Entries for the Los Angeles bench show must be made on or before Saturday next, the 8th of the month.

The deerhounds belonging to the estate of the late Dr. G. W. Winter are for sale. All information regarding the same may be had by addressing 1014 21st Street, this city.

We have a number of entry blanks for the Southern California Kennel Club's bench show which can be had on application. Remember, the entries close on April 8th and the show opens on the 19th running until the 22nd.

We bear well-authenticated rumors of several of the leading dogs of different breeds going to the bench show to be given in connection with the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago this summer. There are a few dogs on the Pacific Coast that will show up well there.

Mr. A. Russell Crowell has opened his kennels in East Oakland and has already a fine line of English setters and several cockers of the first quality on hand. He is a first-class experienced kennel man and any dogs placed under his charge will be taken care of in first-class shape.

The premium list of the Southern California Kennel Club's fifth annual bench show to be held on the 19th to 22d of the present month is before us. Entries close on April 8th; do not allow this fact to slip your mind; forward your entries now. Upwards of one hundred classes have been provided for, and the special prizes already listed is a long one and contains in the aggregate much of value.

Mr. C. A. Sumner, the efficient and gentlemanly Secretary of the Southern California Kennel Club, informs us that the coming bench show at Los Angeles to be held from the 19th to the 22d of this month, as indicated from the present outlook, will be a good one. The hall secured is ample in size, and convenient to the public. We trust that the club will realize its full expectations in giving the show.

Mr. J. M. Tracy, the well-known animal painter, especially of dogs, and judge of dogs and field trials, is dead. He passed away at Ocean Springs, Miss., on the 20th of last month. In his art Mr. Tracy found his chief pleasure and to his anxiety in this matter may justly be attributed his death, as he gave way to nervous prostration owing to over work while attempting to complete some paintings for exhibition at Chicago at the World's Fair.

We are informed that Mr. T. J. Watson, of this city, has purchased from A. L. Crans the black, white and tan English setter "Sam Weller" 14,001, A. K. C. Stud Book. By Rodrigue 3514 ex Dixie 8299; she by Dashing Berwyn 1535 ex Magnolia, she "Leicester" 148 ex Sanboons Nellie" 457. Sam is a dog of good type, was bred by J. Shelley Hndson. Coverton, Ky., whelped December 27, 1888, and was broken by Frank Richards who pronounced him one of the best dogs on game he ever handled.

In the coming bench show there will be a gathering of the kennel interests of this city and vicinity such as has never been witnessed before. One unaccustomed to keeping track of the importation of new dogs into the country will be surprised at the growth that has been made in this particular during the year past.

The work of preparation for the show is now well under way and every step is being carefully taken which looks to the insuring of a large and successful exhibit. An office for the transaction of business has been opened to-day at 628 Market street, where the public will receive all information regarding the show from efficient and gentlemanly clerks and attendants. Make your entries as rapidly as possible. Now is given the opportunity for every lover of the dog to do some effective work by making the show a success. Do not fail to do your part and all will be well.

Mr. George Raper.

We herewith present by courtesy of E. T. Allen Co. the picture of Mr. George Raper, who will judge the coming bench show in this city on May 3 to 6 inclusive, and at Los Angeles April 19-22; at Seattle May 17-20. Mr. Raper has made a very favorable impression in this country as a faithful, conscientious and intelligent judge of dogs, and there can be no doubt but that he will give the best of satisfaction in that capacity at the coming shows on this coast.

Instinct and Reason.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In reading the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of this week, I noticed an article headed "Instinct and Reason" taken from the Shooting Times. The stories told of dog Cyrus are indeed remarkable, and clearly demonstrate the almost human intelligence of that class of dogs. That crossing does not affect their intelligence is also proven by the following true story.

Several years ago I was presented with an ill-favored specimen of puppyhood, a cross between an imported Scotch collie and a Newfoundland bitch. In spite of the many adverse comments bestowed on it by numerous visitors at our home, the pup thrived, and began to develop into a handsome dog. He early evinced a desire to learn and was taught many clever tricks. When it became necessary to shut the poultry up at night Rex was always on hand, and many an obstinate chicken he coaxed out from under a neighboring barn and brought safely home. During the summer, after the breeding season was over, my Silver Wyandotte and Langshan females were allowed to run together in the garden. On occasions when it was desirable to separate them, all that was necessary was to give the word of command to Rex, and the birds of each variety were carefully driven into their respective quarters. The chickens never seemed to be afraid of the dog, and no material difference was ever noticed in their egg production on that account, a point which many poultry men take an opposite view of.

When Rex was a year old my brother Guy, then a lad of twelve, broke him to harness, and drove the dog daily, hooked to a light two-wheeled cart. At the approach of winter a sled was constructed with shafts, and the "turnout" became a familiar sight about the city.

At half-past eight every week-day morning, except Saturday, Rex always appeared at the front door of the house, ready to be harnessed to draw my brother to school. When the building was reached the sled was placed in the hall, and Rex turned loose. He invariably returned home and took up his post as guard on the porch. Intuitively he seemed to know the time of day, for at half-past eleven he was waiting at the school-house door, ready for the return trip.

The same performance was repeated in the afternoon. At four o'clock, instead of going home, the lad and his faithful canine friend made their way to the office of the Evening Herald. As soon as the paper went to press and the carriers received their bundles of dailies, Rex was ready for business again. The dog knew the residence of every subscriber on the route, and always waited patiently at the gate until the paper was delivered by my brother inside the door. By means of his dog-horse the papers were delivered in one third the time it would have required on foot. It seemed as though there was no limit to the dog's ability to learn, and a more obedient animal it would be hard to find. Unfortunately, he was either too good a watch dog or else he possessed the shrewdness of a detective.

At the approach of the mail carrier Rex was always greatly disturbed, and on several occasions tested the quality of the material used in the uniform of Uncle Sam's employee. The carrier usually called in the afternoon when all members of the family were away, and Rex evidently intended to do his duty in their absences.

One morning the dog was found stiff and cold in death, lying under a large cottonwood tree, a victim of poisoned meat. While suspicion perhaps pointed to the letter carrier as the guilty party, nothing was ever proved against him on that ground, but two years later he was convicted of stealing registered letters. The question which has often been raised, and never satisfactorily settled by members and friends of the family, is whether the dog really knew of the carrier's crooked work. Although on friendly terms with the grocer, the butcher and others who called at the house frequently, no advances made by the carrier were ever reciprocated, and to the day of his death Rex was the acknowledged enemy of Uncle Sam's "man in gray."

ARTHUR E. GRAFTON.

An Historic Dog.

Marie Louise's dog was a slim Italian greyhound, and as far as she was concerned, it proved to be a very winsome bit of dog flesh, says a writer in the Art Journal. It twined itself into her affections by its graceful ways. She had her other pets, her singing birds and her parrot in her boudoir in Vienna, a room where, we read, there was "scarcely a thing, down to the carpet on the floor, which was not the work of some loved hand." Madame Junot says when the archduchess became empress she had to leave her fawn colored favorite at Vienna, in the memoir of the Empress Marie Louise by St. Arnaud. He says it was at Munich "she was compelled to separate from a little dog she loved dearly, which the countess (Lazansky) had to take back to Vienna with her." The reason of this was that Napoleon did not like dogs. The empress cried bitterly when she found the plaintive-faced little hound had to return. She longed to keep her coaxing little friend beside her, because she knew it alone cared to be with her, not because she was wife of the man who had so much of Europe in his grasp, but simply because it worshipped her from the depth of its true little heart. "It was a cruel separation," writes Madame Junot, "and the empress and her favorite parted with a din of complaint." "The acquisition of a colossal empire did not console the sovereign for the loss of a little dog," says another historian. It is satisfactory to know that the timid, shrinking hound was not long parted from the empress. Berthier told Napoleon of Marie Louise's tears over leaving her dog, her feathered friends, her room made dear by cherished association, and Napoleon prepared a delectable surprise for his wife, a strategy to win her love. Leading her from the balcony of the Tuilleries, where he had presented her to the people who had thronged below, he led her, in wooderment as to her destination, up a dimly-lighted corridor. A woe-begone greyhound had been sitting in a room there, forlorn and puzzled, till it heard a step it knew, and, whining with impatience, sprang out when Napoleon opened the door. The empress greeted her recovered pet with effusion. She knew its adoration was genuine. The fickle multitude that cheered her might turn on her as they had turned on her grand-aunt, the queen of France; but this four-legged friend was genuine. In the room where her trusty favorite awaited her, Marie Louise found her birds, her music, "in fact every article in the same manner as she left them on quitting her paternal roof." Napoleon was pleased with the delight his kindly thoughtfulness gave the empress. Four years after this the dog left the Tuilleries with the empress and her son, and it returned to Vienna with her. These historic dogs of France were no time-servers. They took little heed of reverse of fortune or change of dynasty, well content if allowed to attend their owners in prison or palace, to the throne or the scaffold. Lord Bacon says: "Take an example of a dog and mark what a generosity and courage he will put on when he finds himself maintained by a man who to him is instead of a God." A dog has no wish to command. Ich dien is their motto, and more willing, easily-remunerated servants it is impossible to find. Their fidelity is proverbial, their constancy is not to be bought. If there is a life beyond this for them as well as their masters, they will not only love them "to the death" here, but "out beyond into the dream to come."

The Pacific Kennel Club met on Tuesday evening last at 21 Kearney street for the purpose of electing a president to fill the position heretofore held so acceptably by Hon. Ramon E. Wilson, who, owing to the pressure of professional business, resigned, feeling as he does that owing to the great amount of work before the organization that an active man who is in thorough touch with the kennel interests and who has the time to attend to the duties of the office should occupy the chair of chief executive officer of the organization.

The whole kennel interests regret, to a man, that Mr. Wilson has felt compelled to take this step, as all recognized him to be the right man for the place, and all remember the able work which he has accomplished in bolding the club together and working under the most discouraging circumstances for the elevation of the kennel interests of the Pacific Coast. Now that he sees the club on the high road to success, in popular favor and without a cent of obligation and plenty of money in the treasury he feels like taking a well-earned rest which no one who knows ought of the circumstances of the post will say that he is not richly entitled to. Mr. Edgar W. Briggs was elected to the position of president of the club, and there can be no doubt but that the duties of the office will be faithfully and ably discharged by him. The success of the coming show is already fully assured, and with the spirit manifest for the upbuilding of the kennel interests by the large membership there can be no doubt of a full representation at the coming show.

Stud book number 31,017, bred by R. J. Meredith. This dog is a beauty, as well as being one of the best bred dogs in the land.

The following amusing telegram appeared in the newspapers of this city on Wednesday morning last: "A great sensation has been caused in sporting circles by the inexplicable disappearance of the famous racer and winner of the Waterloo Cup, Fullerton. The horse was taken from the stable of Colonel North at Etham Saturday." When it is remembered that "Fullerton" is the famous greyhound, winner of the Waterloo Cup, and that no prize of that nature was ever offered for a horse race, the joke is apparent.

Mr. Edgar W. Briggs, who has been chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. Ramon E. Wilson as President of the Pacific Kennel Club, is a good, strong man for the position, and we predict, for the club, a successful career under his administration.

ROD.

The Sun-Kissed Sea.

(CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.)

A beauty rare beyond compare
Is sun-kissed sea;
No scene so calm, no scene so fair
As this to me.

When floods of light dispel the night,
The morning's kiss,
On waves which sparkle with delight
Is loveliness.

When ends my day I trust and pray
My voyage be,
O'er waters where some golden ray
May kiss the sea.

Beautiful meadows down by the river,
Dotted with daisies and buttercups sweet,
Jeweled with dewdrops which sparkle and quiver,
When night before morning beats hasty retreat;
Beautiful meadows, beautiful night,
Beautiful, beautiful morning light.

Black Bass.

Shall the black bass be introduced into the waters of Oregon? asks S. H. Greene in The Review.

Our sportsmen are now considering this question, and the interest manifested is indicative of its importance. Even the daily papers are printing papers on the subject, but thus far nothing has been presented upon which an intelligent opinion can be founded.

Of course, the objections urged to the introduction of the bass are founded the theory that they will be injurious to the salmon and trout. If this theory is correct it must be accepted as sufficient, notwithstanding the fact that the days of "the goldsprinkled living arrow of the water" are numbered. Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of the Leland Stanford University, the acknowledged king of American ichthyologists, and the best-informed man living on the salmon and trout of the Pacific Coast, says on page 19 of bulletin No. 4 issued by the Board of Fish Commissioners of California: "This is the last generation of trout fishers. The children will not be able to find them. I know of but one river in North America by the side of which you will find no paper collar or other evidence of civilization. It is the Nameless river."

Painful as this contemplation must be to all lovers of the gentle art we are forced to recognize it as a fact; but our love for the trout and our reverence for the happy past would forbid the premeditated introduction of any other fish that would jeopardize his rights.

As we view the matter, two propositions are involved, each entitled to consideration viz: First, would the bass imperil the salmon and trout? Second, conceding the affirmative of the first proposition to what degree would the acquisition of the bass repair our loss?

It is very doubtful whether the bass would to any great degree interfere with salmon and trout. Particularly may this be asserted of the large-mouthed bass. M. Dolomieu, on page 402 of The Fisheries and Fishery Industries of the U. S., prepared under the direct supervision of the U. S. Fish Commission avers: "The smallmouths are said, generally, to prefer deep or swift, cool waters, while the largemouths live in muddy, black pools, or in the shelter of old stumps or ledges. We do not seek the mountain trout in such waters."

He further says that through private enterprise and the labors of state fish commissioners nearly every available body of water in New England and the Middle States have been filled with bass. So it seems that the speckled trout of the Atlantic States and the bass are now living in peace and harmony. Mr. William S. Downs, Birmingham, Conn., State Fish Commissioner, while on a visit to Portland last August was questioned on this matter. He stated in unqualified terms that the bass would not injure the salmon and trout to any appreciable extent.

He further stated that a portion of the Willamette river, which he had seen, particularly that portion about the mouth of the Clackamas, would be a paradise for the bass. Dr. James H. Henshall, author of "Book of the Black Bass," superintendent of the fish exhibit of the Chicago World's Fair, says on page 262 of "Fishing with the Fly" that the bass inhabit larger and deeper streams than the trout.

However, we expect to soon be able to publish the opinions of the most eminent authorities in America on this matter. The direct question has been put to them and we are only waiting replies.

On the second proposition we must confess that the fate of our beloved brook trout is sealed, and that the bass is his appointed successor. Dr. Henshall says: "That the bass will eventually become the leading game fish of America is my oft-expressed opinion and firm belief. This result, I think, is inevitable; if for no other reasons, from force of circumstances occasioned by climatic conditions and the operation of immutable natural laws. Another prominent cause of the decline and fall of the brook trout is the erection of dams, saw-mills and factories upon trout streams, which, though to be deplored, can not be prevented; the march of empire and the progress of civilization cannot be stayed by the honest, though powerless protests of anglers. But while the ultimate fate of the brook trout is sealed beyond peradventure, we have the satisfaction of knowing, that, in the black bass we have a fish equally worthy, both as to game and edible qualities, and which, at the same time, is able to withstand and defy many of the causes that will, in the end, effect the annihilation and extinction of the brook trout."

Charles Hallock, the poet angler, has said: "No doubt the bass is the appointed successor of the trout; not through heritage, nor selection, nor by interloping, but by foreclosure. Truly, it is sad to contemplate, in the not distant future, the extinction of a beautiful race of creatures, whose attributes have been sung by all the poets; but we regard the inevitable with the same calm philosophy with which the astronomer watches the burning out of a world, knowing that it will be succeeded by a new creation. As we mark the soft vari-tinted flush of the trout disappear in the eventide, behold the sparkle of the coming bass as he leaps into the morning of his glory!

"We hardly know which to admire the most, the velvet livery and the charming graces of the departing courtier, or the flash of the armor-plates on the advancing warrior. No doubt the bass will prove himself a worthy substitute for his predecessor, and a candidate for a full legacy of honors."

Fishes of America.

One of the most interesting foreign species (South American) is of the genus Doras, of which some twenty-five species are known, all from tropical America. Gunther tells us that these fishes have excited attention by their habit of traveling, during the dry season, from a piece of water about to dry up, in quest of a pond of greater capacity. These journeys are occasionally of such length that the fish spends whole nights on the way, and the bands of travellers are sometimes so large that the Indians who happen to meet them fill many baskets of the prey thus placed in their hands. The Indians supposed that the fish carry a supply of water with them, but they have no special organs, and can only do so by closing the gill openings or by retaining a little water between the plates of their bodies. Hancock, the naturalist, says they make regular nests, in which they cover up their eggs with care and protect them, male and female uniting in this parental duty until the eggs are hatched. The nest is constructed, at the beginning of the rainy season, of leaves, and is sometimes placed in a hole scooped out in the beach.

Other foreign species have strikingly physical features, singular habits and unusual habitats. One, peculiar to the river Nile, never grows longer than one and a half inches; another, called "Prenadillas" by the natives, are said by them to be ejected in great numbers from the bowels of active volcanoes. In others, instead of the usual barbels, there is developed a thick hirsute growth in the shape of a huge bunch of bristles hanging from the anterior end of both jaws; some are nearly eel-shaped, with a prolonged snout; others, which inhabit mountain streams, are furnished with an adhesive apparatus, situated near the throat, which enables them to hold on to stones, thus preventing the current from sweeping them away. Another foreign species possesses an electrical dynamo of considerable power.

It is in one of the silurids, a catfish of South America that we see developed a strong and unusual maternal love; male fishes, as a rule, take care of the young, but Nature, in this case, has provided the female with the means, and devolved upon her the duty of protection. During the period of propagation, the integuments of the lower side of the flat trunk of the female assume a soft and spongy texture. After depositing the eggs, the female attaches them to, and presses them into, the spongy integument by merely lying upon them. She carries them upon her body as the Surinam toad carries the ova on her back. When the eggs are hatched the excrescence on the skin disappears, and the abdomen becomes as smooth as before. Silas Sterns tells us of a similar instance of paternal care shown by one of our native salt-water fish—Arius felis. The spawn is deposited in the sand and impregnated with the milk. One of the parent fish (sex not stated) then takes the eggs in its mouth, and, by some movement fixes them against the gills or between the leaves of the gills. The eggs are carried in this position until the embryo fish are hatched and have become perfectly able to take care of themselves. The eggs when full-size resemble white grapes, and sometimes the jaws of the parent fish are much distended by the eggs and young, presenting a comical appearance. South American waters, which teem with curious phases of fish life, furnishes a dwarf catfish, the largest of which appears not to reach the growth of half of an inch—a parasitic catfish.

It is the common impression that the catfish delights only in sluggish or roiled waters, and that any other habitat is one of necessity, not of choice, but we find a South American genus, the majority of which occupy waters of very high altitudes, up to 14,000 feet above the level of the sea. The streams of the Andes are full of these fish. Again, the channel cat of our native streams, a clipper-built fish, certainly exceeds all others in flavor and gameness when taken from waters flowing from mountain sources. The catfish from the Schuylkill River, near Philadelphia, has passed into local history, owing to its former popularity among them bon vivants of that staid city, with whom a social festival was not well rounded when Wisackickon "catfish and waffles" were omitted from the menu. These fish lived and thrived in the Schuylkill River when the acid factories and woolen mills were evils of the future, but to-day any visitor to that city who chances to be an early riser, will hear the shrill cry of "c-a-a-a-t-fish," and see balancing upon the heads of sturdy huckster women large wooden platters filled with catfish, skinned and disemboweled, ready for the pan. And a large sale of these truly delicious fish is made daily, but they are imported, as few, if any, "to the manor born" are left in the river from whence the drinking water of that large city is taken. The catfish can't live in it, but the people have to drink it. Fish of the same choice species are very abundant in the Potomac River, and I hear that many Washingtonians prefer them as a pan fish to any other local variety. It may be well to add that these catfish are best for table when the hodies measure from six to eight inches; the heads are never served up. A catfish of this size when taken from clear, sweet water and properly cooked (fried in butter and rolled in Indian meal), has, to our taste, a delicious savor about it second to no fresh-water fish that firts a fin. With this fact in view, and the facility with which they can be propagated, it should become the duty of the United States Fish Commission to distribute them in extenso. They are, in truth, what was unhappily trumpet-tongued of the carp years ago—a farmer's fish. Tenacious of life, indifferent to environment and prodigal in reproduction, they can be safely transplanted to any distance, placed in a ditch of turbid water, and, with out care or artificial feeding, they will increase enormously, for they have an old hen's paternal anxiety and incessant care for the young. Bullhead is an appropriate name for them, for they have the pugnacity of the bulldog in defense of their fry. All the farmer will have to do with his ditch-raised catfish when he wants a fish breakfast, is to select the desired number from his stock fish and put them in the running water of the spring house for a few days; the fish will scour themselves internally and externally, and are then fit for a queen's table. Before killing them, we stall-feed our hogs and pen up our poultry, that they may be free from the taint of the har-yard and of the strong food obtained by foraging, and we should, whenever practicable, adopt the same treatment for our fish, particularly those that live in waters receiving the refuse of towns and cities. Our noble game fish, the black bass, is not eaten by many anglers, owing to the earthy taste imparted to its flesh by the impure waters from which it is taken. Under this treatment, it will equal as a food fish its congener of a spring-fed habitat. Even the filthy and abhorrent carp is said to become fairly palatable after being confined in spring waters for several weeks, especially if boiled in beer, which happily neutralizes the natural flavor of the fish.

The Fourth New England Charr.

Monday evening, March 13, Professor John D. Quackenbos read a paper before the Biological Section of the New York Academy of Sciences, at Columbia College, upon, "The Sunapee Lake Trout or Saibling, a Fourth New England Charr." To illustrate the subject of his paper, Prof. Quackenbos procured four life-size pictures of a male and female four pounder, in summer and late autumn coloring says A. N. Cheney in Shooting and Fishing. A fine water color illustrating the most prevalent deformity, also life size. A painting of the yearling and of the eggs. A magnificent mounted six-pound specimen by Fraine, in full plumage. Specimens from half a pound to three pounds in alcohol, and a wall-map which Prof. Quackenbos made, showing the actual and traditional habitat of the fish. The paper itself was the result of some years of investigation into the history of this much-discussed fish, in which the various views of scientists and laymen were carefully considered, and reconciled as far as possible with the author's intimate personal knowledge of his subject, and was an exhaustive summing up of all the facts, and some of the fancies, obtainable concerning the habits, habitat, and history of the Sunapee saibling. The three New England charrs, which, with the Sunapee saibling, made four for that favored division of the United States, are the brook trout, fontinalis, lake trout, namaycush, and blue-back, ogossaa. This leaves out the Dublin pond trout, Salvelinus agassizii, which Garman has described as a variety of the brook trout.

The discovery of the Sunapee saibling is thus recorded: "As far as is known, the first specimens of this new fish to be distinguished from the well-known forms were taken in Sunapee lake, Merrimack county, New Hampshire, during the summer of 1881, by Lieut. Ransom F. Sargent and Mr. Alonzo Cheney, respectively of New London and Wilmot, experienced anglers who immediately recognized, in the three individuals captured by them, specimens of a salmonid distinct from the namaycush and from the brook trout of the region. The fish weighed from two to three pounds each." This, added to the fact that the writer of the paper had in his possession, at Sunapee lake, in the summer of 1882, a four-pound specimen of this saibling, is the great stumbling block to the theory or direct importation of saibling eggs previous to the identical year that the fish were discovered in Sunapee lake. To show that science sometimes gropes in the dark before coming to the light, it is noted that when specimens of the Sunapee fish were sent to the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Cambridge, Mass., and to Dr. T. H. Bean, Curator of the Department of Fishes, National Museum, they were pronounced, at both centers, varieties of the brook trout, although Garman said that "a knowledge of the younger stages of this fish from the same locality may lead to a separation of the form;" and Bean, upon a more minute examination, pronounced the fish "a salvelinus or ogossaa type, but of so enormous a size that he did not suspect its relation to that species."

I need not rehearse the subsequent discussion which took place in Shooting and Fishing, in which Bean called the Sunapee saibling a new species with the specific name Salvelinus aureolus, and Garman held that it was the Alpine saibling, S. alpinus, and Jordan compromised on S. alpinus aureolus. Col. Hodge is given deserved credit for the persistency with which he adhered from the beginning to his belief that the fish was new to the waters in which it is found; that is, new in the sense that it had not been described previous to its discovery in Sunapee, for he claims that it is aboriginal to Sunapee and other waters; and he is quoted as making out a very good case, except in his claim that perch destroyed the saibling until black bass were introduced that destroyed the perch. This seems so utterly untenable as to weaken an otherwise plausible defense of his position. Prof. Quackenbos says that the new salvelinus is represented, so far as is positively known, in Sunapee lake, Dan Hole pond, Carroll county, N. H., and Flood's pond, in the town of Otis, Maine, three distinct drainage basins in New England. In his anatomical description of the Sunapee saibling, Prof. Quackenbos was assisted by Dr. Bashford Dean of the Department of Biology, Columbia College, and arrives at different conclusions from those of Bean and Garman: "Such differences in individuals from the same locality would seem to impair the value of anatomical peculiarities as diagnostic marks."

Perhaps the latest evidence on this subject is Jordan's, who says that in the lakes of Greenland and the eastern part of British America the European charr is as abundant as it is in Europe, a fact which has only lately been made manifest, and Prof. Quackenbos adds: "It certainly does not require a very serious exercise of one's reasoning powers to carry this charr across the Canadian border into Northwestern Maine." The paper says in conclusion: "The Sunapee charr is, undoubtedly, a representation of the European form; but reasons have been given why it is believed to be a native of this Continent. It differs no more extensively from the several European varieties, than they do, among themselves. Von dem Borne, Prof. Benecke and Delmar, Wittmack of Berlin, all speak of important differences in form, size and color, according to age, sex, season and habitat. All authorities allude to the solid sea green or dark blue of the back, the yellowish sides, and the red or orange belly . . . as to spots, there is endless variety. Some forms have none; some, large spots; others, small—yellow, orange, red—and singularly, in certain species, each spot is surrounded by a white ring or halo. The fins take their color from the back and sides, and have the broad white band. . . . We confidently recommend this charr to the attention of State Commissioners interested in placing a valuable and easily propagated food-fish within reach of the people. It is facile princeps, from its rush at the cast smelt to the finish at the breakfast table. These who best know it most enthusiastically endorse, with a light amendment, Prof. Jordan's apothegm: 'Nothing higher can be said of a salmonid than that it is a (Sunapee) charr.'"

Mutuels vs. Book Betting.

We expect to see the mutual system of betting very popular on this coast ere long, and it is probable that our racing associations will inaugurate a new way of doing business, viz., instead of selling on two or three horses, and then the field, tickets on each horse (separately) will be disposed of in the mutual box. And then there is the "place mutuel," thus far something almost unheard of on this coast. This can and probably will be one of the innovations in the line of betting in this part of the world shortly. At least it is our idea that fully as many place tickets could be disposed of as straight, and probably a great many more. There would be no "field," each horse being represented by a ticket on which is printed a certain number. At the East the place mutuel box is liberally patronized at all times wherever it is put up, and the beauty of this method of betting is that it almost invariably pays better than if the same amount had been invested with a hookmaker.

Usually a "pencil," in a race where there are five or more entries, gives you one-third the odds for place that he does straight—up to 8 to 1. For instance, where the odds are 3 to 1 straight against a horse, even money will be offered that the horse does not run first or second; 6 to 1 straight, 2 to 1 a place; 8 to 1 straight, 3 to 1 a place; 10 to 1 straight, 4 to 1 a place, etc. Pick up any paper that prints the amounts the place mutuels pay, and it will at once be seen that the mutual box is the place to play the money for place, the odds being generally from 5 to 40 per cent. better. We will instance a few cases. At North Bergen, N. J., on March 21st, in a five-horse race, Azrael went to the post at 10 to 1 straight in the hooks and 2 to 1 against her chances of getting a place. Therefore, had one wagered $2 in the books $4 would have been won. Place mutuels tickets ($2) on this race paid $6.25, or a win of $4.25. In the next race Khaftau was at 3 to 1 straight and even money a place, and yet the field mutuel ticket (several horses lunched, too) paid on that event $4.15 (15 cents more). In another race the hookmakers offered no place odds at all on Firefly, who went to the post a favorite at 5 to 2 on. Yet the $2 place mutuels paid $2.30. Against Westchester the hookmakers on the same date offered place odds of 1 to 3—in other words, bettors were asked to bet $3 to win $1. In this case the $2 place mutuels paid $2.95, or 95 cents profit on $2—over 30 per cent. better odds than the hookmakers offered. And so it goes, the best inducements being offered bettors to play in the place mutuel boxes in nine cases out of ten.

In Goodwin's Guide the following example is given of how to calculate the amounts place mutuels will pay, as follows:

|---------------------------------------------------------------|----------|----------------------|
| Number of tickets sold..... | 1,924 | |
| Reduce to dollars..... | 5 | |
| | $9,620 | $9,620 |
| Deduct 5 per cent..... | 5 | |
| | $481 00 | 481 |
| | | Balauce..... $9,139 |
| Add together the number of tickets sold on each horse, i. e., | | |
| Come-to-Taw..... | 202 | |
| Strideaway..... | 93 | |
| Reduce to dollars..... | 295 | |
| | 5 | $1,475 |
| Deduct this amount from $9,139, i. e., | $9,139 | |
| | 1,475 | |
| | $7,664 | |

Divide $7,664 in halves, which makes $3,832 each. Divide $3,832 by 202, which is the number of tickets sold on Come-to-Taw, and also by 93, which is the number sold on Strideaway.

| COME-TO-TAW. | | STRIDEAWAY. | |
|---------------|--|--------------|--|
| 202)832(41.95 | | 93)832(41.20 | |
| 202 | | 372 | |
| 1812 | | 112 | |
| 1616 | | 93 | |
| 1960 | | 190 | |
| 1818 | | 186 | |
| 1420 | | 40 | |
| 1010 | | | |

To each of the above results (18.95 and 41.20) must be added the original investment money of $5 each, which was deducted in the first instance, so that Come-to-Taw pays $23.95 and Strideaway $46.20 for each place ticket.

In the event of two horses running a dead heat for first place, the money is divided in the same manner as in the division of the place money in the Come-to-Taw-Strideaway case.

When two horses run a dead heat for second place the division is made as follows: The winner receives his full share of half the place money, and the two dead heaters receive half each of the balance or one-fourth each of the whole.

The "field," in the mutuels, comprises one or more horses which are "impinged" together and sold as a single horse.

If a horse run in a race, whose name is not included in the mutuels, and that horse should win, all the straight money goes to the horse which comes in second, and the place money is divided between the second and third horses.

Once the public realize that the hookmakers make a big "percentage" hook at all times, or, in other words, have a large percentage the best of the bettors, no matter which horse wins, there will be an urgent demand on all jockey clubs to do away with hookmakers and hookmaking. At no time is more than 5 per cent. commission charged on the sale of Paris mutuels, and only 3 per cent. is taken from the sales of auction pools, yet our hookmakers do not hesitate to make a book where, no matter who wins, they have anywhere from 10 to 30 per cent. the best of the game.

Following are a few samples—races that took place here in 1892, with the correct odds. We first give the name of the horse and the odds against its chances. Then follows, in the next column of figures to the right, the amount the hookmakers could take in on the horse at the prevailing odds to make a "round" $1,000 hook, where, no matter who wins, they (the bookies) prove winner. The last column of figures shows how much the pencil would pay out; for instance, if Castro won he would dispose of $1,040; if Oporto was successful, $975, and so on.

RACINE STAKES, RUN APRIL 30, 1892.

| | Odds. | Am't. Bet. | Total of Ticket. |
|---------------|------------|------------|------------------|
| Castro..... | 8 to 5 | $ 400 | $ 1,040 |
| Sir Reel..... | 2 1/2 to 1 | 200 | 1,015 |
| Orrin..... | 3 to 1 | 250 | 1,000 |
| Alliance..... | 3 to 1 | 250 | 1,000 |
| Oporto..... | 12 to 1 | 75 | 975 |
| | | $1,265 | |

This sort of hook (about 26 per cent. in favor of the hookmaker) was actually made on the 30th day of April at Bay District track, and what does it show? Simply this—if Orrin won the hookmaker would pay out $1,000 and take in $1,265, pay out $1,000 on Alliance, less on Oporto, $1,040 on Castro—in short, would be anywhere from $225 to $290 winner, no matter which horse proved successful. The following "hook" was made at the fall meeting, and is only a fair sample of most of the "games" the public are asked to patronize:

| | Odds. | Am't. Bet. | Total of Ticket. |
|----------------------|---------|------------|------------------|
| Joe Cotton..... | 8 to 5 | $ 400 | $ 1,040 |
| Joe Harding..... | 6 to 1 | 145 | 1,015 |
| Jack the Ripper..... | 15 to 1 | 55 | 975 |
| Nell Flaherty..... | 6 to 1 | 145 | 1,015 |
| Ida Glenn..... | 5 to 1 | 165 | 990 |
| Joe Hooker J..... | 20 to 1 | 50 | 1,050 |
| Jim R..... | 5 to 1 | 165 | 9,905 |
| Jennie Mintzer..... | 30 to 1 | 30 | 930 |
| Typesetter..... | 30 to 1 | 30 | 930 |
| | | $1,185 | |

Of course this is only about 18 per cent. in the pencil's favor, but if the bookmakers got an "inkling" that Joe Cotton was a sure winner and rubbed the odds against him out all around the ring, as they often do, when one, smarter than the average does this sort of thing, the outside bettors would have an excellent chance to win, wouldn't they? In the race that Gusdaloupe won at the fall meeting with odds of 30 to 1 against him at the opening it is said a certain hookmaker did not quote any odds at all against the horse, and consequently made a clean scoop of everything, wagered in his hook. But by "holding out" at all times a 30 to 1 shot most thinking men would be led to the conclusion that the hookmaker in question "knew suthin'" and that "suthin'" came out all right—for his pocketbook, if not for his reputation. When hookmaking is the only method of betting that can be reached by the smaller speculator around a race course these small bettors should be protected, and it would not be a bad idea for the racing association to appoint men whose duty it shall be to watch the fluctuations in the betting, and when the odds are suddenly cut down by a bookmaker or bookmakers without apparent justification or where a pencil fails to quote any odds against a horse's chances he should be made to explain his actions to the satisfaction of the judges, if called on. Doubtless this hauling over the coals would result in much good, so far as the purification of the turf was concerned, and at the same time the betting public would be accorded the protection that they deserve.

Blood Horse Association Directors Meet.

Last Tuesday night the Board of Directors of the Blood Horse Association met in Parlor A of the Palace Hotel to dispose of several important matters and arrange the preliminaries to the spring meeting which begins to-day. Thos. H. Williams presided, in the absence of Col. Thornton. The matter that took up most of the time of the racing officials was the disharment (as a hookmaker) of Henry Schwartz, who is, among other pencils, denied the privilege of doing business at the spring meeting on this side of the bay on account of his making a hook at Oakland when forbidden to do so by the local racing organization.

A long document was read coming from Schwartz setting forth that he, the bookmaker-manager, had endeavored to set the dates of his Oakland merry-go-round so that they would not conflict with the Blood Horse meeting, and (out of the goodness of his heart, it is presumed) had postponed its commencement even until the California Jockey Club meeting came to a close (of course scarcity of horses did not cause Mr. S. to change his plans). Mr. Schwartz's document in effect said that his meeting was a model one in point of fairness (this sounds well when the accent is put on the word "fairness"), and that at no time had he done anything that was calculated to sully the good name racing enjoyed on this coast. (As a matter of fact people sometimes get tired of seeing a lot of short-hred, drummed-to-death dogs mosey around a track, and it injures meetings where a higher class of racing is given). Bookmaker Schwartz requested the directors to thoroughly investigate his conduct, if they suspected crookedness on his part. In conclusion the well-known shouter of odds submitted his lease of Oakland track to the officials, which lease he had obtained from Ben Wright before he learned of the intention of the Blood Horse directors to prevent him from making a hook at the spring meeting. In his opinion the disharment edict would be very severe on himself and fellow-shouters if allowed to go into effect. When the secretary had finished reading the communication Adolph Spreckles moved that the directors consider the matter in executive session, and the motion prevailed.

Schwartz was called into the room, but, notwithstanding the "heart-rendering" tale of woe that came from the odds-shouter of the harrowed capitalist, the officials remained unmoved, and the resolution stands in its entirety as originally adopted. This must be a bitter pill to a man who thought himself such an important, can't-do-without me factor in affairs of the California turf as the hookmaker fondly imagined himself not so very long ago.

No action was taken in the case of Jockey Claude Burlingame, whose entries have been refused and who has besides been given to understand that he cannot ride at the coming meeting of the Blood Horse Association. The jockey is accused of trying to bribe parties controlling Queen Bee to pull that mare, so that his (Burlingame's) entry, Patricia, could win. The young man is also said by a prominent turfman to have "doped" Red Prince, so that the horse not only lost, but was in a lamentable condition, physically, for a long time after the race mentioned. Burlingame, however, claims to be able to prove that he backed the horse, and declares that he has not been treated fairly by the P. C. B. H. A. officials.

Pneumatic Sulky Frames and Tires.

The cleverest device in the way of a pneumatic-tire attachment for a sulky, is that made by the "Victor" concern of San Francisco. These wheels and tires may be fitted to any make of sulky, and when fitted, all side shake, rattle and jar, is adjusted completely by the sleeve nut and bolt arrangement, which is both simple and effective. The pneumatic-tire offered by this concern, is one that any boy can repair in ten minutes. To provide against loss of a race on account of a possible accident to the pneumatic-tire, extra inner tubes may be had at a slight cost. These tubes are the life of the tire, and are quickly pulled into the tire, the tire then blown up hard, and the sulky ready for instant use. The "Victor" pneumatic is so simple and strong, it commends itself to every horseman who proposes using a pneumatic sulky during the season. They are made by the Overman Wheel Company, Bicycle Makers, 309 Larkin street, San Francisco.

Thrush in Horses' Feet.

Little is known about the origin of the term "thrush" as applied to a diseased condition of the "frog" or bold triangular centre, visible on the ground surface of the horse's foot, but the cause or causes giving rise to the disease are well known, and, therefore, should be understood.

Filth is the chief factor in the development of thrush. Some owners believe thrush to be contagious, but there is no contagion about it at all, for removal of the filth, clean the feet, and often the disease will cure itself. Canker of the foot is a contagious disease, however, and is due to a parasite of vegetable origin.

Mares suffer from thrush oftener in the hind feet than do studs or geldings, who suffer in the fore feet principally. The reasons for this is obvious.

Some animals are predisposed to thrush, and those animals suffering from navicular trouble often have thrush as a symptom. Therefore, when purchasing a horse with thrush in one foot, or in both, for that matter, be sure you are not buying trouble as well as a horse.

Thrush is an unhealthy state of the frog, accompanied with an offensive ichorous discharge from its cleft or central tissue, not necessarily producing lameness, except when the frog strikes a hard stone, but as the disease advances from neglect, then the deep-seated structures become inflamed and the foot hot and tender.

Thrush may be associated with internal disease of the foot, as before mentioned, in navicular disease, but horses are often left with thrush or a tendency that way after laminitis. So that all cases will not respond to treatment that we will now advise for ordinary cases of this disease; therefore, if this course of treatment fails look for a chronic cause, giving rise to thrush and needing special internal treatment as well as external. Cases of ordinary thrush will yield to calomel, and in using it the following directions should be observed:

Cleanse the stable, and use some of the mazy sweet antiseptics to sweeten the stable atmosphere. Then wash the feet clean every night after work, then dry the feet. Have at hand an ounce of calomel, four ounces of the compound tincture of aloes and myrrh and some medicated cotton. Take a feather, dip it into the tincture and work it into the cleft. Do this thoroughly. Then put some dry calomel into the fissure or cleft with a paper-knife or thin piece of hard wood. After the calomel is gotten to the bottom of the cleft take a piece of the cotton and force it into the cleft with the paper-knife, so as to hold the calomel there, and, at the same time, keep the dirt and grit out. Repeat this every night until cured.

If the horse is of full hshit a good dose of physic will expedite matters, and if the stable is damp alter it.

Electricity For Cribbing Horses.

A gentleman living in a village a few miles north has a valuable six-year-old trotting horse which some time ago formed the very bad habit of cribbing; that is, it would chew at the wood of the manger and parts of its stall, says the Utica Observer. The habit grew and grew till he was cribbing so constantly that he lost flesh and did not eat a sufficient quantity of food. The owner sent a statement of the condition of things to Thomss P. Nightingale, and asked him if he could suggest a remedy. Mr. Nightingale thought the matter over and replied "Yes." He then went to work at the arrangement described hereafter.

He had an induction coil wound. Three cells of a battery were used. A flexible cord was led from it to the horse's back under the surcingle. The stall was lined with tin where the horse had the habit of chewing or cribbing. The connection was made so that when the animal touched his lips to the tin at any point the electric current ran through his head and along his back to the spine under the surcingle. This was enough to make him turn away his nose and lips with all the disgust an equine can show. After vain efforts to touch any part of either the manger or stall without getting the dose he gave it up, and the result is the animal is again eating and digesting his food naturally, and has lost his taste for manger and stall wood.

The Sale Next Tuesday.

The little collection to be sold at auction next Tuesday at the stables corner of Haight and Cole streets embraces representatives of many of the choicest trotting families. The Director filly Inspiration, out of Regina, by Electioneer, is pronounced by competent judges to be the acme of perfection. Her dam, Regina, is one of the few of Electioneer's daughters out of a great producing dam ever offered at auction. She is a grand individual, large, strongly-huilt, perfect in shape and disposition, and a pure-gaited trotter. She ought to be placed in a trainer's hands, and with little work will enter the 2:30 list. Besides these two choice ones there are a number of colts and fillies that are the making of first-class roadsters, if they never go on a race track. They have good dispositions, are well-trained single and double, and with the little work they have had show great speed. Sale commences at eleven o'clock.

Great Chicago May Sale.

F. J. Berry & Co. are in receipt of numerous rich consignments from the leading stock farms of Kentucky, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, California and many other States representing gilt-edged breeding, and including several full brothers and sisters to well-known performers. Several consignments are listed of thoroughbred Kentucky and Missouri saddle horses, besides a grand array of premium carriage teams and high-class roadsters, besides several trotters and pacers, well-known performers in the Western Circuit. Entries close April 6th. Send for entry blanks to F. J. Berry & Co., Union Stock Yards, Chicago.

Chas. Smart Training Stable, South Meriden, Dec. 2, 1891: DEAR SIR—One of my horses in training had a splint and sore tendon, which made him lame. I blistered him, but he was no better, so I decided to try your "Absorbine," which I did with the best results. The lameness began to improve at once, and was completely cured in ten days. He has been going square ever since. Send me one-half dozen bottles at once. I shall recommend it to all horse trainers. Yours truly, CHAS. SMART.

San Francisco's Spring Meeting.

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN congratulates the Blood Horse Association on its race programme for the first week of the spring meeting, with the exception of its selling event conditions, and races where penalties are inflicted on horses that ran at Oakland, but at the same time we hug ourselves joyously when we think that the officials have done many things that we have fought for desperately in times past.

The purses are very liberal, the selling-platters having a chance at $400 in their races, while the regular purses are $500. We would like to see our association take the initiative and make the gelding allowance five pounds, the same amount of weight allowed mares.

Another excellent point about the first week's programme is the large number of events provided for three-year-olds and upwards. Many racing associations in America, we are sorry to state, have turned everything worth having over to the owner of the two-year-old.

It is undoubtedly short-sighted policy (outside of its being cruel) to win, say $10,000, with a two-year-old and break the youngster down, when by not training the thoroughbred until he is a three-year-old you could have him racing for you four or five years longer, win you a great deal more money and improve the lung power, stamina and hone of the racehorse. It is certain that the thoroughbred is not fully developed until it is between four and five years of age. Nowadays they are broken and put to work in the fall, when less than yearlings. At two years old they are drummed harder than at any period of their lives, owing to the associations hanging up richer purses and more of them for youngsters of this age. At three they are scantily provided with class races, and there is but one four-year-old stake race in all America. What a grand thing it would be for our local organization to take the lead in cutting down two-year-old racing and inaugurating three and four-year-old stakes to take their places! They will be applauded by everyone in this country having the welfare of the thoroughbred at heart.

Year Book for 1892.

The Year Book or 1892 has been received. It consists of two volumes, each containing about 600 pages of closely printed matter. Part I. contains, besides the complete summaries of all trotting and pacing races during the past year, one of the most useful of all departments of the entire Year Book, viz.: The alphabetical index to all horses that participated in races or official trials against time in 1892, showing the name, sex and color of the horse, the number of times starting and where started, how many races lost and how many won, and gives all records made from 3:00 down. All records which were accepted by the trotting associations are entered in their places, but those which were rejected by the register office are preceded by an "r" to give proper notice of the fact of rejection.

Part II. contains the alphabetical lists of 2:30 trotters and 2:25 pacers. Tables of 2:20 trotters and 2:15 pacers; the great table; tables of champion trotters, great broodmares, and fastest records; while on the last four pages of the book is the table of rejected performances. As the books will not be sold separately, inquirers should send in their orders immediately, the price set is $5 for the two parts. A large supply is on the way from the East, and will be ready for distribution in a few days.

That $1 and $2 Paris mutuels are exceedingly popular has been proved conclusively in the various poolrooms of San Francisco. Take the sales on fistic contests as an example. In many of the rooms on several occasions more than 2,500 $1 tickets were disposed of, and the dividends were exceedingly satisfactory in every case, while in the auctions there was often not more than this sum bet. This speaks volumes in favor of the mutuels. It shows that it is by far the most popular method of betting, when the sums received by the smaller bettors nearly equals the amount received in the pool-box from the high-rollers. The trouble (what little there was in the Colonies) was that the commission charged was by far too large—10 per cent. There the Government received 2 1/2 per cent. from the sales of mutuels, 2 1/2 per cent went to charitable institutions and the racing association received 5 per cent. In this country the conditions are different, and there is no necessity for a charge of over 5 per cent., if indeed 3 per cent. would not prove beneficial. In Louisville and other places there are three methods of betting—you can buy auction pools or mutuels (straight and place) or can patronize the bookmaker. In this way the bettor is protected. If he sees he can get better odds against his money in the auctions he can go there, and if that does not suit him he has recourse to the mutuels. It is not a case of "take the odds I offer or don't bet," a monopoly pure and simple, for an opportunity is given to go elsewhere and receive reasonable odds. The result is that the bookmakers give very respectable prices against the chances of horses, and the people do not feel that they have any cause for dissatisfaction.

Ancient and Modern Racing Methods.

What mighty changes have taken place in the matter of weighting racehorses since there has been any system regarding conducting racing events, what a sliding up and down, what a variety of opinion! The first great race-horse—the one that became world-renowned—was Flying Childers, the unbated, a chestnut horse with a nose partly white and four white feet, foaled in 1715. It was something almost unknown in those days to train a horse to race until he was five years old, and the distance run was seldom short of four-mile heats. Under that system the racehorses seemed to thrive, and the average age of the thoroughbred was much greater than at present, when he is drummed hardest as a two-year-old and seldom seen on a race course at seven. We find, upon investigation, that when Flying Childers was six years old, the first year of his turf career, the lowest weight he carried was 8 stone 7 pounds (119 pounds) and the highest 140 pounds, when he defeated the Earl of Drogheda's Chaunter in a six-mile race for 1000 guineas. He lived to the age of twenty-six years.

In 1745 we find Robin Hood matched against a brown horse owned by Lord Manvers at four-mile heats, each to carry 168 pounds—twelve stone. In 1752 Skewball, by the Godolphin Arab (Barb) beat Miss Sportly, by Victorious, four miles at the Curragh of Kildare, the weights carried in that event being 126 pounds for each. Bay Malton, a great horse in 1764, by Sampson, dam sister to Leonidas, beat the famed Gimcrack for 500 guineas, carrying only 7 stone 7 pounds, or 105 pounds. Afterward he won with 119 pounds up. Thus we find in a period of forty-three years a variation in weights of no less than sixty-three pounds, from lowest to highest. In 1773 there were several matches at 112 pounds. In 1795 we observe a match at four-mile heats between Mr. Sitwell's gray mare and Mr. Johnson's chestnut gelding, for £200, over the Doncaster course, each to carry sixteen stone, or 224 pounds. By this it will be seen that horses ran four-mile heats, six and eight mile dashes in those days carrying, as a general thing, such crushing weights as 168 pounds, time cutting a very small figure. Endurance was the great desideratum.

According to the turf laws of the early part of the last century the horse that had won the first and second heats (generally of four miles) was obliged to start for the third, and to save his distance in that, to entitle him to the prize. In 1719 it is noted that a bay mare by Basto, belonging to the Duke of Devonshire, ran three matches against Mr. Frampton's Nutmeg, the first two at six miles each, the last at eight miles, each to carry 118 pounds. Four years later Neal beat Ruffler and Othello at Newmarket four-mile heats, every horse carrying 168 pounds. In 1732 there was a twelve-mile match at Newmarket, where the contestants carried but 105 pounds each. In 1746 Mr. Keating's Grenadier ran sixteen miles, beating a field of four, for a purse of £100, carrying 168 pounds. Just think of the difference between those days and the present! Now our horses can win over one hundred times that amount in one event (The Futurity), colts carrying 118 pounds when not penalized, and where the distance is a trifle short of three-quarters of a mile. Hollandaise, the third winner of the Doncaster St. Leger (1778), carried 140 pounds to victory in the King's Plate at Newmarket in 1781, and this seemed to be about the usual weight carried by aged horses in almost any kind of race at that period.

Sir Charles Bunbury, owner of Diomed, first winner of the Epsom Derby, was the originator of a new scale of weights for horses, as well as the introducer of two-year-old stake races. About the year 1786 the first two-year-old stake race was run, though these events were not patronized to an extent worth mentioning until 1797, when only forty-eight two-year-olds ran in public in England, though July was as early as it was thought a two-year-old should run. From this time began the sacrifice of stoutness for speed. Some aver that there came a great change in the conformation of horses, the race horse of the eighteenth century, asked to carry usually 168 pounds over anywhere from four to sixteen miles of ground, being shorter-legged and more substantial in build than the flyer of the nineteenth century, who is more of the leggy, "wasp-waisted" type. It is estimated that thirty per cent. of our horses are drummed so hard as yearlings and two-year-olds that they are either of little worth or are in the boneyard at three years of age. Two-year-olds are trained to the same pitch nowadays as old horses used to be, and seldom get a holiday during a racing season except when they catch the distemper or go to coughing. It is fully as brutal to drum a baby racer through twenty to thirty races as it used to be to send a five or six-year-old to a few races of four-mile heats with 168 pounds on his back. It was Sir Joseph Hawley's proposition not to run two-year-olds until July, and it is to be regretted that it was defeated and the youngsters allowed to run earlier in the year. Had the baronet's proposition been carried we should have had a hardier race of thoroughbreds beyond all doubt, for it was nearly fifty years ago when he submitted his plans to the Jockey Club of England.

From the time two-year-olds began running up to a very few years ago the weights on older horses were gradually reduced, both in England and America, until, in 1854, when Lexington was in his prime, the weights for three-year-olds in America in an all-aged race were 86 pounds; four-year-olds, 100 pounds; five-year-olds, 110 pounds, six-year-olds, 118 pounds; aged horses, 124 pounds, mares and geldings allowed three pounds; in England they were about the same, perhaps a little higher. This low scale remained in force for many years, but our people clung to heat races much longer than the English. During the past ten years there has been a tendency toward increasing the weights and shortening the distances, until at the present, in America, two-year-old colts are asked to carry in their stake races 118 pounds; three-year-old colts, 122 pounds. In all-aged events, three-year-olds in the month of May are asked to carry in races of a mile to a mile and a half 106 pounds; four-year-olds, 122 pounds; five-year-olds and upward, 126 pounds. The weights are now close to what they should be, but a raise of four pounds all around would be advantageous, in that we should have in the saddle a better lot of jockeys—pilots capable of riding a hard finish without fainting through the "reduction" process. Jockeys riding from 110 pounds to 130 would undoubtedly have more sense and greater success than the little fellows that nowadays have mounts at 85 to 105 pounds and who can only get to this weight for perhaps one season. We would like also to see the minimum weights in handicaps fixed at 90 pounds, with the limit of weight for the "crack" to carry fixed at 150 pounds. If the horses could not be brought close together under this system we miss our guess. The Toboggan Slide Handicap weights for 1893 were close to our idea of fairness, and now, if racing associations will band themselves together and say that no two-year-old shall run in over half a dozen races in a season and no three-year-old or over be allowed to run in races of less length than one mile we shall see a vast improvement in thoroughbred horses throughout the world.

THE famous controversy between Messrs. Thomas H. Williams and R. Porter Ashe over Geraldine and four two-year-olds by Alta came to an end last Wednesday night in Judge Hunt's court. After deliberating over three hours the jury rendered the following verdict: "We, the jury in the above-entitled cause, find a verdict in favor of the plaintiff [Williams] for the return of the property in the complaint described, and we find the value of his interest in the said property to be the sum of $4,909.74." The jury stood 9 to 3 on the above—just enough for the plaintiff to receive a verdict. Thus ended one of the most interesting cases where thoroughbred horses were involved ever tried in America, and not a little bitterness was shown, the preponderance being on the plaintiff's side. At first, from the way the verdict read, Mr. Ashe thought the tide had turned against him, but Attorney Wallace dispelled the gloom when he read the verdict and announced "Ashe wins." This was, after all, just what Mr. Ashe had been fighting for—to pay his indebtedness to Mike Kelly and retain the horses. That the verdict was a popular one there is no gainsaying. A portion of the testimony elicited during the progress of the trial regarding the value of the horses was surprising, to say the least. Several men were found who on the stand declared that Geraldine was not worth, in their opinion, over $2,000, while one set her down as worth but $1,500. In view of the fact that the mare holds the world's race records at four furlongs, four and a half furlongs and six and one-half furlongs, and has run miles in 1:40 and 1:41, besides being beautifully bred, and is to-day as sound as a dollar and certainly in as good shape as she ever was in her career for racing, these gentlemen rated a very high-class racer very cheap, to our mind. One or two gentlemen expressed their willingness to give $5,000 for Geraldine; she is certainly worth nearly that sum as a broodmare. During two of the seasons Geraldine was raced she was ailing, and did not face the starter many times, but during her six years' racing career has managed to scratch out over $32,000 in stakes and purses, or an average of over $5,333 per year. Bred to a popular horse like Salvator, El Rio Rey or St. Blaise, that one of her foals would bring from $3,000 to $5,000 is pretty certain, leaving out the fact that she will win many a dollar on the race courses of this country this season if nothing serious occurs. But the battle is over, for the present at least, and the names of Ashe and Geraldine are hound together firmer than ever.

A Southern Circuit.

Five of the Agricultural Associations in the southern part of California have formed a circuit for the fall meeting. The districts and dates claimed are as follows: Santa Barbara, August 22d to 26th, inclusive; Lompoc, August 29th to September 2d, inclusive; Huenceme, September 19th to 23d, inclusive; Santa Ana, September 26th to 30th, inclusive, and Los Angeles, October 2d to October 7th, inclusive.

The large number of stock farms, and the great interest being awakened among horsemen in this thriving section, augurs well for the success of such a circuit. Many of our very fastest trotters trace to Los Angeles-bred horses, while the old families have been increased by the addition of many of the best-bred youngsters in the United States. The beautiful roads and fine tracks there afford plenty of enjoyment for lovers of good roadsters, and when the races end this fall there is no doubt that large accessions to the 2:30 and 2:20 lists will be credited to the competitors that meet on this newly-formed circuit.

The breeder's association recently organized at Los Angeles will give an impetus to the breeding, developing and racing interests also, that will do more toward bringing this favored section into prominence as a horse-breeding paradise than anything heretofore thought of. With such an organization to aid the districts named and keep alive the spirit of competition, it will be only a matter of a few years until the associations in the northern and central portions of this State will have to gird up their loins to meet this new competitor from the orange groves and pampas-plumed section of our great and prosperous State.

Entries Close To-day.

This is the last call for owners of trotters and pacers to make entries for the races to take place at Napa, Petaluma and the Spring and Fall meetings of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association and on the Montana Circuit. The prospects for good meetings were never better; there are more horses in training this year than were ever known before, and many owners who have heretofore refrained from placing their youngsters in the hands of a trainer, are this year seeking hard to get the best ones procurable in the State.

There should be no hesitancy on the part of horse-owners in making entries. The two-in-three rule will prevail, while dash races will prove attractive, and at the same time horses will be able to earn more money than they would by the system formerly in vogue.

Again calling the attention of all horsemen to the fact that this is the last day, we hope to hear of large lists of entries in all the meetings advertised.

WE have called the attention of the former Superintendent of Streets to the condition of our principal driveway to the Golden Gate Park, called Golden Gate Avenue. For some reason only promises were made that the street would receive the necessary repairing, but, like the roadway, they were badly broken. The condition of this expensive roadway is a disgrace to this city. There are "chuck holes" by the dozen every square, and the breaking of axles and the ruining of vehicles is a common occurrence. Horses meet with injuries and are sent to veterinarians for strains and sprains. Visitors to this city who desire to ride in carriages to the Golden Gate Park have a poor opinion of the enterprise of our leading citizens, and much less of the executive ability of our Street Superintendent and the Board of Supervisors. We hope that steps will at once be taken to place this beautiful street in a first-class condition.

ALTHOUGH stallion-owners may not be able to boast of the large number of mares booked to their horses, they have this satisfaction, the mares are of a far better class than any heretofore bred; most of them are standard, while a number have earned records. The value of a stallion will be enhanced through the performances of the produce of these mares, for they are owned by men who believe the "false bottom" is knocked out of the horse business, and values will not decrease much further, therefore, they will raise horses that the public as well as the breeders are seeking.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

SENT in your orders for the Year Book of 1892.

THE Kentfield sale of trotters takes place next Tuesday.

CRICKET, 2:10, is with foal to Sidney, 2:19½. What a pacer that will be?

ENTRIES close at Napa, Petaluma and the Breeders' meeting to-day, April 1st.

BUFFALO horsemen are very much in love with Fausta, 2:22½, the great Sidney filly now in W. B. McDonald's stable.

SIDNEY can have sixty mares booked him at $300 each this season, which would bring to his owner $18,000. Yet he sold for but $27,000.

SWEETNESS, 2:21¼ (dam of Sidney, 2:19½, and Jay Wilkes, 2:35), has a brother called St. Leon 1523 that is the sire of Tomoka, 2:28½.

JACK DAWSON is the name of the stallion by Director, 2:17, out of Favorita, 2:25½, by George Wilkes, that has been sent to George Starr.

WITCH, dam of Cricket, 2:10, lost a beautiful bay filly by Steinway last week, and Mr. Meek, the owner, has the sympathy of all horsemen.

THE bay horse Thor, by Alcazar, 2:20¼, out of a daughter of Fleetwing (dam of Stamboul, 2:07¼), will be trained this year. He is said to be very fast.

E. A. COLBURN, of Colorado Springs, Col., writes that he has engaged Thomas H. Griffin, of California, as trainer and driver for the coming year.

MAJ. DUBOIS, of Denver, owner of Yolo Maid, 2:12, and Superior, 2:17½, is a great stickler for the blood of American Star, and thinks no pedigree is perfect without it.

THE sale of the stock of fine roadsters, broodmares, colts and fillies owned by F. C. Talbot will take place at Killip & Co.'s salesyard April 19th, catalogues of which are now being printed.

THE long spell of wet weather has had a bad effect upon the pastures in this State, and most of the stock has had to be kept up and fed hay since the first of January. This is something very unusual.

DON'T dose the broodmares with physic and condition powders. If they are costive feed a few apples or potatoes. If these are not to be had, give an occasional bran mash nearly as thin as gruel.

AMONG the latest reported additions to Geo. Starr's string are Czar, 2:12½, by Russia; Newberger, by Jay Bird; Junemont, 2:14, by Tremont; Myrtle R., 2:13½, by Monaco, and Valissa, 2:19, by Vasco.

AUGUSTUS SHARPE, Louisville, Ky., has purchased from H. S. Shultz, Lexington, the chestnut filly Faustissima, by Sidney, dam Faustina (dam of Faustino, 2:14½, and Fausta, 2:22¼), by Crown Point.

ORESTES PIERCE has one of the sweetest driving mares in Alameda, in fact, she is the queen of the road. He purchased her in the southern part of this State; she is called Kate Castleton, and has a record of 2:26½.

EL MAHDI's colts are showing phenomenal speed, and his friends predict that their work this year will demonstrate the fact that in the death of the son of Onward and Lady Funker, the trotting turf lost one of its greatest figures.

E. D. BITHER, driver of Kremlin, 2:07¾, writes his old schoolmate, J. W. Bailey, of this city, that Kremlin will not be on the turf this season, but will be out in 1894. He says that Kremlin is doing well and can beat any stallion in the world.—Oregonian.

C. P. CHAMBERLAIN, owner of Royal Prince, 2:24½; Charley Ford, 2:12½ and Harry F., 2:26, died a few days since at Tacoma. Mr. Chamberlain was born in Polk county, Oregon. His horses are reported to be in charge of James Irwin, at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

IN 1891 Almont had 39 sons with 90 trotters and 20 pacers in the list, and 20 daughters had 19 trotters and 5 pacers in the list. In 1892 he had 75 sons with 235 trotters and 34 pacers in the list, and 75 daughters with 61 trotters and 6 pacers in the list. Almonts breed on.

JAMES E. BERRYMAN finally concluded to open a public stable at the Napa race track, and started last Wednesday and Chas. Scott, the new superintendent, will have this course in perfect order. He is working night and day to make it the greatest training grounds in the State for trotters and pacers.

BETSY AND I, the dam of Moquette, 2:10, the fastest four-year-old trotting stallion in the world, is by Ericsson, and Nell, dam of Belle Vara, 2:08½, that trotted the fastest first heat in a race on record, is by a son of Ericsson. The blood of the old trotting champion does not appear to be a bad element in a pedigree.

BOWSMAN BROS., of Lexington, Ky., have sold to Captain Sam Brown of Pittsburgh the three-year-old Wilton stallion Winchester, dam by Mambrino Patchen; price said to be $10,000 or thereabouts. Winchester will be put at the head of Captain Brown stud in Kentucky. He can trot in 2:20 and is said to be one of the most promising young stallions in the country.

F. F. MOULTON, of Redwood City, has a road team that are the envy of all the roadites, and as he is one of those gentlemen who take pride in his horses, and is a skillful reinsman, it is a pleasure to see him drive, and a still greater one to ride with him. One of the horses is by Black Ralph, the other by a son of Nutwood, and a better-gaited team or more speedy one is seldom seen.

H. W. MEEK, of Lorenzo, has engaged the services of that competent reinsman, George Gray, for this season. There are some twelve head of promising trotters and pacers at the track, and the latter will be put in first-class condition immediately. The Electioneer-Nutwood stallion Laster, 2:29¼, will be trained, and colts and fillies by such sires as Elector, Antevolo, Fallis, Director, Steinway, Hawthorne and Redwood will also receive their first lessons "in the way they should go."

ALAMO, Contra Costa county, is looming up as a "horse center." Mr. John A. Benson, surveyor, has been having his beautiful farm divided into paddocks. New stables and barns are being erected, and his rapidly-increasing stock of horses will soon be seen on the race track to be built there. There are about thirty-five men employed at present, and if all Mr. Benson's plans are carried out, he will have one of the model stock farms of the State.

MARTIN CARTER, of Nutwood Stock Farm, has determined to let his horses out on shares this year. Andy McDowell will have a few. Salisbury has Maud C., 2:19, and she is looking very well. At Valensin's Direct Line is receiving work, and a number of colts and fillies will be sent to other places and given records. Mr. Carter has crop of youngsters by California Nutwood and Nutwood Wilkes that are remarkably handsome and speedy-looking.

THE $10,000 broodmare By By, by Nutwood, out of Rapidan, by Dictator, that belongs to the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, will be bred to the mighty Guy Wilkes, 2:15½. The produce will be as gilt-edged as any ever bred in the United States. This mare was pronounced as perfectly-formed as any ever foaled, while Guy Wilkes comes as near being her equal as one egg is to another, so the youngster ought to be handsome. We congratulate the Pierce Bros. on selecting such a sire.

A CORRESPONDENT of an Eastern exchange states there are five horses on the way from Denver to Boston. The slowest has a record of 2:26½, and the fastest a record of 2:17½. According to the correspondent, they are known in the West as ringers. If so, apply the law to their controllers when caught breaking it. Almost all the States have laws against the starting of horses out of their classes, and it is the duty of trotting associations to hand over to the proper authorities all detected in breaking the law.

A NOVELTY race has been arranged by the management of the Detroit track. It is a trot for horses of the 2:20 class, and after three beats have been contested the two horses whose rank is then first and second will be awarded first and second moneys, respectively, and sent to the barn. The winner of the fourth heat will be given third money and go to the barn, while the winner of the fifth heat gets fourth money. This is a move in the direction of shorter contests and will probably meet with favor among horsemen.

THE Independence Driving Park Association is out with a very novel futurity stake, worth $10,000, for foals of 1893, to be trotted in 1895. Mares are to be nominated on or before May 1, 1893, and $10 makes all payments until the night before the race, when $100 will be collected from the starters. Foals bred, foaled and developed in the following twelve states are eligible: "Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Iowa."

SECRETARY EDWIN F. SMITH, of the State Agricultural Society, writes: "In the list of entries sent you last week of colt sweepstakes, there was an error in the entry of Mr. W. O. Bowers. The entry of brf Sadie Benton, by Tom Benton, dam Brown Jennie, by Dave Hill Jr., was entered in stake No. 4 (two-year-old pace) whereas it should have been entered in stake No. 3 for four-year-old trotters, as she is a four-year-old trotting mare. This will leave but two entries in the two-year-old pace, which is not sufficient to fill, consequently it will be necessary to declare that race off."

AN Eastern horseman was going the rounds of the old stalls at the Pleasanton track, and remarked: "It's a pity to put such jewels into such poor settings." He looked at Diablo, and before he asked his name, said: "With the exception of his color, he is the most perfect likeness to Alcaitara I have ever seen, and if he is not a fast one I will treat all bands. What's his name, young man?" "Diablo! He has a record of 2:14½ as a three-year-old," was the reply. The Eastern man seemed pleased, and as he critically examined the horse, said: "Well, if that fellow does not rub out our fastest pacing record and then get a low mark as a trotter it will be because some accident has befallen him, for such individuals as he are not seen in a month's travel in any country."

THE handsome bay stallion Panoast, owned by Benjamin Johnson, of Bardstown, Kentucky, died last Tuesday. Panoast had a race record of 2:21¼, and was sired by Woodford Mambrino, dam Bicara (dam of Monte Carlo, 2:29½), by Harold 413; grandam Belle (dam of Belmont 64), by Mambrino Chief 11. He was bred by A. J. Alexander, Spring Station, Kentucky, and once sold for $28,000. Panoast was badly injured by a stroke of lightning shortly after, and for a long time he was considered valueless in the stud, but by good care gradually recovered. Panoast was the sire of Patron, 2:14½, Ponce de Leon, 2:13; Prodigal, 2:16, Cuylercoast, 2:16½, Garnet, 2:13½ and eleven others in 2:30 list.

THERE was a foal dropped at the Santa Rosa Stock Farm recently that carries plenty of Wilkes blood, combined with that of Electioneer, Clark Chief and Pilot Jr. He is called Vallotta, and is by George Norval, out of Carlotta Wilkes (sister to Arrival, 2:24½), by Charley Wilkes, 2:21½; second dam Aspasia (dam of Arrival, 2:24½), by Alcantara; third dam Miss Eucuban (dam of Escape, 2:26½), by Clark Chief; fourth dam Nep, by Sebastopol; fifth dam by imp. Monarch. Geo. Norval is by Norval, 2:14½, out of Kitty Wilkes (dam of Rajah, 2:29½), by George Wilkes; second dam Snip Nose (dam of Garnet, 2:19), by American Clay 34. Charley Wilkes is by Red Wilkes, out of Kate Bradley (dam of three), by Clifton Pilot. Alcantara is by George Wilkes, out of Alma Mater. Vallotta traces to the mighty George Wilkes three times.

THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Gonzales Racecourse Company was held last Monday at the office of the president, W. Sarles. The following directors were elected for the ensuing year: W. Sarles, Alfred Gonzalez, A. Widemann, Peter Chrisman and Dr. Gordon. The company is in a prosperous condition, being out of debt and having quite a snug little sum in the treasury. The Board of Directors were requested by the stockholders to erect a suitable judges' stand and a house for the track-keeper. Immediately after adjournment the new Board of Directors met and organized by electing the following officers: President, W. Sarles; Vice-President, Alfred Gonzalez; Secretary, Dr. Gordon; Treasurer, A. Widemann. The Board of Directors have, in accordance with the request of the stockholders, decided to build a judges' stand and a house for the track-keeper. The buildings will be completed before the first of May. Peter Chrisman, A. Widemann and Dr. Gordon were appointed as a committee to get up races and report the result of their labor to the Board.

ON Saturday afternoon a meeting of the British Columbia Jockey Club was held in the Vancouver City Hall, Victoria, B. C. Mr. Wm. Cargill, the secretary, reported that the repairs to the grand stand had been almost finished, and that in another week or so the track would be completely drained. The next meeting will be held in May, after that in Victoria, and before the meetings in Washington and Oregon. A successful year is anticipated, as a number of inquiries have been received. Several new members were proposed, and will be elected at a meeting to be held next Saturday. The annual meeting of the club will be held in April.

ACCORDING to his promise, W. B. Fasig lost no time in completing the competition for the two prizes offered by the Tattersalls Company to those who made the nearest estimate of the price Sidney brought at Cleveland. As the guesses of more than 20,000 had resulted in twenty persons getting at the exact sum realized for the son of Santa Claus and the prizes were not divisible, their apportionment was decided by lot. The aid of a local contemporary was invoked, and through the medium of an office boy who possessed the qualification of being deaf the award was made. The result of the drawing is that the sulky goes to West Virginia, Miss Maggie Wetzel, of Weston, the chief town of Lewis county in that State, being the favored one for the first prize. Another of Columbia's daughters gets the gold-mounted whip, the winner of this being Miss Florence Maybew, of Niles, Cal., which is located in the same county where Sidney himself won his reputation as a sire.

AT the Hicks sale last Saturday nine head in all were sold by Auctioneer Simmons. Cbarles Schlutius bought for $125 a brown colt by Durfee 11, 256, dam Italia, by Sidney, 2:19½, grandam Dot, by Prompter, great grandam thoroughbred. Buckman & Carragher made what is thought by horsemen to be a very lucky hit. For $125 they secured an eight-months-old bay filly by Wildesdale, 2:29, dam Pearl, 2:32½, by Blue Bull 75, grandam Lightfoot, by Flaxtail 3, 133, great grandam Fanny Fern, by Tuckadoo. C. F. Dillman bought for $105 a bay colt by Durfee-Sadie, by Prompter, grandam Viola, by Flaxtail 3, 133, great grandam Madam Buckner, by Tom Hal. A bay colt by Sterling, dam Jennie, by Prompter, grandam Jennette, by Belmont, was bid in by W. F. Peterson for $90. A chestnut filly by Sterling, dam Mollie, by Prompter, grandam Lady Narley, dam of Empress, 2:29½, by Marion, son of Mambrino Chief II, etc., a handsome and racy-looking animal, fell to Edward Pickett of Elk Grove for $110.

A NUMBER of gentlemen visited Pleasanton last Saturday and were delighted by the exhibition of trotters at the Pleasanton track. Vic H. is looking and moving better than she has for a long time, and, barring accidents, will be a dangerous competitor in her class. San Pedro, the double-gaited son of Del Sur, formerly called the Los Angeles bearse horse, was pronounced the sweetest-gaited trotter on the track, and will get a very low mark this year. Dr. Latham's big bay Dexter Prince mare is moving well. Charley C., another "green" trotter, will ripen into a record-breaker in time. Directum has grown big and strong. One of the gentlemen present asked Sam Gamble what he thought Directum was worth as Kelly beaded down the score. "Oh! I would say about thirty thousand dollars." As the little fellow passed by Sam said: "I'll take that back; he is worth forty thousand, and I don't know but a great deal more. He has the most perfect action of any trotter I ever saw, and he holds himself always in readiness to go faster when called upon."

SINCE the publication of the records made by the fastest performers sired by Director and Tom Hal in last issue our attention has been called to the great Electioneer and the three records made by his fastest sons and daughter, and they were trotters—no pacers:

| TOM HAL. | | DIRECTOR. | |
|------------------------|-----------|------------------------|-----------|
| Hal Pointer..... | 124½ | Direct..... | 123½ |
| Little Brown Jug..... | 131½ | Directum..... | 131½ |
| Brown Hal..... | 132½ | Evangeline..... | 134½ |
| Seconds..... | 388½ | Seconds..... | 388½ |
| Totals in minutes..... | 6:28¾ | Totals in minutes..... | 6:28¾ |

| Palo Alto..... | 128¾ | Total in minutes..... | 6:27¼ |
| Ariou..... | 130½ | Average..... | 2:09 1-6 |

The Electioneers therefore take the lead by one-third of a second. It does not look to be much, but it means a great deal.

BUDD DOBLE is charged with having fixed his affection upon the young trotting filly Ballona, 3, 2:19½, that, it is said, could show a quarter at a 2:00 clip in her three-year-old form and have something to spare, and is expected to be a sensational performer in the hands of that great reinsman. This is not the first time, by any means, that this expert horseman has selected a comparatively green one and brought it up to a generous fulfillment of his prophecies, as, passing over recent years which are studied with successes of this character, the year 1867 found him hesitating between accepting the captaincy of two trotting mares that were destined to become famous. One of these had a record of 2:32 and was rough-gaited and hard to understand; the other was smooth-gaited, fair dispositioned and had a mark of 2:28. Mr. Doble had watched the two mares in races, and, while liking both, had decided which one he preferred, and, the proposition to train each of them coming by the same mail—it being impossible to accept both—he took the one with the slow record and rough gait. In ten years she had trotted 332 winning heats better than 2:30; won, in his hands, tens of thousands of dollars, obtained the world's championship record of 2:14, and her name had become a household word. This was Goldsmith Maid. The mare he passed by was Lucy, 2:18½, that came into Mr. Doble's stable later and was given a mark of 2:22½ by him. It is perhaps a trifle strange that Ballona, the young mare that has captivated the veteran trainer, should be by the best son of his old-time choice, Goldsmith Maid, and if the filly should go on and prove as sensational as Dame Rumor would have us believe Mr. Doble expects her to be, it could be referred to truthfully as a remarkable coincidence. Ballona is by Stranger 3030, son of Gen. Washington and Goldsmith Maid (the dam of Gen. Washington being the famous Lady Tborn, 2:18½), dam Lady Banker, 2:23, by Hambletonian 10, so that if she chooses to jump out and set a new mark for Miss Nancy some of these day it will be strictly in keeping with her speed heritage.—Horse Review.

The Saddle.

THERE will be about 300 horses to take part in the Blood Horse spring meeting.

DR BOWHILL's colors will be light blue jacket, bright gold sleeves, light blue cap.

JUDGE BURKE will be offered the position of presiding judge at the St. Louis meeting.

KINGSTON has won $124,797 during his racing career. He looks as well as ever this spring.

"BIG JIM" GARLAND, we are informed, will not bring down the string of Ira Ramsdell until about the middle of the meeting.

CONNERS & COOK have a very racy-looking fellow in Trumbo, by Jumbo, a chestnut with white legs and white strip in face.

IF, after a thorough examination, Tenny is found in condition, he will not be relegated to the stud after all by Mr. Pulifer, but put in training at once.

OLD Sorretto won a mile and a sixteenth race at North Bergen, N. J., on the 20th of March, defeating such good ones as King Crah, Rhono, Headlight, Nativity and Perlid.

PEEL has thoroughly recovered from his recent attack of influenza, and is taking his work well. This old fellow is one of the very handsoimest horses in training in this horse paradise.

AB STEMLER, trainer for Burns & Waterhouse, will not come down from Sacramento until the middle of April, his string not being "on edge" at present. He has eight in hand at present.

LAST Monday a large force of carpenters began work on 100 additional stalls at Bay District track, making in all 215 new ones. The demand for stall room is great, insuring the attendance of close on to 350 horses.

THE Sacramento delegation of horsemen got down last Wednesday in great force. The horses of Wilher F. Smith, Billy Murry, Frank Depoister and Cavanaugh are likely to cut quite a figure at this meeting, for they all look elegant.

FRANK JAMES, a prominent Missourian, who used to display a fondness for stopping railroad trains with a brace of pistols, is no longer hooking at Guttenburg. He has turned player, and in common with King Kelly of baseball fame, is the lion of the rising generation.

J. J. DOLAN, former owner of Revolver, has a yearling colt by imp. Brutus, out of Young Jule, the dam of Revolver, and the day he was twelve months old he stood fourteen hands two and one-half inches high, and weighed 700 pounds. This speaks volumes for California as a breeding center.

EUGENE LEIGH has sold the following broodmares to Colonel J. E. Pepper: Sadie, by Duke of Magenta, dam imp. Genista, by King Tom; Nelly Stanley, by Springbok, dam Fanny Hall, by Norfolk; Nocturn, by Falsetto, dam West Wind, by King Alfonso, and Genevieve, by imp. Stonehenge, dam Beoola, by King Ernest.

ON the 22d of March, Californians ran one-two in a race at North Bergen, N. J. Rhono, by Flood—Rosetta was the winner, while Brooklyn, son of John Happy and Lizzie P., was second. At the same place on the same date Fagot, a four-year-old brother to B. C. Holly's Happy Day, won a dash of five and a half furlongs from a good field.

A. W. SMALL has a half-brother to Jack the Ripper in training at Bay District track, and he is a very good-looker, too. Mr. Small says that while little or nothing is known of the breeding of Jennie Mack, dam of the Ripper, her foals show so much quality and race so well that he is inclined to believe her nearly if not quite thoroughbred.

IMP. LOYALIST is looking "finer than silk," according to advices received from Sacramento this week. He is being cantered over the roads leading out of the Capital City, and is almost certain to render a good account of himself this fall. Geoffrey has been fired and blistered, and it is expected he will be ready to race at the fall Blood Horse meeting.

CHARLES KERR, Bakersfield's well-known breeder and turfman, arrived last Tuesday about noon, as did his horses, ten in number, including Crawford, Connaught and a lot of two-year-olds, most of whom are by Apache. Mr. Kerr's stock has wintered fairly well, but owing to the long-drawn-out rainy season he will find out just how good his horses are in races.

THE jockey, "Tiny" Williams, has contracted to ride for Mr. T. H. Stevens, proprietor of the Walnut Hill stables, this season. Some of this stable are at present at New Orleans in charge of A. C. Franklin. The balance are at Lexington. Mr. Stevens has trained some good horses during his turf career, among them Waxy, Loochatchee, Palestine and others of high repute.

DAN DENNISON, the "jainial" veteran, arrived last Saturday night from Sacramento with Tigress, Grandee, Wicklow and five Cheviot two-year-olds, among them being half-brothers to Wicklow and Huguenot. They are all looking well, and as Mr. Dennison always has a race or two up his sleeve, we shall look for some of the youngsters to win their share of the money.

THE regular racing season opened in London on March 20th, the first meeting being the Lincoln spring meeting. The events the first day were of little consequence, but the next day the race for the Lincolnshire handicap attracted a large crowd to the course. The race was won by Mr. J. W. Smith's brown colt Wolfe Crag; Sir J. Blundell Maple's bay colt Gangway second, and R. Viner's chestnut colt Marchions third.

THERE will in likelihood be a meeting this fall of a number of noted thoroughbred stallions now making a season in the stud in California, among the number being such celebrities as Flambeau, Racine, imp. Loyalist, imp. Merriwa, Peel and Gooffrey. That these horses petted against each other would make an interesting contest goes without saying. Many will be astonished to hear that Flambeau is being trained again, after a retirement of three years from the turf. Racine has been a stranger to race tracks for over a year, Loyalist for over two years, Merriwa for as long a time, while Peel and Gooffrey have not faced the starter for nearly four years.

THE horse Tramp proved himself to be anything but a tramp March 20th at New Orleans, and people who backed other horses that day begin to think that he is somewhat of a gentleman. And we are strongly of that opinion ourselves, from the way in which he walked away from horses of more aristocratic names. His three-quarter mile run in 1:14, 123 pounds up, is a great performance at New Orleans, as that is anything but a fast track.

J. W. ROGERS has ten horses in his stable, including Sir Francis, who will be trained by M. Byrnes when the season begins. Pickpocket is a greatly improved horse, and is almost sure to prove a bread-winner. May Win is another of the useful sort. The Moyne gelding, now called Glenmoyn, is likely to prove a tough customer in the three-year-old division. The horses in Rogers' stable are all high in flesh, and are in perfect health to begin the season.

NEWSPAPER men are in demand as racing judges in this section, apparently. Chinton C. Riley, who will be presiding judge at the spring Blood Horse meeting, is a Chicago racing reporter; Norman Brough, the first assistant judge, was at one time editor of the thoroughbred department of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, while Charles Trevathan, the second assistant, is an ex-reporter, during his reportorial career, being on the Chronicle, Examiner and Turf.

THE new grand stand at the Elkwood track, near Long Branch, is to cost $25,000 and to be 140x38 in dimensions. The letting ring will accommodate 1,500 persons. Pony contests may be the feature. The officers of the association are as follows: President, George W. Brown, ex-Mayor of Long Branch; Vice-President, Philip Daly, Jr.; Treasurer, Philip Daly, Sr.; Secretary, William R. Warwick, Jr.; Directors, Walter R. Patten, E. C. Burt, A. P. Coberly and A. C. Newing.

W. M. MURRY, of Sacramento, arrived last Wednesday with six horses that are booked to take part in the Blood Horse meeting that begins to-day. The string consists of Thornhill, Pricelle, The Lark (by Wildidle, dam by Monday), Gracie S., Belfast and Miss Walling—quite a useful lot. They all look sleek except Gracie S. and Thornhill. The former is rather "wasy," while the latter's knees have been blistered, making him look a little rough. However, he is in excellent racing form.

B. C. HOLLY arrived bright and early this week from Floden with his string of twelve good ones, consisting of imp. Paramatta, Sympathetic's Last, Revolver, El Rayo, Happy Day, Green Hock, Sidney, Francesca (sister to Acclaim) and a lot of two-year-olds by Reveille and Prince of Norfolk. That this string is a most formidable one is certain, and we expect to see Mr. Holly's horses place him close to the head of winning owners at the Blood Horse Association's spring meeting. W. Clancy will do the riding, and there, again, the stable is strong.

BELLE MEADE yearlings to be disposed of this year number seventy-one, and include full brothers and sisters to Helen Nichols, Addie, Tulla Blackburn, Egmont, Eurus, Haydee, Blackburn, Reporter, Rambler and Tringle, and half-brothers and sisters to Tammany, Red Banner, St. Croix, Inspector B., Erebus and other noted racers. Iroquois has nineteen yearlings, Luke Blackburn fourteen and Inspector B. ten, the remainder being divided between Black Dean, Vanguard, Bramble, Tremont, Deceiver, Rossington, Enquirer, Heimdal, Glenleg and Great Tom.

AT a meeting of the new board of control March 14, applications of the following for licenses were reported favorably: Trainers—W. B. Gilpin, William Heuston, Robert W. Tolles, Thomas Green, Thomas J. Haley, James McLeer, S. W. Street, W. C. Daly, Wm. Kerrick, Jas. Harrison, Scott Williams, Augustus Hannon, John E. Cook, Matthew M. Allen, Jockeys—Frederick Taral, Albert Thompson, James Cottrell, Paul Fox, Walter Schofield, Michael Bergen, Reginald Harris, William Harrison, Tenny Burgess, P. G. Rogers, James Lambley, John Keefe, Wm. Lilly.

F. C. LUSK, the eminent legal authority of Chico, Cal., is apparently as well up on Bruce as on Blackstone, he having certainly used excellent judgment in breeding his mare by imp. Midlothian, dam by Norfolk, to the splendid Australian horse Loyalist. The result of this union will have in its make-up no less than five crosses of Touchstone, besides Stockwell, Melbourne and Glencoe blood galore, and if it is of "male persuasion" should be a great sire. A large amount of Touchstone and Stockwell blood, especially on the sire's side of the house, is valued by all who know anything of breeding.

THE Duke of Milpitas, who until recently was about as gentle at the post as a Kansas cyclone with a lone shanty on a wide prairie, has developed into the greatest miler ever seen at New Orleans. He ran one race over the Crescent City track in 1:42, and that was considered very good, but a few days thereafter he made the circuit of the course in 1:42 flat, which is the track record at the distance. Charley Boots had this son of the Duke of Norfolk in his stable for quite a time, but he was too tough for the Milpitas breeder of thoroughbreds, and he sold the colt to parties that took him East.

DAN DENNISON has a string of nine at the track, and their splendid condition reflects the greatest credit on the veteran trainer. In the string is the four-year-old mare Bessie W., the three-year-olds Wicklow, Grandee and Tigress, and five two-year-olds, all by imp. Cheviot. One of the best-looking in the string is a two-year-old by imp. Cheviot out of a sister to Ruth Ryan (dam of Quarterstaff), and the half-brother to Wicklow greatly resembles his stoutly-built relative. Another of the Cheviots (a bay) much resembles Gano. Wicklow and Grandee work together, and the gray fellow has been thoroughly cured by Mr. D— of the lameness (pronounced by some veterinarians navicular disease), which is a very gay feather in Mr. Dennison's glory cap.

FROM Sacramento comes news that the Fair string will not race at the Blood Horse meeting, and when the owner of this magnificent stable goes East it will be to stay. The loss to the turf of California of Mr. Charles Fair is great, for his horses were always out to win. In the Fair lot are Flood Gate, Dare, Princess, Gibson, Yo El Rey and five two-year-olds. Two of the latter will be left behind. Notwithstanding the talk that Princess will never face the starter again, she was never in better shape for racing than at present. Gibson is not taking a lame step, having got rid of the corns that made racing intolerable to the conqueror of Geraldine. Dare is doing better at this time than Flood Gate, and the form therefore is fancied most for the American Derby.

MR. JAMES B. FERGUSON, the well-known starter of race horses and proprietor of the Kingston Stud Farm, near Lexington, Ky., has a brown yearling filly of peculiarly rich breeding which he has decided to withdraw from his yearling sale and retain for a broodmare, selling only her running qualities, says a New Orleans exchange. She is by Lisbon (he by imp. Phacton, and he by King Tom), dam imp. Homeward Bound, by Colness, and he by King Tom. This the youngster has a double cross of the speedy, stout and highly-prized blood of King Tom very close up in her pedigree. Homeward Bound is the dam of Prodigal Son, and Lisbon, besides being the sire of other good ones, has the famous Troubadour to his credit. This richly-bred filly has been named Margaret.

J. J. HYLAND has the Daly & Gideon horses ready to begin work for a long and severe campaign. His Highness looks every inch the great race horse that his owners say he is. That he will be hard to beat in the Suburban every unprejudiced horseman concedes. He is a picture of health at present. St. Michael has rounded to his lines. He is now one of the most highly-finished horses in training, and reflects credit on his birthplace, the Brookdale farm. Kinglet, another product of the same farm, is a splendid animal. He is built from the ground up. Every action of his denotes usefulness. The Annie F. colt, now called Ramapo, is of double parentage, Runnymede and Pontiac dividing the credit of being his sire. He is one of the improving sort, and is a favorite of Mr. Gideon, who rates him as first-class.—New York Tribune.

ROBERT C. PATE, the well-known breeder and turfman, has returned to St. Louis, Mo., after a four months' sojourn in Mexico. The object of his visit to the land of the Montezumas was to make arrangements for introducing horse racing to the people of that country. The owner of Monogram counted on being well treated by a people noted for their civility, but he hardly counted on the warm reception tendered him. There is a growing sentiment in favor of doing away with hull fighting, and Mr. Pate's horse racing scheme was looked upon as just the thing to work the abolition of the popular but barbarous pastime. The Congress has awarded to Mr. Pate the exclusive right to build and operate race tracks within the country, and has taken the tariff off the importation of thoroughbred animals for breeding purposes.

BELLE MEADE now holds another best of record, combined the stallions now doing stud service there, having themselves won on the turf more money than the horses in the stud on any other stock farm in America. The list, and what they accomplished on the turf is as follows: Both Iroquois and imp. Great Tom made their racing records in England: Iroquois started 26, won 12, second 4, third 3, won $101,613; Inspector B. started 49, won 23, second 10, third 5, won $58,282; Luke Blackburn started 39, won 25, second 6, third 2, won $49,460; Tremont started 13, won 13, won $40,085; Enquirer started 10, won 7, won $21,500; Clarendon started 29, won 7, second 10, third 1, won $9,925; Great Tom (imp.) started 10, won 3, second 4, third 4, won $6,665. Total starts, 182; won, 90; second, 24; third, 15; total amount won, $237,530.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of March 17th was as follows: "The attempt to establish a winter race track in this city, in imitation of the notorious track at Guttenburg, has proved a failure. It was reported that it was to have the support of some of the prominent members of Tammany Hall, and that 'Boss' Croker, who used to be a brakeman on the New Central Railroad, but who has made money enough out of New York Democratic politics to investigate $250,000 in a fancy stud, was to be the chief hacker of the Ivy City track, but this was probably unfounded. At all events the racing meeting at Ivy City has come to an end. The failure of the new club to induce the New York pool-rooms to take the races, together with general local indifference, caused the collapse. The local lovers of genuine sport do not care for winter horse-racing, and the gambling element is too small to support such a meeting. It is said that $20,000 has already been lost and the club is in debt several thousand dollars."

A PROMINENT American horse-breeder now in England writes home this bit of information: "There is one thing connected with horses here that is far superior to America; that is the manner of transportation by rail. If you want to ship a horse, all you have to do is to go to the depot, same as you go a passenger, and thirty minutes is all the notice they require, and you can have your horses on the same train you go yourself. Boxes for three horses are in readiness in every passenger station at all times to load horses and on all trains, and the cars are all fitted with padded stalls with a large halter hanging in each and feed boxes; also a good apartment at the end of each for traps and a seat for a man in charge. The expense of a horse is only a trifle more than for a man, and the train runs forty to fifty miles per hour. I shipped two horses 200 miles in four and one-half hours. It is not half as much trouble or care to travel with a horse here as it is with a dog in America. Thus I have seen one thing here that I like better than in America."

WILL "Moose" Taylor, the clever little Colorado lightweight, be allowed to ride at the meeting which begins to-day? is the question that is puzzling Taylor, his employer, H. D. Brown, and many other owners who desire the lad's services. It is claimed by Mr. Brown and the jockey that "Curley" Shields, of the old firm of Carlile & Shields, is playing "dog in the manger" in this case not having a contract with Taylor himself, but desiring to hold the little fellow nevertheless and prevent him from riding for anyone else. Taylor claims his contract with Carlile & Shields expired the 1st of last January, and that he did not renew it (having run away previously). Shields declares the contract holds good until January 1, 1894. An official of the Blood Horse Association, we are informed, some time ago asked Mr. Shields to send on a copy of his contract with Taylor, but the document has not been forthcoming, notwithstanding ample time has been allowed for the Colorado turfman to make good his claims. The question of the hour is, is Shields or Taylor mistaken? This is a point that should be settled at once by the Blood Horse Association officials, for if Shields has no contract with Taylor it will certainly be working a hardship on the youngster, who could doubtless get four or five good mounts every day, such a reputation does he possess for piloting winners. Our informant stated the reason Taylor gave for running away was that he was abused by Mr. Shields for riding to victory a horse that the Coloradoan had not wagered a cent on, the animal, however, that Taylor rode, beating a galloper that Mr. S— had staked a respectable pile on with the expectation of making "a killing." That the local association should settle the controversy without delay everyone acknowledges.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

STILL IN TIME.—A great many of our readers will receive this number of the paper in time to make entries in the events of the P. C. T. H. B. A., which close to-day. Those in the vicinity can save the trouble of mailing by calling at the office, 313 Bush street, where the Secretary will be found at his post from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. People are quite apt to overlook the closing entries by putting it off, and then when the limit of time is realized forget until too late to answer the purpose. Scarcely a purse but some one will claim to have forgotten, and in a number of cases secretaries have corresponded with all the live nominators in a stake to obtain permission from them to admit the dead ones who desire to join, but "forgot."

It will also be learned from the advertisements in this paper that there are several other places which will close a part of their stakes and purses to-day, April 1st. At Petaluma and Napa the colt purses to be decided at the fair this fall, open and district, trotting and pacing. There should be a liberal response to the requests for entries from these popular places. The tracks are on a par with the best of any country, and there are no pleasanter surroundings. Were I compelled to award the preference to one of the California places where autumnal fairs are held, the task would be too trying altogether, and only the old method of placing a witness prone on the floor and piling weights on him until he was either pressed flat or signified his readiness to tell would be effective. Even if permitted to name several as being too nearly equal to permit an authoritative decision, there would be quite a list, at the very top of which would be these two places. A person that cannot find plenty of enjoyment during the annual exhibition at either has many grails of dissatisfaction in his composition, or must have the worst kind of bad luck in endeavoring to guess the right horses.

The stakes of the Montana Circuit also close to-day, and very liberal are the conditions. Not having enjoyed the good fortune to visit that region, rich in metals, in grand scenery and liberal people, personal knowledge is lacking, but the universal eulogies spoken by those who have participated in the good things of that mountain land are the best endorsements, it might be said, to be sounder than what was based on individual experience. The Montana Stakes are both racing and trotting, so that there is a junction of interests. I feel quite confident that the entries will be full all around, and should that feeling be sustained by the results, will not feel at all reluctant in prophesying the grandest season for sport ever known on this side of the big rivers.

THE TROTTING STRIDE.—As I expected, the strides which Martha Wilkes has shown, and which was so kindly sent by her owner, has attracted a great deal of attention all over the country. Some of the papers have copied it without comments, and others have called attention to the peculiarities so strikingly exemplified by Martha Wilkes. In Clark's Horse Review of March 21st there is copied the different strides from a 2:20 to a 1:43 gait, and the following remarks appended:

It is certainly not a common sight to see a trotting horse materially increase his speed entirely, or nearly so, by length of stride, the majority of horses undoubtedly combining length of stride with increased rapidity of action to accomplish that end. But Martha Wilkes is not alone in this peculiarity, as it is called to mind that the hay gelding Gloster, 2:17, one of Edd Doble's pupils, increased but slightly the rapidity of the step when changing from a 2:30 to a 2:17 clip, his stride at the latter rate of speed being increased to the astonishing distance of twenty-seven feet.

North Ann, with a record of 2:25½, is another example of a mare with the same peculiarity, her action at a 2:30 or a 2:15 gait, which she has frequently shown, being very nearly the same as respects rapidity of step. It might seem at first sight that the statement that a trotter might increase his speed by dropping from the 2:18 gait, at which the first two beats were won, down to the record-breaking clip of the last heat without any appreciable increase in the rapidity of step.

As to the influence of the long toe in increasing the stride, it is undoubtedly true that balancing a horse accurately will increase his stride, but even where a horse is squarely balanced the long toe must, as a rule, increase the stride for the following reasons, if for no other: The swinging of the trotting leg is somewhat similar to that of the pendulum and governed in part by the same laws of physics. Lengthen the pendulum and increase the weight at its extreme dependent point and the arc of the circle described by it will be greater and the circle itself enlarged materially. It follows, therefore, it would seem, that, inasmuch as a lengthened toe can only come from an increased hoof growth, the added weight and the further fact that it takes longer to "break over" on a long toe than a short one, the rule, though it has its exceptions, must be that the lengthened toe increases the stride in the average animal.

The editor of the Review has been erroneously informed in regard to the stride of Gloster being twenty-seven feet, and it is altogether improbable that there ever will be a trotter which will cover 23 feet. When Martha Wilkes can show a race-horse clip on a stride of 22 feet it is utterly impossible that an animal can so far excel as to make five feet further. In order to cover as much as nineteen feet in a trotting stride there must be velocity of motion to enable an animal to make the necessary flight through the air. The difference between a "standing-jump" and a "running-jump" is proof enough of this, though when three consecutive jumps are taken there is additional testimony to establish the point. But in regard to Gloster I have a better knowledge than can be obtained from hypothesis. In 1873 I stood by the side of Mr. Alden Goldsmith when Gloster was at exercise. I remarked that he was a "long-strider." "What was the longest trotting stride you ever measured?" queried Mr. Goldsmith. Twenty feet and six inches was the reply. That was Queen of the West by Pilot Jr., one of the very fastest horses I had ever seen up to that time, and possibly as fast as any I have seen since. "Gloster will show more than that" was his answer. "I have seen him go on twenty-three feet." He was brushed down the stretch and the longest stride was identically the same as that of Queen of the West twenty feet and six inches.

A horse "stands over a deal of ground" when there are four feet between the toe of the fore foot and the toe of the hind foot—that is when the fore feet are in line, opposite each other, and the hind feet also. The movement in the square trot is fore fore and hind feet on opposite sides to strike the ground nearly in unison. At the instant of contact they are thrust forward, and if in this thrust both are at the same angle the distance of separation would be the same as when at rest. Owing, however, to the greater length of the hind limb and to its greater freedom of motion, the angle between that and the horizontal line of the body is more acute than that of the anterior limb. Therefore in as large a horse as Abe Edginton, nearly sixteen hands, when going under the saddle on an eighteen feet three inches stride, the space between the supporting feet was only three feet six inches. But that phase of the question has been presented in previous articles, though it may be well to repeat that the variations in the stride are mainly due to differences in the airflights. The pendulum illustration is not altogether correct when applied to the action of horses, apt as it is from a mechanical standpoint. A long pendulum with a heavy weight at the end while it will describe an arc of greater radius requires more force to keep it in motion. The clock pendulum is given impetus near the center of motion, the legs of a trotter from the muscles above the hocks and knees connected by tendons and ligaments, the mainspring muscular fiber, the attachments for propulsive exerting an influence all the way down to the feet. The swing of the legs while the body is in the air is pendulistic, the extensors carry the feet upwards and forwards, but the impulse is given by the contraction of the elastic tissue the fulcrum being the foothold on the ground.

The effect of weight on the feet of trotters is uncertain. In apparently identical cases the results are different. The effect is positive in galloping horses, and were it feasible a big gap between two horses, when equally shod, could be brought to a close contest with a few ounces in the shoes, the slower being favored with the lighter pattern. Weight on the end of the pendulum entails extra exertion on the part of the running horse; on the trotter it may have such beneficial effects on the action of the trotter as not only to counterbalance that, but also increase the speed to a degree that might be called marvellous.

The longest galloping stride I ever measured before coming to California was twenty-six feet. Chance, a big colt by the trotting horse Venture, 2:27½, and from Annette, the dam of Ansel, 2:20, outdid that by two feet, making twenty-eight feet for several strides one morning in a brush on the Bay District course. But I would as readily look for a galloper to stride thirty-five feet as a trotter to make twenty-seven feet in one stride, and as a "water jump" has been made of nearly thirty-nine feet, one huge effort might result in astonishment at the force of the equine muscles. The muscles have full power, however, in the gallop, whereas they are restricted in the trot. The race horse after the airflight touches the ground first with one hind foot, the next hind foot strikes, both of these being on the ground at one time, then a fore foot and the last impulse before the body is hurled through the air is from the other fore foot. One, two, three, four and a bound, the impetus from the first contact increased by the second, third and fourth, the whole uniting to send the superincumbent weight to the limit of distance which the power will effect.

Two airflights in the trotting stride, and the force not so judiciously applied. One two-one two after each a short bound, and as was shown by the diagrams of the stride of Martha Wilkes, each airflight covered more than six feet. If I am not greatly in error, our knowledge of trotting action will be much increased in the "near future." The importance of the study is now recognized, and with a general search after a better knowledge it will be singular, indeed, if a good deal of light is not thrown on the question. As before stated I look for a great deal of information from Messrs. Wiggins, Doble and others who will be incited to take part in the search, and in place of the present ignorance in regard to trotting and pacing action, an intelligent understanding which will lead to improved methods of teaching.

And, by the way, further than that the pacing gait is a synchronous movement of the limbs on the same side of the body, "lateral" in place of "diagonal" to distinguish it from trotting, I am entirely in the dark in regard to pacing action. For nearly thirty years I did not own a pacer, and one that I have now is the first in that long interval. Sharing in the prejudice against this, the fastest harness gait, and without reason save that which gave the preference to another method of progression, if a colt showed any tendency in that direction the propensity was checked, and as to buying a colt of pacing ancestry, that was out of the question. The very best family horse I ever owned was a pacer, and with few exceptions none better on the road for a long drive, and a "rare-good'un" on a brush. A big black over sixteen bands and very handsome. My wife drove him to a two-seat family carriage and as soon as that was loaded with children, he seemed endowed with a sense of responsibility, and no matter what happened he could be depended upon. A big raw-boned, roan mare was nearly as far back in the fifties, faster than the black, in fact by far the fastest horse I had driven up to that time, and, in all probability, as fast as any, but in these early days horses were an interlude, lands, farms and lots the business of life, and their movements so long as they were satisfactory, given little consideration.

From what others have done there is little doubt that pacing action is readier to improve and that speed, as a rule, can be developed quicker than at a trot. The records for yearlings are evidence in favor of that ground, as 2:20½ and 2:22½ are a good deal better than 2:25½ and 2:26½, but all the other ages of colthood are in favor of the trotters. The pacers have got their innings now and will henceforth draw a full share of attention, and, therefore, their action will be an interesting study.

CALIFORNIA ENTHUSIASTS.—"I like an enthusiast," remarked a man who is noted for his executive ability and the faculty of selecting the right man for the place he desires to fill, "a crank if you will, which is only another name for an enthusiast, provided he can show that he is endowed with a proper degree of common sense to give his ardor a fair trial." Crankiness, when applied to human beings, has obtained a scope in late years, and its original significance has been lost, or rather the word "crank" has been applied to so many peculiarities that to a majority of people it is synonymous with a mild sort of insanity, harmless it may be, the person who is stigmatized with the appellation, and yet to be avoided as a very disagreeable companion. That there are people who are so warped from the normal standard as to harp on one idea in and out of season that they are intolerable bores is beyond denial, but to associate that class with another which has still more enthusiasm and discretion enough to press their views at the proper time is not a fair combination. It is not my intention, however, to write an essay on cranks in general, the Californian being the objective point in this article, and especially that branch of the tribe which is interested in horses and horse affairs.

That Californians are an enthusiastic people has been abundantly demonstrated. Not merely the "native sons and daughters of the Golden West," as a few years' residence is sure to intensify the feeling, or lead to the antithesis of enthusiasm, despair and depression which can see no other relief than to extinguish the light which shines so brightly for others. That the climate and surroundings have a potent influence to raise the spirits to a pitch of exaltation at times is a just inference, and that exaltation gives a tinge to expression, and it may be inclined to hyperbole in describing the glories of the country and climate. And the horses, too, which are the particular fancy of the eulogist, come in for a share of the high praise. All right when the enthusiasm is restricted to praise, though unfortunately many are in one respect like Oliver Goldsmith, who had the frankness to admit that he could not bear to hear another praised unless that he was awarded a big share of the flattery. Thus some of our horse enthusiasts are prone to disparage in order to heighten the merits of the families which occupy the warmest corner of their hearts, and while extolling to the limits of their vocabulary, switch off occasionally to attack with the same ardor.

This may be termed crankiness in an offensive shape, and when a person "runs down" all but one of our noted families he lacks the element of common sense which my friend insisted made cranks. Valuable agents for the transaction of business.

There are four California families of world-wide renown, and though only one of the quartet was foaled on California soil, all are admitted to be of the Pacific Slope. Electioneer, Director, Guy Wilkes and Sultan. We can all become enthused when any of these horses are mentioned with good grounds for even florid praise, but when a rosy color is used in one portrait, and sombre gray or a dead black in the others, the artist is a sure enough crank.

There is another phase of California enthusiasm which is very agreeable to me at this time. No one can deny that when compared with the past the present market for trotting stock has taken a serious downfall. It comes harder upon breeders who are thousands of miles away from that market than those who are more favorably located. The difference in expense is a material consideration, and the risk of all kinds greater. While everyone recognized the true situation I have not met or heard from a single person who has lost courage or given up hopes for the future of trotting sport. "We will make a better home circuit and we will still breed a fair share of winners for the big circuits of the East. We will join heart and hand in any reasonable project to make trotting more popular with the masses who are fond of outdoor sports; if we fail in one direction will try another. That trotting and pacing can be made popular in a country like this we are positive in the belief, and the move that the Directors of the P. C. T. H. B. A. have made is a good beginning. Do not be discouraged if the first deviation does not strike the right course, that at least will show the error and give a guide for rectification."

These and other encouraging words have been the welcome tales I have listened to with gratified feelings for the kind wishes, and hearty enthusiasm expressed. I am not prone to discouragement, in fact maybe too optimistic in my makeup, and hence when others of experience share in the views there is a great deal more confidence that the outcome will be all right. Were the subject of less importance, the anxiety would be lessened, but when the advancement of one of the great sports of the country is at stake, and with which I have been so closely connected for more than a third of a century there is an intensification of the feeling, an overpowering desire for the innovations which have been decided upon by the Trotting-Horse Breeders to be successful from the start. I write breeders instead of association, for though there was, if my memory can be depended upon, practically unanimity on the part of the directors, every breeder that has spoken has been in favor of a trial.

The remark which one of them made that if the experiment did not prove to be just right in all its features it was worthy of trial, as the weak points could be strengthened in the future, recalled a practice in my younger days which may serve for an illustration. By far the largest part of the surveying I was engaged in was in the big woods of Pennsylvania. The job might be dividing a large body of lands into such sized lots as would attract the various grades of purchasers. Our boundary might be the banks of a stream, and these mountain streams as a rule run in an erratic course, and the other sides of the lot at various angles. In those old days the magnetic needle was the only guide, as that was before the invention of the solar compass. Measurements over hills and mountains and through laurel and tamarack swamps were not very exact, and when two points were to be connected calculations made on these data were not to be depended upon. A trial line was the first move, and that was not expected to come very close to the mark. But the error gave the cue for rectification and the back course was run with confidence and the line "blazed" on the trees.

Something similar and yet widely different this trial line to find the proper course to popularize the trotting sports. Popularize it in two ways. In the first place to increase the attractions so that the gate receipts will show manifest improvements; in the second to give owners of horses, and those who manage them a "better-paying business." With these objects accomplished enthusiasm regarding the future trotting is not misplaced. The hope adds to the prospect, and an enthusiasm which will not subside, however dark the future may appear, is nearly a certain guarantee of ultimate triumph. A fore-runner of anticipated victory; a tuning of the bells which will ring joyously over the re-establishment of the truly American sport.

Speed Carts.

The demand for J. J. Deal & Son's speed carts for track use and fast driving is on the increase in California, Oregon and Washington territory, Messrs. Baker & Hamilton, the agents, have filled hundreds of orders for them, and have yet to hear of a single case of dissatisfaction from the buyers. No better endorsement is needed than this, and the low price for such strongly-made, highly-finished vehicles is quite an inducement to owners of good youngsters who desire to ride fast with perfect safety. Everything about these vehicles is carefully selected and first-class in every particular. Read the advertisement.

W. B. REIS, of Alamo, has a number of choicely-bred thoroughbreds and trotters on his beautiful stock farm. Among the latter are the two promising young stallions, Harry I. and Sid Salisbury, they will enter the charmed circle this fall.

Scoring the Trotter.

Will any person bring forward his objections to rules for scoring? There never were any written. Everyone knows the custom, and the only rule is the rule of custom. What I beg to know is, what are the objections to written rules?

Tedious scoring oftentimes is disastrous to owner and horse. Many times a horse is "knocked out" in the exertions of repeated scores, especially in the early season and hot season. The attendance, that part of it attracted to see the contests in heats, or for its gaiety, or to catch the exhilaration of the occasion, as apart from those who attend to win or lose, are annoyed, disgusted, and oftentimes worn out by the tediousness of the score. These people are essential to the maintenance and advancement of trotting tracks.

Is it not wanton to so disregard the pleasure of this element of our support? Oftentimes it results in a postponement which is a disappointment to many.

How often are the judges laughed at, hooted, it may be to their mortification, for some error in judgment because the "grand stand" is wrought up and on edge from pure disgust at the delay in scoring. All this is against the sport and to the advantage of no one, unless possibly some game old trotter without much speed and the "boy on the outside."

Who doubts that much of this annoyance can be obviated by legalized rules? If judges were blocked out of any particular kind of timber, such rules might not be so essential, but, as everyone knows, they are not. Some judges of races never owned a trotting race horse, never trained or drove one; some, as the saying goes, "never have seen a race"—(of course that came from "the boy on the outside")—and only so far as habit or custom governs there are no two alike. Does not this establish the necessity for specific rules in conducting the score?

Now I have asked for objections, if there are any, and of course there are, and with the objections offered I expect an offering of rules at the same time, so my inquiry has the double purpose of getting a two-headed vote. Votes are now in order.

Permit me to submit my plan of shortening the score. The effort should be to get the horses together "head and head." I would begin the ruling at the commencement of the score, requiring the three head or leading horses at the start to take up the rule.

Rule 1—The leading horse shall pull back to the second horse, and the second horse shall pull back to the third horse.

Rule 2—No horse shall come on and ahead of the third horse before reaching the wire.

Rule 3—No horse shall come to the wire ahead of the pole-horse.

To secure obedience to these rules judges may fine the drivers and collect the money for any disobedience at their discretion as in any other fine. If any driver neglects to comply with these rules and is sent off disregarding the rule, and such horse comes in ahead, he shall be set back double the distance he was ahead in going away.

I expect some will howl at this penalty, but it is fair. There must be a penalty, and this last penalty has an element of danger in it, an uncertainty in it, that I think will sustain the rule. Some say it will be a difficult matter to determine. Very well. It is no more difficult than the same form of penalty governing a gaining break. No one hesitates at taking a place in the stand because of Rule 30.

There must be some additional effort in overcoming any error according to its needs. Now there is gross neglect permitted in scoring. It is to the great detriment of the trotting interest, and to correct the error judges and drivers should be strained up to the necessary effort. Some will say horses should not be sent off "disregarding the rule," but should be called back and fined. Very well. I grant that, where it can be done without too much delay. Delay in starting the heat is the chief object in applying these rules.

Now then, if the rule is complied with three horses will be "head and head" before reaching the wire. If there are four horses in the field and the pole-horse is back of the three head horses at the commencement, and the rule is complied with, four horses will be head and head at the wire. While these leading horses are getting together, or head and head, the rest of the field are coming to them if they can.

No horse can hulk ahead of the third horse without breaking the rule.

Some will say, how is a driver to determine which is the third horse? Just the same as he determines whether he is in the third or fourth place at the finish. Does anyone doubt that he can do that? He may not know this always, but if he is so close that he cannot decide if he is in no danger of being fined or set back. The first three or four may come in head and head. Very good, but the chances are that they will not, and that some horse is being taken back, and while this is the result in front the rear horses are closing up if they can. The rule applies equally to the pole-horse, and if he has the lead in coming up he is being taken back or is disregarding the rule. Three efforts should be the highest average in scoring, instead of eight and ten and sometimes fourteen scores, as we have all seen.

Each driver is supposed to know the rules before starting. If there are no rules, and he is obliged to "catch on" to them as he becomes acquainted with the new judge, then a prompt application might be thought a hardship, but if the rules are established then he should know them, and their application is just as fair in the first score as in the last. The custom is to fool away two or three or four attempts in scoring before any definite rule is applied, except, perhaps, "score with the pole-horse," and who has not seen the pole-horse come ahead of all others repeatedly before he is cautioned to take back to the field?

He should be fined the first score if he came ahead, and every disobedience of the established rules should meet the same fate. Apply the rule to the first score and not compel a driver to work away at a judge three or four scores to get on to his ways. How often a refractory horse is permitted to delay the score from one to ten times! Three chances is all that should be permitted, as I believe.

If he is not ahead and therefore out of place at the third score, let him go and take his chances. A race should not be delayed to accommodate one horse longer than this. It is a lottery at best, and if a man does not want the worst of it in a race let him come with a well-trained and reliable horse or take the consequences.

How often good horses are all worn out scoring, and then beaten by a refractory horse that would not come to the wire at all, while the struggle is going on with good horses as against each other and finally getting the word tired, the refractory horse, being comparatively fresh, is able to win. Three chances are enough for any rattle-headed fool that is allowed to compete in good company. If he is not good after three trials let him go home to his trainer and not be allowed to wear out the patience of competing drivers and the audience. I see no hardship in the application of these rules. Others will, and that is what I am asking of you. They may call for a better control of the horses in a race and the necessity of more skill in driving, and what of that? The quality of the horse and the ability of the driver are more and more in demand, and why not?

The time is coming when "mile and repeat" will take the place of three in five; some predict that dash races are near at hand and races of greater or less severity, adapted to the capacity of the different horses, even as the running races are conducted.

People want more fun to the hour—more heats, quicker decisions and less scoring in place of so many "jim-jacks" and "side-shows" that cost money, with no possible returns except at the gate. Running races are not defaced with these tin-plate exhibitions. Horses enough and heats enough bring the multitude and multiply the receipts. Let the monkey shows be monopolized by the pumpkin shows, and where, as Luken says, "the bull-beef standsrd of the stand-still breed" is pre-eminant.

The demand on a race-track is for music and money and races, and while these are the attraction of the hour the American people will not forget the day.—William B. Smith in The Horseman.

Black Hawk's Dam and Record.

It is a little remarkable how long a false statement will sometimes last, or stand, whether made by accident or design. In looking up a pedigree too many will have a feeling or wish to have it so and so, and if some one that knows nothing about it tells them that it is so, they accept it and the horse's pedigree is recorded so as a fact. If the horse proves a remarkable horse, some one in time will investigate it that has no feeling only to have it as it is, and if the pedigree is true it stands, if not it fails. Such pedigrees are generally found to be false. Some give their horse a false pedigree knowing it to be false, and it often lasts as long as they want it to. Farmer's Beauty, the sire of Taggart's Abdallah 16, had some such a pedigree given him. His owner had it on his hills that the horse was bred at Rockingham, Vt., and foaled at Wells River, Vt., in 1842 and sired by Gifford Morgan, and he claimed, too, but not on the hills, that he was sired by Gifford when he was kept at Walpole, N. H. Gifford was not taken to Walpole until 1845. It was so in regard to the breeding of the dam of Black Hawk 5. She was called by Mr. Hill a three-quarter English blood mare, raised in the province of New Brunswick. At this time the English or thoroughbred cross was the popular cross, and many a horse was called English or part thoroughbred when they knew nothing about it. The Canadian or pacing cross was the unpopular cross, as it was believed, or called low or hase breeding or blood. Hardly any one that had a nice horse wanted to have it that it was part Canadian or pacing blood.

Mr. Linsley in his "Morgan Horses" does not state it quite as strong as Mr. Hill. He says "Black Hawk's dam was raised in New Brunswick and is described as a half-blooded English mare, a very fine animal, black, and a fast trotter." It will be seen Mr. Linsley leaves out one-quarter, but Mr. Solomon W. Jewett states it stronger than Mr. Hill. In an article of his, published in 1879 he said: "The dam of Black Hawk was a thoroughbred English mare owned in Canada near the north line of New Hampshire where Black Hawk was foaled. It was from this strain of blood that the crow hairs were derived." Every one at all posted knows that Black Hawk was bred and foaled at Durham, N. H., and the false statement of Mr. Jewett's that he was foaled in Canada, shows how unreliable his statements must be. The false breeding given Black Hawk's dam stood or lasted some forty years. It was in 1885 the public were given part of the fact as to Black Hawk's dam. Benj. Kelly, the breeder of Black Hawk, swapped for Black Hawk's dam in Haverhill, Mass., and she was called by him a Narragansett mare. This was in the summer of 1831 and while Mr. Kelly owned her at Durham she was called the Old Narragansett mare. She was a coarse, scrawny, dark colored mare with gray hairs intermixed, had a white strip in the face, was mixed gaited, inclined to pace and single foot at times, and was called quite fast. It was understood she had been worked in a huteher's cart at Concord, N. H. John Bell, the owner of Sherman Morgan, the reputed sire of Black Hawk, stated a short time before his death that he had known all the time as to her origin and breeding, that she was bred at Walpole, N. H., by James Wier, foaled about 1819, sire Old Traveler, dam a black Narragansett mare from Rhode Island, that his uncle took her to Concord and sold her there.

Old Traveler was a very fine black English horse from Hartford, Ct. He sired the Hawkin's horse that Linsley states was by Justin Morgan, and too, Paddy or Young Traveller, the sire of Black Hawk. Another statement as to Black Hawk should be proved before it is told any more. It is put down in all the horse books that Black Hawk's record is 2:42, but no one has told when or where he got it. These facts must be told and proved before a record can be admitted and allowed. The 2:42 record that is given Black Hawk is, we believe, as false as some of the other statements made in regard to him. It originated in the brain of the one that states that he was foaled in Canada. In a puff wrote for Black Hawk, published in the June number of the Albany Cultivator in 1845, Mr. Jewett states "Black Hawk, when a colt, trotted in harness on Cambridge Park one mile in two minutes and forty-two seconds without any training." Mr. Linsley put this statement in his "Morgan Horses" as a fact, and Mr. Wallace copied it from Mr. Linsley into the Trotting Register. Black Hawk never was taken out of New Hampshire until he was five years old and, of course, never trotted on Cambridge Park when a colt. There can be little or no doubt that the 2:42 record that has been given Black Hawk is false, and no one should repeat it unless they can show when and where it was made.—Dunton's Spirit of the Turf.

A BILL has been introduced into the Legislature of South Dakota providing that anyone who shall enter his horse under an assumed name in any race for money shall be liable to imprisonment in the penitentiary for one to three years, or in the county jail not less than six months, and a fine not to exceed $1,000.

—Kentucky Stock Farm.

THE Kentfield sale takes place next Tuesday, April 4th. Everyone who wants a good roadster, or a well-bred colt or filly should attend.

Fashion Farm Sale.

There was only a moderate attendance at the American Institute building yesterday morning at the opening of the two days' sale of stock from Fashion Farm, Trenton, N. J., says the Daily Spirit. Though the crowd was not large, there were several good buyers. Mr. J. H. Shults, the Master of Parkville, was on hand, and in addition to being a liberal buyer was also a lively bidder. Robert Steel, of Philadelphia, catalogue in hand, was ready to pick up anything choice and did so. Among the crowd might have been noticed Colonel R. P. Todhunter, Lexington, Ky.; Dr. Day, Waterloo, N. Y.; Hon. J. W. Keyes, South Branch, N. J.; A. Welch, Hartford, Conn.; J. W. Daly, D. S. Hammond, Captain J. Dawson, F. S. Steinway, C. H. Kerner, Judge Freedman, T. C. Eastman and George Scattergood.

The highest sale of the day was the two-year-old filly Gold Coin, by Baroa Wilkes, dam Rosebud, by General Washington; second dam Goldsmith Maid, 2:14. The fight for this filly was between Mr. Welch, of Hartford, and Mr. Shults, and the latter's bid of $1,700 won the day. The big bargain of the sale was the two-year-old colt Piscator, by Florida, dam Pomona, by Jersey Wilkes, which also went to Mr. Shults at $400. A capital three-year-old colt, Verdi, by Rumor, dam by General Knox, was bought by G. Hildebrecht, of Trenton, N. J., at $850. At the same figure Mr. F. T. Steinway got the good four-year-old colt Digma, 2:25 1/2. He is also by Rumor, dam by Socrates. The bidding was lively on the two-year-old filly Wilhelmine, by Eagle Bird, dam Thoretta, by General Knox, but Mr. Shults would not be refused, and at $1,500 he went across the big bridge. That fast mare Patti, by Jay Gould, found her value at $1,000, and became the property of A. Aymer, of East Orange, N. J. Forty-nine head of stock brought $18,955, or an average of $387. The sale will be continued to-day. Below are the details:

Table listing various horses and their owners/buyers, including names like Cynthla, Cebolla, Cozent, and others, with prices and details.

Forty-nine head, 18,955
Average per head, $387.

The attendance at the American Institute building on the second day of Messrs. Peter C. Kellogg & Co.'s sale of stock from Fashion Farm, was rather light, but it was a good buying crowd. The stock offered on both days was in very rough condition and not groomed up as all stock should be for this market. It is quite evident that the courts are poor handlers of choicely bred trotting stock, and are grossly ignorant of the condition in which they should be brought into the sale ring. However, there were many good judges present, and when any offering of real merit was under the hammer Mr. Kellogg did not have to wait for bids.

The last sale of the day was that of the famous old ex-king, Jay Gould, 2:21 1/2. It was really pitiable and pathetic to see the once great horse in all the decrepitude of extreme old age standing patiently while the auctioneer begged for a bid. He looked indeed a veritable equine King Lear with an kind daughter to wait upon him. The well-known horse shoer, James O'Neil, of New York, at last bid $50 and got the old hero. He will give him a good stall and kind attention for the balance of his days. The Fashion sale for the day footed up to $16,040, with an average of $471.76. The total sale for the two days brought $34,905, or an average of $421.60. Below are the details of the day:

Table listing horse sales with details like name, age, sex, and price, including entries like Mona Nutwood, Nym Cringle, and others.

Total for 34 head, $16,040
Average for the day, $471.76
Total for 81 head, two days' sale, $34,905
Average for two days, $421.60.

D., Selma, Cal.—1. Please give the breeding of the trotting-horse called Robin (or Robins); think he was campaigned through the northern circuit last year. 2. Is he standard-bred, and what is his record, if any? Answer.—A roan horse named Robbing, 2:23 1/4, by Black Walnut, was campaigned through Montana last year, and Robin B., a pacer, by Little Tex, was raced in California in 1892. The latter has no record. Neither are standard-bred, we believe. J. M., Sacramento, Cal. 1. Please tell me what Singleton's number is and in what foot he is registered? 2. How many 2:30 performers has he been? 3. Has his sire any 2:30 performers? I saw the horse 2 1/2 number some time ago in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, but I have forgotten it. Answer.—1. No. 20,886, in volume 12, 2. One—Maud Singleton, 2:28 1/2. 3. One—Mollie B., 2:29 1/2. Willie Scheppler's number is 17,359. D. D., Bakersfield, Cal.—Please inform me through the columns of your paper the extended pedigree of Captain Webster, son of Williamson's Belmont, also of Simmons, son of George Wilkes, also the names and records of Captain Webster's get below 2:30. How many did Williamson's Belmont have in the list? Answer.—Captain Webster was by Williamson's Belmont (son of American Boy and Imp. Prunella, by Comus), dam untraced. Simmons is by George Wilkes, 2:22, dam Black Jauc, by Mambrino Patchen 58, second dam Lady Stanhope, Captain Webster's 2:30 performers are Frank (pacer), 2:20, and Free-stone, 2:29. Williamson's Belmont got but one 2:30 performer—Venture, 2:27 1/4. W. J. L., Gonzales.—1. Can you inform me who is the owner of Victor, also color and age? Then record and breeding? 2. Please give the Old Gilpatrick's pedigree. 3. What do you think of Dr. Canada's Impregator? Answer.—1. G. A. Doherty, and we think he lives at Sierra Vista, Cal. Victor is a dark bay, and we do not know his age, but should say he is about twelve years old. His record is 2:22. 2. Gilpatrick, according to a communication from J. R. Rodchaver, of Petaluma, printed in this paper on April 11, 1889, was a bay stallion with white stripe in the face and near white hind foot, foaled in 1854. He was sired by Bailey's Leviathan, dam by Imp. Consternation, second dam by Grey Messenger, son of Mambrino, he by Imp. Messenger, Bailey's Leviathan was by Weaver's Leviathan (8:00) Imp. Leviathan, dam of Stockholder, second dam by Stockholder, etc. Gilpatrick's dam was brought to Oregon by the late John Welsh, in company with Rifleman, son of Imp. Glencoe. Mr. Rodchaver bought Gilpatrick of John O'Brien, and afterward sold him to E. Poe, of Healdsburg. 3. It is highly recommended. J. V. K., Wainuku, Maui, H. I.—The horse I referred to was a stallion, not a gelding; in regard to his name, I am not sure which it was of those two names, Defiance or Reliance. He was a high-bred horse of some of the trotting families, and was very fine-looking (about 15 1/2 or 16 hands high); in fact, was the best-looking stallion I ever saw. He was a double-gaited horse, and in road-trail would go very fast at either gait. He is dead, but has left a name as the finest getter of fine, fast roadsters ever brought to the islands. I have been informed that he won this record of 2:26 in 1880 or 1881 at San Francisco, Cal. If you will kindly inquire of some party in Petaluma, Sonoma county, Cal., probably we will find out his true name and if he has a record of 2:26. I have written a number of letters to this Mr. Merchant, but have received no answer from him. Kindly try and bring a subscriber of your good paper. Answer.—Reliance, a bay horse, foaled in 1874, made a record of 2:22 1/2 at Stockton, Cal., September 8, 1882. He was by Alexander 490, dam Maud (dam of Magdallah, 2:23 1/4), by Mambrino Rattler, son of Biggart's Rattler. We never heard of this horse going to the islands, however.

HOOF-BEATS.

It seems that Mr. C. E. Miller did not get the Bybee horses after all, though it was supposed he would take them as late as Wednesday night.

B. C. HOLLY's good bay horse, imp. Paramatta, by imp. Cheviot—Scraps, pulled up lame in his work this week. Four of the Holly horses came down on Thursday, the balance yesterday.

MORVIN and Queen of Scots, two-year-olds in the string of Wilber F. Smith, are as handsome and racy-looking a pair of youngsters as any one ever saw, while the balance of the string looks exceedingly well.

STARTER J. B. FERGUSON arrived last Thursday from New Orleans, where he has been wielding the flag for some ninety-five days. He is the same genial, popular gentleman, notwithstanding he has had a siege of hard work.

THE thoroughbred mare, Blue Lodge, by Fellowcraft, out of Bonnie May, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, is to be bred to Arion, 2:10. She was a fast mare and frequent winner herself upon the running turf and is also the dam of several winners.

ALCONER is advertised to make the season of 1893 at John McCord's place, Napa, and in July will be prepared for the races. That he will get a low mark is a foregone conclusion, for he is pure-gaited and speedy. As a sire, all of his first crop of youngsters attest his worth.

DR. DAY reports that the people of Europe ask very little about pedigree. The qualities they demand are soundness, size, good gait, good mouth and individuality. If horses possessing these qualifications are supplied to customers the demand for our trotters will steadily increase.

THE Derby winner of 1874, George Frederick, bought at the late Mr. Hume Webster's sale for $195 by Mr. Guy Bethell, has just been sold by the latter for $1,500 for exportation to Canada. George Frederick, now twenty-two years of age, is the oldest Derby winner alive, the next being Galopin, who is a year younger.

J. O. REIS, of this city, purchased the Humburg farm near Alamo a few weeks ago, and is going into the business of raising fine horses—thoroughbreds and trotters—on a small scale. Mr. Reis is a thorough horseman, and will use good judgment in the selection of his broodmares and the sires to which he will breed them. We welcome him to our ranks.

YO BL REY, the $27,000 brother to Yo Tambien, worked half a mile at Sacramento last Thursday in 0:50 over a heavy track with his head pulled around to his side. Flood Gate outran Dare three-quarters easily, doing the distance in 1:19. Among the fillies in the Fair stable Ella Lewis is said to be the most promising. Richard Havey goes East in about three weeks with the string.

AT Mason City, Iowa, last Tuesday night, a fire broke out stock barn owned by the Kirk Brothers, and the famous stallion Storm, that got a record of 2:08½ at Nashville, Tennessee, got burned to death. Storm was foaled in 1887; he was sired by Brown Hal 16,935, out of Zephyr, by John Dillard Jr.; second dam Tampo, by Thompson's Traveller. In the same barns three other fine stallions that shared a similar fate were Brown John, by Brown Hal; Red Clay, by Red Wilkes and Edmund C., by Red Clay. The loss on horses alone is fully $100,000.

WM. CORBITT, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, finds that he has more pasture than he needs for his stock and advertises to take horses at $6 per month. Every horseman in the State knows what an excellent place this farm is for stock, and no better pasturage can be found anywhere. The proximity of this celebrated stock farm to this city, and the great advantages it has over many others, makes it a most desirable place. It is well-sheltered, fenced and watered, while the appearance of the youngsters raised there attest the excellence of the natural feed.

HON. I. V. BAKER, of Comstocks, N. Y., says that since the majority of the horses which now pass under the hammer are purchased for road and track purposes instead of breeding ranks, records will multiply very fast. The get of stallions will be thoroughly tried in the development school, and the records will come so thick and fast as to greatly exalt the rank of the sire. The knife will be more freely used than ever before and fillies will not be held in reserve for the harem. This will put a check upon supply, and the value of well-bred youngsters should increase.

S. H. CRANE, of Turlock, purchased a colt by Mountain Boy, out of that famous road mare Lady Sargent, at the Napa sale, that promises to be one of the fastest youngsters in this State. The stories circulated about its speed approach the marvellous: we only hope they are all true. At the sale he showed more speed than any other one, and it was predicted then that he would become a race horse. Mr. Crane purchased the Alcona filly, Alice Taylor, at the sale, and she shows extreme speed also. He will put her in the list this year.

THAT excellent judge of a horse, B. C. Holly, in an interview this week, declared that Sir Francis should win the American Derby of 1893. He thinks so because the colt is by Mr. Pickwick, who got horses that could "go the route" and pack big weight, and because he is out of Thora, by Longfellow, one of the best mares over the longer distances ever seen in America. Then Sir Francis, Mr. H. says, is being trained by that king among conditioners, Matt Byrnes, and will be ridden by American's "star" jockey, Snapper Garrison. How can such a combination be beaten? Mr. Holly's pick will undoubtedly be "thar or tharabouts" when the rich stake has been contested for.

