"No," said I, "to-morrow will enable me to solve the matter satisfactorily."

Again I sought the magic key, but again was unsuccessful. Day after day I returned from my attempt to solve the problem but it was of no avail. Each time the mystery grew more and more profound. Now I would again see the elk and fire at them but it was of no account, the whole band would bound away unharmed. My rifle must be out of order, or something must be the matter with my cartridges. I would try them. They were perfect. The targets selected at various distances show the mark of the bullet without exception, just as I had been wont to place them. I was glad of this, for I not only prided myself on my skill, but it also convinced me of the genuineness of the mystery, that is it proved to me that my bullets had gone true to my aim, and that the mystery must be accounted for on some basis that would not impair my faith, either in my trusty rifle or my skill in handling it.

The next morning while sitting behind the rock and manzanita-tangle first above described, I chanced to look close along the right-hand wall of the valley, and there in less than one hundred yards of me stood the whole band of elk. The splendid animal which invariably led the band, was stepping leisurely about. He presented his broad side again, and again I drew a fine bead, aiming for his heart. At the first crack of my rifle he fell with that peculiar limpness of motion which the sudden shock of death gives to all bodies, and I knew the phantom elk was mine. The balance of the band dashed forward and disappeared in one of the bunches of pines fringed with rubus tangles, and passed through a short, natural tunnel through a narrow bit of mountain to the open country beyond.

As I stooped to examine my prize, I chanced to glance above and there lay the phantom elk and a hunter—myself bending over him! The crystal mirror below the falls reflected the valley throwing its counterpart distinctly in the mists which circled the mountain beyond! The mystery was solved. The phantom elk was no more.

The Selby Medal.

In 1890 the well-known firm of Selby & Co., manufacturing ammunition on this Coast, donated to the Wing Shots of Northern California a handsome gold medal under certain well-known conditions, the most important of which was that the medal should be won four times by the same man before it should become the property of the individual thus winning it.

On Sunday last Mr. Crittenden Robinson fulfilled those conditions and the medal became his property.

Mr. C. J. Haas and Mr. C. A. Merrill have each won it three times; Mr. Edward Fay twice, a number of other parties have won it once each. The score on this occasion stood as follows: Crittenden Robinson 17, Slade withdrawn, Edward Fay 16, C. A. Merrill withdrawn, C. J. Haas withdrawn, H. C. Golcher 16, Frank Maskey 15.

On the same day the California Wing Shooting Club held its monthly event. Robinson scored, 11, and took first money. Golcher, Schroeder and Haas tied for second and third places, which were won in the ties by Golcher and Schroeder in order named.

The Marine Aquarium at Washington.

The establishment of a marine aquarium at Central Station, for the purpose of demonstrating the possibility of keeping marine plants and animals at a distance from the sea, and consequently, with the use of a very limited quantity of water, was entered upon at the beginning of the year 1889, and has resulted so favorably as to afford abundance of argument for an extension of the work as a means of practical observation and experiment, says William P. Seal, of the U. S. Fish Commission, in The American Angler for May.

The system of construction adopted is the most economical and favorable possible. The building is practically a greenhouse in style, sixteen and a half feet wide and sixty-four and a half feet long, built against the west side of Central Station, with a small extension, about eight feet in length, on the south side, sufficient to accommodate the pumping apparatus, filter, etc. This style of structure, whether simple or elaborate, is necessary to afford the light required to establish favorable conditions for plant life, and, no doubt, in as marked a degree for the health and happiness of animal life also.

The central space or gallery for the observation of the aquaria is completely covered with imitation rock work, made of heavy paper applied in a soft or plastic condition, and afterward painted, sanded and frosted. No part of the aquarium tanks is allowed to show except the glass, which appears like so many holes or openings in the rocks. While all extravagance in the attempt to imitate natural rock is avoided, there is still afforded a very realistic representation of a natural grotto or cavern, in which the observer appears to be beneath or surrounded by water.

Some unavoidable use of brass piping in the beginning demonstrated beyond any further need of experiment the necessity for the entire absence of metals from the tanks, reservoirs and circulatory apparatus, and, consequently, the materials now used in their construction are glass, slate, hard and soft rubber and wood, nothing being used which is oxidizable or capable of exciting galvanic or chemical action.

The use of an awning, covering the entire structure, affords the necessary protection from excessive heat and sunlight in summer.

A gas engine with hard-rubber pump, supplies the means of elevating the water to a sufficient height to give the pressure necessary for effective aeration.

The number of aquaria in the marine grotto is twenty-four, having an aggregate capacity of about 1,500 gallons of water. The elevated tank holds something over four hundred gallons. The reservoir, located in the yard of Central Station, and inclosed with wood and glass, holds about four thousand gallons of water, thus making a total of about six thousand gallons in the circulation. The upper tank, being at an elevation of about forty feet, gives a pressure of about twenty pounds to the water entering the aquaria.

By passing the water through very small glass nozzles (one thirty-second to one-eighth inch orifice, as required) at this pressure, a small amount of water suffices, as a very large amount of air is drawn in with it and dispersed throughout the entire body of water in an aquarium in minute bubbles, thus affording sufficient aeration.

In addition to this circulatory system, there is an auxiliary system of aeration, which is used in case of unavoidable suspension of the circulation, and is also valuable in special cases and in the aeration of water of other degrees of density than that in the main body of salt water.

This system, devised by Hon. Marshall McDonald, is a modification of the various air pumps in use, which are operated by a fall of water through tubes, and is so simple and efficient as to be of very great value, and within the reach of all, for the aeration of a single aquarium kept for amusement or for the greater needs of institutions of learning. Artificial aeration, or change or circulation of water, is necessary where more than a certain proportion of aquatic animals are kept in a given amount of water. For the keeping of marine forms of life, where the supply of salt water is necessarily limited, and especially for the uses of biological laboratories, this device should prove of great value.

To establish such a pump, there must be, first, a fall of water. As but a small amount is necessary for the operation of a single pump, it may be carried up from a watercock, conveniently located, by means of a small rubber tubing. The higher it can be carried the greater will be the force created. The fall should be eight or ten feet at least, and twenty or more feet will make it much more efficient. The higher it is carried, however, the stronger the tubing must be. From this tube a small stream of water, cut down to a gentle flow, is allowed to drop into another tube having an enlarged mouth, and of one-fourth to three-eighths inch bore, drawing in with it air, thus inducing capillarity, the air forming into globules or bubbles, alternating with water spaces.

In the illustration, the tube is shown as being attached directly to the cock, and with a hole in the side for the induction of air. This method of attachment is probably the best, and might be made more effectual by the use of a metal supply pipe.

Some provision is necessary for carrying off the water in case of any accidental stoppage of the pump, as, when the water is prevented from passing down the tube, it finds its way out of the air hole at the top. A funnel-shaped receiver, with a nipple inserted into the side, to which may be attached a piece of small rubber tubing leading to a sink or other exist, might be placed on the tube below the air hole, and would probably be as simple and effective as anything; but this can be left to individual ingenuity.

A small nozzle has been used through which to pass the water into the tube (A 1) with force, but it is probably no more efficient, while great strain is brought on the tubing attaching it, often causing it to burst, and it is also liable to become choked by small crustaceans, scale from the water pipes, etc.

Through the tube (A 1), which is an enlarged sketch of what would be the top of the supply tube (A 2), the air and water pass into a jar, B, which has, in addition to the entrance or supply tube, two exit tubes, all passing through an airtight cork, or stopper, C. One of these tubes, D, merely passes through the stopper, and is for the exit of the air, which of course remains in the upper part of the jar or above the water, while the longer one, extending to the bottom of the jar, is for the exit of the water.

A proper regulation of the height of the overflow pipe outside the jar will regulate the flow of air into the aquarium. This regulation is necessary to equalize the pressure, as it will vary with the proportion of air and water passing into the jar, the depth of water in the aquarium, etc.

Several forms of liberators for the air passing into the aquaria have been devised. The difficulty in efficient aeration in this way has been in the tendency of the escaping globules of air to coalesce and form large bubbles. The more finely the air can be comminuted, the more rapidly it will be absorbed by the water, and consequently the more perfect the aeration will be. Many kinds of dead wood which are porous, such as grapevine, have been found to liberate the air in very minute bubbles, and sponge properly inserted into the mouth of a glass tube bent in the shape of a hook, so that the mouth will open upward, has worked well. It is probable that many other more satisfactory porous materials may be found.

The original supply of salt water was brought from Chesapeake Bay, and from time to time, when the Commission's steamer the Fish Hawk, returns to Washington, an additional supply is obtained. This, however, does not supply all loss from various causes, and artificial sea water has sometimes been used. This has been made by using a salt produced by evaporating sea water.

The usual method of preparing artificial sea water for the aquarium is by use of one of the many formulas provided for the purpose. In the present case, Trnk's Island salt is used. The writer has used this salt for preparing salt water for small still-water aquaria, with perfect success, and it has proven satisfactory in the present case. There was in the beginning some principle, apparently mildly acid or astringent, affecting more or less unfavorably all the lower forms of life, while it had but little noticeable effect on the fishes. Fishes having a slimy, mucous coating, such as the toadfish, appeared to lose it, and the skin became shriveled in appearance, but their general health seemed unaffected.

Stealing A Morning Meal.

One morning, while busy with rod and fly, whipping the quiet, hush-fringed pools of the Meramec, an angler's attention was attracted by a large hawk which had perched on the broken top of a dead tree, and was evidently enjoying some rare tidbit that had fallen into his marauding clutches, says Hunting and Fishing. Whether bird or beast, the object held in the hawk's talons was small, and with his strong beak he was tearing it into fragments of a size to be easily swallowed. As our angler was at times a gunner as well, it is to be supposed he regretted that his favorite rifle was not at hand, in which case the hawk's feast would have suffered an unceremonious interruption; but, as wishing for unattainable objects is ever an unprofitable occupation, the fishing was resumed and the hawk momentarily lost sight of, until his shadow darkened the stream as he swooped down from his perch and struck at something in the tangled grass and weeds. The arrowy dart from the lofty suag had been as direct as the flight of a bee to its comb, and its quarry had been struck with the same unerring accuracy. With hardly a halt the hawk returned to his perch, and resumed the meal that had known such a short intermission.

Filled with curiosity to learn the nature of the food so easily obtained, the fisherman dropped his rod and started to investigate. The riddle was easily explained. A poor mother quail, frantic with terror for her helpless progeny, fluttered about his feet in feeble protest of his advance, while here and there numbers of the scattered brood could be seen dodging about in search of more secure concealment. Accidentally our angling friend had chanced to witness one of the daily tragedies of forest life, and he had come to know the answer to that query so often propounded: "What had become of our game birds?"

No sportsman should ever neglect an opportunity to empty his gun at a hawk if there is the slightest possibility of the charge reaching its mark. No one can estimate the amount of game, the number of song-birds, sacrificed yearly by these fleet-winged, rapacious pirates of the air. To utterly exterminate the entire hawk family would be a wonderfully effective blow toward the cause of game protection; but, since this is impossible of accomplishment, we can at least, do our best to relieve poor Boh White from the perpetual persecution of his natural enemy.

Hunting, Fishing and Wheeling—Lord! but most of the letters of the alphabet are in that name—prints the following: William Dingley, while fishing on the Brazos last week, experienced a great deal of trouble with a large fish. He had caught a nine-pound catfish and put him back in the water, and before starting for home went in his boat for him, and found that another fish had swallowed him. He tried to pull him out, and he was so enormously large he dipped the boat in his struggle. The line, which was thick with fish hooks, caught him and he could not let go; neither could the fish. Down the river they went, first one on top and then the other. Poor William was just able to keep up with his boat. At last the man got loose, but the fish and the boat were making their way to deep water at Velasco. The fish was supposed to weigh over three hundred pounds. The fisherman returned to town to see a doctor. His hands were severely cut with the fish hooks and the fish line. Sixteen fish hooks were sticking in him.

In the Cascade Mountains is the Great Sunken Lake, the most deeply sunken lake in the world. It is fifteen miles long and four and a half wide. It is two thousand feet down to the surface of the water, but the depth of the water is unknown.

With the opening of the hotel season, the "devil-fish story" makes its appearance. The first to be reported is from Florida, where the mammoth devil-fish was recently seen off the coast.

A shark, washed ashore at Midion, British Columbia, had two distinct tails, three perfect eyes, and what appeared to be the rudiment of a fin hanging to the under jaw.

The initial number of McClure's Magazine is before us. It is a very entertaining and instructive issue, and in all essentials is fully abreast with the well-known and long established periodicals of the magazine world. It is handsome and profusely illustrated. $1.50 a year, 15 cents a copy. S. S. McClure, New York.

The World's Columbian Exposition Kennel show will be held September 19th to 22d. In the mean time the list of judges will be announced and we hope a better feeling will be generally secured.

What a slander it is on the Barzoi to have their natures spoken of as being more ferocious than any specimens of the canine race yet produced. When men will talk or write about that of which they know little or nothing they must necessarily fall into error.

The entries for the United States Field Trial Club's Derby, all-age stake, close Thursday next. The entry is expected to be a large one as $1,300 is offered in prizes, to be divided equally between pointers and setters. P. T. Madison, of Indianapolis, Ind., is the secretary.

The Eastern Field Trials club's thirteenth annual Derby for setters and pointers born on or after Jan. 1, 1892, has closed with a total of forty-five entries, divided as follows: English setters, 36; Irish setter, 1; pointers, 8; a falling off in total from last year of 23 entries.

The standards provided by the leaders of the fancy are, perchance, good enough, but the trouble seems to be that even the elect, so to speak, will not hold to the standards in judging the dogs, but each leader sets up, in a measure at least, a standard of his own. Now we do not condemn any man for having an opinion which is virtually a standard by which he judges the animals; any other judge would be an automaton. Give us good, practical dogs; good for the specialty for which they are intended and all will be well.

The Pacific Coast Field Trials Club's eleventh annual Derby for setters and pointers whelped on and after January 1, 1892, is yet open for entries. Entries close on the 15th instant, Thursday of next week. The purse will be divided into three parts, 50, 30 and 20 per cent. Entrance $5, forfeit to accompany nomination; $15 additional to start. J. M. Kilgarif, Secretary. Do not let your nomination fail for want of attention. The trials to be run next January will doubtless be more interesting than usual.

The pointer and setter have each been bred with for too little regard of their natural qualities. Stamina, force and endurance have in each breed been sacrificed to "ideal" lines. The so called "ideal" dog, in so much as such conformation sacrifices the development of natural quality, is that much the less of the true ideal. Ideality is misused whenever applied to aught of form or structure in the sense in which it is so generally used. It would be better to say abused. Give us dogs for use; develop their natural qualities and we will be the gainers in every sense of the word. There will be far more men to take an interest in kennel matters.

The Columbian Exposition's bench show is in hard lines and all owing to the fact that "some one has blundered." Owing to the dilatory and shiftless manner in which affairs were being conducted, so it is said, Mr. James Mortimer has resigned the superintendency of the show. This is to be regretted. True, another, well qualified, may be chosen in his stead, but the general feeling is not of that confidence that we should like to see manifest in this event. It seems that things generally have become considerably mixed at the inland metropolis by the lake. Somebody must move with a firm hand in this matter or the anticipated great show will resemble the brown mouse which the laborers of the mountain brought forth.

There seems to be no end to the feeling that we, at home, should never know aught, save the drool of adolescent verbiage, in treating of any question concerning the kennel world. The very fact that it has become necessary to secure the services of some professional in order to know when you have a good dog, is the worst indictment that ever was or ever will be written against the kennel world as a whole. Who save some impractical theorist would ever think of depending on the stall or untested paddock qualities of a horse? No animal ever was or ever will be worth aught save a growth in the highest practical work for which nature has intended them.

What has nature intended or by suggestion pointed out the work for them to execute?

The greyhound was made for speed. The hare being the natural game of this dog, the animal which is the most speedy should govern as to general type at least.

If any other type be set up by the apostles of the hench, why, the laugh will be at their expense.

The foxhound must be built for endurance; good lungs, good feet, good bone and substance, good scenting power which may be expressed by what for a better description may be called "hound expression," which, of course, includes good head, ears and muzzle. This rule will be found to apply to every class of dogs. In short, nature always chooses or forms the proper type for the use of special senses. This may not be "doggy," but it's common sense.

Mr. Kirby's Protest.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In your report of the Seattle Bench Show in your issue of the 27th inst., your correspondent states that Alton III, in the St. Bernard class, "looses to the winner in height and expression, which is had, and not that of a St. Bernard." While it is a fact that Plinmonarch is taller than Alton, it is also true that the latter weighed at the time of the show more than the former. Your report, as quoted above, as to Alton's expression is simply ridiculous, and can only be accounted for by assuming that your correspondent's education on the St. Bernard question has been decidedly neglected, which he further shows in stating that Plinmonarch has a good skull. To say the least, he should confine himself to a subject he is somewhat familiar with when talking through the press. Regarding your note on my removing Alton from the show, would say, such a rank decision as was made by the judge in this case was enough to justify one in the course taken, especially where you are given to understand before the judging that your dog will be snowed under, and when the winner is misrepresented to the judge in the ring in such a way as to favor him. This opinion is endorsed by other St. Bernard exhibitors at the show. This will be more fully explained by the enclosed clippings from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of this city, in which you will see that I offered to pay all expenses of having a St. Bernard judge from the East to decide the relative merits of the two dogs provided Mr. Raper's decision was sustained, which offer the Seattle Kennel Club dare not accept. This certainly was no child's play.

Seattle, Wash., May 31, 1893.

E. C. KIRBY.

In the interests of the kennel world we have ever held a loose rein, so to speak, on our columns, giving to each and all the right of being heard. The clippings forwarded by Mr. Kirby are, as may be readily surmised, in favor of his position in this matter.

There is one matter, however, to which we would call the attention of all exhibitors, which is this: If you cannot conclude to accept the judgment of the official judge of the show do not enter your dogs.

Have not exhibitors a right to kick?

Certainly; let every man who notes any erroneous decision shed all the light upon the matter that he may possess or can secure.

There is a proper way in which this may be done and it is this: Write up a clear and honest record of the points of the exhibits that are by you deemed to have been wrongly placed. In this way all who may read the record thus made may come into the light.

An Interesting Case.

Mr. Frank McAllister's St. Bernard dog Monk (Gielott P.—Victoria), whelped September 20, 1892, was brought to our hospital May 12th for examination, and my partner and I found an old case of umbilical hernia. The history was as follows: The owner had previously—six months ago—consulted a local veterinary surgeon, who advised keeping the animal as thin as possible, i. e., under-feeding him, until he had grown out of it. Needless to say, he grew into it, i. e., the intestine did, and the swelling increased steadily. We advised the only alternative left us, and the owner agreeing, we prepared the animal for operation. This consisted simply in a purgative, followed by a milk diet and a fast of twelve hours before the operation.

I may state here that our basis of operating surgically is to insure cleanliness throughout the work, and that the antiseptics we use are only for that purpose. The part to be operated on having been shaved carefully with a razor, was washed thoroughly with soap and water and a bandage soaked in lysol and water (one part in ten) applied to the skin for an hour previous to operating. After removing the bandage we injected hypodermically twenty minimums of a four per cent. solution of cocaine into different parts of the swelling. Five minutes later an incision was made lengthwise through the skin, laying open to view the rupture in the abdominal walls and projecting part of the intestine. There was quite an attachment of the omentum to the outer edges of the abdominal walls, and this had to be dissected before the intestine could be pushed back. The edges of the walls having been scarified they were drawn together by three sutures of cat gut; next a little iodoform was dusted over the stitches, then the skin sutured by means of silk—the last suture being at some distance from the end of the cut to allow of a free opening for the escape of any discharge. For the subsequent ten days the treatment consisted in bathing the part in hot water each morning—injecting a small quantity of lysol and water into the opening left for that purpose, and finally a dry dressing of boracic acid.

Each evening a small quantity of boracic acid was again applied. At first a bandage was kept on the part, but we found by experience that that was a mistake. In the first place we could not prevent the animal from soaking the cloths with urine; and secondly, no matter how carefully applied, there was always a certain amount of friction, which very soon increased the inflammation. After this we trusted to the two daily dressings, and kept the bed as fresh as possible. At no time did the animal show much fever—only once the thermometer showed 102 degrees F., and the discharge was very slight. In twelve days the outer incision was healed, and from that time on the part gradually decreased in size. In three weeks there was no sign of inflammation and the swelling almost imperceptible. Excepting occasional small doses of the fluid extract Cascara Sagra to keep the bowels regular, we had no further treatment to adopt.

During the first week the diet consisted of well broiled mush, milk, soup, bread and small quantities of well boiled liver.

As the animal is quite a valuable one, and was under treatment by a well-known veterinary surgeon of this city for some months previous to our seeing him, we have taken a great deal of satisfaction in operating successfully.

The Music of the Hounds.

What is more inspiring than the music of a pack of fox-hounds when in full pursuit of the game? How it comes rising and swelling, now faint, now full, over the hills and through the wooded ravines! It is nature's elixir of life to the sportsman, and he who has never heard it has lost much that goes to make life pleasurable.

I recall a dash in the hills of Kentucky some years ago which is framed in my memory's gallery of beautiful and striking scenes and hung in a strong light, which shows to advantage every detail of the scene. It was in the swiftly-vanishing September days, and the wooded hills had already put on their brilliant garments in honor of October's visit. The sun had but fairly set the wood-nymph's jewels a-glimmer as they hung from the foliage of tree and vine, and scintillated with blue, gold and fire-flashes from the grass and beds of moss. The air was fresh; the morning calm and the woods back of the old field where we had assembled to commence the run were well adapted for the royal sport.

The handlers turned loose the hounds, and to our joy they had not been down above ten minutes before the rich, deep voice of Old Trailer came to us from the gentle valley below in that full note of confidence which told that the chase was on. Like an electric thrill the old hound's notes set riders and steeds a-tingle, and away the whole company dashed with that reckless devil-take-the-hindmost spirit so essential to the enjoyment of the sport.

In a very few minutes every dog in the pack was in full cry. Music? Well, if music be the cause of producing the wildest exhilaration imaginable and induce one to urge their mettlesome steed to the greatest possible speed, leaping over fallen timbers, stumps and gullies regardless of protection to life and limb, then the chorus of those hounds was music.

The fox has broken cover and dashes away over an open ridge to better cover beyond. Away we dash, close on the hounds, while Reynard, a hundred yards in the lead, swings away with all the energy of his lithe form. We reach the top of the knoll and the game deflects to the left, giving a fine view of the chase. Closing rapidly upon him come the dogs, Trailer and Spot in the lead, while the balance of the thirteen dogs form a cone, with the puppies forming its base in the rear; their red tongues are out, and at every jump they add a note to the music; the fox, with brush well straightened, is flying on before. Cutting the angle from the top of the knoll we dash forward with reckless speed.

It was but a moment until the fox had disappeared into the timber-belt at the foot of the ridge, and the hounds were also soon lost to sight. But they press him closely and he turns up the ravine, tracing, in his flight, the second line of the triangle from its apex. The music of the hounds continues with unabated vigor, their notes, clear and strong, rebound from the sounding-board formed of the wooded ridge beyond and echo and re-echo down the valley at either hand.

Some of the party have reached the farther side of the opening near which point Reynard must break cover again if he cannot succeed in throwing the dogs off his trail in the timber.

A shout informs me that the fox has reached the open and away I dash to join in the chase again. The hill or knoll of which I speak is now circled again, and then the wily Reynard dashes back over his former trail, but the foremost dogs are close behind him and, catching sight of their game, they redouble their efforts and gain rapidly on the fox. Another dash and we see the fox spring with his last energies for security from the dogs in the branches of a fallen tree, but it is useless, for when we came up the whole pack of hounds are upon his lifeless body.

Kennel Exhibit.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—It has been found advisable, owing to the improbability of contractors completing the buildings in which the Kennel Exhibit is to be held, to postpone the exhibit, which was to begin June 12th, to September 19th, 20th, 21st and 22nd. A full, completed and separate premium list, with added classes, will be issued early in June, and I have every assurance that I will be able at that time to announce the judges for the exhibit. I regret that this postponement was made necessary, but it will be for the best interest of the exhibit as a whole, and that is what we are all working for. We have had a number of letters from exhibitors who would prefer sending their dogs here in September rather than in June. Please give this a prominent place in your columns, and much oblige. Very respectfully yours, Sales.

J. B. Martin, San Francisco, Cal., has sold Golden Flash, fox-terrier bitch, by Brockenhurst Tyke—Hillside Spinster, to C. H. Kobicke, same place.

The Pacific Kennel Club met on Wednesday evening last at their rooms, 21 Kearney street, President E. W. Briggs in the chair. There was a fair attendance of the membership. The committee on the revision of the constitution and by-laws of the club reported, and after considerable discussion, their report was adopted. Among the changes and additions proposed and adopted, was the creation of the office of Veterinary Surgeon.

Mr. J. B. Martin, Chairman of committee on club rooms, reported progress, but final action was postponed until the next meeting of the club.

The committee on the appropriate recognition of the valuable services of Mr. Clarence Haight, of the recent show, reported, their expression being in the form of an elegant fishing rod, reel and fine book of flies.

The presentation was read by President Briggs, who in fitly chosen language presented Mr. Haight with the angler's outfit.

Mr. Haight responded in a happy vein. After transacting some routine business, the meeting adjourned.

The Recreation Gun Club meets to-morrow at Oakland track. Take 9 o'clock boat.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

"THE NEW DEPARTURE."—The trotting meeting which has elicited so much argument, and which came to an end on Saturday last, is now a good subject for criticism, the theories embraced having been brought to one practical test, so that it has fairly entered upon its tentative era. It could not have been tried at a time which presented so many obstacles to success as those encountered from May 27th to June 3d. In the first place there was the general apathy towards spring trotting meetings which prevails in California, and which heretofore has been an effectual interdict. There has been continuous racing with so few breaks that it may be said to occupy the whole time from October to the Saturday before the trotting meeting opened, the few short intervals being insufficient to overcome the bad effects of the long siege. The tracks on both sides of the bay were occupied by the race-horses, the Bay District being closely blockaded against the admission of wheels, the Oakland in such a state that training trotters upon it was out of the question. That is such training as would be effective in preparing them for hard contests. Then there was the "foreign book" in operation at the Oakland track during the whole time of the meeting attracting a large number of devotees of the blind dispenser of fortune's favor, not so blind, however, as to forget the welfare of the priests who preside at the hippic altars to the serious detriment of the mass of worshippers at her shrine. The opposition of the hookmakers who were debarred from following their lucrative calling was alone effective through the influence exerted over a few of the reporters for the daily papers, these subservient vassals doing their utmost to create a false impression and deter people from attending. Their efforts in that direction were slightly injurious, their false reports more damaging, leading to a wrong impression for the time, which, however, will be overcome when the real situation is apparent and the motif which prompted exposed.

The apathy of the "general public" to spring trotting meetings in California is shared by many owners of horses. These have come to the conclusion that such meetings cannot be made remunerative, and so long as their aid is withheld to make them of sufficient attraction to "draw," it will be as well for the association to come to the same conclusion. Palo Alto was the only representative from the many breeding establishments of California, and while Mr. Salisbury had good reasons for his non-attendance, and which he took the trouble to present in person, the others stood aloof, withholding their countenance, and if not active in their opposition, that was in reality as effectual as open warfare.

Notwithstanding these obstacles I have no hesitation in writing that the innovations were in the main eminently worthy of being accepted, and, if generally adopted, will go a long way towards popularizing trotting in the large cities, where now the sport is virtually tabooed, and increase its attractiveness all over the country.

The meeting, which I hope will prove the forerunner of better days for light harness horses, has been successful beyond my expectations in proving that the ground was well chosen, and that when the machinery has the benefit of the polish which time will give, the defective parts replaced by sections which has shown to be necessary, the whole machine will run smoothly. I will place under different heads the salient features of this experiment:

DASHES AND HEATS, TWO IN THREE.—In place of all heats, "best 3 in 5" is so surely an improvement that it will be a waste of time to enter into a long description of that which may be called the main point at issue. With the exception of a few who are so ultra-conservative that they cannot bear to have the practices of the past interfered with in any way, the verdict has been overwhelmingly in favor of the substitution. Last week I gave an illustration of one cause for objecting, viz., that the trainer of a horse which was beaten in a 2 in 3 told the owner that he would have won had it been 3 in 5, and that at once the owner wrote to Secretary W. M. Morse of the N. T. A. that 2 in 3 wouldn't do. Just as well to call for a change to 4 in 7, or 5 in 9 when a horse was beaten in the old, old very old, (and should be obsolete) 3 in 5. Thirty races were decided in six days; heats from half a mile to two miles, dashes from one mile to two and one-fourth miles. Several of them the closest kind of finishes, one it took four heats to decide, and the free-for-all pacing three heats. Not a heat was laid up during the whole meeting, the only apparent attempt being frustrated by the watchfulness of the management. But as stated before it would be a waste of time and space to amplify on what is so generally conceded, and that innovation has surely come to stay, although it is likely to take some time to adjust the levers all over the country to prize the wheels out of ruts which have been deepened by half a century's traffic. There is little doubt that the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association will adhere to this change, and that the summer and fall meetings will prove, beyond peradventure, that it is worthy of adoption at all places where there is a fair congregation of horses. It may be that in a very few instances, at some of the smaller fairs, there may be a scarcity of horses, and to "round out" the afternoon's sport the longer contests will be necessary, but in all others the change will be a welcome departure.

