about Richmond hitched to a buggy. On the day that he was advertised to appear on the track a great crowd was present and the excitement ran high, for a good deal of money had been put up on the other horses. To the astonishment of everybody Pizarro beat every horse on the track, and the people went fairly wild. Boh-tailed Pizarro never made much of a record. He won two or three races and then went to pieces. For years afterward when anything extraordinary happened in that section it was said of it, "That beats Boh Tail."—Baltimore American.

CHARLES L. FAIR's stable this season consists of ten horses. The bright particular star is, of course, expected to be Yo El Rey, the two-year-old brother to Yo Tambien, and half-brother to El Rio Rey, Emperor of Norfolk, Key del Rey, The Car, etc. In Floodgate, by Flood, dam imp. Rosetta, by Struan, and Dare, by imp. Darebin, dam Carrie Covey, by Maudy, Mr. Fair has two promising three-year-olds, whose chances in the American Derby have already received some consideration. The former is quoted at twenties, while the latter was out from twenty to ten to one. The other three-year-old in the stable is the bay filly Princess, by imp. Cheviot, dam imp. Music, by Prince Charlie. The only old horse is Gibson, the five-year-old gelding, by Joe Hooker, dam by Oregon Charlie, who made a great reputation for himself as a sprinter here this winter, beating, among others, Geraldine. All the two-year-olds in the string are by Joe Hooker. Besides Yo El Rey, there are two colts—Uno Colorado, dam Jessie R., by Hubbard, and Challenge, dam Mattie Glenn, by imp. Glen Athol. The fillies, three in number, include Dolly Mac, dam Lou Spencer, by Norfolk, and so full sister to Dolly Mac; Ella Smith, dam Countess Zeika (dam of Don Jose, El Corrigan, Poctello, etc.), by Norfolk, and a filly called Virginia, Richard Harvey is the trainer, and the well-known jockey, Billy Hill, who will be remembered as Al Farrow's usual pilot, will ride for the stable.

MONBARS, the famous four-year-old, was sold at auction in New York last Thursday for $13,000.

Wanted—a Timer!

There never was a record made that was not the subject of dispute among the men who claimed to be timers. This remark was made by an old-time horseman last week at the investigation of Stamboul's performance when he captured the trotting stallion's crown. The more a person contemplates this truism the stronger becomes the belief that there must be a remedy—a remedy that will and must cure this dreaded ailment. There have been many improvements made in hooting, shoeing and training trotters besides the methods employed to make the tracks "fast" and the sulkies noiseless and easy to draw, but the timers and judges have had no attention paid to their wants by the associations. The age of electricity is here, still, that great agent, which has almost become a universal necessity, has not been used to advantage on our race tracks. "You press the button and we will do the rest" is a command never heard at our race courses, for the simple reason the idea of using it has never been thought of. The place where the distance judge stands, the stations where the patrol judges and the starting judges are on the track, the musicians' stand and the stables should all be connected with the judges' stand by wires. If the patrol judges hears or sees anything that looks like foul riding at the quarter, half, or three-quarter poles, or at any place they may stand, they could, if the wires were placed under the top rail on the inner fence, signal by means of the "button" to the judges' stand and report before a decision was rendered. If it is necessary to stop the musicians from discoursing sweet music in order to have the judges make an announcement, a gentle pressure on the button will have the desired effect. If the trainers are slow about getting their horses in readiness, or if it is desirable to give them a preliminary warning, a touch on the button will transmit the current to the gong, and the noise will apprise them of the exact time to prepare.

This is all very well in its way, but there is another subject which is of far more importance than even these valuable adjuncts to the old-style ornaments in the judges' stand, and that is a large chronograph or time clock so placed that it can be seen by every one across the track. Its face should be at least thirty-six inches in diameter; it should have two split-second hands and one small dial with a minute hand. This clock should be manufactured exactly like the best timers and tested for its accuracy before being purchased. The hands should be started and stopped by electricity. When the horse's nose comes to the wire a pressure on the button by the timer causes a gong (which is below and outside of the clock) to sound and the hands to mark off the time. Everyone opposite can see and hear it, and every one will know that no one is fooling with the hands. When the quarter is reached one hand is made to stop long enough to be noticed by the official whose duty it is to note it, and when each quarter is thus taken down an accurate statement can be entered in the clerk's book. At the wire, as the horse gets his nose again under it, the clock is stopped and the gong sounded. The public can see the exact time, for the hands will remain stationary until thrown back into position by a little wire previous to the next heat being called.

There need be but one timer, and if he has good eyes and practices a little with this clock he will be able to give satisfaction where it has never been given before. There will be no room for disputes, and "misplaced judges" with telescopic optics, like Kearney, will find their occupations gone. The hundreds of men with cranky time-pieces will not shout "up!" in a discordant chorus when the horse is passing the various quarter posts of the mile; in fact, everything will be conducted in a more satisfactory and scientific manner than at present.

Who will be the first genius to introduce this innovation on our tracks? A fortune awaits him, for when once given a fair trial it will be adopted by every association in the United States. The question of timing horses by all kinds of watches is an important one, and has caused many disputes and engendered harsh feelings among the most prominent horsemen for many years. With this appliance there will be an end to all this, and as the aim of our associations is to have the races conducted "fairly and honestly," the quicker such an improvement is adopted the nearer will they come to accomplishing their desires. The electric wires around the track will prove of incalculable benefit also, and when once adopted will never be abandoned.

The Sacramento Bee, an evening paper published in our Capital City, discovered a "honey's nest" at Lodi and sent a reporter to gather the "honey." He sent in six columns of "stuff" gathered from the swipes and blackmailers who have recently received their deserts from the District Board of Appeals of the National Trotting Association. Such "padding" may be called "sensational" news, and it may have caused some people (who had not heard the rumors) to buy a few copies, but the money received for the "news" is as nothing compared to the thousands of dollars' worth of harm such an article might have done to the trotting horse industry of this State if the trial of these blackmailing extortionists had not followed so quickly. There is one consolation, in fact a salve to the wound inflicted by our contemporary, and that is, the Bee has not a wonderful circulation among horsemen, and consequently its sting will hardly be felt. All the newspapers in California, we rejoice to say, with the exception of this one, deferred making any comments on the charges made by the unknown swipes of Lodi; and all the editors, who gave the subject any thought, believed there "was a nigger in the woodpile," but, for the sake of the trotting horse industry in California, anxiously waited for the investigation so that the "Senegambians" would be dragged out and made an example of. The Bee should profit by the lesson taught and not attempt to ruin the welfare of any great industry from a selfish desire to gain notoriety.

A Decision and Suggestion.

The decision in the matter of the Stamboul record and the other records made at Stockton which were investigated by the Board of Appeals for the Pacific District of the National Trotting Association appears in another column. It is complete and comprehensive and should satisfy the demands of the National Association, for every means were adopted to get the facts pro and con in relation to the records which the American Trotting Register Association has decided should be rejected.

The Stamboul case was one that will go down into history as one of the most remarkable episodes that ever occurred on the trotting turf. The confession of the blackmailers, the admission of the conspirators and the deliberate falsehoods uttered which caused the expulsion of one and the suspension of the others are of such a despicable nature that they will never be forgotten. The judgment of the board in this case and in the upholding of all the records made will meet the approval of every fair-minded horseman in the land.

In view of the fact that the circumstances surrounding the cases just decided have had much to do with bringing a shadow of discredit on the performances made and a doubt as to the proper understanding of the rules of the American Trotting Register Association, a change should be adopted at once. The trotting horse industry is of such importance that this question of records and performances against time should be made so plain hereafter that there will be no room for dispute. A committee composed of members of the National Trotting Association, American Trotting Association and American Trotting Register Association should at once convene and draft laws and rules that will be easy of interpretation, and so simple and yet so strong that they will stand for all time. The misconception of rules, as now formulated, will not occur again, and all this harangue about the records, as made in Stockton, will be silenced. The rules in force now are faulty and capable of being misconstrued; this is acknowledged by every horseman who has ever taken the time to study them, so it is earnestly hoped that some action will be taken immediately to have the rules revised by a committee appointed, as suggested.

The following dispatch was received from Sacramento last Monday night: "At a meeting of the Directors of the Capital Turf and Driving Club to-night, it was decided to hold a spring meeting for five days in May, commencing with the 9th. The first and fifth days will be devoted to trotting and pacing, and the others to running. The entries to the running events will close March 11th, and for the other races on April 15th." This meeting, it will be observed, follows on the heels of the Blood Horse meet, and if as successful as the one of last spring, that it will be lengthened out, we have little doubt. See advertisement in another column.

The trotters at Palo Alto this year will have the benefit of drinking pure mountain water which comes from the springs above Searsville. Superintendent Reynolds reports every animal on the place healthy since its introduction. It will be remembered that he and Mr. Covey attributed most of the sickness among the horses last year to the impurity of the valley water, and it must be a gratification for them to know that their theories were correct.

A Little Reprimand.

"No horses allowed to start in any race unless duly registered." The conditions, etc., of the ruling of the Board of Control, are to be highly commended, but one point has not evidently been considered by the gentlemen forming this astute body. For instance, a horse's pedigree, etc., are filled out and sent with the accompanying fee, but no receipt or acknowledgement of any kind is generally received from the owner of the American Stud Book, and the horse-owner has simply to wait until the next number of the Stud Book appears. Now, it is self-evident if horse-owners required drubbing up to get them to register their foals, etc., a similar rebuke is not only necessary but entirely indispensable to the compiler of the records, in order that parties registering may be the recipient of this note of registration and an acknowledgement of receipt of the registration fee. The owner of the Stud Book, being placed in the possession of such a grand monopoly by the action of the Board of Control, causes horsemen to demand a little courtesy and prompt acknowledgment of communications by the Registrar.

In the American Trotting Register no complaint of this kind is necessary, for Registrar Steiner is always very prompt in answering every letter sent, and has always shown a willingness to aid applicants in their endeavors to register their trotting stock. His example might well be followed by the officers of other institutions.

Entries Close March 1st.

With the beginning of spring entries to the great Northwestern Association of Trotting and Pacing Horse Breeders will close. The races will take place at the beautiful Washington Park, Chicago, September 4th to 16th inclusive, just when the great Columbian exposition is in the zenith of its glory. Thousands, aye, tens of thousands will have gathered in the city by the lake shore at that time to witness the grand collection of exhibits from all parts of the world. The opportunity of presenting to these visitors a programme of races commensurate with the importance of the occasion has not been lost by this progressive association, as shown by their advertisement. The stakes are large and the conditions most liberal. There are fourteen stake and purse races for trotters and three for pacers, and the amount offered for these stake and purse races is $100,000. The secretary, R. L. Allen, of Joliet, Illinois, is extremely anxious to have all the crack trotters and pacers of California that are to visit the East take part in these races, and we can assure owners that they will be royally treated and the crowds they will see and the reputations their horses achieve will repay them an hundred fold. Read the advertisement carefully and make your entries at once. Remember they close next Wednesday.

THE San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Association should at once take steps to have McHugh, McCloud and Kearney prosecuted; the former, especially, should be made to suffer for the felony he committed. There should be no hesitancy on the part of the officials of this organization to do everything to make an example of these three men, who should be sent to State's prison for a term of years. The great wrong they have committed to the heirs of the benefactor of the Stockton race track; the way they perjured themselves and the means they adopted to extort money from the estate and the highest officials of the American Trotting Register Association are sufficient grounds for criminal action. If the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Association does not uphold its good name by prosecuting these scoundrels every fair-minded horse man in California will have his faith in the law-abiding principles which its officers profess very badly shaken, to say the least.

MOST of the Asylum Stock Farm horses are at the Bay District track, where they can be seen on and after tomorrow. The sale next week promises to be the best held in this State for years, and the universal opinion seems to be that the catalogue does not begin to state any of the qualities of the grand individuals in the consignment. Many a bread-winner and many a youngster that will become famous either as a sire of trotters or as a dam of 2:30 performers will be sold at a low figure, and an opportunity is offered to small breeders, as well as large ones, that must not be missed.

A. P. WAUGH, of this city, returned from Sacramento last Thursday, and reports that he saw at least ninety of the 120 members of the two houses, and, with one exception, they were in favor of passing the law preventing quack veterinarians from "practicing" in this State. This is the bill we have long been urging, and we are happy to hear Mr. Waugh's excellent report. Only well-qualified veterinarians will have a chance in the future in California.

Samuel Gamble on the Situation

SAN FRANCISCO, February 21.—I see that quite a number of lovers of the light harness horse performers seem to think that the bottom has dropped out of the trotting-horse market, as some gentlemen have maintained at the late sales in the East. As I have attended several sales the last three months and watched with interest the class of goods as a rule sold, it is my judgment the average prices were large. The prices of late years have been too high and the service fees for stallions were also too high. No stallion that has never produced speed himself is worth over $150; if a person pays over that sum to breed to a fast record he will, in most cases, meet with a loss. It is not a certainty in my judgment that because a stallion has a fast record that he will produce speed. I know well that there are men who are crazed with a record-breaker. To produce sure speed take Kremlin, 2:07½, Arion 2:10½, and no man can afford to pay over $200 service fee for them. Their great speed is not an assurance that they will produce speed. Here is one point that the breeding public have at last learned. The "king of stallions," Stamboul, is, up to date, an exception, for he has not only the fastest mile of any stallion, but he has produced more speed than any fast stallion, and only but one stallion has an equal number of speedy ones in the 2:30 list at ten years of age. No man can afford to pay $500 for a stallion's service unless he is a producer, and from a family that breeds on and down. If old George Wilkes was living a person could afford to pay $1,000 fee for a mare like Alma Mater or Lady Bunker, or the dam of the only Wilton or Red and Baron Wilkes; to such tried mares it would warrant one to pay $1,000 service fee. The same may apply to Electioneer, Beautiful Bells and Dame Winnie. There are many similar cases which may apply with the above. The public are learning all this and the breeder of trotting stock cannot afford to pay such high stud fees unless he is assured that he will get something for his money. To state that the selling of the king, Stamboul, 2:07½, for $41,000 means "the bottom dropping out of the trotting-horse market" is wrong, for he was before the auction block with that so-called American Trotting Register "wet blanket" over him, and his honest record of 2:07½ doubted by the leaders of that yearly almanac. The reports they received from the lowest scums of the trotting turf and blackmailers of the meanest order, and the slanderous assaults through letters being written by envious horse touts to parties in the East, claiming he was not a racehorse; that his produce would not be so-called bread-winners, etc., and that he was siring a new trotting family (neither a Wilkes nor an Electioneer) and was not in the wortless so-called trotting-horse fashion. You take such a load of wet blankets and place it on a great stallion, and if he sells for $41,000 he will do to go a long way to look at. I consider, under such circumstances, Stamboul out-sold any stallion yet offered and I honestly think that he out-sold any trotting stallion that was ever sold at auction, up to date. There never was in the history of the breeding of the territory, so much touting and back-capping around the sales as this season. No breeder can see anything but his stock, and the produce of Stamboul sold for less than they were worth on account of the wet blankets thrown over the king of all-around stallions. But, again, the young stallions do not sell for fair prices for there is no demand for them, as there are too many in the country; if they were gelded they would bring more money; and again buyers do not care to take the risk of buying and do their own gelding. A good gelding with speed will sell readily for road work, so my advice to the breeders is to make free use of the knife, for the geldings, as a rule, will out-sell the stallion colts. By using the knife. They are less expense to you by not registering them. You can turn a number out in your pasture together where your young mares prove their merit as producers, the world will know it. So you see that you will have no use for that trotting register (you save two dollars by this), for if a mare is not standard by her produce she is wortless to you, and if her produce is speedy, the world will know it, so you can keep your registry of your stock. The time has passed for an animal to sell well just because she is standard-bred; if she has merit, she will show at the sale, if she has not she will not bring much of a price. So I have learned that there is not much value in the trotting register. Bear in mind that the greatest producers of this day, as a rule, were not standard-bred mares; they made themselves so by their produce being speedy. The woods are full to-day of wortless so-called standard-bred brood mares, and they are some of the kind that are selling in some of the sales, that the public think are selling for nothing, so the cry goes up "the bottom is out of the trotting horse market." I have seen some of these so-called standard mares that were not worth thirty cents sell for three to five hundred dollars, yet men who don't know anything about the merits of such trash cry out "the bottom is dropping out of the trotting horse market." The superabundance of young stallions, the jealousy among breeders, who avoid attending one another's sales, the back-capping of stock and by-bidding at sales is ruinous. After a breeder has sold his stock for fair prices he goes the rounds and states that he sold nothing but culs, that he was weeding out and he did not sell his good ones. The purchaser does not like to hear such remarks and does not buy at that breeder's next sale. It hurts, and again there were so many entered the so-called 2:30 list that the merits of such speed is too common and looks cheap, and is cheap, for the market is over-supplied with that speed, and so many beating 2:20, 2:15, 2:12 and 2:10 last season, such a sudden change in fast records demoralized everybody, and makes a 2:15 and 2:20 trotting animal look cheap, when sold for $500 to $10,000, when under the circumstances they are high (all kinds of horseflesh are selling for the last two years too high, both trotting stock and running stock); the prices of all will be still lower; the risk is too great. As C. J. Hamlin says he thinks Stamboul is not worth that amount, $41,000, I will admit for speed alone, as there were so many to trot down better than 2:10 that it makes Stamboul and Kremlin's tin cup records of 2:07½ and 2:07½ look cheap. Perhaps it would not look out of place for me to state that the great Miss Russell family, Kremlin, 2:07½, and Maud S., 2:08½, had both tin-cup records as I see that that great many are led to believe that Kremlin's 2:07½, was made in a race. No, gentlemen, such is not the case. Kremlin, 2:07½, scored up and his driver nodded for the word and was sent away with the track all to himself, just the same as Maud S., 2:08½, Nancy Hanks, 2:04, Sunol, 2:08½, Palo Alto, 2:08½, Stamboul, 2:07½.

One was just as fair a trial of speed as the other. Yes, it is a great honor to this State that some gentleman, who have standing enough to have some influence with that American Trotting Register like such gentlemen as John Mc-

Cloud, Kearney and Mellugh, while such representative men as L. U. Shippee, Senator Ben Langford, A. Ashby, William Parker, Mr. LaRue, F. M. Corey should be ignored. One more word for Mr. C. J. Hamlin. He says that Stamboul has a reputed tin-cup record of 2:07½, which will not be allowed. Such may be the case with their American Trotting Register's almanac, for there are breeders who think that their American Trotting Register almanac does not care to show favoritism, who do not hold a complimentary ticket and it may be that they will try to count Stamboul out of his honest record yet of 2:07½, but the fair-minded breeders say that they will always recognize Stamboul as king of stallions up to date and can get along without this yearly almanac book. He says the Stamboul's are not bread-winners; he was not speedy and not a valuable stud horse. It may be so, but it looks to me a little too soon to quote that, for he has twelve trotters from two to five years old with records from 2:30 to 2:18 at ten years of age, and he trotted every year from his yearling form to his ten-year-old form, and the last four years made over one hundred leaps each year; besides this he lowered his trotting record (yearly) to 2:07½. Is there another stallion that has had a strain like that, and to be as sound as he is, if so I will go some distance to see him? I don't think there is a man living to-day that thinks as much of that noted tin-cup family (of Bell Boy, St. Bel, Chimes family) as I do. Yet it would take a small family to eat the bread that they won. Chimes and his full sister are the only ones that I know of that have not beaten 2:30, and the world knows well that Mr. Hamlin will place a record, and race all his stock that can do the act. He says: "Chimes can jog quarters in 0:33." So I say the same about his full sister Alta Belle. She could jog quarters the same way in 0:34. Yet such men as Hickok, Marvin, Richard Haver, Harry Whiting could not place a 2:30 tin-cup mark on her, and her owners did not believe that such a 2:30 record would sap her vital powers; yet the only two tin-cup performances that Stamboul's won are out of Electioneer mares, and one is the handsome Daghestan, with a two-year-old tin-cup record of 2:25½, and last half in 1:11. He is by Stamboul, dam Alta Bell (a full sister to Chimes). Mr. Haver and Walter Maben (two good judges) both say that he is as game a colt as they ever saw. Here is quite a maze for the breeders to figure out, that such a combination of tin-cup families should produce such a game, speedy two-year-old. Time alone will prove Stamboul's merit. As to bread-winners, no one's opinion can alter his outcome; I, for one, predict that he will sire bread-winners and speedy, sound, handsome animals. I can say that I do not own a stallion myself, so I am free to give my honest opinion. As to the developed sire Idea—yes, I am opposed to campaigning a stallion during his stud service, for I want all the vital power he has in the stud. I would not try to develop his speed after he was four years old; it is my opinion that he will prove more valuable in the stud. I like moderate exercise. Turn him loose in a paddock or a field (so your readers can judge my position on the developed sire idea); it is my opinion that the bottom has not fallen out of the trotting horse market. When a breeder has stock for sale that is up to the times—are useful, speedy, sound, with good color and looks—such stock is in demand to-day. Corbit, Case and the Stoner sales were good, and the prices great for the class of goods sold. The Hobart sale, after the first day, will go on record as one of the greatest of sales. Bowmans Bros.' Wilton sales were good. One word in justice to P. C. Kellogg, as I know that he is censured for talking too much and reading telegrams, etc., I will simply say that he did as he was told by James Cross, one of the executors of the Hobart estate, and I know that he did his best to satisfy all; the only mistake that I can see was that they did not postpone the selling of Stamboul until the next day at 11 A. M.

SAMUEL GAMBLE.

Oregon State Fair for 1893.

The premium lists in all departments were revised and added to in many instances. On the whole, the amounts of the premiums were increased.

On petition of several, the Board added to the premiums for swine a class for the Ohio improved Chester; and in poultry, also on petition, a class for pigeons was added.

In regard to the proposed improvements to the grounds and buildings, the Executive Committee was instructed to proceed as they deemed best for the interests of the fair and the people of the State. The State has appropriated $11,415 for new buildings and improvements, and these will be made with a view to future permanency.

The Salem Breeders' and Speed Association was granted the use of the grounds for a race meeting on July 4th, 5th and 6th.

The following speed programme was arranged for the annual state fair of 1893:

- 1—Yearling stake race, half mile, 2 in 3, $100 added.
- 2—Two-year-old stake race, 2 in 3, $250 added.
- 3—Three-year-old or under, stake race, eligible to 2:30, 2 in 3, $250 added.
- 4—Three-year-old or under, stake race, for pacers, 2 in 3, $250 added.
- 5—3:00 class, 3 in 5, purse $300.
- 6—2:40 class, 3 in 5, purse $300.
- 7—2:35 class, 2 in 3, for stallions, purse $300.
- 8—2:30 class, 3 in 5, purse $300.
- 9—2:30 class, pacing, 3 in 5, purse $400.
- 10—2:24 class, two mile heats, 2 in 3, purse $600.
- 11—Free-for-all, pacers and trotters, 3 in 5, purse $600.
- 12—Half mile dash, purse $200.
- 13—Three-fourth mile dash, purse $250.
- 14—Two-year-old stake, one mile, $250 added.
- 15—One and one-eighth miles, purse $400.
- 16—One and one-half miles, Oregon Derby for three-year-olds, $250 added.
- 17—One mile and repeat, purse $500.
- 18—One and one-quarter mile handicap, purse $100.
- 19—Five-eighths mile dash, purse $200.
- 20—Three-eighths mile dash, purse $100.

In all purse races entries name and close on August 1st, entrance to be paid on or before 6 P. M. of the day of the race. In all stake races nominations made and one-half entrance paid June 1st. Entries close and balance of entry paid on September 1st. In all purse races three to enter and two to start. In the handicap nominations close with half of entrance money paid by 11 A. M. the day before the race; weights announced at 1 P. M. the day before the race, and acceptance and balance of entry paid by 6 P. M. the day before the race. Entrance fee 10 per cent. of purse or added money.—Oregonian.

Long Branch.

This splendid son of the game Gibraltar (sire of Our Dick, p. 2:10½, Homestake, 2:14½, etc.) will make the season of 1893 at Oakland race track. Read the advertisement in another column and hook your trotting mares to this royally-bred horse.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

"A QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE."—I believe that this quotation is only when a legislator has been harshly treated by the powers, or charged with doing or saying something which is derogatory to his dignity or a discredit to his good name.

On the contrary, I desire recognition to offer an explanation which is due to an exhibition of kindly feeling on the part of my associates, and while peculiarly gratifying to be the recipient of such hearty well wishes, it has placed me in rather an awkward situation. I allude to the editorial note in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of last week, proposing me for judge at the spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, and making mention of my connection with the early history of that society. In the first place, I must be permitted to state that I had no hint of the intention or knew anything about it until I saw it in print. My connection with the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is entirely confined to the special department which is under my charge, and if anything I write is printed outside of that my signature is attached. It is very rare when I see a proof of other matter excepting my own, and the first intelligence I have of what the paper contains is the receipt by mail on Saturday morning, the day of publication.

As to my endeavors in assisting to organize the P. C. B. H. A., it was a labor of love, and the satisfaction of being instrumental in laying the foundation of a society which has stood the test of fifteen years has abundantly repaid me for the labor bestowed. The position I occupied brought me into greater prominence than others who bore the greater share of the heat and burden of the day, and to whom the main credit is due.

RESTRICTING STARTERS.—It appears to strike a majority of people, with whom I have conversed, that restricting the number of starters to six in a dash race was not good policy, especially with as light an entrance fee as five-per-cent. But after thinking over the question a few minutes, only a small minority who do not concur in calling it a move in the right direction. One of the reasons for adopting the innovation was the equalization of the horses at the starting point, as there are few trotting tracks which will admit of more than six horses abreast. Not so much of an equalization when the start from the stand as that is not far enough from the turn to give horses which have drawn places farther to the outside than third a chance to better their position until the disadvantage of the curve comes in the way. When the start is for fractional races such as one and one-eighth miles, one and three-sixteenths miles or at corresponding points on the backstretch, there is "straight going" enough after getting the word to make a good fight from the outset. In my opinion, however, there are greater advantages than equalizing the chances at starting, and that the innovation will be beneficial in heats as well as in dashes. The intolerable prolongation of scoring will be materially reduced, as with six horses or less the trouble of getting them together will be greatly lessened. The advantages from every point of view attending quick starts have been so thoroughly discussed that there is little necessity for repeating the arguments, that phase of the question having only one side, so far as relates to pleasing the spectators. That more than six harness horses in one field is not only an unwieldy number to the starter, but is also unsatisfactory to a large majority of the lookers-on is nearly as self-evident, and hence spectators will be still further pleased by the change. Owners will assuredly welcome the new order, there being far less danger of collisions and altogether a fairer chance for winning. Of greater interest to everyone when each contestant can be kept in view and the varying features of the race noted with some accuracy in place of the usual jumble, when large fields go off in confusion, and if the contest is at all close a general mixing up from the start to nearly all the way around.

When time classification governs with entries closing months, perhaps, before the date of trotting, there may be some valid objections to division, and even then when the purpose is clearly shown in the advertisement none that are really insuperable. Great care would have to be observed in the re-classification, and the method adopted be such that its fairness could not be questioned. That would not be difficult, for instance, if there were eleven horses, that many numbers could be placed in a box, and after a thorough mixing, owners or managers of horses each extract a ticket, the number on which would designate the classes, from one to six the first field, from seven to eleven the second, etc. "Drawing for places" could either be determined by these numbers or a subsequent lottery establish the positions.

Should there be book-betting on trotting races book-makers might not be pleased with the innovation. The more starters there are the "guessers" have a harder task, and making others do the guess-work is the big anchor of those who "lay the odds." Troublesome enough when there are only few starters, when these are of nearly equal capacity, but with a mob of horses fortune has a long way the advantage and plays a doubly important part in the game.

C. J. Humlin, universally conceded to be one of the most astute of trotting horse men, and for good management of a trotting meeting, under the old system, or a stable of trotters has no superior, in a late interview thus discourses: "In order to run a meeting successfully it is necessary to offer sufficiently large purses to insure a large entry list. The theorist clamors for shorter races, best two in three, and single dash events. They might do to fill in with, for a change, but will never become popular with horsemen. Why? Let me explain. Every man who pays five or ten per cent entrance fee is entitled to a fair show for his money. Supposing there are fifteen starters in a two-in-three contest, as at New York last year, what show would the horse drawing last position have of winning anything?" The large entry list is assuredly a potential aid for the success of a meeting; unfortunately, however, under the old dispensation, it was not of corresponding benefit to a large proportion of owners. Even with the money divided into four portions, every entry more than four while going to the credit of the Association which gave the purse was a direct loss to those who did not win any part of the money.

In the New York race mentioned by Mr. Humlin, if the old rule of ten per cent governed, the club was fifty per cent ahead from entries alone, after paying the purse; owners one hundred and ten per cent behind. Now the grand object of a change from old practices is to relieve owners from so onerous a tax and also give a better opportunity for trotters to earn more than formerly. That is the body of the trotters, the aggregate for them to win greatly increased, the expenses diminished.

Mr. Hamlin's objections to 2 in 3 races, that they do not give a man a fair show for his money, is hardly sound, and his illustration in which his horse Glendinnis had to "work his way," from the last position which he drew in the start for two heats, through the crowd in order to get a chance to win a money position" is a better example of the benefits which will follow restricting the number of starters. Let us suppose that there is a purse of say $2,000 in which there are fifteen to start. As shown before, owners have suffered a large loss by the engagement. If trotted under the amended conditions of the P. C. T. H. B. A., and the same clause to govern a 2 in 3 race as it does in dashes, the account would stand as follows:

|------------------------------------------------------|---------|
| Dr. To amount of purse..... | $2,000 |
| Dr. To 60 per cent added for three divisions..... | 1,200 |
| | $3,200 |
| Cr. By entrance received 5 per cent 15 sections..... | 1,500 |
| | $1,700 |

This $1,700 will have to be met by receipts outside of entrance money, and there are three races in place of one to give a chance for reimbursement. But what a big advantage to the owners. By the old plan four of them received $2,000, which has cost them in entrance money $800, having $1,200 to cover the other expenses. The new deviation gives nine owners $3,200, with $900 out for entrance money, a balance of $2,300, nearly twice as much as the old-fashioned ten per cent. 3-in-5, fifty per cent to first, twenty-five per cent to second, fifteen per cent to third and ten per cent to fourth afforded. The horse which could have won the purse had all started does not do as well as he would were there no divisions. In that case he would have obtained $800 more than his entrance money, against $540 nearly under the new order. The horse which would have got second money with the whole fifteen to start, it is fair to infer would have the best chance to win one of the firsts, so that he would be some $240 better off, and the winner of the third, assuming that he would have got the fifteen per cent. when the purse was held entire, receive nearly $440 more. It surely does not require arguments to prove that so far as owners are concerned the innovations adopted by the California association will be vastly beneficial, and the question hinges entirely on the proposition, Can it be made profitable enough in order to grant their benefits? Before attempting to answer that query it will be proper to state that there must be some methods adopted whereby the bulk of trotting horse-owners will not be so severely taxed in the future as they have been in the past for the benefit of a few. Mr. Hamlin cannot be blamed for adhering to systems which have done so well for the trotting park of which he is the minor owner, and for his stable, which is strong enough to take care of itself; and when he denounces those who suggest improvements as "theorists" it is in accordance with what may be expected from a person in his situation. And by the way, his opening remarks to the Courier reporter are characteristic of so conservative a man, and yet it will not answer to ignore good ideas if the person who advances them has not had "practical experience." "It is really amusing," Mr. Hamlin asseverates, "to read the theories advanced by writers of no practical experience. They attempt to tell all about running a successful trotting meeting, how to train a horse to trot or pace at will, the necessity of shorter races to please the public and the advantages of fast classes for stallions to prove which is the best horse for breeding purposes. As a rule, these theorists never owned a horse, cannot tell the difference between a handgale and a sweat blanket, and never had a penny's worth of interest at stake in the management of a meeting, save filing their application for a free pass two weeks in advance." This may all be true, and still the "theorist" may offer suggestions which are well worthy of consideration. But the necessity for changes in trotting methods is too palpable to be overlooked, and at least ninety-five per cent. of owners and breeders of trotters have come to that conclusion. The demand must be met, and as theory must always precede a practical exemplification of the truth of theory, trials are in order.

As frequently stated in previous articles, there are good grounds for advocating the changes which are contemplated, or rather which have been resolved upon by the P. C. T. H. B. A., that being the example which racing has set. Several of the innovations are warranted by that example, and that which is more particularly the theme of this paper is not entirely without a parallel in racing affairs. When the entries exceed ten the privilege has been granted, in some instances, of drawing without any forfeit being incurred, until the reduction brings the field to the proposed limit. Six horses in harness will occupy more room than ten under the saddle, and the dangers of collision much greater when sulkeys are a part of the paraphernalia. Apart from less risks, however, there are other advantages, and a further comparison between the race already cited and those which will take its place when the new theory is put in practice will not be far out of the way. I have not the papers at hand to learn the particulars of the race in New York when fifteen horses started, though in all probability there were at least five heats. With so many starters there would be the "long distance," one hundred and fifty yards, and it is also probable that the race was on the "scattering" order. Fifteen horses, and unless the Fleetwood track has been made a good deal wider than when I last saw it, there must have been three rows. Not much pleasure in watching the scoring of such a gang, still less in the delay which, in a majority of such cases, is inevitable. Part of the prologue, anyway, somewhat stale, flat and unprofitable, and after the word was given there must have been others in the same fix as Glendinnis, or worse, as the inference is from Mr. Hamlin's description, that he succeeded in two heats to "work his way through the crowd in order to get a chance to win a money position, while eleven of the fifteen were "outside" of any money. Now it may have been a very good race for one that was so heavily outnumbered, but at the best it is not at all likely that it would be nearly as attractive as three races with five starters in each, not one of which with any such obstacles as a gang in front to work its way through. Plain sailing, no necessity for zig-zag or tracking a fair field and as nearly an equal chance as can be secured on a "regulation track." Which would draw the most gate money? Which afford the most satisfaction to the spectators? Which evoke the most speculation? Suppose it were left optional with the assemblage whether there should be one race with fifteen starters, or divide the fifteen into three groups, and in place of the prospect of a tiresome drawing out of heats to settle the 3 in 5 contest, a succession of lively rounds, order in place of confusion, life, change, excitement? A hundred to one the vote would show an "overwhelming majority" for the new and improved order of trotting made popular. Were it left to the voice of the owners, among fifteen there might be three who felt so confident of victory that they were willing to take their chances with the whole array, and even then the better opportunity for winning within $160 of what the battle royal would return would surely turn the scale in favor of the more sensible arrangement.

The supreme test, however, is public support, and that to an extent which will more than repay for the heavier outlay. That this support will surely be granted I have every confidence, and that from the first trial, if those who have the management of light harness horses do their part.

RACEHORSE WANTED.—Under that title an article is copied from a California paper by the Kentucky Stock Farm in which rank injustice is done Sunol. To quote "Sunol, on the other hand, would curl up like a whipped dog when the pace grew stiff and the end of the journey looked far away. Marvin toadied and habied her along to the goal of queen, but he never thought for a moment that there was anything else in Sunol but a high turn of speed. * * * The other (Sunol) was a nervous, delicate thing, high-strung and full of notions, weak at heart, lacking courage, faltering and vacillating at critical moments, coming back into the driver's lap when another horse took hold of her." Were one to string out a list of epithets, corresponding to those he applies to Sunol, there would be some strong adjectives used, but the only explanation I can give is that the writer was in utter ignorance of the true attributes of the former queen and had a penchant for sensational writing. To that there can be added an antipathy to Palo Alto, as is shown by another part of the article, and coming as it does from a California source, may attract more attention than it would otherwise command.

Sunol commenced her racing career in 1888, then two years old, at Los Angeles, her first race a purse for two-year-olds which she won in 2:32½, 2:35—heating Visalia, by Stamboul. This was a pretty good beginning and in her second race at Petaluma she defeated Margaret S., by Director and Fortuna, by Florida, in 2:28½, 2:26½. Her next effort was to beat the 2:21 of Wildflower and that she accomplished on the Bay District track on October 19th, trotting in 2:20½ and on October 27th gained the two-year-old championship by trotting in 2:18. In 1889 she was taken to Napa, and while there was attacked with influenza, a severe case, and when I saw her it appeared as though her chances for trotting during the fall circuit was quite slim. Before recovering, in fact while still suffering, she was started at Petaluma against Lillian Wilkes and Margaret S. Sunol won the first heat, Margaret S. second, in 2:21½, Lillian Wilkes the second, third and fourth heats in 2:17½, 2:22, 2:25, Sunol heating Margaret S. in every heat. This was August 29th, and on September 5th she turned the tables on Lillian Wilkes, heating she and Margaret S. on the Oakland track in "straight heats," 2:21, 2:24½, 2:20. At Sacramento, September 17th she again beat Margaret S. in 2:20½, 2:21½, 2:18, so that it is not necessary to go further into the history of Sunol to show that up to her three-year-old form she was eminently a race mare. There is nothing in her career afterwards to lose the prestige which winning every race, with one exception, she ever started in, and then against such a phenomenal competitor as Margaret S. Hereafter I will give a fuller history of one of the greatest trotters that ever wore harness, and that from a race horse view point.

Charlie Mitchell's New Backer.

The man who is named as being about to come to this country, says the Sporting World, as the backer of Charlie Mitchell is George Baird. The Squire—as the "profess" call him—is a Scotchman by birth, a native of Ayrshire. His father was a member of a rich firm of Scotch iron-masters, and at his death the son found himself heir to a fortune commonly estimated at $500,000 a year.

With means to gratify any taste, no matter how expensive, George Baird took early to racing. At the outset he kept a few hunters and steeplechase horses in training, which it amused him to ride and race under the name of Mr. Abington. By degrees, and by constant practice in race riding, he became an adept in the saddle, and ended by becoming the best gentleman rider in England. So naturally had he taken to the vocation, indeed, that he was generally admitted to be as good as many of the professionals. He could ride at a trifle over 130 pounds, so that his mounts were not confined to his own horses, but with his gentleman riders' allowance he was in request. Later on he tired of racing on such a small scale, and aimed at higher game.

He was by no means a pigeon to be plucked, but a pretty shrewd young man. He showed a great deal of judgment in the selection of his stable and his string may be said to have been a fairly profitable one. In 1887 he won his first Derby by the aid of Murry Hampton, and several of the big events have fallen to the lot of the "plum with green cap." He was an early member of the Pelican Club in London, and it is in connection with this club that he has drifted into the prize ring business. The short-haired fraternity were glad of such a gold-lined patron and looked upon "the Squire" as a backer much to be desired.

He has the natural shrewdness of most Scotchmen, and, contrary to the general rule of young men born with silver spoons in their mouths, has passed through the mill without losing his patrimony. He is liberal with his money, but quite capable of taking care of it whether on the turf or in the ring. The fact that he is finding the backing for Mitchell in his coming fight with Corbett goes a long way to show that Mitchell is in good shape and has not forgotten the art. Were it not so he would not be entrusted to carry Squire Abington's money.

Beautiful Bay Rose.

In another portion of this paper will be found the advertisement of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm. Standard-bred trotting stock can be purchased very reasonably. The sons and daughters of Bay Rose, 2:20½, will be trained and given an excellent opportunity to prove their worth, and as this grand horse is a direct outcross for mares with Hambletonian blood in their veins, his progeny should be very valuable as racehorses and producers.

HOOF-BEATS.

AN exchange suggests that some class races for geldings should be offered.

SIMMOLOON, 2:13 $\frac{3}{4}$, by Simmons, 2:28, is at Toledo, O., being treated for an ailing leg.

WHEN a broodmare has produced half a dozen foals and none of them show any particular speed, she is a good mare to dispose of, no matter how well she may be bred.

WE believe the absolute necessity for general road improvement exists; that it will prove a great saving to the farmer; will render rural life more desirable; will cheapen production and greatly conserve the interests of producers and consumers alike.

HERBERT KING, the well-known horseman, started for Cleveland, Ohio, last Monday night with eight head of trotters by Dexter Prince belonging to A. B. Spreckels and consigned to the Cleveland branch of Tattersalls. Mr. King expects to return shortly, and may bring a string of race horses to race at the coming Blood Horse meeting.

MR. J. H. BAKER, Tarboro, N. C., has sold to Col. Julian S. Carr, Durham, N. C., the bay mare Miss Walton, foaled 1882, by Enquirer, dam Mary Walton, by John Morgan, out of Effie Cheatham, by Bill Cheatham; and chestnut filly Waltona, foaled 1890, by Ben Himyar; and bay filly Wenda, foaled 1891, by Ben Himyar, both out of Miss Walton. Prices private.

COLONEL JAMES E. PEPPER, the widely known Kentucky distiller and turfman, took out a policy February 14th in an Eastern life insurance company of 100,000. This makes him carry altogether $380,000 insurance on his life. As it is on the endowment plan it will amount to over $500,000 at maturity, and makes Colonel Pepper the most heavily insured man in the South.

THE producer should do all in his power to increase the value of the stock on his farm by racing it, as it encourages purchasers to drop into line, while successes on the turf bring buyers to the paddock. A training and, to a certain extent, a racing department should be found on every large stock farm, and when the buyers come they can select from tried material at prices based on actual performance or take a long shot at a trotter in the rough among the weanlings.

STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:14, has a right to be called a wonderful trotter when McKinney, 2:12, Truman, 2:12 and others are mentioned. He got his record in the fourth heat of a race in which there were seven starters. He got the worst of the send-off by two lengths, for he was set back by the judges and had to go all the way around on the outside of the six, and then got his record and won the race. That is the kind of a race horse horsemen are after now-a-days. He will stand at Stockton this year.

TACOMA's wealthy horsemen will hold a spring race meeting and endeavor to remove the general impression that horse-racing in Washington is a defunct card. It is to be hoped that their example will be followed by the horsemen of other sections of the new state. There are excellent race tracks at Spokane, Walla Walla, Olympia, Vancouver and Kent, and only a very little energy is required to establish a state circuit that would put Washington in mutually profitable opposition to Oregon as a racing center.

SPEAKING of the chances of Directum in the lightning classes in which he must go the coming season, George Starr says that he had as much speed last season as any stallion out, and that he has one advantage over them all, and that is that in a head and head drive for the wire they may make mistakes and that Directum never will. He thinks that is likely to give him the verdict. Taking everything into consideration, it now looks as though the little fellow may become to us the champion race stallion of the world.

SOMETHING new in the way of a programme is promised by the Oregon State Breeding and Speed Association, whose next annual meeting will be held July 4th to 6th inclusive, at Salem. Baseball and other games will consume the forenoon of the first day, a colt show will precede the second day's racing and an auction sale of well-bred stock will relieve the routine of the closing day. Dashes and two-in-three heats will be features of each day's racing. It will be a splendid time for trying the new system of short races, as it will be early in the season and the horses will not be entirely prepared for long races.

J. E. HARRINGTON, of Salida, Chaffee county, Colorado, has been very unfortunate lately in losing by death a thoroughbred stallion and two mares. The stallion was Weighmaster, by Balancer, by War Dance, by Lexington, dam Arab by Mickey Fee, by imp. Birdcatcher. The dead mares are Lucy B., by Fairplay, dam Arab Maid; and Starlight, a big fine yearling by Weighmaster and out of Arab Maid. These thoroughbreds all died from anasarca the result of influenza probably, and Mr. Harrington feels that his racing prospects for 1893 are rather dubious at present writing.

A WRITER, T. C. P., in the Spirit of the 11th, has a long article in which he cites numerous cases of horses being of different color from their sires. A more remarkable case is that of The Hook, owned by E. J. Baldwin of this county, says "Hidalgo" in the Los Angeles Herald. He is 22 years old and got ten foals last year, and will have 12 this year, while Grinstead, of the same age, is impotent. The Hook gets nearly all chestnuts, although he is a brown himself. His sire, Fish Hook, was a brown, and so was his paternal grandsire, Fisherman, whose sire, Heron, was a bay. On the dam's side, he is out of Juliet, a bay, by Touchstone, a brown, and his sire, Comet, was a brown. His granddam was by Tomboy, a brown.

JAMES DUSTIN, the well-known reinsman who has been away from California about one year, and whom it was expected would only give the Golden State a social call once in a few years, popped in on us last Thursday, and without the slightest hesitation declared that California was good enough for him, and a paradise compared with the frozen "effete East." The rigors of the climate of Maine, Massachusetts and New York proved too much for the patient Dustin, and so glad is he to get back to the glorious Golden State that he has promised never to mention any of the beautiful features of the country east of the Mississippi again. All joking aside, we are glad to welcome Dustin back to California.

MR. JOHN BIELENDURG, Deer Lodge, Mont., has sold to G. W. Watson, Sacramento, Cal., the bay colt Realization, foaled April 7, 1891, by Regent, dam Sadie, by Balaklava, out of Misadie, by Enquirer; to W. F. Mosby, Butte City, Mont., the bay colt Carnot, foaled March 27, 1891, by Regent, dam Nannie Holton, by Longfellow, out of Little Fanny, by Endorsor, and Eros, bay filly, foaled April 9, 1891, by Eolian, dam Piouette, by Harvey Villiau, out of Farfaletta, by imp. Australian. Price not stated.

JOE WERLIN has purchased the interest of Hon. J. N. Carlile in the Carlile & Shields racing stable, now at Chicago, "Curly" Shields retaining a third interest as heretofore. The stable includes among other things the thoroughbreds Dunbarvan, Governor Adams, Brookwood, Lew Carlile and Ben Weitbeck. Werlin has gone East, taking with him his own horses, Mart Walden and Justice. The latter has been in the hospital for some time, but is now said to be better than ever. Werlin has eight horses in all which will be added to the racing stables in Chicago.—Denver Field and Farm.

ED. GRAVES, of Lexington, Ky., has bought on private terms of Mrs. John M. Clay one of the few women engaged in thoroughbred breeding in the country, the promising bay yearling colt by Logic (son of Longfellow), dam Queen Bess, by Gilroy. This colt is a half-brother to that exceedingly smart performer, Sir Walter Raleigh, and is the first of the foals by his sire, who, but for his enormous size, which prevented him taking hard training, would have been a great race horse and who is out of Badger, by Gilroy, who produced Minnie Elkins, the winner of the Colorado Derby and other good races.

ISINGLASS, by Isonomy—Deadlock, is the reigning favorite for the Epsom Derby. The colt has an unbeaten record. His first start was for a maiden-plate at Newmarket, May 18th, for which he beat Sweet Laura, Quickly Wise and eight others over the Rous course. His second essay was at Ascot, where he won the New stakes, beating Fealer, Ravensbury, and seven others. His third and last start was at Newmarket in October, where he won the Middle Park plate in brilliant fashion, with Ravensbury second, Nicham third and twelve others of the best two-year-olds in England unplaced.

THE cruelty of winter racing was never better exemplified than during the big snowfall at the Hawthorne track, Chicago. One jockey had his ear so frozen that it required three hours of application of snow to thaw it out. Other jockeys could do little more than cling on to their saddles in the races. Horses shivered at the starting post and clearly suffered. Meanwhile the spectators huddled the stoves in the glass-enclosed betting ring. Frost covered the glass so that the racing could not be seen, and no one cared to stand outside in eight inches of snow to see the animals run. But the bookmakers were kept busy.

MESSRS. J. M. SIMPSON & SONS, Bear Creek Farm, Ill., have lost by death the following thoroughbred mares: Astra, foaled 1866, by imp. Australian, dam Estelle, by Star Davis, died December, 1888; Calamity, foaled 1887, by King Lear, dam Crownlet, by imp. Australian, died May 10, 1890; Lass of Ayr, foaled 1876, by Asteroid, dam imp. Invercanid, by St. Albans, died June, 1891; Mannette, foaled 1877, by Asteroid, dam Jenny H., by imp. Knight of St. George, died March 23, 1892; Iona, foaled 1877, by imp. Glenelg, dam Item, by Lexington, 1892, no produce; Trixie, foaled 1888, by Storey, dam Lady Bassett, by Asteroid, died January, 1893.

THE following owners, horses and jockeys have been ruled off or suspended at Hawthorne track, Chicago: "H. Stucky, jockey, suspended; S. Bell, jockey, ruled off; J. Cook, jockey, ruled off; J. Swegles, jockey, ruled off; Mara, jockey, ruled off; J. Mooney, jockey, suspended; Snider, jockey, ruled off; E. Slaughter, jockey, suspended; B. Vincent, jockey, ruled off; C. Knhn, jockey, ruled off; W. Higgins, jockey, suspended; G. M. Janney, owner, ruled off; J. B. Fox, owner, ruled off; Gregg, jockey, ruled off; "Dutch" Sommers, ruled off; Pack-horse, bay gelding, aged, ruled off. We are indebted for this information to the Blood Horse Association, who were notified by Secretary H. Kuhl.

B. C. HOLLY has sold to Messrs. Hill & Thacker, of Ventura, Cal., the bay colt Kapila 14,345, foaled in 1890, by Steinway; first dam Nannie Smith, by Ked Wilkes (full sister to Phil Thompson, 2:16 $\frac{1}{4}$); second dam Grey Nellie, by John Dillard; third dam Nellie Grey, by Gill's Vermont 104. Also to the same firm the bay colt Prince Derby, foaled in 1890, by Chas. Derby, 2:20; first dam Princess, by Administrator 357, record 2:19 $\frac{1}{4}$; second dam Priceless, by Volunteer 55; third dam Silvertail (dam of Driver, 2:19 $\frac{1}{4}$), by Sely's American Star. The amount realized for the two was \$2,000. They are two splendid individuals, and are perfect in every particular, and if handled for speed will make trotters.

Entries Close Wednesday.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of the Northwestern Association of Trotting and Pacing Horse Breeders which opens a list of stakes for 1893 that are to be trotted and paced at Washington Park, Chicago, September 4th to 16th inclusive. The sum of $100,000 is offered in stakes and purses, and as the thousands of visitors from all parts of the world will assemble in the great city to witness the sights at the Columbian Exposition, it is confidently expected that the crowds that will attend the Washington Park course will be larger than have ever been seen on an American track. The entries to these stakes close March 1, 1893, and it is of the utmost importance for every owner of trotters and pacers who contemplates sending them East to have them entered immediately. A careful perusal of the advertisement will repay them.

San Mateo Stock Farm Stallions.

It is no exaggeration to say that the get of no stallion in America is prized higher than that of Guy Wilkes, 2:15. They have proved their worth in races, and the average speed of his "list" performers stamps him as the sire of the day and generation. His magnificent young son, Sable Wilkes, 2:18, at three years, has a wonderful record both as a racehorse and sire, and his son and daughters are eagerly sought after. Wil Direct is a young stallion by Sable Wilkes, dam Fidelia, by Director, 2:17; second dam by Reavis' Blackbird, 2:22, sire of Vic H., 2:13 $\frac{1}{4}$. These horses will make the season of 1893 at San Mateo Stock Farm. Read the advertisement in another column.

Notes From Napa.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

NAPA, February 24;—The Napa track presents a lively appearance, horses are arriving and fast filling up the stalls. The track is in first-class condition and the boys are beginning to move along some with their horses.

Dr. Bowhill, brought over his thoroughbred, Chesterfield, last Saturday to introduce to the Napa public.

During the week we had the pleasure of visiting the home of Mr. R. G. Head, who has for years been breeding a few selected trotters; he has not many, but what he has are all first-class and are bred in the most fashionable strains. All he has are standard-bred and registered. He says he finds it more satisfactory to run the ranch with standard-bred trotters than the common run of nondescripts usually raised by some small farmers. Mr. Head started in some years ago to breed up from the famous old mare Lady Grant that acquired a record of 2:40 on a half-mile track over twenty years ago. His principal broodmare is Nellie Steinway, by the famous Steinway, 2:25 $\frac{1}{4}$, out of Nellie Gray, by St. Clair 656; second dam Lady Grant, by Gray Messenger; third dam by Kentucky Whip. Nellie Steinway is a large, fine mare that looks fit to fill any place one might require a horse for. As a broodmare she is hard to surpass. Her first colt, Stonewall, by Director, 2:17, was one of the speediest two-year-olds ever worked on the Napa track and was sold last year to J. H. McDonald for \$3,500.

The black mare Noontime, by Noonday 10,000, out of Nellie Steinway is as fine a looking three-year-old as can be found on any stock farm in the country. She is pure-gaited, has lots of speed, and should make a trotter as well as a great broodmare.

Stonemason 19665, brown colt, foaled 1891, sired by Mountain Boy 4841, out of Nellie Steinway, has a pedigree that embraces some of the best material in the list, and there is no reason why she should not be a great colt, Mountain Boy, sired by the great Kentucky Prince (sire of Guy 2:10 $\frac{1}{4}$) out of Elista, by Messenger Ducoc 106; second dam of the famous Green Mountain Maid, dam of the great Electioneer and nine descendants in the 2:30 list).

Another grand young animal is Kitty Clay, foaled in 1887, sired by Alcona Clay 2756 (sire of King Orry 2:23 $\frac{1}{4}$) son of Alcona 730, out of Madonna (dam of Del Rey, 2:24 $\frac{1}{4}$, Alcona Jr., 2:19, sire of Silas Skinner, 2:17), by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22.

Kitty Clay's dam was Nellie Grant, by St. Clair 656 (sire of the dam of Richards' Elector); second dam Lady Grant, 2:40. This mare will make a great broodmare if there is anything in the looks and actions of her son, "Ace of Clubs 21181," a black yearling, sired by Lord Clive 11,227, son of Sable Wilkes, 2:18 (the greatest sire of early speed of his age in the world), Veronica, 2:29, by Alcona 730 (sire of five in the list, three producing sons and a producing daughter); second dam Fontana (dam of Silas Skinner, 2:17, Flora Bell, 2:24, Veronica, 2:22), by Almont 33; third dam Fannie Williams (dam of Bay Chieftain, 2:28 $\frac{1}{4}$), by Abdallah 15.

Bay filly, by Kafir 15045, out of Nellie Grant, by St. Clair is a promising-looking filly and should be a good one.

At the race track are all the stallions of the Vineland Stock Farm that are being prepared for the great Combination Sale to be held on the 8th of next month.

Alcona 730, by the great Almont 33, out of Queen Mag, by Mambrino Chief, is undoubtedly a great sire when we consider his opportunities; he has got five in the list and three sons that each one their first colt sired, has a record beow 2:30 and a producing daughter. He is also sire of the great horse Prince Warwick trial of 2:15, that was sold last season to the Austrian Government for $20,000. The colt Alcona, that was killed last year at the Napa track, could have trotted close to 2:20 as a three-year-old. All of his colts show speed of a high order, they are all pure-gaited, not a single one ever having a tendency to single-foot or pace. His colts are all like himself, large, fine looking, with the best of dispositions, and make great roadsters. Alcona should be at the head of some large stock farm.

Alconeer 15,120, full brother to Alcona Jr., 2:19, sired by Alcona 730, dam Madonna (dam of Del Rey, 2:24 $\frac{1}{4}$, Alcona Jr., 2:19, sire of Silas Skinner, 2:17, etc.), by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22, second dam by Joe Downing 710, is as fine a young stallion as was ever led into a show ring. He is a solid bay, over sixteen hands, with size, substance and power, and a great trotter. His first colts are yearlings, and they are an excellent lot, eleven out of thirteen being his own color, deep bay, from all classes of mares. Alconeer has shown sufficient speed in his work to warrant that he will beat 2:20. Like his sire, he will make a great sire of carriage horses.

Caducas 10,849 is a powerfully built black stallion of medium size, sired by Almont Medium, 2:18 $\frac{1}{4}$ (dam full sister of Prince Warwick, trial 2:15), by Alcona; second dam Warwick Maid, by Almont Mambrino 761; third dam by Delmonico 110, etc. Caducas is pure-gaited and ought to make a trotter as well as a great stock horse, as his pedigree is one of the richest in the books.

The young stallion King Whippleton, by the great carriage horse, sire Whippleton 1833, out of Kate Chapman, by Nautic 504, second dam by George M. Pitchen Jr., 31, third dam by Ethan Allen 2903, ought to make as great a sire of carriage horses as his noted sire, as he is very large and rangy, solid colored, pure-gaited, and shows more of the characteristics of old Whippleton than any of his sons.

Miss Washington is a fine-looking three-year-old filly by George Washington 220, dam Nancy Rose, by Admiral 448, second dam (the dam of Daniana, 2:26), by Mohamet; third dam by Paul's Abdallah. This filly ought to make a great race mare. She is entered in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN Futurity Stakes for 1893.

The young mare Ethelona, by Alcona 730, dam Belle, by Blackbird 222 (sire of Vic H., 2:13 $\frac{1}{4}$), etc.; second dam by Napa Kattler (sire of the dam of Alex Button, 2:26 $\frac{1}{4}$, sire of Yolo Maid, 2:12), should make a great broodmare. She is in foal to the promising stallion Grandissimo, 2:23 $\frac{1}{4}$.

Grandora, by Grandissimo, 2:23 $\frac{1}{4}$, out of Flora (sister of Burton, 2:30 $\frac{1}{4}$), by Nautic 504; second dam by Dashaway, son of Belmont, will make a trotter without doubt if trained. Mr. Loeber has also several very fine yearlings, among them the filly Vialma, by Alconeer, dam Vineland Maid (dam of Lookout 2:25), by a son of John Nelson; second dam by Gen. McClellan, 143. This is a little beauty.

A bay colt by Grandissimo, 2:23 $\frac{1}{4}$, dam of Whippleton 1833, second dam by Ethan Allen 2903. This fellow knows nothing but trot, and will be like Myrtle Thorne, two-year-old, 2:35, as he is bred in the same way.

EARLY AMERICAN RACING.

Flirtilla Avenges Henry's Defeat by Beating Ariel on Long Island Two Years Later.

After the Eclipse-Henry race on the old Union course, Long Island, in 1823, in which the North had downed the South, it was not surprising that a second great sectional race should follow, says "The Gleaner" in the Sporting World. After Eclipse had gone the way of all horseflesh and had adieu to the turf arena, a daughter of his, Ariel, astonished the turf world by her speed and stamina. A gray filly, three years old, Ariel, out of a mare by Financier, owned by Henry Lynch of this city, was rated the equal of any short or long distance performer of her day.

At a jockey club dinner given at the time, Henry Lynch offered to match Ariel against any named horse, heats of four miles, stakes $10,000 a side and additional wagers of $1,000 each on the several quarters of each heat of the match. This "defi" meant in effect a winning of $16,000, besides the $20,000 stake, for any horse which led every quarter in four miles, and was of too imposing dimensions to meet with acceptance. Later the stake clause to the winner of each quarter was dropped, and Dr. Wyche of North Carolina matched his great mare Flirtilla against Ariel for $10,000 a side. The Carolina mare claimed Henry's sire, Sir Archy, as her sire, so the contest was in effect a renewal of the battle of two years ago by relatives of Sir Henry and Eclipse.

On the day of the race, in October, 1825, the crowd was a tremendous one, including people from hundreds of miles, to see the Southern and Northern champions measure strides. Colonel W. R. Johnson had Flirtilla in charge and her jockey was Boh Wooding, who died in San Jose, Cal., in 1879 or '80. The original terms of the match at four-mile heats had been modified to heats of three miles, the concession being made at the request of the Ariel party, who finally looked on four-mile heats as too great a strain for the young mare. And as the Flirtilla people were of the opinion that the shorter distance would favor their mare, there was mutual good feeling over the change. But the general public was disposed to look on the new deal with disfavor, and there was some comment on the matter.

At the post both mares looked well, and as the partisans of each section were ready to hack their opinions, betting was very heavy at about evens. The first heat was begun at a trotting horse pace, 2:12 for the first place, but after that the pace increased, Flirtilla setting the running. Ariel's jockey took it very easily for over two miles, trailing fully six lengths away. But at the half-mile pole on the last mile, Ariel closed up fast and eventually beat Flirtilla out in 5:59 in a terrific drive, so close that the official verdict was, "won by six inches."

The loss of the heat did not daunt the confidence of the Flirtilla party. The Southerners reasoned that their mare was in the best condition of the two, and while Ariel was the favorite for the second heat, Flirtilla's backers took all the offers made.

In the second heat there was no waiting by the Flirtilla party, the mare being sent out to make a stiff pace from the start, and she did it so well that she began the last mile a hundred yards in the lead. She was winning the heat in a gallop, and Ariel's jockey, away back, had ceased to urge the gray mare, when at the last furlong in the homestretch Flirtilla became frightened by the shouting of the immense crowd and stopped short, holting over to the fence. This set the jockey of Ariel to riding hard again, and while Flirtilla's jockey was trying to set her agoing again the gray was coming up fast originally, when Ariel was nearly up to Flirtilla, the latter started again and just got to the wire a nose ahead of the gray. One stride more and the latter would have snatched the heat and race by the accident.

Of course Flirtilla was now a great favorite, and in the third heat she galloped Ariel off her legs, winning in a walk. But Ariel afterwards became a great mare. She ran until the fall of her eighth year, winning forty two out of fifty-seven, and not less than seventeen were at four miles, most of them at heats.

After the Flirtilla-Ariel race the next great sensational contest was between Post Boy and John Bascome, which the Southern racehorse won easily. Then came the Boston-Fashion contest in 1842, also on the Union course, and so well had Boston shown that it looked as if he had much the best of it. Before his match with Fashion he had won no less than 25 out of 28 starts, 26 of them at four-mile heats. His owner had a standing challenge to run against any two horses in the world for a stake of $5,000.

Boston was owned by James Long of Washington. When his horse was in a race Long would stand with his back to the horses and wager $1,000 to $300 as long as there were any takers. But in the Fashion match he got better odds than that, the current rate being about $100 to $60 on Boston.

The race drew the largest crowd ever seen on an American race course up to that day. Before the course could be cleared for the first heat, a score or more of hruisers, under the leadership of the noted prize-fighter, Yankee Sullivan, had to be employed to heat hack the people. The first heat saw Boston set the pace, the first mile in 1:53 and the second mile in 1:50. The pace was slower in the third mile—1:54. Time, 5:37 for the first three miles.

The fourth mile was begun with Boston in the lead, but on the turn Fashion got a touch of the whip and she ranged up to the mighty chestnut. At the half Fashion was in front, but Boston was not yet beaten and he lapped her again on the turn. At the head of the homestretch, Gilpatrick, on Boston, made another effort, but Fashion, in a drive home that lasted for nearly a quarter of a mile beat Boston a length in 7:32—the best time ever made in the North up to that race. The excitement at the finish of the heats was tremendous.

The second heat saw tactics reversed, Boston waiting on Fashion for two miles in the slow time of 3:56. On the third mile Boston headed Fashion, running the mile in 1:51, but the effort cooked his hacon. At the quarter on the fourth mile Fashion headed Boston, and heat him out very easily in 7:45.

No match ever run in the country up to that time ever evoked the interest of the Post-Fashion race. Certainly the Fashion-Peytona match, three years later which the former won, did not, and the memory of the Boston-Fashion race on the old course on Long Island in 1842 will live long in the memory of those who witnessed it. Fashion was a great little mare. When she beat Peytona she ran the race with bruised heels, and later she won a race at eleven years old. All of these mares afterwards became great stud matrons, Fashion the most successful of the quartette. She died in 1860 at the age of twenty-eight, foaling a filly to old Bonnie Scotland.

R. POSTER ASHE'S Geraldine and J. R. Ross' Nellie Van run a three-furlong match race to-day at Oakland. The stakes are $500 a side, and the Association adds $250. This should be a very close and exciting contest. Geraldine carries 113 pounds; Nellie Van, 107.

JOCKEY "HANK" HILL was suspended last Thursday at Oakland for "pulling" Stoneman, and is a very lucky fellow not to be roled off for life. Judge George Treat was relieved as judge at Oakland by a younger and less systematic man.

Unabridged Speed.

I stood in the barn at noonday, Because it was cold outside, And watched my Blue Bull pacer Fill up his chestnut hide.

And as I saw that cuss 'munching And laying back his ears, A flood of thoughts came o'er me That filled my eyes with tears.

I thought of the time I bought him In a combination sale, And how neatly I'd been taken In by the auctioneer's lurid tale.

Who said his sire was a son of Agon, His dam of three the mother, His sister was fast, barring accidents, And nothing could stop his brother.

And then in dulcet tones This modern Annanias Told how the horse could swiftly pace And also proceed his.

How often, oh! how often, As long as that have come by Have I wondered where the auctioneers Expect to go when they die.

The trick that critter played me In the '40 class trotting race (Which he won hands down but couldn't get 'Cause he hid nothing but pace.)

Was on a par with the one in which The starters wiggled with zest, But he trots toward the distance pole And then sat down to rest.

The grotesque antics of this brute Caused me to shed my hair, And the hurden laid upon me Seemed greater than I could bear.

When I think how many thousands Of care-encumbered men Have advised me what to do with him To make him go in '10,

It gives me that tired feeling, Likewise a pain in the neck, And many moons will pass by 'Ere I bid another "spec."

I am going out of business, My health is falling fast—I have more stock than I can use, Here is your chance at last.

Forever and forever, As long as the river flows, There's one less chump to be taken in, 'Cause he paid for what he knows. —Clark's Horse Review.

Horse and Harness.

The working capacity of the horse, says a horseman writing to the Philadelphia Press, depends not a little upon the harness he wears. If his collar is ill-fitting, producing galls, he will not pull as steadily and squarely as if he had whole shoulders, and the pain, affecting first the nervous organization, leads to general derangement, and the animal becomes incapable of doing full work. One should not buy a collar without first fitting it to the horse. Take the horse with you to the harness-shop. No two horses have shoulders exactly alike; in fact, the two shoulders of the same horse are not exactly alike. Hence, it is by mere chance if a decent fit is obtained without having the horse alone. The wise man will not hesitate to try 200 collars if necessary to get one that fits properly, and if the dealer has not a collar that fits well will have the backbone to say so and go elsewhere to buy. Many collars are harder on one side than on the other; such collars should be rejected, no matter how well they fit. The harder side will almost invariably gall the shoulder. Many men select collars too small. When an animal is pulling hard its neck is a little larger than when in repose. They fit the collar when the animal is standing quietly, and therefore do not get it large enough. Walk beside and a little in front of the horse as it pulls a heavy load up hill and see how the neck swells out and fills the collar. The collar, large enough when the animal is standing, is too small when it is at work. In such a case the breathing of the animal essential to the use of its full working capacity is interfered with. Half the farm harness in use is unnecessarily heavy and cumbersome. If care were taken to select good leather a less weight would suffice. Carrying several pounds of useless weight for an hour may not amount to much, but when it is carried for years it becomes worth taking into account of, especially if it is in such form as to impede the motions of the muscles. Heavy breeching, back hands and belly hands six inches wide are altogether too heavy in farm harness. Good leather costs more in the start, but it is the cheapest in the end. It requires something of an expert to tell good leather from bad, from the leather itself. But there are extraneous circumstances that will nearly always enable one to detect poor leather. The best leather is adorned the least. When harness is full of gew-gaws and silver-plated rings, and when the leather is thickly and highly polished, beware of it. That polish is to hide a lack of quality. Gew-gaws and silver-plating serve to distract attention from the leather. Good leather is not hidden with paste and polish. It is allowed to stand out to the light of day. It is the plain, unadorned harness that wears longest and proves to be the strongest.

A horse is a great deal like a man. Let him get over-worked, over-starved, or abused, and particularly for the want of sufficient drink and the consequences will always be injurious. Sensible hostlers in large cities are awakening to the advantages of frequent watering. Street-car horses are watered every hour and sometimes oftener while they are at work. It is plenty of water that supplies evaporation or perspiration and keeps down the temperature. What old-fogy methods amount to may be seen by the change in the medical practice to man. Twenty years ago a person having a fever of any kind, of pneumonia, was allowed but little water to drink, and then it had to be tepid. To-day practitioners prescribe all the ice-water the patient can possibly drink, and in addition cold bandages are applied to reduce and control the temperature of the blood. What is applicable to man will never injure a horse. Use common sense and human feeling. Don't think it is a horse, and capable of enduring any and all things. A driver who sits in his wagon and lashes his worn-out, half-curved, half-fed and half-watered team should never complain of any abuse he may receive from his master or employer, for he is lower in character, harder in sympathy, and less noble than the brutes he is driving, and deserves, in the name of all that is human, the same punishment as a criminal.—Rural World.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

J. C. City—How was Tye's Veto bred? Answer—By Belmont (Williamson's), dam Fanny Howard, by Illinois Medoc; second dam Fanny Howard, by imp. Middleworth etc.

F. P. L. Sonoma, Cal.—Will you please inform me through the columns of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN how many inches to the foot a half-mile track should be graded up from the pole to the outside, on the turns, to make a good fast, safe track. Answer—We should say about an inch and a quarter to the foot would be about right

W. R. W. Woodland, Cal.—Please inform me through the columns of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN the breeding of the stallion Ilex. Is he standard and registered? If so, under what rule? Please give first, second and third dams if known. Answer—He is not registered standard. Will some one oblige us with his pedigree?

We wish to correct a portion of the answer to H. C. B. Chico, of last week, by printing the following, sent us by G. H. Brager, of San Jose, Cal., and taken from the Year Book, of 1890, p. 85:

Wilmington, by Piedmont..... 2 1 2 Baywood, by Nutwood..... 1 2 2 Myron..... dis Time, 2:33, 2:33, 2:33 1/2.

O. D. Selma.—Please give the breeding of Repetta (thoroughbred), a mare owned by Matlock, of Pendleton, Oregon, and give her best time for one and one-quarter miles at Butte City and Helena, Montana, also second and third horses in each race and oblige. Answer—Repetta is by Adam, by Reform, dam Long Nine, by Lightning, second dam Sallie, by imp. Sovereign. While she was a grand race mare, we do not find that she won a mile and a quarter race at either Butte or Helena.

J. E., San Francisco.—1. Did Comet, by Robbery Boy, owned in Santa Barbara county, ever run five furlongs on a heavy track in 1:02? 2. How many races has he won during his racing career? 3. What time did he make in the races that he won? He ran nine, by Lightning, second dam Sallie, by imp. Sovereign. While she was a grand race mare, we do not find that she won a mile and a quarter race at either Butte or Helena.

Names Claimed.

I claim the name of JUDGE CUTLER for my bay stallion, foaled May 8, 1886, sired by Elmo, dam Lady Consuelo, by Norfolk. I also claim the name of ELIZABETH HUNTINGTON for chestnut filly, both hind feet white, foaled April 22, 1892, sired by Judge Cutler, dam by Pasha (by Sultan). Also the name HOME KETLER for chestnut colt, foaled May 9, 1892, sired by Judge Cutler, dam by Hook Hocking.

I also claim the name of CAPTAIN NANCYOWN for light sorrel gelding, flaxen mane and tail, foaled April 17, 1891, sired by Judge Cutler, dam by Oakland Boy. Charles Hacket works for me, and he claims the name of RIGHTWAY for dark sorrel stallion, flaxen mane and tail, foaled April 14, 1890, sired by Stratway, dam by Oakland Boy. JOHN MACKIN, Visalia, Cal.

I claim the name of MONDAY J.A. for my three-year-old. MRS. SILAS SKINNER, Woodside Farm, Napa City, Cal.

Owing to the name of Silver Bell being claimed here in California and also in the East, I now change from Silver Bell to SILVER BEE. W. TRAVELLS, Sacramento, Cal.

Foals of 1893.

ENCINO STABLE. On February 5, 1893, ch m Belle W., by Wildlie, dam Sallie Hart, foaled a brown colt, near hind leg white, both fore feet white around coronet, by the imported horse San Pedro, by Waxlight. Mare bred to imp. Merriwa February 10th.

Dorsey, sorrel colt, star in forehead, by Cyclone, dam Kate Carson, by Joe Daniels; second dam Belle Mahone, by Norfolk. Tremaro, by Nick of the Woods, dam Rettle B., by Joe Hooker; second dam Kate Carson, by Joe Daniels. Tremaro is a sorrel with three white legs and strip in the face.

Charmer, bay filly, by Fellowcharm, dam Sally Hampton, by Boots; second dam Kate Carson, by Joe Daniels; third dam Belle Mahone, by Norfolk. The above are foals of 1892. G. W. TRAVELLS, Stockton, Cal.

ATHLETICS.

Athletic Sports and Other Pastimes.

EDITED BY ARPHIPPUS.

SUMMARY.

The boxing tournament now in progress at the Olympic Club is one of the most successful of the kind ever before held on the Pacific Coast. The outdoor athletes began trawling on Sunday last, and some good performances may be looked forward to at the March field-day of the O. A. C.

The members of the Bay City Wheelmen will hold another of their enjoyable "Smokers" in their club rooms, on Van Ness Avenue, this evening. A good programme has been arranged, and a fine supper will be served at the close of the festivities.

The annual meeting of the Eucalyp Boat Club, of Alameda, will be held on Tuesday evening, March 2nd. Several very important matters will be discussed, and a full attendance is earnestly requested.

The directors of the Olympic Club, having had evidence of a strong disposition on the part of the ladies of San Francisco to support the Fair and Circus Maximus to be held from April 17th to 22nd, have, in consequence of the great interest manifested therein, concluded arrangements to hold the entertainments in the Mechanics' Pavilion, as affording a better scope than is necessary for the display to give proper effect to the proposed revival of Graco-Roman games, and ample room for the booths. In requesting lady relatives and friends of the members to assist in the work for the fair, the directors suggest that they form committees among themselves and notify the manager, at the club rooms, of the arrangements they wish to make.

All members of the O. A. C. who desire to take part in the coming fair are requested to send in their names at once to the assistant secretary, Mr. Kennedy, at the club house.

The programme for the March field-day of the Olympic Club has been arranged as follows: 60-yard hurdle race.

100-yard run. 300-yard run. 600-yard run. Three-quarters mile run. Two-mile run. Pole vault. Putting 16lb. shot. Running high jump. One-quarter-mile run, for members who have never won a race.

220-yard run, for members of Junior Olympic Club. 110-yard run, partnership. The field-day will take place on March 25th, and the entries will close on March 18th.

It will be noticed that there is no walking event on the programme, and the athletic committee should have included a walk on their list which would have given Mr. Horace Coffin a chance to show his ability. Mr. Coffin has always stood ready to defend the colors of the club, and the least the committee might do would be to give that gentleman a chance to win a medal, if only for an exhibition.

Amateur boxers who are desirous of entering the professional ring should take example by Dooley, who was recently defeated by a third-rate man. Dooley, before winning laurels as an amateur, sought hours in the professional arena, with the result that his reputation both as a professional and an amateur is highly respected.

It is announced on the blackboards in the pool-rooms that a foot race is to take place between Garrison, of the Alpine Club, and Henderson, of the Olympic Club, on March 4th: distance one-quarter mile. The latter athlete is in fine fettle and should easily cover the distance in 51 seconds; whereas Garrison is not at all in condition, and to save his time could not do better than 58 seconds on the date named. There is something very funny connected with the match, and if Henderson runs up to his present form he should win handily by at least 20 yards. Lately Henderson has been giving Garrison 90 yards start in 100-yards and a beating. If the race is to be run on the square the odds should stand at 7 to 1 in favor of the Olympic man, who will run away from the Alpine man. It is to be hoped that such a promising athlete as Henderson will not lend himself to the pool sharps for the sake of a few hundred dollars.

The several operations which have been performed on Joe Bowers, the old time boxer, have proved fruitless. At the present time Bowers is in a very bad condition financially, and his friends should aid him in his efforts to secure a passage to New York City, in which place he thinks he could be eventually cured of his deformity by the physicians of the Bellevue Hospital. Bowers has always striven to uphold square fighting, and in his hour of need his many old-time admirers should endeavor to get up a benefit for him which would help him to fulfill his desires.

The second series of the boxing bouts at the Olympic Club were continued on Thursday evening, February 16th. The attendance was larger than on the opening night, and the quality of the sport was much superior. Bob McArthur acted as referee in the absence of Jack Kitchen. In all there were ten matches, and on the whole the exhibition was first class. Owing to the carelessness of President Harrison, the boxers did not display such an aptitude for slogging as on the opening night, and the members were treated to some very excellent displays of fist-cuffs. It is the intention of the athletic committee to offer in the future valuable medals or prizes for eight or ten-round contests between prominent amateur boxers. Such inducements cannot but help to increase the interest in genuinescientific contests, and the members of the Olympic Club will have no cause to complain as soon as such matches are inaugurated. The tournament was continued on Thursday evening last, and will be finished next Thursday night, when some excellent bouts may be looked forward to.

Woodland Race Track.

DESCRIPTION.—COUNT ANTEEO 14,692 is a handsome dark bay in color, with a star in the forehead and two white feet behind. He was foaled in 1888, and is a remarkably good horse in every respect, and while he has had but little training, he can easily show quarters in 47 seconds and, barring accidents, will be given a low record this year.

PEDIGREE.—Count Anteeo, sired by Anteeo, 7868, record 2:16 1/4 (sire of James Madison, 2:17 1/4, Myrtle (3) 2:19 1/4, Alfred G., 2:18 1/4, Redwood, 2:21 1/4, Maudie, 2:21 1/4, Ethel Mae, 2:29 1/4, Sunset, 2:29 1/4, Anteeo Jr., 2:26 1/4, Anteeo Richmond, 2:24 1/4, Electeeo, 2:29 1/4, Eollne, 2:20, Maud M., 2:20 1/4 and two others in the list). Anteeo was sired by Electioneer, 125 (sire of Sunol, 2:38 1/4, Palo Alto, 2:38 1/4, Arrow (2) 2:16 1/4, Advertiser (3) 2:16 and 125 others in the list).

First dam, Countess (dam of Dawn, 2:18 1/4, Strathway, 2:19, Morna, (trial) 2:28 and Young Countess, dam of Duches, 2:18, Countess was sired by Hambletonian, 725 (sire of Graves, 2:19, Olivette, 2:24, Empress, 2:24, Longfield, 2:24, and 10 others in the list); second dam Fly, a very fast mare.

TERMS, $60 FOR THE SEASON, payable on the 1st of July, 1893. Excellent care taken of mares in any manner that owners may desire at reasonable rates but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be sent to the undersigned. For further particulars apply to or address

Don Marvin.

RACE RECORD, 5th HEAT, 2:22 1-2.

Don Marvin is a beautiful self brown, foaled 1884; bred by Sen. Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal. He is 16 hands high, and weighs 1300 pounds; sired by Falls, 2:23 (sire of six in 2:30 list), he by Electioneer; first dam Cora (dam of Don Marvin, 2:25, and Elected, trial 2:26) by Don Victor, son of Belmont; second dam Claribel (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24, and Rebecca, dam of five in 2:30 list) by Abdalla Star; third dam Fally (dam of Stoner Roy, 2:29, and Sweepstakes sire of twenty-seven in 2:30 list) by Hambletonian 10; fourth dam Emma Mills (dam of four horses that have sired 250 performers) by Seely's American Star. Don Marvin will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $50 the season, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—four producing dams

SIRE BY NUTWOOD. 2:18 3-4.

Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1125 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest living likeness to his celebrated sire, Nutwood, of any station in California. First dam Kitty Parkhurst, by Goldender, he by imp. Belshazzar; second dam Old Kate, by Grey Beard, grand son of Imp. Messenger. Nutwood Boy's opportunity in the stud has been of the most limited description. He is the sire of comparatively very few colts; several of his oldest are, however, showing speed enough to be candidates for the 2:30 list this season. He is a square, level-gaited trotter, and in only five weeks track work a year ago, tried a trial in 2:58, last half in 1:13. After his stud season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "tall circuit" and gaining him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $5 per month. Mares will be carefully handled, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

Imp. Chesterfield

Son OF THE MARQUIS (Winner of the St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas, and second for the Epsom Derby, he by the great Stockwell out of Cinizelli, by Touchstone).

First dam, Lamorna (sold for 1,650 guineas), by Fireworks; second dam Nightlight (sold for 200 guineas when 22 years old, dam of Waxlight, sire of San Pedro; Nightlight by Archy (son of Camel, that sired Touchstone). The sixth dam of imp. Chesterfield (Camara's dam, by Rubens, brother to Castrol, sire of Bantalon), is the ninth dam of the great filly Princess, by imp. Chevot. Then he traces through the most fashionable families in the English stud book to sixteenth dam, Farnier Mare, by Chitaby.

Imp. CHESTERFIELD won in Australia the Shorts Handicap Flying Handicap and Town Plate, Wollongong (2 miles), Christmas Handicap, Sydney, besides being second four times and third twice in a number of the best events.

Imp. CHESTERFIELD is the sire of six winners in the Antipodes this season, including the cracks Templestone, Lotterer, Haughty and Lady Dandy.

This magnificent sire, at $40 the season, will make the season at CHESTER BAY FARM (late Hinkson Ranch), Sonoma County, about halfway between Petaluma and Sonoma. Mares can be sent to Laker's per steamer Gold. Apply to

WANTED

A position as trainer and driver on stock farm or will take a string of trotters and pacers to handle and campaign. Have broken and handled a few colts with good success; am reliable and a mechanic, have graduated from the Ontario Veterinary College with honors class of '87, also taken a special course in dentistry at Detroit, Mich., but prefer handling horses. For speed to practicing as a surgeon, except on stock that are in my charge. Will engage with the right party for any length of time. Address "G." Care: Breeder and Sportsman, San Francisco.

STATE FAIR 1893.

THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY HAS OPENED THE FOLLOWING COLT STAKES FOR TROTTERS AND PACERS:

FOR TROTTERS.

No. 1. FOR TWO-YEAR-OLDS (2:40 Class), $30 entrance, of which $10 must accompany nomination; $15 payable July 1st, and the remaining $25 payable August 10th, 1893. $200 added by the Society.

No. 2. FOR THREE-YEAR-OLDS AND UN-OVER (2:30 Class), $100 entrance, of which $25 must accompany nomination; $25 payable July 1st, and the remaining $50 payable August 10th, 1893. $400 added by the Society.

No. 3. FOR FOUR-YEAR-OLDS AND UN-OVER (2:25 Class) Conditions same as for three-year-old class.

FOR PACERS.

No. 4. FOR TWO-YEAR-OLD PACERS (2:30 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as for No. 1.

No. 5. FOR THREE-YEAR-OLDS AND UN-OVER (2:25 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as No. 2.

No. 6. FOR FOUR-YEAR-OLDS AND UN-OVER (2:20 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as No. 2.

Entries to all the above stakes are limited to colts whose records are no better than the class named in conditions of each stake. In all stakes, failure to make payments as they become due, forfeits entry and money paid in, and releases subscriber from further liability. Five to enter, three or more to start. Money in each stake shall be divided as follows: To winning colt, all the stakes and 50 per cent. of the added money; second colt, 33 1/3 per cent.; third colt, 16 2/3 per cent. of the added money.

Two-year-old stakes, mile heats; three and four-year-olds, three in five. Any colt not winning a heat in three, or making a dead heat, is barred from starting again in that race. No added money for a walk-over. If but two start in any of the stakes, they must contest for the stakes paid in, and divide them two-thirds to winner and one-third to second. Otherwise National rules to govern.

Entries to close with Edwin F. Smith, Secretary, at office in Sacramento, March 15th, 1893.

SIX HUNDRED AND SEVENTY (670) acres of unsurpassed Blue Grass soil, all in grass, two hundred and fifty (250) acres being beautiful, open woodland. About twenty (20) large stock barns of 200 box stalls. Numerous paddocks with roomy boxes. Various cottages and other houses for employees. Coachman's quarters, vehicle and harness apartments, veterinary and farrier's office and shop, and numerous other buildings required in this extensive business. The main residence is an imposing two-story brick of twelve rooms. Another with eight rooms with conservatory and billiard hall; both of recent build, supplied with all modern conveniences of water works, gas lights and electric bells, which later also connect outbuildings with the office. Telephone connection with Lexington. Only four miles to center of the city by turnpike and Louisville Southern Railroad. Station on margin of farm. Numerous daily trains. Pure limestone water to every enclosure by three force pumps and also by windmill. Living springs, pools and a number of large cisterns at the dwelling and barns. The best private track in the State. Farm enclosed and subdivided by the best fencing. The entire place is high table land, affording good drainage, insuring good health to stock and early and more nutritious grasses, in which two particulars Highland has always excelled.

Will have ready in a short time a detailed printed description of this great establishment, and later on will supplement this by a lithographed diagram of the entire place in its subdivisions and photographic views from different perspectives, all of which will be mailed to you on demand.

With great reluctance Messrs. France & Son agree to part with Highland, so delightful a home and a business too, which the public is aware has proven such a signal success, but the health of the former will not permit him to continue longer in the business. The price is made to insure an immediate sale.

For Claes Race and Special Events, which will be made to close at 5 p. m on each day of the meeting for the following race day, entrance to which will be 3 per cent. from startere and 2 per cent. additional to declare out.

CONDITIONS.

No horses and colts owned on the Pacific Coast by others than members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. are eligible to the above purses, but horses owned outside of the Pacific Coast are eligible thereto, regardless of membership.

All States and Territories lying in whole or in part west of the Rocky Mountains are held to be part of the Pacific Coast.

The Directors reserve the right to change the hour and day of any race, except when it becomes necessary to ante-date a race, in which instance the nominator will receive three days' notice of change by mail to address of entry.

Entries not declared out by five o'clock p. m. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start.

When there is more than one entry to purses by one person or in one interest, the horse to be started must be named by five o'clock p. m. of the day preceding the race.

Five to enter and three to start.

In all dash races where there are more than six starters the number of starters shall be divided by lot; each division shall constitute a race. For instance, should there be more than six starters and not more than twelve, there shall be two divisions. If more than twelve, then three divisions, the divisions being as nearly equal as the number will permit; in case of seven four and three; or nine, five and four, etc. When under this rule it becomes necessary to divide the number of starters, the Association shall add 30 per cent. of the amount of the purse in case there are two divisions, 60 per cent. of the amount of the purse in case there are three divisions, 80 per cent. of the amount of the purse in case there are four divisions, and pro rata for additional divisions. The total amount to be equally shared between the divisions, the first horse in each division to receive 75 per cent. and the second 25 per cent.

Trotting and racing colors shall be named by five o'clock on the day preceding the race, and MUST be worn upon the track.

Otherwise than the above, National Trotting Association Rules will govern. Suspensions and expulsions by the American Trotting Association will be recognized.

Applications for Membership.

Persons desirous of making entries in purses, and who have not as yet joined the P. C. T. H. B. A., should make application for membership to the Secretary before April 1, 1893.

F. W. KELLEY, Secretary, 313 Bush Street, San Francisco, Cal. JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON, President.

Stallion Ringwood,
The Famous son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney in formation more than any of his sons. He is a pure-gaited trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he showed trials of speed in 2:39 1/4 as a four-year-old, and would have received a record of 2:18 or better but for an accident at the Napa track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dashaway (thoroughbred), he by Williamson's Belmont, he by American Boy; second dam Fanny Cob, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

ALSO FOR SALE

Tippoo Tib,

(gelding record, 2:26. Can trot in 2:20 or better; will show quarters in 0:32; 15 1/2 high; light bay; a great road horse; single or double, and perfectly sound. Ringwood or Tippoo Tib can be put in training and win their price in one season. For further particulars, address

A NUMBER OF

Fine Standard-Bred Mares

(With Foal to Dexter Prince).

Three are registered and the others are eligible to be registered.

ALSO

Three Thoroughbred Mares,

One by Hyner All, dam Kate Fletcher, by Harry O'Fallon. One by Kyle Daly; first dam by Joe Daniels; second dam Queen Emma, by Woodburn. One by Bryant W; first dam by Joe Daniels, full sister to Lord Breck, winner of the Australian Derby last year. The first mare is Undine, full sister to Lisette, the inner of 310,000 purse last fall in New York.

All these mares are for sale cheap. Reason for selling, my ill-health and wish to close out all of my stock. The standard-bred mares are all good individuals as well as the runners. Will sell them together or singly. For full pedigree and further particulars address

THE TROTTING STALLION
BLUE BULL,

(Known as CHISHOLM'S BLUE BULL).

Sired by Wilson's Blue Bull (sire of 80 in the list) dam Maggie Rice, by Gage's Logan 127 (sire of Skinkle Hambletonian, 2:28 1/4, and 3 sires of 12 and 5 dams of 5 in the list); grandam, Fanny Stratford, a mare s. t. h. thoroughbred. Gage's Logan was by Hambletonian 10 out of Lady Wallace by Ohio Eclipse; grandam, Sally Miller by Post Boy, son of Duroc. This handsome Blue Bull stallion was foaled in 1879, the property of R. B. Chisholm of Kane County, Illinois. He is one of the finest-looking, purest-gaited and most intelligent horses in this State. His colts are all remarkably handsome, combining size with plenty of substance.

ALSO

six years old, sired by the above stallion out of a mare by Gen. Reno 4764. He is sound as a dollar, a pure trotter and as game as a bulldog. Prices very reasonable. Address

DEXTER PRINCE is one of the best-bred horses living, and in the last few years he has proved himself a sire of pure gall and extreme speed, although bred to low mares of merit and kept in a section where nothing but his individual merit and wonderful producing powers enabled him to prove himself one of the greatest living trotting sires.

He is a blood bay, sixteen hands high, of great power and substance and the highest finish. It is well known that he was one of the fastest colts ever at Palo Alto. He is a sure producer of finely-finished and fast foals.

FEE FOR 1893 $250, DUE AT TIME OF SERVICE
Usual return privilege if horse is alive and at this farm.

PLEASANTON, 2:29 1-2,

By ELECTOR 2170.

Son of ELECTIONEER, and sire of FLORA M., 2:16; J. R., 2:20, and many others. One of the best of Electioneer's sons.

PLEASANTON'S first dam is by Tarrason, grandson of Abdallah 1; second dam Black Bess, by Blucher, son of Ducor; third dam sister to American Eclipse.

PLEASANTON is large and very fine looking, sixteen hands high, weighs 1,125 pounds. He is stylish, of splendid conformation, and his colts have every right to be valuable.

FEE FOR 1893 $50, DUE AT TIME OF SERVICE
With usual return privilege if horse is alive and at this farm.

Good care and pasture for mares at $8 per month to July 15th. The farm's reputation is a guarantee that every precaution will be taken, but there will be no liability for accidents or escapes. All charges must be settled before mares are removed.

ELECTIC 11,321

SEASON SERVICE FEE } - - - $100 CASH
With usual return privilege

ELECTIC is a full brother to the CHAMPION TWO-YEAR OLD ARION, 2:10 1/2, both being sired by ELECTIONEER out of Manette (dam also of Oro Finn, 2:18) by NUTWOOD, 2:18 1/2.

ELECTIC represents the ACME of fashionable and speed-producing blood lines. He breeds speed.

ELECTIC'S colts, the oldest of which are now three years old, are without exception TROTTERS; not a pacer in the lot so far, although bred to pacing mares.

ELECTIC will be allowed to cover only a limited number of mares besides his owner's. Pasturage $1.00 per week; hay, grain and stabling extra.

ELECTIC will stand at RANCHO COTATI (PAGE'S STATION) in Sonoma County, until July 1st, 1893.

LANCELOT. The only Son of ELECTIONEER standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

SALADIN. The only Son of Nutwood standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION—LANCELOT is a seal-brown stallion, 15 1/2 hands high. He is a horse of fine conformation; has a beautiful head and neck, fine loins, well-sheathed body, deep through the heart, sloping shoulders, fine arms, large withers and the very best of feet and legs. In action he is pure-gaited. As a three-year-old he trotted quarters in 32 seconds, but was injured and placed in the stud. His colts are all blood-like, large and fast trotters. Several of them are eligible and will enter the 2:30 list this fall. Lancelot is one of the surest of foal-getters.

PEDIGREE—LANCELOT was sired by the immortal Electioneer (sire of 132 in the list), dam Lizzie Harris, by Conus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Conus, the sire of Lizzie Harris, was a full brother to Iowa Chief 135 (sire of Corsande, 2:23 1/2, and others). His sire was Bashaw 20, sire of 17 in the 2:30 list, he by Verne's Black Hawk, dam Belle, by Webber's Tom Thumb; second dam Chas. Kent mare, the dam of Hambletonian 10. Verne's Black Hawk, by Long Island Black Hawk, dam by Webber's Kentucky Whip, son of Black-burn a Whip. WILL BE ALLOWED TO SERVE FIFTEEN MARES OF APPROVED BREEDING. FEE $75.

Season commences February 1st and ends June 1st, 1893. Other conditions same as Silver Bow.

DESCRIPTION—Dark bay; 15 1/2 hands; foaled 1890. Fine head and neck well set on to strong pair of shoulders; fine mane and tail, good legs and feet. I consider him worthy of his royal breeding. He was not broken until August 15th, 1892, as I bought him at Lexington, Ky., and was unable to get him shipped out sooner. He already shows himself to be a trotter. His gait is faultless, and he can show speed enough already to make me think him a trotter. I think I could easily put him in the list if I wanted to this season, but no "fin-up" record for me, as I raise horses to win money with. His breeding needs no comment from me, and I will allow you to be the judge. Address all communications to DANTON MOULTRIE is a bay stallion, black points, perfect in conformation, stands 15 1/2 hands and is a pure-gaited trotter. He will be given a race record this fall.

SIRE OF NUBIA (3), 2:29 1-4.
Sired by Sultan, 2:24 (sire of Stamboul, 2:07 1/2, Alcaraz, 2:20 1/2, and 20 others in 2:30 list), dam Lady Bahcock, dam of Elector, 2:14, grandam of Joe, 2:30 (sire of Lucy Hayes, dam of Nady, 2:26, and Sulwood, 2:26 1/2, Soudan, 2:27 1/2, sire of Nubia, 2:29 1/2), by Hambletonian 75 (sire of fifteen 2:30 performers); second dam Dubois mare, by a son of the Eaton Horse 122; third dam s. t. b. by Abdallah 1. Soudan's progeny are all of good size, perfect in form, gentle in disposition, pure in salt and show great speed.

Both of these stallions will make the season of 1893, ending July 15th, at $100, with usual return privilege, at the Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal. Pasturage $5 per month. Choice trotting and draft stock for sale. For further particulars address

SIMPLE, YET A PERFECT SUCCESS.

FULL LENGTH 24 INCHES.

Especially adapted to hard breeders, but 1 dispensable to every stock man. Saves time, annoyance, "opening" and practically insures. Cost of instrument saved every time it is used. Thoroughly tested last season in hundreds of cases. Every one satisfactory. With this instrument two or more mares can be impregnated with one service in horse, thereby saving his vitality.

Cambridge City, Ind., October 21, 1892. This is to certify that I have used Dr. Canaday's Impregnator with great success on mares which no stallion could have got in foal. I consider it a great help for valuable stallions, as well as for owners of mares.—Chas. Kohlmeier.

H. S. Condit, V. S., Hagarstown, Indiana, says: I impregnated a nine-year-old mare that had been bred every year for five years and never was with foal until now. I transferred the semen from another mare and the horse has not touched her.

Price $10, sent by mail prepaid to any part of the United States and Canada on receipt of price. Send money by draft, money order or registered letter. The money must accompany the order to receive attention. Sent C. O. D. by express when preferred.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/4; Mollie C., 2:37 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 1/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 1/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals require, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

BOODLE 5829 RECORD, 2:21 1/2
In Fifth Heat

Will make the SEASON OF 1893, commencing FEBRUARY 1st and ending JUNE 1st, at AGRICULTURAL PARK, SAN JOSE.

PEDIGREE table showing lineage of Boodle 5829, including parents like GEN. WASHINGTON 1161 and GOLDSMITH 230, and various other horses and their records.

DESCRIPTION. BOODLE, in color, is a seal brown; stands 16 hands and weighs 1100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. He is only seven years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never banded for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year. TERMS, $100 FOR THE SEASON, with the usual return privilege. Excellent care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

Pedigree table for Delwin 14,681, showing lineage from The Moor 870 and other horses like DEL SUR 2:24 and GRETHER 2:19.

DESCRIPTION.—DELWIN is a dark dapple bay, sound as a dollar; 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1000 pounds; he is one of the finest-formed horses for great speed in the land; has the same level head and intelligence that his half brother, Guide, 2:16 1/2, has. Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:07 1/2; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:07 1/2; one to Mambriño Chief, sire of the dam of Director, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18 1/2, combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallion, Del Sur, 2:24, sire of the dam of San Pedro, 2:31, and Cousin Joe, 2:20 1/2, being a full brother to the dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, sire of Freedom, 2:29 1/2, Sabledale, 2:18 1/2, and others better than 2:30. Delwin's colts all show the trot out of any kind of mares.

TERMS $100, with usual return privilege. Good water and pasturage at $5 per month, but will not be responsible for accidents or escapes. Mares can be shipped to the farm and home of Delwin, the Meese Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County, Cal., or S. F. E. R. via Martinez. For further particulars, address

Record, 2:14 3/4 as a Three-Year-Old, Will Make the Season of 1893, commencing February 10 and ending June 15, at Race Track Pleasanton

SERVICE FEE (With usual return privilege), payable at end of Season, $100

DESCRIPTION.—DIABLO was foaled 1889, is a handsome chestnut in color, stands 15 1/2 hands and in conformation, disposition and action is absolutely perfect. He is a pure trotter and will get a mark close to 2:20 at that gait this fall. His record, 2:14 3/4, was made in his second race on the turf and is no mark of his speed as a racer. His breeding entitles him to be considered one of the most fashionably-bred stallions in America. He is by Chas. Derby (record 2:20 in sixth heat), brother to Steiner, 2:29 1/2; by Steinhay; dam Bertha, sister to Bayard Wilkes (record 2:15 in sixth heat), by Alcantara, record 2:23; second dam Barcana (dam of Alario, sire of Victor R., 2:04 1/2), by Bayard 53 (record 2:31, sire of Kitty Bayard, 2:12; on half mile track and 15 others in list); third dam Biandina, dam of six producing sires, including Swager and King Rene, by Mambriño Chief II; fourth dam Burch Mare (dam of Rosalind, 2:21 1/2, and Donald, 2:27), by Parker's Brown Pilot, sire of Sophronia, granddam of Nancy Hanks, 2:04. Chas. Derby, by Steinhay; dam Katy G., dam of two in list, by Electioner; second dam Fanny Malone (granddam of Mand C., 2:19), by Niagara (sire of Fairmont, 2:22 1/2); third dam Fanny Wickham, the great twenty-mile trotter, by Imp, Herald, out of a daughter of Imp, Trustee, etc. The great broodmares of Chas. Derby are Alma Mater, Green Mountain, Mrs. George, Blanche, Blanche Mare, Lady Wallermeir and Fanny G., great granddam of Palo Alto, 2:08 1/2, appear in this pedigree, besides such sires as Electioner, Steinhay, Alcantara, Geo. Wilkes, Pilot Jr., Mambriño Patchen, Hambletonian 10 and Mambriño Chief II, and the strongest thoroughbred families known. Address

MURRAY & RICHARDS, Owners. PLEASANTON, CAL. Excellent care taken of mares. Pasturage $5 per month.

WALDSTEIN 12,597. RECORD 2:22 1-2
In Fourth Heat.

Champion Stallion Record for Five Miles, 13:05 1/2.

Pedigree table for Waldstein 12,597, showing lineage from Dictator 118 and other horses like DIRECTOR 2:17 and DOLLY.

DESCRIPTION.—Waldstein was foaled in 1885; in color, he is a dark shade of brown with two white coronets; stands 15 1/2 hands and weighs 1100 lbs. He is one of the handsomest and most perfectly formed stallions in this State. His fine, intelligent head, well-shaped neck, strong shoulders, short back, powerful loins, heavy quarters, well-shaped barrel, heavy muscular stifle and arms, clean, straight, strong knees and locks, short cannon bones, excellent pasterns and feet all once commend him to the observer as a representative trotting horse. In disposition he is faultless, being kind and level-headed. His gait is perfection, and his race during his short career on the track fully demonstrate the game qualities which he possesses. His breeding cannot be surpassed. He is the only son of Director out of an Electioner mare standing for service. Of his sire, can any more praise be said than that his sons and daughters prove more sensational every year, and the races won by Director, Evangeline, Direct, Margaret S., and the rest stand him as one of the most perfectly formed stallions in America's dam in by the famous Electioner out of sister (dam of Albert W., 2:20, the sire of Little Albert, 2:10 1/2, the games) trotter seen in 1892, and Vixen, the only mare that has a two-year-old and a three-year-old with records lower than 2:19). Waldstein's third dam was the famous Lamont mare, one of the greatest mares that ever came to California. She was a great good mare. Waldstein has four yearlings for record: one during his record of 2:19 1/2, another 3:05, another 3:06, and the other 3:08. All his colts are natural trotters, perfect in form, solid in color and very strongly built. Waldstein cannot help being one of the greatest of sires. To the student of breeding, conformation and quality he fills the ideal.

TERMS $100 (with usual return privilege), for the season commencing February 1st and ending June 30th. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes, but the best of care taken of mares. Address H. S. HOGBOOM, Woodslid, Cal.

The Imported Thoroughbred Stallion
MERRIWA

Will make the season of 1893 at Dakland Race Track 3 Days Each Week, at San Jose Race Track 2 Days, and at Fisher's Ranch, Coyote, Santa Clara County, 2 Days, from Feb. 10th to June 1st.

Table showing pedigree of Merriwa, including parents like HABAENA and GOLDSBROUGH, and various other horses like Atholne and Sylvia.

And so on to the nineteenth dam. MERRIWA is a magnificent black horse, standing 15 1/2 hands, bred in 1856 by Frank Reynolds, of Focal, V.I.C. Goldsborough from Habena, by Yatterdon from Atholne, by Blair Athol from Habena (winner of 1000 Guineas in England), by Irish Birdcatcher from the Bridle, by The Saddler from Moonee, by Taurus, from Cons, by Partisan. Merriwa is undoubtedly a very fast horse and though an accident with a rider's temporary retirement from the turf, has not had a fair chance to prove his great pace by winning. He is descended from one of Australia's greatest families.

Goldsbrough, his sire, won amongst other races, the Great Metropolitan Stakes, two miles; a year, five years; weight, 128 pounds; time, three minutes, thirty-two and two-tenths seconds, fastest on record at that time. Goldsbrough had produced up to 1893 230 winners in the colonies.

Among the winners by Goldsbrough are the following: The Broker (winner Normandy Stakes and V. R. C. Sires' Produce Stakes and Adelaide St. Leger); Morphet (winner Tattersall's Cup, Anniversary Handicap and Australian Cup); Impulse (won Wagga Gold Cup, Arsenal (winner Melbourne Cup), Sorella, Melos (A. J. Derby and Leger and V. R. C. Champion Stakes), Algerian (Tattersall's Spring Handicap, Sydney Handicap, etc.), Cardigan (winner Tattersall's Foal Stakes, Hawkesbury Grand Handicap, Great Metropolitan Stakes, Anniversary Handicap, Summer Cup, etc.); Devotion (winner Merriment (winner Handicap and Hawkesbury Guineas), Elitistic (winner Tattersall's Cup and Hawkesbury Grand Handicap); The Jewel (winner A. J. C. Christmas Gift) Keith (won Hawkesbury autumn Handicap, Rose Hill Handicap, etc.), The Orphan, Jettison, Manolo, Cardones, Kilmore, (winner Royal Stakes), etc., etc. Atholne, the granddam of Merriwa, produced Habena (dam of Merriwa) and Narina, both winners of Marbury Plate, Geraldine and Huntglower each won second in that race, while Gainsborough and Gowan each ran third. It will thus be seen that Atholne's stock have performed with phenomenal success in the turf of all racing men, the Marbury Plate.

TERMS $60 FOR THE SEASON. Payable at time of service. Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for on my own premises may desire and fed on hay or grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars apply to

The Thoroughbred Stallion
THREE CHEERS

Will make the season of 1893 at
WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,
715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Table showing pedigree of Three Cheers, including parents like Young Fashion and Hurrah (imp.), and various other horses like Fashion and Monarch.

Fourth dam Reality; fifth dam, by Imp, Medley, sixth dam, by Imp, Sentinel; seventh dam, by Mark Anthony, eighth dam, by Imp, Janca, ninth dam, by Imp, Monkey; tenth dam, by Silversix eleventh dam, by Spanker. (See Briscoe's American Stud Book, Vol. I, page 432.)

THREE CHEERS, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquita, Ohio Boy, Nellie Patten, Little Entercamp, Red Fox, Medina, Brad, Rafere, Monk, Hoetage, Lady Middleton and many others.

NEWMINSTER, grand sire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BESS-WING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DE SYNTA X, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS' dam, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TAUSTEL, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the earliest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Entercamp, the first among them being the Doncaster Cup Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbing, spinning, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush, AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS. Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for on my own premises may desire and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. Only but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

STALLION ON THIS COAST.

Red Wilkes
:-: Dictator

DICTATUS

Will make the Season of 1893, commencing February 1st and ending June 1st, at

BELMONT STOCK FARM,

BELMONT, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL.

SERVICE FEE FOR THE SEASON..... $100
(Will be allowed to serve fifteen approved outside mares.)

DICTATUS was foaled in 1890. He was sired by the great RED WILKES 1749 (sire of 88 in the list); dam, Miss LOLLIE, by DICTATOR 133 (sire of JAY-EYE-SEE, 2:10, DIRECTOR, 2:17, and 41 others in the list, besides the dam of NANCY HANKS, 2:04, etc.); second dam, Gold Pen (dam of Felina, 2:29½, and grandam of Hill Boy (p), 2:20, by Mambrino Abdallah 2201 (son of Mambrino Patchen 58); third dam by Harold 413 (sire of Maud S., 2:03½, and 41 others in the list and grandsire of Kremlin, 2:07½); fourth dam, Emily Chester, by Mambrino Patchen 58; fifth dam Patsey (dam of Midway), by Snowstorm (sire of Jim Irving, 2:23). He is in color a chestnut, with star in forehead, one hind pastern white. In conformation he is perfect, being about 15.2 hands in height, very short back, strong over the coupling, heavy quarters, large, well-muscled gaskins and arms limbs straight, cannon bones short, hocks and joints clean and bony, and feet of the finest kind. His neck, head and body denote an iron constitution. His shoulders are sloping, and, taking him all in all, a more perfect representative of the great Wilkes-Dictator cross does not exist to-day. His breeding speaks for itself. He traces four times to Hambletonian 10 through his greatest sires—GEO. WILKES, DICTATOR, HAROLD and ABDALLAH 15. He traces to Mambrino Patchen twice and three times to Mambrino Chief. His blood-lines are unequalled by any stallion on this Coast.

The best of care taken of mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Service fee must be paid before mares leave the farm.

IF YOU WANT TO SUCCEED WITH YOUR HORSES BUY

Bilz' Training, Speeding and Combination Carts

They are the lightest and strongest and are made from the best selected material. Nothing but the Dalzell Centennial Axle used, which is the best axle made. They are the lightest running, hold the oil the longest, and no dust can enter the arm.

Some of the noted trainers pronounce my Speeding and Combination carts superior to any other. Frou-Frou and Frank M. made their fastest time in this speeding cart. In ordering carts please state size of axle and height of wheels.

Training The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gutting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work, Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colts are capable of as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE LODI RACE TRACK.

Rent of stalls, $2 per month each, in advance, with track privileges. Rebate allowed if stall is not used full month.

Those not renting stalls will be charged for use of track as follows: Single horse, $1.50 per month; two or more, $1.00 per month each.

Hay will be sold to those renting stalls at $8 per ton, and oats at $1.60 per hundred.

A fine galloping track has been built on the grounds in addition to the regular track and a number of new stalls have been added, making this the most convenient and well regulated quarters for horses on the Coast.

ITS OBJECT is to prevent disease, to regulate the bowels and urine; it strengthens the kidneys, prevents scouring, colic and leg-swell; loosens the bile, fattens stock, promotes the appetite, cures coughs, destroys worms and bots, and produces a fine, glossy coat.

To the stall-fed horse it has the beneficial effects and results of grazing without the softening effects of a season of grass with loss of time and money. For milch cows it increases and enriches their milk.

To Strengthen the Muscles.

It is a marvelous preparation for Strengthening the Muscular System. With Anti-Stiff there is no fault required; it goes straight for the muscles, and you can feel it at work. It has a peculiarly warming, comforting and stimulating effect on all weak or stiff muscles and sinews. Quick in its action, cleanly and pleasant in use. Rub it into the muscles every night for a fortnight, and you will be pleased at its expediting and strengthening properties. There is no pain, nor has been anything like it till now. It differs from all Oils, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some Athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them.

Acknowledged by leading horse-men of the world to be the ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

It Cured Ormonde.

Mr. JOHN PORTER, trainer to the Prince of Wales, says: "I have thoroughly tested OSSIDINE for the removal of Splints, Spavins, etc. I believe it is unequalled. Among other famous horses I have successfully treated with it is Ormonde. It never failed me."

N.B.—Ormonde is the great $150,000 horse recently purchased by Mr. MacDonough, and the winner of many big stakes.

Sanfoin, Common, Orme, and other well-known English race-horses have recently been treated successfully with OSSIDINE. We also have authority to refer to Mr. Jerome I. Case, Messrs. S. A. Browne & Co., Mr. Fred. Gebhard, and hundreds of others, from whom we have very flattering testimonials.

Jim.

Some horses have high-toned names, but it didn't matter with him; Some folks 'ud a called him James, but he answered only to "Jim." We raised him up from a colt, of a common sort of a stock; But he rose above his breed, as you can see by his walk; Faithful always, an' kind, and the pride o' my dead wife, And I wouldn't o' raised a whip to strike me to save my life, I'd as leave hit one of the kids as to lay a lash on him, An' fer an all-round horse thar wasn't none better than Jim.

Stiddy an' straight at the plow, he always knowed when to turn, So fer either gee or haw he didn't have any concern; He started or stopped at a word, no matter how hard the work; He went like his heart was in it, and never was known to shirk, And when I would drive him to town to the surrey he seemed to feel proud.

With all o' the family behind him—an' it wasn't no little crowd, You should see him throw out his feet an' lookin' so slick an' trim, Allowin' no others to pass, fer they couldn't git 'head o' Jim.

Money couldn't a bought him—I'd as soon hev sold a child— The very thoughts o' the thing 'nd set the household wild; No treatment was ever too good for such a critter as he, An' he seemed to be thankful fer it, as any time you could see; Why, the baby could straddle his back and slap him, an' yell with delight.

An' he'd take him around the yard until you'd laugh at the sight, Fer he'd go with a careful step, lest the baby should tumble down, With the other children laughin' an' followin' 'em round.

But the seasons got poorer an' poorer, an' I saw my profits fade, Till I couldn't pay my debts in spite of all Jim's aid, And a merchant I owed in town with an officer came fer the horse, An' there wasn't no use o' fightin' to try to prevent it, of course, I felt like my heart would break—I could hardly get my breath— An' all the children screamin' an' cryin' theirselves to death, Jim seemed to know what was wrong, He looked back with a sorrowful eye When the rascals led him away, an' I went to the barn to cry.

If Jim had a died an' gone it wouldn't hev been so bad, Fer I felt like the feller who loses the girl he thought he had, If she's in her grave that's an end, but to see her some other man's It's misery enough to make him take his life with his own han's, I hadn't much heart to work, but I had to struggle along, I had two other horses, but they wasn't very strong, I beld to the plow behind 'em, but my eyes 'ud always git dim Till I couldn't see the furrow—a-sighin' an' thinkin' o' Jim.

The little truck I could raise I hated to take to the town, Fer every time that I did I'd see Jim trottin' aroun' To the finest buggy I ever see, with nice harness on, An' Jenks slittin' straight with lines in his han's, an' I wanted my gun, An' if Jim 'nd see me he'd neigh an' want to come where I was, But he got the lash—an' I cussed the rich an' railed at the laws, An' then I 'nd turn away, fer my head was beginnin' to swim, An' my very blood 'nd bile as I went home a-gievin' fer Jim.

I am very sure that Jim felt as bad about it as me, An' hated ole Jenks the same, an' soon he got mean as could be, I'd hear that he'd try to run off, an' kicked, an' sbied out o' spite, He wasn't the same old horse, tho' I felt it was perfectly right, But I tried to get reconciled to it, an' went on with my work best I could.

Next year some money I made, fer the season an' crops they was good, An' at dinner one day, as we sat there talkin' o' him, Who should come tearin' an' stoppin' in front o' the gate but ole Jim! Ole Jim, with his harness on, an' a piece of a shaft at his side, I knowed that sumpin was wrong, "Jim! Jim!" the children cried, As we all run out to the gate an' found he was all in foam, An' they patted his neck an' rubbed his face as they welcomed him home.

Well, ole Jenks he was somewhat hurt in the smashup that occurred, And was deadfally mad at the beast, as might easily be inferred, I bought our old love for a song an' paid it down with a vim— That horse there nnder the apple tree, with the children around him—that's Jim.

—A. W. BELLAW IN THE HORSEMAN.

Traditions of Trotters.

In 1788 there was landed at Philadelphia, from a sailing vessel, some English thoroughbred horses. Several of them, exhausted by the voyage, were carefully taken to shore, but one, a rugged gray stallion, with a ringing neigh, stepped briskly down the gang planks and dashed away from the pier, with two grooms holding him in, says the Western Horseman

This was the advent of the famous Messenger, destined to exert a greater influence on the future stock of America than any horse ever upon the continent. A few of his descendants, in the fourth generation still survive, Stamboul, 2:07½, holding the stallion record of America, is in the fifth generation through his dam, and the eighth through the dam of Sultan, while Kremlin, 2:07¾, a formidable claimant of the standard record, is in the sixth remove through the male line.

In 1795 a bay three-year-old colt was introduced into Vermont by a man who was in debt and who offered the colt in part payment of the claim at $100, which was declined. He was then hired out for a year for $15, and used in clearing timber land. The little fellow, for he was only about fourteen hands high, was a prodigious worker, and could draw a log with ease, which a more bulky horse, weighing 1,200, could not draw its length, and after a day's work he could run three or four eighty-rod races, beating all comers. He lived to a great age, and was the sire of a universally popular strain of horses, for he was Justin Morgan.

A raw-boned, rat-tailed horse, foaled 1822, traveled under saddle from New York to Kentucky and was returned to New York after a not very successful season. So little was thought of him that his service was free when three years old, but he was sold for $1,000 when seventeen years old. At thirty-one years he was sold for $35 to a fisherman, who either to subdue his still untractable temper or from brutal indifference, starved him, and so he died, leaving a son, Hambletonian 10, to show that the blood of Abdallah I was a golden current, although he had shown his merits in very good sons who trotted a dozen years before he died of neglect.

Once upon a time (in 1829) there was a son of imp. Messenger called Topgallant, who was spavined in both hind legs. When he was fourteen years old it was discovered that he could trot. At twenty-two he trotted four four-mile heats against Whalebone. The sixteen miles were trotted in 45:44. Two years later old Topgallant trotted against seven good horses four three-mile heats, winning first place in one heat and second in the last. Next week he won a race of three-mile heats from Whalebone. He was an old-fashioned trotter.

It seems that as one great race mare finished her career another appeared to take her place and eclipse her. In 1838 Lady Suffolk, a five-year-old inbred Messenger mare, made her first trot in February for a purse of $11. She was on the turf until 1853, won eighty-eight out of 137 races, and earned $35,011. She was owned by a hard and unrelenting man who sold her to a better man to take care of her in her old age. She won her harness record of 2:28 in 1834 and was champion trotter for nine years.

George Wilkes has told in a story full of sunshine how J. A. Vielle on a June day in '59 was attracted by a rough-coated and bob-tailed little mare tied behind a drover's wagon, and bought her on the spot for $175. A year before, as a four-year-old, she had been sold for $13 as willful and unserviceable. Mr. Vielle sold her within a month for $350 to a Mr. Perrin, whose care changed the crazy, flighty, half-racking, half-trotting little mare into a true stepper, with a long, low, locomotive trotting step. She won races that year and was entered in the racing calendar as Flora. Perrin sold her to his brother for $575. She won other races, and again changed hands for $4,000. In 1853, the year Lady Suffolk retired, Flora Temple tied her time, 2:28, to a wagon. She raced quite steadily, showing herself a great weight-puller and invincibly game; changed hands twice and was again sold to Wm. McDonald for $3,000 in 1858. Next year, fourteen years old, she trotted twenty three races against the best horses and won twenty-two, beating Ethan Allen, Princess and Geo. M. Patchen. Her last race was in 1863, when she had been on the turf ten years. Her last appearance was in a review of stock by Gen. Grant. Her record, 2:19¾, was made in 1859 at Kalamazoo. She had won eighty-six out of 103 races.

Flora Temple's successor, Goldsmith Maid, was foaled in 1857, and by a grandson of Abdallah I, out of a daughter of the same. She was wild, timid and unmanageable until bought by Alden Goldsmith in 1865 for $500 and a buggy, who made her quiet and gentle without loss of spirit. Her first race was at eight years. She went into Doble's hands in 1867, and next year was bought by Doble & Jackman. Though very successful, she lost five races to American Girl and five to Lady Thorn. In 1872 Wm. H. Doble drove her a second heat in 2:16¾. She was fifteen then, but nineteen when she trotted six heats at an average of 2:17. She trotted the same season three heats in 2:16, 2:15½ and 2:15, and in California in 2:14½ a year later. Her record of 2:14 was made at Boston in 1874.

Flying Jib and George Starr.

While the handsome pacer Flying Jib was carrying everything before him last summer his owner, Captain Millen Griffith, left his home in San Francisco and took up a temporary residence in this city. He was accompanied by his wife and two daughters, one of them an invalid, who has been under treatment of New York specialists. On the journey across the continent the party stopped at Chicago and saw Flying Jib win his engagement at Washington Park. During their stay here Captain Griffith and his family have lived at the Brunswick, and they are now on the way back to the Pacific slope. The Captain is a stoutly-built, active man in middle life, and would pass for a prosperous banker or a Wall-street broker who was well up the ladder of prosperity and beyond the worry of puts and calls. In his youth, however, he went through all the hardships of a sea-faring life and was for sometime a resident of this city. In San Francisco he is well known from his connection with the whaling business in which he is still engaged, and among the road-riders of the California metropolis he takes pre-eminence as the owner of the fleetest pair in San Francisco, if not the whole world. Flying Jib made a national reputation on the turf in one short season, but before he ever pulled a sulky Captain Griffith drove him with another pacer, whose name, White Cap, suggests his color and his owner's nautical connection as well. The first time this "hurricane" team appeared in public was at the Bay District track before 3,000 people, where Captain Griffith electrified the crowd by letting them step to the quarter in 29½ seconds, and despite the time lost in negotiating the turn caused by his lack of experience in "weathering a cape" on wheels, the two geldings stepped to the half in 1:02½. From there they were pulled up, but could certainly have made the mile much faster than the record at the way of going.

"It seemed to surprise the boys, especially the professional drivers, when an old fellow like myself could show that much speed with a team, said Captain Griffith, speaking of this performance; "and the only one of the latter who was gracious enough to acknowledge its merits was John Goldsmith. He stepped up to me and said, 'My father was a pretty good reinsman, and my brother and myself have been driving horses all our lives, but yours is the most wonderful feat I have ever seen on a race track.'"

Both members of this redoubtable team will be on the turf this season as part of Monroe Salisbury's stable. Flying Jib seems to have quite recovered from the lameness which followed his terrific battle with Mascot at Terre Haute last September and has wintered well at Pleasanton. His road companion, White Cap, is a couple of years older and inclined to be double-gaited, as he can show better than a 2:30 clip at the trot, but has so much speed when pacing that his training will be for the latter way of going. The breeding of this gray ghost is more obscure than that of his famous mate, as beyond the fact that he was got by Peacock, 2:23, a well-known pacer through the California Circuit, nothing more has yet been learned, and the pedigree of his dam seems a mystery.

Though the exact cause of the trouble which laid Flying Jib up at Terre Haute was not discovered, Captain Griffiths thinks that in going up the hill on the four-sided Indiana track the big gelding injured a foot which once before had given him a lot of trouble. He purchased Jib when he was three years old, and found one of his fore feet was in bad shape, caused by what is popularly known as a "seedy toe." Having had some very unsatisfactory experience with veterinary surgeons in other cases, the Captain resolved to try a treatment of his own, and instructed his blacksmith to cut away the diseased hoof, keeping the bay gelding ankle deep in tan bark until the new growth was completed. Up to the time he was put in training this foot was quite as good as the other, but it can easily be understood how any weak part would be affected by the strain of the numerous fast miles the gelding went on this side of the mountains.

As a mark of his satisfaction with the way George Starr handled Flying Jib through the stirring campaign of July, August and September, Captain Griffith presented him with a valuable gold timer of the best modern make just before he left the city. His presentation speech was a very simple one and in these words: "I guess you'll find it all right, George, and I'm sorry you're not with the outfit this year."—Horseman.

The Great Stallion Race.

Success is assured to this year's trotting meeting at Fleetwood. The three stakes for the two, three and four-year-olds obtained the handsome number of 111 subscriptions at the start, representing nearly all the best-known breeding establishments in the country. But this number is probably less than that which will be reached when the most distant sections have been heard from. In each event a good number of high-class starters may be safely counted on.

For the great stallion race six entries have been received, and one or two more may yet come in, as they usually come by registered mail. Though the number is less than has been hoped for, they are sufficient to make up as grand a field of "flyers" as has ever come together in such a race, when quality is considered. Each one is a star of the first magnitude, the slowest by the record having a mark of 2:14. The list is as follows:

Directum, blk h, foaled 1889; record 2:11 1/4; by Director—Stemwinder, by Venture. Entered by M. Salisbury, Pleasanton, Cal.
 Nelson, b, foaled 1882; record 2:10; by Young Rolfe—Gretchen, by Gideon. Entered by C. H. Nelson, Waterville, Me.
 Stamboul, b, foaled 1882; record 2:07 1/4; by Sultan—Fleetwing, by Hambletonian. Entered by E. H. Harriman, New York.
 Geneva, ch h, foaled 1887; record 2:14; by Leland—Bessie Forrest, by Edwin Forrest. Entered by A. L. McCrea, Jr., Gouverneur, N. Y.
 Regal Wilkes, b, h, foaled 1887; record 2:13 1/4; by Guy Wilkes—Margaret, by Sultan. Entered by J. H. Shults, Parkville, L. I.
 Alvin, ch f, foaled 1885; record 2:13 1/4; by Orpheus—Nancy, by Toronto Chief Jr. Entered by Merrill, Laing & Claire, Tilsonburg, Ont.

Directum is the baby of the party. He gained his record last year as a three-year-old, and Mr. Salisbury considers him the fastest trotter living. Nelson is the horse which obtained such notoriety from the unfortunate stallion race at Boston a few years ago, when he defeated Alcyon, after which both horses and their owners were expelled. No horse in the world has been more talked about, and that he will prove a powerful attraction is certain. He obtained his record of 2:10 in 1891.

Stamboul holds the fastest stallion record—2:07 1/4—in spite of the recent attempts to discredit his performance at Stockton, Cal., last fall. Geneva is less generally known, but is a horse of the highest class and well worthy to be pitted against the best. His record, 2:14, was made last year. Regal Wilkes, 2:11 1/4, and Alvin, 2:13 1/4, very worthily complete the list as it now stands, and as each of them materially lowered his mark in 1892, either may be dangerous in the struggle for the $12,500 purse and the still more valuable palm of victory.—New York Times.

Champion Sires Since 1870.

As a comparison table the following compilation covering the largest winning stallions for each season from 1870 to 1892, is given below. The age in the same instance indicates what the stallions would have been if alive, as, for example, Lexington died in 1875, Leamington in 1878, Bonnie Scotland in 1880 and Billet in 1888. All of the others that figure in the list are still in the flesh.

FLYING JIB, 2:05 1/4, is the fastest pacer descended from Alexander's Abdallah in the direct male line; Roy Wilkes, 2:07 1/4, the fastest from George Wilkes; St. Patrick, 2:14 1/4, the fastest from Volunteer; Wilkie Russell, 2:15, the fastest from Woodford Mambrino; Willard M, 2:11, the fastest from Mambrino Patchen; Flowing Tide, 2:14 1/4, and Merry Chimes, 2:14 1/4, the fastest from Electioneer; Sunset, 2:16 1/4, the fastest from Blue Bull; Robert J., 2:04 1/4, the fastest from Harold; Riley Medium, 2:10, the fastest from Humpy Medium, and Brightwood, 2:19 1/4, and Major Lambert, 2:19 1/4, the fastest from Daniel Lambert.

Joint Sale of Trotters.

On Wednesday, March 15, at the salesyard, corner Market and Van Ness Avenue, Messrs. Killip & Co., the well-known auctioneers will sell by auction a list comprising nearly sixty head of broodmares, colts and fillies. Among them will be found a daughter of Director, out of a sister to Creole, 2:20, a grand looker and bred to suit the most fastidious; Chloe Thorne, a sister to Chloe, 2:23 1/4 and Dexter Thorne, 2:25 1/4; Nutty, by Nutwood, the leading sire of broodmares; Cassiar, a grand looking pacer by Soudan, out of Carrie Malone (sister to Chas. Derby 2:20); Sitka, by Soudan, out of Signa (sister to Maggie McDowell, 2:21 1/4), by Sidney. Three Dexter Prince fillies, a few by Eclectic, brother to Arion, 2:10, some daughters of A. W. Richmond, Nutwood, Coligne, Grosvenor, Whipple's Hambletonian, General Taylor, Dave Hill Jr., Redwood, Echo, Rustic, Director, Sidney, Soudan, Sterlingwood, Admiral, Adventure, Fordston (sire of Marvel, 2:24 1/4), Tempest, and Whippleton. Capt. Ben E. Harris, the well-known horseman, sends a number of royally-bred, perfectly-trained roasters, broodmares, colts and fillies, the produce of his stylish, pure-gaited stallions and prize-winning broodmares. D. J. Murphy also sends a number of youngsters by Soudan, 2:27 1/4, one of the coming California sires, a horse whose sons and daughters are esteemed very highly by all who have purchased them. He also sends some Dexter Prince and Director fillies, L. Hewlett, of Oakland, adds a few well-bred ones, while T. C. Snider, of Sacramento, sends two grand-looking, royally-bred fillies.

Napa's Great Sale.

Next Wednesday, immediately after the arrival of the train from San Francisco, the great combination sale of trotters will commence at the Napa Race Track, headed by the son of Almont, Alcona 730. There are few stallions in California that have five trotters in the list, and Alcona is among them; his progeny stamps him as a sire of large, stylish, pure-gaited, sound and intelligent horses—a class that there will always be a demand for. The family of colts and fillies by him that are to be sold will be living testimonials of his worth. No better or more convincing proof, we think, is necessary. Either on the track or road these representatives fill every requirement. Besides these there are sons and daughters of Whippleton, Director, Grandissimo, Mountain Boy, Steinway, Stamboul, Kentucky Prince, Tom Benton, Silas Skinner, Alconeer, Harold Cossack, Noonday, Privateer, and numerous other sires out of mares that have been selected for breeding, individuality and racehorse qualities. Every horseman in the land who wants to get representatives of the best trotting families in their farms instead of the individuals of unknown breeding whose produce will never bring enough to pay for their first year's pasture should attend this sale. The consignments comprise all the stock owned by the consignees. Nothing is reserved, and every animal will be sold. The synopsis published in another column should be read by every one, and all who wish to secure royally-bred, handsome youngsters at their own prices should make an effort to go to the sale.

Dexter Prince 11,363.

There are very few great sires left in California now that Sidney, Director and Stamboul have gone, but Dexter Prince remains and will make the season of 1893 at the Sonther Farm at $250 the season. Dexter Prince is one of the phenomenal sires, and is destined to take a leading place among the very greatest. Bred, as he was to all classes of mares, he transmitted qualities that are sought after by horsemen, who love a fast, game and pure-gaited trotter. Dexter Prince never had any opportunities to compare with other sires of extreme speed, yet his progeny demonstrate that they inherit speed. He trotted eighths in fourteen seconds at Palo Alto, and if kept on that farm would have made a much better showing as a sire. He is one of the best-bred horses living. He is of good size and excellent color, and his disposition is the kindest. In the adjoining stall to his is the Elector stallion, Pleasanton, 2:29 1/4, a grand-looking, well-bred horse, and just the kind of a sire to get large, stylish, good-gaited horses that will be useful anywhere, either on track or road.

Eclectic, Brother to Arion.

The colts and fillies by this grandly-bred son of Electioneer are being spoken of very highly by all horsemen who have seen them. They are large, well-formed, powerfully-muscled, perfect in disposition and as trotters pure-gaited. They know nothing but trot, and as they inherit the blood of Electioneer, the greatest sire of trotters that ever lived, and Nutwood, the present king of sires, through one of his best daughters, there is no reason why the Eclectics should not rank among the choicest trotters in America in a few years. Eclectic represents the most fashionable breeding, and as a sire he will have his first representatives in the list this fall.

SAYS "Hark Comstock:" "The Moor will always rank with such other founders of winning strains as Hambletonian, Mambrino Chief, American Star, Pilot Jr., Alexander's Norman and Harry Clay. His blood has strong trotting inclinations in its own right and its foals are 'born a trotting.'" It is a sound and enduring strain, and not the least of its recommendations is that even a remote cross of it is almost certain to insure the best of legs and feet. Furthermore, like the blood of Hambletonian, it breeds impartially through both sexes. While it has reached its highest form through the direct male line of descent, the mares have thrown brilliant results. Beautiful Bells and Sable have founded families of their own, and to Margaret and Montrose, that great sire, Guy Wilkes owes his fastest two trotters, Regal Wilkes, 2:11 1/4, and Muta Wilkes, 2:14 1/4.

GENTLEMEN of the trotting associations, every dollar judiciously expended in advertising brings five dollars in at the gate. Don't be afraid to begin early and then keep it up. Get a good man to keep your track and grounds in first-class order, pay your secretary salary enough to enable him to devote more than his spare moments to the business of your association, introduce novelties in your programme, keep up with the times, and your balance sheet will show a good profit every year. But don't forget to advertise.

San Jose Race Track Notes.

Anyone who loves a horse, who admires the fine points of a speedy animal, who does not need the excitement of a race to call forth his admiration, will be delighted any fine morning with a visit to the track of the Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Society at Agricultural Park. The trotters, pacers and thoroughbreds flying past the grand stand and along the stretches for their morning exercise, their smooth coats shining in the morning sunlight, form as pretty a picture as one could wish to see. The beautiful weather of the past two weeks has given the superintendents of the tracks an opportunity to put them in the very finest condition. C. F. Bunch takes care of the track for trotters and "Billy" Donathan looks out for the inside circle, which is devoted exclusively to the use of the thoroughbreds. Their duties of superintending are very much lightened by the carefulness and competence of Peter Clark, whose services have been very valuable during several years past, both to the Association and to the trainers who use the track, among whom he is an especial favorite.

The inside track is a great advantage to the running horses, and it is largely due to this that the park is such a popular place for running stables preparing for the spring and summer campaign.

A third track has been added to those already mentioned. It is for use during wet weather, and is situated under the cypress trees east of the Club House. The thick branches of the cypress form an almost complete roof for the track, which is circular and a quarter of a mile in length. It has been thickly sanded, well drained, and makes a fine place for galloping runners during stormy weather. This improvement was suggested to President Buckley during the recent rains by Henry Walsh, manager of the McDonough stables. Mr. Buckley immediately acted on the plan, and this wet-weather track is the result.

Mr. Buckley has a number of other improvements in contemplation, and some already in progress. Among these latter is a much-needed trimming and cleaning of the cypress grove at the rear of the grand stand. This will make the park much more sightly as well as more healthful for the horses by letting in more sunlight and air about the stables and permitting the ground all about to dry sooner after a storm. The park has long needed a system of water-works, and Mr. Buckley talks of erecting a windmill and a large tank to meet this want.

Mr. Buckley and Secretary Bragg have taken more than their usual interest in the track this year. The president has been on the ground almost daily ascertaining the needs of the tracks and stables, and so far as possible supplying them, and the secretary has made frequent visits to look after the financial affairs of the association. The directors, too, have been wide awake, and have seconded the efforts of the officers toward maintaining the popularity of the park and tracks. The directors of the Agricultural Society this year are D. J. Murphy, James W. Rea, T. S. Montgomery, T. W. Hobson, Wm. Boots and William Quinn.

There is to be something of an innovation in trotting circles this spring. Heretofore the early spring meetings have been almost entirely devoted to speed contests between running horses. An opinion has prevailed among turfmen that trotters could not stand a campaign beginning early in the spring and lasting until late in the fall. On account of this longer campaign of the runner it has been a general belief whether well founded or not, that the thoroughbred is a more profitable horse and earns more for his owner than the trotter can during his shorter season of racing. Besides the public generally seem to demand an extension of the trotting season. These facts have induced the horsemen of the coast to arrange a programme for a number of trotting events at Sacramento during the spring meeting that takes place there beginning on the 9th of May; and also at the trotting meeting in Oakland, beginning May 20th. There will be five days racing for trotters at Sacramento and four days of the trotting speed contests at Oakland.

There seems to be no good reason why these Sacramento and Oakland meetings should not be followed by one of a similar character in San Jose. The horses will be in fine form, the track in excellent condition, and undoubtedly such a meeting at an early season of the year when the weather is bright and pleasant would attract large patronage from the public at large, while those horsemen who are to participate in the two meetings above alluded to would be especially pleased by such an arrangement.

A number of the wide-awake horsemen at the track, who are anxious to make the horses in their care earn as much money as possible for their owners, and who are not too conservative to adopt a good thing when they see it, even if it does conflict with some of their preconceived notions, are now rapidly getting their horses in proper trim for these early trotting meetings. C. F. Bunch is working miles now with some of James W. Rea's horses. Laura R., 2:21 1/4, is shapung up first-class for the free-for-all at Sacramento. Ed Senter's mare Pink, 2:23 1/4, will start at Sacramento in the 2:24 class, and is already showing excellent form.

Minnie B., 2:29 1/4, Ed Topham's fine daughter of Billy Thornhill, 2:24 1/4, and Laura R., 2:21 1/4, by Electioneer, will be one among several entries in the stake for four-year-olds of the 2:25 class to be trotting at the State Fair in September, and with her good showing in so short a time last year her chances for winning are exceedingly good.

Donathan has twelve thoroughbreds from Haggins's stock farm at Sacramento in course of preparation at the track for the summer campaign. His special pet for some time past has been a five-year-old by Alcazar, 2:20 1/4, by Sultan, 2:24, sire of Stamboul, 2:07 1/4, belonging to D. J. Murphy. This horse unfortunately went wrong and died Thursday last. The animal had a history of his own. He was strictly trotting-bred on his sire's side and his dam was out of a thoroughbred mare. He was ineffectually tried for a trotter, but he wouldn't trot, so it was decided to give him his way and make a runner of him. Accordingly he was saddled and from the first went very fast. Donathan, in his smooth, quiet way, that has so often fooled the talent, zealously attended to this horse's training. He expected to use him to surprise the boys this year.

Some of William Vioget's neighbors keep dogs, and since early last week he has taken a strong dislike to the whole canine tribe. He was driving a two-year-old filly, by Eros, 2:29 1/4, at the time alluded to, when a dog frightened the animal, and a runaway was the consequence. Nobody was hurt, but a $150 sulky was badly wrecked. After the accident Mr. Buckley very promptly ordered that all dogs at the track be kept tied. This runaway is not all Billy's bad luck during the past week. His fine bay trotting stallion by Dexter Prince, which he gave a record of 2:25 at Stockton last year to make him standard, has been transferred by his owner, Adolph Spreckles, of San Francisco, to the stable of Orrin Hicock. This was not on account of any dissatisfaction with Mr. Vioget's management of the horse, but because Mr. Spreckles desired to send him on the Eastern circuit. His former trainer says he can get much faster than 2:25; in fact he expects him to swing his mile in 2:10 soon.