LOCAL breeders, you are all right. Don't look back; keep your eye on the bull's eye and you will sooner or later hit the mark. Trotting horse breeders in some sections of the country may be obliged to abandon the business; in fact, there is no question about it. They will for the simple reason that you can produce the stock for so much less than they that they cannot live, but so long as you can as you now do, raise your stock on land that has cost you but $25 or $30 per acre, produce the finest timothy hay at $5 per ton and the best of oats for 20 cents per bushel, you have the best of it. Let breeders in other sections of the country stop breeding. That's all the better for you, for the fewer trotters bred the greater the demand and the more they will bring. Don't say a word but keep breeding, keep training and keep campaigning.—American Trotter.

THE Austrian Government and the Vienna Trotting Association have purchased three of the best horses in the Ketcbam-Splan shipment and the best three horses ever imported into Austria. These are the stallions Brown, four years old, record 2:18½, by Combat, dam by Dictator; Gothatum, by Dictatum, dam by St. Gotbard, and Sir Gotbard, by St. Gotbard. These horses will be used in furthering and fostering the trotting horse interests of this country, horsemen here uniting in acknowledging that the American sire is Austria's only hope of securing speed.

J. R. ROSS, the well-known horseman of the State of Washington, said to a representative of this paper last Thursday at Bay District track: "I will run Nellie Van against any piece of horseflesh, on any kind of track, three-eighths of a mile, the weights to be carried 100 pounds each, and will wager any sum from $1,000 to $5,000 a side. These people have got on their dignity and lengthened the distances in their races, but all the same Longstreet and La Tosca ran five and a half furlongs at Morris Park, to build which it cost $1,500,000. Probably those horses class with a few of the California-bred ones. At least I would like to see something of a higher class than they run in San Francisco."

AN English exchange states that "Orme has greatly improved in appearance during the winter, and is now a very beautiful horse; but of his racing form nothing can be known until he has been some time in strong work. Orme is not to run before Ascot, where he is engaged in the Rous Memorial Stakes on the Thursday, and in the Hardwicke Stakes on the Friday, and La Fleche is entered for both these races. He will also start for the Eclipse Stakes, which is run at Sandown Park on July 14, and this ought to be one of the most interesting races of the season, as the list of acceptances also includes Meddler, Milford, Silene (much fancied at Newmarket for the One Thousand Guineas and the Oaks), Marly, La Fleche, Dunure (a much-improved horse), Glenwood, Raeburn and Chene Royal. Orme is perfectly sound in his wind at the present time."

R. PORTER ASHE applied for stalls at Bay District track last Thursday forenoon, and informed us that, much to his surprise, he was told that there were no stalls for him. In view of the fact that there were a number of empty stalls and a large number being built, it looked as if revenge might be at the bottom of this refusal. Whether Mr. Ashe's entries will be accepted at the meeting which begins to-day is not known, but the fact that stall-room has been refused Mr. A— would lead one to think that if stalls can be refused entries can be also. Mr. Williams was seen last Thursday night, and declared that while Geraldine and the four two-year-olds would not be allowed to start at the Blood Horse meeting, he would go out of his way to procure stalls for any other of Mr. Ashe's horses that would be raced. Mr. Williams declares he won the suit, and that Mr. Ashe has nothing to say about Geraldine et al. Besides, the Board of Directors had declared the horses should not start. To us it looks as if the racers are controlled by Williams until Ashe pays the amount of Williams' interest, $4,909.74. Then they will pass to Porter Ashe.

OF PROMISING two-year-olds in the Eastern stables a New York exchange says: "The Oneck Stable, at old Jerome, is discussed in manner half envious by ambitious rivals. Among its inmates are ten youngsters, half of whom could race next week, if called upon, so industrious has Walter Rollins been with his sbed work. The flower of the collections are two Midlothians, one a big chestnut colt out of Probability, and the other a trim brown filly out of Lima. They are as gentle as dogs and as fast as quarter horses. At Morris Park, Walcott & Campbell boast a St. Blaise colt and a filly by Kinglike, dam Nina, that are pictures of speed even at this early date. 'Billy' Donohue has a couple of Misers that he is also very proud of. The Lorillard stable is filled with grand-lookers, but nothing is known by the public regarding their respective trials. 'Snip' Donovan says they are tough as goats and will pose as snip-beaters until they chase in their respective fields a time or two. Jack Pincus has two clever ones among the lot at Sheephead. They are Downcast, a bay gelding by Ill-Used—Royalty, and Love Not, a bay gelding by Tremont, dam La Traviata. Downcast is pronounced a juvenile wonder."

JAY-EYE-SEE, the famous little black gelding, will be campaigned again this season, and his owner, Jackson I. Case, expects to see him materially reduce his record. Jay-Eye-See is now fifteen years old. He secured his trotting record of 2:10 at Providence, R. I., August 1, 1884, after which he went into retirement, and it was not until 1887 that he was again trained, and after trotting an exhibition mile at Freeport in 2:12½ he was shipped to Lincoln, Neb., where on September 14th he trotted the half-mile track there in 2:15½, which was the best performance on a half-mile track up to that date. During the fall of 1887, while being prepared for a race, he strained a tendou, and it was thought that his racing days were over. He was fired and blistered, and all seemed to do but little good. Last spring, after being jogged on the road all winter, he was placed in training and converted from a trotter to a pacer. The first mile he was asked to go in public was at Racine, where, on August 6th, he started to beat 2:25, and paced a mile in 2:17. August 6th he started at Washington Park to beat 2:17, and paced in 2:08½; at Independence, Iowa, August 26th, he started to beat 2:08½, and secured his present record of 2:06½. During last season he started in public seven times, and in every instance, with the exception of one, he equaled or beat 2:10.

AT Village Farm recently Supt. Bradburn sent for Lady Bunker, and when the famous veteran was led out before several visitors he said, "I'll bet $500 she is in foal." He had formed that opinion several weeks ago, but to be sure he waited until yesterday before making the announcement. If Mr. Bradburn has been successful in his efforts to get her in foal he has performed a feat that no other man in the breeding business could accomplish, and which will place him at the head of stock farm superintendents. Lady Bunker is one of the greatest broodmares living. She was bought by Gerhard Lang in 1836 for $6,500, and for seven years she has been bred to such sires as Sultan, Gen. Hancock, Hylas, Wilkes Boy and Prince Regent without results. Last September Mr. Bradburn bred her to Mambrino King, and she is in foal. Being the dam of that famous racehorse and sire Guy Wilkes, whose get will bring more at auction than the producer of any American sires, and William L., sire of Axtell, 2:12, and of El Mahdi, the sire of Fulmo, 2:18½, and others, a foal out of Lady Bunker would be worth thousands of dollars, and if a regular breeder she would bring an immense sum at auction. Several breeders have offered as high as $25,000 for one of her colts sired by any great stallion.—Buffalo Enquirer.

"A HORSE'S chances are more than ten to one of the mare's." Take a six-year-old horse that has been in the stud since a four-year-old; he has covered probably fifty mares in those two years, and, if any good, has thirty living foals, or say even twenty, allowing for deaths. A six-year-old mare bred as a four-year-old could have but two foals (barring twigs); so the horse has twenty representatives to trot for his reputation where the mare has two only (not allowing for deaths), and as the horse grows older his chances increase, as he covers more mares; the mare's chances remain the same, with a losing chance added, if she misses or a foal dies. Therefore, "dam of two in the list" is as good or better than "sire of twenty."

ACCORDING to the voracious chronicler Mike Bowerman has just recently discovered the penchant New Yorkers have for sitting up until breakfast is ready. He further says he's fighting shy of newspaper men: "I'll tell you why. I was in New York this winter and spending a night chatting with a happy crowd—you know it isn't fashionable to sleep in New York; everybody stays up all the twenty-four hours—and among my companions was a quiet little 'duck' who sat sleepily in the corner and never touched anything but apollonaris. But, oh, how he did chime in when the lunch came around! He was 'dead in it' then. Well some fellow got up and began blowing about Stamboul and Kremlin, and this and that, and belittling Moquette. I jumped up and offered to bet $5,000 or $10,000 or $1,000 that Moquette would down any of them in a race the coming season. Nobody took me up and the incident was forgotten. But, ah! when I got home! My wife was there with a newspaper in her hand and she began: 'Look here, Mike, I'd like for you to explain how you can bet $10,000 on a horse-race when you haven't had enough money to buy me a new dress in six months.' And I haven't got through explaining that matter yet.—Horseman.

Death of Steiner, 2:29 1-2.

A. B. GONZALES, owner of Steiner and a number of other very promising trotters at the Hobart Farm, in company with some friends visited the beautiful farm last Tuesday and were delighted to see how handsome and strong-looking Steiner had become under K. O'Grady's care. That afternoon the horse took sick with acute colic and the veterinarian was called. The patient became worse and although every care was taken and all that medical skill could be devised was done the animal died early the next morning.

Steiner was foaled March 21, 1887. He was sired by Steina-way, 2:25½ (at three years); dam Katy G., dam of Chas. Derby, 2:20, by Electioneer 125; second dam Fanny Malone, grandam of Maud C., 2:19, by Niagara (sire of Fairmont, p. 2:22½); third dam Fauny Wickham, the noted twenty-mile trotter, by imp. Herald; fourth dam by imp. Trustee; fifth dam by imp. Barefoot; sixth dam by Sir Archy; seventh dam by Florizel; eighth dam by imp. Alderman, then to thirteenth dams thoroughbreds.

He was sold as a yearling to A. B. Gonzales for $1500, and gave promise of being a remarkably fast horse, but the first trainer to get hold of him almost destroyed his chances of ever being a five-minute horse. His owner then took him in hand and nursed the handsome fellow until he was able to trot. Last year at Kent, Washington, over a rough country track, Steiner got a record of 2:29½, and this year it was predicted by all who had seen him work that 2:15 would at least be his record. He was a remarkably handsome horse (a little larger than his brother Chas. Derby, 2:20), a seal brown in color, sixteen hands, and weighed 1200 pounds. He was one of the types of a perfect horse that is seldom seen, and his loss to the trotting-horse interests, as well as to his owner, will be deeply felt. He was valued at $15,000, but it is doubtful if that sum would be taken for him.

DR. W. F. EGAN, the veterinarian who attended Steiner, held a post-mortem examination Thursday, and ascertained that his diagnosis was correct; the animal died of stanguated inguinal hernia, which could not be reduced, and caused acute inflammation of the bowels. On cutting open the scrotal sac, it was discovered that there were bloody feces in with the testicle on the left side; the latter was black, showing great inflammation. The part of the bowel that was strangulated was also dark, bloody and inflamed.

The Famous Toomey Sulki.

THE attention of horsemen is called to the advertisement of the Toomey sulki, of which J. O'Kane, of this city, is the agent. The superiority of these vehicles over all others is acknowledged by the leading drivers in America, and to-day orders are coming in so fast for them, that the entire force of men at the great works at Canal Dover, Ohio, is at work night and day manufacturing them, and shipments of vehicles are being made to all parts of the United States and Europe. As the time is rapidly approaching when every one who has a fast trotter or pacer will be battling for purses and stakes on the various race courses on this Coast, it is of the utmost importance that they provide themselves with a "first-class sulki," and the Toomey truss axle with its advantages of strength, rigidity and weight answer the description in every particular. Call and inspect them at the agency and where O'Kane will take pleasure in showing how meritorious these vehicles are. Ask our best and most noted drivers what they think of the "Toomey sulki."

How to Get a Mare in Foal.

COVINA, March 22, 1893.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In the issue of March 18th of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN I saw a communication entitled, "How to Get a Mare in Foal." Having many years' experience in the use of the same method, I would like to make what I consider a very valuable suggestion. Trim the nails of the hand closely and work carefully, so as not to cause any irritation, then immediately let the stallion cover the mare—once only. Do not molest the mare until after the eighteenth day is passed. Then should the mare come in heat, make an examination, the same as before. Usually the one operation is all that is necessary. I write the above for the benefit of owners of valuable stallions. As a rule stallions are allowed too many covers during the season, and believe by experience that one cover will secure the necessary results more often than the continued use of the stallion during the entire period of heat.

Yours resp'y,

A. C. KING.

P. J. W., Gridley, Butte Co.—I have a work mare that is subject to colic. She gets it at all times. Can you give me a preventive? I also have a four-year-old mare that I broke to work this winter.

WIL DIRECT, Black stallion, three years old, 15.2 hands. Very handsome, powerfully built, the best of feet and legs, and a trotter that will make his mark as a sire and a race horse. Sired by Sable Wilkes, who stands at the head of all stallions of his age as a producer and sire of race horses. First dam Fidelia, by Director; second dam by Reavis' Black Bird, sire of Vic H., 2:13 1/2; third dam by Lancet, son of McCracken's Black Hawk, sire of Overman, 2:19 1/2, Ha Ha, 2:22 1/2, Moses S., 2:22 1/2, and others. $100 for the season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19; Annie C., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/4; Mollie C., 2:37 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/4 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:03.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darebin). He stands 15.3 hands on steely legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong back, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis's sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darebin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST's dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darebin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, for apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caractacus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid race-horses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racebros and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

Trial, 2:20 1/4.

Full Brother to Frou-Frou, 2:25 1/4-4, Champion Yearling Trotter.

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1893 AT EUGENE, OREGON.

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS. Not only is Memo full brother to Frou Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Mill (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail and Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the great twelve leading stallions of America. Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:30, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31 1/2, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20 1/4, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32 1/2 to 34 seconds. He is sixteen hands high, and of a powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal-getter. TERMS $50. Season to close August 1st. Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars address DR. T. W. HARRIS, Eugene, Oregon.

Deer Hounds For Sale.

Pack of four thoroughly trained Deer Hounds, the property of the late W. G. Winter. Address or apply to 1014 Twenty-First Street, San Francisco.

ITS OBJECT is to prevent disease, to regulate the bowels and urine; It strengthens the kidneys, prevents scouring, colic and leg swelling; loosens the hide, fattens stock, promotes the appetite, cures coughs, destroys worms and bots, and produces a fine, glossy coat. To the stalled horse it has the beneficial effects and results of grazing without the softening effects of a season of grass with loss of time and money. For milch cows it increases and enriches their milk.

RECOMMENDED BY Marvin, Goldsmith, Corbitt, Gamble, Wells, Fargo & Co. and Others.

Training

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

Stallion Ringwood, The Famous Son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney in formation more than any of his sons. He is a pure-gaited trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he would have received a record of 2:18 or better but for an accident at the Napa track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dashaway (thoroughbred), he by Williamson's Belmont, he by American Boy; second dam Fanny Cob, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

COLE'S OSSIDINE

RESULTS OBTAINED AT KALAMAZOO FARM.

Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone, and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used. Very respectfully yours,

I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths without leaving the slightest blemish. BLOOD HORSE MEETING.

Opened on a Good Day Before a Fair-Sized, Enthusiastic Audience.

SEVEN SPLENDID RACING EVENTS.

The Winners Prove to Be Sir Walter, Brutus-Bonnie Jean Colt, Kyrle Doly-Abra Filly, Dinero, Drummer, St. Croix and Gladiator—Two Very Exciting Finishes—Description of All the Racing Events to Date.

FIRST DAY—SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1893.

OUR race-goers were never furnished as good a programme as the one of to-day. Seven races to open the spring Blood Horse meeting, and in every event some excellent racing material. While all the enthusiasts were present, it can be said with truth that the quality of the sport furnished by the association was good and the quantity immense, therefore it was surprising that the attendance was not larger, not many over 3,000 being present. Not a cloud of any color flecked an azure sky, but a strong wind blew in the faces of the horses as they strained every muscle coming down the homestretch, making fast time out of the question. The track was simply in perfect condition, and Superintendent Fieldwick is to be congratulated on that account. Many that attended the races to-day drove out in the handsomest of equipages, and not only were the stalls full of carriages, but many lined up against the fence in the picturesque (if not handsome) enclosure. The grand and members' stands were fairly well filled with handsome ladies, bedecked in costumes to secure which doubtless made the bank account of their fathers and husbands groan and to gaze on them cause the eyes of their friends to sparkle with delight.

Twenty-two bookmakers made the grand stand quiver with their discordant notes, and as five favorites got home first, the pencilers' load of coin was materially lightened when the last race was over. Only two firms are reported winners. Among the bookmaker's boxes were many new signs but a multitude of well-known visages. However, there were not a few brand-new betting men in the arena of speculation, for instance, Frank Northey, well-known in political and other circles; Captain Henry White, ex-commander of the famous yacht Aggie; Ralph Curtis, a youth who has made several onslaughts on the strong boxes of the hookies in the past who thought he would try being on "the inside" a little, just to see how it went; Mr. Cohen, another young man who has been connected with the betting establishment of Henry Schwartz for many years, and last, but not least, a firm of gentlemen from Gaul, who were quite at sea on Betting Boulevard. Of the animals in the Grand Prix of Paris they might have some knowledge, but of ours they saved not to an alarming extent. However, a modest young "tout," rejoicing under the name of "Kid Blazer," initiated them into the intricacies of the American hookmaking game, and if it did cost the "Parlez Vous" firm something, the experience should be worth a good deal.

Starter Ferguson had not a little trouble with the fields of horses he was asked to send off, there being a number of "green" horses and jockeys to deal with. However, he did not make a bad start. In the second event Johnny Weher, on Claire, as anxious, honest jockeys often do, tried to get a flying start on that filly several times. According to the youth, Starter Ferguson cut him twice with a "hacksnake" whip, and two heavy welts across the back attest that some one struck him. Weher was also fined $50. He rode the day out, however, and was successful on two occasions. His father, Peter-Weher, declared that he would not allow either of his boys (John or Charles) to ride any more at this meeting unless Mr. Ferguson apologized for his actions and agreed to accord him better treatment in the future. [Later—Weher and his two sons were suspended for one year by the Blood Horse Association.]

In the judges' stand were Presiding Judge Clinton C. Riley and Associates Norman Brough and Charles Trevelyan, and, while there were a couple of rather close finishes, their decisions gave general satisfaction.

In addition to the excitement over the races, not a little hubbub of the same was occasioned over the bidding on winners of selling races. In the sixth race St. Croix, entered at $900, was run up by an unknown gentleman to $1,300, but as Trainer-owner Mike Kelly and his employer, Thomas H. Williams, are credited with making a neat clean-up on the race, a trifle of $400 to keep the horse is of little moment. After the last race there was plenty of excitement when Henry Schwartz ran the winner, Gladiator, up to $1,500, at which price the owner, B. C. Holly, let him go.

R. Porter Ashe bred two of the winners—Dinero and Drummer—and was naturally proud of his success. Charley Boots was a very happy young man over the success of his horses. Sir Walter and the Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt carried off the honors and coin in the first two races, while Initiation ran third in the sixth event—a wonderful showing for the Elmwood Farm horses. The horses of Senator Thompson, of Nevada, did well, too, running second on two occasions, (Silver State and Martinet), and winning once (the Drummer) at long odds. W. O'B. Macdonough's horses showed to excellent advantage, also, the Kyrle Daly—Abra filly being victorious, Grandee running second and the Three Cheers—Hattie Ball filly finishing third.

The new band played the plungers' hoodoo, "The High School Cadets," by mistake, but afterwards improved on its selections and rendered good service in the work of enlightenment. Following is an ACCOUNT OF THE DAY'S RACING.

The introductory event was a seven-furlong dash, and brought out eight of the best horses quartered at the track for that kind of race. Sir Walter opened in the betting at 4 to 1, but a persistent plunge on his chances all around the ring forced the odds down to 7 to 5. Towards the close the odds receded to 2 to 1. Quarterstaff and Dr. Ross were played for a killing, and Martinet had a host of admirers. The latter and Quarterstaff are American Derby candidates. The rest of the field, except Wicklow, were practically overlooked. The flag fell to a moderately good start, Joe Narvaez having his horse, Sir Walter, well under way in front, with Charger second and Cyclone third. Martinet got away badly. Sir Walter and Charger ran lapped until nearing the half, Cyclone about three lengths behind. Soon after leaving the half-pole Sir Walter gave Charger the slip, Martinet moved up and Cyclone fell back. For a moment Martinet looked dangerous, but once in the straight Sir Walter came away easily, and soon put two lengths between himself and Senator Thompson's good colt, who, however, came gamely, and was gaining a trifle as Sir Walter passed under the wire an easy winner by a little over a length in 1:23. Martinet, in the place, was two lengths from Dr. Ross, who came up well in the last quarter of a mile. Wicklow was fourth, over a length behind the Doctor, Cyclone a length behind the Macdonough colt, Quarterstaff next, Charger seventh and Captain Al last of all. The time was excellent, in view of the prevalence of a heavy wind, which blew in the horses' faces coming down the homestretch. The second race, half a mile, for two-year-olds, had six starters, Montalvo and the Brutus-Beauty colt being scratched out. The Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt was considered an "air-tight," with Montalvo out of the race, and was played with all kinds of money. Claire repeatedly dashed away in front in the breakaways, and there was a long delay at the post. Starter Ferguson fined Johnny Weher, on Claire, $50. George Miller was up on the favorite. At length the hunting cleft the air, and the favorite was the leader, Claire second, and the Three Cheers-Hattie Ball filly next. Miller took a wrap on the favorite, and allowed Claire and the Three Cheers filly to make the pace. Once straightened out in the homestretch the big, handsome son of Brutus came away, and won very easily by a length. Atticus, last to get off, made a magnificent run in the stretch, and was gaining fast at the end, getting the place, a length separating him from the Hattie Ball filly, third. Thornhill was fourth, Claire fifth and Last Chance last. Time, 0:51.

The third race, also half a mile, had for a favorite Mr. Macdonough's filly, fresh from San Jose, by imp. Kyrle Daly, dam Abra, consequently a sister to the good Candelabra. There was not so much trouble in getting this lot of youngsters away, although there were three more starters. Silver State was the leader at the outset, with the Abra filly at her neck, Realization a hang-up third. This was the order until about a sixteenth from home, when the favorite passed to the front at a great pace and won easily by three lengths, Silver State second, two lengths from Realization. Jennie Deane, who got away badly and was absolutely last coming into the homestretch, came wonderfully fast the last quarter, and was lapped on Realization at the finish. Then came Morven, Cherokee, Guiltless, Fortuna and Corncob, in the order named. Time, 0:50.

The fourth race, thirteen-sixteenths of a mile, had eight starters of very fair quality, and the Sir Modred mare, Moito, was considered a good thing and accordingly made a slight favorite over the well-played Revolver. Dinero opened at 8 to 1, but was played hard in nearly all the books, forcing the odds down to 4 to 1 at the close. Nellie G. was not considered out of the hunt, and at 4 to 1 was played to a considerable extent. Motto, as usual, dashed away in the lead, and opened up a three-length gap going to the half-pole. Between the half and three-quarter marks she commenced to come back to her field, and half-way down the homestretch Dinero got on even terms. A sixteenth from home he had his neck in front, and held her safe to the wire, winning by a neck. Revolver came with a rush at the end, and was beaten by the fast-fading-away Motto but a head for place money. Time, 1:21. Motto ran the first six furlongs in 1:14. Henry Schwartz is credited with winning between $4,000 and $5,000 on the victory of Dinero, while Col. Burns and Mose Gunst were also heavy winners.

The fifth race was for three-year-olds, six furlongs, and Grandee, at 2 to 1, was the favorite. Ledalia, Alliance and Crawford were well thought of, while Drummer was nibbled at. A long delay was occasioned by the circus tactics adopted by Solitude and Clacquer, and when the flag fell, after a vexatious wait of over half an hour, Solitude was left to soliloquize at the starting-point. Drummer that we always claimed was close to a world-beater if he could be cured of bolting, simply made monkeys out of everything in the field of nine that opposed him, leading all the way and cantering in a winner by a length and a half, Grandee (who had run second all the way) in the place, Alliance third, two lengths in the rear of the gray colt. Time, 1:16.

St. Croix was favorite over the field in the second race, one also of six furlongs, Ida Glenn and Initiation being next in public favor. The favorite led Inkerman all the way into the stretch by over a length, pulled away easily in the last furlong, and won by three lengths, Inkerman, the place horse, as far from Initiation, third. Regal, Mero, Alto Mio and Ida Glenn followed in the order named. Time, 1:16. A stranger ran St. Croix up to $1,300 ($400 over his entered selling price), T. H. Williams retaining the horse, however.

Gladiator, in the last race, six furlongs, was a warmer favorite even than St. Croix, but there was quite a play on Mackey. The latter led Gladiator by over a length to the homestretch, but died away like a "cold-blooded critter" in the last sixteenth, Gladiator winning by three parts of a length from Curceny, who came up like a flash in the last part of it and beat Mackey out half a length. Time, 1:16. Schwartz then ran the winner up to $1,500—$500 over his entered selling price. Following are the summaries of the day's races. We start to-day a new style of summary, the first column allowing our readers (in a short time) to trace a horse's performances at this meeting, every race having a number, so that if 2, 3, instance, appears in the first column, before the horse's name, it will be found he started in race 2.

SECOND DAY—TUESDAY, APRIL 4, 1893.

The racing at Bay District to-day was excellent throughout, close and exciting, finishes being the rule. Close to 3,000 persons saw the contests. The track could scarcely have been in better condition, but quite a heavy wind was on hand, interfering somewhat with the making of fast time. Joe Narvaez covered himself with glory by piloting three winners to the front in the five events, Miller riding the other two. Bronco, a 10-to-1 shot, got home in advance in the first race, to the delight of the bookmakers, Toppallant, an even-money favorite at the post, being howled over and the well-played Drummer and Dr. Ross as well. The Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt, with 123 pounds up to 115 and 118 on the others, got away well, and was never headed, showing marked superiority over his fellows. St. Croix won a fast seven-furlong race from the fast-coming Revolver and the fast-dying-away Motto, but had Clancy moved a little sooner on Revolver the chances are a victory would have gone to the Holly stable. As it was, St. Croix won by a short neck in 1:28 1/2.

Sir Walter's win can be credited to Miller's superb riding and the poor work in the pigskin of little Coombs, who not only got away badly and slow, made too much use of the colt in the first part of the journey, but went to sleep half-way down the homestretch. Miller timed the finish beautifully, and landed Sir Walter a winner by the scantest of margins.

Currency's win can also be laid at the door of magnificent horsemanship. Narvaez nursed the handsome colt along until the homestretch was reached, and, by brilliant riding, managed to heat out the well-played Morton by a neck. Currency's victory, however, made the bookies very weary, they being hard-hit.

A feature of to-day's racing was that three horses that won last Saturday got home first to-day—the Bonnie Jean colt, St. Croix and Sir Walter. In the Bonnie Jean race Atticus again ran into place, as he did on Saturday. The hooks won to-day in a majority of cases.

The springing of the Board of Control's forfeit list on Porter Ashe created another sensation, and it was regarded as mere vindictiveness on the part of Mr. Ashe's enemies that prompted the action, though there is a Blood Horse rule regarding unpaid forfeits. It appeared that Ashe owed something like $2,900 in the shape of forfeits on stakes, run on Board of Control tracks. These were brought forward at a very late hour by the judges to Mr. Ashe, and as he could not secure the sum at a moment's notice, his entry, Sir Reel, had to be scratched out of the first race. The sympathy of the race-goers was undoubtedly with Ashe, who had held told any of his entries outside of Geraldine would be accepted.

THE DAY'S RACING.

Toppallant was at all times a hot favorite, going to the post at even money. Dr. Ross and The Drummer had an army of friends, while hot tips were out on Tigress and Royal Flush. Bronco was first away, but had not gone many strides before Nellie Van passed him, Dr. Ross was all but left at the post. Bronco assumed command again at the end of a quarter of a mile, and led into the homestretch by two lengths, Nellie Van dying away and Toppallant coming up fast. In the straight The Drummer made a spurt, but let go again, and Bronco won, ridden out, by three parts of a length, Toppallant second, a length from Inkerman. Time, 1:14 1/2—by odds the best run of the meeting thus far. The winner carried 119 pounds, and is an aged brother to Snowdrop.

Twelve youngsters faced Starter Ferguson in the second event on the card, four and one-half furlongs. The Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt was hacked down from 8 to 5 to even money, notwithstanding he was carrying 123 pounds. Atticus and Ahness (formerly Abra filly) were played to some extent, principally for place. The balance were practically overlooked. The favorite was first off, and in the first half-dozen jumps had put over two lengths between himself and his nearest opponent, Jennie Deane, Ahness lying third and The Lark next. The Bonnie Jean colt was never headed, and won easily by three lengths. Jennie Deane ran up fast and then died away in the homestretch (Jackson losing his whip), and Atticus came up from the extreme rear and gave battle to Ahness. The finish between Van Gorden's colt and Macdonough's filly was a hair-raising one, Atticus getting home half a head in advance eventually. Silver Plate was fourth, The Lark fifth, the rest strung out, Buttou last. Time, 0:55 1/2—fast indeed for a youngster with a house on his back.

Revolver was a hot favorite in the third race, selling, seven-eighths of a mile, though every horse in the race was hacked except Charger. Revolver set the pace for about an eighth of a mile, then Motto, who got away third, headed him and passed to the front, opening up her customary daylight space. St. Croix passed Revolver between the half and three-quarter poles, and made play for Motto, who entered the homestretch a length and a half to the good. Cries went up that the mare was winning, but she quit badly, and St. Croix apparent had the race won easily less than an eighth from the wire. Here Revolver commenced to come up like a Kansas cyclone, and was gaining at every jump as St. Croix passed the winning-point first by a neck, Revolver heating Motto a good length. Time, 1:28 1/2.

The fourth race, mile dash, had for a torrid favorite Thompson's colt, Martinet, who went to the post at even money. Sir Walter was hacked down from 1 to 2 to 1, while Quarterstaff and Almont had their moneyed friends. Quarterstaff and Sir Walter were first off, the favorite being slow to move out of fifth place. Quarterstaff led past the quarter and half by a couple of lengths, and Coombs was riding hard on Martinet, placing him second as they swept by the half, Sir Walter being third and hard-riden, also. Coming around the turn into the homestretch, Martinet got his head in front, and a shout went up that it was all over. Miller, who had not let up at any point on Sir Walter, now came through on the outside, and Coombs, overconfident at first and rattled as he saw Sir Walter coming at him, lost a race that should easily have gone to Martinet, through inferior riding, making too much use of the colt after getting away badly, going to sleep in the homestretch and then being out-riden. In a wonderfully exciting finish Sir Walter won by the scantest of noses from Martinet, who was two lengths from Quarterstaff, third, Almont fourth, Wicklow next, Sheridan sixth, and the maiden, Belfast, last. Time, 1:42 1/2.

Currency was at all times a favorite in the last race, though there were several warm tips out on Morton, Regal and Altmio. Little Tough led the way at the start, attended by Morton and Dick O'Malley. Then the latter sailed to the front, and led to the turn into the homestretch, when Morton and Little Tough sailed away and Joe Narvaez went to work with a vengeance on Currency. By dint of splendid riding, this after getting in a pocket a little over an eighth from the wire, Currency passed Morton in the last dozen strides and won a fine race by a neck, Morton second, half a length only from Little Tough. Time, 1:16.

Leading Sires of 1892.

Comparisons of the standing of different families and sires are always interesting, and now, when the statistics for the past year have all been gathered, and calculations may be made with no fear of being overturned by later reports, is the time to sum up the results of the last season's work and see what changes the battles of the year have made in the relative positions of the various tribes.

Table listing leading sires of 1892 with columns for sire name, number of horses, and percentage of winners. Includes names like Electioneer, Nutwood, and Happy Medium.

Of course Electioneer leads, with Onward and Nutwood close together in second and third places. A curious coincidence in this connection is the fact that according to the Year Book each of these three added the same number in 1892—Electioneer having the records of eight of his get rejected, Onward two and Nutwood one, thus placing all three at the nineteen mark.

The second compilation is designed to show the standing of all sires having as many as twenty trotters to their credit at the close of 1892, together with the number credited to them in 1890 and 1891. This shows Electioneer's wonderful increase in the last two seasons, coming from sixty-three in 1890, when he was tied with George Wilkes for first place, to 127 in 1892, which places him over fifty per cent. in advance of his closest competitor, who is Nutwood with eighty-two.

SIRES HAVING TWENTY OR MORE TROTTERS TO THEIR CREDIT AT THE CLOSE OF 1892.

Table showing sires with 20+ trotters, including columns for Year Foaled, Horse, Sire, 1890, 1891, and 1892. Lists names like Electioneer, Nutwood, and Happy Medium.

Of all the lot the only one whose list can be considered closed is Hambletonian, whose final contribution was made in 1887. Almont and Volunteer, who seemed to have dropped out of the race, each put in one last year, while Blue Bull added two.

Of the forty-two horses in the table fourteen are sons of Hambletonian, while six trace to him through Alexander's Abdallah and his sons, and ten were sired by George Wilkes and one by Happy Medium, making a total of thirty-two out of the lot of Hambletonian blood.

Sires of Performers.

In former years it has been my habit to publish tables of the average speed of the get of horses who have four or more performers of standard speed to their credit, and considerable interest has been created by them.

No less than 143 and sires are found to be eligible to this table, and these are arranged in accordance with their averages. The year in which the horse was foaled is given, as well as the number of his get in the 2:30 trotting and 2:25 pacing list.

This table is full of meat, and will be carefully studied by many. By placing the standard for admission as high as ten performances, a reasonably fair comparison is afforded, and, certainly, the average is the best of tests.—Griffin, in Turf, Field and Farm.

Rich Running Stakes.

Statisticians have been busy all the winter and spring on the reports of thoroughbred racing in 1892, but they have produced no more valuable or interesting compilations than those reprinted below. The first includes the twenty most important fixed events decided in 1892, with the gross value of each. The Futurity leads, and only two of the Western Stakes are large enough to find a place in the table, these being the American Derby and the Hyde Park Stakes, run at Chicago. Tammany won three of these stakes, and Sir Walter and Lamplighter gathered in two each, these being the only animals to win more than once.

The second table gives a comparison of the ten greatest winners in 1891 and 1892. His Highness heads the 1891 list, with the largest sum ever won by an American horse in any year, and Kingston brings up the rear, with the least money but the greatest number of wins to his credit. In these days, when the rich plums are all hung up for two and three-year-old racers, it is indeed remarkable to see an aged horse stand even tenth among the great money winners of the year. Tammany's four victories in 1892 give him the place of honor for that year, while Morello's win of the valuable Futurity places him next in rank, and Montana's lucky fluke in the Suburban makes him a member of this select list. Yorkville Belle and Tammany are the only ones that ranked among the ten greatest winners both in 1891 and 1892.

Table comparing winners in 1891 and 1892 with columns for Name, 1891, 1892, and A. Val. worth. Lists names like Tammany, Morello, Lamplighter, Yorkville Belle, Sir Francis, Sir Walter, Roy de Rey, Tom Tambony, Don Alonzo, Poet Scout, and Kingston.

The third table of the series gives the greatest winner of each season from 1870 to date. One thing that emphasizes the value of the two and three-year-old stakes over those for the older division, is the fact that every year the greatest winner has been of either of these ages. The only horse that earned this distinction twice is Wanda, who headed the list in 1884 and 1885.

Table of Greatest Winner of Each Season from 1870 to date with columns for Year, Name, and Won. Lists names like Kingfisher, Harry Bassett, Joe Daniels, Tom Bowling, Vandolette, Aristides, Vigil, Bazil, Duke of Magenta, Spendthrift, Luke Blackburn, Hindoo, Pearl Jennings, Miss Woodford, Wanda, Wanda, The Bard, Hamovet, Proctor Knott, Salvator, Tournament, Ills Highness, and Tammany.

Waxy.

Waxy was one of those brilliant performers on the English turf in the last century, having won the blue ribbon in 1793. He came from the best of blood in both sides of his breeding. He was the produce of the Eclipse and Herod cross. His sire was Pot-S-os and his dam Maria, by Herod.

Pot-S-os was a great racehorse in his time, having won or walked over for about twenty-five races. His sire was the great Eclipse, his dam being Sportsmistress, who was also the dam of Sir Thomas, who won the Derby of 1788. In the year 1790 Asparagus, a son of Pot-S-os, ran second to Rhadamanthus for the Derby, and the same year his daughter Mistletoe ran second to the Oaks. So it would seem that the Pot-S-os stock was coming to the front before the appearance of Waxy. On May 16th next it will have been one hundred years since Sir F. Pool's bay colt Waxy, ridden by Clift, won the Derby, and from that time commences the history of a family of horses that for great performances upon the turf and in the stud stands unequalled in the annals of the turf. Waxy was the sire of four Derby winners—Pope, Whalebone, Blucher and Whisker.

Whalebone won the Derby of 1810 and was piloted to victory by Clift, the same jockey who rode his sire seventeen years before. The second horse in the race was The Dandy, by Gohanna, a son of Pot-S-os, and this reverses the old phrase, "That the first shall be last and the last shall be first," for it will be seen that the sire of the winner of 1810 was the winner in 1793, and that the sire of the second horse in 1810 was himself the second in the Derby in 1793.

Whalebone was the greatest son of Waxy. His dam was Penelope, who was by Trumpator. His breeding is the Eclipse and Matchem cross.

Whalebone was the sire of three Derby winners—Moses, Lapdog and Spaniel—but it was through his sons Camel and Sir Hercules that he was to perpetuate his fame. Sir Hercules got The Corsair, winner of the Two Thousand; Coronation, winner of the Derby, and Faugh-a-Ballagh, winner of the St. Leger, and Birdcatcher, who was a speedy and great racehorse.

Birdcatcher and Faugh-a-Ballagh were full brothers. It is the Eclipse and Herod cross, their dam being Guiccioli, by Bob Booty, who runs in direct line to Herod. Birdcatcher was the sire of Daniel O'Rourke, winner of the Derby in 1852; Songstress, Oaks in the same year; The Baron, Warlock and the Knight of St. George, all winners of the St. Leger. He was also the sire of Oxford. The Baron got Stockwell and Ratanplan: the latter got Kettledrum, winner of the Derby in 1861. Stockwell was a chestnut in color, foaled in 1849, and was out of Pochontas, who was by Glencoe, and his breeding is the same as that of Waxy—that is, it is the Eclipse and Herod cross. Stockwell got four Two Thousand Guineas winners—The Marquis, Lord Lyon, Bothwell and Gang Forward; three One Thousand winners—Lady Augusta, Repulse and Achievement; one Oaks in Regalia; three Derby winners in Blair Athol, Lord Lyon and Doncaster, and six St. Leger winners—St. Albans, Caller-On, The Marquis, Blair Athol, Lord Lyon and Achievement. The two latter are brother and sister, and are the only two that ever won the St. Leger in succession. Lord Lyon got Minting, who won the Grand Prize of Paris in 1886. Blair Athol was the sire of Silviu, winner of the Derby and St. Leger; Craig Miller, winner of the St. Leger, and Prince Charlie, winner of the Two Thousand and Guineas. St. Albans got Springfield, who is the sire of Sanfoin, winner of the Derby in 1890. Doncaster was the sire of Bend Or, winner of the Derby in 1880. Bend Or was the sire of the great Oruondo, who won all the races he started in, including the Two Thousand, Derby and St. Leger.

Faugh-a-Ballagh was the sire of Fille de l'Air, the French filly who won the Oaks in 1864, was the sire of Leamington, who got Longfellow, Eolus and Iroquois, the latter winning both the Derby and St. Leger in 1881, and being the sire of G. W. Johnson, one of the best two-year-olds out last season. Eolus is the sire of Morello, the crack two-year-old last year and the winner of the Futurity.

Oxford got Stelling, who was the sire of Paradox, Harvester, Enthusiast and Inonomy. Harvester won the Derby or ran a dead heat with St. Gatien. Both Paradox and Enthusiast won the Two Thousand, and Inonomy was the sire of Common, the Triple Crown winner of 1891.

Whisker was full brother to Whalebone. He got Economist, who sired Harkaway, who got King Tom. King Tom was the sire of Kingcraft, winner of the Derby in 1870, and was the sire of three Oaks winners in Tormentor, Hippias and Hannah. He was also the sire of Phaeton and King Ban. Phaeton sired Fen Broeck, King Alfonso and Lisbon. Ten Broeck sired Teuton. Lisbon sired Tronhadour, and King Alfonso is the sire of Foxhall, winner of the Grand Prize of Paris in 1881.

Camel was the sire of Touchstone, winner of the St. Leger in 1834, and next to Stockwell, was the greatest of stallions. His breeding is Eclipse and Eclipse cross, his dam being Banter, who was by Master Henry, who was by Orville, by Benningborough, by King Fergus, by Eclipse.

Touchstone was the sire of four Two Thousand Guineas winners—Cotherstone, Flatcatcher, Nunnykirk and Lord of the Isles. He was the sire of three Derby winners—Cotherstone, Orlando and Surplice—and three St. Leger winners—Blue Bonnet, Surplice and Newminster. Orlando was the sire of Fazeletto, Fitz Rowland and Diophantus, winners of the Two Thousand, and Imperieuse, winner of the St. Leger, and he was also the sire of Trumpeter, who got Plustus, the sire of Flageolet, the sire of Rayon d'Or, who is the sire of Teuny and Chaos, the Futurity winner in 1889.

Newminster was the sire of two Derby winners—Musjid and Hermit—and one St. Leger in Lord Clifden.

Hermit was the sire of two Derby winners in St. Blaise and Shotover. St. Blaise was the sire of Potomac, who won the Futurity in 1890.

Lord Clifden got four St. Leger winners—Hawthorneden, Wenlock, Petrarch and Jannette. He was also the sire of Hampton who got two Derby winners in Merry Hampton and Ayrshire. He was also the sire of Buckden, who was the sire of Buchanan, winner of the Kentucky Derby.

Touchstone was the sire of Ithuriel, who got Longbow, the sire of Toxophilote, who was the sire of Musket, who was out of a daughter of West Australian, and his breeding is like Whalebone's—that is, it is the Eclipse and Matchem cross. Musket is the sire of Carbine, Nordenfent and Maxin. What a line of brilliant performers and producers.

Waxy's descendants in the male line have won in the last fifty years more Two Thousand Guineas, more Derbys and more St. Legers than all the descendants in the male line from both Herod and Matchem combined. The greatest two stallions in the last fifty years were Stockwell and Touchstone, the greatest stallion ever in Australia was Musket, the greatest in America was Leamington—all in the male line from Waxy. The greatest racehorse that this country has produced is Iroquois, Carbine the best in Australia, and England's greatest is Ormoude—all descending from the same horse, Waxy.

Then what could be more fitting during the Columbian Exposition and in the one hundredth anniversary of Waxy's victory at Epsom than that a cup (two miles) should be given by some of the racing clubs around Chicago to commemorate his deeds, and where turfmen from all parts of the world who are familiar with his name and the performances of his sons down to the tenth generation could take part in celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of Waxy's Derby.—St. George in Horseman.

Navidad, by Whips.

From the fact that the bay gelding Navidad has been named in some stakes this season it is evident that the Ketchum Farm people, near Toledo, Ohio, where Navidad is owned, think that the big bay gelding will stand training. Navidad was bred by Senator Stanford, and is by Whips, 2:27½, and out of the Williams' Mambrino mare that produced Santa Claus, 2:17½. The dam of Whips is the thoroughbred mare Lizzie Whips, at one time quite a well-known performer on the running turf, and she was one of the first thoroughbred mares selected in Kentucky for Senator Stanford and shipped to California to be bred to Electioneer. She was foaled in 1874, and is by that remarkably fast horse, Enquirer, dam by Vandal. As a trotting broodmare she has acquired the distinction of producing two 2:30 trotters in Whips and Linnet, the latter having a record of 2:29½. Both are by Electioneer, and Whips is doing something in the way of siring speed as he has four in the list. When it is considered, however, that he was foaled in 1880, and on account of Senator Stanford's fondness for his blood lines on the maternal side has been given a very good opportunity at Palo Alto, it cannot be argued that he has proven a brilliant success in the stud or a powerful argument in favor of the theory that stallions by trotting sires and out of thoroughbred dams are the ones to which we should look for extreme and early speed. Azote, that came out last season under Orin Hickok's management and made a record of 2:14½, is the fastest of the get of Whips and he is strongly trotting bred on the side of his dam, who was a daughter of Whipple's Hambletonian; second dam by Speculation. Among the early lot of brood mares purchased for the Palo Alto farm by Senator Stanford, was the dam of Santa Claus, which latter horse was in those days creating quite a sensation as a trotter. It was her union with Whips that produced Navidad, and in 1890 when this horse was a four-year-old, he could haul an old-fashioned sulky in 2:16, and crack in about as many heats close to his limit as any four-year-old then on the turf. He was rather an unsteady horse in races, however, the thoroughbred blood of his sire's dam seeming to crop out with unpleasant certainty when his head should have been free from heels, and it was on account of this weakness that in the race where he made his record of 2:22½, he lost a couple of heats to Kremlin, then a three-year-old, and one to another horse. Perhaps a good share of Navidad's speed comes from his dam, as another of her foals, Santa Claus, was about as fast a trotter in his prime as stood on iron, and he is breeding on grandly through his son Sidney, in addition to which he has the great two-year-old trotter, Wm. Penn, 2:18½, to his credit, and six others in the 2:30 list. When all these strains of performing and producing trotting blood in the pedigree of Navidad are taken into consideration, it would not be strange if he should prove one of the sensational harness horses of 1893. If he has improved as much since his retirement three years ago, as might fairly be looked for, a mile by him in 2:10 would not be surprising.—Dunton's Spirit.

The Trotting Season of 1893.

The healthy and rapid growth of trotting sport during the last seven years is the best guarantee to the breeding interests that for trotters which can trot there will always be a healthy and growing market. A comparison of the figures compiled from the Year Books of 1885 and 1892, as published in Wallace's Monthly, shows a wonderful advance. In 1885 there were 3,869 trotting races, 575 pacing races, 59 specials and time trotting performances and 13 pacing events of the same character. In these events 5,482 trotters and 711 pacers participated. The number of meetings were 1,071 and the amount competed for was about $1,150,000. In 1892 the number of trotting races were 9,987; of pacing races 2,174; specials and time trotting performances, 1,680, and 264 smaller events in pacing. No less than 16,643 trotters and 3,457 pacers competed during the year. There were 1,931 meetings and over $4,000,000 was competed for. It will be noticed that, while the number of meetings have not quite doubled, the horses have increased three-fold, while the stakes and purses have increased four-fold. In spite of a few failures it must be conceded that the season of 1892 was the greatest from all standpoints in the history of the trotting turf, and the question has been asked, and will be asked again, Was 1892 an exceptional year? Did it mark the crest of the wave? or was it the natural growth of the sport and a part of the general expansion of prosperity due to the increasing wealth of the country? A glance at the prospects of 1893 and the outlines of the programmes so far as they have been published, lead to the belief that the season of 1893 will be as great, if not greater, in all the essential features of trotting sport than its predecessor. If these prospects are realized 1892 will not rank as an exceptional year, but simply one of progress in an era of advancement.

The Grand Circuit is this year stronger in the number of its members than ever, Detroit in the West and New York in the East being new members, and it retains all its old ones. New Yrak is a distinct addition to the trotting fixtures of the year, as Fleetwood Park has had no meeting of magnitude for three years. This year the Grand Circuit series will cover ten weeks, with purses, stakes and specials which will foot up close to $500,000. The advance guard of stakes in their programmes is already before the public. Detroit has five stakes open worth $21,000. Cleveland has closed stakes to the value of $13,000. The Buffalo meeting will occupy two weeks, and its purse and stake list aggregate $75,000. Rochester has $11,000 in stakes. Springfield and Hartford have not yet announced their stakes, but the latter has two closed stake events of $10,000 and $15,000 each, and will certainly renew its classic $10,000 Charter Oak Purse, so that, as usual, the great Connecticut meeting will be the greatest Eastern gathering of the year. The Driving Club of New York has closed three stakes of $2,000 each, and has $12,000 in stakes now open. As the general conditions of these stakes are liberal, it is safe to assume that the Grand Circuit of 1893 will attract a full representation of the best horses in the various classes and stakes, and that its statistics of sport will exceed its great record of 1892.

The Great Western-Southern Circuit has thirteen members, and its programme is sufficiently disclosed to be able to show a purse and stake list which will foot up to the same amount as the Grand Circuit. The Northwestern Breeders' meeting at Washington Park will take two weeks, and its bill of fare will include purses and stakes to the amount of $100,000. Terre Haute has five stakes worth $30,000, with a purse list yet to come. The Lexington meeting will attract, as it always has done, the best horses of the continent, with a programme which touches the $50,000 mark. It now has open a $25,000 Futurity, which is worthy of the attention of every breeder in the country. Several other associations have already announced programmes which place them in the front rank. Narragansett Park, R. I. will have a great meeting September 18th to 22d, with a list of purses and stakes amounting to $37,000. The New York State Trotting Horse Breeders' Association have $12,000 in stakes now open. The Pimlico Driving Club, Baltimore, at its spring meeting, has two stakes of $1,200 each and a card of $7,400. The Chilli-cothe Driving Park Company announce $14,000 in stakes, with a programme of purses to follow, none of which will be less than $1,000 each. To these events must be added the long list of futurity stakes which closed prior to the present year. A moderate estimate, based upon the past season, the stakes at present known and reasonable future prospects, under the most conservative estimates, will place the trotting season of 1893 in front of all its predecessors.—Daily Spirit.

The Dwyer Horses.

The horses belonging to the two Dwyer brothers always play such a formidable part in Eastern racing operations, that the following from the New York Herald is bound to be of interest to Western turfmen: "Heading one division was Longstreet, whose legs looked just the same as they did at Monmouth last summer, and probably the doubt as to whether he would stand the hard preparation necessary for two such races as the Brooklyn and Suburban is one reason for his withdrawal from both of these events. Banquet, who was in Longstreet's lot, looked big, robust and wider across the hips than ever before. His legs are as sound as the day he was foaled, so that another severe campaign, presumably, awaits him. Raceland, too, would stand the scrutiny of any 'vet' as far as his legs are concerned, and although no chicken—he is now in his eighth year—his burden of 116 pounds in the Brooklyn should give him a chance second to none. In estimating his form it must be remembered that last year he was bearing the colors of a man who never spares his animals—a policy which is all against a delicate horse like Raceland. For this reason he is much more likely to be himself in his first race of the season than at any other time.

"Kingston, who is fully entitled to be termed the evergreen, like his aged companion, Raceland, is as sound as a 'hell of brass,' for the wonderful son of Spendthrift and Kapanga is without a 'pimple.' While on the road yesterday he acted like a fractious two-year-old, and any one who had not seen him before would have thought he had yet to run his first race. Judging from previous years, however, he is not to be considered in early contests. Nomad, the remaining Brooklyn candidate, looked big and lusty, and, as compared with Banquet and Raceland, looked as if he would want a lot more gruelling work to get him ready than either of the other two. Of the others, Yorkville Belle was just the same—no more nor less. She has not widened one iota. Don Alonzo is more of a giraffe than ever, as he has gone 'up in the air' instead of lengthening out, and it will be a surprise to me if he ranks among the cracks of this year when the season is concluded. Red Banner, so far as appearances go, is a disappointment. She does not seem to have grown, is very light-ribbed, and her forelegs are decidedly light. G. W. Gillock is somewhat common to the eye, and his forelegs might be cleaner. Lovelace is another who has not grown a bit, and he sweated profusely after the moderate work he was given. Hammie is the same wear-and-tear colt in appearance he was last year, but as he does not seem to have grown any it does not seem likely that he will improve much upon his three-year-old form.

The two-year-olds all look well, the brothers to Hammie and Leonawell catching the eye as likely youngsters, while costly Dobbins is a well-built, smooth-looking colt.

"Turning to 'Phil' Dwyer's contingent, the two Brooklyn candidates, Leonawell and Reclaire, have weathered the winter in good shape. The first named has lengthened considerably, but in height he is the same pocket edition of a thoroughbred. His legs look as clean as a new pin, and there is no earthly reason why he should 'stand up' the whole season. Reclaire, about as unlucky a mare as ever stood in a stall, is to all appearances as right on her legs, and so that nothing shall be neglected to change her long spell of bad luck two horseshoes are hanging outside her stall. The most formidable of the others will probably be Fremont, who at present is as well as one could wish. Of the two-year-olds the most taking is Eolite, a filly by Charaxus-Eola, sister to Eon. She is a bigger and racier edition of Hammie. The fancy of the stable, however, is Handover, a brother to Hannover, but he is too 'peacocky' to look like a smasher."

HARTFORD, Dec. 2, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—Your "Absorbine" I have used on my mare with good results. I am pleased to recommend "Absorbine" to horse-owners as a valuable remedy for Wind-galls, Strained Tendons, etc. Yours truly,
CHAS. FRANCIS ROOT.

On Every Bridle.

MR. SEARS—DEAR SIR:—After giving your bits a thorough trial, I do not hesitate to recommend them to all trainers and drivers, also to all owners of road horses. I have ordered your bits put in every bridle on the farm. Yours truly,
FRANK STARR,
Supt. Sangamo Stock Farm.

THE GUN.

A Summer Noon.

[By CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

Soft, mellow skies their arches fling
Above us like a sea,
Where feathery cloudlets, slow of wing,
Are floating dreamily.

A mystic veil of royal hue,
The distant mountains hood,
And, like a robe of silvery blue,
Lies on the lake and wood.

Deep silence hroods o'er land and sea,
Save meadow-hrook's low tone
Aud drowsy hum of honey bee—
No other sounds are known.

Oh, ocean deep,
Why dost thou weep,
And moan, and sob, and never sleep?
Is there no rest
For thy poor breast?
Unanswered still thy heart's request?
Must sorrow's shades ere o'er thee creep?

The Recreation Gun Club meets at Oakland Track to-morrow. There will doubtless be a good attendance and a pleasant day's sport for all who may be there.

The reports from most sections of the country east of the Sierras show that the past winter has been most severe on quail, and that protection for the coming season is imperative if the supply is to be kept up.

The Kansas legislature has passed a bill prohibiting any one from hunting on the land of another without first securing permission so to do, and prohibiting the sale of quails and prairie chickens. This is a long leg in the right direction.

The movement looking to the formation of a National Sportsman's Association has been growing since the first suggestion was placed before the public, embodying that idea. The times are ripe for it and the circumstances demand that each and every sportsman act at once in the matter to the end that some substantial good may be accomplished in the matter of protecting the fish and game interests of the country.

From the activity noted in different points of the country it would seem that the Mongolian pheasant is destined to become quite a prominent factor in restoring the game supply of the country. The Mongolian Pheasant Association is the name of a new club but recently formed at Belleville, Ill., the central object of which is the securing and breeding of these splendid birds.

The importance of having similar provisions for the same States where the conditions are similar, is evinced by the old trouble regarding the slaughter of elk near the Wyoming and Colorado line. The sneaking vandals when approached on the matter have no hesitancy in swearing that the game was killed in either state, best suited to their scheme of evading conviction on the charge of violating the game laws. A National Congress of sportsmen alone can successfully deal with this and many similar questions.

Ex-President Harrison loves a gun, but he is not a sportsman in any sense of that term. We are sorry that a man so conspicuous as he, should violate every rule of true sportsmanship by indulging in spring shooting. For this class of wanton sport there can be found no sufficient excuse. The ducks, many of them, are nesting long before many of the men who go shooting are aware of this fact. On the marshes of this State, as early as the middle of March, mallard's nests with a good nesting of eggs have been found. This should be a full and final, conclusive answer to all those who favor spring shooting in this State. The law which should govern in all lines of sportsmanship are, like most other laws, but the discovery of Nature's law and a statutory recognition of them. The great majority of sportsmen are sadly in need of education on the laws and conditions which Nature lays down for the government of fish and game, their customs and habits as to propagation and breeding.

Wild Goose Shooting.

Mr. William Bruce Leffingwell's answer to "Skeptie's" criticism of his articles on wild goose shooting makes good reading; it appears in current number of American Field. Any man who has had experience in wild goose shooting along the Platte river in Nebraska, say from Clark's station on the Union Pacific Railway to Grand Island, would consider any man a novice who used other than a 10-gauge gun or less for that purpose. We preferred a 12-gauge gun, and in season when the birds were plentiful, have often bagged from ten to twenty fine birds in a couple of hours or during the flight of the birds from the river to their feeding grounds in the fields back of the bluffs on the south side of the river. The largest goose ever falling to our gun, fell to a charge of 3/4 drachms of powder and 1-3 oz of No. 5 shot in a 12-gauge gun. Our method of shooting them was to select a morning when the wind was coming in from the south; taking position in the edge of the corn fields back of the bluffs near the river we would await the flight of the birds, which invariably began at daybreak. The birds coming up against the wind would be flying very low, presenting as they came over us, the easiest shooting possible. It was not much of a trick to secure a bird with each barrel and often have two birds fallen to second barrel by reason of their awkward bunching after first fire.

In order to note, intelligently, the steps in wild goose shooting one must hunt them under all kinds of conditions. But 8-gauge guns! Well, if anyone wishes to carry them all right, but these guns are frightful things to behold as well as tiresome to hold. Every experienced sportsman knows that Mr. Leffingwell speaks but the true facts regarding wild goose shooting.

Shooting over decoys is the most pleasurable as well as the only way in which the sport can be continued with success, and the most pleasure be derived from it.

The California Wing-Shooting Club.

On the first of the week the California Wing Shooting Club met at Oakland Shooting Park to participate in the regular monthly meeting of this organization. The weather was fine shooting passed off very pleasurably in the presence of a large number of spectators.

The birds were a good lot and several of the gentlemen did remarkably well in the skillful handling of their guns. Mr. Cadman led the shooting in the main match by killing all of his birds. The score stood as follows, the match being refereed by A. Russell Crowell.

The Game Laws.

The recent Legislature passed the following relative to fish and game, enabling the county boards to govern the matter as they may elect.

This power should be used to cure certain glaring defects in the general law, as the shooting of quails on September 1st is to kill them when not half grown, at least, in this part of the State. The section quoted hereafter appears in the bill entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of County and Township government," and is numbered as Article 291. It reads:

"To make regulations for the protection of fish and game: when such regulations are made as provided in this section relating to game, the laws of the State for the protection thereof are suspended in such county, and to regulate the size and kind of nets and seines to be used for fishing."

Ibex Shooting in Baltistan.

A correspondent of the Asian, in speaking to the above subject, says:

Lovely weather on June 25—sharp frost, yet a clear, blue sky and bright sun. I was up this morning before five o'clock, feeling as fresh and fit as anything, breakfasted, then off up the hills. A couple of hours' climb took us to the crestline of the range, separating this from the next nullah, the view being magnificent, miles and miles of snowpeaks in every direction, while far down below a winding river, twisting along its broad, sandy bed like a long thin snake, trended away north.

Clambered on among some very rocky peaks till suddenly Sharpoo, who was leading, slowly crouched flat, whispering: "The ibex, the big bucks." Crawling up to him, I saw far away below from twenty to thirty ibex, all bucks with good heads, not a female among them—without doubt the herd we were after. Creeping back, we descended under cover, then again crept up and peeped over—we were nearer, but still at the very least a good 200 yards from the nearest; five lying asleep on the hillside, while beyond them were the others, either standing listlessly gazing downhill, or else slowly feeding, little thinking what was above them. It was a long and awkward shot, very straight below, and the animals lying down, which is always objectionable; still we could not get nearer, and I did not like to wait, as most of the herd were gradually grazing away from us.

Sharpoo, all anxiety lest they should escape after our getting so near, said: "Don't fire unless you think you are sure to kill." The nearest was lying on its side in the sun, and I felt pretty confident, so took my time, fired, and, to my disgust, up it jumped and went off as if untouched, my second barrel having no effect either, yet I felt certain I was "on" it.

At once there was a tremendous scrimmage, the whole of the ibex rushing to some rocks on the opposite hillside, so I turned my attention to them as they scrambled away, though they were very far off, over 300 yards. One stood for a second—bang, and to our delight he fell headlong down into the grassy slope below.

Three others were close together, just turning a corner, so bang went the left barrel at the nearest—apparently no result, but just at that minute there was a great clattering, showers of stones came rattling down, and we saw the huck I had first fired at, and which I had thought missed, came rolling over and over from where he had climbed up among the rocks. Hurrah! Two, and I really began to fear we were not going to score at all.

Down to them as fast as we could climb, just in time to do the "hallel" before they gave their last kick—both good heads, 35 1/2 in. and 33 1/2 in., but why in the world the first one had not dropped at once I cannot make out, for my shot had crashed through its ribs, smashed up its liver and all the part round, then broken two ribs on the opposite side, yet it went off as if not touched.

Shoulla and Souhani set to work cutting off the heads and skinning the bodies, while Sharpoo wandered off to have a look over the next ridge to see by their tracks in which direction the ibex had gone, so I lay down on the grass, hasking in the sun, reading an old Field and watching the skinning operations.

In about ten minutes I chanced to look towards where Sharpoo had gone, and saw him waving and gesticulating like anything for me to come quickly. Down with the Field, seized the rifle and off to him at "the double." What is it? I knew it was something good, for he was beaming with delight. He said he had been following the tracks, when he suddenly came on drops of blood, and going on tracking for about half a mile had seen one of the ibex, badly wounded, standing among some very precipitous cliffs. He was about right in saying the beast was in a precipitous place; we had a real nasty climb before I got within shot and killed it; a very handsome pair of horns, just under 35 in., very wide-spreading and curving outwards instead of straight back over the animal's shoulders, as is usually the case.

A rare, good day, this! In spite of the long shooting, three good ibex bagged. An hour's rest for lunch; then heavily laden with the three heads, we made for home—home being my blankets on the hillside, and Muddy Bux, with his kettle and frying pan, preparing dinner, a good one, too; then hot whisky and water, and between the blankets, for a sharp frost came on at dusk. To-day, high up on the hills, we caught a young ibex (a buck) only a few days old, such a queer little chap, with great big grey eyes. I sent him straight back to camp, to be put to one of my nanny-goats for milk.

June 26.—Up at daybreak, rolled up bedding and returned to camp, getting in by nine o'clock. The young ibex is doing well, sucks away at his goat-mamma, pounding her with his head, and switching his little tuft of a tail all the time; he is a pretty, grey, wolly-furred little beast, with a dark line down his back and some black markings about his legs, and is already quite tame, clambering about the rocks round my tent, skipping and playing as if born and bred in civilization.

Though one of the ibex I shot to-day had horns, both in spread and curve, so different to the ordinary type, I do not for a minute believe the theory that there are two or more species in this part of the world, but feel sure that there is only one kind of ibex in Kashmir, Astor, and Baltistan, variety in colour being due either time of year or age, and, as for the way the horns vary in size, thickness, spread and curve, it signifies no more than any man having a long, pointed nose, another a short flat one. Sharpoo agrees with me, but I see Jerdon talks, in his "Mammals of India," of a dark-coloured species of ibex in Baltistan; these were probably shot very early in the spring, and were the ordinary ibex in its winter coat.

June 30.—Sent my tent and baggage off down to the village at the entrance to the nullah, I myself going for a couple of days on the hilltops, meaning eventually to work along the ridge down to camp.

Saw a herd containing one very fine head, got within an hour's climb, marked them, take up their quarters for the night, then turned in myself, on the hillside, at between 15,000ft. and 17,000ft., very cold, though June 30. Had a disturbed night, owing to a mousehole, which came out of the rocks and kept continually waking me up by a too close inspection; never being molested, in fact, rarely if ever seeing man, they are very fearless and run about close to one—too close on this occasion.

July 1.—Breakfast at 4:30 A. M., in the open and a snow-storm, then when day broke found the ibex gone, and the place when I got to it, covered with just-made leopard tracks—confound the brute. Worked all the cliffs, even to going along the face of those on which I got the wounded ibex last week; very difficult climbing—precipitous no name for it; but all we saw was an enormous herd of females and kids on a grass slope, ever so far down below us. In the afternoon clambered back up to the summit of the range to where we had left the coolies with my bedding, &c. It was nearly three o'clock. (Query, what to do? No fuel or cover where there were and snow coming on; on the other hand, my camp at the village far away down below, ever so far off, and doubtful if we could reach it before dark.)

Decided to go for camp—no end of a long trudge (no top, too, of a very tiring day), all downhill certainly, but very steep and rough going, descending from 17,000ft. to 2,000ft., and it was just on eight o'clock when we reached where my tent was pitched even Sharpoo pretty "done." Ibex shootin' is not all "beer and skittles."

Saw any number of marmots to-day at from 15,000 feet to 17,000 feet, and shot some; they vary in color, some very ruddy, but, apparently, like all of us as we get old, they fade with age, for many—which Sharpoo says are the very old ones—are quite pale, yellowish grey. Both kinds are about the same burrows, so they are not likely to be of different species. Unless killed quite dead, they invariably escape into their burrows.

One of my dak-coolies turned up to-day, a perfect wreck, having been very ill with cholera, and his companion having died straight off in a few hours; I thought something must have happened, they were so long returning, over six weeks. Cholera is very bad in Kashmir, especially in Srinuggar, which is deserted by all Europeans, trade at a standstill, and the natives dying by hundreds; it is about the worst epidemic on record there. Owing to the disaster of my dak-coolies I found myself to-day reduced to my very last rupee; however, in a few days, reached a large village, in which I managed to "raise the wind," for I discovered a Kashmiri "hunnia" (merchant) had settled there, and by swearing it was not "a stiff un," also adding the inducement of ten rupees and a packet of tea (the last he was very keen on), I persuaded him to cash me a cheque on India for Rs. 300, so am again in funds, which will last till I can get more from Srinuggar.

Sharpoo came to me just now and said he and the other men have had so much hard work, will I stay here for a few days to let them rest and also to celebrate their "burra din"—a kind of native Christmas? I could not well refuse, so said all right, and that I would give them a couple of sheep for their big day.

From July 2 to 12, bar our few days' halt, I was on the march, winding up on the 12th with a long day over a snow-pass, but there was no sun, so the snow was hard and easy to travel over; descending the slope on the other side, we went a few miles down the valley and camped on a nice stretch of grass at the entrance to a likely-looking ravine. To-day, also on many other occasions, I saw in a tame herd a very ibex-looking goat, with ibex horns, and have little doubt that the wild ibex occasionally "courts" the village goats when he comes across them on their grazing grounds, high up among the mountains. Sharpoo, too, agrees with me; moreover, says he knows of one in a Kashmir village with really fine ibex-horns, bred from a gallivanting tame nanny goat, which was "absent without leave" for some time among the hills, and soon after its return presented its owner with a young ibex. I shall try an experiment with my young huck ibex when he is old enough. He is doing uncommonly well, getting very tame, and when only a week old, by way of showing his agility, gave one or two skips, then bounded up one side of my tent, over the ridge-pole, and down the other side, as if it were nothing. His favorite sleeping place is the top of one of my kiltas (boxes); but if the night is wet or very cold, he goes into my servants' tent and makes himself comfortable among their blankets. After all, this nullah, the Shandun, as the natives call it, good as it looks, seems to hold nothing but female and a few small huck-ibex. Perhaps it is disturbed by the presence of a "brama" (a cattle and sheep-fold of rough stones) at its mouth; the grassy hillside above being covered with sheep, and with them several splendid yaks—the long-haired cattle of Tibet. This morning I saw a great fight between two huge bulls, magnificent beasts, and I very much regretted I am not a photographer; in fact, anyone travelling in this country ought to be for trophies photographed directly after being shot, any especially grand piece of scenery, views of the glaciers and snow fields, would form most interesting mementoes of one's wanderings.

July 13.—A very early, also very wet, morning. Up at four o'clock, ordered my tent later in the day to be moved three miles down the valley, then started, beginning the day with steadily climb of over an hour up the steep slope above where I had camped, then worked along the hills after ooin, the wild sheep of Ladax—now supposed to be identical with the oorial of the Punjab Salt Range, through the Ladak variety (the sha-poo) is decidedly a finer animal, carrying larger, thicker horns than its Indian representative. Excellent ooin grounds, innumerable deep stony ravines running down the hillside, but for a long time we saw nothing, not even tracks, and about ten o'clock came to the entrance of a big nullah, so clambered out to a rocky point to prospect.

Sharpoo (my shikari) was busy with the telescope examining the opposite cliffs to the valley below us, and far away down near the mouth of the nullah saw something more. "Quick, the telescope!" and the "something" proved to be a flock of twelve or fifteen ooin, among them some fairly good rams. A very rapid stalk lest they should move, and we crawled out on an undulation of the hillside above the flock, and as near as it was possible to get unseen, but just too far; between 250 and 300 yards, however, I pointed out to Sharpoo that a wide snow torrent was just below the animals, and whichever way they eventually moved must bring them nearer to us, so the only thing to do was to wait.

Some were lying down among the stones, others wandering listlessly about; but in half an hour they began to graze towards us, then two rams which had been lying in the sun half asleep rose, and the whole lot began to move away uphill, at first straight towards us, and I had great hopes of a close shot; but they turned, and I saw would pass about 150 to 160 yards to our right.

A ram with small horns was the first to appear round a bend in the hill, so we crouched without a move, and he did not see us, our clothes being just the color of the stones; then close behind him came one of the biggest heads, so slowly raising the rifle I fired—a scramble, and the ram and a shower of loose stones were rolling down the hillside together, the rest of the flock bolting like lightning over the brow of the hill, never giving me a chance with my second barrel. I never saw animals go off faster, a cloud of dust, rattle of stones, and they were gone. The ram had a fine head, and luckily the kill was not far from my new camping ground, so I sent for coolies to carry home the meat—very excellent mutton it is, too, if kept a few days.

July 14th was very wet, but Gunga (my "bearer"), whose ideas of fine weather seem a trifle vague, dug me out before five, so, being thoroughly awakened, I dressed, then tried to find some more ooin, but saw nothing, though I went several miles. There is a bear here, and I have had a chance of shooting it; but its coat is like an old door mat, all the fur coming out; so I held my hand, for it is no use killing them now when their skins are useless—they shed the hair about the middle or end of June, as a rule, unless on very high ground.

July 15th.—Up the smaller of the two nullahs, and soon spotted some ibex, four fine males and eight females; but, though a long way off, they undoubtedly had seen us before we discovered them; but they went away so slowly, gazing as they went, that we deluded ourselves into the idea they were on the move simply because it pleased them, followed them the whole morning, and the wind up was, that we eventually saw them far ahead, right up against the sky, all looking back towards us, and evidently perfectly aware they were being tracked. A pity they saw us so soon in the first instance, for they were well placed for a stalk, and two of them had horns of between 35in. and 40in.

Worked home along the crest of the hills, once getting right over and within very easy shot of a herd of ibex lying in the sun, but the best of the bucks had not horns of more than 20in., so I did not fire, for, much as I want to kill one to make a total twenty, it must be a good one. Sharpoo very seedy, quite knocked up, as much as ever he could do to get back to camp, every half mile he had to sit down and rest for ten minutes; in fact, he is rather had.

ROD.

Willful Ignorance.

No greater exhibition of parsimony and ignorant assumption has ever been shown by the Governor of a great State, than that exhibited by Governor Altgeld, of Illinois, in his message sent to the General Assembly of that State in which he says:

"First—The Fish Commission. This board was created in 1889 and has up to date drawn $35,496.34 from the State Treasury, and, however, able the members may be and whatever the theory may have been which led to its creation, it is apparent now that the people of the State have at present very little to show for this large expenditure of money. The experiment has been tried sufficiently to demonstrate that it does not pay and as it costs the State on an average of $7,000 per annum to maintain the commission, I recommend that it be abolished and the State be required to execute the law against the use of nets in the waters of the State."

The American Field in commenting on this exhibition of willful ignorance, if, indeed, the action of the Governor should not be designated by a stronger term, says:

Further, on the day after this remarkable exhibition of parsimony toward the people of Illinois, it is stated that the Governor made it plain to Dr. S. P. Bartlett, that in his capacity as the Chief Executive he would not sign any bill appropriating funds for the use of the Illinois Fish Commission.

What a different view regarding the disbursement of public funds Governor Altgeld, only a year or two ago, when he sued the city of Chicago for damages to a piece of his property in a sum almost as large as that expended in five years by the Illinois Fish Commission. The defense made proof, if we remember aright, that the Judge had knowledge of all the facts at the time he purchased the property, and the jury cut down the award for damages very materially. Judge Altgeld did not advocate then such excessive economy in the handling of public funds as now actuates Governor Altgeld.

The reasons given by the Governor for his desire to abolish the Illinois Fish Commission are untenable, when viewed in the light of modern progress and of public good. The State of Illinois, one of the largest, richest and grandest commonwealths in the United States, has always been niggardly in its appropriations for its Fish Commission, far behind other States less able, and stingy compared with its equals.

The expenses of the entire work have been very small, compared to the benefits which have resulted to the public from the labors of the commission. Fish Commissioner N.

K. Fairbank draws no salary, and Dr. S. P. Bartlett, who as secretary has carried on the work, received nothing from the State, but draws a salary from the United States Government as Assistant United States Fish Commissioner. Dr. Bartlett has done good work for the State of Illinois, and the only return the United States has had from Illinois has been in the shape of fish fry.

For about three years Dr. Bartlett has used a small steamer, with which he has superintended the work of seining millions of young fishes in the rivers, hayous and sloughs, during high water and after spawning season, in the Spring of each year. The greater part of the fry has been distributed in Illinois waters, which accounts for the fact that those waters have now a plentiful supply of good fishes; but Dr. Bartlett has furnished a portion of this fry to the United States Fish Commission, for distribution in other states, thus in a measure recompensing the Government for his time spent in the service of Illinois.

In this manner the fish supply of that State has been kept up at very small cost compared to the accrued benefit to the general public, and to do away with the possibility of continuing this good work is false economy, and any steps tending that way cannot be too harshly criticised.

In the American Field of February 4, the fact was noted that Governor Altgeld contemplated the action he has taken, that being the first notification of the Governor's intention, and we then pleaded urgently with Governor Altgeld, that he go deeply into the subject of fish protection and fish culture before taking any steps in that direction. We cited to his notice that in many other states ample financial support was given to fish commissions, and grand results were attained. We pointed out that throughout the length and breadth of the land thousands of families derived their sole support from catching the very fishes fostered by the State fish commissions. We cited Governor Flower of New York, as stating that his travels in company of the Fish Commissioners of that State had interested him greatly in the work, that every acre of water in the State should produce as much food as an acre of land, and that the work there would be greatly expanded.

We cannot believe that Governor Altgeld has studied this matter closely, for his message to the Assembly says, "It is apparent now that the people of the State have at present very little to show for this large expenditure of money."

To begin with, according to the message itself, the Fish Commission has drawn from the State funds a trifle more than eighty-five thousand dollars since 1889, in five years. Governor Altgeld is wrong about the amount drawn in five years. Eighty-five thousand and odd dollars is the amount which has been drawn since 1879, fourteen years. Can Governor Altgeld show us in what other manner the same amount of money has been expended with the same amount of benefit? Let him remember that in his false economy he is striking at a great food-producing industry, sustained at a minimum cost to the people.

We have pointed out in these columns previously that the scanty appropriations by Illinois for fish purposes have been a disgrace to so wealthy a State, and far less than those made by much poorer states.

We cannot believe that the legislators of Illinois will be so recreant to the trusts imposed upon them by the public as to carry out the retrogressive, suicidal policy outlined by Governor Altgeld. Should they prove, however, so lost to all sense of their duty to the public, we believe the people should confront Governor Altgeld with figures and facts showing that the State's wealth had increased through the judicious expenditure of the public money, and demonstrate the false economy of the measure he proposes. Should he still insist upon abolishing the Illinois Fish Commission, and refuse to sign any appropriations for its use, then the Legislature should pass the appropriations over his veto, and increase them to a yearly sum commensurate with the wealth, dignity and importance of the State of Illinois.

The old adage says: "A new broom sweeps clean." It is evident that the recently inaugurated Chief Executive of Illinois intends to make a record for economy. But he has started out on false premises in this matter, and has taken a position he may find it difficult to maintain. He does not stand out for economy, for the little seven thousand dollars per annum, as it has been expended, adds much more than that sum each year to the general wealth of Illinois. The people, as a whole, will be against Governor Altgeld on this issue, for it is neither economical, just nor even politic, and the sooner he ascertains the truth of our statement the better for all concerned.

Blinding a Shark.

A successful diver must possess great courage and nerves of steel. Such a man, connected with a large wrecking company, was visiting the pearl fisheries in the gulf of California. On one of his trips in quest of the pearl oyster he had a narrow escape from a fearful death.

He had been instructed never to stir from the bottom until he had looked up and around. Fortunately he heeded the advice. Having filled his bag he glanced quickly about, and caught sight of a huge shovel-nosed shark watching him.

In an emergency men think fast. Near the diver was a large rock. He moved quickly to the other side of it, hoping to dodge the ferocious monster. But the maneuver did not work; the shark watched every movement, changing his position by a slight motion of his powerful tail.

Time was precious, and the diver conceived the idea of blinding the shark by stirring up the mud. Under cover of that he might escape. He worked for dear life, and had the water thick with mud in less than half a minute.

Slipping around the rock again he rose to the surface, having barely strength enough to reach the side of the boat, and was hauled on board just as the voracious man eater made a rush for him.

Sharks have lately been affording contributions to science. The biologists have been vivisecting them for the purpose of finding out about the functions of the ear, which in fishes is made to some extent on the same pattern as in man. The fact has been known for some time that the ear is not merely an organ of hearing. It has to do with the sense of equilibrium. Light has been thrown on this matter by removing portions of the auditory apparatus of sharks, which are thus rendered unable to maintain their balance in the water. The part on which this faculty seems to depend is the "labyrinth," and the same effect is produced by cutting the nerves communicating with it.

On the Klamath.

Potwine Rapid is five to six miles down stream from the ford; it is a long, deep rapid, terminating in several beautiful pools, from which, by the way, I never succeeded in taking a fish, though I never could resist the temptation to try. This water is generally best early in the season, but I do not think it as good a place for the large fish as above Rocky Ford to the mouth of Spring Creek. At the rapid, once in the month of May, a party of six, myself among the number, took twenty-nine fish, the largest three and a quarter pounds, in a day's fishing; not a phenomenal catch by any means, but then it must be remembered that we had to drive fourteen miles in the morning and the same distance back again in the evening, which took off a good deal from the day, especially as we did not get an early start. On this occasion we found a large "professor" the best fly, but the fish did not rise freely at it or anything else, as the caddis flies were just leaving the water and the fish were feeding on them, and were so gorged that they were not to be tempted by an artificial fly unless it bore a close resemblance to the live one. One of our party, by using them on his hook in addition to the fly, had quite good success, but though he caught more in numbers than the others of the party, his fish were not as large, probably because he could not make long casts without whipping off the bait, and so could not reach the large fish, which keep well in the middle of the stream, where the water is deep. As a general thing my time was limited when at Fort Klamath, and one day's fishing was all I could have, but in July, '87, I had the pleasure of camping for three days on the Will'amson at Rocky Ford, having a very delightful outing, though I think we all agreed that the fishing might have been a little better than it was.

We—there were four of us—left Portland, Ore., on the afternoon of 15th of the month, with dog, guns and fishing tackle, prepared to rough it for ten days or two weeks. At Central Point, Ore., the next morning we left the cars, and after breakfasting and changing our clothes, were ready to begin our long drive. We were met here by a complete outfit from the fort, a strong mountain wagon, drawn by four good horses, for the passengers, and another wagon for the baggage, etc., also tents and cooking utensils; we had our own bedding and provisions. Besides a driver for each wagon there was a cook and two men to help about camp and with the animals, so altogether we were as well equipped for an outing as a party need be.

Our first day's drive was thirty miles to Hull's ranch on the Rogue River, the first part of it being through a well-cultivated country; the ranches soon became further and further apart and the country wilder and rougher, and by the time we reached Hull's we had about left civilization behind us, that being the last settlement until the fort is reached. Our camp was pitched just above Hull's fence on the bank of the river, and although it was late, and the stream, owing to melting snow, was high, we determined to try to get enough fish for supper and breakfast the next morning, and succeeded beyond our expectation, catching in all twenty-five fish, the largest one and a half pounds, which, considering the stage of the water, was doing very well, for we could fish only in one or two places, the banks of the river at this point being very steep and lined with thick bushes to the water's edge, while wading, owing to the depth of the water and the strong current, was out of the question.

From Central Point to this camp the road was comparatively level, but here it turned into the mountains, and our second day's ride was up grade all the way, following closely the course of the river, which we crossed above the falls shortly before going into our second camp, which was made on a branch of the Rogue River known as Union Creek, a beautiful stream, but very brushy. Our driver, who had lived and driven in this part of the county for many years, told us we would get no fish here, as there were none above the falls of the Rogue River; his reason for the absence of fish was that the streams became such torrents when the snows went off that the fish, if there ever had been any above the falls, had been swept down and had never been able to get back again. The falls are an obstacle, as at them the river narrows and plunges down a gorge with such velocity that I am quite willing to believe that no fish could get up; still there are fish above the falls in other streams, and we thought he might be mistaken about Union Creek, but after a very thorough trial and a most dismal failure, we were forced to admit he was right about there being no fish, whatever the cause for the lack of them might be. On the return trip I not only fished Union Creek a second time, but also worked my way to the main river and tried it too, but did not get so much as a rise for my pains.

Our next day's drive brought us to the fort; from Union Creek to the divide near Crater Lake the road is up grade all the way, but none of the hills are very steep, while from the divide to the post it is down hill and the road is good.

At the post we remained over night and most of the next day, leaving in time to make the drive to Rocky Ford and get settled in camp before darkness came on. Two of the officers from the fort went with us, and as soon as a site for a camp was selected we all set out to try our luck at the fish, the result being twenty-one rainbow trout, the largest twenty-four inches in length and weighing six pounds exactly.

Of these twenty-one fish fourteen were taken by one person who used a small fly with dun wings and a sort of yellow palmer-like body, which seemed to be just what the fish wanted; as no one else had a fly like this particular creation, they had poor luck, though fishing at the same place. During that afternoon and evening the writer took but three fish, but as the six-pounder was one of them, he was not disposed to complain. This fish was taken in the dusk of the evening, after the rest of the party had gone back to camp; my efforts had not been attended with much success, and I was working toward camp, fishing as I went. I made a long cast and concluded to give it up, so reeled in my line carelessly. Just as it was at my feet almost I saw the V shaped wake a large fish makes in still water when swimming rapidly near the surface, and knew that my fly had been followed by a fish. Without waiting to let our more line I immediately made a cast, and the fish struck at once, and then began a fight that taxed all my skill and gave me all the work I could do for the next half an hour. My tackle was a nine-ounce Orvis rod, fifty yards of line, a heavy single gut leader and one large fly. No sooner did this fish feel the hook than away he went up stream like a shot, making the reel hum and running out nearly the whole fifty yards of line before he slacked up, which he did only to go into the air, jumping clear of the water time and again, shaking and twisting himself and doing his utmost to rid himself of the hook, which unfortunately for him was well set. Finally he slackened and let himself be reeled in, and I thought the fight was over, but here I was badly fooled, for no sooner did he find himself near the bank than off he went a second time with apparently as much vigor as the first, running out quite as much line and leaving the water repeatedly, first on one side of the river, then on the other, until I began to fear he would wear the hook loose. Once he made a short run right toward me, and the slack line he gained made me think I had lost him, but the hook was too well fast and he could not shake it out.

His third and fourth runs were shorter, and it was evident he was exhausted, and I was not long in leading him to a place where I could reach him with the landing net. I have taken larger fish, but never one, larger or smaller, that was more game or made a better fight than this six-pounder.

The day will come when the owners of good fishing rods will be ten times as numerous as they are at the present day; when the owners of cane poles and dollar-jointed rods will purchase five, ten and twenty-dollar rods without swallowing a lump and turning white, and as nonchalantly as they now pay out a hundred for a gun. It takes time for all things, but it seems to me most singular that our sportsmen, who have shot according to principles for years, and who would no more think of killing a woodcock or quail on the ground than they would trap them, will persist in using a stiff pole and no reel. We will allow them the credit by saying that if they once used a first-class, flexible rod they would never return to the rigid stick, with no give in it. To a reasoning man it must appear as a conviction that to haul a fish out of the water with a stiff pole is in no sense more scientific than putting a bevy of quail as they huddle on the ground. I do not go in as a stickler as to quality of rods and reels. I have no axes to grind. Let every man have his choice as to make. All I want to impress on my readers is that, at the present day, stiff poles correspond to flint-lock muskets, and one who habitually fishes with a stiff pole trots in the same class with the un-sportsmanlike chap who pots his feathered game on the ground.

The bulldog used at the new National theatre, corner Jones and Eddy streets, in the Black-Crook, is a sad commentary on the hall, which for so many years has been the "Hall of Howls" as the bench shows for some time past, given in this city, have been held there. The noble canines would howl most dismally should they be compelled to witness the horrible farce which has been going on there for the past week. The presentation of the Black Crook has fallen in every sense, far below the moral tone of that piece!

The rows anent the conducting of the arrangements of the bench show at the Columbian Exposition are already filling the air with their discords. All of the judges selected for that event do not seem to suit everybody. Whoever supposed that they would? The managing committees are not omnipotent. Do not ask of them impossibilities. Turn in and help the exhibition all you can, and if this be your desire you will have but little time to promote dissensions.

Entries for the Los Angeles Bench Show close to-day.

A number of gentlemen will attend the Los Angeles show from this city.

Nearly thirty entries of dogs from this city will be made at Los Angeles bench show.

Dr. Bowhill will exhibit his wire-haired foxterriers at the Los Angeles bench show.

The Los Angeles Bench Show opens on the 19th. A large number of dogs will be shown there from this city.

The question as to where the next field trials will be held is one of interest but seems to be sleeping quietly now.

The interest in the bench show is increasing daily and there can be no doubt of the complete success of the undertaking.

Mr. H. Schreiber, of Oakland, will exhibit several dogs at the coming bench show under the auspices of the Pacific Kennel Club.

For all information regarding the coming bench show address Managing Committee, Pacific Kennel Club, 628 Market street, this city.

The St. Bernard class at the Pacific Kennel Club's show, will be a surprise to those who have not kept posted on this line, since the last exhibit.

President E. W. Briggs, of the Pacific Kennel Club, bears his honors in that courteous and gentlemanly manner which makes officers popular.

The Pacific Kennel Club held a meeting on Wednesday evening last, at which time the current business anent the coming bench show was dispatched.

The Mechanic's Pavilion on May 3-6 should be visited by every lover of the canine world. There will be no end of interest there for every lover of the dog.

The Mechanic's Pavilion is a splendid hall in which to hold the coming bench show, to be given in this city by the Pacific Kennel Club. May 3d to 6th it will doubtless be filled with the best of San Francisco society.

Mr. George Raper, who will judge the exhibits at the coming bench show is one of the most popular and experienced judges of dogs in the whole country. Do not fail to enter your dogs and have him pass his opinion on them.

If there be any truth in the signs of the times there will be such a gathering of the kennel interests of this country at the Columbian Exposition as will not likely occur again for a great length of time. It will be an event worth attending.

The St. Bernard Club met on Tuesday night last at which time Messrs. McGinley and Benjamin were admitted to membership in the club. Mr. McGinley owns a fine dog, Monk (Celtic Ralman—Gipsy of Pine Grove), that he will enter for the coming exhibit.

Mr. E. P. Schell is an enthusiast in any and all matters in which he takes part and in no venture has he shown more energy and enterprise than in that of his kennel investments. He is working like a Trojan for the success of the coming bench show to be held in this city May 3-6.

Echo Cocker Kennel, Stockton, Cal., A. Davenport, Prop., claim name Lady Josie for black and white markings cocker Spaniel bitch puppy whelped January 18, 1893, by Giffer E. (Giffer ex Lady, Lady by ch blk Pete A. K. C. S. B 4910 ex Miss Nance, A. K. C. S. B. 12,599) ex Fanny.

Now is the time to make your entries for the coming bench show. Do not delay the matter a single day, but call upon or write the Managing Committee at 628 Market street for full information and enter your dog at once. This action will be much on your part to insure the success of the show.

Mr. James E. Watson offers for sale the splendid black pointers, George P. and Doctor P., each of them Derby winners, also Billy P., litter brother to the above. These dogs are good ones in every particular, and any one looking for first-class field dogs can do no better than secure one of them.

The pigeon exhibit that will be given in connection with the bench show in this city at Mechanic's Pavilion promises to be something of unusual interest. The pigeon fanciers of this city are a strong body and represent enterprise and energy sufficient to make any object which they should desire, an accomplished fact.

The amount of enthusiasm engendered by a bench show is readily understood when one realizes that the canine world holds more of man's affection than any other of the animal creation. It would seem that many men in this city are thinking of but little else than the coming show, at present. This argues well for the success of the exhibition.

The Pacific Kennel Club met on Wednesday evening last, President E. W. Briggs in the chair. Albert Beverly, L. R. Carrigan, Frank Vernon and Dr. C. M. Selfridge were elected to membership and J. J. Tompkinson was proposed for membership. There is $612 in the treasury and a guarantee fund of $450, making a good financial showing for the club.

The Bay View Kennels will present at Los Angeles two very fine puppies in Irish setters. Glenmore Hoodlum (Finfilas—ex Ruby Glenmore) and Maid of Glenmore (Finfilas—ex Betsy Crofts). These puppies are very fine-looking, and are said to possess fine quality in field work as far as developed. Mr. Campbell is justly proud of his possessions in Irish setters.

A kennel show is a most important and potent factor in the education of the public along the lines in which they should receive information. The exhibition of several hundred dogs is not only interesting, but it also leaves an impression on the mind of every one who looks upon it the fact that man, some portion of the great family at least, is kindness and attention to the best interests of this species of the animal creation. Kindness to animals and an abiding interest in their development is a noble principle which should be encouraged.

"Ashmont's" Kennel Secrets is a work of such value as to become indispensable to every kennel man. It contains the gist of the knowledge of all the kennel world on matters relating to the care of dogs. If you have a dog you cannot afford to be without this work. It is a perfect compendium on all kennel matters. Messrs. Clabrough, Golcher & Co., 605 Market street, the well-known sporting goods dealers, have it on sale. It is handsomely and profusely illustrated and is just such a work as will satisfy each and every earnest inquirer after information on this subject.

Alongside ran our small pack of bear dogs, a breed peculiar to this district, but much resembling the Esquimaux dog in general appearance, with powerful frame covered with a long wavy coat and set on short legs with broad feet, a short thick neck, broad head with a short, sharpened nose, small, erect ears, bright, intelligent eyes, and a magnificent bushy tail curling over the back like a squirrel's, says Temple Bar.

They are very savage and spend most of their leisure time in getting up fights among themselves; nearly every one of our small pack showed by a hanging ear or a gashed lip that he had not been made free of the guild without paying his footing.

In bear hunting these dogs are invaluable; their keen scent enables them to detect his berloga or winter lair at a considerable distance and through all but the deepest snow, while, when he is started, they will follow his track with unerring patience, giving tongue every now and then to assure the hunter it is "all right," and guide him through the forest till the final chorus tells that they have come up with the bear, and you rush up to obtain an easy shot as he stands at bay. The dogs are very active in avoiding the fierce blows which the bear aims at them, and soon learn the wisdom of attacking him in the rear, so that though every now and then they limp away bleeding from an ugly gash from the bear's claws, but after sitting down in the snow and licking their wounds carefully over they trot contentedly home and come out the next day as keen as ever. We usually took out five, all good dogs, and all of different colors, Sobol, a splendid iron-gray dog with a voice like a bloodhound's and a frame wiry and strong as a wolf's, holding the proud post of leader.

When living near Neosho Falls, Kan., a neighbor, who was a market bird-hunter, went from there to Western Missouri for the purpose of hunting quails and prairie-chickens in the fall of the year. He took with him a favorite pointer dog. The route taken was southward some fifty miles to Parsons, Kan., by railroad, thence northeastward to Fort Scott, and on into Missouri, nearly due east from the latter point, says the Brandon Banner.

All went very well for a few days after he began hunting, but by some means the dog became lost from him. He spent two days hunting it, and, as it was no use to try to hunt without the dog, he went home, and there found the dog, all right. According to the report of his family the dog had reached there within two days from the time he had lost him, and, as the distance was more than seventy-five miles, it is quite certain that the dog took a near cut for home. Now, if this dog had no sense of direction, what had he that led him to take what we may confidently believe to be the straight and true course for home, when he had passed over the other two sides of the triangle by rail?

Who does not know that a cat or even a half-grown kitten, taken a long way from home in a bag, nearly always finds its way back? When living in northern Michigan I had a cat we tired of. I took her in a boat directly across the lake, about two miles, and turned her loose. Although it was about six miles around the end of the lake, a circuitous course, and certainly one unknown to her by sight, the next morning she was back at the old place.

Another case is just stated to me of a cat that was taken by rail fully twenty miles in southwest Missouri, and the next day he walked in all right at his former home.

A Fine String.

Mr. H. T. Payne has lately brought all his English setters up from the south. They consist of Countess Noble, winner of second in the Derby at the late trials, a handsome bitch almost clear white, Lilly C.—the dam of Countess Noble—a large bitch of splendid form and grand head. Lilly C. is by Cable (Dick Loverack—Liddesdale), out of Winnepeg Belle (Rocketer Manatoha Belle). Jolly Fay, a small, compact bitch, by Jolly Planter (Plantagenet—Countess Flirt), out of Los Angeles (Grouse II.—Princess Claude).

At the head of the kennel is the well-known Fred W., by Count Noble, out of Spark (Carlowitz—Magnet), he is a black, white and tan, of good size and form and with one of the finest of heads, and perfect ears. He has proven himself a splendid sire; the records of the Eastern trials showing that his get has, at various times, defeated such cracks as Chance, Daisy's Hope, Fred Galis, Capt. Bethel, The Corsair, Tribulation and others. To these Mr. Payne has added another youngster, Del Sur, received last Monday from Tennessee. Del Sur is bred in the purest of the purple. He is by Eugene T.—a field trial winner—by Count Noble, out of Ruby's Girl (Gladstone—Ruby II.) Del Sur's dam is by Chickasaw II. (Gladstone—Sue), out of Gladette, by Gladstone's Boy, out of Flirt C., by Coleman's London, out of Belle of Hatchie, Coleman's London, by Gladstone, out of Clip.

Thus while Del Sur is sired by a worthy son of Count Noble, he carries in his veins the blood of Gladstone in five crosses, of Leicester—Dart in four crosses, and of Druid—Ruby in three crosses.

Countess Noble and Jolly Fay are both in whelp to Fred W.

Bred.

G. B. Birrell, Esq., San Francisco, Cal., has bred Governor, fox-terrier bitch, by Captain—Flora, to J. B. Martin's Blemton Reefer, by Champion Venio—Champion Rachel.

D. Shannon, Esq., San Francisco, Cal., has bred Judy, fox-terrier bitch, by Le Logos—Vixen, to J. B. Martin's Blemton Reefer 19662.

Names Claimed.

J. B. Martin, San Francisco, Cal., has claimed the name Golden Flash for fox-terrier bitch, whelped July 9, 1892, by Brockenhurst Tyke—Hillside Spinster.

Sales.

A. B. Townsend, Esq., Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, has sold fox-terrier bitch by Brockenhurst Tyke—Hillside Spinster, to J. B. Martin, San Francisco, Cal.

BLOOD HORSE MEETING.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1893.

This was a typical April day, with its sunshine and showers, and, while there was lots of mud to the square inch, the people turned out 2,000 strong to see six races run over a sticky track. There was but one close finish, and that was in the first race, won by Charger. Flirtation, the much-touted sister to Flambeau in the Undine Stables, won her race with ridiculous ease after getting away fourth. She is fully as good as her friends claimed her to be. Quirt, the white-faced Sacramento filly, won the third race almost as easily as Flirtation did the second. The first and greatest "dump" of the entire meeting, came when Red Prince beat the backed-off-the-board favorite El Rayn, and other good ones in the mile and fifty yards handicap. By this victory it would appear that Red Prince, while in Burlingame's hands, was run in and out, for he beat horses of higher class than he ever did last fall. Grandee, heavily backed and a favorite at the post, made a procession out of the fifth race, Bronco, ridden by Miller and the opening favorite, finishing a ridiculous fourth, over a dozen lengths behind Mr. Macdonough's gray colt, who is certainly a phenomenal performer on a heavy track. Wicklow, also in the popular young turfman's stable, put the last race to his credit as easily as his stable companion did the previous event, Dinero never being at all dangerous. Of the five races Mr. Macdonough's horses captured two and ran second in another, and that he and Trainer Dan Dennison have cause to congratulate themselves goes without saying. Little Sullivan did well to-day, though he bestrode on two occasions the best horses by long odds. He had two wins and a second and third to his credit out of four mounts. Thad Williams rode Charger splendidly, while the other successful jockeys were Miller, O'Hara and Joe Narvaez.

THE DAY'S RACING DESCRIBED.

Charger opened a warm favorite in the first race at 8 to 5, but hot tips getting out on Lodi, Stoneman and Ida Glenn, Bally's horse went to the post at 2 1/2 to 1. Ida Glenn was first to show to a beautiful start, with Charger second and Mero third. The field had not gone much over 100 yards when Charger passed to the front and commenced opening up daylight at a great rate. He swung into the homestretch two lengths to the good, Joe Hooker Jr. now second, having run up rapidly from fourth place, past Ida Glenn and Mero. The latter came fast a sixteenth from home, and in an exciting finish Charger, nursed along by Williams, passed the winning post a winner by a neck, Joe Hooker Jr. second, as far from the fast-coming Mero, who would have secured the place had Seaman made his move a little sooner. Ida Glenn was fourth, lapped by old gray Stoneman. Time, 1:20 1/2.

The second race needs little description. The great favorite, Flirtation, got away fourth in the field of six, moved up second coming around the turn into the homestretch, and heading Ardent soon after entering the straight, won pulling up with great ease by two lengths. Rosalie, fourth into the homestretch, came fast at the finish, and beat Silver State out in the last dozen strides to the extent of half a length. Ardent was fourth, the much-fancied (for place) Realization fifth and Bordeaux last. Time, 0:52 1/2.

Quirt, a well-touted chestnut filly with a blaze face from Sacramento was an even-money favorite. She got off third to Fortuna and the heavily-played Alexis, but Gussie, fourth away, moved up very fast and assumed command ere a sixteenth of a mile had been traversed. Quirt passed Gussie at the entrance to the straight track, and coming away with great ease, won by two lengths. Gussie secured the place just as easily by three lengths, Fortuna third, half a length from the "good thing" Alexis. Time, 0:53 1/2.

A mile and fifty-yard race, handicap, was fourth on the day's programme, and oh what a plunge was made on El Rayo! In less time than it takes to tell he was rubbed off nearly all the boards, so anxious were the plungers to back him at 3 to 1 on. Red Prince and Alliance, at 5 to 1 each, had a few friends with the courage of their convictions and some coin. To a good start Raindrop showed in front, with Bessie W. second and Red Prince third. Bessie W. went around the first turn very speedily, and led past the quarter, with Raindrop second and Red Prince third. The favorite was fourth. Bessie W. commenced to tire at the half-pole, and was leading Raindrop but a head at that point. Red Prince now commenced his move, and headed the procession between the half and three-quarter poles, where it was apparent the favorite was beaten, for he was being ridden and did not gain an inch. Red Prince was never thereafter headed, and won in a romp from Raindrop by about two lengths, the latter two lengths from Alliance, who moved up from fifth place in the straight. The favorite was fourth, Bessie W. fifth and Fannie F. last. Time, 1:50 1/2—a good run on such a sticky track. Matt Storn owns the winner, which is a beautiful chestnut horse by imp. Woodstock out of Oklohona, by Breathitt.

Bronco opened favorite in the fifth race, seven furlongs, but a continual rush of Grandee money made the gray colt a slight favorite in the close. The remaining two were little fancied. Grandee got off second, over a length behind Bronco, but when the quarter-pole had been reached was one and a half lengths from Royal Flush, who rapidly passed Bronco, as did Cassim. The further Grandee went the more ridiculous appeared his opponents, and the gray son of Warwick won, pulled almost to a walk, by three lengths from Dr. Ross, who made a good run soon after passing the half-pole. Cassim finished third, ten lengths behind Dr. Ross. Bronco was fourth and Royal Flush last. Time, 1:32 1/2.

Dinero was a 1 to 3 shot at the opening in the sixth race, one mile, but Wicklow's chances were liked so well that almost all the play was confined to the chestnut colt. The result was that Wicklow went to the post a favorite at 4 to 5 (from 2 to 1). Dinero going begging at even money and Sidney at 6 to 1. Dinero was a neck in front at the start and under whip, but Wicklow passed to the fore in the first dozen strides, closely attended by Sidney. The pair last named passed the quarter head and head, but Wicklow soon shook off the Holly colt and gained so fast that at the half he was six lengths to the good. Wicklow was not molested from this out, led into the stretch by a dozen lengths and won in a jog by eight lengths from Dinero, who beat Sidney six lengths for place. Time, 1:50.

Horsemen Should Have Them.

When sea-faring men "go down to the sea in big ships" they know that a physician's services cannot be had, so they provide for all emergencies that may arise, by filling a chest with drugs, liniments, lint and bandages that might be useful in case of sickness or accidents. Horsemen who have any regard for the health of their animals should have a chest made and lay in a supply of liniments, ointments, colic cures and other medicines, to be used in case accidents should happen. All of the large stock farms have a "veterinary department" of this description, and thousands of dollars, besides the lives of many valuable animals, have been saved through having these simple remedies on hand. In our advertising columns J. A. McKerron, the man who supplies everything horsemen need, notifies the public in a very simple and concise manner that they can stock a medicine chest with useful remedies that will pay for themselves the first time they are used. How horsemen on farms that are miles away from a drug store can afford to be without these simple remedies is incomprehensible. The cost is trifling, while the benefits are incalculable. Do not neglect to send in your orders at once for some of these indispensable articles.

SUPERINTENDENT BELLARS telegraphed us last Wednesday that J. J. Burke would act as presiding judge and James F. Caldwell as starter at the coming great meeting in the Missouri metropolis.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

PEDIGREE OF ARION—The following cut from The Chronicle of last Tuesday regarding the action of the Executive Committee of the A. T. R. A. anent the pedigree of Arion requires correction.

In place of a "great amount of evidence" to support the charge that Emblem was the dam of Manette, the only evidence were the affidavits of Allen and French, and these through the newspaper controversy, were shown to be so weak that there was no end to the tinkering and cobbling to patch them up. As will be learned from a copy of the paper I sent to the association, which is also appended, the reasons for not attending the meeting were plainly stated to be that the whole proceedings could only be a farcical imitation of legal methods and the mere formality of an oath being administered did not change its features.

I presume that the reasons for the members of the committee being "required to take oaths" were that in a letter to L. Brodhead, one of the committee, I objected to Mr. Jones, of Kenosha—a townsman of Mr. Allen—showing so much partiality for the Emblem side, and to Governor Coleman for publishing in his paper, The Rural World, that it was shown that Emblem was the dam while the controversy was yet unsettled. In the reply Mr. Brodhead proposed "swearing them off the bench" the antitheton of swearing them on was adopted. I should have had no hesitancy in accepting the committee without swearing off or on if steps had been taken to make the examination as strict as it would be in a court of law, but to submit evidence under the only rule which could prevail would be a loss of time.

Could Mr. Knox be subjected to a legal examination, his memory refreshed by data in my possession, I have the fullest faith that his testimony alone would settle the question that Addie is the dam of Manette. That I shall show so clearly in the future that conviction must follow.

It is hardly necessary to state that Governor Stanford fully agreed with me in not putting in an answer.

Special Dispatch to the Chronicle. CHICAGO, April 3.—Arion's disputed pedigree, so far as the American Trotting Register Association is concerned, has been settled. The executive committee of the association met in special session this afternoon and spent three hours in listening to witnesses and in reading affidavits bearing on the case. As was expected, it was decided that Manette Arion's dam is not Emblem, by Tattler, and not out of Addie, by Hambletonian Chief. The registration will be corrected accordingly.

The case first came up before the committee on January 17th, when the records of Stamboul were considered. Joseph Cairn Simpson came all the way from California to prove that Manette was out of Addie. A great amount of evidence in support of Emblem being Manette's dam caused him to ask a continuance of the case until to-day.

When Simpson returned to California he severely criticised the committee for listening to witnesses who were not under oath. In order to prevent a repetition of this criticism every witness was put under oath to-day and members of the committee were also required to take oaths.

Registrar Steiner refused to make the evidence in the case public. This will not be done until the committee's work is completed, which will not be for a day or two. The most important evidence, however, was the affidavits of Messrs. Allen and French, who were in charge of both mares Addie and Emblem at the time Manette was foaled.

Both are positive that Emblem is Manette's dam, and in the absence of evidence of positive nature in favor of Addie there was but one course for the committee to take. It is probable that Mr. Simpson submitted the testimony in favor of Addie, but that it was unsatisfactory is shown by the committee's decision. The affidavit of Messrs. French and Allen assert that Manette was foaled August 7, 1878, and that Addie could not have been the dam of a chestnut colt foaled in 1878. That these men did not get Emblem and Emblem mixed is proved by sections of their affidavits. The charge does not detract from the excellence of the colt's breeding. Arion as a two-year-old had a record of 2:10 1/2, and was purchased for $150,000 by J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, Mass.

To the President, Board of Directors and Executive Committee of the American Trotting Registry Association.

GENTLEMEN: In relation to the charge brought by C. W. Allen, of Kenosha, Wisconsin, that Manette is not the daughter of Addie, the consideration of which is now before your honorable body, acting as the representative of Leland Stanford, the owner of Manette, I decline to take part in said case or present an answer to testimony already admitted, or what may hereafter be offered. My objections are that under the conditions which govern investigations in your association, the rules under which evidence is received are altogether too slack to give testimony the weight it should have, especially when large pecuniary interests may be at stake, and on consultation with prominent legal authorities, learn that there is no way of overcoming the difficulty.

I was not aware until attending your session in January last, that testimony was received without even the formality of an oath, and when I solicited a postponement that was done on the presumption that steps could be taken which would ensure compliance with established legal precedents, and that penalties could be indicted for violations in accordance with law and the statutes of the State in which the investigation was held. When sworn testimony can be remedied by the addition of simple stories; when corrections and interpolations are offered and accepted to cover discrepancies in sworn affidavits heretofore published, talk, more talk allowed to effect what statements, duly authenticated by oath, and duly signed failed to prove, there is so little chance for rebutting the kind of evidence, that a journey from San Francisco to Chicago on such an errand, might be termed, to say the least, a Quixotic expenditure.

To take further part in these proceedings, would, in a manner, compel acceptance of the verdict, and that risk, in justice to my employer, I cannot accept. To decline being a party to the trial is the only course to pursue, to escape entanglement hereafter. Simply this, it is beyond question that no action in accordance with legal methods can be taken by your Board, and safeguards thrown aside, protection is voluntarily surrendered.

It must be evident to everyone who is capable of forming conclusions, that under such a lax system of presenting and receiving evidence, and that, too, without a chance for amendment, that important affairs could not be subjected to an ordeal, when the hazard is all on one side.

I feel abundantly confident that if anyone of you gentlemen were placed in the same situation, and gave that situation the study and consideration I have given this case, that while feeling perfectly safe, and ready to accept a verdict based on a thorough and legal investigation, you would reject with emphasis, a trial in which your interests, in jeopardy, and dependent on such evidence as might be presented, and I will add, as has been presented in the one under consideration.

Therefore, I present this paper without an apology or other plea than that offered. It is not the court I enter a protest against, but witnesses who are under no control, and whose court, as now organized, cannot govern. I am with assurances, yours, JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON, Agent for Leland Stanford in the Manette case.

TURF AUTOCRACY—The government of turf sports is supposed to be democratic, inasmuch as the members of the cabinet are elected by the vote of the association. If not precisely democratic then it is presumed to be at the most oligarchical, as the President and Board of Control, Trustees, directors, stewards, or whatever their offices may be deominated is composed of four or more individuals. In the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association there are seven directors which are granted by the Constitution and By-Laws authority to conduct the business in accordance with turf law and precedents; the rules of the association being the guide and when these fail, the general statutes in the shape of "established custom" has to be depended upon. Questions outside of those which are provided for by the by-laws and rules are constantly arising, and these are oftentimes exceedingly troublesome. "Precedents and usages" occasionally fail to cover a few of these cases. As English racing antedates that of all modern countries, when our own practices are inadequate what has been done in like instances there is a guide which is the safest to follow. Oftentimes there is a necessity for immediate action, and then some one person must be empowered to decide. There may be no time to summon a quorum of directors, or even to council with others, and distasteful as the name may be to a democratic body, an autocrat is an imperative necessity. But when the necessity for prompt action does not exist there is no excuse for one-man-power, and that cannot be seized without awakening antagonism and a determination not to submit to edicts which have been framed and promulgated by one person.

That there is a wide-spread dissatisfaction at some of the rulings of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association is too evident to be controverted. Members of the association, owners of horses, the general public, or that portion of the general public which has a penchant for racing, unite in denouncing the course pursued, and the expressions of discontent and disapproval are so nearly unanimous that it may be termed universal condemnation. Strong language is the most fancied in signifying their disapproval, and many of the critics are not particular in selecting "words that burn" from their somewhat copious vocabulary of striking phrases. Quite a proportion ascribe the tyrannical edicts to one person, and charge that the vice-president, Thos. H. Williams, Jr., has usurped the power which should belong to the directors. While there are reasons to found this belief upon, I do not share in that further than as there will be always a greater display of activity on the part of one member of a board, and as Mr. Williams has a superabundance of odie force, he has been more conspicuous than his fellow-officers in all the business of the association. He has been the most prominent actor in every scene, and, therefore, when there were personal considerations involved, whenever the ruling favored his side of the question, people could not be blamed for giving that more weight than those with an inner and better knowledge were aware that it should bear. So far as the discussions of the questions go, it does not matter whether there was unanimity in the council, and that every member of the board voted in favor of the propositions carried, or that there was only a bare majority, the right or wrong is present in either case, and I will confine myself to that feature of the controversy.

There are three cases of late occurrence which I consider of paramount importance. The first I shall mention was commenced some time ago, but the culmination of the wrong was last Monday night. That was debaring those who made books on the Oakland races from following the same business at the meetings of the Blood Horse, reaffirming that decision last Saturday, and then revoking it in the case of only one man, and that one the prime offender, if offense were committed, on Monday. To justify that first move the action of the Board of Control in regard to "winter racing" in New Jersey was the precedent though they are certainly not parallel cases. At the close of the last Blood Horse meeting two others were advertised, one the "California Jockey Club," which would hold its meeting on the Bay District course, the other a venture of Henry Schwartz on the Oakland course. So far as I know both were speculations on the part of individuals, with no apparent reason why one should be favored, the other condemned. Without personal knowledge of the manner in which these races were conducted, as I was in the East when they were held, and did not attend on a single day when a subsequent meeting to that of Schwartz was in progress on the Oakland track, I cannot testify further than to reiterate what was said in regard to the honesty of the Schwartz races, that being that with one exception they were remarkably free from all suspicion of jobbery, and that being granted, it would surely not lose by comparison with the big meeting which had preceded. The reasons I have heard given for the order of debarment was that these extended meetings were detrimental to the true interests of the turf, and that there was only a lot of inferior, played-out horses to participate. The first I hold to be sound contention, but an association which had carried a meeting from October to January and gave notice of a still longer for the following winter could not, with any sense of fairness, enter the plea. The second is too trivial for answer further than at the time of writing there have been two days of the spring meeting concluded, and horses which participated in the Oakland debauchery have won six of the twelve races decided.

It was surely wrong to prohibit on one side of the bay what was heartily welcomed on the other. Adhering to the wrong had the merit, at least, of consistency—removing the ban in the case of one and leaving the others still excommunicated, an exhibition of favoritism which should not be shown in a deliberative body.

I have nothing to say regarding the merits of the controversy between Mr. Williams and Mr. Ashe as to the ownership of the horses. Both sides claim a victory, and until that is decided it will be a waste of words to argue that phase of the question. But when the Association refused the person who had legal possession of the horses in dispute a stall for Geraldine, or permit her to take part in their races, it was certainly reprehensible. There is no point of view that I can take which will place that order in a favorable light. No charge had been made at the time affecting the standing of Mr. Ashe, and though subsequently it was learned that he stood in the forfeit list of the Board of Control, that knowledge cannot be entered in mitigation of the injustice done. In fact, it has a peculiar bearing, if my information be correct that the knowledge was obtained in reply to a telegram, and that it was the first instance of forfeits from that body being recognized by the Association. I am not prepared to object to a treaty of reciprocity between our Association and the Board of Control, though if made at this juncture, it is somewhat unfortunate. Washington Park did not enter into such an agreement until December 22, 1891, and there are a number of the racing associations of the interior which are yet outsiders.

There was plenty of sympathy for Mr. Ashe before the forfeit part of the imbroglio came in. The Association is not expected to let sympathy influence its decisions, but there is nothing to prevent me from lamenting over the bad luck which has apparently culminated. May there be a rift in the black cloud I fervently hope, and were it in my power all straightforward racing and trotting men should receive nothing but smiles from Dame Fortune.

The third charge, in my estimation, is by far the most serious. That is, the suspension of Peter Weber and his two sons, growing out of the thrashing of the elder jockey by the starter. It may be that I have not obtained correct information in relation to all the particulars, but so far as heard, there have been no dissenting voices regarding the incidents at the start. That was, that the boy persisted in breaking away in front, was fined $50, and, according to the Examiner description, "Ferguson also slashed Weber with his whip, severely cutting his back." There was some rough talk by the boy's father, and he handed back the badges. He was called before the directors at a subsequent meeting of the Board and one of the officials told me that if he had made a suitable apology he would have been let off with a moderate fine. In place of that, he demanded an assurance that there should not be a repetition of the castigation, and on the admission that he was acting for the boys as well as himself, all three were suspended for a year. There may have been more cause for the punishment, as the conversation was broken off abruptly, but assuming that there was a great deal more, under the provocation of his son's being subjected to a public castigation, cut so severely that welts were ridged on his back, a father showed a commendable command over his temper to restrict himself to even harsh language and a return of badges. The Association, of course, is not responsible for the chastisement the starter inflicted, and, under all the circumstances, the directors could scarcely be expected to punish the starter or give Mr. Weber the promise he demanded. It seems, from what I am told, that the practice of castigating refractory jockeys by the starter has been tolerated heretofore, but I am pleased to say that in the thirty years' turf experience such an example has not come under my observation. It is certainly contrary to the rules, which limit penalties to fines and suspension. Among the rules in force of the American Turf Congress, the last section of Rule 111 is: "With the sanction of the officers of the Association, the starter may appoint his assistants, and neither he nor his assistants shall strike a horse at the post or use abusive language towards the jockeys—and for a violation of this rule the jockeys shall impose a fine upon the starter."

That would be mandatory as the word shall admit of only one construction. But there is no such clause in the rules of the P. C. B. H. A. though they do limit the penalties to fines and suspensions. If not responsible for an infraction of their rules by the starter, but suffer an infringement to pass without rebuke or censure, their dignity might so far be waived as to condone a lack of decorous conduct when a parent's feelings were so grossly outraged. I may look at this in a different light from a majority of racing men, but if in my turf experience a jockey—white or black—who was riding one of my horses, had been subjected to such abuse it would have been resented to the best of my ability, and if the association on whose track it was committed, upheld the act an embassy would not be employed to return its badges. I have not the slightest foundation to assume that the act was justified by the association, though I have heard apologies offered for chastising jockeys, but write plainly so that I shall be placed on the record in a shape that cannot be misunderstood. Again though there is biblical authority for the verdict that "the sins of the fathers shall be visited on his children" it is hardly applicable in this case. It is altogether unlikely that Mr. Weber would suffer his sons to ride where there might be a repetition of the indignity, and they are so competent that their services will be in demand in other places. But if there was a general confederation of racing clubs, as there is trotting associations the injustice would weigh heavily.

The starter has an arduous position, and I can readily understand the trials he has to undergo. That in one of these he should so far lose his temper as to strike a blow, while it is to be regretted, the temptation might be so strong that reason for a moment could not govern. According to the reports which I heard at the track on Tuesday last there was an especial reason to resort to flagellation. There I was informed that it was a common practice with Mr. Rowe, and he has been extolled to the skies for his proficiency in starting. Occupying the ground where flogging the jockeys had met the approbation of club and people it is not at all surprising that Mr. Ferguson should make the mistake that he did. A delayed or inferior start would be the cause of instituting comparisons between him and the other official in which he would be sure to suffer, and when a fine was inoperative a touch of Rowe was the remedy which was likely to be effective. Therefore my condemnation is for the method much more than the agent.

And this, too, had in all probability a bearing on the action of the directors. From having been the practice under the Rowe dispensation, it was not regarded with the disapprobation it would had it been the first transgression, and then the chances are that Rowe struck lighter.

Palliation only. An impulsive man might make mistakes on the spur of the moment that he would regret when common sense resumed its sway, but a body of reflective men, some of them at an age when impulse is held in check by the wisdom which years' bring can scarcely claim extenuating circumstances. But then again, age may bring a desire for ease, and the elder members of the Board turn over the power to their younger conferees. The young men are a majority of the directors, and it is only natural that youth should adhere to youth, and juvenility is always ready to take extreme measures—a valuable trait when properly guided, and justifies the old-time axiom: "Old men for counsel, young men for action."

TROTTER ENTRIES.—As will be learned from the list of entries to the spring and fall meetings of the P. C. T. H. B. A., there is a grand prospect for this year in the way of harness sports. The entries for the spring meeting are only an indication of what it will be, though from other information there is not the least doubt that the gathering in May will far excel any previous springtime show. The purpose is to regulate the largest share of the purses by the attendance of the horses, which can be formed into classes, and from all parts of the State reports come of intended participants in the sport. I fervently hope that every one interested in the future of light harness horses will lend their aid to make as much as possible of the meeting, which will be a test of the new departure. The whole country is interested in the result, and much depends on the initial attempt. With a sufficient number of horses to permit proper classification for a number of races on each day of the meeting, there is no danger of failure and a very good chance to show that the innovations are a vast benefit to trotting interests.

I feel that it is the inaugural of a new era in harness sports, which, after general adoption in all parts of the country, will enhance the value of harness horses, and that the consequent appreciation will rest on a solid foundation. There need be no apprehensions of too many horses appearing, and that there will be a lack of opportunity for them to get into races. A great many races under the new system can be decided in the seven days for which the Bay District track is engaged, and should it appear that the meeting can be carried over a greater number of days with advantage, there will be nothing in the way to interdict the extension.

Another change has been made which will be found advantageous. In place of commencing on the 20th of May, as was the original intention, the 27th has been fixed upon for the opening, the lateness of the season being less determined than under the first arrangement. The possession of the track is given on the 22d of May, so that there will be ample time to put it in order for trotting. The deep harrowing necessary for racing upon it will give an elasticity which would not have been present without that preparation, the only requirement to make it both fast and safe, to solidify and smoothen the surface. Mount Shasta to a molehill that the May meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association will prove the best vernal trotting festival ever held on the Pacific Coast.

A Wedding and a Death.

A happier assemblage of young people never met than were in attendance last Monday at the marriage of James Maguire, superintendent of the Edgemont Park Stock Farm, Los Angeles, and Mary J. Mackey, eldest daughter of John Mackey, superintendent of Rancho del Paso. On Sunday Mr. Maguire came from the City of Angels to meet his intended, and the following day the wedding took place, which was largely attended by friends of both parties. At the home of the bride a wedding feast was spread, at which toasts and congratulations were offered. There was no one present more jovial nor apparently happier than the groomsmen, John H. Mackey, the brother of the bride, and the little incidents of the afternoon made the time pass only too quickly. The bride and groom departed for their southern home. The guests, after bidding the couple "God-speed," dispersed to their respective homes, never for a moment thinking that the grim visitor, Death, would, ere morning, take away one of their number, but young John Mackey, as he familiarly called, was found lying on the sidewalk the next morning totally unconscious of his surroundings; his neat-fitting suit was covered with the dirt of the street; the little bonnetier that his loving sister placed in the lapel of his coat before going over to the church to be married, was still fresh and fragrant, but the owner was beyond all medical skill. The patrol wagon was sent for and the young man was conveyed to the receiving hospital where he died three hours later. The shock to the bereaved family was terrible and everyone who remembers the kindly, genial, warm-hearted young man, will never forget the pang of sorrow it gave them when they heard of his death. The autopsy revealed the cause of death, to be laudanum poisoning. It is claimed that he became despondent over troubles that he believed he could not withstand and heing of a highly sensitive nature he resolved to end all. John Mackey was our New York correspondent last year, writing over the nom de plume of "Salvator." He was an excellent judge of horses and a charming descriptive writer. Had he lived, there is no doubt he would have achieved an enviable position among the turf journalists of the day. Last summer, after attending a veterinary college for several months, he was married to a young lady of this city, and while East on his wedding tour purchased a number of horses at auction and private sale of W. O. B. Macdonough, the young millionaire of this city. He returned to San Francisco with the horses, and shortly after his arrival here his bride died. Mr. Mackey resumed newspaper work, being connected with the Chronicle for several months and latterly with the Call, and did excellent work as police reporter for the papers he represented. Since his wife's death he has been very despondent, and his friends have noticed the change and commented upon it. Mr. Mackey was unusually well-posted on thoroughbred horses, their pedigrees and performances, and was besides an excellent judge of conformation. At the time of his untimely death he was twenty-four years of age, and was born and reared in San Francisco, where he had a host of friends who mourn his sad ending. The funeral took place yesterday from the residence of his parents, 1115 Valencia street, this city.

Salem's July Races.

SALEM, OR., March 31.—The directors of the Oregon Breeding and Speed Association held a special meeting the other day, when the programme adopted a few days before for the July race meeting was revised and added to in several particulars. It was decided to continue the races for four days, instead of during three, as first contemplated. The races will commence on July 1th, and close on Friday, the 7th. Daily the prospects for its success grow brighter. The meeting is to be held on the State Fair grounds near this city, and the new regulation track which is now in course of construction, will be completed in time to be dedicated by the new Association, which has increased its capital stock from $2,500 to $5,000. The new track will be of the regulation pattern, and there is no doubt but it will be very speedy, as the soil is first-class, and it will be well worked before the races are held. The programme for the July meeting is as follows:

FIRST DAY.
Running—One-eighth mile dash, $200.
Pony race—200 yards, two best in three, $100.
Trotting, 2:25 class—Two in three, $250.
Trotting, two-year-olds—Mile dash, $150.
Pacing, 2:25 class—Two in three, $250.

SECOND DAY.
Running—Half mile, two-year-olds, $150.
Running—Half mile and repeat, $200.
Trotting, 2:35 class—Two in three, $250.
Trotting, 2:24 class—Two-mile dash, $200.

THIRD DAY.
Running—Three-eighths mile dash, $100.
Running—Mile dash, $250.
Trotting, 2:20 class—Two in three, $300.
Pacing, two-year-olds—Mile dash, $150.

FOURTH DAY.
Running—One-fourth mile dash, $100.
Gentlemen's roadster race—Two in three, $100.
Pace and trot, free for all—Three in five, $500.

For all of these races the horses are to be named by June 1st.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

THE dam of Hal Dillard, 2:15 $\frac{1}{4}$, will be bred to Sidney this year.

THERE will be a race meeting at Gonzales, commencing on the second of May. A splendid programme is being prepared.

ASTORINE, by Alcyone, 2:27, dam Jessie Pepper, foaled a colt by Stamboul, 2:07 $\frac{1}{4}$, February 25th at Mr. Henry's Penn Valley Farm.

PAMLICO, 2:16 $\frac{1}{4}$, the game young stallion that the late James A. Goldsmith brought down the grand circuit will be campaigned this summer.

THE two-year-old filly Waneta, by Clay, 2:25, dam by Gambeta Wilkes, is said to be a very fast one. She is entered in several of the large stakes.

A FAST quarter or a half early in the spring frequently sets a horse back in his development, and sometimes knocks out his chances for a season's campaign.

THE owner of the celebrated English Hackney mare Drah, it is reported, will send that mare from Brighton, Eng., to this country, to be bred to Allerton, 2:09 $\frac{1}{4}$.

QUITE a crowd of horsemen alight from the trains at Pleasanton every Saturday. The answer to the question "where are you going?" is, "over to Salishury's."

W. D. DOHERTY, Clinton, Ont., has sold to George Whitely, Seaford, Ont., the four-year-old stallion Young Sidney, by Sidney, dam Highland Lass, by Buccaneer.

MILLARD SANDERS told W. B. McDonald to match Fausta, 2:22 $\frac{1}{4}$, against any three-year-old pacer for any reasonable amount, and he would take one-half the wager.

T. C. SNIDER, of Sacramento, is jogging Creole and a few green trotters; he will be out after some of the purses this fall. Dnhec, 2:27 $\frac{1}{4}$, his mainstay, is working splendidly.

IT is said that Jack Groom has a two-year-old by Silver Bow, 2:16 $\frac{1}{4}$, that is surprising everyone at the San Jose track. All the Silver Bows are fast, but this one is a wonder.

IRA RAMSDALL's fine Dexter Prince stallion, Prince Ira, has been sent to J. Cassidy's, on the Point Lobos road; that he will enter the charmed circle this fall is a foregone conclusion.

TWO hundred and eighty-six thousand dollars worth of horses have been sold at Lexington, at public auction, the past three months. They averaged $371 per head. That is a good average price.

EVERY trainer should have an extra pair of shoes ready when his horses go into races, so that if one is thrown and lost it can quickly be replaced. He should also carry a full set of horse-shoeing tools.

THE track at Lorenzo has been torn up and is being put in first-class order; Messrs. Strohridge, Knox, Meek, Gray, Marlin and Rohde intend to have their strings of trotters and pacers there this summer.

EVERY time you open your lips to say a mean thing about your neighbor's horses, just pause and ask yourself the question whether you would like to have someone make the same remark about your horses.

THE directors of the Santa Clara Agricultural Association set a number teams working on the track last Thursday and have kept them going constantly ever since, consequently the track is in fine condition.

WITH the distance stand half way between the wire and the place that it now stands the people will see more close finishes, but the fields will be smaller, as a man with an unsteady nag will be a trifle shy when it comes to making entries.

THERE were more representatives from the horse breeding ranks at the Kentfield sale last Tuesday than have been seen together for years. The two magnets to draw them were the Electioneer mare Regina and her daughter Inspiration.

THOS. MURPHY is working about ten head of very promising trotters at the Petaluma race track. This course has hardly been put in proper shape; if the weather continues good it will not take more than a week to have it in first-class order.

Wm. VIOGET has a big string of yearlings and two-year-olds at the San Jose track. Some of the best are by Eros, 2:29 $\frac{1}{4}$. He has a four-year-old mare by Anteo, out of an Abbotford mare that will get in the list this fall very easily.

ONE of the fastest yearlings at the San Jose track is Tyhee Hood, a son of the game trotting stallion Mount Hood, 2:22 $\frac{1}{4}$. From the way he trots, his owner, F. C. Talbot, will, in the future, be collecting first money in every race in which the youngster starts.

E. D. WIGGIN, owner of Martha Wilkes, has decided to place his stallions, Allandorf and Charley Wilkes, 2:21 $\frac{1}{4}$, in training as soon as their stud duties are finished. The son of Alma Mater is ten years old and has no record, but is credited with a trial in 2:28.

POSTERS are out announcing races on the Salinas track Saturday, April 27th. There will be two trotting races, one for a purse of $125, and one for a purse of $100, and a running race for a purse of $125, the entrance fee in each race to be added to the purse.

JESSE D. CARR and James B. Iverson, of the Monterey Agricultural Association, are going to "boom" their fair this year. The track at Salinas is one of the best in the State, and by a little judicious advertising and push every stall on the grounds should be filled.

PRIMROSE, one of Woodburn's mightiest matrons, died at that famous farm on Sunday. In some respects she was the most remarkable of all broodmares. She had twenty foals, and of these six are in the 2:30 list, six of her sons are sires of trotters, and two of her daughters have produced 2:30 speed. Her most noted son as a sire is Principis, her first foal, who is represented by thirty-four trotters in the 2:30 list. Primrose was by the prepotent Alexander's Abdallah, out of the famous Black Rose, the dam of Darkness and Native American. Few such matrons have a place in trotting annals.

AT Chico, Mr. McIntosh has a number of youngsters by his fine stallion Arthur Wilkes, 2:28 $\frac{1}{4}$, on the track jogging daily. The progeny of this handsome son of Guy Wilkes inherit speed, conformation and good dispositions. Some of them will appear in the races this fall.

THE bottom is all right. The trouble is there is too much "muck" on top, and it is into this muck that breeders are sinking their money. Every horse or mare that has a pedigree is called a trotter, when in truth about half of them could not run fast enough to get into the list.

MILK KNOX is the happiest man in Haywards. His trotting mare, Fanny K., by Redwood, 2:27, foaled a beautiful black filly by Directum, 2:11 $\frac{1}{4}$. The Direct filly, Nina, out of the same mare, is now in Salishury's string. She is a Simon-pure trotter and "cannot pace a little bit."

REGINA, by Electioneer, dam Accident (dam of four in the list) has been sent to Walter Mahen, Los Angeles, and will be given a low mark this fall. Mrs. M. Severance, her owner, believes she is as speedy as any of her relations, and no one doubts her judgment after seeing the way the mare moves.

W. B. McDONALD will campaign Maggie, 2:20, by Dexter Prince; Fausta, 2:22 $\frac{1}{4}$, by Sidney; King Daniel, by Mambrino King; May Homer, by Homer; Miss Viley, by Ahotsford; Max F., by Red Wilkes and the chestnut mare Miss Aline, that showed a few fast miles last season.—Sportsman.

WE see by the Mirror and Farmer, published in Manchester, New Hampshire, that "B. S. Walker, the well-known Vermont trainer, will soon be on his way to Santa Rosa, Cal., where he will establish a training stable. He will carry lots of good, old-fashioned horse sense into the country where trotters are born."

HOPEFUL, 2:14 $\frac{1}{4}$, by Godfrey's Patchen, died March 22d at Rising Sun, Md. Hopeful was one of Dan Mace's great campaigners, and won many a race for the famous driver. After the death of A. W. Richmond, who drove him on the New York roads, Hopeful passed through many hands to his last owner, G. G. Sill.