STARTING.—That a wise move has been made in the new departure in starting over the old is just as surely fixed in my mind as that heats, two in three, and dashes are superior to three in five. In doing away with the "intolerable prolongations" of ancient scoring, it is more effective than any other change. That it has been adopted as the universal custom in racing is one argument in its favor, and a starter separate and distinct from the judges an absolutely essential whether the race is to be started from the judges' stand or any other part of the course. Many of the main Eastern associations employ a professional, paid starter, but as their races are commenced and finished in front of the judges, he is an occupant of the stand. In placing that official by himself, on the opposite side of the track from the judges, following the example of racing clubs, is surely an improvement. He is alone responsible, and should be placed in a situation where he cannot be interfered with. He is in a better position to determine the standing of the horses when "coming for the word" than when exalted to the height that judges' stands are usually erected, and when surrounded by three others who are prone to give advice, if not to utter peremptory commands. There he is in command without the powers to enforce his mandates, and although he may have the necessary "backbone" to pursue his course irrespective of influence, if not competent for the position when left entirely to himself he should not be intrusted with the office. So far it has been tried at two meetings of the association last fall, and all that just finished and in all the trotting meetings I have attended there has been less fault found with the starts in these two, not a tittle of the usual bickerings, only one objection offered, and in that case the driver who entered the complaint was clearly in error. That thirty races in six days, a fair proportion of them at heats, were concluded in plenty of time for the spectators to reach the city long before sunset, with one exception either before or soon after six o'clock, is the best proof that no time was wasted. The only objections that are urged against continuing this method of starting are that it lessens the dignity of the judicial office, and that being quiet spectators of the start in place of being active participants, entailed a surrender of rights which had the sanction of years. I cannot look at these as having any weight any more than if the generals in command of the different divisions of an army should insist on performing the duties of Colonels and Majors of their respective regiments, or a judge on the bench he also the court hallif. It surely does not enhance their dignity to be shouting at the drivers as they pass and re-pass before them, and the conspicuousness gained is rather a lessening than augmentation of the dignity of the position. The starter is subordinate and they have the power to compel his obedience and regulate his authority. No one of any sense would rate the office of starter as superior to that of the judges on account of the noise he makes, and when that shouting is removed from the judges' stand it strikes me that in place of being a commendable adjunct, and a promoter of consequence, it is better away. We are endeavoring to secure the best points of racing management, and those who can recall the old-time starting from the judges' stand by the judges, or a majority of them at least, will agree with me that a return to the old practice would be retrogression.

DIVIDING FIELDS.—When the condition was embodied in the programme that when the entries in dash races exceeded six the fields should be divided, it was wisely ordered. Were it extended to cover heats as well as dashes it would be still better. The only race which gave much trouble in scoring was the 2:28 class, in which eight came to the post, and though that was gotten off with comparatively few scores, had there been two races of four in each it would have been more satisfactory. Had the same conditions been incorporated in the bill for the fall meeting including heats as well as dashes, the further trial would, in all probability, be valuable, and another of the innovations worthy of repetition.

So far as mentioned I consider that the experiments conducted at the meeting just closed have proved to unprejudiced people that there are decided advantages to be gained from their adoption in the future. There are others, however, which cannot be called entirely successful, and which demand modification. I have not given up the hope that spring trotting meetings can yet be made successful in California, but with amendments to cover the discrepancies, or rather correct the mistakes made.

FOUR DAYS THE LIMIT.—Had the original intention been carried out, and the meeting been restricted to Saturday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of the time embraced in the lease of the track there would have been a better financial showing, and a difficulty obviated which was not foreseen. The change was made thinking that so many horses would be in attendance that four days would be inadequate to give them all a chance, and it might be necessary to effect that purpose to extend the time still further. This deviation undoubtedly entailed a loss which, if not presented, the result would have been a pecuniary success of the first spring meeting held under the auspices of the association. And I freely admit that I am the one on whom should fall the greatest blame for the extension of the meeting and just as readily admit that it was a blunder. Tallrand said that a "blunder was worse than a crime," and while not so reprehensible as deliberate wrongdoing, the effects may be equally as bad. The other difficulty which followed the extension was placing the "over-night races" so close to the time of action, in fact, literally what the name implies. With one day intervening there would be a far better opportunity to correct errors in classification, and to amend faults which could not be reached in a shorter interval. There was still another point which I regarded with favor and which a practical test has demonstrated the necessity for reconsideration.

CLASSIFICATION.—On the basis of equality of merit, in place of eligibility depending on records obtained, was a pet scheme of mine, and like many idiosyncracies found wanting when weighed in the balance of actual trial. It may be that later in the season when the performances are better known that it may be tried with better results, and that "outclassed horses" can be given an opportunity to earn something. That this would add to the value of trotters is beyond reasonable contradiction, but in the first meeting of the season there are objections which cannot be overcome. When an animal was mentioned whose record was ever so little faster than the others named there was a general outcry, and in one instance where a horse was eligible to a 2:27 class those who would enter in a 2:28 would not listen to his admission.

FRACTIONAL DISTANCES.—A big mistake to put the theme which is designated by small caps at the commencement of this paragraph into the list of doubtful innovations, and the way that it came to be omitted in the opening of this paper was under the impression that it had been disposed of in the commendations on the dash feature of the meeting. But those were heats, several of them, at distances over a mile and under two miles, and it is indisputable that they were in high favor with the spectators. True enough that there were many queries after the excitement of the finish had died away what the time for a mile would be. In my opinion this is a merit and will, in a measure, do away with the feeling that a trotting race is not worth seeing unless fast time is hung out. When Belle Medium, Richland and Jim C. came to the winning score not a neck between first and third, scarcely an inch between the two leaders at the finish of a dash of one and one-eighth miles in 2:48, there was plenty of applause after 2:48 had been displayed, whereas if it had been one mile and 2:29, the figures, the oration would have been regretted and weak the buzzes thereafter until the verdict of the watch gives the cue for claqueing. Then again, there was a double gratification in witnessing the contestants come down the straight together at the commencement and again at the finish, with the further advantage to the drivers of having a tangent to begin upon in place of close proximity to the curve.

And now for the most important of all the questions that have come up for discussion previous to, during the pendency of and following this meeting so prohibic in debatable features:

POOLSSELLING AND BOOKMAKING.—When this question came before the Board of Directors, ten of which were present, there was only one vote in favor of allowing hookmaking. This was certainly a substantial and significant condemnation of that system of betting. The vote in favor of poolselling was unanimous and the contract awarded to Killip & Co., a firm which has been in the business ever since my arrival in California, nineteen years ago. They were to furnish all the mutual boxes the association demanded, and also conduct the auction pools. There was to be one box in which the price of tickets should be two dollars in order to give small bettors a chance, as this was one of the points which were claimed to be superior in the books. The percentage charged three per cent in the auction, and five per cent in the mutuals on the gross amount of the pools. These are the percentages which rule all over the country as well as in California, and as 60 per cent of the receipts belong to the association, without any portion of the attending expenses, it is a direct addition to the "racing fund." There was only one complaint during the meeting that being that winning tickets were not cashed as promptly as they should have been, and that was remedied by appointing more paying tellers. In order to silence the oftentimes-made charge that the number of tickets sold on the winner were not correctly given, a director was appointed to oversee the business (this Messrs. Killip & Co. have always solicited), and his report was that everything was straight. From the commencement of the meeting and to the close there was a continual harping over the banishment of the bookmakers. The slim attendance on some of the days was ascribed to that cause, and one of the reporters of a daily went so far as to publish that the directors were going to reconsider the vote which excluded hookmakers and accept their services. It was a constant subject for discussion, those who started it being invariably in favor of hook-betting. While I have written a good deal in relation to hookmaking on trotting races, endeavoring to show the dangers which will follow the practice being established, these are of so grave a cast as to warrant often-repeated warning. The battle must be fought to the end, and if the supporters of trotting fail to continue the fight, it will not be long until all turf and track sports will be involved in ruin. The influence of those who are interested in trotting and the breeding of trotters is all that prevents a prohibiting ordinance in Alameda County. Were trotting under the thrall of hookmakers and trotting and pacing races were adjuncts to gambling, the end would be close at hand. To do away with the evils that are sure to follow continuous racing in the metropolis the whole State will be placed under ban. A great interest is threatened, and these interests put in jeopardy that a few may realize fortunes. Bookmakers and others who make money by these long-continued race meetings cannot be expected to surrender such opportunities without a vigorous struggle, and they are powerful adversaries. There is money on that side, and shrewdness, and determination to succeed, and it will be a strong position for them to occupy when trotting, as well as racing, is under their system. Poolselling and hookmaking are on opposite sides, or rather hookmakers are determined to break up a system which interferes with their business. Mutual pools especially. In Australia a bill to legalize the "totalizer" went through the lower house; in the upper it was defeated by the united action of bookmakers and those who favored prohibition of all systems of wagering. Something of the same kind in New Jersey, when those who were interested in the betting rooms in New York City joined their forces with the ultra good—the fanatics. So far as a bigoted warfare against racing and trotting can give them that appellation and a great corporation, the Western Union Telegraph Co., was ready to lend its aid. When the onset was made on the rooms on Leidesdorff street, the telegraph folks could have settled it with one order forbidding the use of its wires, but that would have cut off a great source of revenue, and as corporations have been represented to be without souls, it is a natural sequence that greed for money should govern them as well as individuals who are credited with spiritual belongings.

So long, however, as the State Agricultural Society, the District Fairs and the Pacific Coast Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association adhere to the course which has been followed in the past, there are hopes that the supreme danger can be averted. Should that be forsaken, and owing to a promise somewhat similar to one made nearly nineteen hundred years ago, of great returns to follow a change of route, there can be only one ending.

There was a feature of the meeting which was highly satisfactory to me, that being the interest taken by the owners and drivers who were present, all anxious to forward the interest, and with few exceptions ready to do all in their power to make it a success. While all are worthy of praise it may be thought invidious to particularize, and therefore a general commendation will be all. Not one of these practical men who did not endorse the main changes, enthusiastic in their praise of dashes and two in three, and variations of distance. I did not expect so general an approval at the outset, anticipating some discord and expressions of preference the old system. The antagonism to that innovation will be mainly confined to those who think that it will impose a reduction of track receipts from the increase of the number of races, but if that increase is more than balanced by enlarged attendance that will not be valued. The further test at the summer and fall meetings of the association will surely add to the favorable estimate. At the fall meeting ten purses, all of them 2 in 3, have closed with one hundred and seventy-one entries. That is assuredly an expression of endorsement of change by the owners and may be accepted as an augury of future appreciation.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

PROBABLY no man lives or ever has lived that can train over five trotters well. There are a great many trainers who train fairly well as many as ten horses, but they could train five much better. To obtain the best results a trainer should see every move that is made around every horse in his stable, know just how and when they are fed and watered, how they are cleaned, how much they are walked, how much grass they get, go to the shop with every one that has a shoe set, jog and work every one himself, and be with every horse while being cooled out and taken care of. To do all this with five horses will keep a trainer very busy fifteen hours a day. Owners of promising horses who place them in the hands of a trainer who has twenty or more horses to look after will usually not be pleased with the results.

The Valensin Sale.

The Sidneys are highly appreciated wherever they go. In California, this great son of Santa Claus and Sweetness came into prominence at a very early age as a sire; his opportunities in the stud were very limited, and to-day we venture the assertion that there is not a stallion owner in California who would allow his horse to be bred to the class of mares that Mr. Valensin bred Sidney after he purchased him.

The consignment that William B. Fasig is to sell is composed of many royally-bred ones as can be seen by the following list:

- Belle Helene (2), black filly, by Sidney, dam, Ellen Tomlinson by Dictator; second dam by Mambrino Patchen.

The sale will take place by electric light at Tattersall's Sales Repository, corner Fifty-fifth street and Seventh avenue, New York City, during the evenings of June 21st, 22d and 23d. Every Californian can see at a glance that there never was such a grand collection of well-bred Sidneys offered before, and as the California-bred dams are all producers, and the Eastern-bred dams have fine producing lines on both sides, every youngster in the lot is destined to become famous, as Cupid, 2:18; Faustino, 2:14; Thistle, 2:14; Gold Leaf, 2:11; Adonis, 2:11; Sister V., 2:18; Fleet, 2:19 1/2, and half a score of others.

Moving Equine Palace.

Last Thursday a car attached to the rear of the Eastern bound passenger train attracted as much attention as the Pullman Palace cars. It was called the Burton Horse car, and each side was the name "Matt Stora, California."

Before the bell rang, and the brakeman shouted "All aboard!" an invitation to inspect the car was accepted. The car is forty-four feet long inside. It is partitioned into four compartments and each of them divided into four stalls. The horses are hocked into these and by an ingenious arrangement a bar is dropped in front of them, on one side of which a metallic trough is secured. This bar drops into supports and holds the horses in their places. Directly over the center of the car there is a tank which is capable of holding 3,000 gallons of water. Underneath the floor is a receptacle for holding two tons of grain. The horses face two open driveways and in these can be stored enough hay to last the sixteen horses on their journey. On the sides and ends of the car are the latest improved ventilations, by which an even temperature can at all times be kept. The thermometers at both ends of the car are always carefully watched, and any sudden changes of temperature are noted. It is very seldom that more than twelve horses are taken in these cars on a long journey. Should any one be taken sick, by taking out a horse or two, and moving the partition in the stall close to the other ones, a good comfortable box stall can be made. In order to keep the animals from injuring their hocks, the rear of the stalls is heavily padded. Mr. Stora has added another improvement; he has had extra heavy mats made for the horses to stand on, so that their feet will not become feverish. A medicine chest is one of the necessary adjuncts, and this car had one of the best stocked ones we have seen. He has used this car for the past four years crossing the continent and never has had a sick animal, in it still he believes in being prepared for emergencies.

In the stalls we noticed Topgallant, Centella, Red Prince, Tohasco, Modesto, Hermitage and five other youngsters. Besides these he had a magnificent team of roadsters which were consigned to Herman Oelrichs, J. G. Fair's son-in-law.

San Simeon Flyers.

There will be a notable sale of thoroughbreds on the 19th of July by Killip & Co. At that time there will be disposed of King Thomas, that cost $10,000 at two years, and a (brother to Ban Fox and King Fox), by imp. King Ban, dam Maud Hampton by Hunter's Lexington; Almont, winner of many magnificent races at all distances, by Three Cheers, dam Question by Joe Hooker, besides a large number of yearlings from dams of winners and by such sires as Surinam, Jim Brown, imp. True Briton and imp. Trade Wind. Among the yearlings are half-brothers and sisters to such excellent race horses as Bridal Veil, Yosemite, Snowdrop, Prize, Blizard and Castanet. The success of these horses has been truly remarkable, and doubtless there is in the lot offered for sale this year a number equally as good, if not better, than those mentioned above. Catalogues will be ready by June 20th at Killip & Co.'s, 22 Montgomery street. Horsemen should remember also that the San Simeon brood mares and stallions will be sold at auction next November.

San Luis Obispo Jottings.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SAN LUIS OBISPO, June 6.—The track in San Luis has never looked so well as it does this season. Mr. Trainer, who just at present is responsible for its condition, has finished the good work that Mr. Barstow, of San Jose, commenced, and the result is that our track is on a par with any in the State, and a good deal faster than the majority. This year we mean to wake ourselves and the outside world up to the fact that here in the City of the Bishop we are raising colts and fillies which shall rank on an equal footing with any that run in the meadows of San Mateo and Pleasanton.

Little fast work, however, has been done as yet. R. E. Tolle's mare Bijou shows up in good form and can trot a quarter in a way to satisfy even her owner, but Tolle this season is out for blood, and has no intention to bring a stale mare to the wire when the bell goes, so short hushes are the day.

P. W. Murphy has some excellent youngsters sired by his horse Gaviota, and amongst others a two-year-old pacer, will make a mark as a side-wheeler before many moons have waned. It is built evidently on scientific pacing principles, as it seems to prefer pacing to walking.

A half brother to Hattie F., 2:18, is an animal also which will strike the eye of any lover of horse-flesh, while it promises to be as fast as its relative. That old crack three-year-old, Maud Alameda, two-year-old record 2:25, was beaten in the mile burst for three-year-olds at the late P. C. T. H. B. A. meeting was a disappointment, but at any rate we have the honor of possessing the mother of the winner—Sultan Queen.

Sam Carsoo has a nice bunch at his end of the stalls, and is getting the stallion Sirocco, by Staubohl, dam by A. W. Richmond into good condition. A horse backed up with such breeding should be heard from this year. Major Kyrle; also, who drove out Keno R. last year in 2:20 should be rough customer to handle. SCRUTATOR.

Tattersall's Sale.

There was a good attendance and at times spirited bidding at Tattersall's last night, says Daily America of May 30th. Mr. William Easton, auctioneer, sold forty-six yearlings, the property of different owners, for $47,725, an average of $1,037 per head. The best price of the sale was for the bay colt by Longfellow, out of Trophy, a full brother to Wadsworth and a half-brother to Jilt. After a lively competition he was knocked down for $3,500.

Ex-Mayor Grant, David Tenny Pulsifer, James Galway, Peter Walden, Starter James Rowe, L. J. Rose, William Knakel, Colonel Frank Hall, J. B. Haggin, Dr. Gideon Knapp, C. J. Walcott, Johnny Campbell, Dave Gideon and John Daly were in the audience besides the buyers mentioned below.

At the morning sale Mr. Easton disposed of thirty-three head of high-class hackney cobs, carriage and saddle horses for $7,200, an average of $218. Summary:

Sale of the Rancho del Paso Yearlings.

The sixth annual sale of the Rancho del Paso yearlings, the property of James B. Haggin of California, was opened June 1st in the paddock of the Morris Park race track. The catalogue numbered 146 youngsters, the get of such famous sires as Ben Ali, Fresno, Hidalgo, Sir Modred, St. Blaise, Tyrant and the great Salvador, and of this number thirty-nine were sold yesterday. The total amount realized was $57,900.

An ordinance has been passed in Chicago and allowed to become a law without the Mayor's signature, to cut streets through the ground occupied by Garfield Park.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

THERE are twenty sires that are thus far represented by new performers.

It is said that Yolo Maid, 2:12, has already gone a mile in 2:11 in her work.

CHAS. DUFFEE is working a number of colts by Gossiper and McKinney at the Los Angeles track.

WILLIAMSON'S Belmont never sired a chestnut colt in his life. His colts were all bays and browns.

THE work of classifying entries in the 2:30 list has commenced, and every day brings its new additions.

BISHOP HERO, Frank O'Neil, Sevenoaks and J. S. C. are in George Misner's care at City View Park.—Portland.

A TWO-YEAR-OLD filly by Favorite Wilkes, dam by Gen. Benton, paced a quarter at Parkville, L. I., in 33 seconds, a 2:12 gait.

LETA MAY, 2:23½, by Antevolo, was the first pacer to enter the list this year. She traces direct to Minnehaha, the great broodmare.

A LARGE number of horsemen left this city for Sacramento last Thursday evening, the trotting and pacing events being the attraction.

FERNDALE, Mr. Shult's $5,000 Sidney filly, is a natural pacer, but they are trying to make her trot. Driscoll says she can fly at the pace.

THE bay gelding Ned Winslow was pacing at Rockville, Conn., two weeks ago and won his first race of the year in 2:23½, 2:26 and 2:26.

CHAS. JAMES, the big bay gelding by Le Grande, is said to be the fastest green trotter at the San Mateo Stock Farm. He will be seen on the circuit this fall.

THERE will be a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association at this office next Tuesday afternoon, June 13th, at 1 o'clock.

I. DECURT's fine mare Myrtle is in training at Petaluma. She recently trotted in 2:24 on the track, and with several others, of good trotters of his, will be seen on the circuit this fall.

TWO weeks have gone by and not a word has been telegraphed about Dan McCarty and his two-minute trotter. Surely the wires must be down; he never was neglected that long before.

THE track at San Jose is very attractive to owners and trainers of trotters and pacers. It never was in finer condition, and there never were so many trotters and pacers trained there as at present.

PETER WILLIAMS of Silver Bow Stock Farm started for Salt Lake last Thursday. He had a string of five trotters with him. Mr. Williams will go through the Moutana Circuit with them.

THERE used to be but one or two models of regulation sulkies in use, but since the "dawning of the era of the bike" there are many varieties. At the Bay District Track there were seven different kinds of rigs.

GEO. H. REED, of Los Angeles, has a coal black filly by McKinney, 2:12½, out of a sister to San Pedro, 2:10½, that is as pure a trotter as ever was seen. He is very proud of her, and has already refused a large offer.

WALTER MABEN it is said, will have a large number of Dr. Wise's horses on the circuit. M. McManus will remain at home and handle the youngsters there, although he may be seen on the southern circuit with a few good ones.

A SUBSCRIBER and horseman called upon us to suggest that those who are troubled with warts on horses or cattle will find castor oil a thorough and complete remedy. Simply rub the wart with the oil now and again until it dies away.

KODIAK, the bay stallion that was only beaten a nose by Erin in 2:27 at the Bay District track, is a full brother to Gus Wilkes, 2:22, and will get a very low mark this fall. Mr. A. L. Hinds, his owner and driver, has reason to be proud of him.

At the sale of horses from the estate of John Warr the seven-year-old bay mare Warrina (record 2:25), full sister to Flying Jib, 2:05½, by Algona, son of Almont, dam Middletown mare, by Middletown, was purchased by Chas. Robinson of New York, for $3,600.

F. S. GORTON, Chicago, has sold to George W. West, same city, the chestnut two-year-old filly Her Highness, by Elector, 2:21, dam Princess Mabel, by Kentucky Prince; second dam Lady Rysdyk (grandam of Problem, 2:19½, and Kenneth, 2:28½), by Hambletonian 10.

JAMES H. MCNABB, of Petaluma, has a fine trotter at last; it is called Red Oak, and is marked like "Salvator, the wonderful." Red Oak is by Oaknut, out of a mare by Dawu, 2:18½, and is therefore an inbred Nutwood. He will be seen in the district races at Petaluma this fall.

ON Saturday last the champion race mare of 1890 was mated with the champion race horse of 1891. Cricket, 2:10, was bred to Direct, 2:05½, at the Pleasanton Stock Farm. The product ought to race all summer and then go an exhibition inside of two minutes—just for exercise.

THE necessity of having secretaries attend to the getting of the full pedigree of winners at the trotting meetings this year cannot be too firmly impressed upon their minds by the writers on turf journals throughout the land. Much valuable time will be saved and greater satisfaction will be found in reading the summaries.

ELECTIONEER has another in the list. His ten-year-old daughter, Brilliant, got a record of 2:26½ and won her first race in one-two-three order on May 31st at Denver, Colorado. She is out of Bright Eyes (dam of Marvin, 2:28½), by Gen. Benton; second dam Prussian Maid, 2:19, by Signal 3327. A very fast record is predicted for her this year.

THOS. BONNER, superintendent of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, while jogging a colt on the race track there last week, was thrown out on his head, and for a number of hours it was thought he was fatally injured, but he rallied slowly and is now able to be about. It was a close call.

MILLARD SANDERS is very busy preparing the youngsters by Sidney for their Eastern trip on the 23d. There are some very fast trotters and pacers among them, and as they are out of better-bred dams than any lot heretofore sold from this farm, they should to bring very good prices.

THE Los Angeles people are unanimous in praising a black filly by James Madison that is on the Los Angeles track. She is called Bet Madison, and trots eighths in 18 seconds and quarters in 37 seconds with the greatest ease. James Madison as a sire, will be noted before many years.

JAMES F., a trotter with a mark of 2:16, and valued by his owner, James Slevin, of Aspen, Col., at $10,000, was almost instantly killed on the Overland Park track, Denver, May 26, by a collision with Matron Goldust, who may also die from injuries received. The horses were being speeded and James F., was on the wrong side of the track.

ELECTIONEER's three entries in the 2:30 list for 1893 are: Memento, 2:25½; Brilliant, 2:26½, and Antinous, 2:28½. His son, Palo Alto, is represented by Palatine, 2 years, 2:30. Albert W. has a new one in Albert T., 2:21½, and Antevolo has one in Leta May (p), 2:23½. A pretty good week's work for the family, and it is the first of the trotting season, too.

The handsome mare Neva by Steinway, that got a mark at 2:27 last Saturday, has a perfect gait, but is inclined to be flighty when in company. She is out of Princess by Administrator, second dam Priceless (dam of Ernest Maltravers, 2:24) by Volunteer, 55; third dam Silvertail (dam of Driver, 2:19½, winner of 165 heats in 2:30) by American Star 14. She is five years old.

A TELEGRAM, received in this city from New York, June 5, says: "The special session of the National Trotting Association made short work to-night of the recommendation of the committee appointed in May, 1891, to bring the red flag near the wire. The old rule providing that where less than eight horses start the distance be 100 yards, and for eight or more horses 150 yards, will remain as it is."

A MEETING of delegates from all the associations comprising the grand circuit of California, viz. Oakland, Napa, Petaluma, Vallejo, Stockton, Sacramento, San Jose, Fresno and the Breeders' Association will take place in this city next Tuesday evening, June 13th, at eight o'clock. A programme will be prepared and a uniform rate of entry for trotting and pacing events will be determined upon.

THE Chicago Inter-Ocean says: "There is a big electric clock in use for timing purposes at the meeting in progress in San Francisco. Keys setting the apparatus in motion are placed at various points around the course and stopped by a man in the judges' stand as the winner passes under the wire." This improvement has not been seen here yet. It has been talked about by many horsemen, and that's all.

THE plain-looking little roan mare, Flora S., that got a record of 2:27 at the Breeders' meeting, is by Dexter Prince, out of a little saddle mare that was used by the boy at Mr. Morse's place, Lodi, to ride after the cows. Her pedigree is unknown, and so far as individuality, size or gameness were concerned, she was very deficient. The sire should be given credit for whatever trotting action and gameness Flora S. is possessed of.

AFTER six years of suspension from N. T. A. tracks, William Henry, of Portland, was reinstated a few days ago, through the influence of several members of the Portland Speed and Driving Association, who were of the opinion that he had sufficiently expiated his offense. It was the rather common one of entering some one else's horses. His trotter, What Ho, and his pacer Joe will perform at the Albina meeting this month.

AT OVERLAND Park Longford, a twelve-year-old horse owned by Mr. Barber, of Denver, broke the six-mile trotting record by 45 seconds, and is now the champion of the world. He would have made better time, but the sulky broke in the first round. He covered the distance in 16:08. The previous best record was made by Satellite in 1889, which was 16:53. Longford broke but once in the entire six-mile trot.

MESSES. KEATING & OTTINGER shipped a lot of horses last Wednesday, among them being Our Dick, 2:10½; Ottinger, 2:21½; James L., by Dexter Prince and Eda, by Dexter Prince. In the same car, Lee Rose shipped Richmond, Jr., and the Los Cerritos Stock Farms' consignment, under Lee Shaner, consisting of Moorzouk, Georgie Woodthorpe, Lady H., and a daughter of Sidney. After these horses compete in the races at Salt Lake, most of them will go to Anacouda.

THE owners of winning thoroughbreds are very particular to have their horses get all the credit due them, and there is no reason why a trotter that wins a race or makes a record should have his sire and dam ignored by careless secretaries. The day for untraced trotters and pacers should soon come to an end. Here in California there are numbers that trace to unknown dams, but their sires are all well known; this is an important item, and should be remembered by everyone concerned.

FRANK H. DUNTON, the founder of Dunton's Spirit of the Turf at Chicago, was married to Miss Helen Bromley at Stockton, June 6th. The bride formerly lived in this city. Dunton is well and has been on the coast several months for his health. He has been unsettled since the terrible tragedy in Chicago two years ago, when Dr. Scudder, who afterward committed suicide in jail, killed Mrs. Dunton and attempted to poison Mr. Dunton, to secure the family wealth through Scudder's wife, their adopted daughter.