Mr. Wicks, of Los Gatos, recently lost a very valuable yearling filly, by Antinous, out of a Nutwood mare that he prizes very highly. He has never bred this mare to any but the best horses, such as Antinous, Boodle, 2:21; Silver Bow, 2:16; and Henry, a full brother to Big Lize, 2:24.

The prospects for a very successful trotting season, beginning early and ending late, are flattering so far, and it is to be hoped that the directors of the association here may see their way clear to hold an early meeting after the plan of those at Stockton and Sacramento already mentioned.—Mercury.

Notes From Oregon.

E. S. Rothchild has sent his stallion, J. S. C., to The Dalles to make a season.

Van B. DeLashmutt has engaged Charles Woods to handle the trotters at the Witch Hazel Farm this season.

Already there have been dates claimed for four spring meetings in Oregon, with probably two or three more to bear from.

Messrs. DeLashmutt and Ladd & Reid have secured the Exposition stables for holding their combination sale next April.

Local horsemen have rented a room in the Hamilton building, which will be comfortably furnished for entertaining visiting horsemen.

Van B. DeLashmutt's fine filly Inez D. is dangerously sick with stricture of the bowels. The veterinary surgeon has pronounced her beyond aid.

The North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders' Association will hold a directors' meeting March 8, to fix the time and place of holding its annual race meetings.

Vancouver, Wash., which boasts of the finest track in the Northwest, has claimed June 14, 15, 16 and 17, as the dates for its spring meeting. No doubt liberal purses will be hung up.

Salem is to have a new regulation track of the latest improved style. The Oregon records may be smashed to smithereens next fall. If the brethren over the river expect to walk off with the laurels of the Pacific Northwest this year they will have to get up and "Nancy Hanks" a little.

Nominations to the Witch Hazel $1000 produce stake are being filled with the secretary of the North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders' Association. Rich Morton has named his stallion Alro, by Altamont, dam by Rockwood, and Baily & Wisdom have entered Challenger Chief, 2:21, by Challenger, dam by D. Monroe, 2:28.

The dates claimed by the Vancouver Driving Park and the Independence track seem to clash, owing, perhaps, to the fact that both associations held their directors' meetings at the same time. This error will, no doubt, be remedied by one or the other making a change in its date, as it would not be to the least interest of either to have the two meetings at the same time.

Breeders throughout the Northwest feel highly elated over the improved public feeling towards the trotting horse business in all sections. The application to which the trotting horse is subject is becoming more widely understood, and now the small breeder or farmer is on equal terms with the more extensive or larger breeder. This feeling of confidence is brought about by knowledge of the usefulness of the trotter, derived by united efforts of the breeders. "In unity there is strength" is the motto adopted by the horsemen, and its fruits are made apparently by the flourishing condition of the business.

The speed programme for the Oregon State Fair was arranged at the last meeting of the board. The fair begins September 11 and continues six days. The two-mile-and-repeat trotting race was about the only new feature adopted. The amounts of trotting and pacing stakes are $800; trotting and pacing purses, $2,900; running stakes, $500; and running purses, $2,050; total, $6,250. The board unanimously recommended Senator W. F. Matlock for member of Oregon's world's fair commission, and he has since been appointed by the governor. The Salem Driving and Speed Association was granted the use of the track for its race meeting, July 4, 5 and 6.

President Apperson, Superintendent Wilson and Secretary Gregg, of the State Board of Agriculture, visited Vancouver, Wash., a day or two ago to view the race track and grand stand there in order to secure some information which might be of use when they came to construct a new track and grand stand at the Salem fair grounds. They found a very fine track and stand, and noted a number of features which will be adopted if they make a new track. Perhaps before that time the new track at Irvington, in this city, may be completed, and then they may be able to find some more new and desirable features. There are now about 40 teams at work on the Irvington track, and 20 men are employed at grubbing. Over 15,000 cubic yards of earth have been removed. The Association has 70 acres of ground, about 30 of which are to be cleared. The track will be in the form of a square, with rounded corners, and will inclose about 50 acres, which will be made as level as a lawn. The grandstand, 370 feet long by 50 feet in depth, will seat 6,000 people. It will be elevated some distance above the track, and the ground in front of it will slope toward the track. No carriages will be allowed to drive in front of the grand stand, nor will any be allowed inside the tracks. There will be long tie rails at one end of the stand and behind it. The entrance to the grounds will be at the rear of the grand stand, where will also be the entrance to the stand. Beyond the stand will be the stables, with accommodation for 303 horses, and on the opposite of the grounds will be the saddling or cooling paddock, where all horses will be taken between heats. It will be under the care of a proper officer. It is proposed to import a starter from the East to attend all races on the circuit. The races this year will be nearly all two-in-three heats or dashes, thus giving spectators more racing and less of the tedious waiting than under the old style. If a man can be procured who can start the horses without the usual amount of "scoring" many people will attend the races who have heretofore stayed at home.—Oregonian.

THE ENGLISH RACE HORSE.

Short Sketches of Famous Sires of the Past.

[Written expressly for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

The English race horse, so called—like the game-cock and bull-dog—is purely a British production, unequalled for high courage, stoutness and endurance. The term thoroughbred, as applied to the horse both in Great Britain and Ireland, indicates the horse in question to be either a remote or immediate, pure, unmixed descendant of the Arabian, Barb, Turk, Persian, Syrian or Egyptian horse, or of those of the neighboring countries. The preference given to antiquity and purity of racing blood has always been conceded to the produce of the Arabian and African deserts.

In the general outline of form and limbs, the shape of head and expression of the face the modern English race horse bears the strongest resemblance to the Arab; but on account of the great care, high keep, etc., which he has enjoyed through so many generations, he is now of far greater height and bulk than his Oriental ancestors, and proportionately superior in power and speed. Whatever may be said of the fabled speed of the horse in his wild state, there can be no doubt but that he could not hold his own with even a trained plater of to-day. Hence, assisted by the systematic care of British breeders, the race horse has been brought to that perfection of grace and symmetry which we now see in him and his race the world over.

It is now over a hundred and fifty years since the greatest attention has been paid to pedigree, and to preserving the racing breed pure and unmixed. Accidental crosses there certainly have been, for they are on record, but they have been comparatively few—mere drops of the common in the flood of the pure. Such crosses have often been apparent for several generations in the form and qualities of the produce, but time has obliterated them, and they cannot now be noticed.

The cases of Bay Malton and Sampson are exceptional instances wherein horses with common blood have proved great racers. The former, who was the property of the Marquis of Rockingham, ran over the four-mile course at York—a grass one, of course—in seven minutes and forty-three seconds.

The fathers of the entire family may be said to be the Darley Arabian, the Godolphin Arabian and the Wellesley Arabian. The Darley Arabian was imported into England early in the reign of Queen Anne, by a Mr. Darley, and came from Aleppo. He was undoubtedly of the purest Arabian stock. He was the sire of that famous race horse, Flying Childers.

The ill-success at the stud of an Arabian imported by James I. had prejudiced the English against the strain, but the success of the Darley Arabian turned the tide of opinion in favor of the Eastern family.

Next comes the Godolphin Arabian, imported five-and-twenty years later and owned by Lord Godolphin. By many good authorities the Godolphin was said to have been in reality a Barb; anyhow his career seems to have been a most checkered one. He was thought so little of in France that he was actually employed in the ignoble drudgery of drawing a cart. A Mr. Coke brought him to England and gave him a present to Lord Godolphin. For some time he was not appreciated in England, but when he sired the famous Lath, the best horse of his day, he was at once placed at the head of the stud. The Godolphin was fifteen hands high, of great substance and true conformation. His color was brown bay, with mottles on the buttocks and crest and a small streak of white on a hind heel. He was imported into France from some royal stud in Barbary, and is suspected to have been stolen. He was foaled in 1724 and died in 1753.

The Wellesley Arabian's history is but little known, though by some is considered to have been superior to either the Darley or Godolphin. These three noted horses transmitted to their progeny in the highest degree those qualities which go to make a first-class racehorse—the fine head, full eye, large nostrils, the curving and tapering neck, the slanting and lengthened shoulders, the fully developed, muscular quarters, the bending hind legs, the flat limbs, somewhat short downward from the knee, and the long and springy pastern.

The first famous sire of what may be called the English racehorse breed was Flying Childers. Childers was a bay horse, upwards of fifteen hands high, and was foaled in 1715. He was the property of Leonard Childers, of Carr House, near Doncaster, Yorkshire, who sold him when a two-year-old to the Duke of Devonshire. Singularly enough, the records give us no account of Childers' dam, but she was no doubt a well-bred English mare, probably with a little Arabian blood in her veins. We are asked to believe that Childers ran over the Round Course at Newmarket, three miles, six furlongs, ninety-three yards, in six minutes forty seconds, also that he ran over the Beacon Course, four miles, one furlong and thirty-eight yards, in seven minutes and thirty seconds. These records are a trifle too much for the American palate, where time records are thought so much of and so carefully attested. Childers died in 1741, at the age of twenty-six.

Hampton Court Childers, the sire of the famous Blacklegs, from whose stock some of our best blood comes, was the son of Flying Childers. The full brother of Flying Childers, known as Bartlett's Childers, never raced, but was most successful at the stud.

King Herod, by Tartar, dam Cyron. This Tartar must not be confused with Tartar, by Blaze. Tartar, the sire of Herod, was by Croft's Partner, dam Meliora, by Fox. King Herod was a bright bay with black points, and stood a trifle over fifteen hands, and was foaled in 1758. His grandsire, Partner, was foaled in 1718. He was a chestnut horse of great power and perfect symmetry, and immediately succeeded Flying Childers as the champion of Newmarket. He was by Jigg, dam's pedigree unknown. Jigg was a son of the famous Byerly Turk, and shows a pedigree of good ones, concluding with the well-known Old Vintner mare. Partner died in 1747, aged twenty-nine. Cyron, the dam of King Herod, was by Blaze, a son of Flying Childers, out of Selima, by the Bethel Arabian, and had the blood of Champion, Darley Arabian and old Merlin in her veins.

"However, nothing can be more unsatisfactory," said Admiral Rous, "than the pedigrees of English racehorses up to 1750." It is true that Charles II. and Queen Anne both kept fine studs, but meager records were kept of those most important factors in breeding—the mares. It was not until 1791 that Weatherby, the keeper of the Match Book, obtained a list of pedigrees collected by a private gentleman. A register was then kept, and the Stud Book was published in 1808. Since that time a regular account has been kept of the produce of thoroughbred stock.

King Herod, like Flying Childers, never ran until he was five years old, and only ran at Newmarket, Ascot and York, and always in four-mile races. In nineteen years, viz., from 1771 to 1789, four hundred and ninety-seven of his progeny won in plates, matches and sweepstakes £201,505, exclusive of some thousands won between 1774 and 1785. This record is all the grander when we consider that in those days there were no Suburbans, Brooklyns, Chicago Derbies or Futurities.

Herod was the sire of the celebrated Highflyer, bred by Sir Charles Bury, who, like Ormonde, was never beaten. He also got Woodpecker, Bordeaux, Anvil, Hammer, Sting, Adamant, Plunder, Quicksand, Rautipole, Whipard and many other good ones. His daughters were numerous, and included some notable winners and broodmares.

These are only a few of the celebrities of the past as sires and racehorses.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

In or Out Breeding.

[Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

The question of what shall be the dams of our great coming sires stares us in the face. To maintain the improvement in the trotting horse for the next twenty years that has been maintained in the past twenty is a question that will require study and expenditure of wealth in the field of experiment. Much has been written about intensifying the speed by bringing together two lines of the same fast blood. Cannot much more be said of the intensifying influence of an outcross of equally fast blood—George Wilkes, Electioneer, Nutwood, Abdallah 15, Guy Wilkes—all completely outcross-bred sires, and if they are not the great ones, let us hear what ones can match them? Aside from Hambletonian and his son Egbert, there are no inbred sires of great celebrity, while I have given but a short list of the outcross-bred ones. Look at the sons of Electioneer, Anteo, Antevolo, Anteros and Richards' Elector. Look at Palo Alto and Azmoor. Look at the successful sons of George Wilkes and the sons of all the great sires, and see what number of them are in bred and what are outcross-bred. Look at Stamboul, "the Great." I well know that in him and another I have named an eighth or a sixteenth can be claimed for inbreeding, but that small drop is not the controlling influence of a great sire. There is some method in the idea of the man who is breeding to get mares to breed race horses from. It has been my observation that inbreeding produces more of delicacy than of strength. It has so proven with other domestic animals, and the same will apply with the horse. The advent of Ax-tell, you might say, created Mambrino Boy. Mambrino Patchen was created by his outcross breeding. Speed at the pace has been pretty clearly demonstrated to produce speed at the trot. Tell us why will not speed at the gallop produce speed at the trot or pace. The best way in the world to succeed in raising trotters is to throw prejudice to the dogs. A successful breeder has got to keep a variety of good stuff. The time is not distant when a few first-class runners, winners, will be appreciated on the trotting farms to raise dams of trotters from. They will want a male as well as female. Amigo's dam was by Wildide, out of a trotting-bred mare, and let me tell it, he was the handsomest son of Electioneer, and he came to his speed much faster than did Palo Alto, and had he not died no one knows what would have been his mark at eight years old.

Look at the success that has come from half-thoroughbred mares, and note that you must use thoroughbred sires to get the kind that have been a success.

If there is a family of trotters that has got so much speed that they cannot carry it a race out, breed the mares to a stout thoroughbred and the female offspring back to a game trotter. Remember that you have plenty of time to succeed, and that failure outcasts any delay. I do not offer this to bolster up nor to pull down, but to set the breeder to thinking, that he may build up. PRO PUBLICO.

Denver's Spring Meeting.

The Overland Park Club Association will give a Spring Meeting, running and trotting mixed, beginning May 30, 1893, and continuing until June 10, inclusive. There will be three running races and two harness races one day, varied by three harness races and two running races the next day—on which day harness races are best two heats in three to win. Denver has proved a successful racing point for mixed meetings, and the Overland Park Club stands among the leading clubs in the country for liberality of management, fair racing and the competency of its racing officials, secured from among the best men in the West. The two tracks, one for runners and the other for trotters, are among the best and safest in the country, as proved by freedom from accidents during twenty-eight days of racing in 1892. The weather at the time fixed for the next meeting, as forecast from official statistics for the past fifteen years, should be fine. It is an especially desirable stopping point for California horses on their way East. Good water, good stabling and excellent facilities of every kind are there. They offer the use of stables and track to those who desire to rest at Denver, even though they do not propose to race there this season. The programme will not be issued until about April 1. The purses for both runners and trotters will vary from $300 to $500, with the addition of some trotting stakes, for which entry blanks and conditions will be mailed later. All inquiries regarding the meeting will be promptly answered by the general secretary, Mr. C. Rhodes, 819 Boston Building, Denver, Colorado.

GREEN MOUNTAIN MAID still leads the list of great broodmares in the number of 230 performers, having nine to her credit, which undoubtedly completes her list, as neither of her others are now likely to be given records, though undoubtedly each was capable of entering the list, while one of the others has a record of 2:31, and was first at the wire in a heat which was unjustly given to another in 2:30. Green Mountain Maid has two in 2:20, and her four sons are now all represented in the list. Electioneer, the oldest, leading the list, while Lancelot, the youngest, a five-year-old, surpassed all others of that age.

THE $125,000 beauty, Arion, 2:10, champion two and three-year-old, is wintering very well, and will remain at the stud until July 1. He gets his exercise regularly and is often driven double with Hourii, 2:17, the combined cost of the two being $147,000—a rather expensive team.

THE GUN.

A May Morning In the Wood

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

All nature smiling fresh and glad,
Bedecked as for a holiday,
In royal robes is richly clad,
To welcome thee, sweet month of May.
The orchestra within the grove,
Glad overtures are heard to play,
As all her grand processions move,
Just at the peep o' coming day.

The lark mounts up with cheering song:
The linnets trill a roundelay,
Then all join in a chorus strong,
To welcome in the coming day.
The cunning squirrel creeps from his nest
And gaily scampers o'er the ground.
Or measures space from tree to tree—
The acrobat—with fearless bound.

The mocking bird now takes his seat,
On topmost bough of tallest tree,
And every listening ear doth greet,
With sweetest notes of minstrelsy.
Then from low branch of tree hard by,
Comes floating a sweet voice of love:
None more heart-touching 'neath the sky,
Than this soft note of turtle dove.

The turkeys from their lofty perch
Call "quit, quit, quit," then reach the ground
And straightway they begin their search
'Till some secluded spot is found.
Perchance you see some tardy owl
Drowsily winging home to bed:
He seems half devil and half fowl,
With wondering stare of horned head.

On spreading boughs of yonder oak
Are pigeons feeding on its burs,
The morn no sound from them awoke,
They're Nature's silent worshippers:
A sudden flash from out the sky—
A crash! and then a rumbling sound;
A hawk tells you the reason why,
The birds high circle round and round.

In every leaf and blade of grass
Depends a wealth of jewelry
Which flashes brightly as we pass—
Night's gift to Morning's revelry.
If you would chase away dull care,
And Nature see in charming mood,
Rise with lark and with me share
Some pleasant morning in the wood.

The Emeric Bill.

The fate of the Emeric Bill, at this writing, is in doubt. Should the parties who are seeking to encompass its defeat be successful in their efforts, then one of the best and most wholesome measures ever presented for legislative consideration in this State will have been rejected. It is simply amazing to note the willful misrepresentation that has crept into the press of this city regarding this measure. It has been little else save misrepresentation that has appeared in the columns of any of them. In order to prove this let us look at the matter in a fair and intelligent light. In order to do this we must have the bill before us. Here it is just as it passed the Assembly and was referred to the senate. It reads as follows:

An act to amend section 626 of the Penal Code, relating to the preservation of game birds and animals, and providing punishment for the unlawful taking, killing and transportation thereof.

The people of the State of California, represented in the Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section six hundred and twenty-six of the Penal Code of the State of California is hereby amended to read as follows:

SECTION 626. Every person who, in the State of California, between the first day of March and the first day of October, in each year, shall hunt, pursue, take, kill, or destroy any quail, bob-white, partridge, or grouse, or any kind of wild duck [English snipe,] or rail, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, shall take, gather, or destroy the eggs of any quail, bob-white, pheasant, grouse, or dove, or any kind of wild duck, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, between the first day of [March] and the first day of [August] in each year, shall hunt, pursue, take, kill, or destroy doves, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, shall, within the two years next after the passage of this Act, hunt, pursue, take, kill or destroy, any male deer, elk, antelope, mountain sheep, or buck, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, shall have in his possession any green hides or any green skins of any deer, elk, antelope, or mountain sheep, killed after the passage of this Act, and before the expiration of two years from the date of the passage of this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, shall at any time hunt, pursue, kill, take, or destroy any female deer, antelope, elk, mountain sheep, or doe, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who shall at any time hunt, pursue, take, kill, or destroy any spotted fawn shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who shall take, kill, or destroy, at any time, any bird mentioned in this section, unless the carcass of such bird is used or preserved by the person so taking or slaying it, or is sold for food, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person in the State of California who shall at any time sell, or offer for sale, the hide or meat of any deer, elk, antelope, or mountain sheep, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who shall buy, sell, offer, or expose for sale, transport or carry, or have in his possession any deer or deerskin, or any deer hide or pelt from which the evidence of sex has been removed, or any of the aforesaid game at a time when it is unlawful to kill the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

[Every person who, in the State of California, shall, within the two years next after the passage of the Act, hunt, pursue, take, kill, or destroy any pheasant, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.]

[Every person who shall, at any time, net or pound any quail, partridge, or grouse, and every person who shall sell, transport, or give away, or offer or expose for sale, or have in his possession any quail, partridge, or grouse that has been snared, captured, or taken in or by any means of any net or pound, is guilty of a misdemeanor.]

[Proof of possession of any quail, partridge, or grouse which shall not show evidence of having been taken by means other than a net or pound, shall be "prima facie" evidence, in any prosecution for violation of the provisions of this section, that the person in whose possession such quail, partridge, or grouse is found, took, killed, or destroyed the same by means of a net or pound.]

[Quail, bob-white quail, partridge, pheasant, grouse, or any kind of wild duck killed in this State, shall not be transported to any point within the State, from any of the counties thereof, or possessed for that purpose, except that such birds may be transported from the county where killed when accompanied by the owner thereof. Possession of the birds named by common carrier, unaccompanied by the owner, is a violation of this section.]

Every railroad company, express company, transportation company, or other common carrier, their officers, agents and servants, and every other person, who shall transport, carry or take from this State, or shall receive for the purpose of transporting from this State any deer, huck, doe or fawn, or any quail, partridge, pheasant, grouse, prairie chicken or wild duck, except for purposes of propagation, or who shall transport, carry, or take from this State, or receive for the purpose of transporting from this State, the carcass of any such animal or bird, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every railroad company, express company, transportation company or other common carrier, their officers, agents and servants, and every other person who shall transport, carry or bring into this State from without the limits thereof, any deer, huck, doe or fawn, quail, partridge, pheasant, grouse, prairie chicken or wild duck, except for purposes of propagation, or shall bring into this State from without the limits thereof the carcass of any such animal or bird, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every cold storage company, person keeping a cold storage warehouse, tavern or hotel keeper, restaurant or eating-house keeper, marketmen or other person who shall sell, expose or offer for sale, or have in his possession in this State any deer, quail, bob-white, partridge, pheasant, grouse, dove or wild duck during the time it shall be unlawful to kill such animal or bird, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who shall at any time hunt, pursue, take, kill or destroy any quail, bob white, partridge, pheasant, grouse, dove or wild duck during the time it shall be unlawful to kill such animal or bird, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who shall at any time hunt, pursue, take, kill or destroy any quail, bob-white, partridge, pheasant, grouse, wild duck or rail in any county in this State within which he is not a bona fide resident, land owner or land lessee, without having first obtained and paid for a county license therefor in such county, in such sum as the Board of Supervisors shall fix, unless he shall have been, in writing, previously invited so to hunt in such county, by some bona fide land owner or land lessee therein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who shall in the night time kill, shoot or shoot at any wild duck in, on or over any of the waters within this State, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

[Every person who shall use a shotgun of a larger caliber than that commonly known and designated as number ten gauge, for the purpose of killing or destroying any wild duck, rail, quail, partridge, pheasant or grouse, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.]

Every person who, upon any grounds which are private property, and where signs are displayed forbidding such shooting, shall shoot any quail, bob-white, pheasant, partridge, grouse, dove or wild duck, without permission first obtained from the owner or person in possession of such grounds, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person owning or harboring dogs of the breeds commonly made use of for chasing deer, who shall permit such dogs to run at large on grounds inhabited by deer, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Any person found guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail in the county in which the conviction shall be had not less than ten days, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment. One-half of all moneys collected for fines for violations of this section shall be paid to the informer, one-quarter to the District Attorney of the county and one-quarter shall be paid into the Fish Commission Fund for the purchase and distribution of game birds in the various counties of the State.

SEC. 2. All Acts and parts of Acts in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. All Acts shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Our personal knowledge of the work on the bill began as it above reads when it came up for consideration before the Senate committee on fish and game to which it had been referred. This was upon Thursday evening of last week. The opposition to the bill was led by Mr. Wentworth and Mr. John Stack and the first attack which they made upon the measure showed them to be as densely ignorant of the subject under consideration. The amendment by them proposed to the second section of the above bill was to strike out the word "English" where it refers to "snipe." "Why protect English snipe only?" asked their attorney, Wentworth. He argued that all birds known as snipe should be protected. Stack was strong in his convictions that this would be right. He charged that the bill was "English, you know" and he did not propose to have anything English in the measure, not even the name English snipe!

Mr. Harry Babcock and Mr. John K. Orr explained the matter to the committee, pointing out the fact that the English or Wilson snipe proper was the only true game bird of the snipe family. But Wentworth and Stack earnestly contended for the position which proved them ignorant of one of the most fundamental facts in sporting measures. They could, with equal reason, have included blackbirds, jay birds and red-headed woodpeckers. A number of minor amendments were made to the provision preceding the one requiring the owner of game to accompany it to market.

The opposition alleged and had the temerity to suggest as an argument in support of the movement to strike out this entire section, that it would prevent market hunting and that it would "interfere" with the personal rights of the citizens! It would be "inconvenient" and last, but not least, it was "un-American!"

On the other hand it was argued that this was a most important section of the bill, in that it would insure all game in reaching the market in good, clean, fresh, edible condition. It was pointed out that it would in no sense interfere with the supply of birds in the market as a middleman on train or boat could purchase the entire game supply of the region reached by any transportation line.

It will be readily seen that, in connection with the foregoing provision which provides that "unless the carcass of such bird is used or preserved by the person so taking or slaying it, or it is sold for food, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor," this clause of the bill insures the use of all birds mentioned in this bill and thus prevents their needless destruction. It was also pointed out to the committee that there has been within the year past fully as many birds spoiled in transportation as there has been sold in the market. One commission house alone having dumped into the bay nearly two hundred dozen of quail from negligent shipping alone. It was argued in support of this measure that it would put a check to such wanton waste of game. But reason seemed to be considered a back number with two of the three remaining committeemen and it availed naught.

The next two provisions of the bill are measures which appeal most favorably and forcefully to the judgment of every sportsman who has had the interests of the game of the country at heart. Should they become a part of the law of the land they would prove most potent factors in the preservation of the game interests of the State. The first prevents shipment from the State and confines the inroads to be made upon the game to the demands of the citizens of this commonwealth. The second provision is directed to the enforcement of the other provisions of the bill, and in this forms a most important factor. How? Let us see. In the absence of such a provision it has time and again been proven that to enforce the provisions prohibiting the killing of game at any time in the State is well nigh impossible. Why? Because, parties killing deer, or other game, in this State, and shipping it to market would only have to swear that all such game was killed outside the State. But will they do it? Yes, Experience has shown it to have been done in innumerable instances. Is it not illegal to presume that men will comment a crime? Legally speaking, yes, but rationally, and in the light of numerous glaring practical experiences, no. Three years ago, to the knowledge of the writer, parties engaged in shipping deer and elk in Wyoming hired a band of twenty or more professional hunters who went across the line into Colorado and slaughtered the deer and elk by the hundreds, the carcasses were brought back into Wyoming as "block affidavits" were furnished to the effect that they were on grounds where it was legal to slay them, such affidavit being required by law before shipment could be made. But the numerous cases brought in the courts of this State are ample and incontrovertible evidences to the same end. The cold storage provision is a most excellent one; in fact the game cannot be adequately preserved without it. It is stated on good authority that the Coronado Hotel has now in cold storage two thousand dozen quail. How many has San Francisco and the other leading hotels and restaurants of this State? Every bird so preserved for consumption during the closed season is in clear violation of the spirit of the law which is that the game shall only be taken during the open season for the purpose and to the extent of supplying the tables of the State during such open season. Any other construction of the law would render its aim—the protection of the game of the State—negatory. Next comes the much-talked-of and misrepresented clause which provides that any one hunting, other than in the county in which they reside shall first obtain a license or have been invited in writing to hunt in such other county by some land owner or land lessee.

"I think that's outrageous" said Wentworth. "Its un-American!" reiterated Stack. "Its an attempt to rob us of our rights; its English and its outrageous," he continued, "and I've got the documents to prove it." His "documentary proof" turned out to be a letter which he desired the clerk of the committee to read. It only proved that he had sought at some time or other to hunt on certain lands and that he was told by the owner that he could not issue a permit because he had leased the land. Yet, Stack acted as if he thought it proved something! Well, it did, but we will not be so unkind as to state just what. It doesn't take the eyes of a ferret to see what it proves. "This bill is in the interests of the wealthy men and against the poor man," continued Stack, "Its a stab at our liberties! Its un-American! Its an English measure!"

On the other hand it was argued that this clause was intended to protect the farmers in the enjoyment of their possessions and that justly as at certain seasons of the year when the crops and wild growth of grass and weeds had become dry, extremely dry, as it does in this State that it was no more than common justice that any one going onto a man's land should first receive the consent of the land owner or land lessee. Fires started from firing guns, even with the improved system of loading with firm wads, instead of loose papers as formerly, are still frequent; that the actual danger was great and that the section was a wise provision. It was argued that any man who would go upon the land of another and in any event caused any damage to stock or crops should be justly held responsible for such damage so created and that if he first obtained the consent of the owner or lessee, that he would be extremely cautious knowing that if any damage should occur that the owners could, without difficulty, know where to look for redress. It was claimed as a logical and just conclusion that every man should certainly have the right to say who should or who should not be allowed to hunt upon his premises.

It was shown that the cry that this clause was an effort to engraft an English custom—an un-American principle—in this country was the unreasoning clamor of those only who desired to run counter to all principles of justice, of sound law and good reason. In short that this provision only looked to the protection of a man in the enjoyment of his own property. Only this and nothing more. Is or is not an American citizen entitled to the enjoyment of his land, his house, his farm without any interference from any one else? If so, then this clause is not un-American.

The next two provisions will be conceded by all to be wise and just.

The next provision of the section forbidding shooting "where signs are displayed" called out a repetition of the remarks held to embody the objections of the objectors as presented to the "license clause." Stack was particularly bitter in his remarks, holding that no man had any right as regards this subject, to land unless the same was enclosed by fence.

Its English; its un-American; its depriving us of our rights; its a shame; its a rich man's provision; its unjust, he affirmed while Wentworth alleged that it would throw all the duck shooting into the hands of a few wealthy men!

The supporters of the measure argued that it was right and fair and just, and that no reasonable exception could be taken to it. Stack alleged with all the venom horn of willful ignorance and malice that this entire bill was fathered by the wealthy clubs of the city of San Francisco, and when his groundless assertion was challenged direct and it was shown that not a member of any one of the wealthy clubs had any hand whatever in the origin of the measure or any knowledge of its production, his silence acknowledged his assertion to be a product of his envy.

It was argued in support of this clause that a fence was, for the purposes of all such measures as this bill, but a notice of the ownership of the land, and that any form of notice that would convey such information to persons coming to the land would serve the purpose equally well. The walls surrounding the ancient castles were for the express purpose of keeping out marauding tribes and clans who had weapons in their hands and the will of destruction in their hearts; all fences of to-day, inasmuch as they effect such measures as this, are but relics of those old castle walls—to keep out intruders. We fence against beasts only now, and notices will do equally as well for intelligent beings, who, if good citizens, will not trample the law under foot, when notices mark the boundary of land, though they might scale with ease a fence. It was argued further that no man who has a decent regard for his neighbor's rights, who is a good enough American to enjoy the benefits of our free institutions and wholesome laws, would ever go upon the land of another, when warned not to do so, for any such purpose as shooting at game.

Last, but not least, looking to the support of the bill as a whole, as it came from the Assembly, it was argued that no more important trust was ever laid upon a people, one which falls with peculiar force upon the legislator of to-day, and upon this committee in particular, which is the care and preservation of the estate which belongs to the whole people.

This bill, which looks to the preservation and propagation of game, opens up a way by which the property of the whole people may be preserved. It is essentially in the interests of the poor man, as it seeks to protect his property. The National and State parks, the fish and the game, comprise the only property which is held in common by the whole people. Every citizen has an interest in it; every man, woman and child in America is an equal share-holder in this estate, and you gentlemen, as legislators, have a supervisory control over this property in California, and to you the people look for a discharge of the duties, by virtue of your office, imposed upon you, regarding its preservation. This bill may have some minor features which we might wish were different, but as a whole it is a measure of the first importance to the citizens of this state, as its central object is to preserve the game. Let us do this; we owe it to posterity. Children yet unborn will rise and call him blessed who proves himself true to this great trust, which, in the full measure, is the preservation of our forests and of our mountain streams, the establishment and preservation of National and State parks, and the preservation of fish and game.

Sportsmen Missing.

The finding of an upturned boat which was being rocked by the waves on one of the larger arms of the bay on the Alviso marshes, is all the tidings, which at this writing, has reached the families and friends of Eugene Frost, Secretary of the McNear electric road of Oakland, and Albert R. Church, of Dolliver & Bros., of 573 Market street, this city. One week ago to-day they started to enjoy a day's hunt on the marshes, but it seems to have been a most disastrous outing.

They took the train and got off at Bridges, a station in the marsh. They remained in their cabin on the marsh that night and next morning started out hunting. The wind was blowing a perfect gale and the waves of the branch or creek upon which they were encamped were dashing high. They waited until after noon and in the face of the fact that the waves were strongest they started out. They were sighted afterwards in the waves upon which their light boat was dancing like a cork, but they being good seamen, were not apparently alarmed about their situation. This was the last seen of them. On Monday morning a small boat was discovered floating buttom upwards a short distance from shore. It turned out to be the boat used by the hunters above named. Searching parties were at once organized and it is to be hoped that by the time this falls under the eye of the reader that the dreadful suspense carried to the hearts of all those who love them will have been settled, but there seems but little or no hope. The conviction that they must have been drowned is well nigh universal.

The following are the newly elected officers of the Country Club, Feb. 21st, 1893: Frederick R. Webster, President; Robert Oxnard, Vice-President; William C. Murdoch, Secretary and Treasurer; Ramon E. Wilson, Attorney and Counselor.

Committees—Entertainment and Outings, Robert Oxnard; Trap Shooting and Athletics, George Crocker; Club House, Henry W. Woodward; Stable and Dog Kennels, William S. Kittle; Game, Fish and Preserve, Ramon E. Wilson; Patrolmen and Keepers, Richard H. Sprague.

L. L. Campell, C. W. Van Slyke and Winfield Scott went to Santa Rosa on the last days of the "season" for an outing with gun and dogs in pursuit of the gamey quail and snipe. They were met at the station by Isaac DeTurk, Esq., the well-known vinyardist fancier and stockman of that place and were handsomely entertained and given one of the finest shoots of the season. They made a fine bag.

The California Wing Shooting Club holds its second monthly meeting for the season at Oakland Shooting Park to-morrow. Take 9 o'clock boat. This club is always glad to welcome any sportsman at its regular events. Come and bring your gun. Its monthly trap events will regularly take place on the first Sunday in each month during the season.

Mr. Jno. K. Orr kindly remembered us on Monday last by sending us a fine sportsman's bouquet, composed of quail and snipe, the last fruits of the season, for which he has our sincere thanks.

The E. T. Allen Company, 416 Market street, have been turning matters about generally at their sporting goods emporium. The store proper has been greatly enlarged and the facilities for handling the large amount of goods passing through their hands greatly increased. A handsome display window, will, when work upon it is completed, furnish a very interesting addition to their store.

Now comes the time for obedience to the law for "the man with a gun." We sincerely trust that the law will be enforced, this year as never before, and that the game will be fully benefited by the protection of the law as it now stands.

The Country Club opens the season's sport at the trap today. There will be a full attendance of the membership devoted to trap shooting and an unusually pleasant time is anticipated and will no doubt be enjoyed.

The Recreation Gun Club will open the season's sport for its membership on the 12th of the present month. It contains some fine shots.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

The Detroit Kennel Club and the Elmira Kennel Club have each claimed the same dates for their coming shows, hence a tempest in a teapot.

The specialty clubs of the country are becoming more and more important factors in the kennel interests of the country. The special medals and cups offered by them to be competed for by the membership of the several clubs form an item of interest which cannot fail to result in the development of the special breeds represented by each of them.

The Barzoi continue to gain in popularity in England. From all that we can learn of them and from the very excellent representations appearing from time to time in the kennel press of the country we are persuaded that they are most beautiful and interesting animals. We have none as yet on this coast. Who will be the first to bring out a pair of these beauties?

The recent substantial works contributed to the kennel interests of the country are destined to be of great service to the progressive wing of the fancy. We have just had a glimpse of "Kennel Secrets" by "Ashmont," and from the hasty view which we gave it we are impressed with the idea that its value will go well as a companion volume to Major Taylor's excellent work.

Mr. C. A. Loud, proprietor of the Shenandoah Kennels, has just removed them from Corvallis, Oregon, and located at Raymond, this State. Mr. Loud is well known to the older sportsmen of this city and State as he formerly resided at San Diego and in this city. He brings with him a splendid string of excellently bred dogs and his trained ones have proved their superior quality afield. Mr. W. J. Golcher purchased from him an English setter while here. Mr. Loud, with his assistant, Mr. Orrick, a trainer from Texas, will have charge of the kennel and training of the dogs placed under their charge.

The recent bench shows throughout the country show that the growth of the kennel interests has been more than satisfactory during the season last past. The hurrah and sensational element, so noticeable one year ago, in certain leading non-sporting breeds, has not carried with it anything save the froth and bunting of the parade, which for a time dazzled the public eye. The uniformed brass band element have got all the glory they wanted at the prices required to maintain it and the more substantial, if less dazzling and noisy representatives of the fancy have taken their places. Parades and brews are all well enough in their way, but they grow wearisome if kept up too long. The record of the year past shows up well for the kennel interests of the country as a whole.

It would seem that there has been fully enough fuss made over the trivial difference between Mr. Bardeol Elliot and Mr. Harry Twyford. The principal involved is one as old as the lien law which gives to every one a lien on the animals for the amount of their keep under certain statutory provisions regulating how the animals may be sold to pay for their keeping. We should infer from the decision of the A. K. C. before which both the dispute was brought that there is no lien law in the State under which the transaction took place. We cannot see how they could reach the following decision otherwise, unless it be that Mr. Twyford did not comply, in all respects with the provisions of the law as it obtains in many of the States.

The gist of the decision is that Twyford pay Elliot $30 when the dog only sold for $10. Of course, this decision was arrived at by taking testimony as to the worth of the dog, the selling price not being at all conclusive in any case. Mr. Twyford is cleared by the decision of any intent of wrongdoing.

Rheumatism.

A disease frequently seen in dogs of all ages, says A. J. Lowell in Kennel Gazette, but more particularly in those advanced in years, and though the disorder does in some instances assume a somewhat acute form, causing considerable pain, yet the canine race do not happily suffer from that very severe kind called rheumatic fever, which is accompanied by a high temperature; neither is it a fatal disorder.

Though rheumatism in nearly all cases is the result of a chill or cold, yet the direct cause is due to a too acid state of the blood; in fact, there is an excess of lactic acid present in the system.

Any part of the body and limbs, etc., may be the seat of the complaint, but the favorite spots for an attack are the shoulders, when it is called kennel lameness, and the loins, which occasionally causes complete loss of power in the hind limbs, resulting in paralysis. At times, rheumatics settle in one joint as the knee, or the stifle, but the disease more often affects the muscular system.

Dogs of all breeds, whether rough or smooth-coated, are equally liable to rheumatism, but it is more often seen amongst those used for sporting purposes, probably from their not receiving so much care as others, either in the way of grooming or kenneling. One attack seems to predispose the animal to others.

The direct cause of rheumatism, as previously stated, is due to the results of a chill, either from exposure to cold winds or wet and damp. Dogs living in kennels having a north-easterly aspect in some cases are very subject to the disease, and it is also of frequent occurrence amongst the inmates of kennels which are built in low, damp districts, or on a clay soil, though I remember hearing, a short time ago, of some fox-hounds, living in kennels built on a gravel soil, being constantly affected with kennel lameness, which almost entirely disappeared from amongst the pack when they were transferred to new kennels, which were erected on a clay soil, and it was supposed by the M. F. H. that it was due to the change of soil that the disease disappeared from amongst his dogs; whereas, I am inclined to think that most probably the new kennels were better built and drained than the old ones, and that accounted for the dogs being healthier.

Old dogs after being washed, if not thoroughly dried, or if allowed to go out too soon after a bath, will often have an attack, and the same thing happens after getting wet with rain, or from going into the water in cold weather. Dogs, too, that are subject to the disease, will, like some people who are similarly disposed, suffer from the disorder in cold and damp weather without actually getting wet, due to the excessive moisture in the atmosphere.

It is supposed by many that sea-water will not cause rheumatism. This is a mistake, for I have known many dogs, that are subject to the disease, to have an attack after going into the sea at unseasonable times.

Symptoms.—It is often difficult in some cases to be able to decide whether a case of lameness is due to rheumatism or a sprain, especially in those instances when only one point, perhaps the knee, is affected; however, if there is no history of an injury, and the lameness comes on gradually, the dog overnight being only a bit stiff, and the following morning very lame, it is generally pretty safe to conclude that it is a case of rheumatism: If there are any doubts about the case they will generally soon be quickly dispelled, for rheumatism seldom remains in one part for long at a time, as, for instance one day a fore-leg may be affected, the animal being unable, to put the foot to the ground, then, perhaps, the following morning there will be no signs of the disease in the limb at all, but one of the others is had.

The disease does not often pass from one foreleg to the other front one, but it generally passes from a foreleg to a hind one and usually to the limb on the opposite side of the body.

The parts affected with rheumatism are very tender to the touch, slightly swollen, and, when moved, great pain is induced. When the shoulders, as in kennel lameness, are the subject of the disease, the dog walks very stiffly with his forelegs, he not being able to put the limbs forward, and when the limbs are pulled forward in examining the parts, great pain is caused. In cases where the disorder settles in the loins, the disease is called lumbago, and the symptoms are very acute, the patient after lying down being unable to rise except with great difficulty and pain, and if the rheumatism is not relieved in a day or two, a total loss of power in the hind legs often occurs; but, unlike ordinary paralysis, the result of injury to, or disease of the spine, the legs still remain sensitive to the touch. In these cases it is necessary to notice whether the bladder operates, for very often the dog, as the result of the pain induced by moving, is afraid to micturate; the bladder becomes over-distended, and if relief is not given these parts really become paralysed and serious mischief results.

The muscles of the neck are another frequent seat of rheumatism. Here the symptoms assume rather a different form to the ordinary signs of the disease, for instead of the pain being continuous, as usual, until relief is given, it occurs in spasms when it is very acute, the dog often howling with pain. He is afraid to move his neck; the muscles are hard and swollen, and extremely painful when touched. The head is drawn, as it were, into the body, and the dog, if he moves, goes with his head down, and walks as if he was made of wood, and without joints. Between the attacks, which may last two or three hours, the dog seems practically well, but some sudden movement, or perhaps just getting up after a rest, causes a return of the pains.

Treatment.—The first thing to be done is to place the patient in nice, dry, warm, comfortable quarters, where he should be kept as quiet as possible. It is a mistake to exercise a dog with rheumatism, except in very chronic cases, for though with running about the stiffness wears off after a time, yet this treatment does not cure the disease, for after resting the pain is as bad, if not worse, than ever. As it is a disease in which the blood is affected, internal remedies are necessary, and for this there is nothing better in most cases than salicylate of soda. In many instances this medicine acts almost like a charm, relief being given after three or four doses.

|--------------------|---|-----------|
| R. | | |
| Salicylate of Soda | — | 2 drams. |
| Water | — | 6 ounces. |

Doses.—Two terriers and other dogs of similar size, one teaspoonful; fox terriers, &c., dessert spoonful; collies retrievers, &c., tablespoonful; St. Bernards, mastiffs, &c., three dessert spoonfuls. The mixture to be repeated three or four times a day.

It is always advisable in all cases to get the bowels well opened with aperients, as this helps to eliminate the poison from the system. If after three or four days there are no signs of improvement, the salicylate of soda should be discontinued and the following mixture tried:—

| | | |
|----|-------------------|-----------|
| R. | Potas Bicarb | ℥oz. |
| | Potas Iodide | gr. xxiv. |
| | Tr Colchicum | 3 iii. |
| | Tr. Aconite P. B. | 3 i. |
| | Aqua ad | 3 vi. |

Doses same as Mixture No. 1.

In chronic cases a course of arsenic is beneficial.

Where there is paralysis of the hind quarters the loss of power sometimes continues after the disappearance of the rheumatism. In such cases, the following pills are useful:

THE PILLS.—RECIPE NO. 3.

| | | |
|----|---------------------|---------|
| R. | Ergotine | gr. vi. |
| | Powdered Nux Vomica | gr. vi. |

Excipient sufficient to make 12 pills.

Doses.—From one-half to two pills to be given twice a day.

As to external applications. Some stimulating embrocation as Eiliman's is very useful, and should be applied to the affected parts morning and evening. I have also found the following liniment of benefit, especially when there is much pain:—

THE LINIMENT.—RECIPE NO. 4.

| | | |
|----|------------------------|-------------|
| R. | Methylated chloroform | Half ounce. |
| | Tincture hyoscyanus | Half ounce |
| | Spirits camphor | One ounce. |
| | Compound soap liniment | Two ounces |

Mix well. Apply with friction twice a day.

When rheumatism is affecting the shoulders or loins it is a good plan to put a good thick flannel jacket on the dog, and when a joint as the knee is attacked the limb may be bandaged with a strip of new flannel.

Notes on the New York Show.

The Seventeenth Annual Bench Show given by the Westminster Kennel Club has proven that the interest in the canine world is still growing.

Under the wise hand and long experience of Mr. James Mortimer, the arrangements were rendered as near perfect as it was possible for them to be. There were over thirteen hundred representatives in the show. The Kennel Club show is now one of the stated events in the world of fashion. Every one of the "selected" and thousands who select themselves, forming the alpha and omega of a special, an exclusive "list," are sure to do themselves the honor of gracing, or being graced, by being present at the show.

It is fashionable to admire and love dogs, and the fashion is a good one. Sir Bedivere had no trouble in winning over Kingston Regent.

In the absence of Lady Livingston, Lady Gladwyn won an easy victory in challenge hitch class.

In open rough dogs the late English importation, Marvel, won easily; Roland Jr. won second. In open class for hitches Princess Florence won first, Hopsy second. Sir Bedivere was defeated by Princess Florence for the honor of best dog in the show.

Beaufort's Black Prince, in challenge class, won first in Mastiffs.

Lady Coleus first in challenge hitches.

First in open dogs, Wallack's Merlin; Bunn's Miss Caution first in hitches.

Lad of Kent won first in heavy weight pointers in challenge class.

Woolton Game won first in heavy weight hitches.

In English Setters, challenge class, Breeze Gladstone won first, Count Howard second.

In challenge hitches Princess Beatrice won first and Cambriana second.

In open class Real English won first and Sheldon second.

In challenge class, Greyhounds, Gem of the Season won first, Lord Neversett second.

Bestwood Daisy and Lily of Gainesboro stood in order named in challenge hitches.

John F. Carroll.

We are extremely sorry to have to announce the death of Mr. John F. Carroll, the well-known and universally-esteemed leader in coursing circles in this State. Mr. Carroll's death was caused by heart trouble. He had been confined to his room for several days prior to his death, and passed away on Thursday, the 23d inst., and was finally laid to rest on Saturday following. Mr. Carroll was a man of marked individuality, genial and gentlemanly, drawing about him many warm friends. For years he has stood as one of the staunch advocates of fair and honest coursing, being at the time of his death President of the Occidental Coursing Club of this city. He loved and owned many of the finest greyhounds ever seen in this State, ever following the course for the pure love of the sport. He will be sadly missed by all of our sportsmen in this line on this coast. His family have our sincerest sympathy.

Bruin Fleed From A Dear.

Once out in the gloaming way out in Wyoming, a school teacher sat, combing her golden hair; when all heated and roaring all panting and booming, there came up and hugged her—a big grizzly bear! "It did not fright her—she laid back and murmured: "Still tighter dear!" This broke up old Bruin, he left off his wooing, sneaked back to the mountains and hid for a year—Ex.

ROD.

Evening.

BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.

Silence reigns supreme about us;

And the evening shadows creep.

Up from hill-environed valley

Where they rally,

To enshroud the rugged steep.

And to hush the woodland music.

Lulling all the birds to sleep.

Off to westward, mark the glamour:

Pink and saffron all the sky;

Hear the gorgeous day in dying

Softly sighing,

As the low winds flutter by

Coming slowly in from seaward.

In the valleys here to lie.

Watch the shadows as they deepen.

Round about the nearer hills;

Mark the brooklet's low-voiced singing

And the winging.

Of the graceful whippoorwills,

As they fit like restless spirits,

O'er the meadows and the rills.

See! the shining lamps of heaven.

Pierce the gloom with golden ray,

And the silvery moonbeams streaming

O'er us gleaming.

Chases all the gloom away;

Rendering the night more pleasant,

Than the dazzling hours of day.

Hear the chirping of the crickets:

See the fire-flies fitful glow;

Now the gentle dew is falling

And the calling.

Of the Katydid below,

Comes from out the golden willow.

Swaying gently to and fro.

Stretched upon the ferns and mosses,

Sweet it is at ease to rest;

Night resistless is in wooing

And the cooling.

Of her Naiads' sweet request

Is o'er powering, and we slumber,

By their witching presence hiest.

A Day By the Streams.

It is a warm day in midsummer, says F. S. Palmer, and a fisherman is following along a trout brook. The stream runs through the forest—through bardwood groves, which, owing to their scant underbrush, looks almost like English parks; through mossy evergreen glades, where every sound and color is subdued; through rocky ravines, down which the water hurries with fretful plaints against the boulders in its path, till at last it finds an outlet in a mountain lake.

To-day it is evident that all the wood life is prepared to be lazy—even the trout that are wont to rush so eagerly at worm or fly. Now the fisherman begins to feel the influence of this all pervading inertia, and finally he lays down his pole and stretches himself out on the brook's bank. Close to his side is a sound of rippling water, cool and soothing, while the spreading top of a maple keeps off the sun.

The bank here is covered with thick moss—a pleasant couch waiting for some one to come and use it. In the economy of the woods nothing is permitted to exist for itself only; the saplings have their own life, but must also furnish leaves and twigs to the deer, and bark to the nibbling hares. No plant or animal is entirely selfish, and so this humble moss, since it can do little else, is ready to serve as a resting place for the weary.

There is an old saying that goes, "Best ease is free ease"—or the ease bought with too much labor of preparation is hardly worth having. And this thought, though it may not be very profound, suggests one great delight of the woods, everything is free—is natural. No one but tireless nature has labored. No eyes have ached, no back has become bent, in the making of this couch of moss; no hands have toiled to rear the grateful shade of the maple. The refreshing splash and ripple of the brook is freely, unconsciously given.

The voluptuaries of the east were close students of the art of idleness. Lolling on their cushions, they listened to soft music and watched the movements of dancing slaves. Other slaves waved cooling fans, and, if their masters were exposed to the sun, held silken canopies about them. The eastern prince thought that the pleasures of idleness could be no further perfected.

But the dancers must often have grown weary; the slaves holding the canopies fainted in the sun; the fan bearers and the musicians doubtless wondered at the unjust fate which condemned them to labor in order that others might enjoy. No Indian rajah or Persian lord ever reclined upon an easier couch than this one on which the fisherman stretches himself. The brook makes the most delightful of music. Sunbeams dancing on leaf and moss and ripples are as pleasant to watch as the movement of weary slaves.

Nor do the sights and sounds of the woods lack variety. The music of the water is mingled with the twitter of forest birds—thrushes and wood sparrows; the songful enthusiasm of their annual youth is past, but the midsummer notes are full of happiness, and tell of nests well stocked with little ones. Squirrels chirp and chatter. The dead leaves strewn the ground are of every shade of brown and red and yellow, and the slender shafts of sunlight, which dart down through the breeze stirred foliage overhead, never fall twice upon colors that are exactly similar.

The trout fisherman, half dreamy, half observant, and wholly bappy, has lain there till the long, warm summer afternoon is drawing to a close. The shy little wood creatures that love the dusk come out of their hiding places and run near him, quite fearless of his motionless figure. Delicate, mouse-like creatures are here, the flying squirrels, in soft gray draperies. A mink trots over the wet houlders in the brook's bed, and, conscious of its own importance, eyes the man suspiciously.

Darkness is coming on, and it is time for the trout fisherman to go home. He leaves the mossy bank regretfully, half persuaded that idleness, and not work, is man's chief blessing.

A Welcome Surprise.

It was growing eveningward rapidly. All day, from the early trouting hour of the morning my friend and I had been wandering up and down the beautiful trout stream on which we were encamped, but whip the waters as best we could there was no such a thing as tempting a rise. Not the flirt of a fin had we seen. Not a single bubble to indicate that there were fins to flirt or trout to catch. We had just returned to camp and were about as annoyed and disgusted a pair of anglers as ever struck camp by a stream expecting sport and finding none.

"Don't this heat you?" queried my friend.

"Well, I should say so," I replied, "I never in all my life saw such favorable indications without a single bit of realization."

"Its too bad," sighed my friend, "for I shan't get out again for a month."

"Let us rest for a few moments and then try yonder pool again, and if evening brings no trout there then I am sure there are none in these waters," said I.

While I was speaking my companion got up and started to go into the tent, but as I pointed to the especial spot where I was suggesting that we try again, his eyes turned in that direction. I saw him grow interested and he walked out toward the pool and then came back in great haste for his tackle saying "there are millions of them there, jumping like mad."

It was no time for questioning, so seizing my rod I followed close on his heels. The bubbles were sparkling here and there all over the surface of the water showing that the trout were snapping finely.

The next moment we were busy taking out the fine fellows just about as fast as we could conveniently work the rod and reel.

In little or no time we had our baskets filled and yet the trout kept up their eager striking. Red spinners were the flies of their choice and when all of our red bodied flies were whipped out pieces of red flannel served the purpose equally as well.

The two of us caught 104 trout that evening. On the following morning we found the waters as devoid of fish as though never a fin had disturbed them, but we were content. The trout frequently move very rapidly and in compact bodies.

The Culture and Catching of Mascalonge.

The fishing at Chautauqua Lake the past season has been remarkably good, says Frank W. Cheney in American Angler. I did not take in the spring fishing, for as soon as I was through hatching mascalonge I entered the employ of the Chautauqua Steamboat Company, and did not fish any until the 5th of September. During the months of June, July and August a great many fine strings of black bass were taken. One day as our steamer was at the landing at Chautauqua a fisherman came alongside in his boat and showed us thirty-six small-mouthed black bass and two mascalonge, which he said all together weighed ninety-eight pounds, and all were caught by himself that day.

I will now relate some of my own experience, dating from the 5th of September. I will not refer to the balmy air, the rippling waves and the azure sky, although I am a lover of the beautiful in nature, but will leave that for some other fellow and proceed to business. I did all my fishing with rod and reel, and used live minnows for bait. I fished nearly every day from the beginning of September until about Thanksgiving time.

My score for September was twenty-four mascalonge and twenty-eight black bass, the largest mascalonge weighing fifteen pounds and the largest bass six pounds.

For the month of October, one hundred and four mascalonge and twenty-one bass, the largest mascalonge weighing seventeen and a half pounds, and a bass of six pounds.

For the month of November, forty-eight mascalonge, the largest weighing twenty-seven pounds. There was no fish in the whole score that weighed less than two and a half pounds, and but few of that size. There were not many mascalonge caught during September and October that would weigh over twenty pounds, but in November quite a large number were taken that would run up to the twenty-five and thirty-pound mark. I have noticed that when the large ones bite there are not many small or medium-sized ones caught.

That artificial propagation is a success is evident from the fact that so many small mascalonge have been seen and caught at spots where we put in the fry a year ago last spring. They grow fast, and my opinion is that they will weigh two pounds when two years old. There is an unwritten law among decent fishermen here not to keep any under two pounds in weight.

That it is sport to catch these fish with rod and reel goes without saying. I could fill a page or two with descriptions of the capture of specially large fish, of their sulking on the bottom, of their high leaps in the air and mad rushes for liberty. Unless one understands their nature and knows about what they are going to do, they are liable to be lost. The main point in the battle is to keep your line taut and let them tire themselves out.

I have fished through some pretty tough weather this fall; on some days the wind blew so that no one else would venture out. This is the time when they bite best, if you have the muscle to pull a boat and skill enough to handle your fish in rough water, and boat him at the same time, keeping your boat right side up. No doubt every angler knows that our small lakes get very rough in short order. It is not disagreeable fishing when you get the long, steady swell, but the choppy sea is what breaks things up, and that is what we get here in November.

We are to continue the propagation of mascalonge the coming spring on a much larger scale than heretofore. Mr. Green is going to furnish two additional nets, making three-pound nets altogether, and we expect to hatch three times the fry that we did last spring. We want to make Chautauqua Lake the best mascalonge fishing ground in the United States, and have enough fry over to stock other waters.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

TROTTER STRIDE.—I was much pleased to receive a letter from Mr. Wiggin, the owner of Martha Wilkes, in relation to the stride of that famous mare, and though it may have been intended for private information it will be of great interest to trainers. The following is the letter:

Mr. JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL. DEAR SIR:—As you say in your article in Wallace: "Measuring strides of a horse on a public track when so many horses are working is not only troublesome but not always correct."

I have been in the habit of measuring the strides of all my horses until I became satisfied that I have them balanced so they can do their best. I have a private track, also a blacksmith shop, and spend my time during the early spring until the campaign opens, measuring the strides of my horses in training and attending to the shoeing and balancing of them.

I thought the facts in regard to Martha Wilkes, 2:08, might interest you just at this time. I have heard various opinions about the length of toe a horse carries, influencing the length of stride. So far as my experiments go I have found the length of toe makes no difference provided the horse is balanced.

My track is measured in sixteenths so that I can take the time of each sixteenth and then measure the stride for the entire sixteenth, and if the strides are alike I can tell the rate of speed they are going at that stride.

I find Martha Wilkes' stride is as follows: In going a 2:20 gait she strikes 17 feet, a 2:17 gait 17½ feet, a 2:09½ gait 18½ feet, a 2:07 gait 19 feet, a 2:03 gait 19½ feet, a 1:48 gait 22 feet.

I also find the number of strides per second does not vary but a fraction from 2.15, and strange to say, there is no difference in the rapidity of the stride in going a 2:20 or 1:48 gait.

I have tried Martha Wilkes with a toe from 3¼ to 4½ with 450 angle and find it makes no difference in the length of the stride and certainly believe the shorter toe the easier.

Martha Wilkes stands 15-3, weighs 1050 in load condition, trains to 970 to 90 pounds. Is good length of body goes so near in line that standing in front or behind her when at speed and you only see one set of legs.

It seems strange to me that old trainers will brush a horse down the stretch as fast as he can get, measure his stride and report it as if he were carried that stride a mile. I consider a horse's stride is what he can carry for a mile or in other words, the flight of speed the horse shows when the stride is measured, should be given in order for anyone to profit by the information. I never yet have heard a trainer, when measuring the stride, speak of the rate of speed the horse was going. Frequently I hear old and some of our best trainers say, after having brushed a horse through the stretch a 2:04 gait and found his stride 18½ or 19½ say: "I wish that fellow's stride was only 17 feet. I could drive him in 12 or 15." Mr. Simpson, I drop these crude remarks simply because you and S. T. H. are having a little discussion, and it's the wrong time of year for you to experiment.

The following are the strides of Martha Wilkes:

Table with 6 columns: ft. in., ft. in., ft. in., ft. in., ft. in., ft. in. and 6 rows of data showing stride measurements for different gaits.

It will be perceived from the communication that Mr. Wiggin has been more thorough in his practice than I have heard of anyone previous to his letter. He has had the course divided into sixteenths of a mile so that the time for that distance was obtained as well as the length of stride and in the case of that great mare the increase of speed was due to lengthening of her stride. Thus when she was going at a 2:20 gait, and from that to the wonderful flight of speed as a sixteenth of a mile in six-and-three quarter seconds, was due to an increase of stride from 17 feet to 22 feet. It is not at all likely that many horses have the capacity to cover so much ground, and still more singular that Martha's flight of speed is regulated by her length of stride entirely. It would appear to be due to immense muscular power which can accomplish by forced, as it may be termed, what is usually the result of extreme activity, in her case a combination of both qualities to an extraordinary degree. The two in harmony so that there is an equilibrium in the machinery and motive power. Were an increase of speed from a 2:20 to a 1:48 gait the result entirely of greater rapidity of action, it is a reasonable inference that it would be more tiresome than when the stride is extended, inasmuch as to make a mile on a 17 feet stride, and in 2:20, there would have to be 310 strides, each of them occupying only 45 hundredths of a second, and to show a rate of speed equal to a mile in 1:48 with a stride of 17 feet would give 35 hundredths of a second for each, only a little more than three strides to each second of time, and from that it is safe to assert that a trotter which goes close to the "two-minute-lick" will have to cover a good deal more than 17 feet at a stride.

From the eight tables given it is evident that the increase of speed was almost wholly due to a greater airflight. As Mr. Wiggins has given the imprint a hind foot is the first one marked, that is at the head of the column. To make it plainer this would be the position of the marks of the shoe in a stride of seventeen feet:

* 3 ft. 4 in. * 5 ft. 2 in. * 3 ft. 2 in. * 5 ft. 4 in. * hind fore hind fore hind

Where the action absolutely square, viz., one fore foot and one hind foot striking the ground exactly together, these feet would be at about the same angle from the centers of motion, thrust simultaneously forward. The body is carried over them until the angle is in the reverse direction, and then comes the airflight, the other fore and hind feet coming to the ground, the hind foot 5 ft. 4 in. in advance of the imprint of the fore feet on the same side. But when we reach a 2:07 gait there is a stride of nineteen feet, and the increase from seventeen feet to nineteen feet is due to eight inches added to the length of the space between the imprint of hind and fore feet on the same side, while the other spaces are only lengthened two inches and four inches. These diagrams of the strides of Martha Wilkes completely establish the soundness of the position I have heretofore occupied:

* 3 ft. 6 in. * 6 ft. * 3 ft. 6 in. * 6 ft. * hind fore hind fore hind an even six feet the distance when the hind foot struck the ground anterior to the front foot at a 2:07 gait. The claim that "S. T. H." placed on record, that a horse was "perfectly balanced in his action" when "he walks and jogs and trots precisely in the same footprints," and that horse with a record of 2:26, and which he (S. T. H.) had seen trot a mile in 2:19, was so absurd that were it not for the general lack of knowledge of either trotting or racing action, there would be no necessity for correction. He also claimed that a horse which was "urged up to his speed, then the hind feet extended fourteen inches beyond the front feet, and then only his trouble began in earnest. Palpably his propulsion was in excess of his carrying capacity." That was a Wilkes horse, and now that his cousin Martha extends her hind feet from 5 ft. 4 in. to 6 ft. 5 in., according to the rate of her speed, the excess of propulsion over her carrying capacity is not such a terrible matter.

The difference in the gaps between hind and fore feet which are simultaneously in the air, when the pace is accelerated is not so puzzling to account for as the variation in the spaces between them when they are resting on the ground. Thus in the stride of 17 feet these gaps are 3 ft. 2 in., and 3 ft. 4 in. In the 18 ft. 6 in. stride there are 4 feet each, being uniform. While in the stride of 19 ft. these spaces are 3 ft. 6 in. each. These shorter spaces are controlled by the position the feet are in when they first strike the ground, and, of course, the slightest variation from an exact synchronism in the foot-falls will change the distance. Then again if the hind foot is thrust further forward when the feet touch than the fore foot they will be closer together than if at the same angle. But, in all probability, when the stride is lengthened there are greater variations in the airflights than when shorter, more irregularly, and thus the discrepancy. If the fore foot strikes the ground before the hind foot on the opposite side touches—which in trotting action these feet must necessarily strike nearly if not quite in unison—the space between them will be shortened, and if the reverse it will be lengthened. This is evident and plainly apparent, for with the hind foot reaching the ground first the body is carried forward until the fore foot is brought down, that being extended, while the hind leg is losing a part of the angle it had at its first contact.

It will add to the interest if Mr. Wiggin will kindly give some further information viz. the weight of shoes, the patterns of them, and when the measurements were made the conditions which were observed when the trials were made. There is a very general impression that long toes increase the stride, but the result of Mr. Wiggin's experiments have not endorsed that view. There must be a greater strain on tendons and ligaments, and also entail greater muscular exertion than when the toes are in proportion to the other parts of the foot. There is no question that "action" can be greatly influenced by shaping the foot as well as by the weight and different patterns of shoes and tips, but as a rule, if not a positive implication, that shaping must be in accordance with a good "natural foot." Either too long or too short toes or heels, a hearing which throws the foot out of its proper level are injurious and should be avoided. Malformation can, of course, be remedied with advantageous results, but experiments which are contrary to nature, and surely an extreme length of toe is not in accordance with that and should not be ventured.

TROTTER HANDICAPS * * * The Eastern papers have got hold NOT THEM ALONE } of the wrong idea in regard to the action of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association in relation to the innovations on old formulas of trotting. The chances for handicapping which the "bike sulkeys" have increased are only a small part of the contemplated movement, which, it is fondly hoped, will be for the better.

In the first place the endeavor will be so to classify horses that close contests will be probable with all of the horses evenly rigged. This may be done by selecting horses regardless of records gained, actual capacity being the test. This does not mean that time classification will be ignored, but that there will be a combination of the good that there has been and that which is likely to add to the public interest in trotting races. That closing a series of races, in which records were the basis of classification, some time before the events were set for division have been, as a rule, detrimental is generally admitted. Among other plans to overcome the trouble was that of making a horse eligible after a specified time had been beaten, and forcing it into a lower class. This appeared to be fair, as under that condition there was little chance for a horse to go "all down the line" in the classes it was eligible in when the entries closed. Yet like nearly everything else in horse-racing grows were forthcoming, and still those who applauded were in the majority. But notwithstanding that there are good features in that system there are objections the greatest, in my opinion, being a continuation of the thralldom in which trotting sports have been so long enchained. The bondage of records, and strange as it may appear to one unacquainted with the inner circle of trotting affairs, that has worked injury in two ways. Fear of a record which would lessen, perhaps destroy, the earning capacity of a trotter has been the governing motive for many jobs, and had it been otherwise that in late years a counterbalance in the way of urgent anxiety to secure as fast a mark as possible has done something to restore the equilibrium, many more would have been chronicled. With that fear overcome, with an assurance that if a horse, under extraordinarily favorable circumstances, should gain a mark which is a good deal below the average of his performances, and still have a fair chance to win expenses, the big hughoo would not be so hideous. In place of being all black there would be a few bright spots of color and "outclassed" a term which had lost a good deal of its significance, when the classes are gauged by present capacity. The object in fixing eligibility by standing records was to ensure good races, and occasionally the purpose was effected, in many others failure. That every race can be made a contest by arranging conditions, or under any system of classification, is utterly out of the question. It might be that with one hundred horses to select from, the shrewdest observer could only pick a few groups which would make good sport, and yet it is apparent that the chances will be far better than when entries are made a long time before the race is to be decided. Then, too, the fields can be kept within bounds, and though this thing of foregoing long lists of entries will seem to be the height of folly to the sticklers for old practices, in my estimation that will also be found a good move towards popularizing trotting sports. The ground-work of the action of the P. C. T. H. B. A. was in the first place to increase public interest; in the second to lighten the burden of the owners of trotting horses. The superstructure may not be in as perfect shape as it will be after a few meetings have decided what are improvements and what must be remodeled.

Handicapping in the sense which racing custom implies is comparatively of little significance when trotters are to be brought together, and until the improved sulkeys came into use, practically of little account. European methods will not answer, and the "bike" and "old-fashioned" are about the only resource. Unless there is a radical change in the feelings of drivers and owners, heavy vehicles will not be tolerated and nowadays carts are fabricated which are superior as speed promoters to the sulkeys of a few years ago. Still bikes, old-fashioned sulkeys, and carts from sixty to one hundred pounds, will afford the opportunity without raising much greater commotion than heavy weights excite among racing men. Still races, unquestionably, can be gotten up on the basis of weight hauled equalizing speed, when the horses are not very far apart, which will evoke interest when an equal

"hitch" would fail to secure attendance, and while I am more favorably impressed with the other new features which the association has outlined, do not ignore the harness. In fact, any experiment that appears to be feasible had better be given a trial than to follow the old track which is universally acknowledged to need relaying. The road-bed may do, the ballasting, rails and equipments are certainly behind the times.

WEIGHT ON THE BACK.—"An ounce on the foot is worse than a pound on the back," was received as an axiom more than a hundred years ago when the effect of weight on the speed of racehorses was the topic of conversation. A good friend who is in the front rank of those who are desirous of seeing trotting put on a better foundation suggests that harness horses might be brought together by placing weight on the back, regulating the amount by so many pounds for every second which one horse was faster than another. There have been wilder ideas expressed than the one embodied in that suggestion, and yet there are drawbacks in the scheme which I am afraid will put it out of the field of consideration. A second in a mile is a big gap between racehorses, and according to one of the best English authorities on handicapping, would require a big lump of weight in favor of the slower to bring them together when the distance to be run was not over a mile. In the old days the idea prevailed that horses could trot faster with one hundred and fifty pounds up, than when drawing a sulky, but now that the record is such a big double handful of seconds in favor of harness that notion will not hold water. Then if the converse of the proposition be true, a weight on the back of the trotter, in addition to the force required to haul the load, will surely impede, and even a few pounds make as much difference as there is between the old and the new sulkeys.

Easy enough to test. A lot of lead pads properly made and adjusted would not be a very extensive addition to the equipments of a trotting track, but first of all some one who is in-hued with the right sort of a feeling for the good of the cause should take the initiatory steps to decide whether weight on the back of harness horses will do the like service it has accomplished on the legitimate.

Races that the public will flock to see is the great desideratum, and whatever sort of a magnet is used, as long as it is an honest load-stone, will meet with approval.

STRAIGHT TROTTING.—The objection has been urged to arranging races after the horses were on the ground, that the class of trotting has been in the past of a crooked character. Granting that in many instances such has been the case, it is no harder to control those "specials" than it would be to handle others, made under the usual conditions and under like ownership. The trouble heretofore has been that a gang of outside horses, i. e., horses without regular engagements at a meeting would congregate for the especial purpose of "filling in" when blanks occurred in the original programme. A kind of guerilla warfare, a sort of bushwhacking in which it was held to be proper to adopt tactics not strictly conformable to the articles of war. The chances were taken of getting something which would pay expenses, but that chance not being of the rosiest description, methods were employed to secure remuneration, in other words, to make the most they could out of the few chances presented. With the assurance, that by far the largest proportion of the events during the meeting, will be for horses which are outside of, and among those, having engagements, there will be no other risk than that which will be due to a lack of animals which are of the same or near capacity. For instance if Nancy Hanks were present it would not be expected that she could find a chance for trotting against competitors, but when the limit is increased so that horses capable of trotting inside of 2:30 will figure, there is little danger of getting up fields. It is also evident that when the practice is general, when every prominent stable in the country is represented, and includes candidates for these special events, there is an entirely different condition of affairs. No more danger of crooked work in these races which have only been planned forty-eight hours before decision than when the entries closed months in advance. But I am not ready to admit that under proper supervision any fraudulent job can be conducted to a successful termination, or, at least, but a small proportion of even these when there was a premeditated intention to swindle when the swindlers will escape. Few will be attempted when it is thoroughly understood that punishment will surely follow even an attempt, and that no matter how prominent or influential the culprit has formerly stood in the eyes of the public, when clearly guilty, let the penalty be inflicted.

LENGTH OF STRIDE.—English writers on galloping action the most notable example being "Stonehenge," give the cause of a long stride as length of body or length of hind leg. All other things being in harmony this would be sound doctrine, but when so many short-bodied and short-legged horses cover more ground than those which are their superior in that respect, some other reasons must be given. One wrote was sure that length of stride was due to the slope of the shoulder blade as when the fore foot was in line with that it would be extended further than from an upright shoulder. His contention was that there was fixed lines, but as there is quite a movement in the upper part of the scapula, greater freedom of motion in the upright might give better results.

Another authority on horses gave all the credit of a long stride to muscular development of the posterior portion of the anatomy, but now that the instantaneous photograph has taught that the last great impulse, before the body is hurled through the air, is given by the foreleg that reasoning is not sound. In fact, the action of fast horses, racers, trotters and pacers, is none too well understood, but with a greater number of careful experimenters, such as Mr. Wiggin, and more interest taken by trainers, especially, there will be a marked increase of knowledge. Well worthy of consideration, particularly trotting and racing action, that being more susceptible of change and improvement than the flying gallop—still that can be modulated, and oftentimes greatly to the advantage of the racehorse.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

L. J. ROSE booked the dam of his great three-year-old Vera, 2:23, to Daghestan, by Stamboul, out of Alta Belle, by Electioneer, second dam Beautiful Bells. The dam of Navy State and the dam of Pasadena Belle have also been booked to this great young horse.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

The question of the hour—"What is it; a colt or a filly?"

TRUMAN, 2:12, will not go East in Orrin A. Hickok's string.

It is said that Geers is going to try to beat 2:00 with Pointer this year.

The pacer, Ned Winslow, 2:15, is still owned at Springfield, Mass.

LOCKHEART, 2:13, Nutwood's fastest son, has four white feet and a small star.

THOS. H. GRIFFIN made a short stay in San Francisco previous to going East via Los Angeles.

A GENTLEMAN at Joliet, Ind., owns a pacer called Pop Corn that is not slow in moving around.

THE La Siesta Stock Farm will be represented on the circuit this year by some promising trotters.

ANDY McDOWELL will have D. J. Murphy's fine Soudan colt Nubia, 2:29½, in his string this summer.

MILLARD SANDERS will prepare a number of the youngsters at the Valensin Farm for race records this fall.

LUKE CROW will show his stallion Jim C. at the Bay District track to-morrow (Sunday) afternoon at two o'clock.

MONTROSS, 3, 2:15 (sister of Sweet Rose, yearling record 2:23½), by Electioneer, has been booked to Ralph Wilkes, 2, 2:18.

AMONG the good ones to be seen this fall on the circuit, Egyptian Prince, P. J. Williams' exceedingly well-bred colt, will come prominently forward.

THE celebrated kite-shaped track at Columbia, Tenn., was sold last Monday for $7,600 on foreclosure of a mortgage and was bought in by Norman Kirkman, of Nashville.

REMEMBER the Napa sale takes place next Wednesday. The indications are very favorable for men with limited means (who love a good horse) to secure bargains.

Few collisions and break downs occur with the bicycle sulky. The chief danger to be feared is when a horse stands on his hind legs and fights the air with his fore feet.

T. C. SNIDER, while driving on the race track at Agricultural Park, Sacramento, one day last week, was thrown out of his sulky. Luckily he escaped with only a few bruises.

THE combination sale of young trotters that takes place in this city on the fifteenth will prove a sororise to our horsemen, for every animal listed will be of the class they are looking for.

If the colts want to pace let them alone. Better wait and let them pace than take the chances of injury by attempting by shift over. More than this, the demand for pacers is steadily growing.

LUCAS BRODHEAD says that old Harold will hardly live through March. He is looking for the aged sire of Maud S., 2:03½, to hang almost any day, and maybe he will be dead before this gets into print.

JAMES MADISON, 2:17½, is to be given to a competent trainer and driver after his season in the stud ends this year. That he will lower his record everyone who watched him get his low mark admits.

ALCANA 730, one of the best sons of the great Almont 33, will prove his worth as a sire. He ought to bring a good round price, for he deserves it.

J. CORCORAN, one of the old-time trainers and drivers who used to handle thoroughbreds in California many years ago and latterly had charge of Boodle, 2:21½, at San Jose, died in this city some time ago.

WM. FIELDWICK, "St. Julien Bill" has decided to take Beauty Mac and a string of very promising trotters to San Jose during the Blood Horse meeting. He will be at the race track there about six weeks.

TIPS KEATING has Menlo Falls, 2:27½, at Lodi, and believes the horse will lower his record before the snow crowns the Sierra Nevada. Menlo Falls is considered one of the handiest horses ever seen at Lodi.

TIPS MURPHY ("GLO-TER") has taken up his colt Alden W., and is jogging him a little every day. Every one who has seen this youngster work believes Tom has in him as good a three-year-old as there is in this State.

The trotters shipped to Europe are placed in stalls three and one-half feet wide by ten feet long. These stalls are padded all around with straw six inches thick. The animals remain standing during the whole journey.

A LARGE force of carpenters are at work at the Bay District track replacing the old timbers that supported the grand stand with larger ones. This improvement was a necessary one and the association shows its appreciation of the adage, "A stitch in time saves a lawsuit."

T. W. BARSTOW, formerly of San Jose, Cal., recently leased the track at San Luis Obispo. Mr. Barstow is the owner of Cyrus R., 2:17½, and some excellent broodmares; he is also a first class veterinary dentist, and his services in that profession will be in demand at his new location.

WANDA, 2:17½, by Eros, has been sent to the San Mateo Stock Farm to be bred to Guy Wilkes, 2:15½. A better choice for this mare could not have made, and the produce ought to be exceedingly valuable. This Guy Wilkes-Electioneer cross through Eros should prove a happy one.

It is said that the handsome chestnut stallion, Charley C., 2:18½, will be one of the members of Orrin A. Hickok's string this summer. We would like to see Mr. Jesse Potter's other horse Bloomfield Boy and be given a record as a team of pacers when Charley C. returns. No better material ones were ever hitched than they.

HON. VAN B. DELASHMUTT, Portland, Ore., has purchased from the estate of W. H. Wilson the brown stallion Noonday 10,000, by Wedgwood, 2:19, dam Noonside, 2:20½, by Harold; second dam Midnight (dam of Jay-Eye-See, 2:03½) pacing, and Electricity, 2:17½.

FRED HAIGHT, the trainer who is well known throughout the Eastern and Western States as a successful horseman, visited Rancho Cotati last week and says all the young Electrics he saw acted and moved more like trained trotters than any lot of yearlings he had ever seen.

In "Randall's Horse Breeder" it is stated that Warwick Miller, who lived four miles below Louisville, Kentucky, bred, raised and named the horse Bull Pup, sire of Flaxtail 8132. He was by Old Pacing Pilot, dam by Tom Hal, son of Tom Crowder, and he by Old Pacing Pilot.

JAMES DUSTIN, it is said, is going to take charge of the young trotters and pacers at the Santa Rosa Stock Farm. He is thoroughly capable of making a good showing with them, and from the material there he will, after a few weeks, be able to select some money winners for the fall circuit.

GENIAL CHAS. CHASE was missed at the auction sales lately. He is still under the physician's care, and the worst of it is the disciple of Esculapius has no idea of the magnetism that surrounds an auction sale when Mr. Chase is in the box, and no one has the courage to tell him so.

GEORGE WILKES and Almont each got the dams of eight of the new 2:30 sires, Volunteer, Belmont and Woodford Mambrino each got the dams of seven, and Alexander's Abdallah, Strader's Cassius M. Clay, Jr., Rysdyk's Hambletonian and Mambrino Patchen each got the dams of six.

If Mr. Corbitt, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, had a stallion suitable to breed to the daughters of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, it is asserted that he never would part with them. He has often said that they would prove to be among the greatest broodmares in the world, and this has never been denied.

JOHN GROOM, the well-known trainer and driver, started for San Jose on Monday with ten very promising young trotters belonging to Fred H. Talbot and Orestes Pierce. This is a valuable addition to the list of new stallions that will appear on the California circuit this fall, and everybody wishes it success.

THE handsome chestnut mare by Del Sur that W. E. Crellin was driving all summer around Pleasanton now forms a link in the Salisbury chain of wonderful trotters, and if reports are true she will be one of the very strongest. This mare trotted quarters in thirty-six seconds after having but three weeks' work.

THERE are several colts by Boodle, 2:21½, at San Jose that are "chips of the old block;" they are perfectly-formed, pure-gaited and speedy. The game qualities shown by this son of Stranger have endeared him to almost every owner of a good mare in the Santa Clara valley, consequently his hook is pretty well filled.

JAMES A. CODY has his Antevolo stallion Winwood looking splendidly. Dr. Thos. Bowhill performed one of the best operations on this horse's ankle we have ever seen, and the colt is apparently as sound as the day he was foaled. Mr. Cody will stand him at Sunol this summer and give him a low record in the fall.

W. R. RUGGLES is handling a few very promising trotters and "hangtails" at the Lodi track. "Doc," as he is known, will appear at all the meetings on the Central California circuit and will be very busy every day in the week. He sits a sulky like a veteran and handles a thoroughbred as well as Wm. Donathan or Henry Walsh.

THE Pierce Bros., proprietors of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, are never so well stocked with good broodmares that they can let one be sold if they can get her. They recently purchased that grand-looking broodmare Lou Milton (trial 2:21), by Milton Medium 4782, dam of Redwood, 2:21½, and Ethel Mac, 2:29½ as a three-year-old.

WALTER MABEN is going on the Eastern circuit with a string of horses this year. It is dollars to doughnuts this quiet little driver will astonish the Eastern talent by his wonderful driving. There are very few in the United States to surpass him, especially as he has selected some extraordinary good trotters and pacers to make up his string.

THE "bottom has not dropped out of the trotting horse business," if one is to judge by the number of people who are making preparations to have their trotters ready for the meetings this summer. The prospects of larger attendance, lower entrance and no long drawn-out contests account for this activity among the level-headed enthusiasts.

JOS. OUTHWAITE'S string of trotters from Sierra Madre will be seen on our circuit this year. Among them is the handsome stallion, Daghestan, 2:25½, as a two-year-old. He is more like his sire, the king of trotters, Stamboul, 2:07½, than any horse ever foaled, and it would not surprise us if he would wear the champion's crown some day.

WM. CORBITT, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, has not decided to have any horses appear on the California Circuit yet. However, he has plenty of time to get a string ready, if necessary. We hope he will take up some of the untried ones from the rich pastures and give them an opportunity to hear how the bell in the judges' stand in California sounds.

MONROE SALISBURY will not be here in time to attend the sale of the Director fillies at Napa. This is regretted, for no man ever had greater faith in the progeny of a horse than he, and no horse has ever fulfilled every expectation as well as Director. The Director mares will be esteemed more highly a few years hence than the Dictator mares are at present.

ANDY McDOWELL (everybody knows "Andy") the well-known horseman, recently purchased a fine saloon in Pleasanton. His bartender, Lock, has "Yolo Maid punches," Director Julips and other mixed-gaited beverages that seem to attract the talent of that horse town. No stud horse poker is allowed, and everything about the place is kept as neat and cleanly as possible. Andy has hosts of friends and, what is better than all, he keeps them. The reader need not infer, however, that he has given up training and driving; his string of good trotters and pacers is the largest he has ever had at our time, and from early dawn till twilight he is seen in the sulky at the Pleasanton track.

THE Jewett Farm has adopted a plan of issuing to the patrons of their stallions a duplicate receipt for service fees, marking one very plainly and distinctly "duplicate for registration." This appears to be an excellent idea, and can profitably be adopted by other breeding establishments, as it will frequently save trouble and delay in registration of the produce.

THOS. SMITH has his fine stallion Geo. Washington, 2:20, at Stockton, standing him for this season. The Stocktonites are loud in their praises of this magnificent son of Mambrino Chief Jr., and are willing to wager that 2:15 will be his record this year. If he recovers from the accident which disabled him at the last Breeders' meeting he will "do the trick" easily.

TRAINER ALONZO McDONALD, of Village Farm, has a sensationally fast two-year-old in the colt Electric Chimes, by Chimes, out of Maid of Honor, by Mambrino King; second dam Betty Mac, by Red Wilkes, and third dam the dam of Fanny Witherspoon. He can trot a 2:30 gait through the stretch and this year should take a record of 2:20 without difficulty.

D. J. MURPHY will send to the auction sale, which is to take place in this city on the fifteenth of this month, a number of fillies by Director, 2:17; Boodle, 2:21½; Dexter Prince and Soudan, 2:27½. Among them is a sister to Chloe, 2:23½, and Dexter Thorne, 2:25½. Capt. Benj. E. Harris also sends a consignment, the progeny of Richards' Elector, brigadier, Fordstan and Dawn. Send for catalogue.

A GENTLEMAN who went to Portland, March 1st, took with him the Electioneer stallion Yolo Allen, four years old. He is by Antevolo, and is considered by all horsemen who have seen him to be one of the most perfect in the State. This gentleman will stand him to few choice mares; Oregonians should avail themselves of this opportunity of getting Electioneer blood by breeding to this beautiful horse.

JOHN FORSYTH EDGAR died last Sunday at the home of his mother, Mrs. Grant E. Edgar, in Newburgh, N. Y. His age was thirty-four. "Jack" Edgar, as he was familiarly known, came to California with John A. Goldsmith, and was well known throughout this State. He was employed by A. C. Dietz of Oakland previous to his return to his native place, and drove Tipoo Tih, 2:26½, in his races last fall, for that gentleman.

THIS must be a "late year" for trotters, for not one has entered the list yet. There were twenty-three new-comers this time last year. In the East digging through ice and snow to find the tracks and thawing out the trotters from their icicle-covered stables is one cause, while in California the row about the registration and the general apathy of owners to "rush in where angels fear to tread" have caused them to keep well outside the "magic circle."

THE late Duke of Marlborough was not an admirer of the "sassy horse" by any means, and but a few weeks prior to his death last November wrote of the only equine considered the "propah capah" by Anglo-maniac dudedom: "A more absolutely useless animal at present than the so-called English hackney it would be impossible to conceive, and nothing but the craze of fashion would have ever produced a desire among many people to breed this class of horse."

SINCE Hon. J. Boggs, of Colusa, sold that wonderfully fast gelding to Doc Forrester, of this city, he has been the recipient of numerous letters of inquiry about the dam of this trotter and asking him to set a price on the fillies related to this "Colusa Cyclone." He desires to state publicly that the mare was the best roadster in that county. Unfortunately, she died two years ago. She never had a filly, and the two brothers to "Doc" Forrester's horse are in this city.

MESSRS. GRAHAM & CONLEY'S valuable mare Del Rose, by Del Sur, 2:24, dam Vashit (the dam of Don Tomas, 2:20, and Grand Moor), by Mambrino Patchen, dropped a short-hacked, broad-loined, strong-limbed colt by Constantine, 2:12½, at Quincy, Mass., a few days since. The little chap is the image of his dad, and so are all of Constantine's foals that have put in an appearance. Mr. Conley has several of them at Briar Hill Farm, and is very sweet on them.

THE track on the Hohart Farm presents a lively appearance these beautiful mornings. K. O'Grady has a number of little trotters and pacers there that would be a credit to any stock farm in the United States. Applications for pasture are coming in from everywhere it seems, for the reputation of the fields and paddocks, warm stables, good shelter, clear water and equable climate of this large farm extends from Shasta to Los Angeles. The pasture fields never looked as well as they do now.

GEORGE WILKES holds a combined record of 2:22 to harness, 2:25 to wagon, 2:28 to pole and was campaigned till seventeen years old, was retired to the stud in 1873 and died in 1882, but in those nine seasons got seventy-nine performers from 2:30 to 2:13; and seventy-four sons that have sired nearly six hundred in the list, also thirty-four daughters that have produced race horses with records from 2:30 to 2:03½, an achievement on the turf and in the stud which no horse has approached.

ED. LAFFEY has commenced work on a few colts and fillies at the Oakwood Park Stock Farm. The young Derhys and Prince Red's are exceedingly promising, while the few by Steinway he has driven are better than any he has ever handled. If Ed has any kind of luck and the distemper does not attack the little trotters as it did in '92, the Oakwood Park Stock Farm will take a leading position this year. There has been no sickness on the farm among the horses, and every animal looks well.

THE Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association has made public the programme for its summer trotting meeting, and the chief feature thereof will be an attempt to popularize the dash-race system, each day's card being provided with one or more events of that character. Mr. J. C. Siuipson, who is the leading spirit in the enterprise, has become thoroughly converted to the dash idea as applied to trotters, and will see that it has a fair show. At the Northwestern Breeders' meeting, of Chicago, during the summer of 1891, a number of dash races were arranged for, but the official who had immediate charge of affairs was so opposed to them, without exactly knowing why, that the infant was smothered almost as soon as born. The dash system is all right for large cities, and the public is ready for it. The old-style contest of from five to nine heats is a relic of barbarism and should go to the wall.—Breeders' Gazette.

The Saddle.

STARTER JAMES F. CALDWELL was sixty years old on the 15th of February.

ED CORRIGAN, the famous son of Joe Hooker and Countess Zeika, has been sent to the Ashe farm in Mariposa County.

JOHN A. MORRIS will have over a hundred and twenty-five horses in training this season. His best yearlings at his Texas ranch will soon be sent to Maryland.

VOLITA, winner of the first race at Oakland last Saturday, was beautifully ridden by young Edsall, who timed his rush to perfection. The little fellow bids fair to become a crack jockey.

"DAREDEVIL" FITZPATRICK has signed to ride for James R. Keene in 1893. Keene has secured a good jockey, and if Lidgerwood trains well "Fitz" will be seen on his back for the American Derby.

COL. JAMES WHITE has purchased of the Kendall Stable the chestnut mare Callie Ferguson, by Joe Hooker. Price about $600. The mare is now in foal to Buckler, and will be bred this season to Getaway.

At Walnut Hill Farm, near Lexington, Ky., the bay yearling colt Lord Linden, by Linden, dam Winning Ways, by imp. King Ban, died on Friday, February 17th. He was valued at $2,000, and was the property of C. R. Joyney, of Chicago.

OAKLAND had three of the youngest judges in the stand last Saturday on record, probably, in Messrs. Joe Magee, R. Lloyd and Ralph Curtis. The eldest of the party was probably not thirty years of age, the youngest about twenty-one. Their decisions, however, gave general satisfaction.

SAM BOWLEY, JR., of this city, has purchased of Hon. L. U. Shippee, Stockton, Cal., a five-year-old gelding by Joe Hooker, dam Louisa D., by Norfolk, second dam Tillie C., by Wilddle, etc. Mr. Bowley's horse is untried in public, but quite speedy, according to reports from Oakland.

If you wish to get speed in the horses you breed,
And the sister as good as the brother,
Choose a mare that can race,
With shape, action and pace,
And a horse with a fitting mother.

—The Horseman.

IMP. BRUTUS will hereafter be used as a private stallion. The youngsters by the son of McGregor and imp. Teardrop are uniformly of good size, show no end of substance and "quality," and are highly prized in every case. We congratulate the Messrs. Boots on owning such a great sire of race horses as Brutus promises to be.

DAN MILLER, the well-known turfman, has purchased of Senator Leland Stanford the bay two-year-old colt Gordius, by Argyle (sire of Fairy), dam Gerhardine, by Flood; second dam imp. Goneyaw, by North Lincoln; third dam Bounceaway, by Zuyder Zee, etc. The youngster is said to be a good one. Consideration private.

W. B. CHEATHAM, of Cliff Lawn Stud, Tennessee; John B. Ewing, of Williamst Stud; Ben F. Cockrell, of Richland Stud; Geo. W. White, of Lakeview Stud, and Mora H. Sharpe, of the Greenfield Stud, all located in Davidson county near Nashville, will sell their yearling thoroughbreds at Chicago during Washington Park race meeting, about June 23th.

The first of the ten mares Mr. James R. Keene purchased at the Newmarket December sales to drop a foal was Queen of Sheba. She foaled a beautiful filly to Hampton on Monday, February 6th. There is not a single barren mare in the lot, which speaks volumes for the good judgment displayed in their selection. Queen of Sheba will be bred back to Hampton.

JAMES R. KEENE has completed the purchase of another English mare. This is Fair Vision, chestnut mare, foaled 1886 (sister to Juggler and Necromancer), by Touchet, dam Enchantress, by Scottish Chief; second dam Lady Love, by Blair Athol; third dam Vergiss-mein-Nicht, by The Flying Dutchman, etc. Fair Vision is due to foal to Minting, and will be mated to Amphion.

NORMAN KIRKMAN, Nashville, Tenn., mortgagee of seventy-five acres of land on which the W. C. Jones kite track and buildings are located, ordered a foreclosure of his mortgage, and the track and buildings were sold February 27. The amount of debt was $7,124.35, and the terms of sale were cash. Several attachments had also been run on it, amounting to some $2,000, but Kirkman's mortgage was ahead of all others.

JUDGE CHEATHAM, of Roby, in reinstating Henry Stover, has, in the opinion of almost all the local critics, made an extremely bad move. His action is indeed criticized in very severe terms. The jockey, Piantoni, and horse, Governor Porter, had been previously put in good standing, but Stover seems to be not only adjudged culpable in this particular case but to be deemed on general principles a good riddance for the turf. So evidently Ed Corrigan thought when he ejected him from Hawthorne Park by main force.

WALTER GRATZ, of Philadelphia, a well-known horse owner, died last Sunday in New York City. He owned Elkwood and Dry Monopole, and was well-known and popular all over the country. He spent a good portion of last winter in San Francisco, stopping at the Palace Hotel, and made hosts of friends here by his genial manners. Mr. Gratz was about thirty years of age, and a nephew, if we remember rightly, of B. Gratz Brown, of Lexington, Ky., who ran for Vice-President of the United States several years ago. Deceased was a native of Lexington, Ky., and last spring officiated as judge at the Memphis (Tenn.) meeting.

ROSEMEATH, by Alcazar, 2:20, dam Souvenir, by The Moor, second dam Lulu Jackson (thoroughbred), by Jack Malone (son of Lexington and Gloriana, by American Eclipse), died last week at San Jose of pneumonia. This grand individual always had a predilection for galloping, and notwithstanding that he was trotting-bred, showed so much speed that it was decided by his owner, D. J. Murphy, of Milpitas, to put him in training as a galloper. Billy Donnan took the horse, and he was progressing exceedingly well in his work until seized with the disease which carried him off. He had repeatedly gone quarters in 24 seconds, and his career was being watched with intense interest by his popular owner and many friends who knew the horse's breeding.

In addition to booking a number of James R. Keene's broodmares to Spendthrift, King Galop, imp. Order, imp. Cavalier, Hindoo, Hanover, Onondaga, Jim Gore, imp. Candlemas and Falsetto, Major Foxhall Dangerfield, of Virginia, has selected 1,500 acres of blue grass land near Lexington on which Mr. Keene expects to have a thoroughbred breeding establishment second to none in the country. The deal is expected to be closed within the next few weeks.

THE question of Ormonde's season in England is attracting no little attention. Mr. Macdonough's agent at first asked as high a fee as 1,000 guineas, but, as was to be expected, this was too much. When the terms are learned it is probable that a much more reasonable and sensible course will have been followed. Great as the prestige of Ormonde is, it was not likely that English breeders would pay 1,000 guineas for a service, especially in view of their antipathy to roasters.—Daily Spirit.

PANCHITA, Jockey Willie Spence's $160 filly, by Alta—Constellation, is developing into a clinker. Last Saturday at Oakland she won a seven-furlong dash with great ease, leading Little Tough, St. Patrick, May Pritchard and Elwood almost from the start clear around to the wire. Panchita, previous to the time Spence bought her, was a perfect devil at the post, in fact, about as bad as Duke of Milpitas, Elwood or Late in their palmist days, but is getting very tractable as well as useful.

CHRISTIAN CORNEHLESEN, well-known as the former owner of King Crab and other good horses, died suddenly on Monday night, February 13th, of apoplexy. He had been suffering from heart trouble for some years, but his general appearance bore no indication of his approaching end. His tall, erect form, ruddy complexion and genial smile were familiar to all race-goers. He was a much-liked and highly respected member of the turf community, and will be sadly missed by a host of friends.

A CORRESPONDENT from Los Gatos sends us the following: Edna K., by Thad Stevens, dam Miami, dropped a chestnut colt by Duke of Norfolk on January 16th (full brother to Duke Stevens, and fully as promising). Sue Abbot is in the hands of Trainer J. W. Donathan. The yearling by Wildidle is a very good looker, and will go in training in the fall. Edna K. is stinted to Duke of Norfolk. Her daughter, La Gata, by Middleton, half-brother to Initiation, is stinted to the Duke of Norfolk.

We are in a position to announce that Mr. John A. Qualey is the president of the Ivy City Jockey Club, while Mr. Charles E. Meyer will fill the post of treasurer. The appointments of judge and starter will be announced very shortly. There were some fifty horses at the track by Wednesday and others were expected yesterday. Enough stable room has already been bespoken to accommodate 250 to 300 horses, and with this amount on hand there will be enough and to spare for the success of the meeting.—Daily Spirit.

CALIFORNIA is entitled to another "best on record" not recorded in the table of Goodwin's Official Guide. It is the fastest race at mile and a half heats. In looking over the "Transactions of the State Agricultural Society" for 1884 we find that on the 17th of September of that year Patsy Duffy, seven years old, by Leinster, dam Ada A., by Asteroid, carrying 115 pounds and ridden by Duffy, ran one and one-half mile heats in 2:41, 2:41, beating Garfield, aged, carrying 112 pounds. Goodwin gives Bigaroon the "record" with 2:42, 2:43. This will doubtless be corrected ere long by the Messrs. Goodwin.

THE Los Angeles meeting, slated to begin March 18th and last seven days, was declared off at a meeting of the Board of Directors held on Friday evening, February 24th. An insufficient number of stake entries was probably the cause for this action, and it is said the fact that Baldwin's horses were to race there "shoed" off timed turfmen from this part of the world. Others say the entrance money was too high, but the fact remains that the conditions were quite liberal. The truth of the matter is that Oakland's long-drawn-out merry-go-round is too entrancing for the owners of a lot of string-halted "skates" and drummed-to-death dromedaries to resist, and the owners of rare-good race horses desire to save their animals for bigger game in this city and across the Rockies. It is unfortunate that the Los Angeles meeting did not receive the support of our horsemen, for the Association members certainly deserved better treatment.

A WELCOME addition to the ranks of American breeders is Mr. W. A. Wadsworth, the popular Master of the Genesee Valley Hounds, one of the very best sportsmen in that particularly sporting section of that country. He has purchased the imported stallion, The Devil to Pay, through Tattersalls' (of New York), Limited, to whom he was lately consigned. The horse was foaled 1883, by Robert the Devil, dam Polonaise, by Adventurer; second dam Klarinska, by De Clare; third dam Wiasma, by Hetman Platoff, etc. He is a magnificent individual, and was a good race horse. At the first attempt he won the Malecomb Snakes at Ascot, beating St. Alvere, Calais, Skyscraper and The Sun. His other start was in the Prince of Wales Stakes at York. As a three-year-old he was unable to start, but as a four-year-old he went to the post in the Royal Hunt Cup, won by Gay Hermit, but was unplaced. At the stud he has been given but limited opportunities in England.—Daily Spirit.

AFFAIRS at Overland track, Denver, are assuming a more definite shape. It has now been decided that there are to be three running and two harness races one day, varied by three harness and two running races the next day, on which day harness races are best two heats in three to win. All running races are to come under the rules of the American Turf Congress, of which the association is a member, and all trotting races under the rules of the American Trotting Association, of which the association is also a member, both, however, being subject to local conditions. Both tracks are to be used, and the club offers the use of its stables and tracks to those who desire their horses at Denver en route to the East, even if they do not propose to race here this season. The programme will be out about April 1st, and the purses for both runners and trotters vary from $300 to $600, with the addition of some trotting stakes, the amounts of which have not yet been decided upon. The entry blanks and conditions are now being mailed by the club to every prominent horseman in the country. Secretary Rhodes, who is now in the East and who will return about the 1st prox., is meeting with success in his solicitations there, and encourages us to look forward to an enjoyable racing season here.—Denver Field and Farm.

THE declarations that had come to hand for the New York Jockey Club's handicaps by last night were as follows: In the Metropolitan, Dr. Hasbrouck, 129; Sleipner, 118, and Muldoon, 95. In the Toboggan Slide Handicap, Dr. Hasbrouck, 138; Lady Violet, 114; Ajax, 111; Cordway, 105, and Mendicant, 100. In the Bowling Brook Handicap, The Hunter, 108, and Muldoon, 104. The declarations for the Metropolitan is very much lighter than might have been expected with reason, and that there are so few malcontents despite the raising of the scale is a compliment to Mr. Vosburgh's work. That Dr. Hasbrouck would be scratched in this event was reasonably certain. He had been well looked after, and not only if he had won, but if he had run well with 129 pounds up, he would have lost value as a vehicle for speculation, a most important point to his owner. Presumably his declaration in the Toboggan Slide is a tacit protest against the weight allotted him, but it does not appear to us that he was given a pound too much in view of his great form as a sprinter.—Daily Spirit, February 21st.

THE only declarations received by Secretary McIntyre, of the Brooklyn Jockey Club, were Lowlander and Tulla Blackburn from the Brooklyn Handicap. Mr. Cornehlens, agent for Michael F. Dwyer, received a telegram from Mr. Dwyer, who is in Rockledge, Fla., on the Indian River, instructing him to declare Longstreet out of both the Brooklyn Handicap and the Suburban. Hardy Campbell, Mr. Dwyer's trainer, says that Longstreet is all right in his legs and feet, and is in no danger of a breakdown, but that he is not an early horse, and Mr. Dwyer has decided to pursue with him the policy taken with Kingston two years ago. He will not be started till the Monmouth meeting. This will enable the trainer to give him a slow preparation, and he will receive in the fall many allowances that will let him in the stakes at light weights. The following declarations have been received by Secretary Crickmore, of the New York Jockey Club: Metropolitan Handicap at Morris Park—Dr. Hasbrouck, Sleipner and Muldoon. Toboggan Slide—Dr. Hasbrouck, Lady Violet, Corduroy, Ajax and Mendicant. Bowling Brook Stakes—The Hunter and Muldoon.

It is a pity that the weights have not been raised, says "Augur" in the Daily Spirit. To the fact that they have not is due the fact that we have fewer good jockeys than any racing country under the heavens. The scarcity of competent jockeys is one of the drawbacks to good racing in America. If a large field starts for a race there are not enough jockeys to go round, and many owners have to "scratch." We will never have any number of good jockeys until the weights are raised. As soon as our boys have learned how to ride artistically, they become too heavy and have to give it up. In connection with this subject I am glad to note the increase of welter races. Last season the best races of the year were the welter events. They brought out larger fields, made better betting and were better ridden, as they gave all the best jockeys a chance to get mounts. But welter races are not valuable events. It seems to me the standard scale could be raised 5 lbs. with advantage, as we do not run races of any distance nowadays. Three-year-olds should carry 125 lbs., and two-year-olds 122 lbs.—125 lbs. would be better. Many horses are spoiled by light boys, who cannot ride with the ability of a 125-lb. man. With a higher scale we could reduce the penalties as that seems to be the objection.

GERALDINE equaled the California record for three-eighths of a mile last Saturday when she defeated Nellie Van by a short head at Oakland in the match race for $500 a side and $250 added by the men running the meeting in the Athens of the Pacific. The eldest Clancy rode "Gerry," and remarked after the race that the little Washington mare was "hard game." Mr. Ashe's mare just nipped the race in the last jump when Clancy got to riding his best with hands and feet and lifted her under the wire. Taylor, on the contrary, did not do as well as usual, his legs flying out and in in a curious fashion, as if he did not know what to do with them. However, a sixteenth from home it looked Nellie Van's race, especially when Clancy's cap blew off. "Gerry" got away half a length in advance, but Van was in front before half a dozen strides had been taken and retained it to the very last jump. Geraldine might have had something up her sleeve, but that is hard to say. Certain it is that she made a mighty leap at the right time. Mr. James Ross, owner of Nellie Van, was not satisfied with the outcome, claiming that too much was taken out of the filly at the start, and that she therefore had nothing left to finish on. He wanted to mnde the match over again, but was not accommodated.

JOCKEY TOM MORTON committed suicide at New Orleans last Tuesday night by shooting himself in the head with a pistol. He became despondent on account of losing a race on Lockport last Saturday, and began to drink heavily. Drink made him desperate, and resulted in his taking his own life. Morton went to New Orleans about five weeks ago, from San Francisco, and had been riding San Salvador, Lockport and other horses in Hickey Bunn's string. He formerly rode for Senator Stanford, of California, and the day before his death received a telegram from J. Sullivan, of Cincinnati, asking his terms for riding for his string. Morton's relatives in Baltimore, where he was born, were notified of his suicide.—Live Stock Record, February 15th. Four years ago "Tommy" Morton was the "star" jockey of the coast, and piloted many winners to the front for the owner of the Palo Alto Stock Farm. New and clever jockeys came into the field, dimming the lustre of Morton's star, and the popular jockey began to dissipate greatly and to "lose his grip." Last spring he rode fairly well for Simeon G. Reed, and latterly went East. His many friends here will be sorry to hear of his sad ending.

"I've been told that the two English jockeys, Fordham and Cannon, seldom used a whip, and if you notice it they ward in a hard finish you won't see him get up his whip until within three or four strides from home. It stands to reason, if you yourself are trying your hardest, that punishment for a quarter of a mile—and that's what's expected from a jockey on a beaten horse—is only going to sour your temper. Take Tenny or Tea Tray or any of the Rayon d'Ors. They're all gung enough, but they are so high couraged that instead of standing the strings of the lash when they are doing all they know how they'll light back, and after a few doses of such medicine won't run at all," says a writer in the New York Herald. It is to be hoped the rising generation of jockeys and those lash riders who fling their arms about like a windmill pay some attention to Murphy's methods. Unfortunately, the majority think they know it all, and pay little attention to men who are genuine artists in the saddle, and who in reality are as far above them as a thoroughbred is above a Clydesdale.

The Future is Not Darkened.

Notwithstanding the amount of advertising in behalf of the great Sidney, the price realized at his sale last Tuesday ($27,000) was extremely low. This can only be accounted for by the small number of bidders present at the sale.

The lack of enterprise on the part of breeders in California is to be deplored when a tried sire like Sidney is allowed to be sold at such a low price. There are at least twenty of Sidney's progeny in California that will enter the charmed circle this year, and as they are out of better mares than most of those now to the credit of this famous son of Sauta Claus, the loss to this State will be more deeply felt than ever.

The day for "booming" prices, holding stock at figures far beyond their true value and standing stallions at sums in excess of the prices their progeny will bring has passed. The "bottom has not dropped out of the business." On the contrary, it is being placed on a firmer foundation than ever, and the knowledge that horses will bring just what they are worth in the open market will do more toward helping the horse business than anything else.

This reformation not only extends to the largest stock-owners, but also reaches the smallest; that class of observant horsemen whose purses regulate their purchases and whose life-long experiences in studying the points and defects, pedigrees and breeding-on qualities of the various breeds of horses have befitted them to meet these changes in prices with greater fortitude than the extensive breeders.

Sidney was owned by one of this class ("a small breeder"), and never got the patronage of good mares until the last three years in California. He will now be mated with some of the choicest broodmares in the East, for he is acknowledged to be one of the most phenomenal sires ever foaled.

Are Bookmakers Essential?

A return to the good, old-fashioned system of auction pools and mutuels may be decided upon by metropolitan track managers next year. Last season's experience with the bookies shook the faith of the Eastern jockey clubs.

lost by a majority of one only. This was an exceedingly close call for the men who claim that racing cannot be successfully conducted without the book ring of to-day. Two of the four jockey clubs which compose the Board of Control tracks are said to favor the old system with modern and improved features for registering sales of mutuels.

The above shows that some racing associations do not think hookmaking is something that can not be done away with at race meetings. Several weeks ago the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN pointed out the benefits to be derived to racing organizations were hookmakers relegated to private life.

In France hookmaking was tried, found wanting and abolished, to the general satisfaction of race-goers. In England, Australia, Austria and every other country where there is good racing (except America) hookmakers have had to take a hack seat for the totalizators (parimutuel machines), and betting in mutuels and auction pools, where the public establish the odds, is acknowledged to be the only fair way to bet.

Jockey clubs are not run to make money for the members, but to keep up and increase, if possible, the "Sport of Kings." Horsemen will go where the most money is offered for stakes and purses, and if the profits accruing from sales of mutuels and auction pools were secured by racing associations there would, without doubt, be a vast difference on the right side of the ledger at the end of each season.

Table comparing financial outcomes of two racing systems. It lists 'Received per day from auctions and books under present system' and 'Balance in favor of proposed system, per day' with various sub-items like wages, salaries, and commissions.

In a meeting lasting forty-five days, like the last one of the Blood Horse Association, this would have made a difference to the organization of $40,950, a sum not to be sneezed at, surely. What stakes could be inaugurated with this amount and what a boom could be given the racing interests of California!

The trotting-horse market is reaching its level and horses are selling for just what they are worth.

and patrons of the turf the benefit of any surplus coin, and let the bookmakers make useful citizens at some other business.

And then, leaving the money consideration out, look at the good it would do in the work of purifying the turf. There would be no bookmaker who had taken in too much money on some horse out with his "scouts" looking for the owner of the heavily-played horse to "fix it" with the "gentleman" to "stiffen" his horse, no owner coming around to the side of a bookmaker's box to whisper sweetly in the good penciler's ear that he (the owner) would agree to lose the race or not "show on the board" if the hooky would pay over half the amount taken in on the horse's chances. There would be no bribing of jockeys to get them to "pull" a horse over against the fence so that winning was out of the question, no horse-pilots "riding exclusively for the books," no leasing of high-class horses to run in the interest of some penciler or pencilers, and poor paralyzed "dogs" with no earthly show of winning would not be entered in races expressly to separate the "sucker" from his money. In short, it would work reform in divers ways.

Wanted—A Pacific Slope Board of Control.

That the Pacific Slope needs a Board of Control badly any thinking, fair-minded lover of clean equine sport will at once acknowledge. And that there will be one organized in the near future somewhat on the principle of the Eastern board we have little doubt. Joseph I. Dimond, the popular secretary of District Fair Association No. 1, is entitled to the credit of first suggesting the matter to the officials of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, and we expect to see the matter taken up by them and the co-operation of all other racing organizations west of the Rockies asked. Mr. Dimond, in a conversation last Saturday, gave us his ideas on the matter. Said he:

"I consider it absolutely necessary that this coast should have a Board of Control, where all matters of contention can be settled by a body of men that have clean sport in the line of racing at heart. It will be more important in this part of the world than the one at the far East, for the reason that where they have four tracks under their jurisdiction there will be nearer forty on this coast that will be governed by the rules set forth by the new organization. Just how many men would be on the board has not as yet been settled upon and will not be until a conference is held. At present everything is in a chaotic state. For instance, a jockey, trainer or owner is ruled off for doing crooked work. What is to prevent that person from going to another town near at hand and doing the same thing right over again? The racing organizations at present can only legislate for themselves, and ruling-off or suspension amounts to very little when men can go on with their robbery again in a very few days. If a Board of Control of the Pacific Slope Racing Clubs were formed, and all the organizations were members, a scheming, thieving man would be driven off the turf and his name posted all over, together with the cause of his expulsion. Jockeys and trainers would be granted licenses, and if they did anything causing that license to be taken away it would result in their forced retirement from the turf and consequent purification of the same. And speaking of purification, nothing in the world could accomplish that more than an excellent Board of Control. No man or set of men could conduct a crooked race meeting, for a sufficient number of horses, trainers or jockeys outside the organization I have mentioned could not be secured, and even if they were could not receive enough public support. Another point I would earnestly urge on the members of Coast racing clubs is the providing of club-rooms in every town where a racing organization exists, where could be found on file turf journals from all over this country and from England and Australia as well. The social feature in racing clubs will popularize racing wonderfully. Have billiards and pool, checkers, chess, etc.—in short, a pleasant spot where turfmen could congregate and where their letters could be addressed to them. It would have a refining influence, and that the membership would vastly increase goes without saying."

We trust Mr. Dimond's ideas will be carried out. In no other way can the affairs of the turf on the Pacific Coast be conducted as they should. That the Secretary of the Board (who would probably be located in San Francisco) would have all he could attend to is certain, and the success of that organization would largely depend upon the ability of the Secretary, upon whose shoulders would fall the bulk of the work. The beauty of the workings of a board of control are to be seen every day in England and Australia, for a ruling-off in these countries amounts to a retirement for good and all. As a consequence job-bery is almost unknown, and the cry, "Is — out for it?" never grates on the ears of English or Australian racegoers. — is afraid not to do his best to win, fearing that his occupation would be gone for aye if he did wrong. And then the beautiful club-houses, furnished elegantly, and the gay crowds of enthusiastic racing men within them would lend an additional charm and popularize the sport of kings as in no other way it could be done. Therefore we say, form the Board of Control of Pacific Slope Racing Clubs without delay, select good men to constitute it and a Secretary that would not only do the large amount of work loaded on his shoulders, but who would at the same time be pleasant about it. Clubs would be under the jurisdiction of the board from California, Arizona, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Montana, Utah and perhaps Colorado. Let each of the clubs in the far West have permanent quarters, such as we have mentioned above, remembering that most of the success of racing organizations in this and other countries is due to their social features. Purification of the turf, true sportsmanship and sociability should be the watchwords of the members of our jockey clubs.

REMEMBER the great sale of trotters takes place at Napa next Wednesday. Several of the most prominent horse-breeders in Napa county have consigned all their choicest horses, mares, colts and fillies to this sale, a synopsis of which appears in another column and catalogues will be sent to all applicants immediately. The great sire, Alcona, one of the greatest sons of the mighty Almont, and a large number of his progeny head the list. There are sons and daughters of Director, Stamboul, Whippleton, Steinway, Mountain Boy, Azmoor, Kentucky Prince, Grandissimo, Alcona Jr., Silas Skinner and a score of others which have become famous. There are numbers of noted performers and sisters to fast ones among them, and the small breeder who is seeking to improve the quality of his stock cannot afford to miss this sale. The day is fast approaching when nothing can be sold at a price unless it has a pedigree or a reputation. The day for selling "untraced" animals at anything like a price to pay for their pasture has passed. The animals collected for this sale have been selected with great care, and no mistake can possibly be made by buyers. Everyone should attend.

LOVERS of a good horse cannot afford to miss the combination sale that will take place at Killip & Co.'s salesyard, Market street and Van Ness avenue, on Wednesday, March 15, 1893. At that time there will be sold fifty-nine head of trotting stock, the get of the most fashionable and noted sires on the Coast. There are consignments from D. J. Murphy, of Milpitas; Capt. Ben E. Harris, of San Francisco; L. Hewlett, of Oakland, and T. C. Snider, of Sacramento, well-known breeders of trotters, and in the lot are several brothers and sisters to noted performers; in fact, it is a royal collection, and worthy to grace any race track or farm in this country. Catalogues are out and can be secured of Killip & Co.

The attention of horsemen is called to the advertisement of the P. C. T. H. B. A. in our columns. The low entrance fee, the system of dashes and number of purses to be contested for are reforms that will attract large entries at the meetings. This association is the first in the field to give owners of trotters and pacers a chance to make money at a very small outlay, and at the same time give the public an opportunity of seeing many well-contested races each afternoon. The keynote for success in trotting and pacing races will be struck when the gates of the spring meeting are opened during the latter part of May and the first of October.

It has been definitely settled that the spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association will begin on the 1st of April and run to April 30th. On the heels of this meeting follows the one under the auspices of the California Jockey Club, running from May 1st to May 13th. In all there will be over thirty days of the "sport of kings," the Blood Horse Association beginning a week earlier than originally intended—probably on account of the Los Angeles races being declared off. Everything is ripe for the most successful spring meeting in the history of the Pacific Coast, and we look forward to a grand season of sport.

THE colt, Charles Willis, belonging to G. W. Ford, of Santa Ana, sired by Albert W., 11,333, and out of Clytie 2d (Nutwood 600 and Clytie) has been given the name of Neerut by his owner and is also registered under that name and number 19,810.

IT is a pity that the stock farm that some time ago purchased the magnificent Dantus for its premier should now lose him. The chance to get such a horse at auction is indeed a rare one.

Asylum Farm Sale.

The attendance at the sale of the Asylum Stock Farm horses on Thursday was large, but there were not many bidders among them who seemed to care for the young stock offered the prices realized were fair. $9,150 was realized and the average reached $140. Mat Storn secured Sid Fleet for $2,300 and Stonewall for $1,300. Following is a list of all that brought $100 and over:

Table listing various horses and their owners/buyers with prices. Includes entries like Director Jr., Sid Fleet, Stonewall, Wallace Wilkes, Amatesta, Belle Jewell, Freda, Black Billy, Keyser, Betsy Troutwood, Bay mare, Gip, Gold Dawn, Huda Rose, Lenore B., and Lady Louisa.

Great Broodmares.

In no department of the breeding problem has there been such an advance all along the line as in the appreciation of the importance of the dam. While the list of performers under the heel of the sires is still closely watched and followed the broodmare list receives equal attention, and so far as the market is concerned, their earning capacity being considered, great mares have decidedly the call over the sires. There is another advantage which a mare has if she is a great producer, her individual merits wipe out to a large degree any defects in her lineage. At this season of the year it is peculiarly appropriate to study this list. The small breeder should find a good deal of comfort in it, for many of its now celebrated members were certainly not fashionably bred, says the Spirit of the Times.

Famous Green Mountain Maid, though dead, still holds the list. Her 230 list numbers nine, but wonderful as that is, it is but a small part of her honors. Her immortality depends upon her son, Electioneer, the greatest sire of trotters alive or dead. There is now 230 speed in the fourth generation from this great mother of trotters. Her pedigree to-day would be considered a poor one, for her dam is untraced, but, like the private soldier who has fought his way up to the Marshal's baton, his want of lineage is forgotten in the brilliancy of his own great deeds.

One of the greatest of living broodmares is Beautiful Bells, who added to her list last season, having now seven to her credit. In spite of the achievements of Sultan and Stamboul her breeding would not be considered fashionable. It is the marvellous speed-producing power of her dam and herself which have placed her among the queens of the harem. She has been signally unfortunate in one respect; of her three sons in the list, two died at the beginning of their stud career. Bell Boy was burnt to death and St. Bel died while being prepared for a fast effort. Both horses enjoyed the highest reputation, and had they lived the usual span of life, would have done much to maintain the popularity of this great branch of the equine family. She has, however, a good representative in Bow Bells, 2:19, and her daughters should be eminently successful in the stud. The seven to her credit average 2:20, a wonderful average with one two-year-old, four three-year-olds, one four-year-old and one aged.

Emaline, by Henry B. Patchen, dam by Saladin, is another of the select circle of grand dames who has seven to her credit. With the exception of Jersey Prince, they are all mares and are equally divided, as in sireship, between Jay Gould and Aberdeen. It must be said, however, that the average of speed of her get is not high. Another great mare with seven to her credit is Sontag Mohawk, by Mohawk Chief, dam Sontag Nelly, by Toronto Sontag. Here is a pedigree which is certainly not fashionable, yet she has four by Electioneer and one each by Norval, General Benton and Piedmont. With two such sons as Conductor and Eros her name will live in trotting history, and her daughters, Sallie Benton, 2:11, Colma, Norhawk and Sonoma, will add to her fame.

Alma Mater, by Mambrino Patchen, dam Estrella, by imp. Australian, has not merely written, she has ploughed her name deep in breeding history. With Alcantara and Aley-one alone to her credit, she would have done nobly, but Alfonso and Arbuter should also be successful sires. She has also two daughters in the list. The grand old mare has been sent to Wilton, and should the result be a colt, it will still further, in all probability, add to her record for producing speed. Belle of Clarence, by Finch's St. Lawrence, is not a dam of high degree, yet to the embraces of Brougham she has produced five, and by a Gypsy horse one. It is true the speed average is not high, but all things considered, the result is still wonderful.

Famous old Primrose, by Abdallah, dam Black Rose, by Tom Teemer, has also six, one each by Pistachio, Belmont and Wedgewood, and three by Lord Russell. Another mare with six to her credit is that illustrious daughter of Pilot Jr., Waterwitch, whose four sons and two daughters will keep her memory green. Among those who have contributed five are Sue, by Thorndale, dam by a son of imp. Glencoe, her fastest representatives being Ethorne, 2:21, Rebecca, by General Benton, dam by Abdallah Star, has four by Electioneer and one by Ansel. Nelly Time, by Mambrino Time, dam Cap, by Flying Cloud, in her five has Temple Bar, 2:17, and Shadeland Onward, 2:18. Miss Russell has a most illustrious five, including Maud S. and Nutwood, white outside her speed list she has in her son, Lord Russell, a most untied speed producer. Minnehaha has five, including Beautiful Bells. Ned, by Berkeley's Edwin Forrest; Lucia, by Jay Gould; Lark, by Abdallah Mambrino; Bicara, by Harold; Belle Dudley, by Belmont, and Blanche, by Arthurton, have all five to their credit. The latter in her list has those two good mares, Hazel Wilkes, 2:14, and Una Wilkes, 2:15. The lessons of the broodmare list are valuable, and one of them is certainly this, that the fashionable families do not monopolize its members.—Daily Spirit.

Sidney Sold for $27,000.

The annual winter sale of Tattersalls' brought out a large crowd last Tuesday, at Cleveland, Ohio. The increased attendance was no doubt caused by the sale of the famous trotting sire Sidney. To the complete surprise of the horsemen present the horse did not bring one-half his estimated value. He was the first horse led to the block, and after the auctioneer had finished extolling his virtues, C. F. Emery, of this city, proprietor of the Forrest City Stock Farm, made a bid of $20,000. That was immediately supplemented by one from George H. Hammond, of Detroit, Mich., of $25,000. Emery looked longingly at the horse, but remarked that he did all his plunging at one swoop.

To the mystification of the management of the sale there was no other bid for the sale, and no person present seemed to want him at the low price for which he was in danger of going. Finally Joseph Hubinger of New Haven, Conn., jumped into the arena with a bid of $26,000. He said that he did not want the horse, as he was just going out of the breeding business, but the temptation to speculate when an animal like Sidney was going at such figures, was too great to resist. Hammond promptly raised the bid to $27,000 and Hubinger was urged to come again. He refused to do so, however, and after waiting a long time in the hope of securing another bid the horse was knocked down to Hammond, who will take him to his stock farm near Detroit, where he already has Simmicolon.

The Sidney consignment of ten horses sold for $41,647. A portion of the Hubinger consignment from New Haven, Conn., brought $3,035, ten animals being included. The total number of horses sold during the day was thirty-nine, at an average of $1,707.82 a head. This is one of the highest averages that has ever been seen at Cleveland. The pacer Fausta, with the champion yearling record, was purchased by Millard Saunders, who trained the filly. He says that he will beat any three-year-old pacer in the country with her this year.

Including Sidney, thirty-nine horses were sold, the total amount received being $66,605. The following were among the sales: Fron-Fron, S. Henry, Philadelphia, $3,500; Fausta, Millard Saunders, Cleveland, $2,100; Odd Fellow, Jacobs Bros., Hubbard, O., $2,000; Sidmont, E. W. Johnsdale, Carthage, Mo., $2,555; Red Sid, b c, by Sidney, dam Florence Wilkes, C. F. Appleton, Omaha, $1,000; San Souci, ch f, by Sidney, dam Miss Roy, Colonel William Edwards, Cleveland, $1,025; Faustissima, ch f, by Sidney, dam Faustina, H. S. Schultz, Lexington, $1,250; Maggie (2:20), b m, by Dexter Prince, dam by Peerless, T. W. McGue, Akron, $1,650; Princess Alice (2:16), blk m, by Dexter Prince, dam by General McClellan, C. Decker, Cleveland, $1,025; Cleopatra, b m, by Dexter Prince, dam by Silver Threads, William Garlick, Buffalo, $1,025; Jessie (2:22), b m, by Dexter Prince, dam Lady Fancher, William Garlick, Buffalo, $1,025; New York Central (2:18), by Simmons, dam Jessamine, H. S. Schultz, Lexington, $1,400; Lida Wilkes (2:29), b m, by Young Wilkes, dam Lida, by John A. Madden, Lexington, $1,525.

Death of B. V. Sargent.

At 10 o'clock last Monday morning, B. V. Sargent, Sr., an old and respected citizen of this county, passed away at his home in Monterey, after an illness of only a few days. A sudden relapse occurred last Friday night and Mr. Sargent became unconscious, and from that time until his death remained in a comatose state. He was attended in his last illness by Dr. Gydison of this city and Dr. Lane of San Francisco, but from the moment of his relapse it was beyond medical skill to save him. Surrounded by the members of his family, who did all in human power to stay the advance of the fell destroyer, Death, he paid the debt due to nature, aged 64 years.

Mr. Sargent's life was a very active one, and in all matters of public concern he took an advanced position, always having the public interest at heart, as shown in his works. In matters of local improvement at the old capital, he could always be safely counted upon as leading the way for its advancement. Honored by his fellow-citizens with their votes for State Senator, he served them well in the upper house of the Legislature. Being possessed of good judgment and sound business acumen, he accumulated a competency of this world's goods and leaves his family in affluent circumstances. His estate consists principally of lands and cattle, and is estimated at between a quarter and a half million dollars.

In fraternal matters Mr. Sargent took a prominent part, being a Past Master of Monterey Lodge, No. 217, F. & A. M.; a member of Salinas Chapter, No. 59, R. A. M., and a Knight Templar of Watsonville Commandery.—Salinas Journal.

Sir Modred's Grand Black Brother.

In another column will be found an advertisement of Imp-Idalium. We are glad that breeders will have a chance to patronize this great stallion. The Sir Modreds and Cheviots have made such a wonderful showing that it goes without saying that anything by Idalium will sell readily. As an individual he is all that one could wish for, and great admirers of his two own brothers declare Idalium to be the best individual of the three. We have been for months past chronicling the doings of the Idaliums in the land of the kangaroo, and by this last mail Venos runs in three of the principal handicaps, running second in two and third in the other, and in this latter race only a length between first and second, and that in a field of twenty-seven, while in one of the other races he was second in a field of twenty-six, beaten by a head. Yet Venos, we are credibly informed, is not out of a thoroughbred mare. Already we note that keen authority on breeding, Charles ("Pedigree") Brown, has booked Frisa, by Flood, from imp. Music (dam of Princess); Polly (own sister to Sinfax), by Wildfire from Fortress; Annie Lewis (sister to Flood Tide and Oceanic), by Flood from Lady Evangeline, and a Joe Hooker mare.

Mr. Brown has shown good judgment, for it is certain that not only will Idalium breed racehorses, but also stock that will readily bring big prices, for we contend that after the spring meeting of the Blood Horse the Cheviots will have made such a showing that those who have not availed themselves of the service of Idalium will regret it, as he is not likely to be at the service of the public after this season.

A Very Novel Scheme.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—There is a great deal behind the announcement made by Congressman Tim Campbell to the effect that racing will begin at the Ivy City track near Washington on the twenty-second day of the current month. It was learned yesterday that the syndicate in charge of the old course intends making a bold bid for the popular support of those who are always willing to take a chance, whether on the result of a horse race or the turn of the wheel.

The new departure, unless plans are changed materially, is nothing more or less than a combination of horse racing and lottery, and while it seems that the scheme proposed will not stand the scrutiny of the United States District Attorney, Tim Campbell, who claims to have prominent men at the capital and in this city and Philadelphia interested with him, says that it will be within the pale of the law. He claims to have the most eminent counsel upon the subject, and declares that the scheme is not an infringement of the lottery law and will stand the closest scrutiny. The plan is to sell badges of admission to the race course in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, or any other place where they can be handled to advantage, as well as in Washington, each badge being numbered in much the same manner as a policy slip. Prizes aggregating probably $2,000 will be offered daily in addition to the purses for which the horses will strive, and each entry in the races shall bear a separate and distinct number. The holder of the badge with the number of the winning horses in the five or six races which will be decided each day will be entitled to a first prize of $1,000, the holder of four out of five or five out of six numbers, as the case may be, will receive a second prize of $750, or $500, whichever sum the jockey club may see fit to grant, and so on down to the lowest award. The entries, when announced for publication the evening before, will be numbered consecutively from 1 up to 50 or 100, embracing the entire field, and the new scheme is expected to knock all other racing games out of sight and catch the lottery and policy players of the country.

If the Washington venture is a success, it is the intention of the same syndicate to purchase property on Staten Island, erect a course and give the Board of Control folks an argument right at their own door.

Thomas F. Egan, who has charge of the betting ring at Guttenburg and Gravesend, says that he has been engaged to run the betting ring at Ivy City. The purses offered for the races each day will aggregate about $2,500, and owners representing about 700 horses have given their promise to take part in the meeting. It is the intention of Campbell and his friends to get the thing going smoothly before the inauguration in March, when the city will be filled with strangers, and the race track will, of course, come in for large patronage.

It remains to be seen what action the Board of Control will take. Horse racing with a pool selling accompaniment is against the laws of the District of Columbia and a portion of the Ivy City course is within the District. But it is the lottery adjunct that is bound to cause trouble.

How Fashion Beat Boston.

The Boston-Fashion race, which took place on the old Union race course, was one of the big sensations of the day and attracted national interest because of its sectional nature. This race was run in 1842, and so well had Boston shown that it looked as if he had much the best of it. Before his match with Fashion he had won no less than thirty-five out of thirty-eight races, twenty-six of them being at four-mile heats. His owner had a standing challenge to run against any two horses in the world for stakes of $45,000. He was owned by James A. Long, of Washington, and when his horse was in a race Long would bet $500 to $300 as long as there were any takers. But in the Fashion match he got better odds than that, the current rate being about $100 to $60 on Boston. The race drew the largest crowd ever seen on an American race course up to that day. Before the course could be cleared for the first heat, a score or more of bruisers, under the leadership of the noted prize-fighter, Yaukee Sullivan, had to be employed to beat back the people. The first heat saw Boston set the pace, the first mile in 1:53 and the second mile in 1:50. The pace was slower in the third mile—1:54. Time, 5:37 for the first three miles. The fourth mile was begun with Boston in the lead, but on the turn Fashion got a touch of the whip and she ranged up to the mighty chestnut. At the half Fashion was in the front, but Boston was not yet beaten and he lapped her on the turn. At the head of the homestretch Gilpatrick, on Boston, made another effort; but Fashion, in a drive home that lasted for nearly a quarter of a mile, beat Boston a length in 7:32—the best time ever made in the north up to that race. The excitement at the finish of the heat was tremendous. The second heat saw tactics reversed, Boston waiting on Fashion for two miles in the slow time of 3:56. On the third mile Boston headed Fashion, running the mile in 1:51, but the effort cooked his bacon. At the quarter on the fourth mile Fashion headed Boston, and beat him out very easily in 7:45. No match ever run in the country up to that time evoked the interest of the Boston-Fashion race. Certainly the Fashion-Peytona match, three years later, which the former won, did not, and the memory of the Boston-Fashion race on the old course on Long Island in 1842 will live long in the memory of those who witnessed it. Fashion was a great little rare. When she beat Peytona she ran the race with bruised heels, and later she won a race at eleven years old. All of these mares afterward became great stud matrons, Fashion the most successful of the quartet. She died in 1860 at the age of 23, foaling a filly to old Bonnie Scotland.—"Hyder Ali" in Chicago Dispatch.

"Der Colonist."

Among the journals issued in the interests of the development of the resources of this State, and for the purpose of stating what those resources are, the new German publication called "Der Colonist" is destined to take a leading position. It is to be distributed in Germany every two weeks, and is intended to reach that class of industrious farmers who have never heard or read of this wonderful country except in the meagre, unauthentic articles copied from magazines that are published outside of this State. Dr. Emil Stoessel, the well-known journalist, is the editor, and his name is a synonym of the character of the journal; his thorough knowledge of viticulture, agriculture, horticulture and stock raising makes him invaluable as a guide whose advice is worthy of being followed.

The Trotting Register Office.

The internal affairs of the American Trotting Register office were slightly disturbed last week, in consequence of which D. M. Quirk, who has been the Registrar de facto for some years is no longer with the Register. Mr. Quirk has had seven years' experience in registration under Mr. Wallace and under the present organization, and although Mr. Steiner is officially and nominally Registrar, the work of registration was necessarily directed by his experienced assistant.

Speaking of the matter Mr. Quirk said yesterday () Horseman representative:

"The work in the Register office is not in good shape. It is two months behind. The inadequate registration force has been working night and day to catch up, and I have been urging that the staff be strengthened so that the public business might be properly and promptly done. Instead of this, last week Mr. Steiner proceeded to weaken the force both by decreasing it in number and by a heavy cut in salaries. You knew the salaries—except Mr. Steiner's—have been small, but the Secretary said he was ordered by the directors to reduce expenses. His salary is a very handsome one, though for obvious reasons he cannot discharge the duties for which he is paid; but I do not know whether he reduced his own pay or not. It may be—I should guess it was—necessary to retrench in the Register Association to make a showing to the stockholders in April. But retrenchment could have been accomplished and the efficiency of the office increased at the same time. Independent of the Registrar's fancy salary there are other unnecessary salaries paid in that establishment, and the printing bills paid by the association are exorbitant. As you know, the only paying branch of the Register Association's business is registration. Wallace's Monthly does not pay, owing to the fact that it has few subscribers who pay for it, and its weakness prevents its circulation increasing. Under the Wallace Company the Register paid in the last six months prior to the formation of the present association a profit of seventeen per cent. on a capital of $100,000, and for that year under the same management would have paid undoubtedly a dividend of thirty per cent. It should, of course, pay more now, as more horses are bred and registered. Mr. Steiner, though nominally Registrar, knows absolutely nothing about pedigree affairs. Though paid as Registrar he never investigated a pedigree in his life; he never prepared a case or wrote an opinion to submit to the Executive Committee or the Board of Censors, and for obvious reasons could not do so, for ordinarily he cannot tell a standard from a non-standard pedigree. He was appointed, I understand, on business qualifications. Doubtless by now cutting expenses and allowing the work that should be done to accumulate as the burden of another year, Mr. Steiner hopes to make a financial showing to satisfy the stockholders in April. A statement is all very well, and a look into the outer office is all very well—but if a competent committee should investigate the internal workings of the office, the condition in which the work is in, and the details of printing and other expenditures, including salaries, and for what duties they are paid, the report of that committee would show that Mr. Steiner's management of the Register Association has been far from what the stockholders have been led to believe it was."—Horseman.

The Bilz Carts and Sulky.

J. A. McKerron, the well-known horse-boot manufacturer, is always trying to get something to satisfy the wants of horsemen. His latest acquisition is a department wherein he can display the famous Bilz carts and sulky of which he has the agency. The fame of the carts is almost universal. All of our leading trainers who have visited the East with their horses, brought Bilz carts with them and the horsemen there claimed they were the best they had ever seen. Mr. Bilz, not content with filling this long-felt want by making a perfect-riding, easy-going, strongly-made—yet light—cart, began manufacturing sulky, and the ball-bearing pneumatic tire sulky he introduced to the public last fall has been endorsed by every trainer who has ridden them. Mr. McKerron intends to keep a stock of these vehicles on hand besides all the latest wheels with pneumatic tires which will be made to fit any sulky.

The season is fast approaching for horsemen to lay in their supplies of boots and harness, and Mr. McKerron has those new electric bandages for sale which have proved to be a great boon to horses with sore tendons; they are also used on horses legs in races, and for this purpose also are highly recommended by all the prominent trainers and drivers. When you call and see the carts ask to be shown these and the other valuable aids to trotters that Mr. McKerron has in stock.

The Banner Spring Sale.

No combination sale ever promised the public a more brilliant aggregation of trotting stock than the consignment now pledged to F. J. Berry & Co.'s March 27 to April 1 great Chicago sale. The limit is rapidly filling with gilt-edged offerings, comprising grand individual representatives of the most fashionable trotting families. This immense speed and breeding sale offers owners of high-bred stock the leading market of the world for the best specimens of the light harness-horse. The management is in the hands of the oldest and largest horse commission firm in America, and they offer consignors the finest accommodations on the continent to exhibit and sell gilt-edged trotters. Remember entries to this great sale close March 6th, and the limit is nearly full. For instructions and entry blanks address, F. J. Berry & Co., Union Stock Yards, Chicago.

Ibex, 10,675.

In our last issue the question was asked, "Is Ibex registered?" and the answer made was: "He is not." Since then it has been ascertained that we were mistaken. Ibex is registered 10,675, and is a very well-bred stallion. He is by Commodore Belmont 4,340 out of Lilac, by Tomahawk 680; second dam Bay Flower by Abdallah 15; third dam by Sir Wallace; fourth dam by Hunt's Commodore; fifth dam a Canadian mare. Commodore Belmont 4,340 is by Belmont 64 (sire of Nutwood, 2:18½, etc), dam Miss Gratz, by Commodore, son of Mambrino; second dam by Whip, Tomahawk 680, is by Roscoe 273, out of Woodbine, dam of Woodford Mambrino 345, etc. Roscoe is by Pilot Jr. 12, out of Black Rose by Tom Freeman. Ibex was not extensively advertised, and very few knew that such a well-bred stallion was in California.