THE sale of all the trotting stock owned by F. C. Talbot that is not sired by his horse, Mount Hood, 2:22 $\frac{1}{4}$, will be sold in this city April 19th. Horsemen looking for first-class roadsters, broodmares, colts and fillies will do well to send for a catalogue to Messrs. Killip & Co., and see what a splendid collection will be offered.

P. J. WILLIAMS is handling Egyptian Prince, Silver Bow, Silver Note and a number of others at the San Jose track, and the way they are moving augurs well for the success of this string this fall. Mr. Williams is a very competent trainer, and his trotters show that he understands keeping them in first-class condition.

ANDY McDOWELL has a number of extra good colts in his string. He has two Steinways that absorb so much of his enthusiasm that he has been thinking seriously of going over to the Oakwood Park Stock Farm and making an offer for the sire. He says "he never saw such pupils, and they are the kind that stick to their lessons too."

JOHN GORDON, the driver who was so badly injured at Petaluma during the fair, has entirely recovered and is seen in the sulky every day at the San Jose track. Mr. Gordon's little Abhotsford stallion C. W. S., 2:27, never looked finer; and with the other eight he is handling this driver has splendid prospects for a successful year.

KIRKPATRICK & WHITTAKER, of Knight's Ferry, have shipped the handsome bay stallion, Constable 22,028, to Utica, Ohio. Constable is by Campaign 9811, dam Gridelia, by Silverthreads 18,635; second dam Penny, by Bonner; third dam Sophia, by Williamson's Belmont. Constable left a few very promising youngsters in Stanislaus county.

MILLARD SANDERS is in clover. The youngsters at the Valensin Farm that he is handling are moving exactly as he wants them and if he does not astonish us with a few Sidney yearlings this fall we will be disappointed. There is not a more painstaking driver in the State than he and with his knowledge of handling youngsters he is bound to succeed.

THE overproduction of trotters is often given as an excuse for the low prices at some of the sales of trotting-bred horses. If those who make the statement would change it so it would stand "the overproduction of horses called trotters, but that cannot trot," they would then be right. There never has been nor never will be an overproduction of trotters.—Horse World.

ROBERT FORD, of Salinas, has a splendid farm of 2,000 acres of bottom land in the banks of the Salinas river; he has it stocked with some of the finest horses in Monterey County. He has some trotters among them that will be developed this fall. He has one in particular, a Napa Wilkes filly, out of a mare by Fred Patchen, that shows her speed inheritance very strongly.

P. McALEENAN's colt Samoa, which has been sick for some time past, died yesterday morning. It was thought Saturday that the animal would recover, but he had a relapse yesterday and died. Samoa was an fra colt and was one of the most promising on the coast. His owner was deeply attached to and proud of him and deeply regrets his loss, as do other horsemen, for much was expected of him in the future.—Humboldt Times.

SAYS C. H. Nelson: "Stallions and mares ill-shaped and undersized that cannot be harnessed and driven with safety for fear of being kicked out of your seat behind them should not be bred to any more than those with other faults, as they are all transmissible. Do not in the future breed to any stallion or mare whose sire, dam, second or third remove you would not be satisfied with for your foal."

ATTENTION is called to the Merchants and Manufacturers Stake of the St. Louis Agricultural Fair, for three-year-olds and upward. $5 to accompany the nomination if made on January 16, 1893, or $25 if made on April 15, 1893, when the race will close, $45 additional for starters; $1,000 added, of which $200 to second and $100 to third. The winner in 1893 of a race of $1,500, three pounds extra; of two such races or of one of $5,000, seven pounds. Non-winners at any time of a race of $3,000 allowed five pounds; of $2,000, ten pounds; of $1,000, fifteen pounds; $600, eighteen pounds; of $300, twenty pounds. Maidens, five pounds in addition. One mile.

THE fine gray Nutwood stallion Jim Mulvenna, 2:19 $\frac{1}{4}$, has been sent by his trainer, Patrick Farrell, to Sargents, Santa Clara County, to take a good run at grass and also to be bred to a few good mares. Jim Mulvenna never looked better than he does to-day and when he is taken up and worked it is dollars to doughnuts that Mr. Farrell will give him a record of 2:15. The horse understands this reinsman, and a better "team" never came up for the word.

THE bay filly Bet Madison purchased at Col. H. I. Thornton's sale in Los Angeles, and it is said she can out-trot any two-year-old seen there. Bet Madison is by that well bred son of Anteo, James Madison, 2:17 $\frac{1}{4}$, and like him has that smooth, frictionless way of going that always counts. The reports from every owner of colts and fillies by this stallion are very encouraging and breeders who are neglecting the opportunity of breeding to him will regret it.

THERE are over fifty horses at the Woodland race track and among them are a number of very promising Alexander Buttons and Waldsteins. The long, wet spell of weather has prevented the trainers from getting their youngsters into good shape, but with three weeks' warm weather there will be the greatest improvement noticeable in their appearance. The youngsters by Hoppin's Cuhic are all very handsome and of good size; a few of them are also to be seen on the track daily.

THE following formula for making a superior salve is given by a writer in the National Stockman and Farmer: "To one pint of fresh milk add one gill of spirits turpentine, one heaping tablespoonful of lard. Boil over a slow fire for about two hours, stirring it occasionally. After it is removed from the fire set into cold water and stir continuously until cool. It is then thick as jelly, easily applied, and will heal cuts, bruises or sores of any kind more speedily than any liniment or salve that I ever used."

M. D. PETERSON, of Davenport, Ia., has hooked his royally-bred filly, Bridal Bells, 2:22 $\frac{1}{4}$, by Bell Boy, 2:19; dam Trosseau, 2:28, by Nutwood, to Guy Wilkes, 2:15 $\frac{1}{4}$, and will leave with her for California this month. Mr. Peterson also owns the roan stallion, Red Bird, by Eagle Bird, 2:21, out of the same dam as Bridal Bells, 2:22 $\frac{1}{4}$, that he will make a short season with, and then be put in training for a record, and he will get a low mark without fear, as he can show a 2:16 gait very handy.—American Trotter.

C. E. VAN DUSEN, of Lincoln, Nebraska, has recently purchased the brown stallion Persimmon, 2:29 $\frac{1}{4}$, a son of Simmons, 2:28, who at fourteen years of age is the sire of twenty-nine in the list. Persimmon is eight years old and is out of a mare by Administrator, 2:29 $\frac{1}{4}$, second dam by Ericsson, 2:30 $\frac{1}{4}$, the one-time champion who has lately come into special prominence through the performance of Belle Vara, 2:08 $\frac{1}{4}$, and Moquette, 2:10. The record of Persimmon was made in the third heat of a race at Franklin Park, Massachusetts.

A HORSEMAN writes as follows: "I have the following recipe for removing bloody warts from mules and horses, and pronounce it very valuable, easy of application and very cheap: "Take a quart bottle of common coal oil, put in the stopper a goose quill or turkey tail feather so as to let the oil squirt through it, throw a teaspoonful of the oil on the wart about three times a day, and in two or three weeks the wart will have disappeared entirely. I have never known this remedy to fail. I now own and work a valuable mule that I bought six years ago for $40 less than her value because of a large and bleeding wart on her leg. I cured her in two weeks and worked her all the while."

HIPPOPHAGY is common in the leading European cities. It would seem that the supply is unequal to the demand in Paris. An agent of a French concern is now in Wyoming buying up worn-out horses from the ranges. He gets these bronchos at from $6 to $15 a head. A branded horse that has been used with cattle is now considered of no value. Ranchmen are raising better sorts. Formerly the worn-out cow ponies sold in the East for pets and street railways. Now there is no market for them, as their places are filled by animals of better breeding. There are therefore thousands on the prairies that will be cheap enough for the block if the French scheme can be carried through. This agency is established in Salt Lake.

HORSES require daily exercise in the open air and can no more be expected to exist without it than their owners. Exercise is an essential feature in stable management, and, like well-chosen food, tends to preserve the health of horses. Daily exercise is necessary for all horses unless they are sick; it assists and promotes a free circulation of the blood, creates an appetite, improves the wind and finally improves the whole system. We cannot expect much of a horse that has not been used to daily exercise, while such as have been daily exercised and well managed are capable of great exertion and fatigue. The exhaustion produced by want of rest is dangerous, such horses being among the first victims of disease, and when attacked their treatment is embarrassing and unsatisfactory.—[Exchange.

TOLEDO wrote from Vienna, Austria, to the Daily Spirit under date of March 14:—"I thought you might be interested in hearing that the Vienna Trotting Association has taken John Spian upon their shoulders and placed him upon their pedestal of honor, awarding him the highest gift in their power—the gold medal in recognition of his services in encouraging trotting sports and for his valuable assistance in forwarding the purposes of the Vienna Trotting Association." By this you will see that the Ketcham-Spian party have not only won the gulden of the Austrian sportsmen, but their gold and silver medals as well. Mr. and Mrs. Spian will break away from the rest of the party as soon as the auction sale is over, and leave for London, having engaged passage home on the Paris, sailing on the 25th inst. from Southampton.

NETTIE NUTWOOD, the fine large broodmare owned at La Siesta, died of cerebro-spinal meningitis last week; she was due to foal on the 30th of March. Nettie Nutwood was by Nutwood 600, out of Lady Sculley (dam of Vanderlynn, 2:21) by Joseph; second dam Old Sculley, by Easton's Black Hawk. There was a standing offer of \$1,500 for every one of her foals by Eros, 2:29 $\frac{1}{4}$, but Messrs. Vioget & Burke say that the price for her last filly is \$3,000, and not a cent less will take her. Nettie Nutwood was a very fast mare and should have had a record. She trotted trials in 2:20, but just as she was being prepared for a race, a horse kicked her on the point of the shoulder, and despite all surgical aid, she never recovered the use of the limb. All of her produce showed remarkable speed. She was valued at \$5,000 and was considered one of the best broodmares on the farm.

The Saddle.

TAMMANY is now favorite for the Suburban Handicap, at 4 to 1.

TRANSIT, a brother to Jim Gore, won a good race at North Bergen recently.

HENRY WALSH goes direct to Brooklyn with the Macdonough string April 20th. Just how many he will take is not known.

THE sister to Martinet (Seaside), in Phil Sieenthaler's stable, is a regular second edition of the American Derby colt in Senator Thompson's string.

KINGSTON, the little brown, will be for the first time seen at Washington Park this season. He is coming to down all mile records, and we think he can.

BALDWIN'S Esperanza was taken sick last week, and did not come along with Lottie Mills. Pescador, the one-eyed horse, was brought up by Dickey, however.

JOE NARVAEZ and George Miller appear to be having almost everything to themselves. Last Tuesday the former landed three winners and Miller the other two.

IN THE Fairview yearling sale this season there will be five Cheviots, five Exiles, one Moscow, Ill-Used, Miser, Long Tail and Laggard, while one is by either Miser or Laggard.

ROBERT SMITH, manager of Hugh Kirkendall's gallopers, is expected here late next week, and will in all likelihood accept a number of mounts, for his services will be in great demand.

THE Willows Agricultural Association elected the following officers last week: W. R. Merrill, President; J. R. Troxel, Vice-President; Bank of Willows, Treasurer, and W. V. Freeman, Secretary.

PHIL DWYER says that he will surely race at New Orleans every winter after this. An Eastern combination will take hold of this famous old track and will make it the winter Sheephead of America.

MR. W. L. WHITMORE, owner of Coloma and more thoroughbreds than any other person in the North Pacific, has, during the week, bought six broodmares and fillies from Mrs. R. E. Bybee.—Rural Spirit.

RAMAPO, Dave Gideon's American Derby candidate (known last year as the Annie F. colt), has grown wonderfully. Some judges think he is a trifle leggy, but Trainer J. J. Hyland doesn't share that opinion.

DR. THOS. BOWHILL has engaged the well-known rider, Stanford, to train for him and ride at 122 pounds. Stanford has been with Baldwin for about fifteen months, and is said to be an excellent hand with a horse.

SOLITUDE, who cut up circus pranks at the post in the fifth race last Saturday, is aptly named, surely, for she ran off over a quarter of a mile, refusing to come up anywhere near her field, showing that she liked solitude.

THE Boots horses did great work on the opening day, winning the first and second races easily, and running third in the sixth event. Joe Nelson, the trainer, deserves great credit for his work. However, the material was excellent.

H. DECOURCY FORBES, President of the New York Jockey Club, was an interested spectator at the Blood Horse races last Tuesday afternoon. The gentleman is here looking after his mining interests in particular and incidentally attending the races.

IN the list of seriously injured in the railway wreck on the Rio Grande road late last week was the wife of James Wilson, the young steeplechase rider of Melbourne. The lady's head was cut seriously. We were exceedingly sorry to hear of this misfortune.

CHICAGO newspapers are pretty well represented at the local race track. Clint Riley, the presiding judge, is of the Inter-Ocean; Tom Gallagher is of the Tribune, and a Mr. Bennett of the Herald. The latter is said to be an artist of no mean ability.

PRESIDENT H. DECOURCY FORBES, of the New York Jockey Club, left last night for California to look after his mining interests there. He hopes to return in time to see win the Brooklyn Handicap.—N. Y. Spirit of the Times, March 27.

BURLINGTON, by Powhatter, dam Invercauld, one of the best three-year-olds that ever looked through a bridle and could always win at either a long or short price, has broken down. He went lame in his work recently, and will probably never race again.

A NUMBER of splendid bargains were picked up at the Shippee sale last fall, among the number being Currency, Progression, Oakland and Four Flush. The last-named, in "Pedigree" Brown's stable, has not started as yet, but is said to be a very fast little filly.

THE New Orleans racing stewards fined Jockey Hennessy $50 for "willfully fouling Bret Harte," but refused to disqualify Rampost, Hennessy's mount, allowing him to win second money. This is as queer a ruling as frequently crops out on some other winter tracks.

LEWIS R. MARTIN, who selected the broodmares and sires for Baldwin's Santa Anita breeding establishment, is spending his declining years at the beautiful place in lovely San Gabriel valley. Mr. Martin has been blind for a long time, but is one of the best judges of blood lines in America.

WILLIAMS & MOOREHOUSE have three youngsters in the hands of Joe Courtney at San Jose track, and will probably make some additions to their list of thoroughbreds in the near future. Whether they will race at the Blood Horse meeting or wait until they strike Montana has not yet been decided.

It would be a good idea for the State Agricultural Society to inaugurate a stake race for this fall's State Fair, one and one-eighth miles, for stallions that have been one or more seasons in the stud. The race would attract any amount of attention, and the following horses would probably come to the post: Imp. Loyalist, Flanbeau, Racine, Felloweham, Major Bau, Lodowic, imp. Merriwa, Geoffrey, Peel, Captain Al, imp. San Pedro and imp. Reggy.

BILLY DONATHAN arrived at Bay District track from San Jose last Tuesday morning with a splendid string of twelve horses. In the lot are Atossa, Alexis (by Argyle—Frisa) and many other good ones. For the latter colt Mr. Donathan recently refused a large sum, and he is said to be very promising.

JENNIE DEANE'S run in the third race on the opening day was something to marvel at. Getting away all but last, she ran up in the bunch, only to be pocketed. Then her jockey, Jackson, took her back last nearing the turn into the home-stretch, and she finished a bang-up fourth, gaining at every stride.

ARTICUS, the runner-up in the second race last Saturday, really ran a better race than the winner, the Bonnie Jean colt, as Van Gorden's colt got away absolutely last and was beaten but a length. However, just how much the son of Brutus had up his sleeve is not known, but it is presumed considerable.

THE Blood Horse Association is enforcing Rule 48 of their "Rules of Racing," relating to forfeits, now, but it is not odd that Porter Ashe should be the first man of any prominence whose entries were refused, when a certain capitalist was allowed to start his horses last fall with (it is said) close to $4,000 owing the association in the shape of unpaid forfeits?

H. D. BROWN informs us that Jockey "Moose" Taylor's contract with Carlile & Shield's really expired on the 1st of last January, but as the youth was engaged on the 23d of April (verbally) and Shields wants to hold him, Taylor will not be allowed to ride until April 24th. Contracts generally date from January 1st to January 1st, or at least expire on January 1st.

CHARLES KERR, the Bakersfield turfman, last Tuesday telegraphed to his trainer, Billy McCormick, now at "The Arcade," Rancho del Paso, to send him down six two-year-olds. As there are a number of high-priced ones in the lot being trained by that excellent conditioner, McCormick, these youngsters will doubtless cut quite a figure at the meeting now in progress.

CHEVALIER will take a lot of heating in any company this season. He is a very big youngster, and as game as a pebble. Mr. Jeffcott has a good bread-winner in this son of King Galop. His dam, The Maid, is by Erdenheim, a son of Leamington, out of Kate Mattingly, who is by John Morgan. This shows him to be bred to go a route, and he has already shown his great flight of speed.

THE formal decision of Judge Dugro dismissing the complaint in the action brought by Edward Corrigan against the Coney Island Jockey Club, over the difficulty that he had with the club with reference to permitting his colt Huron to run in the Futurity of 1891, was handed down Wednesday in the Superior Court. The Judge holds that Corrigan was not entitled to run Huron in the Futurity.

THERE are two English Derby winners in America, Iroquois and St. Blaise, and when George Frederick arrives at Montreal there will be three. Ormonde, also owned by an American, is in England. The United States have of late years drawn on the English turf for its Derby winners with indifferent success. Wenlock, Ossory, Kingcraft and Blue Gown died on the voyage to this country, and Prince Charlie died in Kentucky three years after he was imported.

FRANK VAN NESS has in his stable a big slashing bay colt called Fitzsimmons, and racing men say this fellow is more than an ordinary horse. He is in the American Derby, and it is hinted that his chances are first-class. Of course Van Ness does not intend, if it is possible, that anybody will be on to him, but the other day, at New Orleans, he was seen to work a mile and a quarter, and went the last half in 49½ seconds. Pretty good work that is, and coming from a person who is a first-class judge, we think well of "Fitz."

W. O'B. MACDONOUGH has leased for a term of two years, with the option of buying, a very fine farm adjoining the Valensin place, two miles out of Pleasanton. On this farm will be kept a number of yearlings, weanlings and broodmares, and Ormonde and about a dozen royally-bred matrons will arrive in June or July and make their home there. Herbert King has been appointed superintendent, and will look after the work of building as well as attend to the horses. A better selection could hardly have been made, for Mr. King is not only a thorough horseman but an excellent veterinarian.

A BRIEF but peculiar racing career was ended when W. C. Winters, the owner of King Crab, and more commonly known as Tinker, died of consumption at the home of his sister in Hoboken. Some year or so ago Winters began to bet and phenomenal luck attended him. He turned $7 into between $25,000 and $30,000 by the end of the Sheephead Bay spring meeting, his good fortune did not last, and though at the time of his death he owned King Crab and Strap, he was a poor man again. His business before he became hitten with the hetting fever was that of a beef carrier in Washington Market.

IT is a remarkable fact that the two sons of Onondaga (Dr. Rice and Loco-hatchee) started eleven times each in 1892, were each four times winner, four times second, twice third and twice unplaced. Dr. Rice was a two-year-old and Loco-hatchee three years of age. Another remarkable thing about the Onondagas. Critic, a three-year-old, started sixty-two times and Content, of the same age, sixty-one times—which speaks volumes for the lasting powers of the family. Others by this horse that were drummed hard were Midway, that started forty-nine times; Chimes, forty-six, and Miss Spot, a two-year-old, thirty-eight.

ALTHOUGH Milton Young, of McGrathiana stud, owns more noted stallions than any man in America, J. B. Haggin excepted, he has shown that he has enterprise and a broad mind by sending to the farms of Messrs. Shipp and Hawkins the following mares to be bred to the great Longfellow: Imp. Kapanga, the dam of Kingston; Mrs. Chubbs (dam of Glockner), by Wanderer, out of Nannie McDowell, by imp. Leamington; Ponwith (sister to Fonso and dam of Chimes, etc), by King Alfonso, out of imp. Weatherwitch, by Weatherbit Change, by Alarm, out of imp. Presto, by Pretender; Daylight, by imp. Rayon d'Or, out of Valeria, by imp. Glenelg or Virgil, and Maria D., by Lishon, out of Crucifix, by Leamington. The foal out of Maria D., by Longfellow, will be nearly a full sister or brother to Leonatus.

THE Memphis Jockey Club intends to have a grand meeting this spring. Everything that can possibly be done to insure a successful meeting is undergoing preparation. There will be twelve days' racing, of five races each day, with $41,500 in stakes and purses, and all kinds of conditions, so owners want to have their horses well in order to contemplate racing there, as a good lot of New Orleans horses will be there, and among them will be many who have been especially prepared for the Memphis meeting.

JOCKEY BRITTON will ride for Capt. Sam Brown this season after all. In the opening negotiations the salary asked was considered too large, and no engagement was made. Since then, as Britton told very recently, satisfactory terms have been arranged. Trainer Wimmer wrote Britton the other day to report at Mobile about the 26th to give the horses a high trial before they are shipped to Memphis. By the way, the animals in the Brown string are reported as doing remarkably well. Britton will ride Afternoon in the Tennessee Derby. Perkins, the light-weight of the establishment, ranks with the best light-weight riders in the country.

LANE & LIGHT, of Lakeview, Or., have purchased of W. O'B. Macdonough the stallion Sinfax; consideration, private. Sinfax, who was one of the best two-year-olds ever produced in California, winner at that age of a mile and a quarter race in 2:07½, is by Wildidle, dam Fostress, by Foster (son of Lexington); second dam Phnetia, by Planet (son of Revenue); third dam La Henderson (dam of Ferida, Ella, Virgilian and Vanguard), by Lexington; fourth dam Kitty Clark (dam of Maiden, the dam of Parole, Charlotte, Buford and Dr. Lindsey), by imp. Glencoe. As Sinfax gets a cross of Lexington through Wildidle, he has three crosses of that great race horse in his make-up. As Sinfax's get bear the stamp of their sire, that he will be a valuable horse in the stud we believe, especially so on imported mares.

MAJOR J. L. RATHBONE, ex-Consul-General of the United States to Paris, was among the interested spectators on the clubhouse balcony last Tuesday. He and J. G. Follanshee, a cousin of Foxhall Keene's, were eager to view a finish, and they stood upon chairs to see the horses as they came down the stretch. The Major leaned too far forward and his chair tipped, throwing him to the ground. In his fall his loins brought up against the back of the chair, causing him painful injury. He was assisted to his feet by Mr. Follanshee and W. O'B. Macdonough and supported to a sofa in the clubhouse. It was quite evident that he was a very sick man, but he persisted in saying that he did not want the attention of a physician. He maintained that his pain would soon pass away. Half an hour later, when the Major rose and was talking to his friends, he turned ashy pale and swooned into their arms. A physician who is regularly in the employ of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association attended the sick man, and he left the track with his friends, Follanshee and De Courcy Forbes. The physician declares that the injury is not of a dangerous nature, but is liable to produce excruciating pain.

THE three-year-old Sir Francis, by Mr. Pickwick, dam Thora (Yorkville Belle's dam), has left Morris Park, where he has wintered in Brown & Rogers' stable, and joined the balance of Marcus Daly's horses at Monmouth under Matt Byrnes. This colt it was which last October won the great Matron Stakes at Morris Park, valued at $40,000, and in November, at the Ehret sale, Marcus Daly paid $26,000 for him. The colt has wintered well enough as far as health goes, but he has not grown as much as expected, and looks light and dainty. I don't think he will ever be different. He always was a beautiful colt, but as I wrote to you when he won the Matron, he is one of rather delicate habit, quite unlike Yorkville Belle, who is quite a sturdy mare. That he is a fine natural racehorse I am certain, but I doubt if he will ever prove a stout one. A hard race will upset him. Mr. Daly will send him to Chicago in all probability, but he is one I should dislike to railroad on the eve of a race. He has got into good hands for one of his delicate habits, as Matt Byrnes, his new trainer, while a great preparer, does not start his horses often.

THE programme for the spring meeting at the Victoria Driving Park, under the management and direction of the Victoria Jockey Club, May 25, 26 and 27, has been decided upon, and presents few—and those few desirable—changes from the cards of former years. The money in the meeting is about as usual, $2,250, and the chief events in point of interest will be the Queen's Plate and the British Columbia Handicap, the latter the first two-mile dash ever run in this province. In it it is hoped to have every race horse in the province, as the weights will be so arranged as to equalize the chances of all. Already several Queen's Plates are training at the park, and the track, now under the management of Mr. J. S. Bowker, is expected to be faster than in any previous year. The rules of the Blood Horse Association adopted 1887, with the rules and regulations of the National Trotting Association, will govern all events, and particulars, as well as entry blanks, can be obtained at any time from the Hon. Secretary, Victoria. Entries for the Queen's Plate close at noon on May 2d, and all other entries at noon on Tuesday, May 23d.

THE big horse Major Domo has made his appearance at Morris Park and he is closely watched, as it is thought that if aught goes wrong with Lamplighter he has an excellent chance of winning the Brooklyn, while his Suburban chances are well worth considering at the weights. Major Domo has run second for the Suburban the past two years. A fate seems to hover over him. In 1891 his owner thought he should have won had he been properly ridden. Last year he seemed to have the race won and his revenge complete when half a furlong from home he flattered and was beaten out by Garrison's tremendous rush on Montana. A great deal of use was made of the horse, as he raced in front like a hare for more than half the distance. There can be no doubt that last May Major Domo was about as fast a horse as could be found on the American turf. But ever since he went to Saratoga he has been "on the shelf." He fell lame, and trainers generally looked upon his as a hopeless case. Mr. Spiers, his owner, stopped him, hoping by waiting until spring to bring him out right, but the horse is one of the largest and heaviest on the turf. He weighs close to 1300 pounds, and when so heavily topped a one as he gets wrong in his legs it is hard to bring him around. Mr. Spiers makes no secret of his hopes. He says the horse shows no signs of lameness, but as yet he has not been moved fast enough to bring it out. If he stands a preparation there will be a great many surprised horsemen hereabouts.

The Trotting Horse Market.

A few people who have been placing fictitious values upon horses, and especially their own, have been urging upon all owners of horses the necessity of at once unloading their stock "for the bottom has dropped out of the market" and adding to this statement, "what is the use of breeding trotters, when no one wants to buy?"

The demand for horses that are bred to trot and cannot trot is, we are happy to say, at a lower ebb than it was. This is one of the healthiest signs of the breeding business; it demonstrates most clearly that buyers are further advanced in their ideas and have learned by high-priced experience that there are horses that never fulfilled the purposes they were created for, and are a drag in the market. The demand for good, level-headed trotters that CAN TROT and are well bred, good-looking, large-sized, and "perfect in wind and limb," is as strong now as it ever was, and just so long as people love to ride, just so long will the demand for such horses always exceed the supply.

For the first time in the history of the trotting horse, breeders are having the scales dropped from their eyes enabling them to see what the public wants. For years the cry has been: "We want speed, speed, and more speed," and this clamor came from a large number of people who thought there was a Robert Bonner or a Malcolm Forbes in every city and town who were neglecting their hours of sleep in a search for the two-minute horse. These sanguine and intelligent people who have posed as breeders, by sacrificing the size, conformation, disposition and constitutions of their youngsters, got "speed, speed, and more speed," but the plethoric purse came not, and, as they surveyed the poor, attenuated, rattle-headed, delicately-formed, spindle-shanked "phenom," whose earning capacity had "depleted" their purses, they became disgusted, and forthwith sent the victim with a 2:12 1/2 record to be sold in some advertised combination sale in the East. The breeding on the sire's side was fair, dam's side unfair, but the horse had a record, a wonderfully fast one. He was offered at auction and sells for $1,200. Every journalist who is not less than 1,000 miles away from the animal sold, and every despondent theoretical breeder who is good at mathematics and pedigrees, immediately publishes items about the "bottom dropped out of the market, judging by the price that great trotter brought!" The next week despondent breeders everywhere talk the matter over with their neighbors who are entirely ignorant of the causes of the apparent depression in the business, and these consoling friends agree that "the best thing to do is to sell before the horses are given away." Forthwith a list of horses is sent on to the auctioneer and the sale takes place. The shrewd buyers who attend the offerings secure some royal good ones, that have never been developed, at a fair price, and, by a judicious expenditure of money and the employment of competent trainers, the value of the horses the despondent breeders sold are considerably enhanced and the poorest ones are lost forever to the world of trotters. This in itself is a splendid omen.

There is another very healthy sign noticeable in "these trying times," and that is, the reluctance shown by owners of poorly-bred, ill-shapen, soni-tempered mares in breeding them to stallions standing for public service, and the owners of these horses are more than pleased to see that their books are not being filled with the names of such mares. The stallions standing to-day are far superior to those of ten years ago and it is about time that the class of broodmares should improve also. Most of the men in the business have become educated to the value of individuality as well as bloodlines, and the "pedigree" must have performers on the dam's side to be considered valuable, and those performers must not be known as vicious, wasp-shaped, unsound quitters, either. The trotting-horse business has become a science. It is not a theoretical study but an established reality, and it claims all the thought, care, skill and attention that the practical breeder can impart to it. Every man who gives it strict attention and exercises sound judgment will succeed.

The present time to buy is the VERY BEST for all who believe the market for good trotters that fill every requirement is, and always will be, a good one. The great majority of our best trotters are not the results of accidents, but rather of skillful and intelligent breeding. A man might as well think of looking for success in any other calling by reason of an accident as to expect it in the horse business. A breeder who seeks to acquire wealth and achieve fame by getting a trotter from a nondescript mare by a nondescript sire will find in a few years that he has missed his vocation in life, and must forsake the place in the ranks that he thought he could fill.

Every sale of horses which has taken place in this State this year has been productive of much good to the trotting-horse industry, for most of the animals have brought their actual value. The best individuals have gone into the possession of progressive horsemen who will develop and train them; and the poorest have been purchased by men who will have to learn what good horses are, and they can only do so by following in the footsteps of the most successful and progressive men. If they purchased horses at sales that had neither conformation, size, nor breeding, and intend to stock a farm with them, they had better stop and consider what the prospects for selling the produce will be; the probabilities are they will be surprised to see that they cannot get even a low rate of interest on their foolish investments.

The Law for Veterinarians.

The bill for the regulation of the practice of veterinary medicine and surgery in this State as signed by Governor Markham and published in our last issue is one that will—it its provisions are fully carried out—prove of incalculable benefit to every farmer and breeder. Situated as this State is, on the edge of these great United States, fronting the broad Pacific; its principal cities offering the nearest ports of entry for Australian, China, Japan and the islands of the Pacific, it is of great importance that the officials in these foreign lands should know that the most stringent laws for the eradication of contagious and infectious diseases in the bovine and equine species are rigidly enforced, and that statutes have been made for their enforcement.

The "glanders scare" that was described in a sensational article in one of our enterprising dailies created a feeling of distrust among our foreign neighbors, and especially in the land of the kangaroo, where all livestock, such as horses and cattle, exported from this State were not allowed to land at certain ports, but were compelled to be placed in quarantine for six months before a clean bill of health was issued. Before this time there was quite a market for our trotters and thoroughbreds in that country, but the article in question acted as a bar to further exportation, and the gates were closed in such a way that breeders considered it a losing speculation to send stock there. Now, by the provisions of a State law a Board of Veterinarians is appointed whose duty is to let the foreign powers know that by the duties devolving upon them the existence of all contagious and infectious diseases will be investigated and destroyed.

This is a duty they owe the profession, the State and themselves. They should endeavor to see that all of the veterinarians appointed by the County Boards of Supervisors are capable of discovering such diseases and reporting the results of their investigations. The bill was not passed as a measure to benefit the profession exclusively; it was to benefit all our citizens. These qualified professionals who compose this State Board must carefully examine all applicants for diplomas, and ascertain if they are competent or not. A great responsibility rests therefore upon them. The gentlemen on the Board have had more or less experience in the past with "cow-leechers" and "quacks," and have been called to check the most dangerous diseases that have been allowed to thrive through the ignorance of this class of impostors; therefore, it is incumbent upon them to see that all of these so-called practitioners who apply for a certificate shall undergo a most rigid examination. The success in California of the great profession in which they have devoted years of study and application depends upon their efforts. For years qualified practitioners have been laboring to get aid from our Legislature which would enable them to be on the same footing in this State as they most of the other States, and success has crowned their efforts. Let them show the public that they appreciate the efforts made in their behalf, and make this new office a model one in every respect.

The law adopted is a good one. Amendments may, in the future, be deemed necessary to make it stronger; time and practice will determine this. The exit of the quacks to other climes and the influx of competent, qualified veterinarians is at hand; consequently, farmers, cattle breeders and horsemen will have greater confidence in the members of the profession hereafter. The notification to other States that there is a law here that forbids impostors to practice will also have a beneficial result. If, in this "equine paradise," there is an opportunity for the founding of a veterinary college, wherein our young men may have an opportunity of perfecting themselves in the profession, the presence of none but qualified veterinarians, who have never forgotten their collegiate experience, will be a great aid in placing such an institution on an equality with that of any other in the world. We congratulate the members of the profession and the horsemen and farmers of this State in having a State Board of Veterinarians, and believe that an era of progress in the profession is dawning.

Entries Close.

That live organization, "The Capital City Turf and Driving Club," will hold its five days' spring meeting May 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th, at the race track, Agricultural Park. There will be three days devoted to the thoroughbreds and two to the trotters and pacers. Entries for the latter class will close next Saturday, the 15th. Entries for the Stockton Fair will close upon the same date, and owners of trotter and pacers should send for blanks and make entries at once. Then the Overland Park Club, of Denver, Colorado, also claims next Saturday for the time for the closing of its entries, and by reference to the advertisement it will be seen that the terms are very liberal and the purses and stakes large.

Reference is called to this date of closing because many horse breeders and owners have been regretting that they did not pay more attention to this important matter before, and, in consequence, are in a quandary to know just what to do with their most promising trotters and pacers.

THE suspension for one year of Peter Weber and his two sons, John and Charley, has been the principal topic of conversation among race-goers and horsemen during the past week. The opinion generally expressed was that the Board of Directors of the Blood Horse Association punished the Webers too severely—in fact, should have looked over his passionate words, uttered under the circumstances. That Mr. Weber had reason to be indignant at the treatment accorded his son John all thinking man will admit. No racing association in the world has any rule allowing a starter to strike a jockey, and therefore Mr. Weber, as a father, had just cause to be angry at Mr. Ferguson. The Blood Horse Association rule covering the case reads as follows: "A jockey misconducting himself at the post, refusing to obey the commands of the starter in any respect whatever, willfully turning his horse round, hanging behind, not starting when the flag is dropped, or otherwise attempting to take any advantage, shall be fined or suspended by the starter, but the suspension of a jockey shall not take effect until after the last race of the day of his suspension, and the Board of Directors may modify or remit penalties imposed by the starter." Now, if Johnny Weber disobeyed the commands of the starter, Mr. Ferguson had a perfect right to fine or suspend the jockey, but was certainly wrong in lashing the boy with a black-snake whip. Did not the father take the part of his boy, wrongfully flogged as he was, he would indeed be considered a poor specimen of manhood. Peter Weber was right in feeling himself aggrieved, and anything he said in the heat of passion should be passed over as lightly as possible. The suspension for a year is by far too severe a penalty, and if he used insulting language to the Board a small fine, under the circumstances, would have been sufficient. On tracks under control of the Turf Congress the starter, far from being allowed to flog disobedient jockeys, must use decent language at all times, and a starter that swears at the boys can, on complaint, be punished severely. This is as it should be, for a string of oaths flung at a host of young jockeys is certainly not calculated to improve the morals of the youths.

SENATOR LELAND STANFORD has sold to John Adams, of Woodland, Yolo county, the bay horse Shannon, foaled 1872, by Monday, dam Hennie Farrow, by imp. Shamrock. Shannon has sired a number of winners, the best being Homer and Bishop. He is a brother to Mollie McCarty and half-brother to Flood.

THE race-track band, out during a blinding rainstorm last Thursday, played a very appropriate air, entitled "One More River to Cross." As the gutters on each side of the street bade fair to develop into rivers and the Bay District track could easily be mistaken for the roaring Calaveras, the selection of this piece by the leader was exceedingly timely.

THE attention of our readers is called to a splendid son of Guy Wilkes, 2:15, that is offered for sale by J. Dewitt Butts, of Oregon. This is a handsome bay stallion out of May Spronle (dam of Margaret, 2:28), by The Moor. See ad.

The B. H. A.'s New Track.

[Written expressly for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

"Why, where on earth did you come from, old man? It's a coon's age since I've laid eyes on you!"

"I've been buried in the Alaskan mining country for five years—off in the wilds, 2,000 miles from nowhere. I've made a neat clean-up, and I'm glad to get back to old San Francisco, I can assure you."

The above conversation was overheard on Market street the other evening, the speakers being old-time residents of this Pacific Coast metropolis.

After a hearty handshaking, the "old boys" retired to the Cafe Royal to moisten their whistles. They were lovers of good racing, and the resurrected gentleman soon brought up that subject.

"I've got back just about in time to take in the races at Bay District track, I suppose. If I remember aright, the spring meetings used to commence about April 1st."

"Bay District track! Why, that old blot of a place was torn up and streets cut through it over two years ago. You have been buried alive, sure enough, not to have heard of that," said No. 1.

"Is it possible? I imagined that the Blood Horse people were so wedded to old Bay District track, with its ramshackle grand stands and stables and unsightly enclosure that they would never let go of it."

"Well, it did look that way, I'll admit, but the association got some new blood in it, just as it was about to kick the bucket over factional rows, and bought a tract of 175 acres in the warm belt back of Oakland—Fruitvale—you remember Fruitvale. The papers, you see, shamed the Blood Horse folks into giving up the playground of the wind-gods, commonly known as Bay District track, and now, without exaggerating the case a bit, I can say they have the finest track west of Chicago, and in no place of its kind in America can such beautiful lawns and grounds be found."

"How in the world did they ever make the rifle?"

"Easy enough. A young capitalist formed a stock company, and took $50,000 worth of the stock himself for a starter, then other wealthy men followed in his footsteps so fast that they could easily have raised that day $2,000,000 instead of the $400,000 necessary to put the institution in order. In the first place they bought 175 acres of land at $750 an acre. Then they built a substantial, come-to-stay sort of grand stand that comfortably seats 25,000 people, and a very handsome clubhouse that is situated about seventy-five yards north of the grand stand. In the former are nicely-upholstered seats for ladies, and there are three tiers to the stand, including the large amount of room on the roof. In the basement of the grand-stand is a fine restaurant, and their cooks are the best in the land. Purses so reasonable, too, for everything. West, or back of the grand stand, about fifty yards, are the betting quarters and a saloon as handsome as this one. On three sides of the stand, and also in front of the members' clubhouse is a beautifully-kept lawn, and I tell you the ladies of San Francisco and Oakland look simply superb, with their vari-colored costumes, promenading on that carpeting of green on fine afternoons during the races. Oh, I forgot to say that you drive up to the grand-stand through a splendid avenue of elm and pepper trees. And the track! You will say it is simply perfection when you see it. As far as that goes, there are a combination of tracks. THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN printed some time since cuts of a combination track, invented by a gentleman connected with that paper, and the Blood Horse Association saw its superiority over other courses at once, and had the combination track built. It gives great satisfaction to both horsemen and the public. There are training tracks on the inside of the regular ones, and one portion of the combination course has been sodded, so that they can have races 'on the grass' for a novelty."

"You bewilder me with all this. I never imagined there was so much enterprise in San Franciscans."

"Hold on. I have not finished describing the place yet. The stables are all over at the east end of the grounds. There is stall-room for 1,000 horses, and at the very first meeting they gave over there every stall was filled. Talk about turning out! You ought to have seen the crowds."

"Why, I thought people WOULD NOT go to races if they had to cross the bay. That used to be the cry before I went to Alaska."

"I know that, but if you have a good stake race or two every day and a two and three-mile race every once in a while for good measure, the people will go a good deal further than Fruitvale to see the contests, I can assure you. Why, the crowd commences to come as early as 10 o'clock in the morning. They are there for a day of recreation and pleasure—a much-needed outing—to observe things that are pleasing to the eye, the beautiful green sloping lawns, level tracks and enclosure, to see the fountains playing and feel the excitement over the races. At convenient spots around the grand stand and betting quarters are marble reservoirs, containing ice water, and attentive waiters are at hand if a person wishes a lemonade or something stronger."

"What a great change from the old method. It is hard to realize that so much has been accomplished during my absence."

"Yes, but that's not all. They only have one judge now, and the timing is done by electricity. The electric clock is so large that anyone can tell the time made in a race from its face 75 yards off. When the Pacific Cup (2 1/2 miles) was run last fall we had a crowd estimated at 75,000, and it is a common thing to see thirty-five bookmaking firms doing business at the Fruitvale course. Why, the association in two years' time has been able to clear the place and declare a handsome dividend."

"Why, how could they do that in such a short time?"

"They had, as I said before, at least one stake race every day, and many novelties that were attractive from time to time. The average paying attendance was 7,000 per day, or $7,000 in cash; at least thirty bookmaking firms were on at $100 per day each, while the commissions on auction pools and mutuels amounted to something like $1,000 daily. Then look at the amount received by the association from keepers of pool-rooms. There are perhaps 75 pool-rooms paying the Blood Horse people $10 each per day for the entries, track odds, etc., or $750 daily for that privilege. About $3,000 was given out in stakes and purses on racing days, and running expenses amounted to about $750 per day, making a net profit of about $8,000. They have held four meetings since you were away of twenty days each, making a profit of $640,000, exclusive of stalls-rent, and so they have paid for their beautiful track, grounds, stables, grand stand, etc., and have about $240,000 in the treasury. There is nothing like pluck and enterprise. It carries the day every time. And how the country has built up all around the new race course—a regular colony of racing men. They have their own residences paid for and their private training stables as well, and all seem to be prosperous, too. Well, their expenses are comparatively light the way they live, and they lead much more respectable lives than they used to, going around the country like a band of gypsies, or even worse. All they have to do is win five or six races with their little strings of horses during the year to have a neat sum to live and keep their families on. Another good thing about a track being away from a city a considerable distance is that lads will not be so likely to run away from school and become stable boys or touts. There was too much temptation about a place like old Bay District."

"How do you account for the large attendance at the Fruitvale races?"

"Why, San Francisco has a population of 375,000, and a vast amount of wealth—more than any city in the world of its size possesses, probably. Then there is Oakland, with 75,000 inhabitants, Alameda with 15,000, Berkeley with perhaps 2,500 more, making 467,500 to draw from, to say nothing of other large cities not very far away. Seven thousand out of this number is a very moderate average, and in a few years there is no reason why San Francisco should not turn out yearly as large a crowd to see a big racing event as they do at Melbourne on 'Cup Day,' when 160,000 have been present. Why not?"

Of course the reader will have understood long ere this that the story above is merely drawn from imagination, but there is no sensible reason to be advanced why such things cannot be brought about in the next two years.

Almonition in the Stud.

This handsome son of that sire of trotters, Aleona 730, is advertised in our columns to make the season of 1893 at the Alamo Stock Farm. Everyone who attended the races last year will remember this game, strong-moving, blood-like looking trotter. He was the ideal four-year-old of the year, and the way he won all of his races proved that he must have been well bred. When one comes to investigate his pedigree it is very evident that he was bred to stay the route. His dam, Pansy, is also the dam of King Orry, 2:23, and she was by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22, the great sire of great dams; his second dam was Lady Richelieu (dam of Alfred, 2:26); third dam Lady Vance, by American Eclipse; fourth dam by Joe Gale; fifth dam by James Lowery; sixth dam by Consul; seventh dam by Imported Medley. With such a sire as Aleona and such a dam, there is no reason why Almonition should not be a good one as a sire as well as a trotter. He will stand for $100 the season.

In an adjoining stable is the racy looking stallion, Steinel 18,654, a son of Steinway and Phaeola, by Silverthreads; second dam Minnehaha (dam of Beautiful Bells, 2:29), and four other trotters. Steinel will be given an opportunity of getting a record this fall after his season in the stud ends.

Excellent Pasturage.

The attention of our readers who have horses they wish to pasture is called to the advertisement of the Lakeville Stock Farm. The pasture never looked better; and every care will be taken of stock. There are no wire fences on the place. Watering troughs are in every field, and they are supplied from never-failing springs. Stock can be shipped per steamer Gold every day except Sunday from the wharf between Jackson and Washington streets.

EARLY this week the weights in the Washington and Hawthorne Park handicaps came to hand. In the Oakland handicap, mile and an eighth, run at Washington Park, Lamp-lighter and Tammany have been assigned top weight with 127 pounds. Riley 123, Ida Pickwick 122 and Poet Scout 120, are next in order. The California horses have been treated very well by the handicapper. Here they are: Yo Tambien 119, Racine 119, Guido 114, Santa Ana 110, Wildwood 110, Homer 108, Zaldivar 107, Galindo 106, Dolly McCone 103, Hotspur 103, Gloaming 101, Mero 100, Rio Grande 97, Cadmus 96, Picton 96, Fidelia 94 and Antrim 90. The Oakwood handicap is one and one-eighth miles. The Great Western has a splendid entry list, especially when it is considered that the race is one and one-half miles. It demonstrates that horse-owners are not averse to running their horses over a distance when fair money is hung up. Tammany and Lamp-lighter are both handicapped at 126 pounds. The California horses are weighted as follows: Yo Tambien 118, Santiago 114, Longshot 110, Santa Ana 108, Wildwood 107, Zaldivar 105, Hotspur 101, Dare 100, Dolly McCone 100, Don Fulano 90, Alliance 90, Sir Carr 90, Martinet 90 and Antrim 90. Dare and Don Fulano appear to have been treated extremely well by the handicapper.

Moondyne at Mendocino.

The horsemen of Mendocino City, Mendocino county, have long been seeking the services of a first-class, well-bred, speedy stallion for their mares, and this search has at last been rewarded by the advent of the black three-year-old stallion Moondyne. This youngster was sold at the dispersal sale of the Asylum Stock Farm horses, and the way he moved on that day and the remarkably easy, frictionless gait he seemed endowed with made him a great favorite among the hundreds of horsemen assembled there.

Moondyne was foaled in 1890; he is coal black in color, a handsome, clean-limbed, strongly-built type of a pure trotting horse. He has everything to commend him, breeding, disposition, conformation, constitution and speed.

Moondyne is by Director Jr., out of Cesanola, by Altamont 3600; second dam by Mike 3403; third dam by Old George Savage's).

Director Jr. is by the Black Cyclone, Director, 2:17 (sire of Direct, 2:05 1/2, Directum, 2:11 1/2, Evangeline, 2:11 1/2, Margaret S., 2:12 1/2, Guide, 2:27 1/2, and fourteen others in 2:30), dam Brainer, by Echo 462 (sire of sixteen in the list and of the dams of Annie C., 2:25, Direct, 2:05 1/2, Flowing Tide, 2:24, and Pink, 2:23 1/2); second, dam Lady Dudley, by Tom Dudley (thoroughbred); third dam by Bertrand Jr.; fourth dam by Paoclet; fifth dam by Sir Solomon, son of Sir Archy. Direct was bred in similar bloodlines to Director Jr.; he was by Director, and his dam was by Echo, second dam, thoroughbred. As Director Jr. has only had limited opportunities in the stud there is no reason why (with the advantages he now has in Sacramento) he will not appear as a sire of a large number of game and reliable trotters. He is one of the handsomest sons of the old horse and the way he transmits all of his quality can be seen at a glance at his son Moondyne. The blending of the blood of Director and Echo has proven a very happy one and as Director Jr. is the only representative of this cross outside of the Pleasanton farm, he will soon prove his worth. Moondyne is the first colt he sired and no better proof of what a his future as a sire is than this fine youngster.

Cesanola, the dam of Moondyne, was one of the best trotters in Oregon although never have been given a record she showed her ability to enter the charmed circle before she was driven two months. Her owner then bred her to Director Jr. Her sire is Altamont 3600 with a record of 2:26 1/2 to wagon. He is considered one of the handsomest sons of the mighty Almont. He has eighteen trotters and only one pacer in the list and this year there will be at least ten more that will go in. Among Altamont's progeny are the great trotters Altao, 2:17 1/2; Lady Daphne, 2:21; Canemah, 2:20 1/2; McMinville Maid, 2:22; Alta, 2:23 1/2; Del Norte, 2:22 1/2; Stemwinder, 2:25 1/2; Lady Beach, 2:26 1/2; Pearl Fisher, 2:25; Pricemont 2:26; Alena, 2:26 1/2; Althaia, 2:27 1/2. Altamont's dam was Sue Ford (dam of Trouble 509, 2:37 sire of Lizzie Craig, 2:23 1/2, Trile, 2:29) and the dams of Albion, 2:25 1/2; Foxhunter, 2:30; Andrew Allison, 2:22 1/2; Cadmus Jr., 2:26 and Dr. Almont, 2:21 1/2), by Brown Chief 445 (sire of Maggie K., 2:29) and the dams of Altamont, 2:26 1/2; Frank P. Porter, 2:27 1/2; Goodwin Jr. 2:29 1/2 and Lady Majolica, 2:25) he by Mambrino Chief 11, sire of six trotters, twenty-three sires of ninety-two and seventeen dams of twenty-four trotters in the 2:30 list. Altamont's second dam was by Imp. Hooton (sire of dam of Lula, 2:15 and grandams of Olmedo Wilkes, 2:26 1/2; Fanny Bess, 2:27 1/2; Clermont, 2:29 1/2; Altamont, 2:26 1/2 and others); third dam by Bertrand, the great four-mile race horse; fourth dam by Woodpecker, sire of the famous Grey Eagle. Sue Ford appears also as the dams of Alburn 4720 (sire of Almont, 2:17 1/2 and the dams of Ione, 2:27 and Young Voltaire, 2:30; May Quesse, 2:29 1/2). Her daughter Almira is the dam of Laclede 1895 (sire of three in the list), and she is also the grandam of Celerity, 2:29 1/2—all trotters.

Moondyne's second dam was by Mike 3403 (sire of Barney 2:25), and the dams of Alta, 2:23 1/2 and Alena, 2:26 1/2), by Vermont 322 (sire of Ella Lewis, 2:27, Lollie T., 2:28 1/2, Parrott, 2:26, and the dams of B. B., 2:21 1/2 and Saladin, 2:11 1/2), by Independence, son of Black Hawk 5. Mike was out of the Perringer mare, by Beal's Horse.

The third dam of Moondyne was by Savage's Old George, a thoroughbred. It can thus be seen that Moondyne is as well bred as any horse north of San Francisco. He traces to Mambrino Chief four times, twice to American Star and three times to Hambletonian and to Pilot Jr. through Sue Ford. The combination of such blood lines as Director and Altamont, backed up by the best and strongest strains of the thoroughbred and Black Hawk families as represented, commend him to the attention of breeders.

Moondyne will be allowed to serve a limited number of mares in and around Mendocino City and after the first of July he will be placed in the hands of a trainer and given a record. His former trainer, Thos. Murphy, declares that the colt has trotted halves in 1:13 and did it so easily that he was confident of making quite a reputation with the horse this fall and felt aggrieved to hear that he had to part with him.

Owners of broodmares who are seeking to improve their stock should avail themselves of the opportunity of breeding their best matrons to this young horse this season before he has achieved a great reputation. The mighty Axtell stood for $25 his first year in the stud; after he got his record, his services were set at $1,000 the season and even then he was very well patronized.

The Kentfield Sale.

The attendance at the Kentfield sale of horses last Wednesday showed that the interest in fine trotting stock is as strong in this State as it ever was. There were representative breeders from all parts of the State, and the auctioneers had no trouble in calling out their names. Among those present were noticed: Messrs. T. W. Moore, Henry and Ira Pierce, Frank H. Burke, John F. Boyd, Wm. Vioget, Geo. A. Wiley, Clas. F. Neal, F. C. Talbot, W. Powning, T. C. Snider, G. Glide, John McCord, C. Crittenden, Jesse D. Carr, James B. Iverson, T. J. Crowley, C. C. Clay, John Reis, Prof. E. P. Heald, F. Lowell, J. Rosenbaum, M. Carter, Alfred Seales, T. Seales, C. Durfee, Thos. Smith, J. McKerron, J. Cassidy, W. Fink, J. O'Kane, C. Cooper and F. W. Chapman. The bidding was spirited, and the prices obtained were fair. Mrs. Mark Severance, of Los Angeles, secured the gems of the collection, Regina and Inspiration. The following are the names of the animals, buyers and prices obtained:

Table listing horse sales with columns for horse name, buyer, and price. Includes entries like Regina, brown mare, foaled 1880, by Electioneer, dam Accident, sold for $1,650; Weaver Girl, bay mare, by Speculation, dam Lady Weaver, sold for 50; Ducbess, roan mare, by Monroe Chief, dam Queen, by Alexander, sold for 90; Birdie K., bay mare, by Director, dam Weaver Girl, sold for 630; Fanny, bay mare, by Abbottford, dam Belle, by Paul's Abdallah, sold for 165; Telephone, bay gelding, by Director, dam Weaver Girl, sold for 315; Agitator, roan gelding, by Monroe Chief, dam Queen, by Alexander, sold for 125; Arthur Orton, bay gelding, by Steinway, dam Mand II, by The Moor, sold for 235; Inspiration, brown filly, foaled 1891, by Director, dam Regina, by Electioneer, sold for 1,825; Dirigo, bay colt, by Alexander Button, dam Ducbess, by Monroe Chief, sold for 125; Juliet, bay filly, by Alexander Button, dam Birdie K., by Director, sold for 250; Investment, bay colt, by Alexander Button, dam Fanny, by Abbottford, sold for 130; Lorna Doon, black mare, by Steinway, dam Lady Dudley, by Tom Dudley, sold for 340. Total: $6,380. Average 13 head: $533.

Important Meeting of Blood Horse Directors.

Last Monday night the Blood Horse directors, by resolution, reinstated Bookmaker Henry Schwartz, and he was declared to be entitled to go on and make a hook at the meeting now under way. He was suspended because he did not heed the resolution of the Board passed on January 16th last, providing that any person making a hook during the race meeting then in progress in the Athens of the Pacific should be debarred at the spring Blood Horse meeting from doing business as a hookmaker. Vice-President Williams stated that the balance of the Oakland hookmakers would be also. It was stated further that Schwartz was reinstated because he had made an open, manly fight against the Blood Horse Association, and had not carried on business under an assumed name (as many are at present doing at Bay District track).

The case of "Moose" Taylor came up, the clever young jockey petitioning to be allowed to ride. The Board decided that Taylor had broken his contract with Carlile & Shields, the Denver turfmen, and therefore would not allow him to take any mounts here in races. However, we understand the contract expires on the 23d of this month, so the young fellow can then ride for any one he pleases.

The most important case of all passed on was the suspension for one year of Peter Weher and his two sons, John and Charles. It is said Mr. Weher was still very indignant at the treatment of his son John at the post on Saturday last, when the boy rode Claire and received two severe cuts across the back with a blacksnake whip. Weher Sr. tendered the badges of himself and sons to the officials of the association, and we have it that he afterward appeared before the Board of Directors of the Blood Horse Association and used such language at their meeting last Monday night that he and his sons were suspended for the term of one year. He was asked if he spoke for his boys, and said he did.

Draw the Lines Closer.

It may seem like threshing straw to again urge upon breeders the necessity for greater care in the selection of breeding stock, but in this course only may we hope for a speedy deliverance from the ills that now, like clouds, darken the horizon of the breeding world. We are suffering from a violation of all the rules that should have served as guideboards to success. We are reaping just what we have sowed, and with the assurance that this law will ever hold good, shall we not seek to raise the standard or quality of the sowing, and thus at once raise the value of the harvest?

It is easy to err on the side of laxity, but no error can be made on lines of being too exacting. Reject every imperfection. Breed as near perfection as your judgment can dictate. This course followed for a few years would have a wonderful effect upon the general appearance and value of trotting stock in general.

Why should a breeder accept imperfections at this time? There may have been some excuse for passing imperfections when the business was in its infancy and high-class sires and dams were more rare. A curb, or an imperfectly formed leg; lack of size or absence of beauty; faulty gait or conformation; the lack of any one of these may have been pardoned when the animal averaged high in other qualities; but today the breeder that expects to attain the highest measure of success cannot afford to pardon anything. He must insist upon the highest excellence gauged by the type he seeks to produce.

By this we do not mean that a type of the general purpose horse, or one that can be termed a general utility animal, will be found the most profitable to produce. The highest point of excellence in a draught horse might be a very ordinary quality in the trotter, just as the light, rangy conformation of the thoroughbred would be a poor characteristic to reproduce in the cart horse.

There are some qualities, however, that every type demands—soundness, size, grace and beauty. These are necessary and should be indispensable qualities in any harness type. If a breeder seeks to produce race horses, he will naturally seek the racy type in conformation and general make-up. If road horses be the object, a pleasant disposition and quick, graceful action are very essential. In horseflesh especially is a thing of beauty a joy forever, and other things being equal, the handsome horse will quickly outsell the one of plain conformation.

By all means discard the culls. Put the unsound or ill-shapen mare to work on the farm, or do anything with her rather than reproduce her defects. Begin this season with the determination to produce the best lot of foals you ever bred, and carry it far enough to risk none that will be liable to lower the general average. Remember it is still a true adage that the first loss is usually the least, and get rid of every undesirable broodmare.

The chances are if you decrease the quantity and raise the quality it will be a very profitable change. Only the highest type will find a ready market amid the general depression that is sure to be the rule for a few years to come. Breed with the same care you would if you knew the long-expected financial panic was to be a thing of the near future, and that values of all kinds were to be correspondingly depressed.

Such a course if generally pursued would soon curtail the production and raise the general average of excellence, and these two are the keys to the future welfare and prosperity of the business of breeding the light harness horse.—Horse Breeder.

Mrs. Caudle.

Mr. Cyrus Lukens, of Philadelphia, sends the following interesting letter about Mrs. Caudle to W. T. Chester, of Turf Field and Farm, which, while not directly proving anything seems to indicate that she was of Morgan blood:

DEAR SIR—Over three months since you asked for information relative to Mrs. Caudle, dam of Ericsson, and granddam of Clark Chief, remarking that your attention had been called to her by the great speed shown by many of her descendants. Thirty years ago my attention was called to the same subject, although the fast speed element was not so plainly apparent. February, 1865, my old friend, Charles L. Sharpless, and our mutual friend, Charles Mathers, visited Kentucky. While on this trip, Mr. Sharpless purchased Lady Montague, by Mambrino Chief, whose daughter, Lydia Montague, by Tipppo Bashaw, is now dam of two in the 2:30 list. At the same time Charles Mathers purchased Mambrino Whip, by Mambrino Chief. He was a very handsome brown stallion, bred by R. F. Van Mater, and showed his fine thoroughbred inheritance on his dam's side, descended from Whip and American Eclipse. He could show about a three-minute gait.

After the stallion arrived at Mather's home, Penlynn, Montgomery County, Pa., while looking him over, I said: "Charlie, why did you not buy Clark Chief?" Said he: "Cyrus, you are right; the best-gaited Mambrino Chief stud in Kentucky; but if I had brought him home my friends would have said: 'Charlie, what did you bring that big flat-footed horse home for?' To which I queried, 'Is that a fact?' 'Yes,' said he, 'the largest flat front foot you ever saw.' The fact that his grandam had been Mrs. Caudle was the reason why I had called Mathers' attention to Clark Chief. I knew that she had been a fast trotting mare of a pure, square gait, and that she had been brought from New England down to New York somewhere in the forties and had been claimed to have been of Morgan descent.

Mr. William T. Porter, then editor of the only sporting horse paper in New York City, had bought this mare, and had sent her to a friend, from whom he had purchased her, in Savannah, Ga.

She was used there some years, and when Mambrino Chief went to Kentucky there was more fuss made about him than there had been when he was up in Dutchess County, N. Y., which attracted her owner's attention, and he shipped her to Enoch Lewis, of Kentucky, who bred her to that stallion and produced Ericsson, who was driven by Warren Peahody a mile to wagon in his four-year-old form in a race, the fourth heat in 2:30!

This Morgan history of Miss Caudle stuck to her through all these years, and Ericsson was for a time, when quite young, known as Morgan Chief, combining the names of the two families in one, as has so frequently been done. Although bred in Kentucky, Ericsson, like a large percentage of our most famous trotting stallions, owed his ancestry to the trotting horse families bred east of the Alleghenies. During August meeting of Charter Oak Park, 1878, I was in the smithshop of W. B. Smith with old Mr. J. P. Gilbert while he was assisting in shoeing Croxie, 2:19, and talked with him about her large, flat front feet, remembering full well Charlie Mathers' remarks of twelve years previous. I have noticed large, flat front feet in other descendants of Clark Chief, now famous as a broodmare sire. I shall never forget a story Mathers used to relate about their visit at that time (1865) to Dr. L. Herr. Charles L. Sharpless was quite taken with Dr. Herr's colt, as they called him, now known as Mambrino Patchen. He was shown to halter, and Mr. Sharpless offered $5,000 for him. Dr. Herr wanted $10,000, because the colt was said to have been a full brother to Lady Thorne, who at that time was more to us trotting horse enthusiasts than Nancy Hanks is now, and we never will lose that feeling about it. Sharpless insisted on seeing the colt in harness. There seemed to be something in the way of that. Dr. Herr very kindly and hospitably entertained them and amused them for two days, at the end of which time he showed them Mambrino Patchen in harness. Mathers said: "That as the Doctor drove away from where they stood Sharpless watched the horse closely for a time, but suddenly he wheeled about and made a straight line for the house, 'and,' said he, 'if you could have seen that little Quaker's coat-tail standing straight out back as he rushed to the house it would have made you laugh. He never made another offer for Mambrino Patchen.'" CYRUS LUKENS.

A Clever Pneumatic Tire for Sulkyes.

Fully as much care in the selection of a good tire for your racing sulky, as in the proper training of your horses, is a necessity. Do you want to lose a race by having your pneumatic tire "blow up" or become soft at the last moment? The tire has to take hard service, it is in constant contact with the ground. If anything happens to it and repairs cannot be made instantly, you run a big chance of being knocked out of race. The most easily repaired pneumatic tire and one upon which this quick repair is at the same time, a permanent one, is that of the "Victor" make. It consists of an outer case of Para rubber and linen canvas which acts as a protection to an inner tube. The inner tube holds the air and is therefore the life of the tire. When an accident happens a new inner tube can be instantly pulled into the tire by any boy, and the tire is as good as new. These inner tubes are of pure rubber, weigh but a few ounces and cost but $2.50 each. Before ordering your sulky attachment examine this pneumatic tire. They can be seen at the Overman Wheel Company's store, 539 Larkin Street, San Francisco.

HOOF-BEATS.

THE Rohy (Ind.) race track resumed business on March 29th with a small crowd in attendance, but before the programme was finished six constables from Hammond, Ind., raided the place for a violation of the Indiana pooling law. Manager Argo and two bookmakers were arrested. The races were not stopped.

J. R. WHITTAKER, secretary of the Vallejo Agricultural and Speed Association, recently informed us that it is the intention of the society to make a number of improvements at the track. About eighty stalls are to be built; the track will be harrowed, rolled and placed in first-class condition. Backed up with the enterprise of the large number of horsemen in and around Vallejo, there can be no doubting that success will attend their efforts. Mr. Whittaker is the right man in the right place, and horsemen will find that he is one of the secretaries they are always glad to meet.

AMERICANS pretend to be the smartest people on the globe, yet they are still grovelling in the dark ages on the road question. We make wagons with tires that cut up the roads and drag the horses to death to pull them through the ruts. In France they do things differently. The French law requires the ties of all wagons shall be six inches wide, and in four wheeled wagons the front axle is six inches shorter than the rear axle, thus making a roller two feet wide out of every wagon. Such wagons do almost as much towards improving the roads as the graders themselves, and are much easier on the teams. In that country a horse is expected to pull from two to three tons, at least twice as much as he could haul on our roads.

JOHN E. TURNER, of Ambler Park, near Philadelphia, has begun working the large string of trotters under his charge on the old fair ground track. Among the animals in his string are: Abbie V. (7), 2:18½, by Aherdeen; H. C. T. (6), 2:17, by King Almont; Rose Filkins (4), 2:22, by Melrose; Happy Lady (4), 2:23 at two years, by Happy Russell; Belle Truxton (4), 2:37½, by Truxton, he by Young Wilkes; Rigmarole (4), 2:33½, black mare, by Prince Orloff; Nyanza (4), 2:29½, at two years, bay mare by Quartermaster; Nutshell (4), bay mare, by Bayonne Prince; Willow (3), bay stallion, by Santa Claus; Dudley Alcott (5), 2:26½, chestnut stallion, by Albert W.; Corryan (5), bay stallion, by Cornelius; Daylight, bay stallion, by Gen. Benton; Fourth of July (4), bay stallion, by Santa Claus; Keiser (3), by Kentucky Prince; a three-year-old bay filly by Woodnut, and a three-year-old bay filly by Santa Claus. Santa Claus, 2:17½, by Strathmore, now eighteen years old, is looking well.

OLD SWIGERT, one of the most famous trotting sires in the West, is dead. He was owned by the F. J. Dwyer Stock Farm at Burlington, Wis., where he died on Saturday. Swigert was foaled at Woodburn Farm in 1856. He was bought by Richard Richards of Racine, Wis., as a yearling and was taken to Meadow Lawn Farm, where he was owned until 1888. As a producer of fast horses he had few equals in the West. With limited opportunities he sired 37 horses with records of 2:30 or better, including the noted campaigner and sire Moody, 2:18½; also Brilliant, 2:17½, and Governor D., 2:21. Eighteen of his sons have produced 22 performers, while nine of his daughters produced 10 performers, including Vic H., 2:13½, and Addie Hayes, 2:19½. He was sired by Alexander's Norman 25; dam Blandina, dam of that good sire King Rene and Abdallah Pilot, by Mambrino Chief; second dam the Burch mare, dam of Rosalind, 2:21½ and Donald, 2:27, by Brown Pilot.

THE yearling and two-year-old gelding records are nearly ten seconds slower than the best for colts and fillies of those ages, and the difference is not much less with the three and four-year-olds, which is additional evidence that practically all which are of any account are still being kept entire, along with hundreds of others that all know to a reasonable certainty never will amount to anything either on the track or in the stud. There are numerous advantages, as well as much less risk, in castrating early. Many colts may be castrated as sucklings and most of the balance as yearlings. Dexter and Rarus, though able to become the champions, did more for the general trotting interest as geldings than they would ever have done as stallions, and paid better, as one of them finally brought $35,000 and the other was sold by his breeder for $36,000, which is more than was realized for all the others from their dams. Only a very small proportion of what are now being kept entire are needed for stallions, or will ever pay the much greater expense of raising as such. It would be well if every State breeder's association should now offer inducements in the shape of liberal purses for geldings one, two, three and four years old, and another open to geldings of all ages. The relative demand for geldings is fully a hundred fold greater than for stallions, and the public sales are now demonstrating that, with the exception of the very best bred, those from great dams and by the most fashionable sires, they are not now bringing as good prices if entire as though gelded.—Horse Breeder.

LADY SUFFOLK was a beautiful dapple gray mare in her young days, says L. C. Underhill, foaled in 1833, and she was therefore twelve years old when she made her record of 2:26. She stood 15.2 hands high, and her action was low and sweeping, such action as in the hands of a Marvin or a Dohle would have carried her a merry mile. In a journey over Long Island a few months since I saw the stable where the Lady Suffolk passed many days of her life. Everything was in the primitive state of half a century ago, even to the latch string, that still hangs as it did when David Bryan and his famous mare were still among the living. It was fourteen years after Lady Suffolk surprised the country with her record before 2:20 was beaten, and this honor fell to the gallant little Flora Temple. She was bred in New York State, and before her best performance she had become so famous that the owner of Woodburn Farm, Kentucky, had purchased her dam and the noted horse Edwin Forrest, that was the prominent one of her family in the male line. Flora, only a pony, standing 14.1 hands high, but she had the grit of a tour-in-hand, and was the biggest for her inches that ever figured among prominent trotters. Her record was made in 1859, and to say that the performance created a sensation would be a mild statement. Nothing in the nature of a turf record, either before or hence, has equalled it. The limit of trotting speed has been placed at 2:20, and she was the first one to break through the lines. What Flora Temple would have accomplished, aided by all the arts and knowledge acquired during the past thirty years, is of course idle conjecture, but she was followed by one that I have always believed the equal of any trotter living or dead, I refer to the mighty Dexter.

IF you have a horse with the size, form, gait and natural speed that would make him a good road-horse, spare no pains in educating him and in developing those qualities to such an extent that he will be a road-horse in every sense of the word. First-class road-horses are not plenty, and if you have the good fortune to produce one or a dozen, a ready sale will be found for one or all of them at most remunerative prices, provided they have been thoroughly educated and fitted so that they may pass direct from your hands to the man who wishes to use them for pleasure driving.—Horse World.

In a recent chat C. J. Hamlin referred to the pleasant side of the horse business in the following style. "The happiest moment of my life—when I feel just like kicking up my heels—is when I see one of my own horses, which I bred, raised, and developed winning a turf battle down the stretch in a nose by a magnificent burst of speed at the finish. I believe, too, that being engaged around horses is conducive to healthfulness, provided a person's habits are properly balanced. There is a certain degree of magnetism between man and beast, a sort of silent telephone. What is more invigorating than a spin down the park roads on a bright morning behind a high-bred trotter? It is not the ride that does you good, but the magnetism of your horse. If you don't believe it, then take an hour's trip to-morrow morning out to the Park Lake on a trolley car and go over the route tucked up in a newly-painted road wagon, drawn by your favorite roadster, the next day at dawn, and draw your conclusion."

THE game trotting mare Fanny D., that got her record of 2:26 at the Oakland track September 3, 1891, was the following spring placed in the breeding ranks. She was bred to Wilber Field Smith's fine Alcazar stallion Kebr, 2:28½, and last week dropped a handsome bay colt, "the image of his sire." W. A. Hendrickson, owner of this mare, sent her to Pleasanton Monday to be bred to Richards & Murray's stallion Diablo, 2:14½. Fanny D. is credited to Antee in the Year Book; this is an error. She is by Mansfield Medium, out of a mare by Dohle's Black Bashaw; second dam a pure Arabian mare. She has all the Arabian light flesh-colored markings noticeable in this breed. Mansfield Medium was by Happy Medium 400, dam Black Bess (dam of Edith, 2:22½, and Happy Princess, 2:23½), by Black Oscar, son of George M. Patchen 30. He was a very fast horse. J. A. Phillips, the well-known trainer, took him to the Philadelphia track and with but very little work the horse trotted trials in 2:22, but meeting with an injury the stallion was thrown out of training and has never been started since. He is at Columbus, New Jersey, the place where Fanny D. was foaled.

THE interest in the thoroughbred contingent quartered at Monmouth Park will be greatly heightened by the arrival of Mr. Marcus Daly's string, which is due there to-day unless Matt Byrnes shall have deemed it advisable to stop over somewhere en route, says the Daily Spirit of March 17th. This he did not do at Chicago, for the horses were in such fine order, having made the trip from Montana on a special train, that there was no apparent necessity for resting them at Washington Park, as had been intended. In fact, up to that point in the trip the only delay had been occasioned by a stoppage of ten hours in a Dakota snowdrift. There are fourteen in the lot. The older horses are Tammany, Montana, Silver Fox, Sir Matthew, The Pepper, Steve Estes, Duke of Hamilton, Delury and Lillian Russell, the remaining five being two-year-olds as follows: Tenacious, bay colt, by Iroquois—Tassel; Dr. Garrett, bay colt, by imp. The Ill-Used—Fou Follet; imp. Matt Byrnes, brown colt, by Hampton—Cherry; Sam Lucas, bay colt, by The Ill-Used—Mehallah and Senator Grady, chestnut colt, by Iroquois—Satinet. They were a high-priced lot of youngsters. Tenacious cost $10,200; Senator Grady, $3,900, as yearlings; while Sam Lucas and Dr. Garrett brought $6,100 and $3,000 as weanlings at the Nursery Stud sale in 1891.

A WRITER, over the signature of Fides, in the Spirit of the Turf, says: "Greatness, that mysterious faculty, marked by the full time posts long weary distances apart, often comes where least expected. The despised little broken-kneed Teaser, that founded the English thoroughbred family had nothing to indicate his wonderful greatness. What was there about the unbeaten Eclipse that made him great? His sire got many others, but there never was another Eclipse. Where did the questionably-bred Messenger get his greatness? And Bill Rysdyk's Bull—the real progenitor of the greatest and best family of horses the world has ever seen—by what license could greatness be expected of him? His sire, Abdallah, got many other sons, but the Hero of Chester is absolutely the only thing that saved his name from oblivion. Then there was the short bred Geo. Wilkes, whose name will shine eternally in the firmament of equine stars; and Electioneer that was out of the wicked, kicking, willful unmanageable brown mare, that in turn was the daughter of the ragged-hipped, high strung old sorrel mare with white legs and a blaze that came from Ohio, and whose breeding no mortal knows. That little short-bodied sorrel pony with a monstrosity of a neck, a broken leg, and a blind eye, and no known breeding, a teaser for a Jack, named in derision, Blue Bull. What was there in him to make him great!"

In a conversation with W. A. Hendrickson, the gentleman who brought Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, to California, the history of Lady Woodard was alluded to. Mr. Hendrickson said, "I never knew her breeding, she was a large, handsome blood-like looking mare that was brought across the plains from Kentucky and sold to Wm. Woodard the sporting man. I bought her from him and often after driving her to San Jose (fifty miles), in six hours and a half, she would feel like coming back again. I never sat behind a better formed, stronger built, purer gaited, sounder or gamer mare than she. I liked her so well that I bred her to Geo. M. Patchen Jr., and she produced the horse called Budd Dohle, and he was a slashing good one, I can tell you. The following year, Steve Whipple begged me to send her to his horse, Whipple's Hambletonian, and she produced the chestnut colt that was afterwards known as Westfield, he was gelded and used as a roadster; he proved to be too fast for the road, so Tom Farrell got him and at the State Fair races, Sacramento, in 1873, in a field of eight, he got his record of 2:26½, and won the fourth, fifth and seventh heats, and race. The mare was sold to a Mr. Donahue, over in Mariage County, and I lost all track of her. She never had but two foals while I had her. Budd Dohle is the sire of Barney E. 2:27½, and the dams of Jim Mulyenna, 2:29½; Peacock, 2:23½; Keno, 2:23½ and Mary O., 2:29½, and they tell me all of his get are good looking, heavy-limbed, game and intelligent. I believe some credit should be given to Lady Woodard, his dam, and I hope that in the next Year Book she will get the credit she deserves."

It seems that this has been an unfortunate year with many of the English breeders, particularly so in the case of Lord Alington, the proprietor of one of the best studs in England. Not only was Thistle, the dam of Common and Goldfinch, barren to Donovan, but Match Girl (own sister to St. Blaise), slipped her foal by St. Simon. Certainly Lord Alington has cause to complain of ill fortune, and he seems not to have been the exception that proves the rule.

It is noticed in one of the Eastern papers, in a comparative statement of Electioneer's produce as to number of foals that he had produced, that what he produced in California was a known quantity, but that he must have sired a great many East before reaching the West. The facts are as furnished by Chas. Backman, that Electioneer got nineteen foals in the East; of this number one died at four days old, one at thirty-six hours, the other the year it was foaled, leaving sixteen live foals over a year old.

THE Blood Horse Association has evidently taken a strong liking for the Board of Control all at once, that organization doing business over 3,000 miles away. It will make a grand mistake if it does not form a Pacific Coast Board of Control, with its own set of rules and officers, and not be tied down to such a far-away lot of turf legislators. A turfman remarked the other day that the association had recognized the Board of Control in everything for a long time, and a bystander wanted to know of him if that were true how it was that the clever jockey, Joseph Narvaez, suspended for the balance of the season of 1892 for reckless riding, was allowed to take mounts at last fall's Blood Horse meeting in San Francisco. The answer was that Narvaez had been reinstated. As the suspension came about October, it would be interesting to know if he was reinstated just when it occurred.

THE old Mambrino Chief mare Bacchante Mambrino figures in the pedigrees of a number of good ones. She is the dam of two producing daughters, Jenny Hamilton, by Lakeland Abdallah 350, and Minerva, by Pilot Jr. 12. The former is the dam of Mambrino Swigert, 2:30, sire of four in the list while the latter (Minerva) is one of the great broodmares. She is the dam of Meander, 2:26½ (sire of four in the list); Nugget, 2:26½ (sire of ten and one sire of two and the dam of one), and Egmont (sire of twenty-one and three sires and the dams of three in the list). The dam of Buchchante Mambrino was Grey Bacchante, by Downing's Bay Messenger. She was the dam of Sheldon Messenger 9690, sire of Geo. Wolf, 2:30, and Ed. Barton, sire of Nemo, 2:21½. The grandam of Bacchante Mambrino was by Whip Comet, and she was known as the dam of Clifton Pilot 2026 (sire of Jack Lewis, 2:28½), third dam by Grey Messenger.

Castrating Colts.

A week ago I answered a correspondent's inquiry as to the proper time to castrate colts, and in your issue of February 23d is a reply to my answer by James Shelp, V. S., who also asks why castration interferes with the development of the sheath any more than with that of the leg or other part of the body.

It needs but a moment's thought to see that depriving an animal of its testicles destroys its virility, and, if the operation is performed early in its life, will in a great measure arrest the growth of every organ connected with the virile parts; and this is the main reason why the sheath as well as the yard remains undeveloped. The leg is not affected by that peculiar virile influence which flows to every part of the generative organs, and suffers no visible loss by the emasculating act; but is not the neck affected, losing its beautiful crest, and is not the mental and nervous system affected—the eye losing a great deal of its fire and brilliancy, the voice its strength, and the whole animal become more docile and less courageous? Now, will Dr. Shelp tell us why the neck, eyes and voice are changed, while the legs manifest no change whatever? Before the days of Gregory it was a common practice among Catholics to castrate a certain number of boys that they might retain the beautiful tenor voices of childhood and youth, for the contrasted boy's voice never changes, and he can always sing high tenor. But when Gregory came into power he put a stop to this practice, and gave the churches to understand that if they wanted tenor or soprano voices in the churches they must let women help to do the singing. Before that time women were not allowed to sing in their churches. Now, will Dr. Shelp tell us why castrating boys prevents the changing of their voices and does not arrest the growth of their big toes?

The castrated boy becomes larger than he would have been otherwise. The horse, the dog, the cock, all grow larger, but the vim, the fire, the courage are gone. No sportsman ever goes forth cock-fighting with a capon under his arm. The bull can master a field full of oxen. I wish, Messrs. Editors, I possessed the skill to present your readers with a true illustration of a game cock, in all his pride and glory, and compare it with the capon. We are also told by Dr. Shelp that "capon made the best mothers for the chicks." But would capons make "the best mothers" if they had not been mutilated until self-respect, courage, and vim had been driven out of them? The ox is not as good-looking as the bull. He always looks ashamed of himself, while he is not more useful in the yoke; neither can he pull as heavy a load as the bull when properly broken. The stallion, even, is as docile as a gelding when properly broken and not used for procreation.

If castration is to be done, let it be in the most humane manner and at the most suitable age, which I still maintain is at a year or two old for the colt. The injury of performing this operation too early does not consist entirely of the non-development of the yard and sheath, thereby causing fobbling and wetting of the legs; but it should be remembered that the inguinal rings in a colt three or four months old are weak and liable to give way from slight injuries, and being still rather relaxed by castration and the pressure of the intestines upon them, the result is rupture and frequent deaths.

One of the choicest colts I ever bred was castrated at four months of age with an ecraseur, and for aught we know the operation was properly accomplished; yet, notwithstanding, irreducible hernia supervened, resulting in death. Hydrocele can never occur in a castrated animal, no matter by what method the operation was performed.

I am surprised that a man acquainted with modern antiseptics should recommend hen's oil as a means to cleanse a foul horse. If the oil is old, it is very liable to be rancid; if not, it very soon becomes so when applied. I would suggest that mildly carbolyzed vaseline is far preferable to hen's oil, and will not become rancid.—J. J. MILLER, M. D. in Dunton's Spirit.

by Euclid, Lida Stanhope second and Clomel third. Only six horses started and Monitor was a poor fifth. American Derby Bets.

CHICAGO, March 20.—In the course of the last ten days there has been no abatement in the average of business over the American Derby, and some very heavy and important transactions have been recorded in the Ullman-Echerr-O'Neill $30,000 book. Friday a well-known Eastern man put $500 on the Duke of Beaufort's colt, Son of a Gun, $400 straight and $100 to run first, second or third, it being in some respects the most significant. The Reaper has been backed to the full extent of the book, and "full" is now written against his name.

A number of the bets listed recently have come straight from owners or persons acting as agents for owners, and as near as can be ascertained G. W. Johnson, Sir Francis, Don Alonzo, Aldebaran Cadmus, Dare, Buck McCann, Calhoun, Clifford, Floodgate, Fidelia, Wormser, Pansy, Northwestern, Major Dripps, Monowai, Ingomar, Hasty, Hush Penny, Green Hock, Tobe Bell, George W., Plutus, Enthusiast, Francis Pope, San Francisco, Spartan, The Reaper, Tero, Perdition, Walnut, Fitzsimmons, Ramapo, Son of a Gun and Turquoise have been backed by their owners.

The leading wagers since the last quotations were as follows: $20,000 to $400 against Son of a Gun; $15,000 to $100 Turquoise; $5,000 to $200 The Reaper; $6,000 to $100 Aldebaran; $6,000 to $15 Antrim; $10,000 to $100 Buck McCann; $2,100 to $35 Clifford; $1,000 to $10 Calhoun; $1,000 to $10 Don Alonzo; $2,500 to $50 Fidelia; $2,000 to $20 Enthusiast; $2,500 to $50 Green Hock; $1,600 to $200 G. W. Johnson; $2,000 to $100 Hush Penny; $5,000 to $50 Hasty; $3,000 to $50 Ingomar; $3,000 to $1,000 Lookout; $2,000 to $20 Northwestern; $1,000 to $100 Sir Francis; $1,000 to $100 Son of a Gun; $10,000 to $50 Tom Reed; $3,000 to $10 John O'Meara; $2,000 to $20 Joanna; $20,000 to $100 Corduroy; $10,000 to $100 Wormser; $3,000 to $100 St. Croix; $15,000 to $10 Qundora King; $10,000 to $100 Plutus; $12,000 to $20 Decapod; $6,000 to $10 Lady Belmont, and $5,000 to $50 Governor Forsaker.

One odd feature of the wagering so far done is that no backing has yet cropped up for Lady Violet. She was easily the best filly of last year, and in her greatest race gave Sir Francis twenty pounds and a handy beating, and in the same race beat Don Alonzo and Helen Nichols.

COLE'S OSSIDINE

An Infallible Cure FOR CURB

Results obtained at KALAMAZOO FARM. THE WELL-KNOWN

Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Spring Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone, and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used.

Very respectfully yours,
S. A. BROWNE & CO., Prop'rs.
Kalamazoo, Mich.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrecence is so palpably reduced that even the sceptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that will remove a Bone Spavin after it has become ossified.

Put up in one style only. Price, $3.00 per bottle.

SIMPLE, YET A PERFECT SUCCESS.

FULL LENGTH 24 INCHES.

DR. CANADAY'S IMPREGNATOR.

Especially adapted to hard breeders, but indispensable to every stock man. Saves time, annoys "opening" and practically insures. Cost of instrument saved every time it is used. Thoroughly tested last season in hundreds of cases. Every one satisfactory. With this instrument two or more mares can be impregnated with one service of horse, thereby saving his vitality.

Cambridge City, Ind., October 21, 1892.—This is to certify that I have used Dr. Canaday's Impregnator with great success on mares which no stallion could have got in foal. I consider it a great help for valuable stallions, as well as for owners of mares.—Chas. Koblheiler.

N. B.—Beware of Infringement. This is the original, and all imitations and infringements will be prosecuted as soon as patent is allowed. Parties purchasing no infringement do so at their own risk, as they are equally liable to prosecution in using them.

Price $10, sent by mail prepaid to any part of the United States and Canada on receipt of price. Send money by draft, money order or registered letter. The money must accompany the order to receive attention. Sent C. O. D. by express when preferred.

Nutwood Boy.

SIRE BY NUTWOOD, 2:18 3-4.

Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/4 hands high, and weighs 1125 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest living likeness to his celebrated sire, Nutwood, of any stallion in California. First dam Kitty Parkhurst, by Goldfinder, he by Imp. Belshazzar; second dam Old Kate, by Grey Beard, grand son of Imp. Messenger. Nutwood Boy's opportunity in the stud has been of the most limited description. He is the sire of comparatively very few colts; several of his oldest are, however, showing speed enough to be candidates for the 2:30 list this season. He is a square, level-gaited trotter, and with only five weeks track work a year ago, trotted a trial in 2:28; last half in 1:18. After his stud season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "fall circuit" and gaining him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $3 per month. Mares will be carefully handled, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

WILL BE ALLOWED TO SERVE FIFTEEN MARES OF APPROVED BREEDING. FER $75 Season commences February 1st and ends June 1st, 1893. Other conditions same as Silver Bow.

DESCRIPTION—Dark bay; 15 1/2 bands; foaled 1890. Fine head and neck well set on to strong pair of shoulders; fine mane and tail, good legs and feet. I consider him worthy of his royal breeding. He was not broken until August 15th, 1892, as I bought him at Lexington, Ky., and was unable to get him shipped out sooner. He already shows himself to be a trotter. His gait is faultless, and he can show speed enough already to make me think him a trotter. I think I could easily put him in the list if I wanted to this season, but no "tin-up" record for me, as I raise horses to win money with. His breeding needs no comment from me, and I will allow you to be the judge. Address all communications to P. J. WILLIAMS, Milpitas.

COLTS FOR SALE

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/4 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:03 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:03.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samne Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darebin). He stands 15.3 hands on steady legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong back, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darebin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Anstralia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeres (by The Peer, sire of Darebin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Canfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, far apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeres produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caractacus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorions, a most successful Anstralian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid racehorses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

His gait is perfection, and his races during his short career on the track fully demonstrate the same qualities which he possesses. His breeding cannot be surpassed. He is the only son of Director out of an Electioneer mare standing for service. Of his sire, can any more praise be said than that his sons and daughters prove more seasonal every year, and the races won by Director, Evangeline, Direct, Margaret S. and the rest stamp him as one of the most potent sires. Waldstein's dam is by the immortal Electioneer out of sister (dam of Albert W., 2:29, the sire of Little Albert, 2:10 1/4, the sold in color and very strongly built). Waldstein has four yearlings that have records: one has a record of 2:21 1/4, another 2:35, another 2:36 and the other 3:38. All six colts are natural trotters, perfect in form, bred in color and very strongly built. Waldstein cannot help being one of the greatest of sires. To the student of breeding, conformation and quality he fits the ideal. SERVICE FEE, $60 (with usual return privilege), for the season commencing February 1st and ending June 15th. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes, but the best of care taken of mares. Address H. S. HOTCHKISS, Woodland, Cal.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

Stallion Ringwood,

The Famous Son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney in formation more than any of his sons. He is a pure-gaited trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he showed trials of speed in 2:18 1/4 as a four-year-old, and would have received a record of 2:18 or better but for an accident at the Napa track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dashaway (thoroughbred), he by Williamson's Belmont, he by American Boy; second dam Funny Cob, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

Training

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters. Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relation for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that not only capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

FOURTH DAY—FRIDAY, APRIL 7.

SOMETIMES there is an out-and-out "off day" with men, and just so with horses. This was one of them. The entries were meager, the quality not of the best in most of the events, while the track was as slow as the mills of the gods, and had a good deal more mud about it. The attendance, however, was exceedingly encouraging, about 2,000 braving the threatening weather. Charger was favorite over the field of three opposing him, and when he finished a had last the judges called Jockey Thad Williams to the stand and asked him why this was thus, and wound up by suspending him for an indefinite period. While it did look strange that Charger should one day defeat as good a field as the one he met to-day comparatively easy, Williams should be given a fair trial, in view of the fact that he is an excellent rider and that his reputation has been very good for honesty. We do not agree with one of the local writers that Williams was a notoriously crooked rider, for, if he was, such a man as Marcus Daly would certainly have not employed him for several years. If Williams was guilty of "pulling" the horse, he should be punished, but if Charger was "off" or was "fixed" in the stable, the jockey should not be made to suffer. Charger got away in front, but went back so fast that it looked as if something was wrong with him, and if a pull was made it was certainly a barefaced one and deserved ruling off for life. The successful owners to-day were George Van Gorden (whose horses won two races), W. A. Gibson, B. C. Holly and Charles Boots. Morris, a new jockey to San Franciscans, distinguished himself by riding the winners, Atticus and Motto, and his ride on the latter was something that will be remembered by lovers of clever horsemanship for many a day. The faint-hearted daughter of Sir Modred was nursed along to a victory that no one expected her to achieve, after being almost collared soon after entering the homestretch by Conde and Topgallant. Morris did not once strike her with his bat, but rode as fine a finish with hands and feet as any one ever saw in San Francisco. Atticus made one of the swiftest moves in the last sixteenth of a mile that local race-goers were ever treated to, and so fast did he appear to be going that the others apparently were all but paralyzed. Revolver beat Swifsure handsily, but a little later on we shall expect to see Archibald's colt make it warm for Revolver or anything else out this way. Conde surprised his friends by his close finish with Motto, and will in all likelihood be a hard horse to beat in any race up to seven furlongs before many days. Sir Walter, with top weight up, indulged Garcia with the lead to the homestretch, where he came on and won, running like a wild horse, by three lengths from Revolver, who was foolishly made a favorite over the field, for what reason, though, it would be hard to explain, for Sir Walter had certainly performed much better than the Joe Daniels gelding. Joe Narvaez, Miller and Rinstein rode one winner apiece to-day, and the former is doing much to regain his lost prestige.

THE DAY'S RACING.

Charger opened at even money, but was plunged on so hard that he went to 7 to 10 at the close. Currency, with Joe Narvaez for a pilot, had lots of friends, however, and Stoneman was nibbled at. The flag fell with Charger in front half a length, Little Tough second, Stoneman third and Currency last. Charger was passed by both Currency and Little Tough nearing the half-pole, at which point the last-named were head-and-head. Soon after passing the half-pole old Stoneman commenced to gain, and going around the turn into the homestretch so well was he going that a shout went up that the old gray was going to get all the money. At this point Charger was absolutely last. Once in the straight Stoneman went up to Currency as if he meant to dispose of him easily. Then a beautiful finish was seen; and excitement was worked up to a great pitch. In the last three strides Currency, nose-and nose with old Stoneman, was given a couple of stinging cuts with the whip, and he responded gallantly, winning by the scantest of noses, with Little Tough two lengths away and Charger a bad last. Time, 1:19½. Williams, who rode Charger, was called into the judges' stand and questioned, and later was suspended indefinitely.

Atticus was favorite at 7 to 10 over his two rivals, Ovation (formerly Hattie Ball filly) and the much-fancied and touted Brutus-Beauty colt. Ovation led the Beauty colt over a length to the last turn, Atticus lying away three lengths back of him and apparently out of it. The Beauty colt now showed that he had speed, for a moment looking a winner and entering the homestretch half a length in advance of Ovation, Atticus still as far in the background as before. A trifle over a sixteenth from home the favorite commenced his run, and got through one of the narrowest openings, against the pole, imaginable. When he did get through his opponents appear to have stopped, for in less than a sixteenth of a mile he not only passed the others, but went on and won by three lengths. The Beauty colt shut up badly, allowing Ovation to come up and win the place money by two lengths. Time, 1:06. After this race many expressed the opinion that Atticus would make it decidedly sultry for the Bonnie Jean colt at six furlongs.

The third race, fifteen-sixteenths of a mile, had but two starters—Swifsure and Revolver. The latter was at 1 to 10, Swifsure at 3 to 1. Revolver indulged Swifsure with the lead to the extent of about a length until about 100 yards of the wire, when the Joe Daniels gelding was turned loose, and won handsily by half a length in 1:40—a very slow affair.

Topgallant was at 4 to 5 in the fourth race, six furlongs, Motto going at from 2 to 1 to 3 to 1, 2½ to 1 at the post. Red Cloud was strongly tipped, while a few nibbled at the chances of Charmer. The flag dropped with Jackson half a length in front, Motto second and Charmer third, Topgallant, Conde and Red Cloud following in a bunch and Sir Gordon practically left at the post. Motto passed Jackson about 100 yards from the start, and Conde ran up rapidly from fifth place, and was second, but a little over a length from the flying Motto passing the half, Topgallant third, close up, Charmer over a length behind. Nearing the three-quarters Conde and Topgallant both moved up on Motto, and the latter led Conde into the homestretch only half a length, Topgallant nearly a length away from the Encino Stable's colt. Everyone at all posted expected Conde and Topgallant to "run over the top" of Motto, but, contrary to the general rule, neither bat nor spurs were plied to the mare, and Morris was urging her with voice, hands and feet. Conde, gamely fighting, could never get up, and in a finish that will linger in the memories of those who saw it for many months, Motto passed under the wire a winner by half a length from Conde, who was a little over a length to the good of Topgallant. Time, 1:18½.

A plunge was now made on Revolver to get even, he going to the post at 4 to 5. Sir Walter, carrying 117 pounds, opened at 2 to 1, went up to 3, at post-time being backed down to 2½ to 1. Garcia was not lacking for friends, with but 103 pounds in the saddle and Sullivan for a pilot. Garcia dashed away in front at the fall of the flag, and led Quarterstaff, last to get away, nearly two lengths at the quarter, Nellie G. being third, lapped on Quarterstaff, Sir Walter over a length behind the gray mare, and Revolver last of all. Sir Walter went through the bunch between the quarter and half, and was within a length and a half of Garcia, Nellie G. still third, at the half-pole. Garcia was indulged with the lead until within an eighth of home, when Sir Walter, running like a wild horse, came away and won easily by three lengths from Revolver, who made his usual good finish, the favorite two favorite two lengths from the fast-fading-away Garcia. Time, 1:54.

FIFTH DAY—SATURDAY, APRIL 8.

The programme offered to-day was an exceptionally good one. Six races contested, and four of them surprises. Over 4,000 persons saw the events, and when the majority of those present headed homeward it was with the old-time, tired feeling, that horse racing is a mighty onerous business. The book-makers went to the oat this afternoon, and the way they pounded out dollars was calculated to rattle the veriest old-timer. How the ladies did turn out, too. At a distance the balcony resembled one huge flower garden, such a profusion of Easter bonnets were there to charm lovers of gentle flora. The weather was snperb, but the track was not exactly nice, being dead and lumpy.

Morton was a well-played favorite, but got off last and finished there. Regal, who when hit and well can do his six furlongs in 1:14½, laid second to Joe Hooker Jr. most of the way, and until the homestretch was reached, then ran away from the Lake-county horse as if he were tied up, winning with ease by four lengths from Little Tough, who was vigorously ridden down the straight by Jackson, and beat Mackey out for the place by a couple of lengths. The Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt, asked to carry no penalty, won the two-year-old race rather easily, but Agitato, ridden by Morris, came through at a great pace in the straight, and proved himself a fine colt, as did The Lark just at the finish. It was the Bonnie Jean colt's fourth consecutive win this season. Sir Walter, by taki 123 pounds and defeating such good ones as Martinet, Hermitage and Almont, showed that it will take a real crackerjack to beat him at any distance over a mile at even weights. Martinet was, in our opinion, made rather too much use of too early in the engagement, and when it came to a hard finish he had little left. Sir Walter did not win easily—in fact, was all out—and had Martinet laid along with Sir Walter, or even back in the bunch, he might have beaten Mr. Boots' honest bay horse. Almont, too, seemed to have the foot of the entire party, and had he a more desperate finisher on his back than Rafour or had the horse been taken out in front, he would have been in a hard one to catch this day.

Green Hock, the handsome American Derby candidate in B. C. Holly's string, made a very poor showing in the six-furlong race, where nothing but three-year-olds contested, Wyanshott, a 15 to 1 shot, winning, with a 10-to-1-er, Steadfast, in the place. Green Hock went up like a shot for a time, then fell back again, and it may be he was a trifle short of work. This colt is such a good-looker that it is hard to see how he can fail to be a crackerjack, and rumors were in circulation some weeks ago that he was at least the equal of anything in the Holly string. That he will do better when he gets used to running in company, in races, we do not doubt.

Bronco got the best of the start by a considerable margin in the fifth race, seven furlongs, and led to the homestretch, where Belfast (whom Col. Dan Burns had played for "a killing") came through and won with ridiculous ease, to the astonishment of about 99 persons out of every 100. Wicklow got the place, about three-quarters of a length from the heavily-weighted El Rayo, who is pretty close to a race about this time. Dr. Ross was again badly left at the post.

Lodi, a slight favorite, made a great finish, after running last to the homestretch, and won from the tiring Lucy S. and Joe like a sure-enough race horse.

THE DAY'S RACING.

Morton, with Sullivan up, was a well-played favorite in the first event, six furlongs, selling, but Regal also had a host of friends. Miskey had Joe Narvaez for a pilot, and was played not a little, and Mero's chances were not despised. Joe Hooker Jr. got away slightly in advance of Regal, and held his advantage on suzerainty to the homestretch, where Regal was given his head, and came away in grand style, winning easily by four lengths. Little Tough, fourth into the straight, came up well under Jackson's vigorous riding, and landed the place money by two lengths, Mackey quitting badly in the last eighth and just managing to finish third. Morton, the favorite, was absolutely last under the wire. Time, 1:17.

The Bonnie Jean colt was a favorite at 1 to 5 in the second race, four and a half furlongs, for two-year-olds, he carrying no penalty. Claire led to the homestretch, with the much-touted Valencia second for nearly a quarter of a mile. Once in the straight the favorite drew away, and won handily by two lengths. Agitato, fourth into the homestretch, made a fine rush at the wind-up, and secured the place, half a length from The Lark, who came also like a whirlwind at the end. Valencia was fourth. Time, 0:56.

Martinet, at 2 to 1, was a favorite for the special handicap, mile and an eighth, but a large amount of money went into the ring on Almont and Sir Walter. There was considerable kicking up at the post, Martinet getting in a hard one on Grandee, and the latter taking his revenge out on Sir Walter. The flag fell to a splendid start, and Raindrop led the way by a neck, with Martinet second and Grandee third. Passing the stand Grandee went to the fore, closely attended by Sheridan and Mariquet, Sir Walter fourth. Martinet was shoved along by Morris, and led Sheridan three-quarters of a length as they swung by the half-pole, Sir Walter third, and being ridden hard by Miller. At the three-quarters they had not headed Martinet, nor into the straight, and Miller had gone to the bat and was urging the game son of game Nathan Coombs with hands and feet and encouraging tones. A little less than an eighth from home, and it was evident Martinet was tiring, but was still game. Sir Walter had very few speed links left himself, and Almont was running back third with lots to spare, apparently. On they came, Martinet and Sir Walter heads apart. Three strides from the finish Miller is beating a merry tattoo and riding with all the determination he is possessed of. Sir Walter makes a final effort. Martinet is unable to respond to the call of Morris. Amid intense excitement Sir Walter sticks out his neck as he is fairly lifted under the wire, and for the fifth consecutive time Mr. Boots' horse is a winner—this time, by but a neck—but just as safe as if it were half a dozen lengths. Two lengths away was Almont. Time, 1:58.

Now came a shock to the talent. B. C. Holly had two in the fourth race, six furlongs—Green Hock and Sidney—and declared to win with Sidney. Green Hock was naturally touted as he was, a hot favorite, and it did look a lay-down for him to win. Reta was well played at 2 to 1, and a strong tip was out on Timbuctoo. Ichi Ban led the way, attended by Steadfast and Wyanshott. Sidney was fourth. Between the half and three-quarters Green Hock made a bold move, but fell back again a moment later. Once in the stretch Wyanshott moved up, and came away in the final sixteenth like a sure-enough race horse, to the surprise of nearly every one, winning by two lengths from another surpriser, Steadfast, who beat Ichi Ban three parts of a length for place. Time, 1:18.

Wyanshott's win was not more surprising than the victory of Belfast in the fifth race to most people, though Col. Burns and a few others are said to have cut a large slice off the rolls of the hookies by the win of the maiden from Missouri in Murry's stable. Bronco was at all times a favorite, though there was a strange turn in the odds against El Rayo, who opened at 8 to 5 and went to the post at 8 to 1. Belfast opened at 15 and was backed down to 6 and 8. Bronco got by far the best of a start, and was, besides, well under way when the flag fell. Dr. Ross was almost left. Bronco led Wicklow and El Rayo until nearing the three-quarter pole, when Belfast commenced to gain on everything at an astonishing rate, and, when called upon in the homestretch, came away and won in a romp by a length and a half. Wicklow gave El Rayo the go-by in the last 75 yards, and landed the place money by three parts of a length. Bronco finished absolutely last. Time, 1:30—a fast race on such a track.

Joe and Lucy S. were well played in the last race, six furlongs, but a mighty plunge on Lodi made him a slight favorite at the close. Joe and Lucy S. had it hammer-and-tongs all the way to the homestretch, Sidney, Nipper, Joe Winters and Lodi following in the order named. Coming around the turn into the straight young Turbinville commenced urging Lodi vigorously, and that horse responded so well that he got up on even terms thirty yards from the wire, and then won by half a length, Lucy S. second, a neck from Joe. Time, 1:17.

SIXTH DAY—TUESDAY, APRIL 11.

This was an out-and-out April day, with its sunshine and its showers, and there was a surfeit of the latter. Notwithstanding the rain, there could not have been present less than 2,000 persons, and no doubt the California Stakes was the principal magnet. The association for the first time provided white, numbered saddle cloths, similar to those worn by horses in far-away Kangaroo land, and the innovation is regarded in such a favorable light that it will doubtless be adopted by not only the Blood Horse Association, but racing organizations in all sections of this country. A number of the formerly boycotted bookmakers transacted business at the track to-day, showing that the Blood Horse folks saw the folly of making fish of one firm and fowl of another.

Six events were on the card, and favorites passed the wire first in four of them. The non-favorites that fooled the talent were Gypsy Girl, who won with odds of 15 to 1 against her chances at the post, and Revolver, who at one time was at 10 to 1 in some books. Gypsy Girl had top weight, 124 pounds, and won all the way, Ida Glenn and Stoneman moving up like cyclones at the end, forcing the daughter of Little Alp to extend herself to the utmost in order to win by a neck. Martinet's victory was an easy one. He waited on Wicklow until the homestretch was reached, then came away with ease and won by three lengths.

Flirtation getting away second in the California Stakes, had her nose in front at the three-quarters, where she began to leave Quirt. The Duke of Norfolk—Neilson colt, a maiden that just arrived from the Capital City last night, came out of the bunch, and Miller was forced to ride the favorite hard most of the way down the homestretch in order to land his mount a safe winner. The much-touted Normandie showed up poorly, but Thornhill, the heavy-backed, blaze-faced colt in Murry's string, getting off seventh, ran up well around the turn and down the homestretch, finishing fourth. The time made by Flirtation, 0:49, on a track at least three seconds slow to the mile, or equal to 0:48, on a good course, shows her to be a high-class stake filly, and she will be a hard one to beat in any man's country, especially when the track is heavy. "A Wildidle for the mud" is an old California axiom, and when that Wildidle has for a mother such a producer of winners as imp. Flirt (dam of Gorgo and Flambeau), who is sister to Friar Tuck, it will take a real crackerjack to head her. The Neilson colt ran a great race, too, especially when it is considered that he never faced a starter in his life previous to this, and had a Miller been up on this fellow and got off well on the strong-looking one-eyed colt we would have seen "a boss-race" beyond peradventure.

Revolver laid third to the homestretch, behind Garcia and Sheridan, and then won in a romp from the quitting Schwartz gelding by about a length. The Ariola colt, plugged from 3 to 1 to 4 to 5 at the post, got off second, behind Rhodanthe, and just did win by a short neck from the game, fast-coming Hyder Ali filly in Mr. Macdonogh's stable, Rosalie. Jennie Deane got away tenth and last, and came like a shot in the straight, securing third place. She should win a race ere long. The fourth and one-half furlongs, run in 0:55, marks a remarkable performance, condition of track considered.

Crawford, the favorite, ran second to Joe D. to the homestretch, and then won handily by a neck from the flying Orta and Velita, heads apart.

DESCRIPTION OF THE RACES.

Tigress was played with all kinds of money in the first event, five furlongs, selling, forcing the odds from 4 to 1 to 2. Strong tips were out on Mountain Boy, Ida Glenn and Joe Hooker Jr. and they were strongly supported, while at the last moment the stable money went in on Gypsy Girl, who was at 25 to 1 at one time, 15 to 1 at the post. Mackey was first away, with Gypsy Girl at his neck, and Jack the Ripper lapped on her. Gypsy Girl went to the front at the half-pole, led into the homestretch by two lengths, and then had all she could do to win by a neck from the fast-coming Ida Glenn, Stoneman third, half a length behind the little Miller mare. The favorite, Tigress, was fourth. Time, 1:02—a surprisingly fast run.

Martinet was a warm favorite in the second race, one mile. Wicklow was plucked on by Col. Burns and others as 2 to 1, while Vendome, Clacquer and Swiftsure were at anywhere from 20 to 25 to 1, and neglected at that. Wicklow led until nearing the quarter-pole, where Clacquer got his head in front. Then Wicklow pulled away again, leading Clacquer a length at the half, Martinet a length behind Johnny Appleby's entry. Wicklow came into the homestretch but a head in front of the favorite, and the race was practically settled in favor of Martinet, who came away with great ease and won by three lengths from Wicklow, who was as far from Clacquer. The latter had a hot fight with Vendome for third place, landing but a head in front of the brother to Last Chance. Time, 1:45.

The event of the day, and one of the attractions of the meeting (the run for the California Stakes) followed. Flirtation was for a second or two as good as even money, then went down to 1 to 2, then up to 3 to 5, loads of money going in on the handsome sister to Flambeau. Thornhill opened at 8 to 1, but coin in bundles coming in from all quarters, he went to the post at 3 to 1. Quirt had her moneyed friends, while there was a torrid tip out on Normandie, the Kyrle Daly-Extract filly, that had arrived from Sacramento on Monday night. The Duke of Norfolk—Neilson colt had a few admirers, while Claire, Jovita and Mutineer went to the post practically unbacked. In the warming-up the Neilson colt and Flirtation showed to splendid advantage, while Thornhill looked greatly improved. When the blankets were removed and they paraded before the stand Flirtation, looking as strong as a lioness, her bay coat shining, and the favorite jockey, Miller, up, came in for most of the admiration. Normandie looked substantial and muscular, while the rangy, white-faced Quirt appeared as fit as the proverbial fiddle. Jovita is a trim-built little bay racing craft, with black points, and a sister to the winner of the stake last season—Castro. The Neilson colt, a bright chestnut, looked big and handsome as he came out with the plaid colors of Ramsdell and little Sullivan in the saddle. Claire is a very pretty, rangy chestnut filly, while Thornhill, with his white face and four white feet, attracted no little attention. Mutineer, a racy-looking chestnut colt, also by imp. Cheviot, made up the field of eight that gave Starter Ferguson a world of trouble at the post. Claire and Quirt were the chief source of annoyance at the starting point, either dashing away in front or holding back to spoil a good send-off.

Normandie, too, was fractious, unruly and prominent in most of the breakaways. At length, after perhaps a fifteen-minute wait, the flag fell to a fairly well-bunched start. Quirt, ever quick at the start, is first to show, with Flirtation at her neck, Jovita next, then Claire, Neilson colt, Normandie, Thornhill and Mutineer, in the order named. Quirt holds her advantage for perhaps 200 yards, when Miller, already at work on Flirtation, shoves his mount's head in front. Coming around the turn into the homestretch the Neilson colt has worked up from fifth place to third, and is coming in such a sweeping stride that Miller is alarmed and call into play everything he knows in the way of jockeyship. Next to last is Thornhill, coming at a rare pace around that turn into the straight track. Flirtation is kept at her work, and only once does she falter—about a sixteenth from home. But she is too far ahead to be caught, and the pace is beginning to tell on Quirt. The Neilson colt snatches the place away from Quirt at the drawgate, and Flirtation is a winner by two lengths from the Neilson colt, slowly crawling up on the favorite all the way down the straight. Two lengths behind the Ramsdell entry, and third, is the tiring Quirt, and a trifle over a length in the rear of her Thornhill, fourth. Then follow, strung out, in the order named, Claire, Jovita, Normandie and Mutineer. Time, 0:49—a wonderful run on a track three seconds slow, at least, to the mile. While the field was almost as well-bunched as it was possible to get one in this race at the start, the need of a standing start was never better shown than in this race, for undoubtedly several of the youngsters were not fairly on their stride when the flag swished.

THE STAKE WINNER.

Flirtation, the California Stake winner, is a strapping bay filly, standing about 15.2 hands, a bay, with star in forehead, near hind coronet white, foaled February 2, 1891, bred and owned by Senator Leland Stanford, and leased of that gentleman by Thomas H. Williams, Jr. Flirtation is by Wildidle (by imp. Australian, and sire of Flambeau, Nomad, Wild-

Metropolitan Trotting Topics.

Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

NEW YORK, April 5, 1893.—The only Splan and his estimable wife returned to these shores on last Saturday and on Monday departed for their home in Cleveland, Ohio. I had the pleasure of spending a few hours with them and learning much of the customs of the Austrians that should interest your readers. "As horsemen, the Austrians far exceed us," said Mr. Splan, "and a gentleman there that drives will equal in skill our professional drivers."

To quote Mr. Splan's ideas without giving his exact words, I may say everything pertaining to horse matters in Austria, is done with much more thoroughness than here. A gentleman will go with a professional hackman and learn driving paying for his tuition. Every one drives at a breakneck pace and it is an inspiring sight to witness the throng in the Park, everything from a six-in-hand to a single trap going as if pursued by the evil one. It requires dexterity to drive as they do and keep clear from accidents.

The track of the Vienna Trotting Association is located but a few moments walk from the heart of the city and the drive to it is a magnificent one through the Park. Here a long line of officers stand in the center of the driveway and two throngs of carriages move swiftly in opposite directions while a bridge path on either side accommodates the devotees of the saddle and the sidewalks are thronged with spectators. From Mr. Splan's description it is such a drive as we should have in New York.

As an example of the high average of horseflesh used in Vienna, Mr. Splan said that the hackman patronized by the guests of the hotel where the Americans stopped, drove a pair of horses that could draw the carriage a mile in 2:50, and the type of driving horse in demand there is a large, handsome animal, with bone and substance that can draw a heavy trap from a 2:35 clip to a 2:50 gait. Speed alone cuts no figure, and a homely horse is not tolerated. "I did not see a horse in Vienna wearing a check-rein," said Mr. Splan, "nor did I see a horse with a curb; in fact, unsoundness of any kind is the exception, and as for legs and feet—well, the roads are as hard as stone, and every one drives at top speed, rain or shine, mud or dust." The small percentage of unsoundness is due to the fact that everything in breeding is controlled and regulated by the government. No man can advertise or stand a stallion without a license issued by a duly appointed officer, and the examination before the license is granted is strict. This shuts out unsound, undesirable horses, and prevents reproducing the defect.

Mr. Ketcham sold three horses to the Austrian Government, these being Brown, 2:13½, and two young horses bred at Dreamland Farm, Leroy, N. Y., the price received for the three being $11,000. This transaction alone insured the party against loss on the venture. The balance of the horses were sold by public sale and brought satisfactory prices. The stallions were placed in charge of the Vienna Trotting Association and sent into nearby interior localities, with a moderate service fee to encourage breeders and prevent any monopoly or discrimination. Brown just filled the demand for a stock horse, and any private individual could have placed his fee at a good round sum and have secured a liberal patronage. It is the policy of the Government, however, to extend the greatest good to the greatest number. Prince Warwick, the young horse purchased last year from Orrin Hickok, is very popular, and every horse of that type placed abroad does much to help the standing of the American trotter.

It is a mistaken idea, however, to suppose that our horses outrank those in Europe or at least in Austria. Mr. Splan says that we are far in the rear. The Austrians will excel us in breeding road horses in five years," said Mr. Splan, "but I question if they ever produce a 2:04 trotter. Speed alone is of little value to them; they want useful horses. I became so thoroughly conversant with the different types," continued he "that I could almost tell at a glance what particular work a horse was designed for. They breed and train, or educate there for a special purpose and even the tram or street car horses are a distinct type easily recognizable. Then, again, they spend a long time in educating a horse to the work for which he is designed and in this way a high degree of excellence is reached in every type."

The Americans were very kindly received by such prominent men as Count Kalman Hunyady, President of the Trotting Association, Count Charles Esterhazy, a prominent breeder and a man of large wealth, Dominick Graff Herdeg and others. Both Mr. Ketcham and Mr. Splan were presented with medals and shown many special honors. Mr. Splan is especially proud of his gold medal and why should he not be? It is a token of recognition that any man might feel proud to win. The accompanying parchment reads:

THE VIENNA TROTTING ASSOCIATION.

Mr. John Splan, of Cleveland, O., U. S. A., for his services in encouraging trotting sport and for his valuable assistance in forwarding the purposes of the Vienna Trotting Association, is hereby awarded the Gold Medal.

(Signed) COUNT KALMAN HUNYADY, Field Marshal Lieutenant, President of Vienna Trotting Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Splan left Vienna on March 19th, it being the twentieth anniversary of their wedding day, and the event was not overlooked by the friends formed during their stay at the Austrian capital. Many of the kind expressions of regard and wishes for future happiness will long be cherished by "Little Splan."

Mr. Ketcham and his wife are still in Europe, and will remain for several months enjoying a trip of the Continent, also Ireland. That the trip as a business venture has been successful is cause for congratulation, but the experience gained may be summed up in one remark Mr. Splan made: "If I should collect another lot to take over, the best I could find would not be any too good."

Notes From Vina.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

VINA, Cal., April 8.—It is some time since I sent you any news of our horses at Vina. We have a lot of good horses for the races this year, good-lookers and trotters. We will have an entry from every class, and I feel satisfied the horse or colt that wins in the Northern Circuit this year will have to go some.

The weather here has not been all one could wish, and as a result we have not been able to give the colts much work however, they have developed well and show plenty of trot; everything considered we can show as fine a lot of youngsters as any stock farm on the Coast.

They have thrown up the turns of the Chico track and made improvements which will make it one of the fastest tracks in the State (regulation); so look out for fast races through the Circuit this fall.

Barney Simpson has Mr. McIntosh's horses looking fine at Chico, and expects to make them go some when the bell taps.

Jim Lindon has a string of trotters at the Chico track, and is rather sweet on a four-year-old filly by Monroe Chief, that could show lots of trot last fall, besides some other good ones in his string.

Arthur Mount has a string at Red Bluff, among them the three-year-old colt Escort, that showed his ability to trot close to 2:30 last fall.

I might mention that Mr. McIntosh has just completed a three-quarter mile kite track at Chico. "CHICO."

The Portland Horse Show.

Portland's first horse show opened to a large and enthusiastic crowd at the Riding Academy, Monday evening, April 3d. While the weather has been anything but desirable for a large display of outside horses, the show surpassed the expectation of everyone, and a finer display of saddle horses and stallions has never been witnessed in Portland, and if anyone thinks the spirit of admiration of our most noble animal is lost to the people of this city a visit to this show would remove all doubt, for a more enthusiastic gathering never met in our fair city.

The opening address of Dr. J. W. Hill, of Bishop Scott Academy, paid an eloquent tribute to the horse as a man's truest friend, and his general usefulness to healthful, outdoor exercise.

Fred G. Englehardt, as master of ceremonies, acquitted himself with all due honor.

The first on the programme was the exhibition of two-year-old stallions, in which R. R. Morrill entered Hassalo, by Altamont, dam Timosa, by Almont Rattler. Wm. Kerr, on chestnut colt by Tom V., dam by Hambletonian Mambrino, and chestnut colt by Tom V. The first prize was awarded to Hassalo, and second and third to Tom V. colts.

Wm. Kerron's three-year-old colt by Tom V. was awarded first prize as a three-year-old.

The next event was the exhibition of gentlemen's saddle horses—conformation, manner and style of going at the walk, trot and gallop were the points. There were entered J. W., by J. W. Hill; Q. iro, by W. J. Burns; Dick, by Geo. Goode; Rats, by I. L. White; Dandy, by Col. Beebe; Dolly, by A. K. Veltou; Harry, by Joe Liebman; David, by Capt. Symons; Dude, by Y. N. Hughes; Pomeroy, by H. J. Green; Magee, by E. House; Cocett, by Lee Hoffman. The judges on saddle horse performance—Messrs. Major Jackson, Carl Spuhn and W. E. King—were compelled to devote considerable time in making their decision, for the horses were all quite evenly matched in their different performances, and made a most magnificent showing as they pranced around the ring in single file. Dude was awarded 1st, Dick 2, and Cocett 3d, prizes.

The next event—being the best performance over regular hurdles (horses ridden by ladies), George, ridden by Miss C. L. Wilson; Joe, by Miss S. H. Lewis; Lady Gray, by Mrs. Buffum; Rosebud, by Miss L. H. Hawthorne—was quite exciting throughout, and the ladies deserve a great deal of credit for their acquired skill in equestrianism. Miss Lewis was awarded 1st, Miss Hawthorne 2d and Miss Wilson 3d prize.

Mrs. Dihan exhibited Caprice, a beautiful Challenger mare, in fancy riding, showing the great intelligence of the mare to the satisfaction of all present.

The tandem riding by Captain and Mrs. Dilhan was greatly applauded, and the entertainment closed for the evening with the wrestling match on horseback between Messrs. Green and Anderson—Anderson winning the fall.

On the second day the show opened to a larger and more enthusiastic crowd than on the first day—if such a thing is possible. A visit among the stalls and seeing the anxious-looking horses before the ring was opened, was convincing of the entertainment in store for the evening.

The first event being the exhibition of stallions—aged class—Challenger Chief was the first in the ring, where he was paraded, without rein, in style and action equal to an old show horse. Chief was greatly admired by all, and more so by Capt. Dilhan and class, from the fact his favorite saddle horse are Challengers. The next stallion to enter the ring was Colonel B, who performed some very handy tricks under the management of Mr. Beebe. Then came King Patchen, a son of the great and renowned show horse, Mambrino King, who did himself credit on his first appearance before the elite of our fair city. Prince, a Shetland stallion, attracted his share of attention—taking size into consideration. Challenger was awarded first prize for aged stallions, King Patchen for four-year-olds.

The next event was for best ladies' saddle horses, conformation, manner and style of going at the walk, trot and canter. Miss Wilson's George, Miss Lewis' Joe, Mrs. Buffum's Raven, Miss Gild's Lady Gray and Miss Hawthorne's Rosebud were the contestants. Lady Gray was awarded first, Raven second and Rosebud third prize.

Then came gentlemen's saddle horses over hurdles. Dick, by Mr. Goode; J. W., by Mr. Hill; Rats, by Mr. White; Harry, by Mr. Liebman; Pomeroy, by Mr. Green; Mizra, by Mr. Strain; Dude, by Mr. Hughes. Harry was awarded first and J. W. second prize.

The great event of the evening was Capt. Dilhan on his mare Caprice, whose gait on the walk, trot and gallop was perfection. Her fancy steps, forward, backward and side movements at command, shows beyond question the great intelligence of the horse, when properly educated.

A short description of this mare, we think, would not be out of place here. She is a beautiful bay, 15 hands, and will weigh close to 1,000 pounds, having heavy quarters, clean flat bone, a masculine neck, set on a well arched shoulder. She has a perfect head and a large, prominent eye, showing full well her great intelligence. She was sired by Challenger 1064; dam by Cornet; second dam by Veto; third dam by Walnutbark. Capt. Dilhan has had this mare less than one year, and her performance under the saddle is pronounced by all as being equal to the best trained horses in larger cities.

The third and last evening brought out a full house and there was scarcely standing room. The only competition of the evening was the high jump between J. W. and Mizra, which was decided a draw, both jumping 4 ft. 9 in., with men up. The high school class riding was quite exciting throughout, and the show was a decided success in every respect, and we hope to see the seed now sown reap a rich harvest.—Rural Spirit.

B. O. Van Bokkelen's string.—Holmdel, 2:18¾, No. 3290, br s, by Holmes, 2:27½, dam Time Love, by Peacemaker, by Hambletonian 10.

Holmdel is standard-bred and standard by performance. Mr. Van Bokkelen said to our representative: "Holmdel won the Ohio Breeder's Stake in a jog at Cleveland, Ohio, September 13, 1887, obtaining a record of 2:44½. In 1888 he won the Patron Stake for three-year-olds at Cleveland, obtaining a three-year-old record of 2:23½. Two weeks later at Philadelphia he showed a half-mile in public in 1:11. In 1891, four weeks after having been shipped from Montreal to Missoula, Montana, he obtained a record of 2:24½, and in 1892 he won his race, only being out of stud duties three weeks, taking a record in second heat of 2:18¾ and defeating a field of seasoned campaigners. All of Holmdel's performances have been made hitched to an old-fashioned, high-wheel sulky, and in his work has shown a half-mile in 1:04, the last quarter of which was finished in 0:21½. We feel confident that when in condition, hitched to a bike sulky, he will greatly reduce his present record, as he is still a young horse, full of strength and vigor."

P. J. McMANN will not visit the Montana circuit this year, but he has entered his stable of trotters in some of the leading events at Syracuse, Neb., and Council Bluffs, Ia. These tracks have been leased by Messrs. Pyle & Briggs, and their plan of conducting the two meetings is rather unique. The gate receipts will be divided pro rata among the horsemen who enter, and every dollar of the $46,000 guaranteed in purses will be paid as fast as it is won. The experiment will be watched with interest.

Justin Morgan's Sons.

There are only six sons of Justin Morgans of which we have any reliable record. They were Sherman, Bulrush, Woodbury, Revenge, The Fenton Horse and The Hawkins Horse.

Revenge was foaled in 1815 and his dam was called a Narragansett pacer. He passed through many hands and left some good stock. He died suddenly in 1837.

It is said that only one of his colts was kept as a stallion, and this one was owned at Dunham, Canada East, in 1853. He was called "the fastest horse in the neighborhood."

"The Fenton Horse" was foaled in 1808. His dam was an "excellent animal," of unknown breeding. This horse was considered one of the best, if not the best, of Justin Morgan's colts, and resembled him very closely.

He was gelded when he was six years old, because he bit his owner. It is believed that no son of his was kept as a stallion.

"The Hawkins Horse" was foaled in 1806 or 1807. It is not known how his dam was bred; but she was a mare of fine form and excellent action.

This horse was taken to Canada and was lost sight of. He was a black horse, about 15 hands high; a very showy horse, and said to have been the fastest of Justin's six sons.

The three sons of Justin Morgan in which we are the most interested are Sherman, Bulrush and Woodbury, for the reason that they left many descendants and producing sons in New England, which created the Morgan family of horses. They were, without doubt, the best three sons which left descendants.

Sherman was foaled in 1808 or '09, at Lyndon, Vt. Little is known as to the breeding of his dam. Probably the most reliable statement is the one made by George Sherman, the son of James Sherman, who bred and owned Sherman. He says that his father brought the dam of Sherman from Cranston, R. I.; that she was a chestnut, of good size, high spirited and an "elegant animal," and adds, "we called her of Spanish breed." Other accounts state that she was an English mare.

Whether an English thoroughbred or of Andalusian or Spanish blood, she was of Eastern origin, and so of affinity blood to Justin Morgan.

Lindsay, writing in 1856 (from whom we get reliable data of the Morgan horse), says: "Sherman was a chestnut, 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ high and weighed 925 pounds. His off-hind leg was white half way up to the hock, and he had a stripe in the face. His head was clean and well-shaped, ears small and fine, eyes inclined to be small, hot full, prominent and lively. His legs had some long hairs on the back sides, but were broad, flat and sinewy. He had a capital chest, with the breast-bone very prominent, the shoulders were large and well-placed, the neck excellent, the mane and tail full, but not remarkably heavy. His hips long and deep, the loins broad and muscular, but he was a little hollow or "sway-backed;" still, no suspicion of a weak hack could attach to him, or he would have broken down under the rough treatment he received in early life."

Sherman was put to hard work at four years old, and for ten months in the year he had little rest from work. During the winter his owner drove him with his half-brother (by Justin) steadily in a team between Lyndon, Vt., and Portland, Me.

His "little team" became famous at every inn between Lyndon and Portland, for their owner was always ready to match them to draw or run against any team of any size, for a trifling wager; and they were seldom, if ever, beaten.

Such was the kind of work Sherman was put to from the time he was four years old until he was ten.

He stood in many different places in Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, and finally died at Lancaster, N. H., in 1835. He was apparently perfectly well in the morning at ten o'clock, and at one o'clock of the same day he was found dead. He was free from blemish or any kind of infirmity on the morning of the day he died, as he was when he was foaled. Although not so nervous and high tempered as Woodbury, he was more tractable, very spirited, and a rapid driver, with great powers of endurance; and he needed neither whip nor spur.

Woodbury was foaled in 1816, at Tunbridge, Vt. Nothing is now known of his dam's breeding. She came from Bethel Vt., and was five years old when Woodbury was foaled.

She was over 15 hands and weighed about 1,190 pounds, a bay, with black points and a white spot in her forehead. She was rather flat ribbed, but had a good chest, fine shoulders and hips, and excellent limbs. Her head was fine and she carried it high, and was a free and spirited driver, and called fast. She paced and trotted, breaking from a pace into a trot as she increased her speed; and she was a very fast walker.

In 1826 Woodbury became the property of William Walker and was known as the "Walker horse." Afterwards he was owned by Peter Burbank and was called the "Burbank horse." But he should not be confounded with his son, who was also called the "Walker horse" and the "Burbank horse." In 1836 he was sold to Norman Baglee, who took him to Gainesville, Ala., where he died in 1838.

Woodbury was 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ hands high, and weighed 983 to 1,040 pounds. In color, a chestnut, his off hind leg was white half way to the hock, and he had a white stripe extending from the upper lip more than half-way to the eyes. His mane was neither thick nor long; his tail was curly, and both mane and tail the same color as his body. The hair on his body was fine, short and soft. He was closely and compactly built, with heavy quarters and deep flanks. His chest was good, and shoulder well shaped, with a short back and broad, sinewy loins. His head was small and lean, with fine muzzle and large nostrils—very wide between the eyes, which were large and prominent. His ears were small, short and wide apart.

He had a bold, resolute way of going, and was very nervous, and, although he was a good driver, he appeared to better advantage under the saddle. In disposition he was playful and pleasant.

When sent to Alabama he was shipped on a sailing vessel, and suffered much from a long and stormy passage, and never fully recovered from the effects of it. Woodbury's form was more symmetrical than either of the other sons of Justin. His breast was not so full and prominent as Sherman's; but he was deeper in the flanks and better quartered. No horse was more fearless. Martial music roused and delighted him, he cared nothing for the firing of guns and the waving of flags.

Bulrush was foaled in 1812 or '13, probably in 1812. The breeding of his dam is unknown. She was a bay mare with black points, low and compact, with large limbs and large joints, and rather a long neck. She was a sharp trotter, but not a spirited driver. She was said to be, and had the appearance of being, "part French." Probably a French-Canadian mare, and weighed about 1,100 pounds.

Bulrush stood in Randolph, Hartland and Maidstone, Vt. Two years he was in Maine, and afterwards in Bradford, Vt., Keene, N. H., Lyme, Chelsea, Burlington and Fairlee, Vt.; and in 1842 was sold to F. A. Weir, of Walpole, N. H., who kept him until he died in 1848.

Bulrush was a bay horse with black points. His mane and tail were very heavy, the former reaching to his knees; and his foretop came to his nose. His legs were large, close-jointed, broad, flat, and with more muscular development than those of Woodbury or Sherman. His back was longer, but very broad and straight. His lips were not so long as Sherman's, and he was not so well quartered as Woodbury; but he was deeper in the chest than either of them. His shoulders were thick, but not so well placed, and he carried his head low. He was not so proud in his carriage as Woodbury, and he had not the short, nervous step of Sherman; but he was faster than either of them. He was remarkable for his powers of endurance—in this respect he was without a rival. He was 14 hands high and weighed 1000 pounds.

It is noticeable that these three sons of Justin Morgan were out of mares of unknown breeding, but who were all of them spoken of as having great individual excellence.

But because their true breeding was unknown, it does not follow that they were not well bred.

In the earlier part of the century, and in the preceding years, a number of Arab or Eastern horses (I think ten or twelve) were brought into New England; and sons of Messenger, Wildair, Duroc, Eclipse and other horses of good blood were owned there.

As early as 1766 the horse known as Lindsey's Arabian was imported into Connecticut, and his stock and his descendants were noted for their beauty, their speed and their endurance.

During the siege of Boston in 1775 and 1776, many of the cavalry were mounted on these horses and attracted the attention of General Washington, who was a lover of a good horse; and by his advice and direction the horse then known as Ranger was sought out and purchased, and was taken to Virginia by Mr. Lindsey, which led to his afterwards having been called Lindsey's Arabian.

Sherman, Bulrush and Woodbury were treated much alike. They had hard work, with no especial care, no blanketing, no warm stable, and were early accustomed to labor and fatigue.

Through these three channels the blood of Justin Morgan has poured into the native stock of Vermont, mingling largely with Arabian, English and other Eastern blood, bred back upon itself, doubled, tripled and quadrupled in their descendants as time went on, until the typical form and characteristics of the Morgan became fixed, and a distinct breed of horses was produced. To-day they are almost entirely gone, owing to the absurd fashion of "crossing," which means the destruction of the family or type.

The "time standard," like a vampire, has sucked out the blood from the veins of our most valuable horses, and we have left as our typical horse what is called the "American trotter." He cannot very well be described, for hardly any two of him are alike. He is the result of extreme training, and he is gauged by records which seem to be manipulated by a "turk clique."—Trelawney in Rider and Driver.

Ghosts of Old Drivers.