BISMARCK 2587 was destroyed by his owner, John Gordon, last month at San Jose. Bismarck met with a painful accident last September and never recovered from its effects. He seemed to "with away," and to put him out of misery he was chloroformed. Bismarck was foaled in 1873; he was sired by Index 2556, dam Lady Weeks, by Williamson's Belmont. He sired Chancellor, the game chestnut stallion that got a record of 2:21 last year. In appearance Bismarck was very handsome and stylish, and he was a most intelligent animal.

A WEEK hence the Portland Speed and Driving Association's new grounds at Albina will be ready for the proper reception of the horses entered for the Spring meeting, which begins on the 24th inst., and before that date arrives the last finishing touches will have been put upon the finest racetrack and equipment on the Pacific Coast. Last week the graders completed their work, and the track is now being rolled and fenced. The grandstand has been finished to the roof, which will be laid the coming week, and nothing more remains to be done with the stalls than to tenant them with horses.—Oregonian.

THE American Trotting Association has amended one of its rules in such a way as to prevent any compromising with the devil in cases of ringers or disguised horses. Rule 32 formerly provided that "Any horse that shall have been painted and disguised to represent another or different horse, shall forfeit the entrance money and be ruled out, and the guilty party and horse may be suspended or expelled." The wording has now changed to "shall be expelled." The rule as it formerly read gave half-hearted people in authority an opportunity to let thieves down easy. There is now no compromise ground. The offender must walk the plank.

THE Kentucky Stock Farm publishes a column of items under the heading of "California Clippings" every week. There are just thirty of them in the issue of June 1st, of this number twenty-eight are taken bodily from the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN and no credit given. We advise the scissors editor to change the heading next week and in its stead put "Clippings from the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN." It may not look so well to give credit where it is due, but then it will give greater satisfaction. The California correspondent of that journal used to take similar items without giving credit also, and out of them by liberal padding he made about three columns. We observed that he was dropped from the list when his pilfering methods were discovered by the scissors editor who is now anxious to show that he is only an apt imitator. Of the two evils, the special correspondent is the least objectionable.

GREENVILLE will fit up their new track, and they have much hard work and expense before them. The people of the place have much fair enterprise or they would not have undertaken so much, but as the first fair ever held in the Eleventh District was held there, it is not to be wondered at that some of the old enterprise is still there. We predict for Greenville a successful fair this year. The band tournament is a drawing card and should create much interest during the Fair week. There are ten or twelve hands in the Eleventh and Thirty-fourth Districts; the premiums are liberal and should give a stimulus to develop the musical talent in the two districts. If the Thirty-fourth district will also offer premiums it will be the great drawing attraction at both fairs, and make the prizes so that the one receiving first in one district cannot receive first prize in the other district.—Sierra Valley Leader.

SECRETARY ROTHSCHILD is compiling his list of trotting and pacing entries for the spring meeting, and when published, it will convince the sport-loving people of Portland that an unprecedented series of treats is in store for them, says the Oregonian. Horses from as far south as Santa Rosa, Cal., and as far east as Montana, will compete with Oregon and Washington flyers on the new track. Gold Medal, the horse that paced in 2:17, the fastest mile ever covered on the City View track, will attempt to lower the record at Albina, and C. W. G., another fast pacer, is entered from Spokane. Altao and Tremont, drawing cards everywhere, have the call in the free-for-all and the 2:27 and 2:29 trotting classes. Blondie as a trotter in the 2:24 class will no doubt get the hacking of his many admirers, for whom he has never yet caused regret. The 2:50 class will have 10 entries, and the 2:40 probably as many. That there are plenty of pacers in this district is inferred from the fact that about eight entries have been received for the 2:35 pace and almost as many for the 2:25 event. All the drivers will occupy pneumatic tired sulkies at this meeting. While the horses may not be able to make the time they will attain later in the season, they will never perform on a faster track than the one at Albina will be three weeks hence.

THERE seemed to be a difference of opinion regarding the pedigree of Henry Williamson. Mr. W. M. Williamson, while at the races last week, was asked to give his version of it, and as he had Belmont, and owned the dam of the stallion we were inquiring about, he answered: "Henry Williamson was a bay horse by Belmont, and was far better bred than Venture. His dam was a mare called Silver Cup (dam of Vixen, grandam of Neilson and other good ones), by American Boy Jr.; second dam Liz Givens (dam of Langford and Bonnie Belle), by imp. Langford; third dam Charlotte Pace (dam of Bergen, the best son of Johnson's Medley), by Sir Archy; fourth dam by imported Restless; fifth dam by Mead's Celer, etc. Silver Cup was a bay mare that Mr. Williamson had at the track at Martinez. He took her across the river with Owen Dale and a few others to Benicia, and then drove her hitched to a wagon to Sacramento (sixty miles). It was a tedious journey, but they arrived safely, and the man who had charge of the track asked Mr. Williamson if he could not use the mare in the harrow with one of his horses to prepare the course for the racers. Mr. Williamson did so, and at nightfall a race for the following day was gotten up, and a Mr. Smith asked Mr. Williamson to make an entry. He replied: 'I have nothing but the bay mare that had to pull that old stage horse and harrow all day. She never was trained. I don't believe she ever ran one hundred yards in her life. She ought to go some, as she is bred right. I have always used her in a wagon, and a pure-gaited trotter is not to be found anywhere; if you need her badly, and can get her going, you can have her. The stake, you say, is a silver cup and $50. If she wins, I will take the cup and you can have the cash.' The next afternoon she was saddled and brought to the post. At the first break-away she trotted, and the rider said: 'There's something the matter with this mare; she don't know how to run.' I shouted: 'Use the whip and spurs and she will go fast enough.' At the second attempt she did better, but the field of horses was ten lengths ahead of her when she started. She passed them at the three-quarter pole and beat them by six lengths in 1:52, and a more surprised-looking lot of horse-owners you never did see when she came in. She could trot in 2:45 to a heavy buggy. Nathan Coombs, of Napa, rushed out of the judges' stand and offered me $1,000 for the mare before the boy was weighed. He said he never saw such a wonderfully easy-moving thoroughbred in his life."

The Saddle.

JIMMY McLAUGHLIN is back in St. Louis wielding the flag again after a sojourn at Toronto, Canada.

APRIL FOOL, the buckskin skyrocket of Selma, Cal., is now quartered at the Fair Grounds, St. Louis.

THE Bramble colt, Clifford, is looming up as one of the most dangerous of all American Derby candidates.

MONOWAI managed to run third in a three-horse race at Morris Park last Tuesday. Stonenell was first, with Fort Worth second.

It appears that Isinglass did not run a mile and a quarter in 2:02 1-5 after all, but in 2:21 on a heavy track. The cable flashed the error.

GEORGE MILLER, the Undine Stable jockey, has been riding at St. Louis. He piloted Balgowan to victory in the Missouri metropolis on May 29th.

PRICELLE, by imp. Cyrus, dam Precious (dam of Peel, Pliny and Mero), by Lever, has been gelded. He will be taken up shortly and prepared for the fall races.

FRANK VAN NISS' grand colt, Morello, has proven a great attraction at St. Louis. The Blood Horse Association should by all means get his owner to bring him out here next fall.

W. CLANCY has been doing most of the riding for W. O'B. Macdonough at St. Louis. He piloted Rosalie to the front easily. The daughter of Hyder Ali and Rosemary won by two lengths.

ELIZA ANN, a two-year-old bred at San Simeon, by Surinam, dam Trampo (dam of the winner, Blizzard), won a nine-sixteenths dash at Latonia on May 31st. She is owned by George T. Leach, and beat a field of four.

THEY are paying more attention to time in England these days than formerly. Isinglass, winner of the Derby and Ten Thousand, ran the Derby, mile and a half, in 2:33, which is only a quarter of a second behind the best-on-record.

DOMINO, the best two-year-old seen at the East in many a day, has three crosses of Lexington, and is, therefore, according to the Kentucky school boys, "well-bred." He gets these crosses through War Dance, Himyar and Enquirer.

"BY" HOLLY reached St. Louis Thursday, May 25th, with only two horses, El Rayo and a three-year-old filly. He started from California with eight, but had to leave six of them at Denver, as some were sick with catarrhal fever.

LOOKOUT won the Annual Stakes at Hawthorne Park, Chicago, May 30th. Huron was second and Louise third. This stake had $2,750 added. Lookout was at 2 to 1; Huron, 3 to 5. The seven furlongs (muddy track) was run in 1:31 1/2.

THERE has been trouble in the Western division of Mr. Macdonough's string as well as the Eastern. His trainer, Dan Dennison, has had to discharge his light-weight jockey, Sullivan. The trouble was whiskey in this case also.—Daily America.

It has been settled that Sir Francis will not do for the American Derby. Last Tuesday he was not one-two-three in the Withers Stakes, one mile, at Morris Park. Dr. Rice won, Rainbow finishing second and Sir Walter third. Time, 1:42, in a track of deep mud.

ENCOURAGING reports come every day of the work of the work of the California horses quartered at Washington Park, Chicago. Floodgate, Dare, Yo El Rey, Wildwood, Fidelia and Peter the Great all seem to be doing well. Cadmus did not come over with the Elmwood Stable lot, after all.

THE Oaks at Epsom on the 2d inst. were won by the Duke of Portland's bay filly, Mrs. Butterwick, by St. Simon, out of Miss Middlewick. Lord Rosberry's chestnut filly Treasure, by Bend Or, out of Bonny Jean, was second, and T. Jennings' bay filly Cypria, by Carlton, out of Queen of Cyprus, third.

LOTTIE MILLS started at St. Louis recently with odds of 12 to 1 against her, and finished fourth in a field of five, Bessie Bissland winning, with Ray S. second and Prince Kinney third. Mills carried 110 pounds, the winner (same age) 104 and Ray S., also a four-year-old, 120 pounds. Veily Lottie has gone back.

JOCKEY CLAUDE BURLINGAME returned from Portland last Monday. He says that city is to have the finest race track on the Pacific Coast. It is being built at New Albion by some of the enterprising citizens of the metropolis of the Wehfoot State, and according to Burlingame it will be a very handsome one.

GEORGE EVANS, JR., who was out in this country in 1891 and 1892, is doing good work in the saddle at the great Board of Control tracks. He piloted the Esher-Dolly colt to victory at Gravesend on May 27th. Young Evans will be remembered as the clever youth that piloted Mamie C. to the front here on several occasions.

ORVILLE APPEBY did nothing at Sacramento last Tuesday but win every race in which he had a horse engaged, three in number. If Little Esperanza had not been injured she would probably have been entered in the seven-furlong race won by Addie Chipman, and would have captured the event easily enough. Truly Orville is a successful trainer of race horses.

CARILLO, the jockey whom Walsh brought from California with Mr. Macdonough's stable, has been discharged, having been on a prolonged "sneeze." Carillo, it will be remembered, had been ruled off some years ago for a job with Al Farrow, and it was through Walsh's intercession that he was reinstated. Walsh naturally feels that he has received a poor return for his kindness.—Daily America.

Dow WILLIAMS arrived at Garfield Park from Latonia last Monday with that part of the Santa Anita stables which he is in training, the string consisting of Santa Ana, Galindo, Lady Bess, El Dorado, El Reno, Revel, Santa Anita, El Paso, Aida, Empress of Norfolk and Los Vegas. It is not likely that the string will remain long at Garfield, as quarters have been assigned to Williams in the stables at Washington Park. The two-year-olds are a good-looking lot, and will probably be heard of during the meeting.

This is what "Kelston" of the Daily America said the other day in his "Training Gallops" of Sir Francis, favorite for the American Derby of 1893: "Sir Francis trotted and cantered. He has not improved since last year and has no middle-piece. His action also is bad. He plants and twists his legs, and wears boots all over him. If he can carry weight and race more than five furlongs it will be very surprising."

CHARLES BOOTS arrived in Chicago on the 2d of June with the Elmwood Stock Farm flyer. Tom Williams and Mike Kelly arrived in the morning along with George Corington, who is fast recovering from the illness which confined him to his bed in Council Bluffs. A telegram says Cadmus is still in Winnemucca and Mr. Williams will rely on Fidelia and Don Fulano to carry his colors to the front in the American Derby.

CALIFORNIA horses did exceedingly well on June 3d on tracks east of the Rockies. Zaldivar won a seven-furlong race at St. Louis; Tim Murphy ran first and Geraldine second in a five and one half furlong dash, while Guido was third in a six-furlong run at the same place. Sir Excess, the Sir Modred-Dixiane two-year-old, ran a dead heat with Ontario for the rich Harlem Stakes at Morris Park, while Gold Dollar, by Sir Modred-Trade Dollar, won a five-furlong dash in 0:57 1/2, a quarter of a second behind the record.

J. H. DAVIS, of this city, has recently made valuable additions to his racing stable, which is at present in Oakland awaiting the opening of the race meeting on June 6th. The first of these is Duke Stevens, three years old, by Duke of Norfolk; the other is Sue Abbott, a two-year-old filly, by imported Brutus. Both animals had for a grandam the celebrated race mare Miami. Duke Stevens, in his two-year-old form, made half-mile heats in 0:48 1/2 and 0:49 1/2 seconds. These colts, with Nellie G., Amigo and Farewell, will bring credit to Humboldt.—Humboldt Times.

M. J. CORRIGAN has sold Poor Jonathan to M. F. Dwyer, of Brooklyn, for $3,500. Green B. Morris has purchased Illume from John Madden for $9,000. Michael J. Meany, the jockey, who had the race mare Dagmar in his charge when the animal was seized by Sheriff Morton to satisfy a judgment of $13,000 obtained against Messrs. Barnham & Phillips, the supposed owners, notified the Sheriff to day that he is the owner of the mare and that the judgment under which she was seized is inoperative. Meany says that Barnham & Phillips have no claim whatever on the mare.

W. CATASTROPHE DALY tried to introduce a wagon superior to any manufactured in New York. He gave an exhibition of its strength at Shults' trotting track. At least fifty persons who desired to secure a wagon superior to any in use in New York were present at the trial. At the first turn Daly came to grief, as the wheels turned inside out and let the Hartford turfman down harder than ever his horses let the public down. The fragments of the wagon were picked up by his boys. When he recovered his breath he said a mistake had been made and the wrong wagon had been sent.

THE text of the Illinois law relative to fraudulent pedigrees is as follows: "Any person, who by any false pretense, shall obtain from any club, association, society or company, for improving the breed of cattle, horses, sheep, swine or other domestic animals, a certificate of any animal in the herd register, or other register of any such club, association, society or company, or a transfer of any such registration, and every person who shall knowingly give a false pedigree of any animal, upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding $1,000 nor less than $25, or imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court."

ONE of the Macdonough horses in Walsh's string finally got a place. Last Monday Parasite, 2, by imp. Cyrus, dam, imp. Getaway, ran second to Melody in the rich Debutante Stakes, five furlongs, at Morris Park; time, 1:01. Fourteen started. His Highness and Raceland ran a dead heat in the Hudson River Handicap, the time, 2:05 1/2, being close to the mile and a quarter record. Starter Rowe accused Jockey A. Clayton of pulling the California-bred colt, Comanche, in the Bowling Brook Handicap last Saturday, suspending the youth for the balance of the meeting. Col. Simons was to send the case to the Board of Control.

JOHN C. RIORDAN, and old-time horseman of this city, visited Palo Alto Stock Farm recently, and is loud in praise of the management of Senator Stanford's great breeding establishment. At the thoroughbred farm he saw Superintendent Cy Mulkey coming along, a host of boys behind him riding the yearlings. "It reminded me," said Mr. Riordan, "of Forepaugh's circus on parade." Mr. Mulkey explained his methods of conducting the thoroughbred department, and Mr. Riordan is of the opinion that Mr. M. is one of the most thorough horsemen he ever met, and he has visited the noted establishments of England, Ireland and France. The place could not be neater or the work carried on with more system. At the "trotting farm" Senator Stanford and his wife and several other notabilities were gathered. "I never saw anything like it," said the old horseman. "Youngsters went quarters at from a 2:17 1/2 to a 2:21 gallop without any urging, and they were wonderfully pure-gaited, too. There is an army of trainers and drivers, and everything went along like clock-work."

THE trainers at Washington Park, Chicago, were active early last Monday morning to take advantage of the fine weather and finish their work before another storm like that of Sunday could catch them. The inside was again used, and it was rather heavy. George Covington came on the track with Racine, Fidelia and Flirtation, and the old horse led the two fillies in a steady gallop. St. Croix galloped about a mile, but Don Fulano and Tigress walked only. Havey walked Floodgate and Dare and sent them over the ground, going at a smart pace. Dare was given much more work than his stable companion. The old horse Gibson led the two-year-olds, Una Colorado and Challenge, and all three went well. Sweeper, as usual, was out with Strathrose. He had plenty of admirers, but he will have to do much harder work to fit him for the big race. Bayless worked Oporto with two others of his string. Dan McCarty still declares that if the colt were bigger he could repeat C. H. Todd's coup. The Orchid filly, by Onondaga-Kelp, and Banker's daughter moved fast under Frank Jones' watchful eye, and Orchid went three-eighths at almost a fair racing pace, pulling up fresh and strong.

EMANUEL HARDING, who trains that part of Lucky Baldwin's string now performing at the fair grounds, is having very hard luck with his horses. Most of them have been sick since their arrival and can hardly be gotten up to a race, says the St. Louis correspondent of Daily America. Esperanza and Sautiogo, who were counted on as bread-winners, have run in very bad luck. The former has started six times and secured only one victory, though twice she was only just beaten through poor riding. On one race Mr. Harding lost $900 and his friends a great deal more. Harding says that when his two-year-olds get around to form he will recoup his loss and retrieve the fame of the red and black Maltese cross.

CHARLES W. DREW, employed by Frederick Gebhard, arrived recently from the West with the following horses, which are stabled near Long Branch: Guenoc, b c, 3, by imp. Greenback—Wah-ta-Wah; Leonie b f 3, by imp. Greenback—Una; Golden Lily, gr f, 3, by imp. Greenback—Her Lilyship; St. Peter, b c 3, by St. Saviour—Miss Hooker; brown filly, 2, by Tom Martin—Half Sister; bay filly, 2, by imp. Greenback—Wah-ta-Wah; brown colt, 2, by imp. Greenback—Her Lilyship; chestnut filly, 2, by imp. Greenback—Prosperpine; bay colt, 2, by imp. Greenback—Miss Hooker; brown filly, 2, by imp. Pirate of Penzance—imp. Elmira; chestnut filly, 2, by imp. Pirate of Penzance—Racemed; bay colt, 2, by St. Saviour—Alice T.; bay colt, 2, by St. Saviour—Glen Queen.—Sporting World, N. Y., May 30th.

THE killing made by the Clark Bros. on Twilight two weeks ago went glimmering as a local race track sensation here to-day, says a St. Louis special to Daily America, when Al Orth's luck became known. He won $58,000 on Roquefort's victory at the St. Louis Jockey Club track in the fifth race yesterday. Roquefort opened at 7 to 1, was backed down to 4 to 1 and reacted to 6 to 1. Orth played his horse heavily in the books at the St. Louis Jockey Club track, in Coley Ullman's St. Louis poolroom, the East St. Louis books, also in the books at Kansas City, Latonia, Chicago and Minneapolis at the odds named, and in some instances got as good odds as 20 to 1. A fair average of his layings is estimated at 10 to 1. He took out of Coley Ullman's St. Louis room $6,000 and $8,000 out of the East St. Louis books, the balance of his winnings being distributed at the St. Louis track and the other track books named. Orth bought Roquefort from Father Bill Daly two weeks ago. He says he also purchased another horse from Daly, the identity of which he refuses to divulge, but he says he will uncork him soon, and that when it comes to covering ground on a race course this dark horse can outrun Roquefort like Salvalor in his day could outfoot a greyhound.

THE statistics of the meeting of the Brooklyn Jockey Club show that eighty-eight races were run, in which 299 different horses appeared, says Daily America. The club added to the stakes and over-night events the sum of $124,700, including $14,400 added to the Brooklyn Handicap and $5,550 to the Fort Hamilton Handicap, to make up the guaranteed values. Fifty-five stables won money amounting to $200,145, including the surplus in selling races. The big winners follow: J. R. and F. P. Keene, $27,098.50; Walcott & Campbell, $19,815; M. F. Dwyer, $18,255; R. Croker, $18,120; Ranocas Stable, $16,120; J. A. and A. H. Morris, $10,130; Washington Stable, $9,000; Boyle & Littlefield, $8,665; W. C. Daly, $7,047.50; W. M. Barriek, $6,645.50; Gideon & Daly, $4,740; P. J. Dwyer & Son, $3,970; Madison Stable, $3,910; A. Lakeland, $3,875; W. J. Spiers, $2,840; W. B. Jennings, $2,867.50; J. Ruppert, Jr., $2,850; A. J. Cassatt, $2,230; Empire Stable, $2,080; W. R. Jones, $2,045; J. E. McDonald, $2,005; C. Miler, $1,860; C. Walker, $1,840; F. Lowe, $1,755; F. D. Weir, $1,740; N. Strauss, $1,565; R. Bradley, $1,405; Blemton Stables, $1,400; Brown & Rogers, $1,340; G. B. Morris & Co., $1,250; E. B. Doswell, $1,070.50; J. M. Jeffcott, $1,062.50; H. P. Headley, $1,020.

A SPECIAL from Chicago of last Tuesday said: "Havey had Floodgate and Dare out, and they did some easy galloping. After a while the two-year-old Yo El Rey joined them and cantered once around the track. Through the stretch the youngster led and seemed to hold the three-year-olds safe. Floodgate clung to him closely up to the finish, but Dare was out of it. Dare's admirers claim that he never would do anything in his work, and that the only place he shows to advantage is in a race. Havey has come to the conclusion that the horses in his string want some real racing before they try for the big stakes at Washington Park. He has decided to go to St. Louis with Fair's horses. To-night he shipped Floodgate, Dare, Princess, Yo El Rey, Challenge, Una Colorado, Ella Smith and Dolly Mc, leaving Gibson and Virginia behind. It is a question whether the move was a wise one, for although the racing may do the horses good, the journey and change of air and water may work considerable injury. Bayless gave Oporto, in company with two others, a gallop of a mile and a half. The little fellow went well, and those who saw him agree with McCarty that he will not finish last in the big race. George Covington gave Racine, Fidelia and Flirtation easy work, but of the other half of the Undine stable St. Croix was the only one to gallop."

THE $60,000 American Derby is to be run just two weeks from to-day, and a number of equine idols have been shattered within the past two weeks. Don Alonzo was disposed of easily by Rainbow, and the latter in turn was easily beaten by Dr. Rice and Sport. G. W. Johnson, that cost $30,000, has been defeated on several occasions at the shorter distances. Monowai has disappointed his friends badly. Picton is dead, and Cadmus, according to report, has been nearly so. Fidelia has not done anything sensational. Yo El Rey, a two-year-old, outworked Floodgate and Dare this week. Lookout continues to win, and Clifford has won some splendid races. Chorister, a son of Falsetto, ran a mile in 1:39 1/2 recently. Sir Francis was not one-two-three in the Withers Stake this week. Therefore, on public form, provided Cadmus does not come to the post fit and well on the 24th, we think the American Derby should be between Lookout, Clifford, Chorister, Floodgate and Kamapo. The English colt, Strathrose, has been doing good work in private, and Don Fulano may be in shape and cut a good figure in the great stake race. If Cadmus rounds to unexpectedly the horse that beats him should come very close to securing first money for his owner. If he doesn't run, the horses mentioned above should fight it out, and California's chances will be centered in Floodgate, Fidelia and Don Fulano. Lady Bess has run well, but Clifford has shown himself to be a dozen or more pounds better. San Francisco is an unknown quantity. There are several in the same category entered in this race, and the winner may turn up from this list.

Review of the Trotting Meeting.

The spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association which closed last Saturday proved several important things very conclusively. In the first place, spring trotting meetings are not popular, and the public this year have had a surfeit of racing.

Secondly.—The people did not show the same frenzy of excitement and wild enthusiasm so noticeable when good races were given at previous meetings. The long-protracted Blood Horse meeting and its supplement, the Jockey Club meeting, had a most cooling effect upon the heretofore excitable public.

Thirdly.—The attendance was not what it should have been. As one observer remarked, "nearly all the lovers of trotting horses have gone with their families to Chicago." If this is the truth, then we should not complain, for it speaks well for the prosperity of the friends of our best class of horses.

Fourthly.—The dash races and the heat races at distances of over a mile were a success far beyond all expectations, and all horse-owners are loud in their praises. That these innovations will be universally adopted is a foregone conclusion.

Fifthly.—Better racing has been seen at this time of the year at the meeting than at any other ever held in California. The decisions met with the approval of all; not a single appeal was made from any of them; the horses were called up on time and everything went off "as merrily as a marriage bell."

Sixthly.—It has shown the officers and members of the P. C. T. H. B. A., as well as the representatives of all the agricultural associations in this State who attended, that they must start right in and embellish their programmes for the coming races with these novel contests, and they will prove drawing cards.

Lastly.—The necessity for getting horses in readiness for the summer meeting was impressed upon the minds of the directors of the P. C. T. H. B. A. in such a manner that they are more determined than ever to give the best meeting ever held in California next month, and every member has signified his willingness to have horses ready for it.

The Grand Circuit.

The time is rapidly approaching for the various meetings comprising the Northern, Southern and Central, or Grand, circuits to be advertised. Horsemen everywhere are anxiously scanning the columns of this turf journal to ascertain where and when the races are to be given, what the principal events will be, and whether dash-racing will be universally adopted.

The delegates from the Northern and Southern circuits have selected their dates, and the directors are busy making improvements that will meet the demands of all visiting horsemen. The universal aim seems to give good purses, furnish all stalls free, and have the tracks in first-class condition.

On the Grand circuit, which comprises the Breeders' meeting at San Francisco, Oakland, Vallejo, Napa, Petaluma, State Fair, Stockton, Fresno, San Jose and San Francisco there seems to have been a disposition on the part of some of the representatives of this great circuit to disregard the invitation to be present at the meetings which have heretofore been held. To harmonize the interests of all these prominent associations in arranging dates, preparing programmes and deciding upon a uniform rate of entrance for all, it was decided at the last meeting to call a special meeting next Tuesday evening, June 13th, at this office, when it is expected every delegate appointed by these associations will come with power to act regarding closing of entries on the subject of programme for their meetings. After it has been conclusively shown that the majority are in favor of a change, he should, if in the minority, submit gracefully, and endeavor to act under the rule that the object of all such organizations is for "the greatest good for the greatest number." With that end in view, everything will move smoothly and harmoniously. There will be a united effort all along the line to help one another. With uniform conditions those that start at the Breeders' meeting will go like a "troupe" right through the circuit, receiving accessions to the ranks at every place. This mode of procedure is noticeable in all the Eastern circuits and surely California should not be behind the times.

At this meeting the classification of the horses that are to meet on the circuit will be considered, and dates in every week will be set apart for the different classes, so that owners of free-for-all trotters will not leave one track Saturday after giving their horses a hard race, and then visit another track Monday for their horses to engage in a free-for-all event there. The benefits of having a system and adhering to it in regard to racing, even from this standpoint, are very plain.

Last year, and in fact for the last two years, the conditions which read five per cent. to enter at some meetings in the circuit, conflicted with the old-time ten per cent. entrance that was considered absolutely necessary at others. This "worked a hardship" on the horse-owners and the society with liberal and progressive ideas. For instance, there are six meetings on the circuit which we will designate as A, B, C, D, E and F. A and B advertise five per cent. entrance, C advertises ten, D five, E ten, and F five. A horseman starts out with a string of horses, he makes his entries at the meetings given by A and B, paying five per cent. When it becomes necessary to go to C (for he cannot afford to miss a meeting) he must pay ten per cent., and that society profits by this increase; he stays there and goes to D, paying five per cent. When he goes from there to E he pays his ten per cent. and determines to never go there again; he goes to F and pays his five per cent., knowing and being satisfied to pay his extra five per cent. of the winnings if he is so fortunate at the places where the low entrance fee was charged. In the Eastern circuits five per cent. is all that is asked beside five per cent. from the winners, and it has given satisfaction to horsemen who have heretofore been at a loss to know why ten per cent. should be charged whenever they made a nomination.

In the arrangement of dates there should be no clashing, and we hope to see an arrangement made that will be agreeable to all. The horsemen in California cannot at this critical period afford to be arbitrary. There is nothing to warrant any disagreement among trotting horsemen. All the district associations should try and work together. If they do so they will find that owners will support their efforts and give meetings which will forever redound to the credit of the Grand circuit and attract the attention of horse breeders and horsemen of the East to the greatness of our horses, the closeness of the contests, the low records made and the prosperity of every organization comprising this, the most popular of all circuits.