HOOF-BEATS.

OSBORN & ALEXANDER have secured the agency of the celebrated Elliot Hickory wheels. See advertisement.

It is said that Fred Gebard will soon come to California to look after the interests of his magnificent stock farm in Lake County.

The guessing contest is over. Sidney sold for $27,000, and the man who guessed he would bring $200,000 are silent as the tomb.

The Coombs Bros. will sell (at the Napa sale) a remarkably handsome thoroughbred mare, Miss Flash, by Kyrle Daly, in foal to Major Bau.

The first foal at Savannah Park was dropped February 23d, being a fine bay filly by Stoney, dam Shirley, by Kentucky Prince. Shirley will be bred to Daghistan, 2:25½, this year.

Those who wish to attend the Napa sale next Wednesday will be enabled to return to this city on the same day, for the sale will be concluded before the time for the train to return.

H. W. CRABD sends a team of perfectly-matched, stylish, even-matched, black geldings, 16:1 hands high to the Napa sale next Wednesday. This team has won first premium wherever shown.

W. W. MARCH, of Philadelphia, Pa., has sold the two-year-old colt Little Jug, by Eros, 2:23½, dam Lizzie (dam of Little Brown Jug, 2:11½, and Brown Hal, 2:12½), by John Netherland, to T. Gern, Wamego, Ark.

E. J. BALDWIN, according to advices from Los Angeles, has been very unfortunate in losing the foal by Emperor Norfolk—Los Angeles. Great things were expected of the foal, from two of the greatest racers the country has seen.

A FEW days ago E. F. Fallon, of Fairlawn Stock Farm, Hollister, Cal., found dead in his pasture the splendid-looking chestnut mare Skjaway, by Wildide, dam Vixen, by Belmont (Williamson's). Her owner thinks she was shot to death by some careless hunter, as she had been in perfect health. Skjaway was dam of Hathaway and Dashaway, two very promising colts, and was valued at $1,000.

THERE is to be a breeders' association formed by the lovers of light harness horses at Los Angeles on Tuesday, the 7th of March. A call for a meeting at Agricultural Park race track was signed by the following representative breeders of Los Angeles county: Dr. K. D. Wise, Charles A. Durfee, Willard H. Stimson, H. M. Johnson, Ed Ryan and Walter Maben. Trotting horse men are certainly a progressive class, and we expect to see the new association prove a most powerful organization, with such men at the helm.

THAT fast and great son of Anteeo 7868, Danteo, will be sold at the Killip combination sale March 15, as will be seen by reference to the advertisement. It is a rare opportunity to secure a well-bred son of Anteeo, and as this one's dam is by that great broodmare sire Gen. Dana 1774, sire of the dam of Frank M., 2:17½, and Astor, 2:16, by the greatest producing and "breeding on" son of Electioneer and out of a dam having two producing and "breeding on" strains of Whipple's Hambletonian, this is the greatest opportunity of the season.

AMONG the very promising two-year-olds at Oakland track are a black two-year-old by Alta—Thetis, a chestnut colt with white face by Ed Corrigan and Don Mengano, a brown colt by Alta—Marilee, in the Maltese Villa Stable. The Alta—Thetis colt is a model of symmetry, and should prove a high-class racehorse. The Ed Corrigan colt is rangy and racy-looking, while Don Mengano is a substantial-looking fellow that should more than earn his oats at the East this season, where he is well entered in the stakes. Sir Reel has filled out splendidly, and good work is expected of him.

THE Spirit of the Times concludes a long and exhaustive review of the relations of the National Trotting Association and the American Trotting Register Association to each other and trotting affairs, with this loyal and sensible expression. It is in vivid contrast to the course of certain journals that seize upon every incident remotely suggestive of inharmony in trotting affairs, as a pretext for the display of rancorous discontent and sore-headedness: "The gentlemen who compose the Board of the Register Association are of the highest standing in the breeding world and in the community at large. Their judgment is in strict accord with the plain language of the above rules. Every unprejudiced person acquainted with the facts believes in their integrity and that in their recent decisions in throwing out the Stockton and other records they were simply discharging their duty to the great constituency which they represent. Registrar Steiner deserves thanks, not abuse, for the vigilance which he has exercised in his office. But the lesson of to-day is the same as that of three years ago—the pressing necessity of the three associations agreeing upon rules for record-making purposes which all will recognize and obey. The present time should be a favorable one for action. Many of the leading members of the National and American Association are in favor of it, and they should be able to negotiate the matter to a successful issue."

J. R. ROSS, the veteran Washington turfman, who is known all over this country as the owner of the speedy Kitty Van and other flyers, and whose opinion is entitled to considerable weight, in view of the fact that he is a close observer and a practical man that has traveled all over America, said the other evening: "I consider that the Snake river country of Oregon and Washington has no superior as a section in which to raise iron-limbed, well-developed, immense-lunged horses. It is very hard to break down horses from that part of the world, and they all have magnificent quarters, the best of feet and legs and grand constitutions. It is also the most wonderful agricultural country in the world, too. They raise the finest and largest watermelons I ever saw, the largest cabbages, and as for pears and prunes, a person never saw anything like the yield they have there, and the flavor is grand. Their wheat also brings the very best price in the market. I think the excellence of the horses raised there is due to the immense amount of mineral to be found in the land, its rolling nature and the pure air the animals breathe. Where I live it is about 2,000 feet above the level of the ocean, and the winters are never severe. The snow seldom falls to a depth of even two inches. I believe the Snake river country will eventually be a great horse-raising center—when the many advantages of the section are understood by thinking breeders."

IMP. IDALIUM, the beautiful black brother to Sir Modred and Cheviot, has been bred to four royally-bred mares belonging to Charles A. Brown, viz., Annie Lewis (sister to Flood Tide and Oceanica), by Flood, dam Lady Evangeline, by Leinster; Polly (sister to Sinfax), by Wildide, dam Fostress; Frisa (half-sister to Princess), by Flood, dam imp. Music, by imp. Prince Charlie, and a mare by Joe Hooker, dam Robin Lass, by Flood.

WHEN Wm. Murray speeded Diablo, 2:14½, about a quarter of mile in honor of Mource Salisbury's return from the East last Monday, the latter went in ecstasies over him, and asked Mr. Murray to let him go East to show the people there what kind of a four-year-old pacer he is, but his owner declined, as the horse's book is being rapidly filled. Among those sent to him are Ellwood, 2:17½; Lady Markham, 2:17½; Cora S., 2:27; Morning Glory, 2:27; Electress, 2:27; Fanny F., 2:26, and the dam of Delmas, 2:27.

IN AUSTRALIA as well as in the East the Rules of Racing are undergoing revision, but it is said that the changes will be comparatively slight. The language will be simplified as much as possible, and the rules arranged under divisions in a systematic manner. One of the proposed rules will obviate the necessity of disqualifying horses on technical grounds. It will provide that no objection on the ground of misdescription, or of error or omission in an entry shall be entertained after a race unless a charge of fraudulent entry be preferred in connection therewith. According to our Rules of Racing adopted by the Board of Control, an objection on this ground may be received within forty-eight hours of the last race of the last day of the meeting, save in the case of any fraud or wilful misstatements, when there shall be no limit to the time of objecting, provided the Executive Committee are satisfied that there has been no unnecessary delay on the part of the objector. The Australian rule opens up a large field for carelessness in entering horses, and the task of discrimination between an error of entry and a wilful misstatement will be found by our antipodean brethren most difficult. Therefore we suggest to them our rule, which in the end will be found more serviceable and less liable to abuse.

ROBERT E. BYBEE, of Salem, Oregon, one of the best-known turfmen on the Pacific Slope, died on Hyde street, this city, last Saturday night of Bright's disease of the kidneys, from which he had been a sufferer for several months past. Mr. Bybee was about forty-five years of age, and one of the best-posted men in America on the affairs of the turf. His knowledge of blood lines was truly remarkable. At the time of his death Robert Bybee owned a very fine string of about a dozen race horses, among the number being the very fast mare, Misty Morn, and the crack three-year-old filly, Rosebud, both by St. Paul, whom Mr. Bybee owned until he died, which was about a year ago. Deceased left an estimable wife and one child, who reside at Salem, and they are, we understand, comfortably provided for. His aged and respected father, James Bybee, and several friends were at the bedside of the Oregon turfman when death came to relieve his distress, and the body was taken to Salem for interment last Sunday by the father, James Bybee. About a month ago Robert Bybee was around Oakland track on crutches, but was very weak, and was soon forced to take to his bed again, from which he never arose. Mr. Bybee was an excellent trainer, a fine judge of a horse, and had been interested in racing and race horses all his life.

RACING IN OLD VIRGINIA.

Heat Races for $30,000—Lady Blessington's Good Performance at Two-Mile Heats.

THE last race meeting of 1864 of note on the Atlantic Coast took place in November at the famous old Broad Rock course. This well known race track of the Old Dominion was for years the scene of some interesting races, and the meeting under discussion proved fully up to past records. The location of the track drew to it quite a large Northern element as well as Southern, although at the time of which I write, when the war was not yet over, the attendance at Broad Rock was not so large as before the beginning of sectional strife.

Early in the fall of 1864 a big post stake at two mile heats was extensively advertised to be run at Broad Rock. While the bulk of the Southern cracks were sequestered, confiscated, or impressed into the service, still there was enough available material for the race in question to arouse widespread interest. In even these days, more or less dark with the uncertain aspect of the future, the old Virginia families took to racing as a duck does to the water, and the Broad Rock meetings were always well patronized, no matter what necessities might call the vicinity residents elsewhere.

For the big race in question there was a good entry, and a representative gathering was at the course to see the decision of the great event. The purse and stake was worth $30,000 to the winner, and so well had the mare, Lady Blessington, shown, that only two opposed her. These were D. Ward's Oriana, by Denalican—Nine, and C. Green's bay gelding, by Arlington—Lucy Hazall. The race was for three-year-olds, two mile heats. Colonel David McDaniel had Lady Blessington then, and the mare was at her best. By imp. Eclipse—Philo, by Mariner. She had been specially prepared for this stake, and while most of her family had failed to show staying qualities of note, she had seemed to be an exception to the rule of soft-heartedness in the blood. A fair-sized mare, Lady Blessington was every inch a racer.

In her race at Broad Rock Lady Blessington was the choice in the betting at emphatic odds, and she won the first heat very easily in slow time. It was now any odds on Colonel McDaniel's mare, and she landed the money with great ease in straight heats. Lady Blessington was one of the few of the Eclipse family to go a distance, and at the stud she threw two good performers to Kentucky in Count D'Orsay and Countess. Kentucky was a pronounced failure at the stud, but Lady Blessington bore him two of the best he ever sired in the two named. Ruthless, Patti, Little Mack and Catesby also went a distance, the last winning for Governor Bowie the Maturity Stakes, three miles, at Jerome. But as a rule the get of Eclipse preferred shorter races.

Of the beaten horses in this $30,000 stake at Broad Rock, Orleans, for Major Doswell, afterward threw some fair foals, Outcast, by Leamington, being her last. Then I. Y. Keene, of Kentucky, secured her. Another big race at this meeting was a match for $10,000 between McDaniel's Oakland and C. Green's Conductor, three mile heats. Oakland, afterward the sire of Princeton and others, was a six-year-old, by Revenue, while Conductor, by Enquirer, was five years old. Again did Colonel McDaniel secure the race with Oakland, he winning in two straight heats, Conductor being outrun at every stage of the race. Oakland's son Princeton, sire of Princess and others, afterward went to Mexico to the farm of Richard Henry, Esq. Here he has since performed stud duty in creditable shape.

Such amounts as those named, the $30,000 purse and stake won by Lady Blessington, and the $10,000 match by Oakland, looked on paper to make Colonel McDaniel a lucky man, but I understand the cash was Confederate money, which meant way below the stated figures in real value. But still the sum of $4,000, even in the currency of the section, was a very respectable nestegg for Colonel David McDaniel to win.

In this vicinity the close of 1864 in the turf world was marked by the return of the well-known colored trainer Bill Bird, from San Francisco, where he had gone with the colt Lodi. Bill Bird, famous for his connection afterwards with General Bowie's and Captain Cottrell's horses, brought back glowing accounts of turf matters on the Pacific Coast. He said that Norfolk had got there safely before he (Bird) had left, and that some great races between Lodi and Norfolk were certain.

Lodi had beaten all the horses on the Slope, and the arrival of Norfolk had aroused popular interest to a great extent over the prospective meeting of the two horses. George Rice had Norfolk in charge, having taken the colt after his winning race for the Jersey Derby at Paterson, and the voyage from here to Aspinwall, transit across the Isthmus of Panama and voyage up the Pacific had been in complete safety for the horse. Norfolk reached the Golden State well and sound, and was at once put in training for his race with Lodi.

On shipboard Lodi had behaved like an old salt. His trainer, after leaving Panama, had Norfolk placed on the upper deck of the ship in a large open stall, and as the weather was favorable the voyage up to San Francisco was a pleasure trip, devoid of danger or important features. His leg, which was rather on the weak side at Paterson, seemed to be all right when he reached Frisco, and matches at two, three and four-mile heats with Lodi were at once discussed. When Bill Bird left the matches had not yet been settled, but, if made, Bird was to go back to the coast to prepare Lodi and take the well-known jockey Gilpatrick along with him.

How the two Eastern horses on Pacific soil fought out their famous races is worthy a chapter alone. Late in the winter of 1864-5 the guerrilla warfare in Kentucky again affected the stock farms adversely; at Woodburn, R. A. Alexander had fifteen valuable horses carried off by the bushwhackers. A chase to the next county brought on a fierce skirmish between pursuers and pursued, and before the horses were recovered several of the marauders bit the dust.

The well-known turfman, John P. Viley, was also carried off by the bushwhackers, but rescued by his friend a few days later. Then the Woodburn stock was transferred to Illinois, the town of Williamville, Sangamon county, being selected by R. A. Alexander for a temporary abode until matters should clear over a bit.

But he left behind him, in the hands of the guerrillas, three promising horses: Norwich, the full brother to Norfolk; a colt by Star Davis—Lindora and another. Norwich afterwards found his way to Oregon. These guerrilla raids proved very destructive to Kentucky stock. The Kentucky farm of John Harper was also raided, and in the defense of the stock Adam Harper, brother of John, was fatally shot.

The guerrillas were looking for horses more than anything else, and a leader of one of the marauding parties was a woman who dressed in the habiliments of the male sex and was described as a devil incarnate. I met a man afterwards who saw this woman hanged, and he described her nerve as something extraordinary. The closing days of the war were dark and troublous days for the breeders of Kentucky, the "dark and bloody ground." THE GLEANER.

Good judges predict that Anteeo's son Dantus will prove the sensational performer of his great sire this year.

Loyalist, the Great.

In another portion of this paper will be found advertised the magnificently-bred race horse, imported Loyalist, who will make the season of 1893 at Bay District track. A faster horse, a better-constituted or a more grandly-bred horse never came to our shores, and his service fee is put at the ridiculously low figure of $65, simply because his owner wishes to prove his great worth as a sire in America, and believes that in no other way can this be accomplished except by having a low service fee until his youngsters make their appearance on the turf. As an individual, he is something to enthuse over, a bay horse, standing a trifle over 15.3 hands on steely, flat limbs. His head and neck are models of symmetry, and his shoulders and back are staunchly built. He has great depth through the heart, a well-rounded, substantial barrel, immense muscular quarters, and is as sound as a dollar. Loyalist will be trained this season, and great things are expected of him, as he was one of Australia's greatest race horses, holder of the mile and a quarter record (2:03½ on a turf course) until Carbine went it in 2:08. Any horse that is within a quarter of a second of the renowned Carbine in a mile and a quarter run must be a real "clinker." Loyalist's breeding is simply grand, he being by that great sire, The Marquis (winner of St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas in England), he a son of the unapproachable Stockwell (winner of the St. Leger, while his (Loyalist's) dam was Loyal Peeress (dam of Loyalstone), by the Peer (sire of Darebin and brother to Marchioness, winner of The Oaks); second dam Letty West (dam of Glorious), by West Australian; third dam Bay Letty (dam of Libelons), by Bay Middleton; fourth dam the famous Miss Letty (dam of Weatherbit and winner of The Oaks), by Priam, and so on through the best racing and producing families in England to the fifteenth dam, by Brimmer. His tenth dam was Proserpine, a sister to the unbeaten Eclipse. His pedigree is truly perfection, and besides this Loyalist, a grand individual, from producing families all the way through, must make a great sire. Read the advertisement.

WITH Anteeo standing at $1,000, his sons Redwood, James Madison and Anteeo Jr. breeding on as they are, the Anteeos will be the most sought after.

Some Horse Bits.

"A short horse is the soonest hurried." And it is also the soonest worried. "You judge a man by the coat he wears." And also by the horse that bears. "Into the mouth look no gift horse." But glance at his form and limbs, of course. "John Gilpin's horse" was once fast enough; "John Gallopius's" now has better stuff. "The better the day the better the deed." The better the horse the better the speed. They hammered the steed that wore a mail; Don't drive him now as if driving a nail. "Time is long and art is fleeing." Just like a modern racer's speeding. It is a singular apothegm That a flyer "has no flies on him." A horse, 'tis a lunny piece of wit. Will make his record by breaking it. The horse is praised with "making time." But making too much is quite a crime. The "outcome" of a race, to wit, Altogether depends on the "come in." The knight fell good when bootied and spurred. But the horse did not in it being. In your study of horses you'll witness this: The fier, the more of a courser he is.

Those Rejected Horses.

The following list includes all records of 2:30 or better rejected by the Register Association, as shown by the Year Book, the first part of which has just been issued. The first column shows the best record of the performer according to the Year Book, while the second is the record claimed for him and rejected:

Table listing horse names and records, such as Aaron S., by California Lambert (2:33 1/2, 2:29), Abe Smith, by Artemas (2:31 1/2, 2:29 1/2), Alautau (p), by Guy Wilkes (2:14, 2:11 1/2), etc.

Table listing horse names and records, such as Lissa, by Patchen Wilkes (2:18 1/2, 2:17), Little Goldie, by Little Frank (2:39 1/2, 2:30), Lorauer, by Electioneer (2:25 1/2, 2:19 1/2), etc.

-Ex.

Table listing horse names and records, such as Queen Clay, by King Clay (2:29 1/2, 2:28), Quip, by Boston Wilkes (2:30 1/2, 2:29 1/2), Redondo, by Stamboul (2:26 1/2, 2:23), etc.

What it is Coming to.

Neither of the sires or dams of Kremlin, 2:07; Sunol, 2:08; Maud S., 2:08 1/2; Palo Alto, 2:08 1/2; Jay-Eye-See, 2:10 and 2:06; Alix, 2:10; Lord Clinton, 2:10; Arion, 2:10; Nightingale, 2:10; Guy, 2:10 1/2; Lobasco, 2:10 1/2; Ryland T., 2:11; Mattie H., 2:11; Erminie, 2:11; Jack, 2:11; Fred S. Wilkes, 2:11 1/2; Walter E., 2:11 1/2; Axtell, 2:12; Truman, 2:12; had records, and those of Nancy Hanks, 2:04; Allerton, 2:09; and St. Julien, none as good as 2:30.

This does not by any means operate as an argument against the proper and reasonable development of speed in both sire and dam, as there can be no question but that the trotting instinct is developed, intensified and more thoroughly fixed by use; but it does indicate with some degree of certainty that the leading families of American trotting horses are approaching the point where they can truthfully be denominated a "breed" in every practical sense of the word. Of course if it be true that alone by in and in-breeding can a technical "breed," like the setter, the St. Bernard or the greyhound, be established, it must be conceded that the life-time of this planet itself is scarcely long enough to bring the heterogeneous bloods and individualities of the present families into the required state of uniformity of size, color, gait, mental tendencies, etc., to constitute a technical breed. But for all practical purposes in which speed is the chief characteristic, the American trotter is fast becoming a thoroughbred family, or a "breed."—Horse Review.

THE Ocean View Stable, in which is Wildwood, Joe Cotton and other good ones, starts for Brookline about April 1st. Wildwood is looking and feeling first rate, and is not as delicate as horses as has been represented, by any means, according to his excellent trainer, C. Davis.

A DISPATCH from Newburgh, N. Y., dated February 25 says: "The stallion Monbars, 2:11 1/2, was brought back yesterday by his former owners, Richfield & Leathers, from Major T. S. Dickinson at an advance of $2,500 over the price paid for him by Dickinson a few days ago."

Names Claimed.

LUPEX, for bay filly, three years old, with hind feet white, by Apex, 2:25, dam by a son of Tom Crowder.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

Diller, Wash. Co., Oregon—Please publish the pedigree of Manita Belmont, sire of Belmont Patchen, record 2:15. Answer—By Tilton Belmont 1:53, dam untraced.

N. S., Independence, Or.—I a bet B that no steamer ever drew twenty-six feet of water. Which wins? Is Eldo, the running horse, a stallion? Answer—The best authority we can find says twenty-five is the greatest draught of water made by any vessel.

J. M., Ogden—Kindly give me the address of Vet Tryon who drove Hylas Boy and Maud Patchen two years ago. An early reply will greatly oblige. Answer—A letter addressed Vet Tryon, Agricultural Park, Sacramento, Cal., should reach him.

J. R., Modesto.—Please give breeding of Australian horse Kelpie, that raced in this State in the early eighties. Answer—By Claude Dural, dam Imagined, by the English Kelpie; second dam Imma, by Scratch; third dam Immie, by Dover, etc. Claude Dural was by Rochester, dam Wait-a-While, by Sir Isaac; second dam Rebecca, by Isomax; third dam Chanty, by Tramp. Rochester was by Chatham (son of The Colonel), dam Merry Monarch's dam, by Stone, second dam by Little John, etc. Sir Isaac was by Camel, dam by Liverpool.

W. B., Stockton—1. Please inform me through the columns of your paper who bred and raised Esael, sbe by Commodore Belmont? Is she registered, if so, what's her number? 2. Who bred and raised her dam, Irene, by Dictator 113? 3. Who bred and raised Fanny Helm, by Abdallah 12? 4. What is Lord Byron's number? Answer—1. Sbe is registered standard in Volume 6, Esael was bred and owned by W. H. Raymond, Belmont Park, Virginia City, Montana. Mares have no number in the register—only stallions. 2. Irene was bred by Logan Helm, of Versailles, Ky., and owned by W. H. Raymond. 3. Fanny Helm, by Abdallah 12. We find no trace of Fanny Helm but presume Logan Helm, of Versailles, Ky., bred her, from her name. 4. Lord Byron's number is 11,801. This is the Gen. Benton horse with a record of 2:18.

G. W., Leland, of 1324 De la Vina St., Santa Barbara, Cal., writes: "In your paper of the 21st of January, 1893, you have given a pedigree of my horse, Accident. I send you his pedigree so that you may also send some of his performances. He is not all of his races but one, on the Santa Barbara track. He was never beaten there but once, and then his rider was ruled off for foul riding, and the purse and bets declared off. He won two races of a mile and a quarter, one a match and the other a novelty. The match race was run in the sixteenth, the novelty a little later. Both races were run in the side of an hour. Accident ran in Los Angeles when Grover Cleveland ran there. Accident was the first horse at three-quarters of a mile, and then received some injury, and has not been able to run since. This race was one and one-fourth miles. Accident has won a good many races. Accident is by the Marquis of Colton, dam Mollie Dunneagu, by Norfolk; second dam Mary Giveus, by Owen Dale; third dam Liz Giveus (dam of Laugford, Pete and Bonnie Bell), by Imp. Laugford; fourth dam Charlotte Face, by Sir Archy, etc.

Inquirer, Fairplay, Cal.—1. Please state the sire and first and second dams of Ulster Chief. Can you inform me further in regard to the breeding, on the dam's side, of a horse named Rowdy Dutcbman, said to be sired by Ulster Chief, out of a mare by Chiefina? 2. An Agricultural Association leases a race track for one season, has the track recorded, joins the P. C. Blood Horse Association, have a series of races over the track under the rules of the Blood Horse Association. The lease expires, a private individual, in no manner connected with the Agricultural Society, leases the track and advertises races to be run under said rules. In one race the judges changed riders after second heat; the substituted rider wins, but the owner of the horse refused to pay him for the mount. The judges ruled the horse off the track until the rider was paid. Did they have the authority to do so? If so, does the sentence extend beyond the time that particular track is under the control of the party who was lessee at the time? Answer—1. By Hambletonian 10, dam Lady Ulster (dam of High Private), by Duukin Mambrino, second dam untraced. 2. Write to Post, Sessions, Oakland, Cal. We know nothing of this horse. 3. As there are no confederation of tracks on this coast, we should say that the penalty would only apply while the party mentioned ran the track. The Blood Horse Association only legislates for its own meetings, but that organization would not allow a horse run off under such circumstances to come back until the amount was paid.

EVERYTHING indicates that the Metropolitan Handicap will be one of the sensational races of the year. Trainers at all the tracks intend to give some of their horses a special preparation for the race. The declarations up to date do not detract in the slightest degree from the attractiveness of the race. All the tracks are to be prepared for training purposes as soon as the weather permits. The jockeys are beginning to prepare for the season's work. Willie Simms joins the Ranocosa Stable on March 1st. A. Clayton will ride for C. Fleischmann. E. H. Garrison is in Florida. Fred Taral will begin active work March 1st with the Walcott & Campbell stable. M. Overton will begin on the same day with Daly & Gideon's horses. S. Doggett will soon be home to take his place with G. Knapp's horses.

The closing out at Roby, whether temporary or permanent, has driven many owners to seek fresh campaigning grounds. There has been a large exodus to East St. Louis. The stables at that track are, however, so well filled that newcomers have to seek accommodation outside the gates. A third member of the Sloane fraternity, Fremont by name, has transferred his affections to East St. Louis. He is said to have been doing some creditable work in the saddle at Roby.

WANTED.

Position as trainer or foreman for a first-class stable of race horses by a thoroughly reliable and competent man. Address Care Breeder and Sportsman.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address, that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by two dollars and addressed to Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., 1117 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco.

J. L. C.—Please give in your veterinary department a receipt for wind pulls. Answer—If they are not of long standing the application of hot wet bandages, with a tight tunnel bandage over it may remove them. Should this treatment not prove successful in a week or so, apply the following blister. Benicoid of mercury half an ounce, vaseline two ounces. Mix and rub well into the part after removing the hair from over the windgills.

J. C., Redwood City—I have a Jersey cow that seems to be troubled with an itch, as all the hair is falling off in patches, the soots then become scabby and itchy as she scratches them against the fence. She has got very poor lately. Please advise me through your columns, what I should do for her. Answer—Please examine the cow and say if this affection is in the form of "warbles" or round elevations about the size of a two-bit piece, along the back, or if there are any woodticks present, or if there is merely a scurd, with patches of hair off. Also say whether it has continued for any length of time, and if it be equally distributed all over the body, or more in certain locations.

M. P., San Rafael—I have a two-year-old colt that has had a swelling under the jaws. After a few days it burst and run a great deal of matter. He also had a cough and discharge from his nose. I steamed his head with bran and hot water, and gave him hot bran masbes with saltpetre in them. With this treatment he got all right again as well as ever, but looking rather thin. I wanted to send him out to pasture, but the man I was going to send him to refuses to take him, as he says a veterinary surgeon told him that he has the glanders. Now I want to know if this is the glanders. If it is, I have cured four other colts that had the same disease and I thought glanders could not be cured. Please let me have your opinion in next issue of your valuable paper. Answer—The symptoms you have given are those of "strangles," not "glanders." See if there are small ulcers in the nostrils, or if there is a small, hard enlargement under the jaw close to the bone, with a slight discharge from nostril of same side. If those symptoms are all absent, it is pretty certain that there is no glanders present.

The Racing and Producing Families.

In our last issue we demonstrated the excellence of the descendants of the D'Arcy Royal mare in England, from which it is clearly apparent that the family was an acknowledged famous racing and producing one long before the American branch was known or became prominent in the annals of the turf.

Duchess (Bland's), called also Diamond, was foaled about the year 1755 or '56, and imported to America by Gen. Alexander Spotswood. She was by the Cullen Arabian (as also was Jack of Diamonds, imported at the same time), her dam Lady Thigh (Griswood's), by Croft's Partner, son of Jigg, by Byerly Turk: grandam by Greyhound, a natural Barb; great-grandam Sophousha's dam, by the Curwen Bay Barb; great-great-grandam by D'Arcy's Chestnut Arabian, tracing through daughters of Whiteshirt, Lord D'Arcy's old Montague mare, Hawthay and Brimamer to the D'Arcy Royal mare. Duchess was the dam of Apollo, and his sister by imp. Traveler, son of Partner, a filly by Junius, filly by imp. Jack of Diamonds, True Whig, by Fitzhugh's Regulus, son of imp. Fearnaught, and a filly by imp. Regulus, son of Regulus, by the Godolphin Arabian. This blood is transmitted to us through her two daughters, by Jack of Diamonds and imp. Regulus.

The Jack of Diamonds mare, bred to Ariel (son of imp. Traveler, by Partner, and imp. Selima, by the Godolphin Arabian), produced a filly which was bred to imp. Fearnaught, and produced a filly which was bred to imp. Highflyer, by Herod. This Highflyer filly, bred to Melzar, son of imp. Medley, produced Maria, and she produced in 1817 the bay mare Lady Grey, by Robin Grey, son of imp. Royalist, by Saltram, by Eclipse. Lady Grey, in 1821, produced Lucy, by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel, by imp. Diomed; in 1823 bay mare Maria, by Davis' Hamiltonian, son of Tayloe's Hamiltonian, by imp. Diomed; and in 1826 chestnut mare Rowena, by Sumpter, son of Sir Archy. Lucy was the dam of Blacknose, by Medoc, a superior racehorse who ran three miles at Lexington, Ky., in 1840 in 5:40, the fastest three miles ever run to that date, and Lucilla, by Trumpator, son of Sir Solomon. Lucilla was the dam of two bay fillies by imp. Tranby, son of Blacklock. The Tranby mare, foaled in 1838, was the dam of Alaric, a fine racehorse, winner of second heat of two miles in 3:39 in 1845, by Mirabeau, Levity, by imp. Trustee, Atala, a superior horse by Boston, Vandal and Volga, by imp. Glencoe and Vistula, by imp. Scythian. Vandal was one of the best racehorses of his day (winner of three-mile heats in 5:36½, 5:33) and a grand and successful stallion.

Levity was the dam of Ruric, a superior horse, and Sister to Ruric, by imp. Sovereign; Lightsome and Mildred by imp. Glencoe; Breuna, by imp. Knight of St. George, son of Birdcatcher, Lever and Legatee, a good racer, by Lexington. Lightsome was the dam of Sprightly, Crucifix, Salina and Nevada, by Lexington; Linda, by imp. Scythian, son of Orlando; and Gulnare, by imp. Glen Athol. Sprightly was bred a trotter for years, and then to imp. Billet, by whom she produced Volturino, a grand racehorse, that first brought imp. Billet into notice, and Elias Lawrence, a good one and winner at three miles at three years old, in 5:28½; Lady Way, by imp. Eclipse, Avalon and Aretino (the last a grand racehorse), by Aramis, son of imp. Phaeton. Lady Way is the dam of Foxglove, by Lever, and Lady Wayward (Carlsbad's dam), by Virgil. Crucifix was the dam of Fairplay, a good racer, by Virgil. Semper Felix, by imp. Phaeton, Cruciform and Blanche J., by imp. Australian, Quito (Cripple), The Judge (Cordova), Cortez, St. Augustine, a good horse, and La Cruz, by King Alfonso, Maria D., by Lisbon, Cross Fire and St. Albans, by Falsetto. Semper Felix, is the dam of Semper Vive, by Waverly, son of imp. Australian, Semitone (Kate J.), by imp. Buckden, Leonatus, a grand racehorse, winner of ten stakes at three years old, including the Derby, Tobacco, Woodhaven, Hindoo, Himyar, Illinois Derby, &c., and a successful stallion, by Longfellow, Latonia (Button's dam), by imp. Billet, Felicia and Semper Parais, by Stratford, &c. Semper Vive is the dam of Semper Idem and Semper Aurum, by imp. Glen Athol, Fordham, Folsom and Westchester, all good racehorses, by Falsetto. Semper Idem is the dam of Longstreet (one of the best racehorses in America and winner of sixteen out of eighteen races in 1891, including a match one and a quarter miles in 2:07½, defeating Tenny); the Welter Cup, one mile in 1:42½, with 144 lbs. Longford, a good racehorse, by Longfellow. Semitone is dam of Ella Pinkerton, by Longfellow, and Semaphore, a winner, by Onondaga. Blanche J. was a good mare, and a dam of Blandona (the dam of Verona, Donna and Katona), by Longfellow, Sea Shell (Long Shore's dam) and Australian Ban, by imp. King Ban, Blautyre, by Lelaps, &c. Maria D. is the dam of Lucy B. and Victorine, by Onondaga, Mark S. (Moxie) and Ed Bell, by Duke of Montrose. Salina was the dam of Duchess, Saltpetre and Sultillo, by imp. Glencoe, Virlein, by Virgil, Prince Charlie (Priam) and Salvator, by imp. Prince Charlie Salvator ran a mile in 1:53½, heat Tenny a match one and a quarter miles in 2:05, and won the Chaupion Stakes, one and a half miles in 2:35½. Nevada was the dam of Nova Zembla, Sierra Nevada, Greenland and Greengage, by imp. Glengarry, the phenomenal three-year-old in his year, Luke Blackburn, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, Ecuador, a good horse, by Enquirer, Bradford and Bravo, both winners, by Bramble, and Neva, by Longfellow. Nova Zembla is dam of Nisa and her sister, by Shannon, and Superba, by Flood, Sierra Nevada was the dam of Mountain Range, Monte Rosa's dam, and Wamsutta, by Longfellow, Sutor, by Enquirer, &c. Gulnare is the dam of Costello and the good lily Satisfaction, by Sensation, &c.

Mildred was the dam of Zoe and Mittie, by imp. Scythian, Ringlet, by Ringgold, she the dam of Restless, by Voncher; Debby, Jim Lipe, Debbie (Flora) and Epsom, by Derby, son of imp. Eclipse; Wundering, J. J. Healy and Waterbury (Hambler), by Wanderer. Mildred produced Nora Worth, by imp. Eclipse, the dam of Nero, Rocket, Roxella, North West, Startle, Trumps, Darkness, Renown, Force and Finality, by West Roxbury, and Adventure II, by Amadis, the majority of which were successful racers. Minx was the dam of Minnock, the great gelding Monitor, whose race, 2-1-8 miles in 2:44½, has never been equaled; Lotta C., Mirth and Romeo, two lost in England. Mirth was the dam of Bouthillier, a winner in England in 1891. Minnock is the dam of Salvator, Lady B., Minnarette, Selma D., by Springbok, and Onondagas, by Onondaga, etc. Lotta C. is the dam of Roullette (Sefton's dam), Illisee and Lizzie M., by Baden Baden. Stamps was the dam of Katie Pearce, by imp. Leamington, she the dam of Lizzie S. (Extra's dam), by Wanderer, Ballard, by imp. Billet, Katrina, by Virgil, and Dal, by imp. Mortemer, Bertha, Loch Tanna (in England), Louise, Preciosa, by imp. Glencoe, and Valleria, by imp. Glencoe or Virgil, unquestionably by the latter. Bertha was the dam of Reina Victoria, by imp. Saxon, Delphine and Soney Lass, by imp. Mortemer, and Mohican, by Iroquois. Victress is the dam of Vanguard, a good racer; Victrix, by Longfellow, and a colt by Stratford. Vestvally is the dam of Wanda West, Veracity (Festina's dam), Vestella, Vesper Bells and Valedictory by Wanderer. Wanda West is the dam of Speedwest, by Spendthrift, and Imogene, by Powhattan. Vestella is the dam of Mahomedan, by Hindoo, &c. Grey Alice was the dam of Pickaway, by Wagner; and Nellie Gwynn, by imp. Bonnie Scotland. Nellie Gwynn was the dam of Louise Gwynn, and Faith, by imp. Hurrah. Louise Gwynn is the dam of Grace Lee, by imp. Kyrle Daly; and Hector, by Grenada. Release was the dam of Carrie P., by Northourne, son of Lecompte; Hetty C., by Uncle Jeff; and Night Rose, by imp. Knight of St. George. Carrie P. is the dam of Cape Sterling, Cape Henry, Cedar Grove and Carrie Race, by Cape Race, son of Lexington. Night Rose was the dam of Nightmare, by imp. Australian; Voltague, by imp. Glen Athol; Fred Fogle, by Planet; Haddisco, by Pat Malloy; Johnny E. (Pocassett), and filly, by Powhattan. Rescue was the dam of Abu Beeker, by Mahomet; Relief (Maid of the Cave), by Ringgold; Relief, by Star Davis; Remorse, by imp. Eclipse; Abd-el-Kader, Abd-el-Koree, good racehorses; and Rigmorle, by imp. Australian. Rigmorle was the dam of Regale, by Bulletin; Rigmor, by Harry of the West; Rigin and Bessie Franklin, by imp. Glengarry; Carmen (Blue Jeans), by Gorlitz, son of Lexington; Merry Dance, by War Dance, etc. Rigin is the dam of Rowland, Regina and Royal, by Shannon; Chancellor, by Monday; Gladys, by Flood, etc. Bessie Franklin is the dam of General Early and I O, by Erlanger, son of Enquirer. Carmen is the dam of Blue Streak and Blue Wind, by Bingham, son of Asteroid. Lavender was the dam of Rock, by Ruric; Nannie Letcher, Helmbold, a superior race horse; Bob Shelton, a winner; Lava, Barricade, a winner, and Baden Baden, a superior horse, by imp. Australian; Lax, by imp. Scythian; George Wallace, by Asteroid; Buchu, by Planet, and Glen Wood, by imp. Glen Athol. Nannie Letcher was the dam of Corinne, by Planet (she the dam of Rapidity, Sweetheart, America and Lady Rapture, by imp. Rapture); Mignonne (dam of Rapture's Daughter), and Emma G. (dam of Hermit, by Hurrah), by imp. Phaeton. Lax was the dam of Slow Breeze, by Restless, she the dam of Golden Slipper, by McCreery, and she the dam of Le Premier, by Lucifer; Verge d'Or, by Virginus, and Crystallite, by J. Quitta, Fragonelle and Neppie Moore, by Baywood, the latter the dam of Trosach, by Terror, son of Alarm; Virgie, by Virgil, she the dam of Ona, by Onondaga; Virgin and Virgin 2½, by Milner, son of imp. Leamington, and Release, by imp. Strachino.

In a summing up of the excellence of this branch of the Duchess family coming down through the daughter of Jack of Diamonds, we find Ten Broeck, out of a daughter of Lexington, ran four miles in 7:15½; Fellowcraft, out of a daughter of Lexington, four miles, 7:19½; Lexington, four miles, 7:19½ and 7:23½, a feat unequalled; Ferida, out of a daughter of Lexington, four miles, 7:23½; Wildide, out of Idlewild, by Lexington, four miles, 7:25½; Idlewild, four miles in 7:26½; Janet, by Lightning, son of Lexington, out of the same family, four miles, 7:25; Jim Malone, out of a granddaughter of Lexington, four miles, 7:29½; Kentucky, by Lexington, four miles, 7:31½ and 7:31½, over Old Jerome Park track with 120 pounds; Abd-el-Kader three-year-old, Old Jerome Park track, 7:33; Abd-el-Kader, four miles, 7:31½, both out of half-sister to Lexington; Monarchist, by Lexington, four miles, 7:33½; Old Jerome Park track; Glenmore, from the Maid of the Oaks branch, four-mile heats, 7:29½, 7:30½, 7:31, the best average three-heat race ever run; Drake Carter, by a grandson of Lexington, out of a granddaughter of the old hero, three miles in 5:24, best on record; Lida Stanhope, out of daughter of Lexington, 5:25; second best on record; Thora, out of daughter of Lexington, 5:25½, third best on record; Eole, out of granddaughter of Lexington, 5:26½. The best race ever run at three-mile heats was won by Lexington's son Norfolk, 5:27½, 5:29½. The fastest and best race of three heats was won by Mollie Jackson, by Vandal, 5:35½, 5:34½, 5:28½, the last the best three heat ever run. Brademante, by War Dance, grand-dam Levity, has the best two-mile heat race ever run, 3:32½, 3:29. Aristides, out of daughter of Lexington, two and one-half miles in 4:27½, best on record. Two and a quarter miles: Springbok, out of daughter of Lexington, and Preckness, by Lexington, dead heat, 3:56½, best on record. Hindoo, out of daughter of Lexington, 3:57½, second best on record. Two and one-eighth miles: Monitor, out of Minx, by Lexington, 3:44½, best on record. Aristides, 3:45½, second best on record. Two miles: Ten Broeck, 3:27½; Wildmoor, out of daughter of Vandal, 3:28, second best on record. One and three-quarters miles: Hotspur, dam by grandson of Lexington, 3:00½, best on record; Glidella, out of Waltz, by Lexington, 3:01, second best on record. One and five-eighths miles: Ben d'Or, dam Kate Walker, by son of Lexington, 2:49, best on record; Ten Broeck, 2:49½, second best. Hindoo craft, a double grandson of Lexington, ran the distance with 75 lbs. in 2:48. One and a half miles: Lamplighter, by grandson of Lexington, 2:32½, best on record; Firenze, dam by son of Vandal, grandam by Lexington, 2:33, second best on record; Luke Blackburn, dam Nevada, by Lexington, ran the distance at three years old in 2:34. One and three-eighths miles: Ormie, by grandson of Lexington 2:20½, best on record; Richmond, by son of Vandal, out of a daughter of Lexington, 2:21½, second best on record. One and one-quarter miles: Tristan, dam by Tom Bowling, son of Lexington, 1:51½, fastest ever run; Terra Cotta, double grandson of Lexington, 1:53, with 124 lbs. One and one-sixteenth miles: Yo Tambien, by Joe Hooker, son of Monday, by Colonel, son of Lexington, 1:45½, best on record; Aloha, by St. Mungo, his grandam by Lexington, 1:46, second best on record. One mile: Salvator, dam Salina, by Lexington, 1:35½, fastest ever run in the world. Kildeer, dam Lou Lanier, by Lever, son of Lexington, 1:37, second best. Seven furlongs: Bella B., by grandson of Lexington, dam by Colossus, descended from this family, 1:23½, best on record; Kingston, by grandson of Lexington, 1:26, second best. Three-fourths of a mile: Yemen, out of Hira, by Lexington, 1:09½, fastest on record; Fides, out of granddaughter of Lexington, 1:10½, second best.

Five furlongs: Dr. Hasbrouck, dam by Virgil, grandam by Lexington, 57 seconds, the fastest in the world. One-half a mile: Gersdine, by Grinstead, grandson of Lexington, dam by son of Lexington, 46 seconds, best ever run. So that in this country, where time is regarded as the true test of excellence, all the best records from one-half mile to four-mile heats were made by horses possessing the blood of this wonderful family.—Turf, Field and Farm.

The Care of Mare and Stallions.

No sooner is the foaling season fairly opened in the spring than reports of heavy losses of foals begin to fill the columns of the agricultural journals. The combined knowledge of the horsemen of the country is not yet sufficient to throw light on all of the causes of these losses, but the reasons for some of them are well known to those who have had experience, and deaths and loss can be prevented in a great many cases if proper precautions are taken.

It is frequently the case that the death of the foal is due to conditions peculiar to the farm or locality, such as certain poisonous weeds eaten by the dams, disease of some kind, ergotized fodders, or other conditions unknown. In cases of this kind when the owner of the mare is not aware of the danger until he is warned by the loss of a foal or two it is, of course, impossible to knowingly take measures to guard against it. But the foals whose deaths are brought about by such causes are very few compared to the large number that die every spring before reaching an age of two weeks, and it is probably safe to say that the great majority are lost because the sire and dam have not been properly handled, or by reason of bowel troubles, usually constipation, during the first three days after birth. Hence it seems to me that if we take every measure possible to insure against losing foals we should begin by looking carefully after the management of the stallion and mare before copulation. It is doubtless true that healthy colts are sometimes born and develop into good horses from sire and dam that were not in good health at the time of mating, but the man who breeds a diseased mare or to a diseased stallion is taking risks which he cannot afford to take if he hopes for profit from the raising of horses. The farmer who desires to take every precaution against loss should most certainly assure himself that not only his mare but the stallion is thrifty and full of vitality before they are mated.

It is a very easy matter for a farmer to determine whether his mare is in fit condition to be bred. He sees her and works with her every day. He meets with more difficulty, however, when he comes to examine the stallion. If by the term healthy we only mean free from active disease a short examination would satisfy one on that point. But if every preventive measure to guard against loss be taken something more than apparent health should be required in the stallion. He should be in a thoroughly healthy condition and full of vigorous, bounding vitality. Whether he is in this condition at the opening of the breeding season depends in a great measure upon the food and treatment he receives during the winter, and I think it the duty of the mare-owner to thoroughly inform himself as to the manner in which the horse to which he expects to breed his mares has been kept during the three months prior to the opening of the season.

The horse that is kept in a stall from the beginning of cold weather until the breeding season opens is in no fit condition to get healthy colts, and if there were fewer horses treated in this way there would be fewer complaints from the mare-owners during the foaling season. Every horse needs exercise a good part of every day throughout the winter that the weather permits, and the farmer who permits the horse to which he breeds to be kept from one week's end to the other in the stable without making vigorous objections should not complain of want of vitality in his colts. For myself, I most thoroughly agree with those correspondents who have insisted that the draft stallion should be worked if we hope to steadily improve the useful qualities of our draft horses. It is a self-evident truth. We must have in both sire and dam the useful qualities we hope to secure in the offspring if we meet with success, and draft stallions that do nothing from one year's end to the other, and whose ancestors for several generations have led lives of idleness, must certainly play a very insignificant part in improving the working quality of our draft stock. However, that is a bone of contention between the stallion owner, who thinks it too much trouble to work his horses, and the mare owner, who knows from experience that until the stallion is worked he cannot hope to improve the most essential qualities in his horses, and will have to be fought out by them. But exercise, even in a small yard, is absolutely essential to the health and vigor of the stallion, and should be strenuously insisted upon by every man who breeds to him. The owner of the horse may not at first take kindly to suggestions from his patrons concerning the winter management of his horse, but he should be fair about it and remember that the prosperity of the patron as well as his own depends in part upon the way in which his horse is managed during the winter. If he will not be fair the farmers who expect live and healthy colts will do well to give their patronage to some one who will.

The treatment of the mare during the winter previous to foaling must of course depend upon the conditions. Hard and fast rules cannot always be followed, if indeed it is desirable that they should. Some farmers keep only the one team, and they must be used to do the winter's work. There is no objection that I have ever been able to see against working mares in foal at all times from two days after they have been bred until a day or two before foaling, but it must be done with judgment. The mare in foal cannot stand excessively hard work and "banging around" without injury. More than the usual care should be taken to see that the harness fits comfortably and does not rub and irritate her; the collar should be as large as she can work in comfortably and without injury. She should not be asked to work in inclement weather. Common prudence dictates that she should be sharp shod when working on the roads during the winter. A careful man can work a team of mares from the time they are bred until the day before foaling without injuring them in the least. A brute who jerks and kicks and strikes should not be allowed to work any horse.

If the broodmares are not needed for work during the winter they ought to spend every day that is not stormy in the fields and pastures. If outside food is plentiful and so they can get at it easily, and shelter, either in the form of groves or wide open sheds, is provided, the broodmare will do very well in the fields throughout the winter. In fact, judging from my own experience I believe they are better with this kind of treatment than when kept in warm barns. Only those mares that take kindly to one another should be allowed to run together in the same field; a vicious mare or gelding may do irreparable mischief among a lot of mares heavy in foal. For many years it has been my practice to turn all broodmares into the pasture as soon as they were no longer needed for work, and they live entirely in the winter pastures and stalk fields until a month or six weeks before foaling or spring work commences. Groves, straw stacks and open sheds afford all the shelter that seems necessary, and as long as there is plenty of food the mares seem to do better than if given what some would call better care. They are not allowed to run down in flesh, and hay is hauled to them or they are brought up at night and fed grain whenever it is necessary to avoid this. A broodmare must be kept in thrifty, healthy condition if she foals a thrifty, healthy colt. A month or six weeks before the spring work commences those that are needed for work or are near foaling are taken up at night regularly and fed well on corn and oats and hay. Having lived for some months entirely on rough feed the stomach is distended and the muscles are not as firm as when fed grain, consequently the mare that has been treated in this way if put at once from the field into the harness would rapidly run down in flesh. While she had plenty of time she could gather enough rough feed to keep in good condition, but when put to work she cannot eat enough to keep in good flesh and build up the waste in muscular tissue. Whenever the broodmares are needed for work they are kept in the harness up to the day or two before foaling. They are not worked hard and no injury has ever resulted from the practice.

I have raised a good many colts and have not yet lost one, either at foaling time or before reaching maturity, nor has there ever been one hemished in any way whatever or unable to get on his legs and find his natural nourishment unaided. With the exception of one time when I accidentally discovered a mare in the field at the time of foaling, I have not seen a colt foaled in six years, and would not feel it necessary to sit up with one of my mares if it seemed quite certain that she would foal in three hours. None of them have ever had the slightest trouble in foaling or afterward since coming into my possession. In the case of one mare I went down to the barn one morning and found her with a lively, strong colt at her side, and as the mare was up eating hay and both mare and colt seemed all right, I went about my morning's work and paid no further attention to them. In a short time one of the neighbors came over and noticed the new colt. He asked when it came and on being told expressed considerable surprise, and said Mr. B., who had managed the farm and had the mare for six years previous to the year before, had always had to call in help to get that mare on her feet after she foaled. As Mr. B. had always stabled the mare in the winter and fed her grain I took it as an indication that the constant exercise and plain diet during the winter saved me any difficulty with her. She never had the slightest trouble in the four times that she foaled while I owned her. It is quite likely that I have been unusually fortunate, or "lucky," but it is no more than natural that I should believe that the treatment given the mares and the care exercised in breeding has contributed somewhat to my "luckiness."—L. H. Granger in Breeders' Gazette.

The Orange County Broodmare Catbird.

One of the foundational Orange County broodmares, from which considerable speed has come, particularly a few generations removed, was the brown mare Catbird, foaled about 1848. She was by Whistle Jacket, son of Mambrino, dam by Duroc. In 1855 and 1856 she produced by Abdallah Chief, Virgo and Satinet, two quite speedy and very good individuals, which were considered as among the very best of the early Stony Ford broodmares.

Satinet died when quite young, and is only known as the dam of Messenger Duroc, which, though of late years rather unpopular on account of the generally believed lack of stamina in his offspring, was a horse of very remarkable speed, so great, in fact, that before he became known as a sire, showed George B. Alley, who had then had such remarkable success with Dexter, sufficient speed, so that he offered $10,000 for him to geld and develop as a trotter.

While many will think it is a great pity Alley did not then get him, Messenger Duroc has been, after all, a very uniform sire of trotters and large, fine roadsters capable of beating 2:30. For several years early in his career he was decidedly the best and most successful sire of colt trotters anywhere in the North, so much so, in fact, that his produce were at one time barred from most of the prominent Northern colt stakes.

Though not generally credited, it is even probable that the uniform speed of Green Mountain Maid's numerous foals was fully as much and possibly far more inherited from their sire than their greatly eulogized dam. Lancelot, the youngest, has, like his sire, made a wonderful beginning in the stud, having at five years old to his credit a yearling with a race record of 2:28½, a two-year-old with a record of 2:27½, and a record himself of 2:23, equalled by no other at that age.

It is not at all improbable that Lancelot may prove as successful a sire as his near relative which now heads the list, and with the aid of his two full brothers, Antonio and Mansfield, both of which are excellent individuals with remarkable speed and ability to transmit it, do much towards improving the standing of that branch of the Hambletonian family.

It is wonderful what a change different opportunities will make. Messenger Duroc and Electioneer were for a number of seasons stable companions at Stony Ford, but while from the services there previous to 1877 Messenger Duroc got his 2:20 performers, numerous colt trotters and fourteen of his 2:30 performers, being then considered the most valuable stallion in America, Electioneer proved a flat failure, getting practically nothing but blanks. From a different class of mares in California Electioneer has reached the highest pinnacle, while Messenger Duroc meanwhile lost ground steadily, until he became one of the least popular.

It was Messenger Duroc which was wanted when Electioneer was purchased, but he could not be had for less than four times the price of Electioneer, and from all accounts at least double would then have been paid. It is quite likely had Messenger Duroc then gone to Palo Alto he would now be holding the first place, as his ability was not unlike that of Electioneer. Even at Stony Ford Messenger Duroc has demonstrated his ability to sire trotters from thoroughbreds. John W. (2:24½), his gamest and best campaigner, and Prue-tor (2:29½) sire of Charley Green (2:24½), are from thoroughbreds, which is undoubtedly a larger proportion than he got from mares which were not thoroughbred.

Virgo, the full sister to Satinet, was fully as good an individual, and now also has in all a large number of descendants in the 2:30 list. She is the dam of Virgo Hambletonian, sire of Charley Hogan (2:18½), etc. She also produced Madam Felter, dam of Josephine (2:24½) and Mayfly, dam of the great broodmare Miss McLeod, which in turn has produced Lord Nelson (three years, 2:26½), Polonus, one of the most popular sires at Chester, and Camptown, dam of the famous Egbert, which for several years has been close to the front in number of his 2:30 performers, and far surpassed all other sons of Hambletonian at the same age in the total number of his performers.

As Egbert's dam is by Messenger Duroc, he traces to Catbird, through both Satinet and Virgo. In 1871 Virgo produced Helen Russell, by Messenger Duroc, which also had both crosses, and was the fastest Northern three-year-old of that year or up to that date.—Vision, in Horse Breeder.

A Great Band of New Pacers.

That the pacers were strongly in evidence last season was not only demonstrated by the grand series of contests in the free-for-alls and the fast classes, but also by the number of new performers which entered the 2:30 list. This latter band was over 600 strong, and the records run all the way from the limit, 2:30, down to 2:05½. It will be interesting to notice how the most prominent of these new-comers are bred, and thus trace the source of the speed. The phenomenal leader of the band is undoubtedly the bay gelding Flying Jib, 2:05½. This record, made in a race, places him close up to the champion Mascot, 2:04, and so far as race records go close to the throne. He is by Algona, a son of Almont, out of a daughter of Middletown, a son of Hambletonian 10. Here is a trotting pedigree, yet Flying Jib is a natural pacer, and in one season has jumped from the dark brigade to the free-for-all class.

The next most remarkable arrival in the list is the already famous Jay-Eye-See, who, in 1884, obtained his champion trotting record of 2:10. He has been in retirement for several years, but in 1892 Mr. Jackson I. Case decided to try the experiment of changing his gait. He proved so apt a pupil, that after two lessons he paced fast, and on August 26th, he made a pacing record of 2:06½. He has the unique honor of being the only horse in the world with two records as fast as both gaits. Jay-Eye-See is, as all the world knows, by Dictator, out of Midnight, by Pilot Jr., and gets his pacing instinct in the maternal line. The star youngster of the year was the two-year-old bay colt Online, 2:11, by Shadeland Onward, dam Angeline, by Chester Chief. Here is a fine trotting pedigree. Angeline is, however, the dam of Ontonian, 2:25, pacing. Online should be very close to the record next season.

A sensational new arrival was the bay gelding Robert J., 2:09½, by Hartford, he by Harold, dam Geradine, by Jay Gould. He was invincible till he met Flying Jib and the free-for-all crowd. His pedigree is essentially a trotting one. San Pedro is a converted trotter, having a record at that gait of 2:21½, but in 1893 he paced down to 2:10½. He is by Del Sur. A pacer bred in good pacing lines is the three-year-old bay colt Alhambra, 2:15, by Legal Tender Jr., dam Little Miss, by Blue Bull. Here is a youngster that should sire fast pacers when he attains stud dignity. A grandly trotting-bred young stallion in the list is the bay horse Allen Lowe, 2:16½, by Alcantara, dam Susie (dam of Du Barry, 2:19½, trotting), by Happy Medium. Where in this pedigree did the pacer come in so strong that his gait should predominate over the blood of George Wilkes, Alma Mater and Happy Medium? Another converted trotter is the chestnut colt Blondie, trotting record 2:20, who paced to a record of 2:15. He is by Lemont, dam Molly, by Frank Chapman.

That Dexter Prince gets extreme speed at the pace as well the trot is proved by the fact that the chestnut colt Charley Ford, by him out of Nettie, by Corsair, is in the list with a mark of 2:12. Cleveland S. is another trotter turned pacer. He has a trotting record of 2:24, but comes in the list with a pacing record of 2:11½. He is a bay stallion by Montgomery, dam Topsy, by Tipppo Saib. It is well known that Guy Wilkes gets extreme speed at the pace as well as the trot, and in the list will be found the chestnut gelding Chris Smith, 2:14½, by him, out of Lucy, 2:14. In this case the gait evidently came from the dam. The three-year-old chestnut colt Diablo, 2:14½, is a Californian who should come fast this season. He is by Charles Derby, dam Bertha, by Alcantara. It is quite clear that on both sides of the line the blood of Alcantara takes kindly to the pacing gait. Patchen Wilkes is rapidly coming to the front as a sire of extreme and prolific speed. A fast representative of his in the new 2:30 pacing list is the three-year-old colt Divan, by him out of Betsie (dam of Blackie, 2:20, pacing), by Draco. The bay mare, Ella Brown, 2:11½, came honestly by her gait, for she is by Prince Pulaski, as also did the chestnut mare Fleetfoot, 2:14, by Clear Grit, dam by Whirlwind Jr. Joe Jett, 2:14½, has great trotting lines on both sides of the house, for he is by Billy Wilkes out of a daughter of Fairy Gift. A precious filly is Lottie Lorraine, 2:16½, by Gambetta Wilkes, dam Lady Yeiser (dam of Don Pizarro, 2:14½, pacing), by Garrard Chief. The dam's influence here held sway.

The four-year-old colt Merry Chimes, 2:14½, by Chimes, dam Hypathia, by Blackwood Chief, shows that this great son of Electioneer gets fast pacers as well as trotters, and that though the dead monarch of Palo Alto got no side-wheelers as a rule, yet his sons do. A trotting-bred aristocrat is the chestnut stallion Nutpine, 2:15½, for he is by Nutwood, out of Maggie Wilkes (dam of Wilkeswood, 2:23½), by George Wilkes. In this case the gait is not hard to account for, as a goodly percentage of the get of Nutwood are pacers. A fast three-year-old colt is Ovid, 2:15½. He is by Almont Jr. (Hamlin's), dam by Alcantara. Prima Donna, 2:11½, is by Betterton; Leverone, 2:16, is by General Hancock, and Rebus, 2:15½, by Chesterwood. These examples are a fair average of the fast newcomers in the 2:30 list of 1892. The vast majority of them are trotting-bred, and many of them in the most fashionable lines. Fortunately for the modern breeder, the day has gone by when the pacer was both unpopular and unfashionable. The fast side-wheeler, of to-day is able to earn his oats with the same facility as his trotting confrere—Spirit of the Times.

The Magnificent Grandson of Stockwell!

IMPORTED LOYALIST

Is Located at Bay District Track.

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/2 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:08.

FOLLOWING IS THE HORSE'S PEDIGREE:

- 6th dam—Orville mare, by Orville, 7th dam—(Golden Legs) dam, by Buzzard, 8th dam—Hercule, by Trumpeter, 9th dam—Luna, by Herod (Tartar), 10th dam—Proserpine (sister to Eclipse), by Marske.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darebin). He stands 15.3 hands on steely legs, and has great joints and the best of feet.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Anstralia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head.

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darebin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, for apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the horse breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist and Loyalstone; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winners Caractacus and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission a heavy winner last season; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid race-horses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racehorses and sires, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 9th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first the rest nowhere" fame.

No. 3. FOR FOUR-YEAR-OLDS AND UNDER (2:25 Class) Conditions same as for three-year-old class. FOR PACERS. No. 4. FOR TWO-YEAR-OLD PACERS (2:30 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as for No. 1. No. 5. FOR THREE-YEAR-OLDS AND UNDER (2:25 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as No. 2. No. 6. FOR FOUR-YEAR-OLDS AND UNDER (2:20 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as No. 2. Entries to all the above stakes are limited to colts whose records are no better than the class named in conditions of each stake. In all stakes, failure to make payments as they become due, forfeits entry and money paid in, and releases subscriber from further liability. Five to enter, three or more to start. Money in each stake shall be divided as follows: To winning colt, all the stakes and 50 per cent. of the added money; second colt, 33 1/3 per cent; third colt, 16 2/3 per cent. of the added money. Two-year-old stakes, mile heats, three and four-year-olds, three in five. Any colt not winning a heat in three, or making a dead heat, is barred from starting again in that race. No added money for a walk-over. If but two start in any of the stakes, they must contest for the stakes paid in, and divide them two-thirds to winner, and one-third to second. Otherwise National rules to govern. Entries to close with Edwin F. Smith, Secretary, at once in Sacramento, March 15th, 1893. EDWIN F. SMITH, Secretary. JOHN BOGGS, President.

THE GREAT SON OF ELECTIONEER'S GREATEST SON, ANTEEO 2:16 1-4. The phenomenally fast and high-bred stallion.

Table listing various horses and their owners, including Electioneer, Anteed, Columbine, Gen. Dana, and Lady C.

Danteo is a typical Electioneer, beautiful rich bay, 15 1/2 hands high, four years old, of perfect conformation and magnificent proportions. While being unusually kind and well disposed, he is full of pluck, game and building tenacity. All this, coupled with his fine action, great speed and wonderful intelligence, will mark him as one of his sire's greatest sons, both on the track and in the stud. Anteed sold East for $4,000, and stands at $1,000, and as but few of his sons remain in California, it is likely to be the last chance to secure a well-bred son of his at auction on this coast.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15 119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/4; Mollie C., 2:37 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals require it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

"HOME OF GUY WILKES,"

RACE RECORD (Regulation Track, 4th Heat), 2:15 1-4.

GUY WILKES. A few approved mares outside of those already engaged will be received at $750 each for the season.

SABLE WILKES, Three-year-old record, 2:18. Limited to twenty outside mares, 1893.

SABLE WILKES, 15 1/2 hands, black horse, by Guy Wilkes, first dam Sable, by The Moor; second dam Gretchen, by Mambrino Pilot; third dam Kitty Kirkham, by Canada Chief; fourth dam by Fanning's Tohe; fifth dam by imp. Leviathan. $300 for the season.

WIL DIRECT, Black stallion, three years old, 15.2 hands. Very handsome, powerfully built, the best of feet and legs, and a trotter that will make his mark as a sire and a race horse. Sired by Sable Wilkes, who stands at the head of all stallions of his age as a producer and sire of race horses. First dam Fidelia, by Director; second dam by Reavis' Black Bird, sire of Vic H., 2:13 1/2; third dam by Lancet, son of McCracken's Black Hawk, sire of Overman, 2:19 1/2, Ha Ha, 2:22 1/2, Moses S., 2:22 1/2, and others. $100 for the season.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties engaging the services of any of the above horses must send a deposit of 10 per cent. of service money with engagement. Pasturage $6 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain, or both, are fed, the charge will be $12.50 per month. Good care will be taken of all mares sent to the farm, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes.

Mares may be shipped direct to me at Oak Grove Station, San Mateo County.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are paid.

Season commences February 1st and ends August 1, 1893.

San Mateo Stock Farm, San Mateo, Cal.

DEXTER PRINCE 11,363

AT THE

SOUTHER FARM.

Table listing sire of Dexter Prince with names like Aster, Fitzsimmons, Jessie, etc., and their respective records.

Dexter Prince is by KENTUCKY PRINCE 2470.

Son of CLARK CHIEF (sire of dam of MARTHA WILKES, 2:08 1/2, etc.), and sire of Guy, 2:10 1/2; Spofford, 2:18 1/2; Company, 2:19 1/2; Fred Folger, 2:20 1/2; Bayonne Prince, 2:21 1/2, and twenty others in the 2:30 list.

First dam LADY DEXTER, Sister to Electioneer 125, George Wilkes 519, Alexander's Abdallah 15, Happy Medium 400, Dictator 113, and 110 other producing sons.

Second dam CLARA, Dam of Electioneer 125, George Wilkes 519, Alexander's Abdallah 15, Happy Medium 400, Dictator 113, and 110 other producing sons.

Third dam MCKINSTRY MARE, dam of SHARK, 2:27 1/2.

DEXTER PRINCE is one of the best-bred horses living, and in the last few years he has proved himself a sire of pure gait and extreme speed, although bred to few mares of merit and kept in a section where nothing but his individual merit and wonderful producing powers enabled him to prove himself one of the greatest living trotting sires.

He is a blood bay, sixteen hands high, of great power and substance and the highest finish. It is well known that he was one of the fastest colts ever at Palo Alto. He is a sure producer of finely-finished and fast foals.

FEE FOR 1893 $250. DUE AT TIME OF SERVICE. Usual return privilege if horse is alive and at this farm.

PLEASANTON, 2:29 1-2, By ELECTOR 2170.

Son of ELECTIONEER, and sire of FLORA M., 2:16; J. R., 2:20, and many others. One of the best of Electioneer's sons.

PLEASANTON'S first dam is by Tarrason, grandson of Abdallah 1; second dam Black Bess, by Blucher, son of Doroc; third dam sister to American Eclipse.

PLEASANTON is large and very fine looking, sixteen hands high, weighs 1,125 pounds. He is stylish, of splendid conformation, and his colts have every right to be valuable.

FEE FOR 1893 $50. DUE AT TIME OF SERVICE. With usual return privilege if horse is alive and at this farm.

Good care and pasture for mares at $5 per month to July 15th. The farm's reputation is a guarantee that every precaution will be taken, but there will be no liability for accidents or escapes. All charges must be settled before mares are removed.

For further information, address SOUTHER FARM, San Leandro, Cal. GILBERT TOMPKINS, Agent.

DANTON MOULTRIE is a bay stallion, black points, perfect in conformation, stands 15.2 hands and is a pure-gaited trotter. He will be given a race record this fall.

SOUDAN 5103, RECORD, 2:27 1-2.

SIRE OF NUBIA (3), 2:29 1-4.

Sired by Sultan, 2:24; sire of Stamboul, 2:07 1/2; Alcazar, 2:20 1/2, and 24 others in 2:30 list; dam Lady Babcock, dam of Electioneer, 2:21 1/2; granddam of Joe, 2:20 1/2; Lady Graves, dam of Naddy, 2:25, and Sulwood, 2:26 1/2; Soudan, 2:27 1/2; sire of Nubia, 2:29 1/2, by Hambletonian 725; sire of fifteen 2:30 performers; second dam Dubois mare, by a son of the Eaton Horse 122; third dam S. C. by Abdallah 1. Soudan's progeny are all of good size, perfect in form, gentle in disposition, pure in gait and show great speed.

Both of these stallions will make the season of 1893, ending July 15th, at $100, with usual return privilege, at the Moorland stock farm, Milpitas, Cal. Pasturage, $5 per month. Choice trotting and draft stock for sale.

SILVER :: BOW :: STOCK :: FARM.

SILVER BOW 11,708

Bay stallion, 16 hands high, foaled June 26, 1887. Two-year-old record, 2:37 1/2; three-year-old record, 2:26; four-year-old record, 2:23 1/2; five-year-old record, 2:16 1/2.

WILL BE ALLOWED TO SERVE TWENTY OUTSIDE MARES AT $150 FOR THE SEASON Season to close June 1, 1893, as we intend racing him this Fall. Usual return privilege for mares not proving to be in foal. Silver Bow has trotted twenty-six races and won sixteen. He has won in purses and stakes over $11,000. His oldest colts are two-years-old this Spring. We had three of them, and two of these are sure to be fast trotters. The only one we worked last season won the yearling stake at the San Jose Fair; time 2:36 1/2. Good pasturage at $5. Mares can be shipped direct to Milpitas. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

ALL BILLS DUE ON OR BEFORE JUNE 1, 1893.

THE STANDARD STALLION EGYPTIAN PRINCE.

Table listing sires of Egyptian Prince including George Wilkes, Dolly Spauker, Mambrino Chief 11, Fanny, Director, Thurdale, Czarna, Onward, Mambrino Patchen 58, Kate Middleton, Lady Stout, and American Star 14.

WILL BE ALLOWED TO SERVE FIFTEEN MARES OF APPROVED BREEDING. FEE $75. Season commences February 1st and ends June 1st, 1893. Other conditions same as Silver Bow.

DESCRIPTION—Dark bay; 15.3 hands; foaled 1890. Fine head and neck well set on to strong pair of shoulders; fine mane and tail, good legs and feet. I consider him worthy of his royal breeding. He was not broken until August 15th, 1892, as I bought him at Lexington, Ky., and was unable to get him shipped out sooner. He already shows himself to be a trotter. His gait is faultless, and he can show speed enough already to make me think him a trotter. I think I could easily put him in the list if I wanted to this season, but no "tin-cun" record for me, as I raise horses to win money with. His breeding needs no comment from me, and I will allow you to be the judge. Address all communications to P. J. WILLIAMS, Milpitas, Cal.

WILLIAMS & MOREHOUSE, Owners.

ELECTIC 11,321

SEASON SERVICE FEE --- $100 CASH With usual return privilege

ELECTIC is a full brother to the CHAMPION TWO-YEAR OLD ARION, 2:10 1/2, both being sired by ELECTIONEER out of Manette (dam also of Old Fino, 2:18) by NUTWOOD, 2:18 1/2. ELECTIC represents the ACME of fashionable and speed-producing blood lines. He breeds speed. ELECTIC'S colts, the oldest of which are now three years old, are without exception TROTTERS; not a pacer in the lot so far, although bred to pacing mares. ELECTIC will be allowed to cover only a limited number of mares besides his owner's. Pasturage $1.40 per week; hay, grain and stableing extra. ELECTIC will stand at RANCHO COTATI (PAGE'S STATION) in Sonoma County, until July 1st, 1893.

COLTS FOR SALE

LANCELOT. The only Son of ELECTIONEER standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION—LANCLOT is a seal-brown stallion, 15.1 hands high. He is a horse of fine conformation; has a beautiful head and neck, fine loins, well-shaped body, deep through the heart, sloping shoulders, fine arms, large stifles and the very best of feet and legs. In action he is pure-gaited. As a three-year-old he trotted quarters in 32 seconds, but was injured and placed in the stud. His colts are all blood-like, large and fast trotters. Several of them are eligible and will enter the 2:30 list this fall. Lancelot is one of the surest of foal-getters.

PEDIGREE—LANCLOT was sired by the Immortal Electioneer, sire of 132 in the list, dam Lizzie Harris, by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus, the sire of Lizzie Harris, was a full brother to Iowa Chief 528 (sire of Corsando, 2:24 1/2, and others). His sire was Bashaw 50, sire of 15 in the 2:30 list, he by Ver-nol's Black Hawk, dam Belle, by Webber's Tom Thumb; second dam Chas. Kent mare, the dam of Hambletonian 10. Ver-nol's Black Hawk, by Long Island Black Hawk, dam by Webber's Kentucky Whin, son of Blackburn's Whip. Long Island Black Hawk, by Andrew Jackson, dam Sallie Miller, by Tippecanoe; Andrew Jackson, by Young Bashaw, son of Grand Bashaw. Arnold Harris, by Whitebone, dam Sportsmistress; she was on of Cub, by Medco; second dam Ann Merry, by Sumpter; third dam Grecian Princess, by Blackburn's Whip, and so on to the 15th dam.

SALADIN. The only Son of Nutwood standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE—Chestnut stallion, 16 1/2 hands high, the greatest Irish sire. First dam, Lady Uley Jr., by speculation, son of Rydsky's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Uley granddam of Western Girl, record 2:22 1/2. Saladin has now a number of yearlings and two-year-old colts, all showing great uniformity in size, style and color. All of them are fast trotters, and several will trot in 2:30 list. Nutwood 600, 2:16 1/2, by Belmont 64, dam Miss Russell (dam of Maud S., 2:08 1/2), by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell, by Boston. Nutwood is the sire of 101 in the 2:30 list. Belmont is the sire of 74 trotters in the 2:30 list and 29 sires of 120 trotters. Lady Uley Jr. is by speculation, dam Lady Uley, 2:38 1/2, granddam of Western Girl, 2:27 1/2. Speculation (sire of Crown Point, 2:24, Grade S., 2:22, Oakland Maid, 2:22, and the dams of Alfred G., 2:19 1/2, and Waterford, 2:27), by Hambletonian 10, dam Maria Washington (dam of Hambletonian 725), by Burr's Washington; he by Burr's Napoleon, by Young Mambrino, dam Willis mare, by Mambrino. TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON for service of each of these stallions. No other opportunity is offered breeders to obtain these blood lines at such prices. Excellent care taken of mares in any manner that owner may desire at reasonable rates. Usual return privilege. Call on or address C. G. BERRY, Owner, 332 Montgomery street, or at private stable, First Avenue, between Turk and Eddy Streets, where colts and fillies of these stallions can also be seen. G. W. BROOKS, Agent.

DICTATUS

Will make the Season of 1893, commencing February 1st and ending June 1st, at

BELMONT STOCK FARM,

BELMONT, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL.

SERVICE FEE FOR THE SEASON..... $100
(Will be allowed to serve fifteen approved outside mares.)

DICTATUS was foaled in 1890. He is sired by the great RED WILKES 1749, (sire of 88 in the list); dam, MISS LOLLIE, by DICTATOR 133 (sire of JAY-EYE-SEE, 2:10, DIRECTOR, 2:17, and 41 others in the list, besides the dam of NANCY HANKS, 2:04, etc.); second dam, GOLD PEN (dam of FELINA, 2:29½), and granddam of HILL BOY (p), 2:20, by MAMBRINO ABDALLAH 2201 (son of MAMBRINO PATCHEN 58); third dam by HAROLD 413 (sire of MAUD S., 2:03½, and 41 others in the list and grandsire of KREMLIN, 2:07½); fourth dam, EMILY CHESTER, by MAMBRINO PATCHEN 58; fifth dam PATSEY (dam of MIDWAY), by SNOWSTORM (sire of JIM IRVING, 2:23). He is in color a chestnut, with star in forehead, one hind pastern white. In conformation he is perfect, being about 15.2 hands in height, very short back, strong over the coupling, heavy quarters, large, well-muscled gaskins and arms, limbs straight, cannon bones short, hocks and joints clean and bony, and feet of the finest kind. His neck, head and body denote an iron constitution. His shoulders are sloping, and taking him all in all, a more perfect representative of the great Wilkes-Dictator cross does not exist to-day. His breeding speaks for itself. He traces four times to HAMBLETONIAN 10 through his greatest sires—GEO. WILKES, DICTATOR, HAROLD and ABDALLAH 15. He traces to MAMBRINO PATCHEN twice and three times to MAMBRINO CHIEF. His blood-lines are unequalled by any stallion on this Coast.

The best of care taken of mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Service fee must be paid before mares leave the farm.

Socrates stands 16:1 1/2 hands, and weighs close to 1,400 pounds. In color, he is a beautiful shade of bay; no white. In disposition he is perfection, while in conformation he is considered by competent judges to be the best stallion of his age and class ever brought to California. His action is perfect, and as he is sound and free from all vices he is recommended to all horsemen desirous of raising large, fine-looking, stylish, well-limbed and perfectly matched horses.

Training The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto in breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colts' capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address: THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, 312 Bush St., San Francisco, Cal.

To Strengthen the Muscles. To Athletes, Cyclists, Baseball & Footballists, Horse-back riders, Boxers and Oarsmen, when you want to ride, run, walk, row, skate or swim a long distance, USE ANTI-STIFF.

To Strengthen the Muscles. This is a marvelous preparation for Strengthening the Muscular System. With Anti Stiff there is no fault required; it goes straight for the muscles, and you can feel it at work. It has a peculiarly warming, comforting and stimulating effect on all weak or stiff muscles and sinews. Quick in its action, cleanly and pleasant in use. Rub it into the muscles every night for a fortnight, and you will be pleased at its supporting and strengthening properties. There is not, nor has been, anything like it till now. It differs from all Gills, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some Athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them. Price 20c. and 35c. per box. The Standard-Bred Stallion
Count Anteo
 14,692
 WILL MAKE THE SEASON
 OF 1893 AT
COLUSA, CAL.

DESCRIPTION.—COUNT ANTEO 14,692 is a handsome dark bay in color, with a star in the forehead and two white feet behind. He was foaled in 1888, and is a remarkably good horse in every respect, and while he has had but little training, he can easily show quarters in 37 seconds and, barring accidents, will be given a low record this year.

First dam, Countess (dam of Dawn, 2:18 1/2, Strathway, 2:19, Morna, (trial) 2:23 and Young Countess, dam of Duchess, 2:18 1/2. Countess was sired by Hambletonian, 125 (sire of Oraves, 2:19, Oliveette, 2:24, Empress, 2:24, Longfellow 2:24, and 10 others in the list); second dam Fly, a very fast mare.

TERMS, $60 FOR THE SEASON, or before the 1st of July, 1893. Excellent care taken of mares in any manner that owners may desire at reasonable rates but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be sent to the undersigned. For further particulars apply to or address

Don Marvin.

RACE RECORD, 5th HEAT, 2:22 1-2.
 Don Marvin is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1884; bred by Sen. Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal., is 16 hands high, and weighs 200 pounds; sired by Pallis, 2:23 (sire of six in 2:30 list), he by Electoneer; first dam Cora (dam of Don Marvin, 2:22 1/2, and Elected, trial 2:26) by Don Victor, son of Belmont; second dam Clarabel (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24 1/2, and Rebecca dam of five in 2:30 list) by Abdalla Star; third dam Fairy (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29 1/2, and Sweepstakes sire of twenty-seven in 2:30 list) by Hambletonian 10; fourth dam Emma Mills (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star. Don Marvin will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $50 the season, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—four producing dams

Nutwood Boy.

SIRE BY NUTWOOD 2:18 3-4.
 Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1125 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest living likeness in his celebrated sire, Nutwood, of any stallion in California. First-dam Kitty Parkhurst, by Goldfinder, he by Imp. Belshazzar; second dam Old Kate, by Grey Beard, grand son of Imp. Messenger. Nutwood Boy's opportunity in the stud has been of the most limited description. He is the sire of comparatively very few colts; several of his oldest are, however, showing speed enough to be candidates for the 2:30 list this season. He is a square, level-gaited trotter, and with only five weeks track work a year ago, trotted a trial in 2:28; last half in 1:13. After his stud season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "fall circuit" and gaining him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $3 per month. THE Stallion Ringwood,
 The Famous Son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney in formation more than any of his sons. He is a pure-gaited trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he showed trials of speed in 2:19 1/2 as a four-year-old, and would have received a record of 2:18 or better but for an accident at the Napa track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dash-away (thoroughbred), he by Williamson's Belmont, he by American Boy; second dam Fanny Col, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

ALSO FOR SALE

Tipoo Tib,
 Gelding record, 2:26. Can trot in 2:30 or better; will show quarters in 0:32; 15 1/2 high; light bay; a great road horse; single or double, and perfectly sound. Ringwood or Tipoo Tib can be put in training and win their price in one season. For further particulars, address

FIVE DOLLARS A YEAR

A TRIP ACROSS THE SIERRAS.

NEVADA FOR HORSE BREEDING.

The First Part of the Experiment Successful.—
A Favorable Result Probable.

The twenty-third of February is still early in the year in all sections of the country. In that part of the Great West where I saw two feet of snow less than a month ago, and from which the wires brought about daily intelligence that the Blizzard King still reigned, that date is still an undisputed part of the winter, with the upper Mississippi hard bound in its icy covering, and the soil frozen to a depth that a month's sunshine will scarcely relieve. There could scarcely be a finer afternoon than greeted those who were waiting the departure of the Overland Flyer at the Oakland pier. Brilliant sunshine and the slight breeze from the west was scarcely sufficient to break the hay into dimples, and in place of laughing in the sun a smile was all that the salubrious zephyr could excite. Truly tranquil the scene in that February afternoon, and as the train wended its way along the shore of the placid inland sea, the green of the water on the far-off side harmonized with the emerald-hued hillsides beyond. Even the turbid flood flowing from the bank-full Sacramento which the incoming tide forced towards the Contra Costa boundary made a pleasing contrast to the verdant slopes—bespangled with yellow flowers which served as a frame work to the aquatic picture, and then ere the sun sank behind the crest of Tamalpais it appeared to rest for a moment on the summit, a vision of splendor, which did not require the enthusiasm of a Fire Worshipper to awaken fervor if not adoration.

There is far more dreary music when the snow-laden winds sighs through the tree tops and whistles around the corner of dwellings and barns on a February night, on the other side, than the full choir of frogs which rehearsed a merry roundelay on the Suisun marshes as the train sped along. Again came the refrain after leaving Davisville, and it had a sharper, brisker tone when the carwheels were silent in the depot at Sacramento. A strange sort of a cadence, when associated with the sheen of electric lights, this ranunculus chorus, and though somewhat monotonous, told of springtime and the approach of summer. Pleasanter than the glittering lights, now left far behind, was the moonshine on the whiteness as the train neared the summit, and the berth curtain was raised to the top of the window in order to get a view of the moonlit scene. The prime agent in determining upon the journey was a letter received only a few hours before the start containing an invitation to visit "Rancho del Sierras," one sentence of which read: "Now, my friend, I want you to come over and see my mares and colts and give me your judgment of them and my chance of raising a first-class colt in this climate."

A not very satisfactory outlook for a favorable reply that spread of snow and the pine trees and bardy shrubbery along the mountain sides. Not a great deal more hopes the next morning with the Truckee river rushing along among ice-coated boulders, and the branches of willows and alders pendant from being overburdened with a like frosted covering.

There was brightness at Reno, a wealth of sunshine and a placid air if it was somewhat eager and nipping withal, but not so chilly as might be expected from its four thousand feet of an elevation above the ground where the alfalfa and wild oats were covering the soil with a thick carpet, and the yellow poppies and the blue and red of other flowers leading a harmonious contrast to the rich green of the grasses. Five hundred feet higher, and though the hour was still early, not yet 9 o'clock in the morning, the temperature was a good deal milder, and had it been otherwise than that the snow was well down to the base of the mountains it would have suggested a more southern latitude and a lower altitude. I had never seen this country at a favorable season of the year. My first visit was late in the fall, and the morning after arriving at Mr. Winters' place there were a few inches of snow, which had fallen during the night previous, and which still hung on the fruit trees. The second trip was the middle of January of last year, and at that time there was little contrast between the valley, as regards vegetation, and the shores of the bay. There were meadow larks and robins, and the lower snow line on the mountains was quite a piece up the side. I took an early morning stroll then far up the mountain sides, the crusted snow crackling under the footsteps, and though respiration came quicker than when at home, and a little more jerk to the expirations, it was an enjoyable climb. Exercise pleasant at a slow pace and when seated on the top of a big rock and looking eastward a scene which well repaid the labor, had there been tenfold more toil. A circle of high mountains magnificent in their dazzling whiteness, brilliant and awe-inspiring. The valley appeared to be so thoroughly sheltered by that cordon of massive mountains as to be thoroughly guarded from violent storms, and had we not been informed in regard to the "Washoe Zephyrs" it would seem that the tranquil lake on the far-off side of the valley was always undisturbed. On that bright January morning I pondered over the "chances of raising a first-class colt" in the midst of such an environment, and with my strong proclivities in favor of California, with its uniformity of temperature, climatic advantages far superior to any other country with which I was personally acquainted, and hesitated as to the degree of failure that should be pronounced. It could scarcely be possible that the chances were nearly equal, and while it might be very likely that when fully matured that equally as good racehorses might be reared, there was little probability of obtaining stake colts which would successfully cope with those reared on the Occidental plateau beyond the Sierras. I could imagine the wonderful transformation in that valley from January to May and the advantages from that date until October in the shape of green pasturage, and that, with no lack of artificial aids to counteract adverse weather, there should be good results, and yet as I looked at the brown valley, from the eastern border of which sage brush extended to the snow line, it hardly seemed probable that there would be such youngsters as I had seen on the banks of the Sacramento when the stock was quartered on Rancho del Rio. Still, if not offering the advantages which California presented, it was not inferior to other countries where great stake colts had been bred and nurtured, and when cogitating on that bright midwinter morning on my seat fully five thousand feet above sea level, comfortable as need be with the same clothing which would have been worn in Oakland, neither overcoat or gloves, and long enough to smoke a newly-lit cigar to the end without a sensation of chilliness, the conclusion was not easily reached. Mr. Winters claimed that alfalfa hay, properly cured, would replace the early grass as milk-producing food, and the foals, a few of which had then come, would have plenty of lacteal nourishment, the best of all for the early stages of growth. There was one result to guide my thoughts towards a favorable conclusion, that being the mares and foals which had been brought from the Sacramento farm the preceding October were all in robust health and good condition with one exception. That was Marion, and she was low in flesh owing to Mr. Winters' orders to wean her colt at the usual age not having been obeyed, so that she suckled him within three months of her next foaling time (and by the way I shall refer to that episode again, as it has a bearing on a point that has elicited a deal of discussion). Little necessity for recording more fully the pros and cons of the mental argument which, seated on that giant rock, cogitating on the future of horse-breeding in Nevada, broken by admiration of the grand scenery whenever the eye was turned from the future to the present, the mental faculties which were seeking an elucidation of a problem which would not be solved until in the hereafter, given another direction by the sublimity of Nature's handiwork. And yet one more subject for reflection may be recorded which was forcibly presented during that half-hour of mountain life. The effect of altitude, connected with rugged surfaces, on physical and mental development. The two must be connected in race horses as well as in the human family, although it may be better in connection with the equine race to couple physical and nervous forces. The best example, as it is an illustration from this part of the world, is a comparison of the Digger Indians of the coast valleys and the mountain tribes, the former inferior in every respect. Physically, far inferior; mentally, especially in that part of the mental make-up called courage, still farther away. From reliable information there is little question that Apache Indians are unexcelled for activity and endurance by any people, and those who, from a casual inspection appear to be deficient in form, when the standard selected is that which we are accustomed to apply, are capable of performing astonishing feats. Framework, muscle and nerve must be in great perfection to give this power, or it may be that in those specimens when frame and muscle are not in accordance with our ideas that the quality of the muscle and indomitable nerve overcome the mechanical deficiencies.

The history of all races will show that if there are advantages in different parts of the same zone to promote perfection of physical development, the mountainous and billy regions have a full share of them, and therefore in respect to that feature of Nevada, if not a benefit, it cannot be called a drawback.

Something more than a year had elapsed since my former visit, and a part of the theory would at least be demonstrated. The new big barn, which was described in the account of my previous trip, was the first point to visit, and in the paddock between that and the road were a number of mares which were due to foal in a short time. Apart from the breeding the mares on Rancho del Sierra are fine specimens of the thoroughbred race. Mr. Winters has given special attention to form and size, and, incidentally, to these important qualifications, endeavored to secure good mothers—that is, mares which are large milkers. When such a collection are healthy and in "good condition" there is gratifying display, and everyone of the mares in that large paddock were at their very best in regard to these points. That much I expected, as with the facilities for taking care of them—warm, roomy boxes for quarters whenever the weather is the least unfavorable, and a commissary supplied with everything necessary for well-doing—matured animals should do well in nearly any climate at all adapted for horse life. Remarkably well all of them; Mattie Glenn, eighteen years, nearly as juvenile in appearance as the youngest in the band. Through the barn into the paddocks on the eastern side, and the young foals were gamboling and cavorting in the sunshine, just as full of glee and as happy as ever their near kin were on the banks of the Sacramento. Large, fine looking foals, corroborative testimony of that presented last year that January and February foals were not out of place in Washoe Valley, and hereafter it will be shown that the promise of early youth was fully carried out by another year's history.

As we went through the gateway between two paddocks there was a bay mare stood quartering towards me, and Mr. Winters remarked: "You should know that one." "I might to," was the answer, but did not until the second look, and must confess some shame at my dullness when the discovery was made that it was one that I had known from the time she was a few minutes old, and it may not be out of place in this connection to recount how she put an end to "a trade" I intended to consummate. A Mr. Lewis of Kentucky wanted to exchange some stock for Malcolm. The mail of the evening of May 13, 1871, brought a letter from Mr. Lewis, offering two thoroughbred mares by Young Melbourne and an Andorser gelding, which he wrote could run half a mile in 43 seconds, for Malcolm. I thought well of the offer, when a boy came from the stable bringing the intelligence that Maggie Mitchell had foaled. Referring to the journal of 1871, I find the following entry: "Five o'clock p. m.—Maggie Mitchell had filly foal by Malcolm; bay, star in forehead, no other white, large and very fine." A "dead image" of her grandam, Charmer, was my first impression, and as I held Charmer to be one of the greatest, if not the best, of the Glencoes, the similitude was one of value, and then as I liked the filly better than either of the two sons of Bonnie Scotland which Maggie had "thrown," the trade could not be entertained. Rather mortifying that failure to recognize at a glance the mare which I take so much pride in, and then, too, when I recall a man, not an expert by any means in horse affairs, who recognized in the photograph of a mare twenty-four years old one he had not seen for fourteen years, it was particularly stupid. But when I saw Marion thirteen months before, then almost due to foal, and thinner than I had ever known her, and here was a mare that did not show to be much more, if any, than half the years which have elapsed since that memorable May evening in 1871—strong, hearty, with plenty of flesh and as full of gambols as a colt.

But if I did not recognize the old mare at first sight I had no difficulty in selecting her yearling colt, which I never had seen until February 24th. And still I will not brag on that evidence of perspicuity, as had he been absent from the paddock another would surely have been chosen with just as much confidence. There were eighteen yearlings in the two paddocks, five of the oldest being separated from the others as being rather too strong for those foaled at a later date.

The yearlings were the main point of attraction, as independent of the anxiety to see them from a general point of view, there was the question of adaptability of Nevada soil and climate for the breeding of race horses; for the rearing of a high class of racing youngsters. It is a subject of vast interest to the inhabitants of a large section of country; the whole country from the eastern slope of the Rockies to the western side of the Sierras; from Arizona to British Columbia, or at least that portion of it which can be called the mountain district. Many others beside Mr. Winters are interested. Marcus Daly, in Bitter Root Valley, Montana, is breeding on a very large scale. A large number in the vicinity of Denver are striving to rear the best and the fastest of harness horses, and in connection with them the thoroughbred is being domiciled on a number of mountain breeding farms. One could not ask for a better test than that afforded by Mr. Winters. "It goes without saying" that all the attention would be given which skill, experience and liberality could afford, and the only thing to stand in the way of success would be what nature presented, or what can be classed as misfortunes which a fair share of human intelligence could not guard against. Here were colts begotten in California and foaled in January and February in Nevada. There are others begotten in Nevada and foaled as early as from January 6th through the rest of that month and February fully up to the standard of former years. Among the yearlings are some which came as late as the last part of April and in May, so that there is good data for comparison.

To commence with Rey del Sierra, foaled January 22, 1892. Chestnut colt, white mark in face, near hind leg white to hock, other three feet touched with white. By Joe Hooker, his dam Marion, by Malcolm. That much Stud Book phrasing is easily accomplished, but when I undertake a detailed description of the "Mountain King" there are obstacles in the way which are somewhat annoying. After the long list of colts and fillies which Marion is credited with, and the high excellence displayed, especially those of late years, which have been extolled in all the changes which panegyric could ring, with Emperor of Norfolk, The Czar, El Rio Rey, Yo Tamahien and Yo El Rey, so prominently on the stage, to write that there is another to add to the group that will not suffer by comparison with the best, that in my honest opinion he is well, let me illustrate by an anecdote which I heard many years ago.

There was a large dinner party at the home of Uncle Ned Blackburn, near Spring Station, Kentucky. Many of the notables of the time were present, among which Henry Clay. Uncle Ned had secured a short time before the meeting of the party the great racehorse Boston. None could more skillfully portray the best points of a horse, none present a more graphic description of one he fancied than the host. But he had been silent so far in regard to his latest acquisition and Mr. Clay, bantering him in relation to his silence, accused him of having exhausted his vocabulary and run out of adjectives which could express his opinion without going over the old ground. Mr. Clay instanced some of Uncle Ned's favorite horses, Superior, Whip, American Eclipse, Grey Medoc, et al., repeating a few of the eponyms bestowed. "And now what have you to offer in regard to Boston?" was the query of the great orator. "Fill up your glasses, gentlemen, and I will give you a toast which must be drank standing" was the ready reply. "Boston among horses what Harry Clay is among men, the king of them all."

It is a good deal to claim that so far as size and form are concerned the youngest of the family is an improvement on his predecessors, but surely fills my eye as being a shade the best of those I have seen at the same age. In fact it is difficult to select a place where he is deficient. "How will his ears suit you?" was the remark of Jimmy Welsh. The old man had growled for the year past at my criticism of the auricular appendages of El Rio Rey, which I had called too short, and there was a satisfied glint of the eye that told he had the fullest confidence that his pet could not be faulted in even the slightest particular. Fifteen hands at thirteen months is surely height enough, still longer from point of shoulder to point of buttock than he is high, tremendously muscular all over, with such immense arms and gaskins that I am constrained to forego giving measurements which would surely seem exaggerated. Top of shoulder blade nearly as high as withers, back, loin and quarters so strong that it would be no foolish estimate that he could carry 150 pounds now without suffering inconvenience. I would not like to say that Rey del Sierra will mature into a better-shaped horse than El Rio Rey, and I consider the highest praise that can be awarded him is that he is very much like his half-brother, and his ears are surely an improvement.

When I saw his dam a few days before he was foaled, and learned the cause of her thinness, that being suckling the big bay colt so long, I was apprehensive that it would affect the coming foal. But inasmuch as she missed, for the first time in her history, that gave the foal the whole advantage of the maternal supply, and in all probability that barrenness was not an unmitigated evil. From all appearances she is safely in foal again, and the embryo will have the benefit of being the sole requirement to nourish. Eighteen yearlings, not a runt amongst them. In place of that there is a good deal of trouble in making decided selections, for though the earlier colts, those foaled in January and February, are, of course, bigger and stronger than the later foals, smaller yearlings which I saw last year than any of the present eighteen are now slashing big two-year-olds. There is a Joe Hooker from Bonita that is very nearly as large as Rey del Sierra, and as he was foaled on the same day it is a fair test of the surroundings being equally favorable, and not dependant on any one animal to secure size. A Joe Hooker from May B. can scarcely fail to race, and one out of Polly Mac has the cut of a racehorse. A filly by Hooker from Lou Spencer is a big slashing filly, and a big Hooker colt from Ozgilla is built on racing lines all through, but as the Hookers have gained a good place in racing records, and growing better as the years pass by, I was more interested to see the El Rio Reys, and as their racing powers are yet to be tested, and even then cannot be shown until late in the season, when they are asked to show the regulation three-eighths form and breeding is the only guide. Form principally, as it usually requires time to discover the "happy nicks," and judging from that of the six yearlings I saw there are more than good chances for them to be worthy of their illustrious sire. A chestnut colt from Hattie Humphrey by Joe Hooker, and her dam Mattie Glenn, can scarcely fail to be one that will do in any company. He is shaped a good deal like Rey del Sierra, and while it would seem like rank heresy to lose faith in the invincibility of the king, it is no disparagement of the paragon to prophesy that his nephew will be "thar or tharabout" when the trial comes. A roan filly by El Rio Rey, with her legs white to hocks and nearly to her knees is of a configuration which gives promise of phenomenal speed, and if able to keep up the clip, which her breeding will warrant her accomplishing, she will do. A bay filly by El Rio Rey from Question has suffered some from a severe attack of distemper which gave her a setback, but now, entirely recovered, I shall build great expectations on the future of this handsome miss, and so I could go through with the whole string, with so little chance for faultfinding that the description would read like pages cut from a sale catalogue in which the compiler endeavored to show off his goods to the best advantage. Yearlings and sucklings a testimonial to the adaptability of Nevada for breeding and rearing colts of that age, and in the next paper I will present further evidence, which was gathered from other sources, and what was shown at the Reno track.

THE ENGLISH RACE HORSE.

Marske and the Peerless Horse Eclipsee.

[Written expressly for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

Marske, by Squirt, he by Bartlett's Childers, out of the Ruby mare. She was from a daughter of Bay Bolton and Hutton's Blacklegs—Fox Cub—Coneyskins—Hutton's Grey Barb—a daughter of the Byerly Turk, from a Bustler mare. This is one of the oldest of pedigrees, and dates back to the reign of Charles I. Like the Godolphin Arabian, Marske had an eventful career. He was bred by John Hutton, of Marske, Yorkshire, was foaled in 1750, and named after his birth-place. In Mr. Hutton's stud book appears the following entry: "In the year 1750 his Royal Highness, the Duke of Cumberland, gave me, John Hutton, a chestnut Arabian in exchange for a brown colt got by Squirt, bred from the Ruby mare, and which his Royal Highness afterwards called Marske."

Marske was a good race horse, but he was an uncertain horse, and could never be safely played to win for big money. He was not much thought of in the Duke's stud, and was sold at his sale for a small sum to a farmer, and covered twenty mares at half a guinea each. When Mr. Wildman, who had bought Marske's son, Eclipse, found his information respecting that grand horse correct, he bought Marske for twenty guineas. What a buy this was can be judged from the fact that besides siring the great Eclipse he was also the sire of Shark, Pretender, Honest Kitt, Masquerade, Leviathan, Salopian and Pontac.

Shark won £16,057 guineas in matches, sweepstakes and plates, heating the best horses of his day at any distance. His sire, Squirt, had also an up-and-down career. After running and winning many races he was used as a stud horse by Sir Henry Harpur. He was not thought much of, and Sir Harry ordered him to be shot and fed to his hounds. As the huntsman was leading him out to the kennels he was begged off by the stud-groom, and this poor, despised, death-doomed animal afterwards sired Marske, the sire of a lot of horses whose winnings amounted to over £75,000. Marske died in July, 1779, at the age of twenty-nine.

Next in order comes the great Eclipse, Marske's most famous son, out of Spiletta, by Regulus, a son of the Godolphin Arabian, out of Mother Western. Mother Western was by Snake, a full brother to Williams' Squirrel, her dam by old Montague, grandam by Hautboy, out of a daughter of Brimmer, her pedigree not preserved.

When a yearling Eclipse was bought by a Mr. Wildman, a sporting inclined sheep salesman of Smithfield Market. He was bought at the sale which took place after the death of the Duke of Cumberland, and the price paid was seventy-five guineas. Wildman had a friend in the old Duke's stable who gave him a tip as to the qualities of Eclipse's form. Wildman made the journey to the sale grounds in haste and did not arrive until after the colt he had come to buy had been sold for seventy guineas. He instantly looked at his watch, a time-piece he could depend upon, and found that the sale had commenced before the time advertised. He therefore firmly insisted that there had been no lawful sale and that the lots knocked down should be put up to auction again. The auctioneer, who knew Wildman's resolute character, offered him the choice of any lot he should choose. Eclipse was put up again, and Wildman got him for seventy-five guineas, or about $393.

Just before Eclipse ran for the King's plate at Winchester in 1769 Colonel O'Kelly bought a half share in him for six hundred and fifty guineas, and after the race bought the other share for eleven hundred guineas. Like most of the old-time horses, Eclipse did not run until he was five years old, when he was entered at Epsom for the Maiden Plate of fifty pounds. The touts had however "got onto" him, and had seen his tricks, so no better than 1 to 4 could be had about him.

O'Kelly well knew the qualities of his maiden colt, for he plunged on him, even at these prohibitive odds. In running the second winning heat the whole five horses were close together at the three-mile post, when some of the jockeys began to whip. Eclipse who was going easy under a pull, was frightened by the sound, ran away with his jockey and distanced the field.

In running over the York track in the following year for the Subscription purse against Tortoise and Bellario, two first-class horses, Eclipse took the lead, and at two miles had his horses not only beaten, but distanced, and at the end of the four miles they were hardly within hailing distance of him. He started with odds of 20 to 1 on him.

O'Kelly once made a bet that he would place the horses in a certain heat race in which Eclipse was engaged, and backed his opinion at 6 to 4 in hundreds. When asked to name the three placed horses he declared: Eclipse first, the rest nowhere. He won, for Eclipse distanced the field of six, and O'Kelly landed his bets.

In 1779 the then Duke of Bedford asked O'Kelly to put a price on Eclipse. "By the mass, my lord, and it is not all Bedford Level that would purchase him." To properly understand the high value O'Kelly put upon his horse, it would be as well to explain that Bedford Level was situated in the heart of London, and even in these days, was worth an immense sum, but no doubt O'Kelly was feeling particularly jubilant that day and would not have parted with the horse for the whole of the city of London.

Eclipse was a peculiar horse in many ways. He had a most determined temper of his own, and would have doubly broken many of the stables of the present day, for he could not be pulled. He was always allowed to run according to his own "sweet will," yet he never swerved, and, when he had passed the winning post, pulled up of his own accord. Still O'Kelly was afraid that he might at some time break away, and when the horse ran at York, five miles, with 168 lbs. up, a number of men were placed at the winning post to stop him in case his jockey should lose control. Fancy a horse of the present day with that impost trying to run away after going four miles on turf! The only horse that was considered "in it" with Eclipse in those days was Mr. Shaftoe's horse, Gold-fuider, by Snap, a fast and long-reached brood. He was never beaten, and was to have met Eclipse for the King's plates, but broke down in his training.

Although a strong, he was at the same time a thick-winded horse, and in a sweat or under fast work could be heard to blow from a considerable distance.

Eclipse first covered mares at fifty guineas, afterwards at twenty being stinted to fifty mares exclusive of those of his owner. Among his get are ranked no fewer than 334 winners. In 1788 his feet gave way, and he was removed from Epsom to Cannons, and died at the latter place in 1789, aged twenty-five years. His heart weighed thirteen pounds, and his skull was extremely large. It was shown to Dr. Spurzheim, one of the founders of the science of phrenology, who thus diagnosed the craniological developments. "The leading characteristics of Eclipse," he said, "were a remarkably large brain, not only in proportion to the animal but to horses in general, indicating great and high courage, unusual capacity, but deficient in meekness, or rather possessed of a vicious temper." He also remarked that the horse must have been difficult to break—which was the case.

There was an uncertainty about Eclipse's pedigree, arising from the fact of her dam having been barren the previous year, and in the next covered by both Shakespeare and Marske, but he came to Marske's time, not Shakespeare's. A strong resemblance, it is said, however, existed in Eclipse to the get of Shakespeare in the particulars of color, temper and certain lines of form.

Of course we must take the records of these bygone days cum grano salis, but still the fact remains that Eclipse must have been a wonderful horse. Some of our best horses of today trace their pedigrees back to Eclipse, and it would be ungenerous for we of the present day to pluck the well-earned laurels from the brow of the dead hero of over a hundred and ten years ago. He stood 16 hands and 2 inches, and measured from the tip of his rump to the ground 67 inches. In length he was 69 inches from the most prominent part of his breast to the extremity of his buttocks. Asylum Stock Farm Sale.

SECOND DAY.

The attendance was much larger than the first day, the class of stock better, the bidding livelier and prices higher. The Pancoast filly sold for $1,410, Geo. H. Fox being the purchaser. J. A. Benson secured the game trotting stallion Almonition for $2,000, A. Joseph purchased the well-formed Stamboul filly, Helen White, for $1,000. The prices obtained throughout the sale were fair. Over $26,000 were received, and the average of the entire sale was nearly $200. Following is a list of the animals sold that brought $100 and over:

Table listing various horses and their sale prices, including entries like South Carolina, by Alcona, dam Kate Jackson; J. Crooks, 135; Tamarack, by Mambino Jr., dam by Belle Alta; T. Donabue, 130; The Baroness, by Frazier's Secretary, dam Young Countess; D. J. Murphy, 265; Veronica, 229; by Alcona, dam Fontana; T. W. Colt Stakes.

At a meeting of the directors of the Agricultural Association, yesterday afternoon, at Hollister, the yearling colts' stake was declared filled, with the following:

- R. L. Orr enters b f Lady P., by Ward B.
C. P. Warburton enters dark brown filly Fleet, by Eros.
C. V. Kelly enters bay colt Ward E., by Ward B.
John Parker enters sorrel filly Ida, by Brown Jug.
Donnelly, Dunne & Co. enters blk colt Antimony, by Antinous.
L. Orr enters bay filly Miss Barron, by Ward B.
J. H. Scholefield enters Jay C., by Bay Rum.
S. B. Welch enters Alice W., by Lottery.
P. E. G. Atzar enters unnamed colt by Grosvenor Jr.

The two-year-old stake was declared closed with ten entries, as follows:

- R. L. Orr enters bay colt Adonis, by Ward B.
D. D. & Co. enters bay filly Letter B., by Ward B.
George Waple enters gray colt Harry, by Jim Mulvanna.
S. H. Scholefield enters bay filly Lou Benton, by Matchless.
M. P. Kelly enters bay colt Little La Gloria, by Brown Jug.
D. D. & Co. enters brown colt Chief, by Ward B.
P. E. G. Atzar enters brown colt Loupe A., by Zanoni.
L. M. Ladd enters unnamed colt, by Jim Mulvanna.
Geo. E. Shaw enters black colt System, by Mambino Wilkes.

The two-year-old pacing stakes and two-year-old running stakes were declared off.

A number of new stakes were established, of which due notice will be given by the Secretary.—Free Lance.

Of all the clays of election, Anteeo promises to exceed all in producing 2:20 trotters, and in the breeding on qualities of his get.

The Founder of the "Morgan Horse."

Justin Morgan, the founder of the Morgan family of horses, was foaled in Springfield, Mass., in 1793—just a century ago!—and was taken to Randolph, Vt., in 1795, when an unbroken colt, by Mr. Justin Morgan, who had received him in payment of a small debt.

He was a bay horse, with no markings, fourteen hands high and weighed 950 lbs., and yet he "could out-draw, out-walk, out-trot, and out-run every horse that was matched against him." Although small, he could not be beaten where strength, speed and endurance were the tests.

What was the cause of his great strength and speed and endurance, which enabled him to stamp those characteristics upon his descendants?

The sire of Justin Morgan was True Briton, a beautiful bay, and his dam was by Diamond, a son of the famous Wildair, imported from England by James de Lancey, of Long Island, a son of Lieut.-Gov. James de Lancey, who was for many years a member of the General Assembly of the State of New York and an extensive breeder of racehorses.

True Briton, the sire of Justin, was by Moreton's Traveler, who was by Croft's Partner; whose grandsire was by Byerly Turk, and in whose male line of descent occur such other famous names as Spanker, d'Arcy's Yellow Turk, Morocco Barb, and Bald Peg, who sire was an Arab horse and her dam a Barb mare. In the female line are Curwen's Bay Barb, the Selaby Turk and White-legged Lowther Barb.

The dam of Justin Morgan was by Diamond, a son of Wildair, by Cade, the best son of Godolphin Arabian; and in the line of Cade's descent are such names as St. Victor's Barb, Akaster Turk, Leedes' Arabian, Spanker, d'Arcy's Yellow Turk, Morocco Barb and Bald Peg, whose sire was an Arab and her dam a Barb mare.

Strange as it may seem, Justin Morgan was nearly a brother in blood to the famous Matchem, who was grandsire of the great Trumpator, who, with Eclipse and Herod, may be said to have been the founders of the English racehorse, for a high authority has said: "Every individual has descended from either Eclipse, Herod or Trumpator, or a combination of all three."

We find, upon the best evidence and authority, that Justin Morgan came on his sire's side from Croft's Partner and on his dam's side from Cade.

The similarity of his breeding with that of Trumpator may be shown in this way:

Trumpator's paternal g. grandsire was Cade.

Justin Morgan's g. g. grandsire was Cade. Trumpator's paternal g. g. grandsire was Partner. Trumpator's maternal g. g. grandsire was Partner. Justin Morgan's paternal g. g. grandsire was Partner. Arab and Barb blood in the same sires frequently occur in the pedigrees of both Trumpator and Justin Morgan.

The breeding of Justin Morgan's grandam is not known, but from the fact that she is described as having "a little long hair about the fetlocks, and for two or three inches above the fetlock on the back side of the legs," it may reasonably be inferred that she may have been of French Canadian origin.

Justin Morgan was, then, an Americo-Arab, and he was as fully entitled to a place in the American Stud Book as American Eclipse was; although, for that matter, Eclipse was never registered in Bruce's American Stud Book.

Justin Morgan had in his veins the blood of Godolphin Arabian, of Flying Childers, son of Darley Arabian and of Leedes' Arabian; and he had other Eastern blood strong on both the paternal and maternal sides.

Although large mares were bred to him, he seldom, if ever, sired an ungainly foal. His progeny partook largely and uniformly of his compact build, his even temper and his great endurance.

It gave evidence of great purity of blood; for, without that in the sire, the foal is almost sure to inherit more largely the qualities, good, bad or indifferent, of the dam.

During the lives of Justin Morgan and his four great sons, Bulrush, Woodbury, Sherman and Revenge, and their immediate descendants, the Morgan seems to have predominated in Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut and parts of Massachusetts; and it is remarkable how closely this blood was interbred for many years.

It was, probably, because it "came handy" for the farmer to send his Morgan mare to be bred to a son or grandson of Justin, standing for service "near by."

In this way "they builded wiser than they knew," for thus the type became fixed; and, the blood being good and pure, it became after a time almost impossible to "breed it out."

Even to this day, a century after the birth of Justin Morgan, with all the manifold crosses with common and degenerate blood, a mare or horse who has for a remote ancestor a descendant of old Justin Morgan will show it in some one or more of the characteristics of that great little horse.—Trelawney, in Rider and Driver.

Doble's Two-Minute Trotter.

Budd Doble has designs on the two-minute record for trotters with a horse that is his own property, and he has been a long time looking for the horse he thought could "do the trick." He kept his plans quiet, but last week he got what he had been looking for down in Kentucky. It was the three-year-old filly Ballona, by Stranger—Lady Bunker, and he bought her from her owners, St. Clair & Curry, of Lexington.

After the purchase had been made Doble announced that he proposed to train the filly for the sole purpose of making a record of 2:00 with her, and added that he was sure he would succeed. As her record is but 2:19, horsemen laughed a bit about Doble's intention, and suggested that he go and get a plow nag and all that sort of thing to "do the trick" with.

After they had all had their laugh, it turned out that Doble had paid a very fancy price for the filly, and that he had had his eye on her for nearly a year, and was determined to have her at any cost. It is said that he has seen her work half-miles in 1:02, and that she has done quarters at even a faster rate, and that she is one of the best individuals in the State of Kentucky. Her appearance, instead of her breeding, is what did the business with Doble, and he now has no hesitancy in saying that he has always believed that she would develop into a faster mare than Nancy Hanks.

Doble says that she will not be trained for races, but solely for the purpose of making a record mile, and that he has every reason to believe she will hold that record at the end of the year. Ballona has been sent to the stable at Terre Haute, where she will be in the company of that great trio of trotters, Nancy Hanks, Stamboul and Belle Vera.

Stamboul, by the way, did not take very kindly to the Terre Haute weather when he first arrived there. Bred in Lower California, he had always been used to the mildest sort of weather, and the snow that he had to take his exercise in was a decided puzzle to him. He carried on quite a bit when he was first introduced to it, but recent reports from there state that he now appears to thoroughly enjoy his romps in it whenever he is allowed to get out of the covered shed where his exercise is usually taken. Indiana hay and water bothered the great trotter at first, but he has now got accustomed to them, and has no trouble from eating and drinking all he can get.

Parkville Farm Out for the Money.

Considering the attitude that John H. Shults has always maintained as a patron of the light-harness horse, some of the remarks that have recently been made about him are at least uncalled for. In a recent issue of the Kentucky Stock Farm, under the caption, "A Good One on Mr. Shults," a very much garbled account of the way in which he became the owner of Eagle Princess is told, prefaced by a comment which would make it appear that in being a liberal buyer at public sales Mr. Shults was moved solely by a desire to keep his check-book in exercise without any regard to getting the worth of his money. Those who know the Brooklyn millionaire as he really is would never draw such a distorted picture, but as a great many more people read about the master of the Parkville Stud than come in personal contact with him, the popular notion of this prominent breeder is largely formed by what is written. One would think that the leading turf journal of the blue-grass region would at least be careful about its facts in telling how one of its fashionably-bred youngsters happened to come North, but there is scarcely a detail correctly stated in this connection. Without going over the story as it has happened, it will be as well to give the true version and let those who read both see the inaccuracies.

It will be remembered that a few years ago Mr. Shults had a farm on the Marysville pike, near Lexington, where he kept most of his broodmares and some of the stallions. This interest took him frequently to Kentucky, and in the month of April, 1890, in company with Steve Maxwell and W. W. Shuit, who is now Superintendent at Parkville, he paid a visit to Ash Grove. As the party walked towards the stables they were attracted by a band of yearlings in a paddock, and Mr. Shults, who is especially fond of the youngsters, proposed for each one to pick out a colt or filly that would prove the fastest without knowing the breeding. Mr. Shults said: "That lets me out, for I know the whole lot," so Mr. Maxwell was left to test his judgment with that of Mr. Shults. The latter picked a roan filly, and Mr. Maxwell's choice was a bay, and on investigation learned that the roan was by Eagle Bird, out of Addie Leggett, by Young Jim, while the bay was a daughter of William L. and Dewy Eve, sister to Jay Bird.

"We've made our choice," said Mr. Shults to Colonel Simmons, "now what is the price of each filly?"

"For the roan $1000 and $5000 for the bay," was the reply.

"I do not want any more stock," continued Mr. Shults, "but I would give you $500 for that roan filly just to have her trained."

"You know we have only one price at Ash Grove," was the response, and then, after some good-natured bantering, the genial Colonel of George Wilkes fame presented the Eagle Bird fadling to his guest from Long Island. She was sent over to the Lexington Farm and kept there till the following October, when with the rest of the stock left over from the sale she was shipped to Parkville. After the usual breaking the filly was handled a little for speed in 1891, but did not show much promise at the trot. Last year she was permitted to pace, as she inclined to that gait, and one day when Driscoll let her step along showed a half in 1:08 and repeated in 1:05. This was enough to prove that Mr. Shults had made a selection that did credit to his discernment of a speedy confirmation, and Eagle Princess, as she is called, is now at the training stable where Driscoll presides, to be further developed and tried in actual contests this season. As the bay filly selected by Steve Maxwell was sold and put to breeding it is not probable that there will be any opportunity of determining which made the better choice, but Mr. Shults has at least had the satisfaction of picking out a valuable animal even, when she was not marked up to a high price.

It is not by any means on the doings of any one animal, no matter how promising, that Parkville Farm intends to rest content in the future, and this season will find the stock from the big establishment on the Coney Island boulevard more prominently on the turf than ever. John Driscoll, who has been head trainer there ever since the place was founded, is now handling a string of thirteen, and will be ready to score up whenever the campaign begins. A special palace car is now being built by the Arms Company, to be thoroughly equipped and ready by May 1, when Driscoll will probably take his lot to Baltimore to get the advantage of the early season there so as to be in shape for the opening at the Philadelphia Driving Park on May 16. His pupils include six young stallions of the bluest blood, the most famous of which is, of course, Regal Wilkes, 2:11½, now six years old and fresh from his triumphs in California, where he secured the championship two years and has trained on steadily until he is now the fastest trotter bred at San Mateo. For a big, rangy horse Regal Wilkes is unusually muscular, and though quite low in flesh at present, looks strong and healthy. His near relative, Jay Wilkes, out of the dam of Sidney, is a compact fellow, and one of the sort that progresses steadily, though he has never shown any great flight of speed. Mozart, a son of Stamboul, is another recent addition who is well equipped to make a name for himself, as besides the speed inheritance from his sire he has for a dam Modjeska, a strongly-bred mare by Enfield, and already well known through the doings of her son Reference, 2:18.

Baron Rose, another high-horn product of the Pacific Slope, has been at Parkville since he was a yearling and has grown to be a lordly specimen of his kind, with enough natural speed to insure his doing justice to his lineage when he makes his bow to the public. Driscoll takes special pride in the son of Stamboul and Minnehaha, showing him beside his two-year-old filly out of Edith R., 2:17, and appropriately named Edith Rose. The two make an impressive sight, and the filly will also be trained and started in stakes for her age, one of her engagements being the $2,000 event at Fleetwood next September. Chan Q., by Sidney, is also a promising young stallion, while Thistle needs no introduction, for he has been on the turf sufficiently since he was transplanted from the other side of the continent to show that the highest honors are not beyond his reach. During a short campaign in 1891 as a four-year-old he won a heat in a field of aged horses at Philadelphia, and scored 2:19. The big black brother of Gold Leaf was intended for a longer season last year, but an accident early in the Grand Circuit necessitated a let-up in his training. He reappeared at Hartford, and though short of work won a good race, the last heat in a blinding storm, and retired with a mark of 2:14. This year he has filled out and looks fit for any amount of work, while his great flight of speed is always on top.

Of the half-dozen mares that will be in Driscoll's string Eagle Princess and Edith Rose have already been mentioned. Besides them are Lou Wilkes, four years old, with a mark of 2:20½ from last season; Fernale, the daughter of Fern Leaf, by Siumocolon, two more productions from the sunny slope. Maggie Pandect, a brown filly of three years, by Pandect, out of Maggie Wilkes, and Talapa, also a brown, but a year younger, by Baron Wilkes, dam Hildegard, by Harry Clay, are a likely-looking pair and bred to be winners. There is one gelding, General Stanford, by Stanford, 2:26½, dam Alaska, by Electioneer, to accompany the twelve mentioned, and Driscoll evidently has no superstitious fears about having enough horses to make up the unlucky thirteen.

Another string has been assigned to Nichols, who is now jogging about sixteen head. Pandect, the legitimate successor of Pancoast at Parkville Farm, will surely add another 2:20 performer to his sire's roll and round out the fame of the great Reina Victoria, four of whose sons have already entered the list, two of them scoring below 2:20. As Pandect could speed at a 2:18 clip in his four-year-old form with only about a month's handling, there is no reason why he should not take kindly to further development with the more extended opportunity he will have this year. Linda Stanford, four years old, by Stanford, dam Linda, by Electioneer, is the only one of Nichols' pupils with a record, she having earned a mark of 2:30 at Poughkeepsie last September. There is a trio of three-year-old fillies, including Lizette, by Pandect, dam Lizette, by Voltaire; Avoca, by Sable Wilkes, out of Nina De, 2:26½; and Florence J., by Hexameter, dam Izaide, whose daughter Celerity went in the list last year. The two-year-olds muster a dozen strong, the colts being Cricklewood, a chestnut by Sidney, out of a sister to Beaumont, 2:23½, and Albert Mackay, a bay by Albert W., out of the dam of El Monte, 2:29. The ten fillies are all of fashionable blood, among them being such high-born demoiselles as Wiltona, by Wilton, dam Addie De, 2:25½; Liberty Bell, by Guy Wilkes, out of Nina De, 2:26½; Mowitza, a daughter of William L. and Lizette, by Voltaire; Roschud, by Sidney, out of Rose Leaf, dam of Falrose, 2:19, by Buccaneer; Linda Brown, by Brown, 2:18½, dam Linda Sprague, 2:19; Clover Leaf, by Pandect, out of Clover, by Harry Clay; Varden, by Albert W., out of Vardee, by Echo, and Silvern, by Sidney, dam Miss Casserly, by Eugene Casserly. There is a single representative of Pandect's sire among the fillies in Linda Pancoast, out of Linda, 2:32½, by Electioneer. Nichols has already proven himself a faithful tutor, and did well with the trotters he handled at Poughkeepsie for Mr. Pickhardt before he came to Parkville.

George Evans, who has been with Mr. Shults for some time, is looking after about a score of youngsters, and will probably have an opportunity to try his hand in public with some of them this season. Nelly Whips, by Whips, 2:27½, dam by Mohawk Chief; Sweet Mint, by Albert W., out of Jessamine, by Director; The Rose, a bay gelding by Baron Rose, dam by Warwick, and Norlette, another gelding by Norval, out of the imported thoroughbred mare Bridget, by Foxhall, are among those intrusted to Evans. Superintendent Shults says that they are in correspondence with another well-known developer of colts, and he will probably be added to the forces at the farm. This is a formidable array, and if ever a breeder deserved success it should fall to the lot of Mr. Shults, who has certainly he good wishes of every turfman in the stud.—Horseman.

The Botfly.

The gaddy (Gastrophilus equi) attacks the animal while grazing late in the summer, its object being not to derive sustenance, but to deposit its eggs. This is accomplished by means of a glutinous excretion, causing the ova (eggs) to adhere to the hairs. The parts selected are chiefly those of the shoulder, base of the neck, and inner parts of the fore legs, especially about the knees, for in these situations the horse will have no difficulty in reaching the ova with its tongue. When the animal licks those parts of the coat where the eggs have been placed the moisture of the tongue, aided by warmth, hatches the ova, and in something less than three weeks from the time of the disposition of the eggs the larvæ have made their escape. As maggots they are next transferred to the mouth and ultimately to the stomach along with food and drink. A great many larvæ perish during the passive mode of immigration, some being dropped from the mouth and others being crushed in the fodder during mastication. It has been calculated that out of the many hundreds of eggs deposited on a single horse scarcely one out of five of the larvæ arrive within the stomach.

Notwithstanding this waste the interior of the stomach may become completely covered (cuticular portion) with hots. Whether there be few or many they are anchored in this situation chiefly by means of two large cephalic hooks. After the hots have attained perfect growth they voluntarily loosen their hold and allow themselves to be carried along the alimentary canal until they escape with the feces. In all cases they sooner or later fall to the ground, and when transferred to the soil they bury themselves beneath the surface in order to undergo transformation into the pupa condition.

Having remained in the earth for a period of six or seven weeks they finally emerge from their pupal cocoons as perfect dipterous (winged) insects—gaddies. It thus appears that hots ordinarily pass about eight months of their lifetime in the digestive organs of the horse.

According to Prof. Michener, hots seldom—not more than once in ten thousand times—cause colic. They may when present in large numbers, slightly interfere with digestion, but beyond this they are, with these few exceptions, entirely harmless. It is entirely useless to attempt to dislodge them from the stomach, and they will go at their appointed time, which is mostly during the months of May and June.—Newspaper bulletin from the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

Danteo will be sold Wednesday next at Killip's.

The American Derby of 1893.

The following table, taken from the St. Louis Republic, shows what the various American Derby candidates did in the line of racing during 1892, and gives an excellent line on what should, "on form," win the rich event this season:

Table with columns: Winner, Second, Third, Fourth, Amount Won, Name, and various race results for 1892.

There were twenty-nine non-starters in 1892, as follows:

AMERICAN DERBY WINNERS. Table with columns: Year, Stakes, Value, Winner, Second, Time.

The following horses finished third in this great race, the year being indicated by the order named: Boh Cook, Troubadour, Sir Joseph, Wary, Los Angeles, Retrieve, Ben Kingsbury, Kingman and Cicero.

The table above covers the history of this classic race since inception in 1884. But one sire, Grinstead, has to his credit as many as two winners—Volante and Silver Cloud—while Modesty is the only filly that ever won this prize.

With a guaranteed value of $50,000 to the winner, the American Derby to be run at Washington Park, Chicago, on June 24th of the present year, steps to the front as the richest race of its character in turf history.

In 1864 the first Derby of any amount run in America came off at Patterson, N. J. The victor proved Norfolk, known to the present generation of turf followers as the sire of the mighty El Rio Rey.

first lot at Chicago, but in the future Grand Rapids will be the place from which they will be forwarded as a large factory is to be erected for the purpose of manufacture. In style the "hikes" will be about like those in present use, but the material will, harring the steel axles and rubber ties, be entirely of aluminum, including the shafts, truss and seat, and when completed will weigh at the maximum twenty-five pounds, while the lightest ones will weigh but eighteen pounds.

A Blessing in Disguise.

It has been the rule that periods of depression follow periods of unnatural inflation, and the present depression in the business of breeding, or rather in the market for selling trotters, is no exception to the rule.

In the unnatural excitement of an inflated market men forget or put aside the strict principles of business prudence so essential to success, and sooner or later the penalty is over-production or production of less average merit or over-trading, whatever may have been the line of business in which the rule was violated, and in the reaction brought about many must suffer, just as many have profited by the unhealthy expansion.

Any thoughtful reader can readily see that the general policy of trotting horse breeders during the past ten years has been little less than suicidal. Individually nothing has been too poor to breed if it had a pedigree with a standard tag on.

Every breeding farm, and the number soon became legion, was turned into a horse mill, where every energy was bent upon grinding out produce; the greatest number in the shortest possible time. It was not a question of excelling in quality, but only of producing quantity and turning that quantity into dollars.

How many men engaged in the business from a natural love of the horse and a natural aptitude for the calling? How many engaged in the business with a desire to lay the foundation carefully, because it was to form a life work, and one that it was hoped might be handed down to posterity with honor and fame, as a few of our great breeders suds have been conducted and bequeathed?

Every reader can answer these questions as well as we can, and the answer is a sufficient reason for the state of affairs that exists to-day in the trotting horse market.

The longer trotting matters continued as they have been for several years past the more reckless breeders became, and the less attention would be paid to the laws of nature or what we term the science of breeding.

Unsoundness, faulty conformation, undesirable color or markings, a mixed gait or tendency to pace, size, everything, in fact, was overlooked so speed could be shown or expected in the produce.

We all know the results; there could be no other expected. The country is overrun to-day with a lot of nondescripts, that without extreme speed are worth less than the cost of production.

The longer the feverish excitement continued the larger became the production of low-grade trotters, and under these conditions have we not all reason to be thankful that the bubble has burst, and that breeders are pausing to consider how unwisely many things have been conducted.

Hereafter when a breeder begins business he will know what he desires to produce before he begins, and he will use every means at his command to attain the desired result. More discrimination will be used in the selection of the foundation stock.

It has been said that a chain is no stronger than its weakest link. So, in breeding, a sire or dam must be judged by the imperfections and not by the best points. At this time no breeder can afford to overlook any imperfections.

Again, the business of breeding trotting horses has been greatly overdone. Men have rushed into it without any special fitness, and it will be a good thing for themselves and others when such men rush out again. As well expect a man without experience or natural adaptation to successfully found a bank or practice law.

To breed and attain the highest results requires close study, careful personal attention, a natural adaptation and a liberal supply of brains. Without being able to contribute all of these requirements a man had better turn his attention to some pursuit where a larger measure of success awaits him.

The highest type of the trotter is about the grandest animal man ever produced, and from this time on we may expect the average to approach gradually much nearer to the ideal. The greatest problem, however, with many is: What shall we do with the culls or nondescripts already produced?—Exchange.

The feature of Wednesday's sale will be the forced sale of the great young stallion Danteo. It will be the opportunity of the season.

Aluminum Sulkies.

Sulkies made of clay! Well, that is the size of it, for the coming "bike" is to be of aluminum, the base of which is the common red clay so abundantly found in the West. It is strong and durable, but it does not corrode or taruish, and is capable of a very high polish. It is lighter and cheaper than wood. It is now to be seen in the form of ornaments, cigar cases, etc., but the fastest use it has been adapted to is for shoes for horses, where light ones are desired, and also in the manufacture of sulkies. Mr. W. L. Boyle, of Grand Rapids, Mich., has patented the improvement, and together with Mr. Leathers, of the same place, is now engaged in manufacturing the lishness, its far-reaching effect upon the future of the country, cannot fail to enlist the sympathies and the active aid and co-operation of every unselfish, well-meaning citizen who has an eye for the ultimate good of the public.

This movement is one of the primal steps, one of the necessary and fundamental measures which underlie the structure of all law looking to the preservation of fish and game. The forests must be preserved in order to preserve the streams, especially those fed by the snow which is held in reserve by the timber of the mountains. Shaded streams are essential to trout.

The people in common hold but one species of property; an interest in our public streets and roads, our National and State buildings, our National, State and city parks, and last but not least, in our fish and game. Of course they also hold in common a right to sail upon the high seas and its tide waters and upon all navigable streams and the right to take therefrom, under the restrictions of National and State legislation, the fish and the game. If this property, the fish and game, and these rights are to be perpetuated then some wise and, for better effectiveness, as nearly uniform provisions should be established as the nature of the case will permit.

The preservation of all National and State parks intact is of the first importance. The establishment of other National parks, wherever nature has provided for such, is a matter of the utmost importance. Colorado presents an area of thousands of acres in her vast wealth of mountain territory which should be devoted to this purpose. There are various sections available for such purposes, and the opportunity to reduce them to possession is one that should not be neglected. This subject, of course, presents a field of work so vast and far reaching that the present generation can only do its part in a grand work which future generations will be delighted to do.

The work of a National Sportsman's organization would effect a world of good which cannot be accomplished by any other body. Let every sportsman lend a hand now, to the end that the organization may be rendered effective for good from the inception of this body. Petitions are now being circulated to the end that a full expression may be given the undertaking. The call is as follows; cut it out, paste on a sheet of paper and secure all the names you can and forward to us at once:

CALL FOR A NATIONAL SPORTSMEN'S CONVENTION.

I heartily endorse the project of organizing a National Sportsmen's Association, which shall have for its primary purpose the work required to secure greater uniformity and co-operation in the fish and game laws of the various States; a more united effort to prevent the capture, killing, shipment or sale of game during the close season; and establishing, where practicable, public parks in each State, where the natural forests shall be preserved, the lakes or streams therein remain unpolluted, and the denizens of fur and feather be strictly protected that they may multiply and replenish the depleted woods and waters of the surrounding country.

To these objects we hereby offer our active support and would request that a convention be called at an early date, at Chicago, to perfect a permanent and useful organization.

The Lincoln Gun Club.

The Lincoln Gun Club grounds presented a lively scene on Sunday last, it being the first regular match of the season for this leading inanimate target shooting club.

This club always has a large attendance and it presents some very able shots, so that the contests there held are always interesting. The shooting began early in the day and continued until a late hour. A most pleasant day was spent by all who visited the grounds.

The main match was shot off with the following results:

The next event was at 15 singles; $1.50 entrance purse divided into 50, 30 and 20 per cent. The result is as follows:

The day was greatly enjoyed by all present.

A 15-ball pool tournament will take place next Saturday evening March 11, '93, at 7:30 p. m., at the Yosemite Billiard Parlors, No. 8 Eddy street, San Francisco. Open to all comers. For valuable cash prizes and trophies. The following well known pool experts have signed and entered: Frank McDonough, E. E. Johnson, E. A. Gamble, Geo. Becker, J. Garrison, W. Borland, J. Wilson and others.

Mr. W. H. McKittrick, of Bakersfield, has been in the city for some time past visiting Colonel Shafter, commanding military forces at Angel Island. Mr. McKittrick is an enthusiast in field sports and trap pleasures, as well, and while here ordered a supply of traps and targets for use of himself and friends at the metropolis of the valley.

The Country Club.

The Country Club opened the season's trap shooting at Oakland Shooting Park on Saturday last by engaging in the performance of the first number of six events to be given between this and the opening of the season for field shooting next fall.

The weather was very unpropitious, the rain falling in all the varied gradations during the day, from a misty, hesitating drizzle to a copiousness which suggested that the entire fire brigade of heaven had been called out, and seated on the ragged edges of the clouds, were turning the hose upon the Park with all engines at full pressure.

The birds were an uncommonly good lot, and, when the rain was not falling too hard, got up and off in splendid motion.

This being the Club's first event of the season, called out a very good representation, notwithstanding the state of the weather, twenty-one gentlemen participating in the sport of the day. Several new faces were presented at the score, and most of them proved themselves at home with the gun. Messrs. J. B. Stetson, D. O. Richards, W. E. Brown, D. T. Murphy and Wm. Berg took part for the first time with the Club on these grounds, and they all shot well for new beginners at trap work.

Messrs. Webster, Babcock, Stetson and Oxnard took the eleven o'clock boat and shot off their score before the rain began falling, and, from other causes, had much harder birds than fell to the lot of the balance of the gentlemen later in the day, and, as a result, the scores of these gentlemen represent, comparatively speaking, a higher degree of skill than the bare figures indicate. J. Downey Harvey was present, and not only did his part in the shooting, but kept up, as he always does, a running fusillade of witticisms, which kept the entire company in good humor.

The presentation of the question of class shooting as appearing in these columns, from time to time, has not been devoid of substantial good.

This event was the first ever held by this club where class shooting has been introduced. The good effects of this movement was at once noticed, as in the events following the main match of the day every one was eager to cross swords, so to speak, with those of their respective class and as a result the shooting was spirited and lively. The gentlemen shooting at thirty yards rise comprised the first class, those shooting at twenty-eight yards formed class two, while class three was made up of those shooting from the twenty-six yard score line. No sooner than one pool was finished in any class than a new one was formed, and the shooting ran along just as smoothly as though there had been but one class. The purses, as a result, were not so large as formerly, but every one was highly pleased, the contests in all of the classes being productive of the most spirited rivalry. It kept many of the gentlemen in the pool shooting simply because it gave them a show of being at the top of the score once in a while.

In the main match Mr. Ramon E. Wilson did some very clever shooting, in fact his shooting for the entire day could not well have been better as he lost but one bird out of all the number fired at and he continued well up in the days' pool shooting.

Mr. R. H. Sprague is another of the excellent shots of the club and few of the matches were shot without his score figuring well up with the winners.

Mr. F. R. Webster did not shoot in his usual form, as he has become one of the leaders in making good scores in the club.

Mr. Harry Babcock's position at the trap combined with the ease and grace with which he makes good scores always renders him a noticeable factor at all the trap events which he attends but his love of the fields and mountains prevents him from participating in but few of the club's regular events.

Mr. W. E. Bourn, a new man at the score, demonstrated that he is a first class hand with the gun.

Mr. Tallant, Mr. Atherton and Mr. Wooster shot well, although the first and last named of this trio were not shooting up to their usual average.

SUMMARY.

OAKLAND, CAL., March 4, 1893—Oakland Shooting Park. The Country Clubs first monthly shooting contest for the season for the Club's annual medals and trophies. President, F. R. Webster; Vice-President, Robert Oxnard; Secretary, Wm. C. Murdock; Field Captain, George Crocker. The score.

In the second event of this class Wilson and Sprague divided on four straight kills. In the third event Sprague and Wilson again divided on six clean kills.

In Class No. 2, Messrs. A. C. and W. B. Tubbs divided on the first score. In the next event Mr. Oxnard won the purse on four straight kills, while the following one resulted in favor of Messrs. Crocker and Oxnard, the latter winning the final alone.

In Class No. 3, Messrs. Atherton and Richards divided on second round, Mr. Atherton winning first in next event by killing his first bird. The third event fell to Mr. Harvey on one kill. Mr. Atherton won the next event by killing three straight, dividing the next with Mr. Hall.

It was spirited pleasure during the whole afternoon in spite of the falling rain.

The State Sportsman's Association has had its ranks augmented by the addition of the Humboldt Sporting and Recre-ative Club. T. A. Smith is Secretary of this club.

The Yellowstone Park Segregation

The spectators who are striving with might and main, by every means known to lobbyists, to have the Segregation bill pass the House have for their object only selfish and mercenary ends. In order to accomplish their nefarious purpose they will go to any length necessary to succeed in passing the bill. The bill has already passed the Senate and its fate now lies with the House. The outcome will be awaited with the greatest interest by every lover of field sports.

The portion which this gang of speculators desire to have cut off and thrown open contains some of the best cover for game known to the country. Remove the timber, as will speedily be done, if the bill should succeed in becoming a law, and there will remain but a barren and unattractive waste of desert land unfit for the use of either man or beast. It is in the very nature of events that the speculators who alone can hope to derive any profit from the passage of the bill are the only active ones regarding the measure. The great number of the citizens of Montana and of the Union who have but a common interest in the preservation of the Park as it now stands are not organized and have no effective channel through which to present their sentiments to Congress. The public depend on the rational interpretation of all such measures by its representatives in Congress, but these unreached by any but fragmentary expressions of public feeling are too often falling into grievous error.