The history of the trotting turf is replete with romance and interest. Commencing with Hiram Woodruff's time, which was an era in trotting annals, we must conclude that he was the first trainer and driver of trotting horses who made a really high mark in trotting history. The horses which were in his stables from time to time were first-class animals of their day, and from the great Dexter, which had the lowest record of them all, back to Dutchman, Ripton and Americus, they were horses whose names will go down to posterity with a glamour and highly-flavored historic interest. The shaft that marks the grave of Hiram Woodruff, in the cemetery on Long Island, points to the last resting-place of a man who, in his profession, was esteemed very highly, and was considered a king of his art.

Dan Mace acquired his fame as a reinsman after Hiram Woodruff's decease, although he was very prominent before that. He first came into prominence through his connection with the mare Lady Sherman. When a boy his father kept a riding school in Boston, and Dan was well up in horse matters even then. A greater judge of sleighs and all pertaining to the snow path never lived, and the long list of horses which he trained and drove proclaim him second to none in his profession in trotting history.

Contemporary with Dan Mace were M. Roden, B. Daniels, John Shook, Dan Phieffer, Ben Mace, John Lovett, Walker, of Long Island, Billy Borst, John Rogers, John Murphy, Doble, Sr., and John Phillips, with others of the old drivers, who have all passed over to the silent majority. All of these had more or less fame as trainers and drivers of trotters, and some of them held front rank, notably John Murphy, who was highly esteemed and was a prince of drivers. Death, it will be seen, has cut a big swath in the ranks of the old-timers, and in some ways their places will never be filled. When these worthies flourished there was more romance than now about a race, for in these prosaic days there are so many of them that people view them more mechanically. The glamour and the novel interest has fled, until it is like the difference between a sailing and a steam yacht. Ghosts of former days, these men appear to the old turfman who sits cozily behind his bright fire these cool nights and reviews the past sports of the trotting turf.

Among the old-timers still hearty and hale are Uncle Sim Hoagland, Darius Tallman, Isaac Woodruff, John Turner, Orrin Hickok, Budd Dohle, Charles Green, Jack Feek, John Moore and Peter Manee. Long may they flourish.

OLD FRO.

HARTFORD, NOV. 18, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—I have used your "Absorbine" on my bay mare and have found it the only thing that will remove Wind-puffs, which it has done to my full satisfaction in this case. I also used it on another mare to remove a Callous Bunch on fore leg, which it has done to my full satisfaction. I cheerfully recommend it to all horsemen. Yours truly,

JAS. P. ALLEN,
President Hartford, Conn. Driving Club.

The Kentucky Derby.

The Buchanan colt Calhoun is beginning to attract considerable attention as a Kentucky Derby candidate. There are quite a number of good turfmen, who have closely observed the colt's turf career, who think that he can beat King Lee. Among these are the Scoggan Bros., who bred and developed both these colts and are in a mighty good position to judge of the qualities of each.

To a reporter of the Louisville Commercial Mr. Hiram Scoggan gave expression to the following opinions a few days ago:

"The horse's performances last year were excellent, and when the season closed he was in fine condition. He is a powerful horse and a great stayer. In that particular he is a far better horse than either G. W. Johnson or Don Alonzo. Don Alonzo, in my opinion, is a better horse than Johnson, though both are, I think, inferior to Calhoun. We raised the colt and thought a great deal of him, and sold him to Cushing & Orth, for $3,000. Before the season closed we would have paid $5,000 for him, and only last week I went to Chicago to offer $7,000 for him, ready to go to $10,000. His owners wanted $30,000 for him, and we did not feel justified in paying that for a horse when we had sixty-eight already. The horse has as magnificent legs as can be found under any horse in the country, and is, as I say, a staying horse. He is a big animal, but all nerve, and, if he gets away well, I venture to say will keep in the lead.

"Don Alonzo is a very fast horse, but he can't go the Derby distance at all. Of Calhoun, Johnson, Sir Francis and Don Alonzo, I consider Alonzo the speediest horse, but he can't stay with the others in a long race. Johnson is, I think, a poor-legged horse. He was hurred and fired last year, you will recollect, and, in my opinion, is not as great a horse as Calhoun by a great deal."

"Calhoun," said Mr. Scoggan, "is entered for the Derby here, which will this year be the best we have had for several seasons. If he and King Lee go to the post together the race will be between them. Calhoun will not go to Nashville, but come here at once and go to work. He is now at Memphis. Of the two horses I think Calhoun the better and the probable Derby winner."

Calhoun belongs to Cushing & Orth, and Will McDaniel, their trainer, also thinks mighty well of the colt's chances in the Kentucky Derby. This stable is now at Little Rock, Ark., and all the horses belonging to it are doing well, especially Calhoun. In a letter to The Record, Mr. McDaniel writes the following in regard to Calhoun and other members of his stable:

"Calhoun's last four starts, last year, were winning races, having won at a mile in 1:45, 1:43 $\frac{1}{2}$, 1:43 and 1:42 $\frac{1}{2}$. His last race he won in 1:42 $\frac{1}{2}$, and gave such a mare as Ethel, a stake winner in her two, three and four-year-old form, thirteen pounds, and Dungan, a good handicap horse, fifteen pounds in the fastest mile that had ever been run up to that date over the Hawthorn race-track. He showed in all his races that he liked a distance, and always finished good and strong. He is out of a War Dance mare and I think he will make a Derby horse. He likes a distance better than any Buchanan I ever saw.

"Cushing & Orth have three strings to their bow, in Lookout, Calhoun and Boundless. In Boundless I think I have an awful good colt; in his work here he is showing himself to be a good colt. The last time I breezed him a mile he won in 1:51, in the middle of the track and with a 120-pound boy up. The best mile ever run over this track here was 1:44. Boundless was off the most of last year, so Mr. Byron McDaniel told Mr. Cushing when he bought him at Lexington last fall. Lookout is a good colt and won more races than any horse in the American Derby for '92 did last year. I don't think we will start him until June at Latonia. He is a big colt and weighs 1025 lbs.

"In regards to the Tennessee Derby, there is only two in it on last year form, and they are Calhoun and Hugh Penny. Mr. Corrigan will not have anything south of Louisville this spring; Afternoon is wintering at Louisville and I don't think he will be at Memphis this spring, and G. W. Johnson, Fort Worth, C. H. Gillock and Red Banner are all East and will not be there. The best of them are selling platers and maidens, although S. S. Brown's Bob Speed was thought well of by his trainer, Mr. Pete Wimmer. He did not start last year, owing to leg trouble, and may not be able to stand a Derby preparation. The horses here are all going along pretty fast; miles are being rolled off every day or so in 1:51 and 1:52 handily, and they are all well advanced and seem to be doing fine. My horses are going fine, especially Calhoun. Boundless and Torrent. I am not doing much with Lookout and Carrol Donner."

"THAT all round racing man, C. H. Pettingill, at present presiding judge at Hawthorne, had a narrow escape from plodding along through life as an ordinary every day trainer," narrated G. R. Tompkins in the course of a recent conversation. "Two years ago last summer I was on a trade with Pettingill. He was in hard lines, and I had one rattling good horse and a few bad ones. Taragon was my bread-winner. The day I closed with Pettingill as trainer for the balance of the season, Taragon broke down. I explained matters fully to him, pointed out how poor our Saratoga prospects were and advised him to look elsewhere for a stable. He good-naturedly agreed with me, fell in with the Gloucester people, and a few weeks later obtained his real start in life on the opening of that track. A year ago Pettingill went to Garfield Park, Chicago, as starter, at a $20,000 a year rate of salary, and he is to-day the best paid racing man in the West. This season he will hold the flag at the Washington Park World's Fair meeting. My releasing Pettingill gave him his chance and the turf world an admirable official."

THE broodmare Jamaica, who will ever remain on the scroll of fame as the dam of Foxhall, died last week at the celebrated Woodburn Stud in Kentucky. A daughter of Lexington and Fanny Ludlow, by imported Eclipse, she was foaled in 1871, and produced her first foal in 1878, which was the redoubtable Foxhall, the winner of the Grand Prix, Caesarewitch and Cambridgeshire in 1881. Jamaica was apparently satisfied with having given to the turf world one Foxhall, for none of her other produce could rank as race horses. Potosi, a younger brother to Foxhall, was probably the only other of her sons and daughters who could claim any pretensions to being a race horse, and he was only able to land a few selling races in England.

THE GUN.

The Alameda Gun Club.

The Alameda Gun Club met on Saturday last at the trap in Oakland Shooting Park. The attendance was very good and in many respects the meeting was a remarkable one, principally noted for the large number of "goose eggs" recorded during the day.

It is something strange and unaccountable to find that an entire body of shooters will "fall down" in their shooting at times.

The Alamedas have long stood as one of the leading and most skillful clubs appearing at the traps in this vicinity. The following score is no criterion whatever of the average skill of the club. The score is as follows. Mr. A. Russell Crowell referee:

Table with 2 columns of names and scores. Names include T. R. Barney, H. Schroeder, Slade, Chas. Lainer, C. M. Osborn, F. K. Noyes, "Worth", "James", C. T. Morrison, J. G. Bliss.

In the pools the work started off as follows:

Table with 2 columns: FIRST and SECOND. Lists names and scores for various pool matches.

The day passed off very pleasantly and the event proved that the social features of the club in no sense depends upon the class of the scores made by the shooters. It must be remembered that the California birds at this season are second to no bird that flies for swiftness. On this occasion many of the birds darted away like rockets and the man that hesitated was sure to have a "goose-egg" placed to his account.

The Recreation Gun Club.

On the first of the week the Recreation met at the traps to celebrate the second monthly meeting of this organization for the season. The birds were a very lively lot and gave the contesting sportsmen all that their skill could manage to accomplish the scores which they did.

The scores in the main match showed Mr. Barney to be shooting in excellent form, killing all of his birds. Mr. G. C. Golcher came next with ten credits, while Mr. W. J. Golcher and Mr. C. J. Haas each secured nine credits. Mr. A. Russell Crowell referee. The score:

Table with 2 columns: FIRST CLASS and SECOND CLASS. Lists names and scores for various matches.

The pool shooting was brisk and interesting for the balance of the day. Barney and Haas divided the first pool on clean scores; Barney and "Woods" divided the next freeze-out on three straight kills. Haas won the fourth event on five straight kills; Schroeder and Barney fell out on their fifth bird.

Haas and "Woods" indulged in a spirited contest, honors being held and remaining about even to the close.

Sport in the Yellowstone National Park.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—It is a curious fact that comparatively few sportsmen know of the variety and gaminess of the fish to be found in the streams and lakes of the Yellowstone National Park, or the opportunity for pure sport, which this wonderful section affords.

These waters seem to be the very home of the trout, which are so plentiful that we doubt there can be found any stream in the country which presents more temptation to the fisherman. The different varieties of trout that can be found there, in themselves, afford the true sportsman not only sport, but information as well; while the grayling, a fish so rare in this country, and which is found here in great numbers, adds extra pleasure to the day's sport. These waters are so seldom fished that it is believed in them can be solved the question, "To what size will the trout, when allowed to live, grow?" In the waters of the Upper Yellowstone trout weighing eight pounds have been caught. It would seem that a country, which has become by reason of its natural beauty and wonders, the haunt of the tourist, would be fished out by this time; but it must be remembered that these pleasure-seekers generally go there to see the country, grown so famous, and seldom bring their rods and tackle with them.

Each of the different hostleries in the Park is within easy riding and driving distance from one or more of these streams, so that the sportsman, even while fishing in waters so seldom disturbed by the swish of the fly-rod, is always assured of a good resting place for the night.

In Blacktail Deer Creek, near the Mammoth Hot Springs, good fishing can be obtained, and trout weighing a pound each are very abundant; and in Glen Creek, above the Golden Gate, the Eastern Brook Trout, planted by the Fish Commission some years ago, are now large enough to afford good sport. It is but a day's ride from the Mammoth Hot Springs to the headwaters of the Gallatin River. In this and its various tributaries, trout and the rare grayling are abundant, and take the fly readily.

From the Firehole Basin the folks of the Madison River can be easily reached, over a good wagon road, and here again one has the grayling as well as the trout. The road from the Upper Geyser Basin to the Yellowstone Lake passes near Shoshone Lake, where Lake and Loch Leven trout are found, having been planted by the Fish Commission. The largest catches can, however, be taken at the outlet of the Yellowstone Lake. Yancy's, accessible from the Mammoth Hot Springs or the Canyon, forms a convenient point from which to make excursions.

The Yellowstone River itself affords nearly fifty miles of the finest trout fishing within the borders of the park; the East Fork and smaller streams, are easier to fish, and the trout not less game; at Tower Falls the swift current and deep pools make ideal fishing.

The park is on the very summit of the Rocky Mountains, and is about 7,000 feet above sea level; in fact, the springs, which are the sources of the streams, are themselves within the Park, thus making the waters cold all the year, insuring a gamey fish. One of our members in a day's fishing last summer, landed ninety-nine trout, weighing a trifle over 150 pounds for the catch.

I have mentioned but a few of the many spots in this region which offers so many attractions to sportsmen, and should be better known to all lovers of outdoor sport.

The fishing season runs from the middle of June to the first of October, and the Park is open to the public between those dates.

The Olympic Club Fair and Circus Maximus.

Revival of Ancient Græco-Roman games, Caesar's court, a Roman holiday, this great revival to be produced and the fair held in the new Olympic Club building, on Post street, from Monday, April seventeenth, to Saturday, April twenty-second, MDCCLXXXIII; afternoons, XII to VI; evenings, VIII to XI, under the immediate patronage of more than one hundred of the leading ladies of the city, among which appears the names of most of those who are prominent in all leading social events.

The directors of the Olympic Club have decided to hold a grand fair, and to give a series of entertainments during the week ending April 22d, on a scale that has never been attempted in the history of the city of San Francisco.

The success of the fair will depend entirely on the kind assistance and support of the ladies of the city, in asking which the directors feel that they have only to make their wishes known to insure the success that the Olympic Club so well merits. Ladies in the different residential hotels in the city are cordially invited to form committees among themselves, and conduct booths, to be named after the hotel in which they reside, on any plan they may suggest; in this way the management thinks the ladies will be able to obtain the best results with a minimum of labor.

The ladies of Mare Island and the Presidio are also cordially invited to work for and be represented at the fair.

The leading newspaper proprietors of the city have kindly offered to establish booths at the fair, and the co-operation of all is earnestly invited.

Contributions or donations to the fair are solicited from those willing and able to assist in the great work undertaken, the object of which is to extinguish a floating debt of $25,000.

All communications may be addressed to the Manager of The Olympic Club Fair, 305 California street, who will be pleased to assist in organizing committees, and arranging for the distribution of booths, individually and collectively; and ladies who are so kindly disposed towards the club will promote the success of the Fair by addressing him at their earliest possible convenience.

The afternoon programmes will include promenade concerts, juvenile revival of ancient Græco-Roman games, aquatic sports, and series of special entertainments.

The evening entertainments will consist of grand reproductions of ancient Græco-Roman games by the entire strength of the Olympic Club.

Cæsar's Court will be represented by one hundred leading society ladies and gentlemen of the city in Roman costumes. Prætors, senators, soldiers, gladiators, slaves, and dancing nymphs will form part of the procession.

Amadeo Jonllin will have charge of the artistic arrangements. H. J. Stewart has consented to act as musical director. A restaurant will be opened on the right of the main entrance to the building, under the management of Ludwig. Season tickets, costing $5.00 each, which will admit two persons to the entire series of twelve entertainments, can be obtained from the manager, as above, or at the office of the Club on Post street.

Messrs. Clabrough, Golcher & Co., the well-known sporting goods dealers at 605 Market street, make the following announcement, which will be of interest to all sportsmen in and about this city:

"We take pleasure in notifying you that we now have our grounds at the Oakland Driving Park in order for inanimate target shooting. Having put in the latest expert traps with electric trap pulls, etc., together with other improvements, makes it the best-arranged grounds on the coast for shooting inanimate targets.

"We shall have shooting every Saturday and Sunday, open to all, but during the other days of the week, if parties are desirous of having private shoots, we can accommodate them at a few hours' notice, and will reserve the grounds for their use accordingly.

"The birds will be furnished and trapped for three cents each. We will also have cartridges specially loaded for this kind of shooting for sale on the grounds.

"We will hold a tournament shortly; the programme and conditions of same will be sent you in a few days.

"Hoping that the promotion and encouragement of this class of sport will meet with your approval, we remain, yours very truly, CLABROUGH, GOLCHER & CO."

There can be no questioning the fact that this movement will prove an important addition to the shooting interests at the popular shooting grounds at Oakland Park. The sport of shooting at inanimate targets is found to come into favor more and more each year, and this movement will doubtless prove a most important one to the sportsmen here.

The initial number of the Rod, Gun and Kennel published at Louisville, Kentucky, under date of April 6th, is before us. A glance at its pages proves it to contain a large amount of most excellent matter on a variety of subjects of the first interest to sportsmen generally. It presents on its title page an illustration, having chosen "Lad of Rush" for the subject. If this be a "pointer" as to the future course of the publication, it will, no doubt, prove a grand success.

The National Sportsman's Association.

We have no apology to offer for dwelling on this subject at length and often. The subject is of the first importance and we are pleased to note the general awakening of the sportsmen of this section of the country on the question. There can be no questioning the fact that very great good will spring from the annual meeting which this body, when organized, will hold. It should be remembered that the growth of the interest in sportsmanship, the county over, demands that such an organization be formed to the end that the sentiment of the guild be so concentrated as to be effective for good in this matter. Organization is the watchword; organization is the only means through which the work that must be done in order to preserve from destruction the game of the streams and forests, can be accomplished. We must have uniformity of laws for the sections of county common to certain species of game. Nature provides by the maturing of the game a definite opening season and by the laws of breeding and propagation the time when the season should be closed. Information touching upon these important points is absolutely essential in order to intelligently legislate upon this question. How can this knowledge be best obtained? When obtained how can it be best applied so as to conform to the natural conditions? Is there not something of importance to do?

The inability which to-day exists, all over the country, to enforce the game laws in the regions along the border line of adjoining States, especially in wild and mountainous districts, is one which can only be met and handled by a body composed of representatives from such States acting in unison.

The greatest possible good would arise from the fair and equitable adjustment of such questions by such a body as we have been pleased to advocate.

The influence of such a gathering would be of the greatest power for good. Have you signed the petition for such a call? If not, will you not do so at once and thus lend your aid to a cause of the first interest to all sportsmen of the entire country? No time has yet been determined upon for the preliminary meeting in Chicago, but it perchance will be at a time when some of the great shooting tournaments will be held at that place.

We know that the best element on the Pacific Coast interested in sportsmanship is heartily in favor of such a meeting and no doubt but that this State will be fully and ably represented at Chicago at this time.

No Time for Aim.

Possibly none of the larger wild animals of the plains sooner takes alarm from the advance of civilization and so quickly retires before it, than the elk, the noblest in my opinion of all our game animals, says Sergt. Frank Burke in Rod, Gun and Kennel. His habits are migratory and he requires a very extensive area of absolutely wild country over which to range and graze. He prefers the rough broken foothills in close proximity to the mountains, though occasionally found upon the plains as well as high up among the mountain ranges. No more congenial home for the animal ever existed perhaps, than the section of country in the vicinity of the Snowy mountains near Central Montana. This range, and other small ones adjacent to it, has in the past been the home of large numbers of elk, and even to-day the remains of former great herds are still to be found.

It was on the Western slope of the Snowies, not far from the present town of Copperopolis, that the writer saw for the first time a large band of these animals and experienced the pleasure and pride of seeing the first one fall before his rifle. I was a member of a military expedition which started from Helena, Mont., late in October, 1882, our objective point being Fort Maginnis, near the entrance of the valley known as the Judith Basin, and about 200 miles from Helena. We saw no game of consequence until after passing White Sulphur Springs eighty miles out. Leaving that place, we entered a country of high, bare hills, covered with abundant grass and having a dense growth of underbrush along the little creeks, which flowed through the ravines which separated them. We had been told at White Sulphur that we should find plenty of game along our route, but this prediction did not prove true the first day, for, though we traveled about twenty miles of the country we saw nothing but a few stray antelope and deer which, from their exceeding shyness, must have been hunted very recently. I was greatly disappointed, for I had heard from old hunters that this particular bit of country probably contained more elk than any other section for hundreds of miles around.

That night we camped near the summit of a little divide not far from the cabin of a miner who was engaged in sinking a shaft into the hill in search of copper. He, like most Western miners, had very expansive notions as to the future of his claim, and given the place the name of Copperopolis, and so it is set down upon the maps. But his glowing recital of the superlative richness of his mine and generally brilliant prospects for himself and his property, had only a passing interest to us, until he incidentally remarked that he had seen that morning a large herd of elk covering the next hill, about a mile distant. It was too late then to take any action upon this information, but it was at once agreed between myself and one of the officers of the detachment, that we should investigate the matter in the morning as soon as there was sufficient light. We were awakened by one of the guards at 5 o'clock, and arranged that we should pursue nearly parallel tracks: he to take the left of the range of hills that bore away to the west of us, and I the right. The morning was chilly and the hills were covered with a dense fog, or mist, which extended from these summits half way to the valley below. The path was very rough and was intersected at frequent intervals by deep ravines between the hills. It was thought that these ravines would be the most likely place for game, since each of them contained a small water course and the grasses and brush upon which the elk feed grew there in greater luxuriance than upon the hills.

I had gone perhaps two miles, and though signs were abundant, I saw no living thing. I had given up hopes of success for that morning at least, and turned into one of the ravines mentioned, for the purpose of joining my companion on the other side of the hills. Owing to the dense fog which prevented me from seeing more than twenty yards in any direction, I was compelled to proceed very slowly. I had gun, perhaps, half way through, when my attention was arrested by a sudden snort, and a second after, from the noise, it would seem as though I was in the midst of a charging regiment of cavalry. The shadowy forms which arose apparently from the ground on all sides of me, were distorted in twice their actual size by being seen through the fog. I had walked directly into a large herd of elk.

For a moment I had a had case of the "buck fever," but quickly recovering raised my rifle and fired—I must confess at random, for there was no time for sighting—into the mass of animals as they were tearing at full speed over the hills. I could hardly have missed if I had tried, but did not anticipate my good luck in seeing one of them fall and remain upon the ground behind his fleeing companions. He was shot through both shoulders and was helpless, though he made vicious lunges at me with his antlers as I approached him. A second bullet soon dispatched him and secured to me the grandest prize of all my hunting experiences. It was a large bull and his antlers, though not by any means the largest, were by far the most symmetrical I ever saw. I secured them and the head and still preserve them as mementos of the adventure.

My companion beard my shot, and though the herd came close to him, he could not make them out on account of the fog. We soon reached camp and a detachment brought in the elk just in time for the members of our party to enjoy some of its steaks for breakfast.

The Pastime Gun Club.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—According to your request I am happy to announce the organization of the Pastime Gun Club, in our city, with a membership of thirty-five, of which some leading business men of the city are active members. We have furnished some club rooms very comfortably and are ready to entertain any visiting sportsmen from other cities. We have regular weekly practice shoots, using the Expert Blue Rock trap. We would be grateful for a sample copy of your paper for our table. Yours,

J. B. BADGLEY, Pres.

San Diego, Cal., April 7, 1893.

We are very much pleased to note the enterprise of our brother sportsmen of San Diego, and congratulate them and the sportsmen generally of the West on the addition of so able and effective a body as the Pastime Gun Club will be sure to prove to be. The gentlemen of this organization may rest assured that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will become a regular visitor.

ROD.

The Glories of Shasta and the Sacramento.

On the 11th of June I had said: "This is the supreme day for Mount Shasta and the upper Sacramento. It never was so beautiful here before and never will be again." On the 25th day of October I was fully convinced of my mistake, and am now ready to aver that he who has seen the upper Sacramento only in June—magnificent as the sight is—knows little of its true glory. That compares to this only as green baize to cloth of gold, says J. K. McLean in The Angler.

I wish to make another correction, accompanied by an humble apology to my adopted State. I have been accustomed to admit that all months in California must give precedence to two in New England and New York—those of June and October. I now solemnly, and with acknowledgment of wrong in having made such admission, withdraw it, especially as concerns October in the northern part of our State, for I am firmly convinced that the days beginning with the 17th of October, and continuing to the 27th, were unparalleled by any Eastern October; and I am in a state of mind to add, by anything this side of immortal glory. No more deliciously or magnificently perfect examples of weather or of landscape could be contrived.

As usual, with all best glory, this was born in pain. October 14 to 16 was frosty, snappish, chill and gloomy. Visitors had reason to say—and made no scruple in saying it—"This is not what we came for. October has aborted for this year. This is grim November. Worse than the worst we have about the bay." Saturday night, the 15th, this untoward condition culminated in a pouring, roaring rain. Nothing could keep up the temperature. Great wood fires, roaring up wide-throated chimneys, made no impression on it; they only drew in drafts of cold air, made colder by the drawing. The lower hilltops were white on Sunday morning. On the higher elevations, pines, firs, cedars, all slanted their heavy branches to the earth. It was a picture of Norway winter. Shasta refused to disclose himself at all. Apparently, the donning of his new suit he did not judge a transaction proper for the public eye.

But on Monday morning! Sky clear, low mountains steaming, higher ones gleaming, and the great monarch resplendent in a suit of lickerish ermine, which covered his very feet. And such a golden hue to the air; such a clean-washed sky; such shining oak leaves and such glittering pine needles. And such faint hints and touches here and there of autumnal color. And withal, what fishing. Such fishing so envired! Paradise? Well, Paradise will have to start in early in the morning, and work late at night, to beat it.

And the growing wonder of it is, that each succeeding day has been like its predecessor, only more abundant. The golden cast in the air has deepened day by day, the halcyon tones grown subtler and more spiritual, and the colors upon the mountain sides and along the river much more vivid. A marvelous garment of green and gold, green and terra cotta, green and crimson, has been woven in the loom of the last ten days, and hung over the labyrinthine mountains in a perfect prodigality of splendor. I wish I could place all Oakland—though unequipped with rod and tackle—along certain bends of the Sacramento which I have haunted from sun to sun, and through these wondrous days. They are points where the mountain rises sheer out of the emerald stream to the height of thousands of feet, and at an angle of forty-five degrees. These rises are somewhat thinly clad with loose growths of pine and cedar, leaving abundant openings, which dogwood, maple, oak and laburnum occupy. The steep face northward. The sun seems to just roll along their summit, but scarcely peeps over. Some days its shine has not found me till high noon.

Now just look. First of all is the green, clear, rattling, noisy river. Growing out of its brink are the great umbrella-shaped and sized saxifrage leaves, green in summer, but now gorgeous in all the colors of the rainbow. Next beyond these come azalea bushes, which last June illumined the place with their pinkish, yellowish white blossoms, and now irradiate it with their frost-painted leaves. Above them stands the dogwood of a deep, rich terra cotta. And higher yet—the crown and glory of it all—the large-leaved, soft maple, rising in broad blotches all the way to the mountain top. These show as great masses of pure gold, the goldenest sort of gold. And the dusky twilight of the over-hanging, variously-shaded green, makes splendid contrast and background for it.

This is beautiful all the day through, even before the sun had slanted his first beams up toward the ice cap of Shasta. But as the morning goes on and the air grows warmer, and the light behind this grand decoration grows stronger—the trout meanwhile rising vigorously—why, one has fairly, now and then, to even stop his fishing and give himself absolutely up to admiration. (Fishermen will know how much is said in saying this, especially when I add that the trout landed in such surroundings by the same hand which pencils this, weighed, many of them, three-quarters of a pound apiece, a dozen at least a full pound each, one two pounds, and another a full two pounds and a half. To knock off fishing in favor of scenery at such a time, stands for much.) But, increasingly beautiful is it as the day goes along, for the climacteric of the grand display is reached when at length, near noon, the sun finally does glance over the apex of the ridge, and floods the entire curved hillside. There's an illumination indescribable, unsurpassable! Each one of those brilliant masses of foliage is transfused with splendor. The fine gold of an hour ago is burnished gold now. The crimsons, terra cottas, and all the reds take on strengthened tints. It is a grand illumination without the jostle, a colossal pyrotechnic without smell or smoke. It is the coronation of the year.

But I must not forget, amid all this splendor, my dusky little fisherman friend, the water ouzel, that wee, sweet philosopher, poet and musician, the making of whose acquaintance were in itself a sufficient justification for a five hundred mile trip to the mountains. Although in himself an inconspicuous personage enough, he adds, in my mind, by his enjoyment of it, even to all this radiance of glory. He apparently takes it all as meant for him. It is his vacation time. All summer long he has been rearing children. He no more than gets one brood off his hands than he takes on another. And a very devoted parent is he. I have for an hour watched a busy pair carrying food to their nestlings beside some pool where I have been fishing. Their visits, never empty-billed, average at least once each two minutes. But now domestic cares are off his mind. His children are all grown up, and he is giving himself well-earned leisure. All day long he flits up and down the spraying stream, delighting most to rest on some rock tip where the water runs swiftest. And very sociable he is, particularly toward other fisher folk. He really seems to court their company. I have often had one this season, as well as at other times in autumn, pause in their rapid flight up or down the stream, turn about and light on rock or stone quite near me, evidently in part curious to see what is going on, in part conscious of kinship with all anglers. For this little bird, about the size of a robin, though not properly a water bird at all, lives always by the water, and gets his living out of it. And though not in summer—in these days he is singing. He has a song much like that of a canary, quite as varied and mellow, and as full of runs and trills, but much weaker. He reminds one of a weak-throated, low-voiced canary. By the quarter hour will he sit sometimes, and trill and turn his head and courtesy. He is quite tame, too. I have been allowed to come within fifteen or twenty feet of him without at all disturbing the current of his song. He is a delightful little fellow to all observers, but I have the idea he thoroughly unbosoms himself only to fishers. He recognizes the crashnet not only, but knows that people of such taste and calling can thoroughly be confided in. But even fishermen see this bird at his best only in October.

Perhaps I have said enough to shake the good opinion of my friends in my vacation soberness. But there still remains the October afternoon on Mount Shasta, an appearance wholly apart from anything I have ever beheld there at any other season; perhaps because of the unusual amount of new-fallen snow, perhaps because the tavern of Castle Crag stands at the proper angle from the setting sun and the mountain to catch the light to best advantage. But I am disposed to think it is the peculiar quality of this October light—its rich golden hue. At all events—not every night, but often—the great mountain's helmet glows and gleams with a depth and richness of color quite equal, it seems to me, with that seen on Jungfrau.

In a word, many things, great and small—the absence of dust, heat, insects (even that audacious freebooter, the yellow-jacket—the Evans and Sontag of insects, who robs you boldly before your very face, then lingers in the neighborhood, defying arrest and refusing to go away, while he plans how to rob you more—seems to have suspended business for the season), the absence of smoke from forest fires, and, may one add, the infrequency of the summer tourist—all these things, together with the positive beauty and healthfulness of the frosty mornings, combine to make the upper Sacramento in October a region as much superior to the same in summer as the upper Sacramento in summer is superior to the lower Sacramento at any time.

Treasures of the Government Reservations.

Where will one find the best fishing in the United States seems a hard question to answer, but if it be fresh-water fishing, I believe the Yellowstone Park is the place, says Walter W. Weed in Washington Post. It has been said that whoever tastes of the waters of the Yellowstone cannot help exclaim: but this is unnecessary, for truth about the Park is stranger than fiction. It is now an old story, the tale of trout caught in a cold mountain torrent, with a hot spring at hand in which to cook them without stirring from the spot, but true, nevertheless. It is, however, not of the wonders of this region but of the sport to which attention is called. Indeed, it is not surprising that the curiosities of this geysers-land, wherein nature has wrought so many miracles, should monopolize attention, and that many visitors should depart knowing naught of the attractions it offers to all disciples of the revered Isaac.

It has been my good fortune to spend many summers in this delectable region, and to have employed such leisure hours as could be stolen from a study of the rocks in fishing its streams, and there is scarce a lake or a creek in the region in which I have not cast a fly. Nature provided mountain trout in more than abundance the gamey grayling and the white-fish in almost all the waters, and an indulgent Government, through the Fish Commission, has stocked the remaining waters, inaccessible to native fish by reason of waterfalls, with Van Behr, rainbow, eastern brook and lake trout. It is believed that there is no spot in the country where so large a variety of trout may be caught in the wild state. Good fishing is, naturally, a variable term. The man who laboriously, yet with keenest enjoyment, whips a New England brook to bring home a string of speckled trout, would find rare pleasure in casting a fly in any of the streams of this region. He who wishes to catch a number that will arouse the envy of his fellow men, and wishes to do it with the least possible effort, can also fulfill his heart's desire if he but visit Yellowstone lake.

The native trout of the region is the spotted or mountain variety. The red and the orange-colored male, (speckled with black) is the equal in beauty of his imported rivals. The mountain trout (Salmo mykiss) is a Pacific Slope fish that has made its way over the Continental divide into the headwaters of the Yellowstone and Missouri, an easy task by way of the divided creek of Two Ocean Pass. Indeed, it is quite evident that he came this way in the Yellowstone region, since he is found above the 400-foot falls of the river, but in all the other streams is found only below the waterfalls. The larger fish are found in the waters of the Yellowstone itself, from which specimens weighing as much as ten pounds have been taken, in the deep pools of its lower canyon. In the Yellowstone Park the fish are nearly uniform in size running from three-fourths to a full pound and a half in weight. In the smaller streams they rarely exceed this weight, but the fish vary considerably in gameness, and the readiness with which they take the fly.

The outlet of the Yellowstone Lake must ever be a favorite spot for fishermen. On the quiet waters of the lake, as they join the pine-environed Yellowstone, one may at almost any time see literally hundreds of trout, all over the surface, raising or leaping in midair, after the flies and insects that float over or upon the water. Fabulous catches have been made at this spot, as Prof. Bickmore, of the Museum of Natural History and many other New Yorkers can testify. To tell of them here would be to invite suspicion. The lake is, however, well supplied with trout, and as this is the favorite feeding spot, enormous catches will always be possible—at least for many years to come. At the Thumb, hot springs bubble close to the shores of the lake, and one mound of white sinter rises as an islet above the lake waters a few feet from the shore. Upon it the bold fisherman may stand, and casting his fly, land his fish in the kettle-like hot spring in the apex of the mound, appropriately known as the Chowder-pot. It is not sport, but is a curious feat none the less.

And right here let me say a word for the trout of the Yellowstone Lake, currently reported to be all wormy. A large proportion—perhaps one-half—will be found to contain a white worm along the side, these fish being readily recognizable by their lack of vigor and general cadaverous appearance. Curiously enough, that strange bird, the pelican, which, with a species of seagull, is abundant on the lake in summer, has been found to be responsible for this singular fact. During the summer months this beautiful white-plumaged bird may be seen lazily floating upon the surface of the river and pocketing many struggling trout in its capacious pouch. In the bird the parasite finds a new home, and in its new form completes that alternation of generations that once proved the puzzle of naturalists. It is now seriously proposed to kill off the pelicans, as without them the strange parasite would soon die out.

In the river below the lake capital fishing may generally be had, though as elsewhere there are times when fish may be seen by hundreds, yet not one will rise to fly or bait. Such was once my luck when encamped upon the river's brink. I whipped the stream long and patiently, but brown hackel and coachman, scarlet ibis and black gnat, all failed to attract. Then, with a desperation borne of long diet upon hacon and beans, I tried that usually irresistible bait, a grasshopper, but also without success, when a final resort to a pickering spoon and lure proved the means of landing a savory mess. In one of the tributaries to this part of the Yellowstone, known as Alum Creek because of its strong puckery taste, I have seen a hundred fish taken out, in as many minutes from the pure headwaters, the fish being confined to this part of the stream, which a few yards below became a boiling, steaming torrent with the waters of numerous hot springs. These smaller fish, generally called brook trout, are the same species as the larger fish of the lake, though differing much in appearance.

Below the falls of the Yellowstone the trout are much gamier, as would be expected from the fast and furious current of the stream which here flows between the gayly-tinted walls of the famous Yellowstone canyon. Where the waters of Tower Falls empty into the river, the fishing is ideal, as Col. Appleton of the gallant Seventh can testify. But if you enjoy casting a line into such waters, and struggling with rod and reel to land your trout, despite his wily dashes and plunges into the seething waters, stop a while with my good host "Uncle John" Yancev. No one knows better where the biggest fish may be caught, or how to tempt them, or how better to cook them. Moreover, Uncle John can tell true tales of fishing and hunting that will outdo the utmost efforts of one's imagination. Take a good lunch if you go out for a fish here; you will probably forget it, as all else in the excitement of the sport, but it will come handy towards dusk.

Perhaps the journey tired his ancestors and he has inherited the trait, but I believe the trout of Atlantic flowing waters is less gamey than his brother across the continental divide. That parting of the waters is twice crossed by the traveller from the geyser basin to the lake, but not where the native trout may be caught, for a waterfall prevents his access to the beautiful Shoshone Lake in which Loch Leven and lake trout have been planted, and now await the fisherman. But in the Snake River, some miles to the southward and the various streams whose waters eventually join the Columbia, the trout differ somewhat in appearance, as they certainly do in gaminess, from those of the Yellowstone. The ardent fisherman will find if a delightful trip, with the best sport, if the forks of the Snake be reached. A lakelet forms the head waters of that stream, on Two Ocean Plateau is so full of fish in spawning time as to lend belief to the old story that the natives of Siberia cross the streams on the shoals of salmon that fill the waters.

In 1869 and 1890 the agents of the United States Fish Commission planted eastern brook trout (Salvelinus fontinalis) in the waters of the Gardiner River above its falls, rainbow trout (Salmo irides) in the Gibbon River, and Von Behr brown trout (Salmo fario) in the waters of Nez Perce Creek while Loch Leven and Lake trout were placed in Shoshone and Lewis Lakes. All these fish are now spawning, and fishing in these waters will be permitted this coming summer.

FIXTURES.

BENCH SHOWS.

- Southern California Kennel Club's bench show, Los Angeles, Cal., April 19, 20, 21 and 22. C. A. Sumner, Secretary.
Pacific Kennel Club's bench show, San Francisco, May 3, 4, 5 and 6. Horace W. Great, Secretary.
World's Columbian Exposition bench show, Chicago, June 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17. Entries close May 20. Address W. I. Buchanan, Chief Department of Agriculture, Chicago.
American Pet Dog Club's bench show, Lenox Lyceum, New York, May 30, 31, June 1 and 2. T. Farrar Rackham, Secretary.
Hamilton Kennel Club's second annual bench show, Hamilton, Can., September 7, 8, 9 and 10. A. D. Stewart, Secretary.

Captain Thos. Higgs will take a string of upwards of twenty dogs to Los Angeles.

Forty-four entries have been made from this city and vicinity in the Los Angeles bench show.

Mr. L. L. Campbell will have a large string of dogs in his charge at the Los Angeles show from this city and vicinity.

The Foxterrier Club will give a banquet in honor of Judge Raper and the press, sometime during the coming bench show meeting.

The preparations for the coming bench show are progressing finely and substantial evidences are to be observed on every hand pointing to the success of the undertaking.

The interest in the coming bench show is daily increasing, and there can be little or no question but this event will prove far superior to any one ever presented in this city.

A number of the cups provided by the Foxterrier Club for competition this season, bear the engraving of the celebrated foxterrier bitch Vessuvienne. They are very handsome.

The owners of Los Angeles entries may be noted each day making their favorites out for constitutions. The dogs that win this season in most classes will be very good specimens.

On April 7th Henry Bamber's (Hollister) foxterrier bitch Flirt, by Punch out of Nellie, threw three pups (two dogs) to same owner's Golden Tip (No. 21,651), by Blemton Shiner, out of Beatrice.

The St. Bernard class will be a large and most interesting one at the coming bench show to be given by the Pacific Kennel Club. The acquisitions made in this line during the year past have strengthened the breed in this city and vicinity.

Mr. Henry Huber and Mr. J. B. Martin will attend the bench show at Los Angeles, starting probably on Monday evening. It is long ride to the metropolis of the orange belt and good company is an essential in making the trip pleasant.

Judge Raper will find a large contingent of kennel men on this city to greet him at Los Angeles. The well-known hospitality of the Los Angeles kennel men is warrant enough assure all attending the coming show at that place of a pleasant visit.

The recognition which some organizations give to classes that expend thousands of dollars annually, for the interest of their special line of business, is apparently in the nature of a half-hearted apology, but in reality it amounts to a "Damn you," for favors received.

It was the intention of the Huron Coursing Club to hold a ste coursing meeting this week. Unless the hare are entirely different from those in this State, the sport will have been a failure. Spring coursing here is most unsatisfactory cause of the condition of the hares. They are not fit to use at this season.

Just now, in San Francisco, you can meet at almost every one the man who has a wise, self-satisfied look and whose mysterious air informs you, in the strictest confidence, of course, that he has "a wonder" in this or that breed of dogs that will make the fancy open their eyes when dog show opens.

The gentlemen who are intending to exhibit their dogs at Los Angeles have all their preparations for starting their show on Monday next so as to give them a day's rest before benching them. This is highly proper for the ride is a long one for the dogs and they will need the rest in order to be placed on the bench in proper condition.

It is said that the many "kicks" against the judges announced as having been chosen for the bench show to be held at Chicago during the World's Fair, are being made at a "kick" list. We are inclined to think that it would be the part of wisdom in our friends not to "kick" at all, but if they must "kick" first be sure that there is something to "kick" at.

The St. Bernard Club met on Tuesday evening last, Dr. G. S. Burger in the chair. The desire was unanimous for the changing of the Constitution of the club so as to permit of funds being used for providing prizes at the bench shows. It was found to be about $75 in the treasury. After attending to the routine work of the club the discussion of the question of general interest occupied the time until adjournment.

It would it not be a good idea to offer a prize to the exhibitor having the most tastefully-arranged stall. A little attempt at making dog shows pleasing to the eye would do no harm, says the Fancier's Journal, and we quite agree with his proposition. Dogs are, in most cases, kept as companions and pets, and the public, generally in visiting bench shows, would be pleased to note the elaborate decoration of stalls in which the dogs are shown. Many of the exhibitors in this city have, in the past, been quite noted for this work, and we hope to see more of it than ever before at the coming show.

Roumanian Dogs.

The best individual specimens of small doghood to be found in Roumania partake of the character of our own rough-haired Terriers, and I have met with some really decent instances of dogs possessing Irish Terrier type, says Morman in English Stock-Keeper, but then for all that there is nowhere any attempt made to maintain a recognized strain, and although no doubt these Terriers are due to ancestors of British origin, the type has never been properly maintained, and in litters of pups one or two of them may be all right and the rest mongrels of the most disapproved description. The continuous stream of British trading steamers coming up the Danube must account for the prevalence of very fair rough Terriers in the towns, because one or, at the most, two dogs are quite sufficient on shipboard, and litters which, if biped, would belong to Stepney parish, are given away by the captains to friends and business connections ashore, and in this way many well-bred Terriers reach the country. As these dogs are less disposed to promiscuous race-combinations than many other breeds, the stamp of dog getting a footing, some good specimens of good type, but all the same bad manners, are frequently to be seen. Our Vice-Consul at Sulina has a good strain of smooth haired Foxterriers, and from his kennel a fairish number are spread over Galatz and Braila, and their fame is even represented by some few specimens in Bucharest. There are a large number of dogs of the Bullterrier type to be seen, as also some fairish long-haired, short-legged ones, "as represents" the Scotch Terrier. I have also come across a few canines much akin in looks to Airedales—good, hardy, useful dogs, fit to tackle a wolf or a fox, but more frequently employing themselves to harry the lean and hairy swine, which, with stolid indifference, perambulate the less frequented streets of the town, and also pick up a precarious existence on the split grain on the quays of the riverside towns.

Of Dachshunds there are plenty, but of breed in the same there is a famine in the land. I do not know where you could find a more varied collection of Dachshund mongrels than in this country. There are great numbers of Germans in the towns, and there is a large percentage of them who affect their dog, but oh! spook of Belgian Herr, what ingenuity of mispurpose has overcome their breeding. A friend of mine in Braila (It is you, Major, to whom I allude) has a good strain of liver-colored dogs, which are rapidly tending to improve the general breed in that town; and so noted is the head of the clan, Toby of that ilk, that the expression is often heard "Este un Toby, rara Engleza" (it is a Toby dog, an English breed). There are also numbers of those hairless dogs about Roumania, a breed too suggestive of an animated Lyons sausage to secure my fancy, but still much affected by the female department of polite Roumania society.

Coming to the nondescript canine population, how can I catalogue the multifarious mongrelism of the thousands of dogs which lurk in and around the towns, the villages, and the hamlets, and even the fishermen's huts in the marshes, and on the endless heterogeneous craft, lighters, caics, and tugs which ply upon the Danube and its affluents? From the meanest whelp, all ears and tail, to big gaunt beasts, more wolf than dog, I verily believe every possible specimen of mongrel-bred dog is to be found. Scavengers of the streets and outskirts of the towns, they appear with the night and disappear with the day. It is not enough that poor humanity should be frozen in winter, hoiled in summer, shaken or blown inside out with earthquakes and windstorms, but night is made hideous with their howlings and barkings. Last summer I had a house overlooking the Danube at Braila. No sooner had the bum, like the roar of a distant sea, of the rising mosquitoes at eventide given place to the hoarse croaking chorus of millions of bullfrogs, than that in turn gave place to canine pandemonium. A small white dog usually gave the signal outside my window. He was answered from a lighter on the river below, a running fire of different barks spread for a mile or more over the craft anchored in its stream, the fire spread to the limits of the town, and in five or ten minutes there was a girdle of canine discord entirely round the place. Thousands of dogs joined in, and until the morning sun waxed out the discordance used to continue. By surreptitiously shooting the pioneer, I managed to delay the performance till after my dinner, but it always went on, and I believe in course of time if I reach a green old age, I may get used to it and find the million voices of the canine chorus soothing and provocative of sleep. Roumanians and Greeks, Turks, Jews and Armenians, apparently enjoy it; and why not also.

That Talented Clerk.

The legal talent of the Saturday Press is guilty of inflicting the following upon the public.

After mature deliberation and having taken into consideration all of the mitigating circumstances we are of the opinion that the collector herein after mentioned should procure a mongrel of vicious nature and sic it upon the "talented clerk." Read this and see if our judgment is not correct:

Attorney-Generals have curious law questions submitted to them. Here are three recently propounded from a neighboring State:

- To the Attorney General:
DEAR SIR:—Please relieve a perplexed collector:
1—If a man is assessed for a dog and wont pay it, what shall I do?
2—If the dog dies after it is assessed and before it is payable must I collect it?
3—If a man is assessed for a dog who never had a dog how shall I get rid of it?
A talented clerk deputed to answer, did so as follows, after consulting Ram on Facts:
1—Make the dog pay it.
2—Yes, unless it is too far gone.
3—The attorney can't tell.

On the Trail.

A correspondent in Shooting and Fishing gives the following interesting incidents to the public through the columns of that journal:

"I hear that Henry Wright, of Ashby, Mass., had an odd adventure on one of the last days of the fox-hunting season. He was out with his little hound, Sport, and had started a fox without much trouble. The hound was driving about half a mile from the hunter and just out of sight behind a knoll, when suddenly he began to yell. Mr. Wright knew at once that he was in trouble of some kind, and fearing that he had been so unlucky as to get caught in a trap, hurried toward him. When Mr. Wright had almost reached a place from which he would have been able to see his hound, Sport stopped screaming and began to tongue as he always does on a fresh track. In a few moments a fox came in sight, and the hunter killed it. It proved to be a vixen. When Sport came in his master found that the fox had caught him by the ear, and made two long slits in it. These wounds were so severe that it was necessary to sew them up. Sport is said to be a gritty little hound that will kill a fox in quick time if once he gets hold of it, but in this case it is evident that the vixen was too quick for him. The gentleman who related this incident did not tell me whether any marks of the dog's teeth were found on the fox or not.

"The incident which has just been related is certainly unique. Those who have had long experience in hunting reynard have occasionally known an old dog fox to bristle up and run towards the hound, and it is not a rare occurrence for a vixen, when she has young, to follow a hound and make a rush at him; but the foxes that are bold enough to do this are always very careful to keep out of reach of the hound. This is the only case that has come to my notice in which the fox has had sufficient bravery to actually tackle its pursuer. To be sure, the evidence in this instance is entirely circumstantial, but, nevertheless, it seems to be sufficient to prove the case.

"A friend of mine who lives on Cape Cod, in the vicinity of Hyannis, Mass., told me not long ago an interesting incident of the hunting last fall. Early on one November morning he heard the hounds coming directly towards his house, and hurried to the window to see what he could of the chase. He was just in time to see a fox come slowly through the open field which separated the house from the woods. Scarcely had the fox made his appearance when two hounds came into view, running—or I ought to say walking—the track of the fox. As they caught sight of their quarry the excitement of the moment gave them a little fresh energy, and they closed on their prey. It was difficult to tell which of the three actors in this drama of the woods was the most exhausted. The chase had evidently been a long one, for the fox had run till he could run no longer, and the pursuing hounds were ready to drop with fatigue. The fox, finding escape impossible, turned on the hounds, ready to die game, and there, within twenty yards of my friend, the battle was fought. The fox mustered all the little strength he had remaining, knocked down the leading hound, bit the second one severely, and with one last effort for life disappeared in the woods at the back of the house. The hounds could go no further, they were done, and that gallant fox, who struggled so splendidly for his life, will live, I hope, to run many another race."

The Foxterrier Club.

The Foxterrier Club met on Tuesday evening last and decided several matters relative to the future action of the club, one of which was that in the future the club would direct its attention to providing much more elaborate and costly cups than those now offered for competition. Ten cups have been hung up by this club for the Los Angeles show. Ament the question of foxterriers we quote the following from the English Stock-Keeper:

"We this week publish an illustration of Roche Talma, one of the most deservedly successful wire-haired foxterriers now before the public. This very typical son of Bodger and Vic was first brought out by his owner, Mr. J. W. Taylor, of Oldham, at the Rochdale Show in the February of last year, when under Mr. A. Ashton, the new corner won in all the classes in which he was entered, and in addition secured the cup offered for the best foxterrier in the show. The next appearance of Roche Talma was at Oxford, where he won in the novice, maiden, and Tyro classes, the three-pound special, and the wire-haired foxterrier fifty guinea challenge cup being also included in his list of victories. Pursuing his academic career with much diligence, Roche Talma next took a double first and special at Cambridge, these successes being supplemented by firsts at Amsterdam, Bradford, Altrincham, Stockport, Oldham, Carlisle, Derby and Bochdale, whilst upon the two later occasions special cups were added to his former triumph. It will thus be seen that Roche Talma possesses the strongest possible claims to be considered one of the best, as he is undoubtedly one of the most successful specimens of his breed that has existed, and we trust that before the present season has passed over his head a new and equally creditable sequence of victories will be recorded in his favor. Mr. Taylor advertises him at the stud in our columns, and if there is any foundation whatsoever for the saying that like begets like, the owners of well-bred bitches should certainly expect to derive substantial benefits from availing themselves of his services."

The illustration is a good one and bears out all that our contemporary has said as quoted above referring to this special animal. The picture shows that peculiar character in a full degree that has made the wire-haired terrier such a favorite.

The Selby Medal Shoot.

The Selby medal will be shot for on Sunday the 23d inst., at the Oakland Shooting Park commencing at 10 o'clock. Mr. Frank B. Norton is the challenger, Mr. Thos. R. Barney holding the medal over from last year.

The probabilities are that the rains that have rendered the inaugural days of the angling season so barren of results are now about over. This will, if true, prove a most welcome announcement to the lovers of the rod who have had, so far this season, little save disappointment on every hand.

The San Francisco Gun Club meets this afternoon at Oakland Track. There will be a large shooting membership present and as a result a fine time will be enjoyed.

wood, May D., Alfarata and hosts of other winners), dam Imp. Flirt (dam of Goro, Faustine and Flambeau, winners, and sister to Imp. Frigo Tuck), by Hermit (winner of the Epsom Derby of 1867), son of Newminster, he by Touchstone. George Covington trained the winner, who is a sister to the mighty Flambeau, and deserves great credit for the condition in which he brought her to the post.

Below will be found a table showing the winners of the California Stakes since its inauguration and other interesting points in connection with the event:

WINNERS OF CALIFORNIA STAKE—1/2 MILE.

Table with columns: Yr, Name of Winner, Sire of Winner, Second Horse, Time. Rows include 1879 Tillie C., 1880 Frank Rhoads, 1881 Anita, 1882 Gano, 1883 Prince of Norfolk, 1884 Estill, 1885 Willow, 1886 Graciosa, 1887 Pocatello, 1888 Trade Mark, 1889 Racine, 1890 Fairy, 1891 Toro, 1892 Castro, 1893 Flirtation.

In 1879 the weights in the California Stakes were 86 pounds for colts 33 pounds for fillies; in 1880 they were raised to 100 pounds for colts 97 for fillies. In 1883 the weights were raised to 110 pounds for colts 107 for fillies.

In this race Don Jose jumped the track about thirty yards from the wire, when leading, killing Sidney Mash, a spectator.

It will be observed that daughters of Wildidle won this stake the first and last time it was run for, and in the same time. In no other years have the Wildidles been successful so far as this event is concerned.

FOURTH RACE.

Sheridan, with Miller up, was a hot favorite, because it was thought he was more at home on a heavy track than the others, except Bessie W., who was not thought to be exactly on edge. Bessie W. led Garcia and Revolver passing the quarter, then Garcia took up the running, striking the homestretch two lengths in front of Sheridan, he over a length from Revolver. Once in the straight, Revolver came up like a flash, and, collaring Garcia 100 yards from the wire, the latter gave it up, Revolver winning in a romp by a length, Garcia, fast dying away, second, a neck from Sheridan. Time, 1:51. Revolver went to the post with odds of from 6 to 10 to 1 against his chances. Sheridan lost lots of money for his friends. T. H. Williams secured the horse at $2,350, or $350 over his selling price.

Ten two-year-olds faced Mr. Ferguson in the fifth race, four and a half furlongs. The Brutus-Ariola colt opened at 3 to 1, but a ton of money, more or less, crushed the odds down to 4 to 5 at the post. Rosalie had lots of fanciers at 3 and 4 to 1. Rhodante was first away a neck, the Ariola colt second, Realization third, about a length in front of Rosalie. The favorite led Rhodante into the stretch by a couple of lengths, with Realization still third, Rosalie fourth and coming fast. The latter gained considerably, and 100 yards from the wire Sullivan commenced to ride her desperately. So gamely did she respond that had the wire been thirty yards further the Ariola colt would have run second to the filly. As it was the favorite won by a short neck in wonderful time—0:55 1/2. Six lengths away, third, was Jennie Deane, who was absolutely last coming into the homestretch.

The last race, five furlongs, had eleven starters, and Crawford was hacked down from 8 to 5 to even money at the post. Volita was most fancied of the others. Joe D. led into the homestretch by about four lengths, Crawford being second, and when Phil Archibald's sprinter shut his jackknife Crawford came and won handsily by three parts of a length from Orta, who was coming like a shot at the end, as was Volita, who was but a head behind her. Time, 1:03 1/2. B. C. Holly ran the winner up to $1,250, $250 over his entered selling price, but Mr. Kerr kept him at $1,255.

SEVENTH DAY—THURSDAY, APRIL 13.

Favorites and long shots divided up the snails this beautiful day, and close to 4,000 persons saw them do it. Motto dipped the talented in Consmme Lake in the first race, the winner turning up in old Inkerman. Bronco and Motto went out and set such a pace that it was suicidal to their chances, for they had nothing left to finish on. Tigress looked very much like a winner a sixteenth from home, but Inkerman, under whip and spur, came with an irresistible rush down the homestretch, winning in the last jump by his ironclad nose.

The Brutus-Ariola colt won all the way in the second event, five furlongs, Atticus and Valencia making a pretty fight for place honors, the former securing it by a neck. The winner of the mile and an eighth handicap, ten starters, turned up in little Willie Murry's white-legged Missouri cyclone, Belfast, who beat the supposed invincible Sir Walter and the heavily-played Almont, among others. Belfast is a stayer of the first water, and as game as the proverbial pehlie. Getting off eighth, he was second at the quarter-pole, went to the front nearing the three-quarter mark, and although he went back to Sir Walter a little about a sixteenth from home, he came again like a sure-enough race horse and won handsily from Boots' horse, though about all out, by nearly a length. Belfast went to the post at 5 to 1, being backed down from 8 to 1. Most of the play was on Sir Walter, Almont and Democrat, the latter being a hot tip.

Martinet had an easy task set him when he beat five three-year-olds of rather mediocre ability. Rosebud, last all the way around to the homestretch, made a good run down the straight, and will probably be heard from after another race or two.

Sympathetic's Last won from Bessie W. and a few poorer ones in ridiculously easy style.

THE DAY'S RACING DESCRIBED.

Motto was an even-money favorite in the opening race, six furlongs, and well-played, though Bronco and Inkerman were not lost sight of in the rush. As several clever horsemen predicted, the two speedy ones, Motto and Bronco, went out to have the race to themselves, and so hot did they make the pace that both died away in the homestretch, and Tigress moved up from fifth place and looked an easy winner until within 100 yards of the wire, where Inkerman commenced to gain perceptibly with one of those old-time rushes of his, and getting up, won in the very last stride by the scantest of noses, Tigress second, a length from Bronco, who was but a head from Gladiator. Motto finished eighth and absolutely last. Time, 1:15.

Several dollars were wagered on the second race, five furlongs. The Brutus-Ariola colt had the greatest number of moneyed friends, and was a favorite at 9 to 10, but Atticus lacked not for admirers who liked to put coin on him at odds of 2 1/2 to 1. Valencia was much liked for place. To a beautiful start, Ovation was away a neck in advance of the Ariola colt, but the latter passed her ere 100 yards had been run, and led Valencia into the homestretch two lengths. Miller rode the favorite beautifully all the way down the straight, and won easily by a length and a half. Atticus got away slowly, but came like a shot the last eighth of a mile, and nipped the place by a head from Valencia.

The nine furlong handicap, third on the programme, was very interesting. Ten owners accepted the weights for their horses, and everything, except perhaps Little Esperanza, Pescador and Raindrop, was hacked well. Sir Walter and Almont went to the post equal favorites at 2 to 1. Belfast opened at 8 to 1, but coin forced the odds down to 5 to 1 at the close. Democrat was played for a killing. A good start was elicited, and Pescador, on the fly, fifth as the flag dropped, led the way passing the stand, with Raindrop and Almont his closest rivals, but all pretty well hunched for such a field. Dinero ran up fast around the first turn from sixth place, and led passing the quarter by nearly a length, Belfast in the place, he having moved up from eighth place. Pescador was third and Raindrop at his neck. At the half-pole there was no material change. An eighth of a mile further along, though, and a considerable shifting was indulged in, Belfast taking the lead from Dinero and swinging into the homestretch about a length to the good, Raindrop third, Red Prince fourth, while Sir Walter was fifth and beginning to come up fast. A great shout went up that Boots' good hay horse was gaining so fast that he would win, and a little over a sixteenth from the finish Belfast faltered for a second or so, but when Sir Walter and Raindrop came up close to him the Longfellow blood in the chestnut Missourian began to surge, and he pricked his ears, extended himself like an eagle, and flew in a winner by nearly a length, Sir Walter second (beaten at last, but not disgraced), a neck from Raindrop, old Sheridan a good fourth, the rest strung out, the hot tip, Democrat, last of all. Time, 1:56 1/2. Almont was not in the hunt after a quarter of a mile had been run. Belfast is a good horse, and will scarcely get in another handicap soon with 106 pounds up.

Martinet, with odds of 1 to 5 against his chances, waited on Clacquer and Wicklow until the homestretch was reached, when he came on and won easily by three parts of a length from the ridden-out Wicklow, he a neck from Rosebud, that was probably a little short of work. Time, 1:30.

Sympathetic's Last and Bessie W. went to the post equal favorites at 7 to 5. Castro and Red Cloud had a few friends. Sympathetic's Last went up second soon after passing the half-pole, and when Clancy let go the brown horse head (about half-a-dozen strides from the finish) he came away from Bessie W. as if she was tied up, winning in a romp by a neck. Red Cloud ran up into third place in the homestretch, being one and one-half lengths behind Bessie W. Time, 1:22 1/2.

Stoneman and Oakland were plunged on heavily, both closing at 2 to 1. Quiet tips went out on Jackson and Alfred B. The start was anything but pretty, Cassim and Jackson having at least two lengths the best of it. Jackson, vigorously ridden by Johnny Weber, was soon in front by daylight, and though closely pressed around the turn into the homestretch and in the first part of the straight by old gray Stoneman, shook that fellow off, Oakland taking up where the gray left off. At the dragate Little Touga came up with a fine burst of speed, he and Oakland passing the finishing point head-and-head in a dead heat. Jackson won the race by one and a half lengths. Alfred B. was one of the worst sufferers by the start, but finished fourth. Time, 1:15. W. Clancy, the good rider of the Holy Stahle, who had the mount on Francesca in this race was kicked severely just below the right knee by Cassim, and at first it was thought Clancy's leg was broken, but it proved to be only a bad bruising and abrasion of the skin. However, it will be many days ere Clancy will be in the saddle again, it is feared. The youth was conveyed to the upper story of the club-house and attended by the Association's surgeon, Dr. Quinlan.

Johnny Weber, who made his reappearance in the saddle to-day, after being unjustly ruled off by the local association, did very well, indeed, riding Jackson to victory, Bessie W. and Wicklow second and Valencia third.

Won in a drive. Winner b by Luke Blackburn—Ivy Leaf. Entered by E. Savaaga. Francesca's original jockey W. Clancy, was kicked by below the knee by Cassim in this race, and was quite painfully injured.

Next Wednesday's Sale.

The opportunities owners of stock farms have had this winter to purchase first-class broodmares, colts and fillies at lower prices than the same grade of stock ever sold for before, have been many. The progressive breeder, the one who believes in making money out of the business by breeding and developing trotters that will trot, and well-bred horses that will sell, has been present and profited by his purchases. The eras of apparent depression in all branches of business come at regular intervals, and the men endowed with forethought and wisdom who live up to the axiom, "Buy when everything is low and sell when everything is high," are always the successful ones. The chances for horsemen to secure real bargains this year are growing less every month, and when such a consignment of stock is offered as that to be sold next Wednesday at Killip & Co.'s saleyard, horsemen should attend and see what an aggregation of really first-class ones it is. The sale is absolute. Messrs. Talbot and Sessions are too well known to our readers to need an introduction, and as judges of horses, they stand as high as any two men in California. Mr. Talbot owns Mt. Hood, 2:22 3/4, and as his stock farm is small, he does not care to train and develop any but the progeny of this horse, therefore he sends every broodmare he owns that is not bred to Mt. Hood and every colt and filly that is not by this game son of Eros to the sale. Mr. Josiah Sessions is one of our pioneer horsemen, and as he says, "he is too old to stay in the business, and is offering all the choicest ones he has selected and owned for the past few years, because he wants to be relieved of the cares attached to owning fast trotters. Let others get them and they will call me blessed, for a finer lot of horses were never hitched."

There are thirty head to be sold in all; fourteen of these are the property of Mr. Talbot. They are all broken and are perfectly gentle; they do not pull on the bit while being driven; they are of good size and have had all the care lavished upon them that this horseman could think of. Their exhibition of speed will surpass that of any lot ever brought to this city and as their breeding will justify all the auctioneer can say and the purchaser can hope for, we know that every one who gets one of these individuals will be more than satisfied.

The stock is nearly all registered and certificates will be given with the bill of sale.

The chestnut filly Violetta foaled 1891, by Kafir 15.045, dam Violette, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31; second dam Viola, by Echo 462; third dam Woodbine (sister to Monarch, 2:28 1/4), by Woodburn; fourth dam Vestress (dam of Monarch, 2:28 1/4), and the dam of Lohengrin, 2:27 1/4, by Williamson's Belmont. This is the kind of breeding that is being sought for by all lovers of fine-looking, good-sized, game trotting stock. Violetta is stylish and handsome and although never having received any track work has shown enough to warrant a buyer in giving her to a trainer. Her breeding commends her to all seeking a broodmare that will produce well-limbed intelligent and pure-gaited trotters: Sultan, Hambletonian Patchen, American Star, Lexington and Williamson's Belmont blood. All strong bloodlines that are noted as great on the maternal side of many of our greatest trotters' pedigrees.

Hyack is an Indian name for a two-year-old brown filly by Guide, 2:16 1/4, out of Travers mare, by Billy Hayward, 2:31 1/4, and the second dam is the Ransome mare, a famous road mare that was a winner on the Cliff House road at all distances. Guide, 2:16 1/4, is by Director, 2:17, out of Imogene (dam of Del Win, 2:20 1/4, and Guide, 2:16 1/4), and is one of the best bred sons of the Black Cyclone in this State, his progeny can trot and will trot fast when given an opportunity. Billy Hayward, the sire of Hyack's dam, was one of the gamest sons and best sires by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. and his dam was by The Morse Horse, sire of Gen. Taylor, so it can be seen that Hyack inherits speed from every side. She is a large-sized, good-looking, pure-gaited trotter and will be useful anywhere. She will show what she can do in the way of trotting.

Kitsap is by Santa Rita 18,018, one of the finest-looking sons of Buccaneer out of the Perfection mare, a mare that could pull a buggy in 2:50 at any time and never knew what it was to be tired. Kitsap is the making of a nice roadster. She is inclined to pace, although her sire and dam were pure-gaited trotters.

Some one will want a gray trotter, one that will make himself as famous as Jack of Pilot Medium fame. The yearling Utsalady 20,174 will fill the bill; he is bred away up in G, and can trot as fast as any Sidney in the State that has had no greater opportunities than he. Utsalady is, to use a horsey phrase, "a corker," and he inherits speed from his sire, dam and grandam. Anna Magee, his dam, is by Capt. Manford 804 (better known as Paddy Magee); she got her record of 2:37 1/4 while heavy with foal, and had but three weeks' track work there. A finer mare would be difficult to find anywhere. Her dam Winona was a great one and was by Hambletonian 725 out of Vanona Fee a t b, by Illinois Medoc. Utsalady has perfect limbs, a well-shaped, intelligent head, fine neck, splendid shoulders and quarters and he can trot fast.

There are some sons of Electioneer that have never had the opportunities they should have had, either on the track or in the stud, and Lancelot, the sire of Klikitat is one. He trotted quarters as a three-year-old in 33 seconds repeatedly, but being injured never was able to get a record. He was placed in the stud, but got very few good mares. Seminary Girl (that is to be sold in this sale) is, we believe, one of the best ever trot to him. Her filly, Klikitat, is a beautifully-formed chestnut, and can show as much trotting ability as any one in the sale. She is thoroughly broken and very gentle, and will make her sire and dam famous if she is put on the rack. Seminary Girl, the dam of this equine beauty, is a roan mare that P. A. Finnegan used to pass everybody with on the roads. No one knows how fast she can go. She is perfectly sound, for after she trotted a mile in 2:28 at Pleasanton, Mr. Finnegan put her to breeding, believing he had the reatest matron in California. Having to go to Europe, he sold her to Mr. Talbot, and in his possession, she dropped the handsome foal by her side. Mr. Talbot did not breed her, and by one who wants a first-class road, track or broodmare could secure her. Words are inadequate to express her merits.

Teekelat 22,166, by the great Simmocolon, 2:13 1/4, out of Kringa, by Yosemite 4306, second dam Maud II, (sister to ez, 2:30), by The Moor 874; third dam Katydid (dam of ez, dam of Vesolia, 2:29 1/4), by Fireman, is a good one, whose degree needs to be more fully set forth, for everyone will want to know where he gets his wonderful speed from. Simmocolon is by the great Simmons, 2:28 (sire of Greenleaf, 103; New York Central, 2:10 1/4, and twenty-seven others in 2:30), out of Colon by Strathmore 408, second dam Coral, (dam of Coraloid, 2:14 1/4), by Clark Chief 89, etc. Yosemite, sire of Cressida, is by Egbert, out of Leah (sister to Malaga, dam of Woodbrino, 2:25 1/4, sire of four in 2:30), by Woodford Mambrino; second dam Maud (dam of King Jim, 2:20 1/4, and two sires of eleven in 2:30), by Abdallah 15, etc. Teekelat is a black colt, and as the catalogue truthfully states, is one of the finest-formed, strongest-made, best-jointed and purest-gaited sons of Simmocolon ever seen. He will pay any one to train him. His bloodlines are of the best, while his dam has a two-year-old Noonday colt that will get in the 2:30 list the first time he is started. Teekelat is thoroughly broken to harness.

Skagit, by Eros, out of Recess, by imp. Kelpie, is another fast one, and will reflect credit on her sire and dam in the first race she starts. She is a good one in every respect, and will never need urging coming toward the wire, she is not bred that way.

Don Tomas, by Antevolo, out of Black Bess, by Venture, 2:27 1/4, second dam by Easton's David Hill, is a grand-looking four-year-old stallion, thoroughly broken and just in right condition to be given to a trainer to get a low mark this fall. He comes from the best of sires and dams, and will make a splendid stock horse.

Tote, by Eros out of Jenny (dam of Perkin's stallion Iris) will need no praise from the auctioneer. She is grand-looking, good-sized, pure-gaited, stylish trotting mare, the ideal road horse, sound, kind and a pleasant driver.

The gray mare Judy 2:40 that will be sold has no known pedigree, but she has speed, disposition, gameness and a perfect conformation—a model roadster endowed with superior intelligence. There are others in the Talbot consignment that will attract attention as they are the kind lovers of horses like to see and own.

Josiah Sessions' lot includes La Tosca (full sister to Niles Beauty, 2:25 1/4), a grand individual being by Ulster Chief 18,011, out of Puss (a great broodmare), by Skenadoah 926. She is stunted to Steinel, son of Steiway and Phaceolo, by Silverbreads, and is the making of a great broodmare.

Bernwood is another good-looking mare that can trot fast; she is also stunted to Steinel.

Bonnie Bernwood, by Figaro, out of Bernwood, by Fleetwood, is a good-sized, well-formed, strong-limbed filly that can trot fast for the little handling she has had.

Laughing Waters is the name of one of the nicest-looking mares in the sale. She is by Noonday (son of the mighty Wedgewood), out of Nokomis, by Del Sur, 2:24. Laughing Waters is one that will pay for her training, while her bloodlines can hardly be improved.

Sir Derby, by Chas. Derby, 2:20 (one of the most promising sires in California) will cause every horseman to wish they owned him as soon as he is led out for inspection. He is also out of Nokomis, one of the gamest daughters of Del Sur.

Mr. Session's favorite roadster, King Orine, is to be sold and whoever wants a first-class trotter, one that needs no boots and can trot all day, should not let this one pass into the hands of some one else at the sale.

Jessie Ebony is the name of a filly by Abdol, 2:28, out of Jessie, by Ned Forrest, and will make a first-class roadster. She has been bred to Steinel.

Ulster King, by Ulster Chief; Major, by Abbottsford and Lady Orine are all good ones and will prove their value any where.

Eva, by Grand Moor Jr., out of Nancy, by John Nelson 187 is a stylish young road mare. She can show quarters in forty seconds and can trot all day.

Tempest, by Junio, out of Weaver Girl was not offered at the Kentfield sale, but will be sold at this one. Mr. Kentfield concluded to put him in here. Tempest is a large, fine-looking bay gelding and is an excellent road horse.

Kiff Kiff is by Jocko, a thoroughbred, and inherits the blood of Lexington, Leamington and Glencoe. She is an excellent broodmare.

There are several others in the sale that are really excellent individuals. The sale will commence at 11 o'clock A. M., and every one who wants a good roadster, broodmare, standard colt or filly should attend it. It is the closing out sale of good ones. The stock will be at the salesyard to-morrow for inspection until time of sale. Send for catalogue.

Charles Kertell has been East on a business trip in the interest of the celebrated Red Ball Brand stock food. He has succeeded in selling over six car-loads for consumption in the large breeding establishments as far east as New York. One large order in particular he is much pleased to chronicle; it is from Foxhall Keane, and is to be fed to Tournament and his other flyers.

Vallejo Races.

The advertisement of the races to take place at Vallejo appears in this issue, entries for which will close May 10th. The track has been placed in first-class order; everything about the course will be in better shape than it has ever been. The officers of this association are energetic, enthusiastic and anxious to begin their fair with large entries for the different races. Sonoma, Marin, Napa, Solano, Contra Costa, Yolo, Lake, Mendocino and Humboldt are nine very large counties. Surely there must be a number of trotters and pacers among the thousands of horses there to make the Vallejo Fair an interesting one. Let every horseman do his best to encourage his neighbor to send some of his most promising ones to this fair. Read the advertisement and make entries at once. At the time of going to press and too late to make the change in the advertisement, a telegram was received at this office from the secretary of the Vallejo Association, to make the three and four-year-olds, best three in five, in free-for-all and District purses.

EVERY horseman in the land who wants to keep pace with the times should visit Hirschman at 113 Sutter street and purchase one of his celebrated timers. He supplies nearly all the trainers and drivers on this coast, and has yet to hear of any dissatisfaction among the buyers.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

SEND for a sale catalogue of the Talbot-Sessions' horses.

THE horses to be sold next Wednesday are to be seen at the salesyard to-morrow and every other day until the sale.

EVERYBODY who wants to see marvellous exhibitions of speed should attend the Talbot sale next Wednesday, April 19th.

C. H. NELSON has bought back the fast mare Aubie, 2:19, and will hitch her double with Nelson, 2:10, for a trial against the world's double-team record.

THERE is a youngster by Noonday, out of a Steiway mare, over at Meese's Stock Farm, near Danville, that will be the first Noonday to enter the 2:30 list.

JAMES E. BERRYMAN is working four very promising trotters at the Napa track and when the bell taps he will be ready to win some of the money hung up.

BEN KENNEY has bought from John E. Madden the bay pacing stallion St. Patrick, 2:14, by Volunteer, dam Young Saline (dam of Monroe, 2:27), by Guy Miller.

PAULIN & Co., of Fresno, have moved all their stock of fine trotters to the Laurel Creek Farm, near Belmont. They have some very promising youngsters among the lot.

ORRIN A. HICKOK is very busy at the Souther Farm race track. His horses are all doing well, and by the first of the month he will have them in first-class condition to send East.

THE seal brown Red Wilkes stallion, Ed. Wilkes, that stood for a short season at Petaluma last fall, is at Portland, Oregon. From a letter received we learn that his book is almost filled.

ADVOCATOR is the name of a very promising colt by Secretary, dam Debonair, by Sultan, that is going exceedingly well. He is owned by Chas. Northrup, the popular harness maker of Petaluma.

THE colts and fillies by Del Win over at Danville are all trotters of the kind that will sell well. They are large, heavy-boned, well-muscled, bay or brown, and have the purest of trotting action.

APPLICATIONS for stalls at the Petaluma track are coming in rapidly. From present indications the largest gathering of trotters and pacers that was ever seen there will be at this fine course this fall.

JAMES MAGUIRE, the superintendent of the Edgemont Park Stock Farm, has the finest lot of youngsters to work on he has ever seen. Jim is a splendid hand and will have quite a string of good ones this year.

IN the division appropriated to horses at the World's Fair the American trotting horse occupies the place of honor in the premium list. Besides two diplomas and a medal, there is the sum of $5,100 in premiums.

IF you want to get a standard trotting mare, colt or filly, attend the sale next Wednesday at Killip & Co.'s salesyard. The collection of first-class stylish roadsters that can trot will surpass any heretofore offered in this city.

ED. CONNOLLY, the trainer who had Dr. Wise's string on the Montana and California circuits last year, will be seen at the fall meetings in this State behind a number of fine ones belonging to Richard Gird, of the Chimo Farm.

THE Oakland Trotting Park is deserted by the thoroughbreds and the trotters are now dashing up and down the stretches and around the turns. The inside track is very convenient and is highly appreciated by horsemen.

IT is reported that M. C. Delano, who is in the granite business at Rocklin, Cal., will return to his old home in Maine to resume his favorite calling as trainer and driver. It is on dit that among others, he will handle Robinson D., 2:24.

THE service fee of Allerton, 2:09, last year was $1,000. At the commencement of this season Williams put it down to $300, and now it is $200. Williams' star seems to be waning. He announces that Allerton will not be trained this year.

WM. OVERHOLZER'S Dawn stallion Oaknut is at Petaluma. He will be seen on the circuit this fall, and at the same meetings there will be at least two of his get to make him noted as a sire. It is said they are as fast as Dawn was at their age.

BEN CHEBOYA is with Millard Sanders at the Valensin Stock Farm handling the young Sidneys. Ben is an able lieutenant and some day we shall see him have a string of trotters on the circuit as good and as speedy as any in the State.

CHAS. C. McIVER, the genial proprietor of Linda Vista Stock Farm, has had a few really good colts and fillies at Pleasanton. Last week he sent two of the best to Mr. Salisbury to be handled by that prince among reinsmen, J. Kelly, and the balance he had sent to his stock farm near Irvington.

THE following have been appointed Directors of Agricultural Societies by the Governor: J. A. Trescony, District No. 7, Monterey county; John C. Boggs, George W. Towle, District No. 20, Placer county; F. D. Baldwin, D. M. Locke, R. C. Kirby, District No. 14, Santa Cruz county.

FREE HANEY, the Petaluma trainer, is at Lodi. He has a colt by Daly, 2:15, belonging to Wm. Bihler, that he believes will be winning money this fall. Daly will have a number of good ones to his credit in a few years; everyone who owns a colt or filly by him believes he has a race horse.

MR. W. A. PAXTON, JR., Omaha, Neb., lost last week by pneumonia, the race mare, Maud B. by Red Wilkes, dam by George Wilkes. Mr. P. sustains quite a loss in her, as she was the "Blue Ribbon" broodmare of the "Keystone Farm," was bred last year to Nutwood and due to foal soon.

MARVIN is driving on the covered track at Meadville a ten-month-old filly by the Electioneer stallion Conductor, dam by Wood's Hambletonian, and has already stepped the youngster a quarter in 44 seconds. This is certainly phenomenal, and Marvin says that he expects to lower the yearling record with this daughter of Conductor.

MARCUS DALY is long-headed as well as good hearted. He wrote Secretary Ed. A. Tipton to return all moneys sent by breeders nominating mares in the Kentucky Futurity that were in foal to Prodigal, 2:16, and to draw on him for the amount due, as it was his intention to pay the fee for nominating all mares in foal to him.

THERE is a two-year-old Sidney in Kelly's string at Pleasanton that was not deemed worthy of being named for the Eastern events. Everybody in the little horse kingdom of Pleasanton is regretting this, for this Sidney side-wheeler is a Hal Pointer, Direct and Flying Jib all rolled into one, and its a "living whirlwind of speed."

FROM present indications, owners of trotters and pacers are bound to make the spring meeting of the Trotting Horse Breeders' Association a success. The special races will give all the horses a chance; it is believed that nearly three hundred trotters will be at the Bay District track, and most of them will be seen in the races.

STAMMOOR, by Stamboul, 2:07, dam Moor Maid, by The Moor, is at Petaluma. He is considered one of the finest-looking sons of the "King of Trotters;" his colts and fillies are large, fine-looking and pure-gaited trotters; they are all bays and browns. Stammoor never got but one chestnut filly and she is a very dark one, out of a light golden chestnut mare by Dawn, 2:18.

DICTATUS, the premier stallion of the Belmont Stock Farm, is having his book rapidly filled with the names of some grandly-bred mares that are owned by men who believe in the game qualities of the fashionable Red Wilkes-Dictator cross. Maggie C., 2:25, by Hambletonian 725, owned by Dr. D. A. Hiller, of this city, was sent to him last week. Dictatus will get a low record in Wm. Fieldwick's string this fall.

MIKE McMANUS has charge of Dr. Wise's string at Los Angeles. Adelaide Simmons is the best of the lot. Emin Bey, 2:23, by Guy Wilkes, has been thrown out of training for awhile. Glendine, 2:20, by Judge Salisbury, will be entered in the 2:20 class race that is to be placed on the programme of the Breeders Association of Los Angeles. This will be a good one for Gossiper Alto Rex, Native State, Larco, and Ben Corbitt will be also compete.

THE ringers will not in future be allowed to make South Dakota a favorite stamping ground. A bill providing that any one who shall enter a horse under an assumed name in any big race for money shall be liable to imprisonment in a penitentiary for one year to three years, or in the county jail not less than six months, and fined not more than $1,000, has passed both houses of the South Dakota legislature, has been signed by the Governor, and is therefore now an existing law.

DAN MIZNER, the well-known trainer and driver of Petaluma, has been seriously ill for about four months. Last Monday he was able to sit on the porch of his cottage in the sunlight for the first time. Dan believes that the doctor will have him "conditioned" for the races this fall and he is taking his condition powders and medicines with rare good grace. He wants to drive Plunkett, 2:13, through the circuit this year and R. S. Brown, the owner, says he can have him if he gets strong enough to ride.

THE young stallion wonder Arion of $125,000 fame, sired a filly March 31, the first of his get. The dam is Maggie Sultan, 2:30, by Sultan, out of Maggie Prescott, by Jim Monroe; grandam Laura Logan, by American Clay. She was bred by J. T. McMillan, Paris, Ky. This filly's career will be carefully watched on account of the bluest of blue blood of her sire and dam. Mr. J. Malcolm Forbes has said that after a limited stud season he would again put Arion in training for a go at the champions this year.

TEEKELAT 22,166 is an Indian name for the Simmoocolon colt out of Cressida, by Yosemite 4906, second dam Maud H. (sister to Inez, 2:30, dam of Vesolia, 2:29), by The Moor 870, etc., that is to be sold at the Talbot sale. The Simmoocolons are considered the greatest of all the youngsters in the East, and Teekelat will occupy a similar place in the estimation of all who see him next Wednesday disposed of at auction to the highest bidder. He is one of the best made, strongest built and purest-gaited trotters seen this year.

IN publishing the list of entries to the P. C. T. H. B. Association's meetings last week through an error the following were omitted: Jos. Cairn Simpson's bay filly Altavolo, by Antevolo, dam Purissima Damsel, by Hambletonian 725 in the free-for-all colt purses for the spring meeting, and the entry made by B. V. VanBokkelen of the bay filly, Daisy D., by Oneco, dam by Woodbury in the three-year-old Encouragement purse should have been placed in the three-year-old champion purse for the fall meeting.

PAYNE SHAFTER is busy training a lot of young Rustics, Secretaries and Antevolos that are very promising. Mr. Shafter loves to surprise the boys with an unknown at the Petaluma and Napa fairs, and somehow he always succeeds. As a driver and conditioner, Mr. Shafter has ideas of his own, and many of our young drivers are anxious to learn a few of them. He brings his horses to the post in perfect condition and drives them under the wire in front of a field of competitors with as much coolness as Budd Doble.

JOSE H. NEAL, the able superintendent of the Pleasanton Stock Farm, in the last issue of Dunton's Spirit of the Turf, handles its California correspondent "Occident" without gloves. He shows this knight of the quill up to be a "Munchausen" and calls Editor F. J. Berry's attention to the fact that if "Occident" cannot tell the truth he had better say nothing. Mr. Neal omitted to state that the charge made in the letter against Wallace Mendenhall was a warranted falsehood and we state this one fact for "Occident's" consideration.

THE Kentucky Futurity Stakes, for foals of 1893, valued at $25,000, has received 1379 entries. The heaviest contributors are: William Simpson, 40; William Russell Allen, 36; H. S. Henry, 32; A. H. Moore, 25; San Mateo Farm, 25; Palo Alto Farm, 24; Hermitage Stud, 21; Marcus Daly, 21; Glenview Farm, 21; H. C. McDowell & Son, 20; John H. Shults, 20; Village Farm, 20; W. C. France & Son, 18; B. J. Treacy, 16; La Siesta Ranch, 15; Schmulbach & Park, 15; Standard Trotting-Horse Company, 15; Edgewood Farm, 13; L. V. Harkness, 13; J. R. & C. J. Smith, 12; C. W. Williams, 12; H. C. Jewett, 11; T. C. Anglin, 10; S. A. Browne & Co., 10; G. C. P. Cecil, 10; Ketcham Farm, 10; A. A. Kitzmiller, 10; Leonard Bros., 10; C. & F. Ridgley, 10; Colonel John E. Thayer, 10.

ABOUT ten years ago, during a season of financial depression all over the country, the trotting horse breeders were putting their stock on the market at very low prices. Many fine horses were purchased then, the sellers being ready to accept almost any price, while the purchasers who took advantage of the low market reaped a large profit in a very few years. Money is scarce in business circles now, and the horse industry feels it as keenly as any other business. History repeats itself, and those who purchase judiciously now will certainly make a profit.

SINCE our article on Lady Woodard appeared last week, we have received a letter from J. H. Troy, of Oakland, who adds more glory to the fame of this great mare as follows: "The mare Lady Woodard sold by Mr. Wm. Hendrickson to Peter Donahue, is the dam of the colt, Pat Malloy. He was by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, and is known as the sire of the dam of Com. 2:26, and others whose names I do not now recall. Pat Malloy was a grand individual; he got first premium at the State Fair as a four-year-old. He was very speedy, but Mr. Donahue was not in the business of training trotters. Pat Malloy was for years at the Col. Gift ranch, Martinez. I believe that Ed. Newland, of Oakland, has a wonderfully fast colt that is out of a daughter of Pat Malloy's." We would like to hear of more of the get of this horse. Lady Woodard is therefore the dam of Westfield, 2:25, Budd Doble 3764 and Pat Malloy.

K. O'GRADY, of Hobart Stock Farm, has a royally-bred young stallion; a glance at his pedigree will prove this. He is called Hart Boswell 13,699. He is sired by the great Onward, 2:25 (sire of 64 trotters, 24 sires of 56 and 10 dams of 12 in the list), by George Wilkes, 2:22, out of Dolly (dam of Director, 2:17, Czarina, 2:21, Onward, 2:25, and Thorndale, 2:22), by Mambrino Chief 11, etc. Hart Boswell's dam is Nancy Lee (dam of the Queen of the Turf, Nancy Hanks 2:04, and Dictator Wilkes, sire of Richard Jay, 2:17), by Dictator 113 (sire of 45 in the list, 20 sires of 66 and 19 dams of 27 2:30 performers); second dam Sophie (grandam of Mike Wilkes, 2:15, Ira Wilkes, 2:22), by Edwin Forrest 49; third dam Sophronia, by Brown Pilot (Parker's); fourth dam by Bertrand; fifth dam by Lance; sixth dam by American Eclipse; seventh dam by Gray Dungannon. This colt is a three-year-old, and will stand for a few mares this year at the farm, for the low price of $50 the season.

PARKVILLE FARM will have three strings of trotters and pacers this year. Johnny Driscoll will have about ten of the aged horses with records, while the second and third strings will be in charge of Nichols and Evans. Parkville boasts of a score of horses with records better than 2:30. They are in splendid shape, and as the track is good just now Driscoll and his aids are working those that are to be sent after the money this year, so that they will be ready when the bell rings. The most improved horse in Driscoll's string is the Californian, Regal Wilkes, who trotted in 2:11 at Stockton. Thistle, 2:14, the pacing whirlwind, injured one of his eyes a few days ago, but the sight has not been impaired. This great son of Sidney should take a record of 2:10 or better this year. The filly by Favorite Wilkes, bought last autumn at Poughkeepsie by Mr. Shultz, can go "like a thoroughbred," to quote Driscoll, who let her move this morning. Eagle Princess, by Eagle Bird, is going to make some of the green pacers tired this year. A new arrival on the Boulevard is Charles E. Swan, of Derby, Conn. Mr. Swan has quite an extensive string, with Blizzard, 2:16, the fastest of the lot.

A WRITER in the Breeders' Gazette thinks that one of the greatest detriments to horse breeding is that farmers, as a rule, do not realize the importance of kind and gentle treatment of the mares in foal. He firmly believes that the destiny of the future horse is to a great extent determined while in the mother's womb. A great deal is said about stunting the colt the first year of his life; he believes there is more at stake while the fetus is being formed and developed than at any time afterward. He says: "It is a well-known fact that the colt takes its constitution and disposition mainly from the mother, and thus it follows that it is of the greatest importance to give careful attention to the broodmare in every respect. A slight chill or other mishap, even if it does not cause a miscarriage, is liable to check the growth of the fetus. It is all the better to work a brood mare till within a few weeks of her time, but the practice of putting her through all sorts of work, weather and conditions is very foolish and unjust. It should always be seen to that they are provided with dry; comfortable quarters, and supplied with good nourishing food. Unless careful attention is given the animal that has double work to do there will be a draining of the vitalizing powers and each organ cannot properly perform its duty. Mares are oftentimes allowed to become thin in flesh towards spring; this is the time when special attention is needed in order to give the mare full strength to prevent a back set at foaling time, and also to start the young colt on a healthy career."

AN Eastern horseman, who is visiting the stock farms in this State, was not satisfied with one visit to Palo Alto but had to repeat it, and on his return to this city, spoke as follows: "I visited Palo Alto nearly six years ago, and I thought then that I had seen the most perfect establishment of the kind in the United States, but, on my two last visits I found so many improvements I could not help expressing my admiration. Mr. Covey is the right man in the right place, while Messrs. Ferguson, Reynolds, Phippen, Nolan and the other able men are doing more for the great institution than I expected after the reports I had read of the place in the Eastern turf journals. There are more fast trotters in proportion to the number of young horses there than on any other three breeding farms in America. The great thoroughbred cross in trotters is exemplified on this place to a marvelous degree for its worth as a potent factor in getting extreme speed, gameness, soundness, docility and perfect dispositions can be seen at once. Why, I saw a filly by Palo Alto, out of a three-quarter thoroughbred mare, that was only bitched up four times, stop in front of me as his proud driver (whom I had not seen for years) spoke for about five minutes about the 'boys at home,' and the little thing never stirred while the horses were trotting past us on that track at a 2:30 clip; she looked around like an old campaigner, and I could not resist the temptation of caressing her. The outlook is good for the stock at this farm. Every youngster handled that is by a son of Electioneer seems to be endowed with all the requirements needful in a handsome, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited and speedy trotter. I only wish I could convince all the owners of our large Eastern stock farms to come to Palo Alto, and see for themselves that this is the nursery of record-breakers and the training school par excellence of the trotting world."

The Saddle.

CHARLES BOOTS last Wednesday refused an offer of $3,500, made by B. C. Holly for Sir Walter.

Dr. C. W. ABY, looking sunburned and hearty, arrived in the city from New York last Saturday.

THE Australian-bred mare, Repose, by Apremont, did not prove in foal to Peel, and has been bred to Flambeau.

H. R. POTTER, of Merced County, brought up to the races late last week two three-year-olds by the Australian horse, Kelpie.

CHARLES BOOTS is considering an offer of $10,000 for the Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt, who is well-engaged in stakes at Chicago.

At the end of the first week Miller led all the jockeys at Bay District track, with Joe Narvaez a close second and Morris third.

THE famous mare Thora, dam of Yorkville Belle and Sir Francis, has foaled a filly by St. Blaise, making seven St. Blaise foals at Fair View up to date.

BLITZEN, who is commonly called the "iron horse," heads the list of winners at Gutterburg with fifteen races. Panway and Kirkover come next, with eleven victories each.

SOME twenty mares are due to foal to imp. Midlothian this season. If another Sir Walter is developed this year the lot should prove a veritable gold mine to John Mackey.

THE Blood Horse race programmes issued by Stern & Co. have been very correct, and are giving general satisfaction. The conditions in all the races are given—a very good feature.

TONY HAMILTON, who is under contract to ride for August Belmont, has arrived in New York from St. Louis, where he spent the winter, and will begin to fit himself for the Brooklyn meeting.

THE Aena stable has signed Jockey J. Irving for the coming season at a salary of $4,500. Irving has been riding for D. Waldo, but his contract expires April 7. Critics all speak well of him as one of the best light-weights around Chicago.

BOB SMITH, the well-known jockey-trainer, will not be able to attend the Blood Horse meeting, his services being required by Hugh Kirkendall in the work of getting the big string of the Montana turfman in shape for the Washington Park meeting.

THE chestnut two-year-old brother to Parvenue, Slight-of-Hand, by Uncas, dam Necromancy, in Boyle & Littlefield's stable, is said to be something quite out of the common. Mr. Littlefield pronounces him one of the best two-year-olds he ever saw.

IMP. MERRIWA has been mated with Faralone, by Norfolk, dam Golden Gate, by imp. Leamington, and her daughter, Lady Winters, by Kyrle D. (son of imp. Kyrle Daly and Maggie S., dam of Alliance, by Bayonet). This is breeding royal enough for anyone.

THE Bakersfield Californian says the star of Charles Kerr's stable is a brown two-year-old filly by Munster (son of imp. Darebin), dam Wild Rose (dam of Jennie K.), by Norfall. This is the first of Munster's get, and her performances will be watched with interest.

JAMES BYBEE, the veteran horseman, father of the late Judge R. E. Bybee, together with S. J. Jones, has leased of Mrs. R. E. Bybee four excellent horses—Misty Morn, Rosebud and their full sisters, and will enter them shortly at the Blood Horse meeting.

REPORTS from Los Angeles are to the effect that Lady Bess, the Emperor of Norfolk-Arriba filly, beat Santa Anna in a mile trial late last week. She is at 100 to 1 in the American Derby. Galindo is showing up well in his work, and Amigo promises to make a high-class jumper.

THAT good two-year-old, The Lark, is a brother to Alfarata and Juniata, being by Wildidle, dam the Monday Mare; second dam Mary Givens (dam of Wild Oats), by Owen Dale; third dam Liz Givens (dam of Langford, Bonnie Belle, Pele and Gladiator), by imp. Langford.

ABINGTON BAIRD was buried April 1, in the family vault at Sticheil, Scotland, his pallbearers being seven of his cousins. His money which, despite the inroads he made on his capital, must have amounted to a much greater sum than is indicated in the cable dispatches, all goes to his mother.

THE Australian horse, Kelpie, that ran here about ten years ago, and which has been reported dead, is in excellent health, and owned by H. R. Potter, of Merced County. This gentleman also owns Sir Arthur, by Bayswater, dam Ruth Ryan, by Lodi, and this horse's produce are grand-lookers, Mr. P. says.

A SYNDICATE of Lake county horsemen have made up a purse and purchased the great race-horse Sinfax, paying $1,000 for him. F. P. Light last week went to San Francisco after the stallion. Sinfax holds the world's two-year-old record for the best time at 1 1/4 miles.—Jacksonville (Or.) Democratic Times.

TRAINER BILLY McCORMICK arrived at Bay District track last Monday from "The Arcade," Rancho del Paso, with a number of two-year-olds belonging to Messrs. Kerr, Mackey and Ira. "Big Jim" Garland came in on the same train with Ira Ramsdell's Homer and the fine-looking Duke of Norfolk—Neilson two-year-old colt.

THE noted high-jumping horse, Filemaker, whose record is feet 4 1/2 inches, had an accident last week at Kalamazoo, Mich, which may prove fatal. In jumping a fence he was napped on a picket which penetrated to a depth of about seven inches. Filemaker will be remembered as the big, raw-boned horse that graduated from a coal cart.

THE broodmare, Gold Ban, foaled 1882, by imp. King Ban, imp. imp. Cicely Jopson, by Weatherbit, died at Mr. E. C. Eadley's Beaumont Stud last week. The mare's death, which as caused by congestion of the heart, was almost instantaneous, her owner having been looking her over only a few minutes before she was found dead. Gold Ban was a fair race mare, and was owned by J. B. Richards as a two-year-old and a three-year-old by Milton Young.

JOCKEY "MOOSE" TAYLOR arrived in San Francisco last Monday from Ogden, in response to a telegram he received from H. Brown, at Bay District track. He was on his way to Denver, and it was thought the directors would offer no objections regarding his riding, but to Taylor's surprise the officials did nothing in his case last Monday night.

Dr. THOS. BOWHILL has secured the services of Alf. Stanford as trainer. Stanford was reckoned an excellent jockey in Australia and India, and did good work at Chicago for Baldwin last season, but got too heavy to ride, and devoted his attention to conditioning horses. He has in training Wildflower and Rosalie, Maid Marian having been sent to the ranch.

In Joe Nelson, the Elmwood Stock Farm owners have a jewel of a trainer. The victories of the Bonnie Jean colt and Sir Walter attest Nelson's value, and everything in the string is doing well. It is astonishing that the Boots horses have accomplished so much, for the San Jose track, where they were trained, was a sea of mud for several weeks before the Blood Horse races began.

MESSRS. GOODWIN BROS. will introduce two new features into the first issue of their Official Guide, which was to appear about the 10th inst. In the index the customary bracketing for wins will be supplemented by placing the figures 2 and 3 after the number whenever a horse has been placed. This should prove a very great aid in reference. Secondly, instead of merely describing a horse as "aged," after six years old he exact age will be given.

H. COX, of San Jose, is the first man in California to use a set of aluminum shoes on a galloper. These shoes are nearly half an inch thick, and weigh but 2 1/2 ounces forward and 2 ounces behind. He has had them on the horse over one month, and they show little signs of wear and tear at the toe, that is all. The beauty of aluminum shoes is that they do away with constant plating and in the long run save considerable money and the foot of the horse. However, it is tough on the blacksmith. Thick aluminum shoes are destined to take the place of plates.

THERE has been considerable talk about bringing Wildwood and Sir Walter together at something like weight for age. The owners of Wildwood want a race at a mile and a sixteenth, while Mr. Boots prefers 1 1/4 miles for his horse. It would be a good idea to compromise on 1 1/8 miles, the association to hang up a purse of $750 or $1,000. Nothing has so far been found able to take Wildwood's measure, but so good has Sir Walter proved himself this spring that many think he could defeat the brown colt. Such a card would certainly draw immensely.

H. R. POTTER, of Merced County, tells us that Minnie Smith, dam of Bessie Sedgwick, was not by Starlight, but by Owen Dale, and that Bruce's Stud Book has it entirely wrong, as Owen Dale never stood but one season in Stockton. He was stunted that year to Fanny Howard, by Illinois Medoc, and produced Minnie Smith. That can be proved of William Williamson, of San Jose. Mr. Potter says further that Starlight was not out of Fanny Howard. George Brennan, former owner of Billy Wallace, still living in this State, according to Mr. Potter, told him that Starlight was given credit for producing Minnie Smith just to boom his stock.

A WRITER in a local contemporary under the non de plume of "Justicia" goes on to give a list of examples of book-making at Bay District track, and by his own showing the pencilers have from 7 to 37 per cent. the best of the bettors. Still he argues in favor of the bookmaker against the Paris mutuel, where the commission charged is but 5 per cent. Leaving morality out of the question, his own mathematics strike a heavy blow on the fat stomach of the hedionated bookmaker and speak volumes in favor of the Paris mutuel. "Protect the public" should be the motto of racing associations, and if any men or set of men have from 7 to 37 per cent. the best of a game and bettors are forced to wager their money with bookmakers or not at all, we fail to see where fairness comes in.

THE largest crowd ever seen on an Arkansas race track turned out on the opening day of the Little Rock meeting to see the Arkansas Derby run. There were six starters. Boundless and Calhoun, Cushing & Orth's colts, were coupled in the betting at 5 to 4 on. Boundless, with Graham up, was never headed, and won by a length from Buck McCann, that much-touted Western colt. Calhoun was third. The distance, 1 1/2 miles, was run in 1:58. Brownwood, Francis Hope and Constantine also ran. Boundless belongs to W. S. Barnes of Lexington. He is by Harry O'Fallon, out of Endless. He was only an ordinary colt last year, having won only two races out of eleven starts. At the fall meeting at Gravesend last year he landed a sweepstakes race, beating the Girofla colt, Heads or Tails, Sam Weller and others.

E. TIERNY, of Eureka, Cal., has purchased of Mrs. R. E. Bybee the chestnut horse Broad Church, aged, by Leinster (son of imp. Australian and Luileme, by Lexington), dam Tibbie Dunbar (dam of Canny Scott, Lena and Lizzie Dunbar), by imp. Bonnie Scotland; second dam Brenna (dam of Strathmore, Sir Walter, Athalaric and Brademante), by imp. Knight of St. George; third dam the immortal Levity (dam of Ruric, Lightsome, Mildred, Lever, Legatee and the dam of Grinstead), by imp. Trustee, etc. No better-bred horse was ever foaled in America than Broad Church. The horse will probably make a short season in the stud in Eureka, be given a few months' rest, and then taken up about the 1st of August and trained for the fall races. Broad Church should make a good sire, and, fit and well, is a fair race horse.

At an executive session of the P. C. Blood Horse Association directors last Monday night Jockey Fred Carrillo, Trainer Jim Brown and ex-owner Charles Tupper, ruled off in the Al Farrow case just about four years ago, were reinstated, they having been deemed sufficiently punished for their action at the time. Fred Carrillo has been at work exercising for Mr. Macdonough this season, and was one of the best jockeys that ever straddled a horse in California at the time of his forced retirement. Jim Brown was once a crack jockey, later a most excellent trainer, and as he reaped little or no financial benefit from the Farrow swindle, he had the sympathy of a majority of the race-goers and horsemen. Tupper was a young man and was perhaps more sinned against than sinning. It was expected the cases of the Webbers would be taken up and acted upon as well as that of Jockey Thad Williams, but it was not.

THE License Committee of the American Turf Congress met in Lexington, Ky., on Thursday, March 30th, Messrs. Clay, Clare and Tarlton present. The following were granted jockey licenses: Harry Ray, Leon Gemoets, Charles A. Thorpe, W. Perkins, Clarence Bryant, Joe West, Lester Reiff and J. J. McCallerty. The committee unanimously construed Rule 160, which reads: "If a jockey should own in whole or in part a race horse in training he shall not be permitted to ride horses other than his own on any course of this Congress," to apply to a jockey having a horse in training on the track where he is riding. The Secretary of the Congress was directed to have the following notice to jockeys published: "The License Committee would call the attention of jockeys to the fact that, under the rules, they will not be allowed to ride on any of the tracks belonging to the American Turf Congress unless they have a license or have theretofore applied for one. The racing on the Congress tracks in 1893 will begin at the New Memphis Jockey Club, Memphis, Tenn., on April 13th. Applications must be made prior to that date by jockeys who intend riding there."

STEWART BROS., of Moscow, Idaho, recently sent us the following interesting communication: "We are away up here in the panhandle of North Idaho, where most breeders of good horses think it is too wet and cold to think of raising a good horse, but, Mr. Editor, we think this is just the country for that business. It will give them bone, sinew and muscle that many warm climates will not give. We have but few horses to start with, but our mares are increasing very fast, so we will soon have as many as we can take care of. On a half section of land we have some of the finest looking yearling colts that we think a man ever looked at. They are as fine individuals as a man ever saw, all thoroughbred and all registered. We will give you the breeding of some of them. We have at the head of the stud that good race horse Vici, by Virgil, dam Nutwood Maid. Broodmares—Queen, by imp. Billet, dam Bonnie Maggie, by imp. Bonnie Scotland; Bonnie Oaks, by Nathan Oaks, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, dam Bonnie Maggie, by Bonnie Scotland; Lucy Long, by Nathan Oaks, dam Queen, by imp. Billet; Belle Evans, by Humphrey Evans (by Asteroid), dam Nancy Hanks, by Brigand; Lady D., by Glen Dudley (by imp. imp. Glenelg), dam Lucy Long, by Nathan Oaks; Miss Oaks, by Glen Dudley, dam Bonnie Oaks, by Nathan Oaks; Miss Stewart, by Glen Dudley, dam Bonnie Scotia, by imp. Bonnie Scotland. The balance of our thoroughbreds are all colts by Vici out of the above bred mares."

TATTERSALLS (of New York), Ltd., have issued the catalogue of Mr. J. B. Haggins' Rancho del Paso yearlings, which will be sold at Morris Park during the first week in June, beginning Monday morning, June 1. There are no less than eighteen sires represented in the lot of 146 yearlings that will come under the hammer, though three of these, Tremont, Three Cheers and Milner, have only one each, while Argyle and Longfield have two each, Alexander (brother to Foxhall) and Fresno four each and St. Blaise three, the last-named lot being out of Carina, Flavina and Mentmore Lass respectively. Salvator's get numbered fifteen. Six are colts out of the following mares: Chimera, Daruna (half sister to Dewdrop), Electra (dam of Hidalgo, Fitz James, Marian, etc.), Lou Lanier (dam of five winners, including Kildeer, Katrina and Kaleidoscope), Mabel (sister to Ban Fox and King Fox), and that great old mare Vandalite. His fillies are out of Anrelia, Bella B., Electricity, Ethel (dam of Comanche), Katrina (dam of Kilkenny), Lizzie Lucas (dam of Cyclops, Chiuera, Cambyes, Cerise, etc.), Lydia (dam of Julien), Miss Woodford and Peoria. Sir Modred will be represented by twenty-seven yearlings. Among the mares that were mated with him were La Scala (dam of Sir Walter), Katie Pearce (dam of Lizzie S., Ballard, Katrina, etc.), Lotola (dam of Cayuga and Unrest), Tourmaline (dam of Fitzsimmons), Preciosa (dam of Uncle Jess), Explosion (dam of Dewdrop), Embroidery (dam of Sir Matthew), etc. The catalogue is a large volume in itself, and as is always the case with those issued by this firm, wonder fully complete and accurate.

WILDWOOD, the great brown colt by Wildidle—Fedora IV., was purchased last Saturday of C. A. Brown by Keating & Ottinger, and, together with Joe Cotton and one or two others, will proceed East in a few days to fill engagements at Brooklyn and elsewhere. The terms were private. C. A. Davis the well-known Eastern conditioner, will train the horses. Wildwood is a brown horse standing fully 16 hands, and is rather on the long, leggy order, having a somewhat similar make-up to most of our later-day champions of the turf. C. A. Brown purchased Wildwood (formerly Hickory Withe) from Henry C. Judson, of Wildwood Stock Farm, Santa Clara, as a yearling, for $500, and while the colt showed a great amount of speed as a two-year-old, he was a sick colt until about the first of September. Notwithstanding this, he ran third to Motto and Bessie W., but one and a half length from the winner, conceding each of the fillies twelve pounds, the six furlongs being run in 1:14. Then he ran second to The Peer (heaten a neck) in a six furlong dash, beating Romair, Motto, Bessie W. and four others and unplaced to Pescador in a wonderful six and one-half furlong run. Last season Wildwood opened the season by running third to Lottie Mills and Esperanza in a handicap, mile and an eighth, giving seven pounds away to each of the fillies, the distance being run in 1:55. After that Wildwood did not suffer a defeat, winning six races (two in one day), and doing a mile in 1:42 in a big gallop and a mile and an eighth 1:55, carrying 120 pounds and running around a big field. Wildwood is a good horse, and his trainer says he is not as delicate by far as reported in several journals, and a very fair doer. That he will render a good account of himself at Brooklyn and elsewhere if he arrives in good health there is no doubting.

THE fair grounds at Newark, O., are no doubt the most historical grounds of the kind in the world. The track is built within a sort of a fortification, built by whom no one knows, but it is supposed to have been done by the mound-builders who lived years ago. The fortification is a true circle about three-quarters of a mile in circumference and about eight feet high with a trench on the inside of the same depth. There is but one opening in it, and that is on the east side and about sixty feet wide. In the center field there is almost a perfect image of an eagle lying on its breast with its wings spread out built in the form of a mound. It is about forty feet through. The trenches are paved as nicely as could be, in fact the whole thing has been done by master hands, making it a place that should always be kept and well taken care of. Adam Seymore is the present secretary, and any person who may chance to be there will have a very pleasant time and be highly entertained by calling on him and going out to the grounds.

The Outlook in California.

The long spell of wet weather in California this winter will never be forgotten by horsemen. The rainstorms, coming as they did, just after the tracks were in perfect condition, have had a disastrous effect upon the hopes of many owners who have taken a pride in "getting horses in the list in January."

The tendency among most of our California drivers to keep pegging away all winter with their colts, and giving them a little too much work for their strength has not proved beneficial. The colts, if they do not become injured, get "track sour" and act as if the sight of the long, low white fences on the endless track is obnoxious.

The agricultural societies are beginning to advertise their meetings, and every horseman who believes in the permanency of the trotting-horse industry, and that the demand for well-bred trotting horses that can trot, and well-bred pacers that can pace, will never be fully supplied, should make entries before they close.

No one owner can claim that any other has had the advantage of a longer time to prepare his horses for the races, for the heavy rains we have had, and the conditions of the tracks preclude all possibility of such an assertion being founded on facts.

The programmes of the Spring meeting (a portion of which has been published) gives only an idea of the surprises that are in store for our horsemen, their friends and the public. The Bay District Track, with all of its improvements, will be put in excellent order for the trotters, and as thousands of dollars have been spent to make it as presentable as it is, the inaugural trotting meeting, since it has been so greatly changed, will attract large numbers of people from everywhere.

Now is the time for horsemen to take an interest in the development of their youngsters; the warm days have come, the crops are all in, the orchards are blooming and hillsides and valleys are clothed in their brightest raiment, while proud broodmares with the little trotters by their sides are knee deep in the luxuriant pastures. At present there is little for our farmers to do but attend to the development of the stock that will add wealth to their little savings and fame to their homesteads. Hence, they should use every means in their power to have their trotters ready to compete in the contests that will make them rejoice at having succeeded in their ideas of breeding, training and developing. Besides, they can look upon the old broodmare which produced that trotter with greater pride than ever, and feel that in owning her they have a treasure that money cannot buy.

Standing Starts Wanted.

The success of Mr. James Ferguson as a starter at the Blood Horse Association meeting last year had much to do with attracting large crowds to the races every day, and loud and long were the praises bestowed upon him by the press and public. The spectacle of the starter, flag in hand in the box, the colored assistant with his long whip moving among the nervous flyers, bunching them for the "flying start," was something new and progressive, and the old-time habits of our tracks were delighted with the changes made at the old Bay District course, and new life was infused in the sport.

Unfortunately for Mr. Ferguson, he had an engagement in another city, and therefore was compelled to bid adieu to the Pacific Slope. In his stead, the Association secured the services of James Rowe, ex-jockey and trainer, and one of the best starters in America. If Mr. Ferguson's work in the box was surprising, Mr. Rowe's was marvelous. The beauties of a "standing start" flashed across the intellects of all the visitors, the quiet and gentlemanly manner in which the jockeys were controlled, and the uniformly fair "send-offs" became the principal topic of the day among horsemen.

Mr. Ferguson returned; it was an unfortunate thing for him that the public had been taught how much fairer the standing start was than the one called the "flying" that had made him famous.

Numerous complaints against Mr. Ferguson's system of starting are now heard on every side, and the demands for a standing start are becoming louder and more demonstrative.

Mr. Ferguson's unfortunate action in the Weber case the first day of the meeting has had a great deal to do with this state of affairs. The jockeys seem to be bewildered; and all the advice in the world will not restore confidence as long as the flying start is in vogue. The superiority of the system under which they formerly got their horses going has made them skeptical regarding the efficacy of the present system, and as one of them remarked, "We often got away better in the breakaways than we do when the flag falls. No one seems to be sure of his position at any time except those who are used to this style of getting away."

The starter's position is not one that many people can fill with satisfaction; it is one that demands a quick eye, good judgment and a thorough knowledge of thoroughbreds and the dispositions of the boys, and, like a captain, he must have the confidence of those under him at all times, and they must know that he will protect them and give no one the advantage. Mr. Ferguson should thoroughly understand this, and adopt Rowe's populist style. The public must be protected and no favors shown to any jockeys at the track. People pay their money to witness the races; they back their favorites and rely upon the officials of the Association to give them "a run for their money." The standing start is the only way this can be accomplished.

It is a reform not inaugurated since the result of the meeting will not be creditable to the Association, and it is feared that interest in the breeding and developing of the beautiful "children of the winds" will have died in its incipency, and the bright future of this great industry will be greatly dimmed. Justice and fair play; all that is expected, and the public will endorse by their presence the actions of the association that has an eye single to that desired end.

P. C. T. H. B. Association.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association was held on Monday last to consider the entries for the spring and fall meetings, which closed on the 1st inst. There were present Messrs. Simpson, Burke, Boyd, Heald, White, Loeber, Page, Covey and Brown. President Simpson reported that he had leased the Bay District track for the spring meeting, the association to take possession Monday, May 22d, the meeting to commence on May 27th. It was also agreed in the lease that should unfavorable weather compel postponement, the lease would be made to cover such extra days. The association will give a four days' meeting, commencing Saturday, May 27th, and continuing the following Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and, should there be the great number of horses at the track that there is reason to expect, the association will probably give a number of extra days so as to accommodate all of them with races, if possible. The leading events of the meeting will be the overnight races, and in all probability there will be a great number of first-class race horses at the track to select from. The dashes and handicaps will prove most interesting to everyone.

It was decided at the meeting of directors to declare all the purses and stakes filled except the Stallion Produce and Broodmare Stakes, there not being a sufficient number of entries in these stakes to warrant the amount guaranteed by the association. The president appointed Messrs. Heald, Covey and Boyd a committee to prepare Broodmare and Stallion Produce stakes to take the place of those declared not filled. The new stakes will contain more attractions and be based on a more liberal plan, so as to secure a greater number of entries.

The president appointed an Executive Committee consisting of F. H. Burke, R. S. Brown and Wilfred Page; and a Printing Committee of E. P. Heald, Jno. F. Boyd, J. H. White. With such efficient gentlemen on these committees, there is little doubt but the advertising will be well done and that nothing will be omitted to make the spring meeting a grand success.

The following list of applications for membership was presented and the applicants elected: S. G. Reed, Pasadena; Jno. O. Reis, San Francisco; P. J. Shafter, Olema; Thos. W. Moore, San Francisco; F. W. Thompson, San Francisco; R. G. Head, Napa; Octave Marchand, Oakland; Jas. G. Fair, San Francisco; Dr. R. Gross, Eureka; T. F. Ricks, Eureka; W. O. Bowers, Sacramento; A. L. Hinds, Oakland; P. W. Murphy, Santa Marguerita; F. D. Myers, Oakland; O. A. Lowe, Woodland; Smith J. Hill, Oakland; Wilson Chamberlain, San Diego; A. McDowell, Pleasanton; Louis Henry Fox, Stockton; W. H. Paulin, San Mateo; P. J. Crowley, San Francisco; Alfred Cohen, Fruitvale; C. F. Northup, Petaluma; W. R. Overholser, Petaluma, and G. C. Fountain, St. Helena.

THE summer meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will probably commence August 5th, and a number of prominent horsemen have advanced the idea that as there are two circuits this year to claim similar dates, some plan should be decided upon that will prevent confusion. The following little schedule will be useful to Secretaries who do not wish to give a repetition of the jealousies that marred the meetings of last year and caused so much trouble among horsemen who made entries:

Table with 2 columns: Meeting Name and Dates. Rows include Marysville (August 5-12), Willows (August 21-28), Napa (August 14-19), Woodland (August 28-Sept. 2), Sacramento (September 4-16), Stockton (September 18-23), Vallejo (September 23-30), San Jose (October 2-7), and Breeders' Meeting (October 9-21).

PETER WEBER and his two clever sons, John and Harley, were reinstated last Wednesday by Col. H. I. Thornton, who was empowered by the Board of Directors of the Blood Horse Association to act as a saw fit. Their reinstatement was certainly due, under the circumstances. In fact, the Webers did nothing justifying their ruling by the Blood Horse Association officials at the time. They have been unjustly punished, humiliated and kept from earning several hundred dollars when the fault was the part of the starter and the bot-headed officials who sided with Mr. Ferguson against a father who was trying his utmost to protect his sons against future abuse.

THE attention of owners of pacers that are four years old and under is called to the advertisement of the Napa Agricultural Association. All other colt pacing stakes, previously advertised by this Association, are declared closed. Entries will close May 1st. Here is an opportunity that must not be overlooked by owners of side wheelers in this State.

CONSIDERABLE space has been taken up in Eastern turf journals about that wonderful sire of speed, Flax-tail 8132. In next week's issue we shall publish all the information that can be procured at present regarding this neglected sire. Dr. M. W. Hicks immortalized his name the day he purchased this horse, and, as a large number of our California trotters and pacers that have helped to make their sires famous trace, in the maternal line, to Flaxtail, it will be interesting to read of his history and the efforts made to establish his breeding.

Handicap Weights.

Somebody under the nom de plume of "A Yankee" recently wrote to a London Sportsman the following letter on "Handicap Weights," which, as it bears directly on a subject which has been much ventilated here of late, we quote in full:

"Will you allow me a little of your valuable space to venture an opinion on an oft-mooted question, viz., handicapping? There is an old saying that a race-horse and a donkey can be brought together, but how can this be accomplished? You cannot raise the donkey to the height of a race-horse, therefore the horse must be brought down to the level of the donkey, and it seems to me that the same principle would hold good in regard to bringing together good, bad and indifferent horses. A horse will, under a certain weight, which may in some cases be higher, in others lower, according to the conformation of the animal, give very nearly his full speed, and the taking off of weight, no matter how much, below that mark will not increase his speed to any perceptible or practical degree, whereas the addition of even a limited number of pounds will materially lessen it. To prove this statement, let me refer to America, where every race is timed to one-fifth of a second, and as nearly all races there are run from start to finish, time plays a far more important part than here, where even, with the same class of horses, one race is run slowly and the other fast.

"El Rio Rev, one of the greatest two-year-olds America has ever known, ran six furlongs with 126 lbs. (9st.) up in 1:11, and could not excel this record among equally good horses and ridden out with 11 lbs. less on her back. In the last Cambridgeshire we saw La Fleche with 8 st. 10 lbs. on her back beat Pensioner, carrying 6 st. 4 lbs. Now I maintain that if Pensioner had only had 5 st. 4 lbs. to carry the mare would nevertheless have won, but with 10 lbs. added to La Fleche's burden I think the verdict would have been reversed. Let us have a scale of weights ranging from 7 up to 11 st. The minimum will allow boys of sufficient strength to ride, and any horse capable of winning a race at all can win under that weight, and there will be sufficient play up to the maximum to make handicaps what they should be—an equalizing as nearly as possible of all contestants. For reasons which are evident from the foregoing, I do not think the raising of weights in a handicap, where no horse with 9 st. or over accepts, an equitable arrangement, as a horse carrying 3 st. 7 lbs. might beat one carrying 8 st., but with 9 st. on his back might be beaten by the other with 8 st. 7 lbs. to carry."

Whoever the writer may be, there is a vast deal of good sense in his letter. It might be said of handicaps that there is always room at the top so far as the scale is concerned. The half unconscious notion that many persons entertain here that handicaps are after all little but glorified weight-for-age races is all wrong. At the present time in England, though the four-year-old Orme has 139 lbs. allotted him in the Kempton Jubilee, people are clamoring for a higher scale of weights. Here the general tendency is to keep down the top-weight. Why? So as to keep the best horses in and this, of course, means that the others are driven out. The point made in the above letter in regard to the fact that the taking off of weight will in many cases not increase a horse's speed, while the addition of even a small amount will materially decrease it, is well taken. It strikes the keynote of the situation. In other words, a handicap must be made from the top, else horses can never be brought together.

Patronizing Young Stallions.

There is a general impression that a horse should be a much more successful and decidedly better sire when fully matured and in his prime than when very young or extremely old, still, while that certainly looks reasonable in theory, it is by no means in accordance with the records, which show very plainly that in numerous instances the very best ever got by even the most successful sires were before they reached maturity. On the other hand, the very last from a very old and enfeebled sire as often prove among the best he ever got. This is perhaps largely due to the fact that after a reputation as a successful sire has been fully established, and the class of mares with which he is most successful clearly demonstrated, his very last patronage is such as he is best adapted for, and they are usually much more valuable and better mares than would have been sent to that horse earlier in his career. It is very different, however, with a young horse, as the patronage is then almost solely untried mares or those not considered of much value, and when superior ones have been included it has usually been accidental rather than intentional, says American Horse Breeder.

It was as a two-year-old and free of charge that Rysdyk's Hambletonian sired Alexander's Abdallah, and many are of the opinion that in his whole career he never got a better son. It is absolutely certain that Alexander's Abdallah, though his stud service was far more limited than that of his sire, never got another which, as a trotter and campaigner, was any comparison to Goldsmith Maid, which he sired before reaching maturity.

Prinsep has to his credit no better performer than Trinket (2:14), which at one time held the champion four-year-old record, reducing it to 2:18, and subsequently taking a record of 2:14, and she was the result of his first year's service. The game campaigners Alcyon (2:15), Iona (2:17), Pennant (2:15), Mary Marshall (2:17), Paragon (2:13), Patron (2:14), Saxon (2:22), Sarah B. (2:20), Annie W. (2:20), Maud T. (2:19), and a very large number of others nearly or quite as fast, were by four-year-old sires. Jack (2:11), the fastest by his very successful sire, So Long (2:13), Issaquena (2:21), Whitesocks (2:20), Brandy Boy (2:20), Mista (two years, 2:29), Eva (four years, 2:23), Joe Arthurton (2:20), (two-stance (2:24), Promoter (four years, 2:19, and Vatican (2:18), Miss Seely (2:20), Mabel A. (2:23), Lookout (2:25), Sweetheart (three years, 2:22), Leone (one year, 2:23), are by three-year-old sires. Brava (2:14), Ukamet (two years, 2:27), the yearling trotter Ella Woodline (2:29), are by two-year-old sires.

Kremlin, who twice reduced the stallion record last season whose mark now is 2:07, and considered by many as the fastest trotting stallion yet bred, was by a five-year-old colt, as was also the famous Nelson (2:10), which now holds the champion trotting record on a half-mile track, Martha Wilkes (2:08, with a race record of 2:03, which is the champion race record to date), Simmocolon (2:13), the game campaigner Bonnie Wilmore (2:14), Roy Wilkes (2:07) which has held several champion pacing records, Hattie Woodward (2:15), Lady Wilkins (2:15), Astral (2:13), Jewett (2:20, pacing, 2:14), Allie West (2:25), H. B. Winship (2:20), with running mate 2:06), which is still the champion record that way of going. There are actually several hundred others by horses which had not reached maturity that have entered the 2:30 list. Of the small number of yearlings which entered the list last season, Leone, with a race record of 2:25, and Ella Woodbine (2:29), were got by sires of two and three years old, and the dam of Leone, as was also the case with the dam of Unkamet, were only four years old when these remarkable youngsters were got.

Of course there is some degree of uncertainty in breeding to any untried horse, but where the blood lines are superior and speed is unquestionably possessed, the risks become very small indeed, particularly where a reasonable degree of intelligence is exercised in the mating, and the records show that there is very little difference in the proportional success of sires at any time during their career from their first services to extreme old age, though it would be natural to infer that the most uniform success would be when in their prime; still when we take into consideration the quality of the mares which are bred to them, the evidence is strongest in favor of the very young sires.

The Professional Trainer.

What the trainers and drivers think they don't know about the profession is not worth learning. We do not refer to those mechanics who are acknowledged artists in the business, for we have always found them modest and cautious in their pretensions and opinions. A little learning makes one mad, but to drink deep at the fountain of knowledge sobers one again. In the history of many members of the drivers' association there is an egotistical period in which the knight of the sulky has mastered the whole curriculum of the business. We speak of the average trainer and driver, not men who have met with success in the profession but men who have made failures. The latter are the ones who think they know more about everything that a trotter requires than the men who have been able to drive a good many that were among the greatest winners. There are scores upon scores of men who profess to be able to develop colts and to train trotting and pacing horses according to the latest and most improved methods who do all their shoeing, tubbing, harnessing, rubbing, etc., etc., ad infinitum, in an old-fashioned, stereotyped way, just because they think they are doing it right and never stop to reason why nor ask whether there could be any better method or any more satisfactory way. More than one good horse has been ruined by men who honed them out in the old rut with utter disregard for the laws of common sense and the dictates of reason. It would be impossible to attempt a description of all the weak methods that incompetent drivers have, and the perille reasons that are advanced, if they can advance any reasons at all, for adopting such methods. We have just received a letter from a gentleman in the East who has never considered himself much of a practical horseman, and who, on entering the horse business, got a few that could trot some and was necessarily at the mercy of the drivers in whose hands he was obliged to place his horses. Last spring everything was rosy and the prospects were fine for his young stallion to take a low record and win some good races, for he was showing enough speed to warrant the belief that he could materially lower the record with which he closed the season of 1891, and which was several seconds slower than 2:30. Now that the snows of winter have arrived and this young horse has failed to distinguish himself, we cannot help but recall the fairy tales that were told in the spring. After continued disappointment the New York man took his horse away from the driver who had been handling him and decided to take care of the horse himself and have him under his own personal supervision during the winter. This was way along in November. He drove him a few times on the road, and one day while driving down Jerome avenue, he tried conclusions with a pacer that only a week before had been driven a mile and repeat over the Fleetwood track in 2:18 and 2:18, and with his owner driving him to a road cart, the young stallion seemed to have no trouble in beating the pacer down the road. Then his owner thought he would see how much speed he really had, and he carried his blankets and everything needed to work out his horse, and took him out to Fleetwood Park. He tells the story of his experience in the following language: "I took off his heavy shoes in front and put on light ones, that weighed five ounces each; I took off his martingales, his blinders and let his head down much lower than he had ever carried it before in his life. All the trainers who knew him were afraid that he would smash things all to Harlem. But he did not, and the consequence was I drove him a faster mile than he was ever driven before by any man without company. I worked him out the first mile in 2:40, last half in 1:16, last quarter in 36. The second mile he went the distance in 2:26, the last half being made in 1:11, after a stand-still break in the stretch. Now what do you think of that. Since then he has been improving every day, and I believe that I can drive him over Fleetwood a mile in 2:20."

In the letter, a portion of which is quoted, no reference is made to the lack of skill, or to put it more plainly, ignorance of the drivers who have handled this young stallion, nor does he take to himself the credit of being proficient in any way in the business. Here we have an example of an amateur in the trotting horse business who at the first attempt, by using originality and some common sense, has been able to accomplish more than those who profess to be adepts in the art of training and driving trotters have been able to accomplish in a couple of years. Men of brains are needed in the sulky. Men of horse-sense are needed to handle horses if they expect them to meet with success. This is only one of the straws that show which way the wind blows, and the turf needs a great, big cyclone that would sweep off the race track about three-fourths of the so-called trainers who are too busy in the business to hunt for Spirit.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

THE SPRING TROTTING MEETING—"Signs fail in a dry time" was an oftentimes quoted maxim in the country where I was "raised," and as a drouth of a few weeks duration was seriously detrimental to crop prospects it was the only consolation that prophets with optimistical tendencies in their vaticinations could derive, when "day after day, day after day," there was not a cloud and the sun sank in a lurid blaze, like that of Indian summer months before the season when it was a welcome winding up of the autumn. But when the prophecy is uttered that the coming spring meeting, or rather the gathering which will embrace the last days of spring and the opening week of a glad summer time, will be the best ever held on the Pacific Coast there are more reliable indications than those which are studied by the weather sharps. There was a full board present at the meeting of the directors on Monday last, no less than nine answering to the roll call, and a more harmonious body could not be assembled. Mr. Woodard, from Yolo, reported that in his section of the country there was plenty of enthusiasm over the trotting prospects, and Messrs. Page and Brown, from Sonoma, told that in the rich country where the trotting horse is held in high esteem, there was plenty of spirit and no misgivings about the future of light harness horses. Mr. Boyd is well pleased with the prospect of a large delegation from Oakwood, and Mr. Covey says that the Palo Alto contingent will contain a good many ready to take part in the fray. Mr. Burke did not say much, but there was a satisfied twinkle of the eye which, in his case, tells much to one who can interpret ocular language, and though La Sista Rancho—the eubonious title of the farm where Eros reigns—would indicate a Rip Van Winkle tendency, it is far from being a counterpart of "A pleasing land of drowsy-head it was,

Of dreams that wave before the half-shut eye;
And of gay castles in the clouds that pass,
Forever flashing round a summer sky."

the proprietor has his eye fully open, and though he may dream of a two-minute offspring of his favorite, when the fragrant smoke is curling from the cigar, in the make-believe Sista, his ratings will be founded on a better basis than day dreams.

Without exception, those who own or have horses in charge are so well satisfied with the new arrangement that they signify their approbation in unequivocal terms, and the only doubt expressed is in finding a place for each and all of the fast trotters and pacers that will be assembled on the Bay District course the last week in May.

That need not occasion any misgivings as a great many races can be decided in the seven day now embraced in the lease and there is a chance to extend the meeting another week if there are horses enough to make that necessary to accommodate all. The races, which are now closed, are six dashes, and three of heats of a mile, 2 in 3. Even should the dashes bring the number of starters up to enough to cause a division, there will be nine dash races and three of heats. From five to seven races can be handled each day, so that under pressure forty can be decided, as now arranged. Doubling this, and it is apparent that a great many horses can be accommodated. By restricting the heat races to one on each day of the meeting, more than seven can be handled when the afternoons are so long as they are at the season when this meeting will be held, and that without encroaching on the usual dining hour of San Francisco people.

Strenuous rules to guard against lagging behind will be rigidly enforced, and it is safe to assert that there will be less loss of time between the trotting events than there is now in racing. Life, spirit, a constant succession of varying pictures the aim, and that aim will surely be carried through.

THE BLOOD-HORSE. ("What sort of men are the directors of the San Francisco racing club?")

A question propounded at a coterie of turfmen congregated at The Wellington in Chicago last January. The papers had given sensational accounts of the races which had just come to a close, and the comments of the Eastern turf journals were unfavorable. I corrected the false impression so far as laid in my power, but was unable to overcome the prevailing idea that among so many tales of wrong-doing some must be true, and that the officials were derelict in attending to their duties or lacked experience in the management of racing. At this time, when there is a good deal of adverse criticism over the methods pursued, it will not be out of place to give a sketch of the members of the Board, though at the outset I must acknowledge that my acquaintance with some of the individuals is very slight. Happy to state, however, that those with whom I can claim intimate relations, there has been nothing but the most friendly feelings, and though it was a duty I could not shirk, when objections were written and published to management which was surely detrimental to turf interests, there never was the least diminution of my regard for those who did not look at the situation in the same light that others were guided by.