THE reporter of the Daily Examiner got his notes badly mixed, if one is to judge by the report he sent in of the convention of delegates from the various agricultural districts which was held in this office last Saturday evening. He says: "The Trotting Horse Breeders Association is at war with the San Jose Agricultural Association and has felt compelled to rebuke that organization." This is just about as far from being correct as it possibly can be. The P. C. T. H. B. A. had no more to do with the meeting than did the other associations represented, and as for its being at war and feeling compelled to rebuke our good neighbors in San Jose, surely the Los Gatos Keely Cure solicitors should capture that falsifying scribe; he must have a "buzzing in his cranium." The whole article appears to be written in the same "truthful" and extravagant vein, and looks ridiculous to everyone knowing the facts. There is a clashing of dates imminent between the Fresno Agricultural Fair and the San Jose Agricultural Fair, but the Breeders Association has nothing to do with it. The Fresno Association sent its delegate, who made a strong argument in favor of holding the meeting at his place immediately after the Fresno fair; there was no one from San Jose to present that association's reasons why their fair should be held the week following Stockton. There the subject rests until next Tuesday evening, when it is hoped San Jose will send an able delegate to present their side. At the same time, it is hoped a reporter for the Examiner will be present, who will get his notes correct and not trust to information gathered from irresponsible parties.

ALL spring meetings in California appear to be flat failures this year. The one at Sacramento was such a "frost" that it was declared off last Thursday, two days more of sport being mapped out that did not materialize. San Francisco has had enough of racing for a time, and when there is a "frost" in the metropolitan managers in other cities cannot certainly make a success of meetings.

Bay District Races Off.

AS WE go to press it is learned that the summer meeting which Mr. Schwartz contemplated giving at Bay District track will not be held at the old course. The Blood Horse Association desire to build a new foundation under the club-house and improve the interior of the building so that it will be presentable by the time the bell rings in the great fall meeting contemplated. The preparations for a grand season of sport will occupy so much time that it was impossible, under the circumstances, to let Mr. Schwartz have the track for the period he required it—until August 1st—hence the falling through of the arrangements. Perhaps it is all for the best, after all. San Francisco has already had a long season of excellent sport—as much as she can probably stand at this time with her present population—and a rest on the oars until Autumn comes will make matters ripe for such a meeting as our people have never before enjoyed, excellent as the racing was this Spring.

Sacramento's Meeting Closed.

The following dispatch was received from Sacramento on Thursday evening:

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—The attendance at the races of the Capitol Turf and Driving Club has been so slim and the betting so light that after the races this afternoon the spring meeting came to a close. President Wilson says that, including to-day, the races have cost $3000, and that there will not be enough money coming in to justify the expense of giving races on Friday and Saturday, as was intended.

It tells its own tale and only verifies the assertion made in another column: "There has been too much continuous racing in California." The people are beginning to tire of the sport if the testimony of all connected with the spring meetings is to be believed.

Last spring the Capital Turf Club held a very successful meeting. That was before the fairs and the eighty days of racing. This year it is a failure for the reason above stated.

THE need of a Pacific Coast Board of Control was never more apparent. Joe Narvaez, one of our crack jockeys, was recently suspended by the judges at the late California Jockey Club meeting for (it is generally said) crooked business. B. C. Holly telegraphed President T. H. Williams from Denver that he would like to have the young man reinstated so that he could ride at the Colorado metropolis, where good jockeys were quite scarce. The telegram was shown the judges (who alone had power to reinstate Narvaez), and at a meeting they refused to take him back. Notwithstanding this, at last accounts the California horse-pilot was riding in almost every race at Denver, showing that the decisions of our associations are not recognized to an extent worth mentioning. As it now stands the local organizations can only legislate for themselves, and crooked jockeys, owners and trainers can do as they please and laugh at our officials. The need for some action remedying this evil is, therefore, very great.

Important Meeting.

The Speed Programme committee of the State Agricultural Society met last evening in this city, for the purpose of discussing the trotting programme for the State Fair of 1893.

They resolved to commend to the Board the following trotting and pacing classes in addition to the usual colt stakes, viz: Pacing class to close August 1, 1893. Horses making a record of 2:14 or better, before August 26th, barred from starting. Trotting purse, 2:22 class, close August 26th.

Trotting purse, 2:27 class, close August 1st, with 2:22 record bar; 2:16 class to close August 26th; pacing, 2:20 class, to close August 26th; trotting, 2:24 class, to close August 26th; trotting, 2:20 class, to close August 26th; trotting 2:30 to close August 1st, 2:22 record bar; free-for-all pacing to close August 26th; 2:25 pacing to close August 1st with 2:20 record bar; free-for-all trot to close August 26th.

In all races that have record bars, horses will be permitted to re-enter in proper class.

The entrance fee in all races where there are eight or more entries was recommended to be placed at five per cent. with an additional five per cent. from starters.

Where there are less than eight entries the entrance fee shall be ten per cent.

If this rule is adopted by the Board it will save the owners whose horses may go wrong before day of race fifty per cent. of usual entrance money.

The State Society desires to save as much expense as possible to the owners, but at the same time to protect the interests of the Society, and they think that the above plan will accomplish the end.

Horses not winning a heat in four to be sent to the stable. This is another innovation.

The first Monbars colt foaled in California made its appearance at Pleasanton last week. It is out of the handsome bay mare Vera, by Kentucky Volunteer.

HOOF-BEATS.

NEARLY every colt on the Oakwood Park Stock Farm has been gelded.

MILLARD SANDERS starts east to-day with the youngsters from the Valensiu Farm.

EL RAYO won a mile and 100-yard handicap race at St. Louis last Wednesday, beating a good field.

The last payment to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN Futurity Stakes is due July 1st. See advertisement.

A TWO-YEAR-OLD colt, full brother to Firenze, in the string of Jimmy Donohue, died a few days ago at Morris Park.

YO TAMBIEN is doing well in her work, and looks finer than silk, according to Broad Church, who wrote the Spirit from Latonia.

The attention of our readers is called to the notice of the seventh payment to the Golden Gate Futurity Stakes as published in another column.

QUIET John Kelly, the master reinsman of the Pleasanton Stock Farm, did wonderful work in the sulky last year. He gave eight horses records below 2:15.

IN the car with Matt Storn's horses there were two fine carriage horses, consigned to Herman Oelrich of New York. They were bred at J. G. Fair's Stock Farm, Sonoma.

A HALF-MILE speed track of the most approved design will soon be constructed under the auspices of the Los Gatos Driving Association, Los Gatos, Santa Clara County. A large number of fine horses are owned in the vicinity of this charming place.

MONROE SALISBURY said: "There's too many studs in the country," and to lessen the number he had a veterinarian castrate every yearling and two-year-old, besides several of his best three-year-old colts, that he has on his farm. He says there are "plenty more where those came from."

DAILY AMERICA, of New York, speaking of a poor run made by Larghetto recently, said: "Larghetto did not show the least bit of speed, and never was prominent in any part of the race. He will probably improve very much when his people bet on him." This was pretty cleverly said, surely, and the writer is evidently acquainted with Mr. Macahee.

THERE will be a splendid sale of trotting stock, the get of Guide, Sid Roy, Admar, Director, Corrector, Sidney and other famous sires, on the 29th of this month. A. T. Hatch, the well-known breeder, is the consignor of this lot, and Messrs. Killip & Co., the well-known auctioneers, will hold the sale at their salesyards. Further particulars will be published hereafter.

SANTAMEGO, the hay colt by Apache, dam Cinderella (dam of Herald), by Catesby, sold last year by Charles Kerr, of Bakersfield, to H. Simons, of Louisville, has a wonderful record. He is a three-year-old, and thus far in 1893 has started no less than 46 times. The Californian was first 12 times, second 10, third 9 and unplaced 15. And he has not started since the latter part of April either. Pretty useful colt that.

FIRENZE's foal, by the great Salvator, a bay with one white foot and a star in his forehead, is declared by Arthur Bennett, the celebrated artist, to be the fastest galloper for his age his eyes ever rested on, and Mr. Bennett has visited all the famous breeding establishments of America. In the opinion of the artist this colt is certain to turn out a crackerjack. Salvator is looking like a king. Mr. Bennett fancies Sir Modred very much, too, as he does Midlothian. Miss Woodford is a mighty well-preserved matron. Old Joe Daniels is looking exceedingly well.

THERE seems to be a hoodoo of some kind lingering in the neighborhood of Witch Hazel Stock Farm, says the Oregonian. One day last week Katie Powers, an Eastern-bred brood mare by Moore Horse, snagged herself, and there being no hopes for her, she was killed. The great mare Palatina, record 2:22, by Milton Medium, dam Snowflake, by Snowstorm, is dangerously sick, and the mare Nervissa, record 2:32, by Altamont, dam Snowflake, by Snowstorm, had still-born twins, by Noonday, a few days ago.

ALVIN, 2:13; Belle Archer, 2:21; Alix, 2:10; Greenleaf, 2:10; Belle Vara, 2:08; Martha Wilkes, 2:08; Globe, 2:14; Nightingale, 2:13; Ryland T., 2:11; Altao, 2:17; Magnolia, 2:12; Directum, 2:11, are the entries to the free-for-all $15,000 stake to be trotted at Chicago in September. Nancy Hanks, 2:04, was barred from the race, but it is announced that efforts will be made to have Nancy try conclusions with the winner. This is a great field of trotters, and the man who can name the winner ought not to spend the balance of his days picking potato hugs.

OUT of thirteen starts (up to the 1st of June) the Santa Anita horses in Dow Williams' string have won money eleven times. Galindo alone has captured over $5,000, and but for sulking would have been first past the post oftener than he has. Morris, the stable's jockey, is doing magnificent work, and has made a name for himself. Santa Anna has been very sick, as has been the very speedy Cheviot-Albino colt. The three-year-old colt by Kutherford, dam Rosebud, died from pneumonia at Louisville. The members of the string are now, however, rounding to, and great things can be expected of the Baldwin horses from this out.

LONGSTRIDE, a famous Irish hunter, the property of the Monmouth County Hunt, has just immortalized himself by making the second greatest jump on record—a clear thirty-four foot leap, from bank to bank, across the pond at Hollywood, built in the center of the superb grounds of the late lamented prince of good fellows, John Hoey. It happened in a most unexpected manner. The horses, without riders, numbering 122 all told, were started forward, rushing at full speed to the pond's edge. All strained and jumped, but Longstride along landed on the other side, clearing the thirty-four feet in grand style, while every one of his 121 companions fell short, splashing into the water at different distances. This is exactly one foot behind Birdcatcher, who jumped thirty-five feet, and still remains with the longest jump on record to his credit.

A LONDON dispatch of June 1st says: "This was the third day of the Epsom summer meeting. The meeting will end to-morrow. The principal event on to-day's programme was the race for the Epsom Grand Prize of 2,000 sovereigns. It was won by Mr. K. Marsh's bay colt Tanderagee. The Duke of Portland's bay colt Raeburn, which ran third in the Derby yesterday, was second and Mr. Douglas Baird's brown colt Harlinger third."

We have just received copies of S. D. Bruce's latest and best work, entitled The Thoroughbred Horse. Every lover of the horse should have one. There are valuable articles on the thoroughbred horse, his origin—how to breed and how to select him; in fact, it is a perfect horse-breeder's guide, and includes one hundred tabulated pedigrees of the most celebrated sires with their full performances and the best of their progeny up to the end of 1892. Price $5. Send for a copy at once.

MONROE SALISBURY's string of wonderful trotters will leave Pleasanton next Thursday, the 15th of June, for the East. The horses are all enjoying excellent health, and as they are heavily engaged in stakes throughout the principal Eastern circuits, we shall be anxious to see "pictures" of the trotters and pacers that will get away with them. There is Directum, 2:11, by Director; Flying Jib, 2:05, by Algona; Vic H., 2:13, by Blackbird; San Pedro, 2:10, by Del Sur; Little Albert, 2:10, by Albert W.; Mand C., 2:19, by California Nutwood; Charley C. (no record), by Brown Jug; Haviland (pacer), by Sterling; Oriole, by Thistle; Director Flower, by Director; yearling filly by Direct, dam by Redwood, 2:27, a trotter; yearling filly by Direct, dam by Nauhuc, a pacer; a two-year-old by Director, dam by Dexter Prince, second dam by Lodi, and White Cap, the gray pacer by Peacock. This is a combination hard to beat.

THE mare Puss, dam of Lady Bell, that produced Emma Robson, the dam of Enalinde, 2:27, Emma R., 2:28, and Rowena (2), 2:19, is also the dam of Ben Lippincott (sire of grandam of Bay Rose, 2:20), Majester, 2:24 and Pasha, 2:36, sire of Moro, 2:26, and when she was bred to American Boy Jr. she produced Fanny Branham, grandam of James Madison, 2:17. Puss was by Lance (son of Lance, by American Eclipse); his dam was by Crusader, by Sir Archy, out of Lottery, by Bedford. Crusader was brother to Kosciusko, sire of Woodhine, dam of Woodford Mambrino, 2:21, and Wedgewood, 2:19. Crusader was also a brother to Saxe Weimar, sire of dam of old Dolly and grandam of Lady Majolica, 2:25, and Abdallah Mambrino 3:15. Crusader, Saxe Weimar and Kosciusko were all by Sir Archy, and how curious it is that their names should appear in the pedigrees of Kremlin, 2:07, Directum, 2:11, and Rowena, 2:19, all great and wonderful trotters, and they trace to the chestnut mare Lottery, that was foaled in 1803 and was bred and owned by Col. Wm. Alston, of South Carolina.

THERE died at Sacramento on Tuesday morning one of the gamest race mares and as popular a one as ever looked through a bridle—Little Esperanza. News of her death will be received with great regret by race-goers from all over the Pacific Coast. Monday morning, while being ridden in her exercise by a young fellow named Sharp, she collided with Normandie, George Poorman's two-year-old filly, the animals running in opposite directions. Esperanza was thrown against a fence, and a protruding nail tore her throat so badly that it was impossible to save her valuable life. Her rider, Sharp, had his jaw broken. Esperanza was the pride of Trainer Orville Appleby's heart, and amid the tears of the fond trainer and stable attendants the lion-hearted mare was buried. Esperanza was a chestnut mare, four years old, by Judge McKinstry, dam, May D., by Wildidle; second dam Sally Hart, by Montana; third dam Cricket, by Rifleman, etc. She was only about fourteen hands three inches in height—a mere pony—but was capable of going any route and never giving up. As a two-year-old, in 1891, she won four races out of thirteen starts. Her best races that year were at Sacramento, in the Hopeful Stakes, when she defeated The Peer and Ragna at six furlongs in 1:15, 100 pounds up, and seven furlongs in the mud in 1:30, 95 pounds up, at San Francisco. As a three-year-old she won thirteen races out of twenty-five starts. Her best three-year-old performance was a mile and seventy yards in 1:43 (the Coast record) at Sacramento, carrying 109 pounds. The mile from wire to wire in this race was run by the little mare in 1:40 4-5. This season Esperanza started seventeen times, won six races, was second thrice and third on four occasions. To Orville Appleby we tender our heartfelt sympathy in this, his great loss, for her place will indeed be hard to fill. It is doubtful if Little Esperanza had a superior in training on the Coast at the time of the accident which ended her career.

C. BRUCE LOWE, one of Australia's most noted turfmen, arrived from Sydney, N. S. W., last Thursday morning. The voyage was a most pleasant one, and the gentleman landed in America in excellent health and spirits. Mr. Lowe brought with him Stromboli, one of the famous race horses of the Colonies, a four-year-old colt, dark brown, 16 hands in height, and a grand, powerful individual. Stromboli is by Chester (sire of the mighty Abercorn and hosts of other winners), dam Etna, by Marihyrnong; second dam The Alpaca, by Kingston. As a two-year-old Stromboli won the A. J. C. Produce Stakes at Sydney and the V. R. C. Produce Stakes at Melbourne. At three, Stromboli won the Hawkesbury Guineas, one mile; the A. J. C. Derby, one and one-half miles, and the Sydney Cup, two miles, stamping himself one of the very best horses in a country productive of speedy and game thoroughbreds. Stromboli ran second to Strathmore (beaten a scant half-length) for the V. R. C. Derby, and also a close second to La Tosen for the Sydney St. Leger. The last-named race took place on Saturday, and the following Tuesday Stromboli won the Sydney Cup, two miles. This horse will be put in training, in all likelihood, at a not far distant day, and we shall then have a chance to see how a high-class Australian horse compares with our race horses. He is well-bred enough for anyone, and will be heard from, no doubt. Another horse Mr. Lowe brought to this country last Thursday is Clevedon, a rich, bay stallion, with black points, 16 hands in height, by Yattendon, dam Lady Chester, by Stockwell, therefore a full brother to the mighty Chester, sire of Abercorn, Titan, Carlyon and many other renowned performers, and by most persons considered the greatest of all sires in the Southern Hemisphere. The horses are for sale, and are fit to grace any stud in the world. Mr. Lowe selected Sir Modred for J. B. Huggin's famous Rancho del Paso, and is a great judge of blood lines. If Stromboli and Clevedon are not sold here within the next ten days they will, in all likelihood, be taken to New York City.

FIRST DAY, TUESDAY, MAY 30.

DENVER, Col., May 30, 1893.—Eolus set his merry mill at work to-day. He puffed long blasts and strong blasts, but he couldn't puff them long enough or strong enough to keep people away from the opening day of the spring meeting at Overland.

It goes without saying that there was a big crowd out at the park, though there was not any special event on the card. The management reversed the usual order in two ways. The trots were placed first, and the opening race was called promptly at 1:30. The trotting races, which usually drag, went off with very little delay, more particularly as the winner in each event had an easy time and took three straight heats. The running races were a trifle slow, as the horses were hard to send away well and there was an ample margin of time allowed after each race to permit the bookmakers and pool-sellers to accomplish their deadly work. The races were finished at 5:45.

The Lewis & Lohman band played excellently, but a day like to-day causes its best efforts to be lost to the occupants of the stand. The wind picked up the sweet notes and carried them off to Littleton.

The park, with all its surroundings, never looked prettier. Restfulness for the eyes was in the rich green of the enclosure. When the wind blew over the thick alfalfa it caused little ripples of greenish blue to turn and coil in a most delightfully graceful manner all over the broad field. The tracks looked velvety, too. They were just dry enough from the recent drenchings to have the turfy appearance that makes a road way inviting. The harrow and roller had done their work to perfection, so the big crowd looked out over exceptional oval speedways.

The first race was a gift for Charley Baldwin after George Moshier was set back as distanced. Before the race Baldwin was favorite, with Moshier second choice. They got away with an even break. At the half Moshier went off his feet and ran all the way around to the finish, coming in a length ahead of Baldwin. The judges inflicted the heavy penalty of distancing. Before the second heat Baldwin sold on the heat at 1 to 5, with the field at 3. The start was even, and the four were bunched for almost the entire distance, Baldwin's driver evidently not caring to take him away. In the stretch they strung out and Carl broke badly, coming under the wire running in second place by two lengths. He was put back to third, thus losing second money. There was scarcely any betting on the third heat, it being a foregone conclusion that Baldwin had it unless he dropped dead or jumped the fence. He got away at the pole with a slight advantage, but broke coming to the club house, and nearly lost the lead to Black Jim, who made a play for the front but was quickly out-footed by both Baldwin, who held his place, and Carl. Baldwin broke at the half but recovered and won easily by three lengths from Carl, Black Jim away back.

Mutuels—First heat, $9; second heat, $8.70; third heat, $7.10. The second race was for a purse of $400, for trotters in the 2:50 class. It was well filled. There were eight entries. By the bookmakers and by the public in general the race was set down as a walk-over for Brilliant, who, besides having the staunch blood of Electioneer, had formerly proved her ability as a performer.

It was brilliant from start to finish in the betting. She was given no odds for place and was 2 to 5 straight. In the auctions Brilliant sold for $25 against the field at $9 and $10.

Josie C. was driven by her owner, Rose by Sandkuhl, Teton by Hine, Spartan by McMaster, Pankey by Anthony, Julius by Johnson, Brilliant by Lew Trotter and Troublesome by Davis. The race proved just what the talent had said it would be. It was at the mercy of Brilliant from start to finish, and was won by that game mare in handsome style in three straight heats, the average of the time made being nearly equal to the time of the horses of the 2:22 class in the preceding event. She won the first heat by three lengths easily. There was a great fight for place, which was secured under whip by a neck. Time, 2:26 1/2.

Brilliant won the second heat hands down by six lengths. Josie C. beat Rose a length for place in another hard drive. Time, 2:27.

In the concluding heat Brilliant simply played with her field, winning by half a dozen lengths, Josie again second, Rose third and Troublesome fourth. Time, 2:28.

The talent had picked Sympathetic's Last as a sure winner of the second race, six furlongs. The result proved that the sporting cognoscenti were perfectly correct. But there were a great many who, knowing the speed and endurance which the gelding is possessed of, were of the opinion that a 121-pound handicap was too much for him to carry against such a field. The ugly behavior of Al Watts caused a delay of half an hour. He had apparently taken it into his big sore head that the race should be run around the track the wrong way. He resisted for a long time all efforts to get him off in the right direction and reared and plunged and acted viciously. Finally the flag fell to a good start, with the horses bunched, and the recalcitrant Al Watts was in second place, swinging his head at the saddle-girths of Sympathetic's Last. King Pluto was half a length behind, with the other two horses well up. Holly's fast brown gelding did not hold the lead long. Watts had pushed into the lead within the first quarter mile run. As the horses streaked by the half-mile pole, Watts was leading the chase half a length in front of Sympathetic's Last. Sam Brown was third, three lengths away, with King Pluto and Lily G. and John Winfield in order bringing up the rear. On the upper turn of the course Sympathetic's Last began to get into his stride. The struggle was short and decisive. Watts was passed. John Winfield moved up into third place. All the jockeys except Sympathetic's Last's were whipping as the horses swung into the stretch. Sympathetic's Last came on, untouched by whip or spur, and won well in hand by three lengths in front of Lily G., who had worked up from the rear in the run home. Sam Brown was fourth, John Winfield fifth and King Pluto last. The six furlongs were gone in the poor time of 1:21.

Sam Brown (114, Parks), John Winfield (124, F. Bean) and King Pluto (112, Goedertz) also ran.

The babies in the fourth race, half a mile, were colicky, and it took a long time to get them under way. They strung out from the jump after the flag fell, and it was at once apparent that the race lay between the stable and the favorite. Rap-a-Tap got the lead and held it, Jim Lee hanging on doggedly, Poco Tempo a couple of lengths behind and the others trailing. The leaders got the whip all the way from the turn, but their positions did not change, and Rap-a-Tap won by an open length. Time, 0:50.

The men who knew all about the horses were beautifully fooled on this race. Despised Get There proceeded to get there with alacrity. They started in a heap. At the stand Revolver had half a length the better of Get There, with the others all up. They stayed together half-way round, when Get There challenged for the lead, and after a hammer-and-tongs go of a full quarter mile, succeeded in getting it. All were under whip in the stretch, and it was not till within a half-furlong of the wire that the leaders pulled away and Get There pushed in by a length and a half from Revolver, with Wedgefield close up. Time, 1:45 1/2.

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY, MAY 31ST.

About 2,000 people went out to Overland Park to-day. The day was all that could be desired, the track was in splendid condition and the races were all interesting. The prime favorites in the trotting events, owned by DuBois Brothers, had both races about their own way. In the second heat of the second race Mary Magdalene, a 3-year-old by Superior, broke the American May record and got a mark of 2:27 1/4. This was the event of the day, the rest of the time not being particularly fast. Early in the afternoon James M. Barber, with Longtime, without a skip broke the six-mile trotting record by 45 seconds, and would have beaten this but for a break in his sulky. His time was 16 minutes and 8 seconds. Gallatin made the previous record in 1889.

Between the first and second running events a Mr. Craig, of Mexico, gave an exhibition with three fine saddle horses.

W. P. Ijams, president of the American Trotting Association and of the Terre Haute association, owner of the Warren stables, at the head of which is $105,000 Astell, was in the judges' stand at Overland to-day. Mr. Ijams reports the outlook at Terre Haute as exceptionally bright. He thinks Astell will show his true form this season, and adds that Budd Doble has a big string of the finest in the land, all in splendid condition and ripe for records.

With the word "go" from Starter Creveling, Gene led Dollie M. and Betsie Cotton. At the turn Colonel D. and Dollie dropped back. Gene led at the quarter, with Lizzie S. a length behind and Betsie Cotton eight lengths behind her. Lizzie S. forged ahead at the half and Betsie Cotton crawled up on Gene. This position was maintained at the three-quarters. As they entered the stretch Betsie lost her feet and Gene secured second place, but could not reach Lizzie S. who won by five lengths. Colonel D. was away in the rear and Dollie M. was distanced. Time, 2:24.

In the second heat Lizzie S. led the procession and increased it at the quarter to four lengths, with Gene second and Betsie Cotton third. At the half Lizzie S. still led by two lengths, Gene close up and Betsie ten lengths behind. At the three-quarters Gene breaking, fell away to third place, and in the stretch Lizzie S. broke and gave the lead to Betsie, who maintained it to a close finish, defeating her by a length. Colonel D. got third place in the heat, and Gene, who broke frequently, was a poor fourth. Time, 2:22 1/2.

In the third heat Lizzie S. got away first, with Betsie Cotton second and Gene third. Betsie broke on the first turn, but recovered immediately. At the quarter Betsie led a length, with Lizzie S. second. At the half Betsie was still leading by a length, Lizzie S. being fifteen lengths away from Gene. At the three-quarters Betsie was two lengths ahead, Lizzie S. twenty lengths in front of Gene. At the stretch Betsie came in nicely, leading by five lengths, Lizzie S. second by twelve lengths and Gene a bad third, with Colonel D. close up on the turn. In the last heat Betsie set the pace and finished with ease in 2:24.

Mary Magdalene was a hot favorite in the second race and was bought freely in the pools even at the odds taken by the heartless bookies. Nellie Campbell was the only one near her at any time in the race. In the second heat Mary went out for blood, and the record for a May trot of three-year-olds in 2:27 1/4. In the first heat both horses came into the stretch neck and neck. Mary Magdalene pulled out, and ten yards from the wire she was half a length in the lead. She broke and lost the only heat of the race. In the third heat Magdalene led by a length and improved it to two at the quarter. Campbell broke at the five-eighths post and lost four lengths. At the half Magdalene led by eight lengths, and increased it at the three-quarters to ten. In the stretch Magdalene came in strong, Campbell breaking, and the former winning by fifteen lengths in a walk, without having made a skip in the heat. In the fourth heat Campbell led, but Magdalene was first at the quarter. At the half the maroon colors still led, and at the three-quarters Magdalene was increasing her lead and came into the stretch an easy winner, with six lengths to the good, winning the race.

Cactus Blossom led the string at the start in the third race, five furlongs, but Hal Fisher crowded him hard to the half, passing him there by a head. In the stretch he increased the lead to half a length, finishing strong a good length to the front, Cactus Blossom second, three lengths away from Jennie Schwartz, who led the field by four lengths. Signal, Rebecca and the disappointment of the race, Venture, held the three last positions throughout the race. Time, 1:02 1/2.

Green Hock surprised everybody, even his owner, by running magnificently in the fourth event, six furlongs, setting the pace for Viola Belle and all the others for the entire race. He increased his lead by a length at the turn, the half and the stretch, winning with hands down three lengths away from Viola Belle, the favorite before the race. Silverman got away well out of the bunch, but fell at the half-post and fell back fifth in the race. He got a gait on later and came into the stretch and under the wire third, ten lengths behind Viola Belle. Barton H. was pulled up when his jockey found he had no show in the race.

Blakemore went away with the lead in the last race of the day, five furlongs, Boh H. second, Sam Sayre third, with Little Fellow, Boomerang, Little Nell and Balance All close up in the order named. At the quarter Boh H. had gone to the front, with Blakemore on his flank. Boomerang had moved up to third, while Sam Sayre had dropped back to sixth. On the far side Blakemore and Boh H. had their trial, and when they swung into the stretch Blakemore had poked his head in front, with Boomerang third. Then Boomerang lost his grip, and Little Nell and Balance All came up. Blakemore drew away and won by a length from Boh H., who had the place by two lengths from Little Nell, who was a length away from Balance All. Time, 1:04.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY, JUNE 1.

The card at Overland Park to-day was an attractive one. Notwithstanding the sky was threatening black, the prospects of a drenching before the afternoon had worn away did not prevent a crowd of a thousand people or so from attending the races.

The books were judiciously niggardly in the matter of odds, and little money was carried by the favorites in any of the races. The starts in several of the races were poor, but, as it happened, cut little figure.