If the bill passes, the hide hunters, those Black Barts of the sportsman's world, will run riot over the region, and by making excursions into forbidden ground will soon deplete the segregated part of the Park of its deer, elk, buffalo and mountain sheep, as well as of other game. It seems that no sooner is anything of value in any sense added to the public reservations of the country than the eagle eye and itching hand of private greed is fastened upon it. The hope of a strong executive veto seems to be about the only factor against such measures becoming laws, for it is confidently believed that the lobby could not influence the President on this matter.

The Necessity for National Organization.

The necessity for a national organization, a congress, if you please, composed of delegates from each of the several states, it seems to us to be obvious to every thoughtful lover of nature and of field sports.

The central idea of such an organization should be, and from the very nature of the organization would be, the taking of such steps, the crystallization of such measures into law, as nearly uniform as possible in the districts which nature has rendered similar in conditions, as to climate and game production to the end, that uniformity of laws may be established, thus enhancing the facilities for the enforcement of the same.

Every man who has had aught to do with the enforcement of the game laws has, no doubt, been brought to realize the importance of a uniformity of the game laws between adjoining states where similar conditions obtain.

Game is being continually shipped into various states where it is unlawful to kill the same, at the time of such shipment, at the taking of the same is lawful in the states from which it is shipped. The lawless and vicious, taking advantage of such conditions which exist owing to the difference of the laws obtaining in the different states, do not hesitate to turn on prohibited territory, where the game is sought to be reserved, and these lawless individuals do not hesitate to wear that the game so taken on prohibited grounds was taken cross the line where by law it was legal to capture the same.

We are well aware that in order to carry out this idea effectively will require a vast amount of effort, concentrated, determined, persistent effort, but we are firm in the faith that the sportsmen of the country may accomplish the enactment of all just and proper measures which have for their ultimate object the good of the entire people.

The National Forestry Congress has for years been doing a grand and noble work, a work which, by reason of its unself-

The California Wing Shooting Club.

On the first of the week the California Wing Shooting Club met at Oakland track and celebrated the second event for the season of this the oldest wing shooting club in the State.

It took the practice afforded by the dozen birds in the regular match to place Messrs. Robinson, "Slade" and Fay in good form for shooting, and each of the trio did some handsome work in the pools later in the day.

SUMMARY.

OAKLAND, Cal., March 5, 1893.—The California Wing Shooting Club's second monthly match of the season, for the Club's prizes and medals. President, Dr. S. E. Knowles; Secretary, Mr. Crittenden Robinson. The score:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Dr. Chapman, Crittenden Robinson, "Randall", "Slade", Edward Fay, J. E. Duke, C. E. Pendell.

After the main match luncheon was enjoyed at the hotel on the grounds, when pool shooting was continued throughout the remainder of the day. The first event was at twelve birds, the result standing as follows:

American Game Protection.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—From all sections of the country favorable comments have been received regarding the proposed National Sportsmen's Association.

The Secretary of the New York State Sportsmen's Association, Mr. John B. Sage, of Buffalo, says: "I wish success for the National Sportsmen's Association, and if I can do anything to help let me know."

Mr. Richard O. Harding, Secretary of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective Association, writes: "I shall be thankful for the opportunity to recommend so important a subject for the consideration of our association."

Mr. J. N. Wass, of Beresford, S. D., Secretary of the South Dakota Sportsmen's Association, gives the following hearty endorsement: "I am highly pleased with the idea, and most sincerely hope it will materialize in the near future and bear good fruit until the remotest parts of the country shall reap the benefits."

The Secretary of the Arkansas State Sportsmen's Association, John W. Dickinson Jr., of Little Rock, writes: "Once the sportsmen assemble in a body from the different States, it is safe to say that the will have formulated a plan by which the named association will thrive and be a pleasure and pride to the members of each State association."

Mr. Charles A. Bailey, secretary of the Kentucky Fish and Game Club, takes occasion to say: The call for a National Sportsmen's Association I thoroughly endorse.

Mr. J. P. Barium, a prominent sportsman of Prairie du Chien, Wis., gives the following endorsement: "This is a subject I am greatly interested in, having spent much time and no small amount of money in stocking fields and streams for the purpose of occasionally enjoying a day's sport with rod and gun."

Dr. E. S. Holmes, who has for many years been prominently identified with the Michigan State Sportsmen's Association, makes the following sensible comment: "If sportsmen have become broad, statesman-like, patriotic so as to act unselfishly in the interests of the people of the country and posterity, I shall be in favor of organization."

Hon. A. J. Turner, of Portage, Wis., one of the most practical and enthusiastic sportsmen of the Badger State, writes this: "I have attached my signature to the call for a National Convention, because I am heartily in sympathy with the objects sought. I reached the reluctant conclusion some time ago that the game in this country is in process of speedy extermination—at least practically so."

laws. The great mass of people look upon them with disfavor, or, at least, as an abridgment of their natural rights; and many "sportsmen" so grossly abuse their privileges during the open season as to disgust people who would like to see good game laws.

Mr. Wakeman Holberton, secretary of the New York Association for the protection of game, and author of a most excellent hook on angling, says: "I have had thirty years' experience in carrying our measures for the protection of game, and must say that under the present conditions I have found it a very up-hill business."

Milwaukee, Wis., February 28, 1893. The above letter comes from that enthusiastic and able sportsman, "Will Wildwood," and presents a most encouraging outlook for this most important of all movements in the field of sportsmanship, looking as it does to the public good.

Losing Consciousness.

Did you ever lose consciousness? Of course you have often been asleep, but I mean were you ever "put to sleep" by a blow or accident of any nature? I have, and I was so impressed by the new sensation to which I was introduced that I am persuaded to note them down before the accumulating days shall have effaced the faint and subtle delineations made on my mind at that time.

Some weeks since, when attending the field trials conducted under the management of the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club, I met with an unusual experience. Three gentlemen and myself were riding out to the grounds in a surrey. The morning was unusually cool; a damp, thick fog lay over the valley, rendering the drive somewhat chilly.

Immediately I felt a warm, sickening sensation in the region of the stomach, and the wave of heat seemed to sweep upward. I immediately realized that I was going to faint. The next instant I had passed into entirely different environments; into a new state of being.

The sky and atmosphere seemed of roseate tint and I lay at ease floating unconcernedly through the air. What seems strange to me now is that I saw myself, was watching myself, floating along in all the luxury of uneffortful progress as if I, the observer, and I, the observed, were two separate and distinct beings—a segregated duality.

The sensation changed slowly and the music that had so charmed me died softly away in the distance and then I began to feel a shudder pass over my body, then I heard faintly the sound of voices and next I could make out but dimly the forms of those about me, then like a flash sight and hearing was fully restored and I heard my friend, the Doctor, say: "We've saved him. He will be all right."

The Spoonbill Gun Club of Sacramento has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, John Fitzgerald; Vice-President, George Naghel; Captain, Less Morrison; Assistant Captain, George Chapman; Treasurer, Charles Flohr; Secretary, Joseph Maddux.

The daily press of this city are in the habit of confounding the State Sportsmen's Association with a body known as the State Sportsmen's Protective Association. The long and meritorious work of the former in the field of legitimate sports in this State is well known to the local sportsmen, but others are led into doubt by the errors of many of the local publications in mentioning the names interchangeably.

"Di. Vernon" quotes in the Weekly Journalist of Boston our remarks anent the subject of turning the Yosemite over to the National Government. The sooner this transfer can be accomplished the better it will be for this incomparable Eden.

Names Claimed.

Mr. Jno. K. Orr of this city, claims the name of Lady Bassford for liver and white ticked pointer bitch.

Mr. F. H. Allen's Tomah, on January 31st, threw a litter of nine to same owner's California Alton. There are a number of them yet to be seen at the owner's kennels in this city. They are a fine appearing litter, nicely marked and of good quality.

Mr. H. A. Bassford of Vacaville, has presented to Mr. Jno. K. Orr of this city, a fine pointer bitch which the latter has placed with Mr. C. A. Loud for training at Raymond.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

FIXTURES.

- Washington City Kennel Club's show, Washington, D. C., March 14, 15, 16 and 17. F. S. Webster, Secretary.

American Pet Dog Club's bench show, Lenox Lyceum, New York, May 30, 31, June 1 and 2. T. Farrar Rackham, Secretary.
Hamilton Kennel Club's second annual bench show, Hamilton, Can., September 7, 8, 9 and 10. A. D. Stewart, Secretary.

Do Dogs Reason?

What is reason? The cynic, the orthodox in thought, the automaton who accepts and imitates without ever questioning his leaders, the indolent who find it much more in accordance with their languorously idle lives to follow in the old ruts rather than to carve out new ones for themselves, will all conclude at a glance that the following is none of it, but it may serve to cause even such to think occasionally.

Of course the idea that any creature save man can reason will not for a moment be considered by the man who is so self-conscious as to demand all of his attention to self. To enlarge the scope of individualities or organisms that are capable of reasoning seems to the self-sufficient to be in some way a detraction from their special form of intelligence.

In speaking of the dog or for that matter any of the animal creation, that shows development beyond the simple power of motion, all will concede them the power of perception and as to the dog none will deny the power of memory. If perception and memory he conceded, then the use of these two faculties must necessarily and logically lead up to reason.

Nature creates no organ, no faculty without having a use for the same. Perception and memory, conceding the utility of the latter, necessarily leads to the conclusion that reason is involved in the use of memory.

Coursing at Sacramento.

There was a big crowd at the meeting of the Sacramento Coursing Club held last week at Cally & Williams' ranch on the Marysville road. The following was the result:

First series—W. Healey's Lady Gay beat Andy Larkin's Pat Spain; Tom Shepp's Muldoon beat W. Healey's Iroquois; J. Long's Galty Boy beat M. Griffith's Banshee; M. B. Griffith's Midnight beat Phil. Callahan's Three Cheers; J. Farrell's Amo beat D. Considine's Maud S.; J. Hanford's Blackbird beat F. Ginter's Ringneck; C. Lynch's Tommy S. beat P. Callahan's Sensation; A. Neithercutt's Valley Girl beat F. Ginter's Minute; J. Kennedy's Lady Iris beat A. Neithercutt's Sunday; E. Hines' Yolo Maid beat H. Sheehan's Lily; J. Kennedy's California Girl beat M. Raney's Pride of Ulster.

Second series—Muldoon beat Lady Gay; Galty Boy beat Midnight; Blackbird beat Amo; Valley Girl beat Tommy S.; Yolo Maid beat Lady Iris; California Girl ran a bye.

Third series—Muldoon beat Galty Boy; Valley Girl beat Blackbird; Yolo Maid beat California Girl.

Fourth series—Muldoon beat Valley Girl; Yolo Maid ran a bye.
Fifth series—Muldoon beat Yolo Maid, taking first money; Yolo Maid second, Valley Girl third.

The Coming Bench Show.

The preparations for the coming bench show, to be held in this city during the first week in May next, are progressing finely. The committees are up and doing, working like beavers with the intention of eclipsing all efforts heretofore made on this coast in the bench show line.

It is certain to prove a most attractive and successful event. The labor to crystallize and focalize the kennel interests of this entire section of country is not small, and the active workers in the movement are to be congratulated on the fact that so much of success has attended their endeavors in this line.

The selection of Mr. George Raper as judge is proving each day, since that fact has become known, to have been a well advised step under the circumstances.

Geo. Raper, Esq., of Wincobank, Sheffield, England, has been secured by the Committee Circuit to judge the coming shows at Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle. He recently officiated at the New York Show and is considered one of the best all-round judges in England. His coming will bring on a large entry, and we estimate 350 dogs to be benched.

"Stock cuts" won't do any more, that is where the subject is a dog. They have served their purpose long and, in many instances well, in every other department save the kennel world. Our daily papers use Lydia Pinkham's well-known "phiz" in all cases of emergency. If a telegram flashes across the wire conveying the information that the beautiful Miss or Mrs. so and so has eloped with the Apollo of the whip and reins, Lydia appears as the naughty and daring heroine while some pluggily or slick confidence man's "cut" is used for the latter. Anything to keep up the reputation of the paper for "hustling," but this fast and false business won't do when it comes to dogs, as evidenced by the following from Sports and Amusements. In the latter case only originals are permitted: "Mr. A. G. Eberhardt has been disqualified for six months by the American Kennel Club, on the charges preferred by Dr. Perry, author of the new dog book 'Kennels Secrets.' Mr. Eberhardt was charged with sending the photograph of the English prize-winning pug Roral Duke to Dr. Perry, asserting that it was a good picture of his pug dog Patsy Boliver. Several other charges have been made against Mr. Eberhardt which will come up at the next meeting of the A. K. C. Mr. Eberhardt has for some time rejoiced in the prefix 'Square Deal' Eberhardt."

Echo Cocker Kennel, Stockton, Cal., A. C. Daveport, Prop., sold Flo E, blk white cocker spaniel bitch puppy whelped July 10th, 1892, by Bronta, A. K. C. S. B., 17,064 (ch Brant, A. K. C. S. B., 5,846 ex. Moller) ex Fanny, to David Winders, Stockton, Cal.

Capt. Thomas Higgs will take a trip to Los Angeles to the Southern California Kennel Club Show, and will also have a splendid string of dogs, as some of our prominent dogmen of this city will send some of their best dogs in charge of Mr. Higgs. He will also act as the representative of the Pacific Kennel Club.

The Southern California Kennel Club, at Los Angeles, are looking forward to a successful hench show. Their arrangements are now all but complete. They will have a large entry.

Special prizes are coming in fast for the Pacific Kennel Club Show. Any person desiring to offer a prize can do so by addressing orders to Clarence Haight, 21 Kearney street.

Mr. C. A. Swisler, of Placerville, a lover of rod and gun and interested in good field dogs, was in the city last week and took a look at Mr. Huber's kennel of champion pointers.

E. H. Williams, Esq., has been appointed superintendent of the Pacific Kennel Club Show. He acted in a like capacity in 1889, and will surely make an efficient officer.

The Review, of Portland, published last week, a handsome illustration of Mr. Henry Huber's celebrated pointer, the Duke of Vernon.

ROD.

To a Robin.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

Thou merry herald of the spring,
Thy liquid notes, so pure and sweet,
Throughout the fields and orchards ring,
Telling of winter's sure retreat;

Fortelling birth of grass and flowers,
Of springing corn and waving wheat;
All children of the sun and showers,
That cometh forth the spring to greet.

It must be that thy little breast
Is warmed and cheered by love's sweet glow;
That thoughts of tiny eggs and nest
Call forth thy sweet song's rippling flow.

Ah! robin, robin, would that I
Might fly with free and careless wing,
To cold and storms I'd hid goodbye,
And journey e'er with the spring.

British Sharks.

The following interesting communication appeared in the Field recently from the pen of John T. Carrington. It reads as follows:

During the past autumn there has been quite an invasion of the British waters by one or other species of the sharks which are taken from time to time in our seas. Only recently Mr. Matthias Dunn, of Mevagissey, so well-known as a recorder of many rare fish, pointed out that the blue sharks in the seas off Southern Cornwall were so numerous that they were seriously interfering with the pilchard fishery off his port. Instead of the pilchards feeding quietly as is their custom to the advantage of the fishermen, they were wild and packed in shoals and altogether in skittish mood. Recently some Ramegate fisherfolk brought in another species, said to weigh over 5 cwt., which, in chasing its prey, had become entangled in their nets, and committed sad havoc, breaking and tearing fathoms of valuable tackle. This example was sold by Mr. Catt, the local fish auctioneer, and has, doubtless, by this time become a "show."

There is one consolation about British sharks, no matter how ferocious they may be among the small fry in the deep, that there is little to fear from attacks upon mankind. Very different creatures are they to those huge brethren of theirs which one so often sees in tropical waters swimming lazily round a ship at anchor. Aply have they been called "seapigs," for they grovel, as it were, in the water after such unconsidered trifles as the waste from the saloon table or an old nigger boy, if he be not quick enough to get clear of their saw-like teeth. In some places, however, such as at St. Vincent in the Cape de Verde Islands, there seems to be a sort of understanding between niggers and sharks, for I have often seen a nigger dive from the rail of a 4,000-ton steamer after a shilling, when two or three big sharks have been no further than 20 yards away. Both nigger and shilling invariably returned safely, the sharks hardly troubling to look as to the cause of the plunge and subsequent splash. Very different was it one day in another port, when a youth plunged, against orders, for a refreshing bath, in the intense tropical heat. Hardly had he reached the surface when there was a cry, and all else we saw was a dark red stain of blood in the water, for both boy and shark were gone.

The scientific position of the sharks is between the sturgeons and dog fish, leading on to the rays. There is among British fishes a link connecting them with the sturgeons. It is the family Chimeridae, of which we have one genus, viz., Chimeria, represented by C. monstrosa, a rare fish sometimes found on our extreme north-east coasts and by the Orkneys. It is known sometimes as the king of the herrings, and also as the rahbit fish, while another name is that of the sea rat, possibly on account of its whip-like tail. It is well named monstrosa, for it is a queer, uncanny looking being. The mouth is placed, shark fashion, well under the great head, while there is on the male a curious fleshy process above the eyes, sticking out like a handle, decorated with a fringe. When taken in British seas this species is probably a wanderer from more northerly regions, for it occurs not infrequently on the Norway coast, where it commonly reaches four feet in length.

Our various sharks belong to the sub-order Plagiostamata, of which we have five species forming the group Selachoidae, as represented in the British marine fauna. It is difficult to ascertain to what ages these animals attain, but we may take it as a rule that, some producing comparatively few offspring at a birth, they are long lived beings. The females of several species deposit two ova at a time, but at not infrequent intervals; the embryo is enclosed in a case, which is attached by thread-like appendages to sea weeds, corallines, and in fact anything that will serve as an anchor. The empty cases are often to be found on the sea shore, and are called sea-purses.

The blue shark, when mature in size, is said to attain a length of no less than twenty-five feet in suitable waters where food is plentiful. No such example has ever been taken in our seas, ten feet to twelve feet being the usual adult size, though from three feet to four feet appears the commoner length. Its blue color seems to have suggested its common names in several languages; for instance, the French call it Le Bleu, but its scientific name is Carcharias glaucus. It is a long tapering fish of rather elegant proportions, with a prolonged tail, and the snout protruding beyond the mouth nearly as far as the distance from the mouth to the gills.

Blue sharks are migratory animals, being generally visitors to our waters in warm weather, especially in autumn time, but they have been seen in June, and even in the month of March. They are nocturnal in their more active habits, taking rest and sleep in the daytime, often on the surface of the water, with a portion of the dorsal fin and extremity of the tail exposed above in the air. So gentle are they in their movements that, unlike many other monsters of the deep, they do not disturb the luminous noctiluca, which at the same time will be lighting every wavelet with their phosphorescence. Blue sharks are not very particular as to what fish they take as food, though those which are gregarious in their habits like mackerel, pilchards and herring, are most commonly hunted by them. It is on record that big fish, such as congers and the larger dog fish, were found in a dead specimen from Cornwall. Occasionally they become entangled in the drift nets set by the pilchard fishers, but these sharks will also take a bait. Great care is necessary in landing a hooked specimen, in case it gives a blow with its tail, which may result in serious consequence, such as broken limbs or ribs. These blue sharks not infrequently occur on the southern and western coasts of Ireland; in fact their range is very considerable, for they occur in all the warmer European seas and throughout the temperate and the tropical portions of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

Our next shark is Galeus vulgaris, which should rejoice in its number of local names. Some of these are penny-dog, tope, toper, whitehound and rig. The French name is Le Milandre. The usual adult size is about 6 feet long, though 7 feet has been recorded. It is an inhabitant of warm and temperate seas all over the world, occurring in Australian and Western North American waters as far north as British Columbia. It is a savage and voracious fish, eating almost any animal food whether dead or alive, such as fish, crabs and starfish. It is most frequently taken by the line fishermen, and appears to haunt the bottom of the sea for its prey; this applies especially to the winter months, as might be expected. The skin is dark grey and the underside of the fish's head and abdomen is dirty white. The dried skin is sometimes used by man for scouring wooden and iron vessels, the finer sorts making good burnishers for gun barrels. It is eaten by some of the fisherfolk of Western France, and occasionally in England; but it is at best foul food, with rank smell. The young are produced alive during the summer time and the litter has been known to extend to as high a number as 50 individuals. At some seasons this fish is a great trial to the line fishermen who work by night, for they are sometimes hooked off the Norfolk coast in large numbers, giving much trouble and but little profit.

Of all our sharks, none is more curious than the "hammer-head," or as it is otherwise known, the balance fish. Its scientific name is Zygma Malleus, the French vulgar name being Le Marteau. This animal seems to occur in most seas of the world, and reaches a length of some fourteen or fifteen feet. It is far from common with us, but has not infrequently occurred among other localities off Scotland, Wales, Cornwall and the Norfolk coast. It has a long and powerful tail; the body is symmetrical until reaching the head, which is so shaped as to give it the name of the hammer-head. The eyes are placed at each end of the hammer-like projections. This odd organization is very puzzling, as there seems no reason why this extraordinary deviation should have taken place in the usual anatomy of these animals. The head is three times as wide as it is long, projecting far over each side of the animal's total width. The body is bluish grey, much lighter on the under side.

Another shark rather resembles the "tope," but the snout is not so elongated. This is Mastelus vulgaris, the smooth hound, it is also called the ray-mouthed dog; in France, L'Entissole commune. It is a less savage species than some of the others, feeding on sea-snail and crustaceans. They have about a dozen young at a birth, and are taken most commonly on baited hooks. Along the sides of the back is a row of whitish spots, which are fainter or obsolete in aged specimens.

The smooth hound often reaches four feet in length, though specimens of six feet have been noted. They are eaten in the western islands of Scotland and considered good food. This animal has a wide range, extending even to New Zealand and the coasts of South America. It is in summer often common in the sea around south and western England, being another shark which appears with the pilchards.

Lamna cornubica is much more shark-like than the last species described. It is the porbeagle of our fishermen, a word supposed to come from two others, viz., porpoise from its appearance, and beagle from its habit of hunting like those dogs. In color they are dull grey above, and whiter beneath. Pennant called this species the Beumaris shark. It is taken on baited lines, and has occurred near Plymouth, in Cornwall, and more frequently off Galway; has also occurred in Orkneys and Shetlands, Frith of Froth, Berwick, off Whithy, Bridlington,

Yarmouth, Hastings and many other places. It is another species with a long range, occurring also in the Japanese seas and New Zealand. Adults taken in our waters have commonly reached 10 feet, though it may grow larger. In summer and autumn it is most frequently met with probably migrating south in winter. The body is thick and high in front, tapering rapidly towards the tail, which is largely developed and unassive. It is a heavy fish for its size and length. There is an instance mentioned of one of these fishes springing at a fisherman and taking a piece out of his clothes; it is said to have taken place off Penzance.

More easy to understand than the malformed looking head of the hammer-head is the prolonged tail of the fox shark. That species is named Alopias vulpes, and has other vulgar names besides the fox, in thresher and slasher, both names referring to the use it can make of its powerful tail. The French also associate it with the fox, and call it Le Renard. This is by no means an uncommon shark in British seas, after attaining 13 feet in length; and I have seen one recently killed of nearly 15 feet. It is generally found following shoals of fishes, such as herrings, pilchards and sprats, which it is said to swim round and round until the fish are gathered into a compact mass, when it thrashes them with its tail. It is more probable that the splashing is to frighten the fish into a closely gather shoal, so that it may more readily catch them. It is said to use the same weapon upon less active animals of its own size, such as the gampus; and several accounts exist of such battles in various parts of the world, for it is another shark which may be found in any temperate sea. It is said to be good eating, but I have not had an opportunity of tasting it.

The largest species of British sharks is so distinct that there need be no difficulty in identifying it by the gill arrangements, for attached to them are elastic rakers, which act like the whalebone strainers of the haeen whale. Their object seems to be to sift the water before passing through the gills, and retaining small crustaceae, etc., on which the animal feeds. Unlike most of the sharks, Selache maxima is timid and inoffensive, feeding upon seaweed and minute marine organisms. It is known by the English name of hasking shark, because of its habit of remaining perfectly still, probably asleep, on the surface of the water. The Irish name is sunfish—doubtless for the same reason. In the Orkneys it is called hoomther or homer, meaning mother of dogfish. In France it is Ee Pelerin. Sallish is sometimes applied, because it often swims with the dorsal fin high out of the water. Occasionally they appear in some numbers, though generally they are found alone. This shark sometimes reaches a length so great as forty feet, but from twenty-five feet to thirty feet seems to be the more frequent size of adults which are found in our seas. Being a very hulky fish for its length, individuals of large size run to great weights, such as half a ton. Another character is the beaklike projecting snout, which frowns over the eyes like exaggerated eyebrows. The mouth, also, is far forward, and not deep under the head, as in sharks generally. The teeth are small and conical, with smooth edges. Gill openings are very long, extending almost the width of the neck. The color of these animals is blackish brown, lighter on the undersides. The snout is dark reddish, dirty whitish underneath.

The hasking sharks are not always inactive in their habits, as they sometimes leap out of the water, exposing most of the huge body, as though at play. Another curious habit is swimming on the top of a smooth sea, with an undulating motion, the snout and eyes being well clear of the water. It is supposed that this habit is the origin of the so-called sea-serpent, for in that condition the snout and eyes would give the required conditions (with a little added) to fulfil the many descriptions of the mythical beast. The capture of these sharks is highly interesting and exciting work. They are easily approached whilst hasking or sleeping, and will not readily awake, even after the harpoon is thrust deeply into the body near the gills. Once sensible, however, to the fact they plunge with tremendous force, deep down into the sea, and roll on to the bottom trying to disentangle the deadly weapon, and then race away at high speed. Every care must be exerted by those in the boats, or the chances are a catastrophe. A free running line of a couple of hundred fathoms is the first thought, for these fish make a gallant fight for life. They are killed for the sake of the oil extracted from the liver, which is said to be of very good quality. A 20ft. female produces as much as 150gal. of such oil. The range of this species includes the Mediterranean, and it is not rare around the Orkneys.

The remaining species is Notidanus griseus, which though allied in general shape and also by the position of the gills with the last shark, is unlike it in habits, being very voracious and savage. In color they are olive, and reddish grey above, and lead color beneath. The largest British specimen measured about 12 feet; but they grow much larger in the Mediterranean, where they are of somewhat common occurrence. Very few have strayed so far as our shores; but it is recorded from Badif, in Scotland, the Isle of Wight, Mevagissey and Polperro, in Cornwall, where it is called the six-gilled shark. The flesh is said to act on carnivorous animals as a strong purgative.

Are You Going Fishing?

It is one of the peculiarities of the sport of angling that the more one follows it the more one grows to love it. One's capacity for enjoyment is, in a measure at least, governed by cultivation, and it has always seemed to me that no line of sport ever yielded such a prolific increase of pleasure as that of angling. One comes to love the rod and reel, the silken line and the beautiful flies and the creel as if they were objects of sympathetic companionship. The beauty, the real pleasure and sport of tilling a creel with fine trout is enhanced by doing it with a rod with which you are perfectly familiar; with a line you have tested and with a reel the music of which is not strange to your ears. I have a fly in my book with which I killed four fine trout in the Truckee last season. It is yet a good fly and in a fair state of preservation. After I had killed the fourth trout, after a spirited fight, I took the fly off the leader and preserved it for the good work which it had done, substituting a fresh one of the same make in its stead. Foolish, you think? Well, perhaps it is, but do you know I take pleasure in just such little incidents of the sport. To me they add, immeasurably, to the general features of the outing. The time will soon be here when the rod will be in demand. We trust that their use may even be more general than in the past on this coast. We have a few genuine enthusiasts in fly fishing, but the interest of the sport could be greatly enhanced by a still larger number of gentlemen and ladies becoming interested in this charming manner of passing a week in the mountains.

PROPER CORRECTION.—The following clipping and letters explain the matter, and the letter from Mr. Ashley thoroughly absolves Mr. Steiner. I agree heartily with Mr. Ashley that Mr. Steiner has been misreported quite often enough, and will also add that he has been blamed for doing his duty, reprimanded in no light terms, where he should have been given unqualified praise. I shall certainly be somewhat surprised if at the annual meeting of the American Trotting Register Association the Secretary is not commended for enforcing its laws. If these are at fault, amend, and the amendment which will be very satisfactory to a big, a very big majority of trotting horse folk, will be the abolition of trials against time; nothing but honestly conducted race records to count. I will be surprised decidedly, however, if that prevails at the coming meeting, though it cannot be long delayed.

CHICAGO, Ill., February 25, 1893.

MR. JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON, Oakland, Cal.

MY DEAR MR. SIMPSON.—I enclose you a clipping from the evidence in the Stamboul investigation taken from the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

I do not know that it would make any particular difference if I had written a letter containing the facts as set forth by Mr. Ashley, but I am unable to find a copy of any such letter to Mr. La Rue or Mr. Ashley, and I do not think it possible that a letter could have gotten out of my office without being copied. Neither are we able to find any such letter in the note books of my stenographer.

Will you kindly favor me by asking Mr. Ashley to send you a copy of the letter. I do not believe he has any such letter, as I do not remember of writing anything of the kind, certainly not in the form in which it is put in the clipping.

Kindly attend to this matter and much obliged. Yours truly,

J. W. STEINER, Secretary.

Attorney Ashley then arose and said: "I would like to have this Board when it makes its report take in consideration the letter written by Secretary Steiner to Secretary LaRue. In this letter Secretary Steiner stated Mr. Allen had told him he had received a letter from some man in Lodi offering to furnish proof that Stamboul's record was irregular for $2,000. Mr. Allen stated the man were employes and could not afford to have their names known for fear they would lose their jobs."

Ashley then read the letter. It contains various erroneous statements concerning the Stamboul record, such as these: "The horse trotted in the rain," "It was before 10 o'clock," "The time was not announced," "Four men on the track held watches and agreed the time was 2:16," and so on.

President Smith announced the letter and all other papers in evidence would be duly considered.

STOCKTON, Cal., March 3, 1893.

MR. JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON, 313 Bush Street, San Francisco, Cal.

MY DEAR SIR: Your note endorsed on the letter of Mr. Steiner to yourself, together with clipping, received. Mr. Steiner is correct. I had no such letter. What I did read was a letter from Mr. M. M. Morse containing quotations from a letter written to Mr. Morse by Mr. Allen. Mr. Morse's letter was addressed to Mr. LaRue as secretary. The quotations gave the charges mentioned in your clipping, with the exception that the exact amount was not stated. I do not think I used Mr. Steiner's name in connection with the letter; if so, it was inadvertently, as the letter read was as I state above. I think I left the letter with the Board of Appeals. The clipping should read Secretary Morse to Secretary LaRue.

I am sorry that the mistake occurred, wherever the blame rests, because I apprehend that Mr. Steiner is misreported often enough, anyway. With kindest regards,

Yours truly, A. H. ASHLEY.

GULLIBILITY.—It hardly seems possible that so palpable an attempt to wrongfully discredit the actions of reputable men should have raised such a commotion over the whole country as followed the conspiracy in regard to Stamboul's fastest record. But the chance of obtaining credence for the most absurd declarations lies in the fact that whenever the performance or pedigrees of horses are discussed there is a proneness to believe stories, however marvellous. Then there also appears to be a disposition to overlook the enormity of hearing false witness when horses are the theme, and a general desire to accept a story which disparages those belonging to families which the listener does not like. Then, too, there is an idea quite generally prevalent that it is a creditable action to attack pedigrees of long standing, especially if by so doing the glory is transferred from a tribe which is not in favor. This laxity of opinion in regard to what might be called equine ethics has encouraged that sort of warfare, and when some one thinks there is "money in it" an attack is made, and others are willing to participate from the notoriety obtained. Pedigrees have been the favorite point to attack, and before time performances were rated so highly, that was the only charge which would insure attention. Nearly certain that if an animal were unusually conspicuous some one would question the genealogy, and thus the great Eclipse was said to be a son of Shakespeare in place of Marske, Sir Archy to be got by Gabriel in lieu of Diomed, while among the trotters there are notable examples which are brought forward again and again.

Had the purpose to blackmail not been so obvious in the Stamboul case, the attack might have been ascribed to a praiseworthy desire to sustain the honesty of the record, but with the latter named incentive motive there should have been an outspoken protest from the first. Not a whisper of doubt, while "brimming beakers" of champagne were quaffed at the race track and joyous shouts over the California championship. When the scene was transferred to the town and the rainfall and clouds could not suppress the jubilant feeling, not an intimation of denial that the trophy was not worthily gained. That the rejoicing grated harshly on the ears of some is beyond question, and with the hurrahs reverberating on the tympanum a chord was struck which jealousy had strained to an acute key. But apart from the gratification of spite, there was there another powerful motive, the chance to secure a sum of big proportions. Never such an opportunity before for commination.

One of the most exciting of the track battles in 1892 was the duel between Stamboul and Kremlin. When Stamboul lowered the mark of Palo Alto by one-quarter of a second there was small manifestation of joy. It was done on the same track, but not a dissenting voice when the improved sniky was given a share of the credit. When Kremlin, however, lowered that to 2:08 the excitement began. Another quarter of a second reduction by Stamboul, and then the country was thoroughly awakened. Not a word of doubt on these two championship efforts or any others of the famous trials questioned. Kremlin advanced his position another fraction of a second, and few there were who had hopes that the Occident champion would regain the laurel. The battle was won, and the season so far advanced that the campaign for 1892 must be brought to a close. But the conspirators saw a grand opportunity. Stamboul was to be sold at auction in New York. He and many of his progeny were on the way for the sale mart. Thousands, tens and tens of thousands of dollars were expected for the champion and his progeny, and all that was necessary was to threaten exposure to bring in a big haul, secure a swag beyond that from a stage robbery when the treasure box was heavily loaded. There would be no time to counteract the scheme, and they revelled in anticipation of the fruits of their sordid thing. Mr. Cross was of different metal than what the conspirators supposed. He would not suffer the palpable imposition to be inflicted on the estate he had in charge, and directed the auctioneer to make public the attempt to question the truthfulness of the record. Then the other string was pulled and affidavits offered for sale. Championship records have been held of such supreme importance that to retain the first place in the stallion list it was supposed that the owner of Kremlin would respond with alacrity to meet their demands. The judicial ermine which enveloped the person of one of the conspirators gave a grand opportunity. An endorsement, effective at a distance, a certificate of standing which had an influence when thousands of miles laid between the site of the court and those who were interested in the investigation. At home there was no such glamour. The District Board laid bare the fraud, and had so little respect for the Chief Justice and his associates that punishment followed.

And still the gullibility of many people is so great, when records or pedigrees are assailed, that there are believers yet in the fraud. "Convinced against their will, they're of the same opinion still," so wrote Butler in his famous satire, and there is another complement which may be quoted as appropriate in these cases:

"For what in worth is anything
But so much money as 'twill bring?"

That has a more direct reference to these pedigree onslaughts in which an offer is made to fill up gaps or straighten out errors for a con-sid-er-a-tion in the Trophos sense of the word. Thus I am credibly informed that the man who claimed to have evidence to prove that the dam of George Wilkes was not by Harry Clay priced it at two hundred dollars, and he was quite modest in his charge, as in one instance, to my positive knowledge, ten thousand dollars were thought to be a fair remuneration for the knowledge proffered. In that case there was something to base a charge upon; documentary evidence which had come into the possession of the man who offered it in a legal way, and he had been told by "horsemen" that it was exceedingly valuable, and that he and them were justly entitled to recompense, he as the holder of the property, them, why discoverers of its worth. Either of these cases, however, are not on a par with one which can be cited. In that a man claims to have formulated a false pedigree, but innocently, another admits that he knew it to be false from the time it was promulgated, nearly fourteen years ago, but did not make the correction, giving, to say the least, a very silly reason for withholding the information. After the expiration of twelve years a colt from the mare sold sprung to the very top of the pinnacle of fame and sold for a larger sum than any horse had brought up to the date of his sale. A big fortune to most people the dollars paid for this paragon, and the whole trotting world became excited over his performances. The colt had made his supreme effort November 10, 1891; he was sold in January 1892. March 22, 1892, the seller of the dam of this colt, nearly thirteen years before, writes his owner that the pedigree as he gave it was not correct, but, in place of acquainting him wherein the error laid, desires an interview when he will furnish "indisputable affidavits" and "talk the matter over with him," the pow-wow to take place more than a hundred miles from the residence of the man who held the information. The couplet from Hudibras is applicable in this case.

A copy of the affidavits could have been transported by mail at a small cost, and as it was his own false information that was to be corrected, that would appear to be the straightforward course. The money it would bring would be a matter of diplomacy and skillful handling add wealth galore.

A "grand scoop" for the paper which should first publish this tidbit of trotting scandal, and one journal of enterprise endeavored to secure from the man who had "bottled up" the information for twelve long years "the facts" in the case. "No, not by any means, I consider that is ———'s property," was the answer, and again what is claimed to be truth is rated as of commercial value.

The balance of the history will be given hereafter, and as it is the most important of all of that class which has heretofore come before the public, it is well worthy of exhaustive treatment. That the history will weaken the faith of people in the kind of statements which are now so readily believed is a hope which may never be gratified. Still I have faith that the gullibility of the "general public" can, in a measure at least, be reduced, and the mere outcry of a gang of knaves as was the case in relation to the record of Stamboul, and the fool stories in vogue to discredit long-established pedigrees, fail to have weight. Had those men who were so ready to produce four affidavits for a consideration put in a protest at the time when the announcement was made that Stamboul had trotted in 2:07 it would have carried weight. Had the man who held the secret for so many years that a wrong pedigree had been given corrected it at the time, or even failing in that had he published that the phenomenal trotter's dam was from a dilferent mare, giving her name and breeding, than was accorded, in place of declaring that information was property, there would have been more faith in his honesty.

A BIG PRIZE.—There is a big prize to win at the spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association, and it behooves every one who has any interest in trotting or trotting horses to do all in their power to aid in securing the premium. With that meeting such a success as it is certain to be, should there be joint effort of the horsemen of the Slope there will be inaugurated a new departure which cannot fail to be of vast benefit to breeders, owners and drivers of trotters. Just as sure as anything in the future can be foretold, the adoption generally of the system inaugurated by this association will give an impetus to harness sports which will work wonders in the way of giving it universal popularity. But it is imperative that there be no hanging back at this initial meeting, as failure now, or even partial failure, will have a disastrous result. The tone of the Eastern turf papers are generally favorable to the scheme, with some misgivings that so radical a departure is in advance of the times. All of them, or at least all that are not hopelessly bound to antiquated ideas, concede that something must be done to increase the earning capacity of trotters, and it is just as important that the burdens which are now borne by owners of trotters be materially lightened. This cannot be entirely effected by light entrance fees. Three per cent. even is onerous to one who does not win, and while it is a potent relief when brought into juxtaposition with the stereotyped ten per cent.—twenty on the first money as usually divided—but to that must be joined a better opportunity of paying expenses outside of entrance fees.

It is not my purpose, at the present time, to present arguments to prove that the work which is now mapped on the trestle-board of the P. C. T. H. B. A. will be productive of good results. That question has been partially elucidated, and there is time to consider it more fully hereafter. But there is no time to lose in getting horses ready for the spring meeting, and there must be a general determination among owners to do all in their power to forward the good work. With a fair share of enthusiasm among those who control the horses, and a firm resolution to do all in their power to give the initial meeting a good send-off, the "public" will do its share, and I have no hesitation in recording a prophecy that with plenty of horses to draw from there will be a full attendance on every day. More than that in prospect. That novelties will attract is as sure as that the magnetized needle will point to the magnetic pole, and when these new things are backed by the proof that expectations of better results have been fully realized every succeeding day will add to the appreciation. Those who have not yet commenced training should set the horses and colts a-going. There is time enough to prepare for the race which are programmed, as there will be no tedious contests to prepare for.

There is one thing which may have been overlooked, and which it is important to keep in view. Whenever there is a field of horses which give promise of a good race the opportunity will be afforded them. For instance in the colt races which will close on April 1st, should one or more colts prove much superior to the other contestants, a race afterwards between the slower might be of greater interest than that which had a regular place on the programme. The same conditions will hold good all through, the governing idea being to have as many winners as possible, and furnish sport which will return the most money at the gate.

When there are from five to seven winners of first moneys in each afternoon, and these of races which have awakened the enthusiasm of the spectators; without any just cause for suspicions of unfair management, trotters and pacers will occupy their proper places.

CO-OPERATION.—From present appearances it is very likely that other spring trotting meetings can be given than those now advertised in California with fair prospects of success. This would be an additional help to trotting interests on this coast, as one of the greatest drawbacks to training here is the limited season when harness sports are admissible. Sacramento, Stockton, Woodland, Vallejo, Santa Rosa, Petaluma, San Jose, Gilroy, in the central part of the State, and other towns in the northern and southern divisions, giving short spring meetings, there would be continued employment for trotting and pacing horses. It is not necessary, under the present condition of affairs, to formulate a specified programme of events, as something like the same plan could be followed as that of the trotting-horse breeders. There would be little risk in giving it a trial, as before the expenditure is established it will be known what the chances are for obtaining entries, and in place of entries for horses eligible to specified classes, eligibility determined by an arbitrary close rule, which is far from being a test of equality, and the subsequent race a flat failure, owing to a decided superiority which could not be foreseen, there will be close contests. Should the aggregation of horses at the Bay District track next May be as large as there are good reasons to expect, there will be a chance then to supplement that meeting with others, and this should not be lost sight of by the owners of horses. June could be occupied by a series of meetings, and a portion of July, leaving only a short interval between the close of the spring and the opening of the summer and fall campaign.

THE CLEVELAND SALE.—The sale at Cleveland on February 28th demonstrates the necessity for a reconstruction of trotting programmes, or rather the adoption of a system which will give horses with records a better opportunity than they have at present for paying their way. New York Central, 2:13, sold for $1,400, and as he is a gelding with so fast a record as to practically exclude him from the classes in which he was eligible, "the road" is his only sphere of usefulness. The California mare Jessie, 2:22, brought $1,050, and her stable companion, Maggie, 2:20, $1,650. Princess Alice, pacer, 2:16, at $1,025, was not much better, and as all of these mares are by Dexter Prince, it also shows that the breeding ranks are suffering from plethora.

Corresponding classes of race horses retain their value as long as they are in a condition to race, that valuation being due to the opportunity for racing successfully. Give harness horses a like opportunity by adopting a classification which will bring them together, and the same results will follow. Handicaps, selling races, penalties for winning, allowances, change of distance, selection, etc., give a fuller scope on the turf than appears possible to equal on the tracks, but "just as sure as eggs is eggs" much can be done in the way of bettering the present state of affairs on the tracks.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

Don't forget that at the joint auction sale by Killip & Co. next Wednesday, several animals well worthy the attention of breeders will be offered. Most noteworthy among these is the grand chestnut matron Frankie Eaton, the dam of Marvel, 2:24, at four years, besides Hilda, Honor and Dr. Keely, all within the list. Foals from this producing daughter of Whipple's Hambletonian 725 will amply repay the successful buyer. Another opportunity for a standard and sweepstake premium mare, is that beautiful daughter of Sidney, Sidena, her dam being the registered mare, Lena Bowles, the mother of Twinkle, Grenadier, Lena Monroe and other fast ones. This young mare possesses great speed and high form, and with age and proper cultivation, having no public record, she is valuable for racing purposes, and from her fashionable breeding she should become a valuable mare in the stud, being now in foal to Almont Medium, 2:28. There are also a number of the daughters of Adventure, the son of Venture (2:27) whose reputation as the sire of producing dams is fast becoming very popular. Attend the sale and get a bargain.

Breeding from Speed to Produce Speed.

Most breeders hold faith in the general theory that from the greatest trotters of to-day the greatest trotters of the future will spring. Nobody would be so rash as to claim that there will be no exceptions to the rule, but the tendency of hereditary laws favors the assumption that from the best the best will spring. We call Nancy Hanks the best mare that has yet appeared because she is a consistent performer, and has the fastest record made by a trotter. Of course, while this is majority opinion, there may be, and doubtless are, persons who think some other mare is greater. Again there may be, and doubtless are, mares that through accident or want of opportunity have shown nothing so remarkable as to cause any person to estimate them to be the equals of Nancy Hanks, that nevertheless possess the innate capacity to do anything she has done or even more. The great shuttle for the honors and winnings of the turf assuredly bring very great animals to the top, but it does not follow that all great ones arrive relatively near the top, nor that the greatest always reach a conspicuous position. But the public track test gives us a knowledge that certain ones are very great while the greatness of others is for want of it left merely to surmise.

So generally is the rule accepted that the greatest performers will, in a given number of times, produce the greatest average performers, that most breeders would think that if they had as broodmares such animals as Nancy Hanks, Martha Wilkes, Sunol, Maud S. and Belle Vara, and such a stallion as Stamboul and Kremlin, their chances for breeding up a stud of very fast horses would be better than the chances of another who had to start with untired breeding animals that did not possess such fast records and such enviable turf careers.

Given such material to start with, many breeders would think their chances good to beat the world at breeding trotters when time should have enabled them to reach the ultimate results of combining the blood of several of those great animals in each of the pedigrees of the successive crops of foals that would come of a stud thus created. While equal pedigree does not necessarily bring equal speed, yet in the average the better the pedigree the greater the speed. By often creating foals with pedigrees made up of such material, there should be instances among them, more or less frequent, in which remarkable trotting powers would be demonstrated. A "world beater" is a difficult thing to produce by any process of breeding that can be devised, but if any specific plan of breeding can be made to reach that end, this would seem to most breeders as likely as any to do it. It would, to say the least, be a tempting way to try.

Such an experiment would be pronounced off-hand to be a more advanced method of breeding than has ever been put into practice on like scale by any one breeder, and in view of the greater light thrown upon the subject of breeding the trotter by the results accomplished during the last decade, it probably would be. But if such a course was now adopted by some person of wealth who could command these very fast animals for breeding purposes, it would not be the first time the experiment would have been tried on a comprehensive scale. When Fashion Stud Farm was organized, Goldsmith Maid was relatively where Nancy Hanks now stands and Lady Thorn was far more prominent than Martha Wilkes now is. We can hardly say that Lady Maud ranked comparatively with Sunol or Maud S., for she had never held the world's record, but she was a very great campaigner and had held the world's five-year-old record. Lucy, too, was a prime favorite with the public, and if she did not rank comparatively as high as the two great mares now in Mr. Bonner's stable, she stood certainly higher relatively than Belle Vara does at present, for she was an every-day trotter and a mare of national fame.

For stallions Fashion Stud Farm had Jay Gould and won with him the world's stallion record; also Tattler that had held the world's five-year-old record and Gen. Knox, originally purchased for trotting purposes though well along in years and already the sire of a large representation in the 2:30 list for these days. The latter had at the time two representatives in the 2:20 list, both great campaigners, a distinction that had then been reached by only two other sires, viz., Hambletonian and Volunteer. It was then the boast of the Knox blood, as since that of Electioneer that its members were "line trotters" and that a greater percentage of them possessed decided speed than was to be found in any other family. So it will be seen that Fashion Stud Farm started upon a foundation of developed speed the like of which could only be repeated in comparative importance now by the purchase of the most famous animals on the trotting turf. When Mr. H. N. Smith put his great trotting stable into the breeding ranks he possessed fully one-half of all the mares that had acquired claims to a first-class rating. This is shown by the fact that none of the trotting associations had offered purses prior to 1877 for as fast a class as 2:19. In that year, for the first time, a 2:19 class was made on the grand circuit, thus throwing all horses that had a record faster than that into the free-for-all class and thus rating them as first-class trotters. At that time but eight mares all told had beaten 2:19, viz., Goldsmith Maid, 2:14; Lady Thorn, 2:14; Lucy, 2:18; Lady Maud, 2:18; Lula, 2:15; Lucille Golddust, 2:16; American Girl, 2:16; and Nettie, 2:18. These were eight very remarkable mares; every one a game and reliable trotter and a great campaigner, far better known to the horsemen of the country by actual observation in races than the fastest eight mares on the trotting turf to-day. The first four of these mares were retired from the campaigning stables to the breeding paddocks of Fashion Stud Farm and all left produce there. Of the other four American Girl and Nettie died without having been bred, but Lula and Lucille Golddust have both left very distinguished descendants.

Lady Thorn was the first to breed at Fashion Farm and to the cover of General Knox produced the colt Gen. Washington which, being bred to Goldsmith Maid, produced the stallion Stranger (sire of twelve in the list including Broomal, 2:16) and the filly Rosebud. Lucy and many of the other great mares of the stud were bred to Jay Gould and a few to Tattler and most of the fillies were retained, and at two years old, if sufficiently mature, commenced breeding undeveloped, to General Washington and Stranger.

This course of breeding, it will be noticed, resulted in combining as rapidly as possible, the blood of several of these great animals in each of the later generations of foals. To multiply the number of animals bred in that way as rapidly as possible was the aim of the establishment. That such pedigrees would bring speed of high order was the faith of its manager. No effort was made to develop the speed of the animals that were to be retained for breeding purposes and what little training was done was intended simply to bring out the speed of such colts as were for sale and not intended to be reserved at the farm for stallions. The result is that of the nine representatives of General Washington in the list not one is a mare; of the eight by Rumor only one is a mare, while in Stranger's case, his foals being of a later generation have received more general training and of his twelve in the list three are mares.

It does not follow that if Queen Nancy was bred to King Stamboul or to Kremlin the foal would necessarily become as fast as either parent. There might not be that perfect harmony of blood influences usually called a "nick" necessary to the production of a horse so perfectly balanced in all the requisites of a first class trotter as to create the equal, not so say the superior of either parent. But the breeder who owned a colt bred of such patronage would feel that the demonstrated power of the parents was surety that his colt had everything in his composition that trotting blood could give him and through the various requisite tendencies and forces did not happen to be in the most perfect balance in his individual case, yet he had them in store to draw upon when crossed into new combinations. With a colt so bred to unite with Martha Wilkes, Sunol, Maud S. and Belle Vara, the owner would think he still had a fighting chance to produce a world beater.

Mr. H. A. Smith has doubtless reasoned in a similar way in following out the course that has at last given the Fashion Stud so many youngsters combining the blood of so many of the old kings and queens of the trotting tracks. Had he trained the earlier crops of foals instead of hurrying them into the breeding department he might have produced greater sensations on the track, but he would have delayed the date at which he could have obtained anything like his present number of animals having in their pedigrees the blood of so many most remarkable trotters of their day. To do this he has taken twenty years as it is, but it has not been without its rewards. Though very little training has been done, the colts that have been for sale have as a rule, gone off quickly at liberal prices, irrespective of the rush for strains that have had the good fortune to undergo a popular "boom." Even those buyers who joined the rush for fashionable families would turn aside to buy youngsters closely descended from so many remarkable turf celebrities.

Having got the blood of these old trotting wonders thus interwoven, the next move was to send some of the mares to such outside sires as the public seemed to prefer. With a "boom" sire and a dam well fortified in the blood of these great campaigners, the colts ought to sell for great prices if any colts would sell. And so it has proved, for not only have most of them shown speed right from the breaking harness, but to those who think that extreme speed is the greatest surety for the reproduction of extreme speed, foals from these Fashion-bred mares commend themselves as the best that can be obtained for the various sires to which they have been sent. Hence if a breeder was looking for a young stallion by Alcantara, Eagle Bird, Baron Wilkes, St. Bel, Wilkes Boy, Red Wilkes, Kentucky Wilkes, Nutwood, Electioneer or any other popular sire to which Fashion Stud has sent mares, he could usually find a colt there bred nearer to his liking than could be had elsewhere. The quiet patience with which that establishment has labored and waited to get its foundation right has thus begun to reap its reward. Within the past three years a goodly number of colts by fashionable sires have been sold at splendid prices. From now forward it would appear that Fashion Stud, could it be held intact, occupies a position to make money faster than almost any similar establishment in the country, simply by sending its home-bred mares to fashionable sires and selling the produce young. With Stranger for a leading stallion for the mares bred at home, there will continue to be no lack of extreme speed pedigrees in the fillies that would continue to supply the broodmare department of the establishment.

So keen has been the demand for the colts by Stranger and by the outside sires that were patronized that most of them have been sold young. Many of the fillies could also have been disposed of at long figures, but this would have interfered with the strength that would give the stud by going into the broodmare ranks. Hence but few were parted with. Any stud that can hold the strongest hand in practical race-winning pedigrees can command the best bidding, public or private, to be had in the market. That was what Fashion Stud aimed to hold by virtue of the great collection of turf-tried mares and stallions with which it commenced breeding.

Probably Monbars is generally considered the greatest trotter yet bred by the Fashion Stud. He was sold as a yearling when he showed remarkable speed to a breaking cart, and as a two-year-old won several stakes, including a $5,000 stake at Independence, another of $1,500 at Cleveland and another of $2,905 at Lexington, making in the latter straight heats 2:23, 2:19, beating Amorean, Ralph Wilkes and Lakewood. Against time he first took a two-year-old record of 2:21, and reduced it by successive stages to 2:20, 2:19, 2:18, 2:18 and 2:16, all of these to old-style sulky. Though he was very sick with pneumonia last winter, he rounded to, and as a three-year-old closed the season with a record of 2:11. The large number of stake races and time records made by Monbars as a two-year-old mark him as one of the very greatest colts that has been produced, and as he was out of Lady Maud, that in her day was among the fastest and greatest campaigners on the trotting turf and the holder of the world's five-year-old record, it speaks well for the extreme speed theory.

But great as Monbars is, it is by no means certain that his superior has not already been bred at Fashion Stud and worn harness. The following results of commingling such great strains are beginning to show themselves as the latter generations are now beginning to be trained. Ballona took a three-year-old record of 2:19. She was by Stranger out of Lady Banker, 2:23, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Sanguine admirers, whose experience ought to make them the best judges of such matters, regard her as one of the fastest trotters that ever looked down a homestretch, and talk of quarters and halves such as were never heard of until the bicycle sulky was invented. There are many trotters bred at Fashion farm that to date have shown much faster public form than she, and there is at least one other that has shown private indications of surpassing anything yet shown by any of them in public, but it is not improbable that when another season has closed Ballona will stand as the greatest trotter that the Fashion establishment has produced. When first-class promise is secured the certainty of its fulfillment is in no little degree dependent upon the breeding of the animal. In certainty to keep its promise no blood surpasses that of Hambletonian when obtained close from the fountain. Ballona is out of one of his best daughters, and is by the son of Goldsmith Maid, the greatest race campaigner in trotting history.

Lucy's contribution to the fame of Fashion has been worthy of her own great name on the turf. Her daughter, Lucia, by Jay Gould, has proved a remarkable broodmare, having five representatives in the list with records of 2:10 to 2:30; another daughter, Sapphire, has two with records of 2:21 and 2:21. She has also a granddaughter that has produced a three-year-old in the list.

Among other trotters bred at Fashion are Poem, 2:14, by Gen. Washington, descended from Lady Thorn, Gen. Knox and Jay Gould; Broomal, 2:17, by Stranger, descended from Gen. Knox, Jay Gould, Goldsmith Maid and Lady Thorn; Hurley Barley, 2:19, descended from Tattler, Jay Gould and Lucy; Pixley, 2:16, by Jay Gould, descended from Gen. Knox, Lady Thorne and Ethan Allen; Patti, 2:24, by Jay Gould, descended from Lady Thorne and Gen. Knox; also Eulalia, 2:19, by Gen. Knox, descended from Jay Gould and Lucy; Presto, 2:19, by Gen. Washington, descended from Gen. Knox, Lady Thorne and Jay Gould, etc.

Of the later generations, nearly everything shows great natural speed in the breaking harness, and if a higher pressure training system, such as Palo Alto and Allen Farm practice, was put in use it would be difficult to name a stud in which the prospects of producing the most sensational performers of the trotting turf during the next decade would exceed those of Fashion Farm. HARK COM-STOCK.

Combination Sale at Napa.

The combination sale of choicely-bred trotting stallions, broodmares, colts and fillies which took place at Napa last Wednesday was very well attended, notwithstanding the threatening weather and the ground being thoroughly saturated by the rains of the previous day. The stock was in splendid condition, and under the supervision of Manager F. W. Loeber everything passed off without friction. The auctioneers, W. A. MacKinder and S. Watkins, had no trouble in disposing of any of the stock that had merit. The prices for the stallions were low, but the rest of the stock sold for very fair prices. The Santa Rosa Stock Farm secured Lilly Stanley, 2:17, for $2,100, as well as several other choice ones. Monroe Salisbury secured Comedy, a Director filly, out of Dolly McMann, for $1,000 and The Dane, a colt by Stamboul, 2:07, out of the same mare for $700. There were fifty-eight animals sold for $15,800, an average of $292. It can be seen that this sale was, all things considered, one of the best held in this State this year and proves conclusively that the prices for excellent individuals are not so low as many imagine:

Everything on Wheels.

The illustrated advertisement of the Deere Implement Company published in another column should be carefully scanned by our horsemen. There is not a vehicle thought of by horsemen that cannot be seen on exhibition at the warehouses, 305 and 307 Market street, and the prices asked for them are lower than at any other place in this city. A line of agricultural implements is also shown which embraces every late improvement. The merchant, business man, horseman and farmer should call and see the immense stock on exhibition. A visit will repay them.

Doing a Good Business.

Peter Saxe & Son, breeders and dealers in live stock report good sales for the past six months in thoroughbred and high-grade Jersey cows for family use. Also an active business in thoroughbred breeding hogs. They instruct their patrons that it pays better to handle and feed fewer and better animals with less labor, risk and expense, and at the same time get better returns financially.

H. C. HUBBARD, Hartford, Conn., writes: I cured and removed a curd in ten days with your Absorbine without removing the hair or leaving a blemish; it removed the inflammation at once. Cannot recommend it too highly.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

YOLO MAID, 2:12, is stepping fast in her exercise at Denver.

REJECTED performances appear in the Year Book as "rejected records."

REMEMBER entries to the Salt Lake Stake races, trotting and pacing, close March 15th.

ISLAND WILKES, 2:22½, by Red Wilkes, will be a member of John A. Goldsmith's stable.

REMEMBER the great sale of choice stock takes place next Wednesday. See advertisement.

SEND in your list of foals. We take pleasure in heralding the advent of all the youngsters.

SALEM, Oregon, is making a fine regulation track, to be ready for the summer meet July 4th.

THE Year Book for 1892 shows Little Albert, 2:10½, the winner of sixteen heats in races in the average time of 2:12½.

A STRIDE of a horse is measured from a point where a certain foot leaves the ground to the point where it strikes ground again.

THE late Jas. P. Kerr's fine chestnut mare Grace, 2:29½, by Sidney, dam by Speculation, sold for $875 at the Cleveland sale last week.

THE number of great broodmares on the Santa Rosa Stock Farm surpasses that of any other farm in this State with the exception of Palo Alto.

IRIS, son of Eros, has a crop of yearlings and two-year-olds at Mr. Perkins' place, Visalia, that are more than promising; they are "phenomenal."

CAPT. BEN. E. HARRIS consigns a number of extremely well-bred and finely trained stylish roadsters to the sale which takes place next Wednesday.

THE sales of the Asylum Stock Farm horses amounted to $26,000, an average of nearly $200, and "the bottom has not dropped out of the business."

WHEN Smuggler, 2:15½, won the Blanchard $10,000 champion stallion race in 1874, no two of the soes he carried were of anywhere near equal weight.

THOS. KEATING has a green pacing mare by Dexter Prince at Lodi that will make some of the side-wheelers on the western circuit hustle a hit to wiggle by her.

At the recent sale the three Eclectic youngsters (none of them twelve months old) brought an average of $250. This is two and one-half times as much as his service fee.

L. E. CLAWSON purchased a colt by Clay, 2:25, dam Lottie, by Wayland Forrest, last summer. He has called him Terra Cotta, and says it will take a race horse to make him "break" this fall.

T. W. MOORE, of Santa Barbara, is a thorough horseman, and no better judge of a good animal ever scanned the outlines of a trotter. His purchases at the Asylum Stock Farm sale prove this fact.

SIDNEY's first crop of foals numbered eleven, and nearly all were from mares of common breeding, yet ten of these colts have taken race records and the remaining one was timed a trial mile in 2:24.

THERE are fifty-four stallions in the list of 2:15 trotters, of which twenty-two never equaled or beat that figure in a race, while of the remaining thirty-two nine got their best records against the watch.

W. F. RYDER, of Tacoma, has purchased the standard-bred pacing mare Innocence, by Bayonne Prince, dam Nellie, by Blue Bull; price paid $1,000. Mr. Ryder is also owner of the fast pacer, Red Girl.

MESSRS. BAILEY & WINDOM, of Oregon, have had some good offers for their game race horse Challenger Chief to go through the Montana circuit, but owing to engagements made for and services they will not start him before fall.

A FULL sister to Chloe, 2:23½, and Dexter Thorne, 2:25½, will be sold at the auction sale next Wednesday; she is only a year old, but a prettier animal or one with greater prospects to become a fast one has not been offered at auction for years.

In a letter from Luke DuBois, of Denver, it is stated that Saraway, a full brother to Chas. Derby, 2:20, and Steiner, 2:29½, will be given a low record this fall; he is remarkably promising. Mr. DuBois expects to be in California in April.

SHIRLEY, by Kentucky Prince, out of Ida, by Hambletonian, and his foal by Sidney, have been sold by J. H. Outhwaite to Dr. J. A. McLeod, of Ironwood, Mich. Shirley will remain at Savannah Park, Cal., and be bred to Daghestan, 2:24 at two years.

THERE are a number of fine Director fillies to be sold next Wednesday at the sale. All of them are out of splendid broodmares, and as the fillies by Director will be valued more highly every year, an opportunity like this will not occur again in some time.

TROUSSEAU, 2:24½, by Nutwood, the dam of Bridal Bells, two-year-old record of 2:27, three-year-old record 2:22½, foaled March 1, 1893, at Savannah Park, Cal., the property of J. H. Outhwaite, a fine bay colt by Stamboul, 2:07½. Trousseau will be bred to Daghestan, 2:24.

B. C. HOLLY has concluded to devote all of his attention to thoroughbreds hereafter, consequently he wishes to dispose of all his trotting stock. Anyone wishing to purchase first-class animals at very low figures will do well to inspect Mr. Holly's collection at Floden, near Vallejo.

SINCE the Asylum sale nearly all our prominent veterinarians have been called upon to emulsate the colts sold. The people who purchased the handsome, smooth-going youngsters have no idea of keeping stallions; they want roadsters and are satisfied by what they have seen and the use of the emulsate they will have horses they can take pleasure in driving.

VAN B. DELASHMUTT of Portland, Ogn., will go through the Montana circuit with a stable of trotters and pacers this season consisting in part of Blondie (pacer) 2:15; Susie S., 2:18, and Canemsh, 2:20½.

CHAS. SCOTT, superintendent of the Napa Fair grounds, will have the track in finer fix this year than ever. He understands what horsemen need, and will have no one making any complaints if he can remove the cause.

HAMBLETONIAN 10 was foaled March 5, 1849, just forty-four years ago. What wonderful progress has been made in the trotting-horse industry since then, and how much are we indebted to the grand old Hero of Chester for it.

MATT DWYER, formerly of Fresno but now a resident of Buffalo, has secured the racing qualities of a promising yearling called El Modelo, by El Mahdi. This youngster is owned by H. M. Littel, of Macedon, and Dwyer thinks he has a chance to beat the yearling record with him.

DR. J. W. DAY has met with great success in England; he sold nine of the twelve trotters he brought over, and got better prices than he would for the twelve in New York. Dr. Day believes there is a splendid market for trotting horses in Europe, if the right class of horses are sent there.

THE following is said to be a "sure" remedy for the scratches: Boil enough white oak bark to make two gallons of strong juice; in this put one large teaspoonful of sugar of lead and two tablespoonfuls of alum; wash the legs with a cloth (a soft sponge would be better), having the juice warm.

THE following is said to be a "sure" remedy for the scratches: Boil enough white oak bark to make two gallons of strong juice; in this put one large teaspoonful of sugar of lead and two tablespoonfuls of alum; wash the legs with a cloth (a soft sponge would be better), having the juice warm.

FRED. HAIGHT, a well-known trainer and driver, has engaged with D. J. Murphy, of the Moorland Stock Farm, to handle his colts and fillies. We expect to see a number of the Soudans following Nuhia's example by getting in the list this year for they are all pure-gaited and very promising.

THE AMERICAN TROTTER is now a lively two-year-old, and celebrated its birthday on the fourth of March by appearing in a new cover. This valued exchange is always welcome, for it has filled a prominent place in turf journalism as a champion of the trotting horse industry of America. May it live to celebrate its centennial.

WHILE George Starr was at Plessanton last year he became very much interested in a black mare by Dexter Prince, dam by Richards' Elector. He often said he would like to own her, and at the Cleveland sale last week he bid $900 for her, and was the happiest man in the world when the auctioneer said, "Sold to George Starr."

THE Kern Driving Club will make a proposition to the directors of the Kern County Fair Grounds Association, to lease the grounds and track for a term of years. In such an event they will give occasional meetings for both runners and trotters. Bakersfield could be made the liveliest center for racing in the valley.—Californian.

W. C. JONES, the former owner of the kite-shaped track at Columbia, Tenn., was arrested March 4th at Nashville, Tenn., upon a requisition from New York. Jones has been indicted there for grand larceny growing out of the purchase and sale of certain trotting horses. He claims that he will be fully able to clear himself of the indictment.

J. H. WHITE's celebrated stock farm at Lakeville is noted all over California on account of its pasture, shelter and water. This year Mr. White has decided to take horses to pasture at $4 per month. Its proximity to San Francisco and the absence of risk in shipping per steamer makes this one of the most desirable places in this State. See advertisement.

WHEN asked why he did not have Chimes trained for a fast record, C. J. Hamlin replied: "In order to give him a fair show it would require a year's training, and the only possible benefit derived would be to add one more to the list of his mother, Beautiful Bells, and swell her fame as a broodmare. The progeny of Chimes can win their own fame."

TRAINER TAYLOR, who has had charge of Hon. J. D. Carr's stable of trotters at Salinas, has resigned his position and yesterday left for San Jose, where he will probably open a public training stable. Mr. Taylor is a good conditioner and successful trainer, besides being a first-class reinsman. He is careful, patient and painstaking, and ought to do well among the best knights of the sulky.

THE severe indisposition of a number of the choicest colts and fillies at the Oakwood Park Stock Farm last year prevented many of them from completing their education, and hundreds of dollars were forfeited in the circuit on this account. This year "these ailing ones" are looking splendid, and every one moves like an old campaigner. There are some crackerjacks among them.

J. GROOM is delighted with the youngsters by Mount Hood, 2:22½, that he is handling at San Jose. The first time he "let one of them out"—a yearling, too—he trotted a quarter in forty-seven seconds, and never was hit by a sulky before. Mount Hood was one of the gamest and handsonest horses in this State, and his progeny cannot help inheriting this essential quality. Everyone at San Jose is surprised at the "go-aheadiness" of the youngsters, and predict a bright future for this horse as a sire.

THE teamster who has a handy sidewheeler in his stable wants the races made pace and trot, while his competitors who babble in nothing but trotters are dead set against any such arrangement. Pacers are getting so numerous now that there are enough of them to fill straight pacing events, and in the New England circuit, particularly, there will be more pacing classes this season than ever before. The wigglers score and get away too fast for the trotters.

THE track at Petaluma has been plowed, barrowed and rolled this winter; the hollow places have been filled and the turns well thrown up. The superintendent, Mr. Macdonald believes the course will be as fast as the Stockton kite track this fall. A large number of eucalyptus trees have been trimmed, the stables and box-stalls have been put in good order, and everything but the extensive grounds looks as if some one has been working very hard since last fair time.

L. SWAN, the well-known veteran fast horse-breeder and owner, was over from Yreka last week consulting with James McDonough, his partner in Georgie Woodthorpe. This fine, speedy mare, is Mr. Swan's pet of his horse kingdom, and she is now at Oakland, Cal., in charge of Shaner, the trainer. She has a record of 2:26, but this year will make herself felt with some finer performances.—Ashland Tidings.

IT is a somewhat singular fact that, as largely as the blood of Mambrino Chief figures as one of the great basic elements in the production of the American trotter, but one of the thirteen trotters in the 2:10 list—Alex, 2:10—traces to him in the direct male line, while of the thirty-four which have trotted in 2:12 or better, but four others—Nightingale, 2:10½, Guy, 2:10½, Gillette, 3:11½, and Walter E., 2:11½—come under the same head.

WHILE we hear stories of wonderful speed shown by some trotters and pacers that are now being driven by trainers in this State, and especially as the race meetings do not commence for months, the comments of that "king of drivers," Orrin A. Hickok, have an ominous ring. "Why, I haven't driven a mile in 40 yet; I must get my horses ready for the races when the judges are in the stand, and the purse is ready for me. I am going to bring a string of horses East that will fit to go some!"

E. C. WALKER ("Veritas"), who for a long time has been correspondent and manager of the New York branch of The Horseman, left for Chicago last Saturday to take charge of that paper as secretary and manager. Mr. Walker was for years on the Grand Circuit for the Spirit of the Times, originated the "Track and Road" feature, established the Eastern department of The Horseman in 1885, and has conducted it ever since. In addition he is a practical horseman, bringing out and winning six straight races with Aladdin in three weeks; also won with Miss Alice, 2:17, and Soto, 2:20½, and handled Harvey, 2:24½, and Jewel, 2:24½, at Fleetwood last season.

AN expert groom gives this advice: "Never use the comb on the horse's head. If he has any spirit at all he will not endure it. Take the brush in the right hand and the headstall in the left, steady his head while brushing gently, and then, with the comb in the left hand, curry the neck from behind the ear and the entire right side. Go through the same process on the left side, leave no space untouched. After currying take the brush and brush the hair the wrong way, scraping the brush at intervals with the comb to clean it. Then go the right way with the brush; follow the brush with a woolen rag—rubbing the hair up and then smoothing it. Don't spare elbow grease, and the horse will show his keep and act as he feels.

THE sale of Monhars, the great three-year-old, 2:11½, for $13,000, continues to cause ugly stories to be circulated. It is charged that there was considerable hy-hidding at Tattersalls, in New York, where the horse was sold. W. B. Fasig, of the Tattersalls-Fasig Company said to-day: "I hate to say it, but the whole affair seems to me to be much like a skin game. It was unfortunate, but there was no way to prevent the hy-hidding until after the sale had been made, and that was too late. I believed the sale was a bona fide one until it was said that Richfield & Leathers had brought back the colt from his buyer at the sale at an advance of $2,500. That settles it in my mind. I think that it was a crooked transaction all around."

THERE was a little colt foaled at the Oakwood Park Stock Farm last week that prompted Superintendent Wiley to telephone to J. M. Boyd, the owner, at once. This foal is by Chas. Derby, 2:20 sixth heat, out of Bertha (sister to Bayard Wilkes, 2:15, sixth heat, and Alarie, sire of Victor B., 2:20½), by Alcantara; second dam Barcelona, by Bayard 53; third dam Blandina (dam of six sires), by Mambrino Chief; fourth dam Burch Mare (dam of two in the list), by Parker's Brown Pilot (sire of fourth dam of Nancy Hanks, 2:04). He is therefore a brother to Diahlo, the great three-year-old that got his mark of 2:14½ in the second heat of the second race he was ever started in. It would be difficult to set a price on this youngster.

THE latest trotting reform advocates that in estimating a horse's rank in a trotting summary, instead of ranking the contestants according to the best positions obtained, and ignoring the poorer places in other heats the average he taken instead and money awarded thereby. There is food for thought in the idea advanced, as there is no doubt that a horse who simply wins one heat and is not able to get within hailing distance during the remainder of the race should not outrank one who was close up in every heat, fighting the race out with the winner, while the other, content with second money securely won, drifted in each heat among the tail-enders. The trouble, perhaps, with this and other improvements suggested, is that it may improve in one respect and create a defect in another.

HANCOCK M. JOHNSTON, although prostrated by an attack of sickness that would have used up a man of less nerve and will power, still keeps up his love for fine horses. His recent importation, Conifer, is a horse "bred in the purple," being by Lord Russell, own brother to Mand S., 2:08½, and sire of Kremlin, 2:07½. His dam is by Nutwood, 2:18½, who was by Belmont, out of Miss Russell, the dam of Mand S. This horse is the only one in the United States who is inbred to the best daughter of Pilot Jr., and when he comes to be mated with the game and hard-legged daughters of A. W. Richmond, there will be a new family of horses starting out from Southern California destined to become as famous hereafter as the Sultans, and Richmonds have been in the days gone by. Conifer is a good individual, and is therefore bound to get great horses.—Los Angeles Herald.

MR. T. E. HILLS of Ashland, Or., has recently made the following sales of trotting stock to D. H. Churchill, of Great Falls, Montana: Julian 6934, blk s, foaled April 29, 1887; bred by Geo. W. Sherwood, St. Paul, Minn.; sired by Woodford Wilkes, 2:28, dam Margin, by Gov. Sprague 444; Bessie G., h m, foaled 1834, by Western Chief 685, dam Nellie, by Johnson Horse; Jessie B., h m, foaled May, 1883, by Western Chief 695, dam Kate, by Morgan Horse; Fairy J., blk f, foaled June 3, 1890, by Julian 6934, dam Nelly, by Billy V., son of King Herod; Custer, b c, foaled June 4, 1891, by Julian 6934, dam Bessie G., by Western Chief 695; Gypsy Hayes, br f, foaled June 22, 1891, by Julian 6934, dam Miss Hayes, by Ericsson 580; Ben Hur, h c, foaled June 25, 1892, by Julian 6934, dam Bessie G., by Western Chief 695; Gertrude, h f, foaled 1892, by Julian 6934, dam Lucy, by Western Chief 695.

The Saddle.

RACING has been overdone in Australia, and nearly all the jockey clubs are getting in debt, according to advices received.

AT a recent meeting of the Austrian Jockey Club it was decided to spend $125,000 in purchasing English thoroughbreds.

ALL the Brutus two-year-olds are doing wonderfully well at San Jose. One is credited with running half a mile in 0:47 1/2 last week.

MISS WALLING, by Spendthrift, dam Ventura, by Virgil, has been bred to Geoffrey, brother to Guenn. Billy Murry, of Sacramento, owns the mare.

DR. C. W. ABY has resigned his position as manager of Guenoc Stock Farm. He expects to return to the coast in the latter part of this month.

WE understand that one of the most promising two-year-olds at Sacramento is by imp. Cheviot from Lurline, purchased of J. B. Chaselay and owned by Wilber F. Smith.

HON. M. F. TARPEY has his flyers at Lodi track—two by imp. Cheviot and one by Jim Brown, out of Not Idle, Mr. T.'s good mare. They are named respectively Cheviot Chase, Border Lassie and Albert.

A NUMBER of horses at Bay District track have had a touch of influenza. Among the celebrities so affected are the good son of Monday and Precious (Peel), recently purchased by C. Chappell of Senator Stanford.

THE famous colt King Lee, has for some particular reason, been declared out of the rich American Derby. This will take away some weight, as the great son of King Alfonso would have had a lot of followers for this event.

WHIMBREL, by St. Albans, dam by The Marquis (sire of imp. Loyalist and Chesterfield), won the Metropolitan Stakes of Calcutta in January, beating Ivo, Higbbona (the celebrated Australian horse and an even-money favorite), Shur, Vicenza and several others.

A TELEGRAM received Feb. 27 from Augusta, Ga., announced the death of Col. J. W. Crawford, one of the most interesting and unique figures on the American turf of late years. Col. Crawford was known to nearly every race-goer in the country. He was 55 years old.

MESSRS. J. A. and A. H. MORRIS' mare, Lizzie Baker, by Longfellow, has dropped a brown filly to Galopin and will be bred to Friar's Balsam. Mr. Marcus Daly's mare, Iris, by Bend Or, dam Shotover, now due to foal to Fernandez, will be mated with Amphion.

AMONG the recent foals dropped at Menlo Stock Farm are a chestnut colt by St. Carlo, dam Sister to Ruth Ryan (dam of Quarterstaff), by Lodi; bay colt by Sinfax, dam Partisana (dam of Joshua), by imp. Partisan, and a chestnut filly by St. Carlo, dam Revolution.

CASEY WINCHELL is training Naglee Burke's horses at San Jose. The young man has grown too heavy to ride. He will be remembered as the jockey that rode for Theodore Winters many seasons, and piloted El Rio Rey and other cracks to victory on numerous occasions.

MR. T. C. McDOWELL has sold to Mr. George H. Clay, proprietor of the Balgowan Stud, the broodmares Golden Cad, by Longfellow, out of Cicily Bowling (dam of Zorling) and Unadaga, by Onondaga, out of Una (dam of Early Blossom). Both gentlemen decline to make public the price.

PERCY THOMAS and John B. Thompson will form a racing stable, and as a nucleus have purchased from Jack Chinn fourteen horses, among them Ingomar, entered for the American Derby, and the selling-plater Major Tom. The new confederacy will be known as the Old Jordan Stable.

GLIDE, a bay filly in the Macdonough string by imp. Cyrus, dam imp. Getaway, by Balfe, is said to be the very fastest two-year-old in training at San Jose, and horsemen from the Garden City are very sweet on her. Another very good one is the two-year-old by imp. King Galop, dam Gldelia.

WESLEY GEORGE, the veteran owner of the unfortunate Applause, has secured another bread-winner in the five-year-old gelding Joe, by Conquest, dam Swift, by Three Cheers. Joe, who was in the Thompson stable last season, won two races for Mr. George within a week, we are happy to state.

THE splendid Australian racehorse, Loyalist, though making a season in the stud at Bay District track, is being given light exercise every day, and will probably be ready to race about the middle of May. Great things are expected of him, as he was a high-class racehorse in the land of the kangaroo.

ON Wednesday of last week Mr. H. H. Stanhope sold to Mr. Milton Young, proprietor of the McGrathiana Stud, the thoroughbred broodmare, Ada Ban, by King Ban, out of Ada Cheatham, by Lexington, for $1,000. This mare is due to foal to Jim Gore, and the foal was reserved from the sale by Mr. Stanhope.

A SAN JOSE correspondent writes us that there are 300 horses in training there, nearly all thoroughbreds. Billy Donathan has twelve head, and his two-year-olds are moving exceedingly well. Henry Walsh is working thirty-five, some of them "as fast as a bullet." Boots has twenty, and all are looking good.

DICK O' MALLEY, the Mariner colt in the Owens Bros.' string, is said to have developed into a more than useful race horse. Reports from Fresno are to the effect that he can run away from the speedy Captain Al, and his owners are said to be bewailing the fact that they scratched him out of the American Derby.

COL. DAN M. BURNS has purchased of Senator Leland Stanford, Palo Alto Stock Farm, the two-year-old chestnut colt Mutineer. He is a race-looking little fellow by imp. Cheviot, dam imp. Mutiny, by Adventurer; second dam Muta, by The Duke, etc. Mutineer was immediately put to work by Stiller at Bay District track.

THAT good four-year-old colt Rally, by imp. Rossington, out of Helena, by Longfellow, established the six-furlong record for the New Orleans track recently. He went the distance in 1:14, with an impost of 124 pounds. Rally is a Kentucky-bred horse, his sire, his dam and the sire of his dam all being the property of the Nantura Stud.

THE arrangements for the mating of Mr. James R. Keene's English mares have been completed. As was intended, none of them will be mated except with really fashionable sires. Ixia goes to Saraband, Sylvabelle to Sarabaud, Glide to Surefoot, Cusbat to Galliard, Editha to Galliard, Fair Vision to Amphion, Queen of Sheba to Hampton, Princess Iskra to Sleen, Atala to Wisdom, Eccentricity to Wisdom, Sundown to Common, and Bonnie Gal to Prince Rudolph.

THE stable of C. L. Fair, of this city, will take part in the Eastern meetings the coming season. Richard Havey, the well-known, experienced horseman, is training the horses, while the jockeys will be William J. Hill and George McDonald. Both the jockeys have had experience in the saddle. Hill rode with great success in this State last year. McDonald is the light weight, he being able to ride as low as 90 lbs., and rode several winners at the Fall Blood Horse meeting.

COL. NORTH'S horses became almost unmanageable when they were being led under the 9th avenue elevated road, New York City, and after Eltham Queen, the three-year-old filly in the string, had nearly succeeded in sending an old lady to another land with her heels, she finally succeeded in casting a shoe just before reaching 24d street ferry. The latter was picked up by a bystander, and as he did so little Swash, who rode her said: "You back her every time she runs. She can use her legs just as well in a race."

SAN FRANCISCO will have the greatest spring meeting in her history this year, notwithstanding no new stakes have been inaugurated. We would suggest a mile and an eighth handicap race for the opening day for three-year-olds and over, $50 entrance, with $1,500 added, $350 to second, $150 to third, entries to close March 18th, so that the press of this city would have ample time to discuss the chances of the various candidates. That there would be an immense crowd present to see that race is certain.

GEORGE E. SMITH, "Pittsburg Phil," got back to Pittsburg, after six weeks spent in New Orleans, toward the end of last week. Before leaving the North he made up his mind that he would not bet a cent while in the South. At New Orleans he is said to have been told of sundry good things telegraphed on from New York to Mr. M. F. Dwyer and others from North Bergen, but he would not back them. He is therefore greatly lauded for his determination by the local sporting press. Mr. Smith is reported as saying that he offered to purchase Yorkville Belle from Mr. Croker at a profit, but that his offer was refused.

W. M. MURRY, the well-known Sacramento horseman and owner of Three Cheers, gave us a pleasant call last Tuesday, and, during the course of conversation he stated that never in his life did he see a lot of horses better fitted for a campaign than C. L. Fair's, trained by Richard Havey. The writer asked Mr. Murry to pick out the best one of the ten flyers, and he said that it was utterly impossible to do so, as they were so nearly equal and so fast throughout. "Dick" Havey is entitled to great credit for the excellent work he has performed, and we expect to see the Fair horses render a good account of themselves.

AN expert groom gives this advice: "Never use the comb on the horse's head. If he has any spirit at all he will not endure it. Take the brush in the right hand and the headstall in the left, steady his head while brushing gently, and then, with the comb in the left hand, curry the neck from behind the ear and the entire right side. Go through the same process on the left side, leave no space untouched. After currying take the brush and brush the hair the wrong way, scraping the brush at intervals with the comb to clean it. Then go the right way with the brush; follow the brush with a woollen rag—rubbing the hair up and then smoothing it. Don't spare elbow grease, and the horse will show his keep and act as he feels.

SOMEBODY has been playing on the credibility of a would-be breeder of thoroughbreds, located somewhere in the southern part of the State, says the Live-Stock Record of Lexington, Ky. A few days ago one of the most prominent breeders around Lexington received a letter from the man referred to above, stating that he had just purchased a thoroughbred mare, and that the owner told him that he (the Lexington breeder) would pay a large premium for stinting the mare to his thoroughbred stallion, a horse who, when he is retired to the stud, will be one of the most prominent in this or any other locality. The writer got right down to business, and wanted to know what the Lexington breeder would pay him to send his mare to the stallion mentioned.

ROBERT SMITH, the crack jockey, now managing the splendid string of Hugh Kirkendall, the well-known turfman of Helena, Mont., writes us that the horses will not take part in the coming spring meeting, as he expected, on account of the severe winter in Montana and consequent backwardness of horses in that section. However, they will be ready to race at Denver, proceeding from thence to Washington Park, Chicago. In the fall, the Kirkendall horses will be seen in San Francisco. "Bob" says Nevada, Montana and Three Forks (he by Spokane) look like winners, and, as he has fourteen well-bred ones in the stable, there should be at least two or three crackerjacks in the lot. Mr. Kirkendall is one of the squarest and most liberal turfmen in this country, and deserves all the success he has had. In Robert Smith he has a most excellent manager and a thorough horseman, and Bob made a host of friends during his stay here this winter.

TOM GALLAGHER, in one of his gossipy letters to the Chicago Tribune, has the following to say about a California-bred colt that is very liable to astonish the racing world as did his great sister, Yo Tambien; Yo El Rey is a colt of extraordinary conformation. He is a bay, with a white face, four white half stockings, is slightly watch-eyed in the right eye, and is a little pigeon-toed. Fifteen hands and one inch high, he weighs 1050 pounds and will girth six inches more than his big three-year-old stable companion, Flood Gate. Behind he looks as big as Racedand, and he is considerably longer barreled. A long and immensely big colt on short legs, he is exquisitely coupled, and the most remarkably turned piece of horseflesh ever in this or any other country. This is not an overdrawn picture. His body presents not a single angle. So completely and beautifully is he set that every line is a graceful curve. He has short cannon bones and at first sight looks a little light in his legs, but is not. To particularize his points would be superfluous. I have covered the subject when he said: "There he is, and I defy any horseman to find any flaw in him, except those toes, and I don't mind that, for the best race horse I ever saw, Norfolk, was pigeon-toed."

FREDERICK GEBHARD is negotiating for the purchase of The Locusts, the farm of the Countess D'Agreda, formerly Mrs. George Lorillard, at Easttown, N. J. Frank McCabe, Mr. Gebhard's trainer, has been inspecting the farm. Mr. Gebhard is a true sportsman and has the good wishes of every true lover of the turf. He is a liberal buyer, but has been unfortunate in his selection of high-priced horses. He is not easily discouraged, however, and intends to remain on the turf in the hope that Fortune will smile on him in the near future. New Jersey is likely to become one of the leading horse-breeding States, as many turfmen intend to start breeding establishments in that State.

TO LAY out a mile track, draw a line through the center thirteen hundred and twenty feet in length, setting a stake at each end. Then draw another line on each side and exactly parallel with it, setting stakes at either end of them. Now fasten a line or twine to the center of the stake and describe a half circle. A field of forty-two acres will do. For a half mile, draw two straight lines six hundred feet long, four hundred and fifty-two feet five inches apart. With a wire loop find the center between these lines, and drive stakes at each end. From the stake describe your half circle for the turns, and throw them up one inch to the foot. Three feet from the line will measure a full half mile.

A LONDON correspondent of The Horseman writes: "After all the Jockey Club's scheme for licensing our bookmakers has fallen through, the difficulties being evidently too great. However, the rulers of the turf have taken action with regard to the proper management of meetings, and have issued a circular to all clerks of the course intimating that unless steps are taken to exclude rogues, thieves, vagabonds and riff-raff in general from the stands and inclosures, their licenses for the meeting will be in danger. The effect of this edict has had an immediate result, and at the recent meeting at Kempton Park it was a subject of general remark that the inclosures had never before been so well kept. The plan adopted was the posting of special detectives at the gates who steadfastly refused admission to known bad characters, who had to return the way they came."

A ST. PAUL dispatch of last Monday says: John Glaspie, the millionaire lumberman of Stillwater, Minn., was instantly killed and three other persons were injured in a railway accident on the Chicago and Northwestern near Baraboo, Wis., a few minutes before midnight. Mr. Glaspie's neck was broken by striking against an iron rod. A freight train was standing on a side track, and the sleeper in rounding a curve crashed against the rear box car with force enough to shatter the former into pieces. The injuries to the other three passengers were not serious. Mr. Glaspie was about forty years old, and was well known all over the country. He was an extensive owner of running horses, and attended most of the large meetings. His trip to Chicago was for the purpose of arranging to transfer his string of runners to the South in preparation for the spring meetings.

THE following appeared in last Wednesday's Chronicle: "The bookmakers have evidently made a success on this side of the bay. They are satisfied with their present headquarters at the Oakland race track, just outside the limits of the city of Oakland, where they do not have to pay any license. When Henry Schwartz opened his racing season at the track it was announced that he would only run for two months. This programme has been changed, however, and the bookies have now secured an option to locate there for two years. The present system of betting is confined entirely to the local racing. There is, however, considerable curiosity manifested by people in Oakland to see whether the bookies will attempt to play the Eastern races when the season opens. At present there is no prohibitory law against bookmaking, and the Supervisors say that there is plenty of time to act when the evil exists. Yesterday the plans of Schwartz and his followers were made public to a small extent when the following document was filed for record with the County Recorder: "In consideration of $1, I, Benjamin Wright, the lessee from Joseph Mee, of the Oakland race track, hereby grant to Henry Schwartz for a period of two years from this date the privilege of conducting running races upon the track at any time within the foregoing period, excepting during the holding of the annual meeting of the Golden Gate Fair Association. Schwartz need pay no compensation for the use of the track and be entitled to receive all of the returns therefrom, excepting from the hotel and barroom, where Wright reserves for himself. All money for purses and stakes is to be given by Schwartz, and said Schwartz, among other things, is to receive all the gate receipts, and the track ground and fences are to be kept in condition and repair, suitable for the foregoing purposes, by Wright." We trust, now that Schwartz has secured the track, that he will not allow greed for gold to run away with him and kill off interest in racing in California altogether by giving our people a lot of "dog" runs.

JOHN MACKAY, for fully twenty years superintendent-manager of the famous Raucha del Paso of J. E. Haggin, is soon to leave this, the largest thoroughbred breeding establishment in the world, home of Salvador, Maxim, Sir Modred, Ben Ali, Darelain, Firenze, Miss Woodford, Vandalite, Lizzie Lucas and hosts of other turf celebrities. Mr. Mackay goes into partnership, it is understood, with Simeon G. Reed, the genial millionaire steamboat owner of Portland, Or., in the business of breeding thoroughbreds for the market. Over a year ago Mr. Reed purchased 170 acres of land adjoining the Hon. L. J. Rose's place in Los Angeles county, and lately secured a much larger tract of land in the same beautiful San Gabriel valley, which is hard to excel anywhere in the world as a place to breed good horses. Mr. Reed recently returned from England with the stallion Martenlust (son of Wenlock and Hironelle, by Adventurer), who will probably head the Reed-Mackay stud. Among the mares Mr. Reed purchased in England were Eye Sweet (7 years), by Galopin, $2,600; Brierbush (8 years), by Tynedale, $4,300; The Squaw (8 years), by Uncas (son of Stockwell), $1,000; Ira (5 years), by Domesday, $2,000; Spinning Time (7 years), by Merry-Go-Round—Moribund. These mares were all bred to first-class sires, the last one to Prince Rudolph (son of Prince Charlie). Mr. Mackay owns imp. Milltothian (son of Ratanplan or Strathconan and the great Lufra, by Windhound), sire of Sir Walter, Monowal, Little Mid, Braw Scot and others; Torso (who was a good racehorse), by Algerine, dam imp. Santa Lucia, by Lord Lyon, and about twenty-five royally-bred broodmares. That Messrs. Reed & Mackay will make a success of their venture, with such excellent material to start with, is certain, for with Mr. Mackay's experience and Mr. Reed's excellent judgment and coin to back it, failure is well-nigh impossible.

The Coast Racing Situation.

Everything points to a wonderfully successful spring meeting under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association. And the way things are shaping leads a careful observer to believe that the galloper will be raced in California nearly twelve months each year hereafter, and Oakland bids fair to become the scene of most of the strife for coin, if not glory.

In Los Angeles there are perhaps forty horses being prepared for the Blood Horse meeting, Bridges having six or seven, Baldwin fifteen, Dickey half a dozen, L. J. Rose about that many. Riekabaugh & Earp have Lottie Mills, and other owners bring the total up to at least forty that can be counted on to come to the spring meeting, which begins April 1st.

We are waiting patiently to hear who will preside over the destinies of the horsemen and the public in so far as the presiding judge is concerned. James B. Ferguson, the genial Kentuckian, whose great ability as a flag-wielder is acknowledged, will again officiate as starter. And now, if bookmaking is done away with and the public allowed to make its own odds through the pari-mutuels and auctions, racing will take a hold on the heart of the public on this Coast that can never be broken.

Los Angeles to the Front. The necessity for appointing qualified veterinary surgeons in every county in this State is becoming more apparent every year. The spread of infectious and contagious diseases through the ignorance and carelessness of many of our stock farmers must be kept in check.

Among thoughtful breeders who are interested not only in the breeding and developing of the light harness horse, but also in the purification of the trotting turf, the idea has been advanced that it is not at all advisable to allow hooks to be made on trotting and pacing contests (as proposed some time ago). It is much fairer, instead, to have Paris mutual boxes set up and operated at the track.

Disregarding these vital points and looking at the question from a financial stand, it can easily be shown that associations will make more money by not allowing bookmakers and having only auction and paris Mutuel boxes at the track. The associations can purchase six of these boxes and have them placed in charge of capable men, who are to be paid fair salaries.

As soon as the officers are appointed we hope that the supervisors in every other county in this State will do likewise. Although there may be no work for these officials to do at present, still it will be well to be prepared.

Banish the Bookmakers.

Disregarding these vital points and looking at the question from a financial stand, it can easily be shown that associations will make more money by not allowing bookmakers and having only auction and paris Mutuel boxes at the track. The associations can purchase six of these boxes and have them placed in charge of capable men, who are to be paid fair salaries.

It has been shown that pool-selling firms generally become rich in a few years, while bookmakers often become wealthy in a few weeks. Under the proposed system all commissions accruing from the sale of pools (auctions and mutuels) would revert to the society, and, through it, to the horsemen, whose horses cost a great deal of money to breed, develop and pay entrance money on in the various meetings.

We have no room, neither do we want any, for bookmakers at our trotting meetings. If they once get their "claws" on the associations it will be hard to shake them off. The feeling is so bitter against these followers of the turf in France that they are prohibited from following their business on the race tracks there.

THE list of trotters at the Palo Alto Stock Farm that have become standard by performance is published in another column. No other stock farm in the United States can send a statement equaling it, and when the fact is taken into consideration that last year the horses from this farm met with a serious set-back in having the epizootic attack the most promising ones, the recital upon seems very remarkable.

ENTRIES for trotters and pacers to the Salt Lake Driving Park Association's races, which are to take place in June, will close next Wednesday, March 15th. As many of the owners of large strings of trotters and pacers intend to stop at Salt Lake on their way East, it is of the utmost importance that they do not neglect to send in their nominations at once.

As soon as the officers are appointed we hope that the supervisors in every other county in this State will do likewise. Although there may be no work for these officials to do at present, still it will be well to be prepared.

A DISPATCH from Chicago, dated March 9th, conveyed the following sad information: "Colonel B. W. Woodruff, the famous racing official, died last night. He has presided at great meetings in various parts of the country and had been already engaged for this season to preside at the San Francisco meeting." Colonel Woodruff was known in racing circles from Saratoga to San Francisco, and was generally liked throughout the country. He was, we believe, a native of Eastern Tennessee, but resided for many years at Montgomery Ala. He was a Major in the Confederate army, although known everywhere as "Colonel." The deceased was sixty years of age, and his health had not been of the best for a long time. Seven years ago Colonel Woodruff was presiding judge at New Orleans, and it was there that Ed. Corrigan, who conducted the West Side track at Chicago, now the Garfield Park track, became impressed with his superior knowledge and his straightforwardness. Corrigan engaged him to preside at his meetings in Chicago, and from then until about a year ago he officiated at all the meetings on the West Side track in the capacity of presiding judge. At about that time Corrigan and Woodruff had a falling out. It was over the reinstatement of a steeplechaser named Linguist. The horse was pulled, and the animal, jockey and owner were ruled off the course. Subsequently the horse became the property of a man named Hartman, and, upon evidence being presented to the effect that the latter had nothing to do with the pulling of the animal, Colonel Woodruff signed his reinstatement. This did not meet with the approval of Corrigan, and he dispensed with Woodruff's services. Since that time Colonel Woodruff has officiated as judge at several important meetings. He was judge at the meeting of the St. Louis Fair Association, at Denver, and for the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, at the Bay District track last fall and this winter. He has also officiated as judge at New Orleans meetings, and two years ago presided over the Saratoga track. Colonel Woodruff was a courteous, well-informed, pleasant gentleman, and news of his death will be heard with sorrow by his large number of friends here and by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance—from the Atlantic coast to the Pacific Slope.

THE Fashion Stud Farm trotting stock, which are to be sold by P. C. Kellogg & Co. at the American Institute Building, New York City, on March 21st and 22d, offers opportunities for our California breeders to get descendants of the greatest turf performers to cross with the stallions and broodmares on this coast. The only representative from this celebrated farm we have seen on this coast are Monbars, 2:11½ (recently sold in the East), and Boodle, 2:21½, the handsome, game trotting stallion in San Jose. Every colt and filly sold from the Fashion Farm has turned out to be extremely fast, and as this is a sale of eighty-four choice ones that will prove most valuable as an "outcross," orders should be sent on immediately by our leading breeders to secure a number. The advertisement only appears once.

HORSEMEN should not forget that a number of trotting and pacing stakes, to be contested at the State Fair of 1893, are now open. Entries to these close with the secretary, Edwin F. Smith, at his office in Sacramento, on Wednesday, the 15th of March. Read the advertisement in another column and send in your entries without delay.

ATTENTION is called to the Capital Turf and Driving Club stake races for gallopers, entries to which close with the secretary, James W. Stafford, to-day (Saturday, March 11th). The conditions are extremely liberal, as a perusal of the advertisement in another column will show. Entries mailed at any time up to 12 P. M. to-night will be accepted.

Don't Forget.

Osborn & Alexander are now in a position to fill orders for Hickory Spoke Pneumatic Live Sulky Wheels. If you can't go in person write them. These are the famous Elliot Wheels and the tires are the world-renowned Columbias. There place of business is between Fremont and Market streets. See "ad" elsewhere in this issue.

THE Sonoma and Marin Agricultural Society is the first of our district associations to send in their advertisement of races to be trotted and paced this fall, entries for which will close April 1. There are to be more trotters and pacers handled for speed this year than ever, and every owner should make entries at once in the circuit. Colts and fillies of all ages will have an opportunity of winning money and glory, and as good reports are heard from all the mining and agricultural sections of California, there will be more money in circulation this fall than has been for years. Horsemen should read this advertisement and make entries at once.

The Anteeos are the fastest of the Electioneers, and Danteo will prove no exception.

Next Wednesday's Sale.

The consignments of choice trotting stock to the sale which takes place next Wednesday at Killip & Co.'s salesyard have been carefully selected, and the catalogues containing pedigrees and descriptions show that some of the choicest-bred individuals in the State are to be disposed of. Capt. Ben E. Harris sends broodmares sired by Rustic 917, Henry Williams, Alaska, Packard's Nutwood, Echo 462, Dave Hill Jr. 17,139, Redwood, Avalanche, Hambletonian 725, General Taylor, Whippleton, Alert and Abdallah Jr., out of very choicely-bred mares. A few of these broodmares are stunted to his stallions:

Adventure, son of Venture and Young Rosedale (dam of Rosie Mac, 2:20½), by Sawyer's Messenger; second dam Old Rosedale, 2:27, by a son of Printer. Every one of Adventure's progeny is noted for style, size, good color, perfect conformation and speed. As soon as they are bridle-wise they can trot inside of 3:00. Tempest is another one of Capt. Harris' stallions. He is by Carr's Mambrino 1789, out of Bluegrass, by Hambletonian 10; second dam Old Martha, by Mambrino Chief 11; third dam Lightfoot, by Grayfoot (thoroughbred); fourth dam Birdie, by Kentucky Woodpecker. Some of these mares are in foal to Fleetwood (son of Nutwood 600), Brentwood (son of Dawn), Brown Jug and Hugo (son of Fordstan). They have all proven themselves superior to the ordinary roadsters, or the Captain would have disposed of them long ago. They are pleasant drivers, stylish and pure-gaited.

Besides these there are some very promising young mares by Adventure, Tempest, Fordstan 22,129, Prince Imperial, Sidney, 2:19½, Cavalier (son of Brigadier) and a number of well-trained carriage teams and roadsters. One four-year-old mare called Sidena, by Sidney, dam the famous prize-winner, Lena Bowles, by Vic's Ethan Allen, is to be sold. She is in foal to Almont Medium, 2:18½, and as she possesses a world of speed, she should be purchased by some breeder who will give her a mark this fall. She will prove of great value either on the track or harem.

D. J. Murphy, of San Jose, sends the very choicest of all last year's colts and fillies to the sale, and they must be sold. Besides these he consigns a number of excellent young geldings, broodmares and young stallions. The Dexter Princes sell extremely well, as the sire is now looked upon as one of the greatest progenitors of speed in the United States. There are several very choice daughters of this horse to be sold. One in particular is Chloe Thorne (sister to Chloe, 2:23½, and A. Speckles' handsome colt Dexter Thorne, 2:25½). She is out of Clyde, by Hawthorne, a mare that has three others equally as fast as this illustrious pair which will go inside the "charmed circle" this fall. There is another Dexter Prince filly out of a daughter of Black Prince, second dam (the dam of Lucille, 2:26), by Blackhawk 767. She is also a promising one. The mare Princess Lodi is full sister to Lodi Princess, a mare that will go in the list this year. She is out of a mare by Black Boy 2921; second dam by Chieftain 721; third dam by Black Hawk 767; fourth dam by Jim Crow. That's breeding good enough for anyone; she is a good individual besides. The Director family will be better represented at this sale than it ever has been. Mr. Murphy's contribution is the filly Miss Smith, by Black Tornado, out of Berlin Belle, by Berlin; second dam by Jack Nelson; third dam by Fred Lowe 656; fourth dam Mary Smart, by Black Hawk 767. She is a beauty and, like Direct, is a fast pacer.

T. C. Snider sends the fine filly Grace Darling, by Director, dam Grace (dam of Creole, 2:20), by Buccaneer 2656, second dam May (dam of Apex, 2:26; Sterling, sire of six; Letty, dam of Wayland W., 12:24½, and Maud Singleton, 2:28½), by Flaxtail 8132; third dam by Boanerges (thoroughbred). This filly is by one of the greatest sires that ever lived out of a producing dam, by a great sire of dams, while her second dam was one of the best if not the best mare that Dr. M. W. Hicks brought here. Every animal that traces to her on the maternal side has shown wonderful speed and gameness. This filly on both sides is related to horses of extreme speed, hence her value as a broodmare after her career on the turf ends will make her invaluable.

L. Hewlett, of Oakland, consigns Hannah H. to the sale. She is also by Director out of Brownie H., by that wonderful son of Hambletonian 725, Priam; second dam by Skenan-doh; third dam, Black Bess (dam of Lottie M., 2:24). Hannah H. is ready to be given to a trainer. She is as perfect a specimen of the Director family as one would wish to see, and, in regard to her breeding it would be superfluous to add anything—she is bred to suit the most fastidious.

D. J. Murphy sends the finest lot of Soudans to this sale he has ever bred. They are out of mares by A. W. Richmond, Nutwood, Rifleman, Bismarck, 2:29½, Jack Patchen and Elmo. There are a few two-year-old stallions that are worthy of being placed at the head of any stock farm. Two of them—Syria 14,696 and Stika 20,492—are by Soudan, out of Signa (sister to Maggie McDowell, 2:21½), by Sidney, 2:19½; second dam Lady Hanna, by Arthurton (the great broodmare sire); third dam Old Lady Hanna, by Langford. They are good-sized, well-formed, promising trotters. Their pedigrees need no comment, but as individuals they are just the kind for some good trainer to take in hand.

Some one will want a very fast young pacer, and as pacers are rapidly coming to the front, not only in races, but in public estimation, the grand-looking colt Cassia 20,491 should fill the bill. He is bred in the purple; his dam is a full sister to Charles Derby, 2:20, and Steiner, 2:29½, being by Steinway out of Katy G., by Electioneer. He is a wonderfully well-formed and speedy colt.

Soudan will have a number in the list, and had not Mr. Murphy listed these youngsters previous to his completing arrangements for having them developed, he would not have sent these to be sold, but they must "go," now that they are catalogued.

He also sends a number of fillies out of Nutwood, Sterlingwood and A. W. Richmond mares and broodmares that are better-bred than many of the best on our large stock farms.

T. C. Snider sends Lalage, a three-year-old Eclectic filly that is as pretty as a picture. She is out of Reka Patchen, by Alexander 490; second dam Emma Steitz (dam of Peep o' Day, trial 2:17), by Mountain Boy. Lalage is engaged in the California Futurity Stake, value $7,500, to be trotted for in 1893-94, and, from her smooth way of going, should win it. Eclectic fillies as good as she are hard to find. Mr. Snider also places another good one in the sale—Clito, by Steinway, 2:25½ (that great sire of early and extreme speed), out of Maud M., grandam of Caesar, 2:16½, by Stockbridge Chief Jr.

672; second dam by Williamson's Belmont. Clito is a grand individual, and is stunted to Eclectic 11,321.

L. Hewlett also consigns three other good ones to the sale besides his Director filly, and all of them are worthy of the attention of horsemen.

M. Heilerian's two stallions, one by Venture, 2:27½, the other by Alexander, are both good-looking, stylish and very pure-gaited trotters.

The sale promises to be one of the best held in the State this year, and horsemen should send for catalogues. Read the descriptions and pedigrees, then attend the sale. Remember, it takes place next Wednesday, March 15th, at 11 A. M.

S. Toomey & Co.'s Infringement Notice.

IMPORTANT TO HORSEMEN.

The marked popularity which our Truss Axle sulky has gained has caused certain other manufacturers, who originally depreciated the same, to now practically adopt our form of construction. We were the first to originate and put upon the market a Truss Axle sulky, which our long experience in manufacturing leads us to believe is superior to all other forms. This belief has now been confirmed by the practical opinion of prominent horsemen and competent judges, expressed in our very largely increased trade for them. From time to time it has been necessary to increase our facilities, until now we have the largest sulky factory in the world, so completely equipped that we can supply every demand.

We are owners of all rights under the following Letters Patent of the U. S., which covers broadly all forms of Truss Axle sulky; No. 239,885, issued April 5, 1881; No. 294,528, issued March 4, 1884, and others.

While we are loath to disturb the business of our competitors, we respectfully but firmly wish to warn all manufacturers, dealers and users of Truss Axle sulky that we have counsel, and will spare no expense to prosecute all such manufacturers, dealers in and users of, infringing Trussed Axle sulky, to the end that our rights may be fully protected.

Hoping that this notice is timely given, and will be effectual in putting all innocent horsemen on their guard,

Very respectfully yours,
S. TOOMEY & Co.,
March 4, 1893. Canal Dover, Ohio.

HOOF-BEATS.

THE register number given Mr. N. J. Stone's fine stallion, Election Chief (formerly Election) by Electioneer, dam Lizzie H., is 21,184.

A RECENT addition to the string of Hugh Kirkendall, the Montana turfman, is the good four-year-old brown colt, Sir Matthew, by imp. Sir Modred, dam Embroidery, that ran in Marcus Dalv's colors last season.

FRANK H. BURKE sets the ball rolling by offering his stock in the Register Association for sale at half price. His example will be followed by many others who have seen the Year Book for 1892 and are disgusted with the rulings. The book is full of errors, they say, and is of no use.

SINCE the advertisement of Idalium appeared in this paper, several well-known horsemen have visited John Cassidy's, and pronounced the brother to Cheviot and Sir Modred a "magnificent horse." It was thought until lately that every horseman in the State had seen him, but it appears not.

FRANK H. BURKE is not forsaking the trotter, but at the same time is not so narrow-minded that he fails to see some merit in a good thoroughbred. He now owns three thoroughbreds, and Billy Appleby is training them at Oakland. Two of the number were recently purchased by Mr. Burke.

THE programme for the first week's races under the auspices of the Blood Horse Association will soon be out. There will be five or more races each day, and the meeting lasts from April 1st to 30th, four days each week—Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. A grand season of sport is promised.

THE first filly (a two-year-old), by Bernal, dam Ashley by Gen. Benton, second dam by Ashland (thoroughbred) trotted a quarter the other day in thirty-seven seconds. Bernal is sure to become one of the greatest sires in America; he has everything in his favor—pedigree, record, individuality, size, color, disposition and plenty of nerve force.

BUSH SMITH, the clever trainer of racehorses and part owner of Cyclone, was summoned by telegraph to the bedside of his father in Guthrie, Oklahoma, last Wednesday night, and left Thursday morning for home. He left his horse in the hands of some good friends, and if his father recovers Bush will return here as soon as possible.

MONOWAI, the Macdonough Derby colt, is said to be doing extremely well in his work at San Jose in Henry Walsh's hands, having already done his mile and a quarter with weight up better than 2:15, which is pretty good work for this time of the year. Mr. Walsh is noted for getting "an edge" on a horse for any certain event, and we expect to see Monowai come to the post in great shape for the American Derby of 1893.

THE celebrated colt Arion, 2:10½, champion two and three-year-old, is thus described by a New York Tribune correspondent who recently visited him: "It was extremely cold the day the writer saw Arion. He was in a comfortable box, with only a single blanket to cover him. The ventilation was perfect, with no chance for drafts. A majority of persons expect to see a horse at least 18 hands high when they ask to see Arion, as they imagine he should resemble in size the price paid for him. When Arion, however, is stripped of his clothing he is rather small, standing only 15.1—under the standard. His head is as nearly perfect as the highest type of the thoroughbred. It is well set over a good neck. His shoulders and withers are extremely powerful, as are his forelegs. His girth is a bit over the average for a horse of his size. His middle-piece is rather moderate, although he is well coupled; his loin is good, and his quarters are evenly proportioned. His stiles are abnormally large, with straight hind legs like those of a thoroughbred. He has an enlargement on his left hind ankle which his attendant says never has given trouble, as it has been there since he was a suckling. Arion is a bay with two white fetlocks, and in all probability would be overlooked by many of the shrewdest turfmen were he to be placed in a sale ring and were he unknown to the persons present. He will remain in the stud until July 1st.

Interest the People or Close the Gates

The croaking set up by a few malcontents that the bottom has dropped out of the breeding business is all moonshine. The good ones bring good money, while the had ones bring every dollar they are worth. If the knife was used more the prices would be still better. Many a fifty dollar cross-roads stallion would make a hundred-dollar gelding.

Hundreds of short-bred colts are thrown on the market, and because they do not bring five hundred apiece the owner swears the breeding business is done for, when, the truth is, the suckers sold for more than they were really worth. Pick up any paper containing the result of the late sales. No further proof will you need. Look fate in the face and judge by the past. Know the worst and it can be provided for. If trotting goes up, the people must work the derrick. Breeders, owners and drivers may theorize and resolute till the cows come home. Associations may offer stakes that are hundred to one shots on paper, but one to two chances at the post. They may offer tempting baits to owners, and they may get a good line of entries, but that don't draw in the money at the gate. Interest the people or the bottom will go out of trotting sure enough. About two more years of old-time methods and mannerisms and the trotter will be worth just what he will fetch to draw a cart. True, it may be a dog-cart, but as a race horse he will be below par, away down, terribly down. Now there is no use to attempt to evade the question. What are you going to do about it? Better limber up, get together and do something. This is a business where it will not do to say, "The public be hanged!" or something worse. They must be interested, or we die the death. It isn't too late to fill up the hole that we have been digging for ourselves. Act, act, get up and hustle. Because a man offers a novel idea don't call him a crank and turn him down. Give him a chance for his life; he may teach you a new idea. He would have to offer something mighty poor if he failed to advance an improvement on the old-time three-in-five-all-the-afternoon races of the past century. Tire the people out in one day with the same old thing lasting till dark, and they will fall over each other to get tickets the next day—only they won't. Give them shorter races and more of them, and their money talks. The three-in-five system is a dead sure loser; no question about it. Salt won't save it. All the high stakes and famed horses of the country won't save it either. The money is tied up too long. A man gets in a few dollars at two o'clock, tries to hedge at three o'clock and sweats blood till dark. That may be all right for the pool-box and the drivers who can back and fill, heat after heat, but it won't do the mass of the people. They want quicker action for their money. If they cannot get it with the trotters they will go where they can get it—with the runners—and all the beautiful theories on the face of the green earth, told so winningly by the good single-handed talkers among the trotting men, will not induce them to leave the quicker action. Think of these things and cater to their taste or be an everlasting loser. Two-in-three races is getting nearer to the public, but at that you are not near enough. Good money dashes at all distances would catch the masses certain. In this the trotters hold a winning percentage hand over the runners. They can go but one way, under the saddle. The trotter or pacer can go to sulky, to wagon, single or paired, or under the saddle. Not a man has advanced this idea, solely because dashes are unpopular with trotting men. Gentlemen, you have got to come to it, or perform to empty seats. Don't progress any, except backward. Stick to your old notions forever. The world is moving too swiftly for you, and pretty soon you fellows with old foggy notions will have to take to the tall timber to keep from being run over. All the arguments against the dash system are far from being sound. The man who wrote that Flying Jib would win everything from a 3:00 class down to 2:06 was a genius. He surely laid awake nights to evolve that brilliant idea. It was grand indeed. He was never around when a handicapper put in his fine Italian hand, or he would have passed before writing such nonsense. That matter would be adjusted mighty quickly if a good man who thoroughly understood his business was making up the daily programme. The horse might win the first dash easily enough, but about the second time out he will draw a ton. If he won then he would draw two tons, and about the time the 2:06 dash came off, Mr. Jib would draw enough to anchor a locomotive. Weight could be put on him so that a thirty horse could heat him in a big jog. That is the beauty of the dash system; horses can be brought together more evenly, thus insuring a contest, something a time bar alone never has done and never will. Flying Jib could be weighed out of a 2:20 class too easy, and so any other horse on earth could be stopped if enough weight was packed. That great objection to dashes so flippantly brought up is groundless and will not hold good in the face of the means that could be brought to bear upon any horse. The argument is but a subterfuge to hurt the advocates of quick action races. It is just as easy to make a class for a dash as for a 2:20 regular cut-and-come-back old-timer. Bar a fast one if you don't want to load him down. If he is kept out awhile and there is good money up he will after a time be glad to come in and take his medicine. Go right along without him, and directly he will be found accepting the weights. It is just so among the runners. There is here and there one that packs a load to even him up with the others, and time after time they refuse the weight only to accept it last, when their owners find they cannot get a shade the best of it. It is a mighty poor sort of a secretary that couldn't bring a field of ten or a dozen together on fairly equal terms, once he got his line on them. Another objection raised against dash races, and one that at first blush fit pretty snugly to every breeder, is that a horse with no game nor bottom could go out and take down the money at a mile. A flashy horse fast enough to burn the earth for a single whirl could throw down a good game one. He couldn't save his distance in a two-in-three race, and that would mean breeding down instead of up. Gameness and bottom, the do-or-die kind, a fighter of heats, is the only sort that it pays to raise. Shades of Pegasus! how very careful an owner must be as to how a purse is won. What does it matter how much of a sucker a horse is if he can only win? If a skyrocket can flash a mile ahead of the field, where will he land when the dash is a mile and a half or three-quarters? Surely the game one would have an excellent chance then. If the weak duck can continue to win at all distances he isn't so much of a sucker. He gets to be quite a good one if he can step about quick enough to still do the fellows with sand.

One question to breeders. What does the general public care about your breeding horses game as a lion, if they do not give races they are interested in? The public have had enough of long, drawn-out contests lasting from noon until dark and often part of the next day, and the sooner you see it and come down to practical business the more your trotters are going to be worth. Put up a race that will draw the people, a race on which they can venture a few dollars, and see how they come out before dark, or take down your sign and close your gates. You may wriggle and squirm along awhile longer but you are dying standing up. Not quite yet are you ready for burial, but inside of two years you will be unless you get out of the old rut. The dash system will resurrect the fast dying interest; it may not be the only salvation, but it is mighty near it. Betting on heats will not do. It admits of too much manipulation. First money is not always lost when a heat is dumped to catch the bookmaker. Granted that he is not often caught, but instances can be cited in which he has been stung and stung deep. Of course pool-sellers are opposed to the dash system, and why shouldn't they be? Experience teaches that when the bookmaker enters the door the pool-seller flies out of the window. In opposing the dash he is only "rooting" for his own game, and for that reason his argument is not admissible here. During the meeting here next summer the two running tracks will be in full blast. They cannot afford to close as they did last year. They must make hay while the sun of the World's Fair shines. Under the old three-in-five, catch-as-catch-can, method, where will the crowds be every day? Not with the trotters, and you may wager your existence upon it with reckless safety. With a couple of back numbers, Noah's Ark contests, let the powers that be thrown in about three hot dashes of $500 to $800, seven-eighths to first horse, at a mile, a mile and a quarter and a mile and a half every day, and right off the crowd will thin out at the other tracks and patronize the trots. Doubtful, is it? Well, try it and watch the result. How about ten or a dozen or twenty book-makers, too, with their hundred apiece? You may break, you may shatter their race if you will, but you cannot keep them away. They, as well as the public, are satisfied to let a man do the reeling for their money instead of some boy jockey who is too often a rattlehead. Ask any one of the six book-makers who did business here last year which he prefers, trotters or runners, and it is a hot cinch that he answers you the trotters. Three-fourths of the jockeys know nothing of their mounts until the flag falls and they begin to ride, and yet a favored few close in touch ask their opinion and lay their money on that opinion. It is about this way. An owner engages a jockey with a reputation, tells him the horse is good and ought to win, and as the lad is thrown on the horse, winds up with: "The only horse to beat is Wah Jim; lay with him to the last furlong, then go to the bat if necessary and come on." Wah Jim is a sprinter, and he goes out, making the pace, the other, obeying orders, follows him. At the last furlong they have raced each other's heads off and all the bats on earth won't make either heat a steer—that terrible last furlong. They are dead and finish eight, nine. Would any trotting driver work such tactics, no matter what his orders were? Though two thousand instructions hemmed him in he would let a sprinter race his own head off and then step up and beat the life out of him at the wind-up. That is the difference between the man driver and the boy jockey, and the public would see it too quick and take advantage of it. The men who bet on races are the sharpest, shrewdest set on two feet. Not the pikers, of course, but the form-followers. Every man jack is a one to two shot, and it isn't safe to copper him. Lots of them are successful business men and go to the races only during the regular season. Had these people the chance they would put their money on men, not boys, and there you are. The judgment of a man who does his own driving is far and away better than that of a boy who rides, and there you are again. Shorten the races if you will to two in three; that is a long step in the right direction, but the dash system will fill your coffers. Let Independence give about two $500 dashes each day, with twenty dollars entrance, entries to close the night before the race, horses to be drawn by 10 A. M. next day, and those drawn to pay an additional thirty dollars. This to keep owners from breaking up races if they think they cannot win. Four hundred to first horse and one hundred to second. Would they pay? Well, from five to fifteen bookmakers would be clamoring for stands, and some people would go out from here that do not think they will go now. One driver is abreast all the time. That man don't need somebody to touch him to see if he is dead. He has been on the running tracks and has had his eyes about him to some purpose. He has seen hundreds throwing money at a ten to one shot, and later the horse walk in. He realizes that the public want quick action. If the trotters will give it then the public, he believes, would prefer the trotter. He is willing to back his judgment with his money. He goes home and offers to be one of six to give $6,000 for a meeting, every race to be a dash. Let us hope that he will bring the meeting about.

As the meetings are conducted now, there is mighty little money in trotters, and without a change in the plans there is going to be less. Anything that will lead to a change will be a godsend, for unless you awaken the people to an interest it is only a question of time before the business will be blocked. It is useless to offer two or three hundred dollar dashes, as they did here. The good horses will not take chances of skimming a mile better than their record. That, then, would be the rock upon which they would split, besides, that amount of money wouldn't move an old selling plater out of his stall. Give decent money, from $500 to $800, and let the winner get seven-eighths of it. It would be a mighty low-down cuss that would talk divide if he had the ghost of an idea that he had the winner, consequently a contest would result. Laugh and ridicule the matter as much as you please, you will come to it or set your trotters to plowing corn.—Charmion, in American Trotter.

A COMPANY has been formed at Madison, Ind., and plans have been submitted for what is probably the most unique race-track in the world. The idea is the conception of Grant Larher, an electrician of some note. The plan is to build a straightaway mile track, with just as much "dip" as is allowed by the race associations. A grand-stand capable of seating about 5,000 people will be erected. This will be modeled after an electric railway car, and will run on three tracks. It will be connected with the starter's stand, so that when he drops the flag he can press a button, and the horses and the car will begin their race simultaneously. Racing will be conducted at night as well as during the day. A company has been formed, including some of the most wealthy men in this part of the State, to give the scheme a practical test. Stock to the extent of $100,000 has been subscribed for and ground will be broken as soon as the weather opens sufficiently for work to be pursued. It is hoped to get the track in running order by July.—Exchange.

Imp. Loyalist, the Royally-Bred Race Horses.

Owing to the late hour at which we discovered imp. Loyalist was to make a season in the stud we did not have time to do the great borse justice in these columns, and there were several little unimportant inaccuracies regarding the Australian which we will now correct. Notwithstanding this, the notice brought a number of gentlemen to this city to see the horse, and one of them, W. M. Murry, of Sacramento, was so pleased with Loyalist that a large advance was offered over the price paid for the horse less than a week previous, and the magnificent thoroughbred passes into Mr. Murry's hands. Loyalist will therefore make the season of 1893 at 715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento. At this place mares will be attended to in any manner owners may desire, the best of care being taken of them at all times.

We make the statement without fear of contradiction that no better-bred horse lives to-day than Loyalist, he being by The Marquis (winner of St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas in England and a great sire of winners), son of Stockwell (winner also of St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas and the greatest sire the world has ever known). Loyalist's dam, Loyal Peers (dam of Loyalstone), is by The Peer (sire of Darebin and brother to Marchioness, winner of the Oaks and dam of Fishhook, Angler and Rose of Denmark. Fishhook was a renowned race horse and sire, while Angler sired, among other celebrities, Robinson Crusoe, Progress and Onyx, latter dam of the wonderful race horse and sire, Nordenfeldt. Rose of Denmark threw the winners Florence, Hamlet, Horatio, Thyra, Sovereign and Guinea.

Loyal Devoir (Loyalist's grandam), by Trumpeter, produced the winners Loyal Peers and Caractaco, and these were her only foals. Trumpeter (son of Orlando, Derby winner of 1844, he by Touchstone) was a truly great sire, among others producing Distin (sire of imp. Cbaraxus, who in turn sired Ma Belle, Charade and many other first-class performers), Boot and Saddle (dam of imp. Deceiver, one of our most famous sires to-day), Cracovienne (dam of imp. Conveth), Land's End (dam of St. Michael, by Springfield), Datura (dam of Puritan and Darlington), and many other celebrities of the turf.

Letty West (dam of Glorious), by West Australian, Loyalist's third dam, was not only a winner herself, but Glorious turned out one of the most excellent sires in Australia. West Australian was by many considered the greatest race horse ever known in England, being one of the few winners of the "triple crown"—the Derby, Two Thousand Guineas and St. Leger. His blood has been very successful in this country, through his son, imp. Australian, and others. Australian was the greatest sire of his day in America, producing, among others, Wildide, Spendrift, Fellowcraft, Miser, Lizzie Lucas, Rutherford, Baden Baden, Leinster, Ivy Leaf (dam of Bramble and Brambletalet), Maggie E. B. (dam of Iroquois, Harold, Jacnet, Francesca, Panique, etc.), Helmbold, Faralletta (dam of Fortuna and Falsetto), Zoo Zoo and many others.

Bay Letty (dam of Libellous), Loyalist's fourth dam, was by Bay Middleton, winner of the Derby and Two Thousand Guineas of 1836 and a sire of world-wide reputation. Libellous was a winner himself and a sire of winners.

Miss Letty (fifth dam of Loyalist), by Priam, won the Oaks of 1837, and produced Weatherbit and ten others that were racehorses and sires, among them Letitia, sixth dam of Cadmus, the American Derby colt. Priam, Miss Letty's sire, won the Derby of 1830, and was imported to America, where he sired any number of winners. Almost everything with Weatherbit blood in this country has raced and produced. Hindoo's grandam was by Weatherbit, while Fonso was from a daughter of Weatherbit. Both of these are in turn sired winners. Waverly (sire of Duke of Montrose, Lida Stanhope, etc.), was from Cicily Jopson, by Weatherbit, and in our opinion no stronger cross can be found.

The sixth dam of Loyalist, by Orville, was the third dam of Adventurer, a grand racehorse and sire of Wheel of Fortune (winner of the Oaks and 1,000 Guineas), imp. Chevint (the English horse, sire of B. C. Holly's imp. Paramatta), Apology (winner of St. Leger, One Thousand Guineas and Ascot Gold Cup), etc., while to cap the climax, Loyalist's tenth dam was own sister to Eclipse, who was never beaten and who was a wonderful sire. Some of the greatest horses in the world trace to this mare, Proserpine.

To recapitulate Loyalist's pedigree:

Loyalist, apart from his truly royal breeding, is a high-class race horse, and will show his quality this fall on our race tracks. In Melbourne he won the Brunswick Stakes, mile and a quarter, running the distance in 2:08½ (best on record for quite a time, being on a turf course), beating the crack Steel Arrow, among others.

Loyalist is a dark bay horse standing 15.3 hands on the staunchest of limbs, and has never been sick a day in his life. His head and neck and models of symmetry and beauty, yet everything about him betokens stamina. A more intelligent horse, or one with a better disposition, cannot be found, and we predict now that the get of Loyalist will in a few years bring as much as that of any other horse in the West, if not in the country. Read the advertisement in another column, and book you mares to this grand horse.

CHEVY HOCK, the Idaho Stable's recent addition, is the largest two-year-old that has made its appearance in California in a long time. He is a chestnut colt standing at least 16 hands, and weighing close to 1,100 pounds, but very handsome and showing lots of "quality." He and Alliance have not the most amiable dispositions in the world, however. Chevy Hock is such a big youngster that he is not likely to be campaigned very heavily this season.

HIGH COMMISSIONER, considered by several the best of Colonel North's consignment of thoroughbreds now at the Sheephead Bay race-course, has contracted a cold and is coughing. Dr. Shepperd, however, says that the trouble is not in any way serious and that the horse will be himself again in a few days. All the rest of the string are doing well and rapidly becoming acclimated.

Trotting Topics From Gotham.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

NEW YORK, March 1, 1893.—Trotting matters have been prominent during the past few days owing to the public sales, the closing of the stakes of the New York Driving Club and the general revival of interest in fast road riding, now that we are to have a boulevard or speeding driveway.

Sales of trotting stock follow each other so rapidly all over the country that the wonder is so much stock can be absorbed at any price. Of course under the circumstances prices keep sagging, and it is impossible to predict when the bottom will be reached.

The most important sale held here recently was that of Tattersalls, when a large consignment of horses from Kentucky were sold. Unfortunately with the horses came some of the sale ring customs that have not added to the reputation for fair dealing of owners in the bluegrass State.

Not that all horsemen in Kentucky are dishonest by any means, but it is useless to deny that a certain clique have greatly injured the horse business by manipulation, by bidding and wash, or fake sales when the public had a right to expect fair dealing. These methods were practiced at the late Tattersall sale here, at least in one instance and without resulting in anything out of exposure and consequent injury to the property and all concerned.

The black horse Monbars, 2:11 1/2, had been advertised from ocean to ocean and from the Lakes to the Gulf, as the sensational offering of the entire sale.

When Monbars was a yearling he developed wonderful speed, and was sold to Richfield & Leathers of Kentucky for a reported price of $7,500.

His career on the turf as a two-year-old was sensational, and it is to his credit that he can yet be called "The Unbeaten Monbars." He closed the season of his two-year-old form in California with a record of 2:16 1/2. Last year he was sick and did not reach record-breaking form until late in the season, when he lowered the mark to 2:11 1/2.

At one time his value was computed at a fabulous sum, but times have changed, and we will bear no more about $100,000 trotters. Recently it appears the owners of Monbars decided to close out all of their stock, and the consignment came to Tattersall's of this city.

When Monbars was led into the ring the auctioneer asked for bids. Dunn Walton of this city promptly said $5,000. The prices mounted slowly until $9,000 was reached, when Mr. Shultz, of Parkville Farm, Brooklyn, bid $10,000. Walton raised $1,000, and then Mr. Shultz stepped forward and said: "Do the owners reserve the right to bid on the colt?" Mr. Fasig, the manager of Tattersalls, replied that it was not understood so, and Mr. Shultz then said $12,000. Walton came back promptly with a raise of $1,000, and there all bidding stopped. The auctioneer worked hard, asserting that at twice the sum named the colt would still be cheap, but it was unavailing, and the hammer fell at Walton's bid.

As soon as the horse was struck off to Walton he was surrounded by an eager crowd all anxious to know for whom he had acted in the purchase. When he persisted in stating that he had bought the colt for himself the public began to suspect crooked work, for Walton is well known as a small dealer and general trader that does not put such sums into the purchase of one horse. Later it was said that Walton bought the horse for Major Dickenson, of this city, owner of Miss Alice, 2:17 1/2, but the Major promptly denied having any connection with the transaction.

Soon one of the former owners told his friends that he had offered Walton an advance on the purchase price and Walton had told the same story. This settled all doubt as to the "fake," and public opinion was far from complimentary to the owners and all concerned.

Immediately after the sale a small party of gentlemen were seated in the adjoining cafe, and over a bottle of wine Mr. Shultz made no secret of his disgust with the whole proceedings. He had come to the sale prepared to pay from $20,000 to $25,000 for the colt, but as soon as he saw that he was being "roped in" to pay a big price by the "capper" or stool pigeon he refused to make another bid.

Had the sale been bona fide it was the general opinion that the sum represented actual value. Mr. Shultz has been a liberal patron of trotting sales, indeed, it is doubtful if any one man in this country has ever invested as much actual cash in trotting stock. In attempting to rob him by forcing up the price the conspirators killed the goose that would have laid the golden egg.

It has practically killed the standing of the owners among turfmen, and it has hurt the value of the colt more than pen can tell. I do not believe the colt would sell to-day under the hammer for $10,000. Stripped of all the glitter of nicely-worded advertisements and sensational write-ups, the public are beginning to realize that really sensational performers and sires are not rare, and that not one of the sensational sales of the past ever represented an actual value of fifty cents on the dollar.

We have passed that era, and hereafter prices will approximate actual value. Of course in the general decline much stock must be sold at an actual sacrifice, and it will be several years before breeding interests will recover from the recoil of the boom period. The men that remain steadfast, however, will reap the benefit.

The sale of Sidney by the Tattersalls at their Cleveland Mart on Tuesday was another illustration of the great change in values. Two years ago this horse would have sold for $60,000 to $75,000. As a trotting sire he is not outranked to-day by any horse living, and yet $27,000 represented all the public was willing to say he was worth when the day of the sale came.

Some time ago the Driving Club of New York opened a stallion stake of $12,500, hoping to attract such horses as Stamboul, 2:07 1/2, Kremlin, 2:07 1/2, Nelson, 2:10, Directum, 2:11, and other sensational performers. Trotting meetings as a rule are poorly patronized in this city, and only a race on the sensational order will draw. When something of this kind is secured, however, there is scarcely a limit to the attendance. The Executive Committee realized that should Stamboul and Kremlin meet in a race the grounds would be filled to overflowing. Again, after the controversy over the record of Stamboul, it was expected that each owner would be willing and even anxious that the two horses should meet and settle the question of actual supremacy. It was just these suppositions that actuated the Executive Committee to order the big stake.

Unfortunately, the race did not fill, as only four owners made nominations, and the conditions called for five. Mr. Harriman, owner of Stamboul, 2:07 1/2, Mr. Nelson, owner of Nelson, 2:10, Mr. Salisbury, manager of Directum, 2:11 1/2, and Mr. Shults, owner of Regal Wilkes, 2:11 1/2, were the quartette of owners that responded, and had Mr. Allen come forward, as the management and the public had reason to expect, it would have been the greatest race of modern times. The management have now opened a number of new stakes to aggregate the sum before offered to the stallions.

I received a pleasant letter from John Splan stating that he and the entire party arrived safely at their destination with the loss at sea of one horse. Mr. Ketcham and Mr. Splan suffered much from sea sickness, and it is doubtful if ever Splan becomes a sailor. All are much pleased with the kind and cordial treatment extended by the horsemen of Vienna, and on the other hand our American party are surprised at the "horse sense" of Austrians and Germans.

The last sale of trotters in this city closed on yesterday and values were slaughtered. Mr. Kellogg worked to get the last drop of blood from the small crowd of buyers in attendance, but it was a forlorn effort. Much of the stock were culled and all went at cull price. A sister to Midnight, 2:18 1/2, six years old, sound and regular breeder, sold for $110. Shades of the boom! would any man have believed, two years ago, that a sister to a 2:20 trotter would go begging in the sale ring at a paltry one hundred dollars.

Dr. J. W. Day has returned from his European trip, arriving on the City of Paris last night. He reports a very successful tour and that he has sold all but three of the horses he took over. "Our carts, harness and trotting traps sold like hot cakes," said the Doctor, "and I sold the twelve horses for more money after deducting the expenses than I could have realized for the fifteen here."

When I met Dr. Day this morning he had already arranged for transportation for another shipment, and it is his intention to gather another lot and sail by March 25th. In speaking of the foreign market and its demands Dr. Day said: "Pedigree cuts no figure in England or France; the demand is for individuality. I have in my trunk every certificate of registration that I took because no buyer cared for the one describing this horse. 'The foreigners are good judges,' said the Doctor with a twinkle in his eye, 'and know a sound horse and good trotting action. Pacers or mixed-gaited horses are not tolerated. How much speed can you show under the watch?' is the question after an animal has been found otherwise satisfactory. Good, sound, pure-gaited trotters that can show a mile in 2:25 to 2:30 will sell for good prices, and I am going back with a lot more as soon as I can find them," said the Doctor as he hurried away.

Montana Horse News.

In the spring the horsemen's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of the track with the low entrance fees and big purses, and long odds and other things, and although the birds have not yet commenced to twitter the Montana circuit is already taking up a great deal of attention of well-known horse-owners, and the list of speedy and blooded animals which will be seen in Butte and Anaconda this year is steadily increasing, says a correspondent of the Anaconda Standard, writing from Butte. Just at this time something about the big stables that will be seen here will prove of interest to lovers of horse racing.

Williams & Morehouse's stable, which is now in training at Milpitas, Cal., will be made up of the following horses: B s Silver Bow (6), 2:16 1/2; cb g John Henry, 2:26 1/2; b m Leap Year, 2:26 1/2; b m Magenta, 2:31 1/2; a three-year-old colt by Sidney; three-year-old colt, full brother to Leap Year by Tepest, dam Eulogy; two-year-old Silver Note, by Silver Bow, dam Maud Singleton; two-year-old Silver Bells, by Silver Bow, dam an Anteo mare; two-year-old filly by Tepest, dam full sister to Doncaster; three-year-old h c Egyptian Prince, by Eb Mahdi, 2:25 1/2, dam Egyptienne, 2:18 1/2. The stable also includes the following runners: Three-year-old colt Bynum, by Glen Elm, dam full sister to Sunshine; three-year-old colt Tom Daly, by Patsy Duffy, dam full sister to Sunshine; three-year-old colt Not Yet, full brother to Red Elm; two-year-old colt by Prince Norfolk, dam by Wildlde. As the stable now stands it is an unusually strong combination, but it will undoubtedly be strengthened by new additions before the summer campaign opens.

Sam Handley has in training at Deer Lodge Bud L., 2:29 1/2, by Don L., dam Jobanna; Lady Pen d'Oreille, a seven-year-old, no record; Incoboo, by Incas, 2:14 1/2, four-year-old, no record; three-year-old colt by Don L.; two-year-old colt, full brother to Bud L.; a two-year-old filly by S. E. Larabie's Waukesha. Mr. Larabie also has three or four colts which will be entered in the stakes.

Noah Armstrong, owner of Spokane, will have several two and three-year-old colts by Dolgamo and Montana Wilkes in the stakes this year. Mr. Armstrong will in the future spend most of his time in Montana breeding blooded horses. He will be located at the Armstrong ranch at Twin Bridges, and it is to be sincerely hoped that he may be as successful as was his father.