The President, Col. Harry I. Thornton. Genial, gentlemanly, generous, a whole string of eulogistic adjectives could be used in describing the qualities of the president of the club without eliciting disapprobation from anyone who can claim an intimate acquaintance. Well worthy of admiration, esteem and respect, and from the commencement of our intercourse until now, these have been my feelings towards him. A man of talent, of information, of capacity, of prominence in public and social life, he has been a conspicuous figure in California for more than thirty years. No more delightful companion, for whatever subject is of the most interest to his associates he is thoroughly capable of taking his part in the conversation. Natural genius improved by education, widened by travel and active participation in public affairs, and all that reinforced by manners so perfect that he may be accepted as the type of a true gentleman. Enthusiastic in whatever is connected with horses, especially those of the royal lines of breeding, and thoroughly posted in pedigrees and performances, with a critical eye for form, he is one of the few who can safely be classed as eminently proficient in the art of horsemanship, at least that part of horsemanship which is designated THE TURF. Honor his guiding star, warm friendship one of the main, if not the very foremost maxim in his creed. With those good qualities inherited and acquired, he should be a model president of a racing club, and notwithstanding I have disagreed with him, and still hold opposite views regarding some things, there is no question in my mind of his fitness for the situation. The only drawback that I can see is that he has been on the invalid list for several years, and were his bodily health such as to permit a more active participation in the duties of racing management, little fault could be found with the way the office would be filled. In the many years of close acquaintance I have enjoyed with Colonel Thornton, never the least acerbity displayed by him until there was a jangle over some of the rulings and somewhat harsh criticisms verbal and printed appeared.

It was an error when a vote by ballot was refused at the last annual election, and that is the only wrong act that he can be charged with individually. With his warm, friendly feelings for his associates, he is more likely to be warped in his judgment than a man of colder temperament, and therefore it is not at all surprising that he should see the greatest merit in their side of the controversy. Then, again, Col. Thornton is a breeder, but does not race, and thus while deeply interested in the future welfare of the turf, there are no personal interests to interfere with the proper discharge of his duty, could he afford the time to give full attention to the business of the association.

The Vice-President, Thos. H. Williams, Jr., is the most striking figure on the canvas, a figure to be noted wherever encountered. Unusually tall—I should judge considerably over six feet in height—sparse in flesh, keen, dark eyes and mobile lips, without coming strictly within the definition of a handsome man, there is an individuality, a force of character evident to even a careless observer, and which will attract attention in any crowd. Genteelly habited, without the least approach to dandyism, or any solicism offensive to good taste, his apparel harmonizes with his tall, spare form, the whole picture, as artists would say, "in keeping." Socially, and among "his set" he is a great favorite, and here I must say that, in several years' intimacy, my intercourse with Mr. Williams has been more than usually pleasant. His word as good as a bond endorsed and guaranteed in every point where assurance of compliance with the terms was requisite, and no matter how great the loss consequent upon keeping that word, it would as surely be kept as that life and reason were undisturbed. He has many qualifications that fit him with peculiar appropriateness for the position he occupies; there are others and existing conditions which are seriously detrimental. He is energetic, persistent, of undaunted courage, self-reliant, with plenty of confidence in the justice of his convictions, a thorough knowledge of racing rules, and fairly posted in racing usages and turf precedents. A keen observer of men and familiarity with the management of race horses, he has the knowledge to counteract fraudulent schemes and the nerve to punish offenders.

On the other side of the page must be written. Too much under the influence of impulse, prone to act without proper consideration, feelings in place of judgment governing and put in execution before reason has time to exert its power, and when executed reluctant to make amends. His good qualities enable him to dominate in the counsels, and the warm friendship of his associates sustain him in carrying out measures which are inimical to the welfare of the association. A little less caloric in his brain, a more sedate flow of blood in his arteries and an absence of conditions which now exist would make Mr. Williams one of the very best managers of racing meetings. The conditions alluded to are so plainly antagonistical to the position of prime manager of the racing that denial of an adverse bearing would be an indication of utter ignorance or a manifestation of imbecility, neither of which I am prepared to accept. He is a heavy bettor, probably the highest turf speculator in California. No matter how straightforward, honorable and honest the active manager of a race meeting may be, it gives the opportunity for severe criticism when there are large sums depending, with him as gainer or loser. The judges, starter, and handicapper are employed by him, and should there be the least chance to throw blame on these functionaries, and accuse them of favoritism for their employer, it will be gladly seized.

While the ownership of racehorses and the management of a prominent racing stable does not have so unfavorable an effect on public opinion as wagering large sums of money, it would be better if such owner and manager were not active in the affairs of the club which controlled the races in which he participated. A vast deal depends on the arrangements, and should the programme for the week show even fanciful advantages, there will be grumbling and discord. Some have claimed that the suspension of Weber's sons was due to the desire to have them out of the way, and this manifestly erroneous accusation is given credence by a large number of people. So far as my knowledge of the man and the facts in the case will warrant a conclusion, neither betting interests or ownership interests have influenced Mr. Williams, but are readily explained on other grounds. To take the cases which were mentioned last week for illustration. The warfare with the bookmakers who did business at Oakland was retaliatory for supporting a meeting which was in opposition to one which Mr. Williams was directly and personally interested in. Something of the same kind of a war as that which raged with so much ferocity between Hawthorne and Garfield. Had that been confined to the rival institutions it might have been termed legitimate. When the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association took a part in the fray it could only be accounted for on the presumption that Mr. Williams' high temperament prevailed over what his judgment should have dictated, and had he given the welfare of the institution, of which he was the second officer, due consideration, that mistake would never have been made. Had Washington Park joined hands with either of the other race courses, taboed the bookmakers on one, arranged the penalties so as to cover performances at one and not the other, there would have been a protest from "Maine to Georgia," from the Gulf of Mexico to Vancouver Bay, at the injustice done. I could not understand why "since January 14th" penalties were imposed until informed that on that day the races of the California Jockey Club came to a close; those of Henry Schwartz on the Oakland track commenced.

As to the Williams-Ashe controversy, I have nothing further to say than what appeared last week, the partnership of the association being the action condemned.

But the suspension of Weber and his sons cannot be charged to Williams' determination to get them out of the way of his jockeys, that also being due to a preponderance of hot blood. From later information—that obtained from Mr. Weber, and corroborated by a person who was present, Mr. Weber asked

Mr. Ferguson if he had not struck the hoy too hard. Mr. Ferguson's reply was an emphatic No! and that he would do it again, and at that Mr. Williams said that he, Mr. Weber, should not talk to the starter, ordered him away and called for a policeman to eject him. Again, when summoned before the Board, Colonel Thornton asked Mr. Weber what proposition he had to make. He answered, assurances that his boys would not be maltreated, when Mr. Williams became the interlocutor, with the results as heretofore published.

This much is repeated to prove my position that had Mr. Williams a better command of his temper, and could make his personal feelings subservient to general interests, he would be admirably adapted for the position he occupies, and though the general public would not have the same confidence as if he eschewed hetting, there would be no fear on my part on that score.

The second Vice-President, Mr. P. Quinlan, I am only slightly acquainted with, that being restricted to a few meetings since his election to the Board, though that was some time ago. He is a gentleman of pleasing manners, and is unquestionably a "business man" of a high class. He spent a great deal of time last summer in superintending the improvements at the park, and next to Mr. Williams the most active member in the line of getting things in readiness for the fall meeting. The work was so thoroughly done in the short period allotted for what might be called a complete renovation of the old, and a big addition in the shape of new, that all who were engaged in the happy transformation are entitled to a great deal of credit, for work done without other remuneration than "the good of the cause."

Those who are intimates of Mr. Quinlan speak so well of him that he can be emphatically endorsed as "under the tongue of good report."

General W. H. Brown is one of the oldest members of the Board, and he has had quite a long experience in racing affairs. He bought Golden Gate when she was first brought to California, and that fleet daughter of Leamington turned his fancy to the "legitimate." He has attended every meeting of importance, either trotting or racing, and is familiar with race management. A man of position, Sheriff of El Dorado county, several terms in the State Senate, Surveyor General and Harbor Commissioner. His prominence in political circles show the estimate his party places upon his services, and from his practical knowledge of the turf it would seem that when his attention is called to the mistakes made there will be a change for the better. In all probability his time is so fully occupied that little of that valuable commodity, to a business man, can be given the affairs of the association.

A. B. Speckles is a member of the Junta who is a great favorite with his many friends. Rightly so, as he is sociable, gentlemanly in his demeanor, ready to oblige, and taken all together, very popular. Should there be anything to militate against his efficiency as a director, it will be found in such a strong desire to support his friends, right or wrong, that other interests are held subordinate to the demands of friendship. That and it may be a lack of knowledge of racing law and usages are the only impediments in the way of his being a valuable auxiliary. So far as ownership extends his fancy is for the trotting side of the sport. Hulda, the fast Guy Wilkes mare, which did so well on the Eastern tracks last year, and likely to do still better in the coming campaign, is owned and was bred by him, and he has quite a collection of highly-bred animals on his ranch at Aptos, and is now in possession of Dexter Prince and other trotting celebrities, several of which are in training on the Oakland track. He has been a director in the P. C. T. H. B. A. for several years, and as he has only attended one meeting since I have been a member of the Board, it is fair to infer that he does not trouble himself to any great extent with racing questions.

Chas. A. Wieland I have little acquaintance with. He was also a director in the trotting association last season and took very little interest, so that there are good reasons, to suppose that he is not an active member in the government of racing.

Until on one of the race days when Mr. Burke accosted Col. Thornton and spoke of a meeting of the Board when the Colonel was not present I did not "know him by sight," and further than that he is the owner of a racing stable, and that he bears a good reputation among those whom I have heard speak of him, my knowledge is too limited to be of any service, and assuredly too slight to praise or condemn. Far more pleasant to commend than to rebuke, and were it not that a sense of duty compelled presenting the actions of the Board in a proper light condemnatory articles would not have been written. The sports of the turf are threatened from many sides, and the greatest danger lies in the mistakes of those who have them in charge. To draw attention to the danger is an imperative obligation of everyone who has its future welfare at heart and is especially binding on people who are connected with turf journals. It cannot be shirked without a surrender of self respect, and when there is so gross an outrage perpetrated as the brutal castigation of a defenseless jockey, and that in a measure sustained by the association, it might be said, approved and intensified by adding additional punishment, one in my position would be a craven of the whitest hue who failed to enter a fervid protest, and demand rectification.

There is another charge against Mr. Williams which is certainly unfounded. The directors gave him the full power to select officials, and in making selections a few were Eastern men. At this meeting the presiding judge and starter are the only ones, so far as I know, outside of residents of California. When better men could be obtained from a distance it was clearly his duty to make them the choice. So long as he thought the interests of the association would be best subserved by choosing people from other parts of the world than the "Pacific Coast," that is the only justification necessary. There is no chance for censure on that score, and unless those who make the charge can show that other reasons than fealty to the interests of the association were the motive, it falls to the ground.

Since the above was written and in type I have heard that Mr. Weber and his sons have been reinstated, which affords me great satisfaction. From The Examiner of Wednesday morning I also learn that the bookmakers who plied their business at the Oakland races were in line on the Bay District. Thus I am doubly gratified, in the first place that justice has been done Mr. Weber and his sons, and in the second that the association has signified its willingness to correct errors. As can be learned from a perusal of the New York Spirit of the Times of the 8th inst. the acts of the association have elicited caustic criticism, and the reversal will remove the obloquy in a great measure. As the remedied action was taken before the Spirit reached San Francisco it can only be ascribed to the desire in make amends when the situation was better understood.

It is exceedingly unfortunate that the Ashe trouble cannot be overcome, but as it stands if the Board of Censors has ratified the treaty and agreed to reciprocate there is little chance to rectify. It may be that the telegram, and the answer, which the Spirit mentions, is the only correspondence between the parties and that being confined to two individuals, and not ratified by the governing bodies the old statutes might be revived. As stated before I heartily sympathize with Mr. Ashe, and would be greatly pleased to have him given a chance to recover from the ill fortune which has beset him, but a still greater pleasure will be derived from the fact that men whom I hold in such high esteem have risen superior to the frailties of humanity and done themselves justice.

Again it will not be out of place to state that the horse interests of the Pacific Coast, California especially, are of great moment to me, and the welfare of the Pacific Coast Blood-Horse Association ardently desired. While it is true that only a few of my old associates, who did such good service in organizing the institution, are now connected with it, and none in an official station, so long as it bears the name that feeling will exist. Therefore I call attention to what I consider is not only likely to impair its usefulness, but brings reproach on the turf here and all connected with it. There is a far better prospect now, and I cordially congratulate those who have done that much service.

A CLOSER WATCH.—In old times, perhaps still employed, in Bell's Life vignette there was an open eye and the Latin motto, Nunc semper paratus, that is if my memory of what I have seen many years ago can be depended upon. The eye and the motto, concisely interpreted, would be always watchful, and a very good one it is for a paper like the great sporting sheet of the olden time, and not altogether inappropriate when "modern racing" has to be looked after. Under the "old dispensation," when heats at long distances, ruffled shirts, spotless big cravats, honour (put the u in, compositor, as it may be that striking that apparently superfluous vowel out of the word has partly impaired the obligation so far as racing matters are concerned) were so prominent on the race course, the unseating a jockey before the race commenced by the officials in charge would have been resented so vigorously, that south of Mason and Dixon's line, and in other regions, it would have been held sufficient grounds for a duel to the death. When first adopted I thought that it was worse than injudicious; that it was a direct imputation of wrong intent which could not be sanctioned without injury to racing, and that the proper course would be to let every owner "put up" his choice of jockeys, not debarred by the rules, and if shown to be guilty, expel, with no chance for reinstatement. Modern racing and honor without the u require guards, which were useless provisions in the days when distances was held to be a test of race horse quality. These short sprints are readily decided by the start when the contestants are nearly of the same caliber, and when cuteness—the u figures in that word—is held to be superior to honor.

Saturday, the opening day of the racing on the Bay District track, I only saw the first and second events on the programme, having to attend to important business in the city. Tuesday there was longer time at my disposal, and four races were taken in. One of them was a mile, and, consequently, the start was in front of the stands. There were seven horses to start, not a very big field, and a good deal of trouble in getting them in a position which would warrant dropping the flag. Most of it was occasioned by a chestnut horse and colored rider, or rather, by the black jockey who did not make an attempt to secure a fair start. The grossest incapacity or evident intent were the only explanations, and among those on the clubhouse balcony who expressed opinions in vent was the charge. The others were in good position, the delinquent several lengths behind when the start was made, and he made no pretension to racing in any portion of the mile.

The articles I had written denunciatory of the practice of "taking down jockeys" were forcibly recalled. It did not require an expert to make up his mind that the animal was not meant, or that his jockey was an embodiment of stupidity, and here in plain view of three judges, starter and officers of the club, it was allowed to pass. Were it instigated by wrong intent, the audacity of the scheme insured the success which followed. If it were ascribed to miserable jockeyship, and lashing a jockey permissible under any circumstances, a taste of the catgut to such a laggard would be far more righteous than when applied to one who was too anxious to win.

I was not all surprised when the papers of Sunday morning brought the intelligence that the last on Tuesday was the first on Saturday, when Miller's name was coupled with the horse. But these smart fellows, the hookmakers, must have been blinded as successfully as the judges. When the money commenced flowing in, and the odds dropping and dropping, a little retrospect would have brought the start and the running of Tuesday vividly before them and the hook marked full, or the rates so strenuous that a great deal of money would be required to win a little. Their lack of perception in a great measure exculpates the judges, and there are so few races when the start is forenet them that they have small practice in that kind of a race. Depending on them to keep a watchful eye on what was passing in their immediate vicinity, the starter was not so much to blame, and hence there is little chance for recalcitration from anyone. The public, misguided mortals, shout too loudly where there are only fanciful causes for complaint, and then so many are carried away with the brilliancy of the oups that admiration in place of indignation is the prevailing feeling. One eye will not do to watch all the in and outs of modern racing. That huge old fellow with a hundred active optics should be the emblem, and for a motto, French is more modern than Latin, and abandon fait laron the better reminder.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

S. A. BROWNE, Kalamazoo, Mich., is a director in the Register Association, but he does not value the present standard very highly. He says: "Knowing full well several years ago that the present trotting standard was a failure and disappointment to the practical and intelligent breeders of America, I hoped and entreated for a change. I found that no argument would convince the multitude of breeders who were loaded up with the stuff that passed as standard but could not trot. The present Trotting Register is useful as a record of the names and breeding of the animals therein recorded. That is all. It has no other value. The present standard is a snare and stumbling-block to the amateur breeder."

How Anteeo Was Bought and Sold.

This is the caption of an article that appeared in the Los Angeles Herald a few weeks ago written by "Hidalgo." It made a very pretty story and was copied in many of the leading turf journals in the United States. The writer, no doubt, intended to confer a favor upon S. A. Browne, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, and if he had taken the precaution to take notes of the conversation and the place where it occurred, its correctness could never be questioned, but, in justice to Mr. Browne, some contradictions to it must be made. He called upon "Hidalgo" in Los Angeles after the article appeared and pointed out the discrepancies in it. The latter was sorry and wished to make every reparation possible. On our recent visit to Mr. S. A. Browne in this city, the article happened to be mentioned, and so dissimilar were the facts from the story that we deemed it due the gentleman that he should not leave California with this story bristling with falsehoods confronting him wherever he might go. The story of the sale (as far as is necessary,) as published, is given in small type, the facts in large type:

"There is a tall and slender man, with sandy hair and beard, with deep-set and searching grey eyes, to be seen daily on the streets of Los Angeles just now among the army of climate refugees that will soon be leaving this section again and returning to their Eastern homes. Although hugging the lee shore of sixty years pretty closely, his figure is still erect and his shoulders well laid back, while his step is light and springy as that of most men of forty-five. His name is Samuel A. Browne, and he is interested in large manufacturing enterprises at Kalamazoo, Mich., where he is likewise interested with Senator Stockbridge in one of the leading trotting horse farms of the out-oo. He was at one time the partner of Mr. Bissell, the manufacturer of carpet-sweeping machines, but the partnership terminated with that gentleman's death in the winter of 1890. Mr. Browne attended the meeting organized to form a breeders' trotting association, at Agricultural Park last Tuesday, says Hidalgo, in the Los Angeles (Cal.) Herald, and by his sage counsel and intelligent remarks, made an excellent impression upon his audience. On the ride back from the track to the city I got into conversation with him, and finally it drifted upon the California stallion Anteeo (I go before), bred by Joseph Cairn Simpson, of Oakland, and owned from 1888 to 1891 by Mr. Brown and the late Mr. Bissell."

He never was a partner in the carpet business with Mr. Bissell. Mr. Bonner was a lumber merchant all the time he was in business. The conversation between he and Hidalgo took place on the porch of the building at the Agricultural Park, Los Angeles. He did not own Anteeo from 1888 to 1891; he had him but two seasons, 1888 and 1889.

"I will tell you now how I became the owner of that horse. I was out here in California in the winter of 1886-87, and stayed at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. Every night there would be a crowd of horsemen in the bar-room, sitting about those great round tables and telling of the exploits of their horses. There wasn't a man in the crowd that didn't put up a dozen green colts into the 2:30 list before he went to bed. Doble, Hickok, Van Ness, and a host of the sulky, were there in their bib and tucker, while the breeders were always represented by Col. Thornton, William Corbitt, Ariel Lathrop and a host of others, but they were all new men to me. Still, I did not lack for acquaintances, for "Bud" was introduced to me around quite liberally, and I found them very pleasant gentlemen. Mr. Lathrop got up a little excursion to Palo Alto a few days later, and there we saw Electiooner in all his glory and surrounded by all his mighty sons. In the whole lot of them, however, there was but one of them I wanted, and him I knew I could not get. There was not enough to have taken him off that track."

After Mr. Browne arrived in January, 1887, from his long trip across the continent, he registered at the Palace Hotel and, after doing so, felt as if he was not so far away from some of his old time acquaintances, for among those assembled in the office, he was delighted to see W. R. Armstrong, W. H. Crawford, Orrin A. Hickok, Mr. Bride and other horsemen whom he knew. Mr. Lathrop was not there, neither was Col. Thornton nor William Corbitt. He called upon Mr. Lathrop in his office on business as he had purchased Bell Boy previous to coming to California, and that gentleman kindly furnished him transportation tickets for himself and friends to go to Palo Alto. Mr. Browne never met Col. Thornton at the Palace Hotel that he remembered, and as for Mr. Corbitt, he met him at a later period.

"You would have been willing to give a good price for him, then?" I asked.

"Yes, but a principlality wouldn't have bought that horse. He was the apple of the Senator's eye."

Mr. Browne never made such a statement and don't know to what horse Hidalgo refers.

"So I came back to San Francisco no wiser than when I had left it. That night the pool was full at the Palace, and I saw every man but the one I wanted to see most of all."

"And who was that?" I asked.

"Joe Simpson, the best of friends and the most honorable of foes."

Mr. Browne said: "This much disrespect for Mr. Simpson I never had. In fact I never in my life called him "Joe." Mr. Simpson must have been astonished to see that I used such language. 'I never spoke about best of friends and the most honorable of foes. I am not a newspaper man.'"

Whatever pet theories he may have in which I do not concur, you must at least accord him the merit of sincerity and honesty of purpose. He never spoke nor wrote a word in which he did not firmly believe himself. So, after waiting two or three days without seeing him, I went over to Oakland and paid him a visit. We had known each other in Illinois, and I found him in poor health, but the same genial gentleman as ever. After looking over all his horses he priced Anteeo to me at $10,000, but I did not want him.

"He was a great horse beyond question," Mr. Browne, said I.

"Yes, a great turf horse, but not my ideal of a breeding horse for light-harness use. He was a very consistent trotter, and Mr. Simpson had an open challenge to trot him two-mile heats against any stallion in America. This met with no response, showing that all the trotting horsemen were very much of Mr. Simpson's opinion. But Anteeo did not fill my eye as a sire of light-harness horses. He was over 16 hands high and looked more like a coaching stallion than a sire of trotters. So I did not buy him, of which I am very glad, for it enabled Mr. Simpson to sell the horse at a considerable advance upon the price at which he offered it to me."

The facts in regard to this are to the effect that the horse Anteeo did not impress Mr. Browne as Anteeo did when he first saw him. In the interview he said to Hidalgo: "I considered him a little leggy for a stock horse, yet he was a handsome and good race horse, but I had no desire to purchase." Then Mr. Browne added: "I am sorry Hidalgo did not take notes of the interview. I was not aware he was a newspaper man and had no idea he would distort facts as he did. However, when I showed him how full of misstatements his "pretty story" was, he admitted that he wrote the article some days after the conversation occurred, and that he had no notes to work from."

"And did you go back East without seeing Anteeo at all?" I asked.

"I did, myself, that very thing. I was told Mr. Simpson had sold him to an association of breeders in the Russian river valley, and I supposed I could have gone up there and seen him, but I let the time slip away without doing it. The next spring I was down at Lexington with a consignment of horses to one of the spring sales. It was on the third day of the combination that I met J. W. Knox, to whom you are indebted for what Nutwood blood you have to this State. I asked him where he was from, and he said he had just come from California, and brought on Anteeo to stand at Lexington for $30 the year."

This language, "I did, myself, that very thing," will cause people who know Mr. Browne to wonder whether he was affected by the climate or the aroma of the orange groves. This statement, said to be his, is also noted for other errors. The sale had not commenced at the time Mr. Knox arrived, and as for Russian River valley Mr. Browne did not know of such a place.

"The horse is down at the track and just off the cars, so he don't look much like what he really is," said Knox, "but you'll see a great horse when you see him. When can you come out for a look at him?"

"Now," was my reply; and we were in a hurry, bound for the track, less than ten minutes. I shall never forget how I felt as he pulled the light serge of Anteeo and led him out. Here was the horse I had been looking for all my life. Here was all the muscular power of Hambletonian, with a quality and a finish that the Hero of Chester overtook. Here was a vitalized energy, a characterized force that was pictured in my mind for years, but had never before beheld face to face. The rugged trotting elements of his sire's ancestry had been rounded into classic lines by the hot thoroughbred blood that came to him through his maternal veins. In a word, he was the horse of which I had thought and dreamed."

The horse was at the stable three blocks from the hotel; hence we did not take a buggy to go to the track. It was early in the morning in winter and Mr. Knox and I walked to the stable. Anteeo had two heavy blankets on; we never put a light serge on our horses in the winter in the East. Mr. Knox had the blankets taken off and his man to lead the horse out for my inspection. I was much impressed with him and began negotiations for his purchase at once.

The balance of the printed article that is now being copied everywhere is just as full of errors as it possibly can be, and the few extracts given above show conclusively that Hidalgo allowed his imagination and a fruitful mind to annihilate facts for the sake of filling space. The propositions regarding prices, wording of telegrams and correspondence is full of mistakes. The last statement in Hidalgo's epistle is the unkindest cut of all, and is as false as all the other statements. Mr. Browne owns the great Wilkes stallion Ambassador, and although he esteems Anteeo highly and believes he will make one of the greatest sires, he never used the flowery language that Hidalgo credits him. Everyone who has known this great horseman for forty years will smile when they read it, and wonder what effect this climate has had upon Mr. Browne to make him as eloquent as Daniel Webster. He never forgot himself so far as to make use of this expression in all of his flights of oratory, even though Hidalgo says he did:

"I don't know whether Anteeo is the best horse in the world or whether he is even the best of bloodstock, but one thing I do know—he was a good deal the best horse I ever owned."

Taking it all in all, the story of "How Anteeo Was Bought and Sold" was well couched, but somehow it appears in some of the Eastern journals under the title "Anteeo's Romance," how much more appropriate it would be if headed "Hidalgo's Romance."

A Little Criticism From New York.

The following, taken from the Daily Spirit of the Times, of New York, strikes the officials of the local racing association a "corking blow on the jugular."

The directors of the Blood Horse Association decided before the opening of their spring meeting not to rescind the rule debaring all hookmakers who had operated at Oakland from doing business at the Bay District track. This is in line with later news which shows that Tom Williams is running the meeting in autocratic style. Peter Weber and both his boys have been ruled off the Bay District race-course for a year. This trouble grew out of a difficulty between Johnny Weber and Starter Ferguson on Saturday, the opening day of the meeting. Young Weber was over-keen at the post, and the starter, taking the law into his hands, applied the whip to him and his mount. His father made complaint in somewhat unmeasured terms and repeated his remarks at a meeting of the directors on Monday evening. Some of his speeches must have hit home, for the officials meted out the apparently unwarranted punishment mentioned.

Nor are these the only instances. Williams is evidently determined to debar Porter Ashe from the privileges of the Bay District track by some means or other. He recently wired to a well-known Eastern official inquiring what Ashe's forfeits amounted to. This he learned in due course, the amount being $2,650. The actual standing of Porter Ashe in the Eastern Forfeit List shows that he is in arrears for forfeits, owing for the years 1890, 1891 and 1892. For the first of these years he owes $160 to the American Jockey Club. For the two other years he owes to the Brooklyn Jockey Club $90; to the Coney Island Jockey Club, $1,675; to the New York Jockey Club, $570, and to the Monmouth Park Association, $155. The letter giving the information can scarcely have been received when Ashe's entries were refused on this score. Of course it will be an advantage to the Board of Control if the Blood Horse Association will collect their forfeits for them, but "sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." There is at least one of the most prominent stables on the Pacific Coast that is much deeper in the forfeit list than Ashe, and if he is to be made to pay up before he can race at San Francisco, other persons in the same case should be also. So far there has been remarkably little about the way of conducting meetings in that part of the world that is likely to induce Eastern owners to patronize such great winter meetings as have been proposed.

Wire or Hickory.

We had the pleasure of inspecting a wire "bike" wheel out at the Overman Wheel Co.'s office the other day that was an object lesson. It was one of the latest style of ball-bearing pneumatic tire wheels, with fine wire spokes. A horse had jumped on it with both fore feet, and whilst the wheel was nearly doubled up, not a spoke was broken. Had the spokes been of wood, several of them would have been broken and the horse injured for life. To those interested in the question of the coming wheel, a look at this one will be a convincing argument in favor of the wire spokes when properly made. Call and see it at 309 Larkin street.

Pneumatic Sulky Argument.

Much trouble was experienced last season by horsemen, with pneumatic sulkies, on account of the poor tires. The tires would become flat and soft, and often punctured, and the air would not seem to stay in the tires. When repairs were made to this class of tire, wheels and tires both, had to be sent to the shop; a matter of expense, delay and annoyance.

A practical and easy method to repair a pneumatic sulky, is to have your sulky fitted with the "Victor" make of tire. In case of accident, any boy can readily pull a new inner tube into the wheel, without taking the tire off the wheel, or disturbing the sulky frame in any way. This inner tube is the life of the tire, and the new one renders the tire fit for immediate use. The repair made in the above manner, is permanent and reliable.

The "Victor" pneumatic tires are made by the Overman Wheel Company, Bicycle Makers, 309 Larkin Street, San Francisco.

HOOF-BEATS.

ELECTIONER is the only one of Green Mountain Maid's sons that ever sired a pacer and he sired but one.

IF L. B. HICKS, of Sacramento, is in this city, by calling at this office he will hear of something to his advantage.

PORTER ASHE has sold Sir Reel, and the new owner having paid all outstanding forfeits against that horse, he started yesterday.

CHARLES MARVIN will have more race-winners in his string this year than in any former year, and some of them will be in the top-sawyer class.

THE time to breed your mare is when other fellows fail to breed theirs. By the time you are ready to sell your colt there will not be so many youngsters for sale.

CAPTAIN AL, supposed to be broken down, has been shipped to the Owen Bros.' ranch in Fresno county, and at present it is thought he will never face the starter again.

SEND in your orders now for the famous Toomey sulkies. Wm. D. O'Kane, 767 Market street, is the agent. These sulkies are used by all the leading drivers in America.

CADMUS, the Derby colt in Williams' string, is going like a shot, and good judges pronounce him the best three-year-old on the track by long odds, which is saying a good deal.

JOHN E. TURNER will have several of the get of his horse Santa Claus, 2:17½, in training this year, including Willow, a fast three-year-old, and Fourth of July, a good four-year-old.

THE Blood Horse Association officials have decided that the Tidal Stakes, one and one-quarter miles, shall be run on Saturday, April 22d, and the Pacific Derby on Saturday, the 29th.

WE understand that last Wednesday the boycott against the Oakland bookmakers was taken off by the Blood Horse officials, and in future the pencilers will be allowed to transact business at Bay District track.

AL PEACOCK has Fresno Prince, son of Dexter Princes, and a standard-bred mare, at Central Point fair grounds, Oregon, where the horse will make the season. He is a beautiful mahogany bay and weighs 1160 pounds.

LAST Wednesday night two horses in the Macdonough string, trained by Henry Walsh at San Jose, arrived at Bay District track, and were taken charge of by Trainer Dan Denison. One was the sister to Sir John (Lady Mariau), the other, a two-year-old.

THE chestnut gelding Peep-o'-Day, by Dawn, 2:18½, that was bred by Wilfred Page, of Rancho Cotati, belongs to John Splan, and that great driver wrote to R. L. Allen, of Juliet, Illinois, to enter this horse at the races that are to take place at Chicago, Illinois, during the World's Fair.

MERRIWA last season was only bred to one mare, Lizzie Idle, by Wildidle, and last week produced a beautiful colt. The Todhunter estate of Sacramento is the owner of this mare and youngster, and so well pleased are they with this new arrival that they hooked seven mares to Merriwa at once. We congratulate Mr. Jones on having leased this sire.

DAVID BAY, of North Vernon, Ind., has a good stable companion to Prompter in the stallion Sterling 9223, by Egmont 1828, dam by Flaxtail; second dam thoroughbred. His dam is a producer of speed of the raciest kind, while he, himself, is the sire of several in the list, besides being of noble lineage.—Western Horseman.

A. SMITH McCANN, of Lexington, Ky., made an assignment Tuesday. Four years ago he purchased Fairlawn, the home of the late General Withers for $103,000. At the time of the sale $35,000 was paid down and McCann's indebtedness at the present time amounts to about $83,000. The stock now on the place belongs to Miss Nannie Smith. She is McCann's aunt.

THE Fifty-third Congress promises to be quite a "horsey" one. There is in the Senate Stanford, Stewart, Stockbridge and Mitchell of Wisconsin, all large and eminent breeders. In the house there will be Shibley of Pennsylvania; Hatch of Missouri; Hayes of Iowa; Wadsworth of New York; White of Ohio; Price of Louisiana; Bailey of Texas, and several others.

SIDNEY will make his owner 60 per cent. on the purchase money. That is better than putting it in bonds or stocks or even in hogs, as you have heard so much the past year. His first crop of foals numbered eleven, and nearly all were from mares of common breeding, yet ten of these colts have taken race records and the remaining one was timed a trial in 2:24. Yet you will hear intelligent breeders all over the country insisting that he was sold for all he was worth.

ETHAN ALLEN was the only horse, except Artell, that got to be king of trotting stallions while a colt. He attained this distinction at four years of age and held it six years. During that time he made a record of 2:28, which was the first record in the 2:30 list by a stallion; he afterward trotted in 2:25½, and in 2:15 with running mate when eighteen years old. It is also said of him that rigged in that way he once trotted a quarter of a mile in 28½ seconds, a 1:54 gait.

In another column will be found advertised some two and three-year-old thoroughbreds, among the number being those of the estate of the late J. McM. Shafter, by St. Saviour (brother to the mighty Eole), dam Nighthawk, by imp. Haddington. Nighthawk was one of the very best racing animals on the Pacific Coast in her day, winning stake races in fast time from the pick of horses in this section. Besides, she is the dam of the good Garcia. These gilt-edged youngsters will be sold next Saturday by Killip & Co. at Bay District track.

THE Kentucky Association of Trotting Horse Breeders has consummated its consolidation with the Agricultural and Mechanical Fair Association of Lexington, Ky., so far as the joint ownership of a track is concerned. The breeders' association has paid over to President S. T. Harbison, of the A. and M. Association, the sum of $40,000 for a half ownership. Each association has paid over to the consolidated board $25,000 which will be expended in widening and improving the track and building a new grand-stand. The entire work is to be completed before the famous Autumn meeting.

OWING to the large number of entries so far in every race and the excellent patronage given racing here, the Blood Horse Association has decided to give five days of racing each week hereafter, instead of four, Wednesday being the added day.

THE announcement that Theodore Winters will hereafter send his horses to the Blood Horse races is hailed with great pleasure by those who have California racing interests at heart. It is understood that Mr. Winters became dissatisfied at the way meetings were conducted here a couple of years ago.

THOS. H. B. VARNEY, the well-known bicycle manufacturer, is advertising a sulky that has many points of excellence, and he will take pleasure in showing them to horsemen at his warehouses, 1041 Market street. The demand for pneumatic sulkies will be heavy this year, and it is to the interest of every horseman to get the very best.

THE numbered saddle cloths now used by the Blood Horse Association, and presented by the owner of The Turf, are a great aid to spectators in placing the horses at the finish. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN nearly two years ago suggested this (an Australian plan) to the local racing organization, and it bids fair to be adopted by racing clubs all over this country.

CAPTAIN S. S. BROWN, of Pittsburg, Pa., has decided to go into the trotting horse business. He has bought of Bowerman Bros. and John E. Midden the following broodmares: Louise (dam of Axminster, 2:22½), by George Wilkes, with foal to Wilton; Lynn Sprague, 2:28, by Governor Sprague, with foal to Egbert; a daughter of Baron Wilkes and a daughter of Happy Medium with foal to Red Wilkes.

In examining the legs of a horse the purchaser should first stand with his face to the broadside of the horse as he stands on level ground and observe whether he rests perpendicularly on all his legs, having the natural proportion of his weight on each straightly, squarely and directly, or whether he stands with all his legs straddled out, or with all drawn together under the center of his belly as if he were trying to stick them all into a hat; or, lastly, whether he favors one or more of his legs either by pointing it forward or by placing it in any position in which no weight at all or a very small stress of weight is thrown upon it.

THERE is strong probability that the Blood Horse Association will offer a trophy for a match between Mr. Boots' Brutus-Ariola colt and Mr. Macdonough's Rosalie, by Hyder Ali—Rosemary, at five furlongs. Mr. Macdonough is not satisfied with the result of the race of last Tuesday, when the splendid pair of youngsters met, believing that, had his filly received as good a send-off as the Ariola colt, Rosalie would have proved victorious. This four-and-a-half furlong race, run in 0:55½ on a heavy track, was undoubtedly the best of the whole meeting, and if the pair meet, as proposed, there will be any amount of interest shown.

Now is the time of year when a great deal of good work can be done to advance the interests of every breeder of the land. The crazeur should be taken in hand and vigorously used among the many young stallions to be found on every stock farm. The good work should not stop there, however, for there is many an aged horse that the country can well afford to have join the gelding ranks. The time for well bred, crooked-legged, ill-shaped stallions has passed, though he comes from the most royal family known to fame. The "full brother" story has lost its magnetic effect, and nothing but strong breeding and superb individuality stands in a right position to court success.

A VERY serious objection raised by foreigners to the American trotting horse is his lightness of bone below the knee and hock. That this objection is well founded can be easily demonstrated by anyone who has not already observed it. How many horses there are cut away below the knee and with imperfect hind legs. The craze for speed has brought with it many serious mistakes in breeding and by no means the least is the lack of substance, in many of the trotting-bred horses. There are any number of horses, however, that do not possess these defects, and no matter how well-bred a horse may be there is no longer any necessity of breeding to him unless he is a perfect individual. There are plenty who fill the bill.

JOSIAH H. WHITE believes in breeding his broodmares to the best stallion procurable. Last Monday he shipped Kitty Almont, 2:23½, to Pleasanton to be bred to Direct, 2:05½. Kitty Almont is the dam of Albert Joseph's Helen White by Stamboul 2:07½ now in Wm. Fieldwick's string. As Kitty Almont is black as a coal and Direct is also a decided brunette the boys at Pleasanton, who love to be always on the safe side, are willing to bet any sum of money that the produce of this union will also be "off color." Kitty Almont is the fastest representative of her sire, Tilton Almont, and as Direct holds a similar place of honor on his sire's roster the youngster ought to be a good one when it comes.

CLARA, the dam of Dexter, although she has but one producing son (Dictator), has the distinction of being one of the most remarkable mares, in regard to her produce breeding that ever lived. She produced three foals by Hambletonian 10 that trotted better than 2:30. Two of them were mares, while Dexter was a gelding. In the first generation, therefore, Clara produced three performers. In the second she has forty-seven that have earned standard rank; in the third she has 119, while in the fourth generation she has forty-nine with records of 2:30 and better, making a grand total of 215. Had Dexter, 2:17½, the fastest of his own produce, not been gelded, there is no doubt but what she would have had the most imposing array of 2:30 descendants of any trotting broodmare—Western Horseman.

A. H. MOORE, of Philadelphia, writes as follows: As I have not a stable of my own horses sired by Director to campaign during the season of 1893, in order to encourage the racing of his produce owned by others, and to sustain his title as the great sire of racehorses and money-winners, I offer the following prizes for the get of Director that begin the racing season of 1893 eligible to the 3:00 class of trotters or pacers: $500 for the one that wins the greatest number of races, and $500 for the one the greatest amount of money. Prizes to be paid by me in cash Dec. 1, 1893, to owner of horses. J. H. Steiner, Secretary, American Register Association to decide who the awards shall be made to, from reports of American and National Trotting Associations, as compiled for the Year Book. Horses owned by me to be barred from above prizes.

S. A. BROWNE, the well-known Kalamazoo (Mich.) horseman, now on a visit to this State, has the following string in training at the fair grounds at Lexington, Ky.: Lochie, ch f, 2, by Warlock, dam Mollie, by Twilight. Lady Roseberry, h f, 3, by Baron Wilkes, dam Lena S., by Electioneer; second dam Restless, by Kentucky Prince; third dam Lady Rysdyk (grandam of Problem, 2:24½), by Hambletonian 10. Valerine, h f, 3, by Warlock, dam Valeria, by Baron Wilkes; second dam Vivette (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:26½), by Strathmore; third dam Ahness (dam of Steinway, 2:25½), by Alhion. Amazon Belle, b f, 2, by Warlock, dam Belle Monroe, by Jim Monroe. Wardance, b f, 2, by Warlock, dam Daisy Blackwood, 2:29½, by Blue Bull. Alacrity, ch f, 3, by Warlock, dam Alacrity, by Harold; second dam Juliet (dam of Mambrino Pilot, 2:27½), by Pilot Jr. Mahel Russell, ch f, by Warlock, dam Kate Henderson, by Cazine, son of Idol 177; second dam Big Beck, by Ericsson. Flint Rock, h g, 4, by Warlock, dam by Smugler; second dam by Volunteer; third dam by Black Rose, by Stockbridge Chief; fourth dam by Mambrino Paymaster.

W. H. RAYMOND, proprietor of the Belmont Park breeding farm, held the first public auction sale of blooded horses ever attempted in Montana at the fair grounds yesterday. Mr. Raymond is highly pleased with the result, and is satisfied with the prices obtained. About 200 people were at the sale from all parts of the State, and the bidding was spirited. Especially was this true of the bidding for the colts. All the colts are entered in the Montana trotting stakes for two-year-olds, and the struggle in the bidding for the youngsters was ample evidence of the gentlemen's interest in trotters. All of the colts were sold at good figures, and Mr. Raymond said he could have sold a dozen more had he had them. The black stallion Luminary was knocked down to Sprinkle Bros., of Chinook, Montana, for $450. Dr. McDonald secured the bay stallion colt Occident for about $250. Mr. Ryner, of the Missoula banking firm of Wolf & Ryner, secured Oakbar for $250. Judge McHattan secured a handsome black gelding roaster at a very low figure. Lavell Bros., Charles Langlois, G. W. Gregg, and a number of men from outside towns attended the sale. Several ponies were also sold at prices ranging from $55 to $75. The geldings brought from $105 to $200 each. Only a few horses remained unsold. Mr. Raymond is encouraged at the result, and will very likely have a regular annual public sale in Butte in the future.—Butte Inter-Mountain.

Truly Royal Thoroughbred Broodmares.

Tried producers will bring a good price in any American market. In another column will be found an advertisement that should be very interesting to breeders of thoroughbreds—telling of the proposed sale of Whynot (by George Wilkes, son of Asteroid, dam Flora A., by Tom Bowling), dam of the great mare Misty Morn; Neyella, holder for some time of the world's record at five furlongs, by California, dam Laura Barnes, by Norfolk, and in addition dam of Rosebud, who defeated Geraldine this season at Oakland; Billow, winner of the California Stakes of 1885, by Longfield—Medea, and dam of the truly phenomenal Kvrle Day horse, Eclipse. Then there are Oceanica (sister to Flood Tide and Annie Lewis), by Flood—Lady Evangeline, and tracing through the greatest of racing and producing families to the immortal Levity, on the dam's side of the house. Then there is Keepsake, a half-sister to Kyrle (by Flood—Kathairon); second dam Kathleen, dam of the famous George Kinney, and Lina, dam of Tacoma, by King Alfonso, dam Titania, by Lexington, and her daughter, Lenora, and others of little less note. The owner, Mrs. R. E. Bybee, widow of the late Judge Bybee, of Portland, Or., prefers to make these sales privately, otherwise these truly royal mares will be disposed of at auction on the last day of the Blood Horse races.

Del Win, Son of Del Sur.

The advantage of having a sire of speed and a dam that has produced two in the list by different sires is exemplified when such a game horse as Del Win is mentioned. This horse, notwithstanding a succession of injuries that would have killed any ordinary horse started right out of the slings and gamely earned his record. He has shown his ability since then to get a mark close to 2:15. He is a very strongly-made, well-muscled, good-looking horse, intelligent and one that is the making of a sire of speed. He is bred as well as any horse in this State; he is by Del Sur, 2:24, out of Imogene (dam of Guide, 2:16), and Del Sur, 2:26½, by Norwood 5:22; second dam by American Star 14; third dam by Harry Clay 4:5. Del Sur is by The Moor 870, out of Gretchen, the greatest daughter of Mambrino Pilot. With such bloodlines there is no doubting the fact he is fashionably bred and the foals by him this year prove conclusively that he transmits all of his quality to his progeny in a remarkable degree. All of them are trotters. He would have trotted fast were it not that he was injured he then took to pacing and showed that the speed was in him, to go fast and stay the route. His service fee has been set at $40. Read the advertisement in our columns.

Coming Auction Sales.

The attention of our readers is called to the three auction sales that are to take place in this city within a few weeks. Next Wednesday Messrs. Talbot and Sessions will sell (through Killip & Co.) thirty head of splendid trotters, suitable for road, track or breeding ranks, at the salesyard on Market street. On Saturday, April 22d, at the Bay District track, these auctioneers will sell two extraordinary good St. Saviour colts, and on May 3d, at the salesyard, all of the thoroughbreds and trotters belonging to the estate of W. B. Todhunter, deceased, will be sold. Catalogues are issued for these sales, and will be sent on application to Messrs. Killip & Co., auctioneers, 22 Montgomery street.

Educating for Annexation.

A hike of the latest design—hickory spokes, etc., and an elegant assortment of horse-boots just shipped to Honolulu by J. O'Kane causes that gentleman to believe in the ultimate annexation of these islands, for he reasons: Any people that are determined to be up with the times and get the latest and best are sure, sooner or later, to come into the Republic's fold.

Lightning's Terrible Stroke.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 13.—The barn of Charles Reed, a prominent horseman in this State, near Gallatin, was struck by lightning last night and twenty-five broodmares, in foal by the celebrated horse St. Blaise, were instantly killed. The loss is over $10,000.

Sale of a Good Horse.

Prof. E. P. Heald, of San Francisco, has sold his black stallion, Loeher 13,683, to C. H. Robinson, of Fresno, Cal. This horse is one of the handsomest stallions in the State, and was named for that genial and popular horseman of St. Helena, Mr. F. W. Loeber. This horse was raised at Napa, and is very popular in that valley. He was the premier stallion of the Napa Stock Farm for several years, and left there some very fine colts. His get are uniformly of good size, solid color and speedy. They make the finest roadsters in the world, and are ideal gentlemen's driving horses—handsome, spirited and fast. His first foal, now four years old, is owned by E. T. Sterling, manager of the Schouheit Medicine Co., of San Jose. She is generally admitted to be the handsomest mare in Santa Clara county, and is noted throughout that section for her beauty and great roading qualities. At the Napa Stock Farm there are now many of his produce equally promising.

Loeher is exceptionally well-bred, being by that noted horse Whippleton 1883, out of a mare by Irvington 379, son of Hambletonian 10. Not only is his dam standard-bred and registered, but also his granddam. Whippleton was noted for not only producing fine carriage animals, but also good race horses. California has produced few finer campaigners than Lily Stanley, 2,174, and the prospect is now that she has never produced a better broodmare, either. The Whippleton family is very popular in Napa Valley, and it is greatly to be regretted that the best son of the old horse is to be taken away from that section. Fresno, however, is to be congratulated on this addition to its breeding ranks. Loeher has five direct crosses to Hambletonian 10, and therefore can not fail to produce speed. He will, from his good size and fine finish, produce and extra class of carriage animals when bred to large, roomy mares. We hope the stockmen of Fresno county will understand the value of this horse and breed to him. When a crop of his colts shall have arrived to speak for him, we are certain he will be appreciated in that section. We expect to hear good accounts of him in the future, and congratulate Mr. Robinson on his purchase.

Eureka Horse Notes.

South Park presents quite a lively appearance on a sunshiny day, when the various horses and colts are taken out for an airing or for a little exercising on the track. At present there are about twenty-five horses of all kinds and ages kept at the stables, which we had the pleasure of inspecting in company with that veteran horseman, and manager of the stables, P. H. Quinn. Following is a list:

Cooper's Ira, 2:24, by Piedmont. This horse is too well known to need any further description. Mr. Cooper also has a fine Ira colt, recently purchased from Mr. Black of Table Bluff.

Dr. Gross has Mustapha, four-year-old by Guy Wilkes, Grand Moor dam; also a very promising yearling by Mustapha, dam Quinn's June Bug, and a two-year-old filly by Ira, dam by Grand Moor.

Connick's Wayland W., record 2:24, by Arthur Wilkes, dam by Wayland Forest; also two two-year-olds by Ira, and a yearling by Wayland W.

P. H. Quinn's list consists of June Bug, a standard bred mare, by Electric, with young colt by Wayland W., also black mare sired by Grand Moor; Maud P., two-year-old, by Patchen; standard bred two-year-old filly, Fortuna, by Ira, dam June Bug. Both of the latter are in training, and give evidence of becoming speedy animals.

T. F. Ricks keeps Lou, by Ira, dam by Electric; she has been entered in several races as a two-year-old, and has been a credit to her illustrious ancestors. Mr. Ricks also has a two-year-old by Ira, dam Bessie, and a Pascoora yearling, dam by Electric.

L. Hunt, two-year-old Ira filly, from thoroughbred mare; a yearling by Canny Scott, and a thoroughbred mare with young colt by Canny Scott.

Besides the above is a two-year-old Ira colt, owned by Alex. Forbes, of Elk River; three-year-old filly owned by J. Showers; Clark's Wilkes Moore, by Wilkes Moore, dam by Echo; Samoa, two-year-old by Ira, dam by Pascoora Hayward, owned by P. McAleenan; three-year-old, by Waldstein, dam by Rifleman, owned by Ed. Miller; yearling colt by Mustapha, dam by Overland, owned by Drs. Wallace & McKinnon; three-year-old Ira filly, dam by Overland, owned by M. McGaraghan; two-year-old Ira colt, dam by Bonner, owned by L. Kinsey.—Eureka News.

Stallion Ringwood,

The Famous Son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney in formation more than any of his sons. He is a pure-sailed trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he showed trials of speed in 2:19 1/4 as a four-year-old, and would have received a record of 2:18 or better but for an accident at the Napa track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dashaway (thoroughbred), by Williamson's Belmont, by American Boy; second dam Fanny Cob, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

ALSO FOR SALE

Tippoo Tib,

Gelding record, 2:28. Can trot in 2:20 or better; will show quarters in 0:32; 15 1/2 high; light bay; a great road horse; single or double, and perfectly sound. Ringwood or Tippoo Tib can be put in training and win their price in one season. For further particulars, address

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years. As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

ITS OBJECT

Is to prevent disease, to regulate the bowels and urine; it strengthens the kidneys, prevents scouring, colic and leg swelling; loosens the hide, fattens stock, promotes the appetite, cures coughs, cures worms and bots, and produces a fine, glossy coat. To the stall-fed horse it has the beneficial effects and results of grazing without the softening effects of a season of grass with loss of time and money. For milch cows it increases and enriches their milk.

WILL BE ALLOWED TO SERVE FIFTEEN MARES OF APPROVED BREEDING. FEE $75
Season commences February 1st and ends June 1st, 1893. Other conditions same as Silver Bow.
DESCRIPTION—Dark bay; 15.3 hands; foaled 1891. Fine head and neck well set on to strong pair of shoulders; fine mane and tail, good legs and feet. I consider him worthy of his royal breeding. He was not broken until August 15th, 1892, as I bought him at Lexington, Ky., and was unable to get him shipped out sooner. He already shows himself to be a trotter. His gait is faultless, and he can show speed enough already to make me think him a trotter. I think I could easily put him in the list if I wanted to this season, but no "tin-cup" record for me, as I raise horses to win money with. His breeding needs no comment from me, and I will allow you to be the judge. Address all communications to

COLTS FOR SALE

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/4 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:03 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:08.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darehin). He stands 15.3 hands on steeply legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong back, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darehin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darehin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, for apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caracatus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid race-horses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherhit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

The Imported Thoroughbred Stallion MERRIWA

Will make the Season of 1893 at Oakland Race Track 3 Days Each Week, at San Jose Race Track 2 Days, and at Elber's Ranch, Coyote, Santa Clara Co., 2 Days, from Feb. 10th to June 1st.

MERRIWA. HABENA GOLDSBROUGH

And so on to the nineteenth dam.

MERRIWA is a magnificent black horse, standing 15 1/2 hands, bred in 1886 by Frank Reynolds, of local vide Australian Stud Book, Vol. IV., folio 158. By Goldsbrough from Habena, by Yuttendon from Athollne, by Blair Athol from Habena (winner of 1000 Guineas in England), by Irish Birdcatcher from the Bridle, by The Saddier from Mooned, by Taums from Mona, by Partisan. Merriwa is undoubtedly a very fast horse, and through accident which rendered his temporary retirement from the turf, has not had a fair chance to prove his great pace by winning. He is descended from one of Australia's greatest families.

Goldsbrough, his sire, won amongst other races, the A. J. C. St. Leger Hawkesbury Grand Handicap, and Great Metropolitan Stakes, two miles, age, 5 years; weight, 128 pounds; time, three minutes, thirty-two and two-tenths seconds, fastest on record at that time. Goldsbrough had produced up to 1893 220 winners in the colonies.

Among the winners by Goldsbrough are the following: The Broker (winner Normandy Stakes and V. R. C. Sires' Produce Stakes and Adelaide St. Leger) Morpeth (winner Tattersalls' Cup, Anniversary Handicap and Australian Cup), Impulse (won Wagga Gold Cup, Arsenal (winner Melbourne Cup, Orella, Melos (A. J. C. Derby and Leger and V. R. C. Champion Stakes), Algerian (Tattersalls' Spring Handicap, Sydney Handicap, &c.), Cardigan (winner Tattersalls' Foal Stakes, Hawkesbury Grand Handicap, Great Metropolitan Stakes, Anniversary Handicap, Summer Cup, &c.), Devotion, Merriment (winner Tramway Handicap and Hawkesbury Guineas), Etoile (winner Tattersalls' Cup and Hawkesbury Grand Handicap), The Jewel (winner A. J. C. Christmas Gift), Keith (won Hawkesbury Autumn Handicap, Rose Hill Handicap, &c.), The Orphan, Albina, Jetison, Manola, Cardones, Kilmore (winner Royal Stakes), &c. &c.

Athollne, the granddam of Merriwa, produced Habena (dam of Merriwa) and Narina, both winners of Maribyrnong Plate. Geradine and Huntingtower each ran second in that race, while Gainsborough and Blairgowrie each ran third. It will thus be seen that Athollne's stock have performed with phenomenal success in that envy of all racing men, the Maribyrnong Plate.

TERMS - $60 FOR THE SEASON.

Payable at time of service. Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire, and fed on hay or grain either at our farm, at reasonable prices. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars apply to

Don Marvin is a beautiful seal brown, foaled 1884; bred by Sen. Leland Stanford, Palo Alto, Cal., is 16 bands blgh, and weighs 1200 pounds; sired by Fallis, 2:23 (sire of six in 2:30 list), by Electioneer; first dam Cora (dam of Don Marvin, 2:22 1/2, and Elected, trial 2:26) by Don Victor, son of Belmont; second dam Emma Mills (dam of Clifton Bell, 2:24 1/2, and Rebecca dam of five in 2:30 list) by Abdallah Star; third dam Fairy (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:29 1/2, and Sweepstakes sire of twenty-seven in 2:30 list), by Hambletonian 10; fourth dam Emma Mills (dam of four horses that have sired 2:30 performers) by Seely's American Star. Don Marvin will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $50 the season, with usual return privilege, which makes him the cheapest horse in the State, record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast - four producing dams

Nutwood Boy.

SIRE BY NUTWOOD, 2:18 3-4.

Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/2 bands blgh, and weighs 1125 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest living likeness to his celebrated sire, Nutwood, of any stallion in California. First-dam Kitty Parkhurst, by Goldiliter, he by Imp. Bee-bazzar; second dam Old Kute, by Grey Bear; grand-son of Imp. Messenger. Nutwood Boy's opportunity in the stud has been of the most limited description. He is the sire of comparatively very few colts; several of his oldest are, however, showing speed enough to be candidates for the 2:30 list this season. He is a square, level-gaited trotter, and with only five weeks track work a year ago, trotted a trial in 2:28; last half in 1:13. After his stud season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "fall circuit" and gaining him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $5 per month. Mares will be carefully handled, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

DICTATUS

Will make the Season of 1893, commencing February 1st and ending June 1st, at

BELMONT STOCK FARM.

BELMONT, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CAL.

SERVICE FEE FOR THE SEASON..... $100
(Will be allowed to serve fifteen approved outside mares.)

DICTATUS was foaled in 1890. He was sired by the great RED WILKES 1749 (sire of 88 in the list); dam, Miss LOLLIE, by DICTATOR 133 (sire of JAY-EYE-SEE, 2:10, DIRECTOR, 2:17, and 41 others in the list, besides the dam of NANCY HANKS, 2:04, etc.); second dam, Gold Pen (dam of Felina, 2:29½, and grandam of Hill Boy (p), 2:20, by Mambrino Abdallah 2201 (son of Mambrino Patchen 58); third dam by Harold 413 (sire of Maud S, 2:08½, and 41 others in the list and grandsire of Kremlin, 2:07½); fourth dam, Emily Chester, by Mambrino Patchen 58; fifth dam Patsey (dam of Midway), by Snowstern (sire of Jim Irving, 2:23). He is in color a chestnut, with star in forehead, one hind pastern white. In conformation he is perfect, being about 15.2 hands in height, very short back, strong over the coupling, heavy quarters, large, well-muscled gaskins and arms, limbs straight, cannon bones short, hocks and joints clean and bony, and feet of the finest kind. His neck, head and body denote an iron constitution. His shoulders are sloping, and taking him all in all, a more perfect representative of the great Wilkes-Dictator cross does not exist to-day. His breeding speaks for itself. He traces four times to Hambletonian 10 through his greatest sires—GEO. WILKES, DICTATOR, HAROLD and ABDAL LAH 15. He traces to Mambrino Patchen twice and three times to Mambrino Chief. His blood-lines are unequalled by any stallion on this Coast.

The best of care taken of mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Service fee must be paid before mares leave the farm.

WILLIAM CORBITT,

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud S., 2:03 1/2; Albert H., 2:27 1/2; Mollie C., 2:37 1/2, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

(For pedigree of Nutwood 600 and Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 see tabulated pedigree above.)

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

COLE'S OSSIDINE

RESULTS OBTAINED AT THE WELL-KNOWN KALAMAZOO FARM.

Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Spring Tendons, Curbs, Kingbone, and Spavins, there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any plaster ever used. Very respectfully yours,
S. A. BROWSE & CO., Prop'rs.
Kalamazoo, Mich.

Owner of Eole, St. Saviour, Eolist, etc., says:—

I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Cole's Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,
F. GEHARD,

Training

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the biggest and fullest extent that colts' capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

BLOOD HORSE MEETING.

The Best Racing Ever Seen in San Francisco Delighting Our Enthusiasts.

FIVE FAVORITES BEATEN IN ONE DAY.

Nellie Van, Bonnie Jean Colt, Lottie Mills, El Rayo, Tigress and Quarterstaff Victorious on Friday—Flirtation Wins the Racine Stakes Easily—Rosalie's Easy Victory Over the Brutus-Ariola Colt—All the Events Described.

EIGHTH DAY—FRIDAY, APRIL 14.

FIVE favorites failed to finish first this fine afternoon, in consequence of which the hookmakers smiled angelically and the talent scowled when thoughts of pocket-book flattening and incidentally the day's racing flashed o'er their troubled thought domes.

Nellie Van started the ball of disaster a-rolling by winning gamely at five furlongs when 'they' said she couldn't go over three. The Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt, barred in the hetting by most hookies, romped in an easy winner, Seaside, a sister to Martinet, to the surprise of a host of plungers, running a good race, and finishing a good second under the whip. Montalvo, the well-touted half-brother to John Treat in David Bridges' stable, ran fast to the homestretch, where he tired badly and finished a poor fourth.

Lottie Mills, fresh from Los Angeles, made her first appearance of the meeting to-day, and met and defeated easily in a six-furlong dash the best horses at the distance in this part of the world—Misty Morn, Topgallant, Joe Cotton and Sympathetic's Last—the last-named being a slight favorite. Mills laid away third until the head of the homestretch was reached, when Johnny Weber called on her, with the result that she said "ta-ta" to Topgallant and Misty Morn and won handily by a length and a half from Misty Morn, who was a trifle short of work and a little sore in her forelegs. Joe Cotton and Sympathetic's Last were never in the hunt, and great things were expected of the latter, too, on account of his fine run Thursday.

El Rayo, with 125 pounds up, showed what a high-class horse he is when on edge by conceding a lot of weight to everything and beating the heavily-played favorite, Dinero, as he pleased, the latter under whip and spur the last eighth of a mile. St. Patrick was interfered with at the head of the homestretch, or he might have won a ton of place money for his friends.

St. Croix was played off the boards pretty much all around the ring, going to the post at 1 to 5. All the same Tigress, a 4 to 1 shot, beat him at "every mark on the road," to the great joy of her admirers and consternation of the plungers on the supposed copper-bottomed cinch.

The agony of the favorite-players was further intensified by the victory of Quarterstaff. Sir Reel was hammered from 2 to 1 to 6 to 5 and Conde the same, Quarterstaff going at the close to 5 to 1 from 3. He remained third, within good reaching distance, until they turned into the straight, when Sullivan gave the brown colt his head, and he won easily by half a length from Crawford, who came up fast also in the homestretch. Conde was third and the "air-tight," Sir Reel, fourth, after leading into the straight. This proves that Quarterstaff runs a far better race when saved for the finish. The attendance to-day exceeded 2,000.

DESCRIPTION OF THE RACES.

Ida Glenn was at all times a favorite in the first race, five furlongs, though plunges were made on Mountain Boy and Nellie Van. To a good start the latter led Ida Glenn all the way, coming into the homestretch over a length to the good. About a sixteenth from home Nellie Van experienced that tired feeling for a second or so, but Spence gave her a dose of whip cordial, and she responded gamely, winning a good race by three parts of a length, Ida Glenn second, as far from Lodi, Oakland fourth, Mountain Boy (third most of the way) fifth, the rest strung out. Time, 1:02 3/4.

The Bonnie Jean colt was harred in most of the books, and Montalvo was played heavily for place at 3 to 5. The favorite indulged Montalvo and Seaside with the lead until well into the homestretch, when he came away and won easily by a neck from Seaside, who ran well under the whip at the close. Ovation was third, over two lengths away. Time, 1:02 3/4.

The third race was a heavy hetting affair, the money going in especially lively on Lottie Mills. Misty Morn and Joe Cotton were not considered in the best of shape for a bruising race. Topgallant led Misty Morn and Lottie Mills for about three-eighths of a mile. Then Misty Morn got her head in front, and Lottie Mills began to move up. The race down the stretch between Misty and Mills was very pretty, but the latter had considerable up her sleeve, coming away at the drawgate and winning easily by a length and a half, Misty Morn second, two lengths from Topgallant, the favorite. Cotton and Lady Marion hardly in the hunt. Time, 1:14 3/4—much slower than such horses were expected to do the six furlongs.

Dinero couldn't lose, and El Rayo was carrying too much weight, said nine out of every ten persons that gave much thought to the fourth race, one mile, where El Rayo was packing 125 pounds to Dinero's 114. Mero led Dinero passing the quarter and half poles, with El Rayo third, hack about three lengths. Dinero passed Mero soon after leaving the half hut led El Rayo into the homestretch only half a length. They raced together down the straight, Dinero under whip, El Rayo under a pull, and in the last 75 yards Clancy gave the good son of Grinstead his head, and he shot in an easy winner by half a length. St. Patrick, in a pocket nearing the three-quarter mark, got through and finished third, two lengths behind Dinero. Time, 1:42 3/4.

St. Croix was a burning favorite in the fifth race, six furlongs, and most of the play was on Tigress for place. Regal and Addie Chipman were played a little to receive second honors. Tigress, second to Regal at the start, soon flew to the fore, and was not headed on the journey. An eighth from home Narvaez was urging the favorite with whip, spur, hands, feet and voice, but he could not get up, and Tigress won rather easily by two lengths, St. Croix second, three from Regal. Time, 1:14 3/4.

Conde and Sir Reel were heavily-played favorites, going to the post at 6 to 5 each. Especially strong was Sir Reel played. Conde got the best of a poor start, with Crawford second and Quarterstaff next. Sir Reel passed to the front nearing the three-quarter pole, and led Conde a head into the homestretch. All this time Quarterstaff had been running easily in third place, and when well straightened out Sullivan let Brown's brown colt have his head, and he soon shot up to the leaders, winning quite easily in the last few strides by half a length. Crawford came up fast in the straight and nipped the place from Conde by half a length. Time, 1:14 3/4.

NINTH DAY—SATURDAY, APRIL 15.

Seven races certainly should satisfy any crowd for one afternoon. That number of racing events came off to-day at Bay District track, and fully 5,000 persons witnessed the contests. The track looked fast, but it wasn't, being dead and the running over it was unprofitable in most cases—to the bookmakers. They were hard-hit when Revolver, Rosalie and El Rayo won, and the victories of Jackson and Tigress did not prove balm to the gentlemen from Gilead and other places that bookmakers hail from. Thornhill's second to Flirtation did not sweeten their cups of ice-cold tea, and it is pretty safe to say that the only race they broke anything like even on was the one captured by Valencia.

The features of the day's sport were the excellent riding of Johnny Weber, the easy victory of Rosalie in the match against the Brutus-Ariola colt, the good form shown by the Macdonough and Holly horses and the suspension of Kinnie for his deliberate pull of Bay Dick in the last race. We believe it was Kinnie's first essay as a jockey, and it was probably his last mount as well.

Col. H. I. Thornton, the popular President of the P.

Coast Blood Horse Association, to the surprise and regret of many, tendered his resignation to the Board, which he subsequently called together, and T. H. Williams Jr. was elected to fill the vacancy. A. B. Spreckles was then made First Vice-President and Louis Lessak elected a director. Col. Thornton gave as his reason for retiring ill-health and important business cares, which would not allow him to give the affairs of the association the attention he desired.

THE RACING.

Revolver was at all times a hot favorite in the first race, one mile, though Garcia was well played, and Little Tough hacked down from 15 to 8 to 1. Garcia, off fourth, dashed to the front, going around the first turn, and led to the drawgate, with Initiation second most of the way. Revolver was fourth into the homestretch, and made his characteristic fine finish, almost walking in a length in front of Garcia, who was two from Little Tough. The latter was sixth into the homestretch, and made a good finish. Time, 1:44.

Flirtation, of course, was "a foregone" in the Racine Stakes, six furlongs. Opposed to the sister to Flambeau were Thornhill, Jim Lee and Carmel. Thornhill, though carrying perhaps twenty-seven pounds' dead weight, was played heavily for place. He got off a neck in advance of Carmel and led up to the last of sixteenth of a mile. At the half-pole the favorite was last, and was third to Thornhill and Jim Lee into the stretch. At the drawgate Flirtation got her head in front of Thornhill, and little Weber, on the latter, went to the whip. The favorite simply romped in half a length in front of the whipped-out Thornhill, who beat Carmel about four lengths. Time, 1:16 1/2—surprisingly slow.

The match race at four and a half furlongs between Boots' Brutus-Ariola colt and Macdonough's Rosalie followed, and this was considered as big a cinch for the former as Flirtation was in the Racine Stakes. 1 to 4 Ariola colt, 3 1/2 to 1 Rosalie were about the average odds. Just on account of the odds, however, the Macdonough filly was well played. The flag fell with Rosalie a neck in advance, and both well under way. The favorite ran away from the filly at an astonishing rate around that far turn, and the crowd shouted: "All over! she's beaten now." Not so, however. The colt commenced to come back to the game little daughter of Hyder Ali nearing the three-quarter pole, where he was leading a length and a half. It looked very much like a victory for Mr. Boots as the pair swung into the stretch, but to the surprise of nearly every one the filly not only held her own, but gained inch by inch. An eighth from the wire they were on nearly even terms, and Miller had gone to the hat. "She's got him," yelled the spectators. "See, Miller's whipping the colt!" The colt responded gamely enough, but Rosalie had the speed this day and won easily from the hadly-punished colt by three parts of a length in 0:56 1/2, a full second slower than the loser ran the distance over a heavy track. Rousing cheers went up for Johnny Weher and Rosalie on their return to the stand.

The special handicap, one and three-sixteenths miles, came next, and six horses of excellent quality responded to the saddling-up hell. El Rayo, with but 109 up, was considered to have the race at his mercy, for in his last run he had taken up 125 pounds and gone a mile in 1:42 1/2 easily. Almont still had friends with coin to back him, while quite a plunge was indulged in on Raindrop and Hermitage for place. Almont went out and set a merry pace passing the stand, quarter and half poles, attended closely by Hermitage and El Rayo. Between the half and three-quarters Hermitage assumed command, with El Rayo moving up like a flash around the final turn. Hermitage was first into the homestretch by a neck, El Rayo second, a length from Almont, Raindrop fourth, half a dozen lengths away and out of it. El Rayo and Hermitage raced along evenly, to within 100 yards of the finish, the former under a strong pull, and when Clancy called on him he darted away from Hermitage and won by half a length easily, Hermitage, in the place, two lengths in front of Almont. Raindrop was fourth, Sheridan fifth and Alliance last. Time, 2:02 1/2—a wonderfully good run on a "dead" track.

Seven two-year-olds contested in the fifth race, five-eighths of a mile, and the big maiden from the Antrim Stables, Belle Platte, a good-looking daughter of Munster and Wild Rose (dam of Jennie K.), was made a favorite. Valencia was well-supported. A great tip got out on the gray half-sister to Grandee, the Hidalgo—Helen Scratch filly, and she was backed from 6 to 1 down to 3 to 1. Bordeaux got considerably the best of the start, and ran into the stretch about a length in front of Valencia, Belle Platte being third, the chances of the Helen Scratch filly going glimmering with the fall of the flag, she not being on her stride. Rosalie, Dr. Bowhill's filly, ran well, send-off considered, to the homestretch, and then was eased up, Morris seeing little chance of making up the gap. Bordeaux died away soon after entering the straight, Valencia and Belle Platte having it hammer-and-tongs to the wire, which Valencia reached a neck in advance. The Lark ran up from sixth place into third in the homestretch. After Belle Platte returned to the stand it was discovered that she had pulled one of her plates nearly off, to which mishap her defeat can probably be attributed. Time, 1:03.

The sixth race, five furlongs, was a great betting affair, Bronco opening an even-money favorite. Gypsy Girl was played with all kinds of money, being backed from 2 to 1 down to 6 to 5. Jackson was plugged pretty hard by a few in the know at 8 and 10 to 1. Gypsy Girl piloted Mountain Boy into the homestretch at a great clip, Jim R. being third and Jackson next. Bronco's jockey, Miller, tried to get a good move on his horse in the rear, but those in front unexpectedly closed in, forcing him to pull up or get a fall. Johnny Weher set to work on Jackson in the homestretch, and the old half-brother to Bramble came like a shot that last sixteenth of a mile, nipping the tiring Gypsy Girl in the very last stride and winning by a head. Only three parts of a length behind Gypsy Girl came Jim R.—his first time out for quite a while. Bronco finished fourth, and would have been close to the front had he not received a set back at the start. Time, 1:01 1/2—the fastest run of the meeting thus far.

Tigress was an odds-on favorite in the last race, also five furlongs, but Ida Glenn and Bay Dick were played to win a big pot of money. Volita and Tigress cut out the pace, the latter leading after the first 100 yards had been accomplished. Kinnie, a new jockey to San Franciscans, took a regular Stansbury pull on Bay Dick at the start, as the horse dashed away at the fast clip, and when at length the unknown got going again good he took another reef in the flyer's speed snails. Stoneman and Ida Glenn moved up fast going around the turn into the homestretch, the mare a length in advance, Tigress in front of all, Volita second and tiring. Sullivan cut Glenn loose, pulling her directly in front of the old gray horse, and causing Kinstein to pull him up or get a fall. Then, after a little bump, Sullivan put steel to Miller's little mare, and, a little over a sixteenth of a mile from home, tried to get through closer to the rails, but little Weber set sail in the same direction with Tigress, taking Glenn's track and causing a set-back. Tigress passed the winning-post a winner by half a length, Ida Glenn second, two lengths from Stoneman. Sullivan claimed a foul, but the judges refused to allow it. The patrol judge reported that Kinnie made a very suspicious ride on Bay Dick (hacked to win a fortune by a prominent capitalist), and the jockey and horse were subsequently suspended indefinitely.

TENTH DAY—TUESDAY, APRIL 18.

This was a day of excitement, and that excitement came by more than one route. Revolver, favorite by force of public money, was declared by the judges to have been ridden in a most suspicious manner by the elder Clancy when Almont finished four lengths in front of Holly's old bay gelding. Clancy was called into the stand, and admitted that he had made a poor ride, taking Revolver too far back nearing the half ever to get up. He had, he stated to questioners, backed his mount to the extent of $100. The judges suspended Clancy indefinitely, pending investigation. While Revolver has been winning races easily with big weight up, he has been meeting horses that do not class at all with Almont, it must be remembered. He (Revolver) beat Garcia a mile in 1:44 easily, and took up the same weight to-day, and ran the mile and a sixteenth in just about that notch. Heretofore, too, Revolver had done his best running in the homestretch, but in our opinion that golding, with such a speedy horse as Almont striking the straight four or five lengths in front of him, can not make up anything like that distance in the last quarter. Of course, the race looked "rocky," for our race-goers have been used to seeing Revolver mow everything down with ease in the homestretch, but Almont is in a higher class than Revolver when anything like right. T. H. Williams, president of the Blood Horse Association, had quite an argument with Col. Dan Burns over the Revolver-Almont episode, the latter contending that Revolver was not "meant" to-day, Williams the reverse. Finally Williams offered to bet Burns any sum from $5,000 to $10,000 that Almont could beat Revolver at the same distance and with similar weights up, other trainers to take charge of the horses. However, he would insist on Joe Narvaez again riding Almont. Burns did not accept the wager.

The directors to-day formally reinstated Jockeys Claude Burlingame and Thad Williams. Frank Kinney and Al Leech, respectively the rider and lessee of the horse Bay Dick, "pulled" last Saturday, were ruled off for life. Poe, the owner, was not punished, it being proved that he had nothing to do with the crooked transaction. Emile Steiner was arrested by Capt. Callundan and charged with stealing $5 (due on a winning ticket) from the wife of one of the editors of the Abend Post.

The track was in very fair shape to-day, and a crowd of fully 3,000 saw six events run over the course.

Joe Narvaez distinguished himself by riding three winners. Rinstein, Miller and C. Weher were the other successful horse pilots.

Cadmus, Tom Williams' Derby colt, made monkeys out of Sir Reel and others, winning at seven furlongs with his head erect and ears pricked in a romn in the good time of 1:29 1/2.

Jim R. was a hot favorite in the first race, five furlongs. Stoneman and Currency were nibbled at. The others were practically overlooked. Volita got away in front, and, attended by Mount Carlos to the three-quarter pole, looked a winner. Then Jim R., who had been lying third, made his move, entering the straight first, and old gray Stoneman came up like a flash from fifth place to give him hattle. The engagement did not last long, for the gray gelding came away and had the favorite beaten a sixteenth from home. Stoneman won handsly by two lengths from Jim R., who heat Mount Carlos a length and a half for place honors. Time, 1:02 1/2.

Agitato, Thornhill and Jennie Deane went to the post at 3 to 1 each in the second race, for two-year-olds, five furlongs. The Beauty colt was played a little at 6 to 1. Thornhill was played considerably the hardest of the first-mentioned trio, being backed down from 4 1/2 to 1 to 3 to 1. Jennie Deane receded from 2 1/2 to 3. A splendid start was effected, Thornhill, Silver State and Jennie Deane noses apart, the balance in a compact bunch, except Pricelle, who was not on his stride when the flag flopped. Jennie Deane, with Seaside but a head away, led into the homestretch, Thornhill running third under a pull, about a length off. Jennie Deane fell away hadly an eighth from home, and Claire commenced to move up. Thornhill was shaken up just a little a sixteenth from home, and came away like a sure-enough crack, winning easily by half a length from the ridden-out Claire, who was one and one-half lengths from the Brutus-Beauty colt, who made a fine run from the rear in the homestretch. Realization was an indifferent fourth. Time, 1:02 1/2.

The third race, seven-furlongs, was considered a "fall down" for Cadmus, who was at 1 to 5. Sir Reel was well-played for place. The Australian-bred filly, Atossa, by Dunlop, dam Catherine Wbeel, by Wellington, made her debut in this race, and ran poorly, though she did show considerable speed at the start. Gracie S., third away, dashed to the front at a great rate, leading Vendome past the quarter-pole a neck, Cadmus third. Gracie S. was five lengths in the lead at the half, Cadmus and Sir Reel necks apart. Gracie died away nearing the three-quarter pole, and Cadmus came first into the homestretch, with Sir Reel at his heels. The favorite won as he pleased by three lengths with his head up and ears pricked, and was sent a Derby distance by Miller in good shape. Sir Reel, second, was six lengths from Gracie S. Time, 1:29 1/2.

Almont opened a favorite at 4 to 5 in the fourth race, mile and a sixteenth, but so much money went in on Revolver that at the close the odds were 4 to 5 Revolver, 3 to 5 Almont, 4 to 1 Jackson (from 6), 15 to 1 each St. Patriek and Initiation. Past the stand Almont was a head in front of Jackson, the others bunched. Initiation now took up the running, and ran past her field nearing the quarter-pole, Jackson being second, Almont third and Revolver fourth. Almont moved up past Jackson between the quarter and half, and, nearing the last-named point, Clancy took Revolver back. Between the half and three-quarter marks Almont made a wonderfully fast move, and led Initiation into the homestretch a good three lengths, Jackson third and Revolver fourth, the latter at least six lengths away and apparently out of the bunt. Clancy rode Revolver some going around the last turn, and he easily disposed of Initiation and Jackson in the homestretch, but Almont was too full of run, and Revolver did not get closer than four lengths. Jackson was third, as far behind Revolver, St. Patriek fourth and Initiation last. Time, 1:50 1/2—a mere romp for Almont.

W. Clancy, after weighing out, was called into the stand by the judges and questioned, with the result narrated above. It is doubtful if Revolver ever saw the day that he could defeat Almont, if the latter was in good condition, and while Clancy made a mighty poor ride, we do not think the result would have been any different had he made a good one.

In the fifth race, six and one-half furlongs, lots of trouble was experienced in getting the horses away, and when the flag fell it was to one of the worst starts seen at the present meeting. St. Croix was a good length in front of Inkerman and moving fast, while the favorite, Motto, was absolutely last away. She ran past everything but St. Croix, and gave him a lively fight clear into the homestretch, where she gave it up, the effort at the outset telling the tale. St. Croix came on and won easily by two lengths, Bronco (third around to the straight), in the place, two lengths from Red Cloud, third, Inkerman fourth, Motto fifth, the rest strung out. Time, 1:21.

Oakland was at all times a favorite in the last race, five-eighths of a mile, and was played strongly. A hot tip got out on Orta, and she was backed down from 5 to 2 to 1. Joe D., Phil Archibald's skyrocket, led around into the homestretch by two lengths, then Oakland, who was second into the straight, came away from him and won easily by three parts of a length from Lucy S., that made a fast run in the final sixteenth. Vanity was third, but half a length behind the gray mare, and Orta, first away, was fourth. Time, 1:02.

west—and on the Knoxville line of the Rock Island road, 50 miles east of that promiscuous horse center. It was in this county (Keokuk) that Flaxtail S132 (sire of three in the list and the dams of twelve in the list) was born.

After Mr. Tinsley had the horse some little time there was a man who came here claiming the colt was stolen from him, and the consequence was Mr. Tinsley had to buy the colt again at quite an advance over the first price.

Old settlers here say this horse could pace quarters in 31 or 32 seconds with a man on his back, but was never in a condition to pace a mile out. Even if he was at that time they had no way to give him a proper trial, as the only tracks they had were straight tracks used for running quarter-horses.

This horse stamped his offspring with the same color, style and conformation. No cold-blooded horse could have been so uniform a breeder as he was. They all had the same head, neck, grand sloping shoulders, strong loins, long hips and a good many inclined to be a little on the curby order.

The youngest of his get around here now must be about eighteen or nineteen years old. These old mares are much sought after by breeders. He left here about 1872 or 1873, and went to Keokuk, and from there to California. His daughters have produced Goldleaf, 211, and other sensational performers. There are one or two of his sons in this vicinity. Probably the most notable one is Stringfellow's Tuckahoe, owned at Oskaloosa, twenty-five miles west of this place. After his blood was so sought after a gentleman in Oskaloosa went to Kansas and purchased this horse, one of his best sons, he being by Flaxtail, dam by Irwin's Tuckahoe; second dam by Flaxtail. He has another son, Joe Nell or Linker, bred 2317, trotting, owned at Harper, Kan., that should have access in the stud if crossed on the right kind of mares, as his dam was by Canadian Bull Pup. If Flaxtail had had the advantages of other horses he would have been a very prominent sire as most of his colts from common mares showed a desire to pace, and were very speedy in that gait. None of his colts were handled by this section, and the old horse was never properly appreciated until he had been sold and gone from the place.—Kentucky Stock Farm.

In the last above article republished, it is stated that Flaxtail was brought to California, but that is a mistake. He was never in California. When Dr. Hicks came to California he loaned the horse to G. H. Nelson, in whose possession he remained until he died at La Harpe, Illinois, as stated in the letter of Mr. Robinson.

L. E. Hicks, son of the late M. W. Hicks, testifies as follows:

To whom it may concern:

I have often heard my father say that he was sorry the story ever was printed that the horse was by Blue Bull. This story about Flaxtail being by this horse got out the year that horse got twelve in the 2:30 list. I knew that father claimed that Bull Pup was the sire of Flaxtail, but Wallace had the horse registered as "said to be by Prude's Blue Bull," and for some unaccountable reason he never had it changed. Bull Pup was an unknown sire almost, while Blue Bull was quite popular. Bull Pup was by Canadian Pilot. L. E. Hicks.

April 18, 1893.

We think the showing is sufficiently strong to warrant the Register Association in wiping out the present registration of Flaxtail and substituting therefor the following:

Flaxtail, dun or chestnut horse, foaled about 1854, sired by Bull Pup, son of Canadian Pilot, sire of Pilot Jr.; taken from Indiana to Iowa by a man named Joseph Mitchell, and by him sold to T. T. Tinsley, of Mahaska County, Iowa, and by him sold to M. W. Hicks, who thereafter owned him until he died, in 1880, at La Harpe, Illinois.

The Standard.

We present below the present trotting standard and the one recently adopted which will go into effect January 1, 1895:

THE PRESENT TROTTING STANDARD.

In order to define what constitutes a standard-bred trotting horse, and to establish a breed of trotters on a more intelligent basis, the following rules are adopted to control admission to registration. When an animal meets the requirements of admission and is duly registered it shall be accepted as a standard-bred trotting animal.

First—Any trotting stallion that has a record of two minutes and thirty seconds (2:30), or better; provided any of his get has a record of 2:35 trotting, or better; or provided his sire or dam is already a standard trotting animal.

Second—Any mare or gelding that has a trotting record of 2:30 or better.

Third—Any horse that is the sire of two trotters with records of 2:30 or better.

Fourth—Any horse that is the sire of one trotter with a record of 2:30 or better; provided he has either of the following additional qualifications: 1—A trotting record of 2:25 or better. 2—Is the sire of two other animals with trotting records of 2:35. 3—Has a sire or dam that is already a standard trotting animal.

Fifth—Any mare that has produced a trotter with a record of 2:30.

Sixth—The progeny of a standard trotting horse when out of a standard trotting mare.

Seventh—The female progeny of a standard trotting horse when out of a mare whose dam is a standard trotting mare.

Eighth—Any mare that has a trotting record of 2:35 or better, whose sire or dam is a standard trotting animal.

THE NEW TROTTING STANDARD.

In order to define what constitutes a standard-bred trotting horse, and to establish a breed of trotters on a more intelligent basis, the following rules are adopted to control admission to registration. When an animal meets the requirements of admission and is duly registered, it shall be accepted as a standard-bred trotting animal.

First—Any trotting stallion that has a record of two minutes and thirty seconds (2:30), or better, provided any of his get has a record of 2:35 trotting, or better; or provided his sire or dam is already a standard trotting animal.

Fifth—Any mare that has produced a trotter with a record of 2:30.

Sixth—The progeny of a standard trotting horse when out of a standard trotting mare.

Seventh—Any mare whose sire is standard and whose first and second dams are by a standard horse.

Performances Against Time.

The rules regulating performances against time adopted during the tri-conference at New York of the joint committee of the National and American Associations and the American Trotting Register Association were substantially the same as those adopted by the American Trotting Register Association April 6, 1892. As a matter of interest they are given below:

Performances against time must be conducted in accordance with the following rules and regulations: They must be made at a regular meeting of a society in membership with the National Trotting Association or American Trotting Association, and performances to be accepted by the referee appointed by the judges and three to the day.

strictly in accordance with the rules of said National or American Trotting Association adopted by the member.

No animal shall be permitted to start against time pending a heat or trial by another animal, nor until the result of such trial shall have been duly announced.

Time shall be taken by three timers engaged in the stand during the performance. There shall be three judges in the stand during such performances, who shall not act as official timers. No performance against time shall be earlier than 10 o'clock A. M.

A regular meeting is hereby constituted to mean a postponed or continued meeting unless such a postponement or continuance is made in accordance with the rules of the National or American Trotting Association to which the member belongs. In performances against time the animal must start to equal or beat a specified time, and a losing performance shall not constitute a record or a bar.

A regular meeting is hereby constituted to mean a meeting advertised in at least one newspaper not less than one week before the commencement of said meeting, and at which meeting no less than two regular events (purse or stake) are advertised for each day, one of which must take place. A match race shall not be considered a regular event.

Matches against time will not be allowed. Entries to performances against time must be made with the secretary not later than 7 P. M. the day before the performance, and must appear in the published programme of the day, or if there is no printed programme, then a written copy shall be posted conspicuously at the judges' stand.

Match races shall be regarded as performances against time, and such time made in such races shall be similarly treated and designated. Pending an investigation of a reported record by either the National or the American Trotting Association, the reported record shall operate as a bar until the matter is adjusted.

The Register Association Meeting.

The second annual meeting of the stockholders of the American Trotting Register Association convened yesterday (Wednesday, April 6th), at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, says The Horseman. The attendance was small in comparison with the first meeting, and the 544 shares of stock represented were principally by proxies. Among the well-known breeders and horsemen present were W. R. Allen, Lucas Brodhead, Hon. N. J. Colman, L. A. Davies, C. J. Hamlin, C. F. Emery, F. S. Gorton, Judge Halsey, W. P. Ijams, Morris J. Jones, Major H. C. McDowell, H. D. McKinney, E. D. Morse, Ed. Ward Hayes, Judge M. W. Oliver, W. P. Powell, W. A. Sanborn, C. L. Benjamin, F. J. Berry, S. H. Wheeler, H. D. McKinney and S. G. Boyle. After the report of the committee on credentials the Secretary read the following report and financial statement of the directors:

CHICAGO, Ill., April 1, 1893.

To the Stockholders of the American Trotting Register Association: GENTLEMEN—The Board of Directors herewith submit for your consideration a report of the operations of the association for the past year. Financial statement of assets and liabilities of the American Trotting Register Association, April 1, 1893:

Table with columns for Assets and Liabilities. Assets include Cash in hands of Treasurer, Franchises, Plant bought of C. D. Sibley, etc. Liabilities include Bills payable, Capital stock, etc.

Table with columns for Assets and Liabilities. Assets include Cash in hands of Treasurer, Franchises, Plant bought of C. D. Sibley, etc. Liabilities include Bills payable, Capital stock, etc.

Assets over liabilities... $5,601 86 During the year the indebtedness incurred in the purchase of the property has been reduced from $85,000 to $25,000, and on May 10th next there will be made a further reduction of $5,000, making a total reduction of $77,000 and leaving but $19,000 of purchase price of the property unpaid.

For the first time in the history of trotting a complete Year Book containing summaries of all races trotted, besides the great tables, was issued for the year 1891, comprising about twice as much matter as was contained in the previous volume. The work was sold at the inadequate price of $2.50 in hopes that the sales would be large enough to cover the increased expense without additional cost to the breeders of the country. The result was a disappointment, and entailed a loss on the association of $4,615.70, which has been paid out of the earnings of the association for the year 1892. The Year Book for 1892 became so large as to necessitate its being issued in two volumes, thereby increasing the cost on account of binding the extra volume, besides the additional cost entailed by containing twenty-two per cent. more matter. In view of these facts the price of the two volumes was placed at the reasonable sum of $5 postpaid for orders of less than ten copies, and $4 per copy for orders of ten or more, with an additional reduction to the large turf journals that carry advertisements for the book and purchased same for their customers. The present price will recoup the association for the outlay and prevent a similar loss to that incurred for the previous year.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Year Book for 1892 is bound in two volumes and contains twenty-two per cent. more matter than its predecessor, it has been produced at a less cost, this owing to improved methods in handling the matter and to lower prices for printing resulting from former experiences and competition.

The Association has now on hand several bids for the work of 1893, which show that a still further reduction in the cost can be made, which will insure, as it should, a fair profit on this most important and valuable text-book of the trotting industry.

The directors take pleasure in informing the stockholders that they secured the "Index Digest" on such favorable terms as will insure a profit to the Association. The work is a very important one, and no doubt will have an increased sale as soon as the breeders of the country realize its advantages to them.

During the year the Association has issued the two volumes of the Year Book, the Index Digest, Vol. XI, of the Register, Wallace's Monthly, and has compiled ready for the printer Vol. XII of the Register.

The detail work of the office is simply enormous. Horses are not registered on tradition, by favor, or rejected on account of prejudice against individuals or lines of blood, but the same proof of breeding that every animal registered is required from the most illustrious breeder in the country and our most obscure patron, and filed as authority for the acceptance of the pedigree.

To accomplish the work it was necessary in write 25,159 letters and 26,315 postals. The Association during the year has registered 16,148 horses, transmitted 687 issued 8,641 certificates or registration, rejected 147 applications for registration, and refused 14 fees paid.

Messrs. Brodhead, Colman and Sanborn were appointed a committee to audit the accounts and examine the books of the Secretary and Treasurer, and submitted the following report.

To THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS: Your Auditors and Committee beg leave to report that it has made an examination of the receipts and expenditures during the year, and has approved the same. It has also examined the books of the Secretary and Treasurer, and find them to be correct.

Hon. N. J. Colman read the attention of the meeting to the action of the Conference Committee held recently in New York, and read the report recommending the rules governing records against time, which were recently printed in these columns, and these were adopted unanimously. The following directors were elected:

Directors for one year—W. R. Allen, Pittsfield, Mass.; Lucas Brodhead, Spring Station, Ky.; S. A. Browne, Kalamazoo, Mich.; N. J. Colman, St. Louis, Mo.; S. G. Boyle, Lexington, Ky.; E. H. Harriman, New York City; F. D. Stout, Dubuque, Iowa; C. F. Emery, Cleveland, O.; May Overton, Nashville, Tenn. Directors for two years—F. S. Gorton, Chicago, Ill.; A. M. Garcelon, Lewiston, Me.; C. J. Hamlin, Buffalo, N. Y.; W. I. Hayes, Clinton, Iowa; W. M. C. Hill, Dallas, Texas; George W. Hooker, Brattleboro, Vt.; W. P. Injams, Terre Haute, Ind.; Morris J. Jones, Kenosha, Wis.; H. D. McKinney, Janesville, Wis.; H. C. McDowell, Lexington, Ky. Directors for three years—Judge M. W. Oliver, Cincinnati, O.; F. E. Perkins, Providence, R. H.; F. Rockefeller, Cleveland, O.; J. J. DuBois, Denver, Col.; J. Malcolm Forbes, Boston, Mass.; W. A. Sanborn, Sterling, Ill. David Bonner, New York City; F. S. Waters, Chicago, Ill.; C. W. Williams, Independence, Iowa; Samuel Baker, Chicago, Ill.

Major McDowell moved to strike out rules 7, 8 and 9 of the standard, the change to take effect after January 1, 1895, and after discussion the motion prevailed on a viva voce vote.

The second rule of the standard was then amended to read thus: Any mare or gelding [shall be eligible] that has a trotting record of 2:30 or better, whose sire or dam are standard.

Under this revised standard, to go into effect January 1, 1895, a mare to be standard must be by a standard horse and her first and second dams must be by standard horses.

At an early hour in the afternoon the meeting adjourned, after which the directors met and re-elected all the old officers, excepting that F. S. Waters retires from the Vice-Presidency in favor of Samuel Baker, of Chicago.

Canadian Pilot.

Mr. J. W. Forman, of Little Rock, Ky., gives a graphic account of Old Pacing Pilot, the sire of Pilot Jr., who came to New Orleans in the fall of 1834, says Duntton's Spirit of the Turf. A man by the name of Beau took him there with another horse named Billy. Beau was from Canada, and brought the horse from there. He was not a Frenchman. He came there alone, brought Pilot to pace against time; he was a terrible puller and paced in breeching and had pulleys. When first he came I got up in the night and took him into the stable. Billy was a race-horse, a black gelding, 16.1 or 2, reckoned couldn't be beat, for he brought him to race with Cow Driver, who had taken everything. A few days after he came, Billy was taken sick and died. Beau acted like a crazy man, walked about the streets doing nothing, and Charles Barker, who was in New Orleans at the time with horses (and with whom I was), and old man Dubois, bought Pilot of him and kept him there that winter. Pilot was a young horse then, four or five years old, not over six anyhow. Beau was about thirty or thirty-five. It was at old man Norton's stables where he brought the horses, on a street with a French name like Chomptully, running up and down with the river. Norton lived on Sycamore street. At that time drovers were accustomed to take their horses to his stable and board with him. Beau was a fine-looking man, low and heavy-set, had dark hair and would weigh about 165 to 170 pounds. Dubois brought horses to New Orleans to sell, as did Barker; 1834 was the last trip I made there until 1854. I made my first trip in 1829, and was there in 1830, '31 and '32, when the cholera broke out, and I rode home. I was there in '33 and '34. I am satisfied it was after the cholera. Don't think anybody had ever seen Beau before that night. Wooley, a hatcher, had Cow Driver. I kept Pilot myself in New Orleans one winter after Barker bought him. Major Lindsey, of North Middletown, Bourbon county, Ky., got Pilot of Barker after Barker came to Louisville, and stood him at North Middletown one season, I think 1836. Jim Rogers, of Cane Ridge, has the book. He is brother-in-law to Col. Stoner. Col. Stoner's mother-in-law, who lives at Cane Ridge, might know more about Pilot.

Pilot was a black, no white, about 14.2 or 3 high, heavy blocky horse, heavy mane and tail, pretty neat head. Old Faro was the first Canadian horse I ever saw. He came from Montreal. John Bayless brought him to Kentucky. Bill Rogers bought Faro of him. He was the same kind of a horse, only white." In regard to Faro, we wish to say that Col. Abbot, the owner of the stallion Col. West, tells the following story: "I was about to go to Canada to buy horses for saddle purposes. Before leaving, John Bayless asked me to buy him the best horse I could find. I thought no more about his order to purchase for some days. A few nights after my arrival in Montreal I sat down at a fare table, and when I got up from the table I was $500 winner. I don't know that I slept any better that night than I would if I had quit loser that much, for in those days I thought nothing of winning or losing that amount at a sitting. Next morning after breakfast I was standing on one of the principal streets when a beautiful white stallion and rider came in view. The horse was one of the finest-looking saddlers I had ever seen, and the thought flashed into my head that I might buy him. On the spur of the moment I hailed the man. When he drew rein and came up to the curbstone where I stood, I begged his pardon and then inquired, 'Is that horse for sale?' The man evidently intended to put the price beyond the reach of the rough-looking would-be purchaser, and therefore said: 'Well, yes, for $500.' That amount just sized the fare pile, and the thought instantly seized me to nip the trade in the bud. Sighting the action to the word, I said, 'Here's your money.' That's how the horse came to be called Faro, and that is the way he came to Kentucky." This effectually extinguishes the ingenious story put forth by the scholastic turf writer who asserted that the intention was to call the horse Pharaoh, after the olden Egyptian kings, but that owing to general familiarity with Faro and the limited acquaintance with Scripture among turfdren, the name when put in writing appeared Faro, and that spelling was never corrected. Col. Abbot had sufficient reason in naming the horse, and was as accurate in hitting the spelling as he had been the night before in making his bets.

THE GUN.

The Sportsmen's World.

Every man should choose some particular sport, in which he may become interested, to such an extent, as to take up his attention when needing a rest from his business cares.

We think this proposition one which should be followed by every man, as it will invariably prove of benefit to him in more ways than one.

It is safe to say that every man does have some particular way of spending his leisure moments. The important question then arises: Is that method of pleasure one of an unobjectionable nature? "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," runs the old saw, and in a pronounced sense all men are or should be at times boys, in the sense, at least, of seeking recreation and relaxation from "the troubles that worry, and cares that annoy."

The pastime with gun, at the trap or in the field, furnishes much that is to be commended and nothing that is objectionable. The sport with the gun is exhilarating, inspiring and arouses the blood to a healthful state of action.

It is much better than almost any of the other sports we know, in that it does not enervate and exhaust the system, but on the contrary it serves to stimulate the system to a pleasant degree.

It is a matter of felicitation that sports are growing in this line and as a consequence have a tendency to draw away from those lines of pastime of which little that is commendable may be said.

The salvation of the world lies through the doorway of healthful sports and recreations. The man is only so strong and advanced as are the ways and means employed in his leisure moments. Whom shall be heard to successfully contradict this proposition? We do not think it possible to be done. Do you? If so, how?

Looking at the subject from this standpoint we hesitate not to state that the sportsmen's papers and the active promoters of legitimate sports and pastimes are engaged in a most commendable vocation. In fact they become the practical hand of the "Gentlemen of the cloth." If the work that has been proposed and outlined by the promoters of the idea to form a National Sportsmen's Association, be carried out the practical good that will flow from it to the public at large, will be inestimable. The only practical good that one can be instrumental in forwarding, is a work which has for its object the bettering of the condition of the race. The establishment of National and State parks, the propagation and protection of fish and game, the only community property we may now hold, is a work of the first importance and should receive the active endorsement and support of every one interested in the public good.

Grand Shooting Tournament.

The enterprising sporting goods house of Clabrough, Golcher & Co., announce the following grand shooting tournament, which will take place at Oakland Track on Sunday, the 30th of the present month.

The prizes are all of the first quality and are worth coming from a distance to shoot for. The announcement is as follows:

"Below we hand you copy of the list of prizes to be shot for at our coming tournament, which will be held at our Shooting Grounds on Sunday, April 30th. The programme of the day's shoot is as follows. Shooting will commence at 10 A. M.

American Association Rules to govern. All matches will be class shooting. Rapid firing system. Ties shot off at 5 single target. Pool shooting after match.

All are invited. Matches are open to all. Three cents each will be charged for targets."

We take particular pleasure in announcing the above event as we are satisfied that all such movements are in the line of encouraging legitimate sports with the gun. The sport of inanimate target shooting has been neglected and passed over long enough in this city and vicinity. Let every one turn out and take a hand in this shoot. It will prove a grand event.

The San Francisco Gun Club.

The San Francisco Gun Club met at Oakland Shooting Park on Saturday last to try the sport of pigeon shooting.

The attendance was large, some twenty-two shooters participating in the sport.

The fact that the shooters were about equally divided into squads made the shooting pass off most pleasantly and without the usual long intervals between calls as has frequently been the case where the entire number shoot together. The birds were a fair lot and gave the sport a zest which added to the interest of the occasion. A number of the shooters did excellent work making some commendable scores.

The new method of arranging the brass balls and bit of red flannel cloth attached for scaring up the birds gets many a "duffer" into the air that otherwise would set, aggregatingly, on the ground refusing to rise.

Mr. F. R. Webster's first bird managed to sustain itself for a foot or so beyond the boundary where it fell stone dead.

The balance of his birds he killed neatly, scoring eleven out of the twelve in the main match.

Mr. R. B. Woodward regained his old form, standing with Mr. Webster at the close of the match, his seventh bird falling dead over bounds.

Mr. W. S. Kittle killed all of his birds but two of them fell dead out of bounds.

Messrs. Eyre, W. J. Golcher and Atherton also scored ten birds each in the match.

The score in the match stands as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes F. R. Webster, R. B. Woodward, R. D. Sprague, W. S. Kittle, P. Eyre, W. J. Golcher, F. D. Atherton, Harry Babcock, F. L. Wooster, J. O. Cadman, F. W. Tallant, F. W. Chapin, Harry Woodward, F. Bourne, J. H. Jellett, R. B. Oxward, Geo. Leviston, A. C. Tubbs, J. D. Harvey, Alex Hamilton, F. H. Swett.

Mr. Wooster won the first pool in the 30-yard class on three straight kills; Messrs. Webster and Sprague divided second pool purse on five straight kills.

Messrs. Harvey and Hamilton won first pool in 28-yard class on three straight kills, while the latter-named gentleman took the purse in next pool on same score as made in first pool.

The birds were all shot away in good season and the party returned to the city in good season.

Inanimate Target Shooting.

On the first of the week at Oakland Shooting Park, Clabrough, Golcher & Co. opened their new inanimate target shooting grounds.

There were a large number of sportsmen present who greatly enjoyed the shooting. The grounds, club house, electric traps and all other arrangements for the enjoyment of the sport are perfect.

These new traps send the targets spinning through the air in perfect form and present the acme of sport in this line.

The following are a few of the many scores made during the day.

A grand tournament is one of the events to be provided for the delectation of the sportsmen in the near future:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Robinson, Fay, McMurchy, Slade, Golcher, Johns, Lindsley, Lake, Simpson, Forster.

In another match the score stood as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes McMurchy, Slade, Lake, Robinson, Lindsley, Barker, Johns, Simpson, Golcher, Delmas.

In the third event "Johns" came in a winner by one bird.

In another event Quinton carried off the honors.

A match at doubles resulted as follows:

In the final match Daniels did the best work of the day:

In shooting at the trap on Sunday last the following matches and "freeze-outs" were shot off. The first six bird match resulted as follows:

The Indians Were Surprised.

"One of the most astonishing incidents I ever witnessed," said a lover of the rifle recently, "was some years ago—I think it was in 1874 in Minnesota. I was at that time engaged in the lumber trade, and consequently was brought into close and constant communication with the Indians of the timbered districts of that region.

At the time of which I speak a large number of one of the tribes had come down to East Minneapolis for the purpose of trading their furs and trophies of the hunt, bead work, etc., for such articles—arms and ammunition, principally—as they desired. While passing through their camp I remembered that Professor J. M. Macallister, the world-renowned and justly-celebrated prestidigitator, was performing in Minneapolis, and that he was starting his audiences beyond measure by a most thrilling act, which has to this day been one of the deepest mysteries in the many of that line of wonders that I have ever witnessed.

The trick was performed in such a manner that it defied detection. It was this, at least the following is all that the audience could see or comprehend: A rifle of ordinary pattern was taken by the Professor and handed out to the audience for inspection. He would then pour the charge of powder into the weapon and ram it down, having passed several bullets to the audience with instructions for each one who should get hold of a bullet to mark it so they would know it again. The rifle was then passed about to them and they would drop into the rifle with their own hands the bullets so marked.

A good shot would then be called up from the audience and the Professor holding a plate before his face would instruct the marksman to fire at the center of the plate. The rifleman would pause, invariably, and demur to take part in a scene which to his mind could but terminate in the Professor's death!

But after being assured that the principal performer would exempt the shooter from all blame in case of a sure shot, the gun would be fired, when to the astonishment of every one, a small hole, as if made by a bullet, would appear in the center of the plate and the Professor would spit the bullets from his mouth. They would then be handed back to those in the audience who had marked them, when they would be duly identified.

I struck me that this trick would surprise and interest these Indians. I induced several of them to attend the performance of the above trick, as above described and it was the only time I ever knew of an Indian, being thoroughly surprised, giving vent to numerous "ughs" and grunts expressive of that feeling.

The Tenderfoot and the Cinnamon.

Professor J. M. Macallister, whose world-wide experiences as a traveller has stored his mind with a wealth of interesting incidents, relates the following, which, perhaps, will be recalled by many readers of Frank Leslie's publications where the first account of it appeared.

The Professor found himself in the city of Denver, in the spring of 1876, with some two weeks' leisure time on his hands. Being an ardent lover of field sports, he determined to go into the mountains for an outing. On arriving at Middle Park, he found himself in one of the wildest game regions to be met with in the Rockies.

This section of the mountains has been, and still is, one of the favored haunts for large game of every nature, and with the fond anticipation of meeting, favorably, a bear, the Professor shouldered his Winchester and strode forth from the hotel. There were assembled at this place at that time a number of other gentlemen with the same general end in view—the enjoyment of rod and gun in the mountains and streams about.

After being out from the hotel a short time, the Professor came across a young man who, from his dress, and more especially a light shotgun which he carried, presented positive proofs of being a "tenderfoot," fresh from the hot-bed of the more populated districts of the world.

The usual salutations were passed when the Professor naturally inquired as to the purposes of the stranger in carrying a bird gun only in that region.

"I am looking for bear," replied Mr. Tenderfoot.

The Professor thought the man joking and hence laughed pleasantly over the serious manner in which the stranger spoke of such an absurd undertaking. This nettled the tenderfoot, and he replied somewhat tartly to the remarks which, of course, were calculated to arouse umbrage in the minds of any so ignorant of the situation as to go hunting bear with a fowling piece.

Half believing the fellow to be in earnest the Professor cautioned him to return to the hotel and secure a good heavy rifle, and then pursued his way. He had not, however, gone but a short distance traveling in a circle before he heard the "bang-bang" of the fellow's shot gun. Rushing around to the spot from whence the sound of the shooting was wafted he was horrified to see a large cinnamon bear literally tearing the tenderfoot to pieces.

The bear was so intent on making way with his human foe that he did not witness the Professor's approach who fired at close range and luckily sent a ball to a vital part, killing the great brute instantly.

The people at the hotel were notified and the remains of the ignorant hunter were collected and brought to the hotel, where the Professor learned that the unfortunate was a representative of Frank Leslie's publications. The house was notified of the sad result of the young man's venture and his remains were ordered home for burial.

The moral to this truthful yet horrifying incident is that when one goes to hunt bear they had best stay at home.

The E. T. Allen Co., 416 Market street, have just completed and dressed one of the handsomest sporting goods display windows that we have looked upon for many a day. This deservedly popular house is doing much of recent date to still further enlarge their already well established and extensive trade and their bid for public favor and patronage is of the most effective nature, which is to furnish the best of goods for reasonable prices. Give them a call.

The quick shot with first barrel and the instant repetition with second harrel is the only sure and safe way to become a good pigeon shot.

ROD.

The Maid to the Ocean.

BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.

Roll gently, ye billows,
Ye deep rolling billows—
Roll gently, roll gently, I pray,
As light swaying willows,
As sad, weeping willows,
To soft breeze of bright summer day.

For over the ocean,
The deep, restless ocean.
There saileth a ship for this shore:
Be gentle thy motion,
Create no commotion
'Till its voyage safely be o'er.

I now ask it, oh, sea,
Oh, thou deep, heaving sea,
For that ship bears my lover true:
Bring him safely to me,
And forever will we
Be grateful and thankful to you.

The First Kick of Spring.

The time of the singing of birds has come, and the voice of the brook trout is heard in the land, says Kit Clarke in American Angler.

Such being the case, I want to go on record as the first "kicker" of Spring, and start in with the erudite fish preparator.

It has been estimated that there are at least 40,000 anglers resident in New York and its vicinity, and the figures are rather below than above a fair computation.

During the season, the early boats and cars carry great crowds to the fishing resorts in every direction, and the array of rods and baskets are monumental.

There are more than one thousand incorporated fishing clubs in the United States, and, allowing a membership of but fifty persons to each club, which is certainly a small estimate, we have a total of fifty thousand men whose angling hammers float gayly to the breeze.

Every city and village can boast of its angling coterie, its little clique of fishermen, who flock by themselves, and are not members of any organized club.

In fair numbers, it may safely be assumed we have at least a quarter of a million devotees of rod and reel, and you may be sure they are stalwart, honest and intelligent men.

The fool does not go a-fishing.

Some of the ablest men in our country find delight in "the thrill of the rod and the pulse of the reel."

When I say "ablest," I mean men of brains and brawn, men who make and control great events, men who are foremost in scholarship, law, politics, commerce, science and the arts.

Yet, for some curious and mysterious reason, if one happens to be amid friends to whom the art and pleasures of angling are a mystery, and he should say, "I'm going a-fishing tomorrow," the assertion at once provokes an array of sublime hilarity.

"Going fishing, eh?" and then they laugh, and that hoary "chestnut" of buying your fish at the market is touched off, followed by more laughter.

If the question were asked: "What are you laughing about?" the woman's standard answer would doubtless follow—"Oh! because."

Poor, misguided mortals; as the Gilbertian phrase hath it: "They mean all right, but they don't know." The smile that is born of ignorance would laugh a siege to scorn.

"Sassity," does not go a-fishing along the water-hooks. Oh! no, its lures are deftly cast into the boiling waters of fickle fashion, and many a plastic sucker is gayly landed from its circumambient flood.

Then society laughs, and the larger the sucker the more profound and lavish the exhilarating laugh.

In short, it "don't go."

It is vastly different with the angler who inhales health and wisdom beside the singing streams, for their endless melody is the song of the free, the happy and the blessed.

So, when you tell your friends that you are going fishing, fear not the rapid, ironic smile; forgive them, for they know no better. It is the smile of ignorance—the thinnest, the most insipid substance in existence.

There's another "chestnut" that inherits cracking, to wit: that anglers are given to prevarication. This is hairless, toothless and wrinkled with old age, and its propagation is due to a few brainless fish liars employed to fill space in the columns of certain frayed newspapers.

That the fish liar is ubiquitous in the cold type of the newspaper, will be confessed, but what's the matter with the grocery liar, whose "pure sugar," thoroughly well-sanded, is found on every corner, the clothing liar, whose guaranteed "all wool" garments are four-fifths unadulterated shoddy; the jewelry liar, whose fourteen-karat gold is two-thirds raw brass; the gin mill liar, whose pure old rye is composed principally of fuel oil, and the most gaudy and giddy of all liars, the illustrious newspaper fish liar himself?

This adorable fish liar will lie and stick to it like a porous plaster, a pleasant souvenir of the amiable French lady, who, upon the witness stand, was asked her age.

"Thirty years, sir," she replied.

"But," said the magistrate, "you told me you were thirty when you appeared before me as a witness five years ago."

"I think it quite likely," said the lady. "I am not one of those women who say one thing to-day and another to-morrow."

Go to and come off, thou flitting quibbler, thou patry percolator of the truth, thou tawdryst of fish liars!

It's time you fell upon yourself with the amalgamated force of ten thousand trip-hammers, and gave us a halmy, ambrosial and well-merited rest.

The reading columns of the newspapers, however, are dreadfully surprised by the occasional lies that appear as paid and well-displayed advertisements.

Last summer was announced in flaming type: "A whole fishing outfit for $5. Fine braided silk line, fine nickle and rubber reel, and a fine split bamboo trout or bass rod." This, however, is now supplemented by the advertisement offering "good split bamboo rods for only $1.88."

It may be of interest to add that the name of a hitherto respectable house was attached to this array of transcendent lies.

Any man possessed of even a portion of the brains of a house fly, with barely a fragment of knowledge regarding fishing tackle, is aware of the conspicuous fact that a fine split bamboo rod can no more be purchased for five dollars, not to disturb the remaining dishes in the proffered course, than that the vote of a New York alderman could be bought at the same ridiculous figure.

Both propositions are equally farcical and proposterous, and the idiot who is inveigled by such palpable misrepresentation, deserves no sentiment save that of derision.

The reputable house which perpetrates such a scheme, advancing the thin excuse that competition compels it, may feel absolutely certain of the commixed maxim, "Cast thy bread upon the waters and it will come home to roost."

I want to protest against the gin-guzzling angler, the man who goes a-fishing with a little bit of tackle and a large array of whiskey.

If a tongue were given to the pure and undefiled water coursing peacefully in its bed of gravel down the mountain side, it would talk plainly and like this: "Get out of here, you hog. Snuggle in your village rookeries, and pour rivers of the nasty stuff into your equally vile self amidst hefting surroundings, but don't defile my vicinity, and blacken my respectable reputation, by bringing the miserable stuff near me. Be a drunkard among thy class. Go away and stay there."

And the brook would be talking like a gentleman, and an honor to its kindred.

Liquor has its places, and they are a-plenty, but it is very much out of place in the creel built for the immaculate brook trout.

Land-Locked Salmon in Onawa Lake.

The lake which I propose to describe is situated about ninety miles north of Bangor, and just seventeen and one-half miles east of Moosehead Lake, says Edward B. Jackson. Before the Canadian Pacific Railroad extended its lines east of Montreal, crossing at the foot of Moosehead Lake, and opening to tourists the beautiful body of water I am about to name, there was no road, not even a path to guide the sportsman's steps into this magnificent country, where the echo of the woodsmen's axe had yet to be heard. Nestling between the bases of two large mountains, name Bore Stone and Greenwood respectively, is a body of water of three miles in length, to three-quarters of a mile in width at the widest part. To the old inhabitants of Moosehead Lake and vicinity this place was known as Ship Pond, from three tall trees on a small island which resembled a vessel close reefed. As soon, however, as the pond was open to fishermen, it was given the more poetical name of Onawa Lake. North of this lake the country is exceptionally flat, though heavily wooded with hackmatack and cedar, and serving as a secure retreat for numerous deer, caribou and moose. To the east, towering to stupendous height, is Greenwood Mountain, being the largest of any in the vicinity, while to the west, standing alone in its majestic beauty, its rough sides of solid rock in bold contrast to those of its companion on the opposite side, is the celebrated Bore Stone Mountain, easily distinguished by its prominent summit, to be seen at a distance of thirty miles. The eastern side of this mountain is entirely bare of vegetable growth, as is also the north and south. The western side, however, is partially covered by scattering fir and spruce trees, gradually diminishing toward the base, the latter sloping gently. To the south, for a short distance, it is a comparatively level country, beyond which a series of mountains form a rather picturesque background.

The formation of the lake is quite peculiar, resembling somewhat an immense V. It runs north and south by east, and the water in several places attains a depth of from sixty to eighty-seven feet. There is but one inlet and one outlet, the former in the northwest extremity and the latter in the southeast, both of which are excellent places for taking small salmon and brook trout, as they run up the stream to spawn late in the fall. One of the chief attractions of this place is the convenience in getting there. The railroad runs within a hundred yards or so of the southern end, and a small station has been erected for the use of sporting parties. On a little bluff overlooking the water is a first-class log cabin, large enough to accommodate at least one dozen people, and managed by two enterprising young Americans, who furnish boats and their own services as guides, at a reasonable price. They dwell close to the fishing grounds, and are always fair and impartial towards their guests. Another chief attraction is the immense iron bridge which crosses the stream at the lower end of the lake. This is a beautiful piece of workmanship, and well worthy a visit.

Regarding the salmon fishing, the fish bite better here in August than in any other month, they then either go into shallow water or remain inactive, as only scattering ones are caught during September in deep water. For one who has had little or no experience in salmon fishing, I should advise strong tackle, say a ten-foot rod weighing not over twelve ounces, made of any good wood, according to taste or whim of the fisherman; it might also be well to have the name of some prominent manufacturer upon it—it will add to the confidence of the user. As I have always preferred small hooks to large, I should advise Kirby No. 2 or 4 for salmon; the former for stream fishing, the latter for lakes. Undoubtedly a great many anglers will disagree with me in this, for I notice that it is the prevailing fashion to use a very large hook, especially for heavy fish. Of course we are all entitled to our opinions on this subject; while one may have success with large hooks, another may surpass him with the small, and vice versa. Use a multiplying reel; one of Kentucky manufacture is superior to all others. They are quite expensive, but worth the money invested. For lines, I have used oiled silk and black braided with perfect success, always drying them thoroughly after a day's fishing before winding them on the reel, and being careful not to rub them against metallic substances. A line not shorter than one hundred feet will answer all requirements, and about as much as a verage reel will take comfortably. I am not the snappter of a three-foot leader attached to the line in bait fishing, for I believe that a hook with a double snood is fully as good, if not better, and certainly less apt to break. The principal bait used in Onawa Lake are smelts and angle worms, the former abounding in great quantities. The salmon is far from quick in striking the bait, but once hooked in the side of the mouth so he can close his jaws, I promise the sportsman rare sport for the interval of fifteen or twenty minutes.

The depth of water on the fishing grounds of Onawa Lake is about eighty feet, the bait being allowed to rest about four feet from the bottom. If there are more than two anglers in a boat, it would be advisable, when a salmon is hooked, for the others to take in their lines, otherwise a grand snarl will be developed, which usually causes the loss of precious time and the fish. As soon as a salmon is fairly hooked he will rise to the surface and throw himself out of water. If the fisherman has not hurriedly taken in the slack line, ten to one the fish will dislodge the hook, and then farewell to him.

But few salmon are taken from this lake on the fly, though in the fall small ones can be caught in the streams by this method. Hardly any are taken unlawfully, as there seems to be a certain amount of respect for the law in this locality, and I am sure this is very gratifying to the State authorities, as well as to the sportsmen who make it their summer home. While the salmon here do not attain large growth, it is an easy matter for a party to take from forty to sixty pounds in a day, perhaps a dozen of which will average a weight of from four to five pounds apiece. To my knowledge, the largest on record is eight and three-quarter pounds, but I have heard of better ones being lost.

During the month of August, last year, a party of ladies and gentlemen were camping on Onawa Lake, two of the latter being inhabitants of Greenville, a little village at the foot of Moosehead Lake. One bright morning the two Moosehead gentlemen arose early, and, grasping their rods and bait, paddled swiftly down the pond in the direction of the fishing grounds, wishing to exceed their companions in the day's catch, by getting an unusually early start. There was not a particle of wind to make paddling laborious, and here and there the placid waters of the lake were rippled by the breaks of many fish. As they rounded a sharp point and came in view of the lower end of the lake, the sun arose from behind Greenwood Mountain, and, casting its brilliant rays upon the forest and on the rocky sides of old Bore Stone, threw upon the water sparkling millions of diamond reflections. Inspired into increased exertion by the loveliness of the morning, and the numerous rises of large salmon, the two men continued their journey. About half-way between the point they had just passed and the log cabin at the southern extremity of the lake, they met a solitary individual in a canoe, over the bow of which protruded a fishing rod and the harrel of a Winchester rifle. At a glance the sportsmen recognized him as an old hunter living several miles north, and, thinking he might have with him a string of salmon, they paddled over to ascertain. Their surmise proved to be correct, for the man had that morning taken over fifty pounds of large fish, and on their asking where they were caught and were they for sale, he replied: "They sartinly is." In a few moments, after considerable hantierog, a satisfactory agreement was reached, the entire lot selling at five cents per pound at estimated weight. Chuckling to themselves about how neatly they would fool those city chaps with a tremendous string that night, they eased their efforts and proceeded slowly to the little wharf, above which was stationed the log cabin. On arriving, one of the men took the fish to the house, with instructions that they would call for them about noon; after which he returned to the canoe with radiant face, and, pushing off, they were soon fishing about three hundred yards below, behind a little ledge point, just out of sight of the camp.

About ten o'clock the other party hove in view, and, on advancing within hailing distance of their friends, anchored and began to fish. About noon it clouded up and began to rain, a fine, disagreeable mist, but, as neither party had taken hardly any fish, it was deemed advisable to remain a while longer. At last, however, the ladies became thoroughly disgusted, so the second party pulled up anchor and started home, leaving the others to fight it out. On passing the camp, one of the ladies conceived the idea of stopping to procure a hot cup of tea, and, as this was immediately seconded by another lady, there was nothing left but to gratify their wishes; so the boat's course was changed, and they ran up alongside the wharf. While waiting for the leverage to be made, the cook informed them very graciously that Mr. Jones had left some salmon there, and, as they were going home, he guessed they might as well take them. The surprise to the party was slight in comparison to the joyousness with which this news was received. They not only consented to take the fish, but radiant in the prospect of turning the joke upon their companions, gave the man twenty-five cents for keeping the salmon. They then paddled gleefully back to camp.

Along in the neighborhood of 3 o'clock, the two fishermen, happy in the thought that they had taken the largest string, shipped anchor, and, in buoyant spirits, paddled hastily to the cabin. The proprietor met them at the door with a bland smile upon his face.

"All right, Mr. Lane," they exclaimed, "we'll take the fish now."

"The other party took them," answered he, without a change of expression.

That settled it, and the two luckless fishermen, crestfallen and weary of life, glanced sadly at each other, then, shaking their heads and looking meaningly at the proprietor, they wheeled slowly around, and, with reluctant steps, regained their places in the canoe. They entered the camp with gloomy countenances, and were received with hilarious laughter.

Some men go fishing with set and fixed purposes, rigid as the laws of the Medes and Persians are said to have been, but others go to catch fish and are not slow to use spoon, bait or other lure in order to fill a basket. All secure a full measure of pleasure, and as this is really the object of an outing no one should be blamed. To hear the exclusive man speak of his fellow anglers in terms ungentlemanly because they follow not the set custom prescribed for himself, in this line of sport, is not pleasant. Fish and let fish, is a good motto for all to follow.

The waters are clearing, and in a few more days the angling will be as good as the season can present. Lovers of fly-fishing, in this State, cannot expect very much of pleasure before the first of June, especially in the lakes and upper mountain streams. In the southern portion of the State, especially along the coast streams, the sport may be enjoyed in a measure, perhaps a month earlier.

Mr. D. G. Rowland, in Rod, Gun and Kennel, in speaking of field trials and dogs in Kentucky, says:

As one interested in the progress and development of the high-class shooting dog, I request the privilege of using a short space in your columns to call the attention of Kentucky sportsmen to the importance of organizing at once a "Field Trial Club" in our State. Such an organization would do more toward advancing the standard of our dogs than twenty years of private breeding; in fact, the only true test of a dog's field qualities are the tests applied under field trial rules, where competent judges see all the work done and note every error.

As the case now stands we have no intelligent method of testing our dogs, and if we desire to breed our bitches to high-class dogs of public and undoubted field merit, we are compelled to go a long distance from home and pay heavy express charges in order to get the services of such animals, and even then the risk is very great, as bitches are subject to many accidents, and the result is often a failure. There are many well-bred dogs in Kentucky, and their owners are justly proud of them, but their field qualities are unknown to the public, and consequently they are not successful either in the stud or as brood bitches.

Sportsmen who desire a first-class dog cannot afford to either buy or breed to a dog who has nothing to recommend him but a pedigree. The Kentucky trotting horse is known the world over, and has brought much fame and money to our State. How was it accomplished? Not by simply breeding to a pedigree and keeping them hidden away at home. Would Nancy Hanks be queen of the turf to-day if her owner had never placed her in public competition? Would the world ever have known that Gladstone was one of the greatest dogs of his day had he never entered a field trial?

If I am not mistaken the first field trial club ever formed in America was in Tennessee, and as a result more first-class dogs are produced in that State than any other in the Union.

Capt. Poole, the ardent fancier of the St. Bernards, sent his dog Gillo, that won so much favorable comment from the fancy at the show last year in this city, to the bench show at Los Angeles.

Dr. Thomas Bowhill sent his wire-haired fox-terrier Todge to the Los Angeles bench show.

Bench at Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles Bench Show opened on Wednesday last under the supervision of the Southern California Kennel Club with 137 entries.

This is the fifth annual bench show given by this club, and in quality, at least, is undoubtedly away ahead of any of the previous efforts in this line in that city.

Mr. C. A. Sumner, the genial and courteous secretary of the Club, was on hand at all times during the show, attending to the duties of his office in a manner which proved him to be the right man for that important office; in fact, all of the officers and committees of the club performed their duties in first-class shape, rendering the machinery of the show, so to speak, smooth and well oiled.

The dogs were well benched, and the awards are reported to have been well received, but if the reports given do not stir up something more than the usual contention, then we are mistaken; but to please everybody, or to judge all classes in a show and do it justly, is a task that few, if any one man is able to do.

The awards, as far as we have been enabled to receive them at this hour (Thursday), are as follows:

The Auckland Kennel Club.

In every land where man resides,
The whole of this great earth around;
Wherever joy and peace abides
The sportsman and his dog is found.

The above may not be poetry, that is, not to any great extent, but then the truth expressed will carry it through with the lovers of the dog. The Auckland Star of March 23d contains the following announcement anent the kennel show at that place.

"The first annual show in connection with the recently-formed Auckland Kennel Club was held on February 24th and 25th, and was a success. About 170 dogs were on exhibition, including six fine mastiffs belonging to Mr. H. J. Rodgers, and The Baron, an English setter and champion prize winner from Wellington, besides two greyhounds. The Baron is the property of Mrs. F. W. Maddox. In the class for collies the local dog Donald, belonging to Mr. W. H. Cooper was awarded first prize, beating Young England, a Christchurch dog, owned by Mr. Rudolph Ward. Mr. H. N. Watson, of Gisborne, well known throughout the colonies, and Mr. A. A. White, of Auckland, were the judges, and Mr. Chas. Grosvenor was Secretary.

The New Zealand Kennel Club's trophy, valued £6, for the best dog in the show, was awarded to Mr. W. W. Phillips' Ponto, who was also first in his class and gained T. and S. Morrin's special prize. One of the features of the show is the exhibition of eight beagles, belonging to the Pakuranga Hunt Club.

If you have not entered your dogs for the coming show you should do so at once. The office of the Kennel Club is at 628 Market street. Write or call at that number for all information regarding the show.

Mr. J. B. Martin, one of the leading fox-terrier fanciers on this coast, took two of his dogs of this breed, Blemton Keefer and Blemton Rapture to the Los Angeles show.

The office of the Pacific Kennel Club, at 628 Market street, is a busy place during these days of preparation for the coming bench show.

The Los Angeles show was well attended and the Southern California Kennel Club are much pleased over the success of the show.

Two Larks.

The lark is up to meet the sun,
Which is, of course, quite right;
But when the sun would meet the lark,
He always chooses night.
—Oakland Star.

And when the morning comes again
That son's a woeful tale;
He reaps, alas! but bitter pain,
Caught from that night-in-gale.

Mr. Harvey McMurchy, the genial and gentlemanly representative of the "L. C. Smith" gun, is on his annual visit to this Coast. Mr. McMurchy is one of those gentlemen whom to meet is a pleasure in a social way, and if you are a sportsman and desire to meet him in a business way the pleasure will be vastly increased, as the "Smith" gun is "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Mr. M. F. Lindsey, the well-known sportsman, has been in the city for some time past representing the wood powder. The excellence of this powder has been fully attested over and over again. It is safe to say that Mr. Lindsey would succeed in selling almost anything he might undertake, but when his article is so well known as "Wood" is on this coast his business must be akin with pleasure.

The live bird shooting on Sunday last was very interesting. Some excellent work was witnessed. Robinson, Fay, McMurchy, Lindsey, "Johns" and "Slade" doing some excellent work.

The "Selby Challenge Medal" will be contested for tomorrow, Sunday, the 23d, in open shoot at live birds at Oakland Track. Match opens at 10 o'clock. Every body invited.

Mr. Abingdon.

A flash of life! riches untold,
A youth mispent—a glitter of gold,
A winning mount, a two ounce glove,
An actor's role, a woman's love,
A luckless trip to foreign shore,
A ring, a chill—the squire's no more.
—R. Ord.

The bottom has dropped out of almost everything in Australia, according to recent advices, due to drouth in the past few years and floods this, land hooms and strikes. Horses are now selling at ridiculous figures that three or four years ago at auction would have fetched prices high up in the thousands, and according to our correspondent "everything has gone to the devil entirely."

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

SEND in your lists of foals.

THE stakes for the Boston stallion race have been increased to $11,000.

JAY-EYE-SEE, who is now fifteen years old, will be campaigned again this season.

It is reported in the Oregon papers that John Pender now of Santa Rosa, will return to that state this summer.

HENRY BELMONT, sire of the dam of Rustic, 2:30 (separately in a race in 2:27), is brother to Venture, 2:27.

JOHN GOLDSMITH has selected the Poughkeepsie track on which to prepare his stable for the coming campaign.

DAVE CULROSS is second trainer under John Kelly at the Pleasanton Stock Farm. His work is very satisfactory.

G. PERANO, the leading merchant of Lodi, has a Dexter Prince mare that will go into the list quite easily this fall.

THE filly My Trinket, by Stamboul, 2:07½, out of Trinket, 2:14, is one of the fastest young things at Parkville Farm.

REGINA, by Electioneer, dam Accident (dam of four in the list), has been sent to the San Mateo Stock Farm to be bred to Guy Wilkes.

WANDA, 2:17½, is at the San Mateo Stock Farm in charge of John Dexter, she has been bred to Guy Wilkes and is now being prepared for the races this fall.

FROM the large number of trotters and pacers at the Pleasanton Stock Farm, it will be a difficult matter for Monroe Salisbury to select a string to take East.

WILFRED PAGE is supervising the training and developing of his young Electrics; we understand that there are a number of really wonderful trotters among them.

J. CROW has twenty trotters and pacers at the Oakland track. A. L. Hinds, P. McKenzie, C. Griffin and E. S. Smith are all busy with trotters and pacers there also.

GARRET BLOSSER goes to Lompoc with three trotters to attend the May Day races. Purse are offered aggregating $1,000 and that is what calls the horses out.—Santa Maria Times.

PAULIN & Co., have Panjahi, the handsomest son of Patron, at the Laurel Creek Farm, Wm. McLaughlin, the trainer, is satisfied he can give this trotter a record below 2:25 this fall.

ORRIN A. HICKOK will start East about the 12th of May. He has not taken up the Palo Alto "nine" yet, he is awaiting the arrival of Senator Leland Stanford, who is expected every day.

THE track at Melrose is being put in first-class order, and the turfites of Alameda are waiting patiently for the gates to be thrown open so that they can "turn them trotters and pacers loose."

THE warm weather during the past week has had an exhilarating effect upon our trotting horse drivers; they are up with the lark and working hard to prepare their trotters for the fall meetings.

BON BON, 2:26, by Simmons, dam Bonnie Wilkes, by Geo. Wilkes, has been bred to Directum, 2:11½. Messrs. Pierce & Griffiths the owners of this beautiful mare, are determined to breed to the best.