The first event on the card was a purse race, valued at $400, for pacers of the 2:17 class. W. W. P. opened at 1 to 4, with Uncle Jack 3 to 1, Cebon 5 to 1, and Maritana 10 to 1. After the first heat there was no betting to speak of. Odds on W. W. P. against the field were marked up at 1 to 5. Uncle Jack got off in the lead, with Cebon second and W. W. P. third. The three leaders went together down the backstretch. Uncle Jack quit the struggle on the third turn. W. W. P. drew away from Cehron down the stretch and was first home by five lengths. Cehron was second, six lengths in front of Uncle Jack. Maritana barely saved his distance. Time, 2:19.

The start in the second heat was poor, but Cehron's driver noddled for the word and Starter Creveling dropped the flag. W. W. P. took the lead, with Uncle Jack second and Cehron third. Cehron went out for the leader on the back-stretch, and the race was a pretty and clipping one, with the other two horses well up. Cehron was lapped with W. W. P. to the head of the homestretch, when the latter was loosened out and won by two lengths from Cehron. Maritana, in a whipping finish, heat out Uncle Jack for third. Time, 2:21.

W. W. P. took the third straight heat and the race in 2:22. He got slightly in the lead to a good start, with Uncle Jack second and Cehron third. The horses went well hunched to the upper turn, when Cehron dropped out of the hunt. W. W. P. came in two lengths in front of Maritana, who heat Uncle Jack for the place by a length. Second money went to Cehron, third to Maritana and fourth to Uncle Jack.

SUMMARY.

The second race, a $300 purse for two-year-old trotters, best two heats in three, had four starters. Denver Medium was the favorite at 1 to 3, and after the first heat was cut down to 1 to 10. The horses got away to a very poor start. Peter Jansen was four lengths in the rear when the flag fell. Denver Medium left the others and set a pace that would have distanced them had she not been eased up. She came in and won, pulled almost to a walk. Ghora was as easily second. Privateer was third and Jansen fourth. Time, 3:01.

The second heat was a walk-over for Denver Medium. Ghora got away five lengths in the rear and was never in the race. Medium won in a jog at ten lengths. Privateer was second. Jansen was a poor third and Ghora was just inside the distance pole. Time, 3:04.

The third race was a six furlongs selling race for $300 for three-year-olds and upwards. The entries were: Al Shores' Baychester 105 (Weaver), M. J. Craig's Maelstrom 111 (Goedertz), W. L. Thompson's A. C. Tucker 99 (Whitby), Charles Roberts' Lucy Clark 111 (Graves), San Angelo Stables' Blakemore 106 (Lyons), Heffron & Co.'s King Pluto 96 (Condrey).

Baychester opened at even money in the betting, but went down to 1 to 2 and was finally backed off the books. The post odds on the others were: Maelstrom 5 to 1, A. C. Tucker 30 to 1, John Winfield 60 to 1, Lucy Clark 3 to 1, Blakemore 5 to 1 and King Pluto 12 to 1.

When the flag fell Lucy Clark got off two lengths in the lead, with Baychester second and Maelstrom third. Lucy Clark led to the stretch, when Baychester came to the front with a rush and won hands down without feeling the whip or spur. Lucy Clark was a whipping second, a length ahead of A. C. Tucker, who had got off badly at the start, but had forced his way through the hunch on the upper turn and showed a fine burst of speed down the stretch. Time, 1:17.

The entries were: San Angelo Stables' Ranger, 99 (Locklear), Hanna & Kulegen's Country Girl, 111 (Darby), F. S. Byers' Trooper, 112 (Parks), J. M. Shields' Sam Jones, 114 (Neal), Heffron & Co.'s Kiowa, 116 (Goedertz), Mesquite Stable's Hal Fisher, 118 (Nixon), Frank Saunders' Aristocracy, 110 (Freeman), John R. Campbell's Ben Harrison, 124 (Steel), Powers & Wunder's Manitou, 110 (Robinson), W. L. Thompson's Remus, 114 (Thompson), Charlie Roberts' Charlie R., 99 (Weaver). Hal Fisher was a hot favorite at 1 to 2. Sam Jones sold at 8 to 1, Remus at 4 to 1, Charlie R. at 6 to 1, Ben Harrison at 10 to 1 and the others at 15 to 1 each. It was long before such a large field could be got off. The flag fell to a fairly good start, with Sam Jones, Hal Fisher, Harrison and Manitou lapped in front of the hunch. Country Girl was the last away. Fisher fell back in the run around the turn, and Sam Jones was leading in the stretch and everyone was driving. Fisher came strong in the run home and heat out Sam Jones at the wire by a length and a half. Jones and Ben Harrison had a neck and neck struggle for the place. Jones in the last few jumps got the best of it, and was second by a neck, with Harrison third, two lengths ahead of Remus. Time, 0:56.

After the race, Hal Fisher, who was entered at $600 by John R. Nashworthy, proprietor of the Mesquite stables, was sold for $1,000 to O. F. Johnson, of San Francisco.

Ranger, Country Girl, Trooper, Kiowa, Aristocracy, Manitou, Remus and Charlie R. also ran.

The last race of the day was a dash of fifteen-sixteenths of a mile, for three-year-olds. The entries were: Ryan Bros.' Spoon, 112 (Robinson); B. C. Holly's Green Hock, 112 (King); B. C. Holly's Steadfast, 112 (Whitby); Kilkenny Fisher's Lilly G., 107 (Weaver); Al Shores' Investigator, 112 (Freeman); Mrs. F. A. Stafford's Minnie Beach, 107 (Crowley). The Holly entry was coupled and sold at 1 to 8 in the books, the stable declaring to win with Steadfast. Lilly G. was on the boards at 6 to 1, Minnie Beach 6 to 1, Investigator 10 to 1 and Spoon 10 to 1. Green Hock got off in the lead, with Spoon second, Lilly G. third and Steadfast fourth. There was no change at the quarter. The horses ran well hunched along the backstretch. When they had straightened away for the run home all but Green Hock were catching the whip. Spoon was still in second place and Lilly G. in third. Steadfast was coming fast along the rail. When nearing the wire hd flashed by Lilly G. and Spoon, and after a neck and neck run with his stable companion came under the wire first by a head. Green Hock was not ridden out and finished second, without being whipped. Spoon was third, and Lilly G. fourth. Time, 1:41.

Lilly G., Investigator and Minnie Beach also ran. FOURTH DAY—FRIDAY, JUNE 2.

A large crowd saw the races to-day at Overland Park. The sport was above the average and the crowd in attendance was a well-pleased one. Some good time was made in the 2:34 class trotting, Pauline H. winning the second heat in 2:24. In the three-minute class Rose won the heat and race in 2:27. Al Watts had things about his own way in the first running race. Boh H. fooled the hookies badly in the five-furlong race, and Sympathetic's Last queered the talent in the final. Take it all in all, it was a good day of sport.

In the first race, trotting, Rose won the first heat with ease by four lengths, with Josie C. leading Ella O., Troublesome and Nickel Plate by two lengths. Nickel Plate was distanced, but on explaining that he was pocketed on the turn he was allowed to go in the second heat, when he was distanced without an excuse. Rose won the second heat by five lengths, coming first into the stretch, with Josie C. close behind. The latter breaking near the wire, gave the race to Rose by the distance named and second and third places to Ella O. and Troublesome. The final was won by Rose in a jog, with Josie C. second, Ella O. third and Troublesome last.

Mutuels paid first heat, $2.90, second heat, $3.30, third heat, $3.80. Betting—Rose, favorite, 7 to 10 and 1 to 3; Josie C., even money and 2 to 1; Troublesome, 15; Ella, 8; Nickel Plate, 15.

In the second race, for 2:34 trotters, Jennie Thombs opened a hot favorite. Belvidere acted badly on scoring and delayed the start. A fairly good get-away, with Pauline H. leading, resulted in Gray Andy trotting second and Belvidere third. The latter got his nose in front at the half, and made a lively pace. Coming into the stretch Pauline overtook him and won by two lengths. In the second heat Pauline led the procession and finished with a pull two lengths to the good. The third heat was a most exciting one. Belvidere led from a break on the turn to the stretch, where he was passed by Pauline. As they approached the wire the ball bearings of their pneumatic treads jingled in unison. It was nip and tuck for forty yards, Belvidere forging ahead by half a length as they passed under the eye of the judge. The heat has given to Pauline H., as Belvidere had gone in the air five times during the heat, and Pauline H. had made the course without a slip. It didn't suit those who had their money on Belvidere, but it went with those who love a square deal on a race track.

Mutuels paid $4, $3.70 and $3.80. Betting—Jennie Thombs favorite, selling $10; E. W. L., $9; field, $10. In the finals Pauline sold at $10 and the field at $5.

Al Watts was a favorite in the third event, running, five and one-half furlongs, and about as stubhorn as he was on Decoration Day. His serpentine dance with a stable boy on one end of the bridle was brilliantly executed, but was not encored. He evidently knew what he was about, judging from results on the race. The hunch got the flag when well together and Watts was the first to show his head in the lead, with Tucker well up behind and Sam Brown a close third. This position was maintained to the stretch and Al Watts entered it well in hand. He responded to every call made necessary by the approach of Tucker, and later on of Sam Brown, with an ease which betrayed the fact that he was a great race horse. Sam Brown crowded Tucker out of second place by a head and the field strung out several lengths behind, Cactus Blossom being the only dangerous foe to the three leaders.

It seemed to have been all fixed up for Jennie Schwartz to win this race. Boh H. poked his nose in, however, and upset all the calculations of the talent. He got away out of the bunch first and led all the way to a good finish. Boh Austin ran second to the stretch, where Jennie Schwartz, Lucy Clark and Balance All made the pace too hot for him. They came in under the wire with Boh H. a good two lengths in the lead. Jennie Schwartz came in very fast, passing Lucy Clark near the finish and cinching second money by a head.

The last was the race of the day and the talent found it hard to pick a winner. Wedgefield's win was a surprise. He gave the starter considerable trouble by cutting up badly in scoring. His mount was not able to control him and couldn't get his head to the front. In the breakaway Little Fellow Jr. pulled out a length in the lead. Belle P. was right behind him, Wedgefield, Bay Chester and Sympathetic's Last bringing up the rear. It was the same at the quarter. At the half Belle P. swapped places with Little Fellow Jr., the others touched well together in the same positions. In the stretch Wedgefield passed Little Fellow Jr. and Thompson made the pace hot after Belle P., who, failing to respond to Locklear's whipping, lost the race by a length, with Bay Chester third by a head and Sympathetic's Last keeping Little Fellow Jr. company several lengths behind.

Betting—Sympathetic's Last favorite, with Belle P. and Bay Chester at even money for a place. FIFTH DAY—SATURDAY, JUNE 2.

After four days of excellent management the responsible men of Overland Park closed the week in something like disgrace. The carrying out of the programme was inexcusably slow. There were tedious waits after every heat of the trot, which, as luck would have it, strung out over the whole afternoon, and the same thing occurred before and after the running races. At 5:25, when every body was tired and cold and wanted to go home, the indicator was moved around to the cheerful announcement, "Next race at 6 o'clock." With the trot unfinished and two more running races on the card, that was too much after such an afternoon and most of the crowd went out to the trains.

The polo pony race provided considerable amusement, and the jockies were up in newspaper row enjoying it. Joe Narvaez was critical. After a seemingly profound study of a gentleman jockey, he said: "Well, if dat geysier is a jock, what is us?" A look of lofty disdain from the "geyser" was the only answer beyond the good-natured laughter of those in the vicinity. A colored citizen, filled with bock beer and righteous indignation at being accused of stealing a whip, caused some commotion. He was taken away from the grounds, and 100 men on a gigantic drunk couldn't have made a more noisy exit.

Spartan was a favorite throughout in the first race, with Alpha, Dagmar and Goldust finding few takers at the short odds offered. In the fifth race all bets were declared off and the driver of Princess Dagmar was reprimanded for not urging his horse on the stretch. Spartan won the last heat in a jog and the victory failed to evoke a cheer from the tired spectators.

The second race proved to be a practice jog for Beulah, who sold a hot favorite all through the race, with Fred P. and Norton McGregor as second choice. All the heats in this race were trotted in the order named, Norton McGregor's frequent breaking preventing him from getting a better place. The track was slow after the first race, and no fast time was made.

SUMMARY.

The third was the race of the day. It was "the" race because all the riders were young men of the town, probably known as "Mr." So-and-So. In some cases the mount was made with the assistance of kinds friends, in others the lanky gentlemen riders stood still with their limbs extended and the polo pony was driven in, the gentleman rider dropping into the saddle with an abandon "truly rural." The pedigree of the ponies was not on the programme, which was well, as it might have been difficult to trace the family likeness to such a nondescript collection. Dandy Jim was ridden by a tall young man who had a sure thing and knew it. Knowing it, he plunged, and several parties in the bookmaking district saw him play as large an amount as $5 at one halting place. Before the race the gentlemen jockies lingered in the vicinity of the members' stand. The heavy wraps were unbuttoned and the wind played in a careless way with the loose folds, betraying charms of which many had previously been ignorant. The nicely-turned ankle, the Adonis-shaped limb, and the altogether swell combination, was simply hewitching, and many were the "O, girls, isn't he sweet?" which floated to the other stands, only to be echoed back in revised form, "Mamma, buy me that?" The merry blast of the bugle summoned the riders to the front and to the post. They were soon away from the flag, with John Gilpin and his rider in a quite correct negligee attire in the lead, Pedro second and Dandy third. At the stretch the gallant Gilpin disgraced his name by dropping into fourth place, with the breezy Buck close behind him. They came towards the wire with Guido in the lead, Dandy second, Gilpin third, Pedro fourth and Buck fifth. On they came, and the chariot race in Ben Hur wasn't a circumstance to the interest and excitement attending the finish of this event. When within twenty yards of the stretch hands and feet went in the air, the gentlemen fanned the atmosphere with their haws, and mud and glory flew about promiscuously in chunks. Erratic Gilpin wanted to get off on a side street where more people lived, and this exhibition of vanity lost him the race. He finished second to Guido, ridden by Mr. Kuykendall, with Dandy third, and the others are still coming in. The hero of the hour was the winner. He was immediately surrounded by his friends, while the band played "See, the Conquering Hero Comes." He was embraced by Gratz Brown, who intimated that there was more honor in winning a polo-pony race than being a member of the ninth General Assembly, and no one raised his voice to dispute it. Mr. Kuykendall made a speech. He said it was "the proudest moment of his life," and this original thought evoked a perfect whirlwind of applause, and without a dust accompaniment. Mr. Benton spent the rest of the afternoon telling Barry Wall and a few of "us fellows" how he came to finish second. He claims to have secured that place without turning a hair, but his friends say that his mustache is minus several hirsute appendages on each side of his physiognomy.

Betting—John Gilpin, 6 to 5; Dandy, 6 to 5; Pedro, 5; Guido, 3. Like a shot out of a gun Bi Holly's well-named horse escaped from the hunch which got the flag in this race. The Judge was in second place with Little Fellow Jr., third, the others trailing. At the half Revolver was moving along easily with time on the side to sigh for alfalfa. The Judge was leading the remnant with Viola Belle up to third place and Little Fellow fourth. As they entered the stretch Viola Belle got after the leader, while King smiled back and invited him to come on. Revolver cantered in an easy winner by three lengths, Viola Belle was leading Little Fellow Jr., by five lengths and the others were a length away from each other, two lengths from the third horse.

SUMMARY.

Running—Selling, $50; for non-winners at this meeting; three-year-olds and upwards; ten pounds below the scale; those not buying run as good as second allowed 5 pounds; unplaced, 7 pounds; maidens unplaced, 5 pounds additional. The Judge, Spout, John Winfield and Claxton also ran and finished in the order named. Betting—Revolver, 7 to 10; Viola Belle, 7 to 12; Spout, 5 to 2 Little Fellow 20, Kate Claxton 30, John Winfield 10, The Judge 4.

Queen Regent and Alpha alternated in a specialty act at the post in the nine-sixteenths dash. The former stood still, apparently indifferent to the wishes of Starter Craveling Alpha, on the other hand, was anxious to get in out of the rain, and this anxiety led him away to the front on several occasions before the others were ready. They got away well together at last with Poco-Tempo showing first, Jim Lee second and Rap-a-Tap third. Therace was a pretty one into the stretch, Poco-Tempo leading Rap-a-Tap by a length, with Jim Lee close behind. King applied the whip and Jim Lee shot into second place on the inside, hugging the fence. The others were urged and, responding, pocketed Jim Lee. But King wouldn't have it that way and wheeled his speedy colt to the right. He lost a length by doing so and then commenced the prettiest finish of the meeting. Whips and spurs were applied and all three answered by a jump. They were all ridden to the utmost, but with a phenomenal burst of speed, electrifying in its effects, Jim Lee crawled gradually but as surely to the front. They passed under the wire locked together, but with Jim Lee a half a head to the good. The spectators sent up a cheer which clearly betrayed the excitement of the minute. King was the recipient of much applause as he rode to the stand after the splendid race he had helped to win.

SUMMARY.

Betting—3 to 1 and 5 to 2 on Jim Lee; Poco-Tempo and Rap-a-Tap 5 to 1; Thread, 8; Alpha, 10; Nadine and Queen Regent, 5. The last was a somewhat exciting race and was won by the favorite, Uncle Boh, the six-year-old son of famous Luke Blackburn and Vintage Time. He won the American Derby in 1890, but broke down shortly afterwards. He was patched up, however, and promises to be quite a race horse. He got away third at the start, but overtook Boh Austin in the stretch and beat him in by three lengths. Boh Austin, who was played heavily at 3 to 1, and even 8 to 1, by the D. A. C. boys, led from the flag to within 100 yards of the wire, when Uncle Boh passed him and won with ease. Owen Bowling was third and Huber fourth, Smuggler running with a forlorn hope in the rear.

Late Races at Overland Park.

DENVER (Colo.), June 5.—The field had its turn at Overland Park to-day, and favorites were bowled over with monotonous regularity. Not a single first choice captured first money in any of the five races. To begin the odds-on favorite, Josie C., was beaten in the trotting event by Jennie Thoms, against whom the books laid 4 to 1. Then in the five-furlong running race next on the card the Dickson entries, Laniard and Maelstrom, who were quoted at 1 to 2, finished second and third to Lillie G. Charlie R., backed from 4 to 1 to even money, was last.

Cactus Blossom, a 12 to one, made a show of his field in the six-furlong race. The favorite, The Judge, was second and the best tips, Sam Brown and Bert Hart, nowhere. In the fourth race the slaughter was continued by Ranger, a 4 to 1 chance, who outfought the favorite, Ben Harrison all the way. To wind up the agony Jennie Schwartz opened favorite at even money, but was allowed to go to the post unbacked at 2 1/2 to 1. Razzle Dazzle, Omen and Trooper were almost backed off the boards, but Jennie Schwartz spoiled all calculations by winning in a hard drive from Trooper.

Summaries—First race, trotting—Jennie Thoms won, Josie second, Gray Andy third. Second race, running, five furlongs—Lillie G. won, Laniard second, Maelstrom third. Time, 1:04. Third race, six furlongs—Cactus Blossom won, The Judge second, Silverman third. Time, 1:18 1/2.

Fourth race, four and one-half furlongs—Ranger won, Ben Harrison second, Investigator third. Time, 0:53. Fifth race, seven furlongs—Jennie Schwartz won, Trooper second, Omen third. Time, 1:33 1/2.

DENVER (Colo.), June 6.—The trotting events programmed for to-day failed to fill and two races for gallopers were substituted. In consequence the attendance was materially increased. The opening race, a dash of five and a half furlongs, was captured by Ollie Johnson's horse Hal Fisher. Johnson has been training for Burns and Waterhouse of San Francisco, but came to Denver after the close of the California Jockey Club meeting. Last week he purchased Hal Fisher for $1,000, and to-day won him out. Fisher was hacked from 3 to 1 to even money, and won by a neck in a hard drive from Al Watts, who beat Bay Chester a head for the place. Only King's superior jockeyship saved Fisher from defeat. Had Watts been ridden with any judgment at all he would have won handsly.

Alpha was selected to win the two-year-old maiden race, and was hacked from 2 to 1 to 7 to 10. L. G. S., ridden by Seaman, the California jockey, was a hot tip, and was strongly backed at 4 to 1. Alpha got away in front, but L. G. S. shot up from last position and opening a gap of two lengths led into the stretch. There Alpha came on and won handsly. L. G. S. died away at nothing and finished last.

Six quarter-horses were entered in the three-furlong race and started. Cravilling distinguished himself by dropping the flag to one of the worst send-offs ever seen a race track. Sam Jones and Mountain Maid had at least six lengths the best of the third horse, who was far in advance of the fourth. The favorite, Parole, and Lela were lapped last. After the two leaders had fought it out to the stretch Lela, who had been gaining steadily, came with a magnificent burst of speed and beat Sam Jones a half length, he a length before Mountain Maid. Lela ran the three furlongs in 34 1/2 seconds. Get There, at 8 to 5, beat Wedgefeld, the 7 to 1 favorite in the Owners' handicap, and Boh H., the favorite, easily disposed of his field in the last event of the day, a selling affair, at five furlongs.

Summaries: Five and one-half furlongs—Hal Fisher won, Al Watts second, Bay Chester third. Time, 1:09 1/2. Four and a half furlongs—Alpha won, Tom Parks second, Third third. Time, 0:57 1/2. Three furlongs—Lela won, Sam Jones second, Mountain Maid third. Time, 0:35 1/2. One mile—Get There won, Wedgefeld second, The Judge third. Time, 1:42 1/2. Five furlongs—Boh H. won, Boh Austin second, Venture third. Time, 1:03 1/2.

DENVER, June 7.—Four running races and a trot were scheduled for decision to-day. Gonzales McGregor, the favorite at even money, won the harness event in straight heats from Lizzie S., who finished second each time.

Bert Hart was first choice in the betting in the five-furlong race for gallopers. From 2 to 1 he was hacked to 3 to 5. Navaez had the mount, but the best he could do was to finish second to Little Nell, against whom as much as 8 to 1 was offered. Navaez rode another favorite in the next race, the Judge, who was heavily supported at 7 to 5, and closed at even money, but Bay Chester, well ridden by King, easily disposed of the Judge in the run down the stretch, and won well in hand by half a length.

Once started, the outsiders had everything their own way, and the fourth race witnessed the downfall of another odds-on first choice, Jennie Schwartz. She seemed to have the race won up to a sixteenth from home, where King brought Viceroy through next to the rail and beat her out a length. Laniard, at 15 to 1, and Balance All, at 8 to 1, had a fighting finish for first money in the last race. Laniard won by a length and Balance All beat the favorite a head for the place.

Summaries: 2:20 trot Gonzales McGregor won, Lizzie S. second, Gene third. Time, 2:19, 2:18, 2:19 1/2. Five furlongs—Little Nell won, Bert Hart second, Rehecca third. Time, 1:02 1/2. Seven furlongs—Bay Chester won, The Judge second, Barton H. third. Time, 1:32. Six furlongs—Viceroy won, Jennie Schwartz second, Lucy Clark third. Time, 1:16 1/2. Four and a half furlongs—Laniard won, Balance All second, Trooper third. Time, 0:56 1/2.

It Will Be Grand.

During the week we visited the Portland Speed and Driving Association's race course, now in rapid construction on the east side, a couple of miles from Stark-street ferry. Mr. P. Connelly, superintendent of the track, has sixty-one teams and ninety-nine men at work. We have seen dirt fly, but never before saw it being picked up by the wagon-load so fast that one would think if they did not know that the earth just literally grew in the dirt wagons. This gentleman has no fears but what he will be able to turn over the best track ever raced over in the North Pacific in plenty of time for the June meeting. Mr. D. W. Aaron, superintendent of stalls, has now under way 297 stalls, besides a dozen "cool-out" stalls and walking grounds. He has at work about thirty workmen that are just making race horse homes about as fast as if they were produced from seed. J. E. Bennett, superintendent of the grand stand, has twenty-five carpenters at work, and will have ten more the coming week. This building when finished will seat 5,000 or more people, and would, from outside appearances, do honor as a work of art to the most fashionable portion of a city. The judges' and reporters' stand will, we are told, be as complete as fashion and workmen can make them. Every one whom we saw and talked with gave it as their opinion that this course will have no equal on the Pacific.—North Pacific Rural.

THERE is a movement on foot among the horse-breeders and traders in Kentucky to form an organization which will control all of the standard-bred horse auction sales of the State, says an exchange. This move has been in contemplation among some of the larger breeders for some time past and is now assuming a tangible form. Members of the association who formerly sold their horses at private auction will in the future, should the organization materialize, pool their stock and twice a year have large auctions of standard-bred horses.

Two handsome and perfectly matched horses will sell for many times the separate value of either, and this is a branch of the trotting market in which the demand is out of all ratio to the supply.

Yours truly, C. C. FERGUSON, Clerk.

THERE are a number of California tourists at the World's Fair that have written home, and said they want to see the California horses win a few races on the trotting turf before they return. Those who followed the Pleasanton horses the last two years returned with plenty of Eastern greenbacks.

SACRAMENTO RACES.

All the Races Given Under the Auspices of the Capital Turf and Driving Club Described.

FIRST DAY—TUESDAY, JUNE 6.

The weather clerk certainly likes the Capital Turf and Driving Club, for he furnished some delightful weather for the opening of the five-day meeting here.

The clever Weber boys, Johnny and Charley, were on hand to ride, and the way they handled their mounts delighted the most fastidious.

The first event was the Weinstein & Lubin Stake for two-year-olds, four furlongs. Quirt, Tillie S. and Normandy were the starters.

Quirt, Tillie S. and Normandy were the starters. Johnny Weber's mount, Tillie S., was made favorite in the auctions, with Quirt second choice.

Charmer, Miss Walling and St. Patrick were the only starters in the handicap at one mile and fifty yards.

Motto and Conde were the principal factors in the five-furlong dash, Mrs. Wolfskill's Heliodora being considered rather outclassed.

Orville Appleby's game little mare Esperanza died here early this morning from the effects of her collision with Normandy yesterday.

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7.

Again there was but a small crowd in attendance. The betting was not as lively as it might have been.

The track was fast and the racing—all there was of it—good. Only three races were run, the fourth being declared off owing to a misunderstanding.

The first race, a selling affair at seven and a half furlongs, brought out St. Patrick, Regal and Charger, Broad Church and Gladiator being scratched.

Romulus, Conde, Motto and Gladiator appeared in the handicap dash of four furlongs. Conde, who has improved remarkably, was always a slight favorite over Motto.

Articus, that grand-looking two-year-old by Argyle, dam Glenloch, again demonstrated that he is a racehorse. He picked up 120 pounds in the two-year-old event at four and a half furlongs.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY, JUNE 8.

The Board of Directors of the Capital City Turf Club came to the conclusion this afternoon that the citizens of this city did not appreciate horse racing.

The San Francisco contingent were very much disappointed, and A. B. Stemler was not only disappointed but disgusted.

The racing-card to-day was one of the best ever presented to the racing world. The weather was delightful, the track was good and the fields in most of the races were large enough to make things very interesting.

The Golden Egel Hotel stake at five furlongs, for two-year-olds, was the event of the day. Montalvo, Realization, Red Chief, Quirt, Morven and Normandie faced the starter.

from the hunch. The race to the head of the stretch was very exciting. Montalvo, who was expected to outrun his field in the first quarter, failed in the attempt.

Red Cloud, Broad Church, St. Patrick and Gladiator contested in the selling event of a mile. St. Patrick, on the strength of his recent wins, was made a big favorite.

Charmar, Addie Chipman, Solitude and Orta appeared in the handicap at the mile for three-year-olds. It was a good betting race, Charmar selling for $20, Solitude for $16.

Canny Scott, who had not run for a long time, was made a big favorite in the handicap at a mile and a furlong for the Pioneer Hop-Yard Stake.

The Grand Circuit.

Delegates from district agricultural associations met Saturday evening at this office. Wilfred Page presided. Association directors present were Messrs. Kent, Crittenden, Cohen, Waugh and Daltou of Oakland, R. S. Brown of Petaluma, F. W. Loeber of Napa, Dr. Anthony and Thomas Smith of Vallejo, F. P. Wickersham of Fresno, J. R. Whittaker and several other horse-breeders.

The meeting was called for the purpose of adjusting conditions for the annual fairs of the grand circuit of California. Many points of interest to associations and horse-owners were discussed. The advisability of following the system adopted in the grand circuits in the East in having a uniform entrance fee throughout the entire circuit, possibly five per cent, with an additional five per cent. for the winners of money, was spoken of, but no definite action was taken in the matter, however.

Another knotty problem was the question of reclassification. There is every reason to believe that trotters and pacers that go on the grand circuit will be classified every second or third meeting.

A motion was introduced to the effect that every association on the grand circuit should hang up at least $8,000 in purses, but it was deemed expedient to delay action until the programmes had been prepared.