Mr. Hugh Kirkendall's string in Helena is now in charge of Mr. Charles D. Jeffries, and includes, among others, the following: Katie S., 2:25, by Director; Erect, full brother to Direct, by Director, dam Echora, by Echo, and Gregory, 2:29 1/2, by Bishop. Mr. Jeffries is now giving a great deal of his attention to the two and three-year-olds, so as to be able to pick out the likely ones for nominations in the colt stakes, which close April 1st. Mr. Jeffries also has Mr. Harvey Barbour's pacing stud, Montana Wilkes, 2:26 1/2, sire of Florida, 2:18 1/2. It is safe to predict that his record will be materially reduced this year. The thoroughbreds will be in charge of Bob Smith, and are all in fine condition for the preparatory work, which will be given them as soon as the weather permits. Among them are Montana, by Storey, dam Uga; X., by Regent, Dott and Clara Porter, three year-olds, by Red Boy, and several three-year-olds by Glen Elm and Red Boy.

D. G. Bricker has in his stable at Butte, D. G. B., 2:27 1/2, by Stillson; Butte, 2:29 1/2, by Red Wilkes; Meteor, four-year-old, by Com. Belmont, and a two-year-old trotter. Ida D., 2:19 1/2, is now in Iowa, but will be campaigned on the Montana circuit this year. His bay stallion, Ellard, 2:18 1/2, by Charlie Wilkes, will be in charge of Budd Doble, and is expected to hit the 2:12 notch this year.

Ryan Bros.' thoroughbreds are wintering at Miles City, and will be trained this year by Jack Gagan, who two years ago brought out the speedy three-year-olds Lucinda and Zillah. The four-year-old Al Watts and the three-year-old Spoon, with other two and three-year-olds, will sport the bright green colors and, no doubt, pull down their share of the prizes.

W. F. Mosby's stable will go into training at Anaconda, and it is confidently expected that T. J. Williams will have the horses in fine condition. The stable is now made up of the four-year-old Mike Brown, by Vici, a two-year-old by Eolian and a two-year-old by Regent, and will be augmented by the addition of a couple of three-year-olds.

George Burris has several horses in training at Dillon, including colts from W. H. Raymond's Belmont Park Stock Farm and C. X. Larrabee's Brook Nook Stock Farm.

The runner Periwinkle, by King Alfonso, dam Cottona, owned by Henry Elenberg, will be put in stud this spring and afterwards trained for the circuit races. He was not in proper shape last year, and will undoubtedly make a much better showing this season, as he is as well as any horse and is a good individual.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

Can any of our readers give us information regarding the pedigree of the trotting stallion Frakk Medley, that was in California twelve or thirteen years ago?

B. F. C., Wheatland.—Can you give me the pedigree of Vibrator, who stood in Sutter and Placer counties in the years '84, '85, '86 and '87? Answer.—We know nothing of the horse, and find no trace of him. Write to L. Swan, Yreka, Cal. He can possibly tell you of the horse.

J., Oakland.—Give breeding of Kirby Smith (sire of Stoneman) and Carrie Miller (dam of Black Willow)? Answer.—Kirby Smith was by Gladiator (brother to Langford), dam Kate Mitchell. Carrie Miller was by Veto, dam Fanny, by Illinois Medoc. They were both on the turf in 1871.

F. S. J., Cordelia, Cal.—Please inform me through your paper: First, the breeding of Gen. McClellan; second, his record; third, where made? Answer.—Gen. McClellan 144 (sire of Dan Voorhees, 2:23 1/4, etc., and the dam of Beary Mac, 2:14 1/2), was by North Star, dam unnamed. Gen. McClellan 143 was by Drew Horse, dam by Shark (thoroughbred). The latter McClellan had a record of 2:29, made at Ellsworth, Me. Gen. McClellan 144 had no record.

W. Bros., Newman, Stanislaus County, Cal.—You would oblige us much if you would give us the pedigree of the following: Gray mare that used to be driven and owned by Veterinary Surgeon Woodruff in San Francisco, named Lady Gertrude, sired by General Taylor, we believe. Answer.—She has a record of 2:54 1/4, but her pedigree was not known. William Brown, of San Francisco, entered her in the various races in which she took part.

W., City.—Please give the breeding of Cricket, who ran at Sacramento in the early seventies; also of Compromise. Answer.—Cricket was by Rifleman, dam Fashion, by Williamson's Belmont. (See Transactions State Agricultural Society, page 83, 1871. She was owned by C. Lusk, of San Francisco. Compromise, bay stallion, was by Langford, dam Fanny Howard, by Illinois Medoc, and owned by C. S. Williams. He ran two miles in 3:39.

San Jose, Cal.—In answer to "Diller, Wash. Co., Oregon, in your issue of the 4th inst., will say I have been tracing up the pedigree of Juanita Almont (the sire of Almont Paichen, record 2:15, pacing), and have certificates to prove that Juanita Almont, b. b, foaled 1878, by Tilton Almont 1883, first dam Benicia, by Signal 327, second dam Bell Hartard, s. t. b, by Lexington. Almont Paichen is a h. foaled 1882, by Juanita Almont, first dam Gladys, by Gladiator 8386; second dam Old Belle, by Belmont (Williamson's); third dam a black mare, s. t. b. a Morgan, brought from Ohio by Thos. Henderson, of Modoc county, Cal. G. H. BRAGG, Sec'y.

Solano County Fair.

One hundred shares of stock were represented at the meeting of the Solano Agricultural and Speed Association Monday evening. It was made known that the committee appointed to confer with Dr. Trull in regard to the sale of his land had not been able to arrive at a definite settlement. The Doctor was willing to sell the land for his original figure of $65 an acre and the improvements for their value. The point not decided upon was the value of the improvement. Dr. Trull's carpenter estimated it at $3,800, the Association's carpenter at $2,100.

The motion was made that an offer be made to Dr. Trull of $65 an acre for the land and $2,500 for the improvements. The motion prevailed.

The election of Directors was then proceeded with. Thirteen nominations were made, out of which the nine following were selected: Jos. Wilson, V. V. Harrier, Thos. Smith, J. C. Anthony, B. F. Rush, Joseph Thoreson, Frank Blanco, E. N. Smith, John Wilson.

Dr. Trull stated before adjournment that probably a raise of $500 on the Association's offer might be considered by him, but the present offer could not be. The matter was left with the new Directors.

After the close of the meeting the Directors met and organized by electing John Wilson, President; Thomas Smith, Vice-President; J. R. Whitaker, Secretary, and R. S. Knight, Treasurer.—Vallejo Chronicle.

THE Dundee race track was sold at auction by the Sheriff of Bergen county in December, 1892, for $21,500. It is now reported that an offer of $75,000 has just been refused for the property, and that Peter DeLacy, the New York pool-room keeper, is the party anxious to purchase the place.

THE gray twelve-year-old gelding Stoneman has won nine races at the Oakland meeting, far outstripping any horse at the Athens of the Pacific as a winner to date.

No. 3. HALL, LUHR & CO. STAKE.—A trotting sweepstake for yearlings, to be trotted under the auspices of this club in November, 1893; $25 entrance, of which $5 must accompany nomination; $10 payable August 1, and the remaining $10 payable day before the race; $100 added. One mile dash.

CONDITIONS. Stakes and added money in the trotting events to be divided—50, 30 and 10 per cent. Five to enter, three to start. No added money for a walkover. If two start they contest for the stake money, divided two-third and one-third. Failure to meet payments as they become due forfeits previous payments and declares entry out. Otherwise, National rules to govern. Entries to the running stake will close with the Secretary on Saturday, March 11th, and those for the trotting and pacing on April 15th. The first and last days will be for trotting and pacing. The three intermediate days will be devoted to hand-running. Entrance to races 10 per cent, the money to be divided into 60, 30 and 10 per cent. In all trotting races a horse not winning a heat in three shall be barred from again starting in the race. JAMES W. STAFFORD, Secretary. P. O. Box 171.

STATE FAIR 1893.

THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY HAS OPENED THE FOLLOWING COLT STAKES FOR TROTTERS AND PACERS:

- FOR TROTTERS. No. 1. FOR TWO-YEAR-OLDS (2-40 Class). $50 entrance, of which $10 must accompany nomination; $15 payable July 1st, and the remaining $25 payable August 10th, 1893. $100 added by the Society.
No. 2. FOR THREE-YEAR-OLDS AND UNDER (2-25 Class). $100 entrance, of which $25 must accompany nomination; $25 payable July 1st, and the remaining $50 payable August 10th, 1893. $100 added by the Society.
No. 3. FOR FOUR-YEAR-OLDS AND UNDER (2-25 Class). Conditions same as for three-year-old class.
FOR PACERS. No. 4. FOR TWO-YEAR-OLD PACERS (2-30 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as for No. 1.
No. 5. FOR THREE-YEAR-OLDS AND UNDER (2-25 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as No. 2.
No. 6. FOR FOUR-YEAR-OLDS AND UNDER (2-25 Class). Conditions as to payments and added money same as No. 2.
Entries to all the above stakes are limited to colts whose records are no better than the class named in conditions of each stake. In all stakes, failure to make payments as they become due, forfeits entry and money paid in, and releases subscriber from further liability. Five to enter, three or more to start. Money in each stake shall be divided as follows: To winning colt, all the stakes and 50 per cent. of the added money; second colt, 33 1/3 per cent.; third colt, 16 2/3 per cent. of the added money. Two-year-old stakes, mile heats, three and four-year-olds, three in five. Any colt not winning a heat in three, or making a dead heat, is barred from starting again in that race. No added money for a walk-over. If but two start in any of the stakes, they must contest for the stakes paid in, and divide them two-thirds to winner, and one-third to second. Otherwise National rules to govern. Entries to close with Edwin F. Smith, Secretary, at office in Sacramento, March 15th, 1893. EDWIN F. SMITH, Secretary. JOHN BOGGS, President.

FASHION STUD FARM TROTTING STOCK

AT AUCTION

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, March 21 and 22, 1893,

COMMENCING EACH DAY AT 10 O'CLOCK, AT THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE BUILDING, New York.

PETER C. KELLOGG & CO., Auctioneers, 107 JOHN STREET, NEW YORK.

The following synopsis gives the first instalment of the closing out of all the trotting stock comprised in the celebrated Fashion Stud at Trenton, N. J. It contains all horses in training and all the colts and fillies of 1891 and older; also those brood mares that foal late enough to be handled to advantage at this date; all stallions, excepting two to be reserved to serve the remaining mares. The final instalment to be sold next Fall (date to be announced later) will contain all the yearlings, all the remaining brood mares and their prospective weanlings and the two stallions reserved from the present instalment.

FULL LENGTH 24 INCHES.

DR. CANADY'S IMPREGNATOR.

Especially adapted to hard breeders, but indispensable to every stock man. Saves time, annoys none, 'opening' and practically insures. Cost of instrument saved every time it is used. Thoroughly tested last season in hundreds of cases. Every one satisfactory. With this instrument two or more mares can be impregnated with one service of horse, thereby saving his vitality.

Cambridge City, Ind., October 21, 1892.—This is to certify that I have used Dr. Canady's Impregnator with great success on mares which no stallion could have got in foal. I consider it a great help for valuable stallions, as well as for owners of mares.—Olas Kohlbeler. H. S. Coyault, V. S., Hagarstown, Indiana, says: I impregnated a nine-year-old mare that had been bred every year for five years and never was with foal until now. I transferred the semen from another mare and she was with foal. Price $10, sent by mail prepaid to any part of the United States and Canada on receipt of price. Send money by draft, money order or registered letter. The money must accompany the order to receive attention. Sent C. O. D. by express when preferred. THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/4 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:08.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darebin). He stands 15.3 hands on steely legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong back, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darebin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darebin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, far apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist and Loyalstone; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winners Caractacus and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission a heavy winner last season; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danehury and Letty Lyon, splendid race-horses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

WIL DIRECT

Black stallion, three years old, 15.2 hands. Very handsome. powerfully built, the best of feet and legs, and a trotter that will make his mark as a sire and a race horse. Sired by Sable Wilkes, who stands at the head of all stallions of his age as a producer and sire of race horses. First dam Fidelia, by Director; second dam by Reavis' Black Bird, sire of Vic H., 2:13 1/2; third dam by Lancet, son of McCracken's Black Hawk, sire of Overman, 2:19 1/2, Ha Ha, 2:22 1/2, Moses S., 2:22 1/2, and others. $100 for the season.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties engaging the services of any of the above horses must send a deposit of 10 per cent. of service money with engagement. Pasturage $6 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain, or both, are fed, the charge will be $12.50 per month. Good care will be taken of all mares sent to the farm, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes.

Mares may be shipped direct to me at Oak Grove Station, San Mateo County. All hills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are paid.

Season commences February 1st and ends August 1, 1893.

WILLIAM CORBITT,

San Mateo Stock Farm, San Mateo, Cal.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15 119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/2; Mollie C., 2:37 1/2, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 1/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires as well as brood mares. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 1/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nice times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

DEXTER PRINCE 11,363

AT THE

SOUTHER FARM.

Table listing various horses and their owners, including Aster, Fitzsimmons, Denton Princess, Del Paso, Lucille, James I., Charley Ford, and Irene.

Dexter Prince is by KENTUCKY PRINCE 2470.

Son of CLARK CHIEF (sire of dam of MARTHA WILKES, 2:08 1/4, etc.), and sire of Guy, 2:10 1/4; Spofford, 2:18 1/4; Company, 2:19 1/4; Fred Folger, 2:20 1/4; Bayonne Prince, 2:21 1/4, and twenty others in the 2:30 list.

First dam LADY DEXTER, by HAMBLETONIAN 10. Sire of Electioneer 125, George Wilkes 519, Alexander's Abdallah 15, Happy Medium 400, Dictator 113, and 110 other producing sons. Also sire of the dam of STAMBOULI, 2:07 1/4, and of the granddam of KREMLIN, 2:07 1/4, by AMERICAN STAR 14.

Second dam CLARA, by AMERICAN STAR 14. Sire of the dams of DEXTER, 2:17 1/4; ALMA, 2:28 1/4; ASTORIA, 2:29 1/4; and Dictator 113, etc., etc.

Third dam MCKINSTRY MARE, dam of SHARK, 2:27 1/4. DEXTER PRINCE is one of the best bred horses living, and in the last few years he has proved himself a sire of pure gait and extreme speed, although bred to few mares of merit and kept in a section where nothing but his individual merit and wonderful producing powers enabled him to prove himself one of the greatest living trotting sires.

He is a blood bay, sixteen hands high, of great power and substance and the highest finish. It is well known that he was one of the fastest colts ever at Palo Alto. He is a sure producer of finely-finished and fast foals.

FEE FOR 1893 $250, ONE AT TIME OF SERVICE. Usual return privilege if horse is alive and at this farm.

PLEASANTON, 2:29 1-2, By ELECTOR 2170.

Son of ELECTIONEER, and sire of FLORA M., 2:16; J. R., 2:20, and many others. One of the best of Electioneer's sons. PLEASANTON's first dam is by Tarrasou, grandson of Abdallah 1; second dam Black Bess, by Blucher, son of Duroc; third dam Trotter to American Eclipse.

PLEASANTON is large and very fine looking, sixteen hands high, weighs 1,125 pounds. He is stylish, or splendid conformation, and his colts have every right to be valuable.

FEE FOR 1893 $50, DUE AT TIME OF SERVICE. With usual return privilege if horse is alive and at this farm.

Good care and pasture for mares at $8 per month to July 15th. The farm's reputation is a guarantee that every precaution will be taken, but there will be no liability for accidents or escapes. All charges must be settled before mares are removed.

For further information, address SOUTHER FARM, San Leandro, Cal. GILBERT TOMPKINS, Agent.

Table listing various horses and their owners, including Geo. Wilkes, Harry Wilkes, Guy Wilkes, Wilson, So So, Lady Bunker, El Mahol, Guy Wilkes, William L., Strathmore, ABBESS, Electioneer, Fanny Malone, and Ruby G.

DANTON MOULTRIE is a bay stallion, black points, perfect in conformation, stands 15.2 bands and is a pure-gaited trotter. He will be given a race record this fall.

SUDAN 5103, RECORD, 2:27 1-2. SIRE OF NUBIA (3), 2:29 1-4.

Bred by Sultan, 2:24 (sire of Stamboul, 2:07 1/4; Alcazar, 2:20 1/4, and 26 others in 2:30 list), dam Lady Babcock, dam of Electioneer, 2:11 1/4, granddam of Joe, 2:29 1/4; Lady Graves, dam of Nady, 2:26, and Sulwood, 2:26 1/4, Sudan, 2:27 1/4, sire of Nubia, 2:21 1/4, by Hambletonian 10 (sire of Electioneer, 2:07 1/4, and 110 other producing sons), second dam Dubois mare, by a son of the Eaton Horse 122; third dam s. l. b. by Abdallah 1. Sudan's progeny are all of good size, perfect in form, gentle in disposition, pure in gait and show great speed.

Both of these stallions will make the season of 1893, ending July 15th, at $100, with usual return privilege, at the Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal. Pasturage $5 per month. Choice trotting and draft stock for sale.

B. J. MURPHY, Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal.

LANCELOT. The only Son of ELECTIONEER standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION - LANCELOT is a seal-brown stallion, 15 1/2 hands high. He is a horse of fine conformation; has a beautiful head and neck, fine limbs, well-sloped body, deep through the heart, sloping shoulders, fine arms, large stills and the very best of feet and legs. In action he is pure-gaited. As a three-year-old he trotted quarters in 32 seconds, but was injured and placed in the stud. His colts are all blood-like, large and fast trotters. Several of them are eligible and will enter the 2:30 list this fall. Lancelot is one of the largest of foal-getters.

PEDIGREE - LANCELOT was bred by the Immortal Electioneer colt of 122 in the list, dam Lizzie Harris, by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus, the sire of Lizzie Harris, was a full brother to Iowa Chief 528 (sire of Cornsude, 2:24 1/4, and others). His sire was Bushaw 50, sire of 17 in the 2:30 list, he by Vermont's Black Hawk, dam Belle, by Webster's Tom Thumb; second dam Chas. Kent mare, the dam of Hambletonian 10. Vermont's Black Hawk, by Long Island Black Hawk, dam by Webster's Kentucky Whip, son of Blackburn's Whip. Long Island Black Hawk by Andrew Jackson, dam Sallie Miller, by Tipple Salt; Andrew Jackson, by Young Bushaw, son of Grand Bushaw. Arnold Harris, by Whalbone, dam Sportsmansress; she was out of Cub, by Medec; second dam Ann Merry, by Sumpter; third dam Grecian Princess, by Blackburn's Whip, and so on to the 16th dam.

SALADIN. The only Son of Nutwood standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE - Chestnut stallion, 16 1/2 hands high. By Nutwood 600, the greatest living sire. First dam, Lady Elroy Jr., by Speculation, son of Ixydyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utley, granddam of Western 141, record 2:25 1/4. Saladini has now a number of yearlings and two-year-old colts, all showing great inferiority in size, style and color. All of them are fast trotters, and several will trot in 2:30 this year. Nutwood 600, 2:18 1/4, by Belmont 64, dam Mrs. Russell (dam of Maid S., 2:08 1/4), by Pilot Jr.; second dam Sally Russell, by Boston. Nutwood is the sire of 10 in the 2:30 list, he by Belmont 64, granddam of Western 141 and of 20 others in 2:30 list. Lady Elroy Jr. is by Speculation, dam Lady Utley, 2:28 1/4, by Belmont 64, granddam of Western 141, 2:27 1/4, by Belmont 64, dam Mrs. Russell, 2:27 1/4, by Hambletonian 10, dam Martha Washington (dam of Hambletonian 10), by Burr's Napoleon, by Burr's Napoleon, by Young Mambino, dam Willie mare, by Mambino.

TERMS - $50 FOR THE SEASON for service of each of these stallions. No other opportunity is offered breeders to obtain these blood lines at such prices. Excellent care taken of mares in any manner that owners may desire at reasonable rates. Usual return privilege. Call on or address C. C. HEMMIS, Owner, 352 Montecito street, or at private stable, First Avenue, between Turk and Eddy streets, where colts and fillies by these stallions can also be seen.

DAUGHTER OF. Justina, 2:20; Glendennis, 2:27 1/4.

WILL BE ALLOWED TO SERVE FIFTEEN MARES OF APPROVED BREEDING. FEE $75. Season commences February 1st and ends June 1st, 1893. Other conditions same as Silver Bow.

DESCRIPTION - Dark bay; 15 bands; foaled 1890. Fine head and neck, set on to strong pair of shoulders; fine mane and tail, good legs and feet. I consider him worthy of his royal breeding. He was not broken until August 15th, 1892, as I bought him at Lexington, Ky., and was unable to get him shipped out sooner. He already shows himself to be a trotter. His gait is faultless, and he can show speed enough already to make me think him a trotter. I think I could easily put him in the list if I wanted to this season, but no "in-cup" record for me, as I raise horses to win money with. His breeding needs no comment from me, and I will allow you to be the judge. Address all communications to P. J. WILLIAMS, Milpitas, Cal.

WILLIAMS & MOREHOUSE, Owners.

ECLECTIC 11,321. SEASON SERVICE FEE - $100 CASH. With usual return privilege.

ECLECTIC is a full brother to the CHAMPION TWO-YEAR OLD ARION, 2:10 1/4, both being sired by ELECTIONEER out of Manette (dam also of Oro Fino, 2:18) by NUTWOOD, 2:37 1/4. ECLECTIC represents the ACME of fashionable and speed-producing blood lines. He breeds speed.

ECLECTIC'S colts, the oldest of which are now three years old, are without exception TROTTERS; not a pacer in the lot so far, although bred to pacing mares.

ECLECTIC will be allowed to cover only a limited number of mares besides his owner's. Pasturage $1.00 per week; hay, grain and stabling extra.

ECLECTIC will stand at RANCHO COTATI (PAGE'S STATION) in Sonoma County, until July 1st, 1893. For further particulars address owner WILFRED PAGE, P. O. Penn's Grove, Sonoma County, Cal.

ALLECT. RECORD, 2:26. ELECTOR 2170. Sire of J. R., 2:20; Elector Jr., 2:29 1/4; Electric, 2:27 1/4; Ella M., 2:24 1/4; Flora M., 2:16; Leek, 2:29; Lizzie F., 2:22 1/4; and 60 others in the 2:30 list.

ALLECT is a handsome son of ELECTOR 2170. Will make Season of 1893, ending July 15, at BOARD RANCH, near Orland, Glenn County.

ALLECT was foaled April 13, 1887. He is a handsome dark bay, two white fetlocks; stands 15.3 bands and weighs 1075 lbs. He is symmetrical in conformation, perfect in disposition, and as pure-gaited as any Electioneer that ever lived. He has the finest of legs and feet, and is remarkably well-muscled throughout; his back is short, his loins strong and quarters heavy; he is stylish and very level-headed. ALLECT never received a trainer's care, yet he trotted without any work a mile over the Stockton track in 2:26. ALLECT was bred as a three-year-old to a few mares, and his colts and fillies are all models of symmetry, beauty and trotting action; all are of good color.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON, with the usual return privilege. Pasturage, $4 per month. Mares kept in or escapes. For further particulars call on or address D. ANDERTON, Manager, Orland, Cal.

ALLECT and about thirty head of colts and fillies by ALLECT, Guy Wilkes, Nemo, Noonday and St. Nicolas will be sold at auction in June, 1893.

LOOK HERE! GUY WILKES' SERVICE FEE IS $750. NAPA WILKES, HIS SON, STANDS FOR $30.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1893, March 1st to July 1st, at TARPEY'S STABLE, Watsonville, THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY. AT SALINAS. MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY. $80 FOR THE SEASON. $30 Pasturage and best care taken of mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Usual return privileges, provided horse or mare does not change ownership.

E. W. DAVIS, Agent, Watsonville, Cal. N. B. - The owners of Napa Wilkes will give $100 to the owner of the first of his get that makes a record of 2:30 or better, $75 to the second and $50 to the third. This offer to hold good during present ownership of horse.

DICTATUS

Will make the Season of 1893, commencing February 1st
and ending June 1st, at

BELMONT STOCK FARM,

BELMONT, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL.

SERVICE FEE FOR THE SEASON..... $100
(Will be allowed to serve fifteen approved outside mares.)

DICTATUS was foaled in 1890. He was sired by the great RED WILKES 1749, (sire of 88 in the list); dam, MISS LOLLIE, by DICTATOR 133 (sire of JAY-EYE-SEE, 2:10, DIRECTOR, 2:17, and 41 others in the list, besides the dam of NANCY HANKS, 2:04, etc.); second dam, GOLD PEN (dam of FELINA, 2:29½, and grandam of HILL BOY (p). 2:20, by MAMBRINO ABDALLAH 2201 (son of MAMBRINO PATCHEN 58); third dam by HAROLD 413 (sire of MAUD S., 2:03½, and 41 others in the list and grandsire of KREMLIN, 2:07½); fourth dam, EMILY CHESTER, by MAMBRINO PATCHEN 58; fifth dam PATSEY (dam of MIDWAY), by SNOWSTORM (sire of JIM IRVING, 2:23). He is in color a chestnut, with star in forehead, one hind pastern white. In conformation he is perfect, being about 15.2 hands in height, very short back, strong over the coupling, heavy quarters, large, well-muscled gaskins and arms limbs straight, cannon bones short, hocks and joints clean and bony, and feet of the finest kind. His neck, head and body denote an iron constitution. His shoulders are sloping, and, taking him all in all, a more perfect representative of the great Wilkes-Dictator cross does not exist to-day. His breeding speaks for itself. He traces four times to HAMBLETONIAN 10 through his greatest sires—GEO. WILKES, DICTATOR, HAROLD and ABDALLAH 15. He traces to MAMBRINO PATCHEN twice and three times to MAMBRINO CHIEF. His blood-lines are unequalled by any stallion on this Coast.

The best of care taken of mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Service fee must be paid before mares leave the farm.

Training The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, 312 Bush St., San Francisco, Cal.

ANTI-STIFF

To Strengthen the Muscles.

It is a marvelous preparation for Strengthening the Muscular System. With Anti-Stiff there is no fault required; it goes straight for the muscles, and you feel it at work. It has a peculiarly warming, comforting and stimulating effect on all weak or stiff muscles and sinews. Quick in its action, clearly and pleasantly in use. Put it into the muscles every night for a fortnight, and you will be pleased at its supporting and strengthening properties. There is not, nor has been, anything like it till now. It differs from all Oils, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some Athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them.

Stallion Ringwood, The Famous Son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney in formation more than any of his sows. He is a pure-sailed trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he showed trials of speed in 2:39; as a four-year-old, and would have received a record of 2:18 or better but for an accident at the Napa track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dashaway (thoroughbred), he by Williamson's Belmont, he by American Boy, second dam Fanny Cob, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

ALSO FOR SALE

Tipoo Tib,

Gelding record, 2:26. Can trot in 2:20 or better; will show quarters in 0:32; 15.2 high; light bay; a great road horse; single or double, and perfectly sound. Ringwood or Tipoo Tib can be put in training and win their price in one season. For further particulars, address

A. C. DIETZ, Oakland, Or, Breeder and Sportsman Office, San Francisco.

STANDARD STALLION

FRED DRAKE 4834,

(Race Record, 2:26).

By Joe Gavin 564 (sire of six in the list), he by Messenger Duroc 106 (sire of 20 in the list), first dam, Minnie Drake (dam of 2 in the list), by Louis Napoleon 207 (sire of 16 in the list). Fred Drake 4834, 2:26 1/4, is a splendid individual; stands about 16 hands high, and weighs over 1,100 lbs., is of excellent disposition. His record is no mark of his speed as he can trot in 2:20 or better with training next season. Reason for selling is that owner is engaged in other business and has not the time to devote to the horse. Will be sold at a reasonable price. For particulars address

Special Announcement.

At the sale of Messrs. Murphy and Harris, at Killip & Co.'s salesyard, March 15th, will also be sold for the account of the pedigree

THE GREAT SON OF ELECTIONEER'S GREATEST SON, ANTEEO 2:16 1-4.

The phenomally fast and high-bred stallion.

DANTEEO.

Table listing pedigree details for DANTEEO, including sire (Electioneer), dam (Myrtle), and various other ancestors like James Madison, Alfred G., Redwood, Ethel Mac, Maudie, Sun-set, Anteeo Jr., and others.

Danteo is a typical Electioneer, beautiful rich bay, 15 1/2 hands high, four years old, of perfect conformation and magnificent proportions. While being unusually kind and well-disposed, he is full of pluck, gameness and bull-dog tenacity. All this, coupled with his fine action, great speed and wonderful intelligence, will mark him as one of his sire's greatest sons, both on the track and in the stud. Anteeo sold East for $51,000, and stands at $1,000, and as but few of his sons remain in California, it is likely to be the last chance to secure a well-bred son of his at auction on this coast.

THE ANTEEOS ARE BREEDING ON.

RANCHO DEL SIERRA.

THE WASHOE VALLEY AND RENO.

It may be that the valley of the Truckee and that of Washoe have peculiar advantages over other parts of Nevada for the breeding of racehorses, fast trotters and pacers as that is the only part of the State with which I am personally familiar. Years ago I spent a short time in Carson, and my recollections of the country in the immediate neighborhood of the town place it in about the same category, viz., fertile plains of no great extent surrounded by high mountains.

Apart from the high altitude and severe winters (when compared with the winter months in California, they are severe), Rancho del Sierra is a model breeding farm, and as it appears from what has been done that the disadvantages of climate can be overcome by judicious management, there are good reasons for the belief that the owner will continue to be as successful in the future as he has been in the past in the way of rearing and developing racehorses of a high class. That will be no small measure of success, as apart from the Marion family Mr. Winters has been eminently fortunate in breeding ventures. Mollie McCarthy, Ralston, Flood, Alta, Ed Corrigan of the older division, so many good ones of a later period that their names would fill a big space in the columns of winners. He should be still more successful, the only point in which he fails is that of locality, and as everything seems so favorable now for that proving to be good, it is not out of the way to reason that there will be advance in place of retrogression. Never so well equipped with broodmares, as in addition to the dams of so many winners, there are a lot of young mares which, if the usual dependence can be placed on breeding form and individual excellence, there must be a glorious progeny. These have been selected with the skill that nearly half a century of experience has perfected, and then Mr. Winters has been almost hypercritical in demanding that form, size and other essential qualities he combined with breeding when he was a purchaser. With a tried stallion in Joe Hooker, and one of the promise of El Rio Rey, the breeding stock are such as to be a fair warranty of success, and thus if the farm is suitable all the concomitants are united.

There are several thousands of acres in Rancho del Sierra, having a length on the valley of about four miles, so that quite a large proportion of it is level or sloping from the mountains, with an easy gradient.

There are five flowing artesian wells, so that in connection with the water supply from Washoe lake there is plenty for irrigation, insuring heavy crops of alfalfa and timothy.

There are several mountain streams which never fail, and this affords an abundance of pure fluid for use at the houses and barns.

The large barn built in 1891 is a model for that country. The boxes are roomy and comfortable in the most severe weather which prevails, and though the doors which are in common use open into the interior, each box has a door which can be opened on in emergency to the outside, so that in case of fire the animals could be rescued. There is plenty of storage, so that hay can be kept loose, preferable to baling, and granaries and bins for all the varieties of grain used.

And by the way, the oats and barley grown on the place would rate A No. 1 in any country, and the timothy hay cannot be excelled. In fact, if I have not forgotten what Eastern prime hay is, that I saw in Nevada is surely superior. Facilities for crushing barley and oats in the shape of steam engine and mill are parts of the equipment; only the soundest and best grain is used, so that there is no danger from that source as there is when purchased ground feed may be a mixture of the refuse stuff, the sweepings with just enough honest grain to give it a name.

From the time the grass comes in the spring and until the frosts of the winter stop its growth there is no lack of green feed, and so from this brief statement it is evident that the very best experiment possible of the availability of Nevada for race horse breeding is being conducted at Rancho del Sierra. It was a "dead certainty," a "foregone conclusion" or whatever term may be used to denote high expectancy, that Mr. Winters would use every endeavor to carry the experiment to a successful termination. Nevada has been his home ever since 1857, and while his farms on Putah Creek and Rancho del Rio were the headquarters of nearly all the thoroughbred stock, and a good deal of his time was spent on these places, his favorite residence is that at the foot of Slide Mountain and by the side of the brook which has sung its joyous notes in his hearing for nearly forty years. Mountains exert a potent influence on those who have dwelt the greater portion of their lives among them. There is companionship, a magnetism which is difficult to account for, although it must be a singularly unsusceptible individual who does not admire such grand elevations as those which serve as a frame for Washoe Valley. Slide Mountain is one of the highest of the chain, and only a few hundred yards from Mr. Winters' house the abrupt ascent commences. It would require plenty of strength and a goodly share of courage to attempt the journey to the top in a direct course, but there are routes which are not so difficult, and if I have the good fortune to make a summer visit the top of that mountain and Lake Tahoe will surely be seen; Tahoe is only twelve miles away, so that both are within hailing distance.

Very convenient the railway service between San Francisco and Reno. When time is a desideratum the journey between the two cities can be made without any great encroachment on the hours of daylight. In this era of improved sleeping cars and cosy dining-rooms on wheels, the trip has no discomforts. Something akin to the necromantic tales which are such a conspicuous feature of the Arabian Nights, and which Boccaccio wove into his Decamerone, you fall asleep on one side of the mountains wake up on the other. If there is plenty of time, and dislike to night-travel, the order can be reversed and little else than daylight occupied in the journey. But time was a main factor with me, and the days that could be spared limited to a couple, and these were entirely available for the objective point of the tour. One whole day and a part of another at Rancho del Sierra, the balance of the allotted time at Reno. The race course was the main attraction. Some of the two-year-olds and yearlings I saw a year ago were located there, and the yearlings of 1892 especially would be valuable testimony in the case which was now on the tapis. It is safe to say that if there has been proper growth in colts from yearlings to two-year-olds, and with racing colts corresponding development, one of the most critical of the juvenile stages has been safely weathered. The evidence from early sucklings to thirteen months of age had been presented at the home farm, and a transcript of that published. The early-foaled big yearlings had been sold, and three which were reserved in the lot offered to Mr. Fair, which were thought to be under size at the time the purchase was made. Three of them, Royal Prince, by Prince of Norfolk, from Ballinette; Little Tom, by Great Tom, from Florence A., and Attilla, from Polly Vic, by Victory. There was a great change in the size of Royal Prince since I saw him a little more than a year ago, though at that time I marked him as likely to race, and now am still more impressed with his chances. Fully fifteen hands two inches in height, and with corresponding development of muscle. Immense quarters, a good deal after the pattern of his most famous uncle, though in electing the one we regard as the most famous of the tribe, El Rio Rey, that selection does not meet with approval. When in Chicago I heard a very animated discussion over the relative merits of the Emperor of Norfolk and El Rio Rey, the partisans of each waxing warm over the argument and giving instances to prove that their favorite was the greatest of all race horses. "Neither of them better than Yo Tambien," "broke in" one who had not taken part in the discussion, "and I would rather own her chestnut brother than a whole stable full of good colts." He accounted for his preference for the chestnut members of the family, as he held El Rio better than the Emperor and The Czar better than Rey del Rey, and with this pronounced preference for color, Royal Prince would surely suit him, as he is very nearly the same shade as his two favorites and a racing formation all through. While Little Tom has not grown so fluently as his stable companion, he is of more than average size and a sturdy fellow withal, and so is Attilla. Pyramid, by Joe Hooker, out of Addie O'Neil, is a three-year-old of promise, and a three-year-old Joe Hooker from Avail, Advance he is called, is built on the speediest lines. That this estimate was correct was proved by the whispered remark of one of the boys—"fast as a ghost, nobody can outrun him." There are several two-year-old fillies by Junho in training, late colts, and which show the same improvement in growth. All of them are speedy, and one of them with a double cross of Big Gun and also two strains of Mouday is very likely to be the champion for the short distances which are now such prominent features in racing programmes. A Junho from Sooner may contest the claim, and another from Rosetta may stand the test, but before hazarding more definite predictions will await the results of future gallops. All of them are moving well now, some with the unmistakable stamp of racehorse merit, and what was also a surprise at this season of the year, with a good course to gallop upon.

There is an Eastern-bred filly, or rather a Tennessee product, which shows that the transfer to Nevada has been beneficial. When Mr. Winters was in Chicago last year there was an auction sale of horses by electric light. He sat in the gallery above the auctioneer, and one filly catalogued attracted his attention from her breeding. A friend sat beside him to whom he praised the pedigree, and he called Mr. Winters' attention when she was offered for sale. The bidding had stopped at $300, and Mr. W. directed his neighbor to bid fifty dollars more. She was struck off at the bid, and when he left his seat and got on a level with the filly he was intensely disgusted with his purchase. Looking down from the gallery there was no way of determining size, but when on a level he saw a little runt of a filly, not much bigger than a goat, thin, and though her form was good, there was so little of her that, to use his own expression, he could easily have "packed" her from the sale room. With his partiality for size, and the mortification of having seen her before purchasing disgust was intensified, and had it been otherwise than that the story could have been told as a good joke he would have resold her for what she would bring, if not more than thirty dollars, or given her to some boy acquaintance for a riding pony. From the time she landed in Nevada improvement was rapid, and now, when not quite two years old, she would pass muster as a filly of fair size. Big in proportion to her height, more than the usual hulk of muscle, heavily limbed and with every mark of a strong constitution. She has a marked resemblance to Joe Howell and carries a strong family resemblance to the house of her grandam. That she will race is probable, that she will prove a valuable broodmare there is scarcely a question. Not at all surprising that her pedigree drew attention. By imported Saxon, her dam by imported Great Tom, granddam by imported Bonnie Scotland. That is the way I noted it on the ground, but it may be that the Great Tom mare was from Buttress, by Vigil, her dam Butter Cup, by imported Glen Athol, grandam Bay Flower, by Lexington, and the next dam the great Bay Leaf. In either case the genealogy will stand the closest scrutiny.

Pleased as I was with the stock at Rancho del Sierra and gratified with the good prospect of our adjoining State as the "nursery of racehorses," there was another source of gratification, that being the improvement of the State Fair grounds. The track is a very good one, perhaps not quite as fast as the best of the California race courses, but eminently safe and fast enough for all practical uses. In fact a safe track cannot be slow, at least so slow as to be markedly below the standard, as that would entail being "too deep" for safety when fast gallops are in the routine of work. They go fast, however, on the Reno tracks, as the wretches testify, but unless I am in error the trials there will not mislead, and horses will duplicate or improve on the time shown at Reno.

Capital adjuncts is not an unwarranted statement when speaking of the grand stand and other fixtures of the course. The stand will not suffer by comparison with the best in this section. The first consideration, of course, is to enable spectators to have a good view of the races from start to finish, and to be comfortably situated at the same time. These objects have been accomplished, and with facilities for ingress and egress which guard against crowding. In direct communication with the entrance gate, a few steps bring visitors to the landing at the foot of the stairs. Then all the other accessories are admirably planned. Dining room, ladies' drawing room, club rooms, general and private, wine rooms, pooling-quarters, music stand in harmonious combination, and it is evident that Mr. Winters' knowledge, acquired in his many trips to the East, has been of great service in the arrangement, particularly in seeing that all the minor details were in keeping with the whole plan. Practical experience is of great value in all undertakings, and in a public race course if the little things are not closely looked after imposing structures and general magnificence will not enable amends for the lack of knowing how to give them the greatest value. The judges' stand, apart from the usual mistake of elevating the occupants too high above the horses, is appropriate, and this defect Mr. Withers has overcome by placing chairs in front and on a slope which permits the three officials to view the finish from the same point, and by placing a rod before them and that agreeing with a vertical mark on the timing stand inside of the track the outcome can be told to an inch.

There is an abundance of the right kind of spirit in Reno to sustain the annual fair, and for a State which is in its infancy as regards other than mining interests, secures more attention than it would appear reasonable to expect. Once fully demonstrated that high-class racehorses and fast trotters can be reared there, and the interest will be heightened to a degree which will surprise people of sections apparently far superior in natural advantages. That other agricultural features will be developed to an extent which only the most sanguine expectants deem possible now is also assured, and the fact that the pursuit which seemed to be one of the most unsuited to the climate being successful will stimulate enterprise in other directions. Should the colts which are now yearlings, foaled and reared in Nevada, prove victorious when they enter the lists against California and Eastern-bred animals; should Rey del Sierra or any of the others scarcely inferior in racehorse lines win an important stake in the East, the whole of Nevada will be jubilant. So far as came within my observation, there is none of that jealousy which oftentimes prevails amongst horsefolk, and a victory will be regarded as a glory which every inhabitant of Nevada will share in. "How do you like our colts?" was the invariable query which was first propounded. Quite a place of resort in the evening is the store of Messrs. Ahrams Brothers, and from dinner, at 6 p. m., until the starting of the train, four hours later, a good deal of time was spent therein. It is questionable to me whether Mr. Winters is more interested in the result of his Nevada horse-breeding experiment than one of the brothers, and not a great deal more a majority of the callers who dropped in during the evening than in the hotel, too, where there was a large gathering of people, the same feeling prevailed, and I must say that there is an additional gratification in presenting a report which will prove so acceptable. Fearful that it could scarcely be possible that Nevada could equal California in raising yearlings, and with only a probability that the inferiority would be trivial, to see such a hand as are at Rancho del Sierra was something unexpected. Therefore, in reply to the oftentimes repeated query, "How do you like our colts?" I can conscientiously reply, "So far as good looks and conformation can be taken as tokens of future excellence you have nothing to fear. The race course is the only alembic that can be depended upon for a crucial test of the relative value of race horses; that I will await, in this case, with abundant confidence." JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

Bred in the Purple.

[Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

At Rancho del Paso on the 27th ult. Mr. S. G. Reed's imported mare Brierbush, by Tynedale—Briony, by Adventurer, foaled a brown filly by Surefoot which the owner has named Brierfoot. This young lady comes of royal lineage and her appearance is fully in keeping with her regal blood. Her sire, Surefoot, by Wisdom, is one of the great performers of the time, his doughty deeds on the turf being of too recent occurrence to need recapitulation here. Her dam, Brierbush, is a handsome, blood-like looking mare, in color a good "Yorkshire brown" without white, except a few gray hairs in her forehead, with a conformation that suggest substance and power in every line. She was sired by Tynedale (sire of Border Minstrel, etc.), son of Warlock (Birdcatcher—Elphine, by Emilius) and Queen of Tyne, by Tomboy. Her dam, Briony (also dam of Sweet Brier, the best two-year-old filly of her year, by Wisdom, etc.), was by Adventurer, son of Newminster and Palma, by Emilius; second dam Maid of the Glen (dam of Glen Arthur) by Kingston, son of Venison and Queen Anne, by Slane); third dam Glengourie, by Touchstone; fourth dam Glencairn (sister to imp. Glencoe), by Sultan, etc. Brierbush was bred by Mr. W. Blenkiron at the Middle Park Stud, and was horn on historic ground. Not only his time from the long line of thoroughbreds famous on the course and in the stud that have come from the Middle Park paddocks, but the earliest direct reference in English history to "running horses" occurs in the reign of King John, a monarch that patronized the sport and founded an extensive breeding stud at Eltham in the very fields where Mr. Blenkiron raised Hermit and Galopin. Her withers bear the marks of the saddle and she knows the color of the starter's flag having raced successfully before she was selected for the breeding paddock. Among her stake winnings are the Down Nursery Handicap at Liverpool, the Bradford Nursery Handicap at Shrewsbury and the Zetland Stakes at Stockton. Her first foal, the brown filly Bruyere (1890), by Wisdom was a two-year-old winner in England last season and gives every promise of being a high-class performer this year. Her third foal, a weanling filly, by Merry Hampton, was sold at the same sale where Mr. Reed bought the mare. Although lacking two days of being six months old she brought 290 guineas. Mr. Reed is quite proud of little Brierfoot. She is a hit of silver in the little cloud of ill fortune that attended his venture of importing horses. During a tour abroad last year he spent some time in England and visited most of the prominent studs. After a consideration of pedigrees and individual animals he selected and purchased a stallion and seven mares to form a part of the breeding farm which he contemplated establishing in California. The mares were all in foal to fashionable and famous sires. One of the mares died in transitu, and although the others seemed to have made the journey well, five of them slipped their foals after their arrival here, leaving Brierfoot the sole representative of the in utero part of Mr. Reed's importation. It is to be hoped for many reasons that no misfortune will overtake her. A review of the last foals before mentioned may afford opportunity for speculation as to the probable effect they might have had, not only in the mental and financial satisfaction of the owner, but on the breeding interests of this coast, had they followed the due course of nature and been horn alive and well. The delinquent mares were:

Eye Sweet (brown—1886), bred by Robert Jardine. By Galopin (Derby 1876), son of Vedette (Voultigeur—Mrs. Ridgway by Birdcatcher) and Flying Dutchess, by Flying Dutchman; first dam Wilim Blossom, by Springfield (St. Allans—Vividis, by Marsyas); second dam Hawthorn Bloom (dam of Fitz-James, Heath-bird, Albert, Hawthorn, &c) by Kettle-drum (Rataplan—Hybla, by The Provost); third dam Lady Alice Hawthorn (dam of Thorn, &c.), by Newminster; fourth dam Lady Hawthorne, by Muley Moloch, etc., slipped foal by Ismaili, son of Adventurer (Newminster—Palma, by Emilius) and Lena by Stockwell.

Ira (bay—1888) bred in Hungary. By Doncaster (Derby, Ascot Gold Cup and Goodwood Cup 1873) son of Stockwell and Marigold by Teddington. First dam Iolante, by Buccaneer, son of Wild Dayrell (Derby 1855) and a daughter of Little Red Rover (Tramp—Miss Syntax, by Paynator); second dam Java, by West Australian (2000 Guineas, Derby and St. Leger 1853 and sire of imp. Australian) son of Melbourne and Mowerina, by Touchstone; third dam Joliette, by Surplice, son of Touchstone and Crucifix, by Priam; fourth dam Jessamine, by Knight of St. Patrick, etc., slipped foal by Coeruleus, son of Beadman, (Weatherlit—Mendicant, by Touchstone) and Bas Bleu, by Stockwell.

Scotch Fir (bay—1880) bred by Blenkiron. By Scottish Chief, son of Lord of the Isles (Touchstone—Fair Helen, by Pantaloon) and Miss Ann, by The Little Known. First dam Deodora, by Macaroni, son of Sweetmeat (Gladiator—Lollypop) and Jocose by Pantaloon; second dam Sinila, by The Naboh, son of The Noh (Glaucus—dam of Emilius), and Hester, by Camel; third dam The Merry Monarch, son of Slane and a daughter of Little John; fourth dam by Laurel, son of Blacklock, etc. Slipped foal by Bread Knife, son of Craig Miller (Blair Athol—Miss Roland, by Fitzgerald) and Slice, by Brown Bread.

Spinning Time (bay—1886) bred by W. Blenkiron. By Merry Go Round, son of Scottish Chief and Spinaway (dam of Busybody, Wheel of Fortune, etc.). First dam Morihund (dam of Going Away and King Death) by Gladiator (Derby and St. Leger 1865); second dam Lady Chesterfield (dam of Armada and Bella), by Stockwell; third dam Meavee, by Touchstone; fourth dam Guznee, by Pantaloon, etc. Slipped foal by Prince Rudolph, son of Prince Charlie.

The Squaw (bay—1888), bred by Marquis Talon. By Uncas, son of Stockwell and Nightingale, by Mountain Deer (Touchstone—Mountain Sylph, by Belshazzar). First dam Lulu, by Voltigeur; second dam Jenny Diver (grandam of Chitaboh), by Buccaneer; third dam Fairy by Warlock (Birdcatcher—Euphone, by Emilius); fourth dam Leila, by Melbourne; fifth dam Meavee, by Touchstone, etc. Slipped foal by Bread Knife, whose breeding is given above.

The importer is to be commiserated on his loss, and the public generally who take an interest in the thoroughbred may come in for a share of condolence.

Mr. Reed has acquired a tract of land near Pasadena, which is now being fitted with the most approved accessories of a breeding farm. When that work is finished the stock will be transferred to this new home, which has been christened Oneonta Farm. In addition to the imported mares mentioned the following native-bred ones are the property of Mr. Reed, and will be quartered at Oneonta Farm:

Alesia (bay—1891), by imp. Darehin, dam Ailee, by imp. Hurrah, from Waunaita, by imp. Bonnie Scotland.

Crisalt (bay—1890) by imp. Sir Modred, dam Columbine, by Enquirer, from Colossa, by Colossus.

Detrix (bay—1891) by imp. Darehin, dam Letola (dam of Unrest), by Lexington, from Capitola, by Vandal.

Electric Light (bay—1890) by imp. Darehin, dam Agnes, by Onondaga, from Skylight, by Jack Malone. In foal to imp. Midlothian.

Hostess (bay—1891) by John Happy, dam Trellis, by imp. Great Tom, from Madeira, by Jack Malone.

Hymn of Praise (bay—1891) by Hyder Ali, dam Music, by imp. Glenelg, from Acoustic, by imp. Australian.

Laline (bay—1891), by imp. Darchin, dam Lulu, by Virgil, from La Polka, by Lexington.

Orange Leaf (bay—1891) by imp. Kingston (Hampton—Last Love, by Annadale), dam Bonnie Leaf (sister to Bramble, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, from Ivy Leaf, by imp. Australian).

Peril (brown—1890, the celebrated "Iris filly"), by imp. Darehin, dam Iris, by Iroquois, from Doris, by imp. Hurrah.

Potrero (chestnut—1891) by Hyder Ali, dam Sleepy, by imp. Uhlun, from imp. Sleepy Eye, by Orest.

Royal Purple (brown—1890, sister to Bavarian and Ludwig), by imp. Darehin, dam Bavaria, by Spedthrift, from imp. Pell Mell mare, by Pell Mell. In foal to imp. Midlothian.

Scarlet Letter (brown—1891) by imp. Kingston, dam Bedotte, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, from Ermengarde, by Lightning.

Signa (brown—1890) by imp. Darehin, dam Cuyama, by imp. Glenelg, from Lightfoot, by Lexington.

The Truant (bay—1891) by imp. Sir Modred, dam Teacher, by imp. Billet, from Belle Palmer, by imp. Bonnie Scotland.

Veronica (bay—1891), by imp. Darehin, dam Verity, by King Alfonso, from Veritas, by Lexington.

Wedding Gift (bay—1891) by imp. Sir Modred, dam Blithesome, by Onondaga, from Beatitude, by imp. Bonnie Scotland.

These mares will all be bred this year. The stallions imported by Mr. Reed were selected with especial reference to the mares destined for Oneonta. His pedigree reads as follows:

Martenhurst (bay—1888) bred by Lord Roslyn, by Wenlock (St. Leger 1872), son of Lord Clifden (Newminster—Volley, sister to Voltigeur, by Voltaire—Martha Lynn) and Mineral, by Rataplan (The Baron—Pocahontas); second dam Manganese, by Birdcatcher, out of Moonbeam, by Tomboy.

First dam Hironelle, by Adventurer (Newminster—Palma, by Emilius); second dam Lady Langden (dam of Hampton), by Kettle-drum (Rataplan—Hybla, by The Provost); third dam Haricot, by Lanerocst (Liverpool—Otis, by Bustard); fourth dam Queen Mary, the great daughter of Gladiator, a mare that came nearer founding a line of her own than any matron in the English stud book, except, perhaps, Pocahontas.

Martenhurst's breeding is somewhat exceptional in this, that while he traces twice to Touchstone, three times to Irish Birdcatcher, twice to Pocahontas, twice to Emilius and three times to Blacklock, his pedigree shows no strain of Melbourne.

He should be a great nick with Darehin mares, as they will bring to his aid a strong infusion of Melbourne through The Peer, close to the top. As an individual, Martenhurst will fill the ideal of the most exacting critic. He raced with success as a two-year-old, winning valuable stakes from strong fields of horses. In his three-year-old form he flew at high quarry, but failed to bring it down, although he ran a close third in the Derby of 1891 (Common's year), and was placed in other important races. A suspicious tendon threw him out of training, and Mr. Reed secured him to be the chief of Oneonta, where, from his breeding and personality, if such a term may be applied to a horse, he should sire performers of the highest class. The owner of Oneonta is a welcome addition to the company of California breeders. He is a gentleman of ample means, of breadth and po-sitivity, and possesses to a degree that other requisite, an innate love for the horse. He has enjoyed a long and prosperous business career in Oregon and Washington, with headquarters at Portland, and the higher form of domestic animals is something to which his mind always naturally turned. He was one of the earliest and heaviest importers of thoroughbred cattle to the north country, obeying the mandate of his code, which is written in the two simple words: "Breed up." During one of his visits to the country east of the Rockies in quest of cattle he made the acquaintance of the Messrs. Parks, who at that time owned Bonnie Scotland, and who offered him the horse for a small price. He was greatly tempted, but as he had no thoroughbred mares and there were none in his section of the Union, he declined the proposition. Had he accepted, Scotland would have lived and died unhonored in the wilderness, and Luke Blackburn, Bramble and the rest of that long roll of performers and producers with which the son of Iago and Queen Mary enriched Belle Meade would never have existed. But that is only what might have been. What is and what may be concerns us at present. With his mind relieved from the cares of active business, Mr. Reed finds time now to indulge his fancy for the highest type of the genus equus, and has located in a section which he regards as near to Paradise for all animals, whether they be gifted with speech and reason or not. He has used his check-book freely in the preparation, and it is to be hoped that a full measure of success will be the fate of his undertaking at Oneonta Farm.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SANTA ROSA, March 12.—Horsemen are watching for the appearance of the new Year Book with a great deal of interest. Some of them are very caustic in their comments on the action of Mr. Steiner, the Registrar, and advocate the organization of a new register association on the Pacific Coast. They seem to think the Pacific Coasters strong enough to have a little book of their own.

A number of our breeders attended the stock sale at Napa. They express themselves as well pleased with the prices brought by most of the animals there. The good prices for the Skinner youngsters was exceedingly pleasing to McGraw, owner of Silas Skinner. "Mc" is one of the fellows who does not think the bottom has fallen out of the horse business.

In the purchase of Lilly Stanley Pierce Bros. secured a great mare, and she will certainly become a valuable addition to their already splendid list of mares. At the clip these gentlemen are adding to their stock it will not be long ere they pass Governor Stanford's Palo Alto farm. They will probably have a number of very good ones to go down the line this season, and under Jim Dustin's wizard rein they can be expected to pick some of the best permissons.

Two of Pierce Bros.' mares have babes up to this date. One is Carlotta Wilkes. She has a lively youngster sired by George Norval, son of Norval, the son of Electioneer. The other mare, Kitty Wilkes, has an elegant youngster by Bay Rose, the beautiful.

The aluminum sulky was predicted here by some of our astute horsemen the day the first specimen of that material came here, and from the article in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of last week it appears that they were about right. A party of them were discussing the new sulky Saturday, and all agreed that with the bicycle pneumatic wheel the aluminum sulky would be a grand improvement. They were unanimous in the opinion that no matter how light a sulky with pneumatic wheels was, it would not "slough."

Wyman Murphy's neat stallion Perry S., by Anteeo, dam by Antelope, son of Nutwood, is getting to be quite a "hoss." Mr. Murphy has him well educated, and he can show a pretty lively gait.

Our old friend Mart Rollins has been quite sick for the past few days, but we are glad to announce, is much better now.

Rufus Murphy is not working many of his horses this spring. The Locke colt is about the only one getting regular training. Antelope's handsome son, Cantelope, is the joint property of Mr. Murphy and John Lawrence. He is a handsome horse, and is now on the island with Murphy's other stock.

Wyman Murphy is jogging Maud M., and she is in good shape. She looks well, feels well, and if the spry old gentleman races her this year she will make some of them hustle to keep up with her.

Dr. Long still has his horses at Pierce Bros.' track, but does not expect to remain there very long, as he will campaign some of them. His black stallion Jerome, full brother of the good race mare Florida, is one of the handsomest horses in the country. At one time Dr. Long owned Florida, and he is as proud of her fine performances last season as if he owned her yet. Jerome has not been worked much yet, for he is a young horse, but he shows many indications of good speed. Dr. Long has a number of good horses by Montana Wilkes. He is an enthusiast on the horse question, but not more so than his wife, who is never happier than when playing with her equine pets.

I. DeTurk has reduced his list of stallions for service down to two, Robin and Antietam. Robin was sired by Hero, he by Director, dam by Nephew; second dam by John Nelson; third dam by Morgan Rattler. Antietam was sired by Anteeo, dam a Nutwood mare. Both are good-looking, well-bred and are popular in these parts.

The boys are predicting great things of Graceful George, the sorrel son of Aleona, Jr., the pacer John Pender bought of George Guerne a few months ago. This fellow is swift, has good bottom and a good set of pins under him.

W. Stahl has a fine Illustrious colt out of a good mare. The Illustrious colts are being talked about here a good deal recently.

The purchase of the great old producer Lou Milton of McFadyen by Pierce Bros. reminds us that McFadyen made about $10,000 out of that matron before he sold her. She was sired by Milton Medium, and her dam was brought to California from Kentucky by Banker W. C. Ralston. She produced Redwood, for which McFadyen received $5,000 for a half interest; Allie, that he sold for $2,500, and two other animals he sold for good prices. Two or three mares like that would heat a bonanza mine.

The mention of Major Griffin in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN a few weeks ago called to mind that the Major once told us he had put seven horses into the list one season. When we sought to learn the names of the animals the Major said it was really not worth while.

There has been a good deal of elocution here the past week over a herculean effort to be made to revive base-ball, horse-racing, football and other sports in Sonoma county. Some of the "cranks" are trying to get Petaluma and Santa Rosa into the amateur league, and thus put the two towns against each other, as it were. The race-horse men utter a hoarse and melancholy laugh when they discuss a race meeting, and shake their heads ominously. The football chaps claim to be much alive, but time and results can only tell whether they are in earnest or not. PUBLIUS.

Heredity, Futurities, Dash Racing and Road Riding.

INCIDENTS IN HEREDITY—Every needful quality may be found in a horse that is requisite for extreme speed, but one, and that one deficiency may be entirely accidental and have no bearing whatsoever on the animal's ability to produce speed. For instance, the action, courage, level-headedness and willingness may be present in large and useful quantities and the body may not be sufficiently long to allow the legs the necessary room for the swing required for extreme speed; and all the trotting and race horse qualities possessed may never be suspected on this account alone. If this lack of length were a part of the animals direct inheritance and if it were found in a large portion of his family it would constitute good grounds for rejection; but it is often the result of the accidents incident to the life of the foetus before birth, or it may be a reversion to a forgotten and unfixed type in some ancestor which has not appeared in the family for generations. A horse whose lack of speed was due to some such cause as this might breed uniformly and successfully and the objectionable shortness of body might hardly ever appear in his progeny.

In other cases the accidental lack of the proper development of some important part may prevent the animal from showing what a perfect trotting machine he or she is in all other respects, and if this defect is merely accidental wonderful produce may come from horses that never showed any trotting ability because hampered in that way.

This is, however, only explanatory of certain cases that have been puzzling, and is in no sense whatever advisory in the matter of breeding from horses that have no speed. Breed winners to winners, trotters to trotters and don't take chances of wasting food and care on colts that depend for their chance of trotting inheritance on such remote possibilities as the accidental inheritance of a trotting disqualification in the sire. Every cross of blood that has not proved its trotting ability is a detriment to a pedigree. Even the fact that a mare has produced one or two fast colts should not have the weight that it now has unless it is a well known fact that the mare herself had speed and plenty of it. If every foal from a given mare of no trotting reputation shows great speed it may be taken for granted that the mare either had undeveloped qualities or may have had some accidental inheritance that prevented her showing what she was capable of. These accidents of breeding do more to keep men poor than any other part of this great but uncertain business; because one horse breaks out and trots without any visible right to do so, the world goes broke trying to find a similar freak. Our trotters are too unnatural a product as yet; it takes too much time and education to bring out what is in them. They are too much wrapped up in pedigrees that are lists of well bred failures, and the trotter of the future must have a lineage far freer from ancestors that can't trot than is the case to-day with many of our best-bred animals. Two year old trotting and the great futurities will do much to help out this deficiency, for there is no time to do any great amount of educating and drilling with colts of this age; they must be natural trotters from the drop of the hat—and must drop it themselves.

FUTURITIES AND TWO-YEAR-OLDS.—The great Kentucky Futurity, which closed on the 15th of this month, is a splendid illustration of the possibilities of the large amounts that may be gathered in small payments that in the aggregate make grand prizes and are not felt by the makers of such events. The progressive Futurity of the Independence Association will be worth a fortune, probably at least $30,000, and this is all for two-year-olds, while the Kentucky Stake is divided between two and three-year-olds with a part set aside for the colts that take to pacing. Both these stakes and many others are very creditable to those who have organized them. No one who has not tried to get up events of this kind can appreciate the amount of brick-throwing that is encountered at every turn from well-meaning, but over-conservative horsemen. Mr. Ed. Tipton, to whom the trotting world is largely indebted for the Kentucky Futurity, the first of the larger ones, was fought at every point, and if he had not been made of the most persevering material could never have accomplished what he, with the aid of a few progressive supporters, has done.

While the ideal Futurity has not yet appeared, the Independence Stake is, in some respects, ahead of any in the fact that it is entirely for two-year-olds, and the first money thereof may be anywhere from $25,000 up. We must get the general public more interested in racing and road riding, for the success of the one is very closely allied to the fortune of the other. Big stakes for two-year-olds will be the rule on the trotting courses as it is on the running turf to-day, and these big stakes will draw even greater crowds than now turn out for the greatest galloping colt stake of the year. The American people must have the quickest possible return for its money, and as the two-year-old form is the first period of a colt's life that can be used to any advantage whatsoever in racing, the colts that trot best at this age will always belong to the families that give the quickest return for the time and money put out on them, and consequently will be the kind of horses most needed to develop a proper love and appreciation for road riding.

Dash racing has proved itself thoroughly with the gallopers, and it will do the same with the trotters. Almost every Eastern horse paper contains some correspondence on the subject, and the weight of evidence is so overwhelmingly in favor of this kind of racing that it is only a question of a short time when the greater part of our trotting meetings will be composed of such races. One of the greatest benefits from racing of this sort will be the necessary development of pure-gaited and quick-starting capacity, the ability to get under way at a pure and square trot and to get to top speed in a twinkling, combined with the gameness necessary to carry such a high rate of speed to the wire. Then breaking will become deservedly unpopular, as there will not be the time required for resting of this description; the development of pure trotting speed, which will not be hammered out of the trotters in the everlasting work required to stay them up under the present fool system of all-day contests, will make a mistake in gait fatal, and that is what it ought to be. Too many races have been won by the horse that gave the best exhibition of skyrocket tactics and the recovery therefrom rather than by the purest trotter.

Big colt stakes will interest the public; early maturity and dash racing will give us a race of trotters that will supply the world with pure-gaited roadsters. We have made a good beginning in foreign lands, but if we are to keep in front, and we must keep in front if we expect to make any money at the business, we must build up a race of trotters that trot early, that trot fast, that score and get away like lightning and that will go to the end of the road. Given such horses and the interest therein that they will create themselves and will be created for them by the magnificent speed roads such as New York is now building and that will be built by other cities, and the demand from the whole world will make the late boom in trotting values seem almost insignificant. But the day of the trotter that can't trot has gone forever.

Education or Instinct?

(Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

Man has never been able to destroy an instinct or create one in an animal. The dog was no doubt the first animal that man domesticated, and that domestication has been going on for more than ten thousand years, yet he has the same unchanged instinct that his progenitors, the wolf and jackal, have.

The barn-yard poultry have passed through five thousand or more generations under man's care, and their instinct is the same now as that of the wild cock in the jungle. In the long ages under man's protection they have had but little use for their wings, and the muscles have dwindled away and the feathers have been shortened, but the instinct to fly is the same, and so too is it with the domesticated duck—civilization has not deprived him of the desire to fly, and while his flight has been neglected for thousands of generations, his capacity for swimming is no greater than that of the wild duck, that is, if you stop a duck from flying it does not necessarily make him swim or walk faster; nor if you stop a horse from running does it make him trot faster, if left to his own inclination.

There are some things which animals and birds do that are often called instincts, but which are habits, brought on by experience or education, and all that we see animals do in a wild state is not good evidence that such acts are instinct, for all animals acquire education and knowledge by age.

The instinct of a duck is to walk, swim and fly. These operations will be undertaken by the young if they never saw a duck or anything else fly or swim, even if they were hatched by a hen they would take to the water, as every one has observed. Man has a voice, and to cry is an instinct, but language is education. If a child should have the drums of his ears destroyed it would never acquire a language at all, as with the deaf the sense of sound in one case has been taken away, and the child can have no way to understand the notes or words that are necessary to speak.

Man can perpetuate natural traits or character of mind in an animal, but he can not create them.

All the fancy pigeons sprung from the wild rock pigeon, and there are several types now, among them the Tumbler. This pigeon at the commencement was a deformity either in brain or body, and so found by man who preserved him, and by constant selection the tumbler pigeon is the result; man did not teach him to tumble, but found him doing the trick of his own free will.

The peculiarity of a dog stopping and pointing at birds or animals was found in a certain individual, and not in different breeds of dogs, all over the world. This one individual was preserved and bred, and by constant selection the pointer and setter are the results of long and patient breeding. Man never taught him that habit, but found it in him. More than one hundred and fifty generations now have come down from that first pointer, and some of his descendants will not sit, and will often run after or flush the game; the instinct to run after game can never be bred out.

Trotting, pacing, walking and running are three instincts; these gaits would be undertaken and performed if a colt had never seen either horse or man, just as a child would cry before its eyes were open. These are true instincts. So trotting, as you find horses doing on the plains—without being broke, without education—is natural. The natural trot has never been found to exceed in speed more than seven or eight miles an hour, and all trotting over that is like the language in the child—it is education. If we had found a horse in a wild state, or one unbroken, going at a 2:10 gait, then the breeding would be the same as with the pigeons and the pointers. This gait would always be performed without man's assistance, and when the young horse was broken so that he would know the meaning of the trot, he would trot just as fast for a short distance as he would during any time of his life, just as with the runner. A six-months-old colt can go for a short distance as fast as he can at any other time of his life. The only thing that man could do for him would be to season him for a long and hard contest.

The fast trot, say 2:30 or even slower, in my opinion is entirely a matter of education. All strains of horses from all parts of the world have been educated to perform this unnatural trot, and no particular degree of blood or shape is essential.

Man has been training trick horses for the circus for more than two thousand years, yet we have no breed of circus horses, that is, none performing in the field by themselves, like the pointer and the tumbler pigeon.

There is no such thing as a trotting breed or type of horses, either in color, shape or action. The so-called trotter, the same as all others of our common horses, are nothing but a cross between the draft and thoroughbred blood.

The heavy draft horse and thoroughbred are of the same species, but of different types, for Darwin says "Look at the race and draft horse; their whole frames and even their mental characteristics have been modified, but if we could trace each step in the history of their transformation, and the latter can be done, we should not see great and simultaneous changes, but first one point and then another." Again he says, "The possibility of making distinct breeds by crossing has been greatly exaggerated, the offspring from the first cross between two pure breeds is tolerable, and sometimes quite uniform in character, only everything seems simple enough, but when these mongrels are crossed one upon the other for several generations hardly two of them are alike, and then the difficulty of the task becomes manifest."

The great variability between the so-called trotter proves the above hypothesis, for hardly are any two of these horses alike. Some are large and coarse, while others are small but well-shaped. Sometimes they take more after the draft horse ancestor and sometimes the other way after the thoroughbred side.

If this fast trot is education instead of instinct, which I believe it to be, then the breeding problem in regard to the trotter is settled.

If racing is to be his avocation he will pass up through the same surviving law that the thoroughbred has passed, that is, he will be raised in blood to the thoroughbred standard. This will not be done immediately, for breeders are slow to drop cherished ideas, and nothing but constant defeats on the turf will open their eyes. The change will be gradual, as it was with the runner.

When I look over the history of the trotting turf and the history of the trotters it recalls to my mind the historical expression made in the year 1680 by the Duke of Newcastle and by Sir John Fenwick, to-wit, "that the meanest hack that could be imported from Tangier would produce a finer progeny than could be expected from the best native stallion in the realm." It must be remembered that the English at that time had horses that ran sixteen hands high. At this time, 1680, discussions were going on then in regard to the runner as it is now about the trotter. It was Arah vs. native horse then. And the above-named gentlemen took the side of the Arah pony, and such opinions as they expressed were not popular at the time, national prejudice had been aroused, and few men had the courage to say that a little pony was better than a large native horse. But it was not thirty years afterwards when more than half of the breeders had been brought over to the Arah side, not by argument, but by the performance of their stock, and sixty years after Fenwick and Newcastle had proclaimed their belief in the accuracy of all ancient writers (that the Arah was superior to all other horses), all England had abandoned the native element except for draft purposes.

And it seems to me that the same unerring law is being carried out with the trotter. If we go back fifty years or more we will find many of the best trotters of that time, those that were in the lead on the track and in the stud, were not in the male line from the Arah. Such have gradually disappeared under the law of the survival of the fittest, and nothing remains now but those that come down in the direct line from the Oriental horse, thus following the same law and going through the same transformation which the thoroughbred went through. And fifty years from to-day, if there should be then any horses trained to trot, they will be thoroughbred and of the best running blood of that time. ST. GEORGE.

Sundries.

(Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

A gentleman on his recent return from the East was asked what had created the great depression in prices of trotting-horse. The answer was "too many stallions." In my opinion that is a very small factor in the matter and a ten times bigger one, in just a few words is, too many mares. Another and perhaps a much larger than both combined and one that compasses both the others is ignorance. The breeding of the successful American trotter is no ship-shod, hap-hazard business. It requires subtle analysis of the blood lines of two great individuals, and in connection also the analysis of two forms. This analysis must be performed by a clear conception and a level head. The man who goes from man to man asking what stallion he should breed to will spend years in becoming educated, and will, during that time, have but indifferent or accidental success. In purchasing a stallion to use, when you have your breed chosen, do not accept an individual that a host of breeders have rejected, thinking that he may be a success after all. The judgment of the public is right, for the public is the market. If you are rearing a colt for strict use, after he has come into the world from the blood lines that you desire, compare him with the great colts of other farms of the same blood lines, and do not flatter yourself. Of all the sure thing disasters that can come to you, misjudgment of this colt will bring them most surely. I know a man who essays to be a good judge of the line in which trotters should be bred who got a social infatuation for a man who was in the breeding business. The wishes of the breeder became the thoughts and beliefs of the other, until he became so wrapped up in that stock that there was no other worthy of notice. Of course this breeder berated most savagely those lines that were the most successful rivals against him, and his friend became imbued with his thoughts, till in his mind the most successful sires of the most successful race horses were not worthy of patronage. People are becoming educated. Wealthy bloods who have gone into breeding the trotter because they thought the business was a bonanza are going out. I have seen the managers of these fast simple fellows who would refuse to buy a first-class mare and buy a third-class one, and make the man who drew the check think he had made a great bargain for him. It is amusing to hear would-be seers tell what this or that failure would have done had he had a good chance. Now in the name of fairness did ever a horse have a poorer chance than George Wilkes? Did ever a horse go into a State where more prejudice was set up against him? The prejudice or the poor chance would have killed any but a wonder. Raced till he was seventeen years old, in the stud nine years of his old age, 20 years old before his first 2:30 performers appeared. Let it be remembered that any horse has had as good a chance at 20 years of age. And now a word to the breeder on the young stallion. Better by far gamble on him a little than on the old one who has not yet proved himself; the old one is a failure, the young one may be a success. But I have diverted from what I wanted to say about mares. A good one is worth six that are a grade below, because the one colt that she will produce can beat the six that the other six mares will produce. Now that is one of the great reasons of depression in prices, and now let us see if other things are not slightly depressed and if a general depression does not have some influence. Can a man make money raising wheat or cattle at the present prices? Has the farmer been getting rich any these past few years that the boom has been dropping out of trotters? When general business revives and everybody is making money every body will want a good horse, then prices will revive and horses of all classes (that electricity does not crowd out) will command a living price. New Breeders' Association.

The day was dark and gloomy, and the little handful of men who gathered on the balcony of the club house at Agricultural Park yesterday thought that nobody would attend the meeting that had been called for the purpose of organizing a trotting horse breeders' association.

S. A. Brown, of Kalamazoo, Mich., was called upon for an address in which to give his experience upon the formation of similar organizations. The gentleman made a very intelligent and entertaining speech, giving practical ideas in every sentence he uttered.

"You will hear that the bottom has fallen out of the trotting horse market because some standard-bred horses have been sold recently in Chicago and New York for less than the service fees of their sires, but I tell you that for men who have stallions and mares of real merit this condition of affairs did not come a day too soon.

Thos. B. Merry said he had listened with great attention to both the above gentlemen, and yet he believed that they both represented densely populated sections of country.

Edward Smith moved to amend by making the initiation fee $10, and the yearly dues $5. He thought that it was easier to get 200 members at $10 and $5 than 100 at the figure proposed by Captain Merry.

Mr. Merry moved that a committee of three be appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws and to report at the next regularly meeting. Carried.

The chair nominated Messrs. Merry, Smith and Lockheart. On motion the title of Southern California Breeders' Trotting Association was adopted by a unanimous vote.

On motion of Charles H. Durfee, twenty-five members having signed the articles of organization, the meeting then proceeded to the election of a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. The election resulted in the choice, by acclamation: President, Hon. L. J. Rose; vice-president, Hon. R. Gird; secretary, Edward Smith; treasurer, W. Stimson.

The meeting then adjourned, to meet at the call of the Secretary, which was understood to be on Tuesday, March 21st.

"You have done splendidly," said Mr. Brown, of Kalamazoo, after adjournment. "We organized an association with seven members, and you have twenty-five to start with. Keep it a-going red-hot, and you will have 250 before you're two months older."

Mr. Cadogan said: "If your people have one-half the enterprise that your public buildings and elegant residences indicate, you will have 400 members by the time your Association is a year old."

That's about the size of it. It wants every man to become a member that has ever driven a horse capable of trotting a mile inside of three minutes. The cradle of Stamboul, 2:07 1/2, will maintain its whilom prestige and keep up the traditions that have already made it famous through the length and breadth of the world.—Los Angeles Herald, March 8.

The Royal Cross.

There are few more promising stallions either on the track or in stud than the royally-bred son of Guy Wilkes, Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20 1/2. He is out of Lida W., 2:18 1/2, one of the fastest daughters of the unapproachable sire Nutwood; his second dam is Belle, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31; his third dam is Rebel Daughter, by Williamson's Belmont. Nutwood Wilkes is well known to all our readers as one of the handsomest and gamest trotting horses in this State, and as he has been bred as a three-year-old to many of our choicest matrons, his future as a sire is brightness itself.

"Sidney Guesses."

With regard to the guesses on the selling price of Sidney at Tattersalls' Fasig's sale in Cleveland, Ohio, February 28th, we are informed by Mr. Fasig that about 20,000 people sent in estimates, many of them from England, Austria, Germany and other European countries. The work of sorting the different guesses was a laborious one, especially where competitors would insist on sending lengthy articles bearing on the merits of the horse; or where some, who had evidently made up their mind on winning the prize, would enter into details as to the make of sulky preferred, the mode of shipment, etc.

The guesses varied from $3,000 to $305,000, and the average would be quite $75,000.

Trotting Sires Half Thoroughbred in Use at Palo Alto.

The speed produced by the half thoroughbred sires of Palo Alto is a matter of great importance to breeders of the trotting horse. Yet in its infancy the stubborn fact that speed at the trot can be produced from the half thoroughbred is creating so much interest that the papers are apprising the horse community of its success.

The get of these different stallions are few in numbers, and but a small portion of that number having been handled, makes the showing a remarkable one, and will cause the student of breeding for speed to study more closely the thoroughbred lines producing speed in the trotter.

Azmoor, 2:20 1/2, by Electioneer, dam Mamie C., by imp. Hercules, had three two-year-olds in training in 1892, the oldest of his get; they all got records. Rowena, 2:17, out of thoroughbred Emma Robson, Bonnbibel, 2:24, and Clarion, 2:34, an average speed of 2:25 1-3. Is there any other horse under the same conditions that has equalled it?

Whips, 2:27 1/2, by Electioneer, dam thoroughbred Lizzie Whips, has had but few of his produce handled, yet his performers, Azote, 2:14, Navidad, 2:22, and Warlock, 2:24, are substantial evidence of his ability to produce speed.

That Palo Alto, 2:08 1/2, would be a success as a sire of trotters was never in doubt at the farm where it was the owner's intention that he should reign as the premier stallion.

In 1892 there were but two two-year-olds at Palo Alto; his produce, Avena, got a record of 2:19 1/2. Erastus C. showed quarters early in the spring in thirty-seven seconds, but was taken sick and thrown out of training. Palo Alto will be represented on the turf this season by colts and fillies one, two and three-year-olds. Let their performances speak for the half-thoroughbred sire.

The Petaluma Fair.

The interest being taken in the annual fair at Petaluma even at this season of the year proves conclusively that the successful termination of all previous fairs will be eclipsed in this Columbian year. The display in the pavilion and the poultry exhibit is the talk of the town among the fair sex and when the races are called visitors will be agreeably surprised to see the improvements made for their comfort at the track. The course has been plowed, harrowed and rolled, all the hollow places have been filled, the turns thrown up to the regulation pitch, and wherever the surface needed extra care it has received it.

Eros—Sire of Nine.

It is not often that a sire has as many claims to attract the attention of breeders as Eros, 2:29 1/2. His owner has refrained from placing a number behind his name, although the horse is entitled to one by every rule. Eros has proven himself a sire of speedy and game performers that have color, disposition and size. He is a typical Electioneer in form, and as he resembles his sire in this respect, he goes still further like Electioneer, the sire of 132 in the list—he has a great broodmare for a mother, Sontag Mohawk, the dam of seven in the list, and one of her daughters is the dam of Starlight, 2:23 1/2. This broodmare is one of the greatest in the world and ranks with Green Mountain Maid, Emeline and Miss Russell as one of the few to which every owner of a fast trotter will like to trace in a few years. Eros never had many opportunities in the stud, yet he has proved himself one of the best sons of Electioneer, and every colt and filly by him that receives any preparation will enter the 2:30 list. Among all the sales that have taken place in the East this past winter not an Eros youngster was consigned by the owners to them; that the descendants of this son of Electioneer are appreciated this will demonstrate.

How to Get a Mare in Foal.

A correspondent writes the Rural World as follows on a subject of importance to breeders:

"Sometimes it is difficult to get mares to breed. It may be they are valuable mares and mares with splendid pedigrees, and their foals would command high prices if bred to good sires. There is scarcely a breeder that has not one or more mares to trouble him this way. The writer had a mare of this kind that he had purchased for breeding purposes, by Etban Allen, and out of a fast pacing mare. She was somewhat advanced in years, and for four years I tried to get her in foal. I had bred her to different stallions. She would periodically come in season, and was as regularly bred, receiving one, and perhaps two services at each of such periods. Believing that she was permanently barren, I was trying to dispose of her at a merely nominal sum. Being at Kalamazoo, Mich., about a year ago, inspecting the trotting stock of S. A. Browne & Co., of that city, I was telling him of my trouble with this mare—that I had tried for years to get her in foal, and that I was confident she would never breed. Mr. Browne—who, by the way, I consider one of the best horsemen in the United States and one of the cleverest of gentlemen—said to me, 'Send her to me, and I will see that she gets in foal.' He said he had a number of just such cases, and he had never failed to get them to breeding; but I was so positive that it could not be done that I would not send the mare to him. I asked him, however, what he would do to cause her to breed, and he said it might be necessary to insert the hand to open the passageway to the womb, if closed, which horsemen understand, at the time she came in season, and then let the stallion cover her once a day during her entire period of heat, and the mare would be almost certain to conceive; that some time during the period the egg that is deposited would become fertilized, and the mare in due course of time would have a foal. He said he had never failed to succeed in this way. I received this information last January a year ago, and immediately wrote to my superintendent to try the experiment the first time the mare came in season. She did come in season the first of February, and the stallion was bred to her for five days in succession, when she refused him, and on the 5th of January of this year she dropped a fine horse foal, and both are doing well. By not having this information I had kept this mare for four years at heavy expense, and had wasted time and effort to accomplish a result which could have been very easily obtained at any single period of heat, probably, during that four years. I shall feel under lasting obligations to Mr. S. A. Browne for the information he gave me."

From 1885 to 1892.

For the past two years the trotting pessimists have on all possible occasions, in and out of season, asserted that the interest in light harness races was rapidly declining; that trotting meetings all over the country were losing money and public attention and patronage transferred to the running turf. The statistics of 1891 properly collated and prepared showed such assertions to be without foundation; those of 1892 intensify that showing and fully warrant the assertion that never since the first 2:30 performance has the trotting turf been as prosperous or numerically and financially strong as during the past season. In support of this assertion the following comparative statement epitomized from the Year Books of 1885, Volume I, and 1892, Volume VIII, is submitted:

Table with 2 columns: Year (1885, 1892) and various race statistics including number of races, horses which competed, and value of purses.

*Each horse coated but once.
†Partially estimated for each year.

This is an increase in number and value of races, and in the number of horses which performed during the season, that should be satisfactory to the most ardent admirer of the American light harness horse. We do not believe the statistics of the running turf will show either a like ratio of increase or as large a total either in number or value, and this, notwithstanding the fact that the racing season is continuous from January to December, while the trotting and pacing meetings virtually commence in May and end with November.—Wallace's Monthly.

"Chancellor is a Race Horse."

There was not a better known stallion on the California circuit than the fine dark chestnut stallion Chancellor, owned by R. D. Fox, of San Jose. He proved himself a racehorse in every event he started in. His last halves in every mile were faster than the first, and the ease with which he vanquished his opponents proved conclusively that his present mark, 2:21, is no measure of his speed. Chancellor is pronounced by competent judges to be one of the strongest-made and most evenly-balanced trotters seen for years. He is level-headed in all his work, and shows a degree of intelligence that is almost marvelous. He is sired by Bismarck, 2:29 1/2, out of Lucy Patchen, by George M. Patchen Jr. 31. Bismarck is by Index 2556, son of Keokuk 546, he by Blackhawk 5, out of a Bishop Hambletonian mare. All the produce by Chancellor resemble him in every way. Mount Hope 14,206 is to stand for this season on the same stock farm with Chancellor, at the Santa Clara Valley Nurseries. Mount Hope is by the great stallion Sable Wilkes, 2:18, out of Lizzie, sister to Chancellor, 2:21. He is a very promising young horse, and from the little work he has had proves that he will enter this list and get a very low record in his races. His conformation is perfect, and breeders who desire to get the services of the best stallions for their mares should inspect this pair before going elsewhere. See advertisement.

EUGENE LEIGH has sold the six-year-old bay horse Inferno by Bend Or, out of Billet Doux, to the Western horseman H. Stauffer, and the horse has been sent to Washington to race.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

I've seen thee oft when roses wreathed
Upon thy features garlands bright;

When thy brown eyes with pleasure shone:
Your lips were red with passion's glow,

When shadows came not to annoy
Our perfect harmony of bliss;

Since then I've seen the roses fade.
And in their places the lilies lay;

Oh, dearest maid, I do confess
I have those roses falsely slain;

A National Sportsman's Association.

The widespread interest manifest in the columns of the sportsmen's journals over the country regarding the question of obtaining and enforcing game laws that will protect the game of the country, emphasizes the necessity of the formation of a National Sportsman's Association to the end that the laws of the country be made to reflect the best and highest thought on this subject.

Can there be but one answer to the question as to what the condition of the country will be as to the supply of wild game in the near future? Read the answer in the already well nigh depleted fields and hills of most sections of the country.

Trap Shooting.

I am glad to see such practical letters as those of Mr. Kirkwood, and can shake hands with him upon most of his arguments, but it is my belief that trap shooting, as he means it, is not to be revived, says Samuel J. Fort in Shooting and Fishing.

The generous offer of $50 for a handicap that will handicap, caused a smile; the association might just as well have offered $1000, for they will never find what they want.

I think there is too much stress put on the expert. We would all be experts if we could, and there is not a man who reads these words who would not win everything in sight if he could do it fairly; that is human nature.

expenses or his living by his expert shooting does it because it is a pleasant and, to him, an easy way to do what he has to do to live; he naturally devotes his entire energy to the one object, the ability to break more targets than any one else, while we who are making our living otherwise, pay the freight.

Trap shooting "as she is now shot," is one thing, the one-time system another reform the one, revive the other, but let us try to do both in the true spirit.

I heartily agree with Mr. Kirkwood's suggestion of the distance handicap, at least, as an experiment, though here again we are simply making several classes were formerly were but three, viz., expert, semi-expert and amateur; in other words, each distance would be a class.

The Jack Rabbit system is the only system that prevents dropping for place, and that alone should stamp it as something to be admired. A more natural or abominable practice than this dropping for place is not known in trap shooting, and no distance handicap can, or will prevent the expert from doing pretty much as he pleases in getting a place.

Is it possible to formulate a plan by which the 60 per cent. man can attend a shoot at some distance from his home, pay railroad fare, hotel bill, buy cartridges, shoot in every event, and come home with the expense account balanced by his winnings? Isn't it an absurdity on its face.

Now that there are two associations in the field something should be done, and I would suggest a plan based upon that of putting horses on the track, or matching prize fighters. Let the shooters of the country be classified; this can easily be done with the present acquaintance between the association managers and the men; then match experts, semi-experts and amateurs together.

Now, if you choose, as there are so many more amateurs than even semi-experts, let them shoot the rapid fire system, but intersperse just as many events where a single man shoots at so many birds, unknown trap and angle, gun below the elbow. Platoon firing becomes automatic, and there are men who by nature are better adapted to become automatons than others.

Such a plan would necessitate three sets of traps, three sets of men, etc. But are not the associations rich enough to do this?

Just as soon as a tournament is advertised, wherein "Greek meets Greek," and the amateur can go knowing that he will meet only amateurs, just so soon the crowd will turn that way; but my word for it, that no system of fair handicap will ever be invented whereby the expert will not win, the unexpert lose and he who can not break over 60 per cent. had better not go away from home until he can do better.

The Amended Emeric Bill.

The Emeric Bill as amended and finally passed by the Senate and Assembly reads as follows:

An act to amend section 626 of the Penal Code, relating to the preservation of game birds and animals, and providing punishment for the unlawful taking, killing, and transportation thereof.

The people of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section six hundred and twenty-six of the Penal Code of the State of California is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 626. Every person who, in the State of California, between the first day of March and the first day of [September] in each year, shall hunt, pursue, take, kill, or destroy [or have in his possession, dead or alive, except for purposes of propagation,] any quail, bob-white, partridge, or grouse, or any kind of wild duck, [snipe] or rail, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, shall take, gather, or destroy the eggs of any quail, bob-white, partridge, pheasant, grouse, or dove, or any kind of wild duck, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, between the first day of [March] and the first day of [August,] in each year, shall hunt, pursue, take, kill, or destroy, [or have in his possession,] doves, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, shall, within the two years next (except from September 1st to October 15th in each year) after the passage of this Act, hunt, pursue, take, kill or destroy any male deer, elk, antelope, mountain sheep or buck, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who, in the State of California, shall at any time hunt, pursue, kill, take or destroy any female deer, antelope, elk, mountain sheep or doe, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who shall at any time hunt, pursue, take, kill or destroy any spotted fawn, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Every person who shall take, kill or destroy at any time any bird mentioned in this section, unless the carcass of such bird is used or preserved by the person so taking or slaying it, or is sold for food, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

[Every person in the State of California who shall at any time sell, or offer for sale the hide or meat of any deer, elk, antelope, or mountain sheep, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.]

Every person who shall buy, sell, offer, or expose for sale, transport or carry, or have in his possession any deer or deer-skin, or any deer hide or pelt from which the evidence of sex has been removed, or any of the aforesaid game at a time when it is unlawful to kill the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

[Every person who, in the State of California, shall, within the two years next after the passage of this Act, hunt, pursue, take, kill, or destroy [or have in his possession, except for purposes of propagation,] any pheasant, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.]

[Every person who shall, at any time, net or pound any quail, partridge, or grouse, and every person who shall sell, transport, or give away, or offer or expose for sale, or have in his possession any quail, partridge, or grouse that has been snared, captured, or taken in or by any means of any net or pound, is guilty of a misdemeanor.]

[Proof of possession of any quail, partridge, or grouse which shall not show evidence of having been taken by means other than a net or pound, shall be "prima facie" evidence, in any prosecution for violation of the provisions of this section, that the person in whose possession such quail, partridge, or grouse is found, took, killed, or destroyed the same by means of a net or pound.]

Every cold storage company, person keeping a cold storage warehouse, tavern or hotel-keeper, restaurant or eating-house keeper, marketman or other person who shall sell, expose, or offer for sale, [or give away,] or have in his possession in this State any deer, quail, bob-white, partridge, pheasant, grouse, dove, or wild duck during the time it shall be unlawful to kill such animal or bird, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

[Every person who shall use a shotgun of a larger caliber than that commonly known and designated as number ten gauge, for the purpose of killing or destroying any wild duck, rail, quail, partridge, pheasant or grouse, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.]

Every person who, upon any [inclosed cultivated] grounds which are private property, and where signs are displayed forbidding such shooting, shall shoot any quail, bob-white, pheasant, partridge, grouse, dove or wild duck, without permission first obtained from the owner or person in possession of such grounds, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Any person found guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail in the county in which the conviction shall be had not less than ten days, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment. One-half of all moneys collected for fines for violations of this section shall be paid to the informer, one-quarter to the District Attorney of the county and one-quarter shall be paid into the Fish Commission Fund for the purchase and distribution of game birds in the various countries of the State.

SEC. 2. All Acts and parts of Acts in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. This Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

The Recreation Gun Club.

The Recreation Gun Club met for their inaugural of trap shooting events at Oakland Shooting Park on the first of the week. The day was particularly fine and the sport passed off with a degree of spirit which rendered the occasion of more than ordinary interest.

"Randall" proved himself the champion of the day by killing all of his birds in splendid style. He is a remarkably quick shot and killed his birds before they could get beyond the ten yard line from the traps, in almost every instance.

Table with 10 columns and 10 rows listing names and scores: Randall (1-12), Barney (2-11), Slade (2-9), Haas (2-9), Tibbets (1-9), Woolley (1-8), Schroeder (1-8), Worth (1-8), Liddle (1-7), Golcher (1-7), George (1-7), Smith (1-6), Allen (1-4).

"Randall" won first prize, a fine leather gentleman's dressing case; Barney, second prize, a fine silver-top leather-covered flask; "Slade" and Haas standing for third prize, a fine split bamboo fishing rod being won by the latter on the second six-bird match following, each of these contestants having killed all of their birds in the first subsequent match to the regular one.

Table with 10 columns and 10 rows listing names and scores for the first six-bird match: Slade (1-6), Haas (1-6), Johns (2-5), Randall (1-4), Barney (1-4), Levi (1-3), Woolley (1-3), Smith (1-2), George (1-1).

Another trial at six birds gave the following result: Johns (2-4), Haas (1-3), Barney (1-3), Golcher (2-3), Woolley (2-3), Worth (2-2), Randall (2-2).

An interesting event was a triangular match participated in by Liddle, George and Smith, $5 entrance, Uncle Robert winning by one bird over his competitors in a six-bird race. Haas and Barney divided in a subsequent pool, while Barney and "Levi" won subsequent honors.

Messrs. Clabrough, Golcher & Co. will shortly erect a good substantial club house at Oakland Shooting Park for the convenience of those desiring to shoot blue rocks.

The E. T. Allen Co. are making extensive improvements in their sporting goods emporium at 416 Market Street.

The Alameda Gun Club.

The Alamedas held their opening trap event of the season on Saturday last under a cold, gray sky, which, at intervals, emitted baptismal showers during the early hours of the day, finally settling into a steady rain, the conditions being rendered still more uncomfortable by a raw, stiff breeze which blew continually, thus rendering the shooting very uncertain. In the contest of the Club match the scores stood as follows Mr. A. Russell Crowell referee:

Table with names and scores: F. R. Barney, Shade, McArthur, T. Morrison, H. Haight, Dr. Jones, W. Mathews, C. M. Osborne, H. Schroeder, Colwell.

In the first freeze-out Schroeder, Mayhew and Adams divided the money. Worth won the second and Barney the third. Mr. Barney's shooting this year is remarkably good, could scarcely be better, and we anticipate before the season is over that his record will entitle him to a first place in the rank of the best shooters of the country.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

FIXTURES.

BENCH SHOWS.

- Elmira Kennel Club's first annual bench show, Elmira, N. Y., March 21, 22, 23 and 24. C. A. Brownman, Secretary.
City of the Straits Kennel Club's show, Detroit, Michigan, March 21, 22, 23 and 24. Guy D. Welton, Secretary.
Illindio Kennel Club's bench show, Indianapolis, Ind., March 28, 29, 30 and 31. Chas. K. Farmer, Secretary.
New England Kennel Club's bench show, Boston, April 4, 5, 6 and 7. J. W. Newman, Secretary.
Continental Kennel Club's bench show, Denver, Colo., April 11, 12, 13 and 14. F. W. Rand, Secretary.
Southern California Kennel Club's bench show, Los Angeles, Cal., April 19, 20, 21 and 22. C. A. Sumner, Secretary.
Pacific Kennel Club's bench show, San Francisco, May 3, 4, 5 and 6. Horace W. Orser, Secretary.
World's Columbian Exposition bench show, Chicago, June 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17. Entries close May 20. Address W. I. Buchanan, Chief Department of Agriculture, Chicago.
American Pet Dog Club's bench show, Lenox Lyceum, New York, May 30, 31, June 1 and 2. T. Farrar Rackham, Secretary.
Hamilton Kennel Club's second annual bench show, Hamilton, Can., September 7, 8, 9 and 10. A. D. Stewart, Secretary.

Mr. Matt Kerr has imported a fine wire-haired foxterrier that will be benched at the coming show.

The Pacific Kennel Club's coming bench show will be held in the Mechanic's Pavilion May 3d to 6th inclusive.

Mr. Howard Vernon has purchased the pointer, Carmel Bepo III.—Champion Sally Brass II., of Henry Huber.

Some new blood, of the very first quality in cockers, will be exhibited at the coming bench show in this city. Look out for hot competition.

Does not the fall in the prices realized for first class St. Bernards imply a boom for the breed? We are inclined to so regard the situation.

Mr. George Raper will judge at Manchester, England, on March 21, 22 and 23, leaving England in time to reach Los Angeles at the appointed time.

In the puppy classes at the coming show, cash prizes will be given in all classes where five or more puppies are shown; less classes will receive diplomas.

The excellent illustrations appearing in the American Field are rapidly introducing the leading dogs and kennel men to the public, in the most favorable manner.

The work on the compilation of the catalogue for the bench show is well under way, and is being well patronized by advertisers. The show will be a grand success.

The Continental Kennel Club is showing the spirit of enterprise which has made Denver famous the world over. It may be but an infant in age but it is a Solomon in wisdom and a Jumbo in size.

We have it on good authority that there will be presented at the coming bench show of the Pacific Kennel Club an Irish setter dog that will surprise the fancy. He is said to be one of the royal bloods.

Mr. E. P. Shell will send Lady Gladys and Lady Delight to the Los Angeles bench show. In the same string will be Dr. Regensburger's Reglo; all of them being fine representatives of the St. Bernard family.

The Los Angeles bench show will open on April 19 and continue to 21 inclusive. There will be a very respectable number of entries this year, far above, it is anticipated, the entry of any former show held at that place.

The Philadelphia Show had four hundred and eighty-six entries. The show is said to have passed off very smoothly and acceptably to the management. Eight judges made quick work of this important part of the exhibition.

Mr. Hugh McCracken will exhibit a brace of very superior greyhounds at the coming bench show. This breed has no more earnest fancier than he and his efforts during the year have been for the elevation of these speedy dogs.

The list of special prizes for the coming bench show to be held by the Pacific Kennel Club in this city, may next, from the 3d to the 6th, is already large and constantly growing. Let every one who is interested in this matter call on or write Mr. Clarence Haight, Secretary, 21 Kearny street, for full information and particulars regarding the show.

The library of the Mechanics Institute will shortly put in a set of the American Kennel Club stud books. This will be of great advantage to all the kennel men of the city, and no doubt but they will be in well-nigh constant demand.

The enterprise of the bench show circuit in the West, in securing the services of Mr. George Raper as judge of the bench shows on the Pacific Coast, is to be commended. This gentleman stands unchallenged as one of the first authorities on dogs now before the country.

Mr. Henry Huber will exhibit four grand pointers at Los Angeles and also at the Pacific Kennel Club's show in this city. The string will be composed of Champion Glenbeigh, Champion Duke of Vernon, Champion Sally Brass II. and Lucy S. (Duke of Vernon—Sally Brass II.)

The Occidental Coursing Club will hold a coursing meet at Newark-to-morrow. This will probably be one of the last events of the season at that place. Plenty of good strong hare have been secured and a grand season of sport is expected on this occasion. Go down and enjoy a pleasant day.

Mr. L. L. Campbell is making up a string of dogs to take to the Southern California Kennel Club's bench show at Los Angeles next month. Mr. Campbell succeeded finely with the dogs under his charge last year presenting them in the ring in first-class condition. He is a thorough worker in this line.

Capt. Thos. Higgs will attend the Los Angeles bench show with a string of dogs from this city and vicinity for exhibition at the coming show at that place. It now looks as if a good representation would attend from this city on that event. This is the proper spirit and should be encouraged in every way possible.

We have received the premium list of the Continental Kennel Club Co., of Denver, Colorado, advertising the fourth annual bench show to be given in that city on April 11 to 14 inclusive. Entries close March 27. Mr. John Davidson will judge all classes. Mr. F. W. Rand, secretary.

The managing committee of the coming Bench Show are looking for an office conveniently located for, the transaction of the business of the show. They will open the office and place a competent clerk in charge about April 1. This move is a most commendable one and will, no doubt, do much in forwarding the interest of the show as abundance of time will be required to discharge the duties of the office.

Mrs. F. H. Shepard, of Butte, Colorado, the owner of the famous St. Bernards, Ben Lomond and Marvel, has them now at her ranch near Morrison, that State. As all the fancy know these specimens stand well to the fore of the St. Bernards the world over. We are pleased to note this stroke of enterprise in kennel matters by the lady, and trust that the Rockies will continue to improve in the matter of securing the best dogs in the country. Colorado is in touch with California, not only in a topographical sense, but also in the matter of enterprise in all progressive lines.

W. M. Cunningham, the leading sportsman and dog fancier of Honolulu, shipped his Irish setter bitch Elcho Belle, (Champion Elcho Jr. ex imported Katie IX) to the Bay View Kennels of West Berkeley to be bred to Brace, he by Pat O'More ex Belle C. Elcho Belle is a very handsome red bitch showing a good deal of quality as a field performer. She is reported to be a good one. Mr. Cunningham has several other Irish setters in the kennels and intends "breeding nothing but the best." In sending Elcho Belle to this State he should have by this cross some first-class ones.

St. Bernards In England.

Mr. J. F. Smith, reviewing the St. Bernards of '93 in the English Kennel Gazette, says:

The falling off in quality has been due in a great measure to the exportations of some of our best breeding stock (both dogs and bitches) to America and elsewhere. Another, and, I think, a more serious cause, is that for years past breeders have been breeding away from the type. This has been done by continually breeding the roughs together, which, in my opinion, is a great mistake, as by so doing we are breeding back to the Newfoundland and Pyrenean Wolfhound cross. If you want St. Bernard type in the roughs, you must use the smooth blood occasionally. This has, I believe, been done more or less during the past two years, and I look forward to some grand young roughs being exhibited next year, if not before.

Another craze has been the continual trying to get size; by this I mean height at shoulder. The consequence of this has been that several over-grown specimens have been exhibited which have caricatured the breed. They have simply been monstrousities, which could hardly, much more walk. A St. Bernard that is 33 1/2 inches at shoulder is tall enough for anything, and even this height is very difficult to get, commensurate with symmetry and good movement. A St. Bernard ought to be able to move well, and for long distances, too. Whoever saw hunters 17 hands, carriage horses 18 hands, or dray horses 20 hands high, that were worth anything except to exhibit at a penny show in a fair? They simply could not carry their own weight with ease.

I am glad to see the dewclaw farce is now at an end, and we may hope to see better hind legs and freer movers. A step in the right direction would be to remove these malformations when the puppies are about a week old.

Chetwynd, Litter Brother to Glenbeigh.

In speaking of the family of pointers to which Mr. Henry Huber's Glenbeigh belongs, the English press speaks of his litter brother Chetwynd as follows:

"An excellent all-round pointer, and one that bears critical examination satisfactorily."—The Field.

"Open Dogs were a good lot, in which Chetwynd won: a liver and white, with capital head, though not quite nice in expression; good in shoulders, body, legs, feet and bone."—Stock-Keeper (on Liverpool Show).

"A remarkably smart white and liver dog."—Canine World.

Chetwynd is own brother to Glenbeigh, winner of first Pointer Puppy Stake and Clumpion Prize for best pointer or setter puppy, National Trials, 1891, also first pointer, Derby, and extra prize for best pointer or setter, Kennel Club Trials, 1891. The only pointer that has ever won the double event.

"Instinct" or "Reason."

Some few weeks ago I noticed that some correspondents were discussing the above subjects. Some of them I agree with, others not so. I will venture to tell your readers a true tale of the reasoning of an old English sheep dog whose image is indelibly stamped on the tablet supposed to exist in the box that I possess for casing brains, says a correspondent in Shooting Times.

List then, for here goes. A few years ago it was my father's custom, in sending the draught of sheep for sale, to start the lot about five o'clock in the morning from the farm, accompanied by a man and the dog (whose name by the way was Cyrus, a tribute, I suppose, to the ancient king of that ilk), and follow himself in his dog-cart, later.

This plan worked well for several years, until "Cyrus" began to be troublesome in the fair, by becoming so jealous of his beloved charges that he would challenge any other tyke that came near the pen in his keeping to mortal combat.

And, be it understood, he could fight, and many a gory field of battle have I seen after his mode of persuading the other tykes to keep off.

Well, this, naturally, in no small degree riled the farmers who had their flocks penned adjacent to Cyrus's charges. So it was decided by my father that for the future two men should pilot the sheep into the next fair, assisted by the dog, until the entrance to the town, and then the dog was to be sent home.

Well, this little plan, it was thought, would work admirably, and on the first time it was tried, Cyrus, ever obedient to the word of command, trotted back from the entrance to the town, apparently unconcerned.

Now I have often wondered what passed through the brain of that true and faithful dog as he wended his homeward way, for I have to mention that the shepherd, having mistaken his orders the preceding day, had neglected to separate and mark the sheep for sale in the usual manner, consequently that task had to be done in the early morning, and at that performance the dog had assisted.

This, of course, was a very unusual thing, so unusual, indeed, that "Cyrus" evidently reasoned within himself that his command to return home had something to do with this deviation from the usual mode of procedure, for at about noon a tremendous commotion could be seen from the sheep fair existing in the cattle fair at the top of the town and through which the sheep had to pass in order to arrive at their pens, and as the crowd moved to the right and to the left, we could distinctly bear the yap, yap, which, by the way, is such a distinctive feature of the old English sheep dog, and not until my old optics become closed in endless night shall I forget the look of surprise depicted on every face of those jolly old rustics of long ago at the sight of the grand old dog conducting in faultless style his flock of sheep through the herds of bullocks, separating his charges from the flocks gone before, dashing here, dashing there, his familiar yap, yap, which the sheep knew so well, until he brought them tight up to the pen in which the others were enclosed, and then, with a joyous bark and a look that conveyed far more intelligence than could be found in half the cranks and apes hoiled down together, who speak of a dog as something to be despised. "Only fit for a dog," they say. Bah! A dog reasons, a dog studies, aye, and almost anticipates his master's slightest wish. Kick him, ye monsters of creation, what does he do but return to lick your hand, aye, and die for you.

"I have said 'die for you,'" and verily, so far list again, ye cranks, and apply this unction to your souls:

This self same dog saved his master's life, and in this way: My father, twice in each year, went a distance of eighteen miles to collect the half-yearly rent due from certain freehold property (and I fancy it would puzzle any man's wit to find in the whole of Wales a more lonely road than that which we had to travel by. Now, two weeks previously, a murderous attack had been made on a farmer travelling the same road, and I recollect well my father's jocular remark before starting, "I had better take 'Cyrus,' in case of trouble on the road"

—a presentiment which came true before that day was out—for when he was returning along the most lonely part of the road two men rushed out of the darkness, one seizing the horse's head and the other paying his attentions to the occupant of the dog cart. But while this latter fellow's foot was on the step, Cyrus thought fit to interfere and introduced his fangs into the pantaloons of the energetic but unwelcome interviewer of the driver. This sudden rear onslaught quickly brought the ruffian down, of course the whip was applied, and I am pleased to say my father arrived home safely. But the dog? No sign of him, and I assure you great was the concern as to the faithful old fellow's safety. I well remember, as it were but yesternight, how, for a long time, we all discussed his probable fate, so you may guess the joy that prevailed that house when we, bemoaning with bitter and scalding tears, as we thought, the fate of our staunch and true friend, suddenly heard a "yap! yap!" and a scratch at the door of that dear old farm house.

But, oh! when the old dog rushed in, the idol of everyone, we could have jumped for joy, but he was bespattered with mud and blood, so we diligently set to work washing him, to see where he was hurt, but when the performance was completed not one single scratch was found upon him. I guess, therefore, that his manipulation of those descendants of Dick Turpin must have made them rather uncomfortable. A lot more I could tell you about this dog, and perhaps I will on another occasion.

Death of Judge 7512.

We are very sorry to learn of the death of Mr. E. P. Schell's grand St. Bernard dog Judge 7512, which occurred on Sunday evening last after three weeks illness, from rheumatic fever. Judge was a grand specimen of the royal St. Bernards, showing quality and character of the first order. His had one of the best dispositions imaginable and an account of his companionable disposition, his loss is keenly felt by Mr. Schell and his family. Judge has left a large number of the very best get on the Pacific Coast and his introduction here and careful management under Mr. Schell's charge has done very much to raise the quality of this grand breed of dogs in this city and vicinity.

His death will be deeply regretted by every kennel man interested in this grand breed, as well as of that larger circle of the fancy who love a grand dog of whatever variety. His master hurried him with that care and sorrow which attends the loss of a true and sincere friend.

The Los Angeles Bench Show.

The Los Angeles Herald of recent date discourses of the coming bench show and kennel interests of that city as follows:

"April is generally chosen as the month for bench shows of dogs in California, although they are held much earlier in the year at the East. Here, however, it becomes a matter of fine weather, as nobody will attend a bench show in the day time; and in order to secure a good attendance at night it is necessary to have no rain. The lover takes his best girl to the show, and while he bows and they exchange vows the canines ejaculate their bow-wows as well. Everybody goes to the dog show.

The Southern California Kennel Club have left no effort unspared to make this the great show of the entire coast. With this end in view they sent to England to secure the services of George Raper, who is probably the best judge of dogs in the world, so much so that his services have already been secured as judge for the great show to be held in Chicago during the World's Fair, as well as at the New York bench show to be held during the present month. The owners of fine dogs are jubilant over the prospect, and feel good at the idea of securing the best judge that money will hire. Indeed, so world-wide is the fame of Mr. Raper that if the question of selecting a judge could be left to the dogs themselves Mr. Raper would be elected by so large a majority that the other fellow would not know that he was a candidate.

The intelligent man cannot use his dog except as a companion. Even the professional duck-shooter, who is virtually dependent upon his dog for his daily bread, does not treat him as a menial, but as a friend. The aristocratic Gordon setter, with his glossy coat of black and tan, and his fine hazel eye; the shaggy Skye terrier, with his rough jacket and intelligent face; the mighty St. Bernard, with his burly frame and broad forehead—all these are types of the animal which is a comrade rather than a servant. The Angelenos are aiming to get up a bench show that shall equal San Francisco's, if not surpass it; and as the leading men have dogs to exhibit, it is liable to be liberally patronized."

The Pacific Kennel Club.

The Pacific Kennel Club met last evening at 21 Kearney street, Mr. E. P. Schell in the chair. There was a good attendance and a lively interest in the current arrangements for the coming exhibition.

The committee appointed for the purpose of harmonizing matters relative to the circuit and the securing of the same judge for the shows composing the circuit reported a satisfactory state of affairs. A guarantee fund was started and resulted in raising $240 in the meeting. It is expected that this fund will be raised to $500 within a few days. This matter was placed in the hands of Mr. J. B. Martin with instructions to secure the desired amount, which will no doubt be readily done.

The attention of the club was called to the fact that the Mechanics' Pavilion was claimed by the State Floral Society for the same dates advertised for the bench show. No trouble whatever is anticipated, as the bench show is secure in its arrangements. Mr. Schell will look after the matter in order to set all doubts to rest ament this subject. Arrangements have been completed with the Pacific Coast Pigeon Society whereby the latter will join their exhibits with the Kennel Club, thus adding materially to the attractions of the event.

The official announcement that Mr. George Raper had been secured as judge of the show was formally made.

The discussion then became general as to the coming exhibition.

The annual meeting of the club will be held on May 5th at the committee rooms in Mechanics' Pavilion.

How They Picked Out the Prize Sheep.

Mr. Chas. Hancock, the celebrated animal painter, relates the following story:

"I was once staying with Lord Kinnaid, at his seat in Scotland, when his lordship expressed a wish that I should see some of his prize sheep, which were then feeding, with some hundreds of others, on the brow of a hill about three miles from the house. So calling his shepherd he asked him to have the prize sheep fetched up as quickly as he could. The shepherd whistled, when a fine old sheep-dog appeared before him, and seated on his hind quarters, evidently awaited orders. What passed between the shepherd and the dog I do not know, but the faithful creature manifestly understood his instructions. He darted off toward the sheep, at the same time giving a significant bark which called two younger sheep-dogs to join him. Accustomed as I was to the remarkable sagacity of collie dogs, I was amazed at what now took place. On one side of the hill was a river, on the other side a dense forest. One of the younger dogs, on arriving at the foot of the hill, turned to the left, while the other darted off to the right. The former stationed himself between the sheep and the river, while the latter stood between the sheep and the forest. The old dog now darted into the middle of the flock, when the sheep scampered right and left, but were kept at bay by the two watchers. The old dog speedily singled out the particular sheep required, and in a few minutes the dogs were quietly driving them toward us."

Mr. C. H. Schultz, of Lake, Coos county, Oregon, is now in the city, and tells of some of his experiences in that section which set the nerves of the listening sportsmen a-tingle with longing to go to his lone log cabin by the wild mountain lakes where trout and game abound in great quantities. His cabin is miles away from any other human habitation and he keeps a typical hunter's home. He related to us but yesterday a story of thrilling adventure in which one of his faithful dogs saved him from a horrible death. He was awakened about midnight by the baying of dogs near by; there was no moon and securing his bull's eye lantern and taking his shot gun heavily charged with buckshot he went out to investigate. He found the cause of the disturbance near by in the thick "sallal" brush. Thinking it only a 'coon he ventured in, urging one of his bear dogs on. The dog went forward but in a moment came whining back with one of his ears nearly torn from his head. The next instant a monster panther leaped upon him and but for the gallant fight made by the dog would have undoubtedly used him up in short order. He finally killed the panther, with a lucky shot, the gun being literally pressed against its body. He yet bears the scars received in the conflict.

ROD.

Things to Love.

BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.

I love all beauty, let it be
In sky, or flower, or leafy tree;
In babbling brook or humming bee.
I love it well
When sunset on the calm blue sea
Casts beauty's spell.

All nature speaks of beauties rare;
In every cloud that floats in air
And all around us everywhere,
Will we but see,
The master hand of beauty there—
Divinity!

The Glory of Sierra Streams.

Ah! yes, barefooted boy, will you ever forget your long tramps over the slippery rocks down into the cool alder avenues, says E. McD. Johnstone in American Angler. Do the birds sing now as they did then? Do the daisies nod to you as they used to, and the kingfisher alight near by, to see what luck you are having, bob his tail a few times and then go singing down the stream? Does the first song of the hobolink or the coming of the sandpiper in the spring affect you as it did then?

That honest country humpkin face, with its ruddy glow of health, liberally sprinkled with freckles, is much changed, I see, and your outfit, too, split bamboo rod or "Kosmic" silver-plated automatic reel, silk lines, and flies with names and tails as long as the devil's darning needles your big brother used to tell you would "go clean through small boys," an osier reel, rubber stockings, and I know not what.

Well, do you mean to tell me, my dear sir, that if you had the power, you wouldn't swap that gilt-edged outfit for the old home-made one, be a brown-faced, barefooted boy again for one good long day in June, and try your luck in the "Big Line Brook" or in the "West Branch?" We know one man who would gladly make such an exchange, and give several dollars to boot.

The true angler does not find his chief and only joy in the bare fact that he can slaughter so many dozen fish per diem. He must take a genuine pleasure in Nature's various moods. He of all others will discover that she is very shy and modest, hiding away in her secret places much of her choicest handiwork, and he who finds must seek. He must have an open eye for the minutiae as well as the mighty in her works.

The little water ouzel "on the margin of the river" in the middle of his song, plunging into the stream, then bobbing up serenely to take up his music where he left off, as though this little by-play belonged in the piece. This spry little chap is always amusing.

Strange flowers and ferns cluster about the roots of old trees, along the brooks, as they do not elsewhere.

There are cool dank grottoes, vine-trellised and luxuriant, which one ray of sunlight hursting through the fretted vault of green transforms into miniature realms of glory. Every dew drop is a gem, every vine a diadem. You may scare the from its eyrie on the cliff, and he will show you in his heavenward rising cycles how puny a creature you are without wings.

There are vistas of glory along our Western streams that can only be found in mountainous countries, vistas with backgrounds of eternal snow and skies of sapphire, and, brother anglers of all countries, upon the veracity of the fraternity of the West, we assure you that you will find congenial spirits here, and as fine liars, for the opportunities they have had, as there are in America, harring, perhaps, the State of Maine.

We have trout in this country with the same scarlet-dotted, silvery-mottled sides as navigate other streams of the world. They are as large, as active and as gamy as anybody's fish, and, if you should come this way, we will guarantee to take you up some streams that have their origin in the greatest mountains of North America—streams flowing under the shadow of El Capitan, and the mighty Sequoia, that have been tossed and tumbled and torn in their rugged journey from the High Sierra to these; streams, too, that ripple and sing their way down through the exuberant undergrowth of the coast range cañons, and there are fish in all of them.

Artificial Flies and Natural Baits.

When the fly can be used it always should be used, but where the fly is impracticable, or where first will not rise to it, he is a very foolish angler who declines to use bait.—W. C. Prime.

One April day I was wandering up the East Walker River, having just crossed the State line from Nevada into California; the stream, as is usual at that time of the year, was high and discolored, says W. Bullen, and I knew that fly fishing was out of the question; my fly books consequently remained stowed carefully away in Dot's pack, but on reaching the head of the cañon, where the mountain streams converge after watering the meadows of Bridgeport, in Mono County, I met a party of Indians on horseback, all on fishing intent. Behind each dusky rider was perched a grinning papoose, holding his father's unvarnished, yet highly effective willow pole. Then it was that the above quotation from W. C. Prime was presented to my mind in the form of the question: "Are we fools?" By "we" I mean those anglers who, in many ways educated up to their conscientious standard by the study of principles advanced in your journal, adhere entirely to the use of the fly.

What cared the members of that happy little cavalcade for differences of opinion as to whether a trout should be caught otherwise than with a fly? Did a fish taken with a worm, held conveniently in the mouth of a favorite squaw until required for use, lose any of its flavor? A trout was a trout "for a' that;" and a light fly rod possessed no more attractions to their understandings than a knowledge of the integral calculus.

And again I asked myself the question, "Are we fools?"

When I reflected that not until the middle of July, after the great rush of water from the melting snow banks had sufficiently subsided, would fly fishing be attended with any appreciable amount of success, and by that time what percentage of the fish would be left for the man who prided himself on using no other lure than the fly, after Indians with bait, and other fishermen with spears and dynamite, had first put their ideas on the subject to a very practical test?

I have found by experience that during the spring and the early summer a few fish may occasionally be enticed by the fly on the eastern slope of the Sierras; but, given a falling stream and the trout will not rise in the cold spell that causes its abatement, while warm weather speedily sends down a fresh consignment of discolored water. Are all of us, whose consciences forbid us to catch a game fish in any other manner than with light fly rods and tackle, to look on contentedly for several months while others are decimating the inhabitants of the streams? My idea and definition of game fish are those kinds that can be taken on artificial flies, under favorable conditions, with fairly satisfactory results; there are many kinds of fish that cannot be taken, and, consequently, the most fastidious angler must admit that the practice of capturing them with a bait is a pleasing amusement and a legitimate branch of the craft. In winter, also, many fishermen find good sport in lowering a bait through the icy coverings of the lakes, where fly fishing would be absolutely impracticable.

I know of no positions in the world the rules of which are so stringent that they are not alterable by circumstances; and I do not think that the rules of angling are made of cast iron; it seems to me that we should be guided by our surroundings instead of leaning entirely to extremes; of course, under no circumstances should the use of the spear or of dynamite be tolerated, if for no other reason than that both methods are forbidden by the laws of the land. In places where all sorts and conditions of men (except fair sportsmen) are slaughtering the fish with as many various and more or less barbarous means, bait fishing is, as the law says of some kinds of homicide, not only excusable, but even commendable. And we should not overlook altogether the perfect luxury it must be to a trout to find itself hooked at the end of an elegant light fly rig, or the comparative comfort it feels when taken on the lithesome phantom. On the other hand, the man who would venture to use bait or spinning minnows for game fish, in waters frequented by gentlemen, fishing in the most approved and least greedy way, deserves to be immediately ostracized from all genuine sporting circles.

Favorable opportunities for angling seem generally to fall to the lot of those who either least deserve them or care nothing for them; many a man living in the vicinity of a fine stream or lake would stand aghast at the idea of subscribing to an angling journal, a paper in which he could not see the market quotations of either lard or bacon.

I think we must admit that the proposition of W. C. Prime is, in the main, correct; still, if the only pleasure to be derived from angling is the mere catching of fish, it could be performed more advantageously by deputy; those who find not "a pleasure in the pathless woods," those who feel not the "rapture on the lonely shore," had better catch their trout at the nearest fishmonger's stall with the copper or gold hooks mentioned in a recent article by Dr. Mitchel. The man who may be so kindly favored by the fates, who order the good things of this, our earthly probation, as to possess a ranch by the bank of a stream, had better give his hired man orders over night to harpoon a fine fish for breakfast next morning with a pitchfork, "just while yer doing yer chores, yer know," and that luckless individual will sally forth in the cold, gray dawn, his devotions and ablutions being confined to muttered imprecations against early rising and vicarious fishing. Commendable as are some kinds of homicide in the eyes of the law, very few people care to act as public hangmen; commendable as bait fishing may be under some circumstances, there are probably many of your readers who will not condescend to its use.

Perhaps I may be allowed a few words, in conclusion, on flies. Those that we now buy are certainly marvels of manual skill, and very nice and pretty the fluttering exponents of the fly-tyers' art book, displayed as they are for sale on neat cards; but is there not at present a tendency to make them too "dressy"? Are they designed to be as attractive to the trout in a stream as they are to customers across a counter? The more soberly attired flies of our youth, "where are they, where?"

Benn's Patent Fly Book.

As the season for angling approaches, the lovers of the rod turn their attention to an inspection of their supply of tackle in this line. It is well known that but that little of tackle that is taken on an outing and used at all is ever fit for further use unless the angler have a perfect hook and conveniences for securing the leaders and flies in perfect form.

In this connection we desire to call attention to a patent book, the product of the ingenuity of Mr. John S. Benn, of 822 Folsom street, the well known fly-tyer of this city.

The book is made of good, heavy sole leather, convenient for carrying in the hip pocket. The book is about 3 1/2 by 2 1/2 inches and one inch deep. In this the flies are placed in patent envelopes, peculiarly adapted to the use intended. The different varieties of flies are placed in separate envelopes, and then placed in the book, which they are made to fit neatly. About one-fourth of the top of the book is made into a flap or opening. A ribbon fastened to the bottom of the book at the other end runs up over the end piece of the book at the opening, and is fastened to the outer part of the book. When the angler desires to secure any special variety of flies, he places the second finger in the loop or portion of the ribbon extending over the end of the book, which pulls it taut and has the effect of raising the ends of the envelope which rest upon it next the opening, so that the desired flies may be secured. It is a very convenient pocket fly book, and every angler should have one, as they will materially add to the pleasure of an outing.

The activity noticed at Messrs. Clabrough, Golcher & Co's., in filling orders for all kinds of angling supplies indicates that the demand for this class of goods is starting in early this season.

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

INTERESTING ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.—As will be seen by the following, letter Mr. Wiggin has supplied some more very interesting information regarding the treatment of his great mare, Martha Wilkes.

At the outset, I must say in answer to his request for suggestions from me, that to proffer advice to one who is so painstaking, and who scans so closely all the minutiae of training, and with the success that has resulted his "ordering," would be, to say the least, an indication of over-confidence in being able to better the situation. There is nothing like adapting feed and exercise to the animal which is the subject of treatment, and when a high degree of success follows it would be dangerous to change.

Forty years ago, and anterior to a date that far in the past, the general opinion among trainers was that the greater amount of feed a horse would eat, and the more work it could endure without the legs suffering, the better condition could be obtained. Some carried that principle still further and trained to a point that a let-up was essential before the race came off. Joseph Clinton, who trained Grey Eagle, and who was employed at Woodburn previous to and during the early part of the war, informed me that his preceptor in the art would gallop his horses until they could not run a mile in two minutes; that if a horse showed spirit after his work another two miles would be ordered. He had the knack, however, of giving them just the necessary rest, or comparative rest, to restore their speed and still retain the endurance which the hard work had prevented, and was very successful. Mr. Clinton added that he was the only one he knew who could perform such tactics without decided failures, and his own practice was more in accordance with that of Arthur Taylor, who trained for Wm. R. Johnson, the "Napoleon of the Turf" from the days of Reality to Boston, that being to start the horses into a campaign "big and lusty" and trust to the early races to perfect their condition. The most sensible method, evidently, when more than one race is marked to take part in, but modern systems vary still more from the ancient than divergences between old-time professors. But in whatever school trainers were educated there were greater pains taken with feeding than at present; finalities some of them might truthfully be termed.

Oats were put into a stout barrel and chopped, i. e. pounded with the sharp edge of a spade until the husks were loosened, and these were carefully winnowed from the kernels. Hominy, cracked corn, was also cleared of the mealy part, and these in proportion of three of oats to one of hominy thoroughly mixed.

Hay was "pulled," stripped by pulling it apart so as to remove every particle of dust. "Fodder," especially favored by southern trainers, viz., corn blades taken from the stalk when the corn was standing, a handful of which were stuck behind the ears to cure and afterwards packed in bales. Some were so particular as to "stem," the central rib being thrown away. Five feeds during the day, walks before and after the gallop, and quite a long one in the afternoon, were the order of things.

The object, of course, in feeding is to sustain robust health in the animal; if exercise to bring the faculties into the best conditions to sustain a rapid pace for the distance that races will be run or trotted. To fix imperative rules in either case is beyond human capacity, that is a rule which will govern in all cases. There are certain fundamental principles which lie at the base, and even those which appear to be absolutely necessary may require, in specific cases, modulations.

That Mr. Wiggins' success, remarkably so when his stable for the past six years has not suffered from colds, distemper, strangles or sickness, and containing forty or fifty animals every winter, is the best endorsement of his practice. I fully agree with him in discarding bran. For years not a pound of it was fed to my horses, and as for the past nineteen years I have only lost one animal through sickness, and that might have been owing to a surgical operation, the treatment has not been far wrong. Flaxseed in the proportion he uses it is surely a valuable adjunct, and Dr. Bowhill informs me that he uses it in the same manner as described in the letter, adding a small portion of nitre. As I have an implicit belief that all kinds of medicaments had better be confined to ailing horses I should leave them out of the daily routine, but if tempted to vary from my custom it would be on Dr. B.—'s recommendation.

The exercise which Martha gets appears rational, and again to be guided by the good old rule, "let well enough alone," no change should be made until nearer the time of going into more active training.

The last query I shall not attempt to answer. The best plan to increase muscular development outside of formulas generally practiced is rather difficult to determine. Feed and exercise, but just what kind of feed and the amount of exercise must rest with the person who has the animal in charge. With so careful an observer as the owner of Martha Wilkes the chances are that the effects of wrong treatment will soon be noted and changes made. Years ago I preferred an animal to be "high in flesh," if not fat, to commence with, but that was when a greater part of the winter was passed in comparative idleness, the idea being that bulkiness was in a great measure due to enlargement of muscular fibre, and that when the extra adipose tissue was removed, if the removal was properly managed, the mass of muscles would remain. When at Atwood Place I had scales put in the barn and noted the effects of work and sweats on the avoirdupois. People who were frequent visitors would say, "— is gaining flesh, much bigger than when I was here before. You must look out or she will not be in order for the races, now close at hand," when the fact was that the scales showed a decrease of weight. The critical eye was deceived by the augmentation of muscle which had grown with work, and the lessening of weight due to the absorption of fat in the interior to a greater extent than that between and coating the muscles.

But growth of muscle, and fining of muscle—by fining I mean given power and elasticity to the tissues—is a subject which will require more attention than can be awarded by me at present. That growth of muscle is more readily obtained by food rich in albuminoids than those which have a surplus of starch but less "protine" is beyond question. The mixture which Mr. Wiggin uses should promote muscular growth, and be also a palatable and wholesome diet for horses.

BELLINGHAM, Mass., March 6, 1893.

DEAR MR. SIMPSON: Your remark "And if others followed it and 'reported progress,' we would know a great deal more than we do now," is only too true. It is really too bad that many able writers will say anything to make an argument to down "the other fellow" instead of trying to present facts to the public. It is on account of your disposition to enlighten the public—on points which I realize have taken so much time and study—that I sent the facts I did.

I thank you for the compliment paid Martha and her race-record, and will say that she is in the pink of condition, galloping her twice daily. Water at 6 A. M. fed four pounds ground oats and corn (one-quarter corn); 7:30 A. M., jog two miles; water at 11:30 A. M.; 12 M. feed two pounds same feed. At 2 P. M. she is jogged from eight to fifteen miles according to day and track and the way she feels; at 4 P. M. water and 4:30 eight pounds timothy and clover hay; at 6 P. M. four pounds ground feed with a pint of boiled flaxseed. I put two quarts water into a towel and wring it out and let it simmer half a day, when it becomes a pall full of jelly. About a pint of this will make the manure look as if they had been fed on grass for twenty minutes.

The crude protine in oats is 11.5 pounds to the hundred; corn, 10.5 pounds; while flaxseed has nearly 33 pounds. I have been trying to find something to add to oats to supply the waste while in training. Shorts or bran by the roller process I cannot believe is digested, and if not we get no benefit except to open the horse's bowels, and I am in doubt if it is a benefit. I have fed ground flaxseed for the past six years instead of bran, and have had excellent results. No sickness or colds, and no colic distemper or strangles. Have had no forty or fifty head every winter.

I have visited the Pillsbury and Washburn Mills, and followed the wheel from the time it enters the first roller until the end and taken samples of all the grades. It seems to me that the gluten is all out of the bran; nothing is left but the outer buck of the wheat, which is silica, and perfectly indigestible.

I write this fully, thinking you will be kind enough to tell me what you think of my way of caring for Martha. The snow is quite deep here, but I have kept my track broken up so that my horses have only missed one day in three weeks. Martha will eat twelve quarts of oats while in training, but I believe that is not sufficient to supply the waste while she is trotting a race a week below 2:12. The question is, what can I feed that is rich in protine besides oats? Have you had any experience with cooked or ground flaxseed that would help me? Also would like your opinion about driving twice daily from now until actual training begins, which will be May 1st? Martha wore an eight-ounce plain shoe and a four-ounce toe-weight when she made her record; made from steel 1 inch by 3-16 punched a la Simpson with 4 1/2 ounces behind. Martha will go with a heavier shoe, say 12 to 13 ounces, but had so much action that she could not wear them. I think she will go this year in one-ounce shoes without toe-weights, shall try her that way. She carries her legs in a straight line, so straight that in standing in front or behind her you can only see one set of legs. She pulls the hind feet from the ground as Geo. Wilkes is described as doing. The only spot she touches is at the coronet on the near hind foot in going around a turn or when you take her back quick, strikes it in center of foot. She wears her shoes true, and I do not know of anything to do for her except to put her in PERFECT PHYSICAL CONDITION. She is as sound as a new dollar. Tell me how to feed and drive her to gain every ounce of muscle possible?

Yours truly,

E. D. WIGGIN.

EXAMINE THE PROGRAMME.—The programme for the fixed events of the Spring and Fall meetings of the Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeders Association has been already published, and that and accompanying entry blanks will be before every owner of light harness horses on this Coast ere another number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is issued. I sincerely hope that a response will follow in the way of numerous entries, as that will be a potent indorsement of the action taken by the Board of Directors. As has been stated before, that action has excited widely spread interest and in place of a merely local feeling, there is a general desire to note the success of the innovations. Everyone who has any interest in this branch of horse economy is concerned in the issue, and in order to give it a fair trial must do everything in their power to aid in carrying it through. With this aid I have the utmost confidence in the result, and that an impetus will be given to trotting, and, of course, pacing, which will be felt over the whole country. It rests with our people to expedite the general acceptance of a new era in harness sports. That it cannot be long delayed is a sure forecast unless "all signs fail," and the quicker it is inaugurated the better. Far easier to make changes in the machinery which require renovation than to construct new, and should there be a partial collapse even, the undertaking to regain lost ground is more difficult than when the work is progressive. The changes instituted at the meetings of 1892 proved beneficial, and there are good reasons for the belief that the more radical departure from old methods will be still more so. There is one obstacle which will necessitate unanimity to remove. That is the apathy which has heretofore prevailed in California in regard to Spring trotting meetings. There has been a lack of concerted action to ensure success, and without that a full return cannot be expected. So far as my information extends that supineness which has weighed so heavily in the past does not exist, and the intelligence received from all parts of the country is favorable. But until the returns are in it cannot be definitely settled, and should there be a lack of entries shown faith will not be so strong. With a favorable showing, in that respect, I will feel that the first battle is a victory, a victory which will be a token of invincibility in the future. Not by any means will I lose heart should the primary not come up to my expectations. With so good a cause to battle for, defeat in the first skirmishes would not be disastrous, though I must say that the gratification of taking the lead at the start would be immense. With that secured, the advantage will never be overcome, and New Departure beat Old Methods the whole length of the stretch.

RECORDS.—Valuable as the basis of classification which records surely are, giving the means of formulating a distinct ground for competition, and which, outside of age and sex, is about the only way to prepare a trotting programme with entries closing some time before the decision of the events, they cannot be called legitimate data for constituting handicaps. Especially the slower records, as it is well known that like figures are no criterion of equal capacity. For instance, in a 2:30 class, there may be half a dozen horses which have trotted from 2:29 to 2:35 which are not far apart, others with still slower marks, or none at all, which are far superior. Good enough as far as it goes, but look over the field in which range trotters which cannot stand any change in the classes to which they are eligible, and unless that field has very large acreage it will be densely packed with animals comparatively worthless. Cable lines, electric street cars and bicycles have encroached so far on the domain of road horses that the out-classed geldings are emphatically supernumeraries, lagging superfluous on the stage, their usefulness nil. The breeding farms are overcrowded with mares, and as was proved by the sale at Cleveland finely-bred, well-formed mares, and with fast records to boot, selling at moderate, very moderate prices to what they would were there opportunities of the same stamp as the genuine handicap offers to gallopers. The temptation to ringing would not be nearly so great if a horse with a mark could find legitimate employment. Far more efficacious than penal laws, a better guarantee for "honest trotting" than the penitentiary doors ajar, when honesty was the pronounced best policy to pursue. Give every horse that can be classed with others of the same caliber a chance. If beaten in one gang, let him try again with a slower, and as there is under the present condition of affairs a surplus of non-winners, there will be no lack of material.

It will not take long for the public to appreciate the difference. Spectators will be gratified with closer contests, and then there will be the satisfaction of new combinations. The races of one day pave a smooth way for the succeeding. When classification on the basis of equal speed prevails, there will be a lot of amateurs in the art of selecting. The beaten horses will present a study. One which trotted third in one race may be close company for the winner of another, and two of the close seconds in others "fall in" with those which heretofore have not secured a place. No very difficult matter to obtain the time of every horse in a race, especially when the starters are limited as they will be in the dash races at the coming meeting. The official timers, under the rule, mark the first and second, and there are always plenty of holders of timing watches who will secure the others. A clerk can be appointed whose duty will be to collect and record, at the conclusion of each heat, the time made, and in furtherance of this plan cards might be printed with blanks for the name of the horse, the time made, the position at the finish, and the "breaks" during the journey. When there is a certainty that the largest proportion of the races of the meeting will be made up after the horses are on the ground, the inferior horses will attract attention, a close scanning of relative speed, an ever varying problem in the adjusting of capabilities. Owners will have greater inducements to make entries, as defeat in one race may insure a better chance in another. Let us suppose that in the races which are already on the hills, the colt races for instance, that with the first and second out the others would make a close thing of it. Another trial may be more interesting than the first, and then a contest between selections from the four and three-year-olds result in a "capital race." Handicapping is a fine art. Experts bring race horses very closely together by adjustment of weights. It may require a still higher faculty to select trotters and pacers which in an equal rig will have nearly equal chances of victory, and yet it seems to be well within the bounds of probability. Easier after the season is further advanced, but at all events in the springtime there will be enough of the "glorious uncertainty" to stimulate attendance.

NOT NOVEL.—When I heard a short time ago of the proposal to handicap trotters by placing weights on their backs in addition to the harness it appeared to me that it was a new idea, but Solomon's saying that "there is nothing new under the sun," seems applicable to this as well as other imagined novelties. That Solomon would have corrected that opinion had he lived at the present time "goes without saying," or if too obstinate to change his belief lose his reputation for wisdom. In place of having the merit of novelty that method of equalizing trotting speed has been one of the appliances in use by the Austrian handicapper from the joint information obtained from The Horseman and Horse Review lately received. In the Review is the following paragraph: "Another valuable animal in McPhee's stable is the mare Lula, an Austrian inlander with a mark of 2:40. She has won Dan a lot of money and has been retired from the course to be bred to Prince Warwick. She is a great mare on a standing start, and won last year at Budapest, handicapped with a driver thirty pounds overweight and a pad of lead weighing sixty-eight pounds fastened to her saddle besides by the official handicapper."

The account in The Horseman is more explicit and the system presented so fully that all the points are clearly presented. In order that it may be understood by our people who are now so much interested in the question that much of the Vienna letter is copied in full:

One evening recently I had the pleasure of meeting at a dinner Rudolph Winkler, the official handicapper of the Vienna Trotting Association, and was much interested in learning from him something of the powers possessed and methods employed by him in "placung" the horses in a trotting race. I found the methods differing considerably from those employed by a handicapper in a running race, and was surprised to learn of the almost absolute power placed in the hands of this official. Mr. Winkler has followed the occupation of a handicapper for many years. This office is a necessity in this country from the fact that the starters in a race are possessed of such widely varied speed. Instead of a 2:40 class, for instance, the starters may be possessed of records far below 2:40, and which, with us, would render them ineligible. To overcome this difference in relative speed the horse with the faster record is set back a sufficient distance to equalize the difference in his speed-record by the handicapper. Again, if in the judgment of this official, a horse shows greater strength than his competitor, he frequently handicaps that horse by placing a saddle of lead across the horse's back, of such weight as his judgment indicates will place the horses on an equal footing in the race. In addition to this every horse must carry a fixed regulation weight of 150 pounds in the driver, the handicapper employing either distance or weight, or both, in his handicapping.