J. HARRISON, of Lodi, has a three-year-old chestnut stallion by Dawn, 2:18½, out of Kitty Irvington, that he calls Dusk. The 2:30 list will be increased when he starts in his first race this fall.

JUDGE W. E. GREENE has a colt by Simmocolon, 2:13½, out of Lynwood (dam of Judge G., 2:21½, and Sidwood, 2:18), by Lynwood, that is one of the finest-lined, purest-gated trotters at Pleasanton.

ALLANDORF, by Onward, dam Alma Mater, by Mambrino Patchen, and Charley Wilkes, 2:21½, by Red Wilkes, dam Kate Bradley, by Clifton Pilot, will both be put in training as soon as their stud seasons are over.

SENATOR B. F. LANGFORD feels worse than if some pet measure of his had been defeated in the Senate, for his handsome Brigadier mare, Hazel Kirke, 2:24, lost a beautiful foal only a week old, sired by Directum, 2:11½.

S. A. BROWNE of Kalamazoo, Michigan, departed for home last Saturday. He made many friends while here who will be delighted to welcome him to the Slope. If his business cares were not so many, we believe he would make California his home.

THE Claireview Stock Farm has sold to Dr. D. E. Stone, Frederick, Md., the two-year-old bay colt, Alarco, by Antevolo, out of Pauline, by Masterlode; second dam Ida Mills, dam of Clara Bell, 2:29, and Middleway, 2:22, by Mambrino Chief Jr.

THERE is a brother to Senator L., 2:29, by Dexter Prince, standing at Merced that is attracting the attention of horsemen in and around that city. He is a dark chestnut in color, and shows great substance and quality. His dam is Lady Bayswater, by Bayswater.

THE race track at San Jose is "alive with trotters and pacers." Wm. Vioget has quite a big string, so has P. J. William, while J. Gordon, J. Groom and at least a score of other prominent drivers appear upon the circular course behind their little baby trotters every day.

B. F. SPRAGUE, of Lodi, has one of the best-formed, highest finished young stallions in California. He is called Re-Elect, and has a mark of 2:28. He is by Elect, son of Electioneer, and his dam is Lizzie, by Nephew 1220. He will be trained this fall and given a much lower record.

"THE two-minute trotter has arrived!" is the way one of our Grayson subscribers heads his letter. This youngster is by Richards' Elector, out of a mare by Dexter Prince, and his perfect form and trotting action receive much praise from all the horse critics in that horse center. Richards' Elector colts are all fine looking, but this fellow must be "extra-fine."

HENRY SANDERS, brother to Millard Sanders, has the latter gentleman's filly Sansouci at Cleveland, Ohio. She is entered in over $75,000 worth of stakes, and from a letter received regarding her, we have good reasons for believing she will win a number of the principal ones this fall.

THE mistake is made by horsemen to suppose that a successful career on the race course is the chief end of the trotting and pacing horse of America, when, in point of fact, the ultimate and most important use to which the light harness horse if put, is to become the gentlemen's driving horse.

THE free-for-all class to be trotted at Fleetwood Park in September filled better than was expected at one time. The nominated are Martha Wilkes, Regal Wilkes, Lord Clinton, Little Albert, Directum, Walter E., Geneva and Greenleaf, and if all face the starting judge a fine race will be witnessed.

LAST year E. S. Rothschilds of Portland, purchased the green Whippleton horse Frank O'Neil from Keating & Jones of Sacramento, and gave him a record of 2:29, and last week he purchased the trotter Bishop Hero, 2:26. This horse is by Bishop 1688, dam Lida Kendall, by Hero of Thorndale 549.

IT is said that Millard Sanders is going to have a team of perfectly matched yearlings by Sidney, 2:19½, that will come near making a world's record this fall. It will be a novel sight to see these baby trotters move around at 2:30 clip on a track. It is not every driver in America that could drive them.

GOVERNOR MARKHAM has appointed and commissioned the following Agricultural Directors of District No. 40, comprising the counties of Colusa and Yolo: W. B. Gibson, L. E. Adams, T. S. Spaulding of Woodland; G. W. Woodard, Yolo; Peter Peterson, Sites; Jackson McElroy, College City; D. H. Arnold, Colusa.

E. J. TRAVIS of Chicago, is visiting California, and at the Palace Hotel a gentleman asked him if he had seen Dan McCarty. He answered, "Oh, yes, Dan is as busy as a bee trading horses and dabbling in real estate. He has some very valuable property there and is booming it in great shape." Dan, Dan, wonderful Dan McCarty!

THERE have been many "fads" among turf writers and horsemen during the past ten years, the most prominent of them being: "The thoroughbred in the trotter," "controlling sex," "the standard," "inbreeding" and "the Clay cross." The latest and best of all is the "emasculating of many of our colts," which entitles it to be called "The Gelded Age."

THERE are over 200 trotters and thoroughbreds on the Hearst ranch, which is sometimes called the McCarty Stock Farm. These horses have been well-fed all winter, and Wm. Gillespie the manager of the place has them down on the flat in front of the house where they are knee-deep in alfalfa, alfalfa, clover and grasses. There isn't a sick horse on the place.

THE statement that public interest in trotting horses is declining is refuted by the fact that many new associations will be opened up, and that the purses and prizes offered this year are much greater than ever before. It is estimated that about $9,000,000 will be hung up for trotting horses this year in premiums, prizes and stakes by agricultural and trotting associations.

A WELL-KNOWN horseman of this city called the attention of Monroe Salisbury to the buildings adjoining his famous Pleasanton race track. He answered: "Yes, you may not see anything pretty about them; I know there are no steeples to be seen, but I believe I can lead more speed out of them than any other man in America can in proportion to the number of stalls they contain."

THE string of trotters owned and driven by D. Harris, of this city, at Pleasanton, consists of Delmas, 2:25½, by Almoon 20,503, son of Algona 11,543, dam Queen, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31; Delsid, a yearling by Sidney, 2:19½; Rollie H., by Anteco, 2:16½, out of Queen, and Delzell, by Delmas, 2:25½, out of a George M. Patchen Jr. mare. This quartette of trotters will be seen on the circuit this fall.

THE subject of costuming the drivers of trotters in colors which can be distinguishable at any portion of the mile track, is being discussed all over the United States. In California the drivers are unanimous in the opinion that it will add a great attraction to the events, and to facilitate matters and prevent confusion, these columns will be placed at the disposal of these gentlemen to state the colors they wish to claim.

A NUMBER of horsemen visited J. Green's farm near Dublin, last Friday, and after inspecting the yearling colt by Richards' Elector, out of Stenwinder (dam of Electrina, 2:23½ and Directum, 2:11½), declared he was the finest-looking young trotter they had seen. He can trot fast and never breaks when being led. From such a sire and dam this youngster which is called "Electrical" ought to prove a record breaker.

THERE is a gelding by Norval, 2:14½, out of the imported thoroughbred mare Bridget, by Foxhall, in training at Parkville, L. I. Foxhall is, by the way, an American horse and the only one which ever won the Czarewicz and Cambridge-shire, the two great English handicaps for horses of all ages. This he did as a three-year-old—a feat never duplicated by an English horse—and also won the Grand Prix de Paris the same season.

MONROE SALISBURY believes the spring meeting of the Breeders' Association should receive all the aid that can possibly be given it by owners of fast horses. He will send the greatest drawing cards in his string: Flying Jib, Directum, San Pedro, Little Albert and Vic H. to take part in some of the specials, or show the people what is meant by fast quarters. "Little Kelly" has not given any of these trotters and pacers a mile better than 2:40 yet.

DIRECT will, without doubt, become one of the leading sires of trotters in America if the few of his progeny already shown are any criterion. There is a mare by Inca at the Pleasanton track that has a foal by the "little black king." It is called "2-Soon," and for a three months old trotter showed enough speed to be loudly cheered by an audience of about 150 last Saturday. He hadn't a halter on, but independent of everything, with head and tail up, he trotted an eighth of a mile in a manner that made everybody present wish they owned him.

THE following opinion from the gentleman who owns Nancy Hanks and Arion, is rather peculiar: "In studying the breeding of our trotting families, I find that the most of the best of them are closely connected to the thoroughbred horse, and I believe we must improve our present trotter by bringing more thoroughbred blood into the trotter of the future."

THE ball-bearing axle device has been adopted by a Connecticut inventor for use on all kinds of wagons. The use of the ball-bearers upon wagons for heavy work will greatly relieve teams, it having been demonstrated that one horse will draw a given load with the new-fangled apparatus with quite as much ease as four would with the old gear. The new affair can be applied cheaply. A carriage can be hung up with the invention for $25, the extreme price being $35 for heavy wagons, while a sulky can be rigged for $15. Each is fully warranted for twenty years.

L. M. MORSE has a beautiful farm about two miles from Lodi, on which there are a number of Dexter Prince mares which he is breeding to Hero, a son of Director, dam by Santa Claus; second dam by Bull Pup, sire of dam of Hulda, 2:14½; third dam Lady Peters, by Geo. M. Patchen 30. From such a cross this horseman cannot fail to secure some game trotters. He is breeding a sister to Chas. Ford, 2:12½, to Hero, and as she is as grand-looking an individual as he, the produce ought to compare most favorably with any youngster in this State in all the points needful in the trotter.

THREE or four years ago the trotting horse world would have wondered at the presumption of a man who would have named a horse in the 2:20 class that had never faced a starter in a race, but now several men have done that very thing, and there is no wonder expressed at all over their actions. No man is to be more pitied than the trotting horse breeder who has produced a family of horses that have proven unable to win races in high-class company, and yet refuses to recognize the superiority of those which defeat them, and keeps on breeding in the same lines that gave him his failures.

FOR the meeting of the Vaca Valley Driving Association at their park on July 4th and 5th they have prepared the following special programme, entries to close June 10th. 1. Trotting—2:38 class—Purse $200. Free for all. 2. Trotting—2:50 class—Purse $150. For horses owned in Solano County. 3. Trotting—Two-year-olds—Purse $75. For horses owned in Vacaville Township. Half-mile heats, best 2 in 3; five to enter three to start. 4. Trotting—Buggy horse trophy—Value $25. For horses owned in Vacaville Township since March 15; owners to drive. 5. Running—Free for all—Half mile and repeat; $5 to accompany entry; $5 additional to start, $75 added.

PURSUANT to notice John McCord on Saturday afternoon sold at public auction the chestnut gelding, Jim (Skinner, a son of Silas Skinner. Herbert Shaw was the purchaser, and the price paid $150. The horse was among the lot put up by Mr. McCord at the combination horse sale at the Napa race track on March 8th, and was bid in at that time by E. B. Jennings for $175. Mr. Jennings, however, failed to take the animal or put up the amount of his bid, hence the sale on Saturday. It is understood that Mr. McCord will now hold Mr. Jennings for the difference in the price realized for the animal and the costs incurred by reason of the second sale.—Napa Journal.

T. F. RICKS intends to soon take his three-year-old mare Lou to San Francisco, as she is entered in several trotting events which come off at the spring meeting. She is entered in two dashes of one and one-sixteenth miles each, one of which takes place on the 27th of May and one later on, in one of which there are four and in the other thirteen entries. She will also take in the fall meetings, being entered for a race at Petaluma and one at Napa, and will probably be entered in races at other points in the circuit. Lou has a two-year-old record of 2:27, and Mr. Ricks expects her to make a good showing this season. The mare will be in charge of Henry Haas, and will be taken to the city on the 15th inst.—Humboldt Times.

J. SUTHERLAND has quite a collection of promising youngsters at his stock farm, among them is the following: A filly by Guide, 2:16, dam Alice R. (dam of Redwood, 2:27, and Eva W., 2:25), by Nauhuc, belonging to Mr. Cropsey; L. Shafer's filly, by Thistle, 2:14, a chestnut pacer that will be seen on the circuit; G. E. Whitney's Sidney colt and Noon-day filly, both out of a mare called Western Girl; W. Clark's two-year-old by Billy Thornhill, 2:24½, out of a mare by Grosvenor; Dr. Selfridge's colt by Grand Moor and Dr. Dunn's yearling Director, out of a mare by Antevolo, second dam Pansy (dam of Almonition, 2:24½), besides a two-year-old by Guide, 2:16. All of these are looking well and show that they are cared for by a master hand.

ABOUT one hundred men and half as many teams are rapidly transforming the Portland Speed and Driving Association's grounds at Alhina into a first-class racing park, says the Oregonian. Dirt has been flying at a lively rate since the weather cleared up, and it will not be long until the graders find their occupation gone. Contracts for the erection of the fences and buildings were awarded a couple of weeks ago, but until the track assumes proper shape the carpenters will hardly commence work. Of two things the horsemen and the general public can rest assured—that the track will be ready for the June meeting, and that it will eclipse in all the essentials of attractiveness any race meeting ever held in the Northwest. The latter assertion is based upon the weight of the purses offered and the variety of events programmed. Big prizes will tempt the horsemen, and each day's card will embrace something to appeal to every owner of race-loving taste.

THE Los Angeles Herald's horse reporter took a flying trip to the track on Friday, long enough to see Walter Maben's big string of nineteen horses, all of which he works every day with the assistance of his lieutenant, Lewis McArthur. Among them the reporter noticed Native State looking finer than anybody's horse; Bet Madison, by James Madison, 2:17½, as showy a mare as ever peeped through a bridle; Young Stamboul, by Stamboul, and Perfection, by Count Sidons, owned by J. W. Gardner; and the pet two-year-old of the south, Stamboul Belle, by the record-breaker, out of Belle H., 2:18½, by Belmont. This filly is owned by the Oregon steamboat millionaire, S. G. Reed, who says he has no use for the 2:30 list for two-year-olds. Hence the filly will not be hurried, and at five years old she will be sent out for a low mark. Mr. Ryan has the course in superb order, and the horses are all free from lameness.

The Saddle.

COLONEL JACK CHINN has been engaged as starter for the spring meeting at Lexington, Ky.

THREE days of racing will be given at Paisley, Lake county, Or., beginning on the 15th of June.

THE Tidal Stakes will be contended for to-day, and the best three-year-olds on the Coast are hooked to start.

"SNAPPER" GARRISON has gone to Babylon, L. I., to reduce his flesh and get in training for the coming season.

"TINY" WILLIAMS, the jockey, has contracted to ride this season for T. H. Stevens, the owner of the Walnut Hill Stables.

WILDWOOD is being sent East too late, we are afraid, to become acclimated, as he will not depart for Brooklyn until late next week.

NAGLEE BURKE offers ten acres of the Gen. Naglee place at San Jose, for the new capitol building, and will add to his gift $50,000 in coin.

CALHOUN, winner of the Tennessee Derby so easily last week, was looming up as a prominent candidate for first honors in the rich American Derby in 1893 when scratched.

DON FULANO was reported to be dying from blood-poisoning, but all the same he is galloping mightily well for a dying horse, and is likely to be in the first flight in the American Derby of 1893.

THE San Benito Advance says that at the race meeting at Hollister on Saturday, May 6th, there will probably be a match race between Sam Mount and Valledore, three-eighths of a mile dash, for $250 a side.

IMP. BRUTUS appears destined to become a most successful sire, because as yet he has had few really fashionably-bred mares, and still has produced two high-class youngsters in the Bonnie Jean and Ariola colts.

THE largest winner on the French turf for 1892 was the German Baron, De Schikler, whose winnings amounted to $125,000. The next largest winner was M. Edmond Blanche, who won $115,000 in stakes and purses with his horses.

THE Directors of the Capital Turf and Driving Club last Monday night postponed the spring meeting from May until June 6th, owing to so many horses being engaged at the Blood Horse and Trotting Horse Breeders' races at San Francisco.

DR. ABY came down from Gehhard's Lake county ranch yesterday with five thoroughbreds which he shipped per steamer Zinfandel to the city. Two of the horses will be started in races at the Blood Horse meeting.—Napa Register, April 15.

A NEW YORK morning paper said last Tuesday: "Tammany's chieftain, Richard Croker, has purchased the famous horse Longstreet from Michael Dwyer for $75,000." This is a pretty stiff price, and we should say $25,000 would be nearer the mark.

J. G. FOLLANSEE'S two-year-old colt at Morris Park, by Surinam—Paloma, has been named Armitage, and his chestnut gelding, by Kyrle Daly—Springlike, has been named Springtime. Armitage is one of the most promising two-year-olds at the track.

THE Fair string will leave the Capitol City to-day for Washington Park, Chicago, in charge of Dick Havey. That the brother of Yo Tambien will make the best of them walk some is certain, and it is said there are others in the list little inferior to Yo El Rey.

THE following jockeys were licensed by the Board of Control on April 18th: George Miller, William J. Hill, George McDonald, William J. Fitzpatrick, William Donohoe, Christopher Riley, Charles Flynn, Edward Mosier, Charles Hancock, Cassius Sloan, Dennis Watson and William Simms.

THE Brooklyn handicap is now attracting the most attention among Eastern horsemen. Parvenue, Judge Morrow, Russell and Diablo have shown the best work, and the race is considered to be between these four. Leonawell and Nomad are carrying heavy commissions, and may win if in condition at the post.

A WOODLAND man had a horse that slobbered so much as to excite the owner's disgust. He read an advertisement in an Eastern paper where a man for a dollar promised to send a receipt that would cure the horse of his annoying habit. He sent for the receipt, which simply read, "Teach your horse to spit."—Lakeport Democrat.

G. H. PHILLIPS, the millionaire mining man, informed us the other day that all the papers had the sale of Wildwood wrong, some crediting his purchase to A. Ottinger entirely, others to Keating & Ottinger. He (Phillips) and A. Ottinger own the horse jointly, and Mr. Keating has no interest in the great son of Wildidle and Fedora IV.

THE largest number of entries that was sent in for the Monmouth Park Association stakes that were closed April 3, was 180 from the Ranecocas stable. J. A. & A. H. Morris sent in 158; McCafferty & Wishard, 109; M. F. Dwyer, 100; Walcott & Campbell, 97; J. R. & F. Keene, 91; Blemton Stable, 85; Marcus Daly, 79, and Gideon & Daly, 70.

LAST week the two-year-old filly Mary, by Bishop (sire of Racine), dam Bessie Belle, was shipped from Lexington, Ky., to New York. This miss was purchased by the Tammany chieftain, Richard Croker, of John E. Madden, during a recent visit to the Bluegrass region. Mary was to work a quarter in 0:22½ before being shipped, or the sale did not go.

A CORRESPONDENT from the Hunter River Valley of Australia writes: The Hunter Valley is ruined for some time to come. We have just experienced the highest flood ever known, even to the oldest residents. Every one that had a farm is ruined for some time to come. They have either lost their homes or all their stock. The Hon. John Eales lost nearly all his thoroughbred mares (nearly sixty of them), so the flood had no respect for persons. Maitland, about four miles from Morpeth, is a complete wreck. It came so suddenly on the people that they had no time to save anything. Twenty-five inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours."

NO HALF-MILE records were broken in 1892, Geraldine's time, 46 seconds, still standing. The new records of last year on circular courses are as follows: Four and one-half furlongs, Toano, 116 pounds, 0:54; five-eighths, Dr. Hasbrouck, 122 pounds, 0:57; three-fourths, Yemen, 100 pounds, 1:09½; seven-eighths, Kingston, 128 pounds, 1:26; one mile, Kildeer, 91 pounds, 1:37½.

J. J. McCAFFERTY makes a practice of employing Mexican boys in breaking and training his young race horses, who, he says, "can ride anything that wears hair if it goes on four legs." The fillies and colts broken by these boys are, he claims, the best of actors and quite as famous. The big Mexican saddle is used in breaking them, the boy, saddle and bridle usually weighing about 140 pounds.

THE Vancouver Jockey Club Association met on the afternoon of April 4th. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, F. C. Cotton; vice-president, F. C. Cope; second vice-president, D. Oppenheimer; secretary, W. Campbell; committee, W. Templeton, E. E. Penzer, J. A. Fullerton, T. Dunn, C. A. McKinnon. The spring meeting will be held on the 23d and 24th of May.

THE noted broodmare Fonwicht (dam of Beautiful Bells, Chimes, Grace, Eli and Chapman) died at McGratiana Stud Farm, Lexington, Ky., April 8th. She was sired by King Alfonso, out of imp. Weatherwhip by Weatherhit. She was a full sister to Fonso, and her dam also produced Florence, Hindoo's dam. A yearling out of Fonwicht last year sold for $2,500. Her loss is estimated at $5,000.

MAY 10TH will be the opening day of the Louisville Jockey Club's spring meeting, when the Kentucky Derby will be contested for by King Lee, Calhoun, the winner of the Tennessee Derby, Buck McCann, Rejection, Jake Johnson, Entusiast, Plutas, Fort Worth, Mirage, Midway and others. Among the entries for the Kentucky Oaks, to be run May 15th, are Helen Nichols, Elizabeth L., Red Banner, Kentucky Lady, Johnetta and Dutch Oven.

CARLSBAD, the winner of the American Derby last year, will be dangerous in the all-aged events of 1893. Mr. Swigert, his owner, has already refused $20,000 for him, as he proposes to retain him for breeding purposes. Reports from Lexington state that he has wintered well and grown in every way and spread out immensely. In honor of the horse Mr. Swigert has changed the name of his breeding establishment to Carlsbad Stud.

THE City and Suburban handicap was won by a head on April 12th by Mr. A. Taylor's four-year-old King Charles; Windgall second and Lady Hermit third. King Charles won no distinction in last year's races. Windgall took second place in the Leicestershire Royal handicap, September 21st, and won the Newmarket handicap eight days later and the Liverpool cup on November 11th. Lady Hermit took third position in the Oaks, June 3d.

JUST how the Daily Report can make it out more "sportsmanlike" to send the horses away in races to a flying start, it would be interesting to know. Our argument in favor of the standing start is, that often when the flag drops to the "flying start" some horses are not only in front of others, but in motion, while other horses may be standing, thus giving an undue advantage that could not be secured were the animals sent away with all standing in a line.

IT is alleged $600,000,000 per annum changes hands in the betting rings on American events. On this basis $10 could be allowed for betting purposes to every man, woman and child in the United States. The question is being constantly asked, Who reaps the benefit of this money? It is certainly not the players, for, outside of "Pittsburg Phil," Lucky Baldwin, Mike Dwyer, "Cull" Holland and Colonel Bill Harding, one never hears of any remarkable winnings.

WOLF'S CRAIG, the winner of the Lincoln Handicap this year, cost as a yearling £1,300. He was subsequently sold by his owner to Mr. J. W. Smith for the sum of £340, and has now credited his latter owner with the nice sum of £1,595, the value of the handicap. Wolf's Craig started at the remunerative odds of twenty to one against, and beat Sir J. Blundell Maple's Gangway by a length and a half. The favorite, Mina, was nowhere—in fact, was beaten before one-third of the distance had been covered.

A CHICAGO friend writes Matt Storn, the well-known turfman of this city: "Garfield is being prepared for running. They are harrowing the track and repairing the stables. There are about 150 horses there now. I understand that the three tracks have pooled their interests, so that when one shuts down another will start up. Corrigan bested them all. The Hank-ines are running their horses at his track, so that you see everything is O. K. Carter Harrison and 'the boys' have kissed and made up. The Berry bill will not pass the Senate, and the Mayor will have all to say any way. If he says run, they will run, and if he says stop, stop they will."

BILLY McCORMICK expects to go East early in May with the string of Simeon G. Reed, the Portland millionaire. The flyers in his charge are bred in the purple, and are as follows: Brown filly, 3, by Darebin—Iris; bay filly, 3, by Darebin—Ventura; black colt, 3, by Hidalgo—Birdie W.; bay filly, 2, by Tyrant—Cleo; chestnut colt, 2, by Midlotbaw—Young Flash; bay colt, 2, by Cheviot—by Wildidle; brown colt, 2, by Darebin—Letolo; chestnut colt, 2, by Three Cheers—Charity; chestnut colt, 2, by Sir Modred—Mollie Walton; bay filly, 2, by Sir Modred—Blithesome; chestnut colt, 2, by Sir Modred—Typhoon; chestnut colt, 2, by Florentine—Sozodont; chestnut filly, 2, by Sir Modred—Playing; bay filly, 2, by Sir Modred—Teacher.

ONE of the Baldwin strings left Santa Anita last Saturday in charge of that clever colored trainer, Emanuel Harding, the destination being St. Louis. Harding is one of the best trainers in America, and has some excellent material in the following: Santiago, 6, by Grinstead—Clara D.; Amigo, 6, by Prince Charlie—Mission Belle; San Francisco, 3, by Rutherford—Jennie B.; Aloha, 3, by Emperor of Norfolk—Paola; San Diego, 3, by Volante—Blossom; bay colt, 2, by Cheviot—Santa Anita; bay colt, 2, by Emperor of Norfolk—Mollie McCarthy's Last; bay filly, 2, by Cheviot—Viente; chestnut colt, 3, by Verano—Josie C.; bay filly, 3, by Volante—Viente; bay colt, 2, by Cheviot—Genova; bay colt, 2, by Emperor of Norfolk—Clara D. The crack two-year-old in this lot is said to be the one by Cheviot, out of Viente. San Francisco is Baldwin's American Derby colt. Santiago is said to be a much-improved horse.

THE horse sheds at the track of the St. Louis Jockey Club were destroyed by fire late on the afternoon of April 8th, involving a loss to the club of $50,000. The sheds were filled with valuable horses training for the spring races, which will begin April 21. There was great excitement among the horsemen until their horses had been rescued from the burning sheds. Only one horse was lost, Vatican, 6, by Vanderbilt, owned by George Grassmuck. Grassmuck had expected to do good work with the horse and was giving it a thorough training. The fire will not interfere materially with the racing programme, so temporary quarters will be at once constructed.

J. J. McCAFFERTY considered Rees, who recently died, the greatest horse he ever saw. He says that as a yearling at Columbia in 1891 Helen Nichols could not exercise Rees (who was by Enquirer—Glenary), and that when he found the two-year-olds could not make him gallop he sent him along with old horses for three-eighths or more with 130 pounds up, but even then he could outrun such sprinters as Fred Taral. Although he had been offered $30,000 for him, it occurred to him that he could make an immense killing with him in the Washington Park Derby. He had intended to ride Rees himself in that event, and if he could have got it on expected to bet $20,000 on the horse.

IN the betting for the Metropolitan handicap, Yorkville Belle is favorite at 10 to 1, with His Highness, Locohatchee, Picknicker, St. Florian and The Pepper next at 15 to 1. Nomad, Mars, Pessara, Parvenue and Russell are quoted at 20; Glenmoyno and Pickpocket at 25, and Fidelia, La Tosca, Leonawell, Lady Violet, Madstone, Two Bits, Victory and Vestibule at 30. The hooks are full on Tammany for the Suburban, and the leading quotations are: Lamplighter, 7; His Highness, 8; Dr. Hasbrouck and Strathmeath, 10; Banquet and Russell, 15, with Locohatchee, Mars, Major Domo, Montana, Nomad, Parvenue and Pessara at 20 each. For the Brooklyn, Lamplighter is so universally liked that no books have been made against him.

CY. MULKEY, the superintendent of the Palo Alto thoroughbred department, attended the races last Saturday. He has ten youngsters in training at the big stock farm. The three-year-olds are Charm, Pasha and Ohiyasa. The last is by Argyle, dam imp. Amalia. Charm is almost certain to be a grand race mare. She is by Cheviot and her dam is Fairy Rose, who is famous as the dam of Racine and Fairy. Pasha is by Cyrus, dam imp. Laelia, an English mare bred by Leopold de Rothschild. The two-year-olds in training by Mr. Mulkey are by imp. Cyrus, imp. Cheviot, Shannon and Flood. Mr. Mulkey has broken eleven yearlings—one a half brother to Racine. Thirteen of the best mares on the ranch have been bred to Racine, including Flirt, Gorgo and Fostress, the dam of Sinfax.

MR. J. O. MACK, Secretary of The Dalles Association, was in Portland last week, and said that the winter value of The Dalles track has never been more apparent than during the past six months. Several horses are in training there which will be here at the spring meeting, says the Oregonian. The only trotter is the bay mare Anita, by Rockwood, Jr., owned by M. E. Welch. Among the runners are: Siretta, bay mare, owned by Mack and Macdonough, sired by Joe Hooker; Nehalem, three-year-old brown colt, by Leon; Rockland Boy, by Montana; Mr. Strickland's four-year-old grey mare, Mamie S., by Sam Stephenson, which was here at both meetings last year; Wiseman & Brogan's two-year-old Sam Stephenson colt, Tilden, out of Nellie Ward, and the sorrel Opbir mare, Ruhy, which ran both at Salem and Portland last spring.

PARVENUE, with his 114 pounds, is considered the most formidable Brooklyn Handicap horse now located at Morris Park. He ran eleven races last year and was defeated but once. While it is admitted that "Pittsburg Phil" and his trainer brother know the science of placing horses well, even then Parvenue's record, added to his present good showing, makes him formidable in the eyes of judges. Parvenue still has lots of fat inside that must be gradually worked off. If he had his way he would have run a Brooklyn handicap Tuesday afternoon, when in company with his full brother and Wormser he was given strong gallops on the Morris Park track. He was full of life and motion and was with difficulty restrained. He was given half a mile in a minute, which Trainer Smith considered fully good enough for the present.—New York Herald.

A DISPATCH from Newport, R. I., dated April 7th, says: "Realizing the necessity of doing something to increase the attraction for the coming Newport season, a number of gentlemen interested in sport have formed an association for the promotion of all sorts of outdoor sport, principally horse racing, both trotting and running. A trotting meeting will be held in June or July, a three days' race meeting in August, a cattle show and fair, for the first time in seven years, and there will be races, games and baseball, etc., on various intervening days, and also on all holidays. Suitable grounds will be secured in the immediate vicinity of the city and put in proper order for comfortable occupancy. The organization is called the Newport Racing Association, Limited, and the officers include H. A. Carey, president, who was elected to the Legislature on Wednesday on the Democratic ticket by the largest majority ever recorded here; L. L. Lorillard, vice-president; Roland King, secretary and treasurer; Prescott Lawrence, F. Ware and W. R. Hunter, Executive Committee. A number of the permanent residents are included among the members."

THE Goodwin Bros., of New York, writes us: "Following out our customary line of progress, we take pleasure in calling your attention to two of the most important improvements which we have ever adopted in connection with our Official Turf Guide, the first issue of which, for this year, will be published about the 10th inst. The improvements referred to have never, to our knowledge, been followed by any similar publication in any country, and are as follows: In conjunction with the customary numbering of the horses in the Index we have added smaller figures of twos and threes wherever necessary, which will invariably denote when an animal has run second and third. The usefulness of this, particularly to secretaries of jockey clubs, etc., is very apparent, and to the racing public we are confident it will prove a welcome innovation. The second improvement, also applicable to the Index, will be the giving of each horse its correct age, no matter what that may be. It has been customary, in racing parlance, to term an animal 'aged' whenever it has reached seven years or over; whereas, by the radical change which we have inaugurated, a horse will be designated by an 8, 10, 13, etc., according to its years."

Reflections for Horse Breeders.

The statement lately made that Senator Leland Stanford's experiment in breeding trotters will be looked upon by horsemen ten years from now in a far different light from what it is at present, is true.

The great foundation of our fastest trotters were thoroughbreds, or individuals that are recognized as having had all of the characteristics of thoroughbreds.

When it is taken into consideration that Mambrino, foaled in 1806, Abdallah 1 foaled in 1823, Seely's American Star in 1837, Mambrino Patchen in 1862, all carried a large percentage of thoroughbred blood, and are now looked upon as of inestimable value, is there any reason why the "thoroughbred in the trotter" should now be looked upon with credulity by many who claim to be enlightened?

The industry of breeding and developing trotters is progressive, and America will yet supply the world with the light harness horse. The European market is now demanding our best trotters.

The breeding of our trotting sires to hackney mares has already proven a most successful experiment. A large number of Orloff trotters, and the mares of Austria and Germany, are to be bred to our American trotters from this time on.

The Columbian Exhibition will be the magnet to draw thousands of the wealthiest of all nations, and the wide-awake breeders of trotters in America will have an opportunity of showing what their horses can do.

opinion of all people, are supposed to know no other gait but the gallop, will vie with their trotting-bred companions as "trotters." The results to be achieved by purchasing a trotting stallion from America to cross on the thoroughbreds of Europe, Asia, Australia, South America, Mexico and Africa will be exemplified by the "half thoroughbreds" that may be sent from California, and an active market will be created.

We may not show such noted horses as American Star, Mambrino Patchen, Abdallah 1, The Moor, Woodford Mambrino, Cuyler, A. W. Richmond, or the balance of these named above, but we can show horses and mares that have an inherent right to be superior, and whose produce will make them even more famous, for they will have greater opportunities on the track and in the harem.

The thoroughbred in the trotter theorists have reason to be proud of the records made in 1892, and the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN takes especial pride in reviewing the wonderful work of the trotters and pacers, because, for ten years, it has been an advocate of this great cross, and under its founder it has had many a battle with the mightiest writers and breeders in the land, who have graciously surrendered (with few exceptions) and acknowledged that there is more in the infusion of the "thoroughbred blood" than they had any idea of.

Flaxtail, by Bull Pup.

The discussion in regard to the pedigree of Flaxtail has been given considerable space in the columns of this paper, because, for the sake of the horse, he deserved it. The story that he was by Blue Bull, or said to be by Blue Bull, is false. They looked as much unlike as two horses possibly could.

Flaxtail's blood is being appreciated more and more every year, and, when blended with that of the descendants of Hambletonian 10 and Bashaw 50, it has proven its value wonderfully.

We trust that the registrar will take cognizance of the testimony and facts, as shown, for after a deliberate review of them we cannot see how he can publish the pedigree of this horse Flaxtail as "untraced." This subject will not be dropped at present, for there are numbers of breeders in Iowa who will remember the facts in regard to the horse, now that their attention is called to it.

Secretaries Should Meet.

The little notice that appeared in these columns last week in regard to the time for the fall meetings to commence has been the cause of much comment. The secretaries in the circuits mentioned are anxious to have such dates set as will be agreeable to all, and in order to facilitate matters if the directors will hold meetings and appoint their secretaries to come to this city and meet in the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN at any time they may choose everything will be placed at their disposal.

The Blood Horse Meeting.

In nearly every respect the meeting now in progress at Bay District track has been the most successful in the history of the Pacific Coast. The entries have been larger, the finishes closer and the attendance greatly increased over former meetings. We want to especially commend Judge Riley and his associates for their vigilance and promptness in putting down fraud and punishing offenders. During the past seven days the "crooked" lessee and jockey of Bay Dick, respectively A. Leech and Frank Kinney, have been ruled off for life, as was W. M. Sinclair, who, according to the testimony of unimpeachable witnesses, stated to Jockey Rinstein his desire to have him "place" old gray Stoneman second, and nowhere else. Rinstein told his employer, Charles Boots, as honorable a turfman as lives in any country to-day, of Sinclair's request, and Mr. Boots promptly refused to allow Rinstein to ride the gelding. Sinclair then engaged Wash. King, and upon Rinstein informing the judges of Sinclair's instructions, the matter was investigated with the result mentioned above.

In the case of W. Clancy, B. C. Holly's first jockey, suspended indefinitely for his ride on Revolver last Wednesday, when Almont won, we believe that while the boy made a mighty poor showing and could have been much closer to Almont at the finish had he not taken Revolver back as far as he did, it is not at all certain that Revolver could have won. In fact, Almont fit and well, is, in our opinion, capable of giving Revolver from 7 to 10 pounds in any race where the distance is over a mile. The reinstatement of Jockey Thad Williams was just and proper. A reputable veterinary surgeon certified that the horse was sore in both shoulders and back. Regarding the reinstatement of Jockey Claude Burlingame we know nothing of the merits or demerits of the case—only that certain turfmen made charges against him—of strong-arm work and "dosing" Red Prince.

One thing we would like to say to the gentlemen of the evening press who have tried to deride the stand taken by the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN on the standing start question. They are either allowing their strong regard for Mr. Ferguson to sway them in their writings, or else have not given the subject sufficient thought. Now, as far as Mr. Ferguson is concerned, there is no more genial, popular man in America than he, and as he came from the same section of country as the writer, we naturally like him very much. But that has little to do with the case. The fact remains that James Rowe, with his standing starts, made the greatest of hits in San Francisco, and praise of his work came from everyone that pretended to know anything of starting. There were no howls from owners that they were getting the worst of it. The horses were lined up like a troop of cavalry, the flag swished, and no one had the advantage. Mr. Ferguson is a man of just as good sense as Rowe, and has had more experience in the starter's stand. That he can make just as good standing starts as the ex-jockey-trainer we have little doubt, and our single wish in the matter is to see the starting give general satisfaction—to owners and the public alike. In no other way can fair send-offs be given at all times. It is well-nigh possible to get a good-sized field of horses away to a "flying" start, all on their strides, and bunched. While not wishing to ape the English or Australians, any fair-minded man that has given the matter any study will admit that those countries are ahead of us in the line of racing horses. More interest is manifested there, the fields and crowds are generally much larger and the management fully as good as in America. If the "flying" start were preferable to the standing, would not the older countries have adopted the former long ere this? It stands to reason that the two styles have been closely studied and the standing start chosen. An old turfman gave us a very good example bearing on this case recently. Said he, "My father was 47 years of age, and a fairly active man, when a famous sprinter came to reside in our town in Kentucky. The runner was quite a blowhard, and my father decided to teach him a lesson, if possible. So he made a proposition to the sprinter to run him 75 yards, he (the old gentleman) to go back about twenty-five yards and come up at his best clip, the sprinter to stand on the mark until father just passed him. Then he was at liberty to go. The sum of $100 a side was put up, the celebrity being very anxious to make the match. Now, father was not by any means a wonderful runner, but he beat that sprinter under those conditions by about three yards handily." It is just so with a "flying" start, where all are not on the fly. The horse that is not on his stride when the flag falls has to accept a big handicap, but is certain, especially in dashes of six furlongs and under. In races at the longer distances it does not matter so much, but it undoubtedly makes a vast difference in the sprints.

The resignation of Col. H. I. Thornton as President of the Blood Horse Association was something of a surprise, and acceptance was made with regret. Ill-health, business cares and inability to give as much attention to the affairs of the association as required were the reasons the popular gentleman gave for his retirement. Thos. H. Williams Jr., the Vice-President and most active official in the organization, was elected to fill the position of President, while A. B. Spreckles was made Vice-President and Louis Lessak a director. Mr. Williams is progressive and thoroughly posted on racing matters, and the Blood Horse Association affairs will assuredly be well managed and popular innovations adopted. If a new track, creditable to a city like San Francisco, were going to be built soon, we would say that this city bade fair to be the greatest racing center in America, but there are few straws being blown in the desired direction. However, there has been a great change for the better in the line of racing in San Francisco during the past two years, and California will, in ten years' time, outstrip even Kentucky as a State where large numbers of great race horses are bred and raced.

THERE is an erroneous impression existing among horsemen regarding the length of time chosen for the Breeders' meeting, commencing May 27th. Its duration will depend entirely upon the number of horses assembled. The contract for the Bay District track covers twelve days, five for preparatory work and seven for races. Some of those allotted for preparation can be utilized, and the lease, in all probability, will be extended, if necessary. Arrangements will be made to have the fastest horses on the coast appear at this meeting, and from the interest being taken in it by owners of trotters and pacers, its success is almost assured. There should be no hesitancy on the part of every one interested to hoon this meeting, and help make it one of the greatest inaugural events in the history of the light harness horse in California.

Macdonough's Flyers That Will Go East.

W. O'B. Macdonough's two big strings, one of which goes direct to Brooklyn to-day or to-morrow, have been made up. Henry Walsh shipped five youngsters from San Jose to Bay District this week. The flyers in Walsh's hands, which are expected to attract much attention among Easterners to California, are as follows:

Monowai, 3, by Midlothian—Eliza; Grandee, 3, by Warwick—Helen Scratch; chestnut colt, 2, by imp. Kingston—Jewely; bay colt, 2, by Sir Modred—Glendora; bay colt, 2, by Sir Modred—Mabel; black colt, 2, by Darebin—Alfarata; chestnut colt, 2, by Sir Modred—Tourmaline; bay filly, 2, by Darebin—Fleurette; chestnut filly, 2, by Midlothian—La Scala; bay filly, 2, by Cyrus—Getaway; bay filly by Galore—Gidelia; chestnut colt by Sir Modred—Schoolgirl.

There are some high-class two-year-olds in this lot. According to all accounts, the Cyrus filly is the fastest ever trained by Henry Walsh, and as he has handled all the stars at Palo Alto for years, there is every reason to believe that this filly will be another Helen Nichols. Monowai will, in all probability, make his first start in the Metropolitan handicap on Decoration day. He is on at 95 pounds, and the winter books are already all full on the California colt. About thirty-three horses will be raced in the Macdonough colors this year.

The veteran Dan Dennison will take the seventeen to Chicago after the Blood Horse meeting closes, as follows:

Bessie W., 4, by Darebin—Glendora; Wicklow, 3, by Leinster—Aunt Jane; Rosalie, 2, by Hyder Ali—Rosemary; Valencia, 2, by Hidalgo—Yum Yum; Abess, 2, by Kyrle Daly—Abra; Ovation, 2, by Three Cheers—Hattie Ball; Chestnut filly, 2, by Sir Modred—Faux Pas; bay filly, 2, by Kyrle Daly—Emotion; Bonito, 2, by Ben Ali—Chiquita; black colt, 2, by Hidalgo—Sister to Jim Douglass; chestnut colt, 2, by Cheviot—Lizzie P.; bay colt, 2, by Joe Daniels—Electricity; Border, 2, by Cheviot—Sister to Ruth Ryan; chestnut colt, by Cheviot—Aunt Jane; brown colt, by Cheviot—Bartie W.; bay colt, by Cheviot—Verona; chestnut colt, by Cheviot—Little Flash.

Sullivan and C. Dennison will ride the Western string, it is understood.

The Talbot Sessions Sale.

One of the largest gatherings of horsemen ever assembled at a sale were seen at Killip & Co.'s salesyard last Wednesday, for the trotting stock belonging to Messrs. Talbot & Session, was to be sold. The animals were shown in excellent condition, although the prices realized were only fair. Following are the names of the horses, buyers and prices over $100 received:

Table listing horse sales with columns for horse name, buyer, and price. Includes entries like Admiral, E. B. Stone, Violetta, Hyack, etc.

Don't forget to attend the sale of the Shafter thoroughbreds at Bay District track to-day.

A Famous English Trainer Talks.

Very few people at the races yesterday afternoon were aware that one of the most interested spectators there was none other than Charles Morton, the celebrated English trainer and horse-owner.

"California should be an ideal place to raise racehorses," remarked the visitor to a Chronicle reporter, "and, don't you know, I do not see why we couldn't have dirt tracks in England like your tracks. Our races are all run on turf, and the horses naturally slip a good deal."

Mr. Morton is on a tour round the world and has just arrived here from Japan. Before starting out on his journey Mr. Morton trained for Abingdon Baird, and was very much surprised to hear of his death at New Orleans.

"He was the most liberal man one could imagine," said Mr. Morton. "He was also very peculiar and never backed his horses for any large amount while I trained for him, unless especially advised to do so by me. Another strange coincidence is that Colonel Montague, another gentleman that I trained for, also died while I was away from England."

"What is now the greatest English sire?" interrupted the reporter.

"Minting is the coming horse of England. Ormonde, the stallion recently purchased by your Mr. Macdonough, was the only horse that ever lowered Minting's colors in a race."

"No; I do not think that $150,000 was too much for Ormonde. His progeny in England are showing wonderful speed and staying quality as well. I am very sorry that Meddler will not be able to start in the English Derby, owing to his becoming ineligible on account of the death of his owner. I trained him as a two-year-old, and he was a great colt. It was generally conceded that the Derby lay between Isinglass and Meddler."

"Yes, I know Midlothian, who is now owned in your State. He was a very fast race horse, and should be a success in the stud. By the way, I once owned Reggie, the latest English importation to this State. He is well-bred. The best jockeys in England, and the only ones who could be compared with such riders as Archer, Fordham and Cannon, are Watts, Webb, G. Barrett and M. Cannon. The latter is a son of old Tom Cannon. I was not favorably impressed with the jockeys I saw in this city."

Mr. Morton will visit the leading race-tracks in America before returning to England. He does not think that Son of a Gun will win the American Derby. "He was only a moderate two-year-old," said the English expert, "and will have to train a while to develop into a high-class horse. St. Simonian was a high-priced horse, but he is only a fair horse at the best. El Diablo is a first-class bandicup horse."

Mr. Morton will hereafter train only for himself. He has trained such famous horses as Meddler, Bird of Freedom, Lady Roseberry and Father Confessor.—Chronicle, April 19.

Mr. Morton saw the Australian horse, Highborn, win the Viceroy's Cup in India recently, and says he thinks this fellow good enough to win in any country. Mr. M. is here with the Clement Scott party, and may visit some of our leading stock farms.

A NEW YORK turf paper is the authority for the statement that G. W. Johnson, a candidate for the American Derby, is a sound horse and full of speed. This paper says: "And turning to the horses, both of the cracks, Sir Walter and G. W. Johnson, look well enough to please the most exciting critic. Sir Walter, while the same rather leggy fellow as last year, has put on flesh to a marked degree, and although he only moved yesterday at under a two minute gait, showed in good form for this early in the season. As for the brother to Huron, he is a race horse of the first water—bar accident. He has come through the ordeal of firing and blistering in a manner calculated to entuse all hands, from the veterinarian who advised the heroic measures, down to the owner and trainer of the colt. As he fought for his head yesterday circling the figure eight course of the old saddlebags track, G. W. Johnson was a picture of virile, lusty health, and if he meets with no setback, he will go close for the $60,000 stake at Chicago."

THE revised book of the American Derby is full on Francis Pope, G. W. Johnson, Hasty and Major Dripps. The favorites are Sir Francis and Don Alonzo, 10 each; Dare, Ramapo, Monowai and The Reaper, 15 each; Hugg Penny, Runyon, Lady Violet, Floodgate and St. Leonards, 20 to 1 each; Tyro, Wormser, Son of a Gun, Picton and Cadmus, 25 to 1; St. Croix, Lookout, Niles Standish and Spartan, 30 to 1. If the book fills up, or in other words, stands to pay the same amount of money on each of the above twenty-five horses, it will have $120 in the box for every $100 it will have to pay out, no matter which of the above horses wins, and besides could let all the other eighty seven horses run for the book for nothing.

THE jockey, J. Watts, who was under a long engagement to the late "Abingdon" Baird, has been offered 6,000 guineas as a three years' retainer by Sir John Blundell Maple. The stewards of the English Jockey Club find that the Duke of Portland, who has second claim on him, is now entitled to first. The executors of Mr. Baird, however, are likely to take the ground that Mr. Baird's death does not release the jockey from his contract, and that if he accepts a new 6,000 guineas retainer, it shall be paid to the estate and not the jockey.

BREEDERS of thoroughbreds should not fail to purchase some of the royally-bred broodmares offered for sale by James F. Bybee, who can be seen at Bay District track. Most of the mares are tried producers of high-class performers.

THE Haggis sale of trotters and roadsters will take place on the 4th and 5th of May in this city.

Castration.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, San Francisco. DEAR SIR: Now that the "season" for castrating is at hand, it would be well for owners of fine stock to look into a man's credentials when they employ for that purpose, lest they may be in trouble instead of being properly operated on, and no matter what or how good a surgeon's theoretical qualifications may be, his actual practice must show of his success or non-success. In this I am willing for time to be their enemy for that purpose, lest they may be in trouble instead of being properly operated on, and no matter what or how good a surgeon's theoretical qualifications may be, his actual practice must show of his success or non-success. "Rambler" at Marysville.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

MARYSVILLE, April 14, 1893.—While making a hurried trip to this place and visiting my old friend, J. B. McDonald, the pioneer horseman of this city, my attention was frequently called to some as fine specimens of that famous old campaigner, Brigadier, as one could wish to see, and remembering your request for items when passing among the breeders, I have hurriedly dotted down one or two. In 1876, Mr. McDonald, while on a visit to Kentucky, saw Brigadier, and at a round figure bought him. During the summer and fall he gave him a little track work, and at the Chico fair of that year the new-comer acquitted himself with a three-year-old record of 2:30. This at once established his reputation as the best campaigning son of Happy Medium, and King of the California turf. His title was well earned, and he enjoyed the distinction of being a Brigadier, not only in name, but literally, when on the battlefield. As a sire, he became very popular in this part of the country, and being surrounded by a class of appreciative breeders, he was liberally patronized, and, as a result, there are more of his get in this section of the State than of any other stallion. Breeders are just beginning to realize the value of his daughters as broodmares, and when speaking of their merits as such the common remark is, "Remember, she is a Brigadier." They are indeed a very uniform lot, and much resemble their sire; especially is this the case when considering their gait, it being an easy matter to distinguish them from all others by their fac-simile movements of the old horse, and in this respect it is an easy thing to follow them through the third generation.

AT SEWEL HARRIS' RANCH—I saw a number of Brigadier's daughters and granddaughters. This gentleman is not partial to any particular strain of blood in the trotter; like your humble servant, he believes in a good horse, no matter from which branch in the great tree it comes. His pastures contain the blood of Director, Venture, Antevolo, Don Marvin, Electioneer, Billy McCracken, the Wilkes family and others, but among them all he can boast of none superior, and I doubt if any equal in gait to the Brigadiers. Mr. Harris is a wise and judicious breeder, and as a trainer displays good judgment in handling his youngsters, having in his string some of the most promising two, three and four-year-olds I have seen. One two-year-old filly by his son of Director, out of a Brigadier mare I saw in harness. She is a cracker-jack, and my judgment is greatly at fault if she does not prove to be one of the brightest stars among the constellation of California's phenomenal trotters. H. J. Tomb, an enterprising ice merchant of this place, is also an indulgent lover of equine beauties. He is the happy possessor of a very trustworthy son of Alcantara, upon which he greatly relies for the safety and comfort of his family, his wife being so partial to him as to refuse holding the ribbons over any other horse, while Frank himself pairs off behind a beautiful three-year-old daughter of Brigadier, which he thinks will, in due course of time and with proper handling, take her place among the leaders of the most fashionably trotting-bred youngsters of the Pacific Coast. Success to you, Frank, you deserve a good one.

There are many others around Marysville who love to indulge in the growing sport of sitting behind a trotter. Among them may be seen a young banker who makes his regular daily visit to the stall of a petite son of Sahle Wilkes in which he takes great pleasure. In the same stable Mr. Kimball has a two-year-old colt by Dawn, the great son of Nutwood 600. Mr. K. does not say much of his pet, but the expression of his countenance when seated behind the beautiful colt is enough to assure perfect satisfaction.

A FEW MINUTES AT MARYSVILLE.

A few minutes drive from the lively city of Marysville brought me to the race course of D. E. Knight, where the thirteenth Agricultural District holds its annual fair. On turning into the short avenues which leads to the track from the county road, I met Wm. Hogoboom who has charge of Mr. Knight's horses. He seems to be an intelligent person and is a man who has had as much as twenty years experience with horses, and on conversing with him one can easily see that he has made horses his study. Wm. Look, his assistant, is a young man of twenty-three years, who has improved his time, and is quite an expert in the sulky. On examination, I found the track well kept and in excellent condition, the paddocks are covered with a coating of green which makes them very pleasing to the eye. Mr. Knight has made marked improvements in arranging new barns and grand stands since the track fell into his possession. He is an enterprising man and one whose counterpart is much needed in every locality where good honest racing is its aim. On going to the stables we were joined by "Larry" a St. Bernard, and as fine a specimen of the canine family as one would wish to see. He weighs 160 pounds and is Mrs. Hogoboom's special favorite. On entering the training department I found it well arranged, large roomy stalls in numbers with enclosed driveway in front, so that when out on a windy day one can drive in from the storm and be under cover while doing up his "Smoker." The first horse led out was Patti Rosa, a fine looking filly eleven months old, a rich bay in color, fair sized and as well formed as most three-year-olds; although a little had tempered she is Mr. Hogoboom's favorite, as she can show better than a three-minute gait. She is sired by Silver King, dam by Yuba Boy. The next shown was Marmaduke, a two-year-old, full brother to Patti Rosa, a dapple brown in color, is of good size, with a well-shaped body, neck quite long, well-muscled limbs that stand firmly under him and a loin of unusual strength, he reminded me very much of Sunol on first sight. Glenn H., a two-year-old, was next brought out for inspection, by Silver King, dam Daisy, by Friday McCracken. He is a bright sorrel, good size, quiet disposition and is a race horse in appearance, even at this early date in the season. Maxie Hamml was next led out, a three-year-old sired by Alfred D., dam Knight Hawk, by Brigadier, he also is a well-formed horse inclined to pace when walking, but when at his best speed is as even a trotter as can be found, and is very rapid in his action. After this one was put back Balance All was shown. She is finer-looking than ever, and is going strong in her work and is quieter than heretofore. She is to be mated with Mr. Hogoboom's Lynnont this season, which will surely produce a race horse, as Lynnont is a royal bred animal, and, as Mr. Hogoboom informed me, made a record of 2:30 last season with but three months' work. King of the Ring was then exhibited. He is a fine sorrel, four years old, fifteen hands, weighing 1,050 pounds, sired by Silver King, dam Knight

Hawk, by Brigadier. He has shown his ability to trot with the best, but was inclined to sulk; if the operation of emasculation has the desired effect, Mr. Hogoboom thinks he will be hard to heat before fall. Next came the "King Pin," which was Mr. Hogoboom's stallion Lynnont 21481. He is a fine individual, seven years old, weighs 1,150 pounds, sixteen hands high, is a blood bay, dark mane and tail, right hind foot white and star in forehead; his well-shaped body is supported by as fine a set of limbs as possibly could be found, and without a hlemish upon them. He is a perfect horse, which is saying a great deal, but his breeding and form will substantiate the statement. Lynnont is by Almont Medium, 2:18; he by Happy Medium; Almont Medium's first dam Lady Chile, by Almont 33; second dam Lady Rothschild, by Mambrino Patchen 58; third dam Rothschild's dam by Edwin Forrest. Lynnont's first dam Livona, also by Almont 33; second dam by Mambrino Champion, he by Mambrino Chief 11; third dam the dam of Wake-up-Jack, by Downing's hay Messenger. On leaving the trotters' stables, I met Mr. F. P. Schwartz, proprietor of the Charade Stable; he has only two in training at present, but judging from appearances they will be equal to some stables of a dozen. Mooreana, a three-year-old, by Joe Hooker, dam Queen, by Simon Girty; second dam Dutch Girl. She is a queenly-looking filly, 15 hands, weight 1,000 lbs., is a bright sorrel, right hind hock white, white strip in face; she did not show well as a two-year-old, but her owner thinks she will surely be up in the lead this season, and has already shown her ability to exercise anyone's horse. He also has a sprinter that is a likely-looker which he will not say anything about, but intends taking him out on the circuit this season. He is one of those enterprising men who first agitated the spring meeting, which has already been organized with Samuel Inlow as President; J. O. Gates, Secretary; Wm. Hogoboom, J. J. McGrath and Gus Wade as Directors. The programme, which promises to be very entertaining, is already out for May 5th and 6th, and to judge from the material on hand, there is a bright prospect for good sport, and, withal, a very pleasant time.

RAMBLER.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SANTA ROSA, April 17.—The weather has finally settled, and the boys are once again able to speed the favorites at the fair grounds. A well-known California trainer who visited here last week said that the track of Pierce Bros. is one of the best he ever rode over, and marvelled at its splendid condition.

A number of promising young stallions owned here were castrated last week. It is nothing against their value to state this, but there are too many stallions hereabouts, and the horsemen are wise to thin them out. Some of them are very well bred and good movers, and will be raced, and there is no doubt but that most of them will trot better as geldings.

The spring crop of colts is coming on nicely at the various stock farms about Santa Rosa. The Rose Dale Farm has two or three Dalys, and they are daisies, they say. Pierce Bros. have some additions, among them being a fine Stamboul colt, out of the fine mare By-By.

Ed Walker has sent his great old thoroughbred mare, Jenny Lind, to Lake county to be stunted to one of Mrs. Langtry's stallions. This old mare, during the racing days of many moons ago, made it very warm for all competition. Her colt foaled a few days ago, by Harry Peyton, is as frisky a little youngster as one ever saw.

Dan Carter's Lancelot mare will drop an illustrious colt in a few days. While she is on her furlough Dan is using one of De Turk's fine young Anteos.

Speaking of De Turk reminds us that his grand mare Myrtle is in fine fettle this spring, and the chances are that she will lower her record this season. There is no doubt but that she is better than she ever was before, and we think she will go down the line in a way to make the gossips wag their tongues.

Monroe Salisbury and Captain Griffith spent a few days here recently. Mr. Salisbury closed negotiations with George E. Guerne for his horse Anteeon where he takes him, works him and races him to the mutual profit of all concerned. Mr. Guerne will send five of his splendid Anteos and Nutwood mares down to Pleasant Farm to be bred to the matchless Direct. This will leave Philosopher the only horse in Guerne's stables. It is reported that Mr. Guerne will shortly go back to Kentucky to look after his large horse interests in that State.

Rose Dale Stock Farm has a new trainer and driver. He is Dr. Gauling, and he is a thorough veterinarian, a graduate in dentistry and a good all-around horseman. He saw a Daly at Lodi which impressed him most favorably, and so he came down to see the sire, and the visit led to his engagement.

Col. Mark L. McDonald, besides being very much interested in the Chicago World's Fair, of which he is a Commissioner at Large, is very much interested in good horses, and he has a little Silks Skinner that he is very proud of. It is from a thoroughbred mare, and is an unusually good one.

There have been a number of changes in horse ownership here recently. W. H. Lee, of Lee Bros. & Co., is now owner of The Flood, a promising young runner, formerly owned by W. B. Sanborn. Wilson Barnett sold his fine Anteo colt and Sanborn's horse, Harry Peyton has changed hands. W. H. Grissam purchased Sanborn's colt out of Rosette, and sired by Three Cheers. Judge Dougherty has brought Christ Near's promising Daly youngster. R. L. Crook's latest purchase is a grand specimen of the draught species, and James Dustin has bought a well-bred young horse of Pender. Thus it can be seen that there is considerable stir in the local horse market after all.

Samuel A. Browne, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, well-known by all horsemen, even though they may not have seen him, paid a visit to his old friend, L. De Turk, a few days ago. Mr. Browne is a very affable gentleman, and one it is a pleasure to meet. Mr. Browne, it will be remembered, was one of the gentlemen who bought Anteeo. Speaking of that illustrious horse, while here, Mr. Browne said: "I'll tell you something about that. I bought Bell Boy for $5,000. When I took him home my neighbors said, 'We'll have to send Browne up on the hill,' meaning to the insane asylum, near town. But I made and won over $5,000 on him, and sold him for $35,000, and the fellows who wanted to send me up the hill took their hats off to me. I went down to Kentucky and saw Anteeo. I telegraphed to De Turk to name his price. He did so, and I took him up at once. When my partner, who was a United States Senator, heard about the purchase, he went to Senator Stanford and said: 'My partner has bought a $35,000 horse without consulting me.' 'What horse is it?' said Stanford. 'Anteeo,' he said. 'Well,' replied Stanford, 'he has bought the best son of Electioneer, and he can trot in 2:12.' Then I got a dispatch from my partner congratulating me upon my bargain."

Mr. Browne is still enthusiastic over Anteeo, and says he is sure to be heard from in Pennsylvania soon. He has been bred to some of the best mares in the world since going to that State. Mr. Browne speaks well of Alfred G. as a sire, and he thinks he has a bright future.

The hase hall fever has broken out afresh here. The Santa Rosa club is a member of the Central California Base Ball League, and the opening game of the campaign took place here Sunday, between the Santa Rosa team and the Scotts & Gilberts, of San Francisco. The Central League includes the Santa Rosa, E. T. Allens, Scott & Gilberts, and Petaluma. The game here Sunday was well attended and made a very good beginning in what promises to be a very successful hase ball season. The Santa Rosas won by a score of 19 to 2.

News Notes From Olema.

Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

OLEMA, April 17.—For the sake of old "Lang Syne," I do not doubt the notice in the Turf and Track column appeared of me. You say I am training "youngsters" all from Rustics. Alas! Rustic is no longer young, and as I have no young mares of outside blood, he is now a Rusticus. The old "hoss," twenty-three years old, no doubt reflects upon the day when he won the championship of his district from Alexander (who sighed for more worlds to conquer), Newton Booth and Volunteer.

Rustic has a box-stall 14x22 to roam about in. Out-doors he has a big yard to roll and graze in, in which he can kick up his heels and be a boy again. If I had young mares of outside blood I would breed to old Rustic, second to none. My friend, Mr. McConnell, of Petaluma, will breed Kitty Irvington, the dam of the sensational yearling Marchioness in Lee Shaner's string to the "old hoss." "What bone! what action!" said McConnell, "not a pimple on him and he twenty-three years old!" Well, Payne, ever since you heat my Myrtle F., full sister to Redwood, 2:21½, with Rustic King I wanted to see the old grey "hoss." I like him, and I'll be darned if I don't breed Kitty Irvington to him." As Mac is a Kentuckian, a born horseman, his preference for my old favorite pleased me.

I am working Secret, by Secretary, dam Pastime, by Rustic, yearling record 3:03, two-year-old record 2:42, trial 2:35. Venio (I come), by Antevonio, dam Bahy, by Rustic, small, but sweet-gaited; Spotless, by Leo Wilkes, dam Pastime, 14 hands and 1 inch high behind and a trotter.

I have been only joggling and brushing them an eighth on the roads on account of the rain. There is but one Budd Dohle. It will take an infinite number of Paynes to make another Budd. Your article makes me feel a full blown Budd, my two daughters said that their aged parent flushed clear up onto his head, whereat I reproved them for calling me half-headed in front of our school teacher. This want of respect in the young to the aged is a marked sign of these degenerate times.

Budd Dohle does not believe in early development of the young, that is, in colt races. None can display the same ability in the grand preparation of the baby, as in a mature horse. Count Valensin, who was a very close observer of horses and trainers, told me Budd, in his estimation, ranked first, James Goldsmith next. Mr. Valensin's judgment was given before Ed Geers had appeared upon the scene.

All great drivers are modest and observant; none more so than Orrin Hickok. It is a treat and pleasure to listen to Mr. Hickok discourse on training and driving. He does not say a thing is so, unless he can substantiate what he says. I remember well Mr. Hickok, Orrin, as his intimates call him, saying many drivers get off last, or are pocketed going round the turn; once on the backstretch, the driver sets sail and perhaps catches the leader, at the edge of the stretch. Now said the Nestor of the turf—pull back your flying steed lay a length back—let the leader set the pace, go as slowly as you can; your horse has closed a big gap, your opponent has waited to be pushed; he has his hush hotted up; all he has got to do is to pull the cork. After you have gone say 400 yards pull out alongside your adversary; now or never. You will most likely catch your opponent napping and get in the lead before he knows what you are at. Your horse will have caught his wind and rested himself somewhat, he may not brush as far as your opponent's horse, but remember you now have the lead and it is only a little way to the wire, no one knows that as well as you do. True courage and intelligence go hand in hand. Why do you breed the level-headed Electioneer, and the high-brained Director to thoroughbred mares if the stud does not give the gait and disposition? If this were not so, why not breed the thoroughbred stallion to the trotting mare? But as Rudyard Kipling would say, that is another story. Perhaps I will tell it at another time. P. J. SHAFER.

Reed's Loss at Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 14.—The loss sustained by Charles Reed, owner of Fairview farm, in the destruction by fire of one of his barns, together with twenty-five broodmares, most of which were young, is estimated at from $80,000 to $85,000. No estimates as to individual values have yet been made. The mares destroyed were:

Algebra, by Highlander, dam Algeria; Annie, by Mr. Pickwith, dam Bonnie Wood; Bar Sinister, by Prince Charles, dam Mrs. Campo; Dame Durdan, by Forester, dam British Beauty; Careful, by Forester, dam Caretaker; Daylito, by Tremont, dam Fair Lady; Elaine, by Highlander, dam Helen, by Vauxhall; Athenair Frederica, by Forester, dam Empress; Glenloch, by Flood, dam Glendew; Her Highness, by St. Blaise, dam Princess; Hanna, by Glenelg, dam La Favorita; Brownie, by Pickwick, dam Holmdel; Disagree, by Pickwick, dam Jury; Josephine, by Longaw, dam Bradamante; Juuda, by Esterling, dam Tigris; Sacheris, by Rayon d'Or, dam L'Argentine; Santilla, by Rayon d'Or, dam Liatunah; Merry Christmas, by Zealot, dam Christmas Box; Roodee, by Forester, dam Mary Ann; imp. Piss, by Parmersan, dam Mrs. Wolf; Pretend, by Forester, dam Pretense; Pungent, by Pickwick, dam Pique; Sovereign, by Pickwick, dam Countess; Tesswick, by Pickwick, dam Countess; Siberia, by Muscovy, dam Vibrate; Malice, by Longaw, dam Slander; Lily R., by Glenelg, dam Florence. Lily R. belonged to J. R. Keene, of New York.

A PLEASANTON MATINEE.

What the Great Trotters and Pacers are Doing on the Race Track There.

BY ABBAREE.

The rumors of wonderful trials against the watch by the trotters and pacers at the famous Pleasanton track could not restrain your representative from visiting the place last week. The morning was lovely and the ride across the bay and then on the cars through the wild and picturesque Niles cañon was thoroughly enjoyed. The glimpse of the rolling hills surrounding the great Livermore valley was one that had a peculiar charm at this, the most pleasant time of the year. The valleys, hillsides and mountains were clothed in emerald hue; the fields all dotted with patches of wild flowers, blue and violet, yellow and brown; the streams filled to overflowing, rushing toward the bay; the cattle, sheep and horses grazing in the meadows, while the landscape, as far as the eye could see, was dotted with neat farmhouses, barns, orchards and vineyards. The train moved slowly down the steep grades into the valley and stopped at the little station of Pleasanton where friends were in waiting with teams and carriages to convey us to the famous track from which so many record breakers have graduated. Monroe Salisbury and his able superintendent, Jose H. Neal, seemed to be "everywhere at once," and no time was lost in getting the horses in readiness. The grand stand, which had, in the good old times, served its purpose as a point of observation for hundreds of seniors and senioritas at the famous quarter races of early days, was well filled with farmers and horsemen who came from all parts of the valley to enjoy the stirring events set down on the programme for this matinee. The little square packing box, set upon four uprights, held a number of fair judges and timers, and before the bell rang we took a few notes of the people there: Judge W. E. Greene and Dr. Selfridge of Oakland, Capt. Griffiths, P. Studebaker of Studebaker Bros., of South Bend, Indiana; Chas. Deere, of Moline, Ill.; A. W. Longley, of Chicago; E. J. Travis, of Chicago; J. H. Butler, of Montana; Milo Knox, of Haywards; G. Lapham, of Alameda; Dr. H. Latham, of Pleasanton; J. Nash, of Independence, Iowa; J. McFarland, N. R. Harris, J. Blanchard, A. McDowell, Josiah Sessions, W. Mendenhall, Wm. Murray, Martin Mendenhall, J. Hallinan, J. Sutherland, John Green, C. Blum, J. Johnson, and at least a hundred and fifty others, including many ladies.

The time is rapidly approaching for the great trotters and pacers to leave for the battlefields in the East, and as many of our readers have heard much but never have seen the pilot of the outfit, John Kelly, a description of him and the way he works may be of interest. He is about thirty-five years of age and weighs about 140 pounds. He is a neatly-built little gentleman, and his clear-cut, intellectual face, bright, sparkling eyes and genial ways at once attract and win the observer's attention. He has a very modest manner, yet when sitting behind a horse he shows that he is master of his business, and his decisiveness, judgment and executive ability are noticed in an instant. He is a born horseman, and is gifted with all the attributes that assist in making him one of the most remarkably successful young drivers that has appeared this year. He is a close student of form and gait, and understands getting out all the speed there is in a colt without ruining the animal; in this respect he is very much like John A. Goldsmith. The first one he drove was a large, fine-looking chestnut Del Sur mare called Belle S. She has no record, but by the way she stepped along toward the wire there is no doubt she will be blessed with one before long. This mare is out of a daughter of Hambletonian 725. Dave Colross came out to accompany her with a son of Robert E. Lee (by Nutwood), and gave her quite a brush for first place, but she left him easily.

Monroe Salisbury purchased a fine brown stallion at the Napa sale three weeks ago. He is by Stamboul, out of Lilly Stanley's dam, and at that time a four minute horse would easily have beaten him, but, under Kelly's watchful eye and magic hand, he can step along close to 2:30 now; he is called The Dane.

A beautiful bay mare, one that many a person present wished they owned, was now driven on the track; she is called Director Flower. Her sire is the great Director, while her dam is the pure-gaited Elmo mare that Dan McCarty purchased at the Seales' sale a few years ago for $825, and then took her to Chicago and sold her for $5,000. This mare was one of the most beautiful animals that ever left this coast and her daughter is worthy of all the praise lavished upon her by the delighted audience. She will get a low mark when even called upon. Her appearance, as well as that of every animal at the farm, speaks volumes for their trainer. Never, at that time of the year, has there been such a lot of choice animals in as fine condition. They look well, feel well and move as if it is a pleasure for them to go fast.

The gray gelding White Can, "Flying Jib's park partner," paced a 2:25 clip quite easily, and, like Jib, he needs neither boots nor weights.

Vic H., 2:13, grand looking, bold moving and healthy, never appeared in such a perfect condition, nor moved as fast for a quarter than she does at present. She is "rigged" different; her head is higher and her feet are better balanced. She has all her speed and a little more this year.

Little Albert, 2:10, the game gelding, has only been here a few weeks; he has been down on his knees and shows the effects of the fall quite plain. This accident occurred before he was sent to Pleasanton. In appearance he is big and fat, but Mr. Kelly says he is a very easy horse to get in order. Little Albert will meet some crackerjacks this year, but he will shake them in his races as if they didn't belong to his set. He was not speeded for us, and will not be given any work for a month yet.

Here comes the "King of Pacers," the great Flying Jib. He has a different appearance from the day he started away last summer, and he paces different, too. The old rolling and appropriate motion for a flying jib is absent, and with head and tail up, he sails down past the crowd and then trots back for a start. His driver holds him gently but firmly, and at the head of the stretch he lets go the reefs, holds taut on the lines, and down toward the stand he comes. It would be an act of unfairness to give the time he made for a quarter of a mile, but suffice it to say, there was a smile on Mr. Salisbury's face, as he carried his "reliable Waterbury" over to the little group of excited Eastern visitors and showed them bow fast this bay son of Algona moved.

San Pedro was next seen and Mr. Kelly was just as fresh as the horse. The old-time hearse horse that paced and trotted his way from obscurity to glory last year was jogged a little and then by way of an "astonisher," was "let out a leetle bit on the homestretch down." San Pedro is a perfect trotter and a fast one, too. He, nor none of the other horses, have been driven a full mile yet, but he can move along a quarter of a mile to suit the most fastidious.

A gentleman was seen leading a well-made, bloodlike-looking black mare in the gate and Mr. Salisbury walked over briskly and led her on the track, the proud owner, Jno. Green, of Dublin, following. "This is the dam of Directum and Electrina" Mr. Salisbury said, "she is called Steward, and has a trial of 2:28 on a half mile track. Did you ever see a more racy-looking mare?" Every body inspected her, it seemed, and the unanimous opinion heard was: "She is a wonderfully-muscled and perfectly-formed mare."

The crowd resumed their seats as a filly by Thistle out of Oriole, by Monroe Chief was next shown. She is a beautifully-gaited trotter and was shown beside a Sidney pacer driven by D. Culross. They moved along at a merry clip down the homestretch. It is a foregone conclusion that both of these will have 2:20 opposite their names before snow crowns the summit of the Sierra Nevada.

Directum, 2:11, was driven by Monroe Salisbury last evening, and to get the black rascal to go better than forty-five seconds to the quarter kept this veteran horseman busy. This morning when Kelly got up behind the colt no one living knew how fast that rascal could go. He is the greatest horse ever bred in California, and when he returns to this State, if no accident befalls him, the band will strike up the grand old tune, "Hail to the King of Trotters." Messrs. Studebaker, Deere, Longley and Travis declared that it was worth coming all the way to see him go an eighth of a mile. Kelly seems to make him go without any labor or excitement, in fact, he just steadies the horse and talks quietly to him. He can drive him in 2:15 with one hand.

A bay colt by Director, out of Aurora, the dam of Guido, the famous racehorse, was next driven by Mr. Kelly. He is a pure trotter and the name Gymnast has been given him. Next year this fellow will be seen on the grand circuit for the non-believers in "thoroughbred in the trotter" to stare at. He will upset their theories, we are afraid.

Mr. Salisbury now came out to show us what Direct is doing as a sire; he drove a fast pacer called Killarney Maid in his buggy, while General Miller, a celebrated driver, was seen in a sulky behind a filly by Direct, whose dam was by Redwood, 2:27. The way the little lassie trotted showed that, like her sire, "she meant business," and a prettier mover, or more ambitious little thing to stick to the trotting gait would be hard to find.

The next one brought out was by the same sire, out of an Antevolo mare, and again we witnessed a marvelous exhibition of speed. Mr. Salisbury smiled with satisfaction as he followed the little one in, and said: "I only wish I had bred Direct as a three-year-old. Even now I will bet $4,000 to $1,000 I will give one of these, if not both, a record next year of 2:20, but I have another fellow I want you to see, and he is out of a Hock-Hocking mare, and his second dam is by Wheatley, and so on, all thoroughbred."

Gen. Miller drove the youngster out. He was like the other two, well made and of good size. "Be the powers!" exclaimed an Irishman near us, "he's a faster colt than the others and he's as stidy as any old horse we've seen today." The man was right, for this hot-bred trotter is a stranger to every other gait, and will make a race horse of the first class if nothing happens.

Charley C., by Brown Jug, was now brought out by Mr. Kelly. He is one of the most substantial built trotters shown and will be a good one in the 2:25 class this year on the Eastern circuit. He suits his owner.

Maud C., 2:19, by California Nutwood, is another trotter that will lower her record while in Mr. Kelly's hands; she is working very well.

There was a large seventeen-hand Dexter Prince mare driven a quarter of a mile in thirty-four seconds quite easily. She is called Princess Dexter, and as she has only her first pair of shoes on this year, having been running out all winter on the hills; she will be a very valuable mare. Kelly and Salisbury like her very much and believe she will be as fast and game as any Dexter Prince ever foaled.

There were several others of this string that are in training but none of them were given any fast trials.

Mr. Kelly and the Salisbury horses were not the only ones to elicit words of praise from the interested spectators. That other prince of drivers, Andy McDowell, seated in a pure white pneumatic sulky, kept everybody timing his horses. When the bell rings this summer he will have a string of trotters and pacers that will be as good, if not better, than those of any other trainer on the coast. Andy is a great conditioner, and his "flyers" look strong and muscular and are not worked to death. His system of short dashes is the same as that in use by Mr. Kelly, and as the time for the meetings approaches the distances the horses are to work will be increased. Andy has a "love of a cottage all covered with flowering vines," almost opposite the race track; in the rear, he has built a number of stables and barns, in which he has partitioned large, roomy, well-ventilated box-stalls.

He came over to the track early in the morning with D. J. Murphy's bay gelding Nubia, 2:29, by Soudan, 2:27, and the way this fellow moves would be a surprise to the San Jose people. He likes the track, is perfectly-level-headed, and suits Andy. What more can he said of him? That this trotter "will stay the route" this reinsman will wager any amount of money.

The pacer Jakey Einstein was the next one driven. The way this Roman-nosed baby moved was enough to convince anyone that he will, if there is anything in sticking "strictly to business" get to the wire first.

Ashton, 2:24, by El Capitan, has taken to pacing, and will get a low mark this fall at that gait. He is a bold, resolute mover, and is just the kind of a green one to pay for his training.

Thursday is the appropriate name for a beautiful seal brown filly by Noonday, out of a mare by Director. She is a sidewheeler of the smoothest kind and will be a credit to her sire and dam this year.

Belle McGregor, by Robert McGregor, out of Wyoming Belle, has forgotten all her foolishness since being placed in Mr. McDowell's care. She is trotting well and will be a 2:25 performer this year, unless some accident happens.

Billy W., by Lumps, is a good green trotter, and will be eligible to go into the list when the time comes. He has been worked very carefully; in fact all of the members in Mr. McDowell's string have received his entire attention and they show it.

The seal brown stallion Administrator, by Grosvenor, that is well known at San Jose, has just been sent to Mr. McDowell, and has become quite a favorite already. He is a good trotter and has a very resolute way of going that encourages this trainer to give him a chance.

Rosie C., 2:16, is also in this string. She is moving well and seems to have her old-time speed.

The black Steinway colt owned by F. E. Clawson is doing well and will be seen on the circuit this fall; it will be no trouble for him to enter the list after a little more preparation.

One of the pets of the Pleasanton boys is the bay filly Argenta, by Steinway, dam Idol Belle, by Idol Wilkes 512. She is one of the handsomest fillies seen there and like all the Steinways is dead game and one that will add glory to her famous sire.

Mr. McDowell will have no cause for regretting his return to California. Everyone knows his capabilities as a trainer and driver, and a more genial horseman could be hard to find.

Wm. Murray has his fine horse Diahlo looking well; he jogs him a little every day. Messrs. Salisbury and Kelly would like to take him East but Mr. Murray believes he would sooner keep him here. He may have him on the fall circuit.

The fine Richard's Elector mare, Cora S., is being worked by this capable trainer, and showing that she is as fast as ever and appears to be in better racing turn.

As the train was almost due we reluctantly bade good bye to our pleasant friends in Pleasanton and were home again at 7 o'clock, convinced that we had spent a most enjoyable day among most hospitable people.

How Salisbury Found Kelly.

Monroe Salisbury, while on the train to Pleasanton, was asked by a gentleman, how he happened to select John Kelly as a driver, for he had not achieved a great reputation as a driver when this horseman selected him.

"Well, I'll tell you," replied Mr. Salisbury. "You know I have traveled a great deal and have always been a close observer. I have been around horses ever since I was old enough to know anything and I always liked to be with them. I have owned and handled a great many and have had a great deal of experience with drivers. When I had Johnny Goldsmith I knew I had the greatest driver in America, and I have never changed my opinion. He is unequalled as a driver, and always told me everything about my horses and I never found him wrong in his judgment. He is a natural horseman. Then I had Andy McDowell and Geo. Starr both excellent men. Two years ago I brought Direct and a string of trotters and pacers to Janesville, Wisconsin, to rest them a little before the campaign commenced. I kept them at Little Kelly's stables there and asked him to help Starr exercise them. I liked the way he moved about the horses, and, as he got into the sulky behind Direct, I saw that I had a team there. He drove Direct in 2:19, and after getting out of the sulky, he said: 'Mr. Salisbury, that is the fastest pacer I ever sat behind; I believe I could drive him in 2:10. He is a wonderfully smooth-going little fellow,' I said nothing, but determined to let him jog all my horses that I did not need on the circuit, for a month. He agreed to do so, and after the time was up, I saw that he had carried out my instructions to the letter.

"Last year, while in Chicago, I met a man from Janesville, and as I needed an assistant badly, I thought of Kelly at once, so I asked this man if the little fellow was in Janesville yet. He said 'yes.' Would he come to me, if I telegraphed? I inquired. 'Yes,' he replied, 'I know he would.' So I telegraphed, and in a few days Mr. Kelly came, and I gave him an opportunity of showing the people of the East that I had secured a little fellow that was able to drive with the very best men there.

"He came to California, and everybody talked about him, but he never complained to me. All I have to say is that he is not only a great driver but one of the best conditioners in the United States, and if you will get off the cars at the next station, which is Pleasanton, I will show you a string of horses that will prove all I have said in this regard, and I will let him show you how he can drive at any rate of speed you may desire, and at any part of the mile, too. I expect we will have to meet the best horses and the best drivers on the circuit this year, but I am not losing any sleep over it, for they will all have to move a little when they meet our Californian strings."

The Driver's Vindication.

"It was at a race in one of the Southern counties that an incident occurred which I have never forgotten," said a well-known horseman to a few others that were seated in the grill room of the Palace Hotel the other evening.

"What was it?" inquired one.

"Well," said the speaker, "it was at a pacing race during one of the meetings there, I happened to be acting as a judge. There were five sidewheelers contesting and the second heat had just been paced. The finish was very close and it was noticed that one of the drivers after dismounting, made his way through the crowd, ascended the stairs and addressed us in an excited tone:

"Judges, I was fouled in that heat by one of the drivers; my horse's shoulder is out by the wheel of his sulky?"

"Who did it?" asked R—, the presiding judge.

"Mr. N—, the driver of that pacer from the city."

Mr. N— was called to the stand, and as he stood before us, I actually felt sorry for him. He trembled from head to foot and appeared as nervous as if about to be sentenced to be hanged. Judge R— looked him straight in the eye, and in a most impressive manner, said:

"Mr. N— you are accused of foul driving in that heat, and by that act prevented another driver from winning."

The man looked aghast, and appeared to be speechless for a few seconds; he finally uttered these words very slowly:

"Judge, who made this complaint agin me?"

"Mr. W—, this gentleman."

At the mention of his name, the latter came forward and stood in front of the thoroughly frightened Northern driver. Turning to him and lifting his hat as if about to take an oath, Mr. N— raised his right hand and looking straight at the elderly gentlemanly driver, he asked in measured tones:

"Mr. W—, did I ever commit a foul on you in my whole life?"

The gentleman questioned, took off his hat with his left hand, then raising his right above his bald head replied in the most earnest manner:

"No! By G— you never did!"

ELEVENTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19.

Favorites won three races to-day, and non-favorites two. The day and track were perfect, but a meager crowd attended the races. The people have become educated up to having six and seven races per day, and when there are furnished any less they are not likely to respond so eagerly.

Revolver did not make any better showing to-day in Lawless' hands than he did when Clancy rode the gelding, finishing a poor third to Dinero and Quarterstaff. The last-named pair, ridden by the clever Weher boys, had it hammer-and-tongs all the way down the straight, and Dinero, through superior jockeyship, stretched his neck and won by the scantest of noses in a finish that will long linger in the minds of our race-goers. It was a battle for blood, and no favors were asked or received.

In the last race a job huddled to the surface, and the judges promptly punished the offender. It appears that W. M. Sinclair, owner of Stoneman, asked Rinstein, one of the Elwood Stock Farm jockeys, to ride the old gray gelding, and stated that he only desired to get a place with Stoneman, who on form should have been a hot favorite. Rinstein refused to ride the old son of Kirly Smith, acting on the advice of Charles Boots, his employer. Then Wash. King, who has not been considered the squarrest jockey at the local track, was given the mount on Stoneman by Sinclair. The judges in some manner got wind of the intended robbery of the hetting public, took King down and put Miller up, placing the old horse in the hands of Matt Storn for safe keeping. Subsequent testimony given by Charles Boots and Jockey Rinstein resulted in W. M. Sinclair and his honest old gray gelding being ruled off for life. This is as it should be, for Stoneman went on and won the race handsily. Prompt action in such cases by the judges will result in much good, and the officials can not be commended too highly for their good work in the Stoneman case. Probably in no other section of the world have so many palpable jobs been allowed to go through as on the Pacific Coast, and that has resulted in keeping people away from race tracks that are naturally inclined to encourage the sport if conducted honestly.

Oakland was made favorite in the opening race, seven-eighths of a mile, Alfred B. and Currency being well supported, however. The flag fell with Alfred B. over a length in front, Little Tough second and Wyanashott third. Oakland was seventh away. He ran up rapidly and was third to Alfred B. and Little Tough passing the quarter-pole. This was the order until nearing the homestretch, when Oakland went up second to Alfred B. Between the half and three-quarter poles Retta, next to last, on the outside of the track, stumbled and fell, throwing Morris so hard that he became insensible for a moment. The mare and rider were comparatively unharmed. Alfred B. fell back and Oakland and Wyanashott easily went to the front. Near the drawgate Little Tough tried to get up on the inside, but it was too late, and when they passed under the winning post Oakland was first by half a length, Wyanashott second, nearly a length from Little Tough, Cyclone poorly ridden, was fourth and Alfred B., leader to the homestretch, fifth. Time, 1:30.

The Lark, with but 102 pounds up, was played for all kinds of money in the second race, five furlongs, and Agitato was much favored. Realization was plunged on by a few who thought they knew something. After a long delay the flag fell to a truly beautiful start. Realization, Gussie, Agitato, Montalvo, Jim Lee was the order to the homestretch, the first-named appearing to have the race well in hand up to the time Joe Narvaez drew his bat. There was no end of foul jostling in the homestretch. However, Jim Lee, a 20 to 1 shot, came away in the last sixteenth and won easily by a length, Gussie second, three parts of a length from Montalvo. The Lark was carried wide at the turn, jostled and pocketed twice, but notwithstanding this, finished fourth. Time, 1:03. Misty Morn was backed down from 7 to 5 to 7 to 10 in the third race, a handicap, six furlongs, notwithstanding she had a good field of nine to give weight to. Motto was as good as 20 to 1 straight and 8 to 1 place at the post, while Sympathetic's Last was, at 6 to 1, second choice. They were at the post a full half-hour when the flag dropped with Jackson slightly in front, Nellie Van second, Toppallant third, Motto fourth and the favorite fifth. Motto went to the front at a killing clip, piloting Nellie Van and Toppallant clear into the homestretch, where she was in front two lengths. An eighth from home Sabbath-school John Clifford gave Misty Morn her head, and she soon wrested the lead from Motto with remarkable ease, winning in a gallop by a length and a half, Motto second, as far from Toppallant, who was a head from Jackson. Time, 1:14.

As good as 2 to 1 could have been had against Revolver in the fourth race, who, at 116 pounds, appeared to outclass Quarterstaff, Dinero and Braw Scott considerably. Toward the close Revolver was backed down to 8 to 5, Quarterstaff going at 2 to 1, Dinero at 2 1/2 and Braw Scott at 20 to 1. Dinero, just away, led Revolver half a length at the quarter, Quarterstaff third and running easy. Lawless took Revolver back going to the half, Quarterstaff going up second, being a length away. Dinero was but a head to the good of Quarterstaff at the three-quarter mark, and the latter was going so easily, apparently, that it was all over but the shouting. Johnny Weher drew his whip on Dinero, and he darted away from Quarterstaff, coming into the homestretch half a length in front. Then was witnessed one of the most exciting of struggles. Dinero and Quarterstaff were nose-and-nose to the drawgate, the younger Weher plying the whip on Quarterstaff, who, under punishment, darted a little past Dinero. The elder Weher, though, was saving Dinero, and nursing his mount along, he gave the son of Alta a couple of sharp cuts with the whip thirty yards from the wire. Dinero responded nobly, and the race went to the credit of Schwartz's bay colt by the scantest of noses through superior jockeyship.

Ida Glenn opened at 4 to 5 in the last race of the day, five furlongs. Stoneman was at 3 to 1 (King up), the others at from 6 to 15 to 1. Irish Johnny was at the latter figure, but so much money went in on him that his price was for a time but 3 to 1. About ten minutes before post-time the judges, smelling a good-sized rat, took Wash King down and substituted Miller as Stoneman's rider. Then there was a rush to get in on Stoneman at 6 and 7 to 5, and Ida Glenn and the old grey gelding went to the post at 6 to 5 each. Ida Glenn, a length in front of Ada Chipman, led to the three-quarters, Stoneman nearly three lengths away. Chipman led Glenn into the homestretch a neck, and looked a winner an eighth from home, but Stoneman, saved for a finish by Miller, came up like a whirlwind, and passing Quirt's sister 100 yards from the wire, won rather easily by half a length. Ada Chipman, in the place, was one and a half lengths from Ida Glenn, Lucy S. fourth, Mountain Boy fifth, Irish Johnny, who had run away three-quarters of a mile before the start, last. Time, 1:02 1/2.

TWELFTH DAY—THURSDAY, APRIL 20.

Only two favorites won to-day, three races going to rather long shots, especially in the case of Little Esperanza, who at 30 to 1 at the close. A crowd estimated at 3,000 saw some good racing to day. Garcia won the fourth race, but was correctly disqualified for fouling. So badly was Bronco jostled, just as he was making his run and looked all over a winner, that he was knocked completely off his stride, and Bronco was forced against Bessie W., who was close to the rails. Gypsy Girl was an even-money shot in the first race, but Jim R. won cantering by three lengths in 1:01 1/2, showing that he is pretty "hot goods" at this writing. Atticus won like a race horse. In fact, not one of the pace-setters were successful this afternoon. Little Esperanza simply out-footed Red Prince down the homestretch, managing to squeeze home winner by a very small margin. Sir Walter is apparently going back. Martinet is running so well that his chances in the American Derby should not be despised.

Gypsy Girl, a heavily-played favorite at even money in the first race, led Addie Chipman into the homestretch a head, when Jim R., who got off sixth and was third as they entered the straight, came on and made monkeys out of every thing in the race by all but walking in in 1:01 1/2. Gypsy Girl was second, a length from Addie Chipman. Time, 1:01 1/2. Atticus went to the post a favorite in the second race, for two-year-olds, five furlongs, though Quirt was for a time the choice of the talent. Belle Platte, Munster's big daughter, led the way past the half-pole and nearly to the three-quarters, when Quirt took up the running, attended closely by Montalvo. Just below the drawgate Joe Narvaez, on Atticus, dashed through a narrow hole against the rails, and, going like a shot, won by a neck from Montalvo, he a head from Quirt. Belle Platte was fourth, a length and a half behind the Sacramento filly. Time, 1:03. Joe Narvaez made a nifty ride on the winner, and no mistake.

The mile and seventy-yard handicap came next, and Sir Walter was a hot favorite at 1 to 2. Belfast was not neglected at 3 to 1, nor Red Prince at 10. Gladiator and Little Esperanza were practically unbacked. Gladiator piloted the field past the quarter and half, attended closest by Red Prince and Little Esperanza. Between the half and three-quarters Red Prince took up the running, and, turning into the homestretch, where Gladiator was second, Sir Walter third and Little Esperanza fourth, in a hunch, looked a winner. Little Esperanza came out of the crowd soon after entering the straight and gave Matt Storn's horse battle, and in a desperate finish, head and head to within thirty yards of the wire, the little filly gamely stuck to her work and won a good race by a short neck. Red Prince, second, was two lengths from Sir Walter third. Belfast was fourth and Gladiator last. Time, 1:47 1/2.

Tigress was at all times a hot favorite in the fourth race, seven furlongs, at one time being at even money. Plunges on Bronco, Red Cloud and Bessie W. resulted in lengthening the Tigress odds to 7 to 5 at the close. Bessie W., first away, led Tigress to the three-quarters by nearly a length, with Bronco running an easy third and Garcia fourth all the way. At the drawgate Bronco commenced to forge ahead, when Garcia, next to him, but nearer the middle of the track and coming fast, swerved into the big chestnut horse, knocking him completely off his stride and jaiming him up against Tigress, who was against the rails, also destroying her chances. A worse foul was never committed than this one. We think that Bronco would have won. Garcia sailed on in his hungry style, and won by about a length from Bessie W., with Red Cloud third and Bronco fourth, a neck in front of Nellie G. Immediately after weighing out Bessie W.'s rider, J. Weber, and Rinstein, the pilot of Bronco, claimed a foul, and the crowd wildly clamored for Bessie W. while the judges deliberated over the case. They rightly disqualified Garcia and gave the race to Bessie W., placing Red Cloud second. In giving Nellie G. third place they erred, however, as Bronco finished fourth, a neck in front of Nellie G. Under the circumstances, though, the officials were excusable. That Bronco would have won had there been no fouling there is little doubt, for he showed he had more speed than Garcia at the time he was knocked off his stride. The time was 1:29 1/2.

Martinet was favorite in the last race, though Rosebud was well thought of. A great tip was out on Clacquer, and he was played down from 25 to 1 and 8 to 1. Getting away third, the "good thing" went to the front without delay like a quarter horse, and led Martinet into the homestretch over a length. The favorite then sailed away, winning in a gallop by two lengths from Wicklow, who came up well in the straight. Charmer and Clacquer had a hot fight for third money, the former securing it by a nose. Time, 1:15 1/2.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT EDITED BY JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

OUR TROTTING MEETING.—It may be that I overrate the importance of the trotting meeting which will open on May 27th with, perhaps, a preliminary day or two before that date should the number of horses in attendance demand more time to give all a chance, but the more thought given, and the greater number of conferences with those whose opinion is valuable, faith is strengthened in the ultimate advantages which will follow a general acceptance of the plan.

The most important innovation, in my opinion, is that of classification after the horses assemble. For instance in our meeting, which is sure to cover seven days, and it may be another week, nine races only are closed. This will leave at least thirty races to make up the sport for seven days, and as many more if the races be extended over another week.

There is one point on which many queries have to be turned and to which I can give a decided answer, that being an exemption from delays and an absence of the "intolerable prolongations" which have done so much towards depopularizing trotting races.

"STANDARD AND REGISTERED"—Again there is to be a change in the standard, but postponed to January 1, 1895, that in the mania for tinkering and revising it is long odds that before the advent of that day there will be still greater variations.

Presumably the standard was to be governed by trotting capacity or the procreation of trotting speed, but those who are evidently sure that, if fast trotting be permitted to remain the test, a part of the attention may be diverted from that common type, standardity, to coin a word for the occasion, which have all the elements to confer rank, excepting capacity to trot fast. When the amended rules come in force it might be that the champion of all trotters, the acknowledged king or queen of the trotting world would be ineligible to registry. Before that time a gelding or mare which gets a legitimate record of 2:30 or better will have the right to a place in the books. After that, unless there be a change, even the two-minute trotter will be debarred unless there is one parent which wears or has worn the title. It would appear to one who has not got his brain irretrievably muddled by studying how to make the most of an array of trotters which cannot trot, that a better plan would be to discard those standard fellows in that large army and confer the rank on plebeians that can trot. Some time ago I proposed an ex-standard class, so that after the lapse of a couple of generations, if the trait had disappeared, put an x before their names. That was, however, merely presented as an illustration, and now that people have learned to rate the standard at its true value there is little necessity for curtailment of any kind. All that is needed is a record of the blood of those which have trotted fast, and if that faculty has lapsed "the public" can judge. No matter if there is a whole lot of rubbish mixed with "good goods," there never will be a Stud Book free from worthless animals, and in the future, as in the past, there will be gulls to catch at the bait, but the flock will grow smaller and smaller as years bring knowledge. There has been a singular want of common sense in instituting a Trotting Stud Book. Unwieldy and crude, it will be a source of amazement to people of the hereafter how such a monumental blunder was conceived, or under what possible state of affairs it was continued. The simplicity of people in sustaining a scheme which had its origin in the good sense of the originator, that good sense being directed to promoting his interests at the expense of every one concerned, outside of those directly interested in the profits of the job, is one of those singularities which is past accounting for. A happy thought, so far as personal aggrandizement went, and still barren of results until Dame Fortune came to the rescue and the cumbersome tomes were, presto, changed a source of profit far beyond the expectations of the owner. The talismanic word was standard, that the sesame which unlocked the door of the chamber which were stores of dollars, and this not only enriched the proprietor of the records but also scattered wealth among those who were marshaled under its banner. But the scattering was too general. There was an immense army to share in the hoard, and some way must be contrived to reduce the ranks. The gulls were not so numerous, and what few were left must be the prey of a select corps. High standard was the watchword and with that for a slogan, the plebeians could be got rid of, and the aristocrats of the trotting paddock gather in the spoils. The governing idea to restrict admission to those which could trace through several generations to lines which in many instances had not a prominent name nearer than grandsire or granddam, some still further away from the source of greatness. A sort of Bourbonic idea: "the old regime," which one would think "Napoleon and his marshals" had done a good deal to overcome. Interlopers are doing so much to prove that being horn in the purple is not an absolute essential to trotting speed, that to throw them out entirely would be rather a restricted policy. It appears that the rule which after January 1, 1895 will govern that neither mare or gelding on speed alone could be admitted was a compromise.

Another compromise might have been offered that any mare or gelding which trotted in 2:10 should be accepted without further qualification, and the then advocates of ultra marine, real lapis lazuli blood would not have to endure the horror-judging from the past—of an out-and-out plebeian getting into the ring of the select 400. That would exclude such animals as Lord Clinton, 2:10, and let in a host of others who were 19 1/2 seconds slower, but had the benefit of a standard sire that, perhaps, could not trot a mile in five minutes, all of his ability inherited from the despised branch of his genealogical tree.

It may be that I associate "high standard" with a man I met at the convention in Chicago two years ago and only on that occasion. The embodiment of dignity, that sort of self-glorification the outward token of which is a turvey drop department, an air which says as plainly as words, that it was an act of gracious condescension to mingle with such canaille as composed the big majority of breeders of trotting horses, but that condescension did not imply equality by any means, and that the honor of temporary association should be accepted in humble acknowledgment of superior rank. As a rule such people regard hauteur as dignified demeanor, and that gravity is an indication of heaps of sense. It takes size to give effect to the figure and this man was duly "balanced" on that score. Dress is also a concomitant, and a long surtout reaching nearly to the knees, closely buttoned from waist to chin, and I was somewhat surprised at the absence of ruffles at the wrists and shoes without huckles. If such a gauge could be adopted as one which would rule out the largest proportion of breeders, the business would not be so horribly democratic, and while pride would be gratified in belonging to a more select class, the greater scarcity would enhance the price.

The whole object of the Stud Book is to secure a correct record of pedigrees, or as nearly correct as circumstances will admit. That is the position I have taken from the first and a few of the turf journals have coincided in that opinion. Two years ago Clarks' Horse Review advocated noninterference with the standard as it then stood and the last number of The Horse World, commenting on the abrogation of rule nine, publishes: "If one owns a good mare she is a good mare still, even though she does not quite conform to the standard, and the simple words 'standard, registered,' do not carry the weight they used to. The Register is valuable for recording the blood lines of an animal, but the individuality and demonstrated ability of the animal to trot or produce trotters of the right kind is the certificate of the animal's worth."

That gauge will be more critically used hereafter and all the glamour which can be thrown around a standard, however high, will not entirely obscure the vision as it has in the past. So long as the Year Book makes its annual appearance there is little danger of a relapse into the old system of valuation. A few gulls there will be, and a few men with more money than knowledge of the pursuit who can be enticed into purchase on pedigree alone. An emulator, perhaps, of the hero of an old ballad which still comes to my recollection, though it is more than half a century ago when heard, and I will be greatly obliged to anyone who can furnish the rest of the stanzas. The opening was something like this:

"The laird o' Cockpen he 's proud and he 's great, His mind is ta'en up with the things of the State. He wanted a wife his brae horse to keep, But favor the wooing was fashious to seek."

There is a tangle in the recollections, but that he mounted his horses and in all the style of feudal times set out on his journey is well remembered.

"McLeish's ae dochter of Clavershaughelea, A penniless lass wi' a lang pedigree."

was the objective point of his travels. The result of the fashious wooing I cannot recall, or the after consequence, and yet so nearly as the treacherous faculty of remembrance can be depended upon it was not entirely satisfactory.

There is something of an analogy between the penniless lass wi' a lang pedigree, and the high standard trotter which cannot trot, although a far greater drawback than poverty. The laird could supply, out of the exuberance of his wealth, the pounds sterling to make amends for the dowless maiden, but speed is the first grand consideration in the trotter. With a standard up to the ideals of enthusiasts in blood lines, viz., fine, pure trotting crosses which vie to make the "thoroughbred trotter," nothing less to be recognized, there is a parallel to Scotch pedigrees, although, in all probability, that of the Clavershaughelea damsel embraced twice that number of generations, or the proud statesman would not have given the union a moment's thought. Blood, the bluest kind of blood, without a contaminating drop that eidolon of Cockpen will insist upon, and then be can descend upon his favorite theme, "blood lines" and "producing families," to his heart's content, whereas if capacity to win races were the test, talk would have little effect unless supported by actual performances. "The rank is but the guinea's stamp," "standard and registered" a sort of certificate that the breeding is in accordance with certain rules for admission into the book of genealogy, that which holds the records of races, and individual characteristics, the touchstone which tries the value of the metal.

EX PARTE.—On one side only has testimony been offered in the Manette case though all the papers which have been published the findings of the Executive Committee have assumed that both sides were represented. I have given the reasons, in a previous number of this paper, for not appearing, and printed a copy of the notice sent to the A. T. R. A., explanatory of my resolution not to take part in the proceedings. There is one paper, however, which does not state that there was a "preponderance of evidence" in favor of the claim that emblem was the dam of Manette. That is Colman's Rural World in which appeared the following paragraphs:

ARION'S PEDIGREE.

The Board of Censors of the American Trotting Registry Association at Chicago last week, had the matter of Arion's pedigree up for consideration and established a different version of it from that originally given to Senator Stanford, and by him published in his catalogue. In our judgment the pedigree now given and established is a much stronger and better one than the former, as his blood lines trace twice to Pilot Jr. now, when before they traced only once through the sire of his dam Nutwood. For extreme speed there is no better blood than that from Pilot Jr. The decision was unflinching on the part of the board. Our good friend, Jos. Cairo Simpson, was not present at the meeting, and we presume will not concur in the result arrived at, but like a loyal citizen will acquiesce. The pedigree now is as follows:

Arion, 2:10 1/2, b c, foaled 1889, by Electioneer 125, dam Maicite (dam of Oro Fino, 2:18), by Nutwood 2:18 1/2; second dam Emblem (sister to Voltaire (2:20 1/2), by Tuttle 3:00; third dam Young Porla (dam of Nora Lee, 2:29 1/2), etc.); fourth dam Portia, by Roebuck; fifth dam by Whlp. A regal inheritance for the greatest of colt trotters.

I neither concur nor acquiesce in the verdict, and have the utmost confidence of being able to prove, beyond all reasonable doubts, that Addie is the dam of Manette. The relative value of the two pedigrees has nothing to do with the question, so there is no use in discussing that. The history when published will be something of a surprise, although it may be said that there have been already very queer features. Somewhat queer that a man who had no apparent interests should be the one to bring the suit, and the flimsy pretext that has been given will not stand examination for a moment. I was not the least surprised at the rendition of the verdict, but somewhat unprepared to expect that a claim confessed to be fraudulently concealed for twelve years, still concealed on the plea that it was "property," should have received recognition. I was in hopes that future attempts of a like character would be frustrated by a rule that after the lapse of a certain number of years, ten at the farthest, changes of pedigree would not be sanctioned by the A. T. R. A., and suggested such an amendment to Mr. Brodhead. There is a wide-spread craze to overturn pedigrees of celebrated horses. Tichborne claimants will always secure countenance, and Perkin Warbucks command men and money to support causes, however transparent the foundation.

If Knox has not suffered a complete paralysis of memory he knows that Addie could not have dropped a living foal at the time that French in his affidavit swore that she did. But when I was in Chicago, Knox's testimony was said to have no bearing on the question at issue, the whole depending upon the evidence of Allen and French. Knox was not summoned to appear at the January meeting, or if he was, did not answer. Whether he was present at the last has not been stated, as there have been no detailed reports of the action of the Executive Committee, that copied from the Rural World being a sample of what I have seen. The telegraphic report, sent by the Associated Press, was the fullest.

GOOD AND BAD LUCK.—A letter from E. A. Buck, editor of the Spirit of the Times, brings the intelligence that his mare Roxaline has a chestnut filly by Uncas, "said to be a fine one; marks, white stripe in face and white legs. Where does she get these markings?" writes Mr. Buck. Easily accounted for. Uncas bay and his sire bay and his dam brown, but Lexington had four white legs and a white nose, and the sire of Coral, Uncas' dam, was chestnut and his sire chestnut, with hid legs white. Then the dam of Roxaline was chestnut and her dam's sire of the same color. Roxaline is a sister to Marion, and all of Marion's male foals, with one exception, by Norfolk, were chestnuts, while the only male by Joe Hooker is a bay.

All of the fillies by Norfolk were bays, while the only filly by Joe Hooker is chestnut. Now Roxaline's filly is three-quarters of the same blood as El Rio Rey, not to mention the Glencoe in both, and consequently she "has the right" to color after her celebrated nearly double cousin, and her nearly as celebrated cousin Yo Tambien, and I shall be greatly disappointed if she does not carry the resemblance still further by proving herself a veritable flyer in her two and three-year-old form. Her dam has "thrown" good racehorses, three of them very "useful" horses, Princess, Brait and Fred B., by Princeton, and as I have not kept track of her other foals it may be that there are others. When Mr. Buck thought her I advised him to breed her to a son of Lexington, so that there is triple cause for anxiety that she may prove good, owner, mare and advice given all having an influence in prompting a strong desire that she should be the best filly of her years.

The information of the bad luck came in a letter from Vina that my mare Del Paso had a chestnut filly by Advertiser, foaled on April 10th that it was very weak when it came, and died on the 16th. As it united the Electioneer, Wilkes and Nutwood blood and that backed by thoroughbred, Del Paso's dam being thoroughbred, there were good reasons for high expectations. But the letter also contained some very welcome information that being that my mare Volita, by Antevolo, on March 31st had a colt foal by Praevolo and that "he is a good looking foal and doing well with the exception of having weak fore ankles, but is getting stronger now and I think it will be all right soon," Mr. Robinson writes. Those who oppose inbreeding will claim that the weak fore ankles are due to coupling son and daughter of the same horse, but if they get strong, which there is a good chance to be the case, that will not hold good. Very frequently the ankles of foals show weakness and ultimately get as strong as the best. The sire and dam of this colt are very dissimilar in all points except relationship. Praevolo is as steady as a clock if he is out of a "rattle-headed" thoroughbred, Volita, nervous. She is no the ragged-hipped, roman-nosed order, the only Antevolo I ever saw with a decidedly aquiline beak. Praevolo compactly made and would pass for a thoroughbred. She is a long-strider with speed enough to have shown an eighth in seventeen seconds; all that is necessary for Praevolo to distinguish himself on the tracks is an increase of stride, though I must admit that to go very fast the lengthening will have to be greater than is reasonable to expect. Volita's dam by Winthrop, her grandam by Chiefina and she takes after the Chiefina side of the house, a typical Hiatoga in color and form. Praevolo bears a striking resemblance to his uncle Advance, 2:22, at three years old, much more so than his three-quarter brother Electioneer Rex. These two near-of-kin are surely trotters, and so it is in the family, and therefore there are well-grounded hopes that it will crop out hereafter. By far the greatest fascination to me in breeding is the feature which experiments present, and hence the result of coupling these two near relatives will awaken an interest of greater intensity than would follow the union of acknowledged affinities. Mr. Robinson describes the colt as "brown, two small stars and hind ankles white." His sire is brown without any white, his dam a light bay with white stripe in face, and, depending on memory, three white feet and ankles—color of the dam improved anyway.

RACING IN AUSTRALIA.

Growth of the Sport—Excitement Engendered by the Melbourne Cup.

As a sport horse-racing is one of the healthiest and most enjoyable of all amusements, but when it degenerates into a means of money-making, when it becomes a mere matter of business speculation, it is an evil which cannot too soon be checked. In Australia it is facetiously spoken of as "one of the great industries of the country," and this seems to indicate that it is already passed beyond its legitimate limits and entered that stage when it becomes a danger to the common weal. It will be interesting perhaps to trace its rise and progress, with a view to showing how firm a hold it has on the community.

When the first fleet arrived at Sydney in January, 1788, three were landed one stallion, three mares and three colts. The first settlers probably had too much to do clearing off scrub and other work to think of racing, even if they had had horses. The first recorded race was arranged by a publican at Paramatta and Belfast, and was won by the first mentioned. To take out the day's sport there were cock fighting, wheelbarrow and foot races and a race for girls, the prize being "enough calico to make a chemise." This was on April 20, 1810.

It was in the beginning of this year that Major-General Macquarie arrived as Governor of the colony and brought out with him the Seventy-third Regiment, of which he was Colonel. Among the officers were several sportsmen who took their hunters and two or three foxes with them. They soon killed the foxes, and then finding that the dingo or native dog preferred fighting to running, they turned their attention to racing, and had a piece of ground, now included in Hyde Park, cleared as a course. The first meeting was begun on October 14, 1810, and lasted three days. The principal event was the Subscribers' Plate, won by a horse named Chase. The printed programme of this meeting is still preserved in Sydney. The sport having been fairly introduced flourished amazingly. Captain Piper laid out a course on his estate at Woollahra and Sir Maurice O'Connell another at Camperdown. Both of these are now built over, the Prince Albert Hospital occupying the site of the grand stand at Camperdown. Mr. D'Arcy Wentworth also founded a course at Homebush, and this was for many years the leading course of the colony. The last races were held here in 1875.

In the meantime the sporting men of Sydney had applied to the Government over and over again for a grant of land as a public race-course, as the owners of the private race-courses sometimes refused to allow their courses to be used. In 1833 permission was given to race on what was called the sand track, and in 1863 202 acres were vested in three trustees for racing purposes. The grant did not give much satisfaction, as it was said to be "only fit to run cart horses on." The club however, by spending large sums of money in grassing over the sand hills and leveling the track, succeeded in making the Randwick Course one of the best in the world. This work and the building of stands, etc., is said to have cost up to the present time nearly £200,000 ($1,000,000).

There are now in and around Sydney no less than eight courses, on some one or other of which a meeting is held every week day, while on Saturdays and sometimes on Mondays or Wednesdays two or three meetings are held. In the whole colony 110 courses are registered under the rules of the Australian Jockey Club. There are also numbers of other courses which are unregistered, and in fact there is scarcely a small township or a hush "puh" which has not its own race course where meetings are held once or twice a year, generally about shearing or harvest time.

In 1851 the southern portion of the colony, known as the Port Phillip District, was formed into a separate colony named Victoria. In the same year the big diggings, Ballarat and Bendigo, started, and as gold mining is something akin to gambling, it is not much to be wondered at that horse racing should have received its great impetus about this time. At all events, big meetings were held at Ballarat and Bendigo, and the prizes were cups, medals and trophies made of gold obtained on the field.

It was a wild time, and among the stories told of the recklessness of the diggers was one of a man, afterward a member of the Victoria Legislature, who rode from Beechworth to Melbourne, a distance of 175 miles, with his horse shod with gold. The weight of each shoe at starting was 7 oz. 4 dwt., but after three days on the road they were much lighter, some of them being worn through, and this seems to prove that gold is not the best metal for horseshoes. When the excitement began to cool down the Victoria Racing Club began to devise means to attract the diggers to Melbourne, and large sums were expended in improving the Flemington race course.

One of the most startling events in connection with racing in Australia was the appearance of Alice Hawthorne. Mr. Andrew Chirnside, owner of the Werriber sheep and cattle station and a great breeder of horses, had Lady Charlotte in training for the Melbourne races. Wishing to give her a trial, it was found that Alice, which had been used as a stock horse for some years and was consequently unshod and fed on grass, was the only horse at hand. The stockman mounted Alice and beat the trained horse Lady Charlotte from the start. The fame of this hitherto unknown mare was noised all over the colony. She was put into training and won everything at the Melbourne, Geelong, Ballarat and Bendigo race-courses. Then Mr. Chirnside offered to bet £1,000 on the mare against any of the best three horses in New South Wales. After several trials, Veno, a horse bred by Mr. W. Clark, of Coobart, and owned by Mr. G. T. Rowe, of Eden-sor Park, was selected to do battle for the older colony. The race was run off at Flemington in October, 1857, when Veno won. It is impossible to estimate the amount of money which changed hands over this race, but it is known to have been enormous, each horse being backed freely by the colony it represented. The excitement over the race was intense, and as there were only a few short lines of telegraph then in the country, an enormous number of pigeons were employed to spread the news.

In 1861 the first Melbourne Cup—an event which has since become the chief race in Australia—was run and was won by Archer, bred by Mr. E. de Mestre, of Terrara, New South Wales. At first the prize offered was £2,000 for the first horse. This was considered high at the time, but it has been largely increased several times, until now the V. R. C. gives £10,000 added money, besides all the entrance fees, forfeits, etc. A last year's meeting the first prize was £10,000, the second £2,000 and the third £1,000, while the sweepstakes was only £50 per horse, so that the owner of each horse may be said to have staked that amount on the chance of winning one of the three prizes against each of the other entries.

There are races no doubt in Europe and the United States of America where the winning horse lands more money, but there is not one to which the winner and the other competitors have contributed so small a proportion.

The attendance on the ground for the past two or three years has been 125,000 to 130,000. Think of it! A country as large as the United States of America, with a population of less than 4,000,000, sends yearly at least one-thirty-second of its whole population to meet on the one race-course! To find a parallel here we must imagine America with its 65,000,000 sending between two or three millions of its population to a single race-meeting, and it must be remembered that in Australia the people travel as far as from San Francisco to New York to attend this race. Take another view: Melbourne with its suburbs contains less than 500,000 people, and more than a quarter of this number collect on the race-course to see the cup run for. Taking the population of New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Long Island, Newark and adjacent districts at 4,000,000, at least 1,000,000 would have to go to the race meeting every year to parallel the Melbourne event.

"But," it may be said, "this cannot continue. An end must be reached sometimes." Well, this is just what has been said in Australia for the past thirty years. The population of the city has gone on increasing at a rapid rate, but the attendance at the "Cup" has also increased in a like ratio. It has been prophesied over and over again that a crisis must be reached, but "St. Cup" still draws its votaries in spite of prophecies.

Up to last November, the date of the Melbourne Cup race, there had been expended on the Flemington Course, the grand, leger, members' stands, the lawn, hill, plot and the approaches very nearly £500,000 ($2,500,000). Besides this expenditure of the club the government has built a branch line of railway some two miles long, with stations on the different divisions of the grounds. The Melbourne Tram Company has run a special line of cable trams to the course, and the municipal authorities have constructed a magnificent driving road there. In the first week in November, when the cup is run for, all these means of transit prove too limited, and thousands of people walk from Melbourne across the Royal Park to Flemington. It is only three miles and a beautiful road, so that even if more vehicles were available many would prefer the tramp.

A memorable race was that of 1866, when The Barb, bred by Mr. John Tait, of Maitland, New South Wales, won the first prize. This race was rendered remarkable by the fact that Mr. Walter Craig, of Ballarat, dreamed some months before the race that he saw a horse the color of The Barb, and the rider wearing Tait's colors, come in first. Mr. Craig did not live to see his dream fulfilled, as he died a few days before the race was run, but he and some of his friends to whom he had told his dream hacked The Barb. It was at this race, too, that Mr. Joe Thompson won a large sum of money variously estimated at from £25,000 to £50,000 ($125,000 to $250,000). Whatever the amount may have been it was sufficient to enable Mr. Thompson to build a very handsome residence a few miles out of Melbourne. He was called "The King of the Ring" and "The Leviathan of the Turf," but it is now reported that he has lost his money during his visit to the United States and England, where it was said he "went to show the Yankees and the Britishers how to bet." It was about this time that the great racing sweeps were inaugurated, but a description of these must be held over for a future article.

To relate all the remarkable events which are said to have taken place in connection with the Melbourne Cup would be simply to report every race. According to Australian sportsmen every race is more or less remarkable. Thus Briseis, Chester and several other horses have won the Victorian Derby on the Saturday and the "Cup" on the Tuesday following. Very frequently, too, the winner of the Randwick Cup, Sydney, has been the winner of the Melbourne Cup, and this is always a cause for wonder, as the Melbourne course is a right-hand course, while the Sydney course is a left-hand one.

Some few years ago the late Mr. James White, one of the most respected of the racing men in Australia, noticing that the time in which races were run on the Australian courses compared favorably with the time on the English race courses, determined to send two or three colts to run in the English Derby. He did not live to carry his experiment through and the horses did not do so well as was expected by sanguine Australians. There are two causes assigned for this. One is that the colts bred in the warm climate of Australia are injuriously affected by the cold in England. The other and the more probable is that the colts were bred for the English Derby season and were therefore foaled at an unnatural time of year in Australia. Australian horses have met English horses on the courses in India and have made some very good records, and therefore the failure of these specially-bred colts in England is the more noteworthy.

Turning from flat racing to trotting it may be said that the great American sport has always been popular in Australia. Trotting matches have been held for the past forty or fifty years, but generally these have been private matches. Some ten years ago, however, a track was set apart in Sidney specially for trotting, and the Sidney Trotting Club was formed. Races are now held regularly once a month and sometimes oftener. In Melbourne, also, a trotting club has been formed, and within the past few years several trotting sires have been imported from the large studs of the United States to improve the trotting horses of Australia.

The climate of Southern Australia is so mild and imported animals of all kinds thrive so well there—particularly rabbits, hares, etc.—that Australians are in the habit of saying that any foreign animal introduced into the country in a few generations becomes improved. This has been the case with merino sheep, Short-horn, Hereford and other breeds of cattle, and with camels, those now being reared for packing goods across the dry tracks being far larger than any to be found in Arabia, whence they were originally imported; and if this holds good with the trotting horse, in ten years or so Americans may expect to see an Australian trotting horse competing with the descendants of Maud S., Sunol and other cranks.

The Australians are always ready for sport of any kind, and if there is only a fair chance of success some enterprising person will soon be found to take the risk. If a little friendly rivalry in sport would tend to draw these two branches of the great English-speaking community closer together it would be worth trying. The Australians have always looked with admiration on their big Brother Jonathan, and have received many useful and a few doubtful lessons from him, and a little reciprocity on the part of Americans would be hailed with delight. From the time when the Australia colonies received the grant of constitutional government, America has been taken as a model in numbers of cases, and on public holidays the stars and stripes are as often seen waving in the air as the British Union Jack. But while America is welcome to take the Australian halloo and any other Australian law or invention which may be worth taking, it might be as well to warn her not to make gambling on horse racing quite as popular as it is in Australia. There are several very useful lessons to be learned from Australia, and one of these is the evil of making a god of the race-horse.—"Australian" in Daily Spirit.

Wasted Queens of the Harem.

The best of men have made mistakes in breeding their mares to inferior stallions, first because they happen to own those stallions themselves. Sam Gardiner, the great Australian breeder who bred Dareh-in, has just been sold out by his assignees in bankruptcy. The cause of his downfall is sacrificing good mares, like The Gem, Lurline and Ringarooma, to such worthless stallions as Tahal Cain, Precious Stone, Fitz Tubal and Golden Butterfly. He had to travel less than sixty miles to find Trenton, Newminster, First King, Robinson Crusoe and Eridspor, all tried and famous sires except the last one named. Mr. Haggin, while he has four really good horses in his stud, has six or seven as bad as Fitz Tubal, and bids fair to repeat the history of Mr. Gardiner.

Dr. Warfield, who bred Lexington, was just such a man. He owned Alice Carneal, and a handsomer mare never peeped through a bridle. The doctor never bred her right but once, and then he mated her with Boston and got Lexington as a result. He had an old stallion called Bethune, a rotten horse for a sire, and to him he sacrificed this great mare no less than seven times. She was wasted herself without contributing anything to the reputation of the stallion upon which she was thrown away. John M. Botts had a fine mare called Rosalie Somers and another called Sara Washington. He bred the first once and the second three times to Revenue, and then wasted them on a lot of young horses, which he was vainly trying to build up.

To come nearer home, there was old Nathan Coombs, of Napa, the shrewdest Republican politician in the State outside of San Francisco. He had three fine mares called Emma Taylor, Evadne and Kate Simpson, all of which he sacrificed to a three-quarters bred horse called Billy Cheatham, which he was trying to build up at the expense of a really great horse called Ashland, also his property. The consequence was that he won just about what races were thrown off to him. Had he not owned Cheatham he might have stood at the top of all California breeders.

Owing to a similar narrow-minded policy on the part of the Messrs. Williamson, who owned Belmont, the greatest of all our early importations, Bonnie Belle, the handsomest mare of her day, was sacrificed to her half-brother, Owen Dale, who got race horses from everything but her. Only four of his get—Farsita, Susy B. Moore, Breckinridge and Lancaster—were tried in public, and were all returned winners. To these add a horse with no public record, Kyrat, bred by John Tye, of San Joaquin county. I timed this horse once a private trial at six furlongs, when the record was 1:17, and he did it 1:16. I believed that either myself or my watch was at fault. Now I believe that both was right, but Kyrat never started. He was as fast a horse as I can recollect.—"Hidalgo" in Los Angeles Herald.

The Mouth and the Bit.

A horse, to be a fine driving one, must have a good mouth. This causes the hit to be one of the most important parts of the harness, as it touches the most sensitive part of the horse. The hit used, and the way it is used, causes a horse to have a good or bad mouth. A horse that cannot bear much weight on the mouth or hit is called tender-mouthed. Such ones are often made to have good mouths by using a pleasant hit, and being driven by a careful experienced driver. Some horses are rank pullers, made so by abuse, but when they have a kind, experienced driver, they soon have confidence, and give it up. Many a high-mettled and spirited horse is often largely restrained by the reason and voice of the driver, which it driven by some, would be called unsafe, and they would be for certain ones to drive. A kind, but nervy, high-spirited horse will sometimes go off on the hit, so that it will take all the strength of its driver at first to control, and if the lines are not drawn up quick their heels will go up and they will go off on a run.

A horse in a race will often give a great burst of speed. They want then a good mouth and a strong, steady pull to keep them from breaking. One time when Ethan Allen was driven on exhibition by Holcomb he had so much confidence in Ethan that he seemed to think he need not pay any attention to the lines, and let them be loose. He started him at a fifty clip and Ethan broke, which he would not have done if there had been a few pounds pulled on his mouth. It was said that Ethan never pulled more than ten pounds on the hit in his races. As a general rule a common-sized joint hit is the best hit to drive trotters with. A horse in a break will catch quicker with such a hit than a straight one, and they will not pull or lug on a joint hit as on a straight one. The hit should be made as pleasant to the horse as can be, and have him safe. Many a race has been lost by the horse being vexed, irritated and maddened by an unpleasant hit. Some horses want a few pounds support on the hit from the driver, and, if they don't get it, they will often fall down going either slow or fast. Truck and team horses are partly driven as the oxen are, by the voice, and a common straight hit is all right for them.

I. V. BAKER is of the opinion that since the majority of the horses which now pass under the hammer are purchased for road and track purposes, instead of breeding ranks, records will multiply very fast. The get of stallions will be thoroughly tried in the development school, and the records will come so thick and fast as to greatly exalt the rank of the sire. The knife will be more freely used than ever before, and fillies will not be held in reserve for the harem. This will put a check upon supply, and the value of well-bred youngsters should increase.

HOOF-BEATS.

THE Year Book shows that 1944 starts to obtain cup records were made in 1892.

SPEED belongs to the racing stable, bloodlines to the breeder. The returns from the former is the latter's guide book.

AT Parkville Farm, Parkville, L. 1., last week, Alannah, 2:11 1/2, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/2, foaled a bay colt by Stamboul, 2:07 1/2.

THE dam of Yolo Maid, 2:12, has been bred to Direct, 2:05 1/2. Mr. Hopper, of Yolo, wants a pacer, and he wants a very fast one, too.

KINGSTON has won $700,000 for his owner, and cost $12,000. He has started in 96 races, has won 74, and is sound and good for many more.

EMANUEL DEN, of Santa Barbara, will go on the Southern California circuit this season with Flyaway, Fairlawn, Prince's First and two two-year-olds.

MR. BACKMAN'S views have changed with the lapse of time, and, in total contradiction to his former policy, early development is now the rule at Stony Ford.

THE Macdonough string, in charge of Henry Walsh, was to leave to-day for Brooklyn. Monowal has been working wonderfully fast of late, and his trials are the talk of the San Joanses.

WICKLIFFE PRESTON, of Lexington, Ky., has sold to Gus Straus, the broodmare Katrina, by Virgil, out of Katie Pearce, by imp. Leanington; for the sum of $5,200. She is in foal to Iroquois.

WE understand the Undine Stable's fine-looking mare, Fidelity, half-sister to Flirtation and Flambeau, struck herself in her work last week, and was fired. It is expected she will be all right again in about two weeks.

THERE will always be a place for the gentleman's road horse—a place that can never be filled by any style of horse other than the high-class American trotter that has size, style, soundness and speed to recommend him.

NO MARE foaled later than January 1, 1890, and no stallion of any age can be registered under a name already taken by another animal, unless the second applicant has started in a race under that name prior to January 1, 1892.

NOT less than thirty horses are expected to go to the post for the American Derby. Secretary Brewster says that the track at Washington Park will be widened twenty feet on the backstretch to give the horses plenty of room.

HELEN T., sister of Arion, 2:10 1/2, foaled a bay colt by Prodigal, 2:16, at Marcus Daly's Bitter Root Ranch, Hamilton, Mon., March 22d. Fantasie, 2:25, by Rancho, 2:13 1/2, foaled a bay colt by the same horse on the 10th.

A MICHIGAN man has invented an automatic brake for bicycle sulkies, which is designed to prevent the sulky running under the horse, in case of his rearing, and throwing him over backwards on the driver. It is said to be a valuable feature, and will be in demand.

STEPHEN STROUD, of Norwalk, Los Angeles County, Cal., has gelded Four Aces, the good performer by Hoek Hocking, dam Maid of the Mist. In his string, that will take in the Southern California circuit this season, is a good-looking four-year-old mare, a maiden, by Gano, dam the good race mare Sunday, by Monday.

THE Pierce Bros., of Santa Rosa Stock Farm, will hold their annual sale of trotting stock in May. There will be representatives of Sidney, Director, Bay Rose, Guy Wilkes, Dexter Prince, Steinway, Whippleton and many of the best sires in California, out of great broodmares. The date of sale will be announced hereafter.

ONE of the blue-blooded colts in this state, and probably in the world, to day, belongs to John Mackey, and is now at the Rancho del Paso, says "Hidalgo" in the Los Angeles Herald. He is by Melton, the English Derby winner of 1885, out of Kisherine, by Kisher, by Buccaneer. The youngster is a two-year-old, and is the living image of S. G. Reed's stallion Martinhurst.

THE champion race stallion Lobasco, 2:10 1/2, died on the 9th inst., at the home of his owner J. G. Ladd, Beatrice, Neb., of laryngitis. A few days before his death the operation of tracheotomy was performed on him and it was thought he would recover until within a short time before his death. Lobasco was sired by Egmont, son of Belmont, dam by Gen. Hatch, grandam by Champion Morgan. He made his record at St. Joseph, Mo., Sept. 14, 1892, in the third heat of a winning race.

SCORES of horses have been ruined on the railroads by the shunting of cars. Some action should be taken by horse owners looking to an abatement of the practice of starting cars loaded with valuable live-stock with a jerk. In sidetracking cars engineers will sometimes run the cars backward at a speed of twenty miles an hour, and then bring the whole train up with a jerk, knocking down every animal on board. If railroads were mulcted in damages a few times they would be more careful.

FOLLOWING are the entries to the three-eighths and repeat free-for-all running races at Salinas on the 29th inst.: John Leach's br c Sam Mount, by Ironclad, dam Daisy D. by Wheatley; Charles Cockrill's br f Mary E., by Ironclad, dam Marion, by Kyrle Daly; M. "You can fool all the people part of the time, and part of the people all the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time." You can't make all the people or half of them now believe a trotting horse is a trotter if he can't trot. He may be registered, as one of the local breeders says, in the Herd Book, but that only proves that Ike Smith says he was bred so and so. Call horses that trot trotters, and put them in a small lot by themselves, call the balance just what they are, failures as trotters, and put them in a great big lot by themselves. Then the blind man will be able to see that we have not too many trotters, but not nearly enough.—American Trotter.

THE conditions governing the Cowhoy's Race from Chardon, Neh., to Chicago, which will be started June 13th, have been announced by the committee having the matter in charge, and are as follows: "The race open to anyone riding Western horses; only horses bred and raised west of the Missouri river eligible to enter; each rider shall weigh with stock saddle and saddle blanket not less than 150 pounds; the saddles to be 'double cinch' stock saddles to weigh not less than 35 pounds; each rider to be limited to two horses; to each rider will be furnished a route map, and he will be required to register at places designated by the committee. All horses will be branded with a special race brand on the day preceding the start; entrance to be closed by June 1st, and start to be made from Chardon, Neh., on June 13th; purse will be divided into four moneys, of which the first shall not be less than $1,000."

A CORRESPONDENT from Modesto writes us to correct an error that has been going the rounds regarding the breeding and ownership of several horses. He says that Dan McCarty does not own the dam of Revolver, Young Jule, but J. J. Dolan does. She is by imp. Partisan (owned by D. W. Bury from 1878 until he died, some five years ago). Young Jule is by imp. Partisan, dam Jule, by imp. Nena Sahib; second dam Lady Hawkins, by Jack Hawkins; third dam Julia, by imp. Glencoe, her dam said to be a thoroughbred mare, but owing to certain complications it is well nigh impossible to substantiate it at this time. Imp. Partisan, for his opportunities, did exceedingly well, having sired Idaho Chief, a good race horse, and Joshua's dam, among others. The correspondent winds up with: "And worst of all mistakes is now—a two-year-old represented to be by imp. Partisan, dam Black Willows. Suffice it to say that imp. Partisan has been dead five years." This latter animal was recently started at Bay District track and represented to be by Partisan, though just what Partisan was meant is not known.

THE Witch Hazel $1,000 stallion produce stake has been closed, with thirty-one entries. It will be the richest stake ever trotted for in the Northwest, and the breeder who neglected to enter it has cause for regret. The stake was open to all stallions in the North Pacific district making a season in 1893, whose get of 1894 shall trot in 1896 as two-year-olds. Every colt foaled in 1894 by nominated stallions, regardless of ownership, is eligible to start in this stake. All colts must be nominated January 1, 1895, by giving name, color, sex and breeding, accompanied by $5 and the further sum of $5 January 1, 1896. Any number of colts by the same horse will be allowed to start, provided they are owned by different parties, but no owner will be allowed to start more than one colt. The race to be in harness, mile heats, best two in three, under the rules governing the track upon which it is trotted. A colt distancing the field will be entitled to first money only, but the balance will form a consolation purse for the starters not getting a piece of the money, to be competed for under the same conditions at some time to be announced by the association. Money to be divided, 65, 20, 10 and 5 per cent. If any colt of Challenger Chief wins the stake its owner will be presented with $500 by the sire's proprietors.—Oregonian.