A committee consisting of a delegate from each association will meet June 13th at 8 o'clock at this office to adopt a programme for the entire circuit. This committee will also decide whether or not the three-in-five trotting races are to be consigned to oblivion, as far as the grand circuit of California is concerned. It was also resolved that every delegate should be empowered by his association to vote upon all questions that might be brought up.

The grand circuit, as at present arranged, runs in the following order: Breeders' meeting at San Francisco, Oakland, Vallejo, Napa, Petaluma, Sacramento, Stockton and Fresno.

The San Jose Association has given notice that it will stick by its dates and will not accept the week set by the circuit convention, consequently Fresno and San Jose will again clash.

Mr. Woodard appeared before the Board in regard to admitting Woodland into the circuit. He suggested that the Breeders' meeting start in one week earlier and that the Yolo county city be wedged in. A delegate from the Woodland association will be invited to attend the next meeting, when they may be taken in the grand circuit instead of the northern circuit.

At the Foot of Mt. Diablo.

The trotting stock on the Oakwood Park Stock Farm never looked better than at present. The sixty standard-bred brood mares are enjoying splendid health. Nearly all have had foals, and a prouder lot of well-bred matron or a nicer group of well-shaped foals would be hard to find any where. The youngsters are by Steinyway, 2:25½, Chas. Derby, 2:20, and Prince Red, the three leading stallions. The latter named young stallion will make a great reputation as a sire, and, crossed with the Steinyway and Derby fillies, the produce ought to be extremely fast. The colts and fillies by him are all heavy-boned, well-proportioned, and pure-gaited trotters, and very handsome. Prince Red 9940 is one of the best-bred sons of the mighty Red Wilkes in the United States, and is one of the best-made youngsters in California. He is out of Molly Stout, a sister to Lady Stout, 2:29; Lottie Prall, 2:28½; Black Cloud (sire of Kitty Patchen, 2:21½), and Mambrino Time (sire of Four Corners, 2:20), and two others in the list, one sire and ten dams of fifteen trotters, including Silverone, 2:19½, C. C., 2:16½; Shadeland Onward, 2:18½; Temple Bar, 2:17½. Molly Stout is by Mambrino Patchen out of the famous mare Puss Prall (dam of Black Diamond, 2:29½, and two others, besides the sires Belvoir, Black Cloud, Duke of Glen Lake, Jeb Stuart and Mambrino Time, and the dam of Garret, 2:20½, and Cartridge, 2:29½) by Mark Time, son of Berthune by Sidi Hamet, sire of Jessie Pepper, the great broodmare. Puss Prall's dam was Cora by Daniel Webster, son of Lance by American Eclipse. With such a pedigree, and not a pacer in sight, is there any reason why Prince Red should not become a great sire of trotters? The yearling bay colt Geo. A. Wiley, by him, out of Calypso (dam of Ally Sloper, 2:28½), by Steinyway, 2:25½; second dam Alla (dam of Spartan, 2:24 and Cresco, the sire of Crescut, 2:23½), by Almont 33; third dam (the dam of Henderson, 2:27), by Brignoli, 2:29½, etc., has already shown his ability to get in the 2:30 list this year.

Best Way, his full brother, is another very promising two-year-old.

W. Wood, 2:07, has filled out and looks stronger than ever. He will be a formidable opponent in the free-for-all pacing races this fall. It would not astonish us to see the champion race record won by this fine-looking son of Steinyway.

Bay Rum, the three-year-old daughter of Steinyway, out of May, by Anteco, is also doing well this year; she is a very nice-gaited trotter and will get a record this fall if no accident befalls her.

Amphion, by Steinyway, out of Inez (sister to Inez, 2:22½), by Sweepstakes, is another one that is well entered in the races, and will give a good account of himself among the two-year-olds.

Coquette is the name of one of the handsomest-looking black fillies that will be seen on the circuit. She is by the great Wilton, 2:19, out of Julia Clay, by Harry Clay 45; second dam Esther Ward, by Harry Ward, son of Happy Medium. She is a race mare that will make a low mark.

Cibolo, by Chas. Derby, 2:20, out of Addie Ash, by Indianapolis, has taken to pacing this year, and will make a good showing. This colt was trotting last year, but that dreaded scourge, the distemper, affected him so severely that he did not recover his health until this spring.

There are numbers of other good ones here that will prove their worth when handled, and as the season has been used liberally, there will be less trouble in handling the geldings than if they were left entire. The pastures on the hills and valleys look exceedingly well. The demand for the celebrated Devon, Durham, Polled Angus and Galloway cattle this year has been greater than the supply and additions to the immense herds are made by purchases in the East every three months.

A Reminiscence of Dictator.

The death of Dictator at Ashland reminds us of his sale in August, 1883, says the Turf, Field and Farm. Mr. Harrison Durkee, who owned him, was anxious to get rid of him that spring, but he could not find a purchaser. During the summer three sons of Dictator challenged the attention of turf-goers. Jay-Eye-See had a four-year-old record of 2:14, and later trotted to a 6½-year-old record of 2:10½; Phallas, then six years old, had a stallion record of 2:13½, and Director, six years old, was sweeping everything before him in the circuit and had lowered his record to 2:17. Mr. C. J. Hamlin was anxious to obtain a stallion which would successfully compete with Jerome Eddy, the star of Jewett Farm. The year previous, at Buffalo, Jerome Eddy had taken a race record of 2:16½ and been purchased by Mr. Jewett. Almont Jr., 2:26, was the fastest stallion at Village Farm, and Mambrino King had only good looks to commend him, not having become distinguished in the stud. Jewett Farm had a decided card in 2:16½. We suggested to Mr. Hamlin that he put at the head of Village Farm the sire of Jay-Eye-See, Phallas and Director, explaining that he could not do anything that would produce more of a sensation. This was at dinner at his own home. He brought the matter up at the breakfast table, after having slept on it, and urged us to go to New York at once and see Mr. Durkee. We expressed the opinion that the stallion could be bought for $20,000, and the price did not chill the Buffalo breeder.

The next day we met Mr. Durkee at his New York office and opened negotiations. He haggled and asked for an offer, saying that $20,000 would not buy Dictator. We finally made an offer of $20,000, with the express understanding that it should hold good but an hour. He thanked us and said he would consider the proposition. Two days later Maj. H. C. McDowell appeared upon the scene. Mr. Durkee having telegraphed him that he had refused an offer of over $20,000 for the stallion. The Major induced Mr. David Bonner and Mr. A. A. Bonner to join him, and Dictator passed into their possession at $25,000. The horse was in Kentucky at the time, and the announcement was made that he would stand at Ashland at $300. Mr. J. H. Wallace sneered at the sale. He said in his magazine: "We don't believe he has been sold for $25,000, for we don't believe there is a man in Kentucky that big a fool." Later Mr. Wallace apologized for this rash statement. Dictator's book rapidly filled at $300, but as he was 21 years old in the Spring of 1884, the heavy work in the stud told on him, and he got but comparatively few colts. The next winter he became the sole property of Major McDowell, and was up to the day of his death the star of the choice breeding stud at Ashland. Clara, dam of Dictator, was one of the greatest brood mares that we have seen. Dexter, her first horn by Hambletonian, was king of the turf from 1867 to 1874, with a record of 2:17½, and he died full of years and honor, in the stables of Mr. Robert Bonner. Lady Dexter, his sister, dropped in 1862, produced at Stony Ford Dexter Prince, one of the greatest sires of speed now on the Pacific Coast.

Dictator, the brother, born in 1863, is the sire of 45 in 2:30, including Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and 25 of his sons are sires of speed. The greatest of his producing sons is Director, 2:17, sire of Direct, 2:05½; Directum, 2:11½; Evangeline, 2:11½, and Margaret S., 2:12½. One of his daughters Nancy Lee, produced Nancy Hanks, 2:04, and from another came Keller Thomas, 2:12½. Kearsarge, by Volunteer, was Clara's fourth living foal, and then came Hyacinth, the sister of Kearsarge, who produced Reina Victoria, dam of Muscovite, 2:18; Princeton, 2:20½; Euclid, 2:13½, and Russia, 2:29½. Corrine, by Volunteer, and America, by Hambletonian, were dropped in 1867 and 1868, but thus far they have contributed nothing to the glory of Clara. Astoria, by Hambletonian, was foaled in 1870, and she has a record of 2:29½, but trotted Mr. Bonner's track in 2:23½ before she was sold to Com. Kittson, who bred her to Von Arnim and Revenue. This mare is now the property of Mr. David Bonner, and she is in foal by Alcantara. Alma, by Hambletonian, dropped in 1872, is owned by Stony Ford, and her son, America, has a record of 2:23½. Three of her daughters can beat 2:30. Aida, the last foal of Clara, was also by Hambletonian. She came in 1873, and produced at Woodburn, where she died, Aida de Clare, who trotted to a four-year-old record of 2:26½ before entering breeding ranks at Allen Farm. The Clara family is steadily growing in strength and reputation, and no one can measure its future greatness. The stallion who lies dead under the grand old trees at Ashland loved by Henry Clay will always hold a proud place in the breeding and turf annals of America.

IN ONE respect the present season will be a remarkable one, and that is that a number of the most prominent stables will not start a horse until the campaign is well along. Doble, who has forty-two horses in his charge, has not made any engagements prior to the July meeting at Rochester, N. Y., and it is therefore certain that all his candidates for first money will receive the gradual preparation for which the great driver is noted. This means that the most of his trotting will be done during August, September and October, and it is not expected that the real stars of the stable will be in shape for a good mile before the first of August. Contrary to his usual custom Doble has made no engagements thus far for Nancy Hanks, preferring to wait until the mare is far enough along in her work to show whether or not she has all her speed before undertaking to perform any record-breaking feats with her. Another unknown quantity in the Doble string thus far is Belle Vara, that made a race record of 2:08½ last season. After going this mile she was turned out, at Mr. Doble's suggestion, he not thinking it the best policy to keep on trotting a mare that had made speed so rapidly as did the daughter of Vatican. It is entirely within the possibilities that she will be one of the sensations of 1893, and the chances are that if she continues to improve as she has done thus far every season since she was a yearling the world's record of 2:01 will not be beyond her capacity. Stamboul will not be asked to go any fast quarters for some time yet, as Doble does not think a horse that is brought from California to this part of the country regains his form until he has passed the better part of a year here.

The Dam of George Wilkes.

From Chicago Inter Ocean, May 28.

HEMLOCK LAKE, N. Y., May 25.—If the question were asked me, Was the Clark Phillips mare by Henry Clay, 3, dam Telegraph, by Baker's Highlander, the dam of the famous George Wilkes, 519, my answer would be no. To sustain this position I submit the following evidence:

From the book of the late William Wadsworth, Geneseo, N. Y.

Henry Clay, bought March 27, 1845. Sold to N. Thompson, Jan. 13, 1852. WILLIAM A. BRODIE.

Mr. Brodie is agent for W. A. Wadsworth, son of William Wadsworth, deceased.

Statement of John H. Newman, South Lima, N. Y.:

In March, 1854, Robert Whaley and I, John H. Newman, South Lima, N. Y., purchased Henry Clay of Mr. Thompson, Penn Yan, N. Y., for $500, and stood him at $25 to insure. He served seventy mares and got fifty foals. Sold him the next fall to Bailey Brothers for $700. The above statement is true, according to my personal knowledge. Oct. 8, 1892. JOHN H. NEWMAN.

Letter of Clark Phillips:

BRISTOL, Ontario county, N. Y., Nov. 28, 1891.—John P. Ray, Esq., Dear Sir—Answering your inquiry of recent date, I will say that I bred a brown roan filly, which I sold when three months of age to E. V. Phillips of this town. He broke her and sold her to his uncle, Joshua Phillips. This filly was got by Old Henry Clay (the Wadsworth horse), when he was owned by Bailey Bros.

CLARK M. PHILLIPS.

The writer had several interviews with E. V. Phillips previous to his death in reference to this mare. Having always lived with his uncle Joshua, he was able to name all the get of Henry Clay owned by his uncle. There was but one mare among them, and that one is mentioned in the foregoing statement of Clark M. Phillips. Mrs. E. V. Phillips was present at one of these interviews and remarked that she well remembered this mare. In a letter from her son, Edson Phillips, which was published in the American Horse Breeder (Christmas number), he states that his parents were married thirty-eight years ago, and that he was born in 1856, and that he well remembers riding this Clay mare when she was four years old, and before her sale by Uncle Joshua, a transaction which did not occur until some time in the 60s. Where is the same man who will accept as a fact a thing or occurrence that his reason tells him to be a physical impossibility?

George Wilkes was foaled in 1856, and to this fact all theories, if they are ever accepted by the public concerning his breeding, must bow. The Clark Phillips mare was bred while Henry Clay was in the possession of the Bailey brothers. He passed to their hands in the fall of 1854. Now, suppose Telegraph was bred to this horse the same fall and foaled the Clay filly in the fall of 1855. She would then have been, say six months old, at the foaling time of George Wilkes, a rather young matron. From all the facts that I can learn the dam of George Wilkes was somewhere from seven to nine years old when she produced her famous son, and must have passed from Gilbert to John S. King, and been sold by Joseph S. Lewis, Geneva, N. Y., to Mr. Delevan, and by him to Harry Felner, sent to Orange county, New York, bred to Hambletonian, produced her only foal and been dead at least two years before the Clark Phillips mare was foaled. The originals containing the foregoing statements of Messrs. Brodie, Newman, and Phillips are now in my possession. The original letter of Edson Phillips has previously been made public. Whoever substituted the pedigree of the Clark Phillips mare for the one of the much older mare that was the dam of George Wilkes perpetrated a great fraud that must not stand uncorrected. JOHN P. RAY.

C. M. Clay Jr. 20.

Cassius M. Clay Jr. 20 (Neaves') was a very fast colt trotter, but was injured at four years of age and retired to the stud, where, at ten years of age—a year younger than was his sire when he died—he was destroyed by his owner, his leg having been accidentally broken.

About one inch in space in the Year Book is given up to this stallion, two lines only being spared to show his descendants in the second generation. But Neaves' Clay occupies a much greater area in the trotting-horse world than is indicated by the few lines above mentioned. His son, Harry Clay 45, produced the dam of the great Electioneer, from whom have come Sunol, 2:08½; Palo Alto, 2:08½; Arion, 3, 2:10½, etc. The same granddaughter of Neaves' Clay holds the world's record as a producer of 2:30 speed and is the dam of the sensational young sire Lancelot, that at five years of age, last season, sent out the phenomenal yearling filly Lenore, which made a mile in the second heat of an actual race in 2:28½. A son of Neaves' Clay sired The Moor, from whom came Beautiful Bells, age considered, the greatest broodmare yet produced—dam of Belflower, 2:16½, and six others, and of Bell Boy, Chimes and St. Bel, all speed sires of acknowledged merits. The great race horse, St. Julien, 2:11½, was also out of a granddaughter of Neaves' Clay, and the dead sire Sultan, 2:24, sire of Stamboul, 2:07½, is a direct descendant, being by The Moor, a grandson.

To do full justice to this great progenitor of speed he must be thought of in connection with the wonderful mares, Green Mountain Maid and Beautiful Bells, and such sires as Electioneer, Sultan, Stamboul, Harry Clay, The Moor, Sahle Wilkes, Clay Pilot, and the nearly or quite 400 standard performers that race directly to him through these sources. The records which descended from Neaves' Clay are found as frequently below the 2:15 limit as those of many horses which are constantly kept in public mind by the peculiar turns of fortune's wheel, among them being the following track trophies: 2:07½ by Stamboul, 2:08½ by Sunol, 2:08½ by Palo Alto, 2:10½ by Little Albert, 2:10½ by Arion, 2:11 by Saladin, pacing; 2:11½ by St. Julien, 2:11½ by Regal Wilkes, 2:12 by Truman, 2:14½ by Muta Wilkes, 2:14½ by Merry Chimes, 2:14½ by Norval, etc.

No attempt is here made to give the lion's share of glory of these performances to C. M. Clay Jr. 20 to the exclusion of the noted sires and dams which intervene, but justice demands that a few of these bright rays of distinction which are thrown back upon equine forms ancestral should rest upon Neaves' Clay.—Horse Review.

IT SEEMS that the Morgan family, from which have come many good pacers, is going to be perpetuated, as the Morgan horse breeders will meet at the World's Fair on Sept. 7th next, to organize a Morgan Horse Association.

The Blood of Diomed.

Steam, electricity and improved transfer connections in our great cities have made the rearing of inferior horses of any type unprofitable. Yet the increasing wealth of this country makes an increasing demand for horses of superior quality, size, style and action. This is true as well of drafters as of coachers, carriage horses, saddle horses, gentlemen's roadsters and speed trotters. Size, style and action are in demand. The four-mile thoroughbred race horse has been the patent factor for the improvement of every type of horse yet produced.

The most important of the early importation of thoroughbred race horses from England was Diomed, a horse which combined the blood of the Darley Arabian, the Byerly Turk and the Godolphin Barb with that of the best racing blood of the royal mares. So skillfully have the descendants of Diomed been bred that they have dominated all subsequent importations of racing blood so completely that to-day our most successful sires, our fleetest race horses, trotters and pacers, trace back, through his best descendants, to imp. Diomed.

Of our trotters and pacers the blood of Diomed has assimilated "their way of going," but in every other important particular—of form, size, style and capacity for sustained extreme speed—the blood of this four-mile race horse so thoroughly dominates our best trotters and pacers that the physical characteristics of Justin Morgan, Andrew Jackson, old Pacing Pilot, old Tom Hal, imp. Bellfounder, Hambletonian and Mambrino Chief have almost entirely disappeared from their best descendants.

At the close of 1892 thirteen of our American trotters had made records of 2:10 or better; namely, Nancy Hanks, 2:04; Stamboul, 2:07½; Kremlin, 2:07¾; Martha Wilkes, 2:08; Sunol, 2:03½; Maud S., 2:08¾; Palo Alto, 2:08¾; Belle Vara, 2:08¾; Allerton, 2:09½; Jay-Eye-See, 2:10 (pacing, 2:06½); Moquette, 2:10; Alix, 2:10; Nelson, 2:10.

A careful study of the pedigrees of these remarkable performers develops the following facts: Not one of the thirteen has a dam, nor any ancestor in the direct female line with a record of 2:30.

In but one of the thirteen has the sire's dam, or any ancestor in the direct female line, a record of 2:30.

But four of the thirteen were sired by a stallion having a record of 2:30.

Each of the thirteen traces through Hambletonian, the Norfolk trotter, to imported Bellfounder and to the race horse, imported Messenger one or more times. Five trace twice through Mambrino Chief, and one traces through him once to imported Messenger.

Four of the thirteen trace through Pilot, Jr., to the Canadian pacer Pilot.

There is one strain of Morgan blood in Stamboul, two in Allerton, four in Nelson, one in Moquette, two in Nancy Hanks.

Nancy Hanks traces through her dam eleven times to imported Diomed; Nelson traces through his sire six times to Diomed; Martha Wilkes traces twice to Diomed through her sire's dam; Stamboul and each of the other nine traces to Diomed through both sire and dam.

These thirteen performers derive improved trotting action from their trotting ancestry, but their capacity for sustained extreme speed is derived from the four-mile racing blood of Diomed, which courses through their veins.

Sunol, Jay-Eye-See and Belle Vara trace through Lexington to Diomed. Maud S., Palo Alto and Kremlin trace to Diomed through Boston, the sire of Lexington. Lexington traces once to Diomed through his dam, Alice Carneal, and twice through his sire, Boston, to Diomed. On the turf at every distance from a half mile to four mile beats, Lexington and his descendants, and the descendants of his sire, Boston, hold the world's best records.

Barring the advantages secured from the pneumatic-tired sulky by the trotting performers of 1892—equal to at least five seconds—the trotting descendants of Lexington and those of his sire, Boston, hold the world's best records, to wit: Sunol, 2:08½, grandam Waxy, by Lexington; Maud S., 2:08¾, dam Miss Russell, a grand-daughter of Boston; Palo Alto, 2:08¾, dam Dame Winnie, thoroughbred, by Planet, a grandson of Boston. Like Lexington, the thoroughbred racers Waxy, grandam of Sunol; Sally Russell, the grandam of Maud S., and Dame Winnie, the dam of Palo Alto, each traces also through her dam to Diomed.

Of the above thirteen greatest trotters Palo Alto, Jay-Eye-See, Moquette and Alix each trace through the dam to the great pacer and sire imp. Glencoe, a horse which traces eight times to Herod, the grandsire of Diomed.

Martha Wilkes traces through her sire and Palo Alto through his dam to imp. Margrave, whose sire's dam was a granddaughter of Diomed.

Jay-Eye-See and Moquette trace through the dam and Alix through his sire to the great four-year-old racehorse Wagner, which was inbred to Diomed.

Of the trotters who made records of 2:15 in 1892, Norval, 2:14½, traces through his dam to the great four-mile racehorse Gray Eagle, which was inbred to Diomed. Ryland T., 2:11½, Ponce de Leon, 2:13, and Kentucky Union, 2:13½, trace through their dams to Maria West (a granddaughter of Diomed) the dam of Wagner.

Seventy-one trotters made records in 1892 in 2:15 or better. The pedigrees of sixty-four of them were published in the Review. Every one of these sixty-four great performers trace through either sire or dam to Diomed; twelve of these trace through the sire only, four through the dam only; forty-eight or three fourths of them trace through both sire and dam to Diomed. The average of the sixty-four is three times through the dam and four times through the sire to Diomed. Of the sixty-four thirty-six trace from one to three times to Justin Morgan. Eight of the thirty-six are of Morgan descent through both sire and dam.

Lord Clinton, 2:10½, which tied Little Albert, 2:10½ (the fleetest grandson of Electioneer), for the world's gelding race record in 1892, was got by a Morgan stallion, and his dam is of racing descent.

While these great performers derive their superior action from their trotting ancestry, their capacity for that sustained extreme speed which carries them down the homestretches of the grand circuit the winner of many purses, is the result of the confluence in their veins of the stoutest strains of four-mile racing blood, and in not a few instances has a single strain of known Diomed blood, through one ancestor, been sufficient to overcome the inertia of their cold blood, and impart that unconquerable gameness which carries them to the front in races of many heats.

The sire and dam of the Norfolk trotter, imported Bellfounder, were retained in England, and their other descendants were interbred with others of like breeding. While their trotting action has been preserved, we have the result in the English Hackney of to day.

We bred Bellfounder and other sires of similar breeding to mares of racing descent, and by selection and training we have produced trotters whose speed surprises us and astonishes the world. We should continue to grade up as fast as it can be done while improving their trotting action, until we have eliminated from them the last drop of cold blood, and thus establish a race of thoroughbred trotters.—J. H. Roe in Horse Review.

To Cure Parasitic Skin Diseases.

The veterinary editor of the North British Agriculturist, in a practical article gives the following remedy for the cure of parasitic skin diseases, such as mange, scab, etc.:

Animal parasites infect the skin of every description of live stock, notably sheep, dogs and horses, more rarely cattle, cats and pigs. The most common are the several families of Acaridae which cause the varieties of scab and mange. These acari are round ovoid, are found adhering to the crusts, shed scales, and hair of infested subjects, and although not visible to the naked eye, are readily recognized by an ordinary pocket lens. The juvenile has three and the adult four.

When the parasites of whatever genus are in considerable numbers they make themselves felt in a few days on whatever animal they find lodgment. They produce reddening, papules or vesicles, with consequent irritation, itching and disquamation of the epidermis. They are believed to deposit an acrid secretion in the skin. Rubbing, scratching and biting follow, developing further inflammation. In young or weakly animals, especially when in filthy surroundings, the vexatious irritation of protracted serious attacks interferes with nutrition, retards growth, causes emaciation and even death.

Numerous agents are used for the destruction of these parasites. The several alkalies and their carbonates, bleaching powder and sulphur preparations have some slight effects, but more active remedies are requisite. A thorough washing of warm water, soft soap and carbonate of potash is, however, an important preliminary measure for getting rid of scurf, scabs and dirt, amidst which the acari shelter themselves. The clipping of the matted, coarse hair on infested spots in horses, and the shearing of scabby sheep, in like many facilitate the action of the parasiticide. Solutions of the coal tar or wood tar oils, such as carbolic acid, benzine, tar oil or creosote, in the proportion of one part to 20 or 30 of bland oil or other suitable solvent, furnish the most generally serviceable dressing. Decorations of tobacco, or solutions of one part of corrosive sublimate or of arsenic to 100 of water are also effectual, but require to be used with cautious discretion.

After cleansing the skin as recommended, a corrosive sublimate solution may be rubbed in with a brush, and next day a dressing of tar oil and soft soap. After an interval of three or four days, another soap and water scrubbing should be given, followed by the sublimate and tar oil dressings. In bad cases, a third crusade should be made against the invaders. The applications should be brushed thoroughly into every itching spot. But, in using the active, readily absorbed parasiticides, not more than one-third of the body should be dressed at one time.

Even when apparently cured, the patient for some weeks must be kept under observation, and the slightest roughness or itching of the skin will call for a round of the remedies. All live parasites may be destroyed, but some of the eggs are liable to escape, and he bated, again setting up the disease, and this is especially apt to occur with the soropotic mange. Strict isolation of infested subjects, and proper disinfection of their belonging, are of paramount importance in the curative treatment, and still more so in the preventive.

The Trotting Horse in Ancient Times.

The ancients did not look favorably upon the trotting gait; they preferred much the walk, the pace and the gallop. No horse at the trotting gait, is to be seen among the ancient pieces of statuary nor upon any Greek or Roman medals, nor among the horses represented upon the frieze of the Parthenon at Athens. Neither the Romans nor the Greeks made much use of that gait says a recent writer. They bad for the trotting horse such sweet appellations as cruciator, tormenter, succusator, which names showed how disagreeable the gait was esteemed to be by them. And indeed trotting is hardly pleasant for a rider without stirrups, and the ancients were not acquainted with that progress in modern saddlery. They rode bareback or in chariots mostly, the build of which, as well as their use and the roads they drove upon, was unsuited to the diagonal gait, which, on the contrary, is so well adapted to modern habits, roads and vehicles. However it may be, it is certain that the trotting gait is of recent use among nations. During the Middle Ages, when so much horseback riding was indulged in, we only find three gaits in use, to wit, walking, pacing and galloping. The walk was in use for drawing or carrying loads; the pace, when going on long journeys, and the gallop for rapid riding, war and equestrian festivals. In a medieval lay, the king questions his jester upon the qualities of his horse. "Is he a good walker; is he a good pacer?" The king is made to say, but never once: "Is he a good trotter?" "Is he a good pacer?" repeats the king, to which the jester makes answer: "He is no jail-bird." For, in the Romanic tongue, the word pacer (ambler) signifies both to pace and to steal. I have found in an old French author a piece of poetry entitled, "The Lay of the Trot," in which it is said that the good wives who will have been kind to their husbands in this world will surely ride pacers in the next, while those who may have been wicked wives will most certainly be provided with miserable trotting nags.

THE fast, but erratic half thoroughbred mare Ruby, 2:24½, by Clifton, dam by Leamington, won the $600 sweepstakes at Fleetwood, Tuesday, May 30th. She lost two heats by disorderly behavior to Jewel, but won the next three handily. Time of the five heats—2:27½, 2:25, 2:27½, 2:28, 2:30. M. H. Bernheimer won the members' race with Lightfoot, defeating G. H. Huber with gr g George Wilkes, Dr. C. H. Tucker's b g Dr. T., and L. A. Burkes b in Cora Cooper.

Electricity and Lameness.

In the road horse one of the most exasperating conditions is lameness, and in the track horse sprained ligaments, whether lame or not (sprained joints) and tendons. These are conditions which have very materially affected the usefulness and value of a great number of horses. In fact, many have been rendered entirely valueless by a sprain, which, could they have remained sound, would have been a credit to their sires and have yielded a profit to their owners.

The usual mode of treating these conditions, blistering and firing, although applicable in the past for want of a better one, can now be said to have become nearly obsolete in the hands of the more progressive veterinarian of the present day. There may be cases, but they are the exception, and not the rule, where such methods are applicable, writes T. D. Hinebanch, V. S., in the Trotter.

Electricity in our hands as a means of diagnosis and treatment has been successful beyond anticipation. We have now used it the past two years and also during 1887 and 1888, and met with excellent results. Previously it had worked to my satisfaction upon the loints of my haud, which had been repeatedly injured until relief could not be obtained in any other way. This led me to apply it to similar conditions in the horse, and the results have been entirely satisfactory.

The last two years I have used the McIntosh family faradic battery, which retails for $10. A size smaller will answer all purposes just as well. It must be understood that a horse is much more susceptible to a current than a man, and cannot stand one nearly as strong. The battery, which we use very frequently, has to be shut down as close as possible. It must also be remembered that the better a horse is bred the more he is susceptible to the current.