Again, if one horse has a long-distance record of say 2:40, and another has a short-distance record of the same mark, the endurance qualities of the long-distance fellow are handicapped in an attempt to place both on an equal footing.

In the free-for-all trotting races the handicapper looks over the entries, and, acting entirely on his knowledge of the various horses' abilities and records, he handicaps them according to his own best judgment, and from his decision there is no relief.

The position of a handicapper previous to his announcement is an enviable one, as every horseman is anxious to claim him as his personal friend, but just so soon as the official's announcement is made public he is cursed and derided (under breath, of course) on all sides. There is no appeal from the handicapper's decision, the only relief possible being the withdrawal of the horse, whose owner considers him unnecessarily handicapped, and this is very often done.

An allowance is made by the handicapper of nine seconds in favor of a horse with an American record, our tracks being credited with being that much faster than the Austrian. The age of a horse and length of time that has elapsed since obtaining his record are points also considered in favor of a horse in handicapping.

The office of handicapper is necessary here on account of there not being a sufficient number of horses of any one class to make a race. With the "mixed race" and the handicap the number of starters range from eight to eighteen.

This official is paid a salary of 2,500 florins (about $1,000) a year for his services, besides a small charge allowed him on each "declaration" of handicap made public by him. AMERICAN ABROAD.

With the far greater number of horses to select from it seems plausible that our trotters can be brought together without adopting such extreme measures as prevail in Europe. That "improved sulkeys" have simplified the problem of handicapping harness horses is apparent, as with the unquestionable advantage they confer over the old-fashioned, and the difference between them and carts of various weight, without resorting to very heavy vehicles, horses within a few seconds of each other can be placed on comparative equality. Contests, close contests and these without the provoking delays incidental to past methods are what is demanded by the sport-loving people of the present. The livelier and more exciting scenes enacted upon the turf have intensified the desire to be relieved from the manu engendered by a repetition of the same acts through a long afternoon, and if trotting cannot be lifted out of the old ruts the beginning of the end is close at hand. With implicit belief that trotting can be made equally attractive to racing, and that it will be before many more years are added to history, I feel that the labor in aiding the progress of good work is not time misspent.

NETTIE, NELLIE, NEVA.—The progeny of Three Cheers are especial favorites of the ladies of Mr. Winters' family. Mrs. Winters has a "driving team" of them which are hard to excel for good qualities, and the daughters have each a saddle horse of the tribe which are highly valued. And rightly so, combining the beauty of their sire—and I always regarded Three Cheers as one of the pre-eminently well-formed horses—with the other traits which are required in a first-class saddle horse for ladies' use. They are of a temper, however, which requires proper treatment, and a filly which was pft in training resented the abuse of a stable lad so vigorously that she was ungovernable. Miss Nellie Winters took her in hand, and with more skill than a man would have the patience to display, succeeded in transforming what was wrongfully termed viciousness into amiability, and in directing the high temper so that it was beneficial in place of detrimental. The spirit which prompted resentment to injuries, when properly controlled, was an adjunct to education, and when the right course was pursued there was a high order of intelligence as well as determination.

In a sketch of the journey to Nevada made in January, 1892, appeared a history and description of the handsome filly, but the ownership and tutorship awarded to Miss Nettie Winters in place of her younger sister, Miss Nellie, and as all these take more than a warm interest in their pets, it was a grievous blunder on my part, for which I offer this late apology. I was not aware of the mistake made until my wife, who accompanied me on the late trip, informed me, and, manlike, when there is a chance to throw the blame on some one else, and therefore shift the onus to Mr. and Mrs. Winters as the parties who should be named in the indictment for the christening which led to the error. Nettie and Nellie are so near alike that the crossing of the l's did the mischief.

JOS. CAREN SIMPSON.

HOOF-BEATS.

EUGENE LEIGH has purchased the aged black horse Reporter, by Enquirer, out of Bonnie Meade, and he will be placed at the stud.

HON. L. J. ROSE, the Los Angeles turfman, has in the city this week. His string will probably take part in the Blood Horse spring races.

BERT HART, B. C. Holly's old jockey, is training H. D. Brown's horses. "Moose" Taylor, the crack light-weight jockey, will do the riding for Brown.

DON FULANO, the crack Alta—Marilee colt, is going like a shot at Bay District track. Mike Kelly is training the three-year-old, who is looking fine for a youngster that had quite a siege of sickness last season.

THERE were seventy-four green trotters that entered the 2:20 list last year—never waited until they held a place in the 2:30 list for a few years; of this number twenty-two are credited to the Pacific Coast trotters, a very good proportion.

ONE of the most prominent veterinary dentists in this city, L. Barker Dalziel, of 1212 Golden Gate Avenue, who has his advertisement in this issue. Mr. Dalziel is considered to be one of the leading men in the profession, and his large and increasing practice is indicative of his success.

THOMAS S. GRIFFITH, Spokane, Wash., has purchased from the Standard Trotting-Horse Company, Kenosha, Wis., the chestnut three-year-old stallion Depha 13,954, by Patronage 4143, dam Delphine, by Tramp; second dam Delancy, by Green's Bashaw; third dam Fanny Foss (dam of Bashaw Jr., 2:21½), by Young Green Mountain Morgan.

WILBER F. SMITH has engaged twelve stalls at Bay District track for the Blood Horse meeting. In his string are Orta, Blondinette, Steadfast, Cuidado and two Cheviot two-year-olds. Mr. Smith is an excellent judge of a horse, a great student of bloodlines and a good conditioner, therefore his horses should win a fair share of races at the coming meeting. Let us hope he has something in his two-year-old list as good as Zaldivar was.

CHARLES MARVIN says: "In general if you can win at all you can win in straight heats, and that is the clean, straightforward way to do it, besides being much better for your horse. In four cases out of five where heats are laid up they are laid up with reference to the pool box. The motive is generally not to make sure of winning the race, but to influence betting, and this very thing has in a measure tended to disgust people with trotting."

A. W. LONGLEY, of Janesville, Wis., formerly owner of Monroe Chief, 2:18½, is stopping at the Palace Hotel. Mr. Longley has been visiting at Sacramento, Pleasanton and Lodi, shown around by Monroe Salisbury, and while in the former place purchased of J. B. Haggin a fine mare by Algonia. In New York he purchased a mare by Echo, dam Alice Brown, by Hambletonian 725; second dam Alice Daniels (dam of Jackson Temple), by George M. Patchen Jr.

M. MCKENZIE has James Madison, 2:17½, the fine, large son of Anteeo, 2:16, looking splendidly at the Oakland Race Track. Breeders should not let the opportunity of breeding to such a racehorse pass. He stands at a very low figure, and, considering his breeding, conformation and performances, his book should be filled. James Madison will have some in the list this fall, and as he will be sent to lower his record next year, owners of good mares will regret that they did not breed to him this season.

SAM CLAY, who robbed Bookkeeper Tommy Shannon of $7,000 in New York last winter, has been released. Shannon spent over $1,000 to effect his capture. Shannon's mother was visited by Clay's mother, and the earnest prayers for mercy from the unfortunate mother aroused the sympathizing nature of Mrs. Shannon, and her pleadings, so it is said, have induced him to withdraw the persecution. Clay made a book here last fall for a short time, but being recognized by Starter Ferguson's son, flew the coop.

The directors of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association have just let a contract for the erection of one hundred box stalls on the Haywards property formerly occupied by The Villa. This property fronts on Fifth Avenue, and is opposite the Bay District Track.

J. N. CARLILE has sold out his two-thirds share in the racing firm of Carlile & Shields and is going into the breeding business with Col. Jack Chinn, near Pueblo, Col. The purchaser of Mr. Carlile's share of the stable, which includes Dunbar, Brookwood, Governor Adams, Lew Carlile, Robert Weithreck, Senator Walcott, etc., is Joseph Werlin, of Denver, Col., the owner of Mart Walden and Justice.

A DISPATCH from Long Branch, N. J., says: "There was a stormy meeting of the committeemen and the citizens of Lamond Township in West Long Branch to-day, regarding the protest made against the license granted to the Monmouth Park Racing Association. About fifty citizens were present. Dr. Beach and William Mount of West Long Branch acted as spokesmen for them. Committeemen McFadden, Hopper and Van Note were present, and while the latter was in favor of revoking the license his two associates upheld their action in granting the license."

GIDEON & Daly have purchased from Joseph I. Van Mater his farm of eighty acres, which adjoins their farm in Monmouth county, N. J. It is the intention of the purchasers to establish a breeding farm of a high-class order. There is the most beautiful estate in this section of the country and now contains 234 acres. They propose to outlay about $20,000 on the place during the present year in erecting barns, stables, paddocks and other suitable buildings, fencing, and the like. A new training track and stable will also be built. Their farm cost them about $45,000. They have at present about a dozen broodmares on the place, and Ludwig, the stallion. They expect to fit up a place worth while having.

J. GROOM has ten head of trotters at San Jose belonging to Messrs. Talbot & Pierce. One is the Dexter Princee mare, Dextreana, out of a Chieftain mare that is very promising. Amy, a two-year-old Silver Bow filly, out of Breeze, by Ulster Chief; Hyash, a two-year-old by Guide, 2:16½, dam Billy Hayward; Freda (3), by Steinway, 2:25½, dam by Simmons; Olie S., by Hawthorne, dam Fanny Bayswater; Skagit (2), by Eros, dam Yosemite, by Eghert; Princess McCarty (2), by Dexter Princee, dam Lady Fracture (dam of two in the list); Sophia S., by Sidney, 2:19½, dam Sadie, 2:36, by Reliance; Violette, by Kafir, dam by George M. Patchen Jr. 31; Tye Hood (2), by Mount Hood, 2:22½, dam Sadie, 2:36, by Reliance.

BEAURY MC, 2:14½, never looked finer in his life than he did a few weeks ago; and Wm. Fieldwick was quite happy in the contemplation of the victories he would achieve with this game son of Nephew; but, alas! one morning he went into the box stall where Beaury was and found the horse hardly able to move. He seemed to be injured in the whirlbone, and how he received the injury is one of those inexplicable accidents that never can be accounted for. Everything was done to cure him, but so far the prospects for him being able to meet the best horses in California this fall are very dim. Everyone will be sorry to hear this news, for no horse on the circuit attracted greater attention or merited unstinted praise more than he.

TACOMA ITEMS: N. Harrison's horse, Soudan Patchen, son of Soudan, 2:27½, and Patchen Molly, dam of Commodore Nutwood, has grown to be a beautiful horse; his book is full for this season. Barring accidents, this horse will be in the 2:30 list this fall. Terry Chambers has him in charge. Robt. Breeze is driving Lady Mack, 2:23½. James Brokaw is driving Bishop Hero, 2:28, and mate, Black Jack, 2:27½. Colin Mackintosh has a beautiful span of mares in Mr. Chambers' stable, both sorrel, one by California Nutwood and one by Eugeneer, by Electioneer. In the same stable are two fillies that are bred in good lines. One is a brown, by Caliph, son of Sultan; her dam is by Volunteer 55. The other, a bay, by Bland, by Hambletonian 10; her dam is by Ingram, by Volunteer 55.

C. H. GILLOCK, secretary of the West Side Park Association, at Nashville, Tenn., has decided to embark in the breeding business, and has just added seventeen mares to the establishment. They are all winners and finely bred. The mares purchased are: Addie T. Norinna, Eloquence, Illian, Jennie Maek, Venus, Julia Miller, Dew Drop, Miss Maggie, Lyda, Spavonia, Letter Go, Sylvania, Come On, Estelle M., Lillie B. and Flavella. The lot is headed by the well-bred and speedy stallion, Harry Russell, by Eolus, out of Tillie Russell, which will be the premier stallion of the establishment for the present. Mr. Gillock expects to increase the number of brood mares to thirty in the next few weeks, and will endeavor to secure another suitable stallion.

A COLLISION between two racehorses running at full speed with a third horse standing on the track occurred at Montgomery Park, Memphis, Tenn., on March 3, and resulted in injuring all three horses and their riders. Eugenia and Ed. Greenwood, the most promising of Capt. Wynn Carron's racing string, were being speeded five furlongs, when a green stable boy on a two-year-old drew up squarely in front of them. A collision followed, and the three horses and their riders fell in a struggling heap. John Larkin, the jockey on Eugenia, was probably fatally injured. The other boys were bruised from head to foot. Eugenia and Ed. Greenwood were so badly injured that they will be unable to start at the Spring meeting, and will probably be disabled for the season. The colt that caused the trouble was only slightly hurt.

MR. T. E. HILLS, of Ashland, Or., has recently made the following sales of trotting stock to D. H. Churchill, of Great Falls, Montana; Julian 6934, blk s, foaled April 29th, 1887; bred by Geo. W. Sherwood, St. Paul, Minn., sired by Woodford Wilkes 2528, dam Margin, by Gov. Sprague 444; Bessie G., b m, foaled 1884, by Western Chief 695, dam Nellie, by Johnson Horse; Jossie B., h m, foaled May, 1883, by Western Chief 695, dam Kate, by Morgan Horse; Fairy J., blk f, foaled June 3, 1890, by Julian 6934, dam Nellie, by Billy V., son of King Herod; Custer, h e, foaled June 4, 1891, by Julian 6934, dam Bessie G., by Western Chief 695; Gypsy Hayes, br f, foaled June 22, 1891, by Julian 6934, dam Miss Hayes, by Ericson 580; Ben Hur, h e, foaled June 25, 1892, by Julian 6934, dam Bessie G., by Western Chief 695; Gertie, b f, foaled 1892, by Julian 6934, dam Lucy, by Western Chief 685. This stock was shipped direct home to Montana.—Freeman's National Farmer and Turfman.

A CHICAGO dispatch, dated last Wednesday, read: "In a special train over the Northern Pacific Railroad fourteen of Marcus Daly's crack racehorses reached Chicago from the Riverside ranch, in Bitter Root valley, shortly after noon. Matthew Byrnes, the famous trainer of the copper king's stable, was in charge. Resting for only two hours, the precious cargo started in the same costly way for the East, and on Friday night fourteen Montana-wintered thoroughbreds will join their companions in the Daly paddocks at Gravesend. There Byrnes will at once set the great string at hard work for the turf campaign of 1893. The horses that passed through Chicago to-day were Montana, Tammany, Silver Fox, Sir Matthew, The Pepper, Steve Estes (imp.), Duke of Hamilton, Delury, Lillian Russell, Dr. Garnett, Tenacious, Senator Grady, Sam Lucas, Matt Byrnes. Sir Francis and others owned by Daly have wintered at Gravesend. The trip from Montana was uneventful. The horses are not big and fat, but have been strongly exercised and galloped at the ranch, and are ready to begin such work as is demanded of thoroughbreds two months before the actual season opens. Byrnes said he was more than satisfied with Montana as a winter resort for racers. As to his plan of campaign Byrnes was unable to tell, inasmuch as no definite system of dividing the stable had as yet been determined upon. Garrison and Midgely will be the jockeys. It is practically certain that Montana, Tammany, Sir Matthew, The Pepper and Steve Estes will be worked in preparation for the Brooklyn and Suburban Handicaps, and that those raced at Gravesend will be shipped to Chicago after the meeting, together with Sir Francis and the others reserved for the Washington Park racing. Sir Francis is almost a sure starter for the American Derby, and Delury or The Baron may be his pacemaker."

It is announced that Lord Dunraven has been offered 6,000 guineas for the broodmare L'Abbesse de Jouarre, and if he is well advised he will take the money, says an English paper. L'Abbesse de Jouarre seems likely to prove a shy breeder. It is a fact beyond all question, moreover, that the majority of mares which have eminently distinguished themselves on the turf prove the most abject failures when they are relegated to the stud: Marie Stuart, Jannette, Fraulein, Gamos, Dutch Oven, Wheel of Fortune, Corisande are a few cases in point. Of course, says this authority, there are brilliant exceptions, such as Blink Bonny and St. Marguerite. Spinaway was sold for an enormous price at Lord Falmouth's sale, but she has produced nothing which could win a race since she foaled Bushyody, twelve years ago. In America we have many striking examples of this fact, as witness the almost total failure at the stud of such grand race mares as Fashion, Mary Randolph, Lady Lightfoot, Black Maria, Lida Stanhope, Ferida, etc., all of which ran many hard races at heats of long distances, the severe preparation for which undoubtedly weakened their physical constitution and thus tended to their failure as stud matrons; while the result of the foals of such fine race mares as Duchess, Gironde, Miss Woodford, Modesty and Firenze is yet to be determined. It is, however, pretty generally conceded that when mares are too severely worked in their youth it so depletes their physical organization that they are far less likely to produce their own equals than would otherwise be the case. This theory, however, does not apply with equal force to the modern race mare, since horses now are rarely asked to go over a mile and a quarter, and long distance heat races are a thing of the past. It is quite probable, however, that any first-class filly of suitable breeding, if early retired from the track, and without having had many severe races, would prove of far greater worth as a matron in consequence, and would ultimately repay her owner far better by the sale of her offspring than she would by being kept on the track and winning races, but it seems hard to owners of good mares to abandon the glittering prospects of present winnings for the future prospects to be made by breeding.—Turf, Field and Farm.

The Montana Circuit.

The programme printed in this issue includes running, trotting and pacing. The tracks are full mile, regulation, well cared for and absolutely safe. The stables are large and constructed with a view to permanency. The betting is not equalled outside of the big cities, and the privileges will be in the hands of capable men, well-known to all horsemen. Last year over $1,000,000 passed through the pools, aside from the books, and with the increased local interest it is certainly safe to predict larger sales this year. The distances between points on circuit are short (only 100 miles for Anaconda, Butte and Helena), and without doubt all railroads running into Montana will, as in the past, make rates of one fare for both ways from all points on their lines. This circuit immediately follows and hinges on to the meetings at Denver and Salt Lake City, as well as those at Portland, Salem and other points in Oregon and Washington. Finishing the Montana Circuit, horsemen have ample time to reach the fall meetings at above named points or those in California or the East. The climate of Montana is unsurpassed for summer racing, and the attendance will average better than cities of several times the population. The successful meetings heretofore held should be sufficient guarantee for this season, and assuring horsemen liberal treatment, it is hoped the Montana racing organizations will receive your patronage and entries. Address all communications to D. P. O'Connor, Acting Secretary, Butte, Mont., and remember that entries close April 1, 1893. Read the advertisement in this issue closely and enter liberally without delay.

Percherons at Auction.

Next Tuesday at eleven o'clock, in the salesyard on Market street, near Van Ness avenue, Messrs. Killip & Co. will sell the finest collection of thoroughbred Percheron stallions, broodmares, colts and fillies ever brought to California. They are known as the celebrated "Collier" collection, and have become noted from Shasta to Los Angeles for their size, beauty of form, soundness, perfect disposition and quality. Mr. Collier is giving up the business of breeding, and has sent all of his stock to the sale. They will be sold without reserve, and farmers who are seeking to keep up with the times by improving their stock of horses should attend this sale next Tuesday, March 21st. See advertisement.

TOPGALLANT, in the Storn stable, is shaping up well, and is expected to be a hard horse to beat this season.

TURF AND TRACK

The Sulky.

HORSE-BREEDERS, send in your lists of foals.

ANTEEO RICHMOND, 2:24½, is registered 22,472.

NOTHING appeals so strongly to the best elements in a boy's nature as a horse.

THERE is nothing more attractive than horse raising to a man of refined tastes.

THE friends of Wayland W. are looking for him to enter his teens this year.

S. A. BROWNE, the well-known horse-breeder of Kalamazoo, Mich., is at Los Angeles. He will soon visit this city.

E. N. DURNY, Esq., was elected secretary of the Oregon State Breeders' and Speed Association last Saturday at Salem.

RACHEL, 2:26½, by Woodford Mambrino, dam Princess Ann, by Abdallah 1, is dead. She was the dam of Ramona, 2:19½.

THE Montana circuit has changed its rule of 10 per cent. of purse, pay or play. If a horse for cause can't start he gets a rebate of 5 per cent.

MONROE SALISBURY says there are just three great youngsters that never made a mistake in their races: Direct, Margaret S. and Directum.

ORRIN A. HICKOK starts East about the first of May. He always leads the Californians on their journey to meet the champions on the circuit.

THE bookmakers will not be allowed to transact business at many of the leading race tracks in the United States during the trotting meetings.

STEVE H. CRANE, of Turlock, will have a string of trotters and pacers on the circuit this year. No better judge is to be found in the State than he.

J. CLARK is working a full brother to Katy S., 2:25, at the Fresno race track, and believes he will have no trouble getting him in the 2:30 list this fall.

THE light harness horses at the Bay District track have gone to other courses, for the hang-tails, with their "kindergartens of kids," have full possession of the place.

BLACK PILOT died February 24th near Eckley, Or., aged thirty years. He was raised by Moses Mansfield, Tolo, Jackson county, Oregon, and was a son of Vermont 322.

AT a meeting of the Thirty-seventh Agricultural District, which comprises the northern party of Santa Barbara county, it was decided to hold the next fair at Santa Maria.

THE Montana Legislature, failing to elect a United States Senator, the Governor has appointed Lee Mantle, who was for years secretary of the West Side Racing Association.

DON LOT, by Anteeo, 2:16½, dam Luella (dam of Myrtle, 2:19½), by Nutwood; second dam Ruth Ann, by Bell Alta, is now in Lee Shaner's string, and is a promising trotter.

ANTEEO stands for $1,000. His full brother, Conrad, stands for $50, and good judges say that the latter is a horse of elegant finish, fine size, excellent conformation and action.

H. HELLMAN will, in all likelihood, have charge of the trotters from the Agnew Stock Farm this year. Mr. Hellman drove Emma Temple in all her races two years ago.

THE trotters and pacers from Senator J. G. Fair's stock farm near Lakeville, Sonoma County, are to be sent over to the Petaluma track to be trained for the races next month.

THERE are more trotters and pacers in training in California at present than has ever been known before. Every owner is determined to have an entry or two in the dash races this fall.

MILLARD SANDERS arrived from the East a week ago last Wednesday. He has been busy ever since his arrival at Valensin's, and will have a number of good ones ready for the fall meeting.

JAMES DUSTIN has taken charge of the horses at the Santa Rosa Stock Farm. We expect Jim will be seen in front of many of the largest fields of horses this fall with the youngsters he will select there.

LILLY STANLEY, 2:17½, was the first really fast mare ever bred to Director, and as she was just as game as he in her races, the produce cannot help being fast. We would like to see her bred to Direct next year.

WM. FIELDWICK (St. Julien Bill) is going to San Jose with his string of trotters. He has had more applications from owners of colts than he had any idea he would. Merit, honesty and industry always make friends.

CLARENCE HILL has quite a string of promising youngsters at the Napa track. The "queen" of the lot is Myrtle Thorn, 2:35, but there are two others that are by the same sire, Grandissimo, which will be heard of this fall.

"BREED, feed and weed," is the motto of the successful breeder. Not every well-bred animal is good enough for breeding, and the best breeding and individual merit must be maintained with good feed, care and attention.

L. U. SHIPPEE has gelded nearly every yearling and two-year-old colt on his farm; he will send a big string to the Stockton track about the first of April in charge of James Thompson and Jos. L. Heston, the well-known trainers.

DAGHESTAN, 2:25½, is pronounced by horsemen to be the finest looking and one of the most promising stallions in Southern California. If nothing happens, this, "the most perfect son of his sire," will be inside the teens as a three-year-old.

A. B. RODMAN, of Lakeport, owns a stallion called Advocate. He is by Attorney, out of a Green's Bashaw mare. The yearlings by him are known as Judge, Prisoner, Executrix, Plaintiff, Defendant, Witness, Constable, Administratrix, Counsel and Testatrix.

CON. GRIFFIN has charge of a few of A. Spreckles' horses at the Bay District Track. Among them is Senator L., 2:29, and a Dexter Prince fully out of a mare by Priam. They are all looking well, and will be prepared for the races this fall.

H. D. BROWN, the well-known trainer and driver of trotting horses, has been engaged by A. B. Rodman, of Lakeport, to take charge of his string of trotters. Mr. Brown's services will be in active demand in the Switzerland of America.

CREOLE, 2:20, the handsome son of Prompter 2,305, will be seen on the Montana Circuit this year and T. C. Snider, his owner, will then take him to Portland and from there through the California Circuit. Mr. Snider will have a string of mighty good ones beside Creole also.

LILLY STANLEY, 2:17½, was purchased by Henry Pierce at the Napa sale last week for $2,100, as an addition to the harem of famous broodmares on the Santa Rosa Stock Farm. Shortly afterwards he made arrangements with Monroe Salisbury to breed her to Directum on shares.

DR. J. W. DAY, owner of the Patchen Stock Farm at Waterloo, N. Y., who has just returned from Europe, says there is a ready market in England, France, Germany and Italy for first-class trotting stock. The Doctor will send over two hundred head of colts in a few weeks.

ALMONT MEDIUM, 2:18½, by Happy Medium 400, dam Lady Chile by Almont 33, has been sent from Salem, Oregon, to Iowa, to make the season of 1893. Almont Medium was one of the best race horses seen on the circuit, and bred as he is, he should do a large business in the stud this year.

JAMES DWAIN has received at the Salinas race track from Supervisor Julius A. Trescony a fine two-year-old colt by Eugeneer, dam Lady Johnson by Carr's Mambrino. The colt is a promising one, and if nothing happens to him Julius expects to be in it with the best of them about fair time this fall.

J. D. HARRIS, son of N. R. Harris, of the Secret Service Department, has four very promising trotters at the Pleasanton track. Delmas, 2:24½, is the best one he has, and as he has had an unusually good preparation so far this year, there is no reason why he should not get a mark far below 2:20 this fall.

PETER F. SHIELDS has Director Jr. in Sacramento, and intends to stand him for the season. Director Jr. is by Director, 2:17, dam Brainer, by Echo, second dam thoroughbred. He is brother to Corrector, one of Mr. Salisbury's most promising stallions, and will be given an excellent opportunity in his new owner's hands.

DASHWOOD, 2:22, by Sentinel Wilkes (son of George Wilkes dam by Nutwood, 2:18½), was sold by C. L. Ingham, of Buffalo, N. Y., last week as private sale to Lake View Stock Farm for $10,000 cash. This is the highest price ever paid for an Erie-county horse. Dashwood is a five-year-old, and is expected to trot in 2:10 this season.

THE following "stud" card was observed by a traveler in San Luis Obispo Co.: "Prince Horse will stand at Cambria and Cayucos at the Heine ranch and any other place desired, $10 for the season, $5 for the single leap, $15 for insurance, $7.50 payable at first service; just as good as $10 at end of season. Pedigree—Descendant of the old Killpatrick Sam."

MESSRS. ROBINSON & PERKINS are busy with their young trotters at their track near Visalia. There are some youngsters by Iris (son of Eros, 2:29½), out of Bay Rose mares that will be seen on the circuit this fall. Richmond Chief, the "blue horse" that showed such phenomenal hursts of speed last year, has become steady, and will prove a formidable one for some of our fastest ones.

W. H. GRAVES has one of the best appointed stock farms in this State. It is located in the famous Sonoma valley. There are rows of box stalls, a splendid race track, paddocks and pasture fields. Frank Lowell has charge of the stock, and every one of the youngsters shows great care. Mr. Graves is a lover of horses and is remarkably well-posted on the history, races and pedigrees of the most famous trotters.

PETER BRANDOW has only two trotters at the Bay District track; one is called Prince Ira. He is a very fine-looking stallion by Dexter Prince, dam Luella, by Sultan, 2:24, second dam Ella Lewis, 2:27, and belongs to Ira Ramsdell. The other is also a bay stallion by Mambrino Wilkes, dam by Nephew. This one is a pure-gaited trotter, and, like his stable companion, will enter the 2:30 list at the first opportunity.

DIRECT will be given a lower record next year. He has paced quarters in twenty-seven seconds and halves in less than one minute in his work, while he was hardly fit to go a mile. The constant training and work he received has caused Mr. Salisbury to give the little fellow a good rest this year. Direct is as sound as he ever was, not a pimple is to be seen on his clean, hard limbs and after he gets in trim the two-minute mark will be in danger.

IN the breeding industry we should do the best we can right where we are. Finish up all things perfectly as we go along, and if we only appear to accomplish half as much as others, let it be well accomplished. The palm is generally given not to the man who does something no one else has ever done, but who does perfectly well what others seem to do in an unfinished manner. It is a difference in degree of perfection rather than in kind.

A BAY colt by Direct, out of a fast road mare, was dropped at the Creighton Stock Farm last week. The foal came a few nights before it was expected, and when found, about bedtime, it was in a state of collapse. Mr. Creighton took the little fellow into the kitchen and, placing him before a range, administered warm mare's milk and whisky. Mr. Creighton and his assistant sat up with him all night, and the next morning the little fellow was able to stand up and nurse.

DELMARCH, 2:11½, will probably be in the Dohle string, which will give him three for the free-for-all stallion races: Stamboul, 2:07½; Delmarch, 2:11½, and Axtell, 2:12. Mr. George Starr has had his hands full of correspondence, since his return from Philadelphia, which indicates that he is arranging for a long string of horses, to add to Miss Alice, 2:17½, who is one of the leaders. Last year there was a great desire to see a contest between her and Martha Wilkes, 2:08, as they were daughters of Alcantara and Aleyone, who were the sons of Alma Mater, by George Wilkes. Miss Alice was given a trial mile in 2:12½ last season, and is considered a real trotter.

THERE were only thirteen mares by Buccaneer 2,656 ever foaled. Of this number eight are producers: Grace, (dam of Creole 2:20); Roseleaf, (dam of Falrose, 2:19); Flight, (dam of Fleet, 2:19½, Sid Fleet, 2:26½); Flirt, (dam of Frou Frou, 2:25½); Ivy (dam of Hihibi 2:21½); Unnamed mare (dam of Monroe Prince 2:30); Titania, (dam of Santa Reta, 2:24½), Highland Lass, dam of Highland Lass (2), 2:30). Of this eight five are out of Flaxtail mares. This is quite a showing. Every Buccaneer that has been bred will appear as the dam of a performer.

A GENTLEMAN has just returned from Los Angeles. He visited the stock farm at Savannah Park and saw J. H. Outhwaite's horses, and reports all of his youngsters looking well. Mr. Outhwaite is building a number of box stalls at the half-mile track; the location and soil cannot be excelled for the purpose. At the Los Angeles track Walter Mahen and Chas. Durfee are very busy; the youngsters by McKinney and Gosper are very fine-looking and promising. Both books of these stallions contain the names of some of the best mares in Southern California.

THE Royal Agricultural Society of England has wisely proposed to give no prizes to foals that have been docked, and when England gives up the fad our New York dudes will abandon it as an English craze. An English writer, explaining to tenant farmers the loss they sustain in docking their foals, says: Having made inquiries of the great London dealers about high-class carriage horses, I find they will not buy them if docked, as they are made unsalable thereby. It is also a rule made by army remount purchasers that no horses are taken which have been docked.

THE last issue of Clark's Horse Review, a Chicago authority in turf matters, contained the finding of the Pacific Board of Appeals in relation to Stockton time performances. This comment was appended: "This investigation and its satisfactory ending is a matter congratulatory to both the National Trotting Association that was sufficiently fearless of consequences and obedient to a conservative public sentiment to order an official review of the facts, and to the Stockton Association, the integrity of which was thoroughly vindicated by the report of the District Board."

WOODWARD & SHANKLIN sold forty head of trotting stock at auction at Lexington, Ky., on the 6th inst., for $20,270. The attendance was good and the prices realized were in keeping with the stock offered. Only four horses brought $1,000 or over. They are as follows: Yerlinda B., 2:20, gr m, 7, by Orin, dam by Mambrino; Columbus, E. D. Pendleton, Norfolk, Va., $2,500. Martha H., 2:23½, h m, 4, by Gambetta Wilkes, dam by Kimbrogh's Abdallah; Frank Helfield, Duhois, Pa., $1,000; Mimic, 2:21, h s, 9, by Messenger Chief, dam by Brown Chief; Orr & Cran, Laporte, Ind., $4,150; Aoleta, 2:29½, h m, 6, by Abdallah-Mambrino; Alex. Harthill, Jr., Louisville, Ky., $2,350.

A KENTUCKY horse-owner suggests the following as regards handicapping trotters: "The better way to handicap with records is to allow them to enter in purse races in the same way that has been customary. Then, if a horse trots faster than the class in which he is entered before that particular race is off it shall be optional with the owner to start him in a purse race of the same size with horses of the same class of his new performance, or to refund to the owner the entrance money." Handicapping trotters is a subject now attracting considerable attention in the West, and the prevailing opinion is that no horse should be allowed to start in a slower class than his own record.

LEE SHANER has a string of sixteen very promising trotters and pacers at the Oakland track. He received an addition of two very good ones from Yreka the other day; one is by Antevolo and the other is the gray mare Georgie Woodthorpe, 2:24, by Altamont. This mare is a long, low-sized, heavy-muscled, plain-looking mare, with feet and legs like iron. She will get a lower record this year. Mr. Shaner has had great patience in waiting for the thoroughbreds to forsake the Oakland course so that he could work his horses properly, and Mr. Wright says that inside of two weeks every stall will be ready for the reception of trotters, and he will prepare the track to suit them.

THE trotting-horse industry has weathered in good shape, an era of dangerous inflation, and is now passing safely through a period of liquidation. Losses have been squarely met, values are once more on a conservative and sound basis, and the industry is in a healthier condition than ever. At no time in the past ten years has the purchaser or patron of public stallions had a better opportunity than the present in which to buy or to breed with more certainty of profit. As in all cases of liquidation, the tendency has been toward an extreme of low prices, so that with the end of the spring sales a very material stiffening of values may be looked for all along the line, and the "tops" will command more money than ever.

BUDD DOBLE, while here this week, leased from B. G. Cox a large part of Ware Park for one year from March 1st, says a Terre Haute (Ind.) dispatch. He will have the fine, large, modern barn with twenty stalls opening into the paddocks and sixty acres of land, which will include pasture lots and shady groves. It is just a mile from the Terre Haute race track and good road. Mr. Dohle will keep there his own colts and mares, such horses as may need to be turned out and the broodmares to be sent here this season, of which there will be ten for Stamboul and from six to ten in all for Lee Russell, 2:18½; Axel, 2:27½, and Drexell. Delmarch, 2:11½, will probably be in the Dohle string, which will give him three for the free-for-all stallion race, as follows: Stamboul, 2:07½; Delmarch, 2:11½, and Axtell, 2:12, the latter the $105,000 beauty.

ORRIN A. HICKOK has had to leave the Bay District track on account of the large number of thoroughbreds arriving every day, and the work being done on the track to make it suitable for the "children of the winds." Mr. Hickok is now at the Souther Farm, and will remain there until the first of May, at which time he will leave for the East. The horses he has at work are Angeline, 2:18½, by Wilkes Boy, dam Molly, by Kentucky Clay 194; Hulda, 2:14½, by Guy Wilkes, dam Jenny, by Bull Pup; a brown mare belonging to Ariel Lathrop called Alejandra, by Dexter Prince; Adonis, 2:11½, by Sidney, dam Venus; Dexter Thorne, 2:25½, by Dexter Prince; Antares, a very promising Anteeo stallion, and Charley C., 2:18½, Jesse Potter's handsome Piedmont stallion. There will be eight or nine Palo Alto youngsters added to complete Mr. Hickok's string.

The Saddle.

A QUARTER of a million dollars will be put in a new track at Cleveland this year.

MISS ANNA, the chestnut mare, by Bank Roll, dam Belle, by Firetail (son of Norfolk), has been mated with imp. Merriwa.

THE famous race mare Modesty, by War Dance—Ballet, the property of Ed. Corrigan, dropped a fine bay colt to Longfellow on March 2.

MR. HARPER says that his fine old stallion Longfellow will serve a few mares at $2,500 this season, and they must be winners or dams of winners.

FOXHALL KEENE has been lucky in his purchase of English mares. Nineteen out of twenty-three are in foal to the pick of English stallions.

MARCUS DALY's string is now on its way to New York from Montana. The horses are to be stable at Monmouth and worked on the old track.

THE new racing rules have been decided upon by the committee appointed by the Board of Control and will be reported to the board at its next meeting.

W. M. MURRY, of Sacramento, has engaged ten stalls for his flyers during the coming Blood Horse meeting. Most of the string is composed of two-year-olds.

SALLIE McCLELLAND, by Hindoo, dam Red and Blue, Byron McClelland's good race mare, has been sent to the Nantura Stud to be bred to Longfellow.

ALL reports to the contrary notwithstanding, the crack jockeys, John and Charley Weher, have not engaged to ride for any particular owner during the coming racing season.

L. & G. STRAUS, of Lexington, Ky., has sold to Thomas Morgan, of Philadelphia, the chestnut stallion Bannerette, 6, by King Ban, dam Lida Gaines, by War Dance; price $1,000.

FRED GERHARD is said to have purchased the Locust Farm at Monmouth from the Countess d'Agreda. He will look after the training of his horses more closely this spring and summer.

FELLOWCHARM, Major Ban and Lodowic will be trained this season for L. C. Shippee, of Stockton, and great things can be expected of Lodowic, at any rate, if he is properly prepared for the fray.

THE Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association has leased "The Villa" stable ground, and will erect thereon a number of stables to accommodate the large number of horses that will "come to the races."

AT Cumberland Park the horses are now being trained for the Memphis and Nashville meetings. Yo Tambien was out at West Side Park for the first time last week. She is now in first-class condition.

MONEY is being lost daily at the Ivy City track, and it is likely to be closed in a few days. It will make no difference, however, if the racing is continued; the meeting at Bennings will open as usual in April.

THE late Major B. W. Woodruff, who died in Chicago last week of pneumonia, was fifty-eight years of age at the time of his death. He passed away at the residence of his friend, Frank Root, on Paulina street.

THE great "Iris filly," belonging to Simeon G. Reed, has been given a name at last—Peril. We suppose the various three-year-old stakes in which she is engaged, are, in peril if she comes to the post fit and well.

SEMPER IDEM, by Glen Athol, the dam of Longstreet, dropped a bay filly by Longfellow about two weeks ago. This little stranger is a full brother to Longstreet. Semper Idem has been bred back to Longfellow.

MONITOR, George Lorrillard's game old gelding by imp. Glenelg—Minx, died last week at the farm of Countess d'Agreda, formerly Mrs. Lorrillard, aged seventeen years. He won forty-two races out of 117 starts.

MR. J. B. FERGUSON will officiate as clerk of the scales of the Washington Park Club's meeting. It is very evident that the association fully intends to have the best available men to represent them in official capacities during their star meeting.—Daily Spirit.

ED CORRIGAN is having a streak of bad luck. On Saturday an indictment was found against him as a member of the Chicago Racing Association for keeping a gambling house at Hawthorne Park, and then came the decision against him in the Huron case.

DAN DENNISON, the veteran horseman, has a string of ten horses in training at Sacramento. In the string are Grandee and Tigress, and we understand the former has got rid of the lameness that kept him off the track during the greater part of the last Blood Horse meeting.

MR. ED. CORRIGAN was in Lexington last Sunday on his way to Washington City. He has signed Jockey Robert Hoggett for the coming season, who has bound himself to ride at 105 pounds. "Monk" Overton will remain with Mr. Corrigan and will ride his stake horses.

WE understand the entire lot of horses belonging to the late Robert E. Byhee, of Oregon, will be disposed of at auction at the Bay District track during the second week of the Blood Horse meeting. Misty Morn and Rosebud should bring large sums, as will a two-year-old sister to Misty Morn.

JOCKEY ANDREW PERKINSON purchased at the Shippee sale last fall the chestnut colt Progression, now three years old, for $260. Since that time Perkinson has won seven races out of nine starts with the colt, who is by Wildidle, dam Ernestine, by Bertram. It is not always the high-priced horse that proves the best.

WHEN Ha'penny fell and broke a leg at the Brooklyn meeting last fall David Gideon gave the horse to Dr. Shepard. The latter put the animal under the influence of ether and set the fracture. The leg was encased in plaster of paris. Now comes the news that the bone knit well and that Ha'penny is running around the stable at Lexington.

SUPERINTENDENT BELLAIRS, of the St. Louis Fair Association, says the best-looking race horse he ever saw at St. Louis, harrng El Rio Rey, is St. Augustine, the four-year-old brother to Firenze, by imp. Glenelg—Florida, owned by Dr. Crowley, of the Missouri metropolis. He is pretty well entered in stakes.

LONGFISH, who won the St. Louis Derby in 1889, has been purchased by Mr. Schaefer of Galatin, Tenn., for $6,500, and will be retired to the stud. Longfish has been wintering at the St. Louis Fair Grounds. Mr. Schaefer has also purchased Elmer and Freda, two strapping mares, which he will use for brood purposes.

IT is rumored that the Elkwood Park Racing Association will hold a meeting next summer and probably race on alternate days with Monmouth, from which it is not far distant. This property is said to be held by moneyed men, of whom Philip Daly is one of the principals. A large grand stand is being talked of, and will probably be commenced at once.

OF all the flyers in the Williams string Fidelia seems to be the pick of the local horsemen that have seen the members of that string. The bay daughter of Flood and imp. Flirt is both rangy and racy-looking, and has thus far shown as much speed as any of the Coast American Derby candidates. Picton has his admirers, though, who think he is of proper Derby timbre.

THE bay colt Falstaff, three years old, by imp. Deceiver—Falsino, died at the East St. Louis track recently of lung fever. The colt was in charge of Jerry Gough, and was being prepared for the coming season's campaign. Falstaff was a fair two-year-old. Out of twenty-two starts he succeeded in earning brackets six times. He was well thought of as an American Derby candidate.

JAMES WILSON, one of Australia's most celebrated gentlemen steeplechase riders, gave us a pleasant call this week, he having arrived a short time ago from the land of the Kangaroo. Mr. Wilson will, in all probability, engage to ride "over the sticks" for some prominent owner of steeplechasers in the East. He can train as well as he can ride, and will doubtless have no trouble in his dangerous line.

THE scratching of Sir Francis for the Volunteer and the Bowling Brook Handicaps, the only far Eastern events in which he was entered, confirms the rumor that he will be sent to Chicago to run for the rich American Derby. His quoted price for that event is 10 to 1, and as he may be looked upon as a sure starter, this price seems quite a fair one. He is a colt of the improving kind, and will be up with the leaders at the finish.

THE Louisville Jockey Club held a meeting March 6th at the offices of the club in the Courier-Journal building. The condition of affairs was found to be very satisfactory in every respect. The old officers were re-elected as follows: M. Lewis Clark, President; D. Swigert, First Vice-President; M. H. Smith, Second Vice-President; St. John Boyle, Third Vice-President; Jos. Swigert, Secretary; C. F. Price, Assistant Secretary.

OLD race-goers declare that there was never a more hare-faced rob perpetrated than when Mischief secured first money at Oakland last Saturday. This horse opened at 8 to 1, and notwithstanding he was outclassed by every horse in the race by a large majority, a constant stream of money went in on Mischief, the odds at the close being 3 to 5. Given four lengths the best of the start, a few aver that even then Flora E. was the winner by a head.

A BIG bet on Ramapo, the Annie F. colt, was hooked in Chicago last week. It was $10,000 to $500, made in the name of Bud Renaud, but Mr. Gideon is said to have half the wager. Frank Van Ness got $5,000 to $50 against Fitzsimmons, who, while he was not a brilliant two-year-old, is a wonderfully good-looking colt, and very probably one of the improving sort. Another bet of $5,500 to $55 was also booked about Fitzsimmons, while $2,000 to $200 was taken about Sir Francis.

TRAINER DAVIS, of the Ocean View Stable, has his charges in grand shape for campaigning. "I dread the trip across the Rockies," said he, "and only wish Wildwood could be landed in Brooklyn as good as he is to-day." Joe Cotton is looking and feeling good, and in Davis' hands will be even a better horse than he was last season. A three-year-old John A. filly out of Miss Flush, by Kyrle Daly, is small, but oh my but she's racy-looking. There is in this stable, also, a $50 gelding by Wildidle that is shaping up well, and looks like he would make a fine sprinter.

THE Ocean View Stable of "Pedigree" Charles Brown, in charge of Trainer Davis, will leave for Brooklyn on or about April 1st, going the southern route and stopping off at Memphis, Tenn., in all probability. If Wildwood lands in the City of Churches in as good shape as he is in at present it will take a rare good one to make the big brown colt stretch his neck, but it is a long journey to New York and there are great climatic changes to be experienced, and Trainer Davis dreads the trip. Joe Cotton is looking better than he ever did, and the Prince of Norfolk—Eda two-year-old colt is a substantial fellow.

FITZROY SOMERSET, Duke of Beaufort, the most representative sporting man of Great Britain, will race his horses at Washington Park this summer. This information came to Secretary Brewster last Tuesday straight from the Duke of Beaufort, who cabled that on or about April 15th he would ship two or three thoroughbreds from Liverpool direct to Chicago. As the Duke of Beaufort has only three stake entries at Washington Park, it is reasonable to suppose that his shipment will consist of two or all of his nominations to the American Derby. These are: Son of a Gun, a bay colt, by Petronel—Ithola; Strathrose, a brown colt, by Highland Chief—Queen of Roses; St. Jude, bay colt, by St. Simon—Palmula.

MR. CHARLES F. PRICE, the efficient secretary of the Louisville Jockey Club, is convalescent from a few weeks' illness. Mr. Price is a strong illustration of the value of a wide-awake secretary to a racing association. Since his appointment he has labored early and late for the upbuilding of the Louisville Jockey Club, and the result of his intelligent efforts may be seen in the fact that the coming spring meeting at Louisville promises to be the best in years, if not the best in the history of the association. Mr. Price has not sat down and waited for things to come to him, but has gone out after them and he generally got what he went after.—Live Stock Record, Lexington, Ky.

KING THOMAS, the $40,000 brother to Ban Fox and King Fox, will be bred to eighteen or nineteen mares at San Simeon ranch this season, and has been retired from the turf. Ban Fox got hut two foals (Brown Fox and Montana) before the accident occurred which resulted in his death, and both were winners, so that King Thomas may prove a great sire. Del Mar, the good race horse by Somnus out of Maid of the Hills, by Yattendon, has been retired to the stud also.

E. F. FALLON, of Hollister, Cal., has sold to San Francisco parties, the bay mare Abbie F., foaled 1888, by Judge McKinstry (sire of Esperanza), dam Lottie L., by Wildidle; second dam Vixen (dam of Skipaway and Susie Williamson), by Williamson's Belmont; third dam Silver Cup, by American Boy, Jr.; fourth dam Liz. Givens (dam of Langford and Bonnie Bell), by imp. Langford, and on to the thirteenth dam. Abbie F. will, it is understood, be bred to imp. Loyalist.

A MEETING of the members of the Kern Driving Club was held last evening at the office of C. R. Thurlow, at which a number of names were presented for membership and considerable business was transacted. The Secretary was instructed to correspond with the Secretary of the Sacramento Jockey Club in relation to holding a spring running meeting at Bakersfield. A spring meeting would be a great card and attract a large attendance of horses and sporting men from all parts of the State. The club starts off under very high auspices, and as the officers are possessed of a thorough knowledge of turf affairs, the club is destined to become an important factor in the racing affairs of the State.—Kern Californian.

W. L. WHITMORE, of Mayview, Wash., recently returned from La Grande, Or., where he purchased six of the Ladd thoroughbred mares. Five are by Richard III, and one by Vanderhill. Richard III is by Crichton, son of imp. Glencoe. Crichton's dam, by Wagner; second dam Cherry Elliott, by Sumpter, son of Sir Archy. Richard III's dam, Irene Harding, the great race mare, by Jack Malone; second dam Macaria, by Avalanche; third dam Eureka, by imp. Glencoe. Mr. Whitmore is going into the business of breeding thoroughbreds on a large scale, and he has already reared some winners by his good horse Coloma, son of Joe Hooker and Callie Smart.

THE anti-winter racing bill which was passed by the New Jersey Legislature on March 11th aroused the ire of the Guttenburg people particularly. They declare that they will now begin a war on William J. Thompson and the race tracks governed by the Board of Control in New Jersey as a retaliatory measure. Racing will be continued until December 1st, and a clash of dates with Monmouth Park, Elizabeth and Linden is expected. The new track will be built within a mile of Thompson's track at Gloucester. An effort will also be made to move the indictment now pending against Thompson in the Camden County Court. Such was the edict the Guttenburg managers declared would be the result of the anti-winter racing bill.

THE best for a mare in foal is oats, bran, some corn, a little oil cake, carrots, corn fodder, and good hay in small quantities. Concentrated food is best where there is a tendency to relaxation of the bowels. A large quantity of feed given at any time, in connection with vigorous exercise, is liable to bring a miscarriage; oats or flax straw in large quantities may produce diarrhoea, and abortion may follow. Regular exercise and good, nourishing food in moderate quantities is always the sure road to success with a mare in foal. After the foal is up and around it should have a free operation of the bowels. If it should not you will notice that it is uneasy; it will switch its tail, draw up at the flanks, breathe short, and stare more or less. It is time now to prepare an injection of slippery-elm water, flaxseed water, or even castile soap suds, and inject it into the bowels until the big bowels are emptied; to be repeated if found necessary. But don't resort to physic unless you are compelled to. Better depend on laxative food for the dam than to derange the stomach of the little fellow by medicines that irritate.

THE Coney Island Jockey Club has again gained a point in its litigation with the horse-owner, Edward Corrigan, by a decision handed down on the 6th inst. by the general term of the Superior Court. After Corrigan had succeeded in his fight to have his horse, Huron, run in the Futurity of 1891, and the horse came in second in that race, Mr. Corrigan was unable to collect the second money. He then brought suit to recover the money, and in that action also sought to have rescinded and revoked the action of the Board of Control of the Racing Association, excluding him from entering any of his horses on any of the tracks which they controlled, and that he be allowed the same privileges that are accorded to other persons in good standing. The Jockey Club interposed a demurrer to the complaint at the special term of court, but that demurrer was overruled on the ground that the complaint presented a legal cause of action, namely, to recover the second money in the Futurity of 1891. From this decision the club appealed to the general term of the Superior Court, which now reverses the action of the lower court, and grants a judgment for the club on the demurrer with costs. This confirms the right of the jockey clubs to accept or decline entries.

WASHINGTON Park Club's racing management has decided upon a step that must reduce the changes of crooked work during this year's meeting to the minimum. It will have a board of stewards, not in name only, but a trio of expert horsemen, who, in connection with the two official judges, will form a board of control. These five men will decide questions of suspicious racing and riding and will have absolute charge in all matters pertaining to the sport that require judicial investigation. This is a splendid and necessary move. It will relieve the judges of much work that they can not do satisfactorily and should not be called upon to do at all. With such a provision to guard the interests of its patrons, the Washington Park Club can safely promise square dealing to all, and the public is certain of extending its moral and financial support. That the proper timbre for the board of stewards will be selected is proved by the acceptance of an offer to join it by W. S. Barnes, of Lexington, Ky. Secretary Brewster last week extended "the Apollo on the turf" an invitation to become one of the club's officials, and the famous turfman at once decided to accept. The secretary intimated that no refusal would be entertained, and properly paid a high compliment to the honesty and efficiency of Mr. Barnes. The latter will also be presiding judge at Latonia, and is fearless in the stand. He achieved great distinction and much success during his active career on the turf, and now owns the splendid Melbourne stud, where Jim Gore and fifty highly bred mares are quartered.

Attractive Innovations.

The novel programme of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association for their spring and fall meetings, which was made public a few weeks ago, has occasioned more comment among writers on turf topics, and horsemen generally, than anything that has appeared for years.

Our live organization is the first one to introduce reforms at trotting meetings, and the success attending our efforts in the past has caused the officers of all similar organizations to wait patiently to see what we shall do and what the result of our annual changes will be.

There are large stakes and purses given in the great Eastern cities on the famous tracks there that will attract the best of our California horses, but still we have no doubts regarding the outcome of our home meetings, for from almost every little town in the State, wherever a race track is made, reports are received that there are more promising horses in training this year than ever and nearly every good one is going to appear at the Breeders' meeting to contest in the spring races, entries for which will close April 1st.

There are several other reforms to be adopted that will also help to popularize trotting races as soon as we can get the people interested. The moving of the distance flag nearer the wire; the placing of a number of $2 Paris mutuel boxes instead of the single five-dollar ones in use; the numbering of horses and the costuming of the drivers so that they can be easily distinguished from each other, are under consideration.

The burning necessity of the trotting turf just at present is a much more liberal use of the ecraseur—the really good individuals will escape it, and it will weed out the defective ones, that can well be spared—and anything that will encourage this is worthy the attention of all breeders.

The lack of first-class geldings as roadsters is on the increase in California to-day, and the introduction of stakes for stylish, well-formed, pure-gaited, good-sized roadsters will also meet with favor. Owners of stallions and broodmares must sooner or later come to realize that every horseman who loves to drive a horse for pleasure does not expect to get a track horse, but they do want the easiest-driving, most stylish and best-trained roadster that has good trotting action, a good disposition, size and speed.

Good Rules Recommended.

The meeting held in New York City last Wednesday by delegates from the National and American Trotting Associations and the American Trotting Register Association had for its object the adjustment of the record performances, so that hereafter there will be no misunderstanding regarding the interpretation of the rules.

garding the time records was not carried out, claim that the wording of that law was such as to be easily misinterpreted by the majority of its readers. The elating of the rules of the different organizations last fall has had a most demoralizing effect upon the trotting-horse industry, and the strength of these organizations has been weakened by its enforcement.

Performances against time must be made at regular meetings of some society in one of the national associations, conducted by regular judges and timers and in accordance with the rules of the national organization to which the member belongs. No horse shall be allowed to start against time pending a heat or a trial by another animal.

No performance against time shall be made earlier than 10 A. M., and no performance against time shall be made at a postponed or continued meeting unless such postponement or continuance is made in accordance with the rules of the National or American Trotting Association.

A regular meeting means a meeting advertised in at least one newspaper not less than a week before the meeting, at which meeting there shall be no less than two regular events, or matches against time shall not be allowed. Entries for performances against time must be made with the secretary not later than 7 P. M. on the day before, and must appear in the printed programme of the day.

Match races shall be regarded as performances against time, and the time made in such races shall be similarly treated and designated.

Pending the investigation of a reported record by either the National or American Trotting Association the reported record shall operate as a bar until the matter is adjusted.

It was decided that the distance limit beyond which a horse is declared out of the race he made fifty yards for races in which not more than eight horses start and seventy-five yards for larger fields. The former distance was 100 and 150 yards respectively.

It was decided that licenses be granted drivers, and that drivers must have a license to go in a race; and that races consist of best two in three heats instead of three in five. After a discussion of various other matters the conference adjourned to meet in Chicago on April 4th.

New Racing Rules.

Following is a synopsis of the new rules adopted by the American Turf Congress:

Horses must be ridden out for second or third place under the same rules that govern first place; no one interested in the result of a race can act in any official capacity; no horse's name shall be changed after he once runs under a certain name; owners and horses shall be suspended for non-payment of forfeits; no person but the rider shall be permitted to strike a horse; abusive language by a starter or assistant prohibited; all jockeys must obtain a license from the Turf Congress, through the License Committee; jockeys will not be permitted to have valets; jockeys will not be allowed to bet, except on horses that they are riding; jockeys owning in whole or in part a race horse in training will not be permitted to ride horses other than their own; a person shall be ruled off who uses any injection of drugs or electrical, mechanical or other appliance other than the whip and spur for the purpose of stimulating the endurance or speed of a horse in a race; bets shall not be declared off because a horse that finished first carried more or a horse that ran unplaced carried less than its officially announced weight; when two or more horses, owned wholly or in part by the same person or persons, start in a race they shall be coupled and sold as one horse or entry in all pools, and when two or more horses so coupled are placed bets on them shall be paid as if the best-placed one only had run, and the others coupled with him shall be treated as if they had not started, and horses finishing next after them shall be placed by the judges and the bets paid accordingly.

It is to be regretted that our local racing association is not a member of this body, so that all these most excellent rules would be religiously enforced at San Francisco meetings. Some of these, however, are a part of the Blood Horse Association's regulations, we are happy to state. The most important of the regulations are the ones prohibiting any one interested in the result of a race from acting in any official position, suspension of owners for non-payment of their forfeits, the licensing of jockeys and prohibiting them from betting except on the horse they are riding. The ruling off of any person who uses any injection of drugs, or electrical, mechanical or other appliance other than whip and spur for the purpose of urging a horse to win is a most humane measure, and one that should have been enforced long ago. In short, the rules are sensible and good throughout, and will meet with the commendation of every one that has the welfare of the thoroughbred racer at heart.

The Blood Horse Stake Races.

At the coming meeting of the Blood Horse Association four stakes will be contended for—the Pacific Derby, Tidal Stakes, California and Racine Stakes, and greater interest is felt in these events than has been manifested in a number of years. The Derby is, as the name implies, a mile and a half contest for three-year-olds, the Tidal Stakes a mile and a quarter run, the California half a mile, for two-year-olds, and the Racine three-quarters of a mile for two-year-olds also. The Derby has a large number of entries this year, and will be worth to the winner at least $2,100. No less than twenty-one horses are eligible to start at this time, and as some of them are unknown to fame as winners, but well thought-of by their owners and trainers, the event is an unusually attractive one. We hardly expect to see the American Derby colts of Messrs. Holly and Fair start in the Pacific Derby, but the following are likely to come to the post: Cadmus Picton, Conde, Pasha, Floodmore, Hermitage, Alto Mio, Sir Reel, Duke Stevens, Ledalia, Alliance, Linville, Hugo and Grandee. If this field should face Starter Ferguson it would indeed be hard to pick a winner. Pasha, Floodmore, Linville, Grandee and Hago are "unknown quantities," while Alliance and Ledalia performed excellently as two-year-olds. Conde has shown himself to be a wonderfully speedy fellow thus far this season, Duke Stevens was fast last year, while Alto Mio and Sir Reel are said to have vastly improved in the past few months. This Grandee in the Pacific Derby is a "green" colt by Hidalgo-Veracity, and is not to be confounded with the game gray colt of that name. Matt Storn's colt, Hermitage, was a splendid two-year-old, and if started will be in the hunt. Last season he defeated Charmion at Denver. Alliance and Ledalia has shown their liking for the longer distances, and so, under the circumstances, the Derby of 1893 is invested with no end of interest. Alliance has had a good rest, is shaping up well, and the one that beats him local horsemen will expect to get the winner's end of the stake. That Mr. Williams will start Cadmus and the "maiden," Picton, we have little doubt, and their appearance will be awaited with great interest.

There are twenty-two in the Tidal Stakes, Floodmore and Gift not being in this event. However, Comrade, by Tyrant; Vendome, by Duke of Norfolk, and Unalaska, by Alta, not entered in the Derby, are in the Tidal. Therefore there should be as much trouble experienced in picking a winner here as in the Derby.

There will be a sensational race for the California Stakes, in which there are at present eligible to start some fifteen youngsters. From San Jose come reports of the great speed of Mr. Macdonough's bay filly Glide, by imp. Cyrus—imp. Getaway, who may not, however, be started here. Mr. Williams' bay filly Flirtation, a sister of the mighty Flambeau, is said to be a beauty, and it is hinted that she is an excellent representative of the Flirt family. Prince, in the Palo Alto stable, is a good-looker and as he is by imp. Cyrus from the dam of Princess, that he is likely to be a hard one to beat goes without saying. Mutineer, in the Burns & Waterhouse stable, is a racy-looking fellow, as is the Cheviot-Phoebe Anderson colt, Thornhill. From Sacramento comes good reports of J. H. Miller's colt, Jim Lee, by John Happy, while Chevy Hock and the Duke of Norfolk-Neilson colt are not likely to be overlooked.

Normandie, Claire, Quit and Sallie Miller, that are entered in the California Stakes, are not in the Racine, but Pricelle (by imp. Cyrus—Precious), Carmel, by Duke of Norfolk, and a brown Hidalgo colt take their places, and will make matters most interesting. As all are untried in races except Claire, it would be a hard task to pick the winner, but that they are a very superior band of youngsters, taken all in all, is certain.

Following were the winners of the various stakes mentioned, together with the placed horses and time made since they were inaugurated:

WINNERS OF PACIFIC DERBY—1 1/2 MILES.

Table with 5 columns: Y'R, NAME OF WINNER, SIRE OF WINNER, SECOND HORSE, TIME. Rows include 1888 Surinam, 1889 The Czar, 1890 Flambeau, 1891 Rinfax, 1892 Janus.

The winners of the Pacific Derby have been singularly unfortunate. Surinam broke down at the East after winning one good race in 1888, when he was but three years of age. The Czar, a grand colt, died on the way to Chicago when a three-year-old; Flambeau, another crack-erjack, never faced the starter as a four-year-old; Rinfax was a good three-year-old, but a mammoth disappointment as a four-year-old; while Janus, the winner of 1892, won only the Pacific Derby last season out of eleven starts. Most of the Pacific Derby horses have, however, been high-class enough to win anywhere.

WINNERS OF TIDAL STAKES—1/4 MILES.

Table with 5 columns: Y'R, NAME OF WINNER, SIRE OF WINNER, SECOND HORSE, TIME. Rows include 1888 Surinam, 1889 The Czar, 1890 Flambeau, 1891 Rinfax, 1892 Elmwood.

It will be observed that the winners of the Derby in 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1891 also proved successful in the Tidal during the same years, but the placed horses were different except in 1890, when Flambeau and Racine had all the three-year-olds stakes in this section at their mercy.

WINNERS OF CALIFORNIA STAKE—1/2 MILE.

Table with 5 columns: Y'R, NAME OF WINNER, SIRE OF WINNER, SECOND HORSE, TIME. Rows include 1879 Tillie C., 1880 Frank Rhoads, 1881 Anita, 1882 Gano, 1883 Prince of Norfolk, 1884 Estill, 1885 Billow, 1886 Graciosa, 1887 Pocatello, 1888 Trade Mark's, 1889 Racine, 1890 Fairy, 1891 Toro, 1892 Castro.

In 1879 the weights in the California Stakes were 86 pounds for colts, 83 pounds for fillies; in 1880 they were raised to 100 pounds for colts, 97 for fillies. In 1883 the weights were raised to 110 pounds for colts, 107 for fillies.

* In this race Don Jose jumped the track about thirty yards from the wire, when leading, killing Sidney Marsh, a spectator.

The Norfolks have cut a wonderful figure in the California Stakes. In 1883 a son and daughter of Norfolk ran first and second; in 1884 sons of Mr. Winters' great horse were one-two; in 1885 a daughter of Norfolk ran second; in 1886, Robson, from a Norfolk mare, ran into the place; in 1891 Toro, a grandson of Norfolk, won, and in 1892 Sir Reel, a grandson, was second. The Kyrle Dalys are well represented, too, as Trade Mark won the stake in 1888 and in 1892 Castro, a grandson, proved a victor. Imp. Fairy Rose is the only mare that has thrown two winners of the event (Racine and Fairy), but had not Don Jose jumped the fence Countess Zeika would have produced two winners, as Pocatello was a winner of the California Stakes of 1887.

WINNERS OF THE CONNER, GANO, SO-SO AND RACINE STAKES, THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILE.

Table with 5 columns: YEAR, NAME OF WINNER, SIRE OF WINNER, SECOND HORSE, TIME. Rows include 1879 Patsy Duffy, 1880 Jim Brown, 1881 Duchoe of Norfolk, 1882 Gano, 1883 Callie Smart, 1884 Alta, 1885 Ed Corrigan, 1886 Napa, 1887 Sobrante, 1888 So-So, 1889 Racine, 1890 Homer, 1891 Gentella, 1892 Castro.

* Changed to Gano Stake on account of Conner's best two-year-old time being beaten. † Dead heat with Porter Ashe, but Ed Corrigan won run-off in above time. ‡ Sonoma finished first, but disqualified for a foul. Named So-So Stakes.

 Changed to Racine Stakes on account of So-So's time being beaten.

Gano, Racine and Castro, it will be seen from the above, were the only youngsters that showed "form" enough to win both of the rich two-year-old events of the spring. A number of excellent stakes have been inaugurated by the Blood Horse Association in years ago, but the only spring stakes that have withstood the test are the ones tabulated above. We are informed that there will be a number of liberal stakes gotten up, to be in running order by the next spring, and the association will doubtless see the feasibility of falling into line in the work of doing away with forfeits and bookkeeping by having the conditions of the new stakes read: "$10 to accompany nomination, $40 additional to start," or something of that kind.

The Assembly last Wednesday passed the Senate bill making a ticket of admission to racetrack or other place of amusement a contract, and all that now remains to make the bill a law is for it to receive the signature of Governor Markham. This measure was drafted by a well-known newspaper man of this city, who last fall was ruled off by the Blood Horse Association for criticizing the riding of Jockey Joseph Narvaez, among other matters.

THE attention of all who intend to have trotters, pacers or thoroughbreds race this year is called to the fact that entries to most of the important meetings will close April 1st. By referring to our advertising columns all information can be had. Last year there were many horse-owners who regretted their lack of forethought in not having this most important thing attended to.

The American Stud Book.

The sixth volume of this important and invaluable adjunct to the turf and breeding interest of America is delayed in consequence of the failure of a large number of breeders to report their stock. The stringent rules adopted by the Board of Control, which follow, seem to be ignored. They read:

BOARD OF CONTROL OF THE MONMOUTH PARK ASSOCIATION, CONEY ISLAND JOCKEY CLUB, BROOKLYN JOCKEY CLUB, NEW YORK JOCKEY CLUB. Offices, Fifth Avenue, cor. Twenty-second street, New York, Dec. 23, 1892.

S. D. BRUCE, P. O. Box 362, New York City.

At a meeting of the Board of Control, held this day, the following was adopted:

The office of Bruce's American Stud Book is designated by the Board of Control as the registry office for the time being.

The registry office is established for the purpose of identification of all race horses, whether foaled in the United States or foreign bred, and the certification of their pedigrees.

The registration shall comprise the name, if any, the color and marks, if any, whether a horse, mare or gelding, and the owners, with description of sire and dam as registered or otherwise made public.

If the dam was covered by more than one stallion, the names or description in full must be stated.

Horses foaled in the United States must be registered by July 15th of each year.

Foreign bred horses must be registered within a reasonable time after their arrival in conformity with Article 21.

No horses will hereafter be allowed to start in any race unless duly registered.

The registration fee shall be one dollar for each animal.

Owners desiring to register in conformity with the above resolution can address their registrations to the office of Bruce's American Stud Book, Times Building, Park Row, New York City.

W. S. YOSBURGH, Secretary.

In order to fully understand the proper mode of reporting, all breeders should report the foals of the years not reported, with barren mares, slipped foals and to what stallion the mares were bred in 1892, to anticipate the foals of 1893.

The foals of 1893 should be reported as soon as dropped that as many as possible can appear in the sixth volume, and the stallion to which the mare is bred correctly stated.

This done at once the work can be gotten out very soon. In reporting foals, give date of foaling, sex, color and marks on each one, with name, if any, and the breeder and owner's name of the mare. Many breeders who have sold yearlings at auction in the past few years have not reported them for registration, notwithstanding our personal appeal in writing. All such are disqualified under the rules above quoted. Owners should see to this ere it is too late.

Wednesday's Combination Sale.

The attendance at the combination sale last Wednesday was large, but the bidding was very slow. Many of the horses offered were very ordinary, and the consignors could not expect to get large prices for them. The best-hred ones only brought fair prices. Following is a list of the horses that brought $100 and over and the buyers:

Table listing horse names, owners, and buyers. Includes Hannah H., Kitty Matthews, Grace Darling, Moore, Glide, Steve Burke, Princess Ebony, Syria, Miss Smith, Silks, Cassiar, Gray colt, Chloe Thorne, Echors, Fannie, Lalage, Cleto, etc.

F. J. Berry & Co.'s Star Spring Sale.

This immense six days' breeders' sale, March 27, 28, 29, 30, 31 and April 1, in the Chicago Dexter Park Horse Exchange, comprises the grandest collection of royally-bred trotting stock ever catalogued for a combination sale. The brilliant offerings include the get of the most famous sires and represent such dazzling stars as AXIS, by Axtell, 2:12, sold for $105,000, out of Ella Louise, by Louis Napoleon; second dam Seldom, dam of Uncle Sam, three-year-old record 2:23 1/4, by Durango, 2:23 1/4; third dam Shadland Gem, by Satellite; fourth dam Romper, dam of Golden Bow, 2:23 1/4, by Volunteer, and fifth dam grandam of Grace, 2:27, by American Star.

Pimento, full brother to Prelude, 2:28 1/4, by Onward, 2:23 1/4, out of Laura S., dam of Prelude, 2:28 1/4, by Belmont. Nutpatch, by Nutwood, 2:18 1/4, out of Patchou Maid, dam of Astral, 2:18, and Marshal Kleber, sire of Mistake, 2:29 1/4, by that fashionable brood mare, Mambrino Patchou. Mambrino Abdallah 1889, by the great Mambrino Patchou 58, out of Rosina, the dam of Sally Cossack, 2:22 1/4, trial 2:18, by Alexander's Abdallah. Julian C., by Joe Bassett, sire of Johnston, 2:06 1/4, Joe Bassett Jr., 2:18 1/4, etc., out of Daisy, by Moody, 2:18 1/4. Lucille Wilkes, daughter of Lexington Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, 2:22, out of Lucille, by Moody, 2:18 1/4, and second dam by Rooney Horse, sire of Pedro, 2:25 1/4, and Cling, 2:29 1/4. Element, full brother to Acolyte, 2:21, sold for $40,000, and Daphne, 2:30, by Onward, 2:25 1/4, the greatest sire of his age living, out of Lady Alice, dam of two in 2:30, by Belmont, and second dam Mary Mambrino, by Mambrino Chief. Young Cossack, by Don Cossack, 2:28, out of Electa, dam of Elect Cossack (3), 2:29 1/4, by Electioneer; second dam Lady Nodine, dam of Ruby Duroc, dam of Stephanie, 2:22 1/4, Golden Gem, 2:21, and second dam of Jewel Wilkes, 2:30, and Elect Cossack, 2:29 1/4, by Rydyk's Hambletonian, and third dam Montgomery Maid, by Seely's American Star. Alwood, by Highwood, 2:21 1/4, son of Nutwood, 2:18 1/4, out of Hinka Cossack, sister to Atlanta, dam of Dr. Caton, 2:49 1/4, by Don Cossack, 2:28; second dam Mismother, grandam of Dr. Caton, 2:49 1/4, by Alta, 2:32; third dam by Alexander's Edwin Forrest and fourth dam by Mambrino Chief.

Catalogues issued March 16 and mailed on application. Send for one to F. J. Berry & Co., Union Stock Yards, Chicago.

Arabian Stallion Accionista.

The greatest prize-winning imported Arabian stallion that ever came to America is now in California. He is called Accionista, and the most competent horsemen in the United States declare him to be unequalled. C. A. Baldwin, of Cupertino, Mountain View, Santa Clara county, purchased the horse, and, in order to give breeders an opportunity of securing his services, has set the fee at fifty dollars. Accionista is nearly fifteen hands three inches in height, a rich dark bay with black points, and is a perfect model of symmetry. His disposition is perfect, and his trotting action is most excellent.

The Big Eastern Handicaps.

There has been a number of additional declarations from the spring handicaps since last week's list was published, and many of the more recent ones are more important than those at first announced, since they comprise what are known as popular favorites, says the Turf, Field and Farm. Longstreet's withdrawal is not a matter of general surprise, and as he is now out of both the Brooklyn and Suburban it begins to look as though his astute owner has little hopes of his standing training. This view of the matter has long since been expressed by the writer, and that he will soon be retired for stud service there is little doubt. He should make a grand stallion. Lamplighter, who was entered in nearly all the handicaps, has been declared out of both the Morris Park events, and left in those at Brooklyn and Coney Island, while Tammany has also been declared out of the Metropolitan, in which he and Lamplighter each were allotted 134 lbs., but, as they both remain in the Suburban, there is still a chance that they may come together. As was expected, the Brooklyn Handicap is run too early in the season to suit Mr. Croker's beautiful filly Yorkshire Belle, and she has been declared, as have also Victory, Strathmeath, Lowlander, Tulla Blackburn and Candelbra. It is evident that Green B. Morris will again rely upon Judge Morrow to do battle for him, and hence his chances are entitled to great respect. Great accounts reach me of the improvement of the Californian, Wildwood, and as the climatic conditions in the section where he is being worked, favor an early preparation I must keep him on my side, believing that he will prove the most dangerous outsider in the race. In fact, notwithstanding that my early choice was expressed in favor of Pactolus, Parvenu, Leonawly and Nomad, I am inclined to favor Wildwood as much as either of these well-known performers, and confidently anticipate that a bet placed upon him in the winter hooks will prove a good investment.

With Lamplighter and Tammany both remaining in the Suburban, it is only natural that they should be made the winter favorites, and each will have plenty of backers, but even should they both come to the post it is my opinion that others will be found capable of beating the pair, for grand horses and wonderful performers as they undoubtedly are, I have no reason to believe that either of them can concede eleven pounds to His Highness, should he come fit and well to the post. He has wintered finely, and after his long rest should return to his two-year-old form. There is no doubt in the world that the cause of his "going off" so seriously last spring was attributable to the tremendously severe trial which he was given just previous to the Suburban, and based upon which one of his owners told the writer personally that he did not see how the colt could be defeated if he ran up to that trial. The horse, however, never showed any "vim" in the race, and was one of the first horses to succumb, although the race was run but little faster than His Highness had run his trial.

The experience of the past will no doubt be taken advantage of in the future, and the horse will receive more careful handling for the coming season. As a two-year-old he was pounds better than either Lamplighter or Tammany, and his early three-year-old form warranted the belief that his development had been equal to that of his competitors, but he went amiss, either from overtraining or other cause, and was early retired for the season. There appears, therefore, to be no reason to rate his capabilities any lower now than if he had never started as a three-year-old, and that he is very nicely handicapped at 116 pounds no one can deny. It is yet very early in the day to make a single selection for so important an event as the Suburban, but as many of my readers desire to take a "flier" at long odds on some horse in the Winter books, it is well that they should invest where the chances are most in their favor, and that they will get a good run for their money if they back His Highness is only a question of the horse remaining in such health as he enjoys at present, and standing training for the event. Both Messrs. Gideon and Daly are ambitious to win a Suburban, and nothing would afford them greater pleasure than to witness their pet redeem himself from his past defects. He is one of the truest, gamest colts that ever raced, and he will, barring accidents, surely render a good account of himself in the Suburban of 1893.

Dr. Hashrouck, contrary to general expectation, has been declared out of the Toboggan Slide Handicap, at six furlongs, and out of the Metropolitan, at a mile and an eighth, and is nevertheless left in the Suburban, which is at a mile and a quarter. This seems to indicate that his owner has confidence in his ability to stay the route, and as he is very nicely placed at 116 pounds he would be a very dangerous customer should the distance not prove too far for him. He has never yet been asked to go the journey, but his victory in the Bronxdale Handicap at Monmouth Park, when, with 126 pounds up, he negotiated the mile in 1:39 on the circular course, is fresh in the minds of those who witnessed the performance, and certainly entitles him to be seriously considered in any event in which he takes part. He ran once last year in a race at a mile and a sixteenth and was defeated by Raeland, the distance being run in 1:47; but the longest trip that he went was in Congress Hall Stakes at Saratoga, at a mile and an eighth, which was won by Lowlander in 1:53, Dr. Hashrouck finishing second. With advancing years this best son of Sir Modred may be able to sustain his marvellous speed for a greater distance, and should this be the case he will surely be in the first fight at the finish.

Croker's Big Deal.

NASHVILLE, March 15.—One of the most important deals in the history of the turf in the United States has been consummated. Richard Croker, of New York, purchasing a half-interest in the Belle Meade stud for $250,000. The report of the transaction, with the exception of the price, was confirmed by General William H. Jackson, owner of the Belle Meade Farm, whose guest Croker has been for several days.

Croker met Jackson in Washington according to a previous arrangement, Jackson having some months before extended to the Tammany chieftain an invitation to visit him in the spring, which invitation was accepted by Croker. They came to Nashville together, and since his arrival at the celebrated farm, which is located six miles west of this city, on the Harding turnpike, he has made a thorough inspection of the place and the stock. He was so favorably impressed that he determined upon making the large investment in question, and the trade was closed.

The Belle Meade farm is one of the most extensive breeding establishments in the world, containing about 4,000 acres of land. The stud comprises some of the most famous sires in the country. There are: Luke Blackburn, Iroquois, Inspector B. Great Tom, Enquirer, Tremont, imported Loyalist and Clarendon. There are 135 brood mares at Belle Meade. Croker has no interest in the farm, which is the sole property of Jackson.

Under the terms of the sale Croker does not get an interest in this year's crop of colts. Jackson is to receive a salary of $5,000 a year for managing the stud, and, in addition, is to be allowed $10 a month for the keep of each mare and $12 a month for the keep of each horse.

Croker to-day purchased at the Tennessee breeders' inaugural sale a team of seal-brown horses, for which he paid $975. W. O. Parmer, who matched the horses, says they will be the finest team in New York City. Croker offered Charles Reed of the Fairview farm $50,000 for the brood mare Thora, the dam of Yorkville Belle, but Reed declined to sell, saying that he would not take double that figure.

Trotters at the World's Fair.

At an early date a meeting will be held at Lexington to consult with the Hon. John W. Yerkes in regard to the Kentucky live-stock exhibition at the World's Fair, to be held at Chicago this year. This will be an important occasion, and it is desirable that trotting-horse breeders should be well represented. The most peculiarly American animal to be shown at the World's Fair is the trotting-horse. Thoroughbreds, hackneys, shire horses, Normans and the like, as well as breeds of cattle, hogs, sheep and other domesticated animals, are to a great extent European, but the trotting-horse is an American product—the crown and glory of American breeding. On this account alone it would be peculiarly fitting that the trotting-horse should be particularly well represented. Our best specimens, so far as practicable, of stallions, mares, colts and fillies, should be forwarded, and foreigners should be afforded an opportunity to learn what we are producing in the way of fine harness horses. Representatives from every civilized nation in the world will be in attendance at the Columbian Exposition, and these representatives will consist largely of the wealthier people—men who are able to travel and who can afford to buy what they want. There has never before been so favorable an opportunity afforded to make a good impression on so many people of so many different nationalities and the opportunity will certainly not recur during the present century, and probably not for many years to come.

There need be no fear that foreigners will not fancy the trotting horse, if once his merits can be properly placed before them. We learn that Dr. Day, John Splan and the party that accompanied them have sold every hoof they took to Europe, and have not even a horse blanket left. At the World's Fair we will be able to show our horses without a tedious and expensive trip to Europe. Europe and many other countries will be in Chicago. At least they will have thousands of their people there, and those people will be largely composed of the very classes we desire to reach. Just at this time there is no trotting-horse breeder that does not fully realize the importance of a foreign market. The way to make one is now open to us, and we will be sadly lacking in sagacity and enterprise if we do not avail ourselves of it.

The immediate object of the meeting to be held at Lexington will be to advise with Commissioner Yerkes as to the best disposition to be made of the fund in the hands of the Kentucky commissioners for the purpose of assisting the people of Kentucky in making a display of their live stock at the World's Fair.

We think the meeting should go further than this. As we suggested in a previous issue of the Stock Farm, we believe that there should be a concerted movement among the American breeders to have the greatest trotting meeting at Chicago during the World's Fair ever held on the continent. The Northwestern Association has already advertised a splendid meeting, and that its stakes and purses will be well filled goes without saying. But in addition to this there should be a grand movement on the part of all the trotting-horse breeders of the country to make the best display of trotting speed possible. The population of Chicago during the World's Fair will be extremely fluctuating. A stream of foreigners will be rushing in and another pouring out. These people will be pleasure-seekers—sight-seers. Naturally they will want to run the whole gamut of American sports—at least so far as to witness them—and attractive trotting meetings, well advertised, will draw as scarcely any other sort of amusement will. Those who have never seen a trotting meeting (and their number will be very large) will be drawn to them as novelties. Those who are accustomed to them at home will be anxious to learn the peculiarities of our methods and the points of difference between their own and American trotting.

In our judgment a committee should be appointed at the proposed Lexington meeting to correspond with breeders in the different States with a view to organizing a great meeting or series of meetings at Chicago during the World's Fair on the most extensive and liberal scale practicable. Local jealousies should be entirely ignored, and the breeders of the country should unite in a common movement, which cannot fail to redound to the benefit of all.—Kentucky Stock Farm.

Memo is in Oregon.

The people of Oregon are to be congratulated on having the fine large Sidney stallion Memo in their State. Memo was one of the phenomenally fast ones, and his sister, Frou Frou, still holds the champion crown as the fastest yearling in the world. The dam, Flirt, by Buccaneer, is out of a producing dam, by that "king of speed," Flaxtail. Memo has not had much of an opportunity in the stud to demonstrate his worth, yet it is asserted by every owner of his young progeny that for size, conformation, color, and pure trotting action they are unexcelled by any others. There has never been a Memo sold at auction in this State that did not bring a high figure, while at the Reavis sale in the East, last spring the young Memos outlooked and outsold those by every other sire. Memo will make the season of 1893 at Eugene City, Oregon, and the opportunity breeders will have to get the famous Hambletonian-Flaxtail cross, by breeding to him should be taken advantage of. The value of the Buccaneer-Flaxtail blood when crossed with that of the great Sidney can never be overestimated, and Memo is one of the best representatives of this rich cross. His services have been placed at the low price of $50 for the season, and owners of well-bred mares will make no mistake in breeding to him. Dr. T. W. Harris has the stallion on his stock farm, and will be pleased to answer all questions regarding him.

The Kentfield Sale.

On Tuesday, April 4th, at the stables, Haight street, corner of Cole, Messrs. Killip & Co. will sell by auction fourteen head of grandly-bred trotters. This collection has been gathered by the late Frank C. Kentfield, of Redwood City, and by a perusal of the list it will be seen that he used exceedingly good judgment in breeding, while an inspection of the animals offered shows that he was a most excellent judge of conformation. The mare Regina, by Electioneer 125, out of Accident, dam of Wanda, 2:17½, Rinconado, 2:23, Rex, 2:27½, and Solita, 2:27, is a perfect type of the great Electioneer family, and should be given a record this fall. She is sound as a dollar, her limbs are perfect and no purer-gaited mare was ever hitched. Her filly, by Director, 2:17, called Inspiration, will show what a broodmare she is, for, without exaggerating, this filly is one of the finest ever shown in a show ring, and she is a trotter, too. Her bloodlines should make her invaluable in the stud or harem.

Every animal in the lot is trained, single and double, while none of them have been worked for speed. The roadsters Telephone, Arthur Orton, Tempest and the roan horse are just what our roadies are looking for; they are of good size and show splendid action. Telephone should be given to a trainer, as he is a very promising trotter, and as he is by Director out of Weaver Girl (also in the sale), is the making of a racehorse. Weaver Girl is a well-formed mare, and a gamer one never looked through a bridle. She was one of the best roadsters used in this city, and her produce show her to be a broodmare that will rank among the best. There are fillies and mares by Alexander Button, the sire of extreme speed, which will pay to give to a trainer. Besides the horses, there will also be sold two elegant Brewster buggies, a Larkin huggy, phaeton, a breaking cart and light Chicago cart. The sale is made by order of the executor, and everything must be sold. The stock can be seen at any time previous to the sale at the new stables on Haight street, corner of Cole, and every animal catalogued will be shown in harness and speeded on Cole street, so that buyers can see and judge for themselves of the superiority of the stock offered on the day of sale. See advertisement.

Contagious Influenza.

This very annoying and very expensive—although not very fatal—disease among horses is of an extremely persistent and obstinate character. There are few, if any, of the cities of considerable size in our country in which efforts to "stamp it out" have met with complete success, and in many instances where it was thought this much-desired object had been attained it has again unexpectedly made its reappearance, and, like Banquo's ghost, will not "down."

The characteristic genius of the bacillus of this disease has not yet been determined. Its origin, mode of propagation, vital energy and duration of existence are all points yet to be established by scientific investigation and research, as well as the means for its expurgation. While in the main it is confined to the city stables, where nearly every income from the farm must take his "seasoning," yet it is sometimes transported to the country and spread from farm to farm through extensive neighborhoods, alarming and annoying owners and interfering seriously with the marketing of these horses.

It is not the design of this article to enter upon a discussion of the essential elements of this malady, but rather to direct the attention to the approved methods of the treatment and care of the patients during its invasion and progress to termination. In a large majority of the cases where there is no complication and the animal is in fair condition when attacked, the tendency is to a recovery in from two to three weeks. Good care constitutes the most important feature of treatment.

In an ordinary or critical case a stable fairly ventilated but well guarded against draughts, plenty of light, rigid cleanliness, frequent watering, and if in cold weather, the water should be slightly warm; light feeding and occasional bran mash, and all the time a courageous hopefulness, and the patient is having everything done for him that the case demands.

But in some attacks the inflammatory action may become local, as in the lungs, the bowels, the kidneys or the lymphatic system, and assume grand and alarming features. In such cases the "home treatment" may be attended with more or less risk, and the counsel of an intelligent and experienced veterinarian may be profitably sought, as no general directions can be safely relied upon when symptoms are frequently changing. Should the time ever arrive when this malady is completely eradicated, there will be great rejoicing among horsemen and stablemen.—E. L. Booth, Vt. Dept., Randall's Horse Review.

M. W. Hicks' Trotters.

The advertisement of a closing-out sale of the balance of the stock of youngsters owned by the late Dr. M. W. Hicks, of Sacramento, appears in this issue to-day. The value of the Flaxtail-Hambletonian cross is acknowledged to be greater than ever by all progressive horsemen. The animals to be sold are representatives of this cross, the sires being choice representatives of George Wilkes, Belmont 64 and Sidney, and the mares are all related to producers. These yearlings were reserved by their late owner to be shipped East, but his death intervened, and consequently they remained here, and will now be sold to the highest bidder. We understand there are some grand-looking trotters among them.

As the youngsters sold at the Hicks sale are considered invaluable by their present owners, an opportunity is afforded breeders to secure at low figures individuals that are even better-bred than those heretofore offered. The sale will take place next Saturday, March 25th.

TRAINER JOHN SPLAN has safely reached Vienna with the following string of American trotters: Brown, br h, 8, 2:18½, by Combat—Gumlet, by Dictator; Gothard, br h, 7, 2:20, by Dictator—Rubby Gothard, by St. Gothard; Sir Gothard, br h, 6, by St. Gothard; Vitello, br h, 5, by Lord Byron—Vesolia, by Stamboul; Swarthmore, br c, 1, by Strathmore—Friendship; Lady Duroc, ch m, a, 2:21, by Iowa Duroc—Lady Green, by Bashaw; Lycum, ch g; Lycus, ch g; Chief, br g, 6, by Messenger Chief; Gavotte, br g, 6, by Adonis—Elsie, by Harold, sire of Maud S; Kitty W., br m, 8, 2:53, by Pennyback—Game, by Rocket; Rutledge, gr g, 9, 2:27, by Onward—Estella, by Clark Chief.

L. J. ROSE ON "PA" HAMLIN.

His Late Owner Comms to the Defenss of Stamboul and Criticiss a Critic.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—No doubt the public have heard enough of Stamboul, yet there is such an unkind criticism by Mr. Hamlin, a conclusion based upon no knowledge or fact, that it is hard for me to pass it by. He says: "Stamboul for $41,000! I think the stallion is not worth that amount." Again, "His get are not bread-winners, not even speedy." Again, "He is not in my judgment a valuable stud horse."

As to his value that is a matter of opinion, and if his record is a fraud, if his colts do not train uniformly and attain speed easily and are not bread-winners, then his conclusion is a just one. But I think he is in error in his premisses. Stamboul did trot in 2:07½, whether it is allowed or not, and as to his colts not showing speed, or not being bread-winners, is certainly very wide of the mark if I am any judge in this matter. When a stallion at ten years of age has thirteen that have trotted from 2:30 to 2:18, it can hardly be claimed that he is a grand failure. True, some of these are not now records, but they trotted in the time given all the same. Some of these, however, made their records in races.

I have two that trotted last year at the fair held at Los Angeles, and with very little training. Vera, a three-year-old mare, was started in the 2:35 class, in which there were eight starters, and she won the second, third and fourth heats, making a record of 2:23 and trotting the last half of the fourth heat in 1:11. A few days after she again started in a stake for three-year-olds, which she won without being extended.

Again, Faika, a two-year-old filly, trotted in two stakes and won both, trotting two heats in one of them in 2:23, 2:28. These must be considered creditable performances in any country, and both of them could have trotted several seconds faster. In view of these facts Mr. Hamlin's criticisms seem harsh. I believe that this is an exceptional showing for so young a horse as Stamboul, and I remember only one horse who can claim to show a better or more numerous 2:30 list at ten years old.

Then it may be taken that the opportunities have been very unfavorable, for very few of them have ever been trained except breaking and gaiting them, for nearly all of them were sold at auction when two years old or under, and, as a rule, were used for breeding purposes, and, as to training for speed, entirely snuffed out. What I sold as two-year-olds all showed nice gaits and speed for their handling. In fact, I never handled one of his colts that I doubted to be able to make trot in 2:30 or better, and I never owned a stallion whose get were so uniformly trotters as Stamboul's.

I am aware that there were some of his colts worked by those who bought them and were deemed failures, but this can't seem strange to Mr. Hamlin, for his experience must have taught him that there are only very few trainers that intelligently handle colts and make anything out of them. No doubt he has sold valuable colts—colts of great promise which would have fulfilled that promise if they had remained under his direction and care, but, for the want of intelligent handling, were ruined and never heard of again. In fact, no man can now make any reputation for his stock without he gives the matter his thought, his attention, and has an intelligent trainer, and no one is the superior in working up to this rule to Mr. Hamlin, nor can it be claimed that Stamboul had advantage in the number of his colts.

In 1885 he had one, a filly, that had a record of 2:30, and has been breeding since. In 1886 he had four; in 1887, fourteen; in 1888, fourteen; in 1889, twenty-one, and in 1890, twenty-six. Since then I have no data, nor would it be expected that it could out any considerable figure in making 2:30 performers. But it may be taken that he has never made a heavy season, for Mr. Hoobar had only a small, select number of mares, and never allowed any of his colts to be trained, although it is a well-known fact that some of them showed remarkable promise. To the above list may be added say twenty outside colts belonging to other parties. Now with these facts, which Mr. Hamlin certainly could not have known, is he justified in saying that Stamboul is a failure, and in view of all these facts, together with the further fact of a horse 15.3 hands high, of a beautiful seal brown color, a conformation which has been the admiration of all students of form, a form which is without blemish and a perfection which all critics have been unable to find one fault with or one point which suggests a modification, with a gait which is the poetry of motion and a disposition as endearing and gentle as a woman's, with a speed that has increased with every year, and the end of which, I believe, is not yet, is such a horse not worth $41,000? Can such a horse be condemned and said to be "not a valuable stud horse?" It is strange how a gentleman with the years of experience of Mr. Hamlin can wantonly and without any reason or facts except his dictum go out of his way and say that Stamboul is not a valuable stud horse.

It is strange what an amount of prejudice many men entertain who are owners of stud horses, and this feeling is taken up by localities, by partisans and by sections of country. Kremlin may be a better horse, may be a faster horse, may be a better racehorse than Stamboul (time will tell); but who believes, when in the quiet commune of his own thoughts, reversing the localities, placing Kremlin in California and a California-bred horse, and placing Stamboul in the East and bred in Kentucky, with Mr. Allen as owner, and pall-bearers to keep things busy, that the record of Stamboul made in Tennessee would not stand? Do you believe it? As to the theories about training, sapping the vitality and interfering with success in breeding, much could be said on both sides, but Stamboul does not show that he has been injured in that way, for I take it that when a horse for eight years every year shows improvement, it may be believed that his vitality is all right for every purpose.

Were his theory infallible, then his favorite horse, Chimes, would have a right to be a failure, for Beautiful Bells, the dam of Chimes, was put to hard use and tasks by excessive training, excessive racing, abused by running and working until she fell, then trotted in, say, two months as a four-year-old in seven races, nearly all of which were seven heats, and none less than six heats, and with all that she won six of them. Also The Moor, her sire, was equally abused in training and racing. If, after all this, she can be the mother of Mr. Hamlin's favorite stallion, then I may be excused if I have a different theory, and how can the continual improvement be accounted for if not upon the belief that continued use for a purpose, continual trotting makes conformation adapted for trotting and an instinct to wish to trot? I have written at greater length than I intended. I have no direct interest in this matter, except to have justice done to Stamboul. He has my affection, my love, my admiration, and to me he is the ideal horse of the world. L. J. Rose.

Price of Service Fees.

The year 1892 was certainly a very important one in America, particularly as regards extreme prices paid for both trotters and thoroughbreds, and also for the extreme and generally high service fee as compared with the present or any previous year. It will, perhaps, be interesting to compare the prices of just a half century previous, namely, the year 1842, as taken from the list in the American Turf Register and Sporting Magazine, which was the most reliable turf journal of that day. This was seven years before Hambletonian, Ethan Allen or George M. Patchen were foaled, and as the real foundation of our trotting families was then scarcely laid, the highest fees were nearly all for thoroughbreds.

That season Abdallah stood near the Union Course, Long Island, at $20 by the season. Cock of the Rock, by Duroc, dam Romp, sister to Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger, was near Jacksonville, Ala., at $25. Commodore, by Mambino, dam by True American, was at Lexington, Ky., at $10 by the season, $12 to insure. American Eclipse, by Duroc, dam Miller's Damsel, by Imported Messenger, was a mile and a half from Georgetown, Ky., but his service fee is not given. Gano, by Eclipse, dam Betsy Richards, by Sir Archy, was at the Lafayette Course, Augusta, Ga., at $30. Imported Glencoe stood at Forks of Cypress, near Florence, Ala., at $100 for the season.

The famous Grey Eagle, by Woodpecker, dam Ophelia, by Wild Medley, was near Georgetown, Ky., at $50 by the season and $75 to insure. Imported Leviathan stood at Gallatin, Tenn., at $150, which was the highest service fee in America for that year. Imported Margrave was at Amherst, Va., at $30. Imported Monarch was near Columbia, S. C., at $60. Monmouth Eclipse, by American Eclipse, dam by Imported Expedition, was near Frankfort, Ky., at $100.

Imported Priam at Robinson's Bend, near Nashville, Tenn., stood at the top notch of $150, which was equaled only by Imported Leviathan. Imported Sovereign was at Augusta, Ga., at $30. Imported Trustee made that season at Spring Grove, Hanover Co., Va., at $40. Wagner's fee was $50, and he was then at Gallatin, Tenn. Woodpecker, by Bertrand, dam by Imported Buzzard, was in Bourbon county, Ky., at $50.

There are very few, but thoroughbreds, in this list, as this, as stated above, was before the time of the famous trotting stallions and the very few except thoroughbreds then commanded high fees. In 1892 Longfellow and St. Blaize were the only thoroughbred horses as far as we know standing as high as $1,000. Of the trotters Arion's fee was $2,500, while Nutwood, Axtell, Allerton, Red Wilkes, Guy Wilkes and Stamboul stood at $1,000, and Nelson at $750.

It would be very difficult, if not impossible, to name all of which were advertised to stand at $500, and from that price down the number was still more numerous. Rysdyk's Hambletonian was the first trotting stallion to be placed at $500, and five years ago the only others which had reached that figure were Dictator, Electioneer, Daniel Lambert, Volunteer, and it is said that one season Ethan Allen's fee was placed at that price, though very few, if any, of his Eastern services were above $100—Am. Horse Breeder.

Pool-Rooms Raided in New York.

NEW YORK, March 14.—The police have again raided the pool-rooms of New York, says a special to the Chronicle of this city. It came like thunder out of a clear sky, and apparently the most surprised of all were the bookmakers, who, seated in their thousand and one dens all over the city, invite gambling upon the so-called racing in Guttenberg and Gloucester.

Six years ago the New York Legislature passed what is known as the Ives' pool bill, which permitted the selling of pools on race tracks within certain months of the year. The argument was that there would be no racing if people were not permitted to bet upon the results, and to encourage racing, those who actually went to the tracks were to be free to back their opinions. The restriction of betting to the tracks would it was thought, do away with the inducements for stay-at-home indulgence in the same luxury.

The proprietors of the city poolrooms, by the advice of trained lawyers, speedily drove a coach and four through that construction of the law. They reopened their rooms and invited their patrons to indulge as usual, saying, "For a commission of, say twenty-five cents, we will act as your agents, and send your money to the track, and you can win or lose according to the dictates of your judgment."

So the game went on. Several spasmodic arrests were made, the payment of commission was proved, and the pool men laughed at the easy way of evading the law. Apparently there was no remedy, although everybody knew that it was simply a subterfuge and that no money was sent to the tracks. Years ago the police could have done exactly what they did to-day—prove conclusively that money was taken ostensibly to be sent to the tracks to be wagered upon results after the race had started.

The open question now is why Superintendent Byrnes has started in to do what he could have done at any time since the Ives pool bill became a law. Better late than never, say the opponents of the pool-rooms. Of course, the pool people do not propose to give up their splendid profits without a struggle. They have money in plenty, and able lawyers can be secured. They propose as a last resort to attack the constitutionality of the Ives bill, which permits bets to be made on the track which cannot be made in a city.

Meanwhile the pool-rooms are closed, but about them are gathered a sorry-looking and measly crowd of people, who find their occupation gone, for the moment, at least. Byrnes evidently means that this time they shall be closed until the highest court decrees their re-opening.

HON. T. H. TONGUE, Hillsboro, Or., has sold to W. L. Whitmore, of Mayview, Wash., the following horses: Lena Howard, ch m, foaled in 1876, bred by Hon. T. J. Colic and Its Treatment.

Colic may be due to acute indigestion, or from other causes, such as parasites of various kinds, or from concentrations in the intestines, forming what are known as intestinal calculi and similar disturbing influences. Horses may also have colic pains from other causes than any trouble directly connected with the intestinal tract, such as some obscure trouble with the liver, spleen, kidneys, all of which are abdominal organs. There is a little parasite, a round worm, known as the strongylus armatus, that naturally takes up its habitation, for part of its existence, anyway, in the equine blood vessels, and it most frequently chooses the mesenteric artery or its branches. This worm often causes a dilation of the artery, forming what is known as a "verminous aneurism," and this may be a cause of recurring attacks of colic. There are certain horses that from time to time have severe attacks of colic to which it is impossible to assign a cause, and in such cases the safest advice to give an owner is to sell the horse, unless he prefers to have it die in his possession some fine day, rather than to have another man own it at the time of its decease. These animals subject to frequently recurring attacks of colic will be found upon post-mortem examination to have some such trouble as has already been described above, that is, parasites, calculi, aneurism, a tumor in an abdominal organ or something of the sort, and during life an expert would be unable to make an exact diagnosis of the case, and could only surmise what the difficulty might be.

Colic, which is due to acute indigestion, pure and simple, can usually be accounted for by finding that the patient has received a large quantity of coarse, indigestible food or that it has been fed and watered before it has become properly cooled and rested after a hard day's work, or some similar cause, and if the animal recovers it is not likely again to recur unless the indiscretion that caused it before is repeated. Colic has been termed by some writers as true and false, true colic being acute indigestion accompanied by great pain, and false colic being colicky pains manifesting some other diseased condition than indigestion pure and simple. For example, strangulated hernia in the stallion may have colicky pains as a symptom, and yet the treatment usually resorted to for colic would not afford relief. Colic is also spoken of as spasmodic and flatulent. In the former there are intervals of spasmodic pain, with little or no gas accumulated in the large intestines, while in the latter there is an accumulation of flatus, usually in the large colon, and its volume may even be so great as to cause death by suffocation by the pressure of abdominal organs against the lungs.

Spasmodic and flatulent colic are, however, probably similar in a way, that is, spasmodic colic is an acute indigestion, and it may or may not be accompanied by flatulency depending upon whether it is caused by food of a fermentable character or not, and the quantity of flatus depending upon the amount of fermentation going on, the gas produced being retained in many cases as a result of the spasm of the intestine, which prevents its being expelled, and as the colic subsides the horse generally relieves himself naturally by passing wind every few moments until the condition no longer exists. In the case of M. F. D. it is not easy to ascribe a cause for the mare's repeated attacks of colic; it would not seem to be due to any dietetic errors at present, unless the old frost-bitten grass produced a disturbance of the digestion from which she has not fully recovered. If this were the case ordinarily, a good cleansing out would be the proper thing to do, either by means of a pint and a half of raw linseed oil, or a physic ball, but in this instance we are confronted at once by an objection; the mare is pregnant, and a violent cathartic is likely to produce abortion, therefore all that can be done is to keep the bowels well open with bran mashes, and to give a tonic to the digestive organs, one also that may have an effect on parasites if any are present, and for this purpose iron and gentian is perhaps as good a remedy as there is.

R. Pulv. Sulphate of Iron - - - - - an oz. iv.
Pulv. Gentian Root - - - - -
Mix.
Give mare a heaping teaspoonful in her food three times daily.
In case of an acute attack of colic the following may be used:
R. Laudanum - - - - - oz. ii.
Sulphuric ether - - - - -
Sweet Spirits of Nitre - - - - - ss oz. i.
Mix.

To be given at one dose in a pint of water, repeated in half or three-quarters of an hour if pain is not relieved. Be sure and give the above in a full pint of water, as it is strong enough to blister the mouth if it is not well diluted. Always remember in drenching a horse that the medicine is to be given slowly through the mouth. Pouring fluids down a horse's nostrils, or pinching the throat to make him swallow, are ways in which medicine gets down the windpipe instead of going to the stomach, and many a valuable animal has been killed by setting up a mechanical pneumonia by getting fluids in the lungs, when if no attempt had been made to treat the primary disease, whatever it may have been (often purely imaginary), the patient would undoubtedly have recovered itself. In fact, there is nearly always a tendency among horsemen to thank the medicine if a horse recovers, and blame the animal or the disease if it dies, when in many cases it is the reverse, and if the horse dies it may be the medicine that killed, and if he recovers it is often in spite of what ought to have caused death.

Horses are not made of cast iron, and they should receive gentle treatment on all occasions, particularly when they are being given medicine. Injections of warm suds often aid in relieving colic, and here again care must be taken not to injure the rectum when introducing the syringe; it is not uncommon to see the rectum lacerated by the nozzle of a syringe, and it has ever been perforated (causing death by the end of the syringe being introduced by a rough, careless stableman.) There are other means of treating colic too numerous to mention here, many of which are only available to the skilled veterinarian, particularly treatment by means of various hypodermic injections, tapping with the trocar and canula in cases of flatulent colic, and the like. External applications, such as hot cloths to the abdomen, or mustard water, or even mustard paste, applied to the abdomen, washing it off in about half an hour in warm water, often affords great relief in severe cases of colic. Colic as a result of indigestible food or from taking cold may terminate with inflammation of the bowels, in which case opiates and hot cloths to the abdomen are the chief methods of treatment. Here cathartics above all things are to be avoided.—American Horseman.

CONDITIONS FOR STAKES.

Each nomination must be mailed April 1, accompanied with $10, and a full description of the animal. A second payment of $15, on or before June 1. The third payment for starters of $25 each must be paid as in other races, through the entry box, before 6 P. M. of the day preceding that upon which the race is to take place. A failure to make the payments as above specified declares the nomination out of the stake.

Special rates from all points on railroads running into Montana.

Entries to trotting and pacing purses close July 1. Five per cent. to enter and five per cent. additional to start. Purses divided 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent.

Running purses close night before race, five per cent. to start. Purses divided 70, 20 and 10 per cent.

The rules of the American Trotting Association and the American Racing Rules will govern all races.

ATHLETICS.

Current Notes on Out-Door Athletics. Wrestling—Football—Swimming—Cricket—Rowing—Cross-Country Running, etc.

EDITED BY ARHIPPIUS.

During the past year several new cricketers have arrived in this city from England and the Colonies, and an unusual boom in this branch of field sports may be expected during the coming season.

The members of the Olympic Club are particularly interested in swimming just now, and in all probabilities the coming season will see an increased interest manifested in nautical pastimes, not only by the club members, but by the general public.

The Dolphin, Triton, Ariel, Alameda and other rowing clubs are getting ready for the coming season. For nearly two years but little interest has been taken in aquatic sports, but since the organization of the University crews the members of the local clubs are beginning to realize that they have been taking part in the Laggard drama for a long while.

The turf will shortly become springy, and the roads will soon become navigable. Genuine lovers of out-door sports should begin to get ready for the opening of the cross-country season. The defeat of the Olympic Club team by the students from Berkeley on last Decoration Day should not discourage local athletes. Practice makes perfect, and cross-country running is one of the most essential exercises that a field athlete can indulge in before taking part in a cinder track contest.

Within a year foot-ball has become a very popular pastime. The University players first attracted the notice of our California sport-loving public to the game, but, like all other branches of popular sports, the game has been prostituted in this section of the globe by the interference of world-bee athletes, who know as much about the game as a cat does about a holiday. The University kickers, as a general rule, are all athletes of the first water, and they thoroughly understand the purpose for which they are sent into the field, but the majority of the men who take part in the games played under the auspices of the Gaelic and other associations are better fitted for grocery hand-fights than they are to get out in an open field, and exhibit their science as foot-ball players before a crowd of respectable people.

Quite a number of the local athletes are taking an interest in the coming out-door meeting of the Olympic Club, which will be held at the club grounds on Saturday afternoon, March 25th, commencing at 2:30 o'clock. A second programme has been arranged, which includes a walking event. When we received the first list a few weeks ago we remarked the omission of a walk, but it seems that the athletic committee have decided to give the pedestrians a chance, and great discretion has been displayed in making the addition. The walking event will be one and a quarter miles. The handicapper should not be too severe in placing Mr. Coffin as that gentleman is ever ready to defend the colors of his club. It cannot be expected that he will hold his best form for twelve months out of the year. The entries will close Saturday, March 18th, at 8 o'clock.

It is a question as to whether or not the usual annual championship games will be held this year. For several years past it has been customary for the athletes of this State to assemble once a year for the purpose of deciding who the best men were at the different events included under the heading of a championship list. Until last year the members of the Olympic Club have maintained that their team was the strongest one that California had ever produced, but on May 30, 1892, the team representing the University of California at Berkeley won the long word laurels of the Olympics, and now it is a question as to which team is the best. Want of practice and interest last year's pennant for the Olympians, but if they would only make up their minds to a man once more even the development of new material at Berkeley would not lessen their chances of success were they to try again. Stanford University will not help the U. C., even though the latter team should have a walk-over at the proposed intercollegiate championship meeting. The Stanfords are a new set of athletes, and they cannot be expected to display the same knowledge of athletics as their older brethren. The O. A. C. team think that they can win back their lost laurels again and it would be honest policy for the Berkeley students to forget all trifling differences and meet their dedicated foe men once more on the old battle ground, when the question of superiority would be forever settled.

The much talked about quarter of a mile foot race between A. S. Henderson and John D. Garrison took place at the Bay District track on Tuesday afternoon, March 9th. About 150 men were present to see the contest, and the backers of Henderson returned to town with heavy hearts and much experience. Henderson was in fine shape and was fit to cover the distance in 55 seconds or under, notwithstanding the fact that the track was soft and the wind strong. He declared himself to be defeated by Garrison in 60 seconds, and now arises the question, Was the race a fake? Garrison was not in good condition, and if reports be true he should have been left yards in the rear by his opponent. One thing certain is that the race was a pool-room contest, and each of the contestants, Garrison especially, placed more than one dollar in the pool-box. Experts say that the time was ridiculous and that Henderson held himself back. The majority of sporters who have been asked what they thought about the affair seemed to concur in the opinion that the race was not on the square. Garrison is about to leave this State and Henderson, it is also understood, will shortly move south. The shadow of suspicion which surrounds the whole affair will remain for a long time to come, but in course of time circumstances may clear it away, leaving the true state of affairs revealed.

Owing to want of space we are unable to notice the Olympic Club wrestling tournament in the present issue.

FOR THE DISTRICT.

The offer of all above Trotting and Pacing Stakes is repeated for the District, with $400 added to each, for yearlings, and $150 added to each for 2, 3, and 4-year-old class. 16 Stakes in all.

CONDITIONS.

In all races four moneys: 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent. National Association Rules to govern, except as otherwise stated. The Board reserves the right to trot heats of any two races alternately, or to call a special race between heats; also to change the day and hour of any race if deemed necessary. A horse winning a race entitled to first money only, except when disqualifying the field, then to first and third moneys. All colts properly entered in district stakes, if sold, are entitled to start in such races. Any colt not winning a heat in three, or making a dead heat, is barred from starting again in that race.

If it is the opinion of the judges, before starting a race, that it cannot be finished on the closing day of the fair, it may be declared off or continued at the option of the judges. In all races noted above, five or more full paid-up entries required to fill and three or more colts to start. If only two colts to start, they may compete for the stake paid in only two-thirds and one-third. Trotting and racing colors to be named in all entries and used in all heats. Stables, hay and straw free to competitors during the fair. Entries to above-named stakes close April 15, 1893, with the Secretary.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION APPLY TO JNO. McCORD, Pier 21, Steuart Street.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly on one side of the paper only. Positive no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

A. D. N. Walsh Station.—1. Give the breeding of the dam or Arno, bred and raised by Valentin at Arno, near Jeksville; a seal-brown stallion, about ten years old, sired by Buccaner 6556. I think that he was sold to Dan McCarty. 2. The breeding of a bay stallion that was called Commodore Mambrino, that Merrick took with Bayswater, near Petaluma, or in the vicinity, about fifteen years ago, and the spring of 879 at Sacramento. He was said to be bred by D. Herr, of Kentucky, and was related to Mambrino's father and Lady Thorne. 3. Is Ross S. registered? He was raised by Ross Sargent and owned by W. Osgin in Sacramento. Answer—1. By Volscian, though I doubt, son of Vandal. 2. We know nothing of Commodore Mambrino's breeding. 3. Ross S. is registered, number 18,900.

The following, written by Ben Roodhouse, now of Carrollton, Ill., to a friend in San Ramon, Cal., answers a number of questions, who are interested in the pedigree of Dirleton: "Your letter at hand purchased in Canada by Jas. St. Lawrence was said to be bred by D. Herr, of Kentucky, and was related to Mambrino's father and Lady Thorne. 3. Is Ross S. registered? He was raised by Ross Sargent and owned by W. Osgin in Sacramento. Answer—1. By Volscian, though I doubt, son of Vandal. 2. We know nothing of Commodore Mambrino's breeding. 3. Ross S. is registered, number 18,900."

Failure to make payments on the dates named will forfeit all previous payments and debar the delinquent from starting in the race. No added money paid for a walk-over. If only two start, they shall contest for the stakes paid in, divided two-thirds to winner, one-third to second horse. With three or more starters, the stakes and added money will be divided (where not already specified) 60 per cent. to the winner, 30 per cent. to the second horse and 10 per cent. to the third horse. The get of stallions that have died whilst owned in the District (as above ascribed) are eligible to all Stakes herein advertised. To constitute ownership in the District, the owner of a stallion must either be an actual resident therein or his name must appear as a taxpayer on real estate situated therein. Entries made under fraudulent pretenses of the ownership of the stallion in the District, will debar the person making such entry from starting in the same, and also all or any other entries made by such person in races occurring at the same meeting, and will forfeit all payments made to the Society. Otherwise National Trotting Association rules to govern.

Entries close April 1, 1893, with THOMAS MACLAY, Sec'y. J. H. WHITE, President.

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE OF Trotting Colts and Fillies AT AUCTION.

Belong the entire and uncut produce of the PICK OF DR. HICKS' BROOD MARES, reserved from his closing sale. These youngsters are deeper bred to trotting lines than can be found on any other farm in the State. They are all yearlings, sired by the richly-bred Wilkes horses Wilkesdale, 2:29 (brother to Miss Alice 2:13), Durfee (son of Kaiser 2:28, a producing son of Geo. Wilkes), the Belmont stallion Sterling (sire of seven in 2:30), and Prompter (sire of four in list). They include a filly by Wilkesdale, 2:29, dam Pearl, 2:52, by Blue Bull 75; second dam Light Foot (dam of Fred 2:34, in one year, and sister to Feralead, dam of three from 2:25 to 2:11 1/2) by Flax-tail; third dam Fanny Fero, by Tuckaboe, etc. A colt by Durfee, a richly bred grandson of Geo. Wilkes, dam by Sidney, second dam by Prompter, third dam thoroughbred.

COME TO GET A BARGAIN, AS THE COLTS WILL SELL CHEAP.

The speedy Flax-tail-Hambletonian cross exists in these colts, through great members of both families. They will be sold at auction at Sacramento, at the old Hicks stables, F street, bet. 16th and 17th streets.

SATURDAY, MARCH 25th, 1893, at 1.30 p. m. By order of the Superior Court.

PETER J. SHIELDS, Administrator, Sacramento Cal.

Pasturage.

Having a large stock ranch of rich pastureland about one mile and a half from Redwood City, I am prepared to take horses for pasture. There are small and large fields and paddocks, box stalls, stables, etc., and plenty of running water. The climate is warm and there is plenty of shelter the year round for stock. Pasturage $4 per month; stall room, etc., extra. I am prepared to train and handle colts and roadsters, and will take the best of care of all horses sent me.

RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE LODI RACE TRACK.

Rent of stalls, $2 per month each, in advance, with track privileges. Rebate allowed if stall is not used full month.

Those not renting stalls will be charged for use of track as follows: Single horse, $1.50 per month; two or more, $1.00 per month each.

Hay will be sold to those renting stalls at $8 per ton and oats at $1.60 per hundred.

A fine galloping track has been built on the grounds in addition to the regular track and a number of new stalls have been added, making this the most convenient and well regulated quarters for horses on the Coast.

The Standard-Bred Stallion

Count Anteeo

14,692

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1893 AT

COLUSA, CAL.

DESCRIPTION.—COUNT ANTEE0 14,692 is a handsome dark bay in color, with a star on the forehead and two white feet behind. He was foaled in 1884, and is a remarkably good horse in every respect, and while he has had but little training, he can easily show quarters in 27 seconds and, barring accidents, will be given a low record this year.

PEDIGREE.—Count Anteeo, sired by Anteeo, 7868, record 2:16 1/4 (sire of James Madison, 2:17 1/4, Myrtle (3) 2:15 1/2, Alfred G., 2:18 1/4, Redwood, 2:21 1/4, Maudie, 2:24 1/4, Ethel Mac, 2:23 1/2, Sunset, 2:28, Astero Jr., 2:28 1/2, Anteeo Richmond, 2:24 1/4, Electeeo, 2:29 1/2, Eoline, 2:30, Maud M., 2:20 1/2 and two others in the list. Anteeo was sired by Electioneer, 125 (sire of Sunol, 2:08 1/4, Palo Alto, 2:08 1/4, Arton (2) 2:10 1/4, Advertiser (3) 2:16 and 128 mares in the list).

First dam, Countess (dam of Dawn, 2:18 1/4, Strathway, 2:19, Mora, (trial) 2:28 and Young Countess, dam of Dhechess, 2:18 1/2). Countess was sired by Hambletonian, 725 (sire of Graves, 2:19, Oliveite, 2:22, Empress, 2:24, Longfellow, 2:24 1/4, and 10 others in the list; second dam Fly, a very fast mare.

TERMS, $60 FOR THE SEASON, payable on 1st of July, 1893. Excellent care taken of mares in any manner that owners may desire at reasonable rates but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be sent to the undersigned. For further particulars apply to or address

W. W. SMITH, COLUSA, CAL.

Don Marvin.

RACE RECORD, 5th BEAT, 2:22 1-2.

Don Marvin is a beautiful self brown, foaled 1884; bred by Sen. Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal., 16 hands high, and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Falls, 2:23 (sire of six in 2:30 list), he by Electioneer, first dam Cora (dam of Don Marvin, 2:22 1/2, and Electeeo, trial 2:28) by Don Victor, son of Belmont; second dam Clarabel (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24 1/2, and Rebecca dam of five in 2:30 list) by Abdalla Star; third dam Fairy (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:23 1/2, and Sweetstikes sire of twenty-seven in 2:30 list) by Hambletonian 10; fourth dam Emma Mills (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star. Don Marvin will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $50 the season, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast—four producing dams

Nutwood Boy.

SIRE0 BY NUTWOOD, 2:18 3-4.

Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1325 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest living likeness to his celebrated sire, Nutwood, of any station in California. First-dam Eltry Parkhurst, by Goldfinder, he by Imp. Belshazzar; second dam Old Kate, by Grey Beard, grand son of Imp. Messenger. Nutwood Boy's opportunity in the stud has been of the most limited description. He is the sire of comparatively very few colts; several of his oldest are, however, showing speed enough to be candidates for the 2:30 list this season. He is a square, level-gaited trotter, and with only five weeks' track work a year ago, trotted a trial in 2:28; last half in 1:13. After his stud season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "fall circuit" and gaining him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $3 per month. Mares will be carefully handled, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13 1/4, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Granoee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31 1/2, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20 1/4, and frequently trotted quarters in from 8 1/2 to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both fore- and hind legs. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action snperb. He is a sure foal-getter.

TERMS.—$50. Season to close August 1st. Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

DR. T. W. HARRIS, Eugene, Oregon.

Alect

The Handsome Son of ELECTOR 2170. Will make Season of 1893, ending July 15, at BOARO RANCH, near Orland, Glenn County.

ALECT was foaled April 13, 1887. He is a handsome dark bay, two white fetlocks; stands 15 1/2 hands and weighs 1075 lbs. He is symmetrical in conformation, perfect in disposition, and as purged as any Electioneer that ever lived. He has the finest of legs and feet, and is remarkably well-muscled throughout; his back is short, his loins strong and quarters heavy; he is stylish and very level-headed. Alect never received a trainer's care, yet he trotted without any work a mile over the Stockton track in 2:26. Alect was bred as a three-year-old to a few mares, and his colts and fillies are all models of symmetry, beauty and trotting action; all are of good color.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON, with the usual return privilege. Pasturage, $4 per month. Mares kept in any manner owners may desire, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars call on or address

ALECT and about thirty head of colts and fillies by Alect, Guy Wilkes, Nemo, Noonday and St. Nicholas will be sold at auction in June, 1893.

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/2 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:03.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darehin). He stands 15.3 hands on steely legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong hack, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darehin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darehin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, for apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caractacus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid race-horses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libellous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

DICTATUS

Will make the Season of 1893, commencing February 1st
and ending June 1st, at

BELMONT STOCK FARM,

BELMONT, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL.

SERVICE FEE FOR THE SEASON..... $100
(Will be allowed to serve fifteen approved outside mares.)

DICTATUS was foaled in 1890. He was sired by the great RED WILKES 1749, (sire of 88 in the list); dam, MRS LOLLIE, by DICTATOR 133 (sire of JAY-EYE-SEE, 2:10, DIRECTOR, 2:17, and 41 others in the list, besides the dam of NANCY HANKS, 2:04, etc.); second dam, Gold Pen (dam of Felina, 2:29½, and grandam of Hill Boy (p). 2:20, by Mambrino Abdallah 2201 (son of Mambrino Patchen 58); third dam by Harold 413 (sire of Maud S., 2:03½, and 41 others in the list and grandsire of Kremlin, 2:07½); fourth dam, Emily Chester, by Mambrino Patchen 58; fifth dam Patsey (dam of Midway), by Snowstorm (sire of Jim Irving, 2:23). He is in color a chestnut, with star in forehead, one hind pastern white. In conformation he is perfect, being about 15.2 hands in height, very short back, strong over the coupling, heavy quarters, large, well-muscled gaskins and arms limbs straight, cannon bones short, hocks and joints clean and bony, and feet of the finest kind. His neck, head and body denote an iron constitution. His shoulders are sloping, and, taking him all in all, a more perfect representative of the great Wilkes-Dictator cross does not exist to-day. His breeding speaks for itself. He traces four times to Hambletonian 16 through his greatest sires—GEO. WILKES, DICTATOR, HAROLD and ABDALLAH 15. He traces to Mambrino Patchen twice and three times to Mambrino Chief. His blood-lines are unequalled by any stallion on this Coast.

ITS OBJECT

is to prevent disease, to regulate the bowels and urine; it strengthens the kidneys, prevents scouring, colic and leg swelling; loosens the hide, fattens stock, promotes the appetite, cures coughs, destroys worms and bots, and produces a fine, glossy coat. To the stall-fed horse it has the beneficial effects and results of grazing without the softening effects of a season of grass with loss of time and money. For milch cows it increases and enriches their milk.

Training
The Trotting Horse.
BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.
Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and finest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."
Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

Horse-back Riders, Boxers and Gamblers, when you want to ride, run, walk, row, skate or swim a long distance, USE

ANTI-STIFF

To Strengthen the Muscles.

To Strengthen the Muscles.

It is a marvelous preparation for Strengthening the Muscular System. With Anti-Stiff there is no fault required; it goes straight for the muscles, and you feel it at work. It has a peculiarly warming, comforting and stimulating effect on all weak or stiff muscles and sinews. Quick in its action, cleanly and pleasant in use. Rub it into the muscles every night for a fortnight, and you will be pleased at its stuporific and strengthening properties. There is not, nor has been, anything like it till now. It differs from all Oils, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some Athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them.
Price 20c. and 35c. per box.
Trainers size, $1.00.

Stallion Ringwood, The Famous Son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney in formation more than any of his sons. He is a pure-gaited trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he showed trials of speed in 2:19 1/4 as a four-year-old, and would have received a record of 2:15 or better but for an accident at the Napu track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dashaway (thoroughbred), he by Williamson's Belmont, he by American Boy; second dam Fanny Cob, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

ALSO FOR SALE

Tippoo Tib,

Gelding record, 2:26. Can trot in 2:20 or better; will show quarters in 0:32; 15 1/2 high; light bay; a great road horse; single or double, and perfectly sound. Ringwood or Tippoo Tib can be put in training and win their price in one season. For further particulars, address

A. C. DIETZ, Oakland, Or, Breeder and Sportsman Office, San Francisco.

FOR SALE.

STANDARD STALLION

FRED DRAKE 4834, (Race Record, 2:26 1/4).

By Joe Gavin 564 (sire of 6 in the list), he by Messinger Duroc 106 (sire of 20 in the list), first dam, Minnie Drake (dam of 2 in the list), by Louis Napoleon 207 (sire of 16 in the list). Fred Drake 4834, 2:26 1/4, is a splendid individual; stands about 16 hands high, and weighs over 1,100 lbs., is of excellent disposition. His record is no mark of his speed as he can trot in :20 or better with training next season. Reason for selling is that owner is engaged in other business and has not the time to devote to the horse. Will be sold at a reasonable price. For particulars address

H. R. WARNER, San Gabriel, Cal.

FOR SALE.

Standard and Registered Bay Mare.

Stands 16 hands high, very stylish, a great pole horse record, 2:31; trial, 2:23; guaranteed sound, and is ready for fast work, as she has been jogged all winter. Must sell for cash or approved notes. Price, $1,000. Address, "A. B."

CARE OF THE NEW-BORN FOAL.

The greatest period of danger to an animal is the first few days of existence, before the animal economy has been accustomed to the surroundings imposed upon it at birth, at which time all environments are radically changed, the functions of some organs of the highest importance during fetal life must now be abolished or greatly curtailed in importance, while organs that have remained dormant up to birth must take responsible parts in the maintenance of life.

Chief among these in point of danger to the life of the young animal are those in connection with the organs directly concerned in nutrition, before and after birth, and a careful study of the mortality of young foals will show that fully 90 per cent. of it is referable to the changes in these organs necessitated by birth.

In mammals intra uterine or fetal life is maintained by a blood supply from the mother through the medium of the umbilical (naval) cord, consisting principally of the two arteries, and the anterior opening of the bladder, known as the urachus. At birth this cord of union between mother and young must be severed, which is attained in a state of nature by sufficient pulling or dragging upon it to cause its rupture, a method possessing several points of decided superiority over those sometimes improvised by attendants.

The rupturing of the arteries of the cord by this natural method of tension causes the vessel walls to give away at different points in a rough, irregular manner, which, aided by the contractile power of the muscular and elastic coats, serve to retard the flow of and entangle the blood so that a firm clot is formed, completely sealing the ruptured vessel, and hence it is very rare that serious bleeding occurs when its rupture is left entirely to nature.

On the other hand, if the cord be divided by a knife or other sharp instrument, profuse bleeding at once ensues from the clean-cut ends of the arteries, which is likely to prove fatal unless stopped by further artificial interference in the form of a ligature. By the natural method the liquid parts of the blood which separate from the more solid parts of the clot which serves to hermetically seal the divided ends of the blood-vessels are freely permitted to slowly exude from the ruptured end of the cord, and like opportunity is also given for the escape of a very considerable amount of similar fluids from that part of the cord remaining attached to the body of the foal, while a ligature retains this moisture to a very dangerous extent by preventing its exit from the ruptured end, while the sides allow but slight evaporation of liquids through their well-nigh impervious serous covering.

The retention of this moisture in the cord forms a highly favorable breeding-ground for those living micro-organisms (bacteria, etc.), which are now recognized as the essential factor in the decomposition of organic matter, whether animal or vegetable, and thus may, and not infrequently do, originate serious disease processes.

The point of danger most ineffectually guarded by nature in the ruptured naval cord is the umbilical or navel vein, the walls of which, being but scantily supplied with muscular or elastic tissue, do not undergo that rapid and firm constriction which so effectually closes the broken ends of the arteries, nor is it necessary so far as bleeding is concerned that this vein should close so firmly, as the flow of the blood through it is toward the heart, while that from the artery is outward, and besides the arterial blood pressure is far greater than that of the veins.

In recent years, by the aid of the microscope, it has been clearly demonstrated that living organisms (bacteria, micrococci, etc.) play a highly important role in most animal diseases and are recognized as the essential factor in contagious maladies and in the disease processes such as occur in wounds and inflammation of various tissues and organs.

Bearing in mind that after rupture of the navel vein of a young animal it remains comparatively open, it will be readily understood that there is good opportunity offered for the entrance of these disease-producing germs which, once in the vessel, find a location highly suitable for their multiplication. In this rich breeding ground their progress may be limited to the immediate vicinity of the navel by a firm blood clot or plug in the vein, or this barrier proving inadequate, these germs may multiply or extend along the course of the vessel, soon reaching and gaining entrance into the great portal vein at its entrance to the liver, and thence these germs and their products are rapidly disseminated throughout the entire system by the blood current.

Should the entrance of these germs and their products into the general circulation be effectually barred by a firm clot in the navel vein, there appears at the navel in one to several weeks after birth a considerable hard swelling, which later softens and breaks, discharging pus, and, if properly cared for, eventually heals without producing serious results.

If, however, the blood clot in the vein proves an ineffectual barrier against the invasion of the micro-organisms, and these gain entrance, with their products, into the general circulation in considerable quantity, they promptly inaugurate serious systematic disturbances, and the foal from two to five days old, which has previously appeared in perfect health, suddenly refuses the mother's milk, becomes dull, stupid and listless, with drooping ears, a pinched, painful expression, rapid breathing, great weakness, constipation of the bowels, which may be early followed by diarrhoea, high fever, etc. These symptoms, which in many cases prove rapidly fatal, are probably due to the poisonous products (ptomanies) of the disease germs themselves.

Generally, in cases which do not prove rapidly fatal, these primary symptoms abate somewhat in a few days, or in milder cases the above related condition passes unnoticed, when a wholly different and exceedingly varied train of symptoms of no less serious import than the former are developed, due to the lodging of aggregations (emboli) of the disease germs in some of the fine blood vessels.

In this way occur sudden and severe inflammations of the various joints, attributed generally to the dam treading upon the foal's legs when down. The joints most commonly affected are those of the stifle, hock, elbow and knee. The affected joints are swollen, hot, painful; appear suddenly, sometimes disappear equally abruptly and reappear again in some other articulation. They may suppurate and result in an open joint, which, if healed, will leave the joint stiff and enlarged. When occurring in the stifle joint, dropsy (hydrarthrosis) occurs, which causes a partial dislocation of the patella (whirl-bone) which slips out and in at each step with a cracking noise; an infirmity which is likely to persist throughout life.

Most cases, which have inflamed joints from this cause, succumb to the disease after enduring much suffering, becoming greatly emaciated and covered with bed-sores. In the majority of cases of this disease the bowels are quite irregular, at one time seriously constipated; at another equally serious diarrhoea is present. We quite often find, also, abscesses in the liver, lungs and other internal organs of the body, which result fatally, while in other cases an acute inflammation of the eye may occur, or extensive abscesses may form in the large muscles. It will thus be seen that we have here to deal with a very serious malady affecting the entire system and developing an endless variety of local symptoms according to the location or organ in which the aggregation of disease-producing germs may find lodgment, and when any of this varied train of symptoms are present a careful examination of the navel will show, in most cases, a small opening extending inward and forward, into which a probe can be passed and from which a slight discharge takes place while in many cases the discharge changes, causing a reopening of the bladder, resulting in the dribbling of urine from the navel.

Although the veterinarian, by means of medication, can in many cases do much good, yet the chief and most valuable interest to the breeder lies in the means of preventing these micro-organisms from gaining an entrance into the body.

The disease is evidently more common in recent years, and there must be some reason for this in the changes in methods of breeding and the environment of the new-born foal. It has been suggested that our present breeds are not so hardy, and hence more prone to such affections, but since the malady is due solely to local infection we must find some marked difference in the navel cord itself to demonstrate this theory, but it appears that the navel of a draft or roadster colt of to-day is the same as several decades ago, and both classes of foals given the same surroundings seem equally liable to attack; so we must look to the surroundings as the essential cause in all cases. By far the greatest number of cases occur in foals dropped in the stall or barnyard, or brought into them soon after birth and allowed to lie down with the freshly-broken cord and navel vein in direct contact with decomposing manure and filth, and it is a well-known fact among scientists that this decomposing dung, urine, bedding, etc., form a highly favorable breeding ground for a variety of disease germs, and that such barnyard filth is constantly teeming with them.

Here, too, are found the germs of tetanus (lockjaw), and so we occasionally see young foals die from this disease, evidently due to the germs having found entrance into the system through the freshly-ruptured navel.

It consequently happens that this joint, or navel (omphalophlebitis, or pyosephamia) occurs mainly in very early foals before the weather will admit of mares being kept on pasture where the foals can be dropped and remain on clean grass; it then largely disappears in late spring and early summer, and becomes proportionately more common again as the hot season advances, probably owing to the carrying of infective material, to the newly ruptured navel by means of flies. I have already noted that ligating (tying) the cord frequently tends to produce the disease by preventing the escape of fluids from the remnant of the cord, thus interfering with the drying process.

The suggestion naturally follows that the freshly severed navel cord should be carefully guarded against infection until it is hermetically sealed by drying, and, if this be done, experience has shown that the disease cannot occur, but these precautions must be taken early, as soon as possible after birth, as infection may occur very quickly, and once the germs have gained an entrance into the cord the drying of it is of no avail, so that many cases of disease occur in which there are no noticeable symptoms of local trouble at the navel. It may be stated that as a rule the greater local symptoms at the navel (swelling, suppuration, etc.) the less the systemic disturbances, and vice versa, and, as before noted, this may be explained upon the ground that an effectual plugging of the navel vein between the navel and liver confines the disease germs to the immediate vicinity, and compels the discharge of disease products externally, while if the plug in the vein be destroyed and no effectual barrier to the entrance of the disease germs and their products into the system remains, the navel is left free to dry up and assume an appearance differing but slightly, if at all, from health.

It is worthy to remark that this disease rarely occurs in the young of animals which freely lick their newly-born offspring, especially those with prehensile tongues, like the cow, bitch and others; but let the cows be denied the opportunity by being closely confined by the head, as is common in dairies, and the malady becomes common in their young.

It is well known that saliva is a reliable antiseptic, consequently free licking of the remnant of the navel cord tends to destroy such disease germs as may have lodged upon it. Two thoughts are then suggested for the prevention of this disease:

First: Have the foal dropped and kept in a scrupulously clean place, preferably in a clean pasture.

Second: Protect the navel carefully immediately after birth by the proper application to the severed cord of remedies which destroy living germs, combined with agents which will tend to rapidly dry and hermetically seal it against further danger. When such application is made before infection has taken place, and antiseptic precautions carried out until the navel is dry and sealed, the danger from this disease is passed, and many veterinarians in breeding districts now furnish such remedies to their patrons, with good results.

The second group of diseases which the new-born foal is specially liable, those of the digestive system, and more readily prevented generally by the breeder and far more effectually treated by the veterinarian. They consist in general of two conditions—constipation and diarrhoea.

The first condition, as usually seen, is due to retention in the bowels of the fecal matter, which is already present at birth (meconium), and which the breeder should see is safely expelled shortly after birth, and, if necessary, aid it by means of warm water enemata.

Later, constipation may result from a bad quality of milk, want of exercise, or from eating hay, bedding or rubbish. When milk trickles from the mare's udder for several days prior to foaling, thus losing the first milk (colostrum), which acts as a gentle aperient to the foal, constipation is quite likely to follow as a result. Constipation of any considerable amount demands the attention of the veterinary surgeon, as it is quite likely, if neglected, to lead to a fatal inflammation of the bowels, or by the straining to induce rupture or increase the size of one already established, or it may lead to protrusion of the bowels, and quite commonly it ends in the second—diarrhoea.

Diarrhoea, when not due to constipation or infection through the navel, is generally caused by the taking of too great a quantity of milk, and not infrequently to the eating of hay, straw, etc., when the foal has not yet the necessary teeth for masticating such food and the stomach and bowels are not sufficiently developed for digestion. In foals that have died of diarrhoea I have seen large accumulations of unchewed hay wadded together in the stomach, while in other cases the discharges are freely mixed with broken, undigested straws, which act as a serious irritation. In other cases it is due to unhealthy milk, either from ill-health, improper feeding or overheating of the dam. Allowing free access to the mare after the foal has been kept from her until very hungry is a fertile source of this disease.

A study of the causes of diarrhoea suggests rational means for preventing it. The prevention or relief of constipation removes one fertile source of diarrhoea, while partially milking the mare at proper times effectually prevents overeating, and the eating by the foal of hay, straw and rubbish should be prevented by placing in a clean pasture, where such material is not available, or if kept in the stable or barnyard, by muzzling and thus confining it strictly to a moderate allowance of its mother's milk. Thus, by proper attention, the causes which lead to this affection can be largely overcome and diarrhoea rendered very rare, and its severity, when not prevented, greatly lessened.

There are other diseases, defects and accidents which may impede the life or future usefulness of the foal, but these largely come within the domain of veterinary medicine and surgery, and are always far less common than the two groups of the diseases here considered, the prevention of which should be the constant aim of every horse breeder, since once this danger period is safely passed there is little hazard to the life of the animal until maturity.

It may be safely stated that in the hands of most breeders more fatalities occur, or the foundation for them is securely laid during the first week of the foal's existence the following three years.—W. L. Williams, V. S., in Western Agriculturist and Live Stock Journal.