AN adjourned meeting of the conference committees of the National and American Trotting Associations was held at Chicago last week, at which the former action in regard to the new distance rules was rescinded and the following rule recommended in lieu thereof: Seventy-five yards when not more than eight horses start and one hundred yards when more than eight start. This compromise is offered in deference to an almost unanimous sentiment among the drivers of the country against the proposed course, and it is to be hoped that the latter class will be willing to make some concession in the interest of the general public at race meetings and allow the amended action to be established without serious protest. Every element and faction identified with trotting as a pursuit should be willing to make all reasonable sacrifice for the popularity of the sport. If the public is arbitrary or whimsical it must be appeased, for its support is the foundation of the whole business. The drivers, the owners, the breeders are merely the players, whose occupation depends entirely upon the favor of the spectators. The demand of the hour is for short, sharp, prompt work, and to deny it is to imperil the support of all race-going people. Let the drivers and associations get on common ground and work harmoniously in the interest of the amphitheater.—American Trotter.

ALL the bills against pool-selling and book-making now before the Illinois Senate have been made a special order for Wednesday, April 19th. The bills are three in number. The first is Mr. Berry's measure that passed the House by such an overwhelming majority, and this prohibits all this class of gambling. The second is Senator Berry's bill, of which the terms are virtually the same as that of his namesake in the House of Assembly. The third is introduced by Senator Coon and restricts pool-selling to actual inclosures where races are run off, and also prohibits minors from engaging in buying or selling pools. When Senator Berry's bill was brought up at the end of last week, Mr. Caldwell offered the following amendment: "Provided, however, that within actual inclosures of fair or race track associations in this State, pool-selling and bookmaking may be permitted by the owners or directors thereof during the meetings of such associations on the races which are actually run within said inclosures, but on no other racing or other event. The meeting or meetings of each of such associations at which privileges herein allowed may be taken advantage of shall not continue, counting the time of all such meetings longer than thirty days in any one year, and shall be held between May 1 and November 1 in each year. When such association has used the track or ground within any inclosure for the holding of such meetings for the full period of thirty days, the said track and grounds cannot be used by any other person or association in order to take advantage of the privileges allowed during the same year." This would, of course, utterly thwart the original intention of the bill, and, so far as Chicago is concerned, would mean continuous racing from May 1 to November 1, but a measure that in reality would be better for the interests of both racing and the community at large could scarcely be devised.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department MUST be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

W. B. Ferndale, Cal.—Is Silver Throat, by The Moor, standard? If so, how? Answer—He was not standard-bred, yet he has a number—18,563.

Subscriber, Atlanta, Cal.—To decide a bet will you kindly settle a question, "Has a horse got a gall?" Answer—"The horse's liver secretes gall, like that of other animals, but a horse has no gall bladder."

Subscriber, Petaluma, Cal.—Please state what color was Owen Dale, by William Scott's Belmont; also when he died. Answer—A chestnut. Write to W. M. Williamson, San Jose, Cal. He can tell you when Owen Dale died, and how old he was.

M. S. Lakeport, Cal.—Will you please give the breeding of a horse named Stock Chief. Is he standard and registered? If so, what is his number? Answer—Can find no such horse. Do you mean Stockbridge Chief? His number is 672. He is by Stockbridge Chief, out of Bine Bonnet, by Tom Crowder.

J. J. H., Middleton, Lake County, Cal.—Please let me know through the columns of your paper if the horse Oseola is alive now or not, where he made a stud season last, raised by whom, and if he beat the best horse Foster in any race. Answer—We believe he was raised by Theodore Winters, of Nevada. He was owned by Mrs. Scroggins, of Union, Union county, Oregon, at last accounts.

Subscriber, Estrella.—Please give your authority for the breeding of Bloomsbury, as Col. S. D. Bruce wishes to know in your next issue. Answer—We secured his pedigree from the "Transactions of the State Agricultural Society" for the year 1878, pages 83 and 89, which says on page 89: "Thomas Atchison enters b s Bloomsbury, by Boston, out of dam of Orphan Boy." He was a good race horse, winning from the best horses in California, at two-mile heats and mile heats.

H. R. S., Sacramento.—You will kindly oblige a constant subscriber to your most valuable turf journal by answering the following questions: 1. How many successful producing sires of trotting speed has there been whose dams were thoroughbred sires, also whose dams were three-quarters and full thoroughbred. 2. How many noted sires has there been that neither were standard by breeding nor by performance until their produce made them such, and what are their names? Answer—To answer these questions would entail too much labor and take up more time than we can at present spare. We would advise the purchase of the last Year Book and close scrutiny thereof.

San Diego, Cal.—I have a mare whose breeding I am anxious to prove and thought if you would publish a few questions in your correspondence column I might obtain it. The mare is a large black mare with white hind ankle, about 15 years old, said to be by Whipple's Hambletonian, was bought about eight or nine years since by J. Downey Harvey, of Los Angeles, from N. S. Blair, of Los Angeles, who got her of a man named Bacon, who got her of Mr. Canby. It is stated that before Mr. Blair bought her she was driven double with a full sister of hers, that they could trot in three minutes, that were both bred and this one failed to breed, so the team was spoiled. Any information will be thankfully received by W. B. FRENCH.

Subscriber, City.—I have a mare given to me by a friend in Oregon. He claimed the sire of her was Woodbury, a thoroughbred. Will you kindly state in your columns what kind of performer he was and if he is still living. I believe he was full brother to Ben Wade and Hardwood. Answer—Woodbury was a full brother to Ben Wade and Hardwood by Woodburn, dam Moss Rose, by imp. Knight of St. George, one year younger than Hardwood and two older than Ben Wade. He was foaled in 1871, and I believe died not long ago, though not positive. He was a good performer, and won the Sacramento Derby of 1874, one and a half miles, beating Electra (dam of Hidalgo), Emma Skags, Eureka and Waterford. At San Francisco, November 2, 1874, he made a mile heat race, match, $1,000 a side, against Bill Hazel, by Norfolk.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 15, 1891. Dear Sir:—I have used "Absorbine" with wonderful results; the only remedy I know of that will remove the Wind-puff. Respectfully yours, GEO. S. PLUMMER.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16, 1892. Dear Sir:—I consider the "Absorbine" rightly named, as it completely absorbs all humors where applied. Very truly yours, C. H. MAGOON.

A NEW YORK dispatch says: "The stakes of the Mounmouth Park Association has received 2,594 entries. The California entries were the last to come to hand. W. O. B. McDonough names 73 royally-bred racers; Charles L. Fair enters 12; Dan Miller 6 and Matt Storn, of Grover Cleveland fame, 28. McDonough's stable, which comprises two-year-olds by Galore, Darebin, Sir Modred, Hyder Ali and Kingston, should make a good showing. In his lot is the filly by Galore, out of Glidelia the mare the late Captain Conner was so fond of.

I had a mare affected with a disease confined to the head, about which I wish to have the opinion of your veterinarian. She had been isolated from other horses for six weeks, no epizootic, strangles or glanders known to be among the horses within a radius of two miles or more. Noticed her closely when about to depart, at midday, and could not discern anything abnormal in her appearance. She was allowed to run loose in a lot with her colt, four weeks old, in the daytime and stabled at night. That evening (according to the attendant) she would not come when called, and, on being led in, held her head low, waving it from side to side, staggering somewhat as she walked; seemed to be in much pain, and was greatly drawn. He said she appeared easier and looked better the next day. He did not notice any discharge from the nostrils nor swelling in the head. On my return, on the fifth day after, I found her greatly reduced in flesh, swelling above the left eye and down the side of the head along the curve of the jaw; the hollow above the eye being puffed up so as to be raised higher than the forehead. A very little swelling under the jaw; seemed to be unable to get her head down low enough to eat grass when standing on a level, but could when she could take advantage of a hillside. No indications of a discharge until after I steamed her, when it came lightly from both nostrils, that of the left being in excess. A pressure between the jaws under the throat caused a discharge (freely) of about half a teaspoonful, but on the pressure being removed it would cease. The matter was of slightly yellowish tinge, like whey mixed with numerous small clots or lumps of matter. It would not adhere to the nostrils, and except for a half hour after being steamed) after it stopped running, in fifteen minutes after one would after examine it closely in order to tell there had been a discharge. She would eat mashes freely and grass as noted, but it seemed to pain her to eat hay. Swelling increased on left side of the head after my return, till third day when I lanced it in two places, once about two inches from the outer corner of the eye and at right angles, and the other back from first and toward base of ear. The matter that came from cuts was of a frothy cohesive nature. Also lanced at a point three inches from inner corner of eye on line to center of ear. Could not reach any matter here. The matter from cuts was of very offensive smell. By this time she could not eat unless feed was placed on an elevation of twenty inches from ground. Became more stupid with pain and weaker, so she had to be assisted to get up the morning of the tenth day from being a tacked and cleaning it a hopeless case, she was killed for humanity's sake. The last day or two there was some swelling under the jaws and a little over the eye. After lancing, the swelling subsided some on the left side. There were no lumps under the jaw until about the same time, when one appeared about the size of a large marble, of a soft texture. Could not discern any ulcers in the nostrils. 2. What food is best to give a colt four weeks old that has been deprived of its mother's milk? Is accustomed to mixture of bran, middlings, ground oatmeal and little corn meal.

Answer—The above is an exact description of a case that I have on hands just now, in a mare due to foal in four days. She has now regained her appetite and strength, but has one or two small soft lumps that you mention, still. There was no need to kill your mare. After opening the abscesses you should have thoroughly washed them out with an antiseptic solution daily; and again given her a plentiful supply of soft nourishing food, placed a convenient height from the ground. This, with the addition of a blood purifying medicine internally, should be the line of treatment. 2. Milk should be the principal food for some time yet. A little oatmeal gruel added and increased gradually, as the foal advances in age and strength, will be beneficial. Take care that he does not get constipated after the change from the mother's milk. A little olive oil may be given when necessary.

MARTINET as a pace-maker is not a success, but as a finisher he is almost unbeatable. So far no three-year-old has appeared at the Blood Horse meeting capable of taking his measure.

THE Elmwood Stock Farm Stable heads the list of winners at the Blood Horse meeting, with close to $4,000 to its credit. B. C. Holly is second and W. O'B. Macdonough third.

THE attention of horsemen is called to the closing of Overland Park entries April 25th.

GEORGE MILLER leads the jockeys in number of winning mounts, with Joe Narvaez a good second and J. Weber third. W. Clancy, Spence and C. Weber are hunched closely behind Johnny Weber.

LITTLE, ESPERANZA, at 30 to 1, was the longest shot of the entire meeting to win, though Jim Lee was a close second in this respect. We understand Orville Appleby made a neat clean-up as a pace-maker on Esperanza.

Note Advance in Price.

"ECLIPSE" STACKERS, $125.

"ACME" RAKES, Each $60.

NET CASH; No discount to any one.

The important and very valuable improvements made in these Stackers and Rakes, since they were first introduced on this Coast, have rendered this advance in price necessary. There are no better machines made.

Jackson's Improved "ECLIPSE" Stacker and Loader
PRICE $125.

PRICE OF STACKER AND TWO RAKES, $245.

RAKES ARE $60 EACH.

THESE PRICES ARE NET CASH.

The above is our standard Stacker and is an improvement on all others, as it is lighter, stronger and dumps the hay at any desired height. Instead of carrying it all up over itself, without regard to height of stack. This is quite important in stacking in windy weather, as with the "ECLIPSE" the hay is only raised as high as necessary to dump it on the stack, and it is not scattered by the wind. The uprights of the "ECLIPSE" are made 28 feet high, as this is as long as they can be shipped, and with them it will stack nearly or quite that height; but the height it may be made to stack is really unlimited, as these uprights may be pitched out as high as desired, and guyed with ropes.

This machine is made under the "Acme" and Oliver patents. It is mounted on wheels, and will build a stack 25 feet high.

With the rakes the hay is taken from the swath, when cured, just as left by the mower, or from the cock or windrow, if it is desired to rake it before it is cured sufficiently to stack; and when the Rake is loaded it is driven to the stacker, the rake teeth entering between the pitcher teeth; the hay is pressed forward against the pitcher head. The horses then back the Rake off, leaving the hay in a compact mass upon the pitcher, and return to the field for another load. As soon as the rake is out of the way the horse attached to the pitcher rope is started, elevating the load the desired height, when the hitch-rope is pulled and the hay is dropped in the center of the stack, the horse is backed up, the pitcher being brought back to the ground by its own weight, ready for another load.

The "ECLIPSE" has special advantages for stacking in windy weather, and for loading hay, etc., on wagons. It dumps the load at any desired height, from 8 to 25 feet, while it is easily moved, quickly set and amply strong.

The principle of making hay, by which the expenditure of manual labor is reduced to a minimum, is now almost too well known to need much description, as these machines are now in the hands of all the largest farmers and have proven entirely successful. The words "making hay" are used advisedly, for this Stacker and Rake do all the work from the time the mower cuts the hay until it is in the stack or on the wagon, and no other machines or implements, nor the expenditure of any manual labor, is either required or even desirable.

Jackson's Improved "ACME" Rake & Buck Combined
PRICE $60, NET CASH.

Does the work of all other Hay or Horse Rakes, viz., wire rakes, sulky rakes, revolving rakes, buck rakes and "go-devils." It rakes from the swath and leaves the hay in large bunches at once, requiring no hand work. One man and two horses will keep up with two mowers, following the mower as soon as the hay is wilted enough to be raked clean with any rake. It rakes cleaner. The hay will cure quicker without bleaching by dew or sun. Very large bunches can be made by pushing from two to six rakesfuls into one.

If raked and hunched by the improved "Acme" Rake, the hay is in very much better shape to reload and deliver on the Stacker evenly and level (loading the rakes all they will carry to the stack), and spreads well over the stack, saving labor in stacking, because it has not been tangled, as it is when gathered with the sulky or revolving rake. Bear in mind that windrowing hay with any rake is labor thrown away, and is detrimental to the neat and most economical working of the "Acme" Hay Harvesting Machinery.

Stallion Ringwood,

The Famous Son of Sidney.

Ringwood is a dark bay; black points; 15 1/2 hands, and resembles Sidney to formation more than any of his sons. He is a pure-blooded trotter, and has shown remarkable speed from a colt. With but little work, he showed trials of speed in 2:19 1/4 as a four-year-old, and would have received a record of 2:18 or better but for an accident at the Napa track, and was drawn from his engagements, and never has been put in race since. Ringwood is six years old, and as a sire of speed, form and color, is equal to his noted sire, Sidney. Several of his colts have been sold at high prices, and have gone East. He is a sure foal-getter and of fine disposition, and a lady can handle or drive him. Ringwood is highly bred on the dam's side. Alma was by Dashaway (two-oughtbred), he by Williamson's Belmont, he by American Boy; second dam Fanny Cob, a noted roadmare brought from Canada to California. Alma is a noted producer of speed.

ALSO FOR SALE

Tippoo Tib,

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

DE. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
Dear Sirs,—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks to that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Cough of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly sweated; I tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filed up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proved, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Crottago Grove, Or.

ITS OBJECT is to prevent disease, to regulate the bowels and urine; it strengthens the kidneys, prevents scouring colic and leg-swell; it loosens the hide, fattens stock, promotes the appetite, cures coughs, destroys worms and bots, and produces a fine, glossy coat. To the stalled horse it has the beneficial effects and results of grazing without the softening effects of a season of grass with loss of time and money. For milk cows it increases and enriches their milk.

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/4 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:08.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darebin). He stands 15.3 hands on steady legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong back, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinzelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darebin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peers (by The Peer, sire of Darebin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, for apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peers produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caractacus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid racehorses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Ryedick's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.) and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtall he traces to Canadiana Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13 1/4, and two others Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the set of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District track, the second best of which was made in 2:31 1/2, the first in 2:52. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:29 1/2, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32 1/2 to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal-getter.

TRIMMED $50. Season to close August 1st. Good pasturage of reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars address

He is a square, level-gaited trotter, and with only five weeks track work a year ago, trotted a trial in 2:28; last half in 1:13. After his first season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "mill circuit" and gaining him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $3 per month. "HOME OF GUY WILKES,"
RACE RECORD (Regulation Track, 4th Heat), 2:15 1-4

GUY WILKES, A few approved mares outside of those already engaged will be received at $750 each for the season.

SABLE WILKES, Three-year-old record, 2:18. Limited to twenty outside mares, 1893.

WIL DIRECT, Black stallion, three years old, 15.2 hands. Very handsome, powerfully built, the best of feet and legs, and a trotter that will make his mark as a sire and a race horse. Sired by Sable Wilkes, who stands at the head of all stallions of his age as a producer and sire of race horses. First dam Fidelia, by Director; second dam by Reavis' Black Bird, sire of Vic H., 2:13 1/2; third dam by Lancet, son of McCracken's Black Hawk, sire of Overman, 2:19 1/2, Ha Ha, 2:22 1/2, Moses S., 2:22 1/2, and others. $100 for the season.

Mares not proving with foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties engaging the services of any of the above horses must send a deposit of 10 per cent. of service money with engagement. Pasturage $6 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain, or both, are fed, the charge will be $12.50 per month. Good care will be taken of all mares sent to the farm, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes.

Mares may be shipped direct to me at Oak Grove Station, San Mateo County. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are paid.

Season commences February 1st and ends August 1, 1893.
Horses pastured and given the best of care at $6 per month.

WILLIAM CORBITT,
San Mateo Stock Farm, San Mateo, Cal.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud, 2:19; Annie W., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/2; Mollie C., 2:37 1/2, and several others making at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr., 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

(For pedigree of Nutwood 600 and Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 see tabulated pedigree above.)
NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having 11 in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I must see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that the times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge abroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

Training

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters. Read what J. C. Shiley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address:

COLE'S OSSIDINE

RESULTS OBTAINED AT THE WELL-KNOWN KALAMAZOO FARM.

Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Kingbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used. Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & CO., Prop'rs. Kalamazoo, Mich.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all sores or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the sceptical unkindly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented. The ONLY preparation in the world that it has become ossidated. It up in one style only. Price, $3.00 per bottle.

RANCHO DEL PASO THOROUGHBREDS.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SEVEN YEARLINGS TO COME UNDER THE HAMMER.

Salvators, Sir Modreds, Darebins and Other Great Sires Represented.

The majority of people are prone to overlook what may be termed the minor points in breeding racehorses. Some of these points rise into proportions which may be classed among the greater, for if neglected, there is nearly as much risk of failure as when the generally recognized essentials are not given attention. It may appear to be nonsensical to claim that the lack of few feeds of oats to a mare when carrying a foal was the cause of one member of a family being beneath the average, but that was the only explanation which was at all reasonable. The mare had been neglected for a few days owing to a change in her attendants, and though the foal was weak when it came he developed into a horse of high form, many critics pronouncing him better-shaped than his brothers in that respect, and in that alone. It must be apparent to every observer that even slight differences tell when racehorses are under scrutiny. The capacity to cover a mile and a few additional yards while another is going the mile makes the crack while the slower is comparatively without honor.

That train of thought was never brought more forcibly to my mind than it has since a late visit to Rancho del Paso. There have been plenty of cogitations before on the subject and the big advantages which that place has for the breeding and rearing of racehorses is seen at a glance and fully commented upon, but now I can see that there is a great deal to ponder over which heretofore has been passed without awakening the interest which is now felt, as a solution of a problem which has troubled me for many years appears to be found. I will not cry Eureka too loudly, as others may not agree with me in one point on which the ciphering is based, though so far as I have heard opinions expressed they are in accordance with mine.

I have oftentimes been reluctant to say, and especially to write, that such a mare's foal is better than those which came before, and that this year's crop of yearlings on a breeding farm is better than prior bands, as it seems more likely to be received as a common claim easy to present and of little weight to listener or reader. A short time ago I looked over the thoroughbred yearlings at Rancho del Paso which will be sent to New York during the coming month. It was the main object of the visit and they were given as close attention as the time would admit. There were within a few of one hundred and fifty and this was a sight which no other thoroughbred stud farm in the world can equal or nearly equal. Brief notes were taken of each and while this matter has been the topic for reflection I have gone over the notes to see what bearing they had on the subject. That data gives me more confidence instating, and I have no hesitation in affirming, that in my opinion, this is the best aggregation which I have ever seen on that farm, and after making every allowance for fallure of memory and bias for favorite strains, adhere to the opinion. The notes, too, have given a cue to a feature which was formerly missed, and which has a bearing among others in substantiating the claim that on a large breeding farm with nearly a score of stallions, and twenty scores of mares, and in such a climate as California, every succeeding crop of yearlings should be of higher class. That is from the same sires and dams, as it is self-evident that a change of seed and soil will bring different crops. So far as the land and climate figures that, of course, is the same as it has been. The management while that is the same, every year has added to the experience of those in charge. There are few people who do not benefit by the teachings of the past, and men who engage in a pursuit with enthusiasm are generally apt scholars, and there are good grounds for the belief that the lessons have been carefully studied at Del Paso and made the best of. A regular grade from kindergarten to school, from school to college, college to university. Teachers and opportunities which can only be met on such a place. For instance; a small breeder with a few mares and depending on outside stallions, or a breeder with mares enough to keep two or three stallions are hampered in making selections, whereas at Rancho del Paso there are a number of tried sires, some of them which have gained very high renown, and these reinforced by a corp of performers which for brilliancy cannot be surpassed, and of breeding that the most hypocritical cannot disparage. Never such opportunities for a mating which is already a guarantee of success, when all the other adjuncts are in keeping. Sentiment is subordinate to judgment. Failure or even a slight falling off in the progeny from what was reasonable to expect from the dam is followed by careful scrutiny of form and close study of the blood lines. If either indicate that another sire will be preferable, the choice is made of the individual which fills the requirements, and no matter if the one chosen is not so fashionable as the one which did not beget progeny which filled the standard, it is more than an even chance that the foal from that union will be superior. It takes nerve to carry out the system which is followed at Del Paso. Darebins, Sir Modreds and the get of the nightly-tried stallions will bring a better price than a better-formed yearling by a sire which has his reputation to make, and if the business were to be closed out, were present money-making the object, the more of the fashionably begot the better. But excellence, real merit is the mark and hence it suits the policy better to sell a good animal cheap than to secure a big price for one which may not prove a good bargain. It does not require further argument to show that in the better chance for selection, when there are so many to select from, is one good reason for superiority of later crops of foals over those which have come before. This is an advantage which only the large breeders possess, though there are others which are more likely to be found on a big breeding farm than one of a comparatively small proportions, and yet within the reach of everyone who has the means to carry out the same system. But as in other kinds of business a large demand can be more economically supplied than when it is limited; and then capital has a great deal to do in insuring favorable results. In horse breeding it gives the power to secure the "best in the market" when stallions and mares are wanted; it permits an outlay, however large, when that expenditure will be beneficial, and this is one of the main reasons for the completeness of all of our largest California breeding farms. Men with ever so many millions, outside of the investment in land, stock and improvements, do not hesitate when additional capital has to be added, and that this has been done with judgment is proved by actual results. Wonderful success in producing the highest class of animals; pecuniary success for it is beyond question that the investments have proved remunerative, especially Mr. Haggin's venture in horse-breeding.

This may appear a singular prelude to a brief description of the colts, and incidentally other matters connected with horse affairs at "The Grant," but as has been stated before, the train of ideas which had their origin in this trip has been somewhat bewildering. Heretofore I have advised people who contemplated breeding horses confining their studs to a restricted number of mares. It is still good advice under usual considerations, viz., when the capital is not very large or when the progeny is to be trained. But when the whole aim is to produce thoroughbreds to sell by auction when the animals are a year old the large establishment has a big pull. So much so that if a person has taken a fancy to own a stable of racehorses, and is not influenced by the laudable sentiment to breed the horses which "carry his colors;" it is better to purchase than to breed and rear. Far better from a mercantile standpoint when such youngsters are offered as those which will come under the Tattersall hammer in New York the first week in June. Doubtless very many of them will go at high figures, and to people who can afford the risk of large investments, even at very large prices, the venture would be justified. But it is as nearly a certainty as certainties can be foretold, that there will be genuine bargains through the list. This prophecy is made with a great deal of confidence. I have already written that the lot is superior to previous crops, and on that high average is based the prediction which is given above. That is not entirely founded on good looks, as there was a grand showing the seasons when Montana, Tournament and other celebrities were sporting in the paddocks on the banks of the American River: In fact the youngsters, the colts particularly, are not in as high flesh as when the tape line showed girths of seventy and seventy-one inches, but the cause of a shrinkage in circumference is due to a change of practice, which I feel sure will prove a change for the better. At first paddocks of the ordinary size were built, and though the colts when weaned were allowed to range over the large fields during the day when the weather was favorable until the winter was well under way, after that their life was in the paddocks. Plenty of room according to the prevailing idea for exercise, and surely enough, when one watched their gambols, it seemed as though there was plenty of it to build up muscle and give play to the lungs. The paddocks, however, were mainly on dead level land; the fields are "rolling," hilly would be the phrase in countries where mountains are not familiar objects. In place of cavorting on a small circle bounded by the paddock fences, a straight run of a mile-and-a-quarter in some of the fields, none of them much less, and up and down grade brought all the organs of locomotion into full play. This glorious exercise evidently had not retarded the growth, as height and length were up to the usual standard, and there was a good enough coating of flesh to suit me; the muscles in full relief, the tendons tense and clearly defined. Furlongs may not be made any faster than the mark left by those who gambled in the paddocks, but when the conventional three furlongs are the aim, I shall be disappointed if there is not many lively feats to record.

It is a backward season for California. Twenty Aprils since I landed in the Sacramento valley, and this is a month behind the average of the twenty. And still there was plenty for an Eastern visitor to become enthusiastic over in the middle of the month on Rancho del Paso. The fields and paddocks at the Arcade, the house place were a thick mass of herbage. At the "Bottom" the mares and foals were grazing in alfalfa which reached their knees. The much-lauded clover plant was not the sole occupant as in places alfilerilla disputed its sway, and in others a goodly sprinkling of wild oats. These native grasses are surely an admirable feed for horses, more nutritious than the alfalfa, though for promoting a liberal flow of milk the Chilean herb stands unrivalled. The wheat growing on "summer fallow" stood thick and high, promising double the yield of that which was "winter sown."

It was handiest to commence with the yearlings in the home stables, where Fox is in charge, and our old friend would have taken it amiss if we had left his exhibition to wind up the day. "Nothing like them at the Bottom," said their enthusiastic chaperon, "or in the whole of California, and that means that they are the pick of the world," continued Mike. I did not fee. like gainsaying him before he commenced the exhibition and still less when they were led out of the stalls into the bright sunlight. A bay colt with white hind feet and a little white on nose and small star, a handsomely-marked and evenly-made fellow just two days over a year old, his looks marked him for a coming racehorse, and when the sire and dam was given Tremont—Salvator's dam, Salina, I expected this was the champion which Fox had selected. "Devil a bit," was his response, "good enough, but I will show you a better."

"This must surely be he then," I replied, as a big, strapping chestnut with enough white in his face to give expression, and a form described in my notes as a "magnificent colt all over, short hack, long below, plenty of muscle and several crosses appended, which, interpreted, means that he is to be kept in mind as likely to make a stir in the world. These marks were made before the breeding was known, and when informed that he was a brother to St. Carl, being by imp. St. Blaise from Carina, I thought surely the leader of the gallops in the fields was before me. "Not he," says Mike, but it was easy to see from the flash in his eye that he was one of his favorites.

When such extra-bred and good-looking colts were rated second, some faith was lost in Fox's judgment, although that was well founded on the hundreds of trial runs he had witnessed. But then, again, when a favorite is beaten there is always some excuse, and in the field trials the start is not always exactly level, and one may take a shorter cut than his opponent.

A chestnut colt with blaze face and all of his legs white, that extending well up to knees and hocks, had such a striking air and recalled the great racehorse so forcibly that his parentage on the paternal side was seen at a glance—Salvator surely. He was not so large as I expected a Salvator to be, but he lacked a month yet of being a year old, and with that explanation he was high enough. A beautiful head, nicely set on, plenty of quality, short hack but "covering a deal of ground," high over the loin, the "trotting pitch," as some have dubbed a greater height over the loin than withers, but quite as frequently seen among racehorses as those with a mixture

Soms Pertinent Facts.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I saw a few days ago an article that was written by an old acquaintance in which it was charged that Dr. Warfield improperly bred Alice Carneal. I am of the opinion that the gentleman could have had no personal acquaintance with Dr. Warfield or his system of breeding, or he would not have singled him out as an example of bad judgment, because Dr. Warfield was in the habit of breeding to pretty much all the best horses, although he generally had a stallion or two of his own.

Now it is true that the Doctor bred to Margrave, Sarpedon, Glencoe, Boston, Wagner, Hedgeford, and, in fact, nearly every good horse that was in Kentucky in his day except Medoc. The reason given for not breeding to Medoc was on account of an unfriendliness between Dr. Warfield and one of Medoc's owners. The fact is that Dr. Warfield was a very intelligent gentleman and was not a bigot, and bred his mares with about as much judgment as any of the breeders of his day.

As a proof of this, Alice Carneal was first bred to imp. Trustee, and produced Miss Trustee. She next produced Fance and Grey Alice, by Chorister. Her next foal was Maid of Orleans, by Berthune, a very good race mare, probably as good as her mother, for Alice Carneal never was very celebrated as a race mare. Then she produced Lexington, by Boston, and it was Lexington and Boston that gave Alice Carneal her celebrity, for she was not a great race mare herself, and was inclined to be on the nervous, delicate order, but Boston, being a horse of more stamina than any horse I ever saw, crossed well with Alice Carneal, and Lexington was a wonder. Of course it was unfortunate that the mare was not bred more to Boston, but he was in Kentucky but a few years and died soon after the birth of Lexington, and that ended all chance of breeding any more Lexingtons.

Alice Carneal was next bred to Buford, a son of imp. Nonplus, and the produce was Waxy, a very good race horse. Afterwards, in addition to being bred to Berthune, she was bred to Wagner, producing Lavender, a very good racer and a good broodmare. She was then bred to Le Compte, and the colt was Umpire, a colt highly thought of by Mr. Ten Broeck and taken to England. She then was bred to imp. Scythian and the result was Annett, also taken to England.

This shows that Alice Carneal was bred to eight different stallions, seven besides Berthune and Bertune can hardly be termed "a r-tten horse" as the gentleman terms him. He was evidently a better race horse than Alice Carneal and was fairly well bred, being by Sidi Hamet, out of Snette, by Aratus. Now Aratus was by Director (brother to Virginian), out of Betsy Hazall, by imp. Sir Harry, second dam Timoleon's dam by imp. Saltram, etc. Sidi Hamet was by Virginian, dam Lady Barton, by Sir Archy.

While referring to Virginian I am reminded that some time ago some one made the statement that Virginian was not thoroughbred and gave the pedigree of some cross road horse to prove it. Virginian was bred by Capt. James J. Harrison, and was got by Sir Archy, first dam Meretrix, by Magog; second dam Narcissa, by imp. Shark; third dam Rosetta, by imp. Centinel; fourth dam Diana, by Clodius, etc.

Magog was got by Chanticleer, the best son of Symmes' Wildair and one of the best horses of his day, ad Prestley, the full sister of Magog was the dam of Wilkes' Madison and Cornelia, the latter the dam of Gracchus, showing that Magog was not only a race horse himself, but that the family were the producers of race horses. Symmes' Wildair, the sire of Chanticleer was by imp. Fearnought, out of a Jolly Roger mare and his best son.

Imp. Fearnought was the most distinguished horse of all the early importations and left the most decided mark on the American race horse of any prior to the days of Diomed and Sir Archy. He was imported by Colonel John Baylor, of Virginia.

Virginian, probably the best race horse of his day never lost but one race, and that was caused by the accidental falling of his rider during the race. He ran along with the field of but was distanced for want of weight. All of his other races he won at his ease; no horse that he ever met could make him extend himself. His habit was to take the track and let the other follow. Besides being the great race horse in the country he was the finest one, being a big, strong horse over sixteen hands high, with plenty of substance, and notwithstanding his size and immense stamina, he was a horse of remarkable beauty, and was considered to be the handsomest horse in the State of Virginia. He died young, but was very successful in the stud, while living gettings such horses as Star, Betsy Ransom, Polly Hopkins and many others of the best race nags of their days. A few years ago, after going into the stud, he was purchased by Col. Johnson, as the best horse in the country, with the intention of mating him with Reality, but he had on attack of the colic during the winter after he was bought and died, which was always regarded as a great misfortune, because if Reality could produce such mares as Slender and Bonnets O' Blue, by Sir Charles, she ought to produce wonders by Virginian, for Virginian was a far better horse than Sir Charles.

W. M. WILLIAMSON.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SANTA ROSA, April 24.—It looks like old race-horse times at the track these fine mornings. A lot of fine trotters are being shaped up there this spring, and Santa Rosa will show up in the fall campaign with one of her old-fashioned big representations of race horses. There have been some game races trotted over Pierce Bros.' track and a number of the great horses have made records there in times gone by. But it must not be supposed that the track has seen its best days, for it has not. There will be more heard of within the next four years than ever before; this is our prediction, and time will prove it correct. The days of wild and woolly racing may be over, but there will be more good horse-flesh and fast time produced there than some people have any idea about.

Charlie Rulc, the Guerneville horseman, was in town a few days ago. Nobody will go further to see a good horse race than he, and nobody can come closer to making a good guess on a winner. He has managed some very clever races in this country.

The road question, which agitated the horsemen here some time ago, has been almost completely lost sight of here recently. The agitation over the proposition to bond the city for new water works has absorbed the attention of the horsemen, as well as everybody else. They are interested in good water, and are taking a strong hold in the fight.

Some of our trotting horsemen have shown a very decided tendency to get into other lines of horse business lately. One of them has acquired ownership of some very fine Normans, which he is using to good advantage on his farm. And some of them are in the chicken business, to a large extent. After all, they say, a good hen is pretty speedy property and very profitable.

Mr. J. W. Purrington was in town Saturday. In response to a question in regard to his horses Mr. Purrington said he had nothing to say just now; but a fellow standing near whispered that the gentleman was lying low, but that he had a surprise in store for some of the horsemen, which would be sprung some day with good effect. Mr. Purrington has some of the best trotting and draft stock in the State.

Councilman George A. Tupper is the luckiest man in the breeders' list. His splendid broodmare Santa Rosa, sired by Anteo, and out of a fine mare, has just dropped a fine Silas Skinner filly. Santa Rosa has had three foals, and all are fillies. The first is by Ned Locke, and is one of the band-somest youngsters in the county, and bow fast she can trot. When the Councilman gets up behind her and starts down the liae he goes so fast that his hair stands up like the hair on the back of a cat in fighting trim. Councilman Tupper is the hornet that is stirring up the water-worries fight in an interesting way, and between that and his horses he finds his time pretty well taken up.

Rufus Mnrphy, proprietor of the Hotel Curtis of Ukiah, was a well-known visitor here during the week. He has recently sold his mare Mand, dam of Maudee, 2:24, to J. H. Hellman, his former trainer, and rumor has it that he is soon to sell more of his trotting stock. He likes the hotel business, and will henceforth eschew horse racing.

A number of good mares have been brought to Rose Dale Farm, home of Daly, 2:15, recently. One came from Suisun. She is the dam of Frank B., 2:30 at three years old. Another from Lodi will be stunted to the Rose Dale premier.

Belden & Hebr, the horsemen who are always looking out for snaps for the boys, will have a "bike" sully here in a few days. They have a very pretty black filly Al Locke is breaking for them. Al says she is very fast.

Superintendent Bonner has eleven baby trotters under his eye now. They are little Bay Roses and Stambons, and are as frisky as can be. The colt crop at the fair grounds promises to be a big one this year.

The boys are talking a good deal about the speed of an Albert W. three-year-old which was driven for the first time here one day last week. They say she can trot like the wind already. What she will do later on can hardly be guessed, but she has only to keep up the lick to break the record.

Mr. Noonan, of the firm of Noonan & Towey, has some very attractive Redwood colts of which he is very proud. The dam is a Belmont mare, and one of the largest and best put-up matrons in the township.

A number of Lake county horses are coming down to be trained at Pierce Bros. track soon. About June 1st Mr. Pender will pull out for Oregon and Washington. Dr. Long will start out in June or July, but others are coming in all of the time, so that the number will remain about the same all through the season.

Somers B. Fulton and Fred H. Hood have bought out Walter Bryington in the livery business, and are already in possession. They have a ten-year lease on the building and propose to stay with the business. Mr. Fulton is one of the most popular men in the county, as was shown by the splendid race he made for County Clerk last fall. In a county that went 600 against his national ticket, he was only beaten by about 70 votes. Mr. Hood has a host of friends. His brother, Lon Hood, a very excellent horseman, will have charge of the horses in the stable, while Fred will continue his law studies. The new firm is a strong one.

W. H. Underhill, of the firm of Underhill & McFayden, of San Francisco, and formerly of this place, called upon old friends here during the week. He used to own some choice runners, but has gone out of the racehorse business and now turns his attention exclusively to livery business.

A Santa Rosa druggist has discovered the elixir of horse life, he thinks. A few days ago a gentleman who owns an old faithful horse that was so feeble that he made up his mind he should have to kill it called upon him for a dose to help the old servant to shuffle off the mortal coil. He could not bear to shoot his old friend. The druggist gave him a dose, and he administered it to the old horse that night. Next morning he went out expecting to see his old servant cold in the embrace of death. But he was not. On the contrary he was snorting and galloping around the yard like a two-year-old, his head up and his tail higher than the United States flag at Honolulu. He could not be caught by his owner, and half the men in that part of town could not catch him. At last accounts the old "boss" was as gay as ever.

The E. T. Allens, of San Francisco, and the Santa Rosas had a match game of baseball here Sunday, which was won by Santa Rosa by a score of 8 to 3.

San Diego Scraps of News.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SAN DIEGO, April 17.—About thirty local horsemen met here Saturday and organized a county horse breeders' association. A Board of Directors was chosen as follows: George S. Davis, W. B. Prentice, E. B. Gifford, T. L. Nichols, William Darby, H. S. Richards, E. F. Burgess, Ben Hill, H. M. Squires and Wilson Chamberlaine. George S. Davis was elected President, W. B. Prentice, first Vice-President, and E. B. Gifford, second Vice-President. The Directors will formulate By-Laws at another meeting to be held next Saturday. The President, George S. Davis, is owner of Claireview Stock Farm, near Detroit, and of Antevolo, Harrowgate, Wheeling Wilkes and others.

The object of the association is generally to increase the interest in light harness horses, to establish and maintain a pedigree register of local horses and particularly to guarantee futurity purses for county-bred colts and fillies. Two stakes of this kind are already arranged for, one to be trotted this year and the other next year.

W. B. Prentice, the real promoter of this organization, owns a handsome stock farm in Spring Valley, and has an exceedingly promising lot of colts coming on.

Daughters of old Shiloh and his son, Reveille, are now being bred to Atto Rex, Athens, Artist (all sons of Attorney, by Harold) and to Thomas Rysdyk, son of Rysdyk, sire of Clingstone, Acquaintance, by Stranger, and the result is a speedy lot of colts at the trot. The easy manner in which Shiloh mares breed trotters adds to the conviction here that the stud book is wrong and old man Williamson is right, that Shiloh is by California Belmont, and not by Cosmo.

Flaxtail's Pedigree.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Those horsemen of California and elsewhere who are interested in the blood-lines of that good horse Flaxtail 5132, should be grateful to you for the great interest you have taken, and the liberal space devoted in the columns of your valuable paper, to the straightening out of his pedigree. The showing made in your paper of last Saturday appears conclusive enough to warrant the Register Association to wipe out the present registration of Flaxtail, for that, beyond any doubt whatever, is not correct; and then, instead thereof, to register him in accordance with the (testimony when presented to the Association), which you have shown to the public through your columns. The following is a copy of another certificate written and signed by L. B. Hicks, son of Dr. M. W. Hicks, which bears strongly upon the subject:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—I have often heard my father say that he was sorry the story that Flaxtail 5132 was sired by Pruden's Blue Bull was ever printed. This story was first circulated the year that Wilson's Blue Bull got twelve in the 2:30 list. I know that father (M. W. Hicks) claimed that Bull Pup was the sire of Flaxtail, but he had been registered as "said to be by Pruden's Blue Bull," and for some unaccountable reason he never had the registration changed as it should have been. Mr. Sam Gamble is right when he says the Blue Bulls and Flaxtails were totally unlike. Most of the Blue Bulls that I have seen were small horses with small ears, short heads, short necks and very short conformation. They were a good deal on the pony order. Now the Flaxtails were nearly all good of size and some of them very large, and most of them had very long heads, looz, coarse ears, long necks, and very long backs, and in fact in conformation, disposition and everything else were as unlike the Blue Bulls as they could be.

San Francisco, Witness: E. I. ROBINSON.

It seems to me that if the breeders of California who are interested in having Flaxtail properly registered, would, by some concerted action, cause the evidence that can be produced upon the subject to be properly presented to the Register Association, there would be little trouble in accomplishing the desired object. Although I have no pecuniary interest in the subject, having no animals of that line of breeding, I am ready and willing to give any information and assistance in my power whenever the same may be desired to aid in the proper registration of the horse.

San Francisco, April 26, 1893. E. I. ROBINSON.

The Capital Turf Club.

That fine and popular drive, the Riverside road, which skirts the Sacramento river for a distance of five miles, is to be given to the care and charge of the Capital Turf Club.

The road is controlled by a corporation of which only two of the original incorporators are left. B. R. Crocker owns most of the strip. On account of Mr. Crocker's bad health, which prevents him from attending to his business as formerly, he is very anxious to turn the road over to the Capital Turf Club. The franchise of the corporation will not expire for four years.

At a meeting of the club last evening Daniel Flint made known Mr. Crocker's wishes, and said that the latter would favor any proposition, in order that the road might be taken off his hands. Mr. Crocker would donate the road's sprinkling outfit, consisting of four horses, sprinkling carts, pumps, tanks, etc. Mr. Flint estimated that it would cost about $150 per month to keep the road in condition.

President Wilson said the Supervisors would appropriate $50 per month, and that the remaining $100 would be contributed by the proprietors of livery stables and owners of roadsters. The drive can be made a county road, free to all.

President Wilson, W. O. Bowers and Daniel Flint were appointed a committee to confer with Mr. Crocker and the Supervisors as to the best method of settling the matter.

The club next directed its attention to opening the entries for the Spring races. There were only entries sufficient to fill three races, and it was decided to declare off the unfilled purses.

Owing to the fact that during May the Blood-Horse Association, the Pacific Coast Jockey Club and the Trotting-Horse Breeders would hold meetings, the club decided to postpone its races until June 6th, when it is expected that all the races will be filled.—Bee.

BLOOD HORSE MEETING.

THIRTEENTH DAY—FRIDAY, APRIL 21.

HERE were six races on to-day's card, and in three of them long shots got home first—Seaside, Garcia and Wyanashott. Bordeaux, ex-Senator Rose's good-looking black colt by imp. Mariner, left the "maiden" ranks today by galloping in an easy winner by three lengths in the opening race, one of half a mile. He was made a hot favorite on account of fast trials reported—halves in 49 seconds, etc. Charmion ran rings around The Drummer (a rank counterfeiter), Steadfast and Atossa, winning with her aristocratic mouth wide open in a "bleedin' cantah." Seaside, at 6 to 1, won easily by five lengths, doing her five furlongs in 1:02. She is a sister to the mighty Martinet, and bids fair to be as good as her illustrious brother, whom she greatly resembles. W. Clancy was reinstated to-day and rode Claire in the Seaside race. The Brutus-Beauty colt, favorite, was a mighty poor third, Ovation securing the place.

Tom Bally, trainer of Charger and others, was ordered by the judges to take his horses off the track for some reason not made public, but it is said he is charged with having in his possession horses that can read the odds on the book-makers' boards, and consequently the officials desire to see the animals placed where their faculties can be given full play—in a museum.

Garcia, a greatly improved horse, and being, with but 97 pounds up, given nineteen pounds by El Rayo and seventeen by Almont, made a runaway race of the mile and an eighth handicap, winning by half a length from the whipped-out El Rayo in 1:55½—a mighty fast race at this time of year. Wyanashott, at 20 to 1 at the opening, and well-riden by little Charley Weber, won a fast race by a head from Motto, she as far from Joe Cotton, and he a neck only from Lodi. Motto ran wide at the last turn, carrying Cotton to the extreme outside with her, and the pair ran locked, heads apart, all the way down the homestretch. Wyanashott slipped in against the rails, gaining three or four lengths turning into the straight, and to this can be attributed the victory of Billy Appleby's colt. Another head-and-head wind-up was seen in the last race, the favorite, Carmel, getting home a head in front of Polaski (son of Captain A.), who appeared from the press stand to be a nose from Happy Band. However, the judges declared the last-named pair had run a dead heat for the place.

Bordeaux was a well-placed favorite in the opening race, half a mile, at 8 to 5, the Joe Daniels-Electricity colt being next in favor at 4 to 1. The favorite, ridden by Jonny Weber, was second to Mutineer at the start, but went to the front in a few strides, led that colt two lengths into the homestretch, and won easily by three lengths from the Electricity colt, who passed Mutineer at the drawgate. Cherokee was third, two lengths behind the Macdonough youngster, E. Scratch (formerly Hidalgo-Helen Scratch filly) fourth, Queen of Scots fifth, Mutineer sixth and Corneob last. Time, 0:50. Charmion was a 3 to 10 shot in the second race, seven furlongs, but The Drummer, at 3 to 1, was played by a number of well-posted persons. The Drummer led imp. Atossa a head passing the quarter-pole, and the positions were reversed passing the half. Charmion was all but choked, so badly did she want to go to the front. Three-eighths of a mile from home Charmion was given her head, and passed the leaders as if they were tied up, winning in the easiest possible manner by a length and a half. Steadfast came through against the rails at the drawgate, and was as far from The Drummer, Atossa last. Time, 1:30. Dan Miller thus easily won his big wager that Charmion would capture her first race of the season.

The "talent" were at sea in the third race, five furlongs, but finally made the Beauty colt a warm favorite at 9 to 5. Ovation, Claire and Gussie had lots of admirers with money in their clothes. Seaside, at 6 to 1, and Fortuna, at 15 to 1, were only nibbled at. Ovation, with Gussie at her neck and the favorite about a length away, led into the homestretch. An eighth from the finish Hinky gave Seaside her head, and a sixteenth from home she had everything beaten. The sister to Martinet came on and won a fast race by five lengths, Hinky sitting down and riding her out to the end. Ovation was second, two lengths from the Beauty colt. Gussie was fourth, over a length behind the favorite, Claire fifth and Fortuna last. Time, 1:02.

The mile and an eighth handicap followed, and El Rayo had shown such grand form that his chances, with 119 pounds up, were considered of the very best, and he was a favorite at 7 to 10 at the close. Garcia, well-played, too, was at 4 to 1, and had but 97 pounds up and little Weber as a pilot. Almont, with 117 pounds in the saddle, was a 5 to 1 shot, and considerable coin went in on his chances. Almont, El Rayo, Raindrop, Garcia, St. Patrick, Little Tough was the order at the fall of the flag. Garcia ran rapidly to the front, and led St. Patrick a neck at the stand, with Little Tough third, Raindrop fourth, Almont fifth and the favorite absolutely last. At the quarter-pole Garcia's lead was four lengths, and Almont was the contending horse, with Little Tough third, lapped by El Rayo. At the half Garcia's lead was three lengths, Almont second, a head from El Rayo. Still further was Garcia's advantage reduced as they turned into the homestretch, he now being but two lengths to the good and El Rayo coming, a neck from Almont. An eighth from home the crowd was hailing El Rayo as a sure winner, but little Weber was but nursing Garcia, and he opened up on the handsome son of Grinstead when called on. One hundred yards from the wire it was apparent that, although El Rayo was gaining, he could not get up, and in an exciting finish Garcia won by half a length, El Rayo second, all out and under whip, three lengths from Almont, Raindrop fourth, St. Patrick fifth, Little Tough last. Time, 1:55½. From wire to wire the mile was run in 1:42½.

Motto and Joe Cotton, hacked for heavy sumps, went to the post at even money, in the fourth race, five and one-half furlongs. Wyanashott had also been plunged on, opening at 20 to 1 and closing at 8. Motto, third away, led passing the half-pole by over a length, Lodi second, Regal third and Cotton next. The latter ran up rapidly around the far turn and past the three-quarters, getting within a neck of Motto, who carried Cotton very wide into the homestretch, where the pair ran beads apart under whip all the way. Wyanashott, fourth into the homestretch, slipped in close to the pole and gained several lengths on the favorite, and beautifully ridden by C. Weber, won by a head from Motto, who in turn was a head from Joe Cotton, ridden by Miller. Only a neck behind Cotton was Lodi, making this the closest finish of the entire meeting thus far, only a half a length separating first and fourth horses. Time, 1:08—though Pietro Brandow, official timer, had it up 1:04 for about a minute—by mistake. Thomas H. Williams secured Wyanashott at $1,300, or $700 over his entered selling price. The race was timed privately by a number better than 1:07.

Silver Plate was a hot tip and a favorite at the opening, but persistent plugging on Carmel raised the odds on Silver Plate from 7 to 5 to 3 to 1 and lowered Carmel into favoritism at 5 to 2. Silver Plate and Jovita was the order until half-way down the homestretch, when Carmel, Polaski and Happy Band moved up and passed the tiring pair. So close was the finish that it was difficult to separate them. Carmel and Polaski came with rare bursts at the wire, Carmel getting the verdict by a short head, dead heat for second place between Polaski and Happy Band. Time, 0:51½.

FOURTEENTH DAY—SATURDAY, APRIL 22.

This day's racing was by odds the most attractive of the meeting, bringing out some of the best two and three-year-olds, and old horses in the far West. The attendance was about 4,000—good in the threatening weather and with racing over a track at least three seconds slow to the mile. At the close of the day's sport it was the opinion of a vast majority of those in attendance that Cadmus and Martinet were two very likely American Derby candidates, and that Wildwood (defeated by Martinet and Topgallant) ran a good race for the first time out this season, high in flesh as he is present, and conceding the winner ten pounds at weight for age and Topgallant (a much underrated horse) nineteen pounds. Martinet won by nearly a length, Topgallant a length and a half in front of the famous Wildwood. Three lengths is generally considered a seven-pound beating, so that it can be readily seen that Wildwood was given a good six-pound defeat. The weights, therefore, for a close fight, should the trio meet again, should be about 125 on Wildwood, 107 on Martinet and 108 on Topgallant. Articus, George Van Gordon's Argyle colt, showed himself to be a rare good one by beating Rosalie (conqueror of the speedy Ariola colt) and the lightly-weighted Wildidle gelding, The Lark, easily.

Undine Stable horses won no less than three out of the six events, but the second race, in the opinion of many, should have gone to C. E. Trevathan's Castro, who was felled in the homestretch and carried wide besides. St. Croix, even at that, only won by a nose from the little bay horse. Cadmus, who won the "tidy" Tidal Stakes to-day, stuck to Hermitage like a leech until nearing the last turn, where Miller was forced to ride a little. An eighth from home Hermitage, a neck behind Cadmus, was under whip and clearly beaten, for Miller was sitting still and not urging his colt to an extent worth mentioning.

Tigress won the fifth race at the very start. It was a terrible send-off. Solitude, the sulky Darebin filly, eighth and last away, made a truly remarkable run, finishing third, but really running a faster race than the winner.

Alfred B. and Orin had the last race to themselves at the finish, Jack the Ripper, however, leading up to the last eighth of a mile. Alfred B. won by a meager eyelash, the horses coming on the uneven stride.

C. Weber rode two winners to-day, Miller two, J. Weber and J. Narvaez one each.

Articus was at all times a favorite in the first race, six furlongs, going to the post at 3 to 5. Rosalie at 2 to 1 and The Lark at 4 to 1 had their adherents. The Lark led Articus about an eighth of a mile, when the favorite went to the fore, winning easily by four lengths from Rosalie, who was two from The Lark, a badly-riden bird. Time, 1:19.

Quarterstaff was pounded down until he went to the post a favorite at 9 to 5. St. Croix went from 2 to 1 to 5 to 1 at the close, on account of never having run over a mile. Castro was plunged on, forcing the odds on him down to 3 to 1. Sheridan and Nellie G. were nibbled at. St. Croix, quarterstaff, Castro was the order for about a quarter of a mile, then Castro took the place and ran up close to St. Croix. Nip and tuck they ran all the way down the straight, and less than an eighth from home St. Croix fouled Castro, not, however, doing him any great damage. St. Croix finally won by a neck on the outside of the track, Castro second, six lengths from Quarterstaff, who, eased up, was but a head before old Sheridan at the finish. Time, 1:50. A loud cry of "foul" went up, but the judges did not appear to notice it, and let the result of their deliberations be that St. Croix was entitled to first money.

The special handicap, one mile, came next, and the best field of horses of the entire meeting came together. For a time the lightly-weighted Martinet was a slight favorite over Wildwood, but the money that poured in on the big brown son of Wildidle soon made a change in the odds, and Wildwood went to the post a 4 to 5 favorite, Martinet being as good as 3 to 1 at the close. Red Prince was fancied not a little in such heavy going, and Lottie Mills had many admirers. Topgallant had the false odds of 20 to 1 against him. The big celebrity, Wildwood, was feeling elegantly, cavorting and fighting for his head at the post in great style. He looked too high in flesh to run a bruising race, though, and he did not belie his appearance. Topgallant led from flag-fall to the homestretch. Martinet said good-bye to Wildwood coming around the turn into the homestretch, and full of running, soon had Topgallant in distress, winning with a speed reef or two in his sails by a scant length, Topgallant second, a length and a half from the beaten, but not disgraced, turf mouchard, Wildwood, who was giving ten pounds to Martinet and nineteen to Topgallant. The time hung up was 1:43, which, if correct, would indicate that Martinet on a good track can run a mile with 100 pounds up in 1:40 or better. It must have been pleasing to Col. Thornton to see sons of Mariner run one-two in such an event as this.

The Tidal Stakes, a race at one and a quarter miles, for three-year-olds, was fourth on the programme, and Cadmus had scared everything out except Hermitage, Conde and Alliance. Cadmus was at 3 to 10, Hermitage at 2 to 1, Alliance at 15 and Conde at 40 to 1. Conde led at the start and passing the stand, with Hermitage half a length away, Cadmus lapped on him and Alliance last. Hermitage went away from Conde on the first turn, and Cadmus moved up, and was at his neck. Hermitage's lead of Cadmus was a head at the half pole, Conde third, twenty lengths away. There was no change to the three-quarter mark, where Miller was riding Cadmus some. As they turned into the straight the onlookers shouted that the favorite couldn't get up, but they were mistaken. An eighth of a mile from the wire Cadmus a truly good colt in any man's country. Alliance finished third, fully twenty-five lengths behind.

The winner of the Tidal Stakes is a strongly-built dark bay colt by Flood, dam imp. Cornelia, by Isonomy, and was foaled Feb. 6, 1890, at Palo Alto Stock Farm. He started twice as a two-year-old last season, sulked once and lost, and the next time proved an easy winner, running kindly. He has shown himself the best three-year-old colt in training at Bay District track with weight up, and that he can go to the Derby route there is no denying. At the present meeting he took up 122 pounds and centered in winner of a seven-furlong dash in 1:29½. The Tidal Stakes, worth about $1,100 to the winner this season, was run first in 1888, and below will be found an interesting table of winners we have compiled. It will be observed that Senator Stanford bred Flambeau, Rinfax and Cadmus, while on Theodore Winters' ranch the winners, Surinam and The Gaz, first saw the light. Elmwood, the winner of 1892, was bred by William Boots, of Elmwood Farm, Milpitas.

Tigress, a hot favorite, with but 89 pounds up, and a terrible start, led all the way, and won easily by three lengths from Jackson, who was five from Solitude, absolutely last to get away.

Jack the Ripper and Addie Chipman were equal favorites in the last race, five and a half furlongs. The Ripper led Chipman to the homestretch, where Alfred B. and Orrin came out of the bunch and had the battle to themselves.

FIFTEENTH DAY—TUESDAY, APRIL 25.

There were six races to-day, and while there was nothing of the sensational about the events themselves, there was plenty of excitement for the 3,000 that attended. Frank Northey, the notorious jury-bribing ex-convict, who was backing a book at the track, skipped out with the entire bank-roll after Revolver had won the fourth race—in race course parlance, "welched." Jim Neal, the well-known politician, was on the block for the firm, and reported the matter to the officials. Just why Northey left so unceremoniously is not apparent, in view of the fact that $500 had just been paid for the privilege of making a book for the entire week, and the book, Neil said, was $500 winner on the day. The amount outstanding and due on bets was about $400, and Neil collected $150 due the firm on markers, leaving the association to make good only $250. It teaches the local organization a good lesson. Such a man as Northey is known to be should never have been allowed to do business in any capacity on any decent race track, and the Blood Horse officials will doubtless be more careful in future regarding the characters of the layers of odds.

Little Sullivan rode two winners to-day, J. Narvaez two, Miller and W. Clancy one each. Sir Reel at last was successful—the first time since his initial appearance on the turf, since which time he has run over thirty races. The Brutus-Beauty colt left the ranks of "maidens" by beating Montalvo in the only driving finish of the day, though he cannot now be said to be anything phenomenal, as the five-eighths were run in 1:03 on a fast track. The official timers were sadly off in their work to-day—at least in the Revolver race—for a number of capable watch-stoppers made the time for the mile and fifty yards 1:46, instead of 1:44.

The great filly Charmion, winner of the third race to-day, got a very bad bruise on one of her feet going around the turn after passing the spot where the wire should be, and pulled up dead lame. In fact, at first her attendants thought her broken down for all time in one of her forelegs, but it turned out that she was only bruised, as mentioned above, and we shall soon have the pleasure of seeing the pretty daughter of Tyrant and Unit going to the post again. Miller dismounted when he saw how lame the filly was, and Charmion was at once led, limping painfully, to the stable, at the southern extremity of the track.

Gladiator, at 2 to 1, was favorite in the first race, thirteen-sixteenths of a mile, though Regal, Sir Reel and Initiation were well supported, and Alfred B. not overlooked. Initiation, first away, led Mount Carlos clear into the homestretch, where Sir Reel, who had gradually improved his position, came through and won almost in a walk by three lengths from Gladiator (who was fifth into the homestretch), Initiation third, two lengths behind him. Mount Carlos dropped back at a startling rate, and finished absolutely last. Time, 1:22.

Montalvo was a torrid first choice in the second race, five furlongs, for two-year-olds, and the new-comer, Fatality, was plucked on for a good thing, too. Montalvo led Semele passing the half-pole by a length, with the Beauty colt third, close up. Coming into the homestretch, Montalvo was but a neck in front of the son of Brutus, and in a hot struggle down the homestretch the Beauty colt showed more stamina, and won in the last two strides by a short head, Montalvo second, two and a half lengths from Semele, third, the "good thing," Fatality, last. Time, 1:03.

Charmion was a foregone in the seven-furlong dash, third on the programme, 1 to 12 being about the average odds. Charmer was most fancied for place, going at 4 to 5, Conde at 8 to 5, Steadfast at 2 to 1 and Gracie S. at 3 to 1. Conde led Charmion a neck passing the quarter-pole, then the favorite sailed to the front, leading Conde a head past the half-mile mark, a length at the three-quarters and into the homestretch, and won easily by a length in 1:30. Charmer passed Conde an eighth from home and beat him five lengths for the place.

Revolver, with but 112 pounds up to Almont's 121, was considered to have the best chance in the fourth event, one mile and fifty yards, but Wyanashott was "held out" for some time by the bookmakers. Revolver was backed down from 7 to 5 to even money, Wyanashott going to the post at 2 to 1, Wicklow at 4 and Almont at 5 to 1. Revolver went to the front without delay, leading Wyanashott a length at the quarter-pole, Almont head-and-head with Billy Appleby's colt. Revolver made the daylight space half a length wider going to the half-mile mark. Between the half and three-quarters Wyanashott fell back alarmingly fast, Almont taking second place. Revolver led Almont into the homestretch two lengths, the latter one length from Wicklow, Wyanashott last but gaining some now. Revolver was first at the finish by one and one-half lengths, Almont second, two lengths from Wyanashott, who was eight lengths before Wicklow. Official time, 1:44, but timed privately by a number in 1:46.

Sympathetic's Last and Motto opened favorites at 2 to 1 each in the fifth race, six furlongs, Joe Cotton being much fancied at 3 to 1. Sympathetic's Last had the largest number of moneyed friends, and went to the post favorite at even money, Motto staying at 2 to 1, Cotton receding to 4 to 1. Bessie W. was at 6 to 1, Inkerman at S. Motto, fourth away, soon forged to the fore, leading Joe Cotton two lengths at the half-mile mark, Sympathetic's Last third under a strong pull. Motto led Cotton but a length coming into the homestretch, the latter half a length only from Sympathetic's Last. Once straightened out Sympathetic's Last said good-by, winning rather easily from the ridden-out Motto by a length in 1:44. Bessie W. came with a fine burst of speed in the final sixteenth and beat the usually game finisher, Joe Cotton, for third place by a nose.

Quarterstaff opened favorite in the last race, six furlongs, but loads of coin going in on Crawford, made the Antrim Stable gelding a favorite at the close at 6 to 5, Quarterstaff receding from 8 to 5 to 3 to 1. The Drummer had a strong following. Bronco had for a rider an elongated gentleman named Rose, who was about as corpulent as the proverbial parlor match, and great interest was felt in the Sycamore of the Sierra Nevadas. Quarterstaff, first to show led Jackson and Crawford any where from a length to two lengths into the homestretch, and won with Sullivan sitting perfectly still by a length in 1:15 flat. Jackson came away from Crawford in the last sixteenth after a short tussle, and secured the place by two lengths, Crawford third and Bronco a fair fourth.

Napa Race Track.

Although the Napa Fair Association has not claimed their date for this year's fair, the Directors are this early making preparations for the fall show. At the race track the lessee, Chas. Scott, is improving and beautifying the grounds. His house has received a fresh coat of paint and the newly erected fence surrounding the cottage gives the place an exceedingly neat and inviting appearance.

In the way of improvements Mr. Scott has placed load after load of gravel in front of the south side stalls and at the same time provided for their drainage. Some of the ground has been planted to corn and the raising of alfalfa will soon be an industry at Napa's Agricultural Park.

Clarence Hill, the popular young trainer, has a string of eight horses working out, headed by E. P. Heald's Dexter Prince, Jr., three-year-old, sired by Dexter Prince, dam Emma, by Nutwood.

Myrtle Thorne, owned by Mr. Crahh, is a magnificent black filly and a great favorite with her trainer. She was sired by Grandissimo, dam Belle Thorne, by Whippleton, and has a record as a two-year-old of 2:35.

B. L. Tallman has a black two-year-old filly of great promise (under Mr. Hill) sired by Grandissimo, dam Eva, by Whippleton.

Grandora is another two-year-old bay filly in this string. Sired by Grandissimo, dam Flora, a full sister to Burton (2:23), by Naubuc. She is the property of Mr. Sterling of San Jose.

Fred Loeber has Alco, a bay yearling sired by Alconeer, dam Jessie, by Whippleton, second dam by Bulger. Her trainer says she is the coming two-year-old pacer of the track.

Messrs. Fred Loeber and H. W. Crahh have a bay filly, two-year-old, sired by Grandissimo, dam Flora B., 2:27, by Whippleton.

One of the other horses in this string is the black gelding Altissimo, three-year-old, sired by Grandissimo, dam by Arthurthur. The gelding shows great speed like the balance of the Grandissimo colts.

Among Hans Frelson's string of three horses are Allen Wilkes, sired by Mambrino Wilkes, dam by Ethan Allen Jr., a magnificent horse. A record may be expected from him this fall.

Mr. Chas. Winship has in this string a splendid bay gelding sired by Silas Skinner, and Dr. S. R. Rhodes has a gray stallion sired by Victor, 2:22, dam by Hagen's Bismarck.

L. M. Turner has a four-year-old gray pacing stallion sired by Speculation, under Lou Starr. A bay filly sired by Sitka, belonging to Chas. Gibbs, and a bay mare by Whippleton, the property of Dennis Hanrahan, are also promising youngsters in this string.

Trainer Jas. Berryman has under his care Anna Belle, 2:28, sired by Dawn, the property of the estate of W. R. Graves, of Sonoma. Anna Belle is being driven to lower her record.

R. G. Head has under Mr. B.'s charge the four-year-old black stallion Stonewall, sired by Director, dam Nellie Steinway, by Steinway. Mr. Berryman does not believe in tin cup records, but wants to give his horse a race record, and to this end works Stonewall.

The other horses in his string and working at the track are: Ringwood, sired by Sidney, dam by Dashaway (this is the horse, it will be remembered, that ran away with his driver and caused such a scene at the track one fair week); a black stallion, sired by Billy Roberts, dam by Gibraltar, and a four-year-old colt, the property of Archie McKenzie.

Geo. Hughes has four speedy horses at the track, the string being headed by Lenmar, 2:16, sired by Admar, dam Lenore, by Gladiator, the property of E. B. Jennings.

The others are Alland, chestnut gelding, four years old, sired by Alcona; Alwood K., by Woodnut, dam Alice, and a three-year-old filly sired by Victor, dam Lady S., by Gen. On.—Napa Register.

The Los Angeles Bench Show.

LOS ANGELES, April 22.—It is not often that one not a dog sharp enjoys the privilege of reporting a bench show for a great, big, elegant sporting paper like the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. I can't say that I expected to enjoy it, but when your request for a report reached me I girded on my reportorial armor and went forth to the battle.

As I intimated, I am not a dog fancier. Once upon a time, in company with a brother younger than myself, I owned a dog. As I remember him now, after the lapse of many years, he was certainly spotted, and probably mostly foxhound, though to speak with chemical exactness, he possessed "traces" of about all known breeds of dogs. But to us he seemed a good dog, and we loved him.

Feeling little interest and no enthusiasm, I went into the show room of our Los Angeles exhibition, the fifth annual bench show of the Southern California Kennel Club, which closed to-night. Something had stirred up the animals just then, and I think that every one of the two hundred dogs present was trying to prove that his or her voice was the very loudest in all dogdom. And through the din of big barks and little yelps there came a note which awakened memories that had slept for long—memories of deep snow in the Wisconsin woods and of a boy not very high, upon whose shoulder the long-harred, muzzle-loading rifle seemed to weigh a ton, and of a smaller boy carrying the 18-gauge shotgun, which seemed to weigh two tons; of aching feet covered with moccasins which, in the morning, had been wet with melting snow and in the afternoon were frozen stiff as wooden shoes and twice as clumsy; of two boys more utterly miserable than they could be made by anything else on earth than the remembrance of a shot thought to have been missed and the prospect of a long walk in the bitter cold only to reach home empty-handed.

The sound I heard was the same sound that had sent the eager blood up to blue lips that grew red as two boys shrieked with simultaneous suddenness: "Hi, Jingle! sic'em!" The guns grew light as feathers and the stiffened moccasins seemed to have added unto them the wings of Mercury.

Tingle had once followed a trail of fresh blood spouting from the side of a wounded deer; afterward he would take up on fainter scent, and they say he was a spoiled dog. Nevertheless, if dogs have souls as Luther thought, I pray "God rest well old Tingle's soul," for he got us our first deer and a man must live long to know a prouder, sweeter moment than that which sees his home-coming laden with fresh venison, cut from the carcass of his first deer * * * But this is not that report which is expected of me.

The club was uncommonly fortunate this year in obtaining suitable exhibition rooms, the hall being large, well lighted and well ventilated, and located near the business center. The exhibition as a whole showed plainly the effect of previous shows. California has never lacked for quantity of dogs, but except the greyhounds they all seemed to belong to the breed called curs; and even the greyhounds showed a painful tendency to wear short legs and wag bushy tails. At the first show in this city, held four years ago, no small part of the work of the judge consisted of transferring dogs from classes in which they were entered, but in which they could not possibly belong, into classes in which they might seem to be allowable if a lenient judge didn't open his wise eyes too wide. Even then the judge might have considered himself in the biggest kind of luck if all the "Newfoundlands" were not big, curly black dogs, and if some of the "pointers" did not have bushy tails.

Even a cursory glance at the dogs on exhibition this year shows that Los Angeles lovers of man's most faithful friend have learned the characteristics of the several varieties and with few exceptions have entered "show" dogs. One of these exceptions is a white animal entered as a St. Bernard pup which might with equal propriety be styled a polled Angus goat. Another is a dog whereof they told Doody tales of the pursuit and dismemberment of prisoners who had escaped from the municipal jail in the city of Mexico. Pieces of board were nailed across this dog's stall, the top one being marked "Dangerous," also "For sale—$200." Looking over the fence one sees a mouse-colored dog not much smaller than a bronco horse, with a snarling face, as hideous as one of Dante's devils.

There is something fascinating in the sight of a really vicious dog—it being understood, and these presents are upon this express condition, to wit: That the said vicious dog is securely hitched to something immovable. This animal was so fastened, and a good many ladies and more boys stood and watched the red-eyed brute, and lent a listening ear to his history. I went also.

"He was raised in the jail at Mexico," said the narrator, "and they couldn't handle him. He is a Siberian bloodhound and would tear a man to pieces just as soon as he'd eat beefsteak."

The man seemed to be offended when I expressed a belief that the dog was not a bloodhound, and was madder still when I said that bloodhounds were nice affectionate dogs anyway. He offered to turn the dog loose on me to prove his blood-thirstiness, and even agreed that I might first go out and borrow a couple of lengths of stove pipe and an axehead. I wasn't afraid, but I had on my best clothes and so I had to back down and content myself with asserting that this dog wasn't a bloodhound. It was a little humiliating before all that crowd, but I crawled out from under when that mouse-colored dog was into the judging ring, as the lonely representative of the bloodhound class.

Judge Raper looked at the handkerchief tied over the dog's eyes, at the muzzle over his jaws and the long chain hooked to his collar.

"Why didn't you bring that dog in when his class was called?" he asked.

"This is the bloodhound class."

"Take him away, that dog's a Great Dane," said the judge.

"With a cross of hyena," added I, in a voice as near like the judge's as I could make it.

I wished that I had made the acquaintance of that breed earlier, so that I might have known a Great Dane mongrel when I saw it; but anyway I learned something.

A third mongrel, a big Scotch terrier, was entered for exhibition. Speaking after the manner of horsemen, "Owney" is standard by performance rather than by breeding. He wears a collar—"Owney—Postoffice, Albany, N. Y." and attached to the collar are tags and checks and medals showing that Owney has visited most of the large cities of the Union, and is entitled to be considered the chronic-est canine tramp of the continent.

Aside from the three mongrels referred to any dog in the show was a fair representative of his class, and many of them were the very pick of their kinds, able to hold up their heads in any dog show on earth.

A good deal of credit should be given the management for the way in which the stalls and the hall were kept. Plenty of help was employed and no shirking tolerated. The hall was as free from odor as the ordinary dwelling house, and there was neither the disorder nor unnecessary noise.

Among the pleasant incidents of the show was one occurring when the awards on fox terriers were made. Mr. Sumner, the affable secretary of the club, has spent time, money and energy in popularizing the club and rousing interest in the breeding of good dogs, doing his own share by giving very great care to his kennels of high class foxterriers. When the awards were made and Mr. Sumner's kennels seen to have gathered in a large proportion of blue millinery, a hearty round of applause testified to the public appreciation of the Secretary's labors.

The judging was done by Mr. George Raper, of Liverpool. Mr. Raper is deliberate, not open to outside influence and has no whims, unless a tendency to cut "big" dogs and heavy heads may be regarded as a whim. I heard no fault found with his decisions: except by those not good judges of dogs.

The first class brought into the judging ring was the mastiff dogs, fairly numerous and high class dogs every one. The first prize was awarded to a Los Angeles dog, M. S. Severance's Bishop (listed), a stone fawn dog of splendid size and conformation, sire Amado, dam Wanda; Wooglin, a dog of unknown breeding, but very little inferior to Bishop, owned by Miss Bakewell of Riverside, carried off the red ribbon, and Maro A, sire Imperial Arno, dam Zella M., shown by E. T. Allen, of Los Angeles, was awarded third prize.

Among mastiff hitches M. E. Brangdon, of Beaumont, took first with Phyllis (listed), bred same as first in dogs. Second, J. W. Mitchell's Lomita Hilda, Lomita Kennels, Los Angeles, same breeding.

First and second mastiff dog puppies were awarded Lomita Caution and Lomita Prince, respectively, owned by J. W. Mitchell, third Lomita Wotan; owned by Jacob Muller, Los Angeles. J. W. Mitchell's Lomita Minting was awarded first in the mastiff bitch puppy class.

In the St. Bernard class appeared the finest field of magnificent dogs which was ever gathered together in Los Angeles. John G. Barker's California Bernardo (26,803) Duke of Wellington—Tomah won first over Frank H. Allen's California Alton (22,347) sire Alton, dam Corrette. A very good judge of St. Bernards might be excused if he reversed the positions of the dogs, Alton having the finer coat and rather the handsomer color. The judge gave Bernardo the full benefit of his greater height and better carriage, and did not charge anything to his account by reason of his rather surly face. Close behind Bernardo and Alton in the race for points came Dr. Regensberger's Reglov, sire Saffron, dam Mountain Queen. Captain Poole's Gillott, sire Lord Burghley, dam Barry XVI, a high-class dog good for first place in slower company, received the compliment of a V. H. C. H. position. St. Bernard hitches were not so numerous as the dogs, but they were no less admirable representatives of their breed. F. E. Allen's Tmah (13,552) sire Mascot Bernard, dam Merchant Princess took first and E. P. Schell's Lady Delight (26,163) sire Judge, dam Lady Gladys S, and Lady Gladys (23,043) sire Valour, dam Edith second and third respectively. Geo. Fugard's Zaidee (listed) took first in the bitch puppy class, there being no opposition worthy of the name. All the St. Bernard prize winners were the San Francisco dogs; and looking at the splendid animals as they lay in their stalls or walked about in the judging ring one is almost tempted to wish that the climate of Los Angeles might be a thought cooler if only we might be given the privilege of owning this handsomest and most intelligent of dogs, for the heavy coat of the St. Bernard rather prohibits his successful rearing in the semi-tropics.

In the Newfoundland class only three dogs were entered. Of these Strap, entered by J. B. Banning, of Wilmington, a dog of unknown pedigree, but more than a fair specimen of the best American dog with a good flat coat and of fair size was given first. Two other curly dogs which could claim some Newfoundland blood were decorated with red and white ribbons respectively. Newfoundlands, with their fine and heavy coats, call for a cold climate in theirs, being reputed both untrifling and ill-tempered in a country so warm even as the northern part of California. They seem to be going out of favor elsewhere, more's the pity; for in point of courage, intelligence, faithfulness and gentleness the superior of the Newfoundland dog has not been produced.

In the Great Danes dogs and hitches were classed together, there being only six entries in all. John F. Wohler's hindele bitch Nora, brought down from San Francisco, was commended, but the prizes were all gathered into the camp of John G. Borglum, of Sierra Madre, who showed some recently imported dogs bred by Andrien, of Paris, France, which are far and away the finest Great Dane dogs ever seen in the State, the pearl-colored bitch Marjel being regarded as the finest bitch of her breed in America. Dr. Wm. LeM. Wills was given second prize for dog puppy on the rather inferior puppy Victor, there being no opposition.

When the greyhound class was reached Los Angeles began to show up, for the cow counties can provide daddy-long-legs dogs to compete against any field that could be gathered. In challenge dogs, G. W. Gordan's Leo (20,898), sire Greater Scott, dam Nita, defied the world. Nobody responded, and Leo, the evil-tempered, got his blue ribbon. In the open dogs Hugh McCracken, of San Francisco, took first with Donard, a red dog, possibly a trifle too sturdy, with beautiful chest and excellent loins, sire Chief, dam Bessie. S. Tyler's Falcon, Pasadena, sire Forbes' Hector, dam Fly, took second, and K. C. Klokke's Leo Jr., sire Leo, dam Fly, third, against a big field and a good one. J. Tannemacher's Wallace Go was reserved and W. F. Barber, of Chatsworth Park, got a V. H. C. for his dog Charleston (25,715). In open hitches, as in dogs, Hugh McCracken took first prize, his bitch, Lady H. Glendine (29,250), sire Trales, dam Lady G. Glendyne, taking and deserving the blue ribbon. Styler's Pronto was placed second, W. F. Barber's Lilly Ha Ha third and Maggie M., same owner, H. C. In the greyhound bitch puppy class, J. D. Bethune Jr., Los Angeles, showed Meida, sire Leo, dam Primrose, and she proved a winner. W. R. Manning's Dena and J. F. Heintz's Fly got second and third respectively.

The other awards were:

He Soiled the Cloth.

Rev. (?) Thomas Dixon, (God save his soul!) has been brought to the knowledge of the fact that he cannot ignore and break with impunity the game laws of the State of New York. About one year ago he was fined $150 for shooting robins on State Island. Again, with disregard for the law in his heart and a shot gun in his hands, he recently visited the Island and bagged forty-five robins, for which act of outlawry he has just paid a fine of $300, and $150 court costs.

Good enough; let the game warden keep his weather eye on this "Anointed of the Lord" a while longer. A few more lessons in the same line may make a law abiding citizen of the parson.

Bred.

J. E. Watson, Berkeley, Cal., has bred Gyp, fox-terrier bitch, by Spice—Vixen, to J. B. Martin's Blemon Reever, by Champion Venio—Champion Rachel, at San Francisco, April 17, 1893.

The Continental Kennel Club's fourth annual bench show proved a success in every particular. The entries numbered 257 and contained many very superior dogs. Dr. J. M. Norman, the able and gentlemanly President of the club, was ably aided in all matters of arrangement and conduct of the show by Mr. F. W. Rand, the energetic Secretary.

The visitors from this city to the bench show at Los Angeles have all returned and are very loud and profuse in their praise of the kennel men of that city for the royal treatment accorded them. There will be a good return exhibit from Los Angeles next week at the coming show.

Mr. D. A. Mendenhall, of Livermore, enters a mastiff for the coming show that is said to be a good one by those who have seen him.

ROD.

The Sunapee Saibling.

The sudden and unaccountable appearance, in large numbers, of a valuable food and game fish in any of our inland waters, says John D. Quackenbush, A. M., M. D., member of the American Fisheries Society, in the American Angler, would be hailed as a most important event both in the angling and the ichthyological world. Assume that fish to be a prolific and rapidly-growing salmonoid, surpassing all congeners in symmetry and brilliancy of coloration, equalling the most delicate in table merits, and excelling in game qualities by the land-locked salmon alone, and you may readily comprehend the enthusiasm which, some seven or eight years ago, greeted the discovery of a New Hampshire charr characterized by such a synthesis of traits.

Until the year 1855, but three species of trout, or more properly charr (a Gaelic word meaning red or blood-colored), were recognized as native to New England, viz.:

1. The Salvelinus fontinalis, or common brook trout.
2. The Salvelinus umayush, the longe, togue, lake or Mackinaw trout.
3. The Salvelinus staguilis of Jordau; ognassa of Girard and Gunther; the diminutive blue-back of the Rangeley lakes, of Western Maine—the last closely allied to species widely spread through Arctic America, as well as to the European saibling.

From this classification is omitted the Salmo agassizii, of Lake Monadnock, N. H., now recognized as a variety of brook trout; and the Salmo fusco, or huchua trout, mentioned by Dr. Smith in his "Natural History of the Fishes of Massachusetts," 1833, and therein claimed to be related to the true Hucho of the Danube. Its forked tail, dusky line and reddish spots, coupled with the statement that it was brought to market in a frozen condition from lakes in New Hampshire and Maine, make it probable that the Massachusetts hucho was merely a variety of umayush.

Even Prof. Jordan, in an article on the salmon family, published in "Science & Ethics" as late as 1888, is silent as regards a fourth New England species, although Prof. Garman, of the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Cambridge, in his paper on the American salmon and trout (1885), calls attention, under the head of Salmo fontinalis, to a form, of which he says:

"A knowledge of the younger stages of this fish, from the same locality may lead to a separation of the form."

Subsequent research has led to such a separation, and ichthyologists now admit the presence of a fourth variety of Salvelinus in New England, the Alpinus aureolus, a golden-hued

Alpine charr, whose life history and general characteristics it is the purpose of this paper to present.

As far as is known, the first specimens of this new fish to be distinguished from the well-known forms were taken in Sunapee Lake, Merrimac county, N. H., during the summer of 1881, by Lieut. Ransom F. Sargent and Mr. Alonzo J. Cheney, respectively of New London and Wilmot, experienced anglers, who immediately recognized in the three individuals captured by them specimens of a salmonoid distinct from the umayush and from the brook trout of the region. The fish taken weighed from two to three pounds each, and were known by the name of "St. John's River trout," because they were believed to be descendants of fry planted in the lake in 1867, by the first fish commissioners of the State, and sopped by the resident population to have come from the St. John River, N. B. The conspicuous development of the under jaw in the males led to the local names of "hawk bill" and "hook bill;" the silvery sides of the fish in summer gave rise to that of "white trout." In the two following years, 1882 and 1883, a sufficient number of the deep-swimming strangers was taken to excite comment and conjecture on the part of outsiders who had heard of its presence in Sunapee Lake; and in 1884, Col. Elliott B. Hodge, of Holderness, the New Hampshire Fish and Game Commissioner, finding confirmation in the reports that reached him for a view he seems long to have privately held, ventured the opinion that many Canadian and Northern New England lakes contained a large charr, whose habit of retiring to the deepest and coldest waters throughout the summer, and of approaching the surface for a few days only at the end of October, explained a general ignorance concerning its very existence. Col. Hodge's theory received apparent substantiation from his accidental discovery, in October, 1885, of vast numbers of a mysterious charr spawning on a mid-lake rocky shoal at Sunapee. He wrote at the time:

"I can show you an acre of these trout, hundreds of which will weigh from three to eight pounds each. I could never have believed such a sight possible in New Hampshire. The new fish differs from the brook trout in many ways. The females have a brownish back and lemon-colored sides; the males, a bluish-black back and golden orange sides. The fins are much larger than in the brook trout, and there is an entire absence of the mottling characteristic of the latter fish."

Thus Col. Hodge recognized in this graceful, high-colored charr, a new variety, and he lost no time in inviting the attention of scientists to the New Hampshire beauty.

Specimens were forwarded to the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Cambridge, Mass., and to Dr. Tarlton H. Bean, Curator of the Department of Fishes, National Museum, only to be pronounced at both centres varieties of brook trout. Col. Hodge resented this classification, and sent Dr. Bean other large specimens of the new fish, together with several Sunapee brook trout, urging a more minute examination. Dr. Bean compared the two forms with special care, changed his opinion, frankly admitted that Col. Hodge was right, and pronounced the Sunapee trout "a Salvelinus of the ognassa type, but of so enormous a size that at first he did not suspect its relation to that species."

The late Prof. Baird inclined to the opinion that it might be a representative of a highly variable Arctic charr found in the Dominion of Canada and Greenland, viz., the Salvelinus alpinus arcticus.

A controversy at once arose regarding the origin of this unique trout. Whatever its species, it was a new-comer in the opinion of some; in that of others, a native—the oldest of our charrs, representing the ancestral type, and now almost extinct. Those who took the first view were chiefly residents of the immediate region. Such unhesitatingly declared that they had never met with the new fish prior to 1883 or 1884. They regarded the ognassa (or "Quashy," as it began to be called), either as a descendant of some of the salmonoids introduced into Sunapee in 1867 and succeeding years by the fish commissioners, or as a cross between one of these forms and the native brook trout. In no other way could they account for its sudden appearance in large and steadily increasing numbers.

A theory of descent from blue-backs imported from Maine in 1879, by Commissioners Webber and Powers, as a food supply for the larger salmonidae, was soon set aside on the ground that the little trout of the Rangeleys rarely exceeds one-quarter pound in weight, and could not possibly, even if supplied with an abundance of appropriate food and exposed to the tonic effects of a favorable change of waters, ever attain the aldermanic proportions of the Sunapee charr. Moreover, Dr. Bean, in a scholarly paper published in The American Angler and the Forest and Stream, February, 1888, called attention to six essential points of difference between the Sunapee trout and the blue-back, thus effectually disposing of the argument.

The theory of natural hybridism found few supporters among ichthyologists, and no introduction of charr other than the Rangeley Salvelinus fontinalis and Salvelinus ognassa could be proved, as none had been officially reported. From the first, Col. Hodge, believing in the existence of a similar charr in the Province of Quebec, championed the theory of aboriginality, ingeniously combating every objection made to it:

1. That so conspicuous a food fish could not for one hundred years have escaped the notice of anglers, poachers and scientists alike—by showing how the habits of the white trout protected it from observation and persecution, it being rarely seen, except late in October, on mid-lake reefs, that is, at a time of year when angling was out of season and in localities dangerous or impossible of access in the old-style, unseaworthy flat-bottoms, during the autumnal wind storms. The secluded habits of the European charrs explain in like manner the obscurity which has so long involved the like history of those fishes. Col. Hodge further claims that ordinary fishermen knew no difference between the white and the brook trout, a thing not to be wondered at, when such authorities as Garman and Bean failed at first to separate the forms.

2. The more serious objection that no case can be shown why the white trout, if a native, should suddenly increase in the lake, so as to attract the attention of hundreds of observers, and be taken literally by the ton—Commissioner Hodge meets with the following clever theory: Before the introduction of black bass, about twenty-five years ago, yellow perch swarmed in the lake, and, there being then no smelt food, subsisted largely on the eggs and fry of the lake-spawning charr. At the spring hatching time these perch held carnival among the helpless alevins, almost effecting, by their periodic ravages, the extermination of the white trout. But, as the black bass increased in number, they fell upon the perch in turn, until the lake was virtually rid of this voracious pest. Thus the trout, which had been reduced to the verge of annihilation, had a chance to increase. The black bass did not interfere with it for two reasons:

1. Both bass and trout have an abundance of easily caught and tasteful food in the land locked smelts, which have multiplied since their introduction, until now they literally school in millions.

2. Bass and trout are not found in the same sections of water at the same time, the trout keeping in a temperature of forty-two to forty-five degrees (on the surface in May, sixty feet below in July and August), the bass preferring sixty-five to seventy degrees in summer, and hibernating in winter and during the spring hatching time of the trout. Thus freed from persecution, the saibling has increased, until it is now present in myriads. This is the most ingenious of all the explanations that have been advanced. It is based on facts throughout, and is difficult of overthrow, especially when coupled with a theory of the writer's, that after the introduction of smelts, about twenty years ago, the saibling, if native, learned so far to change their habits as to rise from the depths and follow this food fish to the shores during May and June, thus increasing the chances of discovery. Wherever the smelt schools, there the saibling will be found. An axiom of the Sunapee fisherman is, "Hold the smelts and you will hold the trout," so the smelts are baited in certain localities during the fishing season.

This theory of Col. Hodge encounters but a single objection, viz.: If the perch and saibling have been fellows in the Sunapee basin since its excavation during the glacial epoch, why was not the process of extermination completed centuries ago? It must have been in the case of other lakes on the same primeval water shed, unless we are prepared to admit that an anodorous fish became land-locked in one inland lake alone, while avoiding other bodies of water much more accessible and equally compatible. Geology proves that Sunapee once discharged its waters through Newbury summit, and thus was tributary to the Merrimac. Hence it is fair to assume that, when these trout migrated, following like man and the larger mammalia, but through watery channels, the retreating ice fields and glaciers, they swarmed into many lake basins, where they became extinct before the advent of the white man. Were perch the instruments of extermination? If so, why did they not put in as thorough work at Sunapee?

It is but right to state at this point that the history of the charr in some European lakes is the history of a fish that has disappeared within the memory of man. This is notably the case at Loch Leven, once the home of a charr that rivalled the magnificent fish of Windermere. The trout (fario) seems the fitter to survive.

While the discussion just outlined was progressing, charr identical with the Sunapee Lake form was sent from Dan Hole Pond, Carroll County, N. H., and from Flood's Pond, in the town of Otis, sixteen miles from Ellsworth, Me., to Prof. Garman and Dr. Bean. The water of both these lakes is deep, clear and cold, as in the case of Sunapee. Dan Hole Pond, at the head waters of the Ossipee River, is tributary to the Saco. Flood's Pond connects with the Union River, which enters Blue Hill Bay near Mt. Desert. Thus the new Salvelinus is represented in three distinct drainage basins in New England.

In company with Colonel Hodge, I visited Dan Hole Pond in the summer of 1889, but failed to secure a specimen of the saibling. In the fall of 1890, however, several specimens were sent from the pond to Cambridge and to Washington, where they were pronounced identical with the Sunapee form. Old residents declared them identical also with trout which had for fifty years been speared on the same spawning bed. The present representative from Ossipee informs me, through Commissioner Hodge, that he has seen many individuals of this species weighing ten and twelve pounds—all this, years before a German saibling egg was imported.

I am indebted to Dr. Walter M. Haines, of Ellsworth, Me., for the following facts regarding Flood's Pond. The pond is three miles long by three-quarter mile wide. It is surrounded by high, well-wooded land, and is one hundred feet deep, the bottom being pure white sand or gravel. There are the usual inlets and spring holes. The outlet is a stream of considerable size, and has been dammed in many places for the last forty years. The Flood's Pond saibling, declared by Prof. Garman to correspond exactly with the Sunapee fish, is known in the neighborhood as the "silver" or "white trout," to distinguish it from the "square-tail" or brook trout, and "the togue" or lake trout. It attains a weight of five or six pounds. Two hundred pounds have been taken by a single angler in a day, but it is never caught except in one particular locality. It spawns in the lake on a fine gravel beach, in three feet of water, and does not enter the inlets. Nothing but smelts are ever found in its stomach. Flood's Pond contains neither perch nor bass.

Since, then, by reason of dams on the outlets, no fishes of marine ancestry could, within the last fifty years, have gained access either to Dan Hole or Flood's Pond without artificial help—since land-locked salmon only have been planted in these ponds, and that quite recently—and since there seems to be trustworthy evidence of the existence of this so-called silver trout in each body of water for at least half a century—it is fair to conclude that the Salvelinus alpinus aureolus is a native of two Maine drainage basins, and therefore is aboriginal to New England, an American representative of the European saibling, red charr or Ombre chevalier.

But this does not prove its aboriginality to Sunapee Lake, N. H., although, all circumstances considered, it renders such aboriginality highly probable, inasmuch as no data exist to establish a plant of this variety at any time in Sunapee Lake, and no German saibling eggs were brought to New Hampshire before January, 1881. The fact that the fry from the eggs sent to Plymouth in that year were placed in New found Lake, a body of water apparently in every way adapted to the nature of the saibling, but have never been heard from is further significant here. It may prove that the foreign fish cannot find the necessary conditions in the New Hampshire lakes. The failure of the farmers at Sunapee to distinguish between the large brook trout and the saibling (if the latter fish was a native), is in contrast with the positive knowledge of a difference at Dan Hole and Flood's ponds. Its explanation may be sought in the habits of the Sunapee saibling as already described, or in the ignorance of the few who in old times may ever have seen it and who cared for nothing beyond the fact that it was good to eat.

Flood's Pond, in Warren, and Silver Lake, in Madison, N. H., are associated with traditions of the fall spearing of their spawning beds of large, high-colored trout, which, a believed, from reports as to their habits and appearance, have belonged to this same species. These two ponds, the may represent a traditional habitat. The waters of Silver Lake find their way into the Saco; I was unable to learn whether Flood's Pond discharges into the Connecticut, through Baker's River into the Merrimac.

THE GUN.

With My Old Shot-Gun.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

There may be pleasures greater, but I haven't found them out. In this country where the game birds are a-flying all about...

with my old shot-gun.

There's another always with me, trotting ever by my side; To share my every pleasure is his constant joy and pride...

with my old shot-gun.

On the marshes, in the morning, when at first the grayish light Marks the hour when birds aquatic will begin their early flight...

with my old shot-gun.

There's a wing-tipped wiley mallard seeking in the grass to hide, Not another thus his equal will by no one be denied...

with my old shot-gun.

An Important Movement.

The spirit of earnest activity, in the line of supporting the movement looking to the establishment of a National Sportsman's Association, at Chicago, during the coming summer is a matter of felicitation.

No considerable number of men can be drawn and held together on any subject unless it be of a nature which will require their best thought and the expenditure of their best energies.

This question is evidently proper for every man to ask in considering every subject. It must be remembered, however, that in speaking of sportsmanship the "pay" comes in something far higher than the dollar yard-stick can measure.

Men are daily becoming broader and more liberal, and this fact is shown in the increased attention to all subjects which have a tendency to inure to the good of the whole people.

A Grand Match.

The match at inanimates to-morrow, conducted by Clarrough, Golcher & Co., will, no doubt, be largely attended. The prizes are valuable and the terms the most liberal ever offered in a match of this nature.

Now is the time to go hunting without a gun. The hills are dressed and ready "to receive." Visitors are always welcome. The freshness, the newness, the beauty and adornment of Nature's temples are unsurpassed.

Are you interested in botany, in ornithology in piscatorial pleasures? Now is the time to seek satisfaction in the hills. A few days in camp, at this season of the year, will be found to be productive of a wealth of interest and entertaining instruction to be found on no printed page.

Mr. Harry Babcock and Mr. R. H. Sprague contemplate a match at the traps. The conditions are: 100 live birds, Mr. Babcock to give Mr. Sprague 10 birds the advantage, the latter shooting at 110 birds to the former's 100.

The first fairly satisfactory outings with the rod and line this season are now being enjoyed. The sport in this line will really increase after a few days.

The Country Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the Country Club took place on Saturday last.

The weather was threatening during the morning hours, but by mid-day the mists had broken away and the conditions were found to be most favorable for the enjoyment of the sport.

The fact that of the twenty-two gentlemen participating in the sport, about one-third of their number took the eleven o'clock boat, the balance, quite equally divided into two parties, taking the twelve and one o'clock boats so presented the sportsmen at the traps as to render the shooting much more pleasurable to the participants.

The shooting, on the whole, was very good, the birds being, perhaps, a fair lot, some of them being very swift as is almost invariably the rule.

The scores in the main match are herewith presented:

Mr. W. B. Tubbs killed his first eleven birds in excellent form but the last one, owing entirely to the conditions presented—that of making the highest score possible—was allowed to escape. Mr. Buckbee appeared at the trap for the first time on this occasion, and to say that he surprised the older shooters is putting it mildly.

A number of "freeze-outs" were then indulged in, Wilson, Tallant, Atherton and Hamilton being usually successful in these contests.

The Selby Medal.

On the first of the week a number of the expert shots of the country assembled at Oakland Shooting Park for the purpose of contesting for the Selby medal.

The conditions governing this medal shoot is at twenty live birds. On this occasion it was thought by many that it would be the last shoot for this trophy, but the sequel proved otherwise, and at least another, if indeed not more, in order to settle the medal contest.

Merrill and Fay then shot off the tie for the medal at four birds, still being a tie, each killing all of the birds. In the second tie Fay lost his third, Merrill killing straight and winning the medal by the score of 24 out of a possible 26, while Fay was one bird less on same possible. This was very good shooting, considering the quality of the birds, which was first-class. Fay took first money, Robinson second money.

The day was well occupied at the inanimate target score as well, and every moment of the day was punctuated by the crack of the gun. On Sunday next the inanimate target match heretofore noted, will be largely attended, and some fine sport may be expected.

A match between Mr. Edward Fay and Mr. "Slade" last week resulted in a victory for the former.

It is now well-known that the pheasants turned out some years ago at Tuxedo Park did well, and scattered themselves over a great range of country in New Jersey and southern New York. They are killed from time to time in Rockland and Sullivan counties, N. Y., and seem in the wild state to be slowly on the increase.

We are familiar with the rapid increase of this beautiful species on the West Coast, where all the conditions are in its favor; where climate is milder, food more abundant and easily had, and enemies fewer. But with strict protection a somewhat similar increase might take place in the central West and even on the Atlantic coast.

Pheasants are great wanderers, and a few turned out at any point will spread themselves over a wide extent of country; they are also great runners, and will sometimes refuse to lie to a dog, but at other times they have to be kicked out of the brush just as our own quail and ruffed grouse do.

We know of no experiments with any exotic game which have proved so promising as those with this pheasant, and it would seem worth the while of sportsmen's clubs generally to take the matter of their introduction in hand. The fact that the birds will lay their eggs in confinement, and that the young can be hatched out under domestic fowls, greatly simplifies the experiment.

We are glad to note the following practical suggestion in Forest and Stream anent the matter of encouraging the importation of game birds. The following truthful comments and information relative to the adaptability of the Mongolian pheasant should be productive of much good to sportsmen generally, by inducing a more active interest in the breeding of this excellent game bird. It says:

"It appears to be pretty clearly demonstrated that the Mongolian pheasant can stand the winters of New England and Northern New York, and that he has nothing to fear from climate on this coast. This has been demonstrated not by a single experiment, but by several."

A most wonderful piece of fine pen work has just been finished by General S. S. Bamburger of this city. It is more remarkable when it is understood that the General is nearly seventy years of age, and that the work was performed without the aid of any other help than the glasses he usually wears. The entire inaugural address of President Grover Cleveland is written in a space 1 1/2 x 2 inches. This the ordinary eye may read by the aid of a microscope. This is surrounded by a representation of a laurel wreath. The heading is of embossed or illuminated letters announcing the name and date of the inauguration of the twenty-fourth President of the United States. The whole design is placed on a card 3 1/2 x 6 inches. The General will send it to Mrs. Cleveland with his compliments.

A most pleasing and interesting souvenir of the enjoyment of field sports in the north of Ireland is possessed by Mr. John K. Orr in the form of a woodcock and a partridge which were stuffed and placed in a case more than seventy years ago. The birds were shot by Mr. Orr's father, who had them prepared as they stand to-day. They have never been disturbed and appear as fresh and perfect as though arranged but yesterday. The taxidermist who prepared them evidently knew his business. The good deeds which men do are not always hurried with them.

The activity which we noticed in the sporting goods house of E. T. Allen Co., on dropping into that emporium for all kinds of sportsmen's outfits, is indicative of a lively movement in field and trap sports this time of the year. The improvements made by this house during the past few weeks is most noticeable and very gratifying to the friends of this well known and firmly established house.

It is encouraging to notice the interest taken in pistol shooting, small as it yet is, but it gives promise of growth. There is a pistol club which meets at Shell Mound and practices regularly in this fascinating line of sport. Col. S. I. Kellogg is the President of the club, and F. O. Young, Secretary.

The "World's Fair shoot" will doubtless be a success, now that the Illinois State Sportsmen's Association has assumed control over the arrangements of that event. This is a highly proper movement, as in no other way could the matter be made a success.

Class shooting will govern the match at inanimate targets to-morrow, given by Clarrough, Golcher & Co.

Greyhounds in the Show.

From conversation with many of the leasemen we believe that there will be more greyhounds exhibited on this occasion in the bench show than was ever before seen in this city. This, no doubt, is occasioned by the belief that the gentleman who is to judge for the Pacific Kennel Club is believed to be well versed in all the points of a greyhound, a feeling that was never hitherto believed about the gentlemen that judged other bench shows for the club.

The Occidental Coursing Club have been singularly unfortunate this season in its coursing events from the scarcity of hares it has been obliged to postpone three times a meeting that was advertised to take place more than three weeks ago. The hunter, who has hitherto supplied the club with hares, seems to find it next to impossible to capture a sufficient number of the nimble jacks. However, the club will be sure to have a sufficient number in the park at Newark by the 7th of May when, no doubt, there will be a good meeting which will doubtless be the last for the season held by the club.

There is every probability that by the time the next coursing season opens, the lovers of the leash will have a park at their disposal on the other side of the bay, but within easy access to the city that will do credit to the coursing men of the State. The park we have good reason to know will be complete in all essentials rivaling the famous Gosforth of England.

The coursing meeting that was to take place this month between a dozen of dogs from this city and an equal number from Sacramento has been postponed and in all probability will not now take place before the fall.

California to the Front.

The enterprise and liberality of our citizens have brought California more prominently before the notice of the people of the old and new world than that of any other State in America.

Its name has a fascinating charm that no pen can describe, and while in mining and agricultural pursuits it held a prominent place, it rapidly gained a still greater prominence as the home of the greatest thoroughbreds and trotters that ever beat time on the courses of the land.

Senator Leland Stanford, like all other deep-thinking men, had ideas in regard to breeding trotters that were in accordance with those held by Jos. Cairn Simpson, and others, and, having sent the late Harris Covey, one of the best judges of horses that ever crossed the plains, to Kentucky, he had him purchase a number of thoroughbreds "to breed to trotting stallions."

These self-same doubters are now converted, and at the sales of California trotting stock which, by the way surpassed, in the averages received, those of any other State in the Union during that time, they purchased largely and are very enthusiastic now over the subject of "thoroughbred in the trotter," as taught by the progressive Californian.

Last week, in this column, there appeared an article on the position the trotting horse would attain if properly shown at the World's Fair, and reference was made to the building of an equine kindergarten in which visitors could see the Palo Alto method of training trotters.

"Negotiations are pending, and are likely to be consummated, for an illustration at the World's Fair of Senator Stanford's Palo Alto 'kindergarten' methods of training. Gen. Miles of this city broached the subject to Chief Buchanan and found that gentleman ready to lend a willing ear to the elucidation of the plan, which comprehends an exhibit of thirty-five to forty colts from Palo Alto and the erection of training stables in the arena of the live-stock pavilion, where daily exhibitions will be given of the methods of training the youngsters in vogue at that famous farm.

Senator Stanford is in Chicago and when the carloads of thoroughbreds, half-thoroughbreds and quarter-thoroughbreds are turned loose in the kindergarten, each little youngster trotting as perfect as if it was the only gait his ancestors ever knew and were able to transmit, we should like to be one of that vast assemblage to witness the expressions on the faces of the spectators and hear the exclamations of delight from these people from all parts of the world.

brainy, game-like, pure-moving youngsters will possess each and every visitor is a foregone conclusion, and the trotting-horse industry will receive an impetus in this exhibition that will prove beneficial. The benefits of owning and driving such trotters will be seen immediately, and the demand for these horses will also create a demand for light vehicles and harnesses that will bring thousands, aye, millions of dollars to our manufacturers, while all of the breeders will be benefited by the action of this lion-hearted Californian, whose name will live as long as the English language is spoken.

Precautions Against Fire.

The telegraphic reports of the conflagrations that cremated thousands of dollars worth of horses in the East should attract the attention of every horse owner in California. The building of barns with haylofts and stalls beneath should never be allowed, for when fire commences in them, the smoke stifles the poor animals, and, if they cannot be liberated at once they lay down and die without a struggle.

At the door of every stall there should be a hood made of old carpet or other strong material to throw over the horse's head in case of fire; the animal can then be led to a place of safety. If turned loose after being led from a burning building horses will invariably rush back into the ruins, hence great precautions should be taken to turn them into an inclosed field some distance from the burning building. The hay and feed should be kept in one corner of the building and signs should be placed in conspicuous places having the words "No smoking allowed" printed in large letters thereon.

The Time to Get Ready.

One of the most important offices connected with an agricultural association is that of secretary. The work devolving upon him is of such a nature that he must have time to attend to it and be paid for it. "A laborer is worthy of his hire," and it is hardly to be expected that when one is even more valuable than a laborer he should be deemed unworthy of receiving any remuneration for his services.

At the track he must see that all the farmers get a good place to exhibit their stock. The chickens must be in the coops; the pigs in the pens; the cattle in their stalls, and the heavy horses in front of every other exhibit. When the races commence, the Secretary must act as clerk of the course, and collect all moneys due and keep a record of all drivers who owe forfeits. He must fill out his hooks and send duplicates to the National Trotting Association; thus it can be seen that if ever a man earns his salary it is the secretary.

must have some qualifications besides being a "friend" of a director. He must write a legible hand and insist on getting all of his entries complete from the owners of horses that are to compete at the fair, whether on the track or in the show ring. He must be firm in the discharge of his duties, and gentlemanly and courteous at all times and must keep forever in view the main issue, and that is: "To make the fair a success."

A good, live, energetic young man that has the welfare of the association always uppermost in his mind can, as a secretary, do more to make a meeting successful than a score of half-dead-and-alive directors that feel out of place if they are not hanging around a mower or a reaper or "talking chicken to some lady enthusiast who has a patent incubator."

The necessity for liberal advertising is apparent to all who wish to attract the public. What would our theatrical companies do were it not for the advertising they pay for? Does anyone suppose they can offer better attractions for one week than a first-class, well-advertised, well-conducted agricultural fair, where everybody is united in the work of making it successful, and are anxious to have a large attendance every day?

It is the annual holiday week of the farmer and stockman, where wives, youths, maidens and children can learn more and enjoy themselves better than they can at any other entertainment of the year. The secretary knows this, and, if he has any "progressiveness" in his nature, he can "wake up the slumbering energies of the directors" and have the greatest fair ever held in the district. All that is necessary is a united effort on the part of the directors to help him as soon as they awake to the fact that they must furnish attractions and good races if they wish to draw large crowds of people. If he fails to perform his duties or shows a faint-heartedness and lack of interest in the result of the meeting, his place should be declared vacant and another one appointed. This is a progressive age and every district agricultural association in this State that gets an apportionment from the State Treasury should show the State officials that the money has been expended in a way that will redound to their credit.

The Outlook and Work of the Past.

Next Tuesday, May 2d, the California Jockey Club begins a meeting intended to last fifteen days, running every week day except Monday. We see no reason why it should not be even more successful than the Blood Horse meeting, for the people are now fully interested in racing and the horses are better prepared to put forth their best efforts in turf struggles. The judges have given satisfaction with their decisions in almost every instance and are doing much toward turning the rascals out into the cold, cold world, to fill jails and neglected graves.

One thing about the large number of turfmen and jockeys disciplined is that the offense was in almost every case laid at the door of owners of the sprinters or of jockeys that rode the skyrockets. This teaches a good moral—that most of the robbery or attempted robbery of the public purse is done in these sprint races, and that owners of sure-enough racehorses, capable of going a distance, as a rule run to win.

Judge Clinton Riley informed us the other day that while the Turf Congress rule regarding distances (no race for three-year-olds or over of less than a mile) was in vogue there was never such interest manifested in racing in the West and Southwest, and never did racing associations coin such an amount of money. The popular races are at a mile to a mile and a quarter, and the sprints for "dogs" are nothing more nor less than games of chance—hardly that, for many races of this description are either cut and dried or decided at the start, making it a regular "brace" game. Our local association can make a great hit by having only one race per day of less than a mile, and by so doing will also weed out the no-accounts and ultimately have a better class of horses racing out this way. We would much like to see the change suggested.

We are credibly informed that there is to be built (or rather rebuilt, shortly) a judges' stand of only one story, and it will be so arranged that the sighting will be on a level with the horses' heads, as it should be. Judge Riley will probably supervise the construction of the new edifice, and he knows just how a judges' stand should be built.

There has been much complaint about the timing lately, and certain it is that there is a great variance in some instances between the watches of the official timers and those held by scores of horsemen and reporters. Twenty competent men got the time made by Martinet last Saturday in the mile race 1:43 $\frac{3}{4}$, while the official timers made it 1:43. Many other instances of this sort might be mentioned.

In the case of Joe Narvaez we trust he will be able to prove his innocence of intended crookedness in the saddle, for he is a high-class horse-pilot and the turf can ill afford to lose him. However, if he intended being dishonest to his employer he should be punished severely, as a hard lesson to one of such standing as Narvaez will deter youths that might otherwise desire to be smart and tricky from treading that dangerous path.

Another Circuit Wanted.

The Board of Directors of the Tulare County Agricultural Association have decided to reopen the colt stakes Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 until May 25th, second payment July 1st, etc., according to the advertisement, as seen in the columns of this journal. The members of this Association are wideawake and progressive, and, as Secretary Zartman says, there is room for another circuit, comprising Stockton, Modesto, Merced, Fresno and Bakersfield. This is an excellent idea, and will afford good racing during the month of November. The secretaries of these districts should agree upon this, and by so doing they will awaken an interest among the horsemen, breeders and farmers of that section which will be productive of great good. The races can commence after the Stockton Fair and go right down the rich San Joaquin valley. We hope this suggestion will be acted upon. Let each Board of Directors take hold of this project immediately, and success will crown their efforts.

The first of May is the date set for the closing of entries for the pacing stakes for the four-year-olds or under at Napa, and all owners of baby "side-wheelers" should send in their entries at once. The purse is $300, entrance $15, $5 payable on the date of making entry. The race will be two in three. At San Jose, entries to all the stakes for trotters and pacers close on the first of May, also. Owners cannot afford to miss San Jose in their programme. The track there will be in perfect condition, and a large number of improvements around the stalls and buildings have been made since the last meeting. By referring to the advertisement information will be had of the various stake races to take place there.

Buffalo Girl and Other Pacing Mares.

When the fast pacing mare Buffalo Girl was retired from the turf a number of years ago with a record of 2:12 $\frac{1}{2}$, it was generally thought that she would prove of value in the breeding ranks, inasmuch as she possessed as much speed as had been shown by any harness horse up to the time of her appearance, and in addition her temperament was of the nervous sort that is generally a characteristic of producers of trotting or pacing speed, says the Breeders' Gazette. Thus far Buffalo Girl has produced two foals by the trotter Jerome Eddy, 2:16 $\frac{1}{2}$, and one by Red Wilkes. It is said that the elder of the Jerome Eddy foals has a fair amount of trotting speed, and that all of Buffalo Girl's produce are natural trotters, not in any way inclining to the gait at which their dam gained so much distinction. Be the matter of their speed as it may, the fact remains that thus far none of Buffalo Girl's produce has entered the 2:30 list, and some of her foals are certainly old enough, so that lack of age does not stand in the way of their becoming standard by performance. That the fault is not on the side of their sires is shown by the fact that from other mares Jerome Eddy and Red Wilkes have sired a large percentage of 2:30 speed. Thus far Buffalo Girl is the only one of three mares that were at one time conspicuous in the free-for-all pacing races that has not produced speed. Old Lucy, whose mark was 2:14, produced the pacer Chris Smith, 2:14, to the cover of Guy Wilkes, and when bred to Electioneer the resultant foal, named Luc neer, trained to a record of 2:27 at three years. Mattie Hunter, record 2:12 $\frac{1}{2}$, produced in her first foal, Mattie Marco, a 2:25 trotter, and other pacing mares have shown considerable merit in the speed-producing ranks. Pochahontas, the fastest pacer of her day, can almost be considered the founder of a trotting family, inasmuch as it was through her that Young Rolfe, a wonderful sire for his opportunities, was given to the world, and he in turn got Nelsoa, whose 2:10 record to an old-fashioned sulky on a regulation track is still a mark for trotting stallions to shoot at. It has been shown so often that pacing speed can come from lines of blood which have previously produced only trotters that the interchangeability of the trotting and pacing mares should breed trotting speed, especially when mated with stallions of pronounced trotting action and blood lines, is only to be expected, and breeders who are up with the times fancy pacing matrons to breed to trotting-bred stallions that have a great amount of speed.

The Difference.

The difference between Whittier's great poem and a schoolmaster? Well, one is "The Tent on the Beach," and the other is "bent on the teach." Which reminds us that if you are in want of any kind of a tent—one for a booth, a camping-house, or if you want an awning, or a genuine hunting flag, you cannot do better than to call at 111 Clay Street and see Mr. M. Von Hagan Jr. He makes them; look at his "ad" in this week's paper.

FROU FROU is entered in $45,000 worth of stakes in the East this year. Harvey Ernest will campaign her.

Horse-back Riding.

Horse-back riding is not only a healthful exercise, but the most pleasant and diverting of all sports, and though the art is in a dormant state compared with other sports it is simply from a mere want of knowledge of the true art.

The majority of those who ride have not received proper training nor have properly trained horses, therefore it easily fatigues them and they do not see in it anything more than a means of transportation or idle show; and, satisfied with the appearance they can make by merely sitting on a horse, flatter themselves that they are natural riders, they do not believe in, and even ridicule those schools or systems that the true art of horse-back riding has established. If these mistaken amateurs would only reason for a moment and try to realize the condition of a horse with a rider on its back they would soon see their error.

The horse, like every other quadruped, has a natural equilibrium of its own, without which it could not go, it altering its equilibrium by putting a weight on its back and pre-empting that the animal should move with it with the same and even greater surety and agility than in its natural state (since that is what is required of the saddle-horse is nonsensical). It must be admitted that a system of training is indispensable, and as the rider must keep his equilibrium in perfect harmony with that of the horse, he, too, needs a systematic training.

One often hears the question, "How is it then that natural riders do such wonderful tricks?" They are tricks indeed, and appear foolish and rapid compared with the manage of an expert horseman. They are based on no principles and are merely the result of the physical strength of the rider and the violent use of the same.

The true horseman only sees in such performances a profanation of the art as regards training and a disadvantage to the organism of the horse.

Both horse and rider need preparatory training, without which everything will be executed mechanically, and by accident, as well by the rider as by the horse.

The system of "breaking" or initiating rider and horse are very similar wherever the true art is known. The methods of imparting or instructing, however, differ. Yet all systems regarding the training of the rider decidedly forbid that the beginner should be initiated on an untrained animal.

Since in order to learn what he is told to do, the pupil must feel that the horse understands and does what is required by the given aids.

The modern system, besides that which especially regards the training of the horse, comprises: position; mounting and dismounting; body exercise, by which the equilibrium of the rider is rendered flexible and firm; the holding of the reins, the effect of the weight and body and of the equilibrium of the rider; the action of the rein and corresponding movements of the hands and arms; action of the legs; mutual relation of the hands and legs and the equilibrium; support of the hands on the horse's mouth; position of the horse standing and in motion; means of putting the horse in motion; means of passing from one gait into another; naiting; gathering; hacking; leaping; light-riding or rising in the stirrups.

The pupil having grasped this part of the instruction, has, one may say, learned the language with which he may commune with the horse, and can have it do his pleasure, and never tire of the sport.

Should the pupil at this period show also that he has tact and skill; and that he feels the movements of the horse, he can proceed with the other part of the art and become able to train the horse himself. These latter qualities in a rider are often gifts of nature, others acquire them by practice, while many will never be able to possess them.

Some may well say that this is too much to learn, and become discouraged at the start. But no. All can learn, although there is indeed much to learn. It requires only determination and perseverance.

And when one has learned, seeing what little effort it costs him to manage his steed, he will forget the trouble of training and exclaim, "Well the thing is not so difficult after all." Having lost his rigidity and acquired the necessary flexibility and "equilibrum" he has, as it were, become a part of the horse. His communicating to the horse what he wants it to do costs him no more fatigue or effort than his changing the gait of the horse from a slow one into a fast one.

The horse guesses his thoughts, and at times he will find during his experience that he even anticipates them.

To make riders, though, depends greatly upon the capacity of the instructor. He must have perfect knowledge of the theory and practice; because as the pupil is applying practically the explanation, the instructor must be aware that both rider and horse have comprehended, and are ready to carry out the order in good shape.

The demand for a good teacher of horseback riding has long been felt on this coast; a teacher who follows the above system which has been adopted by the largest riding schools of Europe, New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and lately we have learned that there is a Mr. D. Venchiarutti in this city who proposes to show this system to our citizens as soon as he has his plans perfected. He will have the model riding school of the West and will give exhibitions that will be creditable. If his scheme, which he is planning succeeds, it will prove of inestimable value to our horsemen. The breeding and raising of high-class saddle horses has been neglected on this coast; while horseback riding as a healthful recreation for young and old has never received the encouragement it deserves. There is no part of the United States where so many avenues are open for the enjoyment of the latter. The hills and valleys, along the rapid-flowing streams, in forests, across the meadows, or climbing the mountains, are always inviting to the equestrian and equestrienne. The demand for good, stylish, well-trained horses has been a strong one and if the enterprise this learned gentleman proposes succeeds, the craze for riding will increase.

The golden harvest times will soon be here, and the prospects for great crops in California were never brighter. Now is the time for the observant, studious, careful and economical farmer to purchase his mowers, reapers, binders, threshers and engines. By reference to our advertising columns, it will be noticed that only the most responsible firms are represented, and we take pleasure in recommending each and every one to our patrons. If they visit the city they cannot spend a few hours more profitably than by visiting each of the places advertised, and seeing the very latest labor-saving devices for the harvesting of grain and making and pressing hay.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

LEE SHANER has taken a number of his choicest trotters and pacers to the famous Salisbury track at Pleasanton.

THE SALINAS and Hollister Fair Associations have announced the same dates for their meetings—October 3d to 7th, inclusive.

WALTER MAHEN has a Stamboul colt, out of a thoroughbred mare, in his string at Los Angeles, that will be a 2:20 performer this year.

ORRIN A. HICKOK is pleased with the pacer Dexter Thorn, 2:25; he seems to be one of the improving kind and will lower his record in his first race.

THE youngsters on the Santa Rosa Stock Farm are surprising Jim Dustin. He says there are a number of really choice one there that will be heard of in a year or two.

It would not surprise us if the following California horses are entered for the race for free-for-all pacers at Buffalo. The purse is $10,000: Flying Jib, Silkwood, W. Wood, Charlie Ford and Adonis.

ARTHUR BENNETT has just finished a very life-like painting of A. Spreckles' Guy Wilkes mare Hulda, 2:14. This artist's work stamps him as one of the best animal painters that ever came to this coast.

H. W. CRABB and Fred W. Loeber were at Pleasanton last week. We have it on good authority that the former will breed two well-bred fast mares to Diablo, 2:14. He wants to get the very best, it appears.

A VALUABLE three-year-old colt, Simon, by Re-elect, 2:28 was run over by a freight train at Lodi last week. The horse belonged to B. F. Sprague, and was well bred. He had got loose, and being gentle, did not run when the train approached.

THERE are all sorts of rumors afloat as to what Walter Mahen is going to do this fall; the latest is to the effect that he will remain here, and this seems to be the best after all, for we cannot spare Walter very well from the circuit this year.

THE fine Almont stallion Alcona 730 has been sent to Headsburg to make the season. The horsemen in the vicinity of that place are well pleased with him (as they ought to be), and applications are made for his services by owners of some of the best mares there.

MR. BONNER is very busy at the Santa Rosa Stock Farm getting his horses ready for the sale which will take place in this city about the middle of next month. The Pierce Bros. have been liberal buyers at all our auction sales and they will send to this one their very choicest selections.

JIM LINDON, who piloted Killarney in so many hard races, and who for many years was a resident of Woodland, has a string of trotters at the Chico track, and is rather sweet on a four-year-old filly by Monroe Chief, that could show lots of trot last fall, besides some other good ones in his string.

CHARLIE SCOTT has the Napa track in better condition this year than it ever has been. He is a horseman and knows the needs of horsemen, hence it is no trouble for him to have the stables, the course and the buildings suitable for them. From present indications the coming Napa meeting will eclipse all previous ones.

JOS. CAJRN SIMPSON has a gray Antevolo colt that has taken a notion to pace and this gentleman smiles a broad smile as he mounts the sulky behind the youngster and goes down the stretch at a 2:25 clip. It is quite a change from driving trotters but Mr. Simpson seems to be "at home" behind a sidewheeler.

WILFRED PAGE, of Rancho Cotati, reports the death of the broodmare Leoline (dam of the $2,000 yearling Ecco), by Clovis 4909, dam Leah, by Woodford Mambrino, second dam Maud, by Abdallah 15. Leoline died while foaling, and as she was one of the choicest mares on the farm her place will be difficult to fill.

THOMAS SMITH, of Vallejo, has had his stallion Geo. Washington, 2:20, at Stockton during the past two months, and last week he decided to bring him to Vallejo and prepare him for the races. Besides this grand-looking stallion Mr. Smith has a string of fourteen very promising trotters and pacers which he is well pleased with.

A. T. HATCH has decided not to have any of his trotters trained this year. His orchards and vineyards will demand all his time, hence he cannot give his horse business the attention it deserves. He intends to have a sale of trotters by Sidney, Guide, Lenmar, Admar and Sid Roy in June. About sixty head will be disposed of.

JOHN A. PENDER, of Santa Rosa, sold the handsome black stallion Khartoum, by Soudan, to James Dustin of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm some time ago. We have heard that this gentleman has disposed of him to some one else in Sonoma. Khartoum is a model stock horse, and would, if given an opportunity, prove to be a 2:30 performer.

LUELLA, dam of Myrtle, 2:19, recently foaled a beautiful bay filly by Sidney, 2:19, and was bred to Directum, 2:11. Luella is one of the finest-looking broodmares in the State and every colt and filly she has had seems endowed with speed. At least three of them will be in the 2:30 list this year. She was bred and raised by Lot D. Slocum, of the city.

HON. L. J. ROSE is visiting this city. He is looking hale and hearty, and is a firm believer in the doctrine that "the bottom is not out of the trotting horse business." Around his home near Los Angeles there are more finely-bred trotters than there ever were before, and they are valued by their owners just as highly as when the "boom" in prices was at its height.

THERE is rejoicing in the McCord household, Sacramento, for Brown Jennie (dam of Ned Winslow, 2:15; Shyluck, 2:16), and Marj Lou, 2:19), dropped a full sister to this great trio last Sunday morning. She is brown in color with a star in forehead, and J. L. McCord says he believes he can almost see her come under the wire with a Tom Benton burst of speed and hear the shouts of the people: "She beats the record!" He says the mother, father and baby are all doing well.

THE broodmare Lady Fracture dropped a bay colt last Tuesday that is a brother to Jessie, 2:22; Fitzsimmons, 2:20, and Princess McCarty, a two-year-old now in the hands of J. Groom, at San Jose, that will make a wonderful trotter. Besides these, Lady Fracture is the dam of a yearling colt of much promise. The Santa Rosa Stock Farm has in this mare one of the best matrons in the State.

A MAN who does not know much about horses wants to know why putting a bit in a horse's mouth, which will cut its head in two, should not be liable to law against concealed deadly weapons. He wants to know where the foals are incubated artificially and how soon we will have some performers by Squirtgun, out of Brown Bess, by A Machine.—Western Horseman.

MRS. A. C. GOODRICH, of Oregon, recently sold to S. S. Warren, of Spokane, black stallion by Almont Medium, record 2:18, dam by Alcona; second dam by Post's Hambletonian. Also bay yearling colt by a son of Almont Medium, dam by a son of Alcona 730; second dam by Alcona. Mr. Warren writes: "I have broken the black stallion to harness and he shows lots of speed."

J. DEWAIN and C. Rodriguez are busy at the Salinas race track; their strings of trotters and pacers grow larger every day, while the individuals composing them continue to improve. The reports from the farmers of Monterey County are most encouraging and, as a greater interest is being taken in the improvement of stock there, the stronger becomes the desire for every farmer to own a fast horse.

EVERY horse on Rancho Cotati with the exception of Eclectic (brother to Arion, 2:10), and Holdfast, by Guy Wilkes, has been gelded. Mr. Page believes it is easier and far more profitable to take charge of a lot of fine geldings that will make first-class roadsters (if they never appear on the track) than it is to have a number of mischievous young stallions that take up the attention of a number of men to watch them, and he is perfectly right.

J. E. MCCOY, of Huene, says the hook of his stallion Ben Corbett, 2:21, has been filled with the names of some very choice broodmares, and he thinks it advisable not to give the horse to a trainer this fall, but next year he will have him prepared to make a very low record. Seaside, a full brother, and equally as handsome, will be given to a competent trainer this fall. He is far speedier than Ben Corbett was at his age, and is one of the finest-formed young stallions in Ventura County.

ADVICES from the Oakwood Park Stock Farm are very encouraging. Superintendent Wiley has had the mile track there placed in perfect order and Ed Lafferty, the capable trainer, has quite a string of promising young Steinways, Chas. Derhys and Prince Reds in hand and will have them ready for the races. There has been no sickness among the stock on the farm this year, the pastures never looked so well and the scores of choice horses and herds of cattle are rolling fat.

SINCE the bicycle sulky came into general use collisions have become almost wholly a thing of the past, notwithstanding one set of judges when it first began to be used pronounced it a "deadly machine," and ordered the driver who appeared in one to go back and harness to a sulky of the "regular pattern." From its construction, if, when the driver is in his seat, the horse rears he is almost certain to be carried over backwards, but in no other respect is there as much danger as there was with the old-fashioned, high-wheeled sulky.

CON GRIFFIN has four very promising trotters and pacers in his string of ten at the Oakland race track. Senator L., 2:29, by Dexter Prince, dam Fanny Bayswater, by Bayswater, is looking well and will, no doubt, earn a much lower record this fall. Alfred is a chestnut gelding by Ahbottsford that is being taught to trot to sulky; he is a head-strong, self-willed fellow and when once taught who is master will be a record-breaker. Con has a dark chestnut pacing mare and a yearling Dexter Prince that will be seen on the circuit this fall also.

THE following good advice from one of our exchanges is well worth reproducing: "Gentlemen of the trotting associations, every dollar judiciously expended in advertising brings five dollars in at the gate. Don't be afraid to begin early and then keep it up. Get a good man to keep your track and grounds in first class order, pay your secretary salary enough to enable him to devote more than his spare moments to the business of your association, introduce novelties in your programme, keep up with the times, and your balance sheet will show a good profit every year. But don't forget to advertise!"

E. P. OLCOTT, of this city, will have a large string of trotters out this season from Round Top Farm, Bernardsville, where Trainer George H. Martin is busy fitting them for the route. Some of them will start at Baltimore the first week in June, but the bulk of the stable will join the Grand Circuit at Cleveland or Buffalo. The string will include the six-year-old brown mare Happy Bee, 2:17, by Happy Russell; the game little chestnut filly Amelia, pacing record 2:21½ at three years, by Albert W., 2:20; Somerset, a speedy five-year-old gelding by Sorrento, and the three-year-old chestnut filly Surprise, the oldest foal of Mr. Olcott's young stallion Lord Eldon, a son of Meander, out of Xantippe, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Happy Bee has grown and thickened into a remarkably fine and powerful-looking animal, and should be a hard horse to beat in the 2:18 class.

IN the debate at the meeting of the stockholders of the American Trotting Register Association, Mr. Berry made the following remarks: "I shall have to take the same ground I did before, that a mare making a record of 2:30 would be a more desirable animal for a brood mare than many mares in the standard that have no speed, neither their sires nor their dams. It seems to me that a mare with a speed of 2:30 ought to be standard. The time is coming when our scale or standard, as I said before, will be based upon performances, and we do not want to take a step backwards. I think striking out Rules 7 and 8 is all right, but it seems to me that a mare with a record of 2:30 should be standard." To this statement Mr. Brodhead replied: "I will answer Mr. Berry just in this way. Mr. Berry makes a proposition that horses should be standard by performance. According to that we had better throw away our registers and say there is nothing in blood. In opposition to his statement, I would rather have a horse that is well bred, according to our general ideas of what a well-bred horse is, than to have a horse that trotted in 2:20, and the man that breeds to a horse without pedigree, with speed, will be excelled by the man who breeds to a pedigree without the speed."

L. A. RICHARDS, owner of the great sire Elector, has had Dr. Orvis, the veterinary surgeon of Stockton, at his farm at Grayson, castrating the colts of all ages sired by his horse. Mr. Richards has built a new race track on the place and engaged a competent trainer to develop the youngsters. A horseman visited the farm last week, and on his return declared he never saw such a large number of fine-looking, pure-gaited trotters out of ordinary mares in his life, while those from the best-bred ones were marvels of beauty and speed.

TO the superstitious it looks as though nature was taking a hand in regulating the horse business and getting rid of the over-production. Nearly every day lately witnesses the destruction of thousands of dollars worth of horseflesh from various causes. Besides the losses of valuable trotting-bred animals of wide reputation already reported, two other losses of $100,000 each have occurred within the past ten days, each the result of fire. At Warsaw, Ind., the stables of the Indiana Horse Breeders' Association were consumed, together with twenty-three imported and trotting-bred stallions, and down in Tennessee the thoroughbred horse owner, Chas. Reed, had a barn struck by lightning and twenty-five mares in foal to his $100,000 stallion, St. Blaise, were destroyed in the blaze that followed. These two fires, with the one at Mason City, Iowa, easily make a loss of $250,000. A quarter of a million dollars worth of horseflesh gone up in smoke in a period of fifteen days! Does it pay to keep a large number of valuable animals in a single stable?—Horseman.

THE Los Angeles Herald's racing reporter put in three bonns at Rosemead on Thursday last, and was entertained very hospitably by Mr. Harry Rose, who is in charge of the establishment. Comrade is thickening out into a very handsome stallion, and as he unites the Electioneer blood with that of Stamboul, his youngsters will soon be in demand. Vera and Faika stand in opposite stalls, the former having a record of 2:28 and the other of 2:28, at three and two years old respectively. The former has grown into one of the most magnificent looking mares that ever looked through a collar, being a rich brown with tan nose and flanks. She is filled out at four years old as much as most aged horses, and may be regarded as a well-furnished mare in every particular, the writer will be very much disappointed if she does not trot in 2:20 or better this season, for she is quite as powerful as Ruby and has a good deal better temper. Faika is a steel gray, but looks quite black at a distance. She is a smaller and more compact mare than Vera, and, as Harry Rose remarked, "was never sick nor sorry." The rest were all young things, all of good quality, but not forward enough in work to warrant one in forming a definite opinion of their quality.