We apply it for two distinct purposes, one for diagnosis, the other, treatment.

For diagnosing wet the hair thoroughly. (For illustration we will suppose the soreness to be somewhere on the leg.) Wet the sponges which come with the battery, place one pole where you are almost certain that no lameness exists. Begin at the shoulder and move the other pole gradually over the muscles and tendons until the whole leg is gone over, being careful not to have the two poles opposite one another. When the pole which is moved comes in contact with a sore place the animal will become uneasy, move about, in fact show the same symptoms that are ordinarily shown when a sore spot is pressed upon. Electricity, however, will reach deeper parts than can be effected by external pressure. It will be found after a time that the animal will flinch only when the current is made to pass through the diseased place. When this is pretty well established apply a current almost directly through by placing one pole nearly opposite to the other and moving them both so as to maintain nearly the same position. It will be observed that while passing over healthy places there is no pain evinced, but as soon as sore or tender places are reached the animal will object to the current unless it be very weak. It is always best to have the current just as strong as the horse will keep quiet under when passed through healthy parts.

Some horses object to the noise which the battery makes. This can be avoided by using insulated wires twenty to fifty feet long, and placing the battery outside the stall where it cannot be heard.

By the above method we have succeeded in determining the seat of lameness where others and other methods have failed. One case we treated the past summer had been blistered repeatedly for a shoulder lameness by different veterinary surgeons. We located the lameness in the fetlock-joint by the use of the battery, and then verified our diagnosis by using cocaine. We injected cocaine over the nerve below the fetlock-joint, and the lameness still remained; then we injected above the joint, when the lameness disappeared. This demonstrated that it was between the two points of injection.

In treating sprains by the use of the current we have had the best results by allaying the active inflammation with warm water, applied by wrapping the parts loosely with small sacks or other light porous material and keeping them constantly wet with warm water an hour at a time twice per day for two or three days. If the lameness exists in the legs below the stifle or elbow a hot-water bag holding two or three quarts, such as is used in the sick room, applied to the parts and covered with an old piece of oil cloth or rubber coat to retain the heat is probably the best mode of application.

After the active inflammation has subsided wet the parts and apply the poles of the battery nearly opposite each other, passing a very mild current through them. Keep the current applied for about twenty or twenty-five minutes at a time once per day, thoroughly drying the leg afterwards. If the case be a chronic one, such as a thickened tendon, two applications per day will usually act more rapidly than a single application.

Care must be taken to have the current mild so that the horse will stand quietly while it is being applied. The treatment should be kept up for several weeks, or even a month.

Experiments on the same horse for strained back tendons of the front legs, where one was fired and blistered, and the other treated as above described, demonstrated that the use of electricity was attended by far better results than the other method. The enlargement on the leg where the current was used entirely disappeared, while the other remained considerably thickened and unsightly. The tendons which have been treated by electricity have stood hard work, while those treated by blistering and firing have not.

If those who have horses affected with strained tendons will follow the above method, which they can do at very little cost, they will be surprised at the effect of the treatment and be more than amply repaid for their trouble, besides saving a great deal of pain and discomfort to the animal. In fact, we do not believe that the owners of horses who thoroughly test this method will again resort to blistering and firing.

The ideas of horsemen as to what was necessary in a trotting horse have undergone a great many changes in the past few years. It used to be thought necessary for a young horse to have great knee action in order to make his chances good for becoming a fast horse. It was also thought an exceedingly promising sign when a colt would spread out and go so wide behind that you would "roll a barrel between the legs." These signs of a future trotter are no longer sought for. The trotter with surplus action forward is no longer in demand, and lue trotters are much preferred to the ones with the semi-circular action behind. The horse that moves straight ahead with the least possible waste action is the one now sought.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Food For Sick Horses.

F. T. McMahon, V. S., communicates to the Street Railway Review an interesting article on the treatment of sick horses.

Bran stands decidedly foremost as the food most generally in use for the invalid horse; it acts as a laxative, is frequently tempting to the appetite, and easy of digestion.

We induce him to take a warm bran mash, which comfortably distends the stomach, and satisfies any craving for food, thereby enabling him to lie down and rest his enfeebled system until repose restores its wonted vigor.

Is he incapacitated by lameness? A lower diet than that with which he is indulged when in full work is judicious, and bran is selected. Is it necessary to administer purgative medicine? A bran mash or two renders the bowels more susceptible of its action, a smaller portion of the drug is therefore required to produce the desired effect, and there is at the same time less risk of painful spasms accompanying its operation.

CHORISTER ran a mile and a sixteenth at Morris Park last Thursday in 1:48 1/2 easily, defeating Rainbow and other good ones.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous hox-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

Record and breeding considered, having what no other public stallion has on the Coast.—four producing dams

Nutwood Boy.

Sired by Nutwood, 2:15 3/4.

Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1125 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest living likeness to his celebrated sire, Nutwood, of any stallion in California. First dam Kitty Parkhurst, by Goldfinder, he by Imp. Belshazzar; second dam Old Kate, by Grey card, road son of Imp. Messenger. Nutwood Boy's opportunity in the stud has been of the most limited description. He is the sire of comparatively very few colts; several of his oldest are, however, showing speed enough to be candidates for the 2:30 list this season. He is a square, level-gaited trotter and with only five weeks track work a year ago, trotted a trial in 2:28; last half in 1:13. After his stud season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "fall circuit" and gaining him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $40 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $3 per month. Mares will be carefully handled, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, or complete circulars, address

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.) and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13 1/2, and two others Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Oransee in a race on the Bay District track, the second best of which was made in 2:31 1/2, the first in 2:52. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:59 1/2, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32 1/2 to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal-getter.

TERMS $50. Season to close August 1st. Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars address

THE UNRIVALLED WOODMANSEE

IMPROVED PATTERN, No. 25.

P. HAYDEN, Manufacturer,
Newark, N. J.

C. A. WILLIS, "Archibald" of the "Turf, Field and Farm," writes as follows:
Mr. P. HAYDEN, Newark, N. J.—
DEAR SIR: I am truly glad to see you advertising the merits of the Woodmansee Bit. For the past ten years I have never been without one or more of them, and have frequently given them to my friends and repurchased for myself.
I have purchased every new style of Bit since I was sixteen years old (forty-four now), and I find a large majority of those that are liberally advertised and largely sold are worthless. The Woodmansee is a long way the best bit for general use, either for single or double or other driving, and ought to be used by every owner of horses. My inclination prompts me to write you thus, hoping it may encourage you to place the merits of the Woodmansee Bit before the public. It is the King of Bits and deserves all that can be said of it. A pair of them on a team I was driving once saved my life in California. Yours truly,
C. A. WILLIS.

RESULTS OBTAINED AT KALAMAZOO FARM.
THE WELL-KNOWN
Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Splintings, and Spavins; there is nothing equals it, and for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any balsam ever used. Very respectfully yours, Kalamazoo, Mich. S. A. BROWNE & CO., Prop's.

Owner of Eole, St. Saviour, Eolist, etc., says:—
I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Cole's Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,
F. GERHARD,
Long Branch.

This scientific preparation is an absolute cure for all bony or callous lumps on horses, and is a more powerful absorbent than "firing," without creating the slightest blemish. After a few applications the excess-ence is so palpably reduced that even the sceptical frankly acknowledge that it is by far the most valuable outward remedy for horses ever invented.

after it has become ossified.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.
STAR, LANE CO., OREGON, Feb. 8th, 1892.
DE. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it had a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Curb of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly spavined, I tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your Ointment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary, the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or. S. Z. PALTON.

Training The Trotting Horse.
BY CHARLES MARVIN.
This great practical horse book is a handsome, three-hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.
Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."

OVERLAND PARK RACES.

Good Sport to Wind Up the Spring Meeting at the Colorado Metropolis.

SIXTH DAY—MONDAY, JUNE 5.

There was a fair attendance at Overland to-day and one or two races had a finish close enough to make them interesting. In the second race Dickson's entry opened in the books as a favorite, but later on sold at 3 to 1, with Lilly G. as second choice. In the next race the unlucky Sam Brown, with Wash King on his back, was a favorite, Lucy Clark being sold freely at 2 to 1. Cactus Blossom, Seaman's first mount since he arrived at Overland, surprised everybody by winning by a length in a whipping finish, the favorite being second. Ranger, from a fair start, finished third in the fourth race, the favorite again failing to score by two lengths. Jennie Schwartz got away third in the last and best race of the day. She crawled up to second place at the half, Thompson's Omen leading by half a length. Coming into the stretch Schwartz poked her nose in front and won by two lengths. The track was in splendid condition and the weather, though at times threatening, was all anyone could wish for. There was a marked improvement in getting the horses out and away without the long and vexatious delays of Saturday. The bookmaking at the track is about as poor as an exhibition of nerve as anything ever attempted in Colorado. A $10 bet will scare the hookies at Overland as much as a $1,000 bet would at Gravesend. If they have a cinch, however, you can, in luck, get a 1 to 10 bet occasionally. They should invest in a nerve tonic. Lowry left on Saturday night for Chicago. He was thoroughly disgusted, and will seek greener pastures in the windy city. Bob Austin is hilarious with delight over the past, present and future of Overland, but no one mistakes it for the real thing.

Dan Miller, the noted California horseman, was one of the visitors at the track. He has come East with a good string. He owns Charmion, Gordius, Relampago and Ida Glenn. With his stable are C. E. Trevathan's Genoa and C. W. Chappel's Peel, the latter of which was a crackerjack as a three-year-old, and is in good condition now. The horses have been sent on to St. Louis.

George H. Esterbrook's gelding, Dr. Tilton, was sent an exhibition quarter, and went it easily in 0:34. The entries in the first race were: A. D. Carson's Gray Andy, Covey & Stone's Jennie Thombs, George Tolletti's Consul Chief, O. L. Godfrey's Colonel D., Lewis Hineley's Josie C., D. G. Markle's Bill Sherwood, E. Horan's Pauline H.

Pauline H. sold favorite at $10 to $11 against the field. Jennie Thombs captured the first in 2:23, with Gray Andy second and Josie C. third. Jennie Thombs won the second heat easily in 2:26, with Josie C. second and Colonel D. third. Jennie Thombs took the third heat and the race. Josie C. was second and Gray Andy third. In the third heat drivers were changed on Pauline H., because the judges believed she was not being driven to win, but the mare had a bad knee and was not in condition.

SUMMARY.

Trotting—Purse $100; 2:37 class.
Covey & Stone's b m Jennie Thombs, by Senator..... 1 1 1

The second race was a five-furlong dash for a purse of $200. Laniard and Maelstrom, S. Z. Dickson's entry, were coupled in the betting. The tip was out on Charley R., and he was played hard at 1 to 2. At the start Maelstrom went out to set the running. Lilly G. was second. Lilly G. drew away in the stretch and won by two lengths. Laniard was second, and Charlie R., who had come up from the hunch, was a close third. Time, 1:04.

SUMMARY.

Second race, running, five furlongs.

Won by three lengths, two lengths between second and third. Post betting—Charlie R., 1 to 2; Lilly G., 6 to 5; Dickson's entry, 5 to 1; Hubert, 119 (Bruce), 10 to 1.

The third race was a dash of six furlongs, for a purse of $200. At the drop of the flag Lucy Clark got away in the lead, with The Judge second and Cactus Blossom well up in third place. Before the first quarter of a mile had been covered Cactus Blossom had moved up and was leading by half a length. The Judge was at his saddle girths, with Lucy Clark hack in third place. The horses raced past the half-pole in the same order. Coming into the stretch Cactus Blossom still maintained his lead, with the others close behind. Cactus Blossom passed the wire a winner by a length. The Judge was second, two lengths in front of Silverman, who had beaten Lucy Clark out for the place. Time, 1:13½.

SUMMARY.

Third race, running, to sell, purse $200, for horses that had started and not won at this meeting. Six furlongs.

Won by a length, two lengths between second and third. Post betting—Cactus Blossom, 15 to 1; The Judge, even money; Silverman, 20 to 1; Lucy Clark 105 (Parks), Sam Brown 106 (King), also started.

The fourth was a selling race for horses that had not run first or second during the meeting. The distance was four and one-half furlongs. Investigator got off first, with Ben Harrison, the favorite, in second place, and Ranger third. In the first spurt Ranger came to the front and was leading by a length at the quarter, with Ben Harrison second and Rebecca third. Coming through the homestretch Ben Harrison was coming strong under the whip, and the crowd had begun to shout "Harrison wins!" Before reaching the eighth pole, the horses swerved away out to the middle of the track, and Ranger won by three good lengths. Harrison got the place by two lengths from Investigator. Time, 0:58.

SUMMARY.

Fourth race, selling, for horses that had started and not run first or second at the meeting, four and one-half furlongs.
San Angelo Stable's eb g Ranger, 3, by Stranger, dam unknown, 91 lbs..... Locklear 1

The last event on the card was a selling race of seven furlongs for a $200 purse, for three-year-olds and upwards. The only thing noticeable about the betting was a plunge on W. L. Thompson's Omen, an aged mare who had never started in a race before. She opened in the books at 10 to 1 and was hacked down to 4 to 1. When the flag fell Omen was off in the lead with that redoubtable skate, John Winfield, second and Jennie Schwartz, the favorite, third. Omen led by half a length at the quarter. Jennie Schwartz was second and Trooper third. Winfield had been outfooted in so short a run and was already trailing in the rear. At the half Jennie Schwartz had gone to the front, with Omen close on second place and Trooper third. The positions were unchanged into the stretch. Jennie Schwartz won by two lengths. Trooper finished second four lengths in front of Omen. Razzle Dazzle was fourth and Winfield last. Time, 1:33½.

SUMMARY.

Fifth race, selling, purse $200, for three-year-olds, seven furlongs.

Won by two lengths. Four lengths between second and third. Post betting—Jennie Schwartz, even money; Trooper, 8 to 1; Omen 4 to 1. Razzle Dazzle, 108 (Crowley), even money, and John Winfield 107 (Graves), 5 to 1, also ran.

SEVENTH DAY—TUESDAY, JUNE 6TH.

The races to-day were the most interesting of the meeting thus far. The fact that all were running events increased the attendance as well as the interest. The day was as perfect as could be wished for, and this fact, together with the close finishes, made it a good all-round day of enjoyment. There were more ladies out than on any previous afternoon, except on Decoration day. The feature of the day was the magnificent victory of Lela in a short distance race and the hot chase Bob Austin made for first place in the final.

The first event was a selling race for a purse of $200, five and one-half furlongs. Al Watts delayed the start a quarter of an hour by his usual antics at the post. When the flag finally dropped Viceroy was first, Hal Fisher second and A. C. Tucker third. Al Watts had tired the starter out and was given the worst of it. He was two lengths behind the hunch in the breakaway. But he went right out to run, and at the quarter was leading by half a length with Hal Fisher second and Little Nell third. When the horses had got straightened out in the home stretch, Al Watts still led the way, Hal Fisher second and Viola Bell a bare third. The jockeys rode hard through the stretch. Hal Fisher came strong without being touched. He and Watts were neck and neck at the eighth pole. King gave Fisher a cut or two with the whip and he responded gallantly. The finish was exciting. Hal Fisher won by a neck, with Al Watts a head in front of Baychester, Viola Belle was fourth, A. C. Tucker fifth, Viceroy sixth and Little Nell last. Time, 1:09½.

SUMMARY.

First race, selling, five and one-half furlongs, for 3-year-olds and upwards.
O. G. Johnson's bl h Hal Fisher, aged, by Buck Walton—Alice, 111 pounds..... King 1
Ryan Bros.' cb h Al Watts, 4, by Pantaloon—Floer, 125 pounds..... Robinson 2
Al Shore's b h Baychester, 6, by Luke Blackburn—Silver Maid, 108 pounds..... Fox 3

Won by a neck. A head between the second and third horses. Post betting—Hal Fisher, 2 to 1; Al Watts, 2 to 1, and Baychester, 4 to 1; Viola Belle, 109 (Lyons), 2 to 1; Viceroy, 108 (Graves), 6 to 1; A. C. Tucker, 102 (Thompson), 10 to 1; and Little Nell, 102 (Neal), 10 to 1, also started.

The second race was a dash of five and one-half furlongs, for two-year-olds. Alpha got off in the lead, with Tom Parks second and Thread third. After the quarter had been covered, Thread had got to the lead. Alpha was second, two lengths away, and Tom Parks was third. Into the stretch L. G. S. led by a length with Alpha second and Wall Paper third. There was a jumble up in the run through the stretch. Alpha won by two lengths, Tom Parks was second, five lengths in front of Thread. Wall Paper was fourth and L. G. S. fifth. Time, 0:57½.

SUMMARY.

Second race, for 2-year-olds, four and one-half furlongs.
Ryan Bros.' ch c Alpha, by Imported Keene—Gama, 108 pounds..... Robinson 1
San Angelo Stables' b c Tom Parks by Veutus, dam unknown, 108 pounds..... Locklear 2
Mesquite Stables' b c Thread by Mount d'Or—Nellie Saunders, 108 pounds..... Nixon 3

Won by two lengths. Five lengths between second and third. Post betting—Alpha, 4 to 5; Tom Parks, 5 to 2; Thread 103 (Nixon), coupled with Wall Paper 105 (Lyons), 3 to 1; and L. G. S. 108 (Seaman), also started.

The third race was a three-furlong dash, for all ages. There were only six entries, but the horses, especially Lela, behaved badly at the post, and took half an hour to get them off. When at last the red hunting was struck downward, Mountain Maid and Sam Jones were away in the lead, with an advantage of nearly four lengths. Sam Jones led at the quarter with Mountain Maid second and Parole third. The positions were the same when the horses came into the stretch. Coming toward the wire Lela, which had by all odds the worst of the start, shot through the bunch under the whip. She won in a driving finish by half a length from Sam Jones, who was two lengths in front of Parole.

SUMMARY.

Third race, three furlongs, for all ages, purse $150.
San Angelo Stable's b f Lela, 3 years, by Hickory Jim—unknown, 105 pounds..... Lyons 1
J. M. Shields' blk g Sam Jones, aged, by Black Nick, 124 pounds..... Neal 2
Reed, Webb & Co.'s ch g Parole, aged, sire and dam unknown, 124 pounds..... Guyette 3
Time, 0:31½.

Won by half a length, two lengths between second and third. Post betting—Lela 3 to 2, Sam Jones 2 to 1, Parole 6 to 5, Mountain Maid, 119 (Neil), 4 to 1; Printer, 124 (Graves), 5 to 1; Country Girl, 119 (Denny), 10 to 1.

Two Great Horses.

In the advertisement columns appears the notice for the private sale of the two recently imported Australian horses, Cleveden and Stromboli. These horses have been brought over by Mr. Bruce Lowe, solely with a view of giving American breeders an opportunity of securing some of the Chester blood, which is very justly classed as the best strain in Australia.

When the late Hon. James White took Chester off the turf with the intention of forming a racing stud, some little cherub must have sat up aloft and watched over his fortunes, because it does not always follow that a brilliant race horse is going to prove a success at the stud, as witness the famous Gladiateur, Peter, Joe Daniels, Harry Bassett, Aristides and scores of cases to the contrary. During the ten years that Chester did service at the stud for his late lamented master, his stock won 94 races, including 8 classic races, value $257,000. Since the death of Mr. White, Chester's stock have been large winners. Among the most prominent are Stromboli, A. J. C. Derby, Leger, also V. E. C. Derby. Autonomy, a very brilliant colt, winner of many races under high weights, Trieste, the flying sister to Titan (the almost unbeaten 2-year-old gelding, sold for $23,000 at break up of stables) and many others.

It will be seen, in referring again to the advertisement, that Cleveden is a full brother to Chester. He was so handsome as a yearling that his breeder, Hon. E. K. Cox, decided to retain him as a successor to his great sire, Yattendon, consequently the colt was bought in at $6,000. He never raced, though proved to be better than "Narina," the winner of the Maribyrnong Plate, the middle Park Plate of Australia. Mr. Lowe is in possession of a letter from Mr. Cox, Jr., to the effect that this horse received an injury to his hind foot from a splinter, and this completely crippled him till he was six years old, and during this time the stud was broken up. The horse really got no thoroughbred mares until the last 4 years, and the oldest of his stock which have faced the starter in Australia, 1 to 3 years, viz., Affiance, was nut of a mare of obscure pedigree. This horse won three races at 2 and 3 years—3 seconds and four thirds in good company.

The only other horse which has started at Randwick is Crighton, three years, won A. J. C. Maiden Stakes, one and one-half miles in 2:40, beating a good field, and second to the brilliant three-year-old filly Trieste, 124 pounds, the colt 127 pounds, Blarney Stone, three years (brother to the champion Marvel), 122 pounds, third. This was in second Biennial Stakes, one and one-fourth mile.

Out of three-quarter bred mares Cleveden sired several winners of amateur races, and one of these colts, out of a common ranch mare bought for $25, won three races, two seconds and two thirds, in seven starts.

Stromboli, four years, by Chester, from Etna, by Maribyrnong, second dam The Alpaca, by imp. Kingston, etc. Stromboli had the misfortune when on the turf to meet the very brilliant colt Strathmore, to whom he ran second in some of the big two-year-old and classic races. He managed, however, as a two-year-old, to pull off the rich A. J. C. Produce Stakes and V. E. C. Produce Stake. At three years he won the A. J. C. Derby, one and one-half miles, 122 pounds, also the Hawkesbury Guineas, one mile, for three-year-olds. He ran second to La Tosca for the A. J. C. St. Leger, but, two days after, beat her (giving weight) and a big field handsomely in the Sidney Gold Cup, two miles, carrying 122 pounds, in the very fast time of 73:32.

This horse comes from a remarkable family, inasmuch as for three generations, viz., his dam Etna, her dam, The Alpaca, and her dam, Lilla, have each thrown a Derby winner. This is probably without parallel in the stud books of any nation. Lilla when mated with Yattendon produced Javelin, A. J. C. Derby winner, also Commodore, A. J. C. Leger winner. Her daughter The Alpaca, by imp. Kingston threw a colt, Woodlands, and the set-to between her and Chester for the A. J. C. Derby at Randwick, Sydney, was a sight worth remembering; but Woodlands outpaced him and won by a half length. Woodlands won many good races afterwards. He was by Maribyrnong, and had he lived would have made a great sire, his conformation and gameness being so good. Javelin went to New Zealand and sired a lot of winners, notably Cinderella, the conqueror of that first-class horse Nelson at weight for age in Auckland, besides a score of sprinting races in some cases not handicapped reaching 140 pounds. It will be seen therefore that the family has been a very consistent one—and although the pedigree is not traceable beyond the Tros mare owing to the absence of any stud book in those days, the family is looked up and accepted as one of the most fashionable—indeed it would be impossible to purchase one of the fillies from the Kirkham stud. The Alpaca had eight foals from various sires, all of them winners.

Both of these sires will be particularly valuable as outcross for our choicest matrons. In Australia the characteristic of this family is their mating successfully with any strains of blood. The Colonial records will show that Chester, Yattendon and his sire, Sir Hercules, got racehorses from all kinds of blood lines.

Training Horses.

Now that the training season is at hand it will not be out of the way to call the attention of the younger generation of drivers to the fact, says the Breeders' Gazette, that nearly every sensible man who has investigated the subject has reached the conclusion that in the case of a sound horse the practice of bandaging the legs after a heat or during a workout is productive of harm in most cases, and in any event can not do the animal any good. One by one the old-fashioned ideas about training horses that obtained for so many years are losing their sway, and the preparation of animals for a campaign is conducted on a common-sense basis instead of by a rigid adherence to rules formulated a couple of decades ago, and which in the line of recent developments are not at all applicable to the case in hand. It is not so many years ago that the practice of using sweat-hoods on horses was an almost universal one, and yet at the present time the intelligent driver who has a sweat-hood in his outfit is looked upon as being a little too much wedded to the old fogyism to stand the progress of modern ideas regarding the preparation of a trotter or pacer. It is not possible in the case of a sound horse to point out one good effect which can be produced by the use of a hood, and even with animals that have a thickening of the windpipe it is beyond the ken of most people to discover in what particular the application of a hood will clear the obstructed passages. There would be just as much sense in putting a hood on a horse's back as on his neck. The idea used to be prevalent that it was the production of profuse perspiration that caused flesh to disappear from a horse whose carcass was overloaded with fat and muscle to take its place, but when somebody asked how much fat could be gotten out of a barrel of perspiration it began to dawn upon a large percentage of trainers that the sweating had primarily nothing to do with the destruction of the fatty tissue. That is accomplished by the exercise or work which a horse is given, and the perspiration is simply an adjunct and result of such exercise. Fat men sweat profusely when they do not take any exercise, if the weather be warm, and yet every man who is overburdened with flesh knows well enough that he can put on more fat by drinking one glass of water than he can take off by a day of perspiring. The same line of argument holds good in relation to the use of sweat hoods as applicable to the bandaging of horses' legs. If a trotter has been given a fast mile or jogged until he is leg-weary the first thing that an ignorant rubber, under the tutelage of a driver whose intellect is equally clouded by the adherence to custom, does, is to wrap around the horse's legs a series of layers of flannel which have been wet in water or some liniment, and he generally finishes the job by tying them tightly. The manner in which this bandage is put on, fold after fold, makes it a physical impossibility for the blood to circulate in the limbs of that horse as it should, and there is also another evil result produced through the inability of skin to throw off such excretion as would naturally be disposed of in that manner with the leg left alone. It is well enough when a horse has been given severe work to hand-rub each leg a few times, but after this is done it is only common sense and humanity to let the limbs alone. Another practice that is applied by a good many of the non-thinking and unprogressive set of trainers is that of walking a horse between heats. In a majority of cases no more idiotic proceeding could be imagined. If a horse is tired, a long walk after a heat is the last thing on earth that he wants, or that will do him any good. Some men argue that unless a horse is walked around he will catch cold, but such people do not know what they are talking about, and oracular utterances are not based on any scientific knowledge concerning the horse and his anatomy. A trotter which comes in from the track perspiring profusely after a hard drive would not, on any ordinary summer, catch cold if he were left entirely alone for twenty minutes; and any doctor will testify to the truth of this proposition. Instead of being left alone, however, the horse is generally loaded with blankets, wrapped, bandaged, rubbed and then walked until it is time for him to trot another heat, nearly everything that has been done to him tending to worry, annoy and tire the animal instead of resting and refreshing him. Another class of people who train horses as their grandfathers did are very particular that only a swallow or so of water shall be given a distressed horse, and that anything in the way of food should be put into his stomach during the progress of a race would to them seem suicidal. On the other hand, some people who are naturally intelligent and who are also willing to learn as they go along, find that in the case of most horses a generous allowance of oatmeal gruel between heats is of the utmost value. There are other points that could be developed at length did space permit, but in a general way it may be said that the men who have the greatest success in training trotters and bringing out their speed are those whose methods are conducted on a basis of common sense.

Good Advice.

If you have a good horse and are disposed to speculate a little in auction pools, hack your own horse to win and keep out of jobs. If you feel satisfied that your horse is not good enough to win in the field with which he has to contend, but can secure a share of the premiums, drive him to win if he can. If, under the latter circumstances, you have friends disposed to hack your horse tell them the situation frankly. Nine times out of ten it pays better to go straight. Some of the jobs which promised the greatest results and seemed likely to succeed beyond peradventure have proved the most disastrous. There has been more good money lost to those who have thought they had a sure thing cooked up than has been won. The man who has a good horse and goes straight comes off better in the end. It is a good thing not to let every one know just how good your horse is. You are out for business, and the man who gives his business away in any department of trade is a fool, says the Newark Call.

Many years ago there was a great meeting at a Western city. The night before one of the races was to come off a job was cooked up, and one horse that was considered of little account left out of the deal. The race was started and the neglected party stepped off the first heat with such disgusting ease that the conspirators all made a break for the box to save themselves. It was no use, however, the mischief was done. No bids could be got with all the persuasion used. The gang then wanted to take the outside party in, but he refused absolutely to have anything to do with them. He stepped off the race and pocketed his gains. On the way to the stable after the last heat he met a trotting horse driver. The latter said: "I did well by you to-day and have $1,200 to the good. You drove a square race and beat the gang. I will let you into the secret. Back my horse to-morrow in the 2:40 class. Take my money and put it all on him. It's a surer thing than you had to-day." The first named owner did as he was told. He bought every pool sold on that particular horse. The horse won in three straight heats, driven from wire to wire, and nearly $11,000 was the result of the straight drive.