Of these, count not upon Sunol and Maud S., because their owner, adhering to the clearly defined rule of his life, will not enter in a race. It is not likely that Axtell or Gny will be found in a free-for-all field, nor is it probable that McKinney will leave his home on the Pacific Coast to contest the supremacy with the stars of the East. We doubt very much if Dohle will consent to start Stamboul in an open-to-all class, and the stud engagements of Kremlin are so heavy that he may be held in reserve for the struggles of 1894. The candidates, which are reasonably sure to compete, are Martha Wilkes, Belle Vara, Alix, Moquette, Nelson, Little Albert, Lord Clinton, Greenleaf, Nightingale, Directum, Gillette, Erminie, Fred S. Wilkes, Monbars, Regal Wilkes, Walter E., Constantine, Belle Archer and Belle Hamlin. It is too much to expect that all of these will start for the same purse, but the chances are that they will be nominated at different times for classes free to all. Should those that we have named meet, we think that it would be safe to put a little money on Greenleaf and Nightingale. Alix was a wonderful four-year-old, and she will be hard to vanquish this season. Belle Vara is a great mare, but she has not the speed of Martha Wilkes. The open-to-all class, with its number and quality, furnishes a field for an endless amount of speculation.—Turf, Field and Farm.

The fastest son of the great stallion Gen. Benton will make the season of 1893 at the beautiful Rose Dale Breeding Farm, Santa Rosa, at the low price of $60 for service fee. Daly is out of Dolly, by the immortal Electioneer, sire of 132 in the list, and his second dam is Lady Dooley, 2:31 (dam of Loyalec, 2:30), by McCracken's Black Hawk. Daly is one of the finest looking stallions on the coast and from the easy way he trotted to his record it would not be boasting to say that he will get a mark below 2:10 if given any work. Digitalis the other stallion standing at this farm is by Daly, 2:15, out of Cygnat, by Steinway, 2:25 1/2 (sire of W. Wood, 2:07, Cricket, 2:10, Strathway, 2:19, Chas. third dam Maud second dam Lash, by Woodford Mambrino; third dam Maud (dam of King Jim, 2:20), and the dam of Attorney, sire of Attorney Jr., 2:13, and others), by Abdallah 15; fourth dam by Robert Bruce. He will stand for $25 the season, and in July will be prepared for a record. Digitalis is as handsome and perfect in conformation as his sire, while his bloodlines are of the very best. See the advertisement in this issue.

A New Training Stable.

William Boyd, the well-known California trotting-horse trainer, who has been employed by Marcus Daly for the last two years shoeing and balancing his trotters, has opened a training stable at Stockton. Boyd has shod and balanced for all the knights of the sulky for the last twelve years. If he can command the steel in the horses' mouth as he can on the foot he will be an artist in the business.

PARIS MUTUELS AND AUCTION POOLS

Benefits to be Derived by Substituting This Style of Betting for Bookmaking.

[Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

The articles regarding the abolition of bookmaking that have appeared in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN recently have attracted widespread attention, and almost without exception race-goers and fair-minded horsemen have endorsed you and declared against the bookmaker and his "cinch" odds. Bookmaking would not be so bad if the pencilers acted fairly throughout and gave reasonable prices against the chances of the various horses entered in the races, but the fact is that many of the bookmakers are not averse to putting up a job to pilfer the public purse, and seldom give anything like fair odds against most of the horses. The profits of bookmaking as conducted on this coast are immense, and bookmakers that a few years ago did not have street-car fare or were satisfied to drive one of these vehicles are now the possessors of heavy bank-rolls and horses galore, the money to pay for which came out of the pockets of the players of races.

There are so many benefits to be derived from the abolition of bookmaking and consequent closing up of the pool-rooms that it would be hard to embrace them in one article. Suffice it to say that the racing would be fairer, the odds almost invariably better on money wagered; the money that now goes into the hands of the bookmakers (there to remain) would go to the horsemen, and thus give an impetus to racing that nothing but larger purses and more stakes can give. The bookmakers are non-producers, and are only doing business for the money that they can squeeze from the public through making a steel-ribbed "cinch" book, not through any love they bear the noble animal that furnishes the "sport of kings." As showing how bold the well-fed, bediamonded bookie has become in San Francisco, we have it on good authority that one of the guild was asked the other day at Bay District track if he had seen the horses that were going to take part in the coming meeting. "Naw," he said, with a toss of his head and a sneer; "What in h— do I want to look at the horses for? It's owners and jockeys that I want to see." This was more truth than poetry in what this fellow said. All bookmakers are not as bold or as bad as the pencil mentioned above, but as the public suspect nine out of every ten bookmakers of practicing fraud, and as there is no necessity for them, we say, remove the cause for this feeling of distrust, and there will be a great gain in attendance and ten-fold more interest in racing. As an Eastern writer truthfully remarked recently: "No member of the Stock Exchange is regarded as carrying on a skin game, and why should a racing man be if there is no possibility of fraud? So long as pool-rooms and bookmakers exist, that opportunity exists. But to do away with these, and in their place adopt the Paris mutuel system, and betting becomes a speculation in which common sense and judgment play as much and chance no more a part than these do in Wall street." Superintendent Byrnes has just closed up all the New York pool-rooms (for good, it is hoped), but the keepers of these resorts are wealthy and will fight to the bitter end. There are comparatively few of these places now in the country, we are happy to say, and were they all done away with racing would be looked on with a great deal more favor and receive far more support at the hands of first-class business men, and the poor, deluded beings that almost live in these rooms would be forced to go to work and the better class would attend the races where they do not at present.

Under the Paris mutuel system of betting it would not matter which horse won a race, some bettor or bettors would get the money. At present, under the "booking" plan, a "rank outsider" upon whom a bet has not been laid comes first under the wire, and the bookmaker gathers in all the coin that has been wagered in his box, and this amount is taken away, never to be returned, in all likelihood. The circulation of that coin is at an end. Under the mutuel system, there would be no occasion for unprincipled men to give an owner, trainer or jockey more money to lose a particular race than the purse or stake amounted to. This has been done time and again by bookmakers in America and other countries, if reports from reliable sources are to be believed. There would be little or no "stiffening" of horses to fool the public. Nowadays this is not uncommon. Bookmakers have seldom scrupled at giving a dishonest owner half the amount taken in on that particular person's horse as a fee for filling the animal with water, giving it some stupefying drug, having the jockey ride wide at the turns or get the horse in a convenient pocket. Any observant race-goer knows that such things as told of above have been done times without number. Stop bookmaking, and a long step is taken in the work of purification. There are only two objections being urged or that can be urged against the pari-mutuel or auction-pool method of betting. One is that the bettor does not know just what odds he is going to receive in the former, and the "plunger" THINKS he cannot get his money on in time. In answer to these objections we will state that they amount to nothing. A perusal of the papers where both book and mutuel bets are made will show that the odds received are ALMOST INVARIABLY better in the mutuels than in the books. What matters it, then, if one does not know exactly for a few moments what odds he is getting against his money? The element of chance about the matter should lend an additional charm to the average bettor. In regard to the "plunger" "getting his money on," it can be so arranged that every man would have little trouble in betting all he desires. There could, without discomfort, be three or four auction pool-boxes going at the same time, and that would accommodate most of the heavier bettors. In addition, there could be $1, $2 and $10 mutuel tickets sold on every horse in a race, and these prices would allow the small, as well as heavy players to wager all the coin they desired. Put in a dozen of these mutuel boxes, if necessary, and let the associations employ their own auctioneers and ticket-sellers, thereby securing the commissions, instead of the bookmaker, who has enjoyed a good thing, and abused it, until the public cry out for reform. As racing associations are not formed for the purpose of making money for the members, and the amount received from commissions would go to the horsemen, in the shapes of stakes and purses, that all honest owners of racehorses would herald such a change as we have proposed with feelings of joy is certain. A crusade against non-producing, greedy, dishonest pencilers is being made in all the racing centers of America, and the bookmaker must go. PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Horse-Raising in Canada Northwest.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Having received the other day a letter from a friend who has a ranch in Canada Northwest, just east of the Rocky Mountains, I thought it might be of interest to some of your readers to hear his views on raising horses in Canada.

He says: My preference is horses, but there is more money in cattle. It is pleasant to work with horses, but not so with cattle, though there is more money in the latter, and that is the main thing here. The kind of horses raised is principally the heavy draft—Clydesdales chiefly. They do, and will continue for some time yet, to bring a good price, but the all-round, general-purpose horse is slowly, but surely, coming into favor.

It would pay a man well to begin now breeding that class of horse. Short, chunky and thick set, with good action—in fact, the English work horse is the kind wanted here—an animal that will plough, ride or drive equally well.

There are one or two ranches here which raise thoroughbred horses, but I don't know whether they make anything out of it or not. This part of the country has not the class of people who like thoroughbreds, as you may readily imagine; they are nearly all farmers who can think of nothing but heavy brutes—the heavier the better.

I will await with interest the result of the first experiment of sending horses to the old country. If there is once a market there, crossing the thoroughbred on the draft man will produce the cavalry horse they require. The most profitable horse at present here is, as I said before, the draft horse, but the general-purpose animal is gaining great strides. The time of branding and halter-breaking is six months of age. The colt, in castration, is merely roped, thrown, tied, castrated and immediately let loose, but they are not castrated till they have attained a year's growth. They are broken to harness between two and three years, but after three years is the best time.

Not many of our horses here are sent out of the country; a few go to British Columbia, a good many to Eastern Canada, and a few are brought up around here.

It is only the very large ranches that institute the "round ups." The owners of fifty to a hundred head only take a day or so to get theirs, but the owner of three thousand takes about three months. The cold here is very dry, and though it is forty below zero and the mercury frozen solid in the tube, I only wear my usual winter clothes. We get covered with frost from head to foot after a ride and the horse covered with frozen steam, but no one thinks of that. To-morrow it will likely be seventy degrees in the sun and a hot Chinook wind blowing.

I remember it over thirty below zero in the morning and at night we were eating supper with the door wide open and neither coat nor vest on.

At the present moment my partner is engaged in the (to you) outrageous task of sawing some bread, to thaw out in the oven for dinner, with a hand saw.

At night everything is usually frozen solid as a brick and our first task is to thaw out the provisions, etc., etc., etc.

I am an old friend of the above writer and can vouch for the accuracy of any statements he makes. From this letter one can judge of the difference in raising horses in Canada northwest of California. Hoping this will prove of interest, Sincerely yours, F. W. SKAIFE.

ONE of the harmful practices of the auction business has been the buying of stallions at private sale at a nominal price and then putting them in an auction sale and bidding them up to a fabulous figure, which is heralded all over the country as the correct price. The practice is simply a huncue game, and good men have been engaged in it. Talk about the "widows" of the South End being thieves, they are no worse than the men who have played the first game mentioned. Take the evil practices of the turf—selling, buying and pulling races, the dropping of a heat by a horse which has speed enough to win—all are on a par, perhaps, above the methods which have inflated the prices of trotting horses by quoting fictitious values. When the produce of such horses will not sell at two years of age for their service fee, then those who have played the game will find that their hoom was a boomerang, and that the sharper is a "sucker."

THE English broodmare Wandering Nun, by Hermit, dam Voga, by Stockwell, recently dead, calls to mind one of the closest finishes ever recorded in the history of the turf in any country, says the Turf, Field and Farm. It was in the Astley Stakes at Lewes, and five horses finished so close together that the public could not pick the winner from the lot. The judge's verdict was: "A dead heat for first place between Wandering Nun, Scobell and Mazurka; these three a head in front of Cumberland and Thora, who made a dead heat for second place." This decision was not without many dissenters, and scarcely a dozen people who witnessed the contest could be found but what placed the horses differently from their neighbors, and as it was possible for these five horses to finish 120 different ways, the tremendously wide difference of general opinion can be easily imagined.

Metropolitan Trotting Topics.

(Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

NEW YORK, March 15, 1893.—The conference of the delegates or rather representatives of the two trotting associations and the Register Association took place in this city this week, beginning on Monday. Major P. P. Johnston, Hon. G. M. Fogg and Major H. C. McDowell represented the National Trotting Association; Hon. W. P. Ijams, C. L. Benjamin and Hon. G. B. McFall the American Trotting Association, while William Russell Allen and F. E. Perkins represented the Registry Association. The secretaries, J. H. Steiner and M. M. Morse, were also present.

It was my good fortune to have a pleasant chat with Mr. Steiner and some of the delegates before the convention. I found all hopeful for an amicable and harmonious meeting. "I am in hopes both associations will practically adopt the rules governing time-records formulated and adopted by the Register Association," said Secretary Steiner. I found a very strong undercurrent in favor of doing away with time-records entirely. "They have served their purpose, if indeed any good purpose could ever be credited to the custom," said a delegate.

Of course any reader can infer that Mr. Steiner's expressions of opinion foreshadowed the action of the American Trotting and American Register delegates, as he is registrar of one and secretary of the other. This would constitute the balance of power and leave the National delegates to stand out as a minority or acquiesce.

After a long discussion the conference adjourned until yesterday morning, when the rules of the Registrar Association were practically adopted by the following, drafted by delegates Fogg, Allen and McFall and accepted by the entire conference.

Performances against time must be conducted in accordance with the following rules and regulations:

They must be made at a regular meeting of a society in membership with the National Trotting Association or American Trotting Association; said performances to be conducted by the regularly appointed judges and timers for the day, strictly in accordance with the rules of said National or American Trotting Association adopted by the member.

No animal shall be permitted to start against time pending a heat or trial by another animal, nor until the result of such heat or trial shall have been duly announced.

Time shall be taken by three timers engaged in the stand during the performance.

There shall be three judges in the stand during such performances, who shall not act as official timers.

The adoption of these rules will prevent a track filled with horses following each other in rapid succession in efforts for records against time. It was a sight to bring a blush upon the cheek of any one having the best interests of the trotting turf at heart to witness such scenes as have been prevalent upon some track during so-called record meetings, when horse after horse followed each other for the word until the procession became almost a continuous line. And such performances are accepted and count as records just as much as the heats won by a good game horse in the thick of battle. Is it not a travesty upon horse racing?

To-day the delegates adopted several important changes to the present rules, among others changing the distance stand from 100 yards when eight or less horses start and 150 yards when the field comprises over eight to fifty yards and seventy-five yards, or exactly one-half the former distance. This will do away practically with laying up heats, and is much better than the useless rule enacted some time ago giving judges discretionary power to allow a driver to lay up a heat.

Another important change was in relation to the position of starting in the next heat by two horses having made a dead heat. The National rule was to draw lots for the pole and the American that each should start according to the position at the finish of the dead heat. This latter has now been adopted by the delegates.

Another important point decided was that hereafter there shall be more complete reciprocity between the two trotting associations. Hereafter all penalties by either association will be observed by the other, and penalized drivers or owners will not be allowed to start by either association while under penalty. All fines of $25 or over will be collected by either association for the other and paid over, and the penalty becomes removed at once upon payment to either. This will prevent dishonest turfmen from renewing practices upon the grounds of one association when driven off the grounds of the other.

Hon. G. B. McFall then offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

There shall be a joint standing committee on rules, consisting of the president of each association and four others, two from each association, the president to name the members to represent the association of which he is an officer. Such committee shall meet two days prior to each biennial congress at the place of meeting of such congress, and all proposed changes in the rules shall be referred to such committee, to be reported on by them to the congress. The joint standing committee on rules shall constitute a Board of Arbitration, to whom all questions of difference arising between the National and American Trotting Associations shall be referred for final determination, and for that purpose they may call in one person who is not connected with either association to preside over their deliberations, and such person shall have a vote in case of a tie.

The conference then adjourned to re-convene at Chicago on April 4th next.

Secretary Parker informs me that the Executive Committee of the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders have decided to open the following stakes, which will close on May 15th:

Stakes for foals of 1893, to be trotted in 1893, graded for 2:30 and 2:40 classes, $50 each.

Annual Nursery Stake, free for all foals of 1892, to be trotted in 1893, $75 each.

Everett Horse Stake, for foals of 1892 by stallions none of whose get have beaten 2:30 as three-year-olds or under, to be trotted in 1893, $50 each.

National Trotting Sire Stake for foals of 1892. Sires to be named May 15, 1893; colts named January 1, 1894. To be trotted in 1895, $25 to name stake, and $25 additional for starters.

Matron Stake, for foals of 1892, to be trotted in 1895; $5 to name mare, and $20 additional when nominating foal, the balance to be paid before starting.

FIDELIA and her half-sister, Flirtation (sister to Flambeau), are built on identical lines. They have handsome heads and beautifully curving necks, short backs and immense quarters, with clean, steely-looking limbs. They both have long bodies, and are deep enough, in all conscience, through the heart, and if they do not prove stake-winners it avails anyone not to look at equine shape, for they haveth the appearance of crackerjacks.

A Plan for a Futurity.

(Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

Two-year-old racing has greater possibilities than almost any other branch of trotting, and it will do more to give us a race of profitable trotters than any other form of this sport. By proper management great and valuable stakes can be easily gotten up for colts of this age. Witness what is earned by the two-year-old gallopers; for instance, look at the list of winning thoroughbred sires and see what fortunes are won by good two-year-olds and the money that is made in furnishing yearlings to those who are in the business of racing for these stakes.

The trouble with many of the futurities given heretofore is that there is too little encouragement given to any but the colt that wins one of the main divisions of the purse. Trotters are such expensive things to develop that it takes all the money earned by a phenomenal colt to pay the expenses of the rest of the string, even if the average excellence is high. The gallopers show their hand quickly, and a comparatively short time is needed to get a fairly accurate line on their capabilities, but it is a different story with the trotters. Allerton trotted to a slower record than 2:40 as a two-year-old; Nancy Hanks only took a three-year-old record of 2:24, and both were worked for all there was in it. So if we wish to improve the trotter's chance to make his oats and hoot hill we must provide an opportunity for young horses to earn something while they are being developed, provided they have been entered in the futurities that can be so generally established under a proper system of arranging conditions. Heretofore the bulk of the money gathered together has been won by a representative of one of the great stock farms, and but three or four of those entered got any portion of the funds. Even where part of the stake has been set aside for a consolidation purse, the prospect of being distanced in the main race has prevented many a good colt from having a try at the consolation.

If a futurity has a guaranteed value of say $15,000, this amount should be so divided that while the winner of the main stake should receive a large sum, at least twenty of the colts nominated should have a show to earn something towards what it has cost to bring them up. This arrangement would prove a great attraction to nominators, and would do wonders for the building up of these most necessary stakes.

Suppose a stake of this description to be given, with a guaranteed value of the above amount, $15,000. The whole amount should be for two-year-olds, as the development of money-earning capacity at this age will make it possible to sell yearlings in straight lots, after the manner of the best of the thoroughbred establishments; and the entries should be made in the spring of the year in which the foals are born. A five-dollar payment would be made on the mares at that time, and a payment of ten dollars would be made on the foals at about weaning time in the fall. No further payments should be asked for until the night before the race; and the event could be made a perfect trotting carnival, with opportunities so attractive that the original entry list would run into the thousands. The distance should be a mile dash—there is no sense in asking two-year-olds to repeat; and the entries should be divided by lots into divisions that should start in trial heats to determine who should compete for the main stake. The money should be divided as shown in the following conditions:

The Trotting Encouragement Futurity, a stake for two-year-old trotters, with a portion reserved for those that take to pacing, for foals of 1893, to be trotted in the fall of 1895. Fifteen thousand dollars guaranteed and divided as shown in the following conditions: Foals to be entered under the names of their dams on May 1, 1893, and shall at that time make the first payment of $5. The only other payment up to the night before the race will fall due on October 1, 1893, when each foal shall be reported with its name, marks, and the second payment of $10. In case mare proves to be barren, or slips foal, or foal dies before the date of the second payment, the nominator may substitute another foal of the same year without regard to ownership; but no payment will be returned.

The starting payment of $30 shall be made at or before six p. m. of the evening before the race. Nominators liable for the amount paid in, but failure to make specified payments forfeits all previous payments.

All portions of this race to be dashes of a mile to harness, and not more than six colts shall start in any one portion; the right to start in the main stakes and consolation stakes will be decided as hereafter explained.

No stock farm or individual shall start more than one colt in the trotting and one in the pacing portions of this stake.

Money to be divided as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Stake Name and Amount. Includes Consolation Purse (Trial heats $100, 1st money $250, 2d money $100, 3d money $50), SPEED PREMIUMS (Restricted to non-winners of $100 or over in this race, $200), PACERS (Main Stake, trial heats $400, 1st money $500, 2d money $200, 3d money $100).

Table with 2 columns: Stake Name and Amount. Includes Consolation Purse (Trial heats $100, 1st money $250, 2d money $100, 3d money $50), SPEED PREMIUMS (Restricted to non-winners of $100 or over in this race, $200), PACERS (Main Stake, trial heats $400, 1st money $500, 2d money $200, 3d money $100).

TRIAL HEATS:—Not more than six shall start in any part of the race at one time, and the entries shall be divided into as nearly equal divisions as possible. The money set apart for trial heats shall be equally divided among the different divisions, and of the purse thus awarded each division the winner of the trial heat shall take 75 percent, and the second horse 25 percent.

If there are five divisions, the second horse in the fastest trial heat shall start with the five heat winners in the Main Stake. With six divisions only heat winners shall start in the Main Stake, and should there be seven or more divisions, the winners shall trot another series of trial heats, each for a special purse of $50, to determine which shall start in the Main Stake. Should but six or less enter, all shall start for the trial heat money and in the Main Stake; winners of money in Main Stake only barred in first consolation, and winners of first and second moneys in first consolation barred from second consolation. If there are not over six starters for either consolation purse the trial heat money shall be added to the purse for that consolation race and divided proportionately. In each consolation and in the main race there shall be but one money for each horse, exclusive of trial heat money. A walk-over takes first money, two starters first and second moneys, and three starters three moneys.

CONSOLATION PURSES:—First Consolation.—All starters for main stake trial heats eligible except winners of first, second or third money in main stake. Second Consolation.—All starters for main stake trial heats eligible except winners of trial heats main stake, not first consolation, winners of money in main stake and of first and second moneys in first consolation.

SPEED PREMIUMS:—Open to all starters in main stake trial heats who have not won $300 in any part of this race. Ten premiums for exhibition miles to rule, to be awarded to the colts making the best records, provided that first, second and third premiums shall be awarded to those colts that trot the fastest and best miles without making a break; all performances to be trotted strictly to rule as regards repeated breaking. One trial only to be allowed after nodding for the word.

Table with 2 columns: Rank and Amount. Includes First ($300), Second (175), Third (150), Fourth (125), Fifth (100), Sixth (70), Seventh (60), Eighth (50), Ninth (40), Tenth (30).

PACING PURSES:—For colts entered in this stake that take to pacing. Conditions same as in trotting part of stake with the omission of all relating to second consolation; in speed premium.

SPEED PREMIUMS:—Pacing.—Open to all starters in main (pacing) stake who have not won $100 or over. Four premiums for exhibition miles to rule, to be given to the colt making the best records; one trial only allowed.

Table with 2 columns: Rank and Amount. Includes First ($75), Second (60), Third ($30), Fourth ($25).

Provided.—That first and second premiums shall be given to those colts that pace the fastest miles without making a break; all other performances to be paced strictly to rule as regards repeated breaking.

SURPLUS:—If the amounts paid in for entrance exceed the guaranteed amount of $15,000, the surplus shall be divided among the original nominators of those colts that win money in proportion to the amount won by the colts respectively nominated.

Such a stake would receive an immense number of entries, as there would be a chance for any well-bred colt that had been trained at all to make a part of the money that had been spent on him. There has been altogether too much of a wrong spirit shown in the question of colt training; the idea seems to have been that a colt that could not get out and beat anything in sight, regardless of opportunity or handling, should have no earthly chance to win anything. It is not to be wondered at that utter lack of substantial encouragement given any but a few of the most advanced, who may owe their superiority more to the fact that they have had greater advantages and have been handled by more skillful trainers, rather than to any natural superiority. Trotting is supposed to be for the encouragement of the breeding of a superior class of trotting stock, and if it is to be properly encouraged it must give colts whose owners cannot compete with million-dollar stock farms and ten-thousand-dollar trainers a reasonable chance to make part of the expense of their development, provided that they can make a creditable showing; and when it is considered how much a question of education trotting is even with the most natural trotters, there is nothing inappropriate in giving stakes so arranged that a colt as a two-year-old trots a level mile in anything better than three minutes can earn a few dollars.

As stated above, Allerton, who trotted to a record of 2:09 to an old-style sulky, took a two-year-old mark slower than 2:40, and there is no telling how many good colts could be developed if the money that could be earned in the early trotting years could be used to further educate and develop the trotting gait and habit.

Such a stake should receive a thousand entries; suppose we say $00, as a point to figure on:

Table with 2 columns: Stake Name and Amount. Includes 800 first payments at $5 ($4,000), 600 second payments at $10 (6,000), 30 starting payments at $50 (1,500), Total ($11,500).

leaving $3,500 to be provided for by the society giving the stake, which amount would easily be made from gate money and privileges. There is no patent on this scheme.

Where the Money Is.

A large number of California horsemen visited Montana last year and their unanimous opinion was "That's where the money is." The running, trotting and pacing races at the Montana circuit surpassed anything they had ever seen. The kindness of the officials, liberality of the people, excellence of the tracks and splendid accommodations will never be forgotten and this year it is understood that in these and many other "advantages" the different associations there will try to excel. The large sum of $70,000 is offered in stakes and purses by the four Associations and entries for the races will close next Saturday, April 1st. Blanks are ready at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN and advice in regard to this great meeting will be given to all inquirers. The climate of Montana during the summer months is unsurpassed. The distances between points on the circuit are short, only 100 miles for Butte, Anaconda and Helena. The railroad officials will make liberal terms to all visitors, as they have in the past. As this circuit follows the Denver and Salt Lake meetings as well as those at Portland and Salem, Oregon, horsemen will have ample time to get back to California to reach the fall meetings or to go East. The success of all former meetings should be a guarantee for this, and as the poolmen declared that over $1,000,000 passed through their boxes outside of what was handled by the many bookmakers, a fair idea may be conceived of the way the money was placed and the reason why every stranger said "That's where the money is." Read the advertisement and enter liberally without delay, for remember entries close next Saturday, April 1st.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

(Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

SANTA ROSA, March 20.—There is considerable discussion indulged in here over the scaling down which has been made in stallion service fees. Some of our breeders think it should not be done, while others say prices were too high and had to come down. To confirm their judgment they point us to numerous instances where colts have failed to bring, when put up for sale, not one-half so much as the stallion service fee. They tell us that this is not business, and, in the end, has a depressing effect on the horse-breeding industry.

James Dustin has arrived and already has his hand in at Pierce Bros.' track. "Jim," as all the boys call him, is a valuable addition to the coterie of horsemen that abides here. It does not require a prophet to see that he stands well with his fellow-horsemen, and they have all extended him a cordial welcome to the "City of Roses." No work has been done at the track since he came, owing to copious rains with which the country has been blessed. Consequently all the jogging that has been done lately has been done on the roads, which in these parts are not just what they should be. There is a general howl for better roads here, but thus far nearly all the work has been done in the minds of the howlers.

Bye-Bye, the grand mare Pierce Bros. bought at the Hobart stock sale, has foaled a splendid colt by the king of trotters, Stamboul. The infant is a filly, and as frisky as can be. The event was expected two or three weeks before it materialized. As the mother cost her owners ten thousand dollars, it can be readily seen that the little shaver is pretty carefully guarded by the force at the stables. There is a big crop of youngsters expected at the Pierce stables this spring, and everybody there is alert to give them the proper kind of a reception.

Lil March and Bey Robinson have left Santa Rosa. They have gone to the new State of Washington, where, it is rumored, they will purchase a large farm and stock it with Eastern-bred flyers.

By the departure of Robinson there was made a vacancy in John Pender's force. That is now filled by Gimmel, who will probably accompany Mr. Pender on his travels this season. Pender is a good man to work for and is in every way a practical horseman.

The Mountain Boy filly, owned by Belden & Helin, dam Ada, by Admiral, has been placed in McGraw's hands for training this season. This filly shows good promise, and "Redbeard" is very proud of his interest in her.

The spring crop of colts at Rose Dale Stock Farm has started, one little Daly having arrived last week. A number of others are expected soon. The young stock at this farm is all in excellent condition and growing finely.

J. M. Roney, one of our oldest citizens, died at his home here last week. Mr. Roney was one of the generous-hearted gentlemen of the good old school, and had a host of friends among horsemen all over the State. He owned a number of good horses, one of them being Crownhead, a very promising Anteeo stallion. No man in Sonoma county was more liberal than "Matt" Roney, and he is sadly missed.

It is reported that A. McFadyen has given up the horse business and returned to his first love—lumber manufacturing. Mr. McFadyen was a very successful lumberman long before he went into the horse business.

Another Santa Rosa horseman will soon give up the race horse business. It is "Rufe" Murphy. Mr. Murphy a few days ago purchased the Hotel Curtis at Ukiah, and is already in possession, we believe. The well-known generosity and hospitality of Mr. Murphy will be a sufficient guarantee that he will make a successful landlord. We predict that his house will be immensely popular with horsemen, for who can talk horse more eloquently than "Rufe"?

The Hon. J. N. Bailhaiche, of Healdsburg, came down last Tuesday to help his old friend, Matt Roney. Mr. Bailhaiche has been wrestling with a bad attack of rheumatism for some time, but is much better now. His troubles kept him from enjoying the good races made by his horse Anteeo Richmond last fall, and we hope he will be more fortunate this fall.

Horse news do not necessarily include matrimonial notices, but when one of the happy party is a horseman the mention becomes allowable. We refer to the wedding of Dr. P. C. Davenport, the well-known veterinary surgeon, which occurred here a few days ago. The fortunate lady was Miss Daisy Smith, a fair native of the State of the Golden Gate.

Ed. Colwell, son of the late E. B. Colwell, has left the Palo Alto Stock Farm to take a place at Pierce Bros.' farm under his old friend, James Dustin. Colwell expects to follow the horse business, and is reputed to be well up in that line.

Joseph Purrington has a Saladin filly which knows nothing but trot. She is four years old, from a fine mare and will be given a chance to show her mettle this year.

John Walker Jr., owner of the great old pacer and ex-campaigner Cloud, had an exciting experience recently. Cloud is still able to throw dust in the eyes of about anything that travels these roads, and Walker was out with a friend having a little ride when a gentleman with a dashing pair drove up behind him. Thinking to show the gent a little trick, he let the old pacer out to his very best clip, expecting to see the team fall back with alacrity. Great was his astonishment, however, to see the team not only keep up, but to trot by him and clear out of sight. He has not found out the name of the man who owns the team, but he is sure he had a pair that can trot better than a "thirty" gait. It is suspected that it was a team belonging to Senator Fair.

Rayford Peterson, the hop man, has two Silas Skinner colts that he thinks a good deal of. One is a suckling and the other is a yearling. The dam is well bred.

There is a good deal of talk here about the new race track harrow invented and built by Schmidli & Baker, of Mendocino street. Recently they received an order from Nashville, Tennessee.

Dr. Harris' Trotters.

EUGENE, OREGON, March 13.—Last week one of our representatives had the pleasure of a drive over Dr. T. W. Harris' fine farm, two miles west of Eugene, Oregon, where we saw as fine a collection of trotting-bred stock as is to be found in the Northwest. The farm contains 150 acres and is a level tract from beginning to end, being subdivided into suitable paddocks, and is fitted with a one-mile track that is much superior to many of the tracks of the North Pacific Coast that are used for holding annual race meetings. There is also a covered training track of one-eighth of a mile. There are 40 box-stalls and room for 60 horses under shelter.

Mr. F. W. Kelley (administrator of the estate of James P. Kerr) has sent to Dr. Harris from California the stallion Memo to make the season at Eugene. Memo is a glossy black stallion, eight years old, sixteen hands high, of powerful build. He is by Sidney, dam Flirt, by Buccaneer; second dam by Flaxtail. Memo is full brother to Frou Frou, 2:25½, the world's yearling record. Millard Sanders recently said he could drive Frou Frou this year and lower the three-year-old record. Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race at Bay District track, the second heat of which was trotted in 2:31½, and the first in 2:32. Memo exhibited a phenomenal speed as a three-year-old, and was timed at Oakland in presence of a large number of horsemen in 2:20½. This horse will no doubt receive a large patronage from the Northwestern horsemen. He looks well and is in good condition to begin the season.

Dr. Harris owns as pretty a piece of horseflesh as ever lived in his highly-bred stallion Oregon 5709 (Oregon Wilkes). This horse is a beautiful bay, black points, 16 hands high, weighs 1200 pounds, very symmetrical in form, combining fine style and unusual substance. He has fifteen generations of thoroughbred blood in his veins. The sire of Oregon is Lyle Wilkes, sire of Wood Wilkes, 2:25; Chief, 2:26½; Danville Wilkes, 2:27; Sir Bell, 2:29; Konantz, 2:29½; Mattie Wilkes, 2:30. Oregon's first dam is Maggie Hamlet (sire of Loretta E., 2:18½; A. V. Pantlind, 2:20½); second dam the premium show mare Chm (Mattie Kenney), the dam of Leland Stanford, 2:24½, and half sister to the dam of McKinney, 2:12½ (Chum was by Duke's Norman, son of Alexander's Norman, sire of Lula, 2:14½; May Queen, 2:20); third dam Rose Keny, (sister to Gen. Geo. H. Thomas, granddam of McKinney, 2:12½) by Messenger Chief, sire of Maud Messenger, 2:16½; Neddie H., 2:17½; Susie Walton, 2:20½; Col. Bradshaw, 2:20½, and ten others; fourth dam Lady Messenger, the dam of General Geo. H. Thomas, sire of Annie H., 2:20; Annie W., 2:20; Scott's Thomas, 2:20, etc. Lady Messenger's sire was Mambrino Chief, sire of Lady Thorne, 2:18½, and others.

Oregon combines the blood of the great Hambletonian 10 through his most prepotent son, George Wilkes, sire of Lyle Wilkes, together with that of Mambrino Chief, Alexander's Norman and American Clay, based upon the best thoroughbred blood known to the stud books. This is the breeding which has given us the greatest trotting horses in the world, and the uniform great individuality and extraordinary speed at the trot shown by all the sons and daughters of Oregon that have been tried justify the hope that he will soon become one of the most distinguished sires in the Northwest. The greatest racing four-year-old known to trotting history, viz., McKinney, 2:12½, is very closely related to Oregon, he being by Alcyone, half brother to Lyle Wilkes, and out of Rose Sprague, half sister to Chum, the granddam of Oregon. The speed of Oregon has only been partially developed, but Chas. Wood has repeatedly driven him quarters in thirty-five seconds, a 2:20 gait, thus demonstrating that he is not lacking in speed, the essential quality of a race horse.

Among other fine animals owned by Dr. Harris we mention: Katie Lee, hr m, 2:29½, by Rockwood 1467, dam by Kisher; second dam by Grey Eagle.

Ben Drew, h m (dam of Dick Flaherty), by Todd's Nelson, son of John Nelson, dam by Butterfield's St. Clair; second dam by Black Leg, son of Bigart's Ratler; third dam by Jack Hawkins, thoroughbred son of Boston; fourth dam by old St. Clair.

Dafodil, ch m, by Hambletonian Mambrino, dam by Kisher; second dam by Paul Jones, sire of dam of Jane L., 2:19½; Minnie Wilcox, ch m, by Alwood (sire of Klatawa, 2:23½); dam by Millman's Bellfounder; second dam by Comet, son of David Hill Jr.

Oregon Belle, hr m, by Rockwood; dam (full sister to Mark Twain, trial, 2:24) by Bellfounder 62; second dam Black Satin (dam of Mark Twain, trial, 2:24); by Wapato George.

Nellie Menlo, h m, by Menlo, 2:21, son of Nutwood 600, dam by Owen Dale, son of William's Belmont.

Vinie Comstock (dam of Anita, 2:35), gr m, by Vermont, sire of Parrot, 2:26; Ella Lewis, 2:25, etc., dam Snowflake, the grand dam of Van Tromp, 2:29; second dam by Atlanta.

Bay mare, by Oregon 5709, dam by Rockwood Jr., sire of Anita, 2:35; second dam by Wrecker, son of Wm. Rysdyk, sire of Clingstone, 2:14; third dam by Bacon's Hambletonian.—R. F. in National Farmer.

Sacramento Horse Notes.

Every horseman, if he knows anything about his business, will tell you that thoroughbreds, when under severe training, are susceptible to the slightest atmospherical change; that anything malarial in character or that is conducive of lung trouble will be noticed on the finely-trained animal quicker than on a human being. Do you think they have not studied the climatology of this State? Do you think that they would keep animals worth $50,000 each for weeks, months and years in Sacramento City and county if this were not the healthiest portion of the State? Do they do it? The number of animals now in training here is sufficient answer.

There are more thoroughbred horses, both in number and value, in this city and county than there are in the balance of the State, one ranch—that of J. B. Haggin—alone having stock valued at a million and a half dollars. He raises as many thoroughbred colts annually as do the rest of the large breeding farms of the State combined. The Rancho del Paso has a name and fame throughout America and Europe. Santa Clara had a few cattle farms a few years ago, but the owners have closed them out and gone into politics and wine-making, those two industries being more to their taste and better paying businesses.

At Agricultural Park the track is in superb condition—in fact, it is the only first-class and well-appointed race course on the coast, and is capable of accommodating the tens of thousands who assemble here during the State Fairs.

Yesterday all day long the runners by the score occupied the inner track, and the trotters and pacers were sent whizzing around the outer track. There were many good brushes made and many watches held on those who made rapid quarters.

Dick Havey, well known to all turfmen on the Coast, has a stable of the good ones at the track. Among them are the noted Dare and Floodgate, two that will participate in the great events East this year. One or both will start in this American Derby.

James Garland, another old-timer known on almost every track in America, always winters in this city and comes out in the spring with sure-shot winners. He has five under his charge. Homer is considered an invincible. He also has a two-year-old that is showing up in fine form. His entire string are out on the track every day, and show up in as fine form as do the best hang-tails of the blue-grass country.

Frank Duppoister, the one-armed trainer who worked for Theodore Winters for many years, and handled Foster, Mollie McCarty, Ballot Box, Prince of Norfolk and all those old-time favorites, has a stable of eight at the park, equal in looks, breeding and action to anything that ever walked on four feet or looked through a bridle.

"Hanger" Jones has in his stable nine speedy ones, among them the celebrated Motto. He also has Almont, a two-year-old, the property of General A. L. Hart, that promised to be a record-clipper in her class this season.

Hoag & Watson have four youngsters in their string, amongst them a fine two-year-old by Regent that is doing well.

Ab Stember, the old-time trainer, has charge of eight promising youngsters belonging to D. M. Burns. They have been picked up all over the State, most of them at Shippee's sale, and it is needless to say they are of the best strains of blood, form and action that money could buy.

W. M. Murry has twelve in his stable, all in training for the Spring meeting. Murry is one of those who always carries off his share of the purses, and he is confident that his stable will be strictly in it this season.

Wilber F. Smith is never without a score of good horses in his stables, just outside of the entrance to the park. He has a promising three-year-old by Steadfast, and a very speedy little mare called Otto. He also has in training a three-year-old belonging to McShaffer, which gives great promise. Also a fine two-year-old he calls Marvin, which was sired by Cheviot; also a rapid filly, Queen of the Scots, and Gillot, by St. Saviour.

Dan Dennison, one of the oldest racehorse men on the Coast, who has put in over forty years training horses in this city, is still strictly in the business, and always to be found at the same old stand. He has, besides several of his own, charge of McDonough's string, comprising a dozen or more of the speediest colts in the State. Dan says the red flag will not fall in the face of anything he starts this year. He has, like all the rest, a number in special training for the Spring meeting of the Capital Turf and Driving Club.

Daniel Miller has four hang-tails under his charge, among them Ida Glenn and Charmion.

Bart and John Cavanaugh, who have several good ones, left with them for Oakland a few days since to participate in a few local events there, but will return for the Spring meeting here.

D. Smith, has charge of Oakland Boy and another good youngster.

Willard Gardner has a runner which for his remarkable swiftness he has named North Wind. He expects his horse to sweep everything before him.

Phil Siebenthaler's stable contains four good runners, headed by the famous Sheridan, who has won many a hard-fought battle. Mr. Spooner is the trainer of this stable, and is rounding up the entire string for the spring contest.

Sammy Cooper has two speedy ones by Three Cheers.

The above are a few of the running stables at the Park. Those containing trotters and pacers are still more numerous.

Willard Gardner has four or five trotters, all in training for the Spring meeting. His Dexter Prince colt he intends to put in the roadster class. He owns Crescent by Tommy Benton and Clarion by James Madison that are showing well.

Thomas Holmes has Harper's stable. Among them are such celebrities as Hvas Boy, Brilliantine and Maud Patchen. He has also a pacing mare by Prompter which belongs to Bert Cantrell, and is working Hermit up to the road class for Bert Kidder.

George Kenear has charge of Hugh Casey's stable of five trotters, all of whom are very promising in their work, two of them being quite speedy.

Oregon Smiley, one of the old-time trainers, is here with six trotters, which he brought with him from the "Webfoot" State. Those who have watched him handle them say they are all good ones. He can be seen training them at almost any hour in the day in the circus ring in the middle of the park. Besides his own, he has in training a promising Albert W. colt which belongs to H. S. Beals.

Wilber F. Smith, besides his large number of runners mentioned elsewhere, has also a score of fast trotters. Among them is his peerless colt Kehir. He also has a promising two-year-old colt, the property of General A. L. Hart.

Charles Schlusler has in his stable the famous little mare Almonta and a couple of other speedy ones belonging to Gen. A. L. Hart. He also has a Don Marvin two-year-old that belongs to Charles Goddard that is working out quarters in 40 seconds. Most of this stable will take part in the Spring meeting.

While out at the track yesterday the horse reporter saw Sid Eldred exercising Boxer, the property of Dr. Root. He is entered in the roadster class.

Worth Ober, another turfman from boyhood, has a stable with more trotters in it than any one at the track, and among them are some of the best in the State. He has a two-year-old by Normandy, a full brother to Frenchy (2:22), which he was working out yesterday at an exceedingly lively clip. He is also jogging his stallion Ross S. and expects to get a record for him of 2:15 or better this fall.

W. O. Bowers' stable of trotters embraces the following: Sadie Benton, by Tom Benton, dam Brown Jennie; Silver Bee, by Silver Bow, dam Belle Mack; a yearling, Norhorough, by Cornelius, son of old Nutwood 600, dam Belle Mack.

J. W. Wilson has a promising two-year-old by Don Marvin, dam a thoroughbred mare.—Sacramento Evening News.

F. J. Berry & Co's May Sale.

As will be seen by the announcement in the advertising columns of this journal, F. J. Berry & Co. will conduct a mammoth six days' combination sale May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, in Dexter Park Horse Exchange, Chicago, comprising high-bred trotting stock, carriage teams, ideal roadsters, saddle horses, trotters and pacers with records from 2:30 to 2:15. Already choice consignments of fashionably bred animals from the leading breeding establishments, including one of the best producing sons of George Wilkes, are listed for the sale. Also the entire stud of one of the most prominent Northwestern stock farms will be closed out in this sale. May is the best time to sell and Chicago offers the leading market of the world for speed and breeding. Entries close April 1. Send for entry blanks to F. J. Berry & Co., Union Stock Yards, Chicago.

HOOF-BEATS.

THE Wallace Year Book rejects 265 records which the National and American Trotting Associations accept.

THE racing colors which the young millionaire, W. O. B. Macdonough, has chosen, are green with orange sash, white sleeves and cap.

THE mare Jessie, 2:22, by Dexter Prince, which Geo. H. Hammond, of Detroit, Mich., purchased at the Valensin sale, will be campaigned this year.

DR. A. W. McALISTER, of Missouri, lost by death, February 22d, the imp, mare Halloween, foaled 1867, by Carnival or Macaroni, dam Austrey, by Harkaway, out of Zeila, by Emilius.

UHLER BROS., owners of Alcazar, 2:20½, call attention to the fact that in the new Year Book Bric-a-Brac, 2:28½, and Sacramento Girl, 2:30, are not given credit for making these records as three-year-olds.

J. O. DONNER, the owner of the Ramapo stud, is all smiles, and forgets sugar long enough to tell his friends that Girofla foaled a bandsome colt by Pontiac—the finest looking animal, he says, ever foaled in the East.

MARCUS DALY, whose colors have previously been the well-known copper with green cap, under which Tammany and Montana scored their many famous victories, has decided to make a partial change, and in future his jacket will have silver sleeves; for second colors, green hands will also be added.

AMERICAN roads are probably on the whole rougher than those of almost any other country in the world, nevertheless it is doubtful if there are elsewhere such generally sure-footed horses as in America, and it is a noticeable fact that every where in Great Britain broken-kneed horses are vastly more numerous.

CAPT. BEN E. HARRIS writes as follows regarding the death of the great prize-winning broodmare: "Lena Bowles foaled her last on the 17th inst., and died the same night, apparently without a struggle. The little one she left is quite lively and has become very fond of cow's milk and sugar. The old mare has raised thirteen foals and lost two."

FROM Lexington, Ky., comes news that Richard Croker has purchased from J. E. Madden the handsome two-year-old bay filly Mary, by Bishop, out of Graciosa. She is said to be very promising, and is heavily engaged in the stakes. She will be sent East at once. Mr. Croker will probably add several more to his string before he returns from his trip.

A. C. BECKWITH, the new Senator from Wyoming, is largely interested in trotters. In 1889 he campaigned Faust and Wanita. He was also expelled that year at Denver, Col., for abusing the judges, but was afterwards reinstated on receipt of an apology. He can take his own part anywhere, as he can handle a gun with due western rapidity and talk horse by the hour.

JOCKEY F. DOANE, who was heavily thrown against the rail while riding Dr. Helmuth at Guttenberg on Wednesday, through the horse stumbling, was seriously injured. When he was examined by the track physician it was learned that two ribs had been broken and that the right lung had been pierced. The boy was taken to a hospital, where he is progressing favorably.

FLORA TEMPLE broke the world's trotting record five times, Goldsmith Maid performed the same feat six times, and Maud S. seven times, Dexter twice, St. Julien and Nancy Hanks, each three times, are the only other trotters that have put champion figures on the board more than once, and it is extremely improbable that the achievement of Maud S. will ever be surpassed.

STEMWINDER (dam of Directum, 2:11½) will be bred to Direct, 2:05½, this year. She was a very game and resolute trotter, and John Green, her owner, regrets exceedingly that he did not give her an opportunity of lowering her record of 2:31. He says he has written to Ben Roodhouse, of Carrollton, Illinois, in regard to the sire of the dam of Stemwinder, but has received no answer.

D. T. PULSIFER intends to breed Tenny, one of the greatest public favorites that ever appeared on the turf, to twenty approved mares. Tenny is greatly admired by Kentucky breeders. Mr. Pulsifer made a liberal offer to some horse owners recently. He said he would breed Tenny to twenty mares at $200 each and purchase every yearling from the mares at $1,000 each without any stipulation.

J. W. KNOX, formerly with Fashion Stud Farm, is now located at Terre Haute, Ind., where he will handle a public stable. His list will include a sister to Direct, 2:05½; Arena, by Alcantara, dam by Gen. Knox, and Lugano, by Rumor, 2:20, dam Lucia (dam of Beulah, 2:19½, Hurly Burly, 2:19½, Edgardo, 2:20½, Lammormoor, 2:23, and Lucy Panoast, 2:30); second dam Lucy, 2:18½, by George M. Patchen.

THERE is one consolation about the decline in prices for untried, untrained colts and fillies, and that is that all owners of sons and daughters of Guy Wilkes, Director, Electioneer, Steiny and other California sires will be developed and trained for speed. The old way of attaching fame like a coupon to the record made by a brother or sister has passed into oblivion and every fair-minded horseman is glad of it.

THE Newark, N. J., Sunday Call waxes thus eloquent over the merits of the Charles Kent Mare: "The dam of Hambletonian 10 and grandam of Green's Bashaw does not need standard rank to keep her memory green in the minds of the trotting turfmen of the country. Her name cannot be disassociated from that of her great son, and the mountains will be turned into dust and the streams that supply the ocean run dry before his name and fame are forgotten."

It is a general belief that there will not be as many mares bred this season as have been heretofore. This is a healthy sign and pretty sure indication that those bred will be of a better class, that they will be bred to better horses, that fewer colts will be kept entire, and that the knife of the castrator will be used on many plugs that have been playing "stud horse." Many of the gentlemen who have been breeding standards will abandon that branch and go to breeding horses. Then will come the horse millennium and we will hear no more about the "bottom falling out of the trotting horse business."

It is reported that Mrs. Bybee has sold Misty Morn, Rosy Morn, Rosebud and Broadchurch to Charles E. Miller, of the firm of Huntington, Hopkins & Co., San Francisco, for $13,000. She has shipped to San Francisco about thirty head more of the stock from the Bybee farm, near Salem, which will be sold some time in April.—Oregonian.

The sale of the personal effects of the late millionaire, D. Edgar Crouse, opened this morning at Syracuse, New York, last Tuesday, when his costly stud of twenty-four horses was put under the hammer. Chelsea D., the famous chestnut gelding with a record of 2:18½, was bid in for W. D. Rockefeller for $1,600. King Almont, who cost $10,000, brought only $335, owing to his age. The total realized was $14,600.

A WRITER in an exchange says: "Some time since I noticed an inquiry in your paper for a remedy for scouring in a yearling colt. White oak bark tea saved the life of a three weeks' old colt for me when it had got so weak that it could not get up alone. Also at one time I had a fine litter of young pigs taken with scours just as they began to eat a little out of the trough with the mother. I gave the oak bark tea in milk to both mother and pigs; had lost one before using it, and did not lose any more. Have just tried it on a cow with good results. This is so simple and so easy to obtain I send it for the good of others.

HERE is an old remedy for heaves which is highly recommended by many practical horsemen; do not expect, however, that it will cure the disease. It will, however, greatly relieve the animal, even in the very worst cases: Beat three eggs into one quart of pure white vinegar, and after about three days, or when the mixture is well together, add one pound of strained honey. In tablespoonful doses it can be given with the feed twice a day, or placed on the tongue of the horse. It is equally good for human beings as for horses, and a great palliative for chronic coughs.

TOM McTAGUE, of Deer, was in Butte this week. He entered Panama Pat, a two-year-old, Glen Elm colt, full brother of Ida Glenn, in all the two-year-old stakes of Anaconda and Butte. Tom's stable wintered at Winnemucca, Nevada. They are in charge of Williams, who makes the Montana circuit every year, and will be remembered as the owner of The Jew, the fast quarter and three-eighths horse. Gold Bar, one of the stable, has been lame since he left here last fall, but is getting all right again, and will be in good shape for the Montana circuit—Butte Inter-Mountain.

E. HARRIMAN has shipped the following mares to Terre Haute, Ind., to be bred to Stamboul: Elsie Wilkes, by Young Jim, dam by Ericsson, 2:30½; Tangle Legs, by Sorrento, out of Rowena, 2:24½, by George Wilkes; Tabbie Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes, dam by Nutwood; Queen Annie, by Red Wilkes, dam by Forest Mambro; Gypsy, by Heptagon, dam by Abdallah Messenger; Alcyona, by Alcyone, dam by Smuggler; Fly, by Electricity; Beatrix, by Albert W., and Songstress, by Nutbourne, dam Music, 2:21½, by Middletown. Five of the lot are now in foal to Nutpan, son of Nutwood and Issaquena, by Panoast.

FOR the fourth time in its history, extending over a period of forty years, Woodburn Farm has gone from its own trotting stud for a cross, and for the first time has brought the blood of two stallions on an outside farm. Lucas Brodhead has hooked Lady Russell, the sister of Maud S., 2:08½, to Kremlin, 2:07½, and Wavelet, 2:24½, to the five-year-old champion sire, Lancelot, 2:23. At the age of ten years Lady Russell is the dam of Expedition, 2:19½, Re-Election, 2:27½, and Electrix, 2:28½. Wavelet is the sister to Viking, 2:19½, Waterloo, 2:19½, Warder, 2:29½, and of Sprite, Fairy Belle and Naïad, all famous speed-producers.

AL HUTCHINGS has sold to A. H. Moore, of Philadelphia, the black mare Ermine, 2:13½, by Plymouth, dam Fan, for a fancy price, supposed to be somewhere in the neighborhood of $10,000. Ermine will be campaigned through the grand circuit this year, along with Moore's other fast ones, which will be banded by Millard Sanders. Ermine has been shipped for a week or ten days, but so well has the secret been kept that only two or three persons knew of the sale until Saturday. J. T. Hugely bought Ermine for about one hundred dollars before she was developed, and the same luck that characterized his other deals in horse-flesh followed him in this instance.

A. MUSER, of Chicago, is one of the old-time horsemen who has had a great deal of experience. In a conversation with a number of others at the Palace Hotel one evening last week, the subject of brittle hoofs came up. Mr. Muser said that some years ago Budd Dohle was banding a mare for him that had very brittle hoofs. He told that king of drivers to rub glycerine around the coronets and upper portion of the hoofs. Budd thought it was a foolish idea, but to suit Mr. Muser he did so, and was astonished to see the improvement it made. He continued using the article and the mare's hoofs grew strong and tough. He would not be without glycerine in his medicine chest since, and wherever he goes he tells of its virtues.

THE fire near Franklin, Tenn., recently, that burned the barn of William Ewing, was a great misfortune for this enterprising young breeder and his sister, Miss Carrie. It burned up all his feed and fifteen head of fine broodmares and young stock. It was discovered about one o'clock and had been burning some time. The most valuable animal destroyed was the broodmare Rowena, dam of Dallas (p), 2:11½, and Miss Kent, 2:25. A two-year-old colt from her was among the number destroyed. Rowena was valued at $5,000. Part of this stock were entered in sale here next week. Total loss about $12,000; insurance $1,475. It is thought to have been incendiary, as many barns have been burnt in that neighborhood.—Breeder and Turfman.

THE Turf, Field and Farm, in a notice of the death of Daniel J. Murphy's stallion Rosemeath, that was in W. Donathan's string of runners, says: "Alcazar is by Sultan, out of Minnehaha, by Bald Chief. The Moor is by Clay Pilot, out of Belle of Wabashi, a mare that Mr. Wallace tried to make the public believe was of low and unknown origin. As Rosemeath had a double cross of The Moor and was able to run a quarter in 24½ seconds, conviction grows that Belle of Wabashi was what Mr. J. W. Browning claims her to be, a thoroughbred daughter of Bassinger, son of Lieutenant Bassinger. The pedigree of this mare should be changed in the Trotting Register. Bald Chief, the sire of Minnehaha, the great mother of that great mother of trotters, Beautiful Bells, was by Bay Chief, a horse full of thoroughbred strains. Rosemeath, it would seem, was dominated by the blood which had asserted its power on the running turf."

ENOS, commonly known as "Pedro," is at Mayview working some thoroughbreds for Mr. Whitmore, which will be seen at the Portland June meeting, says the Oregonian. There is a two-year-old Vanderbilt filly, two Coloma three-year-olds, and a four-year-old full sister to Laura D. So the impression many have formed that Mr. Whitmore will be without a string since he sold Ichiban and Swiftsure is erroneous. Mr. Whitmore has purchased six of the thoroughbred Ladd mares at La Grande. Five are by Richard III, and one, a Vanderbilt five-year-old, he is working.

THERE is considerable excitement in horsemen's circles in and around Hollister over the probability of a match race taking place in the San Benito metropolis on May Day at three-eighths of a mile. The inhabitants of Hollister generally and the owner of Valledore (an Ironclad horse) in particular will not believe any horse in the State can beat their representative in a dash of three furlongs. E. F. Fallon's trainer, James Smith, is of contrary opinion, and thinks he has found a sprinter that can give Mr. Duncan's horse dust, weight and a beating, and not try very hard either. The flyer is not Geraldine, but is little behind the mare as a short-distance animal. As the owner of Valledore is said to be willing to back his horse with $2,000 or a trifle more, a considerable amount of money is likely to change hands over the result of the race between the unknown and Valledore.

THE entry lists for the summer meetings at Grand Rapids and Sturgis are out, and are very satisfactory. Despite the hard luck at Grand Rapids last year, horsemen have entered many horses there, the nominations numbering as follows: Yearlings, $500, 49 entries; two-year-olds, $1,000, 21; two-year-olds, 3:00 class, $1,000, 45; three-year-olds, 3:00 class, $1,000, 25; three-year-olds, 2:25 class, $1,000, 13; four-year-olds, 2:35 class, $1,000, 18; 2:30 class, $2,500, 20; 2:30 class, pacing, $2,000, 21; 2:20 class, $2,000, 13; 2:20 pace, $2,000, 21; 2:24 class, $2,000, 22. Sturgis has numerous entries. There are 58 and 37 in the 2:30 trots; 13 in the 2:18 trot; 40 in the two-year-old, 2:40 trot; 33 in the 2:30 pace; 21 in the 2:20 pace; 40 in the yearling trot; 61 and 51 in the two-year-olds, 3:00 class; 32 and 27 in the three-year-olds, 2:30 trot; 18 in the three-year-olds, 2:25 pace; 18 in the 2:25 pace.

THE famous old bay gelding, St. James, owned by E. J. Baldwin, died at the Santa Anita ranch last Thursday night after an illness of a few hours. He was bred by Peleg Jones, of Bristol Center, N. Y., and foaled in 1866, being a few weeks under twenty-seven years old at the time of his death. He was by Champion, 808 (Gooding's), out of a mare whose breeding was a myth, unknown. On the 8th of August, 1873, he got his record of 2:23½, which he was never able to reduce to any great extent. He was never regarded as a very game horse, and was generally supposed to be much speedier than his contestants to win at all. He was evidently a horse, however, that had to have his mood, and would trot if he felt so inclined. At the State Fair of 1876, driven by J. N. Killip, the well-known post-seller, he beat a large field of horses, everyone of which is now dead. That race he won after six obstinately contested heats, trotted on a very hot day, when an irresolute horse would have given up the contest for a bad job.—Los Angeles Herald.

MESSRS. CRAIK & Co., Montreal, Canada, have purchased the chestnut horse Gladiator, own brother to that grand race horse Glenmore, by imp. Glen Athol, dam Lotta, by Hunter's Glencoe, out of Sally Lewis, by imp. Glencoe, she out of the famous Motto, by imp. Barefoot. This horse is from a grand racing family, and has been a winner on the flat and over timber. Gladiator has more of the invaluable blood of Glencoe than any horse living. His sire, Glen Athol, was a great grandson of Glencoe, through his sire Blair Athol, who also had the Sultan blood through his great-grandam Heatherbelle, by Bay Middleton, son of Sultan, sire of Glencoe. Lotta, his dam, was by Hunter's Glencoe, son of imp. Glencoe and Fiatt, by imp. Hedgeford; his grandam, Sally Lewis, was by imp. Glencoe, out of Motto, by imp. Barefoot, son of Tramp, the sire of Trampoline, dam of imp. Glencoe. Sally Lewis was a great broodmare, dam of John Morgan, Hunter's Lexington, Linda Lewis (Linden's dam), Lotta (Glenmore's dam, four-mile heats in 7:29½, 7:30½, 7:31, the fastest three heats ever run), Glenrose, Susan Beane (dam of Susquehanna, Potomac's dam), Stratford, Onondaga, Sensation, etc.

FRED CARRILLO, one of the best jockeys that ever pulled a leg over a horse on the Pacific Coast, but who went wrong in 1889 and was ruled off for "pulling" the four-year-old crack, Al Farrow, in a race at Bay District track, has, we understand, been reinstated by the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association and engaged to ride the excellent horses composing the Macdonough string. Carrillo is now at work helping to get ready the young millionaire's horses at San Jose. The "crooked" work which caused Carrillo's expulsion was discovered by an Examiner reporter (Phillips), the jockey, while under the influence of liquor in John Martin's saloon, bragging over the fact that he had pulled the wool over the eyes of the public neatly. The publication of his remarks by the clever quill-driver present resulted in the ruling off of Carrillo. C. V. Tupper, the owner, and Jim Brown, trainer. The lesson has been a severe one to Carrillo, and it is said he will never leave the path of rectitude again. Let us hope so, for he is a magnificent rider.

THE Breeders' Gazette publishes a little table about the Stamboul record, and gives the names and the time made by four of the men who were present, but neglects to publish the names of the many others whose affidavits were sent in. Mr. Covey's time (he was in the stand when the horse started) was 2:07½; Mr. Thompson's watch also marked 2:07½; Mr. Crowe, who drove the teaser and declared he forgot to stop his watch, was 2:17½; Mr. Gooby, who testified that he was 250 yards away, and, on cross-examination, swore he did not see the horse come under the wire, but stopped his watch as the bell tapped to call back the driver, marked 2:18. Mr. Campbell, the gentleman who had his watch going long before the horse started, and averred that his watch was not reliable, stated that the time he made was 2:16½, and now comes John Engleman, a Kentucky trainer, who was employed by Gov. Stanford, and he wrote W. C. France that Stamboul trotted in 2:17½, and he timed him. Samuel Gamble sent on $300, which he wants to [put against $100 of Mr. Engelman's money, that he was eleven miles nearer Stamboul on the day the horse made the record than Mr. Engleman was. The evidence given at the investigation should be carefully read by the editor of the Gazette, and then he should publish the testimony of Kearney, and McCloud if he wants to strengthen his argument; he must McHugh have forgotten three "dis-graces" when he published the article.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

SEND in your list of foals.

ENTRIES for the Napa Colt Stakes close April 1st.

THE second payment in the Buffalo Park stakes is due April 1st.

THE earning capacity of the trotter will be greater this year than ever.

CHIEF THORNE, 2:20½, will be in Barney Demarest's stable this season.

How will people know you have a stallion unless you advertise the fact?

ROBERT ORR lost a fine colt from Mary O. by Rupee, on Wednesday morning.

ABOUT twelve mares will be all that Stamboul will be allowed to cover this year.

STUDY the blood lines of the winners, and judge for yourselves how the most successful trotters are bred.

THE mists within the enclosure of the Agricultural Park, San Jose, Cal., are a disgrace to the Garden City.

ENTRIES for the colt stakes and purses to be trotted and paced for the Napa and Petaluma Fair close April 1st.

THE Detroit purse and stake list will foot up to $50,000, and $21,000 in special purses have been already announced.

R. I. ORR's mare Mary O., will be shipped Saturday to the San Mateo Stock Farm, to be mated with the great Sable Wilkes.

H. S. HENRY, of Philadelphia, owns Frou Frou, 2:25½, the champion yearling, and will give her a mark as a three-year-old this spring.

SID FLEET, 2:26½ as a two-year-old, has been sent to the Valensin Farm to be handled by the celebrated reinsman, Millard Sanders.

SPEAKING of prices, I. V. Baker says: "Maud S. only brought a little over $200, but the sale was worth a quarter of a million to Woodhnm."

THE protracted spell of rain has caused nearly all classes of horses to be "stall-bound." In many places in this State the water is quite deep in the stalls.

FLEETWOOD'S $12,500 stallion race is declared off. There were only four entries made, Nelson, 2:10; Directum, 2:11½; Regal Wilkes, 2:11½, and Nutpan.

HORSEMEN should remember that entries in the races on the Montana circuit, as well as at Napa, Petaluma and the P. C. T. H. B. A., will close April 1st.

Every stall at the San Jose race track has been engaged and if the proper care is taken, this track would be made the best training track for trotters in the State.

A TROTTING track has just been established at Pan, in the south of France, where so many Americans spend the winter months. It will be opened with a meeting early in April.

REMEMBER the sale of trotting colts and fillies. The entire product of the pick of Dr. M. W. Hicks' choicest broodmares will be sold at Sacramento to-day. See advertisement.

OWNERS of good mares should not forget that Steiner, 2:29½ (brother to Chas. Derby, 2:20), is making the season of 1898 at the Hobart Stock Farm, San Mateo, for the low price of $75.

FRANK H. BURKE purchased four mares at the Palo Alto sale a year ago and has every one in foal. Other breeders on this coast are besieging him with inquiries as to how "the thing is done."

THE sale of the Kentfield broodmares, colts, fillies and roadsters, besides Brewster huggies, road carts, etc., will take place April 4, at stables, corner Haight and Cole streets. Send for catalogue.

WM. FIELDWICK has a very promising young trotting stallion called Birchwood at the Bay District track. He is by Redwood, 2:27, and if nothing happens him this year he will get a mark close to 2:20.

THE directors of the Woodland Association are thinking of offering a $1,000 guarantee stake for yearlings, to be trotted at their fair each year. It is to be hoped they will do it, and other associations will follow.

THAT good little horse paper, the Spirit of the Huh, a short time ago advised its readers to knock all their 2:40 scrub stallions in the head, and now it wants them also to shoot the undersized, poorly-bred colts.

THE breeder who has no love for the animals he raises, beyond that of the dollars he expects to get out of the business, is so short-sighted that he rarely advances sufficiently to get even the dollars as his return.

EVERY man who owns a trotter, or pacer, will have a chance to make some money at the Breeders Spring meeting which will take place during the latter part of May. Entries will close April 1st. Read the advertisement.

THE chestnut filly Queenie Trowbridge, five years old, by Alunde—Ada Lambert, died at Columbus, Ga., yesterday morning. She was the property of McAfferty & Wishard, and won six of her twelve races last year.

W. A. GARBLICK, of Buffalo, New York, purchased the Dexter Prince mares Maggie, 2:20, and Cleopatra at the sale in Cleveland two weeks ago, and will give them a chance to win some money on the Eastern circuit this fall.

C. F. BUNCH has taken charge of the race track and grounds at Agricultural Park. As soon as the weather clears he promises to put the place in perfect order. Mr. Bunch is a worker and we believe he will have the course in better fix than it ever has been. If there were one-hundred more good box stalls erected at the park they would be occupied this summer.

WM. VIOGET has quite a string of good ones at the San Jose track. Most of them are two and three-year-olds by Eros, out of mares of unknown breeding, yet when the bell rings they will make their "mammies famous."

FLORA, the dam of Roy Wilkes, 2:07½, died Thursday at the Hayden Stock Farm at Waterloo, Ia. She was 24 years old. Her breeding had never been definitely established, though it was claimed she was a daughter of Blue Bull.

THE Stanislaus Stock Breeders' Association will hold their spring races at Modesto on March 25th, 27th and 28th. There will be nine running races and one pacing and one trotting race. The races are over-night entries with $10 entrance, half forfeit.

D. C. MURPHY, the well-known livery stable owner of Redwood City, has leased the magnificent stock ranch formerly owned by Andrew Smith, deceased, and is prepared to take stock for pasturage, and train horses for track or road purposes.

ADOLPH SPREEKLES has a broodmare called Sunrise, by Regent, near San Jose; last week she dropped a coal black filly by Aptos Wilkes (brother to Hulda, 2:14½) that good judges declare is the most perfect-formed youngster they have ever seen.

THE mistake is made by horsemen to suppose that a successful career on the race course is the chief end of the trotting and pacing horse of America, when, in point of fact, the ultimate and most important use to which the light harness horse if put, is to become the gentlemen's and driving horse.

RUFUS SMITH has sold his fine Napa Wilkes' two-year-old colt, Champion Wilkes, to Hunter & Harris, the well-known horse importers of Fort Collins, Colorado. He shipped the colt from here yesterday morning. The price received for this promising youngster was $400.—Salinas Journal, March 16th.

By all means try to breed high finish. A handsome horse will always command a much better price and much readier sale than one of plain conformation. Beauty detracts nothing from speed, and the breeder who seeks to breed stylish road horses will find as large a per cent. of fast trotters as he who seeks for speed.

THE new agricultural district of Kern county has been formed with an appropriation of $3,000. This makes our association independent of Tulare county, and places the Kern County Fair Grounds Association on a substantial footing to develop its property interests, supported by the Kern Agricultural Association.

THE qualified veterinarians who have their diplomas are very much exercised over Governor Markham's delay in not signing their bill that recently passed the Legislature. Nearly every State in the Union has had a similar bill passed, and the work it has accomplished has proven of untold value to their live-stock interests.

THE hangtails that are being exercised on our muddy tracks do not deserve to be called "skates" for we have no ice here. These unfortunate equines should be called "crabs," "mud larks," or "rails." Its had enough to cover the "children of the winds" with mud and give them proper names, but to call them "skates" is a very frigid joke.

J. K. NEWTON has made arrangements with D. C. Murphy, the lessee of the celebrated Andrew Smith Stock Farm near Redwood City, whereby he will stand his handsome stallion Antevoro, by Antevolo, 2:19½, dam Renie, by Whippleton. Mr. Newton will take the horse to Menlo Park, Mayfield, Mountain View and Saratoga every week.

CHAS. F. FOSTER, the young trainer formerly employed by Martin Carter, of the Nutwood Stock Farm, and was very successful while on this coast, is now employed by H. J. Marshall, of Greenview, Ill., and is preparing a string of trotters for the circuit. Charley is a very painstaking, intelligent reinsman; one that will make friends wherever he is.

ASTRIONE, the daughter of Aleyone and Jessie Pepper, purchased by H. S. Henry, at the Hobart sale, dropped a colt by Stamboul, 2:07½ at Penn Valley Farm, February 25th. On the same day Berna, by Baron Wilkes, 2:18, out of Axtell's (2:12) dam, dropped a colt by Allerton, 2:09½, and Mayenne (dam of Crescendo, 2:24), by Wedgewood, 2:19, a filly by Anteeo, 2:16½.

F. C. TALBOT will sell thirteen head of fine roadsters, broodmares, colts and fillies next month, as he intends to confine all his training to the progeny of his handsome stallion, Mount Hood, 2:22½. Among those offered will be sons and daughters of Simmocolon, Eros, Lancelot, Cartoon, Sidney, Fred Arnold, and other stallions, out of mares that were noted for speed and gameness.

BELLE, the dam of our great California sire, Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, is also the dam of New Jersey Volunteer, sire of Gen. Marion, 2:27½ (sire of Marion (p), 2:21½), and Maud, the dam of Nelly S., 2:23½. Belle was, according to W. A. Hendrickson, the owner of George M. Patchen Jr., one of the most bloodlike-looking large mares he ever saw, and she has proved herself a producer.

SOME one has been stating in the Eastern turf journals that the horse that has produced the three fastest horses that ever went in harness was Tom Hak. Let us see, Hal Pointer, 2:04½, Little Brown Jug, 2:11½, Brown Hal, 2:12½—total 6:28½; average 2:09 7-12. Director, has Direct, 2:05½; Directum, 2:11½; Evangeline, 2:11½, total 6:28½, average 2:09 6-12 or 1-12 of a second in favor of Director.

WHY does not some of our associations offer stakes for pacing yearlings and two-year-olds? Many a breeder breeds his mare to a trotting stallion and is astonished to find she has a side wheeler and if he is disappointed at that discovery he becomes disgusted when he finds there is no "route" open for him to make any stake money with the little innocent. Even a grub stake would be acceptable.

THE North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders' Association has decided to hold its annual race meeting on the Portland track, and October 4, 5, 6 and 7 are the dates. About $5,000 in stakes and purses will be trotted for at this meeting, and, judging from the number of horses being worked by various trainers, the entries in both stake and purse races will be very large. Nominations for stake races close April 1. Owing to the bad weather, the youngsters that are likely to take part in these stake events are scarcely broken. Therefore, all will begin on even terms.

AT the Oakwood Park Stock Farm last week the Administrator mare, Princess, dropped a hay colt by Steinway, 2:25½, that is a brother to the five-year-old mare Neva which will appear on the circuit this fall. Princess was out of Priceless (dam of Ernest Maltravers, 2:22½) by Volunteer 55; second dam Silvertail (dam of Driver, 2:19½), by Aaron's Gray Messenger, and a finer-formed broodmare will be hard to find on any farm.

S. A. BROWNE, of Kalamazoo, Mich., saw Daghestan, by Stamboul, out of Alta Belle, daughter of Beautiful Bells, at Savannah Park, Cal., a week ago and in the presence of ten gentlemen pronounced him the most perfect horse he had ever seen. "If I had the making of a stallion," said Mr. Browne, "this horse would be my model. He is the superior of Stamboul." High praise for one who owned Bell Boy, Anteeo and Ambassador.

THE offer authorized by the Solano County Speed Association to be made to Dr. Trull for his race track and improvements was submitted to him last week by the Board of Directors and accepted. The offer was $95 an acre for the seventy-acre field and $2,500 for the buildings and improvements. This track will therefore be immediately prepared for the coming fair, and we will have the best district meeting ever held in Solano county.—Vallejo Chronicle.

THE handsome hay mare Ripple, owned at La Siesta, is to be bred in Diablo, 2:14½, this spring. Ripple is a sister to Creole, 2:20, being by Prompter, out of Grace by Buccaneer; second dam Mary (dam of Apex, 2:26, Sterling 6223, etc.), by Flaxtail; third dam by Boanerges (thoroughbred). This union ought to produce a record-heating fast pacer. Ripple had a filly last year by Durfee that will be seen on the circuit as a fast three-year-old; it is a pronounced sidewheeler.

A SANTA ANA despatch to the Los Angeles Herald says: "A Herald reporter, in company with E. B. Gifford, visited the race track this morning, and found upwards of thirty flyers being worked out. The track has been placed in excellent condition, any many fast young horses are being trained. It is expected that within another month every stall on the grounds will be occupied, but the fair association will erect buildings to accommodate all. The colt stakes are filling satisfactorily, and from present indications, the race meeting this fall will eclipse all previous ones."

AT a Directors' meeting of the Vaca Valley Driving Association, held on Wednesday, it was decided to give a series of trotting and running races on July 4th and 5th. We hope to be able to give the speed programme next week. Jos. Stadfeldt has been elected manager of the Association's track and will at once put it in first-class order, when owners of horses (of which there are many good ones in the valley) will have an opportunity of giving them a proper training. The Association having been admitted to membership in the National Driving Association will hereafter be governed by the rules of that organization.

F. H. JERMYN, Secretary of the Pacing Horse Register, and owner of a large number of very fine young trotters and pacers, called at our office the other day. Mr. Jermyrn is in California attending to his mining interests in El Dorado country. He is very proud of his fast pacing colt Carazo, by Alcantara, dam Lady Jenkins (dam of Maxie Cobb, 2:13½), and as it has paced quarters as a yearling in 29½ seconds and eighths in 14 seconds, he has a right to be. Beside Carazo, Mr. Jermyrn owns Allen Lowe 12:27, record 2:16½, and Red Wilkes, out of Betsey-and-I (dam of Moquette, 2:10, and Glencoe Wilkes, sire of Pansy Blossom, 2:23), by Ericsson.

THE directors of the Dixon Driving Park Association held a meeting at the bank Friday, and decided to hold the usual picnic and races on the 1st of May. Committees were appointed to hold a programme of amusements to include games, dancing, etc. A speed programme was agreed upon as follows: Five-eighths and repeat, running, $5 entrance, $50 added. One mile and repeat, $7.50 entrance, $75 added. Pacing, Yolo and Solano colts under four years old that were never in a race, purse of $100. Pacing, free for all, 2:40 class, purse $150. Full particulars concerning the meeting will be given as soon as the various committees have reported.—Dixon Tribune.

DAVID YOUNG, of Stockton, brought down some mares last week to breed to Prof. E. P. Heald's fine young stallion Pilot Prince 20,439. This horse is now five years old, and is full brother to Lottery Ticket, 2:19½, being by Dexter Prince 11,363, out of Emma Nutwood, by Nutwood 600; second dam Lady Emma 236, by Blackhawk 767; third dam the Newby mare, by General Taylor; fourth dam Rosalie, by Williamson's Belmont. Pilot Prince won all his races as a two-year-old, making a record of 2:31½ in the two-year-old stakes at the Breeders' Meeting at Napa in 1890. This, however, was no measure of his speed, as he had worked out 2:27 before starting out on the circuit.

THE California correspondent of Dutton's Spirit of the Turf who writes over the nom de plume of Occident ought to be a little more careful to stick to the truth hereafter. Among other wild and rambling statements in his last letter he says "John Green, owner of Directum, 2:11½, and his dam, Stamboul, has very little knowledge of horses." Mr. Green has been in the horse-raising business long before said Occident was born, and if he catches the quill-driver who wrote the article he will kindly "raise him," and he will do it with a spirit of the turf that will surprise him. Such correspondents who indulge in reflections upon people who are unable to protect themselves should receive a polite note from the able editor of this, one of the best horse journals published.

READ the half-page advertisement of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association's spring and fall meetings. Entries for the stakes and purses will close next Saturday, April 1st. Every owner of a promising trotter and pacer can get a slice of the money by making an entry and paying only five per cent. The races will be two in three; the dashes will be novel, and everyone should aid this association by making liberal entries. Much depends upon the success of this spring meeting, and no one having an interest in the welfare of the trotting-horse industry can afford to stand aloof. Let everyone make an effort, and after the first afternoon's novel sport is ended, the attendance will increase each succeeding day. There will be more enjoyment in witnessing the contests than in viewing the "sprinting" of the thoroughbreds over the same course thereafter. Remember it takes but a few dollars to make your entry, and the books will close next Saturday, April 1st; read the advertisement and act accordingly.

The Saddle.

KING LEE, one of the best three-year-olds in the West, has an ailing leg and was fired recently.

It is not as yet settled whether Baldwin will send the horses in Emanuel Harding's charge to the Blood Horse meeting or to St. Louis.

THE five-year-old gelding Black Bart, by Three Cheers, dam Bonita, by Norfolk, died recently at the East St. Louis of lockjaw.

MR. W. H. CRAIG, of Cornwall, Can., has purchased from Mr. Comstock the stallion Saltpetre, half brother to Salvator, by imp. Glenelg, dam Salina.

MORELLO, the Futurity winner of 1892, was exhibited at the New Orleans track on the 11th inst., and was loudly applauded by the great crowd present.

WILBUR F. SMITH has named his two-year-old hay colt by St. Saviour—Mistake, by Wildidle, Gilead, and the hay colt by imp. Cheviot—Lurline, by Longfield, Marvin.

LEW MARTIN was declared out of all the Blood Horse stakes, according to Assistant Secretary Brough, although his name appeared in our list of entries last week.

R. A. SWIGERT has sold to the Whitten Bros., Wilmington, Ill., the five-year-old mare, Marmose, by imp. Glenelg, out of Marmot, by Kentucky. Price private. She will be raced at the winter tracks.

SILVER STATE, the Cheviot-Bessie Shannon two-year-old filly in Senator Thompson's string, is built very much like Firezzi, a long, low, raking, racing craft that is likely to Kidd many a who may think she's not too fast.

WILBUR F. SMITH has retired the fast Joe Hooker—Marguerite mare, Blondinette, from the turf, and has bred her to that excellent sire, imp. Midlothian. Blondinette is a mare full of nervous energy, and should make a good broodmare.

WE understand the Palo Alto Stock Farm will not have a string at the coming meeting of the Blood Horse Association. This is to be regretted, as it is understood a large number of good ones are being trained by that capable horseman, Cy. Mulkey.

KIRO, the six-year-old son of Joe Hooker and Faustus, that won eight races in 1892, has been purchased by S. E. Lawrence, of Maple City, Kansas, and goes into the stud. He is "dicky" in his forelegs, otherwise Bud Erwin would not have disposed of him.

MARTY BERGEN, who is said to be the richest jockey in America, says he believes he can make more money by not attaching himself to any one stable, and notwithstanding he has had several tempting offers from wealthy owners, prefers to be on "the outside."

MORELLO, the great winner of The Futurity of 1892, was started for the first time in 1893 at New Orleans on the 15th inst. He won in a gallop from Maud, Ansel Jr. and Readina, and did the six furlongs in 1:14, the track record. Morello is, without doubt, a grand race horse.

THE Oakland track is in a bad shape—so bad that Schwartz postponed the races on the Athens of the Pacific indefinitely. The bridge over the creek on the backstretch was, we understand, washed away by the recent rains, and as the course is of adobe, it takes many days to dry out.

DR. THOMAS BOWHILL'S flyers will arrive at Bay District track next Monday from Napa. He has three fillies, and all are said to be doing well in their work. They are by imp. Mariner, imp. Friar Tuck and Birdcatcher, and out of mares respectively by Shannon, Lodi and Wildidle.

JOHN MACKAY, superintendent of Rancho del Paso, denies emphatically that he contemplates leaving his present position to engage in breeding thoroughbreds with Simeon G. Reed near Los Angeles. He declares that no one was authorized to state that he intended leaving Rancho del Paso.

THE noted thoroughbred broodmare, Saucebox, by Star Davis, out of Skedaddle, died of old age, one day last week. She was the property of the B. F. Pettit estate, and was in her twenty-fifth year at the time of her death. Her only foal since 1887, was the three-year-old filly Deception, by imp. Deceiver.

IRELAND BROS., of Paris, Ky., have sold to Frakes & Turner, the five-year-old chestnut horse, Yale '91, by Onondaga, out of Zaidee, by imp. Intruder, for the sum of $5,000. Yale '91 is a good race horse, game to the backbone, and his new owners should be able to win him out directly after the spring races begin.

THE California boy Piantoni, who was recently in trouble at Chicago, came very near causing a serious accident at Hawthorne Park last week. He attempted to go through on the rail with Miss Knott, and in so doing threw Dollkins, with Leonard up, very heavily. Luckily the other jockeys had time to pull up, and a general catastrophe was averted. Leonard escaped with a severe shaking up and a sprained ankle.

LAST Monday afternoon a car-load of race-horses arrived at Bay District track from Los Angeles, including the strings of Dave Bridges and Jockey "Shrimp" Cook. Bridges brought Donna Lilla, Waif, Typesetter, Bartlett, Lucy S. and Montalvo, while Cook has Cassim, Alto Mio, Trumbo and Vendome. Mr. Thompson, of the City of Angels, sent along a good-looking filly by his imported English stallion Convent, son of Favonius (Epsom Derby winner of 1871) and Cracovienne, by Trumpeter. Alto Mio is one of the most promising of the Pacific Derby candidates, and looks well, though he has not as yet been given much fast work.

MRS. JOHN WOLFSKILL, of Santa Monica, according to a gentleman who recently visited the ranch, is greatly pleased with the youngsters by her Australian horse, Plenty, son of Suwarrow and Lurline, the dam of imp. Darchin. Edelweiss (by Joe Hooker—Yolone) has a gray yearling filly, also a hay filly foal at foot. Heliotrope, who has been almost paralyzed with rheumatism for many months, has recovered to some extent, and has been mated with Plenty. Heliodora, the three-year-old Wildidle filly, also goes to Plenty. Daphne is to be trained. Mrs. Wolfskill has sent two two-year-olds to Sacramento to be trained. They are by Gano and Verano. Plenty has developed into a beautiful horse, combining the "quality" of his sire with great muscular powers.

IMP. LOYALIST, the splendid Australian racehorse in W. M. Murry's stable, though making a season in the stud at Sacramento, is taking slow work, with a view to getting him ready for the fall races. Loyalist's hook is rapidly filling. The latest additions are the dam of Late, by Hercules, and a mare by Joe Hooker, dam by Leinster.

REPORTS from San Jose are to the effect that Parasite (formerly Glide), the Cyrus-imp. Getaway filly in the Macdonough string, is a real, live "phenom." The best proof we have of this is the fact that Charles Boots has a couple of Brutus youngsters that are capable of stepping along quarters in 23 seconds or a trifle better, and still Mr. B. is more than sweet on the lively Parasite. Therefore, if Mr. Boots thinks the daughter of Cyrus a world-beater, it must be assumed that she has gone as far as his pair, if not a little faster, and that lick will do in any man's country.

ONE of the largest purchases in the history of Pasadena occurred in that city a few days ago, by which Col. G. G. Green acquired much of the large and valuable holdings of Senator L. J. Rose in that city and vicinity, involving the sum of $110,000. The lands acquired lay for the most part in this city and Altadena, the Hotel Green being included in the Pasadena property; also 700 shares in the Rubio and Millard Cañon water companies. This latest purchase, in addition to his already large holdings in that city, makes Col. Green one of the heaviest property owners in that section.

JOHN REAVEY, the clever horseman, recently purchased of a breeder who resides near Stockton two wonderfully cheap horses, if looks count for anything. One is Hinsdale Chief, a chestnut horse, five years old, by Joe Hooker, dam by Joe Daniels, the other an unnamed black gelding by John A., dam the dam of Hinsdale Chief. The last-named is an unusually handsome fellow, neatly turned as well as showing lots of strength. He won a six-furlong dash at Stockton during the progress of the fair of 1891, and has not been started since, so far as we know. The black son of John A. is a rangy, raw-boned fellow with clean, flat limbs and immense withers. He is not over-handsome, but we would not be surprised if he could go as long a journey as the next fellow.

It will doubtless be very interesting to our readers to know how the mares will be mated at Palo Alto Stock Farm this season by Superintendent Cy. Mulky. Through the kindness of Mr. Mulkey we are enabled to furnish the information. To imp. Cyrus—Rosebud, Shannon Rose, imp. Fairy Rose, Gerbardine, Marcella, imp. Bridget, imp. Getaway, imp. Cutaway, Lady Evangeline, imp. Music, Phoebe Anderson, Riglin, Kathairon and Playmate. To Racine—Fostress, Muster, imp. Gorgo, imp. Flirt, imp. Queen Bess, imp. Mutiny, Aurelia, Evangeline, imp. Ouida, imp. Berna, Faustine and Bessie Hooker. To Flambeau—Fannie Lewis, imp. Amalia, Piney Lewis, imp. Amelia, imp. Petroleuse, imp. Goula, imp. Laelia, Precious, imp. Rosetta, imp. Cornelia (by Isonomy), imp. Teardrop, Glendew, Mozelle and Flam. To Flood—Imp. Cornelia (by Cornelian) and Phoebe (by Grinstead). The selections seem to us very excellent, and the produce will doubtless bring splendid prices.

THE best food for a mare in foal is oats, bran, some corn, a little oil cake, carrots, corn fodder and good hay in small quantities. Concentrated food is best where there is a tendency to relaxation of the bowels. A large quantity of food given at any time, in connection with vigorous exercise, is liable to bring a miscarriage; oats or flax straw in large quantities may produce diarrhoea, and abortion may follow. Regular exercise and good, nourishing food in moderate quantities is always the sure road to success with a mare in foal. After the foal is up and around it should have a free operation of the bowels. If it should not you will notice that it is uneasy; it will switch its tail, draw up at the flanks, breathe short, and stare more or less. It is time now to prepare an injection of slippery-elm water, flax-seed water or even castile soap suds and inject it into the bowels until the big bowels are emptied; to be repeated if found necessary. But don't resort to physic unless you are compelled to. Better depend on laxative food for the dam than to derange the stomach of the little fellow by medicines that irritate.

THE clever turfman, Peter Weher, of Oakland, has purchased of E. F. Fallon, Fairlawn Stock Farm, Hollister, Cal., the chestnut three-year-old gelding Manhattan and the two-year old gelding Crescent Monarch. Consideration for the two, $1,500. Both are said to be very promising "maidens." Manhattan is by Birdcatcher, dam Ursula, by Duke of Montrose; second dam Sozodot, by Longfellow. Crescent Monarch is by Birdcatcher, dam the good race mare Lottie L. (half sister to Susie Williamson, dam of Neilson), by Wildidle. Mr. Fallon has left for sale four excellent young horses and the Wildidle brood mare, Lottie L. They are Hathaway, black colt, four years old, by Ironclad (sire of Inkerman and Sam Mount), dam Skipaway, by Wildidle; Sir Edward, brown gelding, three years old, by Birdcatcher, dam the splendid performer, Harriet, by Flood; Maximilian, yearling colt by Birdcatcher, dam Lottie L., by Wildidle, a splendid individual, and Pauline, yearling filly, by Birdcatcher, dam Skipaway (sister to Lottie L.), by Wildidle. Birdcatcher, Mr. Fallon's stallion, was one of the greatest horses at any distance from a mile and three-quarters upward ever known in California, beating Jocko, the conqueror of Lucky B., and the best horses in the West during his turf days.

THE following special dispatch came from Los Angeles last Sunday night: The Examiner representative to-day visited E. J. Baldwin's stables at Santa Anita, where the horses are being prepared for their journey to Chicago. Santa Ana has thickened out into a great, strapping mare, as one could imagine the great Beeswing to have been. Galindo is a hearty and there is no four-year-old in America more shapely than the gallant gray son of Freda. Next to him is another gray by Rutherford out of Ophir, which "Doc" Williams is schooling over the hurdles. Then comes a great, leggy chestnut mare called Lady Bess, by the Emperor of Norfolk, out of Arritta. She won three out of five races last year in good company, and will be Mr. Baldwin's candidate for the American Derby. She looks as if she might be able to go at a great pace and last over a goodly distance, but her durability as a campaigner is exceedingly doubtful on looks. She is very different from a little dark bay two-year-old by Cheviot out of Alabo that stands in a stall two or three doors away from her. This youngster is modeled very much on the lines of that little hero, Volante. In the adjoining box to him is the pearl of the ranch, a chestnut filly by Cheviot out of Viente, sister to Volante. The horses as a rule are very fit, and look as if they would make their mark in the East.

THE jockey owner, Ezell, and the jockey, Ransom, have been indefinitely suspended at Hawthorne Park, for pulling St. Albans and Noonday respectively. In the latter case an effort will be made to discover who prompted the lad to his dishonesty. Charles McCafferty had some trouble with Judge Pettingill on Monday, refusing for a while to start his horse with the jockey who had originally weighed out for him. Eventually he consented, but it is claimed that no great effort was made to win with the horse.

MATT STORN'S string of eleven are looking and going splendidly at Bay District track, with the exception of Centella, who has had a severe attack of influenza. The great mare, is, however, coming around again very fast. Hermitage, the imp Friar Tuck—Mistake colt, is a solid-looking bay colt, and that he has speed in plenty was demonstrated at Denver when he defeated Charnion for the Pacific Coast Stakes. Toppallant is in fine shape, and a beautiful animal he is. Red Prince has rounded out, and will be a most useful horse this season. Marigold is all right, and will have something to say in races of a mile and an eighth and upward, Modesto, by Hyder Ali, Tobiasco, by Judge McKinstry, Excuse Me and several excellent two-year-olds make up a string that will keep up California's good reputation at the East. After racing here the Storn horses go direct to Brooklyn.

AN important deal in thoroughbred horseflesh was made last Monday, when Charles E. Miller, a young gentleman of this city, secured of Mrs. Robert E. Bybee, Salem, Oregon, the entire string of horses that were in training by her husband and S. J. Jones at the time of Judge Bybee's death. The consideration for the horses, a list of which follows, is understood to have been about $12,000: Misty Morn, h m, 5 years old, by St. Paul (son of Alarm and Lady Salyers, by Longfellow), dam Why Not, by George Wilkes (son of Asteroid); Rosebud, h f, 3 years, by St. Paul, dam Neyella (holder of the five-furlong record, 1:00), for a long time, by California (brother to Joe Hooker); Seahreeze, h f, three years, by St. Paul, dam Bellow, by Longfield; Broad Church, ch h, aged (brother to Canny Scott), by Leinster, dam Tibbie Dunhar, by imp. Bonnie Scotland; Rosy Morn, ch f, 2 years (sister to Misty Morn); ch f, 2 years, by Oregon (son of Monday), dam Oceania, by Flood; Marmore, h f, 2 years, by Broad Church, dam Keepsake, and Wyana, ch f, 2 years, by Oregon, dam Superba, by Flood. Misty Morn is probably the best mare ever raised in Oregon, and, while she did well in California, has never been seen at her best. She was valued at $6,000 by Mrs. Bybee. The three-year-old, Rosebud, defeated the great Geraldine at Oakland not long ago, and was valued separately at $5,000. Broad Church, if his temper could be improved, would be more than a useful horse, and the consensus of opinion cannot but be that at $12,000 the Bybee horses are a great bargain.

LONGSTREET is doing slow work regularly and looks well. His stable mate, Yorkville Belle, seems to have rounded to nicely, if ever there was anything at all serious the matter with her, and looks as if she will be up to her best form again this year. The generality of the local talent are not particularly taken with the way Don Alonzo has wintered. He has grown "up in the air," and not lengthened nor let down to a proportionate extent. This was the way he was inclined toward the end of last racing season. C. H. Gillock is voted a really good sort, and the consensus of opinion is that he will play a part of no small importance among this year's three-year-olds. Red Banner has been on the sick list, and does not look her best at present, though she is rounding to. By the by, Don Alonzo's ex-stable mate, Sir Francis, is one of the principal attractions at Morris Park. The colt has not done altogether as well as Mr. J. W. Rodgers would have wished, and though in reality he has been doing more than "shed work," he looks light beside the other horses in the stable and strikes the eye as if he had been put along pretty sharply. He is probably a rather delicate colt, but it will be remembered that, though his half sister, Yorkville Belle, did none too well in the winter of 1891-92, she began to "go the right way" when spring had fairly set in. It may be hoped that Sir Francis may do likewise, but the fact that he was declared out of all his spring engagements shows that it is not thought likely that he will come to hand early.—Daily Spirit.

POLITICIAN JIM NEIL last Saturday found Checkmate (his John A. colt), that some one stole out of the enclosure at Bay District track about a month ago. Ever since the racingly-inclined thief got in his deadly work on the entering wedge of a great stable of racehorses Jim has been sleuthing throughout San Francisco and her suburbs, and as a final resort visited the City Pound a second time, there to learn that the object of his long search had been clutched by the dog-grabbers on the 2d of March and sold to R. Meins for $30 on March 6th. A look through the pound resulted in Mr. Neil finding the colt's halter, on which "James Neil" stood out (to those capable of reading) in hold relief. Branding the dog-snatchers with terms more appropriate than elegant, the owner of Checkmate at once procured a search warrant, secured the services of a police officer, and proceeded to R. Meins' dairy at Twenty-fifth and Point Lobos avenues, there to search for the prospective winner of fame and fortune—the young namesake of the celebrated (checkmate). There, immured in a stall that had evidently never felt a pitchfork, was Check—and ye gods! what a wreck of his former self, what a clever imitation of a skeleton with a hide stretched over it! Outside of the lack of condition, the colt's shoulders had been wrenched badly and was swollen a la Joe Harding, while the legs that had been the pride of his fond owner looked as if they had passed through three modern threshing machines. Slowly, and with tears ever and anon welling his sad eyes, the gentle racehorse owner led along his sorry charge to a well-known livery stable, the owner being a very good friend of Neil's, or else he would never have allowed this unhappy son of John A. to occupy a stall in his place. His poor condition is accounted for by the fact that the Meins boys are not very well up in the art of training, and had perhaps read some work on training racehorses printed in 1723. (Checkmate, it is understood, was every morning taken from Twenty-fifth avenue (near the Cliff House) to Bay District track. Once there, he was galloped until he perspired gore, and then, the prescribed number of miles being given him on the track, the colt was run back to the dairy over the macadamized road blanketless. The use of rubbers were unknown to the milkmen-trainers, and the only wonder is that Checkmate has not gone to horse heaven, there is join Eclipse, Diomed, Highflyer, etc. Seriously, it would appear that Mr. Neil has been outrageously treated, as the halter with Neil's name on it should have given the pound officials an inkling as to who owned the horse. Besides, the owner advertised extensively that the colt had been stolen.

P. C. T. H. B. A. Spring Meeting.

Never in the history of trotting in this State has there been such a necessity for united effort among horsemen to sustain the interest in the trotting-horse business as now. The live organization called the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association has, as usual, come to the front with a programme of races to be trotted and paced at its spring meeting which, if encouraged by liberal entries from all owners of colts and fillies, will be a success; and this success means more for the breeders than the mere financial returns of the meeting.

The public have, during the past few years, shown their disregard of the long three-in-five races, and consequently they will not attend the meeting. In this age of progression no fair-minded person can blame them. Horse-owners who have had to pay large sums for entrance and then see their horses trot for the money paid in by their fellow-breeders are also disgusted. These two grievances have almost proved fatal to our trotting meetings, but a change is to be made, and, if the success of the coming Spring meeting is assured, its example will be followed by every other similar organization in the land, and a greater interest will be taken in the meetings than ever.

The programme is published in another column and blanks will be sent to every member of the association today. Entries for this meeting, as well as the fall meeting, will close next Saturday, April 1st, and the importance of attending to them at once must be apparent to all. The purse races for two, three and four-year-olds in the dash races are sure to prove attractive, and as they will be "sandwiched" between the regular two-in-three events each afternoon the spectators' interest will never be allowed to flag. [Like a play where there is no long intermission between acts, every actor as well as the audience will become enthusiastic over the systematic way in which the entertainment is conducted.

There is some talk of this association holding a summer meeting if this one proves successful (and there is no reason why it should not); all that is necessary is for horse-owners to send in their entries now.

Nearly every member of this prosperous association is interested in some representative of a worthy sire and dam; let these gentlemen, therefore, take a personal interest in this meeting and see that the entries are made, and, when the last day's races end, they can look back upon their work with pleasure, for large audiences have been delighted, good races have taken place and close contests and exciting finishes have marked each day's sport; the gate receipts have been larger, and everyone will feel happy. The news of our success will be telegraphed all over the land, and a new era for the trotting horse industry will dawn that is certain to become brighter and brighter every year. Therefore, let every member act as a committee of one to make this meeting a success, and with this unity of purpose there cannot be a failure. Remember, entries will close next Saturday. Do not forget that this is the last call.

JAMES B. FERGUSON, of Lexington, Ky., who is no stranger to California, will start the festive gallopers at the Blood Horse meeting which begins next Saturday. His work has almost always been of the best under the flying start system, and we look for a continuation of it. Clinton B. Riley, of Chicago, will be presiding judge, and a long experience as racing reporter on metropolitan newspapers, close study of the racing rules and years of experience in the stand should fit him for the position. Who the official handicapper will be cannot be guessed, but we trust the association will see fit to put aside the moss-covered idea that the gentleman's name must be kept secret, and swing into line with the first-class, progressive racing organizations at the East, that allow their secretaries to appoint the weights and take the blame. Everything done by organizations of this kind should be open and above-board, and until it is known by the horsemen and the public who fixes the handicap weights there will be dissatisfaction and consequent lack of confidence.

We were misinformed regarding the reinstatement of Jockey Fred Carillo, a statement appearing in another portion of this paper that the Blood Horse Association had taken him back. It is true he is working for Mr. Macdonough, under Henry Walsh, and it is said a movement in favor of Carillo's reinstatement is on foot, but as yet the Blood Horse Association has not acted on the matter.

The Spring Blood Horse Meeting.

Sunshine and cheerfulness has been exchanged for long-continued sky-weeping and dreariness. With the change of weather for the better comes the arrival daily of many strings of gallopers at Bay District track, together with hopeful trainers and happy-faced urchins that do the horse-piloting or rubbing. At the present time over 100 horses have "come to the races," and indications are that the 106 new stalls built on "The Villa" ground will soon be occupied by the "children of the winds." In fact, no less than 325 horses will participate in the Spring Blood Horse meeting, and the number is likely to be swelled to 350. The inclement weather and consequent sorry condition of the tracks throughout the State has resulted in the thoroughbreds being backward in the work of preparation, those trained at Bay District track and Sacramento, however, being further along than their brethren prepared in San Jose, Oakland and other points, owing to the nature of the ground composing those race courses. In fact, so bad has been the track at San Jose for the past six weeks that little or no work has been done over it.

Already the "tout" and his stop-watch is on band, every good "work-out" being duly noted by the parasite of the race courses.

Perhaps the most interesting lot of horses at present domiciled at Bay District track are those controlled by Thomas H. Williams—Fidelia, Picton, Cadmus and Flirtation, the first three three-year-olds and the latter a two-year-old sister to the mighty Flambeau. Fidelia, on looks, is the best of the older division, while every trainer and race-track devotee is loud in praise of Flirtation. Cadmus is declared to be "hot rags," and it is thought he will go the American and Pacific Derby routes in excellent shape.

C. A. Brown's Ocean View Stable, quartered where B. C. Holly's horses were last fall, will not race at the Blood Horse meeting, but proceed East about the 1st of April. Wildwood, Joe Cotton and the Prince of Norfolk—Eda two-year-old colt have been got in beautiful condition by Trainer C. Davis, and are sure to render a good account of themselves at Brooklyn and other far-Eastern courses.

Mike Kelly is working Don Fulano, The Spaniard is without doubt a great colt, and that any three-year-old in California can beat him we very much doubt. He is a model of symmetry and beauty, and it is hard to realize that the brown son of Alta and Marelee that is stepping as light as a dancing master was a mighty sick colt less than one year ago. St. Croix and two two-year-olds are also in Kelly's stable, and the fast sprinter first-named is likely to have some say in the six-furlong races.

Matt Storn's eleven will give an excellent account of themselves, no doubt. Centella is the only one that has been sick to an extent worth mentioning. Hermitage is doing beautifully, and is a very handsome, sturdy-looking three-year-old colt. Topgallant is looking and feeling well, and as he was more than a useful horse last season, when we say he is now as good as he was last year it will be understood that he will cut a considerable figure in his races this season. Marigold is the same good mare she was in 1892. Red Prince has rounded to, and will be heard from. The two-year-olds are good-lookers, but, of course, as yet unknown quantities.

Ollie Johnson, a clever horseman, is working three horses for Burns & Waterhouse—the five-year-old bay gelding by Joe Hooker, dam Louisa D., by Norfolk; Hugo (Derby candidate), a chestnut colt by Cyclone, dam Brown Bess, by imp. Hercules, and Mutineer, a chestnut colt, two years old, by imp. Cheviot, dam Munity. All are maidens, but are good-lookers. Mutineer especially is a racy-looking fellow.

"Hanger" Jones, who graduated under one of the most famous of our old-time horsemen, the late Captain Thomas G. Moore, of Crab Orchard, Ky. (who trained at one time for J. B. Haggiu, has nine at work, and an excellent lot they are. Phil Archibald owns three of the number—Swiftsure and Ichi Bau, two-year-olds by Coloma, and Joe D., an aged sprinter. Old Almont and the Sir Modred mare, Motto, are doing well. Dr. Ross, the Cheviot-Beauty colt, is a much improved one, and is likely to make it warm for most anybody's horse.

Dave Bridges, Carner and Al ("Shrimp") Cook came in from Los Angeles last Monday with Donna Lilla, Waif, Typesetter, Lucy S., Button and Montalvo, Trumbo, Vendome (Maben's Duke of Norfolk colt), Alto Mio and Cassim, the last-named quartet being in Carner and Cook's hands. Montalvo (half-brother to John Treat) is a very promising, fine-looking two-year-old. Old Type-setter is showing up excellently well. Alto Mio, a grand-looking Alta colt, is not likely to be started in the Pacific Derby, as the route is a little long for him this season of the year, he being a great, lengthy, growthy fellow.

Bert Hart, B. C. Holly's old jockey, is training the string of H. D. Brown, composed of five horses. Quarterstaff is the star of the stable, and a colt that is likely to prove a pie-winner.

Dan Miller's horses got down from Sacramento this week in the hands of Trainer Dan Meeks. There are four in the stable—Charmion (who has been coughing a little), Ida Glenn and two two-year-olds.

Charles Boots' string of ten arrived last Wednesday—Sir Walter, Ledalia, the Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt Peter the Great (2); gr f 2), by imp. Brutus—Ledette; b c Romulus, by imp. Brutus—Beauty; ch c (2), by imp. Brutus, dam by Bob Wooding; br c (2), brother to Sir Walter; b c Mercury (2), by imp. Brutus—The Swayback; b m Initiation (6), by Inauguration—Brown Maria; br c Sir Rhodes (3), brother to Sir Walter. A better-looking lot of two-year-olds or a string that appears more fit for a campaign than the Boots horses, never came to Bay District track. Peter the Great is already a winner, but on looks Romulus and the colt from the Bob Wooding mare are his superiors. Romulus especially impresses us favorably. Nine others will be brought up later on. James Nelson, the trainer, deserves credit for the appearance of the horses. Rinstine and Hinkey will ride. Just how Ledalia will go in the Derby and Tidal is hard to say at present, in view of the fact that she has been quartered at San Jose, where the track was a sea of mucilageous mud.

The Suisun Stahle is on hand with seven or eight horses, among the number being Braw Scot, and "the other" Grandee.

John Reavey has a small but select string, at the head of which is the good-looking five-year-old chestnut horse Hinsdale Chief, by Joe Hooker. The black half-brother to Hinsdale Chief is a big-boned fellow with clean-looking limbs and unusually prominent withers.

C. W. Chappell has a good string in charge, composed of Peel (who has fully recovered from his attack of influenza), Alliance, Chevy Hock, Guadaloupe, Wallace, a John A. gelding, Jack the Ripper and Little Tough. Great hopes are centered in Alliance, who is a vastly improved colt.

"Bush" Smith, of Smith Bros., has the game old bay horse Cyclone in charge, and the old fellow is the same breadwinner that he was of yore. Bush has just returned from Oklahoma, and great credit is due George Woods for the horse's excellent condition.

Billy Donathan, of San Jose, is expected to be on hand with Atossa and a number of others that have races up their sleeves, and Henry Walsh is likely to bring two or three of the Macdonough youngsters. If he fetches Glide along there will be heavy hearts among the owners of two-year-olds that know the filly's capabilities.

Senator William Thompson has a most excellent string in charge of Maurice Peppers—Martinet (a grand chestnut Derby colt), The Drummer, Silver State (a beautiful bay filly, long-bodied on short legs, by Cheviot—Bessie Shannon), and a couple of youngsters by Nee Ban.

W. M. Murry is due to arrive next Wednesday from Sacramento with nine or ten horses, including Belfast, Pricelle, Thornhill and a number of two-year-olds.

Wilber F. Smith, of Sacramento, will also come in early next week from the Capital City with a string of ten or eleven, among the number being Orta, Steadfast and Cuidado, and Dan Dennisou will have fully as many coming from the same place, including the gray Grandee, Tigress, Wicklow and the two-year-olds Chartreuse, a chestnut filly by imp. Cheviot, dam Zara; Border, bay colt, by imp. Cheviot, dam Sister to Ruth Ryan (dam of Quarterstaff), and a chestnut colt by imp. Cheviot, dam Aunt Jane (dam of Wicklow).

Dr. Bowhill's three come down from Napa next Tuesday morning. They are all fillies, by Birdcatcher, imp. Friar Tuck and imp. Mariner.

Charles Kerr, of Bakersfield; E. R. Den, of Santa Barbara; J. H. Miller, of Sacramento; G. W. Trahern, of Stockton; Owens Bros. and P. McKenna, of Fresno; J. G. Hill, of Ventura; L. J. Rose and Rickabaugh & Earp, of Los Angeles; Billy McCormick, of "The Arcade," Sacramento county; Ira Ramsdell, of this city; Naglee Burk, of San Jose; Frank Burke, of Menlo Park, and many others are expected to send strings, and that there will be the best meeting this spring in the history of the Blood Horse Association is certain.

It Must Not be Destroyed.

It is not within the province of a turf journal to speak of the depreciation of real estate values in the suburbs of San Francisco, but certain newspaper writers have taken upon themselves the herculean task of almost driving the Board of Supervisors to believe there is a boom in real property, and to make them perform acts that will be of no particular benefit to anyone; and these writers threaten to do this by bringing an improvement club's influence to bear upon our city fathers. We step outside our bounds, however, when the interests of horsemen are at stake, especially when the principal aim is to have the Bay District track fences torn down, the stalls destroyed, the track obliterated and streets cut through the inclosure.

If there was any immediate demand for outside property, or if there was a large number of people in San Francisco who could not find a place to live or a vacant lot on which to build, then by all means we would be in favor of doing exactly as these local agitating writers demand, and would help them in every way to accomplish the work.

Our real estate dealers are not jubilant over the "prospects" of an increase in the value of lands in the suburbs, as alleged in the articles referred to. Along the Point Lobos road there are acres of fenced lands; out on the Mission road there are miles of unimproved property; toward South San Francisco and beyond, the same level expanse of unimproved property meets the eye. Where the steam dummy draws its load of pleasure-seeking passengers to the ocean beach there are acres of almost valueless wastes; beyond Seventh Avenue there lies an unbroken stretch of country to the beach that will some day be built up; over toward North Beach there are more lots and many acres awaiting a buyer. These places have all been "boomed," until the unfortunate owners who paid high prices for their holdings would willingly sell for one-half of what they paid. There is no denying the fact that there are more unoccupied houses in San Francisco to-day than has ever been known in its history, and many of the inhabitants have moved from their mortgaged homes to rented apartments. This can largely be attributed to the effects of the "boom."

The improvement clubs which induced the Supervisors in the past to erect electric lights and lay down water and gas mains, etc., were composed of property-owners who had paid for grading and macadamizing their streets and were anxious to have their property improved. The demand of the times was for little homes, and these owners found little trouble in renting the cottages they erected. That was when the boom was at its height. The clubs deserve a great deal of credit for what they accomplished then, and if the improvement in the prices could have been sustained every citizen in the land would rejoice with these fortunate people. We admit with sorrow that such a thing could not be, and the property-holder must wait patiently for years for a revival in real estate; then, and not till then, will it be advisable to cut streets through the Bay District track and the graveyards this side of it. When that time comes this journal will unite with all others to boom the work of the improvement clubs and have Senator Stanford sell his land where the track is. But the builders of streets (with their pens) have no patience, and would have him open up a new lot of land now to place beside the squares of unoccupied territory surrounding it, just because the track is in the way.

The Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association has gone to considerable expense to make the place presentable, and were it not that the directors are continually harassed by newspaper articles decrying their work, thousands of dollars would be expended where only hundreds are paid out monthly to beautify the enclosure. The great industry of raising horses in California must have an exhibition ground whereon the thoroughbreds, as well as trotters and pacers, can be shown and their qualities developed. This State is destined to lead every other in the United States in this respect, not even excepting "Old Kentucky," and as the other lands on the peninsula are very scarce or are placed at such exorbitant figures that they can hardly be purchased, we believe the members of the improvement clubs will agree with us when we say, "Let us exercise patience until the 'boom' comes, and then if the law must be enforced, let us have streets cut through the Bay District track and build a track elsewhere." All other pieces of valuable property occupying the choicest sites in our suburbs (yet much nearer the City Hall), which are at present being used as places of enterment, must also receive the attention of the improvement clubs, and we will help them. The bodies of the deceased who have "requiscat in pace" on their tombstones must be removed, and macadamized streets be cut through. It will be a public necessity, and if the law is enforced in one case it must in the other; therefore, until there is need for a change, we humbly ask the reporters to restrain their ambitions and pray for a "rise" in values.

Scientific Shoeing.

"No foot, no horse" is an old but true saying, yet how many hundreds of horses are ruined by the ignorance of horse shoers who never made a study of that wonderful work of nature—a horse's foot. Badly shod, the horse while in action often strikes himself and becomes unfit for any work thereafter. T. Doyle, the celebrated horse-shoer, makes a study of scientific horse-shoeing, and gives his personal attention to all details. He has fitted up two large shops, one is at 628 Howard street the other on Park avenue near Larkin street, opposite the New City Hall. In these places Mr. Doyle has stalls erected for horses that are under the veterinarian's care for cracked heels, quarter-cracks, thrush, gravel or other ailments. Every care is taken of them, and numerous testimonials have been received by this practical workman for the good work he has performed.

Mr. Doyle has patented a clasp for quarter-cracks and a horseshoe that prevents any concussion, and they are a success wherever used. A patent chair in which horses are led to be shod is another innovation; it affords comfort to the horse and protection to the workman. A cordial invitation is extended to horsemen to visit these establishments for they are models of comfort, and anyone having horses that interfere or forge should call and see how quickly Mr. Doyle can remedy these defects.

Sulkies To Chicago.

Mr. Bilz, the machinist and carriage manufacturer of this place, yesterday shipped one pneumatic tire sulky and one speeding sulky to the World's Fair to be held in Chicago. The sulkies are handsome structures and should bring home the winning prize for their class of vehicles. They were designed and built here in Pleasanton by Mr. Bilz, and show him to be a skilled mechanic. His workmen in every department of his large factory are first-class in every respect. These sulkies are begun and finished completely before they leave the factory, that is to say, they are wooded, ironed, painted and upholstered.

Mr. Bilz also shipped two plows of his own patent and manufacture to the World Fair—a one-horse vineyard plow and a two-horse gang plow. He also shipped two speeding sulkies to Palo Alto, and to-day will ship one combination cart to John A. McKerron, his agent in San Francisco.—Pleasanton Times.

All of a Family.

Chas. E. Needham, of Bellota, San Joaquin county, is one of our best-known horsemen, and this year he has placed his advertisement of the four-of-a-kind stallions in our columns. There is Steve Whipple with a race record of 2:14 in fourth heat, and in third heat he was separately timed in 2:11; in this heat he was sent away last and had to go to the outside of a field of horses and was only beaten a head. Every one knows Steve Whipple and it would be as useless as trying to gild refined gold or to paint the lily as to speak of his merits. His two half brothers, Voter, by Elect, and Prindex, by Dexter Prindex, besides his full brother Andy R., are all to stand for the season of 1893 in Stockton and Bellota according to the advertisement and owners of good nares should avail themselves of the opportunity of breeding to them. Voter, Prindex and Andy R. will be given race records this fall, and they will be of the Steve Whipple kind, too.

Napa Colt Stakes.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of the Napa Agricultural Association. There are races for yearlings, two-year-olds, three-year-olds and four-year-olds, trotting and pacing, entries for which will close next Saturday, April 1st, and every owner of a good youngster should not forget to make an entry. The track at Napa will be put in first-class shape, and Chas. Scott, the superintendent, will have everything in readiness to make this the best fair ever held in the beautiful city.

The officers of the society are working hard to make the coming annual meeting a grand success. The Napa track has been the battle ground over which many of the most famous trotters and pacers in this State have won fame, and now that it is to be placed in better fix than ever, we can look for some very fast records being made. Remember entries close April 1st.

McCormick Machines.

The reputation of the celebrated McCormick farm machinery is world-wide. Every improvement that can be thought of has been added to make them as near perfection as possible. Their mowers, reapers and binders are universally used by our leading farmers and they would not have any other. The Deere Implement Company of 305 and 307 Market Street, are the Pacific Coast agents for these celebrated machines. A large line of assorted sizes are always on exhibition in their extensive warehouses, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to visit and inspect these useful implements. Write for catalogues and prices.

Stonewall 11,050.

The handsome, black stallion Stonewall 11,050, sired by Director, 2:17, out of Nellie Steinway, by Steinway, 2:25 1/2, is advertised in this issue to make the season of 1893 at the Napa race track, at the low fee of $50. After the season ends he will be given to a competent trainer and will, no doubt, earn a low record. Stonewall is a large, well-formed young stallion, he is a model of symmetry and is remarkably pure-gaited. His disposition is perfect. He should make a great sire; his breeding commends him, and the combination of Director Steinway and St. Clair blood backed up by stout thoroughbred crosses is difficult to excel. Read the advertisement.

THE GUN.

The Scenes of Youth.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

Though still and dead,
My soul is wed
To thoughts and scenes of other years:
My early youth,
I love foresooth.

The San Francisco Gun Club.

The San Francisco Gun Club met at Oakland Shooting Park on Saturday last, celebrating the second event of the season in their regular annual programme.

Mr. R. B. Woodward shot his score in his old form missing but one bird.

Mr. F. W. Tallant killed to his last bird, which being a very swift bird to right quarter, escaped with but little punishment.

Then followed six gentlemen who scored ten birds each, all doing excellent shooting.

The scores of the first sixteen gentlemen, as given below, shows well for an amateur club.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Lists names like R. B. Woodward, F. W. Tallant, R. H. Sprague, etc., with their respective scores.

In pool-shooting, in 30-yard class, Messrs. Sprague and Babcock divided the first purse; Messrs. Babcock and Webster the purse on second "freeze-out," Messrs. Babcock and Tallant divided in the third event and Messrs. Tallant and Cadman won the money in the fourth event.

In the 25-yard class Messrs. A. C. Tubbs and Hamilton divided the money in the first "freeze-out," the latter winning the purse in the next event; the third was a repetition of the first trial.

Messrs. Sprague and Cadman then finished the birds by shooting some twenty odd birds each, Sprague winning but by one bird. It was a very interesting race.

Important to Every Sportsman.

No question has ever been presented to the sportsmen of America equaling in importance the project now before them of forming a National Sportsmen's Association.

The sportsmen of America have become legion and the public are but beginning to realize that they are a body of men, in so much as field sports are concerned, that is devoted, primarily, to the furtherance of such aims and object as are of the first importance to the people as a whole.

upon which every true, loyal citizen can unite. These objects, all, are for the education, refinement, use and pleasure of the whole people.

To every lover of nature, they are objects which appeal with a force which must call forth most earnest and conscientious endeavor for their accomplishment.

The call has gone forth and the rallying of our forces are already indicated; from New York to San Francisco and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico the answer comes as from one man favoring the movement.

It is a matter which will require the thoughtful study and constant care of the wisest minds in our midst—the formation of a National body in such a manner as to render it most effective for good.

The whole country is being awakened to the importance of such a movement and from the present outlook it may be safely predicted that the "call" when formally issued for the organization of the body at Chicago, during the summer, at such time as will best suit the majority interested that there will be not only a large, but a most earnest practical gathering to found what we confidently predict will prove to be the grandest and most effective organization for the good of the cause of general sportsmanship that has ever been formed.

Are you doing your duty in the matter of calling attention to this subject? Are you throwing your personal interest into the matter and laboring in the behalf of the organization of this body? If not will you not now begin? Let every one do his part and the movement will prove a grand success.

Isle Royal.

On the northern shore of Lake Superior is to be found one of the most interesting islands to be met with in any of the group of great lakes. The Isle Royal lies about fourteen miles from the main land and presents many features of attraction not to be met with in any other section of the country.

This island is about twenty-seven miles in length, varying in width from two to three miles. Along its farther or lake-facing side and distant from it but a mile or less runs a chain of islands so near together that one might with ease pass from one to another on foot.

Between this chain of small islands and the main one is one of Nature's perfect harbors, where the entire fleet of the lake might anchor with perfect safety. An entrance may be made into this harbor by the largest vessels at either end of the islands and also in the center of the smaller chain of islands.

On the island are to be found a large number of smaller lakes and these lakes practically have no bottoms, and but a few years ago were literally filled with trout as fine as were ever taken from the rushing mountain streams of the higher mountains.

Professor J. M. Macallister, the world-renowned mysticist, ran onto this charming island some years ago in one of his constant excursions into every part of the habitable globe.

In conversation with him recently, he remarked that Isle Royal presented some features of interest of the most striking nature, the formation of the island, its lakes and the wonderful quantity of trout found in them on the occasion of his visit there, being not of the least.

The small lakes of the island proper are formed in the links of a chain, most of them being connected with narrow passages which to my mind suggests the manner in which the small islands above described were dismembered and formed into the columns as now presented.

The Professor and his companion spent a month on the island, visiting the adjacent points of interest on the shore of the lake. An experience is related by the Professor relative to the quantity of trout in these small lakes that is well nigh incredible, and yet, knowing him as we do, we do not hesitate to vouch for the absolute truth of the statement.

Angling with a lure leader was soon dispensed with, and in a short time, even with but one fly the sport grew wearisome because of the ease with which the trout insisted on being slaughtered.

In the trout fishing line there was something of yet greater interest to the party. Taking their yacht and sailing over to the mainland to the mouth of the Nepagion river which flows down into the lake from Canadian soil, they struck some truly wonderful sport in the trout fishing line.

The famous Silver Island is near the Isle Royal, yielding a very great per cent. of silver. On the island was found a large number of hardened copper tools which art was lost with the obliteration of the more advanced civilization of the pre-Columbian age in North America.

Turning a Trick.

Did you ever go out with the very best shot on earth? The one who never fails to kill more birds than any other man he ever went with a-field, regardless of any exception? No? Well, you never knew my self-alleged friend Boggs.

He loved his dogs and guns and in sports a-field found his principal pleasures of life. When he went out hunting he invariably came back with the largest bag of any one of the party.

He worked it in this wise. When a bird would rise and his companion would drop it, Boggs' gun would crack at the same instant and he would be heard saying, "Bai Jove! did ye see me kill 'em!"

The occasion of my first experience with the old fellow I shall never forget. It happened in this wise.

A party of half dozen or more went out to the old fellows place for a few days hunt; there was an air of ease and careless comfort about it; the old house was low and rambling with plenty of room in every apartment.

In the evening I was most agreeably surprised on answering the dinner call to find at the table one of the sweetest and most charming creatures whom I had ever had the good fortune to meet. I think I should have stood spell bound by the sight of the beautiful maiden, had not one of my companions pulled at my coat, at the same time whispering into my ear the very sage and oft-repeated words of advice "Don't be a fool!"

I sat down quite abashed and I fear that I cut a sorry figure through the whole of the dinner hour from a feeling of conscious slavery to the beautiful being opposite.

Kitty Boggs! Lord! it can't be that she is old Bogg's daughter! Impossible! But nevertheless it was true and when introduced I managed to stammer a few platitudes about the weather and other equally unimportant subjects.

We had not been in the field but a short time, until I "tumbled" if I may be allowed to fall into slang. I could not be rude to Kitty's father, for strange and ludicrous as it may seem, I was fairly nettled in the meshes of her winsome ways and wonderful charms.

But I must secure by stealth what I was losing by open-handed robbery. Bird after bird that I had knocked down went into the capacious pockets of Boggs' hunting coat.

I began working the old fellow by plying him with liquor from my flask, but behold! he drained the whole of it, and walked better and played his game of robbing me of my birds more boldly than before.

Luncheon hour brought me the desired opportunity. Boggs had so many birds in his hunting coat that he was obliged to lay it aside in order to secure any rest during luncheon. At a favorable moment I quickly filled my pockets from those of his coat, replacing the bulk and weight of the birds removed by damp moss from the brook near by.

The effectiveness of the small hore gun on game is conceded, but at the trap at live birds it seems doubtful if it may become in general use. The fact of Mr. John K. Orr's shooting in the match of the San Francisco Gun Club on Saturday last, proves pretty conclusively that it requires a heavier gun for this shooting, but it should be remembered that he shot at 28-yards, no provision having been made in this club for handicapping gun.

The Country Club meets at the trap to-day in Oakland Shooting Park.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths, to their kennels, to all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

FIXTURES.

BENCH SHOWS.

- Illinois Kennel Club's bench show, Indianapolis, Ind., March 28, 29, 30 and 31. Chas. K. Farmer, Secretary.
- New England Kennel Club's bench show, Boston, April 4, 5, 6 and 7. J. W. Newman, Secretary.
- Continental Kennel Club's bench show, Denver, Colo., April 11, 12, 13 and 14. F. W. Rand, Secretary.
- Southern California Kennel Club's bench show, Los Angeles, Cal., April 19, 20, 21 and 22. C. A. Sumner, Secretary.
- Pacific Kennel Club's bench show, San Francisco, May 3, 4, 5 and 6. Horace W. Orear, Secretary.
- World's Columbian Exposition bench show, Chicago, June 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17. Entries close May 20. Address W. I. Buchanan, Chief Department of Agriculture, Chicago.
- American Pet Dog Club's bench show, Leox Lyceum, New York, May 30, 31, June 1 and 2. T. Farrar Rackham, Secretary.
- Hamilton Kennel Club's second annual bench show, Hamilton, Can., September 7, 8, 9 and 10. A. D. Stewart, Secretary.

Mr. Coke's greyhound Character, almost unknown to the local fancy, won the Waterloo Cup at the recent meeting.

Mr. J. B. Corvell's St. Bernard, St. Elmo, is turning out to be a very fine specimen, fulfilling every promise of his puppyhood.

There was some good coursing at Newark Park on Sunday last. The Occidental Club will hold two more events this spring.

The Pacific Kennel Club has engaged an office at 623 Market street and will receive entries for the bench show on and after April 1st, by which time the Premium List will be ready.

H. W. Jones Esq., of Alameda has a splendid kennel of fox-terriers and will have one of the largest exhibits in the coming show; his kennel building is nicely decorated with diplomas won by his dogs in Canada.

David Sinclair has been engaged as clerk for the Bench Show Committee and he is a competent gentleman for the position. He has had a deal of experience in the East in connection with kennel clubs.

Reports from Los Angeles indicate that there will be a very much better entry for the bench show there this year than there was last. The show begins on the 19th of May, continuing until the 21st inclusive.

H. McCracken claims the name of Lady H. Glendyne for white, black and greyhound bitch whelped February 24, 1889. Trales—Lady Graham Glendyne. This bitch is related to such dogs as Fullerton, Gay City, Paris, Hinc Hullos.

Several surprises await the St. Bernard fanciers in this city and they will be sprung upon them at the coming dog show. Owners of previous winners should not be too confident of winning again, as the competition will surely be of the keenest kind in all classes.

The work involved in the preliminaries for the coming bench show, to be given by the Pacific Kennel Club, May 3d to 6th inclusive, at the Mechanics' Pavilion, is now well in hand. The show will, beyond all doubt, prove to be the best ever given on this coast.

Capt. Thos. Higgs has now a string of some eighteen dogs that he will take to the Los Angeles bench show. The kennelmen of this city and vicinity are showing a fraternal disposition toward our brethren of the State's southern metropolis that is pleasing to note.

Dr. Regensburger has just cause to feel proud of his St. Bernard puppy, Reglov (Safford—Mountain Queen). This dog is less than one year old, and yet runs well with the largest dogs of this class on this coast. As a puppy we think he would be placed well to the front in almost any company.

In the recent run for the Waterloo Cup the great Fullerton—the Napoleon of the (English) greyhound family—met his Wellington, found his Waterloo, but lost the cup. The grand old dog was defeated in his second course. But it will be a long time, we predict, before any dog will eclipse his winning record.

The pigeon fanciers are making extensive preparations for the exhibit to be given by them in connection with the bench show. During the show, each day, carriers will be liberated from the top of the Palace Hotel for trips to Stockton, Sacramento, San Jose and other points, the time of flight to the different points being posted on the blackboards at the show in the Pavilion.

The Chicago Inter Oceans' chestnut roaster pulls the following one out of the fire and sends it around, but having no especial use for it we pass it along:

"Didn't you find him just as represented?"
Lady (indignantly)—"No, sir; you said he was a bird dog and he hasn't sung a note yet, and I've had him two weeks!"

The all-important matter of the sanitary measures governing bench shows will be carefully looked to in the coming bench show to be held by the Pacific Kennel Club by Messrs. Skaife & Rowat, the well-known veterinarians of this city. Every exhibitor may rest assured that the dogs entered will be given the very best of care which skillful, painstaking, watchful care can guarantee.

The Managing Committee of the Pacific Kennel Club have secured an office at 623 Market street, where all business connected with the coming exhibition will be promptly and courteously attended to. Mr. David St. Clair has been placed in charge, and will, no doubt, prove the right man for this important position, as he has had previous experience with some of the leading shows in the East in like capacity.

Immortality For Animals.

Ever since that Webster and Otis of the pulpit, Henry Ward Beecher, electrified and astounded the sleepy-going world of his profession and their unquestioning followers by speaking of a "horse heaven," there has been more or less of speculation as to the subject of immortality for all animal life. Why not? Nothing save the inordinate egotism of man is responsible for the claim that be alone is to be granted the boon of eternal life. In view of the daily demonstrated fact that man falls, even lower than any other form of animal creation, the fact of his claim to the exclusive care of the Almighty is preposterous. Our Dumb Animals, speaking of this matter in a recent number, says:

One strong argument in favor of human immortality is derived from the undeveloped powers and unfulfilled capacities, mental and moral, which are observable in human life. Man is capable of a perfection, personal and social, which seems to be clearly contemplated by his nature, but which is never actually attained. In the higher, that is, in the social and moral strata of their nature, men are still apparently in an embryonic condition. It is therefore argued that, as the embryo is the germinal beginning of the life to be developed, so our embryonic human life is but the beginning of a fuller life hereafter in which, "when that which is perfect shall come, that which is in part shall be done away." If there is a wise God at the heart of things in this world, a God who means something for the future in whatever He does in the present, that is a sound argument in favor of a future life for men. But it is just as good in favor of a future life for brutes. For in them, quite as surely as in man, there are undeveloped powers and unfulfilled capacities. There is not one intellectual faculty in man of which we do not find at least the humble counterpart in some dumb brute; and there is not a single social and moral virtue of which the higher brutes do not appear to have at least the elementary capacity, and sometimes the highly developed reality.

Another argument for a future life is that of the inequalities observable in this life. Granted that there is no favoritism in the dispensations of Providence when it sets up one man and casts down another; grant that the gifts of God are at His own discretion; and still one would expect to see some equality of method in the distribution of His gifts. That is what we do not see in this world. In the struggle of life it is not the best but the strongest that succeed; and the craftiest are often the perfect man, and asks what the world would do to such a man, if he should appear. The answer is that they would crucify him! Now, in a universe over which a just God rules, that cannot be an ideal state of things in His sight; and since it is the actual state of things here, God's just purposes must have their ultimate fulfillment for His earthly creatures in some world which lies beyond the present. Why does not the principle of this argument apply to brutes? In the lower animals we see one universal struggle to the death. Whole races seem to live only that other races may live by devouring and destroying them. The struggle is utterly immoral; for the survival of the fittest simply means the survival of the strongest, the craftiest, the most selfish. If there is any purpose in those countless lives, it cannot surely be that they shall come and go, devouring and being devoured; and if there is a moral purpose in it all, the fulfillment of that purpose, which is never reached here, must be reserved for a life beyond.

The argument from the inequalities of life is strongest when it is put into the form of an argument from the undeserved sufferings of life. It is said that sin is the cause of all suffering. Perhaps it is; but it is not always the sinner who suffers; and myriads of human beings are involved, through no act of their own, in sin as well as suffering. There are thousands of children in the world, born of sin that they did not commit; born with a taint of sin in their blood that is absolutely certain to work out into sins of their life; born suffering and to suffer, the consequences of the sins of their progenitors. In this world these poor creatures have no chance to escape either sin or suffering; and unless God has created and ordained them for the express purpose of sinning and suffering, which a just God could not do, there must be a way out of this dark problem somewhere. In this world no such way has yet appeared; and if God be just—we need not even say benevolent—the way will surely be made plain in some other world than this. But again we ask, Why is not this argument as powerful in behalf of dumb creatures as in behalf of human beings? In this case there is no sin to be thought of, yet there is unlimited suffering, for "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain even until now, waiting for * * * redemption." And unless St. Paul blundered, that "whole creation shall be delivered from the bondage of" its present cruel "corruption, into the glorious liberty of the children of God."

We have spent many a profitable hour in years gone by in studying the strange revelations of the Sage of Sweden, some of whose followers have so far departed from his counsel and example as to found a sect called "The Church." We have had, and we still have, many esteemed friends belonging to that church. Some of them are ardent supporters of our societies, as they are strong supporters of every good word and work. It is now many years since we read the works of Swedenborg, and we do not recollect what he says, nor indeed whether he says anything, on the subject of animal immortality; but it has always seemed to us that, of all people in the world, the members of the New Church ought to be predisposed to believe in that doctrine. For animals have life; and Swedenborgians believe that "all life is from the Lord." How, then, can any form of life be perishable—as to its essence, at any rate? Moreover, Swedenborgians believe that life is permanent in the degree to which it belongs; that natural life remains in a natural state forever; that when an influx from the Lord raises a natural man into the spiritual plane, he becomes a spiritual man forever; and that when a higher influx still raises him to the celestial order, he remains celestial forever. Thus, there might be a lifting up from the natural into the spiritual and from the spiritual into the celestial; but the infernal is only a perversion of the natural. Even in hell a man is still a natural but self-deluded, self-tormented man. Now, if all this be true, would not a fair analogy lead one to infer that there must be a like law of permanence and possible advancement for creatures below the natural life of man, until, as Wesley thought, the life of humanity might become their heaven, as the celestial glory is the utmost possibility of human life in any sphere?

Japanese Spaniels.

Some six or eight months ago I wrote to you on the subject of Japanese Spaniels, says a correspondent in English Stock-Keener, and you were good enough to publish my letter, and also a letter from F. Crang the following week, in which he agreed with my remarks, and hoped that I would write to you again and give my ideas as to points, etc. Unfortunately, illness, and then absence from home, prevented my doing so at the time, but my attention having again been drawn to the subject by seeing the Japanese dogs at Liverpool Show, I am venturing again to address you on this matter, believing it will be of interest to many of your readers.

I will commence by remarking on the good quality of the exhibits at Liverpool. It is most encouraging to lovers of this breed to note that the least good specimen at Liverpool, viz., Mr. Grindrod's Pearl (which got v. h. c.) was the second prize winner at Birmingham this year in a class of eight dogs. This, I think you will agree with me, says much for Liverpool quality.

Then there is another point I would refer to. Your reporter says: "Reserve was a very pretty red-and-white, which had too pale a nose, or probably would have been higher." In this view he is quite correct, as the judge expressed his admiration of the dog in question, and said he liked "its head immensely, but a pink nose was fatal"—or words to that effect. Now, in an English Toy Spaniel, a pink nose is undoubtedly a great blemish, but I should like to ask your numerous readers if any one of them ever saw a Japanese dog with red or lemon markings and a black nose? I seek for information. I may mention that I personally have no interest whatever in this particular red-and-white dog, but I have owned several of a similar color and seen several others in Japan, and I can not recollect one with a black nose—the nose has always been the color of the markings. It would be of interest to all Jap fanciers if any reader who has undoubtedly seen a pure-bred, red-marked specimen with a black nose, would communicate the fact through your columns; if, as I believe, such a thing does not exist, the sooner judges are aware of the fact the better.

I may remark en passant that at the Troy Spaniel Club Show, two years ago, a very small lemon-and-white dog with pale pink nose was placed first by Mr. Lindsay Hogg; but he is a judge who confessedly considers small size, the most important point in a Jap—so size may in that case have accounted for his judgment. This brings me round to the question of size which may last letter discuss, and I would like to say that several readers of it who have spoken of it in my hearing (of course without the least idea as to authorship), seem to have gathered a wrong impression of its intention. It was most certainly not my idea that a big Jap is preferable to a small one; on the contrary, if the points are equally good I would always place a small dog first, and I think most judges would agree with me—not only in Japs, but in any Toy breed—but what I did wish to enforce, is that a bad dog should not beat a good one, merely because it is small. By all means let a well-made small dog beat an equally good big one.

Every breeder knows the great difficulty of getting good head and body combined in a small dog, which is comparatively easy in the larger-sized dog, and as far as my own views are concerned, I consider coarseness one of the worst faults a Jap can have; it should always (whatever its size) be a small boned dog, with slender legs and dainty feet, and general air of breeding and "finish." Only do not sacrifice health to size is my advice to breeders; an unhealthy, delicate dog can never have the style and smartness so necessary to Japs, but with care moderately small, hardy specimens can no doubt be bred occasionally, without continued inbreedings. Now I am afraid, Mr. Editor, I am writing an unconscionably long letter, so will hurry on to a scale of points, merely remarking that the question of name of the breed is not settled. Are they Pugs or Spaniels? At present they are called either or both.

Head.—Very broad and slightly rounded at top of skull, large for size of animal.

Ears.—Well feathered, but not large, carried rather high on head, and slightly forward when excited.

Muzzle.—Strong and wide, very short from eyes to nose.

Nose.—Fnl, black or red according to color of dog's markings, i. e., black with black markings, red with red.

Eyes.—Dark, lustrous and large, prominent and wide apart.

Neck.—Rather short and thick.

Back.—Short, slightly arched towards tail.

Body.—Cobby in shape, not lanky or too much tucked up.

Legs.—Slender, but as abort as compatible with great activity, well feathered.

Feet.—Long and narrow, tufted, but not large.

Tail.—Well-feathered, and carried in a curl over the back.

Color.—Black and white, or red and white; colors distinct and evenly marked.

Weight.—From six to nine pounds.

General appearance.—Smart, showy, quaint; very dainty and high-bred looking, with profuse long coat, feathered ears, legs, thighs, feet and tail.