It is always a pleasure to look upon a well-bred, well-made and well-trained colt, and when one looks upon the yearling owned by Millard Sanders, Superintendent of the Valensin Farm, a strong desire to ask the price is apparent. This youngster is a beautiful dark bay in color. He is by Patron 2529, out of Fanny Wilkes, by Geo. Wilkes, 2:22; second dam Belle Clay (dam of Amy King, 2:22, and Socratist, 2:25), by Kentucky Clay 194; third dam Betty Brown (dam of Anglin, 2:27; Wilkes Boy, 2:24, sire of eighteen, and dams of St. Vincent, 2:13, Lydia Wilkes, 2:17, Ellen Wilkes, 2:25, Georgiana, 2:26, Patchen Wilkes, 2:29, Glerstie Wilkes, 2:22, Amy King, 2:22, and Socrates, 2:25), by Mambrino Patchen 58; third dam Pickles, by Mambrino Chief 11; fourth dam by Brown's Bellfounder; fifth dam by Grey Eagle. Patron, 2:14, is by Pancoast, out of Beatrice, by Cuyler; second dam Mary Mambrino, by Mambrino Patchen 58, etc. The great broodmares Belle Clay, Beatrice, Bicara, Mary Mambrino, Betty Brown, Woodbine, Grey Rose, Chas. Kent mare and the Rodes mare appears in this pedigree, while the great sires represented stamp him as one of the choicest-bred youngsters in California. As a trotter he is very promising. That he will get a low record while in his owner's care is a certainty.

THE great free-for-all race that is to take place at the Buffalo Driving Park, Buffalo, August 4th, promises to be "the event of the season." The purse amounts to $20,000. It will be divided into two parts, $13,000 for the first race and $7,000 for the second, which will be a consolation affair. Any horse starting in the first race and not finishing better than fourth, will not be allowed to start, and as only ten horses are entered all but two will be able to get their money back and six will be winners. Entrance money will not be due until July 17, and the fee is but 5 per cent. Following is the list of entries April 24th. It is expected that A. Spreckles' fleet mare Hulda will also be in the list, but her name had not been received on the above date: D. Wiggins' h m Martha Wilkes, 2:08, by Alcayne; Budd Dohle's ch m Belle Vara, 2:09, by Vatican; V. L. Shuler's b g Greenleaf, 2:10, by Simmons; Standard Trotting Horse Company's h m Alix, 2:10, by Patronage; Bob Stewart's h g Walter E., 2:11, by Patchen; Mambrino Village Farm's ch m Nightingale, 2:10, by Mambrino King; Jewett Farm's h s Favora, 2:19, by Patchen; Anderson's h m Nightingale, 2:13, by Osgood's Patchen; Monroe Salishury's ch g Little Albert, 2:10, by Albert W.; Scott McCoy's cb g Ryland T., 2:11, by Ledger Jr.

THE five-year-old mare Canary Bird, 2:19, whose record was made as a three-year-old, died recently in Independence, Ia., the property of C. W. Williams. She went a mile in a race last season in 2:13, although unable to win the heat, and was expected to trot in 2:10 this year. An added poignancy is given Mr. Williams' natural grief on the loss of so valuable a mare by the fact that his paper, the American Trotter, tells him in so many words that losing the mare was his own fault. The Trotter makes the death of Canary Bird the text for a sermon on the foolishness of owners who are anxious to put mares in the breeding ranks as soon as they get themselves records instead of keeping on campaigning them as long as they are able to win money in their class. Referring to Canary Bird, the Trotter says: "It is almost a certain thing that she would have won a large amount of money, but her owner, like a majority of breeders, seemed to be anxious to assist all he could to bring about the over-production of the trotting-bred horse, and instead of trotting her, as he should have done, he bred her. Last week she and the colt both died, and for his short-sighted policy her owner has now neither colt nor mare, and no trotter to take her place in the 2:20 class stakes." It is tough enough to lose a fast young mare, but to then be lectured for your folly by the editor of your own paper is indeed gall and wormwood. However, it is gratifying to note that Mr. Williams, the editor, does not hesitate to rip Mr. Williams, the horseman, up the back whenever occasion for this drastic treatment arises.—Breeders' Gazette.

The Saddle.

TELARE was to have had races Thursday and Friday of this week.

MARTINET is a sure starter for the American Derby, no accident occurring.

PERRY McKENNA arrived at Bay District track from Hanford, Cal., late last week with Ruth, Lady Gwen and a few others.

LONGSTREET, so the track watchers say, will hardly be gotten up to a race this year, as there are already signs of lameness evident.

BILLY LAKELAND'S Victory has been given up as a hopeless horse and will be shipped to W. H. Forbes' Farm near Boston to be retired.

ARTHUR BENNETT, the celebrated artist, now in this city, has recently made excellent pictures of Topgallant, Hulda and other turf celebrities.

MIDNIGHT, the black Accident gelding, has been returned to his home in Santa Barbara sound and well. He will probably be seen on the Southern California circuit this fall.

THE Kentucky Derby, May 10th, is another stake the Cushing & Orth stable have a good chance to win with either Lookout or Calhoun, now that King Lee is on the hospital list.

THOMAS H. WILLIAMS' horses captured three out of the six events contested for at Bay District track last Saturday—St. Croix, Cadmus and Tigress, though the former's was a foul victory.

LADY VIOLET is conceded to have a better chance than any other filly eligible to start in the Derby, although Col. North's Eltham Queen improves in favor as the date of the race approaches.

LEONAWELL, now 12 to 1 for the Brooklyn, is at Gravesend, and was punch-fired a short time ago. He is as fit as a horse can be got, working five furlongs in 1:03½, going easy and under a pull.

DR. THOS. BOWHILL, as an amateur photographer, is a great success. Last week he presented us with a most excellent picture of his Australian horse, Chesterfield, and it is a splendid likeness of the son of The Marquis.

CENTENELLA, the Mariner—Catalina filly owned by Senator W. Thompson, of Nevada, is declared to be phenomenally fast up to and including a mile. In fact, she is said to have shown better trials than the illustrious Martinet.

NEITHER Sir Francis nor G. W. Johnson is likely to start in a race until they meet in the American Derby. The former will have the advantage of having the best trainer, Matt Byrnes, and the best jockey, "Snapper" Garrison.

We understand Frank Van Ness, owner of the great Morello, Fitzsimmons and others, will not be allowed to start his horses on any of the Turf Congress tracks, he having been disbarred from the trotting turf for alleged crookedness.

The judges are the handicappers for the Blood Horse meeting. This much we learned from Presiding Judge Riley, who stated that any one could have learned who did the handicapping had they taken the pains to ask the proper persons.

The turf operations of some of the English magnates are colossal. During 1891 and 1892 Baron de Hirsch won upon the turf in public stakes about $210,000. Of this amount $198,125 was distributed among several large London hospitals.

SO FAR it looks as though this was going to be an off year with McCafferty. He loses his best colt, Rees, now he has to shoot old Hoeksey, and he can not win a race, but it is fair to say that he has not yet started anything above a selling plater.

DAN DENNISON, acting for Mr. Macdonough, has sold to A. F. Gonzales, of this city, the hay two-year-old colt by imp. Cheviot—Verona, a mighty good-looking youngster. This is Mr. Gonzales' first venture in the thoroughbred line, we believe.

THE Kendall Stables, of which that great filly Yo Tambien is the bright and particular star, will this year begin its racing season at Nashville. Yo Tambien, though only taking slow work as yet, is said to be a greatly improved mare in appearance.

BALDWIN is said to have a filly by Cheviot that has gone half a mile in 0:47½ over the Santa Anita ranch track. Whether it is the filly out of Atalanta II. or some other mare is not known, but the one from this mare is declared to be lightning.

SENATOR THOMPSON last Saturday telegraphed $200 to a Chicago hook-making firm to place on his horse Martinet, and it was done. "The ticket will read $20,000 to $200 Martinet," 100 to 1 being the odds. The price was immediately cut down to 50 to 1.

OWNERS of thoroughbreds will please remember that declarations in the Grant & Hesing Stakes and Garfield Park Derby, Garfield Park, Chicago, are due May 1st, and the same will be received at the club's office, Deming Hotel. Joseph Swigert is the Secretary.

HON. L. J. ROSE, it is said, may send East a small but select string. He at present owns the black Mariner colt Bordeaux, that won last week, and a grand-looking chestnut two-year-old by imp. Cyrus. It is said the Los Angeles gentleman has taken a decided fancy to Misty Morn and Rosebud, and may purchase them.

IMP. WHISTLE JACKET, the property of Milton Young, has established a record in England. Before he crossed the Atlantic he had made his first season in the stud. This year three mares produced to his cover seven foals, one triplets, the other two twins. It is to be hoped that he will not try to beat this record at McGrathiana.

C. J. BIRD (Vancouver) has purchased the great thoroughbred stallion Oregon. The horse will be for the present in the stud at his farm on Fourth Plain. As soon as the Portland new track is in condition he will be moved there. Oregon is a chestnut horse by Monday, dam Planetia, by Planet, therefore a half-brother to Fortress and Ned Cook.

LITTLE interest seems to be taken in the Brooklyn, the first of the great spring handicaps, as compared with former years, one of the reasons being that Lamplighter, now at 6 to 1, is looked upon as a cinch. Lucky Judge Morrow may repeat again, however.

THE Lake Country (Ore.) Agricultural Association has arranged for four days' interesting racing, to begin on the 30th day of next June. Some fine sport is in store, for there are a nice lot of promising youngsters in training for the event—Jacksonville (Or.) Democratic Times.

HENRY SCHWARTZ last Saturday bought at auction at Bay District track the hay two-year-old colt by St. Saviour, dam Nighthawk (dam of Garcia), by imp. Haddington. Consideration, $500. This colt belonged to the Shafter estate. Wilber F. Smith sold a two-year-old for $105.

THE light-weight jockey, Piantoni, is bound by contract to G. Van Gordon, of San Simeon, Cal, for $5 per month for a term of three years yet to run. His employer had loaned the lad to "White Hat" McCarty, but now insists that he go back and work out his contract.—Daily Spirit.

MR. CORRIGAN, at the request of a number of horse owners in California who have animals engaged for the event, has consented to postpone the running of the Chicago Derby, a Hawthorne Park event, until some time in June, instead of running it on May 16, as was at first intended.

MIKE DWYER recently offered $2,500 for Prince George. "Father Bill" Daly promptly refused the offer. Subsequently he was offered $8,000 for the colt, which was also declined. The Brookwood stable have sold their two-year-old colt Dare Devil, by Willful—Garrote, to M. A. Coleman.

MARCUS DALY resigned as president of the West Side Racing Association last evening and Thomas Lavell was elected to succeed him. F. E. Shaw was elected vice-president and A. C. Holmes secretary. D. P. O'Connor will continue to be the assistant secretary.—Butte Inter-Mountain, April 20.

DAN MILLER'S string goes along with the crack Undine Stable horses. Mr. Miller will take the great Charmion, the two-year-old bay Argyle colt, Gordius, and Relampago, a strapping hay two-year-old colt. Relampago, is by Three Cheers—Narcola. Dan Meeks trains the Miller horses.

"TWO-YEAR-OLDS in Training, Foals of 1891," is the title of a most useful little volume, giving the names and pedigrees of nearly all the two-year-olds in training in America. It was compiled by C. F. Knippel, of San Francisco, and printed by the Pacific Printing Co., 533 California street, this city.

THE recent rich addition to the ranks of turfmen, Richard Crocker, of New York, had hard luck last week with both Fairy and Longstreet, who were defeated in their first race of the season. Fairy ran second in her race, Prince George winning, while the famous Longstreet was ninth in his race.

THE yearling produce of the Ellerslie stud will be sold in the paddock of the Brooklyn Jockey Club on May 19th. They comprise the get of Eolus and Charaxus, and among the lot is a sister to Russell, a brother to Charade, Mahelle and Charter, and a sister to Hammie, besides other well-bred youngsters.

PERA, a sister to the famous Iroquois, has foaled a colt by Himyar that is thought to be the best foal yet dropped in Kentucky. Major Thomas, who owns the mare, was offered a long price for the foal in utero, but declined the offer, as he was sure that the foal, if it lived, would fetch a big price as a yearling.

THAT good "horse" paper, the Breeder and Turfman, issued since its inception, over a year ago, at Nashville, Tenn., has moved its headquarters to St. Louis, Mo., having only a branch office in the Tennessee capital. They will fit up a parlor and reading-room in St. Louis for the use of visiting horsemen.

VIC JENKINS, that thorough young horseman, has taken charge of the Kennedy horses lately handled by Tom Bally. Included in the lot are Charmer and Mackey. The former signalized her change of trainers by running a good second to the great Charmion, giving dust to Conde, Steadfast and others. Vic is very popular, and in his hands the horses will not suffer.

A NEW daily sporting paper, called The American, was to have come out in New York on the 1st of May. George H. Dickinson, for several years past sporting editor of the World, is the managing editor, and Richard Croker, the Tammany chieftain, and Michael F. Dwyer, the turf magnate, are said to be the backers of the paper. Turf news is to be a specialty of the new publication.

In a few days a carload of horses will leave San Francisco for St. Louis, Mo. Among those that are hooked to go are Lottie Mills, Pescador, Misty Morn and Rosebud. It is intended to take along six tons of California hay. E. J. Baldwin has done this for years, as he found out by experience that the average California racehorse does not thrive so well on the Eastern product.

JAMES R. KEENE'S broodmare Sundown (by Springfield, out of Sunshine), foaled April 4, a hay colt, by Ayrshire, which is said by the Cobham Stud groom, Shipley, to be the highest and best he has ever seen. Atala, another of Mr. Keene's mares, foaled a chestnut filly, by Amphion, on the 6th inst., and this is described as "a grand one." Seven out of the eleven mares have now foaled.

GLENLOCH, the dam of George Van Gordon's excellent colt Articus, was burned to death at Charles Reed's celebrated Fairview Farm, Gallatin, Tenn., on the 13th inst. A broodmare barn was struck by lightning, and twenty-five mares perished in the flames. Most of these were in foal to imp. St. Blaise. Glenloch was a bay mare, foaled at Palo Alto Stock Farm, February 1, 1887, by Flood, dam Glendew, by imp. Glengarry, therefore being a sister to Guenn and Geoffrey.

CHARLES MORTON, the English trainer who visited San Francisco, said the Australian horse, Highhorn, that won the Viceroy's Cup this season in India, would be a good horse in any country. If the British expert be correct, what a great horse Carbine must have been to give Highhorn fifty-three pounds and a heating over three miles of ground. This the Australian champion did in the Melbourne Cup of 1890, when he carried 145 pounds to Highhorn's 92. Carbine at that time was five years old, Highhorn the same.

E. F. FALLON, of Hollister, has a magnificent-looking colt in the four-year-old Hathaway, son of Ironclad and Skipaway, by Wildidle. He is 16.1 hands, weighs over 1,100 pounds, and has shown six furlongs, according to report, close to 1:17 over the owner's ranch track, though not in training at present. Some clever horseman should purchase this horse, when can, we understand, be bought at a very reasonable price.

DICK HAVY left Sacramento last Monday at about noon for Chicago with the famous Fair string, twelve in all, including Yo El Rey, Dare and Flood Gate. The last-named pair, American Derby candidates, will doubtless render a good account of themselves, as their work of late has been very satisfactory. Of Yo El Rey every horseman that has ever seen him at his work pronounces him the equal of any colt that ever saw daylight on the Pacific Coast, and El Rio Rey, Emperor of Norfolk, Mollie McCarthy, Gano, Geraldine, Sir Walter, Zaldivar and King of Norfolk were a fairish lot as youngsters, too.

THE Macdonough string, in charge of the veteran trainer, Henry Walsh, left San Jose last Sunday morning for Brooklyn, N. Y. It is said the Walsh lot has been thoroughly weeded out, so that everything in the bunch is considered a stake animal. If Monowai and Parasite are not heard from as winners, we will say San Jose horsemen are sadly off in their calculations. Grandee, in the mud, will be hard to head, but on a dry track he is only about fourth-class. The youngster by imp. King Galop—Ghidella, will be a crackerjack or we miss our guess, and the Cheviots out of Lizzie P. and Young Flush are declared to be as fast as the proverbial bullets.

THEODORE WINTERS will send an excellent string of nine horses to St. Louis on the 5th of May, in charge of "Tip" Williams. J. J. Grant, the genial superintendent of the Nevada's ranch, who was at the Baldwin Hotel last Sunday, kindly made public the list of horses to be sent (nearly all Nevada-bred), as follows: Pyramid, ch c, 3, by Joe Hooker—Addie O'Neil; Advance ch c, 3, by Joe Hooker—Aval; Royal Prince, ch c, 2, by Prince of Norfolk—Ballinette; Little Tom, ch c, 2, by imp. Great Tom—Florence A.; Van, br c, 2, by Attila—Polly Vic; Donello, b f, 2, by Jumbo—Sooner; Tanthe, ch f, 2, by Jumbo—Silvia; Tzetta, br f, 2, by Jumbo—Rozzetta; Pedigree, b f, by imp. Saxton—Butteress. "Tip" Williams, the trainer of the above, has been with Ed Corrigan for some years past, and handled G. W. Johnson, Hiron and other celebrities.

RACES have been arranged to come off on the new kite-shaped track at Gonzales on the 2d day of May, as follows: At 10 o'clock in the morning a stake race, trotting, best 3 in 5, for $30 for each horse named, will be decided. In this race there have been named the following nominations: Clark's Budd Dohle, Widemann's Fred H., Rodriguez's Bay Pete and Davis' Brown Angel. Promptly at 2 p. m. the running race, 600 yards and repeat, for a purse of $40 entrance added, will be called by the judges. Following are the entries: W. Handley's Dexter, H. Handley's Red Rover, Nixon's Bee's Wing, Rutherford's Hayseed, Clark's Polly Hopkins and Widemann's Country Girl. The last race is trotting, best 3 in 5, for a purse of $60, with entrance money added. The entries to this event are: Chrisman's Emmett, C. Beatty's Calcutta, Gordon's Keno (p) and Brockman & Widemann's Klukluck.

A NEW YORK dispatch dated April 22d says: "Very little interest is being taken in the Brooklyn handicap this year. The race is less than three weeks off, and as yet but little talk has been heard concerning the entries in the race. Lamplighter has not been taken up yet, and it is almost a certainty that he will not face the starter during the Brooklyn meeting. Raceland, Fidelio and one or two other handicap candidates are racing at Elizabeth, but little is heard of any others save Judge Morrow, who is to be raced into condition at Washington. The racing appears to be at the mercy of three or four candidates, and this may be one of the reasons. At any rate the bookmakers have refused to make a future book on the event. The Morris string, now at Elizabeth, will be shipped to Washington, with three exceptions. They are Aleppo, Clismic and Wolsey. They will remain in Fred Littlefield's care until the Washington meeting is over."

E. F. FALLON'S two Judge McKinstry fillies, Easter Lass and Mollie Rogers, are working in a manner highly pleasing to their owner at the ranch track, near Hollister, and will, in all likelihood, be heard from later on in the season as winners. The first-named is from Tallula, by Enquirer, second dam Tallula, dam of five winners and the dams of Miss Ford and Reporter, etc., on to the twentieth dam, while Mollie Rogers is from Ursula, by Duke of Montrose, second dam Sozodant (dam of So-So), by Longfellow, and on to twenty-first dam. Judge McKinstry, by Grinstead, dam the famous Kate Pease, by Planet (dam of Marigold, Centella and Lurline) never had many well-bred mares sent to him, but the dams of Easter Lass and Mollie Rogers are certainly bred "in the purple" and from our greatest racing and producing families. Mr. Fallon owns a yearling brother to Easter Lass called Rayo del Sol (Ray of Sun) that it would take a heavy sum to purchase, as Judge McKinstry is now dead and he desires to retain this fellow for use in the stud. Maximilian, a fine-looking Birdcatcher colt, two years old, we are informed is going to be a race horse, and great hopes are entertained of Dashaway, another son of Birdcatcher, out of a Wildidle mare.

LAST week was prolific in events of paramount interest in thoroughbred circles, and may safely take rank with that week in 1887 which saw the Ives pool bill go on the statute books. Thursday the "legitimate" season of racing began at the track of the New Jersey Jockey Club, Elizabeth, N. J. Friday the Saxton bill, sounding the death knell to pool rooms in this State, was passed in the Assembly by the practically unanimous vote of 112 to 7, it being opposed by Messrs. Dinkelspiel, Mitnacht, Rice, Roberts, Robinson, Roche and "Dry-Dollar" Sullivan. Their names are given for the benefit of posterity. Saturday the famous edict of the Board of Control against winter racing was revoked. This "boycott," as it has been called, went into effect December 22, 1891, after being in existence a little more than a year, and during which time it has worked much injustice and been almost universally condemned by liberty-loving and fair-minded lovers of the sport, at the close of a stormy session lasting five hours on Saturday, the following preamble and resolutions were given out: "Whereas, Racing during the winter months is now prohibited by the legislative enactment in New Jersey as well as in New York. Resolved, That the resolution of this Board of December 22, 1891, be and is rescinded. 2. That all disabilities incurred for contravention thereof be and are removed. —W. S. VANDERBILT, secretary."

of cold blood, though as a rule the "high behind" racehorses have broader loins and bigger fillets than their plebian relations.

The depth through the heart, the quality and the general pose, every foot coming to the ground in the right place, and if a sort of intuition could be depended upon this was the champion which Mike had selected. There was only a quasi-admission, however, on the part of Fox, and he told of so many wonderful gallops and that every one under his care was sure to have plenty of brackets when the seasons rolled by.

A Salvador from Electric has all the marks of racing, and could hardly fail to show superiority of form when his ancestry is recalled. Half-brother to a whole lot of celebrities including Hidalgo and Fitz James, and then his grandam, Hennie Farrow, with a galaxy of stars to her credit. A handsome color, bay with some white markings, and with a rare flight of speed, Mike says.

Scarcely a shade inferior to the Salvador is the St. Blaise-Flavina colt a chestnut with a modified Gladiator mark in the face, and a Milner from Gloriana, also chestnut with narrow white stripe in face, both fore feet white and a long stocking on his left hind leg, is a brother to Kempland, and likely to make one that could go the route from his near relationship to Marigold.

A St. Blaise filly from Mentmore Lass, a handsome shade of bay with the Turkish standard marked in her forehead, is one of Mike's special favorites, and if she comes up to his prognostics she will win heaps of money.

A Maxim suckling, her dam Corrinne, was in the paddock adjacent to these stables, and as the opinion I have entertained of this fashionably-bred Australian is very high I was pleased at the opportunity to see one of his get. Not at all disappointed, for though a foal has to commence to shed its first coat before an authoritative dictum can be spoken, this one will fill the bill of those who are experts in babyhood formation. The stable boys of the olden time had a sure test to pick out the colts which were cut out for four-milers. If in their first gambols they encircled their dams four or more times that was enough, and it must be admitted that it was a simpler method than studies of genealogy. Although this young Maxim was older than the rule admits, if long, easy and fast gallops are a criterion, it is a born racehorse.

The drive to the Bottom is over the rolling hills, the road, a private one, a good part of the way between immense areas of growing grain alternated with open woodlands. A beautiful view from the crest of the hill which overlooks buildings, fields, orchards and paddocks and hundreds of horses, young and old, on every side. A change of name is an improvement which could well be made. That it bears must have been given when the rich bottom land on the north side of the American river was the only thing to distinguish it from the hilly part of "The Grant," and now when it is the headquarters of hundreds of thoroughbreds and not a few highly-bred trotters it is worthy of a fitting appellation.

With the exception of Alexander—brother to Foxhall—all the stallions are domiciled on this part of the Rancho. A grand collection. Salvador, Sir Modred, Darebin, Midlothian, Maxim, Tyrant, Ben Ali, Fitz James, Hallowinass (brother to St. Blaise), St. Andrew (son of St. Simon), Calvados (a son of Galopin) and several others of note. The late purchase of Mr. Reed, when in England, Martenburst is also a member of the band, and a magnificent animal he is, which is to be expected from his double strain of Newminster, with Melbourne, Ratanap, Birdcatcher, Kettle drum in addition, and then in direct descent on the female side from Queen Mary. A rare collection, worthy associates of the grand collection of celebrities found in the near kin of the collaborators in continuing the rich flow of blood on this side of the continent, a joining of the best strains of England, Australia and America.

Fortunate in reaching the breeding quarters at the time when nearly all of the stallions were brought out, and also fortunate in seeing a number of mares which were to be coupled with them.

So far as could be learned from a brief inspection of peculiarities of forms the selection of stallions was made with good judgment. When it appeared as if the shape of the one selected was not as good to effect deficiencies as that of another, the reason given was either that the "nick" had proved successful or that the blood lines governed. As has been stated before two hundred and forty mares and some twenty stallions give an unrivaled opportunity for selection, and then the many years that have elapsed since breeding racehorses was commenced there have afforded the best of all tests results of previous trials.

Salvator was, as might be expected, the greatest attraction. I had only seen him once before, over a year ago, and while a change was looked for, I was not prepared to see as much difference as there is. It may appear absurd to claim that in the past eighteen months there could be a structural change, and whatever variation there was must be due to more or less flesh, in a horse that was foaled in 1886. However out of the way the estimate may be considered, I have no hesitation in saying that there is a big difference. He looked rather light in body and a trifle long in limb to be in absolute proportion then; now all I have to say is that he is so nearly my ideal of perfection in shape, that of all the horses I have ever seen El Rio Rey is the only one that I consider his equal, and it may be that my favoritism for the old mare's family may sway my judgment, though if it does it is an unknown influence. At all events I would freely walk from sun-up to sundown, and that would be a good many miles, to see them together.

If Mr. Winters will send his horse to the State Fair at Sacramento this fall, it is altogether likely that Mr. Haggin would gratify the thousands who are interested in the highest type of horses, by sending Salvador. Not to compete for a premium—a higher aim, an "object lesson" which would teach more effectually than all the professors of horse lore in all the colleges.

When such horses as Midlothian, one of rare form, Martenburst, Maxim, Darebin and Sir Modred have to be rated second, though good seconds, nothing more is needed to express my opinion. Greatly taken with Midlothian, I saw his son, Sir Walter, win in the East last May, and another son, Monowal, win here. Neither at first glance appeared capable of doing such great things, but on closer inspection there was evidence of capacity, especially tokens of invincible gameness.

If, however, I were to descend upon the stallions at Rancho del Paso in proportion to my appreciation, there would be little room for anything else. The colts which are to be sold are of the most interest to the readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, as even among the few people I have met since the visit to Del Paso, there have been numerous inquiries and perseverance in questioning that shows how general the interest is spread. To those who are aware of the perplexities attending picking out the best from a small band even, it is not necessary to state that when there is one hundred and forty odd, the difficulty is increased in a ratio which is simply appalling to one who realizes the highness of the job. I shall not attempt it. As heretofore stated in taking notes of colts in addition to written out description, signs are appended. Thus a cipher signifies that the animal is inferior, one x that the colt is above the average and a greater number of crosses a token of extra quality. Comparing with notes of previous years which have been laid away, there is quite a preponderance of x's, very few ciphers. These signs, however, are only indicative of form, and though I am always gratified to find that the crosses agree with the breeding, it is not always the case, and hence there may be conflicting elements to embarrass the choice.

The colts are kept in the large groups of boxes on the hills, the fillies in those which are among the paddocks. Fifty-four colts, and there was no time to indulge in conversation or listen to the remarks of their attendants, had there been a disposition to talk. Not so sanguine, perhaps, as Fox, though the numbers would militate against individual praise. To copy some of the notes, omitting calistholic signs: No. 1, chestnut (markings not copied), by Joe Daniels—Wai, nicely sloped, but rather small. No. 2, bay, by Ben Ali—Fedalma, well formed and on racing lines. No. 3, bay, by Ben Ali—Regret, good size, powerful, and truly shaped, and from the marks the pedigree was looked up and in that the Bonnie Scotland, Lexington, imp. Eclipse and Vandal were in harmony with the signs. No. 4, bay, by Kyrle Daly—Music, a fairly shaped colt. No. 5, a bay, combining Ben Ali and Darebin blood, a likely colt. No. 6 is a very trimly made youngster by Sir Modred from Blithesome, and No. 7 chestnut by Sir Modred—Pandora, is highly formed and racing-like.

Even when the notes are cut down to limits, as tersely stated as in the above extracts, by the time that the list was got through with it would be very tiresome reading, and were the notes copied in full, it would not only fill a great deal of space, but give a wrong impression. In some instances a page is taken up with the description of a colt which was greatly fancied, and then only a line or two, with accompanying marks, which showed that the briefly sketched colt was more to my fancy than the other. Actually in going over the notes there are so many complementary lines and such a sameness of language in praise that I am averse to giving them publicity, as it would have the appearance of a desire to extol so many as to lessen the value of the portraiture. And the praise is not restricted to the get of the horses which have already won distinction, or to the full brothers or sisters of celebrities. There are crosses, and plenty of them, after the get of Midlothian, Hidalgo, Alexander, Ben Ali, Tyrant, as well as Sir Modred and Darebin. The Salvador colts are after the type of their sire, and in all probability when he was of the same age the same objections might have been made to the colt which afterward developed into the greatest racehorse of the day, as will be offered to his sons. As great interest will be felt in the first of his get, the notes are copied descriptive of a son and hereafter of a daughter.

Salvator-Vandalite, chestnut dark shade, large star, left hind foot white, good size, high on the croup, tail set on after Arab pattern, middle piece rather light, but good depth of chest, shoulder well placed, good neck and fine in the throat, head good, somewhat leggy, but every "angle" of the right degree, all of the points indicative of speed. Quite similar the notes of the other Salvador colts, "following" the sire in conformation. Likely as the colts are to race, and if they fail to be of very high class, especially the — I will leave the space blank, I will not be the only one disappointed, and previously, too. The fillies by him are surely destined to future eminence. To keep the Salvators together the description of the Miss Woodford is copied.

Salvator-Miss Woodford, brown, small star, good size, big quarters, middle piece strong, well-placed shoulders, tapering neck, fine muzzle, prominent eye, wide between fore legs, large arm, medium gaskins, immense muscles back of the stifle for a yearling, set of the legs just right, ditto setting on of the tail, high over the croup, while carrying the most resemblance to her mother there is a blending of both parents.

I am almost tempted to predict that when the crucial test is applied the filly which beats the daughters of Salvador will be the best of her year, and that is not pinned on the Miss Woodford filly alone. Others could be selected which in my opinion will give her a race, and there is one out of an untried mare, that if I were racing, any stake within my means would be gladly entered into. Then there is another untried mare that is the dam of a Salvador that pleases me exceedingly, and a grey Salvador that is likely to bring that color into fashion.

In extolling the Salvador fillies it must not be taken for granted that I hold them superior to the get of the other stallions, which from a conservative point of view would be rash to say the least.

There is only one thoroughly reliable standard to be guided by, that being public running. Form, blood, performance of the parents and others near of kin, are a safe guide, in fact, when the form will stand rigid scrutiny with approval, and the form and performance of the sire, especially, meets the requirements of an exacting critic, there is little risk and yet if that he supplemented by progeny already of high standing in racing calendars then the "glorious uncertainty" in breeding youngsters is reduced to a minimum.

In reviewing the notes of the fillies and comparing them with the records, I find that the first one with crosses attached is from a mare that has a son with 1:40 1-5 on a circular course to his credit. Another is from a mare which ran seven furlongs in 1:23, the best on record, and which won $23,200 in her three-year-old form. Another has a dam which was a great race mare, and the sister to a great racehorse; another the dam of a good winner, and so in nearly every instance where these marks are found, they will be backed by the records. Proud to congratulate myself on falling "into line with facts," as when the crosses were made no thought was given to the breeding, though this self-glorification had not so good a foundation as was thought. There are so many celebrities among the mares at Rancho del Paso, that it was like shooting into a flock that was closely packed, and if even the gun used was choke-bored, execution must follow the shot. But as some bear marks which are the first foals, if these prove correct predictions, there will be some satisfaction. But in one instance where the crosses come in the sire is untried, not one of his get having started, and it is the first foal of the dam who has no racing record, so that here is one case where individual form is not supported by the usual backing; the exception which proves the soundness of the rule.

In selecting individual descriptions from the get of a few stallions, it must not be inferred that the Darebins and Sir Modreds, the Hidsigos and Tyrants, the Midlothians and Ben Alis, the Kyrle Dalys and Alexanders are unworthy or have been overlooked. There are twenty-six Sir Modreds, twenty-five of the get of Darebin, fifteen by Salvador, thirteen by Hidalgo, twelve by Kyrle Daly, eleven by Tyrant, ten by Ben Ali, eight by Joe Daniels, six by Midlothian, four by Alexander, five by John Happy, three by St. Blaise, the horse which sold for $100,000 at auction, the largest price ever paid for a horse at that kind of a sale, and one by the great Fremont, out of the dam of Salvador. It is scarcely necessary to repeat that I consider this year's showing of the Australian sires fully up to previous exhibitions, and for reasons heretofore given, they please me better. I have never surrendered the belief entertained from the time Darebin reached this coast until now that his merits as a progenitor would ultimately rank very high. Already there have been illustrations that the faith was well-founded, his daughter, Kildeer, having the race record, 1:37, for a mile and quite a number of sons and daughters which have gained the distinction of "brackets." It would be superfluous to do more than allude to the Sir Modreds, so well known as the speediest horses on the turf and the biggest kind of winners. Tournament earned over one hundred thousand dollars, Sir John $31,000, Sir Matthew $29,660 and Dr. Hasbrouck, who is still regarded as the fastest horse on the Eastern turf, $25,825. As I have contended in the opening pages of this sketch, the advantages which will result from the adoption of the present methods of mating and rearing, over the old plan, will be manifested whenever these colts are trained, and still more decidedly when running in races, and shall rest contentedly in that belief until demonstrated. It is a question in which all breeders of racehorses are interested, and fully justifies the scope given. There could not be a better test of the small paddock, forcing system than prevailed on this farm. It is rather a misnomer to call it by the terms used, as from weaning time, until well on in the winter the foals had the run of the big fields, and the main difference now is that the time for long straight-away gallops has been extended to within a month, or a little more, of the time of shipment. The paddocks were never small compared with those on eastern farms, now they would almost merit the name of fields in their present shape. It is safe to assert that if present methods do not prove superior, when the grand touchstone of racing is brought to bear, the former is the better system, as the trial has been carefully conducted.

The trotters were not forgotten in the short visit to Rancho del Paso, but it will hardly be fair to the harness division to tuck them on to the end of such a big thoroughbred procession as that which marches over the bottoms and hills of Rancho del Paso. A company in comparison to the battalion of aristocratic lineage though hearing an imposing front, and gallant appearance.

A Visit to Ormonde.

John Kent, the veteran trainer, has been paying a visit to Ormonde at Waterbeach, and in an article which he has contributed to the Anglo-American Times, he says:—Ormonde is looking remarkably healthy and well, considering that he has just gone through a voyage which lasted for three weeks. Moreover, he is not so full of flesh as most horses are which have been turned out of training for as long a period as he has. Not being let down, he has rather a leggy appearance, more especially with his handages on. He stands fully 16 hands 1½ inch high. I never saw a horse better made over his loins and hips, his second thighs and hocks being also very good. I cannot say much for his largeness of bone. His other defects are that he is rather light-bodied, and perhaps a trifle long from the hock and knee downwards. He has rather a plain head, and is thick and deep in the throat—a defect which I pointed out to the Duke of Westminster when his Grace was good enough to have the horse walked round and round so that I might examine him thoroughly at Newmarket, just after he had won the Free Handicap, A. F., in the Houghton Meeting, 1886. Take him altogether, he is certainly a magnificent specimen of the race horse, and, oddly enough, he reminds me of Mus, a horse bred in 1833 by the Earl of Burlington (great-grandfather of the present Duke of Devonshire). Upon the decease of the Earl in 1834, his Grace, the fifth Duke of Richmond purchased Mus, and the horse, having no engagements, ran at three years old for the City Plate at Goodwood, one-mile heats, which he won after running four heats, in which he beat a fairly good five-year-old mare named Famine. Mus ran in fifty-five races, of which he won seventeen at all distances, including four Royal Plates; and the Orleans Cup at Goodwood (two miles and a half), in which, being eight years old, he gave thirteen pounds and a heating to Mr. Lightwald's Hyllus, aged five, after the latter had run second to Charles XII, the day previously for the Goodwood Cup. All this has come back to my memory from the singular resemblance to Mus (who ran, by the way, until he had completed his tenth year) which Ormonde bears. I should mention that Ormonde's shoulders are better than those of Mus; indeed I never saw better or deeper shoulders on a race horse than Ormonde possesses. From the general make and character of the latter, I should say that compact-made nudes, such as many of St. Simon's daughters are, would suit him best. It is, I believe, the intention of his owner to move him to Newmarket before long. At present he is standing at Mrs. Bennett's stables, at the Richmond Arms, Waterbeach, close to Goodwood Park, in which, by permission of the Duke of Richmond, the horse takes two hours' exercise, walking and trotting, every day.

Now and Then.

Maud Muller on a summer's day,
Raked the meadows sweet with hay.

That was the poetry of hay-making—the modern style is so much easier and more practical. Cut your hay with one of those Adriance Buckeye Mowers and rake it with a self-dumping sulky rake (the Tiger preferred), and haying is easy, and surpasses the old style for cleanliness, by the use of these modern improvements no clods, dust or dirt is gathered in with the hay. Baker & Hamilton have the mowers and rakes, and, by the way, they have just received a full car load of those celebrated "Deal" carts.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

GOOD PROSPECT.—So far as can be estimated from present indications, the Spring Trotting Meeting is sure to be successful. If that estimate prove correct it will insure a general adoption of many of the novel features inaugurated by the Pacific Coast Association. In my opinion that means a great deal more than is apparent from a casual survey of the grounds on which the new edifice is to be erected.

The foundation is built on the certainty of increased public favor following better entertainment. Close and exciting contests, without waste of time, are the dependence for exciting interest, and these conducted in a way to insure honest, straightforward sport.

I have not the least hesitation in promising that these conditions will be fulfilled and that a great majority of the races will be stubbornly contested, and that everyone of them will be free from fraud. In some of those already closed, the colts races for instance, there may be a decided superiority in favor of one or two of the contestants, but should that be the case, a fine will be obtained which will enable the management to arrange others in which there will be an equality in those engaged. Every race will afford data for others, and among as many horses as are already promised to be in attendance there can scarcely be a failure in obtaining good fields. Five or more races in an afternoon will occupy the time, and with the celerity in carrying the programme through, which is guaranteed from the past management, there will be no dreary intervals between heats and races to weary the spectators.

It is promising a good deal when that promise entails honest trotting in every race to make it good, and still I have little, I might say, no scruples in making that now. Under as rigid a scrutiny as will be maintained, and with guards who are familiar with the schemes of crooked operators, the chances are largely in favor of discovery, and with the knowledge that certain punishment will follow an attempt to swindle, it will be a hold man who accepts the risk. It will be better to say an ingrained fool when one has so little sense as to hazard expulsion with so little in sight, and it is well known among those who are in a position to engineer "a roh" that expulsion for throwing a race, or attempting to throw a race, with this Association, is equivalent to perpetual banishment. Now that the Racing Association, in which are joined nearly all of the main Western and Southern jockey clubs, recognize and enforce the sentences of expulsion of members of the National and American Trotting Associations, and which is likely to bring concurrent action from all the clubs, the hands of the tracks will find no harbor of refuge. No chance for a change of base, and race courses will be free from the pollution of their presence.

There are few of that class among trotting men in comparison with the numbers who are guided by as nice a sense of honor as prevails in any other business circles, but the trouble has been that the taint of the few has permeated the whole body, and the laxity in punishing and the readiness to condone done immense injury to the sport. The era of swindling trotting races has come to an end. There is a feeling prevailing all over the country among the men who are most interested in sustaining trotting and the breeding of trotters that the loose practices of the past shall not be tolerated in the future. The press has been derelict, and papers which claimed to be guardians of trotting interests have failed in their duty, some of them so far as to apologize for, and in a few instances commend, flagrant trespasses. A great change in this respect has taken place in the last few months. The controversy over laying up heats has had a beneficial effect in opening the eyes and brightening the intelligence of people who heretofore looked at offenses against honesty in trotting as of trivial importance. The mistake, to call it by as light a name as possible, came from a general belief among young and inexperienced turf writers that laying up heats and, as a necessary sequence, laying up enough of them to lose races, was a cute management and a common practice for sharp drivers to follow, but the paper which permits that kind of writing to appear in its columns hereafter will have little influence.

I met several of the most influential supporters of trotting sport in Chicago last January, and there was cordial unanimity in agreeing that the first and greatest necessity in the way of popularizing trotting was to enforce rigid rules against laying up heats, and to give the public assurance that no such management as heretofore has been tolerated, will be allowed to prevail. This determination has given the smart drivers a subject for study, and those of that class who have brains enough to reach a conclusion will see that the only course is to go straight.

In this connection I am pleased to write that the "turf papers" are now on the right side, and that The Horseman has exerted a potent influence in shaping the change. Its fearless course in denouncing wrong-doing in high places merits the praise of everyone who desires the future prosperity of the "trotting turf" (another of the objectionable phrases in horse literature), and though the medicine may have left a bitter taste in the mouth, the effect has been salutary. Now this general acquiescence in the necessity for purification has an influence which reaches our side of the continent and lessens the difficulty of enforcing the most stringent rules in the way of disciplining those who have to be coerced into honesty. But I must also write that there are few of the class which require coercion connected with trotters in this country, and therefore, with the aid of those who will ardently join the association in making fraud difficult to accomplish there are good grounds for the assumption that the coming meeting will be free from the incubus.

And now there is one more point which will be briefly treated, that being the speculative side of the question. Were the association to ignore the propensity of humanity to speculate on "chances," a grave mistake would be made. It would be practically the acceptance of a big deficiency in the receipts. In order to make the commissions as light as possible, to give the investors the cheapest system of brokerage known, apart of "betting out of hand," mutual pools have been adopted in place of hooks. Heretofore I have given my objections to bookmaking on trotting races, and there is no necessity for recapitulation. The gravest objection to mutuels that the investor is ignorant of—the rates he will obtain until the race is ended, or nearly ended—is overcome by the knowledge that in at least ninety-nine cases in a hundred that the odds will be greater than would have been given in the hooks. To those who are at all apt in arithmetic, it is only necessary to state that in the mutuels the commission is five per cent.; in the books it must range from fifteen to fifty per cent., or even more, to cover the extra expense of carrying on the business and leave a margin for profits. Then the profits go to the backers, after deducting the commission. An outsider wins, as was the case in the race which Pescador captured, and all the Pescador money is in the hands of those who will invest it on the same conditions. Into the pouches of the hookmakers, and it is guarded by odds which are worse than the old California rates of five per cent. a month, compounded at the end of every thirty days, until the fairest possessions were burdened by a load which transferred them to the cute handlers of a few dollars in the start and a huge percentage to change them to thousands.

Another objection was that the small bettors had no opportunity, but mutual boxes which admit an investment as small as can be made in the hooks overcomes that. The big operators can take care of themselves, and I must admit that if either had to suffer the leviathans would be the party and not the minnows. Those who only need a small amount at stake to heighten the enjoyment of the race are the ones which the association should take every pains to please, and fortunately with mutual and auction pools, small and great can be gratified. An honest contest for their money, however large, however small, an absolute guarantee of fairness in handling the funds by those in charge, and the speculative department is amply provided for.

QUALITY.—There are a great many things in horse literature which cannot be left to slumber for only short periods, and then some clever resurrectionist brings them out of the wrappings and around they go again. A little change of wording, perhaps, a line or two interpolated, and it is safe to say that in every succeeding circuit it will have a far wider radius than that which it covered before. The appended extract, cut from The Horse World, and credited by that paper to the Country Gentleman, is one which cannot be kept covered for any length of time before it is started on a fresh journey. And in the main, the definition of quality, as applied to horses, is correct, though in the endeavor to enlighten there are several claims which cannot be sustained. A long ear is not necessary shape, and fineness being the test, a small eye, if properly set and with an intelligent expression, the withers may be low, but if the shoulder blade be well placed and the neck "sprung" from that point of junction, so as to lend an air of elegance to the carriage, that will come within the rule. That which has been given the most emphasis, viz.: "good, flat clean bones in the legs, as against round, coarse bones. But this does not mean small, light bones" is nonsensical. The cannon bones are never flat in the common acceptance of the term applied, which, unquestionably, was intended for a flat clean leg. A cannon or metacarpal bone when the fore leg is meant, is nearly round the flattened surface being the posterior and therefore the greatest diameter is across the leg. I have the metacarpal of a thoroughbred horse which about midway between upper and lower extremities has a diameter of one and three-eighths inches, measuring across what would be a line parallel with the spine, and a longitudinal diameter of one and one-eighth inches, the flatness therefore being crossways. A coarse bone will show greater flatness in the same direction. The term flat bone is frequently used to convey the idea of a flat leg when the relative measurements of bone ligament and tendon are the proper criterion. A proper balance between the osseous and tendinous structures, and these in harmony with the size of the animal which constitute a good leg.

Like nearly all the other "points" in the horse, horsemen will differ in regard to quality. One will claim that the animal under "inspection is full of quality," another will claim deficiency in that respect. Briefly stated it is the antithesis of coarseness. An antique cut gem, or a cameo of excellence, may be said to show quality in a high degree. Earthen ale mugs, called "Tobys" are the reverse. Even these opposites are scarcely further apart than a coarse member of a coarse family of horses differ from a thoroughbred of quality. Sometimes great racehorses are deficient in quality, great race mares rarely without a fair inheritance. Miss Woodford has less than Firenze, although far from lacking in that much-admired attribute. I have heard "a weed" extolled as an embodiment of quality, and a "ploughboy" pronounced a paragon; when both together were not worth their accoutrements. And yet with the exception of "ribs with good spring from the spine, and hips of good width," would fill the following bill fairly well:

The term "quality" is difficult to define in describing horses, and yet its meaning is well understood. Some confound it with "style," but it is quite distinct. Style depends largely upon action, while the term quality may be applied to an animal at rest, standing quietly in his stall. It is made up of many things in a horse. It means thin open nostrils, as against heavy, close ones; a large, prominent eye, as against a small, sunken one; a long, thin, pointed ear, and not a thick, clumsy one; a neck well cut up in the throat and of good length, and not a short, thick one; clean sloping shoulders, as against heavy, straight ones; withers rather thin and high, as against those thick and low; rise with good spring from the spine, as against flat-sidedness; hips of good width without roughness, coupling rather straight, buttocks not too steep or too narrow, mane and tail with rather fine, silky hair, and, as important as any one point, it means good, flat, clean bones in the legs, as against round, coarse bones. But this does not mean small, light bones. Now, "quality" is an indescribable mingling of all these, together with an air of excellence. It is impossible to give the exact formula. The horseman perceives it as once when he sees the animal, but he can't put his finger on it. We see it in men, we often notice it in women, we know it when we see it, but we never stop to analyze it. We should rather revolt at the idea. We are happy in the consciousness that it is there.

NOT CORRECT.—In the Kentucky Stock Farm of April 20th Iconoclast, in reply to an article in The American Horse Breeder, writes: "So far as Pilot Jr.'s very fast performers are concerned, I did not know before that he had any. The fastest is Pilot Temple, 2:24, which would not now be considered a 'low record.'" As that was made in 1871 when the stallion record was 2:22 it should be considered fast now. But Pilot Temple is not the fastest of the get of Pilot Jr. as in 1864 John Morgan trotted in 2:24 and at that time the best on record was 2:10 and that the only mark which was not a good deal outside of 2:20. John Morgan was from a thoroughbred mare, and I trust that Iconoclast's antipathy to near strains of thoroughbred in fast trotters is not the cause of his lapse of memory. Then Tattler, a son of Pilot Jr., and a thoroughbred mare trotted in 2:26 in 1868 when five years old and that was by far the best mark for a stallion of his age, and also "the record," at that day.

Probably the fastest Pilot Jr. ever foaled was Queen of the West, but she needed the steady tendency of a thoroughbred dam to make her speed available as was the case with John Morgan and Tattler. Queen of the West hauled a wagon a half a mile in 1:03, but her fastest record is 2:26—and in very many of her races she was nearly uncontrollable—Governor Coleman, of the Rural World, owned and sold her to Henry Graves, of Chicago, and Graves told me that if an editor could drive her at the rate he had seen before purchasing, Rocky could drive her in 2:10 to a dead certainty. When Rocky, and a far better man with a nervous, rattle-headed trotter, John Williams, failed, I had to remind Mr. Graves of his prophecy and with the query added "Would it not be a good thing to send her to the editor?"

The Pilot Jrs. were, as a rule, "crazy-headed," which near crosses of thoroughbred in the dams did much to remove. When I first bought Clifton Pilot he could not be driven around a track, but that came from brutal usage. In a little time he became docile, and had it not been for a bad leg, would have trotted very fast. St. Louis horsemen were partial to the Pilot Jrs., and a large number of them were owned there, Pilot Temple, Dixey and Tackey being the only ones to distinguish themselves so far as I can recall.

"TROTTING PITCH."—"Aurelius" and "Iconoclast" have joined forces in reproaching the slang phrases, and oftentimes silly phrases which are in common use among those who write horse. "Miss Russell," of the San Francisco Call, antedated them in a vigorous onslaught on the propensity, and surely the war was commenced on good grounds. Plenty of provocation, and there are good grounds for the belief that the lecturing will result in a modification of the practice. But the Eastern knights of the pencil equine also place a taboo on the word I have italicized without showing the reasons for banishment or suggesting a better. It is a good word and hard to replace, and after a good deal of "hustling" among the convolutions of my brain, cannot think of one that will take its place. Just as well to discard human from the vocabulary of polite literature as equine from that which is necessarily burdened with a sameness of incidents involving repetition that is difficult to circumvent. It is Mount St. As to a grain of sand that there is no other one subject that is so much written about and talked over as equine affairs, and of all the branches of horse lore, the trotting horse entails the deepest study, has the largest array of professors, and though students are in the minority, once in a while a freshman in the college where equinity is taught, and these may be induced to adopt a better method of expression.

Incited by the efforts to ameliorate the condition of readers of equine literature, I have put on the war paint, have clutched a weapon which may prove a boomerang, and with a whoop-lah as sonorous as the bark of a sea-lion, proclaim that henceforth the compound word "TROTTING-PITCH" must be barred, and that before the first of January, 1895, for owing to the immense increase in trotting-horse journals, the space that is given in all the big dailies to subjects "pertaining to, or resembling, a horse" (that is the Webster definition of equine) that trotting pitch will be iterated and re-iterated billions of times before the millennium commences, when the high-standard folks will be in an ecstasy of happiness.

"Dame Winnie has the trotting-pitch" and that is the reason why three of her sons and one daughter are in the "charmed circle"—(hear in mind Judge that I am quoting) says one. "Electioneer had the trotting-pitch in an abnormal degree and that accounts for his 'prepotency' in getting fast trotters from thoroughbred and half-bred mares," says another. But if I were to quote one-thousandth part of the sentences read and spoken in which that nonsensical moral is repeated it would tire the most invertebrate stickler for a high-behind, low-before trotter. In no sense is it a trotting inheritance. A great many of the thoroughbred yearlings among the one-hundred and forty at Rancho del Paso are high over the loin, the filly by Salvator from Miss Woodford decidedly so. Among the old-time quarter-horses it was a common configuration, especially those of Printer origin. Frequently associated with powerful muscular development, and ability to get into a full stride in a few bounds. In this way it may be beneficial to fast trotters, but in place of calling it by a wrong name let that conformation, which is not at all peculiar to trotters, be described in words that convey a true meaning.

The Haggin Sale.

The annual spring sale of trotting, harness, work and draft horses, Mexican and Shetland ponies from the ranchos of J. B. Haggin, will take place Thursday and Friday, May 4th and 5th, at Killip & Co.'s salesyards, corner Van Ness Avenue and Market street. The catalogues have just been issued and contain the names and pedigrees of some very choice-bred ones. A number of trotters have been purchased at these sales in the past that have proven to be fast and game racehorses. Guided by the experience of the past, a better class of mares has been bred to the best stallions on these farms, consequently the produce which will be offered next week excels any heretofore offered. There are numbers of fine work animals suitable for all purposes, besides about forty head of choice Shetland and Mexican ponies for children. These little fellows are valuable and more attention is being paid to their breeding in the United States than ever; they are as hardy as an Esquimaux dog and cost very little to raise. On all of our stock farms a few of them are to be seen. Let everyone attend this sale, and as it will last two days there should be no complaints heard, that bargains were secured by the ones who come first. Send for catalogue.

Some Dont's in Horse-Shoeing.

Don't have your farm horse shod unless the wall is worn so short that the sole is wearing away. Until then shoeing is unnecessary.

Don't allow hoofs to become ragged and uneven, but with a rasp keep them level.

Don't patronize an inferior blacksmith, nor leave the shop until your horse is shod.

Don't have shoe fitted until the hoof is properly shaped by use of a rasp—too or heel lowered until the foot is at the correct angle, sides lowered until exactly level on a level surface, and this can not be done by sighting over the bottom. The blacksmith usually takes more off of the inner side, which tilts the foot out and the ankle in.

Don't have the hoof burned to fit the shoe, but fit the shoe to the properly shaped hoof.

Don't have long, dull, nor uneven calks and toes, as they frequently produce strains.

Don't have heavy shoes or large and many nails, as they are unnatural and harmful.

Don't allow rasp or knife to touch sole nor outside of the hoof, as they protect and keep the foot moist.

Don't allow a horse to wear shoes too long, because the hoof grows, the shoe does not.—National Stockman.

LODI LEAFLETS.

Some Facts About the Famous Race Track and the Country Surrounding It.

The stories about the superiority of the Lodi track to all others in this State have created more or less jealousy, mingled with curiosity, among the horsemen who have "pitched their tents" beside the many other tracks during the winter. The stories are not exaggerated, and a visit to this course in winter, or in fact to any part of the country surrounding it, will convince one that here, at least, is the ideal soil for a perfect race track.

Lodi is thirteen miles above Stockton on the road to Sacramento. It is on the southwest corner of a plateau of about twelve square miles of the richest silt or sediment land in California. It is traversed by the famous Calaveras river, from the banks of which, and along its pebbly bottom, many of the miners of early days washed out the yellow metal that lured them to this golden shore. The soil of this section is free from gravel, stones or adobe. Its productiveness has made the owners wealthy, for cereals, fruit trees, vines and small fruits thrive and yield enormous crops. As far as the eye can see the stately oaks stand out like sentinels above orchards, gardens, meadows and grain fields. The residences are all substantial and elegant, and an air of thrift is noticeable everywhere.

To speak of the great enterprises that are as yet in their "healthy infancy" would take up too much space; the latest one, however, called the "Armstrong Fruit Company," deserves a little notice, but it is only one out of the many that will make the name of this portion of the State famous throughout the world. The Armstrong farm consists of three thousand acres, devoted exclusively to the raising of fruit. Every variety of tree and bush that can be mentioned seems to thrive as if this was their native soil. Figs, olives, oranges, lemons, apples, peaches, pears, almonds, walnuts, quinces and hanautas are planted side by side. It seems as if every inch of the soil can be made profitable, for the strawberries, blackberries, raspberries, currants, grapes and melons yield more plentiful crops here than in any other place on the Pacific Slope. The San Francisco, Sacramento and Stockton markets are supplied with watermelons, that grow very large and abundant on this soil. The crops of wheat and barley harvested every year are also very heavy, so it can be seen that the rich country around the famous Lodi track aids materially in forming a most favorable impression on the minds of the visitor.

The track is about a quarter of a mile from the center of the town of Lodi, and, as the road is perfectly level and smooth at all times of the year, every one walks in and out to it. The town itself contains about 1,200 inhabitants, a large number of whom have lovely homes and live in luxurious ease, while the rest are engaged on the various farms and orchards adjoining it. The track is as level as a billiard table, except at the turns, and they are thrown up to the regulation pitch. The soil, as I have said before, is peculiarly adapted for a race track. It is of a porous nature and never muddy; the water percolates through it, and in three hours after the heaviest storm the track is fit to work horses on. When the rains are over the surface is sprinkled and the very lightest of harrows scrapes it even. The velvet-like elasticity of the soil never gets the horses' feet and muscles sore, and it seems a pleasure for them to exert themselves to do their best whenever called upon. The infield is now a waving field of grain, and many tons of hay will be cut from it next month. The stalls in the buildings along the western side and around the "lower turn" are large and commodious; about seventy-five of them are now occupied, and will be until the races on the circuit commence.

In the first three stalls were noticed M. F. Tarpey's three thoroughbreds; they are just recovering from the effects of a touch of distemper, and appear to be getting along well. There is a two-year-old colt called Chevy Chase, by Cheviot, out of Jennie Belshaw, by Wildidle; Border Lassie, a good, compactly built Cheviot, out of a Wildidle mare, and a Jim Brown two-year-old colt called Alert, out of Not Idle, by Wildidle. They are receiving slow work at present and will be prepared for the races this fall.

Thos. Wall, who made his first appearance on the turf last year with the "plow horse" Aster, and gave him his record of 2:16, has a few promising trotters here and they show evidence of being well cared for. He has a gray Sidney called Sildet that is out of a mare by Silverthreads, and, unless all signs fail, Sidney will have this one to his credit this fall.

In the adjoining stall is Albina, by Alhria, out of a Chieftain mare. Alhria is by Algona, out of Contra, by Electioneer.

Antioch, 2:26½, by Antevolo, out of Fanny, by Mambrino Wilkes, is also one of Mr. Wall's good ones. Antioch looks far better and stronger than he did last spring, and his hoof, which was injured at that time, has entirely healed. He is one of the finest-formed and purest-gaited trotters at the track, and we hope he will prove a "second Aster" this year for his painstaking owner.

Dan McCarty has a string of Dexter Princes in charge of M. Costello. They are all doing well and will be seen on the circuit this fall if the great and only Daniel returns. They are all fast enough to enter the charmed circle now.

Messrs. Keating & Ottinger seem to have the majority of the good horses here. Thos. Keating has been taking extra care of them, and their fine condition shows they are almost ready for the fray.

In the first stall is a very promising mare by Dexter Prince out of a daughter of Hamilton Chief, that, as a pacer, will be a good one to bet on if there are any split heats, although she has never been given a mile yet. Mr. Keating says he does not know what she is capable of, but believes she will do.

Aster, 2:16, was the next one looked at; he has more the appearance of a race horse than he had last year and as he has become used to the change of life from the harvest field, he seems to enjoy the change. If this horse gets over the habit he had of making a stand-still break and then gaining the lost ground by trotting at a two-minute clip he will do. He seems to have more sense this year, and it is hoped for the sake of his backer that he has forgotten his "sky-climbing, stand-still breaks." Aster is a wonderful trotter, and if nothing happens he will lower his record this fall.

Our Dick, 2:10, the game son of old Gibraltar, does not seem to change much; "he has his speed with him" at all times, and therefore he needs very little hard work. This smooth-going side-wheeler will form one of the string to go

East this year. He is wise as an old man, and knows everything that his driver wants him to do, and never makes a mistake.

In the adjoining stall is the dark brown gelding Ottinger, 2:21½. He is not much to look at as he stands in the stall, but he improves on acquaintance as he comes down the home-stretch and under the wire. Ottinger is the making of a tough, game-like trotter. He has a pure, tireless way of going, and sticks to the trotting gait with a tenacity that makes him a formidable contestant in a race; he has only been worked quarters and halves. Mr. Keating believes in the "brush" system of training. Ottinger will return to California with a record below 2:20, anyway, this fall.

Flora M., 2:16, stronger and better than ever, is in the next stall. This is the first winter she has ever enjoyed good health. She showed a desire to quit caused by a weakness across the loins last fall and appeared unable to untrack herself, but now there are no signs of any such trouble. It cannot be claimed she is entirely well; campaigning will prove whether she is or not, but at present she looks well.

Menlo Fallis, 2:27½, by Fallis, is also one of the string. He is owned by P. J. Maloney, of Menlo Park, and for beauty, style and disposition and perfect trotting action there is not another at the track like him. He is taking to his work well and should get a much lower mark. This stallion will attract attention wherever he goes.

Flora B., 2:22½, is a very smooth-moving pacer, and will be a good one to bet on if the race is prolonged. She is by Mambrino Wilkes.

Free Haney, formerly of Petaluma, has quite a long string of youngsters, none of them; however, have ever made any stir in the trotting world. He will "astonish the talent" with a few pacers, however, this fall.

Chas. David, the well-known trainer has a new barn, adjacent to the long row of stalls, well filled with trotters and pacers. He has a strawberry roan pacer by Upright, dam thoroughbred, that will enter the list this year. Upright was by Hambletonian 725, out of Gilroy Belle.

In the next stall is a Dexter Prince colt out of a Bayswater mare; nothing has been done in the way of developing this one.

There is a pacing mare here called Geraldine, sired by Mt. Vernon, that will be seen in front of many fields of pacers this year if she keeps on improving. She belongs to Dr. Clark, of Stockton.

The Sidney colt out of the dam of Directa, 2:28, belonging to Prof. E. P. Heald, is doing well; he is remarkably level-headed and will make a valuable horse when he gets a little older.

The gem of the collection is the black two-year-old, by Dexter Prince out of Luella (dam of Myrtle, 2:19½), by Nutwood 600. He has a set of legs like iron, and in conformation is one of the strongest made, yet he shows a great deal of quality. He is a pacer and one of the Flying Jih kind, no hoots are needed and the even way he moves stamps him as one of the best youngsters in this State. Mr. David has a right to be proud of him, and whenever Senator Benj. F. Langford comes to look at the colt he feels as happy as if some of his pet measures in the Senate had received the Governor's signature. This sturdy pioneer has a beautiful farm about five miles from Lodi that is under thorough cultivation and if diversity of crops is sought for his farm will be found unequalled in this respect by any Californian. He is a thorough horseman, and a remarkably good judge of what a good horse is.

J. H. Johnson has some trotters here that will "win the duets" for him this year. He has a chestnut colt called Dusk, by Dawn, 2:18½, out of Kitty Irvington, that's a hummer, and will be "a chip of the old block" when the hell rings. He is very much like his sire in color, size, disposition and gait.

He has two Dexter Princes out of a mare by Reliance that will prove valuable in the 2:30 classes, and besides these he has three others that are also doing well in the way they should go.

Everyone seemed to be glad to welcome the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN representative, and on all sides words of praise were heard which caused one to believe that the fraternity which exists among horsemen makes one of them "feel at home" wherever he is, and that one is

ARNAREE.

The Yearling Colt.

If you stint your colt, your horse will always show it. See that colts do not get infested with lice or worms, and if they do, take speedy steps to rid them of their parasites, for until you do they will never thrive. For worms in colts a good home remedy is turpentine. It should be mixed with a little milk or beaten eggs and given when the howels have been opened by a dose of oil. Turpentine is poisonous in large doses.

During the long winter there is nothing to wear down the colt's feet, and towards spring the toes have grown very long and should be trimmed off with a pair of sharp pinchers. If nothing else is at hand, a sharp chisel and mallet will do. Neglect of this matter is frequently the cause of ringbones and other deformities.

The colt is now a yearling, and if he is a male the question arises what is the proper age for castration. My practice is to advise the castration of all colts not intended for breeding at a year old. In some parts of the world the practice is to castrate the suckling foals, but apart from the fact that in many suckling colts testicles are not detachable, there are cases of scrotal hernia—in other words, cases where part of the bowel occupies the sac along with the testicle—and these it would be imprudent to touch until at least a year old, when the development of the colt has probably effected a cure. As for leaving the colt until he is two years old, I do not see any advantage to compensate for the annoyance that most entire colts give between one and two years old. There is a popular idea that it will thicken the neck and improve the carriage of the head, but I think it is a fallacy and have seen no cases to support the theory.

As for the proper time for the operation, there is no doubt colts do better after it when they are on grass, so it is well to have it done not earlier than the middle of May. But with reasonable care the operation can be safely performed at any time of the year. Regarding the manner of it there are many modes of operating—some good and some bad—but with a skillful operator a bad method sometimes produces good results, and I would advise the selection of a good operator and to leave the result to him. The loss from the operation, if well done, is very slight, and the colt will seldom show any bad effects from it.—F. Torrance, V. S., in Exchange.

Valencia Farm.

The heavy rains of last winter have made the pastures and meadows on this famous farm "look as green as an emerald sea." The broodmares, with young foals by their sides, are knee-deep in the luxuriant and succulent grasses and alfalfa; the yearlings and two-year-olds that are not restrained by harness or straps are reveling in the air of freedom and taking all of the enjoyment out of their surroundings they possibly can. The cottage facing the entrance is almost hidden by vines and climbing ivy, fragrant lilacs and roses, and the green lawn, shaded by lofty cypress, pines and flowing acacias, appears prettier than ever. The neat stallion barn, wherein the mighty Sidney held court for months, is deserted, however. Since his departure to a colder clime his old box-stall is vacant. The track, which it faces, has just received the finishing touches of the track superintendent and is in as perfect condition as when Fausta, Frou-Frou, Faustissimo and the other great ones were driven upon its velvet surface. The infield is dotted with a score or more of lusty colts and fillies that eat, play and appear to forget that some day they will be beating time on the circle surrounding them. They are all bays, blacks or browns—not a gray nor off-colored one is to be seen.

Down in the neat rows of stalls fronting the hollow square, about one hundred yards from the cottage, are twenty-three yearlings sired by Sidney out of mares by Aberdeen, Dictator, Brown Wilkes, Alcantara, Buccaneer, Privateer, Strathmore, Combat, Valensin, Patron, Flaxtail, Allendorff, Nutwood, Capt. Webster, Pilot Medium, Red Wilkes, Le Grand, Arburton, Crown Point, Echo and other famous sires.

Mr. Millard Sanders has just had the youngsters halter-broken, and is beginning to prepare them for the races this fall. It is a pleasing sight to see how this driver goes around the youngsters. Ben Chehoya, his assistant, is also a worker, and between them they manage to keep pretty busy handling about forty yearlings, two-year-olds and three-year-olds. Mr. Sanders has not selected any favorites yet, but says that among those he is handling he believes he has the 2:20 yearlings by Sidney, and the two-year-old record will also go to one of that horse's progeny.

The methods employed by this trainer in handling youngsters are all original, and he has the rare faculty of knowing when a youngster has enough work and does not sacrifice their limbs to beat the tireless hands of a chronometer. The work he is doing this year, although not started as early as that of 1892, will be productive of better results. In about one month a better idea can be had of the way the youngsters are moving, and a more intelligible line can be had of what they promise.

The premier stallion here is called Direct Line. He is a bay horse, of magnificent proportions, sired by Director, 2:17, out of Lida W., 2:18½ (dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½), by Nutwood 600; second dam Belle, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31. When he first came here he was a little unbalanced in his gait, but under Mr. Sanders' guidance he goes as smooth as Directum, and shows a marvellous turn of speed. Direct Line will be given a record this fall. He is royally-bred, and as an individual would attract attention anywhere.

The broodmares are looking strong and well, and the crop of foals this year will be up to the average. Every care is taken of them, and as they fill the ideal individually and collectively of what a hand of broodmares should be, the spectator will never forget the pleasure it gives to see them. These mares, with their foals, should never leave California. They were selected by one of our greatest judges, and their produce by Sidney will be seen on the race tracks in all parts of the United States. It is the intention to send the yearlings, two-year-olds and all these mares, with their foals, to the Eastern market this fall and dispose of them to the highest bidder. The stock farm (and it is a model one in every respect) will be placed upon the market, and if a syndicate were to purchase the whole establishment just as it is, and build upon the foundations already laid, there is no doubt that it would prove a very profitable investment. In a future article we will describe the stock more fully.

The Terrible Fairview Fire.

Charles Reed writes the Daily Spirit of New York, as follows:

GALLATIN, Tenn., April 13.—Last night we had a dreadful electrical storm, accompanied by heavy rain. At 11 P. M., one of my finest stables, containing 40 boxes, each 16 feet square, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground.

It contained 2,500 bushels of oats and over 100 tons of the choicest clover and timothy hay. All was lost. The greater loss was, however, the burning of twenty-eight mares. I enclose a list of the mares killed. At 12:30 a. m. all was gone.

With the dreadful storm that was going on it was possible to save only five mares, notwithstanding all the help we had to use. It is all for some good purpose, I suppose.

Yours sincerely, CHAS. REED.

HOOF-BEATS.

CLEANLINESS is the best remedy for skin disease. Animals breathe through the skin as well as through the lungs; keep the pores open.

BUCK McCANN, Lookout, Boundless, Don Alonzo, Metuchen (C. H. Gillock), and Martinet are the only Derby candidates who have started this spring.

OUT of nine trotters that have gone better than 2:10, five are mares, while but one among the seventeen pacers to go below the 2:10 mark is a mare; all the others are geldings or stallions.

THE new phrase, "The horse that pulls the plow should get the fodder," is attributed to the Senator from North Carolina. This is a felicitous variation of "To the victors belong the spoils."

SPEAKING of the prosperity and progress of trotting in England, the London Sporting Life says: "It is very evident that trotting as a pastime is gaining daily in favor with English sportsman."

An excellent opening for a first-class trainer can be found at the Hueneme race track. A really competent man can get as large a stable of horses there as he can possibly handle. Address T. H. Merry, Hueneme.

MR. SPIERS has finally made up his mind that any attempt to train Major Domo is hopeless, as the big horse has been going lamer and lamer, and will be definitely retired to the stud, where he is likely to make quite a name for himself.

DIRECTUM, 2:11; Nightingale, 2:13; Little Albert, 2:10; Ryland T., 2:11; Walter E., 2:11; Moquette, 4, 2:10; Lord Clinton, 2:10; Kittie Bayard, 2:12, and Magnolia, 2:12, were bred outside of the standard and had to trot their way into it.

THE Dwyers were granted a license for their Elizabeth (N. J.) race track, which has been idle for more than two years. It holds good for five years, and they are to pay in all $25,000 for the privilege. The racing will begin on April 15th, and continue one month.

THE celebrated brood mare, Beatrice, the dam of Patron 2:14, Prodigal 2:16, and Patronage, the sire of four in the list, two of which have records better than 2:15, is now owned at the Shults Farm in Brooklyn, N. Y., and recently foaled a dead filly by the pacer, Thistle 2:14.

DR. HARTKILL, the Louisville veterinary surgeon, thinks the injury which King Lee sustained will only be of a temporary nature. The trouble from which the horse suffered last winter has nothing to do with the present mishap. By the wrenching of his leg he will be set back in his training for a week or ten days.

THE Messenger (San Luis Obispo), says: "We are sorry to learn that F. W. Barstow intends giving up the race track grounds. Under his brief management things looked very promising, but not so much so to Mr. Barstow as he had been led to expect. He proposes to sell off considerable property and effects and return to San Jose.

BOB SMITH, the clever jockey trainer, leaves Helena with Kirkendall string about May 1st for Denver, where Nevada, Montana, Clara Porter and others of the string and Bob's Spokane colt, Three Forks, will run. From Denver the horses go to Washington Park, Chicago. The horses are receiving fast work at the Montana capital.

PIERRE LORILLARD has returned from the South, where he has been spending the winter, and is now at his farm at Johnstown, N. J., where he is a daily watcher of the horses he has in training there under the management of Mr. Higgins. While Mr. Lorillard looks to be in perfect health, the contrary is the fact, and he is constantly under the care of a physician.

THE light-weight jockey, Felix Carr, had a great day at Hawthorne Park recently. He piloted four out of the five winners at odds of 3 to 1, 9 to 5, 4 to 1 and 3 to 1 respectively. He rode the favorite, Quotation, at 2 to 1 in the other race, but was unplaced. In one race he had a succession of bad luck, in getting off badly and then being cut off, but in a rattling finish got up in time to win by a nose.

ON public form St. Florian ought to capture the Metropolitan Handicap, the only question being, will he stand training. Up to the time he broke down at Coney Island last year he was the best horse of the season. This was shown in the Fort Hamilton Handicap, when he gave Lamplighter eight pounds and beat him easily, the field including Fidelia at 100 pounds, Leonawell 115 pounds, and Charade 110 pounds—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THREE spring meetings open up this year, to-day (April 29), Lexington, Nashville and St. Louis. As St. Louis will get the pick of the horses and attract the majority of Southern race followers, the meetings at the other two tracks are not likely to amount to much. Louisville and Latonia will have St. Louis and Hawthorne to contend with. The East St. Louis track will also keep open and do its share to interfere with the success of all these meetings.

THERE is no question as to Don Alonzo starting, in the American Derby, as Phil Dwyer, as well as the Eastern public, believe him to be a sure winner, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. There is a good deal of reason for this opinion, as he is now in form, as shown by his easy victory over Prince George. He is regarded by many as the coming three-year-old. He has a stride like that of Potomac, the winner of both the Futurity and Realization stakes, and his easy gait and action seem well-nigh perfect.

THE following are the recent foals at Kalamazoo Farm: Chestnut filly by Ambassador, 2:21, dam Eminence, 2:18, by Empire 1378, second dam Soprano (dam of three in 2:30) by Strathmore 401; third dam Abness (dam of two in 2:30), by Alhion. Chestnut colt by Ambassador, 2:21, dam Charlotte by Nelson, 2:10, second dam Lady Lambert (dam of Crete, 2:30) by Daniel Lambert; third dam by Toronto Chief, 2:31. Chestnut colt by Ambassador, 2:21, dam Opera by Robert McGregor, 2:17, second dam Zilpah, by Cnyler; third dam Zither (dam of Look, trial 2:22), by Woodford Mambrino; fourth dam Tulip (dam of Ulva, 2:27), by Abdallah 15. Bay filly by Ambassador, 2:21, dam Ethel Mack, 2:29, by Anteeo, 2:16, second dam Lou Milton (dam of two in 2:30) by Milton Medium.

WE learn that a new judges' stand will be built at Bay District track. At least the top story of the present grotesque structure will be torn down and the place so arranged that the judges will be on the level with the horses' heads—as it should be. As at present arranged a horse running on the extreme outside of the track might be lost sight of. The contemplated change is a very sensible one.

AMERICAN horsemen will be represented at the sale of the late Abingdon Baird's horses, and it is thought that the three-year-old Meddler, by St. Gatien—Busybody, will be secured for this country, as his English engagements are cancelled by his owner's death. It is considered he would be most valuable here in the stud, as Meddler's blood is the most highly-prized in England, his dam, grandam, and great grandam all having won the Oaks, a case unparalleled. Busybody herself is in the Baird lot, and also Merry Hampton, who won the Derby of 1887 and was second for the St. Leger.

LAST Tuesday afternoon Judge Hunt handed down an opinion by which he interprets the somewhat complex verdict rendered by the jury in the suit brought by Thomas H. Williams, to recover possession from Porter Ash, of the mare Geraldine and certain colts. Judge Hunt decrees that under the verdict Williams is entitled to recover possession of Geraldine, the colt by Alta, dam Merilee; the colt by Alta, dam Dizzie Blonde; the colt by Alta, dam Thetis, and the colt by Ed Corrigan, dam Smilax. Should Ashe not desire to deliver the animals he must pay to Williams $4900, that being the amount of the lien on the property.

REPORTS from Morris Park state that Rey del Rey is attracting much attention, and although he has not done any fast work yet, as he is not being hurried, it will not be safe to back him out of the calculations for the big handicap this year. Fred Taral a few days ago worked Pessara a half mile in 0:58, but the horse does not seem himself yet. Pittsburg Phil's Parvenus and Wormser are being worked daily, and look in fine form. Eph Snedeker's black gelding by Pontiac-Groffe worked a half mile in 5 1/2 seconds with ease, and is likely to make his mark this season. Pickpocket is fast getting into form and looks as though he could run a good race now.

GEORGE FREDERICK, the English Derby winner of 1874, arrived here April 4th on the White Star steamship Bovie, consigned to Mr. J. A. L. Straty, of Montreal, Canada. As a sire he has been responsible for Frontin, winner of the Grand Prix in 1883; Beau Brummel, winner of the Woodcote Stakes in 1882; a favorite for the Derby which fell to St. Blaise's share, Montezuma and Colorado. George Frederick is a son of Marsyas and Princess of Wales, by Stockwell, and consequently brother to Albert Victor, sire of Mr. Pierre Lorillard's stallion, The Sailor Prince. The same vessel also brought the thoroughbred Roquefort, one of the finest "fencers" ever seen in England, and winner of the Grand National Steeplechase in 1885. Roquefort is to appear on the stage in one of Mr. French's new plays.—New York Herald.

A DISPATCH from Hartford, Conn., dated April 18, says: The directors of Charter Oak Park Driving Association met last night to take action in view of the law relating to pool-selling, purse-racing and other outdoor sports. It was unanimously voted to rescind a former vote giving a spring meeting, with purses of $6,000. A committee was appointed to ascertain what arrangements can be made with some other associations in the Grand Circuit to trot upon its track the Hartford Colt Stake of $10,000 and the historic Charter Oak Stake of $10,000, which was advertised to be trotted at the August meeting. The directors also refused the application of the Columbia Cycle Club and the Hartford Wheel Club for the use of the park for bicycle tournaments, as the new law makes the lessees of any grounds to be used for racing purposes for prizes liable to arrest and imprisonment.

WALTER B. JENNINGS has bought the following horses: From Thomas W. Sumner, of Illinois, brown filly, 2, by imp. Eric (son of Pretender), dam Pequot, by Pantaloon; bay gelding, 2, by imp. Eric, dam Fleetness, by imp. Intruder; chestnut colt, 2, by imp. Eric, dam Daisy, by Pantaloon; second dam Darkness, by West Roxbury. From F. C. O'Reilly, chestnut colt, 2, by imp. Verger, dam Lesbia, by Strathford; brown colt, 2, by imp. Verger, dam Zingara, by Jonesboro and bay filly, 2, by imp. Verger, dam Margery, by Macaroon. The terms are private. Mr. Jennings has also been selling some horses to S. Ross, Washington, D. C., as follows: Bay filly, 2, by Guardsman, dam Formosa; bay filly, 2, by John Harper, dam Little Criss, by Revolver; bay filly, 2, by imp. Eric, dam Pequot, by Pantaloon; bay gelding, 2, by imp. Eric, dam Fleetness, by imp. Intruder, and bay colt, 2, by Voltigeur, dam imp. Paragon, by Sir Bevys. It will be seen that this lot includes some of Mr. Jennings' previous purchases.

ELBA L. won over $800 as a yearling last season. She was owned by Tom Connell and handled by Sandy Smith, and the latter was to receive 50 per cent. of her winnings. At Salem she got away with $485, but when it came to a division Connell represented that Smith was entitled to only one-half of $300. Smith sued for $224, and got judgment for the full amount, and the defendant appealed to the State Circuit Court. The appeal came up before Judge Hurley and a jury one day last week, and the audience was largely made up of horsemen. They are still chuckling over a clever "bluff" worked by Smith's lawyer. Connell had stated positively that he had not written a certain communication relative to the case, and the attorney requested him to tax his memory. The witness did so, and repeated his statement. Drawing a bundle of letters from his pocket, the man of law began turning them over, and gazing steadily at the witness, asked: "Do you swear positively that you did not send the note in question?" The witness faltered, and then acknowledged that his memory had deceived him. The lawyer returned the letters to his pocket and calmly informed the Court that not one of them was in any way connected with the case. The jury sustained the decision of the justice court.—Oregonian.

EAST HARTFORD, Feb. 6, 1892.

I am so well pleased with your "Absorbine" that I feel as if I must acknowledge its excellent results. I applied the medicine to my horse's leg, and in ten days' time the horse was fully relieved of those long-standing Wind-puffs. You have a wonderful cure for such cases, and I recommend it to all of my friends, and trust if any of their horses are afflicted with such complaints that my horse had that they will not only do a favor for themselves, but a much greater one to their dumb beasts, and secure a bottle. I remain very truly yours, H. B. HALE, Editor Gazette.

SIXTEENTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, APRIL 26.

Two shocking surprises were sprung on an innocent public to-day when Pescador, he of the single optic (at 30 to 1), and Huguenot (at from 10 to 20 to 1), finished in front of fields that contained a plentiful supply of fair racing material. On top of that was the taking-down of Joseph Narvaez, a most excellent horse pilot that is accused of intending to "shoo in" Garcia with the Undine Stable colt, St. Croix. Pending investigation of the matter Narvaez was suspended. Last fall we criticised a few of Narvaez's rides when he was in the employ of B. C. Holly, and the last-named gentleman took up the cudgel in behalf of the jockey against the writer, taking the ground that we were blackening the reputation of an innocent, clever young man. Subsequently other writers wrote in the same strain, and Mr. Holly, we believe, finally acknowledged to one of them that he had been "taken in" by the rider, and that what had been said of his work in the saddle was pretty nearly correct. We trust, however, that Narvaez will be able to clear himself of the charge, for he is certainly one of the most capable jockeys in the West, and had the confidence of the Palo Alto folks in a marked degree for years.

It was a red-letter day for the Bree Cheers family, a son and daughter of the old son of Hurrah getting home first. "Daggie" Smith, owner of the unfortunate Oakland, we understand recently gave Peter Weber $400 for Huguenot, and not only won the colt out, but we understand had several dollars on Pescador at 30 to 1. Pescador's run was the best of the entire meeting, and a ton of money was lost by the "good thing" players on Misty Morn, who, at the weights, should have been at 3 to 1 instead of 4 to 5. In this race Sympathetic's Last was cut down badly by Wildwood. The last-named, had the start been a good one, would have been returned a winner, in all likelihood, be getting off a sad seventh in a field of eight and finishing a good fourth.

Bordeaux, with Johnny Weber up, was a favorite at 7 to 10 in the first race, eleven-sixteenths of a mile, Polaski next in favor at 6 to 1. Silver Plate, Happy Band and Button were at 7 to 1, and Jovita at 30 to 1. To a poor start, Polaski all but left at the post, Happy Band led Bordeaux and Silver Plate into the homestretch by a small margin. Meantime Polaski had stumbled to his knees, but was coming like a wild horse and eating up space at a great rate. Bordeaux shook Happy Band off easily soon after entering the homestretch, and coming on, won easily by a length from Polaski, who ran a much better race than the winner, everything considered. Happy Band was third by less than a length, Silver Plate fourth, Button fifth and Jovita last of all. Time, 0:57. Oration was at 8 to 5 for a moment at the opening, but a plunge all around the ring forced the odds down to 6 to 5. The Joe Daniels-Electricity colt was well supported at 2 1/2 and 2 to 1. Claire and Jennie Deane were strongly played for place. Oration led nearly the entire distance, and won easily by one and one-half lengths from Claire, who was second most of the way. Jennie Deane, third, was three parts of a length in front of Electricity. Time, 1:03.

Third on the card was the six-furlong handicap, and the very best horses at the track completed—Wildwood, Misty Morn, Lottie Mills, Topgallant, Sympathetic's Last, Bessie W., Pescador and Wild Robin. Misty Morn, notwithstanding her impost of 123 pounds, was made a hot favorite, and from 7 to 5 was pounded down to 4 to 5 at the close. Sympathetic's Last was second choice at 3 to 1. Wildwood was well-played at 4 to one. Pescador was nibbled at 30 to 1. Topgallant was fancied for place and a show, be being an 8 to 1 shot. After quite a long delay the flag fell to a very poor send-off, Lottie Mills and Pescador off together, Topgallant about a length away, Misty Morn fourth, the rest strung out, Wildwood seventh and Sympathetic's Last absolutely last. Pescador, at a great clip, sailed to the front without delay, at the half-pole leading Lottie Mills over a length, Topgallant third, a length from Misty Morn. Then came Sympathetic's Last, with Wildwood at his heels. Misty Morn ran up second to the one-eyed colt nearing the three-quarter mark, Pescador leading her a length into the homestretch, Topgallant third, a length behind the favorite, Lottie Mills fourth, Sympathetic's Last still fifth and Wildwood next. Pescador was not headed, and won handsily by a length from Topgallant, who came very strong at the end and passed Misty Morn half-way down the straight. Lottie Mills came with a fine burst of speed at the close, and finished but half a length behind Topgallant. Wildwood was fourth, one and a half lengths behind Mills. Official time, 1:13; timed privately by a number of competent men in 1:13. Sympathetic's Last was badly cut down by Wildwood. Oh, what a fall for the talent, my countrymen! Garcia opened at 7 to 5 and was played so hard that a close the best odds obtainable were 4 to 5. Revolver was at 2 1/2 to 1, while St. Croix receded from 2 1/2 to 4 to 1. J. Narvaez was, much to the surprise of every one, taken down and Burlingame substituted on St. Croix. That horse and Garcia went out, and had the race to themselves, heads apart, opening up a gap of three lengths on St. Patrick, who was a head from Revolver. The positions were not materially changed clear into the homestretch. An eighth from the wire Garcia fell back a trifle and swerved violently toward the rails, destroying what chances he had of winning. Little Weber whipped Garcia with might and main, but St. Croix, running easily, won by two lengths, Garcia second, as far from St. Patrick, he a head from Revolver. Democrat last and bleeding profusely from the nose, was pulled up at the end. Time, 1:48.

The last race was a battle of the skates, Solitude being a well-played favorite at 2 to 1. Little Tough, second choice, was backed down to 2 1/2 to 1. To a poor start Joe D. led Solitude to the homestretch, where he died away, and the favorite looked a winner all over. Johnny Weber, however, was nursing Huguenot along third, and when he called on the Three Cheers colt near the finish he said good-bye to Solitude, beating her half a length. Solitude was a length from Orta, third, she a head from Little Tough, who got away a had eighth. Morton, absolutely last to get away, and about three lengths behind everything in the race at the half, where they were strung out, make up a lot of ground, and finished a good fifth. Time, 1:16 1/2.

SEVENTEENTH DAY—THURSDAY, APRIL 27.

This was a fine day for racing, and also prolific of fouls. A big crowd attended, and the sport was much enjoyed. Seaside won over the big favorite, Rosalie, easily, and it showed that Rosalie is "going back." Tigress, ridden by little "Moose" Taylor, won the seven-eighths dash easily, although many believed the little filly would not "go the route." "Moose" Taylor made his first appearance in San Francisco in this race, and was given a warm reception. Tigress' victory was a very popular one. Motto, who was second at the finish, fouled Quarterstaff twice in the last eighth of a mile, and the judges rightfully gave the Friar Tuck colt the place.

Cadmus, with 122 lbs. up, beat Hermitage, with 133, a little easier to-day than he did last Saturday in the Tidal Stakes and clinched his claims to the championship for three-year-olds colts, so far as this meeting is concerned. Picton made his first appearance in public, and ran a very creditable race, coming especially fast in the homestretch and getting third place.

Martinet met his Waterloo at the feet of St. Croix, who won easily and convinced a whole lot of folks that he was a better horse than he was given credit for being.

Morton was given the verdict in the last race, but the decision did not meet with approval in most instances. If Lodi did any fouling not a spectator could be found who saw it, and it is presumed the verdict was given in accordance with Rule 90 of the "Rules of Racing" of the organization, which reads: "A leading horse is entitled to any part of the course but when there is a clear opening to pass him he may not impede another horse by crossing, so as to compel him to shorten his stride," etc.

Rosalie was a hot favorite in the opening race, five furlongs, presumably on the strength of her races against the Ariola colt, but Seaside, sister to Martinet, had really shown as well, and at longer distances. Relampago, Dan Miller's Three Cheers—Narcola colt, led at the start and past the half-pole by a length, with the favorite second a neck, the Brutus-Beauty colt third by half a length, Seaside last. Nearing the three-quarter mark the favorite took command, and Seaside had moved up like a streak. She collared and passed Rosalie soon after entering the straight, and won hands down by one and one-half lengths with a whole lot of links up her sleeve in 1:03 1/2. Relampago was third, eighth lengths behind Rosalie and one length from the Beauty colt.

A seven-furlong dash, selling, followed, and Tigress went to the post a hot favorite at 9 to 5. Dinero, Motto and Quarterstaff being well backed at 4 and 5 to 1. Wyanashott, at 8 to 1, was not friendless, but Cyclone was nearly so. Motto got away in front this time, and led Quarterstaff at the quarter-pole two lengths and three at the half, Tigress lying third, one length behind Brown's colt, Wyanashott fourth, Cyclone fifth and Dinero last. Tigress made her move between the half and three-quarter poles, and eat up space at a great rate, Motto leading her but a length as they swung into the homestretch and Quarterstaff close at hand. An eighth from home Tigress, it was apparent, was winning easily. Motto and Quarterstaff were having a hard fight for place, and Motto twice swerved into the colt. The filly finished a neck in front of Quarterstaff, with Wyanashott fourth, one and one-half lengths away. Spence, Quarterstaff's jockey, claimed foul against Motto as soon as he weighed out, and the judges allowed it, placing Quarterstaff second and Wyanashott third. Time, 1:28 1/2. "Moose" Taylor, who rode the winner on this, his first appearance in San Francisco, came in for lots of admiration, and was loudly cheered both before and after the race.

Cadmus was thought to have a rather easy task to win the third race, mile and an eighth, as he had beaten Hermitage rather handily last Saturday. Cadmus' stable companion, Picton, a sturdy-looking chestnut colt, made his initial bow to the public in this event, but the owner of the Undine Stable flyers declared to win with Cadmus, consequently he was a torrid favorite. Hermitage, Picton, Steadfast, Charmer, Cadmus was the order at the start and passing the stand. Steadfast took second place going the next quarter, Charmer moving up third. Cadmus was now given rein, and he sailed by everything except Hermitage in a hurry, taking second place passing the half-pole, Charmer still third, Steadfast fourth and Picton last. Miller rode Cadmus hard around the last turn and a little in the homestretch, but had Hermitage beaten half-way down, winning from the game, ridden-out son of Friar Tuck by half a length quite handily, Picton third, two lengths behind Hermitage. Time, 1:56 1/2—a good race, weight and time of year considered.

Martinet, with but 105 pounds up, looked like a good thing, and was played all around the ring at 3 to 5 in the fourth race, also one and one-eighth miles. St. Croix (in goggles) went begging for some time at 5 and 6 to 1. Little Esperanza was at 4 and Red Prince at 5 to 1. Little Esperanza led the way passing the stand and quarter-pole, with Red Prince second, St. Croix a close-up third. The latter was now ridden hard by Burlingame, and was leading Esperanza a length passing the half, Red Prince half a length behind the little filly, the favorite last and now beginning to make his run. He had disposed of all but St. Croix as they swept into the homestretch. The goggled son of King Daniels was running easily, however, and the shouts of Martinet's backers died away soon after they were strangled away, and it was softly murmured that St. Croix was winning easily. Whipped and spurred with might and main, the favorite could never get closer than a length and a half of St. Croix, and the Undine Stable colt won with ease by that distance, Martinet second, one length from Little Esperanza, who came gamely in the final eighth. She was a neck from Red Prince, who brought up the rear. Time, 1:56 1/2.

Ten selling platers came to the post in the last race, and Gladiator was a favorite at 2 to 1. Ida Glenn was backed down from 3 to 1 to 2 1/2 to 1. The balance, at from 8 to 75 to 1, were nibbled at, Mount Carlos, Lodi and Morton probably having the most friends of the 8 and 10 to 1 shots. Lodi dashed to the front at the fall of the hunting, with Jack the Ripper second and Mount Carlos third. The Ripper sailed to the fore, and piloted the crowd passing the half, with Lodi second, Mount Carlos third, Ida Glenn next. Montebello was fifth and Morton sixth, strung out. Lodi led into the homestretch, with Mount Carlos lapped on him, Ida Glenn third, and Morton fourth, he having come like a whirlwind around the final turn. Mount Carlos soon dropped back, and Morton made for the pole. Some claim that Ida Glenn bumped Morton and that Lodi did not keep his track, but moved toward the rails, forcing Morton, who tried to get through, to pull up. Lodi passed the winning post first by nearly a length, Ida Glenn second, a good head from Morton. At least that is the way it looked to the writer. Time, 1:09 1/2. The judges set Lodi back last and gave the race to Morton, the place to Glenn and third to Mount Carlos.

Death of John M. LaRue.

John M. LaRue, Assemblyman from the Stockton district in the last Legislature, died at his home in Stockton last Thursday night after an illness of five days. He was attacked by erysipelas last Sunday, which soon settled in his brain, and he had lain unconscious for several days, slowly dying. He was a prominent member of the Masons and the Workmen, and was well and favorably known by horsemen throughout the State, having held the position of secretary of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Society for many years, and was considered one of the most active ones in California. He resigned the position after his election to the Assembly last fall. He leaves a widow and three children.

The Gelded Age.

From almost every stock farm in this State letters are received informing us that most of the colts are being castrated. Dr. G. W. Stimpson of 770 Nineteenth Street, Oakland, is kept very busy and his work with the ecraseur is giving satisfaction. The Doctor has had many years experience in this branch of his profession and has achieved wonderful success. Horsemen who wish to have any castration performed can secure his services by addressing him as above. Dr. Stimpson is a qualified veterinarian, and was for three years assistant State Veterinary surgeon of Illinois. Since coming to California he has achieved a prominent place among our ablest surgeons.

A NEW-COMER has arrived at the Rancho Del Paso which is destined to some day cut a figure on the American turf, says the Chronicle of Friday. Firenze has a bay filly by Salvator. Here is a combination of speed which heats the world. The suckling should prove to be a wonder if breeding counts for anything. Her dam was the queen of the American turf for several seasons, and won many a classic stake race, including the Champlain stakes, the Jerome, the Monmouth Cup, Twin City Handicap and many other important races. Firenze ran a mile and a half in 2:33, which was the world's record when the gallant daughter of Glenelg was retired to the barn. Lamplighter last year reduced the record for a mile and a half to 2:32 1/2. Salvator, the sire of the suckling filly at Rancho del Paso, was one of the grandest race horses in the history of the turf. He was bred by Dr. Swigert, proprietor of the Elmendorf stud of Kentucky, but was purchased when a yearling by J. B. Haggin, of California. Salvator's brilliant record on the turf is too well known to the followers of racing to need more than a passing notice. He faced the starter but nineteen times during his three years' career on the turf, and won $114,370, being only once unplaced, which was in his maiden race in the Juuor Champion stakes and the Suburban handicap. His victory over Tenny in the great match race at Coney Island will long be remembered by all horsemen, and stamped him as the king of the American turf. The mighty son of Prince Charlie holds the world's record for a mile, having run the distance in the sensational time of 1:35 1/4. In 1890 Salvator, with 127 pounds up, captured the Suburban in the fast time of 2:06 1/2, and in a trial against time soon afterward, ran the distance in the sensational time of 2:05. Treatment of Wounds in the Foot.

Lockjaw in horses is frequently caused by the animal stepping upon a nail. Most cases can be avoided by prompt treatment. We clip the following upon this subject from an exchange:

"All persons owning and working horses are liable to have them injured in their feet by stepping on nails, thus temporarily or permanently crippling them. Wounds of this sort need attention, and yet few persons under such circumstances know what to do.

"If a wound caused by stepping on a nail bleeds freely, so much the better, but usually it does not. The tough, fibrous sole is very elastic, and is apt, therefore, to close up and prevent bleeding, at least very quickly after withdrawing the nail.

"When an accident of this kind occurs, go to the nearest blacksmith, as he has facilities for cutting out the sole of the foot, which should be done about the part pierced till the blood flows freely. Then take the horse home and wash out the bottom of the foot, and apply to it flaxseed meal mixed with hot water to the consistency of dough, with which fill the cavity of the foot. It will stay without being bound on if the horse stands on a floor.

Of course, anything else that will keep the soil moist and soft and the wound open for free discharge will do, but I consider a flaxseed poultice far better than any other, all things considered. How long a horse should be so kept is a matter of judgment, depending on how serious the injury is, and how fast the animal gets along as to fever, etc., in the feet and ankle.

"A wound of this sort is always attended with danger, and especially if the nail inflicting the injury is rusty. Many a good animal has been lost by such an injury that need not had this treatment been known to the owner. It is inexpensive, easily done, needs no professional skill, and I think is better than anything else that can be recommended. Linseed meal can always be found at any well-equipped drug store. Every country farmer should keep two or three pounds of it on hand to be used in cases of emergency."

McFerran & Clancy, of the Foundation Stud, write: "We beg leave to announce the following arrivals: April 5, brown colt, stripe in face, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/2, dam Amaryllis, by Director, 2:17; second dam Maud S. T. (dam of Neponset, 2:24 1/2), by Gov. Sprague, 2:20 1/2; third dam Belle Patchen, 2:30 1/2 (dam of Baron Wilkes, 2:18, champion sire at ten years), by Mambrino Patchen; fourth dam Sally Chorister (dam of Proteine, 2:18, Belle Brasfield, 2:20), by Mambrino Chorister. This fellow is very substantially built, great style and bone. His inheritance of racehorse speed is very remarkable. April 6, cherry black filly, black points, faint star, sired by Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/2, dam Alicia Nutwood, by Nutwood, 2:18 1/2; second dam Alicia, 2:30 (sister to Alcantara, 2:33, and Alycane, 2:27), by Geo. Wilkes; third dam by Alma Mater, by Mambrino Patchen. This is about as beautiful a filly as one could find in a day's journey. Will she do for a broodmare? Both these foals are entered in the Kentucky $25,000 Futurity for foals of '93. Can anyone beat this pair?"

A. H. MOORE, Cloverdeli Stock Farm, Colmar, Pa., has a formidable string in training. In the list are Vinette (pacer), 2:09 1/2; Margaret S., 2:12 1/2; Erminie, 2:13 1/2; Mambrino Maid, 2:15 1/2; Ollie Wilkes, 2:17 1/2; Position, 2:22 1/2; Anorean, 2:26 1/2; Pacific, 2:35; General Worth (brother to Sunol, 2:03 1/2); Erectress, b f, by Director; Gross Grain, b f, by Bell Boy; Costa Davis, b f, by Robert McGregor; Sweetness, b f, by Alcazar; Cherry Red, b f, by Red Wilkes; Pearl B., blk f, by Wilton; Gypsy Earl, cb f, by Earl; Minnie Wasta, br f, by Wilton; Sidney Boy, b h, by Sidney; Wilkes Medium, b c, by Red Wilkes; Meta S., b f, by Stanboul; Crispa, b f, by Clay, and Waiting Maid, b f, by Bell Boy.

AMONG the bets registered in Chicago recently against possible starters for the American Derby were $2,500 to $50 against Metuchen; $10,000 against $1,000 on the chances of Don Alonzo; $5,000 to $50, Delury; $5,000 to $100 Eltham Queen; $8,000 to $200, Evantus; $7,500 to $150, Fidelio; $1,500 to $50, Miles Standish; $3,000 to $200, Ramapo; $6,000 to $300, St. Leonard; $5,000 to $500, Sir Francis; $1,500 to $50, Spartan, and $10,000 to $200, Young Arion.

THE race between Alvin, 2:14 1/2, and Geneva, 2:14, will probably take place on the new track at Hamilton, Ont., July 1st. As neither will be on the edge that early in the season, fast time will be out of the question, but it will be a race for a man's life, and will bring together 20,000 people. The Hamilton Driving Club, which will hang up a purse for this race, has appointed John White, of Hamilton, secretary of the trotting department.

MR. JACKSON I. CASE, the owner of Hickory Grove Stock Farm, Racine, Wis., has been re-elected for a third term as mayor of that city. Although this is his third term he still enjoys the unique honor of being the youngest mayor in the State of Wisconsin. Mr. Case has demonstrated within the past three years that he is at once a successful politician and a first-class trainer.

SEVEN of the nineteen foals produced by Miss Russell, dam of Maud S. (2:03 1/2), Nutwood (2:18 1/2), etc., were chestnut in color, an inheritance doubtless derived from Fink's Havoc, sire of the dam of Pilot Jr., as Miss Russell was never mated with a chestnut horse.

It is said that Michael F. Dwyer and Richard Croker are the principal backers of a new daily sporting paper which is to be started about the middle of next month. John E. McDonald is to be the business manager of the sheet.

The Distance Flag.

There seems to be a great deal of opposition to the reduction of distance between the wire and the distance flag in harness-racers with some drivers, and what is more surprising, from some racing managers as well. With one or two exceptions the turf press was almost a unit in commending the reduction. Of course, the writers who were in favor of the reduction were at once sneered at as being mere theorists by those who are not in favor of the change; but when Budd Dohle came out and frankly endorsed the plan for reducing the distance, they could hardly cry "theorist," for that great driver has driven and won more races than any three of those who are denouncing the new rule, so the cry was made that Dohle could well afford to endorse the new rule, for he had the pick of all the horses of the country and his horses always act well. Well, what is there to hinder other drivers from teaching their horses always to act well? If the methods employed by Dohle have placed him at the head of living drivers, why may not other drivers employ the same methods with profit to themselves? One thing is certain, and that is that the race-going public has grown disgusted with the break-and-lay-up method of losing heats, and any rule that will help it will meet with its approval. Drivers with skip-jack horses may be expected to disapprove of any rule that will lessen their chances of winning, and secretaries and racing managers who are looking more closely for a large entry list than for an attractive programme to entertain the public with, may be expected to assist them in this protest. Even such a combination will not avail if the public becomes thoroughly awakened on the subject, for there is where the money comes from, and the only way harness-racing can become popular or be kept popular is by furnishing racing of the quality the public demands. As for the associations that will make an exception of the rule reducing the distance, and thus practically defy the two parent associations, there seems to be no remedy. If these associations had tried the new rule and found it a failure, there would be some excuse for its exception. Under the circumstances the National and American Associations seems to amount to simply nothing so far as making rules for their members is concerned, for if any rule made is distasteful to any member, that member simply makes an exception of the objectionable rule, and that is the end of it. Reforms in harness-racing that are intended to make such racing more popular, will be a long time in making any change if the two parent associations do not devise some way to force their members to obey the rules they adopt.—Horse World.

ALCONA 730

The Greatest Producing Sire ever offered to the Breeders of Sonoma County.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Sire of Alcona 730 offspring.

AND GRANDSIRE OF SPEED, SIZE, STYLE, BEAUTY

ALCONA 730 is a golden chestnut, 14 8 hands high and weighs 1300 pounds; he is strong-boned, heavy-muscled, clean-limbed, with flowing mane and tail, lofty carriage, and has style and appearance that attracts attention wherever seen. Alcona is one of the greatest speed-producers in California, considering his opportunities; he has five in the 2:30 list and three producing sons and a producing daughter. His colts are large, fine-looking, and in the best of dispositions; they are useful for carriage and general purpose horses on the farm if they do not prove fast trotters.

Alcona has always been a profitable sire for the small breeder; his colts have always sold for large prices, either private or at auction. PRINCE WARWICK was sold to the Austrian Government for $20,000; Veronica brought at auction $2500, Almonition $2000, and many others from five to fifteen hundred dollars. Alcona is one of the greatest prize-winners in California; he has never been beaten when shown with a family of colts.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

STAR, LANZ CO., OREGON, Feb. 8th, 1892.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,

Dear Sirs:--I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Carth of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly spavined; I tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughbred and Blind Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or.

Price $1.00 per bottle.

COLTS FOR SALE

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/4 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:08.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darehin). He stands 15.3 hands on steely legs, and has great joints and the best feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong hack, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darehin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darehin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, far apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caractacus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid racehorses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Lihelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

WALDSTEIN was foaled in 1885; in color, he is a dark shade of brown with two white coronets; stands 15 1/2 hands and weighs 1100 lbs. He is one of the handsomest and most perfectly formed stallions in this State. His fine, intelligent head, well-shaped neck; strong shoulders, short back, powerful loins, heavy quarters, well-shaped barrel, heavy muscular thighs and rump, clean, straight, strong knees and hocks, short cannon bones, excellent pasterns and feet at once command him to the observer as a representative trotting horse. In disposition he is faultless, being kind, gentle and level-headed. His gait is perfection, and his races during his short career on the track ably demonstrate the game qualities which he possesses. His breeding cannot be surpassed. He is the only son of Director out of an Electioneer mare standing for service. Of his sire, can any more praise be said than that his sons and daughters prove more sensational every year, and the races won by Director, Evngeline, Direct, Margaret S. and the rest stamp him as one of the most prepotent sires. Waldstein's dam is by the immortal Electioneer out of Sister (dam of Albert W., 2:20, the sire of Little Albert, 2:10 1/2, the gamest trotter seen in 1892 and Vixen, the only mare that has a two-year-old and a three-year-old with records lower than 2:19). Waldstein's third dam was the famous Lamont mare, one of the greatest mares that ever came to California. She was also a great brood mare. Waldstein has four sires that have records; one has a record of 2:51 1/2, another 3:05, another 3:06 and the other 3:08. All his colts are natural trotters, perfect in form, sold in color and very strongly built. Waldstein cannot help being one of the greatest of sires. To the student of breeding, conformation and quality he fills the ideal.

He is in color a chestnut, with star on forehead, one hind pastern white. In conformation he is perfect, being about 15.2 hands in height, very short hock, strong over the coupling, heavy quarters, large, well-muscled gaskins and arms, limbs straight, cannon bones short, hocks and joints clean and hony, and feet of the finest kind. His neck, head and body denote an iron constitution. His shoulders are sloping, and, taking him all in all, a more perfect representative of the great Wilkes-Dictator cross does not exist to day. His breeding speaks for itself. He traces four times to Hambletonian 10, through his greatest sires—GEO. WILKES, DICTATOR, HAROLD and ABDAL-LAH 15. He traces to Mambrino Patchen twice, and three times to Mambrino Chief. His blood-lines are unequalled by any stallion on this Coast.

The best of care taken of mares, but no liability assumed for accidents or escapes. Service fee must be paid before mares leave the farm.

WILLIAM CORBITT,

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud, 2:19; Annie W., 2:23; Albert H., 2:27 1/4; Mollie C., 2:37 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

(For pedigree of Nutwood 600 and Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 see tabulated pedigree above.)
NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

Training

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. G. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any detail for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

COLE'S OSSIDINE

RESULTS OBTAINED AT THE WELL-KNOWN KALAMAZOO FARM.

Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it, and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used. Very respectfully yours, S. A. BROWNE & CO., Prop's. Kalamazoo, Mich.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "iring," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excrescence is so palpably reduced that even the sceptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

The ONLY preparation in the world that after it has become ossified.

Put up in one style only. Price, $3.00 per bottle.

BLOOD HORSE MEETING.

Concluding Days of the Most Successful Meeting Ever Given on This Coast.

CADMUS CAPTURES THE RICH DERBY.

Carmel, Steadfast, Montalvo, Lottie Mills and Joe Cotton to the Front Friday—Undine Stable Horses Win Four Races Saturday—Flirtation, Quartersstaff, Cadmus, Pieton, Wildwood and Tigress First Past the Post—Wildwood a World-Beater.

EIGHTEENTH DAY—FRIDAY, APRIL 28.

INTERESTING indeed was the racing to-day over old Bay District track, the fields being of fair size and the quality of the contestants excellent in five of the six events run off. The attendance was estimated at 2,500. Carmel, a good-looking chestnut colt, by Duke of Norfolk from that excellent race mare, Carmen, won the opening race for two-year-olds, but had not Realization been cut down and pocketed the race undoubtedly would have gone to the exceedingly handsome young son of Regent and Sadie. As it was, Carmel managed to win by three parts of a length from the fast-coming Realization.

Steadfast, last clear into the homestretch, ran around his field like a true racehorse and won the first purse of the meeting for popular Wilber Smith, of Sacramento. Sidney quit in the homestretch, to which he led Reta and Solitude by a small margin, but managed to last long enough to finish third. Abi P., an outsider by Three Cheers out of Dairy Maid, by Shannon, made her debut in the event, and ran up so well in the stretch that Steadfast and the filly had the race to themselves, a neck separating the pair at the finish.

Montalvo, leading nearly all the way, experienced no trouble in winning from his field, in which Claire was most fancied, going to the post at 8 to 5, at which Montalvo was also quoted. Lottie Mills, a favorite, and played with all kinds of money, won handily after being shaken up about a sixteenth from the wire. Dinero came out of the bunch like a shot in the last 100 yards, and easily got the place. Joe Cotton had his running clothes on to-day, and managed to beat Crawford half a length over five and a half furlongs of ground. To the surprise of every one the Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt had to stretch his neck to defeat Fatality, the Sir Modred-Faux Pas filly a neck, and the time made (1:01) was the fastest two-year-old race of the meeting. We understand Fatality was not by any means at her best, so that, should she continue to improve, it is not unlikely she will leave here the champion two-year-old filly.

Carmel, Cherokee and Realization opened at 3 to 1 each in the betting on the first race, half a mile, for two-year-olds, and notwithstanding Realization was conceding considerable weight to every one of his rivals, went to the post backed heavier than the others and a slight favorite. Happy Band was in front for a second, with Carmel second, Benito third and Realization fourth as the flag swished, and Carmel immediately went to the front, attended closely by Benito and Happy Band. An eighth of a mile from the start Realization was cut down by some colt immediately behind him, and fell back nearly last, coming again as they neared the straight, only to be pocketed. He did not get out of the scrum until about an eighth from home, and he mowed everything down except Carmel, who was not beaded on the short journey, he winning by three parts of a length in 0:50. Realization second, half a length from Happy Band. Benito was a close-up fourth.

Solitude opened a 6 to 5 favorite in the second race, seven furlongs, but toward the close a sizzling tip on Sidney escaped, and a few persons went down the line on Holly's colt, forcing a cut from 10 to 1 to 3 to 1, and the hookies badly seared at that. Steadfast and Reta were at 6 to 1 each, and Solitude went to the post at 2 to 1. There was little play on the remaining quartet. After a tedious delay at the post, caused by the circus antics of Solitude and Sidney, the flag fell with Sidney a neck in front, Reta second, Steadfast third, Reno next. The favorite was sixth away. Sidney and Reta at once went out in front, Steadfast falling back into last place, Reno moving up third, the John A. gelding fourth and Solitude fifth as they went by the quarter-pole. Reta was in front a head passing the half, Sidney second and Solitude third, looking dangerous. Steadfast was eighth and last at this point, two lengths behind over Montebello. They swung into the homestretch with heads only separating each of the first four—Sidney, Reta, Solitude and Abi P., with Steadfast now coming like a wild horse. Shouts went up that Wilber Smith's colt was winning an eighth from the wire, where he and Abi P. drew out from their field and fought on the battle, Steadfast winning by a neck, Abi P. second, two and one-half lengths from Sidney, who died away, as did Solitude and Reta. Time, 1:30.

Montalvo was a warm favorite at even money at the opening in the third race, a two-year-old affair, distance five furlongs. Such a plunge was made on Claire, however, that at the close she was at 8 to 5 in some books, as was Montalvo. Polaski was not overlooked in the betting, but Chillon and Semele were not fancied to an extent worth mentioning. Semele was first at the fall of the flag, but Montalvo did not delay matters long, sailing to the front and staying there easily to the end, winning by two lengths. Chillon, the unknown quantity, had a little fight with Semele in the homestretch, but drew away at the drawgate and landed the place money by three parts of a length. Time, 1:04. Claire was fourth and Polaski last.

Lottie Mills was considered to outlast her field (Revolver, Dinero, Jackson and Almont) in the mile run, and from even money was backed down to 2 to 5 at the close. Revolver was second choice at 6 to 1. Jackson led the way passing the quarter by a neck, Lottie Mills second, as far from Revolver. The favorite soon drew away, and led Almont passing the half an open length, Revolver third, a neck away from Jones' old horse, who had run up from fifth place. Almont cut Mills' lead down to a neck passing the three-quarter pole, where Dinero was but a little over a length away. An eighth from home it looked as if Lottie Mills would be beaten, but under whip she came away in the final sixteenth and won handily by one and a half lengths, Dinero (who had come out from the bunch like a shot at the very wind-up), second, one and a half lengths from Almont. Revolver was fourth and Jackson last. Time, 1:42—a good run on a slow track and in the teeth of such a strong wind.

Joe Cotton was never as good as even all around the ring, and closed at 3 to 5. The race was at five and a half furlongs. Sir Reel and Crawford were staunchly supported for place, and Sir Reel was not unbacked to win first honors. Joe D., the skyrocket, led Crawford by from a length to a head to the homestretch, where Crawford went to the front and looked a winner an eighth of a mile from home. Joe Cotton stuck resolutely to his work, however, and heading Crawford at the drawgate, came on in a drive and won by half a length, Crawford second, two lengths from Sir Reel, he a nose from Alfred B. Time, 1:09.

Fatality and Jim Lee were not considered in the hunt with Boots' great Bonnie Jean colt, who was at 1 to 15, Fatality at 10 to 1, Jim Lee at 20. It was 4 to 5 at the close on Jim Lee and Fatality for place and take your pick. Fatality was quickest away, and led the favorite two open lengths passing the half-pole, Jim Lee a length behind the Bonnie Jean colt. Three-eighths from home Miller, rightly frightened at the clip which Fatality was going, set to work on the favorite, and it looked very much as if he would never be able to close the gap. Fatality came into the homestretch nearly two lengths to the good. Slowly the favorite moved down the space, and, in an exciting finish, managed to win by half a length in 1:01, the fastest time made by two-year-olds at the entire meeting. Jim Lee was last, five lengths behind Fatality. Although the Bonnie Jean colt won, there is denying that he was about all out at the finish. He was, however, giving Fatality fourteen pounds and the usual sex allowance, but, as the Sir Modred filly was not at her best, we shall hear from her as a winner before many days. Her dam, Faux Pas, is bred on the same lines to Salvador, being by imp. Pricce Charlie, dam by Lexington and second dam by imp. Glencoe.

NINETEENTH AND LAST DAY—SATURDAY, APRIL 29.

The Blood Horse Association's spring meeting wound up to-day with six races, four of which were won by Undine Stable horses—Flirtation, Cadmus, Pieton and Tigress. In fact, President Williams' horses won every stuko race of the meeting, Flirtation securing the Racine and California, Cadmus the Third Stakes and Pacific Derby, San Franciscans turned out nobly this windy afternoon, the attendance being estimated at between 5,000 and 5,500. The Pacific Derby was the drawing card, but Cadmus seared everything out except Hernitago and Orrin, there being no less than seven scratches.

The race was won comparatively easily by the bay son of Flood and imp. Cordeila, and the time made, 2:38 1/2, on a dead track, facing a strong wind at times, and with a second or more up his sleeve, proves to us that Cadmus can, over Washington Park course, on a good day and track, do the "Darby" distance close to 2:35 1/2, making him a dangerous horse to tackle in this richest of all American three-year-old events. We base this opinion on the fact that the track to-day was lumpy and dead, the time in other events, with one exception, not being noteworthy. Flirtation won her five furlong race in 1:03 in a drive, Quarterstaff seven furlongs in 1:20 1/2, Picton a mile in 1:43 1/2, Wildwood a mile and a sixteenth in 1:43 1/2 and Tigress six furlongs in 1:16 1/2. Wildwood's time, 1:43 1/2, made easily, was good, but it must be remembered that he is a great horse in any country. Therefore it can be said with truth that the track was a full second slow to the mile and the strong wind prevalent would make a difference of at least half a second in a mile run. This being the case, and with quite a bit to spare, Cadmus is not overrated a bit when we state that he can under favorable conditions run a mile and a half close to 2:35 1/2.

Flirtation had to do her prettiest this afternoon when she defeated Martine's sister, Seaside, by a short half-length in 1:03, and has either gone back a trifle or was not as good as we imagined her yesterday.

Quarterstaff proved himself a mighty go he was sent away a bad last, came around his neck, stretch, and won by half a length easily from Garcia, in 1:29 1/2. Picton waited on Gracie S. u. b from the finish, when he came away and won by a very easily in 1:43 1/2. This proves to us that Picton is at ever claimed for him by the Palo Alto folks, and far behind Cadmus as a racehorse, or we miss our guess.

Wildwood, off ninth and last, ran up third around the first turn and second soon after passing the quarter pole, and heading Pescador when Clancy turned his head loose, about an eighth from home, won pulled up to a dog-trot by a length in 1:48 1/2 for the mile and a sixteenth. That he is a truly great horse in any part of the world he will prove if nothing happens this season, for he carried in this race 123 pounds, lost perhaps half a second by the send-off, and had more than a full second of speed left that he did not have to utilize, making him capable of running a mile and a sixteenth in 1:47 over Bay District track when the day and track are favorable, if not in 1:46 1/2. What he could do the distance in over a course with a long straightaway to it we do not know, but we should dislike to bet that he could not take up 123 pounds and run it in 1:45 1/2. He is one of the best horses that ever saw the light in California, and our hope is that he lands at his destination in the East in good shape, and it will take a world-beater to give him dust at any distance from a mile upward.

Tigress got off fifth in her race, ran in that position to the homestretch, then came on and won by a length from Sir Reel, who got away badly. Inkerman was absolutely last at the start, and finished a good fourth.

Flirtation was a favorite at 1 to 7 in the opening race, five furlongs, while Seaside was at 6 to 1 straight and 3 to 5 for a place. Valencia was at 20 to 1 straight and 2 to 1 place, the other pair, Bordeaux and The Lark, hardly considered in the hunt by most persons. Bordeaux led Flirtation (off fourth) a head into the homestretch, the favorite half a length from Seaside, fifth and last to get away. Bordeaux gave it up almost as soon as they struck the straight track, Flirtation ridden hard around the turn and into the homestretch, and Seaside, drawing away and having the race to themselves. It was nip-and-tuck for about an eighth of a mile and a little over a sixteenth from home a shout went up that Seaside was winning, but not so, for Flirtation, ridden out by Miller, gamely came again, winning in a drive by a scant half length, Seaside second, three lengths from Valencia, third. Time, 1:03. Many were of the opinion that had Seaside been ridden by as capable a jockey as Miller Flirtation would have met Defeat, and been her'n. This performance would indicate that the Bonnie Jean colt is considerably better than Flirtation—we should say eight to ten pounds. Yesterday he took up 122 pounds and ran five furlongs in 1:01 1/2; to-day she was nearly all out with 119 up in 1:03 over the same track and on just such a day.

A seven-eighths of a mile dash followed, and Garcia was the opening favorite. So much money went in on Quarterstaff, however, that at the close it was 8 to 5 Quarterstaff, 2 to 1 Garcia. Red Cloud was at 4 to 1, the others from 8 to 15. Red Cloud, to a straggling start, was first away, Quarterstaff sixth and last. Red Cloud led Annie Moore, Garcia and Sheridan to the homestretch, where Garcia dashed to the front and for a moment looked a winner, but Quarterstaff came like a shot from the extreme rear, and soon had the Wildidle gelding in distress, winning by half a length from the whipped-out Garcia, who was a couple of lengths from Wynashott, third, Red Cloud fourth, Annie Moore fifth and Sheridan last. Time, 1:20 1/2. Quarterstaff's victory was loudly cheered, it being very creditable under the circumstances.

The much-talked-of Pacific Derby, one and one-half miles, was third on the programme, and as all but Cadmus, Hermitage and Orrin had been scratched out, not a great deal of interest was manifested. It was considered a "moral" for Cadmus, with even weight up. He opened in the hooks at 1 to 10, Hermitage going at 6 to 1 and Orrin at 50 to 1. Toward the close Cadmus was at 1 to 8. For a three-horse race the start was not creditable, Hermitage being first, half a length from Orrin, who was nearly two lengths in front of Cadmus, the favorite. The latter sailed by Orrin ere an eighth of a mile had been traversed, and passing the stand it was a pretty race—Hermitage first by three-quarters of a length, Cadmus second, as far from Orrin, who commenced to drop out going around the first turn past the stand at a great rate. Hermitage at the quarter-pole was first by a length, Cadmus second, five lengths from the tired Orrin. Cadmus went up to Hermitage's neck as they neared the half-pole, the mile having been covered in 1:45. Orrin was twenty lengths away, in the dust. Both Weber and Miller were riding hard as the horses quickened their pace and flew toward the homestretch, which Hermitage reached first by a head. Almost as soon as they were straightened out Weber, on Hermitage, went to the whip, and it was apparent that the race was Cadmus', no accident intervening. Under whip for more than an eighth of a mile, Hermitage could not get up, though he made a gallant struggle and responded as nobly as a grandson of the great Katy Peace should. Cadmus, with a number of speed-links to spare, passed the finishing-point an easy winner by half a length in 2:38 1/2, and the sixth Pacific Derby was over. Hermitage, second, was fully thirty lengths in front of Orrin, who gave up the game before a mile had been run. The quarter was run in 0:27, half in 0:52 1/2, three-quarters in 1:19, mile in 1:45, one and one-quarter miles in 2:11, one and one-half miles in 2:38 1/2. Below will be found a table regarding the Pacific Derby that will prove interesting to our readers:

Cadmus, the winner of 1893, is a dark bay colt by Flood (son of Norfolk and Hennie Farrow, dam of Mollie McCarthy, Shanou, Electra and Mimi), dam imp. Cornelia, by the renowned Isonomy (son of Sterling and Isola Bella, by Stockwell); second dam imp. Petroleuse, by Plebeian; third dam Resolution, by Lecturer; fourth dam Annexation, by King Tom, etc. That Cadmus will be a hard horse to defeat in the rich American Derby if he lands in the World's Fair City fit and well few thinking persons can doubt, and as the sturdy, lion-hearted colt has proven himself the best three-year-old shown in California this spring, the hopes of a large number of the betting residents of the Golden State will be centered upon Cadmus when the day comes that the American Derby of 1893 is to be run—June 25th. Cadmus has speed, courage and a good jockey to pilot him, and should render an excellent account of himself on that date.

The fourth race, one mile, was nothing but a strong exercise gallop for Picton, who ran a neck behind Gracie S, his only competitor, to the drawgate, when he came away and won by five lengths in 1:43 1/2.

The $750 handicap, one and one-sixteenth miles, came next, nine horses coming to the post, and Wildwood being played hard at even money. Topgallant was next in favor and not at all neglected at 5 to 1. Belfast was at 6, Castro and Pescador at 8 to 1, Bessie W. at 10, Red Prince and Little Esperanza at 15 to 1, Wild Robin at 30. The start was pretty good, except for Wildwood, who was two lengths behind Wild Robin, who was eighth. Bessie W. was first away, with Pescador at her neck, Topgallant third, lapped on the one-eyed horse. Pescador soon flew to the fore, and opened up a gap of two lengths on Bessie W. going to the quarter-pole. Wildwood, through an opening against the rails, had made a wonderful run, taking third place as they rounded the first turn and passing Bessie W. easily in the next furlong. Pescador led the favorite a trifle over a length passing the half-pole, Wildwood running easily, Topgallant now being third, a neck from Bessie W. Around the final turn Clancy gave Wildwood a little rein, and he came into the homestretch but a neck behind Pescador. Before they were straightened out Wildwood was in front, and sweeping on with a restless stride. His victory was heralded when more than an eighth of a mile from the finish, and in less time than it takes to tell it Wildwood was nearly three lengths to the good. Eased up from the drawgate, he centered in a winner by a good open length, Pescador second, not quite two lengths from Topgallant, who was about a length from Bessie W. fourth. Belfast was fifth, badly cut down. Time, 1:48 1/2—this with 123 pounds and pulled up the last sixteenth of a mile.

Tigress was rubbed off most of the boards before they went to the post in the last race, six furlongs. A warm tip was floating around regarding Inkerman, and he was backed from 8 to 1 down to 3 to 1 at the close. Sir Reel and Guadalupe were well-played for place. To a bad start, Sir Reel seventh and Inkerman a sad last, The Drummer led Lodi and Guadalupe to the homestretch. Tigress was fifth into the straight, but soon showed that she had the foot of the party by passing to the front and winning easily by a length from Sir Reel, who ran a fine race. The Drummer was third, a length from Inkerman, who would have cut quite a figure in this event had he not been all but left at the post. Time, 1:16 1/2. Lodi fell down at the starting point, before the race, throwing little Peters, who was not injured much.

The Winning Owners.

Following is a table showing the total amount drawn down by the various owners of thoroughbreds at the Blood Horse Association's meeting, which ended last Saturday. The Undine Stable horses not only won the largest amount, but the largest number of races and all the stakes, four in number. For number of horses started the stable of B. C. Holly and the Elmwood Stock Farm flyers did unusually well, as did George Van Gorden's pair, Articus and Motto. The sum won by the Undine Stable is estimated, but the amounts secured by others, being in the shape of purses altogether, is exactly correct:

Work of Jockies at the Blood Horse Meeting.

The following table will prove interesting to those who back jockeys as well as horses. While "Moose" Taylor's percentage is 1,000, it will be seen that he had but two mounts—both on that fleet filly, Tigress. George Miller ranks first, in reality, for he had a large number of mounts. Still he rode for two of the best stables—the Undine and Elmwood Stock Farm, and consequently generally had the speediest horses under him. C. Weber's work, therefore, must be considered as good as that of any jockey at the track, while his brother John is entitled to great credit. Sullivan did extremely well, as did C. Clancy, Nichols and Williams. The most marked improvement, to our minds, noticeable in any of the pilots, was in Peters and Burlingame. J. Narvaez, as usual, rode a large number of winners, but there are many who claim he could have placed many more wins to his credit had he so desired:

Salinas Races.

The races last Saturday at Salinas, despite the raw, disagreeable weather, were well attended, many persons being from Gonzales, Castroville, Soledad, Chualar, San Juan and Hollister. The Salinas band furnished the music and Leach ran the pools.

The first on the card was a running race, three-eighths and repeat, free for all. For this race O. Cayer was the presiding judge, and W. J. Lynn and P. Chisman were his associates. There were four starters: Leach's Sam Mount, Dwain's Mamie D., Cockrill's Mary E. and Nixon's Bee's Wing. On the second attempt the horses got off to a good start. Sam Mount at once went to the front and won hands down, Bee's Wing second, three lengths back and a nose ahead of Mamie D., Mary E. fourth. Time, 0:36.

The second heat was also taken by Sam Mount easily, Mamie D. second, Mary E. third and Bee's Wing last. Time, 0:36. Purse, $125.

The judges for the trotting races were James H. McDougall (presiding), Al Widemann and J. W. Tholcke.

The gentlemen's roadster race, owners to drive, had five starters. C. Z. Hebert's Black Bart, Carr's Thurman, Chot's Calamity Jane, H. P. Brown's Daisy R. and W. A. Kearney's Black Ben. Black Bart sold an even favorite against the field and justified the confidence of his backers by winning in three straight heats. In the second heat, however, Thurman was heated out only by a neck by the favorite. In the first heat the order at the finish was Black Bart, Daisy R., Thurman, Black Ben, Calamity Jane.

The second heat at the finish the positions were: Bart, Thurman, Daisy R., Ben, Calamity Jane.

The third and deciding heat Daisy R. nipped second place from Thurman just as they passed under the wire. The positions were: Bart, Daisy R., Thurman, Black Ben, Calamity Jane. Time for the heats—3:02, 3:01, 2:58. Purse, $150.

For the subscribers' purse of $200 the starters were Iverson & Vanderhurst's Alfred G., M. Lynn's Violante, J. D. Carr's Little Change, Hebert & Son's Spokane, James Beatty's Calcutta and J. B. Iverson's Alex S.

In the pools Spokane was installed favorite at $5, Violante $2.50 and the field $2.50.

At the finish of the first heat the order was: Spokane, Alfred G., Alex S., Violante, Little Change, Calcutta.

Before the second heat Spokane became a favorite at $5, against $2.50 for the field, with very little shortened money.

Violante went out and won the heat after a driving finish from the favorite, Alex S. third, Alfred G. fourth, Little Change fifth, Calcutta last.

Violante now became a favorite at $5 to $4 for the field. Spokane, however, went to the front and won by a neck from Violante, Alfred G. a neck further back, Little Change fourth, Calcutta fifth and Alex S. last.

Before the horses were called up for the fourth heat, C. F. Taylor appeared behind Albright's Alpheus, 2:25, and drove an exhibition mile in 2:32.

Spokane was again installed the favorite at $5 to $3 for the field.

The result of this heat proved quite unsatisfactory. Alfred G. fought it out down the stretch with Spokane, and at the dragage Spokane began to forge ahead, when Alfred G. left his feet and gained on the leader, the two finishing so close together that the judges declared it a dead heat. This did not please the crowd, the majority of whom thought Spokane had finished first by a head. Violante finished third, Little Change fourth, Alex S. next and Calcutta last.

Pools now sold Spokane $5, field $3. Alfred G. finished first, but having swung into the homestretch in second place from the pole, he broke a little ways beyond the distance stand and swerved into the pole in spite of all his driver, Cavet Rodriguez could do. This threw Violante off her stride, and she finished second, Spokane third, Alex S. last, Little Change and Calcutta having been drawn before this heat. The judges very properly disqualified Alfred G. and gave the heat to Violante.

Alex S., not having won a beat in five was drawn. No pools were sold on this heat. Violante was first at the quarter, and although hard pressed by Alfred G., finished first, Spokane close up third.

Violante got first money, Spokane second and Alfred G. third money. Time, 2:43, 2:41, 2:40, 2:39, 2:42, 2:41.—Salinas Journal.

Racing at Modesto.

At the time of the spring races last month a bet was made by Miller McPherson of $250 that Samuel Gibson's Longfellow could, after a month's training, beat Torrent, who came in ahead at that time. W. J. Martin, of Waterford, owner of Torrent, covered the bet, and Tuesday was the day decided upon for the event. In addition, two other match races were made so that a day's sport would be had. The attendance was very large and the pool selling spirited. The first race was between Joseph McDonough's bay mare Tunis, D. S. Husband's sorrel mare Spanish Belle and C. S. Sperry's bay horse Romolo. The race was one mile, trotting, best two in three. Spanish Belle won in two straight heats, Tunis second and Romolo third. Time, 3:03, 3:01.

The second race was a mile, trotting, best three in five, and the entries were: S. H. Crane's sorrel horse Frank C., J. J. Dolan's chestnut horse Antrim, T. J. Carmichael's roan horse Ray, Dr. Lee's gray mare Turkey and W. J. Hughes' brown horse Pepper. The horse of S. H. Crane won in three straight heats, the remainder of the horses taking different places in each heat. Time, 2:45, 2:41, 2:41.

The third race, mile pacing, two in three, was the event of the day, and much interest manifested, many of the friends of each horse backing their judgment with liberal bets.

The first beat was won easily by Longfellow in 2:33.

In the second heat Longfellow broke badly and Torrent came in an easy winner. Time, 2:40.

The third and deciding heat was won by Longfellow in 2:33, amidst loud and continuous applause by the friends of the winning horse.

More money changed hands Tuesday than at any one day's races held here.—Stanislaus County News.

If horse-owners, trainers and drivers will send in their lists of trotters and pacers they are handling we shall take pleasure in publishing them. All of our subscribers are interested in these items. The owners and trainers of thoroughbreds are more progressive and anxious to let horsemen know what they have in training than the other division of horsemen; they know how valuable the information is.