I think these points will be generally considered correct, and believe that several judges do already judge by the them—or very similar ones—if, however, any improvements can be suggested I hope your readers will bring them forward.

As to relative value of these points, it is hard to say; roughly, I would say head points first, then coat, then size. Yet, granted head and coat at all equally good in two specimens, tet size have great weight, and never overlook legs and feet—they show breeding more than almost anything.

There is just one point more, an under-hot mouth, though not an advantage, is not a great blemish, to my mind, provided the muzzle remains short.

Now, with many apologies for the length to which this letter has run, and hoping it may prove of interest to many.

An Important Matter.

The action of Mr. Everett Millais in resigning from the Kennel Club has been the subject of wide-spread comment. Speaking of the matter, an Exchange says:

"Something of a sensation has been caused in England by the withdrawal of Mr. Everett Millais from the Kennel Club, and the publication of his reasons in an open letter to the committee. With the particular charges of Mr. Millais against the committee we are not here concerned, but it does concern us and all lovers of dogs to know that the same complaints might often be justly made against the managers of dog-shows in this country. Usually such shows are held under the pubblished patronage of well-known gentlemen, and exhibitors have a right to understand that the honor of the patrons is pledged to the proper management of the whole affair. Yet it is also usual for the show to be a matter of pecuniary profit in somebody, and it very often happens that when the interest of the exhibitor or the health and comfort of the animals conflicts with the profit of the business, the latter is well taken care of, while the former is shamefully neglected. It is to the interest of somebody that the number of dogs exhibited should be as large as possible, and hence very little trouble is taken to ascertain the condition of the dogs that are offered for entry. Hardly a dog-show is held at which animals suffering from infectious diseases are not admitted either knowingly or through sheer carelessness, and consequently, after nearly every show, many valuable dogs die of diseases caught at the exhibition. We ourselves have lost several valuable animals in precisely that way, and we have always felt that the patrons of the exhibitions which were so recklessly conducted, were morally bound to prevent such recklessness. If they are not, why do they allow their names to be used to mislead the public? If they are, they ought to see that their pledge to the public is faithfully kept."

A High-Class Greyhound.

The Pacific Coast is to be congratulated on the acquisition of new blood in the greyhound stock, Mr. H. McCracken, having recently added to his kennel the black and white bitch Lady H. Glendyne. She was bred by D. N. Heizer, Esq., Great Bend, Kan., whelped February 24, 1889, and is, therefore, four years old and in her prime. This bitch is of royal blood, being out of Trales—Lady Graham Glendyne, the latter being sired by the celebrated English dog, Jester, who is the sire of the most noted dogs of England of the present day. Trales, sire of Lady H. Glendyne, won American Field Cup, 1889, and four puppies out of Trales divided the same cup. 1890, also Lady Barton won 1892, and Scavenger, another puppy (all by Trales), won the Derby, 1892.

Visits.

Capt. Thos. Higgs bred his Chesapeake Bay bitch Bess, on March 6th, to same owner's famous stud dog, Trout. Trout is by Drake, out of Dundee; Bess, by Duke, out of Wave.

It was on a very warm day in the mountainous district of Oregon that I started out for a day's hunt, said Mr. Karl E. Meyer to the writer the other day. I had with me, he continued, a splendid English setter dog. The morning hours drew a fine bunch of chickens and I cached them in the soft soil near a spring. Going on for some two miles my dog came to a point and when ordered on, flushed a large cock grouse. We were on the edge of a gorge, deep and rocky and filled with long grass and brush. As the grouse darted over the bank I took a snap shot and saw him fold his wings as he dropped into the gorge. I ordered my dog to retrieve. Away he went, but after a long interval returned without the bird. I sent him back again, speaking sharply to him. He returned again without the bird and I scolded him roundly and told him to get the bird or I would whip him. After being gone a long time he returned with a bird which I saw at once to be a chicken. The old dog did not act in his usual joyous manner, but wore a pronounced "hang-dog" look. As subsequent investigation proved the dog had gone back and dug up one of the birds I had cached and brought it to me! He had been to water and found no trouble in finding the grouse.

Messrs. Sanborn, Vail & Co., the well-known and popular Market street dealers in art goods, pictures, picture frames, engravings, paintings and artists' materials always have the happy faculty of securing the best of everything for their patrons. There large art emporium is always filled with the very choicest goods in their line, no department being overlooked. They have some very fine paintings of dogs, but recently received, any one of which would make the heart of every sportsman glad who may chance to look upon the collection. The striking subjects of a setter on a "point" and a pointer retrieving, are finely executed, as are also a large number of other subjects wherein the dog is brought out faithful to life.

Board of Fish Commissioners,

Applications for fish for stocking public waters of the State must answer the following questions:

1. Name of applicants?
2. Post office address?
3. Variety of fish wanted?
4. To be distributed where?
5. Tributary to?
6. Flowing through what counties?
7. Are these waters public or private?
8. Is there any sawdust or other substances deleterious to fish emplaced in the waters?
9. Give size of stream or lake.
10. Volume of water at time of drought?
11. Give highest temperature of water during year.
12. If stream, does it run through wild or cultivated lands?
13. If lake, what is depth and character of bottom?
14. What is the local sentiment in regard to enforcing fish and game laws?
15. Have fish of any kind been planted there?
16. How have they thrived?
17. What varieties of fish are now in these waters?
18. Give name of railroad station where fish are to be landed.
19. How many hours travel, by heavy wagon, from railroad station to waters to be stocked?
20. Who will meet men in charge of fish at station?
21. Who will pay all local expenses?

All expenses of planting fish, including ice, cartage, help and living expenses of attendants, from time of arrival at railroad station until returned thereto, must be paid by parties making application.

Fish are not planted in private waters, unless under contract whereby the Commission is given exclusive privileges of taking same, for public waters, for number of years.

ROD.

Why is it Thus?

By FRANK C. RIEHL.

Why is it, I should like to know,
That one cannot a-fishing go
In these degenerate days, without Submitting to unhallowed denit
His word and reputation;
When, from a most successful cast
He comes, his trophies safe and fast,
And, just to please inquiring friends,
Reluctantly himself unbends
To give the day's narration?

Why should they look in feigned surprise,
And mildly intimate he lies?
Although he may from early youth
Have been a sturdy child of truth,
And true disciple of it,
They coyly quote the Holy Book,
And hint about the silver hook,
Ev'n affidavits count for naught,
Unless some friendly kodak caught
A photograph to prove it.

This should not be, it is not right,
Because, perchance, some graceless wight,
Who had not any fame to lose,
Should have employed so base a ruse
And told a fishy story:
That honest men should have to pay
A photographer every day
To "take them" in the catching art,
Or forfeit all the better part
Of piscatorial glory.

The Edible Crab.

Very few restaurants understand how to cook a crab, and, curious to say, the simplest way is the best. First, with a very sharp knife, remove the mouth of the crab, which has sand in it; then gently lift each end of the shell and cut off the lungs, spongy substance which are readily seen; then turn the crab over on its back and detach what is called the pocket book, or under lap of the top shell, and your crab is ready for the pan. When the latter is hot, put in a good-sized lump of butter; let it brown a little, and then place the crabs on their backs, as the top shell is thicker than the under one. After frying until it gets a good, rich, red color, turn it on the other side and fry for about ten minutes. Turn the crab over again on the back and fry for five minutes more. It is then ready for serving. This is the only proper way to retain the natural juices and preserve the full flavor of the crab. The restaurant method of cooking a crab is to cover it with meal or bread crumbs, which absorb all the juice, and turn it into a dried-up chip, with all flavor lost.

Another crabbing method in vogue is to get scraps of lean meat (when it is too fat it will not sink) and tie them on the end of a fish line about twenty feet long, then let them sink to the bottom, and, as soon as the line is seen to stiffen, there is a crab at the bait. You must have a good hand net ("scalp net" technically), the larger it is in diameter the better, and plenty of patience and some degree of skill. I remember early one morning a friend and myself started about sunrise with minds intent on crabbing, to be done from the deck of an old and dilapidated canal boat tied to the shore of the Harlem River on the Haigh estate, add known to all the crabbers and fishermen of the Harlem as "Haigh's Dock." When we had made our way carefully over the broken and half rotten timbers of the old craft, we set eight lines as baited above, dropping them from the end of the boat, so that they would fall upon the soft bottom of the river. Crabs must have been in a very good state of mind that morning, not to speak of a very poor state of stomach, for the way we caught them was a caution; the lines stiffened so fast that we could hardly attend to them by taking turns at pulling them up and scalping the crabs. The sport almost got fatiguing, for we had to keep up a regular round without stopping. As we were trespassing on private property, a policeman came down to put us off, but he was so astonished by the multitude of crabs—we caught them three and four at a time on each bait—that he at first stood a silent spectator, and then took part in the fun himself, white gloves and all.

The bait may not be limited to meat, as a capital one is the head of a fish, and when the fish are small a whole one is tied to the line, and a small weight attached to sink it. But the bait most prized of all and most eagerly sought after by crabbers who "know the ropes," is a skinned sheep's head, but in this case we cannot use the short hand net with advantage, so the head is put into a large, round lobster net, about two feet in depth and two feet in diameter. After being lowered it is pulled up about every five minutes, and it is seldom empty.

I would suggest to all those who intend to go "a-crabbing" that they provide themselves with a large hand net made of stout cord, painted green, with a very short handle of about four feet in length, and that, above all, they go in a good-sized and comfortable skiff, or there will be no such thing as ease of motion, and dexterity with the net will be seriously handicapped.

Crabs begin to swarm in from the ocean up the shallow creeks and small rivers, in the vicinity of the places I have mentioned, about the middle of July. When they have reached their summer home they remain quiet, spying out the land, as it were. Then they begin to move nearer the shore, selecting a spot suited to their taste. An individual, having chosen his place, becomes perfectly quiet, and soon the upper shell shows signs of swelling about its edge at the back. After a time this edge becomes wholly disengaged, and the crab has the difficult task before it of freeing its claws and legs from their covering, which they are enabled to do by an opportune softening of the muscles. The crab now stands wholly undressed, and settles down in the soft bottom, into which it gradually sinks till it is covered so as to escape observation, for it is at present in a perfectly helpless condition. Where there is an abundance of eel grass and sea cabbage, the crab will cover itself with this, and it will require a very skillful and practical observer to find out its retreat. In these stages the crab is helpless, but within forty-eight hours its fighting instinct asserts itself once more, and it is restored to the exercise of all its functions.

I don't see how crabs can ever have an attack of dyspepsia, even if they are American born, for their stomachs are fitted up with a splendid set of teeth, and they have ten or twelve pairs of jaws in addition. Being such ready fighters, they are of course quick of eye and ear, especially as regards their eyesight, and, in catching them the net must be lowered in the water some distance from the bait and then moved very slowly and carefully under the crab, the instants of which leads it, on the approach of danger, to seek the bottom, and of course it falls right into the net underneath.

Among the delicacies which tempt and please the palate of man, the soft-shell crab ranks with the canvas-back duck and the diamond-black terrapin, and no one who has eaten a fat, soft crab cooked while alive, in butter, will ever forget the flavor, nor will he wonder at the price which they demand in the market.

In some localities near the ocean, where the tide runs swiftly through the tortuous creeks and water courses, the rushing waters leave no safe holding or hiding place for the soft crab in his defenseless condition. We know of a large town in Southern New Jersey, situated on such a rapidly moving stream, where, of course, the soft crab is seldom, if ever, found; but innumerable quantities of crabs "in full armor bright" are taken and consumed, and many of these hard crabs are made to do duty as soft crabs by having their shells and claws torn from them and their walls crushed with a rolling pin, then they are cooked and served as "soft crabs," nor are they a bad substitute for the real thing. ¶

The Farmer and the Sportsman's Club.

In many farming communities a feeling exists, to some extent justifiable, against the so-called sportsmen's clubs, says the American Angler. In certain sections this prejudice assumes an accentuated form, and it has been found impossible to procure a verdict against a man guilty of willful trespass, or caught in the act of killing game or fish on the preserves of a club. The people are opposed to thinking over the matter at all. They simply believe it to be an infringement on the free rights of the citizen for an association of wealthy persons to control in fee simple, or by lease, the waters and the lands, on and over which free passage and usage has been their conceded right for generations. They do not, and will not, give thought to the fact that utter destruction of fish and game would ensue were liberty to kill unrestrained; that clubs foster protection and increase; that club lands are private property, as much so as the acres of a small farmer; that to repeal the law of trespass would be to take away the inherent right of ownership—absolute control; that the adjacent lands and fluvial waters, flowing from and into the preserves, are made more fruitful of fish and game by the stockings and protection done at the expense of the clubs. "It is God's acre," comes the cry from the shooters and fishers of the small towns and villages, and the inference of it would be all-powerful were it not that the owners of farm lands are subject to a stronger one—that of the mighty dollar. The victory is to the mightiest, but the sore spot remains, showing itself in the jury-box, and sometimes on the bench and in the District Attorney's office.

This condition, which certainly exists, is to be deplored, and it becomes the duty of intelligent and thoughtful sportsmen all over the country to consider how to placate this local sentiment, and at the same time enlarge the field of their own recreation; uphold the game laws and broaden the sympathy that exists between genuine sportsmen, be they hulleonares or plough boys.

It is conceded that if the game laws were strictly enforced, and stocking conducted liberally and with judgment, the waters of the country would teem with game fish, enough to satisfy the most insatiate of fishermen. Such a condition would do away with the necessity of private preserves for club use. Plenty of fish, protected and caught under wise regulations, would soon take away the financial prop from under club formations, except in a few isolated cases, where unhealthy exclusiveness is born of unwieldy bank accounts. We question, provided a consensus of opinions could be reached, if there is one angler out of a hundred who would prefer to fish preserved rather than wild waters. Clubs spring up from a scarcity of fish and from love of social communion. Given plenty of fish, with liberty to roam, hither and yon, in pursuit of them, and the clubs with exclusive rights would be measurably limited, although club quarters for social intercourse would multiply.

The Breeding of Commodore Mambrino.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In January 15, 1890, I wrote to Dr. Herr as follows:

"In 1875 or 1876 Mr. J. A. Merrick brought to this State a bay horse named Commodore Mambrino which he claimed to be bred as follows: By Mambrino Patcho, dam by Downing's Bay Messenger; second dam by Bertrand; third dam a thoroughbred mare bred by Captain John Hutchcraft, of Bourbon county, Ky.

"Commodore Mambrino bred by Jonathan Owen, of Bourbon county, Ky., foaled in 1873; bay horse, sixteen hands.

"Will you be so kind as to refer to your books and inform me whether the statement given agrees with your books.

"Respectfully yours, (Signed) WILFRED PAGE."

Dr. Herr returned my letter in due course, and written across each page are the following words:

"The pedigree is correct.

L. HERR."

It is possible that by publishing the above you may be able to learn whether the "Downing Bay Messenger mare" alluded to in pedigree produced anything, whose chances to breed on fell in more favorable places than did those of Commodore Mambrino.

Yours, etc., WILFRED PAGE.

ED. D. THORNE, agent for the famous Putnam horse shoe nail, is in this city. The excellence of the article makes it very easy for him to demonstrate its superiority over all others when tested by every experiment that can be thought of. Our horse-men are unanimous in demanding that the Putnam horse shoe nail only should be used, for they have come to the conclusion that it is the only one that approaches the old-fashioned, hand-made, hot-forged nail that was in use twenty years ago.

HERBERT KING, the well-known horseman, returned from a trip to Cleveland, Chicago and Minneapolis last Monday night, and will open a public stable at once. He has a few thoroughbreds in view, and will doubtless experience little trouble in securing all the gallopers he can handle.

The attention of horse breeders is called to Dr. Lyford's celebrated Impregnators. They have been used with great success and are highly recommended by every one who has used them. Send for catalogue and price list.

The Kentfield Sale.

The opportunities presented by a closing-out sale of horses and carriages are always taken advantage of by horsemen. The greatest bargains have been secured at such sales and many who have "looked with longing eyes" at the pure-gaited, handsome trotters belonging to an acknowledged judge of horseflesh, never fail to attend when the stock is offered for sale at public auction.

At Redwood City, the late Frank C. Kentfield kept a few good horses and mares which he used on the excellent roads around that pretty little place. No one drove better ones nor used greater judgment in the care of them. He bred the mares to the best sires procurable and intended to have a little breeding farm stocked with the very best, but just as he was getting well interested, he was stricken with illness which proved fatal, and in order to settle up his estate the executor concluded to offer all the horses and vehicles for sale at public auction in this city, on Tuesday, April 4th, at the stables, corner of Haight and Cole Streets.

The first one to be offered is the thirteen-year-old mare Regina, by the immortal Electioneer, dam Accident (dam of Wanda, 2:17; Rinconado, 2:23; Solita, 2:27, and Rex, 2:27), by Elmo, 2:27, sire of Alfred S., 2:16; Overman, 2:19, and five others in the list; second dam Cy, by Chieftain 721. Regina is perhaps the last of the Electioneer mares to be offered for sale in California, and as she is out of one of the greatest broodmares in the United States, one whose produce are yearly adding glory to her name, it can easily be seen that Regina is "a jewel rare." Being endowed with great speed, having trotted in public in 2:24 on the Bay District track, driven by John A. Goldsmith, she is to-day as sound as a dollar, and able to go out and get a mark of 2:20 with very little preparation. Individually, she is a very fine-looking, strongly-built, well-muscled, dark-brown mare, a perfect Electioneer, and her clean, hard limbs, intelligent head, fine neck, good barrel, heavy quarters, clean, strong joints and excellent feet at once proclaim her to be a remarkably fine-looking mare. She was never bred but once, and her filly, Inspiration (also in the sale), demonstrates the kind of a broodmare she is. Electioneer's daughters have twenty-two in the list, and none of them have a better license to be the dams of several great ones than Regina, for her dam is a proven producer. Whoever gets her will have a perfect driving animal, a game and handsome trotter, and whenever it is deemed best to place her in the broodmare ranks her produce will always bring good prices, for breeders are looking for youngsters out of just such dams.

Weaver Girl is the name of a bay mare that was bred by Wm. C. Ralston. She is by Speculation 928 (sire of Crown Point, 2:24, Grace S., 2:22, Gus Spreckles 2:23 and Oakland Maid, 2:22), out of Lady Weaver, a very fast road mare. Weaver Girl will not need any praise when she steps in front of the auctioneer's block. She is a very evenly-formed, good-sized mare. Looking at her either from the side, in front, or behind, she is a perfect picture of a good-looking roadster, and when in harness the impression is strengthened by her clean way of moving. She is a sure producer, and all of her get show that they inherit all her qualities. Weaver Girl is a pleasant driver, and no better pole-mare is to be found anywhere.

Monroe Chief's daughters are esteemed very highly as broodmares, and such individuals as Duchess are very scarce. She is out of Queen by Alexander 490; he by Geo. M. Patben Jr. 31, out of Lady Crum. Duchess is broken single and double, and is one of the most pleasant roadsters imaginable and of the kind that can go all day without any apparent tiring. Duchess has been bred to Alexander Button, and her produce by this union will be disposed of on the day of sale.

Director mares are in demand, and Birdie K., out of the game trotting mare Weaver Girl, by Speculation, is a good representative of the family. She is sound and kind, and although never worked for speed, has shown her ability to become a race mare of the first-class. Birdie K. is an excellent roadster and has no bad traits.

Fanny is a low-sized counterpart of her sire Abbottsford, she is a well-muscled, gentle-looking, game, driving mare, and is just the kind for a lady to drive. She has the Abbottsford heavy mane and tail, small, well-shaped head, good limbs and feet, and is as pretty a coated mare as one could wish to look at.

Some one at the sale will want to purchase a gelding to enter in the races this fall. Telephone will come nearer filling the bill than any other one to be found. He is the right color, size and formation, and is bred to stay. He is by Director, 2:17, dam Weaver Girl, by Speculation 928.

Another representative of the great Director and one of the finest individuals led out for inspection is the two-year-old filly Inspiration. She is dark brown in color and in conformation resembles her dam Regina, by Electioneer. She is heavy-boned and well-muscled and a perfect type of a trotter. Her blood lines are of the best; the rare combination of Director and Electioneer blood, backed up by that of the great broodmare Accident (dam of four in the list), by Elmo, another great sire, makes her one of the best, young mares for either the track or harem in this State, or, in fact, any other State in the Union. She is a trotter and will make a reputation as soon as given an opportunity. Some one will get a bargain in this fine young animal.

There is a black mare in this consignment called Lorna Doo, by Steinway, dam Lady Dudley, by Tom Dudley, second dam by Bertrand Jr., third dam by Paquet, fourth dam by Sir Solomon that shows a great deal of quality. She is a perfect animal in conformation, disposition and trotting action and is one of the choicest trotters offered. The Steinway mares are bound to become famous in the harem and this stylish-looking mare will prove her worth anywhere.

Then there are a number of extra fine looking sons and daughters of the great stallion Alexander Button out of the broodmares referred to, one; is out of Birdie K., by Director, another is out of Fanny, by Abbottsford and still another out of Duchess, by Monroe Chief. Alexander Button for his chances is considered by competent judges to be one of the greatest sires of extreme and early speed in California and these representatives are bred to make famous roadsters if they never appear on a race track.

The pacer Arthur Orton, by Steinway, 2:25, out of Mand H., by The Moor 870 is a slashing, big, smooth-gaited pacer—one that will pay to train. He is six years old and very promising.

The huggies in the sale are made by Brewster & Co., the leading buggy manufacturers in the United States. A three-quarter top buggy in excellent order made by Larkins & Co.,

a fine Chicago cart, a breaking cart, a canopy top phaeton and a single seat, side-bar, top buggy made by Caffrey & Co., of Camden, New Jersey, complete the list of vehicles offered. Every one should send for a catalogue to Killip & Co. All the animals will be shown in harness and every one attending will be able to judge of their appearance and action. Remember the sale takes place Tuesday, April 4th. The horses can be seen at the stables at any time previous to this date.

Los Angeles Trotting Club.

The committee appointed to draft a constitution for the newly-organized trotting association, incorporated March 7th, met in this city yesterday afternoon and completed their labors before adjournment. The constitution does not limit the membership to any given number, but fixes the initiation fee at $10 and the annual dues at $5. It vests the governing power in a Board of eleven directors, one of whom shall be the president of the association and two of them vice-presidents. The treasurer and secretary may be chosen from the directors or not, in the discretion of the members, who shall call an annual election for that purpose on the second Tuesday in January of each year, at which time four new directors are to be chosen in addition to the president, two vice-presidents and the secretary and treasurer. Of the directors there will always be four hold-overs after the first year. There being eleven in all, three of these are to be citizens of Los Angeles county; two of Orange county; two of Ventura county, and one each from the counties of Santa Barbara, San Diego, San Bernardino and Riverside. Six directors will therefore comprise a quorum for the transaction of any and all business.

The section of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association allowing the competition of Eastern-bred horses in purses and stakes given under the auspices of the association, provided that their owners are members of the association, was stricken out, it being the design of the committee to confine competition in its races to the products of California only. They also limited the time for paying annual dues to the first Tuesday in July of each year. This will give them some funds with which to arrange for fall trotting meetings, to be given either before or immediately after the regular annual district fair.

Edward Smith is secretary of the new concern, and will call a meeting for the 22nd inst. to ratify or reject the constitution, as they may see fit. It is quite probable that the association's ranks will be largely augmented by new applicants for membership within the ensuing ninety days. Any good, well-to-do farmer can join the association and increase the prices of what horses he has to sell by paying $10 the first year and $5 for each subsequent four years. He will more than get his money back whenever he sells a colt with his engagements, and he will have some fun for his money in the meantime. The moderate membership fee is in itself an inducement for every man to join, not only as breeders, but as those who love a good horse and enjoy a ride on the road.

In connection with this it is proposed to give an annual dinner party at the close of the regular race meeting, on which occasion speeches will be made upon subjects connected with the purposes of the association. England has kept up this custom for many years, and made it pay, by bringing men together in a sociable way and promoting an interchange of sentiment. Southern California has always been prominent in breeding the light harness horse; and there is every reason to think that, in this new venture, she will maintain her long established and widely acknowledged prestige.—Los Angeles Herald, March 17

Richards' Elector 2170.

There is no horse in California that has acquired greater celebrity than the stallion known as Richards' Elector. Like the famous sires, Geo. Wilkes, Blue Bull and old Abdallah, early life was not cast in the most pleasant places. Considered unfashionable bred and being deemed unworthy of being mated with good mares he at last found a home in the San Joaquin valley where a standard-bred mare was unknown, and the only ones he was bred to were work animals that were driven on the roads on Sundays and holidays; yet, with this class of matrons he proved his worth as a sire, and today leads every other son of Electioneer. His progeny are very uniform in color and conformation, being dark bays with little or no white markings, heavy-boned, well-formed and perfect in every way, with dispositions remarkably gentle. As a sire of speed the fifteen whose names are given in his advertisement attest his value there. And as most of them have only been seen on the track during the past two years, it would not be an idle boast to say they could all lower their records if given an opportunity this year. Elector is one of the most remarkable sires foaled in California, and if ever given an opportunity on a stock farm would astonish even the most sanguine believers in the breeding-on qualities of Electioneers. The colts and fillies by him are all pure-gaited and speedy, and what is better still they seemed to be endowed with that great quality called nervous energy, which always gives them courage to extend themselves and do their utmost every time they are called upon. Richards' Elector will stand for $250 the season. His fee will not be lowered this year. Mr. Richards will have a number of young Electors on the circuit this fall.

The Pneumatic Sulky Question.

Many horsemen, last season, were inexperienced in the matter of pneumatic tires upon sulky wheels. They are attracted by advertisements of low-priced articles. Many accidents and much expense was the result. The most practical device yet offered for pneumatic sulky wheels is that of the "Victor" make. This consists of an outer elastic case, and an inner, separate tube. This tube is removable in a moment, and without tools. In case of damage to tire an inner tube is pulled into the tire, the tire inflated, and the sulky fit for immediate use. These inner tubes weigh but a few ounces, and are very cheap. The sulky wheels and tires made by this concern can be fitted to any make of sulky, and, by extremely ingenious device, all side shake and rattle is obviated by a sleeve-and-bolt arrangement, which is both simple and effective. Makers of this pneumatic tire have long been known in the bicycle trade, and stand at the head of this branch of business.

Our riders are referred to the Overman Wheel Company, Bicycle Makers, 309 Larkin Street, San Francisco, for further details.

T. W. MOORE, of Santa Barbara, who has been a liberal buyer at several of the late sales, is an excellent judge of horseflesh. He is wealthy, enthusiastic, energetic, progressive in his ideas, and the kind of a man that will be gladly welcomed in the ranks of California breeders. He has selected Steiner, 2:19, full brother to Charles Derby, to breed a number of his mares to. The selection is a good one, as Steiner is considered by the best judges to be one of the most promising young stallions on the Coast.

ATHLETICS.

EDITED BY ARPHIPPEUS.

The above cut is a very good likeness of Mr. Edward A. Kolb, the leader of the Olympic Club, of this city. Mr. Kolb was born in the East, but has been residing in this city ever since he was a boy. He is a splendid specimen of a typical athlete, and his looks do not belie his ability. The popular Olympian stands five feet seven and three-quarter inches in his regular gymnasium shoes, and when in condition weighs 158 pounds. His chest measurement is 41 1/2 inches, and the other measurements of his body are equally up to the standard of a well-built athlete. Mr. Kolb has been identified with all kinds of athletic sports, both in and out-door, ever since he could stand on his feet, and his collections of medal and prizes attest the fact that he has made a thorough success of his ambition to excel as a wrestler and all-round gymnast. Besides being a thorough gymnast, he has a splendid record as an oarsman and a field-athlete. He is a member of the Dolphin Boat Club, and before connecting himself with the Olympic Club he was a member of several of the local regattas. He is now serving his third term as Leader of the Olympic Club, and it must be pleasing to him to know that although much opposition was brought to bear against him when he was nominated at the last annual meeting of his club, his name was announced as being far in the lead after the ballots had been counted. Mr. Kolb is a very good-looking young man who has not as yet arrived at the age of thirty, and personally he is a model as far as refinement and sociability are concerned. It was chiefly owing to his exertions that the recent boxing and wrestling tournaments held in the Olympic Club gymnasium were a success, and he is now doing all in his power to aid the other officers of the club in trying to make a success of the coming Roman Fair, which will be opened in the Mechanics' Pavilion on the 17th of next month.

The Petaluma Fair.

The advertisement of the district colt stakes and purses to be trotted during the fair at Petaluma appears in another column. The prospects for a good meeting were never better, and as the superintendent of this famous track, under the supervision of the able Board of Directors, has been preparing the track in the best possible manner, horsemen who are anxious to give their horses records over a fast track will be accommodated. Everybody will try and attend the Petaluma fair this year, for the reports from all owners of trotters are to the effect that they will not save their horses for the kite track but will name them in the various events to which they are eligible in the district fairs. There has never been so many horses engaged by competent trainers before, and all these knights of the sulky declare they will "drive to win," and make reputations for the horses as well as themselves. Entries will close for the Petaluma races on April 1st. The accommodations are first-class and the conditions very liberal. Remember, this is your last notification.

Another Remedy for Scratches.

A subscriber sends us the following: "I saw an item in last week's paper of a remedy for 'scratches,' and below you will find a remedy which I know from practical experience, to be a positive cure for 'scratches' in their worst form as I have used it for them.

Take one quart of the best cider vinegar, simmer (not boil) it down to one point, and every once in a while skim off the scum which will appear on the surface, then take nine ounces of lard and mix well warm, but not too hot, wash affected parts well with white castile soap, then apply a little of the paste, and after a few applications all soreness and scratches disappear and leave the skin with a perfectly smooth surface and no white hair marks.

Napa Wilkes

There are few sons of Guy Wilkes that have a better license to become a progenitor of speed than Napa Wilkes. When he was a yearling it was claimed by Messrs. Corbitt, Goldsmith and Rogers that he was the fastest Guy Wilkes they had ever seen, and great things were expected of him, but an accident threw him out of training. Napa Wilkes is out of Napa Maid, by Irvington, second dam Napa Queen, by Eugene Casserly, and the owners offer $100 to the owner of the first of his get that makes a record of 2:30 or better; $75 to the second and $50 to the third, this offer to remain good during their ownership. Napa Wilkes will make the season of 1893 at Watsonville and Salinas at the low price of $30. See advertisement.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

THE LAST CALL.—One week from the issue of this number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN the entries to the open events of the Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeders will close, and this is the last opportunity to call the attention of our distant readers in time to prepare them for the closing. It is in compliance with the rules when the letter containing the entry is plainly postmarked on the day of closing, but a safer plan is not to put it off to the last moment.

There are favorable prospects for entries, and certainly a breeder of trotting horses who does not give hearty support will not promote his own interests by holding back. Then the trotting interests of the whole country are dependent on some move which will tend to popularizing harness racing, and the new departure on this Coast surely has a trend in that direction. At all events, a fair trial should be given, and it will not be long until proof is forthcoming, and if successful here the advocates of reform will have a precedent to warrant further trials.

There is an existing state of affairs which will retard entries, that being the unusually long period of wet weather. As a rule there are two months between the two divisions of the rainy season when with the exception of occasional showers the weather is favorable for training. February and March have been unpropitious, and many are impressed with the idea that horses cannot get in order to trot as early as May 20th. Were the old conditions to govern, and races in prospect with a whole lot of heats to struggle for, the point would be well taken, but in cases where in all probability three heats will be the extent of the prolongation of a race, and dashes when one great effort is only needed, the objection does not hold good. There can not be a single place in California where adverse conditions exceed those at the Oakland Trotting Park. Not only wet, but the race horses have been in full possession ever since early in January, and to get from the stables to the macadamized or graveled streets mud has been so deep that the horses had to wallow through a slough of misery. Still the trainers have been industrious, and with the certainty of only a few weeks' favorable weather in April and May they will be in readiness. Better prepared for what is before them, in my opinion, than if it had been permissible to rattle them through the old course.

SLIDING ON THE HIND FEET. In a recent letter received from the owner of Martha Wilkes, the information is given that he tried several experiments to determine the cause of the difference in the spaces between the hind and fore feet, in which weights of various amounts were tried. In his own words he writes: "I added weight first to one foot and then the other, but finally made up my mind that it was on account of her feet sliding after striking the ground. Martha's forward feet remain where they land, but her hind feet slide from three to eight inches. She is pure-gaited, and forward and hind feet strike the ground at the same time."

Mr. Wiggin is certainly in error in coming to that conclusion, for if both struck the ground at exactly the same time both would slide if either moves. But the interval is so short between the striking of both feet that the eye and ear cannot detect the difference, as even in the longest slip, eight inches, only one-sixtieth part of a second would mark the difference. A trifling inequality in the surface would be sufficient as going down grade the fore foot would be somewhat retarded in wrestling the ground from it, being further from the foot, and on the up-grade accelerated.

The camera has caught and retained what the eye and ear failed to record, and the plates show plainly that the hind foot touches the ground first and retains its hold longer than the corresponding fore foot. This being the case, the movement of the hind foot, when in the air, must be more rapid than the front when the touch is so nearly synchronous. I have been greatly interested in the reports from Mr. Wiggins, and hope that when he resumes training in the Spring he will continue experimenting. Could the stride be lengthened with any degree of certainty, and that without entailing the strain on the ligaments and tendons, consequent upon the use of heavy weight on the feet, training trotters would be simplified. The variation in the length of the stride of the great race trotter is a peculiar feature; some five feet in passing from what would be a fast rate in good trotters to the fastest I have ever heard of shown by a trotter, and the extreme length two feet longer than any I ever measured. Then her increase of speed, dependent upon extending the stride without increasing the rapidity of stroke, is another interesting feature.

That Mr. Wiggins' experiments, and noting so minutely the result, will stimulate others to pursue a like course, is altogether probable. Some time ago, in fulfillment of a promise made in Chicago, I sent Budd Doble a copy of Horse in Motion, and that clever educator of trotters will pay greater attention to that branch of the trotting curriculum. That much good, at least, has resulted from the articles in this paper and Wallace's Monthly ancient trotting action, viz., securing Mr. Wiggin's papers on the stride of Martha Wilkes and eliciting attention which will stimulate further research. That the importance of an accurate knowledge of the action of trotters has been overlooked in the past is somewhat incomprehensible, especially when the possible modulations of that action has been so fully considered. Preparation of the foot, weight and various patterns of shoes, extra weight in the shape of toe-weights and weighted boots, spreaders, over-checks, an almost useless array of contrivances, and then such a pronounced ignorance in regard to action that one of the most voluminous writers on the subject had not the least conception of the movements made by a fast trotter. Mr. Doble is a welcome aspirant in pursuing investigations. He is in a position to give the most acceptable evidence of any one man in the whole country. The number of celebrities under his charge present unpeaked facilities for observation, and the renown of pupils and teachers insure attention which would not be given to those of inferior position. One hundred people would be attracted when Nancy Hanks, Stamboul or others in Mr. Doble's charge were the illustrations to one of inferior fame. Thus, Martha Wilkes, at the head of all race trotters, not only as regards time made, but, if my memory is not at fault, she won all of her races in straight heats up to the time she met her first defeat, in 1892, drew the attention of every one whose eye fell on the page.

If Mr. Doble will note the length and peculiarities of the different strides of his most noted horses, and also of a few of those which are in the junior class, he will confer a favor on the whole body of educators of harness speed, and I will be "more than pleased" to receive a transcript. Could these annotations show as thoroughly as the records of Mr. Wiggin the stride at various degrees of speed, weights of shoes if they would be still more acceptable. The assumption has been heretofore that the stride given was when the horse was at full speed, but that was conjecture and a greater nicety in observation gives superior data. Very interesting to learn if celebrated trotters are indebted to increased rapidity of action or increased length of stride for accelerated speed, and whether Martha Wilkes is an exceptional case or not. It may appear that it was taking "lots of trouble" for little recompense the measuring, the timing, and recording the stops, but after a little while the trouble will not be so great, and the gain far greater than expected. With a blank book of size enough to give room, in one abbreviated for the requirements, thus:

Table with columns for Fore, Hind, Stride, and rate. Includes 'NANCY HANKS' and 'June 15, 1893'.

A page for each horse, and each leaf would give room for several trials. Any fractional distance would answer, the handiest one-tenth of a mile 528 feet. Twelve seconds for that distance would be the rate for a mile in two minutes and as a majority of the best timing watches mark fifths of a second every fifth would represent two seconds. With a very little practice a glance at the watch would be all that would be necessary to give the rate and with a flagman to signal one and sufficient accuracy result.

TIME CLASSIFICATION.—When there is a whole country to draw upon, as is the case with the places which compose the Grand Circuit, an arbitrary classification, with time records an absolute condition, will present interesting features, and result in good races. The best of each class congregate, and nearly every State in the Union that breeds and trains trotters to any extent represented at these big trotting centers. California comes in for a full share of the honors and emoluments of victory, and when it is taken into consideration that it is fully two thousand miles from the nearest field of action, it is one of the most forcible arguments that can be advanced of the superior adaptability of the soil and climate for the production of fast trotters. In urging amendments to the past methods of conducting trotting meetings, I would not ignore time classification, neither do I undervalue that system which has been such a potent influence in developing trotting sports. A grand improvement on the original methods which were in vogue a half century ago in bringing trotters together. Money won was then the basis and time made rarely considered.

But with the immense addition to the array of light harness horses, a change which proved so eminently beneficial requires supplementing, and still there is a necessity for innovations to keep up to the requirements of the times.

Longer meetings are demanded where the population is so dense that extension will be met with adequate attendance, and when programmes cover two weeks, in place of four or five days, these programmes must be arranged so that there will be no decline in popular interest. Can this be accomplished with record classification? Even with colt stakes, which are deservedly growing in favor, a twelve-day meeting will necessitate a greater variety than can be accomplished when records and age are the only methods of classification. Especially when dashes and heats of two in three are the order. In place of two, three or four races in an afternoon, and these prolonged until spectators are thoroughly wearied over the intolerable sameness, five will be the minimum, so that from sixty to eighty events will have to be provided for. Following the plan of racing association the programme for the first week can be formulated, and that can be governed by records and age. For the succeeding week the basis may still be governed by equality in time provided steps are taken to learn the capacity of every horse engaged in previous races. The stumbling block in the way of carrying that to a successful issue being the temptation to cover the actual speed, and show an inferior rate by the drivers of horses which cannot win in their first engagements. Not an insurmountable obstacle as when there are warranted suspicions, those guilty of hiding capacity can be barred from making entries, and only those which have given an honest exhibition of their powers allowed to participate. Or when there are good reasons to believe that certain horses have been trotted to deceive as to their speed, place them in classes which will be sure to be a test, and when it is fairly demonstrated that honesty must be the policy adopted to secure remuneration that will prevail. If too much to expect of frail human nature that the practices of the past, among a few men connected with trotters, and who are still in the ranks, to be wholly abandoned, let us hope for some regeneration, and that self-interest will so far overcome ingrained dishonesty that conversion will follow. The stumbling-block alluded to has troubled racing managers, but in the contest between owners whose main endeavor was to deceive handicappers, in a majority of the cases the weight adjuster got the best of the fight, and the much-fancied tactics resulted in the imposition of a "crusher" when straightforward work would have met its reward by a fair allotment of weight.

That longer periods for trotting meetings will prevail in the centers of population is already assured. If not carried so far as to entail antagonism it will be a welcome boon to owners. The expenses while en route with a stable of horses are very large, and owing to a monopoly of the business of carrying horses by the Eastern express companies the burdens are constantly increasing. A sojourn of two weeks in place of one will not only reduce that expense as it will lessen the risk of travel. In extending the time, however, due regard must be observed in presenting attractive bills of sport. The first consideration is to please the public. The dollars at the gate and those from other legitimate sources of revenue are the corner-stones, the pillars and the buttresses of the temple. The rest of the superstructure must be built to subserve the owners' interests in general.

Endeavor to arrange the purses so as to secure the largest number of winners, and multiplying events will give a far better opportunity to effect that purpose than when restricted to the usual routine. For instance at Cleveland, which I take to have been one of the most successful in the circuit, there were five days' races, with eleven purses, beside double teams and special. There were ninety-seven starters in these races, and from a casual examination one race was the limit for any one horse to start in. As they were all 3 in 5, there was the prospect of plenty of work in one race so that it could not be expected that the large entry fees would be risked, when at the most only three days would intervene between the engagements.

It is conceded that only first or second money will cover expenses, so that there were seventy-five of the horses which took part in the races at Cleveland, which were behind, fifty-three of them entirely outside of the money.

Let us suppose that these five days had been supplemented with five more in the following week, what an opportunity there would be for arranging a series of interesting races!

In the 2:21 class Lady Belle won the first heat in 2:18 1/2; she was third, eighth and seventh in the other heats in 2:21, 2:20 1/2, 2:21 1/2, the race won by Myrtle R., Pedro L., 4, 2, 3, 2, Phoebe Wilkes 6, 9, 2, 3. These were the four money winners, but Keokee, who ranked next with 7, 4, 4, 4, beat the winner of second money in two heats, and of the fourth money one heat. Taking the summary entirely for a guide, and it would appear that Pedro L. would hold all the others safe when the winner was excluded, and then it may have been that when the driver of Lady Belle found that he could not beat Myrtle R. and had the second money safe he did not make further effort. There is little doubt that under skillful management in the way of reclassifying that a second week in Cleveland, with the same horses to draw from, would have offered superior attractions to those which were trotted and paced. Knowing that such was to be the case, and the spectators, now enabled to make comparisons, would feel a greater interest from the opening day on, as their curiosity would be stimulated to learn the success of their forecasts. The greater the uncertainty, the greater the charm in either trotting or running to that division of race-goers who make up at least nine-tenths of the assemblage, and now that there are so many trotters and pacers to draw upon, the chance for securing contending fields is very good. Wherever the population will justify a meeting covering two weeks, money enough can be "hung up" and races enough offered to attract plenty of material. That properly handled will give such an impetus to light-harness sports as will surprise and gratify the breeders who are now somewhat despondent.

NAILING.—That many others in addition to myself were interested in the Martha Wilkes articles has been abundantly shown by the comments I have heard, and especially the queries which have been made in relation to this sentence: "Martha wore an eight-ounce plain shoe and a four-ounce toe-weight when she made her record; made from steel 1 inch by 3-16, pnnched a la Simpson." What is meant by a la Simpson? is the oft-repeated question, and an answer in print will explain the phrase to those who have made inquiries by letter.

Early in the sixties, thirty years ago, I adopted a shoe with a swedged rim, the nail holes punched inside of the rim which at its base was from one-quarter to three-eighths of an inch thick. But in place of giving a new description will copy from Horse Portraiture, and as the part copied appeared in the paper in which it was first published, before incorporated into book form, February, 1866, was written as early as 1864, and as I still follow that system of nailing, many years' practice have demonstrated that it has merit. I mention the dates, as in 1865 J. B. Lippincott & Co., of Philadelphia, published Illustrated Horse Management by Edward Mayhew, M. R. C. V. S., in which the same system is recommended. I did not obtain the book until 1867 or 1868, and up to the time it came into my possession, supposed that the method of nailing was original with me, but that supposition was based on a lack of information, as from Stonebenge's Stable and Field, published 1869, I learned from that that inner nailing had been practiced in France long anterior to my adoption of the plan.

The plan I now follow is to have the fore shoes swedged with a tool that leaves a rim all around the shoe of three-eighths of an inch at the base, coming to a dull edge at the apex, being about the same depth as it is wide. The remaining part of the web is concaved on the inside, and on the outside the crease is cut where the web and rim join, with an inward inclination. The nails are driven from the inside of the crust in place of the middle, with a slope that will bring them out half an inch above the shoe. The reasons for adopting this system of nailing are that, as the hoof is composed of a great number of thin plates or laminae overlaying each other—the fibers running up and down the foot—when a nail is driven in the center it has a tendency to divide the layers, and either split them asunder or cause an undue pressure when driven higher than the insensible sole. By starting the nails from the inside of the crust and taking more of a horizontal direction, the laminae are not divided, but perforated, giving a far better hold for the nail, with no danger of either wounding the sensitive parts or pressing on them to cause pain. When the nail is driven through, the point is twisted off, and in lieu of taking the rasp and filing an ugly crease that weakens the hoof by destroying the enamel, a very small gouge merely removes enough of the horn to hide the clinch riveted with a punch, and, of course, entirely out of the way of doing injury. The clinches "cannot raise," as the heads of the nails are completely protected by the swedged rim. There is a small clip at the toe with the additional security of a nail driven in that strongest part of the foot: three nails on each side giving ample assurance that it cannot be displaced. These nails do not go back as far as the widest part of the foot, leaving the quarters unobstructed in their motion. The hind shoes differ in being a great deal lighter, and in place of the swedged rim are so concave that they have an angle or bend of about forty-five degrees. The crease is cut in the rim, and when the nails are driven they are filed away till the whole shoe is left so smooth that, if even a horse grabs, it slips off the quarter without doing an injury. The back part of the web and of the hind shoe is what gives the wound when a horse cuts his quarters, and when turned over the horn of the anvil—as is the customary plan—is almost as sharp as a knife. You can satisfy yourself that this is the part of the shoe that does the mischief by observing the wound, which is always triangular, the point being the place where first struck, and the flap or torn skin falling back and attached at the lower end or base of the triangle. But still the most conclusive proof is that with the shoe made as I have described, with no toe calk, sharp web or nail heads, there never will be a wound. The quarter may be bruised by a blow from the iron, but even that will be mitigated by the smooth surface. There are, of course, horses that could not be shod in this way, from their feet being diseased or defective—some requiring round or bar shoes, others with a gutta-percha or leather sole, and all others with a great part of the horn and shoe cut away to guard against the result of faulty action arising from wrong shape, &c., &c.

A natural, healthy foot is the one I am now directing to be shod, so as to do the work in the best manner required, and keep it in its normal condition. Those who still stick to the first shoe I have described will say that it is the only one for a trotter, without deigning to give any reason why it is so. The advantages I claim for the continuous rim or calk, are, that it is more like the natural unshod foot, bringing the support where it is required, directly under the wall; that it gives a firmer hold of the ground, enabling the animal to retain in every inch he progresses, and adds to the confidence of the horse, not slipping, so that he can strike out boldly in the limit of his stride. Should the track be very hard, there is less concussion than where there is an inch and a half of flat metal to meet it. Should it be inclined to cut or give, the concavity gives a far better traction than the flat, with less tendency to "pick up." In the mind, no one will deny its advantages over the customary way of placing the points only at the heel and toe. In preparing the foot to receive this shoe, I may still be thought singular. I will give my reasons, and until some one converts me to another plan, by force of argument, I shall continue in my own without the fear of ridicule, which has no better logic than a laugh to carry its point.

It is a matter of the foot to be pared, only the wall, and that is cut till it rests on the floor in a natural manner. Great care must be taken that the proper amount be cut from toe and heel to effect this. I think the general error is in allowing the heels to be too high.

The swedged rim has been, in a measure, given up, not from a lack of appreciation, but the difficulty in making, and then for tips it was not so appropriate. The only valid objection I ever heard or read of driving the nail from the inside of the wall was that it separated the small tubes of which the horn is composed and cut off the supply of matter with which they are filled.

There is little chance, however, for the general adoption of this system of nailing the horseshoe of the animal's foot. Hand-made shoes, when the prejudices of the Smith are overcome, can be punched as far from the edge as is required, though machine-made are all after the old pattern, the crease, or fuller as the English call it, being stamped close to the edge.

In giving the weight of the shoe which Mr. Wiggins thinks will be suitable for Martha Wilkes, there was a typographical error which escaped the proof-reader. One ounce when ten ounces was correct. That could only leave the weight in doubt, as even with aluminium for the metal used a trotting shoe could not be fabricated.

STOP THE SHOOTING, Mr. WRIGHT—Wednesday last I tramped through the mud on Hollis street to the Oakland Trotting Park.

There was a pigeon-shooting contest under way, and unfortunately the parties to that were scoring a good many misses, and all around the field, on the inner and outer tracks, on the driveway from the entrance gate to the hotel, in front and back of the grand stands, outside shooters blazing away.

Apart from the danger of a dose of shot or being made the target for a rifle ball there were many annoyances. Light-weight riders, to whom a gun was a decided novelty, to six-foot high grooms, to all colors from the towheaded jockey to black in its intensity, a regiment as grotesque as that of Falstaff.

Put a stop to it, Mr. Wright, and it may be that this short printed reminder will be more potent than a hundred verbal protests in abating the nuisance.

WELL DONE.—When this part of my work for the week was finished the N. Y. Spirit of the Times came with a report of the action of the joint committees of the National Trotting Association, the American Trotting Association and the American Register Association.

Although not provided for, following the analogy that distances in 3 in 5 races are to be seventy-five and fifty yards, 2 in 3 will be forty yards, though why there should be the difference in heats, and heats best 3 in 5, has never been satisfactorily explained.

Portland Speed and Trotting Association. To the Portland Speed and Driving Association is due the gratitude of every person who desires to see horse-racing promoted as a sport on the North Pacific Coast.

rapidly approaching satisfactory consummation. Their $30,000 cash outlay will find public appreciation on June 24, when the new track at Alhina, now in course of construction, will be thrown open for six days' meeting.

First race—Introductory scramble, running, one-mile dash, purse $400. The winner of one race this year to carry three pounds penalty; of two races, five pounds penalty; of three or more races, seven pounds penalty; maidens allowed seven pounds.

Second race—Running, one-half mile dash; purse $300. Third race—Trotting and pacing, 2:21 class, one and one-fourth of a mile dash; purse, $200.

Fourth race—Trotting, 2:29 class, two in three heats; purse, $500. Fifth race—Pacing, 2:15 class, two in three heats; purse, $500.

Second DAY. First race—Running, two-year-olds, five-eighths of a mile dash; purse, $250. Winner of one race this year to carry three pounds penalty; of two races or more, five pounds penalty.

Third race—Trotting, three-year-olds, two in three heats; purse, $300. Fourth race—Trotting, 2:50 class, two in three heats; purse, $350.

Third DAY. First race—Running, seven-eighths of a mile dash; purse, $350. Second race—Trotting, 2:35 class, one and one-sixteenth of a mile dash; purse, $150.

Third race—Trotting and pacing, free-for-all, one and one-half of a mile dash; purse, $300. Fourth race—Trotting, two-year-olds, two in three heats, purse, $250.

Fifth race—Trotting, 2:24 class, two in three heats; purse, $500. Fourth DAY. First race—Running, three-quarters of a mile dash; purse, $350. Winner of seven-eighths dash to carry three pounds penalty.

Second race—Running, three-eighths of a mile dash; purse, $300. Third race—Trotting, 2:40 class, two in three heats; purse, $350. Fourth race—Pacing, 2:35 class, two in three heats; purse, $350.

Fifth race—Trotting, 2:20 class, two in three heats; purse, $600. FIFTH DAY. First race—Running, five-eighths of a mile dash; purse, $300. Winner of seven-eighths mile dash to carry three pounds penalty, and winner of seven eighths and three-quarters miles dashes to carry five pounds penalty.

Second race—Pacing, 2:25 class, two in three heats; purse, $250. Third race—Pacing, for two-year-olds, two in three heats, purse, $250.

Fourth race—Trotting, 2:27 class, two in three heats; purse, $500. SIXTH DAY. First race—Running, eleven-sixteenths of a mile dash and repeat; purse, $400.

Second race—Running, one and one-sixteenth miles dash; purse, $500. Winner of mile dash to carry five pounds penalty; winner of mile and seven-eighths dashes to carry seven pounds penalty.

Third race—Trotting, 2:35 class, two in three heats; purse, $450. Fourth race—Trotting, free-for-all, two in three heats; purse, $700. Trotting and pacing entries will close June 1, and running entries will close June 15.

This is in every respects the most attractive race programme put up in this district. Its purses, aggregating about $10,000, are heavy enough to tempt owners all over the Pacific slope, and the events are sufficiently varied to satisfy the general public.

Suburban and Metropolitan Handicap Odds.

Following are the odds quoted by a New York firm of book-makers on the various Suburban and Metropolitan Handicap candidates. Wildwood will, at 25 to 1 against his chances, doubtless be played hard by the plungers hailing from this section of America. It will be observed that Yorkville Belle, with 122 pounds up, is favorite in the Metropolitan at 8 to 1.

American Derby Transfers.

The American Derby, guaranteed to be worth $50,000, is absorbing the attention of the turfmen, both in the East and in the West, and the public is not a little interested in the candidates that are eligible to take part in that noted contest.

The public always likes to know to whom a noted horse belongs, and to satisfy that curiosity, The Live Stock Record publishes the changes that have been made in the ownership of American Derby candidates. The ownership of those who have not changed hands can be found in the original nominations.

The transfers are as follows: Anchoret, b c, by Hermit, dam Substitute, from John Hunter to Marcus Daly. Banisher, h f, by Kingfisher, dam Bellora, from August Belmont's estate to Marcus Daly.

R. C. Kelley & Co., Taftville, Conn., writes: "Please send me three (3) bottles of your Absorbine. It had done splendidly."

Winners of two races since January 14th 7 pounds extra; three or more, 10 pounds. Seven furlongs.

In all the above selling races, only the winner to be sold or claimed; one-half surplus over entered price to go to second horse, the other one-half to Association. Entrance and declarations in all the above races to go to the Association. Entrance in all the above races when not specified in the conditions of the race will be $10; nothing additional if declared, except when there are more than 10 entries. In all races other than handicaps, declaration is free down to ten horses. In handicaps, owners can scratch up to 12 m. day of race, by paying full entrance.

Geldings and two-year-old fillies allowed 3 lbs, mares 5 lbs in all races other than handicaps.

In all the above purse races, when not otherwise specified in the conditions, 70 of the purse money goes to second horse and $30 to third.

The Board of Directors reserve the right to refuse any entries.

R. B. MILROY, Secretary. COL. H. I. THORNTON, President.

The famous race mare Los Angeles has been mated with The Hook, Baldwin's old Australian horse. The foal by Emperor of Norfolk that died was not larger than the proverbial "pint of cider." Esperanza was bred to the Emperor, but is in training in Emanuel Harding's string.

Dam Lady Signal, by Signal 327, sire of Carric T., 2:20 1/2; Dan Rice, 2:20 1/2, and Prussian Maid, 2:19.

DESCRIPTION.

ANTEO JR. 22,372 is a handsome dark bay horse, with black points. He is a perfect model of symmetry throughout. He has an excellent disposition, and is remarkably intelligent and level-headed; a purebred trotter; game and speedy far beyond his record. His first colt Hallstom, foaled in 2:25 as a three-year old, and every colt and filly by him seems to have inherited his pure-bred, fine form and perfect disposition. For particulars, address

J. C. SMITH, Oakland, Cal.

PACER!

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE.

A good road horse, gentle and nice driver; pacing record, 2:24 1/2; nine years old; drive axle or double; just out of pasture and in good condition. For particulars address, P. O., box 706, San Jose.

MANY ADDITIONAL PURSES

Will be given for Class Races and Special and Handicap Events, which will be made to close at 5 o'clock p. m. on each day of the meeting for the following race day, entrance to which will be 3 per cent. from starters and 2 per cent. additional to declare out.

No horses and colts owned on the Pacific Coast by others than members of the P. C. T. H. B. A. are eligible to the above purses, but horses owned outside of the Pacific Coast are eligible thereto, regardless of membership. All States and Territories lying in whole or in part west of the Rocky Mountains are held to be part of the Pacific Coast.

The Directors reserve the right to change the hour and day of any race, except when it becomes necessary to ante-date a race, in which instance the nominator will receive three days' notice of change by mail to address of entry.

Entries not declared out by five o'clock P. M. of the day preceding the race shall be required to start. Declarations not in writing and to be made at the office of the Secretary.

When there is more than one entry by persons or in one interest, the horse to be started must be named by five o'clock P. M. of the day preceding the race.

Five to enter and three to start. In all dash races for the Spring Meeting where there are more than six starters the number of starters shall be divided by lot; each division shall constitute a race. For instance, should there be more than six starters and not more than twelve, there shall be two divisions. If more than twelve, then three divisions, the divisions being as nearly equal as the number will permit; in case of seven four and three; or nine, five and four, etc. When

Don Marvin.

RACE RECORD, 5th HEAT, 2:22 1-2.

Don Marvin is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1884; bred by Sen. Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal., is 16 hands high, and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Falls, 2:23 (sire of 6 in 2:30 list), by Electioneer's third dam (Cora (dam of Don Marvin, 2:22 1/2, and Elect, trial 2:26); by Don Victor, son of Belmont; second dam Charbel (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24, and Rebecca dam of five in 2:30 list by Abahla Star; third dam Fairy (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:24, and Sweetpeaks sire of twenty-seven in 2:30 list by Hambletonian 10; fourth dam Emma Mills (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star. Don Marvin will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast--four producing dams.

Nutwood Boy.

SIRED BY NUTWOOD, 2:18 3-4.

Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1125 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest likeness to his celebrated sire, Nutwood, of any stallion in California. First dam Kitty Parkhurst, by Goldfinder, he by Imp. Bolshutz; second dam Old Kate, by Gray Beard, grand son of Imp. Messenger. Nutwood Boy's opportunity in the stud has been of the most limited description. He is the sire of comparatively very few colts; several of his colts are, however, showing speed enough to be candidates for the 2:30 list this season. He is a square, level-gaited trotter, and with only five weeks track work a year ago, trotted a trial in 2:28; last time in 1:33. After his stud season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "fall circuit" and galloping him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $3 per month. Mares will be carefully handled, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

RACE RECORD (Regulation Track, 4th Heat), 2:15 1-4

GUY WILKES. A few approved mares outside of those already engaged will be received at $750 each for the season.

SABLE WILKES, Three-year-old record, 2:18. Limited to twenty outside mares, 1893.

SABLE WILKES, 15 1/2 hands, black horse, by Guy Wilkes, first dam Sable, by The Moor; second dam Gretchen, by Mambrino Pilot; third dam Kitty Kirkham, by Canada Chief; fourth dam by Fanning's Tobe; fifth dam by imp. Leviathan. $300 for the season.

WIL DIRECT, Black stallion, three years old, 15.2 hands. Very handsome, powerfully built, the best of feet and legs, and a trotter that will make his mark as a sire and a race horse. Sired by Sable Wilkes, who stands at the head of all stallions of his age as a producer and sire of race horses. First dam Fidelity, by Director; second dam by Reavis' Black Bird, sire of Vic H., 2:13 1/2; third dam by Lancet, son of McCracken's Black Hawk, sire of Overman, 2:19 1/2; Ha Ha, 2:22 1/2; Moses S., 2:22 1/2, and others. $100 for the season.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties engaging the services of any of the above horses must send a deposit of 10 per cent. of service money with engagement. Pasturage $6 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain, or both, are fed, the charge will be $12.50 per month. Good care will be taken of all mares sent to the farm, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes.

Mares may be shipped direct to me at Oak Grove Station, San Mateo County. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are paid.

Season commences February 1st and ends August 1, 1893.

WILLIAM CORBITT,

San Mateo Stock Farm, San Mateo, Cal.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/4; Mollie C., 2:37 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

(For pedigree of Nutwood 600 and Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, see tabulated pedigree above.)
NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires as well as brood mares. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with $ in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mfg or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st., 1893.

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/4 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:08.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoola Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darebin). He stands 15.3 hands on steady legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong back, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darebin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darebin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, for apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caractacus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danbury and Letty Lyon, splendid race-horses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherhit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

Oregon Breeders! Take Notice!

THE STANDARD STALLION

MEMO 15,907.

Trial 2:20 1/4

Full Brother to Frou-Frou, 2:25 1/4, Champion Yearling Trotter,

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1893 AT EUGENE, OREGON.

PEDIGREE.

Table with 2 columns: Sire and Dam. Includes names like STRATHMORE 408, Saeta Claud 2000, SIDNEY 4770, Sweetness, FLOWA CHIEF 528, TINSLEY MAID, FLAXTAIL 912, and Mahaaska Delle.

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Hysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk, Through Flaxtail the traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12, through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13 1/4, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Granee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31 1/2, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20 1/4, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32 1/2 to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal-getter.

Terms—$50. Season to close August 1st. Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

DR. T. W. HARRIS, Eugene, Oregon.

Alect RECORD, 2:26.

The Handsome Son of ELECTOR 2170. Will make Season of 1893, ending July 15, at BOARD RANCH, near Orland, Glenn County. ALECT was foaled April 13, 1887. He is a handsome dark bay, two white forelocks, stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1075 lbs. He is symmetrical in conformation, perfect of disposition, and as pure-gaited as any Electioneer that ever lived. He has the finest of legs and feet, and is remarkably well-muscled throughout; his back is short, his loins strong and quarters heavy; he is stylish and very level-headed. Alect never received a trainer's care, yet he trotted without any work a mile over the Stockton track in 2:26. Alect was bred as a three-year-old to a few mares, and his colts and fillies are all models of symmetry, beauty and trotting action; all are of good color.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON, with the usual return privilege. Pasturage, 24 per month. Mares kept to or escapes. For further particulars call on or address D. ANDERTON, Manager, Orland, Cal.

ALECT and about thirty head of colts and fillies by Alect, Guy Wilkes, Nemo, Nonday and St. Nicholas will be sold at auction in June, 1893.

LOOK HERE! GUY WILKES SERVICE FEE IS $750. NAPA WILKES, HIS SON, STANDS FOR $30.

NAPA WILKES,

By GUY WILKES, sire of 32 in 2:30 list; 1st dam NAPA MAID, by Irvington; 2d dam NAPA QUEEN, by Eugene Casserly.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1893, MARCH 1st TO JULY 1st, AT Tarpy's Stable, Watsonville, Thursday, Friday and Saturday; at Sallinas Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at $30 FOR THE SEASON.

Pasturage and best care taken of mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Usual return privilege, provided horse or mare does not change ownership. R. W. DAY'S Agent, Watsonville, Cal.

N. B.—The owners of Napa Wilkes will give $100 to the owner of the first of his get that makes a record of 2:30 or better, $75 to the second and $50 to the third. This offer to hold good during present ownership of horse.

DEXTER PRINCE 11,363

SOUTHER FARM.

Table listing various horses and their owners, including Aster, Fitzsimmons, Jessie, Dexter Princess, Del Paso, Lucille, James L., Charley Ford, and Irene.

Dexter Prince is by KENTUCKY PRINCE 2470.

Son of CLARK CHIEF (sire of dam of MARTHA WILKES, 2:08 1/4, etc.), and sire of Guy, 2:10 1/4; Spofford, 2:18 1/4; Company, 2:19 1/4; Fred Folger, 2:20 1/4; Bayonne Prince, 2:21 1/4, and twenty others in the 2:30 list.

First dam LADY DEXTER, by HAMBLETONTIAN 10. Sister to DEXTER 125, George Wilkes 519, Alexander's Abdallah 15, Happy Medium 400, Dictator 113, and 110 other producing sons. Also sire of the dam of STAMBOUL 125, George Wilkes 519, Alexander's Abdallah 15, Happy Medium 400, Dictator 113, and 110 other producing sons.

Second dam CLARA, by AMERICAN STAR 14. Dam of DEXTER 125, George Wilkes 519, Alexander's Abdallah 15, Happy Medium 400, Dictator 113, etc., etc.

Third dam MCKINSTRY MARE, dam of SHARK, 2:27 1/4. DEXTER PRINCE is one of the best-bred horses living, and in the last few years he has proved himself a sire of pure gait and extreme speed, although bred to few mares of merit and kept in a section where nothing but his individual merit and wonderful producing powers enabled him to prove himself one of the greatest living trotting sires.

He is a blood bay, sixteen bands high, of great power and substance and the highest finish. It is well known that he was one of the fastest colts ever at Palo Alto. He is a sure producer of finely-finished and fast foals.

FEE FOR 1893 $250. DUE AT TIME OF SERVICE Usual return privilege if horse is alive and at this farm.

PLEASANTON, 2:29 1-2,

By ELECTOR 2170.

Son of ELECTIONEER, and sire of FLORA M., 2:16; J. R., 2:20, and many others. One of the best of Electioneer's sons.

PLEASANTON'S first dam is by Tarrason, grandson of Abdallah 1; second dam Black Bess by Blucher, son of Duroc; third dam sister to American Eclipse.

PLEASANTON is large and very fine looking; sixteen hands high, weighs 1,125 pounds. He is stylish, of splendid conformation, and his colts have every right to be valuable.

FEE FOR 1893 $50. DUE AT TIME OF SERVICE With usual return privilege if horse is alive and at this farm.

Good care and pasture for mares at $8 per month to July 15th. The farm's reputation is a guarantee that every precaution will be taken, but there will be no liability for accidents or escapes. All charges must be settled before mares are removed.

For further information, address SOUTHER FARM, San Leandro, Cal. GILBERT TOMPKINS, Agent.

SILVER :: BOW :: STOCK :: FARM.

SILVER BOW 11,708

Bay stallion, 16 hands high, foaled June 24, 1857. Two-year-old record, 2:37 1/4; three-year-old record, 2:30; four-year-old record, 2:29 1/4; five-year-old record, 2:16 1/4.

WILL BE ALLOWED TO SERVE TWENTY OUTSIDE MARES AT $150 FOR THE SEASON Season to close June 1, 1893, as we intend racing him this fall. Usual return privilege for mares not proving to be in foal. Silver Bow has trotted twenty-six races and won sixteen. He has won in purses and stakes over $11,000. His oldest colts are two-year-olds this Spring. We had three of them, and two of these are sure to be fast trotters. The only one we worked last season won the yearling stake at the San Jose Fair; time 2:56 1/4. Good pasturage at $5. Mares can be shipped direct to Milpitas. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

ALL BILLS DUE ON OR BEFORE JUNE 1, 1893.

THE STANDARD STALLION EGYPTIAN PRINCE 14,431

Large pedigree table for Egyptian Prince 14,431, listing sires and dams such as George Wilkes 519, Dolly Spanker, Mambriño Chief 11, Fanny by Ben Franklin, Mambriño Chief 11, Rodas mare, American Star 14, Captain Roberts mare, Mambriño Chief 11, Rodas mare, Mambriño Patchen 58, Alcyon, Guy Wilkes, Baron Wilkes, and 90 others in the list. Also lists sires of Mambriño King 1273 and Egyptian Prince 14,431.

WILL BE ALLOWED TO SERVE FIFTEEN MARES OF APPROVED BREEDING. FEE $75. Season commences February 1st and ends June 1st, 1893. Other conditions same as Silver Bow.

DESCRIPTION: Dark bay; 15 1/2 bands; foaled 1890. Fine head and neck well set on to strong pair of shoulders; fine nose and tail, good legs and feet. Consider him worthy of his royal breeding. He was not broken until August 15th, 1892, as I bought him at Lexington, Ky., and was unable to get him shipped out sooner. He already shows himself to be a trotter. His gait is faultless, and he can show speed enough already to make me think him a trotter. I think I could easily put him in the list if I wanted to this season, but no "tin-cup" record for me, as I raise horses to win money with. His breeding needs no comment from me, and I will allow you to be the judge. Address all communications to Soudan's progeny are all of good size, perfect in form, gentle in disposition, pure in gait and show great speed.

Both of these stallions will make the season of 1893, ending July 15th, at $100, with usual return privilege, at the Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal. Pasturage $5 per month. Choice trotting and draft stock for sale. For further particulars address D. J. MURPHY, Moorland Stock Farm, Milpitas, Cal.

LANCELOT. The only Son of ELECTIONEER standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION-LANCELOT is a seal-brown stallion, 15 1/2 bands high. He is a horse of fine conformation; has a beautiful head and neck, fine loins, well-shaped body, deep through the heart, sloping shoulders, fine arms, large stifles and the very best of feet and legs. In action he is pure-gaited. As a three-year-old he trotted quarters in 32 seconds, but was injured and placed in the stud. His colts are all blood-like, large and fast trotters. Several of them are eligible and will enter the 2:30 list this fall. Lancelot is one of the surest of foal-getters. PEDIGREE-LANCELOT was sired by the immortal Electioneer (sire of 132 in the list), dam Lizzie Harris, by Comus; second dam by Arnold Harris. Comus, the sire of Lizzie Harris, was a full brother to Iowa (chief sire of Coridan, 2:24 1/4, and others). His sire was Banabaw 59, sire of 17 in the 2:30 list, by Vernon's Black Hawk, dam Belle, by Webber's Tom Thumb; second dam Chas. Kent mare, the dam of Hambletonian 10. Vernon's Black Hawk, by Long Island Black Hawk, dam by Webber's Kentucky Whip, son of Black-birds Whip. Long Island Black Hawk by Andrew Jackson, dam Sallie Miller, by Tippecanoe; Andrew Jackson, by Young Bashaw, son of Grand Bashaw. Arnold Harris, by W. Hale, dam Sportswoman; she was son of Cub, by Medoc; second dam Ann Murry, by Sumpter; third dam Gretchen Princess, by Blackbirds' Whip, and so on to the 15th dam.

SALADIN. The only Son of Nutwood standing for Public Service in San Francisco.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE-Chestnut stallion, 16 1/2 bands high. By Nutwood 600, the greatest living sire. First dam, Lady Utey Jr., by Speculation, son of Ridsyk's Hambletonian; second dam Lady Utey, granddam of Western Girl, record 2:27 1/4. Saladin has now a number of yearlings and two-year-old colts, all showing great uniformity in size, style and color. All of them are fast trotters, and several will trot in 2:30 this year. Goldsbrough from Habena, by Yuttendon from Atholnie, by Blair Athol from Habena (winner of 1000 Guineas in England), by Irish Birdcatcher from the Bridle, by The Saddler from Mooneda, by Taums from Mona, by Furtisan. Merriwa is undoubtedly a very fast horse and has secured an excellent record...

Among the winners by Goldsbrough are the following: The Broker (winner Nonnandy Stakes and V. R. C. Sires' Produce Stakes and Adelaide St. Leger); Morph (winner Tattersalls' Cup, Anniversary Handicap and Australian Cup); Impulse (won Wagga Gold Cup); Arsenal (winner Melbourne Cup); Orella, M'elos (A. J. C. Derby and Leger and V. R. C. Champion Stakes); Merrian (Tattersalls' Spring Handicap, Sydney Handicap, etc.); Cardigan (winner Tattersalls' Foal Stakes, Hawkesbury Grand Handicap, Great Metropolitan Stakes, Anniversary Handicap, Summer Cup, etc.); Devotion, Meriment (winner Tammany Handicap and Hawkesbury Guineas); Eldredale (winner Tattersalls' Cup and Hawkesbury Grand Handicap); The Jewel (winner A. J. C. Christmas Gift); Kelth (winner Hawkesbury Autumn Handicap, Rose Hill Handicap, etc.); The Orphan, Alpha, Manilla, Cardones, Kilmore (winner Royal Stakes), etc. Atholnie, the granddam of Merriwa, produced Habena (dam of Merriwa) and Narina, both winners of Maribyrnong Plate. Geraldine and Huntingtower each ran second in that race, while Gainsborough and Blairgowrie each ran third. It will thus be seen that Atholnie's stock have performed with phenomenal success in that envied all of racing men, the Maribyrnong Plate.

TERMS - $60 FOR THE SEASON. Payable at time of service. Good pasturage at $5 per month, but will not be responsible for accidents or escapes. Mares to be shipped to the farm and the Meese Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County, Cal., per S. E. B., via Martinez. For further particulars, address THOS. G. The Thoroughbred Stallion THREE CHEERS

Will make the season of 1893 at W.M. MURRY'S STABLES, 715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

Fourth dam Reality; fifth dam, by Imp. Medley, sixth dam, by Imp. Sentinal; seventh dam, by Mark Anthony; eighth dam, by Imp. Janus; ninth dam, by Imp. Monkey; tenth dam, by Silvergrey eleventh dam, by Spanker. (See Bruce's American Stud Book, Vol. 1, page 432.) HURRAB, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquila, Ohio Boy, Nadia Payton, Little Buttercup, Red Fox, Medusa, Brall, Referee, Monk, Hoastage, Lady Middleton and many others.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, he family on both sides being noted for their exemption from carps, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. (Breeders who can appreciate the highest type of thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush, and they speak for themselves.)

TERMS. Seventy-five Dollars for the Season. Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire and fed on hay and grain, either by or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent groomers employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

STALLION ON THIS COAST.

Red Wilkes
∴ Dictator

DICTATUS

Will make the Season of 1893, commencing February 1st
and ending June 1st, at

BELMONT STOCK FARM,

BELMONT, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL.

SERVICE FEE FOR THE SEASON..... $100
(Will be allowed to serve fifteen approved outside mares.)

DICTATUS was foaled in 1890. He was sired by the great RED WILKES 1749, (sire of 88 in the list); dam, MISS LOLLIE, by DICTATOR 133 (sire of JAY-EYE-SEE, 2:10, DIRECTOR, 2:17, and 41 others in the list, besides the dam of NANCY HANKS, 2:04, etc.); second dam, Gold Pen (dam of Felina, 2:29½, and grandam of Hill Boy (p), 2:20, by Mambrino Abdallah 2201 (son of Mambrino Patchen 58); third dam by Harold 413 (sire of Maud S., 2:08½, and 41 others in the list and grandsire of Kremlin, 2:07½); fourth dam, Emily Chester, by Mambrino Patchen 58; fifth dam Patsy (dam of Midway), by Snowstorm (sire of Jim Irving, 2:23). He is in color a chestnut, with star in forehead, one hind pastern white. In conformation he is perfect, being about 15.2 hands in height, very short back, strong over the coupling, heavy quarters, large, well-muscled gaskins and arms, limbs straight, cannon bones short, hocks and joints clean and bony, and feet of the finest kind. His neck, head and body denote an iron constitution. His shoulders are sloping, and, taking him all in all, a more perfect representative of the great Wilkes-Dictator cross does not exist to-day. His breeding speaks for itself. He traces four times to Hambletonian 16 through his greatest sires—GEO. WILKES, DICTATOR, HAROLD and ABDALLAH 15. He traces to Mambrino Patchen twice and three times to Mambrino Chief. His blood-lines are unequalled by any stallion on this Coast.

The best of care taken of mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Service fee must be paid before mares leave the farm.

SOCRATES 99

SIRE BY

LANDESSOHN, out of LINTZE,
by MAGNAT II

WILL MAKE THE

SEASON OF 1893,

Commencing February 1st and Ending July 1st,

— AT —

∴ Hobart Stock Farm, ∴

SAN MATEO.

Service Fee - - - $40

Socrates stands 16:1½ hands, and weighs close to 1,400 pounds. In color, he is a beautiful shade of bay; no white. In disposition he is perfection, while in conformation he is considered by competent judges to be the best stallion of his age and class ever brought to California. His action is perfect, and as he is sound and free from all vices he is recommended to all horsemen desirous of raising large, fine-looking, stylish, well-limbed and perfectly matched horses.

For further particulars regarding conditions, shipment, and care of mares, etc., apply to

K. O'GRADY,

SAN MATEO, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL.

ABSORBINE

Will remove wind-puffs, capped hock, throughoutpin and all puffs and swellings without removing the hair. Easy to apply. No lost time. Does not require the horse to be laid up. Has been successful in all cases. Why not in yours? Price, $2 per bottle. Put up by W. F. YOUNG, Meriden, Conn.

PER BALL

ITS OBJECT is to prevent disease, to regulate the bowels and urine; it strengthens the kidneys, prevents scouring, colic and leg swelling; loosens the hide, fattens stock, promotes the appetite, cures coughs, destroys worms and bots, and produces a fine, glossy coat. To the stabled horse it has the beneficial effects and results of grazing without the softening effects of a season of grass with loss of time and money. For milk cows it increases and enriches their milk.

RECOMMENDED BY Marvin, Goldsmith, Corbitt, Gamble, Wells, Fargo & Co. and Others.

PENSIONS

Address a letter or postal card to THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY, JOHN WEDDERBURN, Managing Attorney, P. O. Box 463, WASHINGTON, D. C. PENSIONS PROCURED FOR SOLDIERS, WIDOWS, CHILDREN, PARENTS. Training The Trotting Horse. BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, mating, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters. Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a coil as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Stallion Ringwood, The Famous son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney in formation more than any of his sons. He is a pure-gaited trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he showed trials of speed in 2:19 1/2 as a four-year-old, and would have received a record of 2:18 or better but for an accident at the Napa track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dash-away (thoroughbred), he by Williamson's Belmont, he by American Boy; second dam Fanny Cob, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

THE WELL-KNOWN
Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone, and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for its effect a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.
Very respectfully yours,

Vol. XXII, No. 13.
No. 313 BUSH STREET.

SAN FRANCISCO, SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1893.

SUBSCRIPTION
FIVE DOLLARS A YEAR.

GEORGE WILKES.

Many great discoveries have been made accidentally, as it were, and it has been so in showing how some of the great horses were bred. George M. Patchen's dam having gone lame she was put to breeding, and it was so with Dolly Spanker. She was a roan brown mare about fifteen and a half hands high, owned by Harry D. Felter, of New York City, who used her as a driving mare for a few years. She was a fine driver, and could trot in three minutes with two in the wagon; some say she could trot a 2:45 gait. She was sent to Col. Theo. Felter, of Newburg, Orange County, to be bred to Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Col. Felter bred her to Hambletonian the season of 1855. Nothing was said or known as to her breeding at this time. The next season, 1856, she brought a dark bay or brown colt which, when found, was standing on the dead body of its dam, he being her first and only foal. The colt had to be raised by hand, and as a colt was fed by the women of the place, and it is stated was fed milk, sugar and Jamaica rum. Why or how long the rum was given is not told. He may at first have needed a little stimulant. Hardly anything has been said as to his colthood. It is understood he did not look very promising the first year. The fall after he was two the Colonel removed to Hyde Park, Dutchess County, N. Y., about twenty-three miles from Newburg, taking the colt with him. It was soon learned what a high bred-colt the Colonel had, and many called to see it, and when they were shown him they winked, shrugged their shoulders and laughed, as he was a sorry-looking colt with long hair, standing the wrong way. They were told that it was caused by his losing his dam and being raised by hand; that he would beat anything they had when grown. The colt did well that winter, and the next May the Colonel drove him with a calico-colored one to Daniel, called at Dominie Wiggs' shop at the village, and Mr. Wiggs was the first to shoe him. After he was shod the Colonel asked Mr. Wiggs to take a ride with him and see what a trotter he had. Mr. Wiggs did, and he states the colt could trot so fast as the other could run; that the Colonel drove him mostly single to a heavy wagon, using a black snake whip, and that he was boss on the road; that the Colonel was ready to try it with them any time; that he frequently drove with them three or four times in an afternoon. Mr. Wiggs states the driving the colt got then was injurious, and took the snap out of him. Mr. Wiggs often rode with the Colonel, who weighed 190 pounds, and Mr. Wiggs weighed 235 pounds. One time a man in a sulky passed them. The Colonel said he could beat him, and started the colt at his best pace, and passed him as they entered the village. Mr. Wiggs states the colt had a good disposition, would stop instantly when going fast, at the word of command, was a dark bay, would not serve mares when at Hyde Park, because his owner having him in his shop one time, when there was a mare there that in heat, the Colonel whipped him to make him keep still.

One writer states the Hyde Park road was the favorite one for all the speedy ones on both sides of the river, and that the Felter colt was the boss of the road; that there was a three-year-old at Kingston, called Black Jack, by Victor, that was called very fast, and one in Kingston said he would match him against the Felter colt for $500 a side. When the Colonel heard it he drew his check for $500 and gave it to one, and told him to go and make the race, and if he did he would give him $100. The friends of Black Jack declined to make the match, and it was the last heard of matching the Felter colt at Hyde Park. In the spring of 1860 Colonel Felter moved back to Newburg, taking the colt. He matched him that season against Guy Miller, a four-year-old bay colt by Hambletonian, dam by Nanny Bolivar, and owned by Guy Miller, of Chester, Orange county. The Colonel had Harold P. Jones, of New York City, take the colt to fit for the race, which was for $250 a side, $125 forfeit. It was when Mr. Jones had the Felter colt in his stable, and the last of August, that Mr. Z. E. Simmons saw him. He had been told Mr. Jones had a very speedy colt by Hambletonian. Mr. Simmons states that he was attracted to him by his looks and general appearance, and, knowing he was by Hambletonian, he wanted him. The price was soon made, and he bought him of the Colonel. One of Mr. Simmons' friends told him at the time he had made a fool of himself buying the colt. Mr. Simmons, not caring to have the colt trot for so small a sum, paid forfeit, thinking and expecting another race would be made for a large sum. Mr. Simmons states when he purchased the colt that he would kick another horse if he came behind him if he (Wilkes) was not harnessed, that he was all right when in the harness. He was told he had sired four or five foals, and that one of them was kept for stock, was owned in Illinois, and called Young Wilkes. Guy Miller was taken to California the fall of 1861, and died there that fall.

It was the season of 1860 or 1861 that the Felter colt was named Robert Fillingham, and he was so named at the request of his trainer, Horace F. Jones. Robert Fillingham was Mr. Jones' particular friend. He lived in London, England, and was a saddler. It was August 1, 1861, that Dolly Spanker's son, Robert Fillingham, trotted and won his first race in four heats, Bellfounder taking the second heat, Abdallah Chief distanced in the first heat. Time, 2:33, 2:33, 2:33, 2:33. A very good showing then for a five-year-old.

Just how the race between Fillingham and Ethan Allen came to be made has not been stated. Jones, it is said, made the match. Wilkes' Spirit for August 15, 1862, states: "That the horses had been matched for $5,000 a side, that the brown stallion had been for some time the property of Z. E. Simmons, of this city." The next Spirit states: "That the race will be trotted September 10th, and that the brown stallion was bred by Mr. Felter, of Orange County, and father of Henry D. Felter, this city." The next number of the Spirit, August 30th, states: "The movements of the stallions are closely watched; that Ethan was accurately timed a quarter in 33 seconds, a 2:12 gait. Did not think Mace meant to have his time caught. It was believed that Ethan was a better horse than ever before. That his races with running mate had probably increased his speed, and that the Simmons stallion was being backed by a strong, wealthy party." The night before the race Mace said Ethan was in the best condition he had ever been, and could have trotted a mile better than 2:20. Mr. Holcomb came round and said he would watch with Ethan so that there could be no tampering. The next morning Mace states he found Ethan all off, but thought nothing wrong. Holcomb was with the horse all the time until the race was called. Before it was called, it was seen that the knowing ones were betting on Fillingham; that he had the call at 100 to 40. Why was this? The speed that Ethan had showed did not warrant it. Was it not understood that Ethan would not be able to show the speed in the race that he had in private. It is understood that as a general rule the old heads who bet on races get hold of it some way which horse to bet on, though they sometimes get caught. Much was said and claimed about the private time Fillingham had shown, and it was claimed 2:21 would be made in the race. Fillingham was driven by Mr. Jones. They scored several times for the start, Ethan having the pole and the foot of his rival. When the word was given Ethan took the lead and was three or four lengths ahead at the quarter, Fillingham breaking. Then Ethan tired and would not respond to the whip; Fillingham went on and won in 2:24. When Ethan stopped he commenced making water, and Mace states he made more than a gallon; a veterinarian was called, and he said Ethan was a very sick horse and the trouble was diabetes. Mace said he believed the doctor was the one who mixed the dose that Holcomb gave Ethan. In the second heat Ethan took the pole and led to the half, Fillingham breaking three times; then Fillingham passed Ethan and won the heat in 2:25. Ethan took the pole again in the third heat, was two lengths ahead at the quarter, then he tired and Fillingham passed him and won the heat in the slow time of 2:31 and the race. It is said that $100,000 changed hands on the race. Mace said he lost all he had, $1,700, and two horses. After the race was decided the owner of Fillingham announced from the stand that he would bet one thousand dollars against ten thousand that his horse could trot in 2:15. This was done as a blind, as Fillingham showed the next month in his race with Butler that he could not trot in any such time. The race called the attention of the public to the merits of Hambletonian as a sire of trotters, as he was little known at that time outside of Orange county.

Five years after the race Ethan, then owned by Wm. L. Simmons (George Wilkes' owner) won a great race with running mate, beating the mighty Dexter. Some of the particulars are given, so it can be seen that Ethan won much more money when allowed to win than was lost on him when not allowed to win. Dexter at this time, 1867, was the King, and was considered invincible. Ethan with running mate the first of the season had beaten Brown George and running mate, getting a record of 2:19, and it caused the public to think of a race between him and Dexter. They were matched for $2,500 a side. The day before it was to come off, it was said, Ethan's running mate Charlotte F. had fallen lame, and they sent to Connecticut for Brown George's running mate. When the race was called the party backing the team declared it off and paid forfeit. They then said for the gratification of the crowd they would make a new race and match Dexter for $250 a side, and did not want to bet more as Ethan had never been driven with Brown George, runner, did not know how he would act. The offer was accepted and the most of them believed Ethan would stand no chance to beat Dexter with a runner he had never been driven with. This caused Dexter to have the call in the betting at two to one and three to one. They were accommodated, and it is said that a quarter of a million was bet on the race. John Morrissey was the managing chief for the team, and it was said his share of the winnings was forty thousand dollars, the team winning in 2:15, 2:16, 2:19. It is admitted the team could have trotted the first heat in 2:12. They did the first half in 1:04. The day after the race Ethan was given a trial with Charlotte F., that was timed in 2:17, the last half in 1:04. It is understood Brown George's runner had not been in Connecticut.

After Fillingham's race with Ethan he was matched against Gen. Butler, Fillingham to harness, and Butler to saddle for $2,000 a side. The race came off Oct. 8, 1862. Before the start Fillingham had the call at 100 to 30. Mr. Mace rode Butler and Mr. Jones drove the stallion, Butler winning in four heats, Fillingham taking the second. Time, 2:21, 2:24, 2:23, 2:27. The third heat was a close one, Butler winning by half a length. It was quite dark when the last heat was trotted, and Jones claimed Butler did a great deal of running. Mace states Butler collared the stallion coming up the home stretch and beat him in 2:27. It is presumed Mace did not feel very bad winning, though it is believed he would have felt better to have won with Ethan. The race showed what Fillingham was capable of doing at the time—that 2:23 would beat him. A large amount of money changed hands on the race.

It was stated Fillingham was lame the season of 1864 and he was not trotted. It was the season of 1865 or '66 that his name was changed to George Wilkes, at the request of his former owner, Z. E. Simmons, he now being owned by his brother, Wm. L. Wilkes showed well the seasons of 1865, 1866, 1867, beating some of the best ones. But he did not train on as some of the great ones did that he beat at first. It is claimed he showed a two-mile trial in 2:54 and a mile trial in 2:19 and 2:18. He won his record, 2:22, at Providence, R. I., October 13, 1868, beating Rhode Island and Draco Prince in four heats, Draco Prince taking the first heat and was distanced in the last. This beat the stallion record held by George M. Patchen one and a half seconds, which was made on the Union Course, August 2, 1860. Wilkes held the stallion record until beaten by Jay Gould half a second at Buffalo, August 7, 1872.

The trotting register credits George Wilkes trotting 56 races to harness, winning 25, and trotting 56 heats in 2:30 or better. He won a wagon record of 2:25, and a team record with Honest Allen as trotting mate. It can be said, George Wilkes, as a trotter, did not meet the expectations raised by his first races. The fast ones that he first beat proved the best. Lady Thorn, 2:18, beat him nine of their twelve races; Lucy, 2:18, four of the seven races they trotted; American Girl, 2:16, beat him two of the three they trotted; Goldsmith Maid beat him the final race they trotted, Wilkes making a dead heat with her of 2:22 in the third heat. Dexter beat him the only race they trotted.

S. T. Harris says Wilkes was a very honest trotter; that he would stick to his trot no matter how hard he was pressed and out-trotted by a rival, or beaten by his driver behind; that he rarely broke, sometimes shifting his trot to a pace; that he was over twelve years on the course. His gait, an experienced horseman that knew him well says, was unlike that of any other trotter he ever saw. Charles Foster said of his trotting, "his hind leg when straightened out in action, as he went his best pace, reminded me of that of a duck swimming." His picture shows him a rather plain-looking horse, but some say he was clean-cut and blood-like as any stallion in the land. He was called rather small, being but fifteen hands high. It is claimed the way he was raised, stunted his growth. He had good bone and substance, and length of body, was higher behind than forward. The day he beat Lady Thorn to wagon he weighed 970 pounds, and in good flesh weighed 1,100 pounds. His color was a very dark brown, almost black at times. His right hind foot was white, most ning up a little above the pastern joint. His disposition was not as good as that of his sire; he did not like strangers around.

Wilkes' day as a trotter now over, which was the reason been why he was put in the stud. One reason is given that his owner, with some friends, had been to see Messenger Drooc; it was then his reputation as a sire of trotters stood high. It was then talked over what a great horse he was, and some of them said that he was the best one of Hambletonian's sons. Mr. Simmons said that he had a better one, and would prove it, and so sent Wilkes to Kentucky the spring of 1873. Some claim that it was through the advice of W. H. Wilson that caused Wilkes to be sent to Kentucky. He (Mr. Wilson), taking him there and having charge of him the first season. S. T. Harris states that when Mr. Wilson took the horse to Kentucky he stopped at Cincinnati a few days to let him rest, and that he (Mr. H.), was asked to look him over, and he tells what a fine, noble-looking horse he was, that in color he was darker than a wine-colored brown; muzzle and flanks shaded into a rich tint of deep tan.

Mr. Harris says that Wilkes was just 15 hands high, that his stock average 15½ hands, some were 16 hands or more, and a few were under 15 hands. His owner states that Wilkes had not sired twenty foals when taken to Kentucky. He was advertised the season of 1867 at the Fashion course at $250 to warrant, $75 to be paid down. At that time he was the fastest stallion there, yet he had but little business. The price may have stopped some. Two of the foals he sired that season entered the 230 list, May Bird and Young Wilkes. May Bird entered the season of 1874, getting a record of 2:27. She has now a record of 2:21, a saddle record of 2:19½, a wagon record of 2:24½, and 69 heats in 2:30 or better. Her dam was by John C. Fremont. Young Wilkes entered the 230 list the season of 1875, when he got his record of 2:28½, and five heats in 2:30 or better. His dam was by Prince of Wales, son of Royal George. Wilkes was seventeen years old when taken to Kentucky. None of his get were in the charmed circle. With these facts in mind the breeders of Kentucky could not see any great treasure in him. Yet some were jealous of him at first, and to put breeders on their guard one of the sporting papers was asked how many times Lady Thorn had beaten George Wilkes. When this was known it could be seen that it would be much safer to breed to an own brother of Lady Thorn. Could they have looked into the future and seen what a gold mine he was going to prove to them, how different they would have felt and done! That they should have at first looked and felt somewhat coldly towards him is nothing strange. The price charged at first was $100 the season, and it is said that he did a very fair business the first two seasons, then his patronage was light for a few seasons, but when the first of his get in Kentucky began to show their great speed, then his value as a sire was seen and his services were in demand, and the price was raised to $300 the season.

It is stated his services were worth ten thousand dollars a season at the time of his death, and that his book was full. He died Thursday, May 18, 1892, of pneumonia; was taken with it the sixteenth, was attended by Drs. Herr and Haggard. Shortly before he fell and expired he walked to the door and gave a neigh, something as Almont did. Some one says he saw the horse early in the spring, that he looked strong and healthy as though he would live to be thirty; that a very warm spell of weather was followed by cold, rain and wind, and that it was this change that caused his death. The same writer states that Simmons missed shipping a lot of mares from the East of doubtful breeding to breed to him, that they did not force the growth of his colts, nor develop their speed any too much. That it would have been better for the reputation of the horse if they had purchased Kentucky-bred mares to have bred to him rather than the ones they did from the East.

His owner states that he sired but about 350 foals in Kentucky. Considering all the facts it is doubtful if any horse has made so good a showing. The first of his get to enter the 230 list in Kentucky was Blondine, 2:24½, and So So, 2:24. They entered the season of 1879; they made his four in 230 list. The season of 1880 six entered, Alcantara, 2:23, one, making his number ten; 1881 two entered, making his number twelve; 1882 eight entered, making his number twenty; 1883 six entered, making his number 26; 1884 nine entered, making his number 35; 1885 nine entered, making his number 44; 1886 eight entered, making his number 52; 1887 seven entered, making his number 59; 1888 seven entered, making his number 66; 1889 two entered, making his number 68; 1890 four entered, making his number 72; 1891 three entered, making his number 75; 1892 two entered, making his number 77.

Though George Wilkes was by Hambletonian and was a Hambletonian, as are his descendants, yet have the Hambletonians so covered the land that they are divided into families, and it is believed the greatest one will be called the George Wilkes family, or it will be shortened to the Wilkes family. Horses tracing to him are now called Wilkes, the same as those tracing to Volunteer are called Volunteers, those to Electioneer, Electioneers, those to Happy Medium, Happy Mediums, and those to Almont, Almonts.

Some don't want to admit that George Wilkes was the great sire he was and that it was coming out greater in his descendants. They argue that if Alexander's Abdallah and Electioneer had had Wilkes' chance in Kentucky they would have done as well if not better. No one can believe that if they been trotted, campaigned and abused till they were seventeen (as Wilkes was) and then put into the stud, they could have done as well as Wilkes did.

It is claimed by some that a horse to be a sire of trotters must be one that has proved a great and lasting trotter himself and they instance George Wilkes an example proving their claim. If George Wilkes had not been trotted more than Alexander's Abdallah and Electioneer were when he was sent to Kentucky he would no doubt have proved a better sire. It is interesting to know that these three great horses were by the same sire and that their dams trace to the same source. Alexander's Abdallah's dam was by a son of Andrew Jackson. George Wilkes' dam by Henry Clay, a son of Andrew Jackson and Electioneer's dam by Harry Clay, a great grand-son of Andrew Jackson. Those that claim that there is nothing in pedigree or breeding must admit that this cross has been very prepotent in transmitting speed. Henry Clay's dam was the trotting mare Lady Surry, so called because she came from the town of Surry, N. H. She was bred by William Perkins, of Surry, and sold to a distant relative, Mark D. Perkins, of Surry, and he sold her to a Mr. Gilmore, who rode her to New York City. It is claimed Wilkes' grandson, Old Telegraph's great grand sire, was by a son of the original Morgan horse. If Lady Surry was by a Morgan horse, which is probable, it gives Wilkes' dam two Morgan crosses. This some may claim was what caused in part, Wilkes to be so great a sire, and it no doubt helped, as the Morgan blood gives lasting and staying qualities with beauty and intelligence.

Just how Dolly Spanker came to be called a Mambrino mare may never be known. Some were not as particular in getting the facts at first as they should have been. If some one understood or heard it said so, and it was the popular hood it was put down so. It has been hard at first for some to give up these dear old false pedigrees. But the truth is mighty and will always prevail. It was understood after awhile that Dolly Spanker's breeding was unknown, because no one had given as her origin or breeding. These facts must be known to have a pedigree stand. Though some horses show their breeding strongly in their looks, and it is known at once that they are a thoroughbred, a Morgan, a Black Hawk or a Lambert.

To Mr. Wallace belongs the credit of bringing out the facts as to the origin and breeding of Dolly Spanker, though they had been known a dozen years or so before. Varich (A. B. Palmer), had had it written out to give the public, but concluded best not to. It was at the breeders' banquet, Dec. 1877, that Mr. Wallace first met Harry D. Felter and Wm. L. Simmons and he asked them if all hopes of finding the breeding of Dolly Spanker had been abandoned, and they replied in the affirmative. Mr. Wallace then asked Mr. Felter if he could give the name of the person he bought the mare of, and Mr. Felter replied he could, as it was on his books, and he promised Mr. Wallace he would look up the name and send it to him. Mr. Wallace was soon informed that Mr. Felter bought the mare of W. A. Delevan, who bought her of I. S. Lewis, of Geneva, N. Y. From these facts Mr. Wallace was able to learn the origin and breeding of the mare. It was found she was bred in Bristol, N. Y., by Clark Phillips, sire Wadsworth's Henry Clay 8, dam a brown mare, 15½ hands high, called Old Telegraph, and sired by Baker's Highlander, a bay horse, 15 hands high, and by Paul's Highlander, a handsome bay, 15½ hands high, by Highlander, that was taken from Massachusetts about 1825, and said to be by a son of the original Morgan horse. The owners of Wilkes were not pleased, as the Clay cross was not then a popular cross. Had it been as popular then as now it is probable it would have been all right. Many are not fair in having the facts known. If the pedigree as they have it, suits, they do not want to give it up for one that is not considered as popular. Captain Rynders tried hard to have it stated that Aberdeen's grandam was by Abdallah. Taggart's Abdallah 16 had a false pedigree which stood over forty years, and so it was with the dam of Black Hawk 5. Some do not like the facts recently given as to the breeding of Gipsy Queen, the dam of Thomas Jefferson.

What the honest breeder wants is the true pedigree, so as to give each family or breed its just credit, and then they can see what crosses give the best results. It is claimed the Clay cross shows itself strong in Wilkes' descendants. Many of his sons have the black color and white marks of the Clays. They are bays, browns and blacks, averaging 15½ hands high, and some are 16 hands and weigh 1,300 pounds, like Red Wilkes and Abdallah Wilkes. A few are small, less than 15 hands, and 1,000 pounds in weight, like Lumps, 2:21, Wilton, 2:19½. It is said that his daughters are mostly bays. It is interesting to know that Wilkes had a large box stall and yard to run in and was driven winters in Kentucky.—Spirit of the Turf.

The National Trotting Association.

A meeting of the Board of Appeals of the Pacific District was held at San Francisco, Cal., on Dec. 23, 1892.

Present: Messrs. N. T. Smith, of San Francisco, and J. D. Carr, of Salinas, Cal. Frank Shay was appointed Secretary of the meeting.

The following cases were considered and decisions rendered:

F. C. Chapman, of Vacaville, Cal., vs. Solano Agricultural and Speed Association, District No. 36, Vallejo, Cal. Appeal from the decision of the judges in the three-year-old class for named horses.

The race was awarded to the sorrel filly Dollicant, owned by Mr. Thomas Smith. Plaintiff protested and claimed that Dollicant should have been distanced for running. After hearing all the evidence the Board decided that it was not in the power of the judges of the race to waive a distance in this case, and that they had committed an error in permitting Dollicant to start in the second heat, and thereupon Ordered: That the money awarded to Dollicant by the judges be distributed to the parties entitled thereto.

W. B. Bradbury and chestnut gelding Little Hope vs. Solano and Napa Agricultural Association, District No. 25, Napa, Cal., and San Mateo and Santa Clara County Agricultural Association No. 5, San Jose, Cal. Protest and application for release of himself and horse from payment of suspension.

It appears that in 1888 Mr. Bradbury entered his chestnut gelding Little Hope in a four hundred dollar pacing race at San Jose and in a five hundred dollar pacing race at Napa, but, at the time of making his nomination, he did not send the entrance fee. At the time of the races Mr. Bradbury was not in this State and somebody, on his behalf, promised each association that the entrance fees would be paid upon his return. Neither association, therefore, took any action towards suspending Mr. Bradbury, but permitted the matter to run on with the expectation that when he returned to the State he would pay up. Matters ran along until 1889, and, in that year, as Mr. Bradbury was about to start his horse in a race at Oakland, the Secretary of the Santa Clara Society and the Secretary of the Napa Society notified the Secretary of the Oakland Association to withhold the amounts which they claimed to be due them. Bradbury protested, but the amounts were withheld. Mr. Bradbury claimed that his entries, not having been accompanied by the entrance fee, as required by the rules of these associations, were void. Upon this point the decision of the Board of Appeals was against Mr. Bradbury. Mr. Bradbury's next point was that the respective societies, having failed to suspend him for non-payment, had lost their rights in the matter, and, upon this point, the Board decided in favor of Mr. Bradbury. It was the opinion of the Board that in order to maintain its rights, a society must follow the course laid down by the rules; that, if it chooses to pursue some other course, and, instead of suspending for the non-payment of entrance fees, prefers to trust to the honor of the owner of the horse, it must take the chances.

By direction of P. P. Johnston, President, the Pacific District Board of Appeals convened February 10, 1893, at Stockton, Cal., to investigate the alleged irregularity of the record of 2:07½ of the bay stallion Stamboul, made on the grounds of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Association, District No. 2, Stockton, Cal., November 23, 1892, and the following is the official report of the action taken:

We find that the meeting held at Stockton between October 13th and November 23, 1892, inclusive, was duly and regularly advertised to commence on the 13th and to continue as long as the weather would permit; that there were two purses hung up by the Association, and entries duly made for the record races; that the races were regularly adjourned from day to day and the announcement of the adjournment made from the judges' stand; that notices of the races were in the daily papers, gate money collected at the gate, judges regularly on the stand, drivers weighed in and out, and the rules of the National Trotting Association faithfully observed.

That on November 23d, the day on which Stamboul made the record of 2:07½, was an adjourned meeting; that on that day gate money was charged at the gate; the judges were in the stand; two judges, Mr. Covey and Mr. Thompson, men of unquestioned reliability, were selected and acted as timers; that the race was after 10 A. M., and the reported time, 2:07½, was justly and fairly made and so reported and announced from the judges' stand; that the driver of Stamboul carried the required weight, and that after the race no doubt was expressed or objection made as to the correctness or fairness of the time.

We find that the judges' book, was signed by Langford and Parker, and by LaRue for Kearney by authority given LaRue by Kearney shortly after the time was announced and before the parties left the track.

We believe that the effort subsequently made to discredit the time was for a malicious and dishonest purpose, and we find the charge is not supported by any reliable evidence, but that parties active in making the charge are implicated in a conspiracy to levy blackmail.

We find that the record of 2:07½ made by Stamboul at Stockton on November 23, 1892, together with all other records made at Stockton between October 13, 1892, and November 23, 1892, as shown by the judges' books of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Association, were justly and fairly made under the rules of the National Trotting Association, and all such records must stand as true and correct records, and it is so ordered.

It is further ordered that John A. McCloud and John S. Kearney be and are hereby suspended, and that Henry McHugh be and is hereby expelled.

(Signed) FRANK SHAY, Secretary.
The above is the official report sent to the office of the National Trotting Association. M. M. MORSE, Secretary.

Death of a Horse Trainer.

RENO, Nev., March 23, 1893.

C. J. Brookins received this morning a letter from J. M. Haller, Constable at Galt, Cal., inquiring if Mr. Brookins could give any information concerning E. P. Winslow, who was knocked off the bridge at that place a short time ago. The writer says:

"We got him out and I took charge of him and took him to the Sacramento hospital, where he lived only an hour after his arrival. He never knew anything after the train struck him. He was a stranger and tramping the road. He was about fifty years old and well-dressed, but had only ten cents in his pockets. He had apparently been a horse jockey as he had a number of blanket safety pins on his person. He was hurried from the hospital at Sacramento."

A letter from Mr. Brookins was found on the person of deceased, which caused the Constable to write the note of inquiry.

The unfortunate man was evidently E. P. Winslow, the horse trainer who trained Tam O'Shanter for Mr. Brookins, and also Frank M. and Sensation for the Lee Brothers. He was well known in Reno, and in fact all over the Coast, and was considered one of the best trainers in the country. He left here about the first of January, and was in Oregon when he deceased Mr. Brookins letter.

Deceased was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion and came to the Pacific Coast at its close. At one time he was quite well off, having a fine saloon in a large California town. He left a wife in the East from whom he had not heard for a long time, when he accidentally discovered that she had divorced him, married again and was living with her husband but a short distance from where he was then doing business. This appeared to break him completely down. He took to drinking heavily and in a short time was a financial wreck. His services as a trainer were always in demand, and had he lived he would have been engaged in that capacity here next summer.

How to Feed.

Compiled for the Missouri State Board of Agriculture by Chas. P. Fox, assistant chemist in Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station, Columbia, Mo:

Rule 1. Feed animals as much as they can digest without injuring their health.

Rule 2. Feed a "balanced ration," i. e., one in which the composition is in proportion to their needs.

Rule 3. Food is required to maintain animal heat; save food by providing warm, but ventilated shelter for your stock.

Rule 4. Stimulate the digestive capacity of your animal by a variety of food, salt, etc.

Stock foods are composed of substances usually arranged into six groups.

1. Water. The amount varies with kind of food. It is of no economic importance.

2. Ash. This is the residue left after burning away the combustible portions. It supplies the mineral ingredients to the animal body. A portion of the ash has a maaurial value.

3. Protein. This is the nitrogenous portion of the food. It is used in the animal economy to form "muscle" and all other nitrogenous portions of the body; it also aids in the formation of fat. It is the most valuable ingredient.

4. Fat. This substance produces animal heat, or is stored up in the body as fat for future use. One pound of fat will produce as much heat as two and one-half pounds of carbohydrates.

5. Carbohydrates. This group includes the starches, gums, sugars, etc. They produce fat and heat.

6. Fiber. This substance has about the same composition as the carbohydrates, but is much less digestible; it is of but little value.

THE ENGLISH RACE HORSE.

Pot-8-oe, Escape and Beeweing.

[Written expressly for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

Pot-8-os was one of the many good ones that came from the loins of the great Eclipse, and was one of the best. He was a bright chestnut in color, and stood sixteen hands. His dam was Sportsmistress. He was foaled in 1773, and was bred by the Earl of Abingdon. At the Newmarket first spring meeting of 1788 his owner had stated publicly that he intended to dispose of several of his horses. Pot-8-os was in a sweepstake of one hundred guineas each, eight entries, and just before the start Lord Grosvenor, who had heard of Abingdon's intentions, asked him the price of Pot-8-os. "Fifteen hundred guineas," was the reply. "With the stakes if he wins?" "Oh, certainly." The bargain was closed, and in a short time horse and purse were the property of Lord Grosvenor. The oddity of his name is said to have come about in the following manner: A favorite old groom of Lord Abingdon's was asked to name the horse soon after he was foaled, and being a better hand with a horse than a pen, christened the horse "potatoes," and spelled it in the manner which has since become historical. He no doubt hailed from the Emerald Isle. Pot-8-os died at Horne Park, Newmarket, in 1800, aged twenty-seven. Most of our most esteemed pedigree of thoroughbreds trace back to him.

Highflyer was one of the most celebrated racehorses on record. He was never beaten, and never paid a forfeit. He was a bay horse descended from King Herod, and was foaled in 1774. He was bred by Sir Charles Bunbury, and sold by him to Viscount Bolingbroke, who afterwards sold him to Mr. Richard Tattersall. Highflyer swept all before him from 1776 to 1780. He saw the inauguration of the St. Leger, Derby and Oaks, and was the first prominent horse to break through the so long established custom of not running horses until five years old and over. Charles Fox, the great British statesman, was present at the festive gathering when the grand colt was christened Highflyer. Although he never started after five years old, his winnings amounted to over nine thousand three hundred pounds, or $60,000, the value, by the bye, of the American Derby of 1893. His immediate descendants won for their lucky owners no less than £573,000. This grand horse died at "Highflyer Hall," Cambridgeshire, a villa near Ely, the property of Mr. Tattersall, who named the place in honor of the horse, in 1793, aged nineteen years.

Probably no horse ever created more excitement on the British turf than Escape, a son of Highflyer. He was the property of George IV, then Prince of Wales. Chifney, the leading jockey of his time, was retained by the Prince of Wales, and rode Escape in a sweepstake from the "Ditch-in" about two miles. Running in the same race were Skylark, Pipator and Criander. The last named won. Next day Chifney rode Escape against the same horse a distance of four miles, and won. In the latter race odds of 4 and 5 to 1 were laid against Escape, while in the former he was a hot favorite. It was rumored that the Prince of Wales had landed a big stake in the latter race, but this he flatly denied, and stated that £400 was all he won. He believed that Chifney had "pulled" the horse in the first race, as did the general public, and to clear himself, moved that a public investigation be held, the whole resulting in the trial of Chifney, and the retirement of the Prince of Wales from the turf.

Escape beat the best horses in England over a distance of four miles, and was himself beaten over the same course by inferior animals. He was an uncertain horse. He beat Nimble, the fastest horse of his day, at a mile and a half, and was beaten in a private trial at the same distance by Don Quixote and Lance, both inferior horses to Nimble, by almost a distance. In another trial, two miles, over Epsom course, he beat Baronet and Pegasus giving the former, a horse of his own age and a good winner of big races, twenty pounds. Then Baronet beats him at the same weight and distance a few days later at Ascot. With all the knowledge of the horse's uncertain running, it appears to us of the present day unfair to condemn owner or jockey. As Chifney most aptly observed at his trial, "I notice that horses change in their true running. If a horse is in perfect fitness for running he immediately becomes exhausted, little or much. He must change in his running. A horse cannot keep his perfect fitness for running more than one race until rested. I have seen one sweat between a horse twice running change him for the worse astonishingly." The same holds good to-day.

Chifney, who was not only a crack jockey but a master hand at training, was very much opposed to the heavy sweating of horses then in vogue, and which is now practiced to a large extent by some trainers in California who do not know any better. For the benefit of these we give Chifney's opinions in vexed question:

"It is destruction to horses to sweat them in the manner they are sweated at Newmarket, as the practice there is to sweat them once in six days, and sometimes oftener; and between these days of sweating it is usual for the horse to go out twice a day, each time having strong exercise. On these sweating-days the horses are mostly covered with cloths two or three times doubled, and go in their sweats six miles, more or less, and at times go tolerably fast. Directly the horse pulls up, he is hurried into a stable. As soon as he gets in, there are often more clothes thrown upon him in addition to those he had been sweated in. This is done to make the horse sweat the more; and he stands thus for a time, panting, before he is stripped for scraping; and with being thus worked, clothed and staved, he is at times so affected that he keeps breaking out into fresh sweats, which pour from him when scraping as if water had been thrown on him. Nature cannot bear this. The horses must dwindle."

Beeswing, back to whom so many of our race horses trace, was a wonderful mare. She was bred by a Mr. W. Dede, of Nunykir, Nuthumberland. Her sire was Doctor Syntax, the winner of twenty-nine races out of forty-four starts. Her dam by Androssan, out of Lady Eliza, by Whitworth, she from Sylvia, by Young Marske. Her blood is directly traceable to the Darley Arabian. She made her debut at Newcastle in June, 1835, for the Tyro Stakes, but ran out when in a good place. In 1836 she ran for the St. Leger, but was beaten by Elis. Beeswing ran for eight seasons, starting sixty-four times and winning fifty. She won for her owner over $35,000.

NEWMARKET.

ONLINE holds no less than four world's records. His race record over a half-mile track is 2:20. His time record over a half-mile track is 2:17. His race record over a regulation track is 2:13; and his time record over a kite track is 2:11.

At the San Jose Track.

Work at the track has slackened a little during the wet weather of the last few days. Advantage has been taken of the hsd weather by Superintendent Bunch to put the track in fine condition. Owing to the constant work of a large number of horses during the past two months, the clay had packed closely, and had lost, in a measure, its elasticity; when the recent storm began an extra team was employed, and the track was torn up and worked to such a depth as to put it back in as fine condition as it was when it was first clayed, some three years ago.

The attaches of different stables are anxiously watching the progress of their pets, especially those entered in the races of the Blood Horse Association. The meeting for thoroughbreds under the auspices of the association, to which horsemen are looking forward just now, will take place at the Bay District track April 1st, and will continue about four weeks from that date, at the end of which time many prominent stables now on the coast will go East to follow the circuit there. J. Nglee Burk's thoroughbreds are among those that will go. They have been training at Naglee Park during the winter.

The Bay District races for trotters under the auspices of the Blood Horse Association differ somewhat from the usual line of races. They will continue for one week, and it is the intention of the management to make every race a contest. This will be accomplished in part by handicapping the horses, as is the custom in running races. The races will all be dashes except one, and that will be best two in three. There are a great many advantages to be obtained by this plan, and the good results expected will probably be especially apparent in the case of horses driven by the young and less experienced drivers. These cannot be shut out by combinations, as they may sometimes be in heat races. This plan will give the faint-hearted and cautious driver a chance, and in these respects at least will be fairer tests of the real value and speed of the horses. The meeting takes place about the middle of May, and owing to the early date it was thought until recently that only a few of the stables now at Agricultural Park would compete. This, however, was a mistake, for a number of horses are now actively training for these events, and it is probable that a good share of the money staked then will be earned by horses from San Jose and vicinity.

William Donathan has six or eight entered there. Henry Walsh has a large string, which consists entirely, as does that of Mr. Donathan, of thoroughbreds.

C. T. Bunch, of J. W. Rea's Vendome Stock Farm has a number of trotters entered, and among them are Laura R., 2:21, who will start in the free-for-all; Pink, 2:23, in the two-mile dash; Alviso, by Brown Jug, out of Big Lize, 2:24, will start in the four-year-old; Tip Tinous, a three-year-old, by Antinous, will start in the three-year-old; John D. Evans, a bay colt, will start in the two-year-old.

Billy Vioget has three or four trotters entered also. One of Billy's beauties is a mahogany bay, a very promising animal, called Wilima, by Eros, 2:29, out of a mare by Abbotsford, 2:19. Wilima will start in the three-year-old class. He has also a three-year-old and a four-year-old for those classes respectively.

C. H. Cox has T. B., 2:26, a pacer, who will start at the spring meetings, and two trotters also.

Of course it is impossible to tell at this time how these horses will work out, as the season for working is now quite short, not more than two months remaining.

The talk of removing the State capital to San Jose, has, of course, caused more or less speculation among horsemen as to whether in the event of a removal the annual State Fair would follow the capital, and be held thereafter at Agricultural Park. Naturally it is to be presumed that it would do so.

There would be something peculiarly appropriate, at least from a horseman's view, in bringing the State Fair, or at least the racing portion of it, San Jose. Aside from having as good track facilities here as can be found in the State, this valley has been for many years the natural home of the trotter, and is fast becoming famous as quarters for the thoroughbred as well.

The prominence of Santa Clara valley as a producer of trotters can be traced to the progeny of two horses—Electioneer and Nutwood. Of course, everybody is familiar with the fame of Electioneer and his colts, but the praises of Nutwood have not been so widely sung. Nutwood was brought here by his owner, J. W. Knox, about a dozen years ago. He got a record at Stockton of 2:18. He was a half-brother to Mand S., the mare whom so many people consider the queen of the turf. She made her record (2:08) in 1885 drawing an old-fashioned sulky, for this was before either the Toomey or Caffrey sulky was in use, not to mention the pneumatic-tired, ball-bearing sulky of to-day. Neither did she have the benefit of the kite track, but made her mile on a regulation track. These facts have encouraged Robert Bonner, her owner, to think she can still in her age, for she is now eighteen, lower the record of Nancy Hanks if hitched to the latest improved sulky. She is, therefore, now in training for a trial some time this year. Maud S. has been mated to Ausel (2:20), by Electioneer, but she has so far failed to produce.

Nutwood was not an unworthy relative of Maud S., for he is second only to Electioneer as a sire of speedy trotters. His breeding was exceptionally good, his sire being Belmont 64 and his dam the dam of Maud S. Among his get there are a number of fine mares still remaining in Santa Clara valley, and here are the names of a few of them:

Maggie E., 2:19; Manette, dam of Arion, whose two-year-old record is 2:10; Lyla W., 2:18, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20; Eva W., 2:25, now the property of Senator Stanford; Kate Kelly, 2:34, sister to Laura R., 2:21; Lady Nutwood, 2:34, and a number of other fine and famous mares.

Facts are numerous substantiating the proposition that Santa Clara county is pre-eminently the greatest producer of horses of any like area in the world. The two greatest trotting sires that ever lived stood within fifteen miles of San Jose—Nutwood and Electioneer. This was the home of the former and the latter was at Palo Alto. Their entire families, except those sold to non-residents, are now in this valley. The trotting records of the world were all held at one time by horses foaled and raised in Santa Clara county. The largest sale of trotters ever made from one locality was made from here, and the highest price ever paid for a trotter, $125,000, was for Arion, a Santa Clara county horse, who was always kept here until he was sold. The world's stallion record for trotters is held by a horse from this valley—Stamboul, 2:07, and before him Palo Alto, 2:08, another horse born and raised here, has held it.

The first yearling that ever trotted a mile in 2:30 was foaled and raised in this valley. This was Freedom, 2:29, by Sable Wilkes, 2:18, out of Mollic Drew, and he got his record

Napa in 1890. The two greatest broodmares in the world are owned by Senator Stanford at Palo Alto—Beautiful Bells and Sontag Mohawk.

Beautiful Bells has a record of 2:29, but it is not her record that made her reputation, but the records of her sons and daughters. The list of these includes Bell Bird, yearling, 2:26; Bell Boy, three-year-old, 2:19; Bell Flower, 2:16; Bow Bells, 2:19; Hinda Rose, 2:19, as a three-year-old; Palo Alto Belle, three-year-old, 2:22; St. Bel, four-year-old, 2:24; Chimes, 2:30. The sons and daughters of Beautiful Bells have rivalled their dam as producers. Bell Boy, 2:19, is the sire of Bridal Bells, two-year-old, 2:22, and Princess Belles, two-year-old, 2:29. St. Bel, the property of Miller & Shiley, the Pennsylvania stockmen by whom Marvin is now employed, is the sire of Bellman, 2:28; Bell Town, 2:25; Bell Onward, two-year-old, 2:23; Free, 2:25; Gold Point, 2:20; Honey Dew, 2:29; Legacy, 2:30, and Silver Ore, two-year-old, 2:29. Chimes, 2:30, while not himself in the list, is the sire of a large number with records below 2:20. The names of some of them follow: Chimes Boy, 2:25; Chimes Girl, 2:26 as a two-year-old; Curfew, 2:28; June Bug, 2:29; Midnight Chimes, three-year-old, 2:16; Prince Royal, two-year-old, 2:20; Merry Chimes, pacer, 2:14. Besides these the dams of Mont Rose, 2:18, and Sweet Rose, yearling record of 2:25, are daughters of Beautiful Bells.

Sontag Mohawk, the other mare mentioned above, has an equally long string of swift sons and daughters. Seven of the most remarkable, with their records, are here given: Sallie Benton, 2:17, dam of Starlight, three-year-old, 2:23; Norhawk, three-year-old, 2:20; Sport, 2:22; Colma, 2:25; Conductor, 2:25; Sonoma, 2:28; Eros, 2:29. The latter is the sire of Wanda, 2:17; Oro Fino, 2:18; Mount Hood, 2:22; My My, 2:25; Maraquita, 2:30; Daylight, 2:27; Rinconado, 2:23; Solita, 2:27; Donzello, 2:29; all trotters.

The theory that a three-quarter thoroughbred could be made to trot fast, and that a mixture of thoroughbred blood would greatly improve the trotter originated with the leading horse-owner of this valley—Senator Stanford. This theory has been developed until now it is an accepted fact. Palo Alto, Sunol and many other fast ones are the result of experiments along this line, as is also Rowena, with a two-year-old record of 2:17. The blood of all of these is rich in thoroughbred strains. And while talking about the trotter it must not be forgotten that the veteran campaigner, St. Julien, the first horse that ever trotted a mile in 2:11, is kept in a paddock near San Jose.

Not quite so fine a showing has been made with thoroughbreds, but this is because less attention has been paid to them by the breeders here. However, with the little attention they have received the runners from this valley have done credit to its reputation for fast horses. It is not generally known that the world's running record for regulation track is held here by Racine, 1:39. This horse got his record while making the circuit successfully, last under the management of Thomas Williams.

More attention will be given to the breeding of thoroughbreds in this valley hereafter. The importation of Ormonde by W. O'B. Macdonough at a cost of $150,000—the largest price ever paid for a horse—is sure to lend impetus in this direction. Mr. Macdonough's fine stable is here now, and this great horse will be kept at his stock farm in this valley. Ormonde is an English horse, and is famous both as a racer and as a sire. He never lost a race while on the turf, and three of his colts have won all the races in which they were entered. It will not take long for such a horse to excite an interest in the breeding of thoroughbreds.

Santa Clara county has already some good runners and some good running sires. Among them is Brutus, the property of William Boots, a great stock horse whose colts show up wonderfully.

It is probable that with such advantages the State Fair might be easily made to follow the capital if the latter is brought here. It seems probable that before many years the racing portion of the fair will naturally gravitate in the direction of San Jose whether the capital is removed to this city or not, for the greatest interest—horses—will naturally center in the place that has the largest number of fine horses to show.—Mercury.

If He Was Only There!

John Eugleman, the first one to declare that Stamboul trotted in 2:16, instead of 2:07, when the "King of Stallions" made his record, came from Montana to this State, we believe, and is one of those men who delight to spread don'tful stories for the sake of becoming "celebrated." Samuel Gamble has telegraphed $300 to place against any amount from $100 down, that Mr. Eugleman may choose to put up, that he was nearer Stockton that day than Mr. Eugleman. From his confession in the Kentucky Stock Farm, Mr. Gamble will have a "mortal cinch" on the coin, for Mr. Eugleman says: It was all hearsay talk. He was at Palo Alto, and could not say that the record was falsified, but adds "we had a two-year-old that we wanted to start that day to beat 2:30, but the track was so heavy that she was shipped home instead." Mr. Eugleman was not one of the few, but knew very well (if he knew anything) that no one decided that it rained exactly as described in the evidence given before the District Board of Appeals, and the track was too heavy for the filly to start after Stamboul came in; but the horse was not started because the track was too heavy for her. Mr. Covey, through courtesy, consented to let Stamboul trot in preference to the filly, because the sky looked threatening and not because the track was too heavy.

The evidence in this case is all in. Campbell swore that he could place no dependence on his watch, and did not know whether he started it when the horse was going to score or after he started. Kearney was proven a falsifier. The far-away man, Gooby, stopped his watch when the bell rang to call the timer, Mr. Thompson, back to the stand. Every other person with one exception, who timed the horse, made it 2:07, and he made it 2:08. The man Crow, who drove the teaser, got excited and forgot to stop his watch or start it (he did not know which) after he had marked the time to the half 1:05, and testified that the horse came home the last half faster than he had during the previous one.

In looking over the letter written by Mr. Eugleman, one is tempted to remark that some people like to circulate I-told-you-so stories because, from force of circumstances, they are not allowed to join sewing circles or write for society journals. Mr. Eugleman was not at the track and knows absolutely nothing about the time made, but if he writes to the National Association he will become enlightened; to do so he ought to have as an amanuensis some talented genius like M. H. McHugh. The latter gentleman is out of work and should cultivate Mr. Eugleman's acquaintance at once.

THE GUN.

Heard in the Hills.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

Hear the soft winds singing low
O'er the meadows as they wing;
Listen to the river's flow
And the wild birds as they sing:

Wake! wake! bubble, little stream;
Wake! wake! pretty flowers, and beam;
Let your sweet perfume arise
To the bright, blue-vaulted skies.
Wake! the beamings of the sun
Wait for each and everyone;
Lilies pale and roses red
Rear, each one, your winsome head,
Spring, with kisses, comes to woo
Back to bloom each one of you.

See the grasses as they spring.
Answering the sunbeam's kiss;
Mark the robins which they fling
As in joy they echo this:

Wake! wake! bubble, little stream;
Wake! wake! pretty flowers, and beam;
Let your sweet perfume arise
To the bright, blue-vaulted skies.
Wake! the beamings of the sun
Wait for each and everyone;
Lilies pale and roses red
Rear, each one, your winsome head,
Spring, with kisses, comes to woo
Back to bloom each one of you.

The Country Club.

On Saturday last, at Oakland Shooting Park, the Country Club met for their regular monthly trap event. There was a large number present, in fact the great number of persons shooting is about the only drawback, if such it may be termed to the trap events of this body. There were twenty-five gentlemen shooting on this occasion, and when it is considered that some four of them shot up back scores, it may well be imagined that the waiting between rounds gave each of them more than ample time in which to steady their nerves. The birds were far better than average, but occasional "duffers" were found among them, such birds as never should be placed in the traps at all. To have anything like good uniform birds some one should inspect them with an eye to securing good, strong birds instead of allowing all the poor ones to be placed in the trap with the sole view of selling them to the clubs. A step in this direction would materially enhance the sport.

Messrs. J. D. Grant and H. E. Hall were the only gentlemen taking the eleven o'clock boat, and as a result they secured some excellent sport before the main body of sportsmen arrived.

Some of the leading shots of the Club failed to measure up with their general average at the trap.

The division of the shooters into classes has had much to do in increasing the interest in the sport, and we predict that it will not be long until it will become necessary for the Club to have two meetings at the trap each month in order to accommodate all desiring to participate in the sport.

The scores made on this occasion stand as follows:

The day was well spent when the main match was finished, and the pool shooting began. This was kept up until the daylight and birds were finished. The first pool in the thirty-yard class resulted in a division of the purse on fifth bird between Messrs. Sprague and Tallant; in the following one Messrs. Tallant and Wilson divided on fifth bird. In the next Mr. Wooster won on first bird.

Messrs. Alberton, Bourne and Richards, in the twenty-six yard class, shot off more pools, in the mean time, than were ever shot on these grounds in the same length of time. They enjoyed the class competition very much.

Messrs. Cnbrough, Golcher & Co. have erected a very handsome, substantial and convenient blue-rock shooting quarters at Oakland Shooting Park, and placed in position a fine set of electric pull largest traps for the use and accommodation of the shooters there. We predict that the sport will become quite popular here before the season is over. Everyone interested in trap shooting may enjoy this class of sport, as it is not nearly so costly as live-bird shooting.

On Wednesday of last week Messrs. Wm. Kittle and R. B. Woodward spent a very enjoyable hunt on Tinaloa Bay, bagging twenty-nine black brant. These birds are not common in his section and it was rare sport for the gentlemen to engage in bagging them. The birds are very fine table birds and a fine dish here.

The Lincoln Gun Club.

The Lincoln Gun Club held the first medal shoot of the season at their grounds at Alameda point on Sunday. The day was perfect and the membership attending was large. The sport was commenced at an early hour and continued during the day. The medal for the first class was won in the shoot-off by Cate, Burns and he breaking fifteen out of the twenty fired at in main match. In the second class Sutton came in an easy winner. The scores of the main events stood as follows:

The club has arranged for an open shoot on April 9th. A large programme has been arranged and all are invited to attend and participate in the shooting of the day. Much interest has been awakened in target shooting and the chances are that the year will witness much more of it here than has ever occurred heretofore.

An Excellent Beginning.

The following from the Oregonian, of Portland, will be good news to every true sportsman in the country. We trust Mr. McGuire will keep his eye on the field and arrest every one found hunting in violation of the law. The account runs:

"Fish and Game Protector McGuire received a telegram from Sheriff J. E. Noland, of Lane county, last Saturday afternoon, announcing the arrest of Messrs. Thompson, Mulford and Barr, and the Powers brothers, all of Foley Springs, for killing elk during the close season, and that all of the defendants had pleaded guilty. This is the first case that has come up in the game protector, and he is highly elated at its speedy termination. It seems as if it were an exceptionally aggravating case, as the lawbreakers are all highly respected citizens of the county, and were killing the elk, not for the meat, which is worthless at this time of the year, but simply to obtain the antlers and hides. It appears the hunters have recently bagged a number of fine bucks over on the McKenzie, about fifty miles east of Eugene City. Mr. McGuire's attention was called to the matter by a gentleman residing in Eugene, who learned that the guilty parties had been sending to a well-known gun store in that city for glass eyes, to be used in mounting the heads. The gentleman wrote, furthermore, that he thought that the sheriff of the county knew the facts of the case, but would not prosecute. When Mr. McGuire went to Eugene last week he looked into the matter, found plenty of evidence against the parties, and ascertained that the sheriff was willing to prosecute, and Mr. McGuire accordingly placed the matter in his hands. The dispatch received yesterday tells the rest of the story. The elk law is very stringent and provides that no elk shall be killed from December 1 to August 1. The minimum fine is $50 and the maximum $250, so that, in any case, the sheriff will receive $125 for his trouble, for the law provides that whoever secures the conviction of a breaker of the game laws shall receive one-half of the fine imposed.

"We found all of the evidence necessary against the guilty parties right in Eugene City," said Mr. McGuire, "but I did not expect to secure a conviction without a fight. A great deal of credit is due to Sheriff Nolan for the part he has taken in the matter, and I will say that if every sheriff and prosecuting attorney in the state would give me the assistance Sheriff Nolan has in this case, it would be but a short time before the game laws of the state would be religiously observed."

A Fowl's Gizzard.

A fowl's gizzard, where so many lost articles turn up, is a curious trap as well as a necessary vital organ of the fowl. Diamonds, pearls, coin, buttons, tacks, orange peel and about everything else save dynamite have been found in the gizzards of fowls.

A study of this organ is interesting. Experiments have demonstrated that what may be called the gastric juice in fowls has not sufficient power to dissolve their food without the aid of the grinding action of the gizzard. Before the food is prepared for digestion, therefore, the grains must be subjected to a triturating process, and such as are not sufficiently bruised in this manner before passing into the gizzard are there reduced to the proper state by its natural action.

The action of the gizzard is, in this respect, mechanical, this organ serving as a mill to grind the feed to pieces, and then, by means of its powerful muscles, pressing it gradually into the intestines in the form of pulp. The power of this organ is said to be sufficient to pulverize hollow globules of glass in a very short time and solid masses of the same substance in a few weeks. The rapidity of this process seems to be proportionate generally to the size of the bird. A chicken, for example, breaks up such substances as are received into its stomach less rapidly than the capon, while the goose performs the same operation sooner than either. Needles, and even lancets, given turkeys have been broken in pieces and voided without any apparent injury to the stomach. The reason undoubtedly is that the larger species of birds have thicker and more powerful organs of digestion.

It has long been the general opinion that, from some deficiency in the digestive apparatus, fowls are obliged to resort to the use of stones and gravel in order to enable them to dispose of the food which they consume. Some have supposed that the use of stones is to sheathe the gizzard in order to fit it to break into small fragments the hard, angular substances which might be swallowed. They have also been considered to have a medical effect. Others have imagined that they acted as absorbents for undue quantities of acids in the stomach or as stimulents to digestion, while it has even been gavelly asserted that they contribute directly to nutrition.

Repeated experiments, however, have established that pebbles are not at all necessary to the trituration of the hardest kinds of substances which can be introduced into their stomachs, and of course the usual food for fowls can be bruised without their aid. They do, however, serve a useful auxiliary purpose. When put in motion by the muscles they are capable of producing some effects upon the contents of the stomach, thus assisting to grind down the grain and separating its parts so that the digestive fluid or gastric juice comes more readily in contact with it.

The Prairie Hen.

Among our native wild birds, there are few that seem worthy of domestication, as they possess economic qualities that are of value says H. S. Babcock in American Agriculturist. Among these there is none that seems more worthy of a systematic attempt at domestication than the pinnated grouse or prairie hen. Its general color is yellowish-red, with black markings. It has a short and rounded tail. The male has two remarkable characteristics; the neck-tufts, composed of long narrow feathers, sometimes measuring five inches in length, and the pouches of wrinkled skin along the neck for two-thirds of its full extent, which are capable of inflation, and when filled with air, resemble quite closely medium-sized oranges. This resemblance to oranges extends not only to size, but to the color and peculiar surface of the fruit. In the winter the birds congregate in large flocks, in summer these flocks break up into smaller hodies, dispersed, probably, for the better performance of the operations of hatching and rearing the young. As the breeding season approaches, the males strut about like turkey cocks, dropping their wings to the ground, erecting the feathers on their neck and inflating their orange-like pouches. At this season, many meet in certain places in the western part of our country, about daybreak usually, and engage in their displays to attract the females, ending in severe battles. When the sun is up, the conquerors and conquered retire from the field. The pinnated grouse was once common in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, as well as on the prairies of the west, but, like the Indian, it has disappeared before the advancing wave of civilization. Its food is not dissimilar to that of domesticated poultry would obtain, if compelled to shift for themselves. It feeds upon seeds, berries, buds of trees and bushes, insects and the like. The flesh of this bird is good, and in the parts of the country where it is rare, is highly prized.

Could it be domesticated—and it is by no means impossible that it could—there would be added to the feathered stock about the farmyard a fowl with excellent flesh, a new figure to please the eye, and probably a fairly-good layer. It now lays quite as well as the original bird from which the domesticated fowls are supposed to be descended, and, under domestication, its laying powers might be equally increased. In its wild state it shows more or less variation, and as variation is increased under domestication, if it were domesticated its size might be enlarged, its color and markings more or less changed, its figure modified and its prolificacy augmented. In this way its economic properties might be greatly improved, and it might be found to be fully as useful and profitable as the fowls that now supply our table with delicate flesh and eggs.

Imported Song Birds.

The success of the efforts of our northern neighbors in Oregon in importing song birds is attested by the following, taken from the Oregonian: Speaking of this subject, it says:

"Reports are coming in from a number of places to Secretary Pilger, of the association for the importation of song birds, in regard to the return of the birds from their winter migration.

The song thrushes are back. One pair, which raised broods of young out near the cemetery, are again building in the same locality, and the male is regaling the people around there with his sweet songs. A number of other thrushes have been seen in the city and neighborhood. The black starlings have also returned, and a pair are building a nest near the heart of the city, where they nested last year. The male is frequently heard singing from the top of a church-spire. Mr. Frank Dekum went around to have a look at them the other day, and was much pleased to see them back. Goldfinches and chaffinches have returned in large numbers. The skylarks do not migrate. Flocks of fifteen or twenty of them were seen on the Riverside road while the snow was on the ground, and a number of them were fed by Mr. R. Scott, of Milwaukee, during the cold spell. They are now heard singing on fine days, but they have not had a chance to sing much of late. A number of black thrushes have been seen at Summit and in Washington and Marion counties. The only report in regard to nightingales last season came from Mr. Hughes, who lives near Silverton. He wrote that a pair of nightingales had been nesting near a spring on his place, and had raised broods there for two or three summers. He will report if they return again this season.

On the whole, the results of the importation of the song-birds have been very satisfactory."

The well-known sporting goods house of E. T. Allen Co., 416 Market Street, has been for some time past undergoing extensive alterations, enlargements and repairs, so that on stepping into the house to-day, one sees but little that is familiar save the smiling faces of the genial proprietor, and those of the clever gentlemen whom he has called to his aid in the transaction of so large a business as this house is conducting. The angling season is just opened and the rush for all kinds of lure and fishing tackle generally is most astonishing. If you don't see what you want call for ask for it and you will be cheerfully supplied.

"A track of moonlight on a quiet lake
Whose small waves on a silver-sanded shore
Whisper of peace, and with the low winds make Such harmonies as keep the woods awake.
A slumberous stretch of mountain-land far seen,
Where the low westerling day, with gold and green,
Purple and amber, softly blended, lies
The wooded vales and melts among the hills;
A vine-fringed river winding to its rest
On the calm bosom of a stormless sea."

White-Winged Blackbirds.

The white-winged blackbird consorting with the red-winged seems to have been observed by two many persons to permit an explanation on the mere theory of albinism, extensively as that freak in "coloration" among birds and animals is seen. A correspondent of ours, who is a good observer, makes an important statement when he says the white-winged specimens are smaller than the red-winged. That circumstance would seem to indicate a different species. Possibly there is an error. At any rate we will give the explanation of an observer who has watched the phenomenon of the white-winged blackbird with some persistence.

He says the white spot on the shoulders or upper wing is due after all to the curious effect of light reflected from a ruddy surface when the wing is at certain angles. In other words, it is a deception. He claims to have followed this out and proved it. It seems to be a fact that the red place on the blackbird's wing does change its appearance decidedly in certain aspects during night; but we do not present this theory as a conclusive explanation of the appearance.

Miss Lillian F. Smith, "The California Girl," who has startled the shooting world the country over, by exhibitions of her marvelous skill with the rifle, recently at Stockton, broke all previous records with the rifle by breaking 50 swinging glass balls in 40 seconds. Chain lightning work that was, we should say.