MR. PIERCE S. MILLIMAN, a well-known, old-time horseman, died at his home, Argyle, Washington county, N. Y., on Wednesday, May 24, 1893, aged 75 years. He will be remembered as the breeder of Bellfounder 62, better known as Milliman's Bellfounder. Mr. Milliman sold Bellfounder to parties in the west for $5,000, through the agency of Wm. McDonald, father of the well-known driver, A. P. McDonald. This horse died at Walla Walla, Wash., in 1877, and is the sire of nine trotters and seven dams of eleven trotters in the 2:30 list. For his day he was a fast horse, having trotted the ice in 2:29, and with the same opportunities in training, fast tracks and light vehicles would have taken a fast record. The fastest of his descendants is Judge Davis, 2:18½, and his blood is found in other staunch campaigners, but, with his lack of access to well-bred mares, he never will attain the prominence he merited.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SANTA ROSA, June 12.—Baseball is all the rage here again. The recent defeats of the Santa Rosa team has only added interest to the contests here. An unbroken record of defeats or victories is not conducive to a healthy interest, and so our boys manage to diversify matters for their own and the public good.

R. L. Crooks has a Skinner colt out of one of Stanford's mares that the boys insist is a "peach." The dam has a two-mile record of 5:15, and her blood, blended with that of Silas Skinner, could hardly bring forth aught but a fine foal. Mr. Crooks has a colt by Saladin, out of a good mare which is well spoken of. He also has a Lancelot colt of great promise. One of his latest acquisitions is the horse Abha Rega, lately owned by John Pender. This was a stallion, but he was changed and is now one of a pair of very stylish roadsters owned by the Mark West horseman. Mr. Crooks, by securing a number of good mares, is laying the foundation for a good stock farm. He has not yet secured a stallion. He will take his time, and when he finds one that just suits him he will have a premier for the farm.

Good reports come from the Petaluma track in regard to the work of the Santa Rosa horses in training there. Hillman has the stout-hearted little mare Ella H. and another good one in his string there. DeTurk's horses are also doing very well, and are going pretty fast. It would not be surprising if some very fast time is made by these Sonoma county horses this season.

Superintendent Thomas Bonner, of Pierce Bros.' Stock Farm, is about well again. He received a terrific jolt the time he had his accident a few days ago, and grave fears were entertained for a day in regard to his condition, but, to the joy of all his friends, he will soon be "himself again." His injury was almost identical with that which nearly cost Jim Dustin his life on the same track a few years ago. The very day Mr. Bonner's accident occurred he received word from the East that he had fallen heir to a snug portion of a big estate, his share reaching nearly $50,000. He will be likely to remember that eventful day for two reasons, it is surmised.

They say that Jerome, the handsome black son of Montana Wilkes, and full brother of Florida, 2:18½, is going very fast this year. Her is owned by Dr. Long and is being driven by Andy Compton, one of the most careful horsemen in the county. Jerome is a magnificent fellow, and has a good future.

Dan P. Carter's fine Lancelot mare has an illustrious colt he thinks is sure to become hot stuff if he lives. Dan is steadily gravitating toward the point where the boys will call him a sport, if we mistake not.

F. J. Yondle likes a good horse as well as anybody in this town, and he has lately purchased one that goes through the air at a slashing gait. M. J. Streining is another man who revels in the delight of owning some good horseflesh. The blacks he purchased at Pierce Bros.' sale, one three and the other four, make a handsome pair and are enough to make anybody wish he owned them.

Mr. Allen, of San Francisco, owner of the fine Silver Bow trotter Mart Rollins is training, came up to see how it is going last Saturday.

Daly, 2:15, is in great demand here this year, and also in other parts of the State. Last week a Noonday filly and a filly by Dexter Prince were brought here to be stunted to him.

John Pender left Thursday for Oregon with his string of horses. He shipped to Portland by water. His first races are at Vancouver, Washington, and from there he goes to Portland to start his horses. In his string are Rustic King, Graceful George, the pacer, Ida D., by Doncaster, a three-year-old Mortimer filly and a five-year-old by Dexter Prince. We shall keep an eye on some of these horses for we all know that Pender knows how to drive in a race.

Prof. Bean, of San Francisco, has a big boxing class here among our fellows who desire to learn how to use their fists and to keep in better form. The appearance of Champion Jim Corbett here helped to arouse considerable interest in the manly art. But Corbett did not receive the big ovation here that greeted the first appearance of the erstwhile mighty champion, Sullivan.

Nearly twelve hundred people came here from Petaluma Sunday, to see the great game between the club of that city and the Santa Rosa ball players. Up to that game the two teams were even on the number of games one and each had won a game from the other. There were nearly 2,500 people on the grounds, and the excitement toward the close of the game was intense. Up to the third inning the Santa Rosa team had not scored and the game stood 3 to 0 in favor of Petaluma. The home team rallied, and at the close of the ninth inning the score was 6 to 6. The tenth inning was played and by losing the ball one time the Santa Rosa players gave the game to the visitors by one run. Men howled themselves hoarse over the result—that is, men from Petaluma. It was the best game ever played on the grounds, and both clubs covered themselves with glory.

One of the cleverest colts owned in this town is the Nutwood colt of John M. Dickson. He is a handsome fellow, large, of good bone and has a lofty way of traveling that makes him a lively competitor for horses of his age. He has been driven a good deal in single and double harness, and Mr. Dickson is justly proud of him. He will make him an elegant family driver.

Bicycle riding has received a powerful impetus here recently. There are hundreds of riders and some of them are very swift. At the coming Fourth of July celebration there will be a number of races for amateurs and professionals, and some very exciting sport is expected. PUBLIS.

E. T. BEDFORD'S seven-year-old black gelding Gillette, 2:11½, by Cyclone, trotted an exhibition mile at the half-mile track of the Parkway (N. J.) Driving Club Tuesday, May 30th, in 2:14½. This is the fastest mile in harness trotted to date, this season, and comes within three seconds of the half mile record made last year by Nelson, 2:10.

H. C. Hubbard, Hartford, Ct., writes: I removed and cured a curb in ten days with your "Absorbine" without removing the hair or leaving a blemish. It removed the inflammation at once. Cannot recommend it too highly.

THE FARM.

Old Dobbin.

I see old Dobbin through the fence. How weak he looks, and old! His hair is falling off in spots; he feels the damp and cold; He hangs his head; his step is slow; 'tis plain enough to see His thirty years are more to him than fifty are to me.

He shall not work another job—not that he would complain; But from this hour he ne'er shall know the touch of whip or rein. Of all the horses on the farm he's been the very best, I should have thought of it before, but now he shall have rest.

I call to my mind the colt he was, and how I broke him in. Whew! how he kicked and pranced and plunged: 'twas doubtful which would win. But I was young as well as he and would not be denied, And since he's been as safe a nag as man would wish to ride.

Then in my happy courting days he knew the very night That I would swing the stable door and greet him with delight. He knew the girl I loved was waiting far away and fair, He seemed to say, " 'Twill not be long before I take you there! "

Then on my wedding day he stood with others at the church. No doubt he thought for just that once I left him in the lurch. One face, one form, that day of days, was all that I could see. I did not think of Dobbin then, whatever he thought of me.

And when the years had brought their grief, and I learned joy's reverse, He drew the little ones and me behind the gloomy hearse. I cannot say that he divined how lonely was my lot, But since he has not been the same; I know that I have not!

And so through gladness and through grief old Dobbin has been near. No wonder that he looks so old when I have grown so serene. I know full well that fifty years is youth to many men, 'Tis not the years, but that my heart has reached three score and ten!

So while I live his falling life shall naught but comfort know. Old Dobbin, as I said at first, shall ne'er feel rein or blow. The best of oats, the sweetest hay, the field to wander free Shall all be his—a poor return for all he's been to me!

Milk Fever.

Every cow-keeper will regard with interest all recorded experience concerning the dreaded disease which invariably attacks the best cows rather than the poorest. One London veterinarian has recorded a series of observations covering several thousand cows, when it was noted that allowing the calf to run with the mother about four days covering the milk fever period, and in the meantime not allowing the udder to be milked clean, had resulted in a marked exemption from milk fever. The theory was that the calf never empties the udder completely for several days, and that such practice prevents a chill and nervous collapse. We have always believed that there was some valuable truth in this view of the case. Observation confirms this statement by the further fact that when calves run with their mothers, even if the latter are heavy milkers, there is almost complete exemption from milk fever. Consequently it has been our practice to keep the calf with the cow four days, and in that time not to milk the udder clean.

Professor McConnell, of England, combines this treatment with the administration of chloral hydrate and bromide of potassium in the following proportion:

R—Chloral hydrat. a. ss, oz.
Potass. bromid. xxv. oz.
Aona, ad f.

The method of administering the above mixture is to give five wine glassfulls with three pounds of molasses or syrup, and two hours afterwards half the quantity with one pint of syrup, the latter dose repeated if necessary every four hours afterward.

In diseases of this kind prevention is often more important than cure. Professor McConnell gives the following advice: "When there is no reason to suspect an attack, feed sparingly for some weeks prior to the calving, and, if circumstances permit, allow plenty of exercise. If the cow be at grass, on no account change entirely on a dry food before parturition, otherwise a disease much more serious (at this critical period) may supervene, viz., so called "stomach staggers." Should the udder before calving be painfully distended occasionally draw off a little but never the whole of the milk. After calving, if at all practicable, allow the calf to run with and suck the dam for three days; and where this is not practicable, then imitate as closely as possible the calf's method of emptying the udder for at least two days, by frequently drawing off a portion but never the whole of the milk. In proof of the calf being allowed to suck being an excellent preventive, I may state that there are in this district a great many Galloway cows whose calves are always allowed to suck, and that during nearly twenty years' practice I have known only two of that breed attacked with 'milk fever,' and in both cases their calves were dead at birth."

He claims that his formula has saved over sixty per cent. of the cases attacked, while his system of prevention has rendered the disease almost unknown in the herds where it has been faithfully followed.

Curing a Cow When Choked.

Having noticed in your paper several methods of removing an apple or potato from a cow's throat, I will give my method which, although very simple, is nevertheless effectual. When a cow becomes choked she tries to remove the obstruction by swallowing. By so doing she forces the air past the apple, which acts like the valve of a pump and death ensues from bloating. To prevent this take a piece of wood about a foot long and something like two inches in diameter, fasten a cord to each end of it and put the stick in the cow's mouth. The ends of the cords should then be tied together on top of the cow's head, and thus the stick will be held in the mouth as a horse's bit is held. This arrangement prevents the cow from closing her mouth and hence from swallowing, since, in order to swallow, her mouth must be closed or she can not press air past the obstruction.

Let the stick remain in the mouth an hour or two and the apple will be softened and digested as if it were in the stomach; as soon as the apple is partially digested its size will be reduced so that it will pass down into the stomach. After a time remove the stick, and your cow is well.

As you drive cows along the road in the fall they are certain to get a greater or less number of apples. For such instances, the remedy mentioned above is very convenient. Fasten a stick in her mouth as I have described; you can then drive along the same. When you think enough time has been allowed for digestion of the apple, remove the stick and you will find a cure has been effected.—Norman Brown in Hoard's Dairyman.

The Yerba Buena Herd of Jerseys.

Yerba Buena Ranch is situated in Santa Clara County, near San Jose, Cal. The proprietor, Henry Pierce, of San Francisco, has given his attention for twenty years to the care and improvement of his herd of registered Jerseys connected with the ranch. He has made three journeys to the Isle of Jersey, and spent thousands of dollars to get the very best. He shipped forty of his own choice via Cape Horn, and from these forty besides those he selected among the best importers of the East he has sold over 300 head. He has a herd in East Baldwin, Maine, composed of representatives of the best strains, and this herd holds as high a place among the many exhibitors east of the Mississippi as the Yerba Buena herd has earned west of it.

The herd now numbers about one hundred, and contains descendants of the famous Jersey Belle of Scituate, who gave 25 pounds 3 ounces of butter in a week and over 700 lbs in a year; of Coomassie, the celebrated prize cow of the islands, seven of whose progeny sold at auction in 1885, in New York, for an average of $3,000 per head. One of these was in that year spoken of in the San Francisco Bulletin as follows: "Mrs. Samuel M. Shoemaker has lost by death from inflammation of the lungs the world-renowned cow, Princess 2d, which astonished the world by giving in seven days a yield of 46 lbs., 12½ ozs. of butter. This test of her butter qualities was completed April 10, 1885. About two years ago Mrs. Shoemaker refused $25,000 for her. She was eight years and six months old when she died. She was an imported cow and was bought at auction in New York for $4,800. She was of the celebrated Coomassie strain. Her last calf was sold during an absence from home of Mrs. Shoemaker, for $10,000, but the sale did not stand, Mrs. Shoemaker refusing to ratify it on her return." And of Farmer's Glory, the noted hull who brought at a recent sale $3,250; Rioter, Alneha, Stoke Pogis, Victor Hugo.

To those who are unacquainted with the qualities of the Jersey, a brief account of their native land and the surroundings and causes which have produced and maintained the breeds, and of some of the advantages claimed for them in comparison with cattle of other blood, may be of interest.

They are all imported or descended from animals imported from the island of Jersey, situated in the English Channel, off the coast of France, and belonging to Great Britain, Jersey is 40,000 acres in area and is wonderfully productive; and with a genial climate almost the year round, the crops are very abundant. The population is about in the ratio of two persons to every acre. As long ago as 1879 a law was passed prohibiting the importation of any other breed into the island of Jersey, and for over a century the farmers have been breeding these animals as a distinct race. As a result, we find the Jersey of to-day a thoroughbred dairy animal, combining beauty of form and color with the highest excellence as a butter-yielder. The well-known excellent quality of their butter, and its superior quality to a given amount of cream, is due to this fact of line breeding, to produce an animal which should supply the needs of a small, thickly populated country.

Many people are loth to keep a cow, because, as they think, they have no room for so large an animal. It is an erroneous impression, for if a person has room for a shed they have room for a cow, it having been established beyond question that a cow is one of the animals which does not need exercise to stimulate digestion. In the large dairy districts of France and Lombardy cows never leave their stalls, but are kept tied up in the year round, and their food brought to them. The Jersey is particularly adapted to such treatment, for she is never allowed to range the pastures of her native island, but is tethered, and changed but twice a day, getting comparatively no exercise and needing none; thus the food which she eats, instead of going to supply waste of tissue caused by exercise, stimulates the milk-secreting glands, and increases the flow and the quality.

Again, a Jersey, from her smaller size, consumes less; 25 pounds of hay at 12½ cents, 12½ cents worth of barley or meal will feed a cow during one day, who will yield one pound of butter worth 50 cents, and keep a small family in cream and milk besides. With these figures, a man need not be much of a mathematician to see that there is great benefit in keeping a Jersey beyond having pure milk and cream.

Among the reasons which have gained the Jersey fame and popularity may be stated the following:

First. The Jerseys are a thoroughbred and well-established race. As far as there is anything of value in systematic breeding with a particular end in view, purity of blood, a long line of worthy ancestors, and favorable conditions with respect to food and climate, the Jerseys compare favorably with any and all other breeds.

Second. They possess as fully as any breed the power of transmitting their desirable qualities to their offspring. They are thoroughly responsive to in-and-in breeding, when intelligently carried on for the purpose of intensifying and perpetuating their peculiar powers as butter-producers. The leading Jersey cows in America to-day show in their pedigree much close breeding among their ancestors, and they are better than any of their ancestors.

Third. Having smaller bodies than any of the other leading breeds, they require less food to build up and develop these bodies while they are growing, and they require less food for the repairs of their bodies when they have reached their full size.

Fourth. They come into profit at least a year earlier than other breeds, thus making a saving to their owners of a year's food, handling and housing. This is no small item, considering the labor, the expense and the risk attending the younger years of valuable stock.

Fifth. They have shown a power unequalled by any other breed of adapting themselves to the various climates and to the varieties of foods of all parts of the United States.

Sixth. No cattle in this country are more quiet, gentle, hardy, prolific or long-lived.

Seventh. They are the most persistent milkers of any breed. They seldom go dry for more than six weeks. Many instances are on record of cows giving half a dozen calves in as many years without ever ceasing to give a good yield of milk.

Eighth. They make more butter from a given amount of feed than the cows of any other breed. Two pounds and a quarter of butter a day is not an uncommon yield for a cow in the winter, receiving a dozen pounds of dry hay and two pounds of corn meal, mixed with two pounds of wheat shorts.

Ninth. They will make more butter in twelve running months than will the cows of any other breed. Several cows in this country made over 500 pounds of butter, and none of these cows are believed to have yet reached the full limit of their powers. Records for herds of 300, 350 and 400 pounds per cow are to be found in many States.

Tenth. Their butter has a higher color in winter, as well as in summer, than that of any other breed except the Guernsey.

Eleventh. The milk, the cream and the butter of the Jersey has a much richer taste, and a more lively and agreeable flavor at all times of the year than that of any other breed.

Twelfth. The butter of this breed, in texture and grain, has no equal. Its firmness and freedom from salve character in the heat of summer are particularly noticeable.

Thirteenth. There is no breed which has been crossed upon the common stock of the United States with more immediate and satisfactory results. It is an important fact in cross-breeding that the most favorable results are obtained where the bull belongs to a race whose bodies are smaller than are those of the race to which the cow is allied, and the same is true where the male represents a race older and better established than that to which the female belongs. Both of these favorable conditions exist in the case of the Jersey and our common stock, but too much care cannot be taken in selecting thoroughbred hulls from best known cows, it being the rule in breeding that "after like comes like." It is an admitted fact that by judicious crossing grades will produce 15 per cent. more butter than the average dairy cow.

Fourteenth. The Jersey breed is surpassed by no other in respect to the opportunities it offers to the efforts of the practical and the experimental breeder.

Fifteenth. The beef is of the best quality known. Several noblemen in England keep them entirely for the rare quality of the meat. Butchers in this country pronounce the quality equal to any beef.

There is one principle always followed by Mr. Pierce. The hull calves are kept entire until they are six months old, then if not up to the standard of form and excellence they are emulsated and fattened as steers. The late Henry Lux, of the firm of Lux & Miller wrote: "In reference to the Jersey steers from Yerba Buena Ranch, I have to say that they weighed, for their size, more than any cattle I have ever killed, and I never cut up an animal that was in all respects better meat. I thought them stall-fed, until you told me they had not been, having gotten their entire living off the hills back of San Jose. Taking into account how they were raised, I am sure no breed of cattle could have equaled the quality of meat. Three-year-old steers weighing upwards of 700 lbs., and two close to 800 lbs."

At every exhibition where the Yerba Buena herd have been shown the majority of premiums for hulls, cows and calves have been won by them.

The present organization of breeders of Jerseys in America is called the American Jersey Club. It is composed of 2,000 members, and the fifteenth volume of the register which has just been issued shows that there are 83,000 cows and 31,000 hulls registered. Mr. Pierce's stock is considered by all members of this great organization to be unequalled and according to the standard scale of points rates the highest.

Brains and Cows.

It would be easy to show that the best cows have the best brains, but we are now talking of the brains of the owners of the cows, and all we have to say applies to the owner of the cow on the farm, or in the village, just the same as to the owner of ten, twenty or fifty or more. But, says one, suppose nature did not give me an ample supply? Then "beg, borrow or steal some." Brain is a thing that grows by agitation.

Of course we use brains here to represent knowledge. More knowledge, more "know how" pays in every kind of farming, and in nothing more than in dairying. Suppose a merchant of your acquaintance last year bought a certain line of goods, and sold them for all he could get for them. But at the end of the season he found that expenses of various kinds ate up all the difference between what he paid and what he got. In a second line of goods the expense ate up a little more than the profits. A third class of goods left him some profit or return for his time and capital, or credit invested. What would you think of him as a business man if next year he bought all three kinds of goods just the same, though he was under no obligation to do so, for the sake of variety or other reason? He simply goes on in the old way; he don't like to use his brains enough to look into the matter and find out what pays and what does not. He gets along without starving because one kind of goods meets the losses and the want of profit on the other kinds, but he is not a success.

Now how does this merchant differ from the keeper of cows who goes on year after year, keeps feeding and milking a miscellaneous lot of cows, or one cow without knowing whether this one or that one gives milk enough to pay for her keeping, feed, care, milking and handling the milk.

If the man will simply use his brains, he will test and prove each cow, and he will not be long in getting what he can as beef or otherwise for every cow that does not pay a profit (which is the case with fully half of all cows kept), and he will put the proceeds into a cow or cows that do yield a net income. Better sell fifty such cows and with the proceeds buy one paying cow. Twelve paying cows are infinitely preferable to thirty of which ten just pay expenses, and ten cost more than they come to during the year. If one cow averaging eight quarts through the year worth four cents a quart is worth $15, a cow that will average ten quarts on the same feed and care for 300 days returns $21 more, and that pays 33 per cent. profit on $72 on extra cost of such a cow while her extra cost may not exceed $6 or $10. Apply more brains.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Not a gentleman farmer in England is fonder of taking prizes at county fairs than is Queen Victoria. Of late years this has been her majesty's chief source of pleasure, and she treasures the medals won by her butter and cheese and the premiums carried off by her cattle above the gorgeous tributes of her Eastern subjects on her German royal relations. When she is at Balmoral not a day passes that she does not personally inspect the home farm, as it is called, and now and then advise as to the butter and cheese-making, in which she is especially interested. Her dairies are almost Dutch in their exquisite cleanliness, the box stall being tiled in blue and white china and the milking done by maids after a good old English custom. It is said that the produce of these model farms is sold in London. It adds to the interest of farming, no doubt, to make it profitable, and she is to be congratulated upon her success. At Windsor a herd of buffaloes are kept, and recently an attempt was made to cross them with some Scotch cattle. Here also is the famous poultry house, filled with cocks and hens that have taken prizes all over the United Kingdom.

THE GUN.

The World's Columbian Exposition.

[By CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

The flame of truth burns bright and strong. The world is dazzled by its rays; A pean grand bursts from the throng, An anthem of devoutest praise, And here aloft, kissing the sky, The starry banner is unfurled, Revealing unto every eye, The hope and light of all the world.

Behind us lie the shades of night, Before, the bright eternal morn; Each moment yields a new delight, Each day a higher trust is born. The faith of yesterday, to-day Is turned to knowledge, and we rise; Testing the trump of prophecy Revealed by new discoveries.

The faith that ruled the Spaniard bold, And drew him westward o'er the seas, Is current coin to-day. Behold, The need of greater argosies! However bright the light may shine, However radiant bursts the dawn, Darkness the shores beyond entwine, And hope still whispers "on and on!"

The winds blow fierce, the waves dash high, Life is an ocean deep and wide; Death strews the way, its victims lie Helpless upon the heaving tide. "Watchman, ahoy! What of the night? Gleans there no sign of coming dawn?" "Yes, Captain, yes, there is one light— The star of Hope shines brightly on."

The waves grow rougher day by day; All that we are or strive to be Is needed now to sail the way To mankind's final destiny. "Man overboard!" Quick! lend a hand, He must not sink beneath the wave; Accursed would be the barbor land If reached by a neglect to save.

Sail on! Sail on, brave hearts, sail on! Though tempests rage and billows roar; For idle hands there comes no dawn, Work belms the aching to the core. Sail on! sail on! tread firm the decks, Sboat land the song, nor pause to weep; To the brave heart can come no wreck— He will provide His servants sleep.

The Alameda Gun Club.

On Saturday last the Alameda Gun Club met at Oakland Shooting Park to measure skill in its regular June event. The attendance was very small. It usually is at this season, many of the membership being absent in the mountains or otherwise engaged.

The birds furnished so far this season are a strong, vigorous lot and have been instrumental in keeping down the general average of the scores below those made last year. The scores made in this match are as given below:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. H. Schroeder 1 0 2 2 1 1 * 2 2 1 1 1-10, F. B. Norton 0 1 1 1 2 2 1 1 2 0 1 2-10, G. E. Colwell 1 0 1 0 1 2 * 1 2 1 1 2-9, "Slade" 1 1 0 1 0 1 1 * 2 1 2 1-9, T. R. Barney 2 1 0 2 1 0 0 1 1 1 1 2-9, H. J. Knowles 2 2 * 2 2 0 1 0 0 1 1 2-9, C. M. Morrison 1 0 0 0 0 1 1 0 0 0 0 1-4

A number of pools were then shot and the sport came to a close for the day.

Schroeder won first, on the toss, a handsome pocket knife; Norton, second, a leather-covered and silver-topped flask; "Slade" a fine fishing line and Colwell a fancy pack of playing cards.

The Recreation Gun Club.

On the first of the week the Recreation Gun Club holds its regular monthly event at the traps in Oakland Shooting Park.

The attendance was limited, but the sport was all that could be desired. The day was pleasant and everything conducted to render the match a most enjoyable one. Again, the scores were not remarkable for high per centage of birds fired at.

Mr. H. C. Golcher led the shooting in the main or Club match of the day with ten kills out of a possible dozen. A. Russell Crowell referee. The score:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. H. C. Golcher 1 2 2 0 2 2 2 0 1 1 2 2-10, H. Schroeder 1 1 2 0 2 1 2 0 0 2 2 0-9, "Randall" 0 1 1 0 1 2 2 0 2 2 2-9, A. W. Allen 0 0 2 0 2 1 0 1 1 1 2 2-8, "Slade" 2 1 0 0 2 0 1 2 0 1 1 0-7, Dr. G. G. Gere 2 0 0 0 2 1 1 0 0 0 2 1-6

Of the prizes a fine leather shell case fell to Mr. Golcher; a pocket knife to Mr. Schroeder; a hunting knife to Mr. Randall, and a fine pair of pocket scissors to Mr. Allen.

In a 12-bird pool, $2.50 entrance, the scores stood as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. "Randall" 2 2 0 2 2 1 1 2 1 2 0 1-10, Dr. Gere 1 1 0 2 0 1 1 1 1 2 2 1-10, Golcher 0 1 1 0 0 1 1 0 0 2 2 2-8, "Slade" 2 2 2 0 2 0 0 1 1 1 2 2-8, S. F. Hughes 1 0 0 1 0 2 0 0 2 1 0 1-6, Twitebell 2 0 0 1 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0-3, Schroeder 1 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0-2

Randall and Gere divided the purse.

It is encouraging to note the formation of game and fish protective associations over the country. The West has been particularly active in this matter showing a pronounced growth and activity in this line. It is a duty as well as a pleasure to every true sportsman to lend his aid to all such movements.

San Diego has another gun club. It is called the Silver Gate Gun Club. E. R. Kellogg, president; R. H. Dalton, first vice-president; G. B. Grow, second vice-president; H. C. Gordon, secretary and treasurer.

Antelope Shooting.

In the fall of 1886 I visited a friend in one of the extreme western countries of Kansas. The surrounding country was then new, having received its first settlers but the year before, and it was no uncommon sight to see antelopes roaming about, says W. J. Beck in American Field. However, I was not favored with a sight of any until one evening when I got into a huggy with my friend Max to go over eastward on business. I took my Winchester, hoping to see some game. The sun was not high and Max drove rapidly that we might get back before dark.

After we had gone perhaps three miles, Max called my attention to some moving objects far ahead and on the opposite side what seemed to be a wide gorge in the plain. The objects were mere specks to us, and I suggested that probably we were looking at nothing more uncommon than some settler's barnyard fowls. As we came nearer, however, our hens began to change in appearance, and on coming still nearer, "It is antelopes," said Max. "Why, yes," I answer, "Why did we not think of antelopes before?" I grasped my Winchester, and, raising the rear sight, was ready for a long shot. But when I looked up the antelopes had passed from sight, for we were going down into a gorge which ran at an angle with and opened into another, in which, no doubt, the antelopes were grazing. In the angle between the two gorges was a high ridge which Max thought I had better climb while he remained where he was with the buggy.

I became very much excited. Game like this was new and, heretofore, entirely unseen by me. I neared the top of the ridge and getting down on my hands and knees and trailing my gun as best I could, I was soon at a point from which, peeping over, I could view the whole width of the gorge for some distance. Sure enough, there were the antelopes, seven of them. Beautiful creatures. They had not yet seen or scented me, but were quietly feeding on the grass at the bottom of the gorge. I could see their eyes distinctly and almost hear them browse the grass, so close were they. But I was crouching close to the ground and did not dare rise, even to a sitting posture, lest I should frighten the shy creatures. They did not scent me even then, for the wind was blowing from them toward me. I was afraid to attempt a shot, for even if I could get up from the ground I was so nervous from excitement that I feared I should miss. Before me and somewhat to my right, was a road nearly five feet high. If I could only get behind that I would then be more at ease, and, resting my rifle upon its top, could take more certain aim. But to attempt to reach it might expose me to the whole hand, should they raise their heads. But I knew I must do something, and I could think of nothing better than to try and reach that rock. So, hugging my rifle close in my arms, I lay upon the ground and rolled slowly over and over toward the rock, pausing after each turn to make sure that the antelopes had not discovered me.

After a great many turns and pauses I reached the rock and, cautiously getting up behind it and laying my rifle across its top, I began casting about for the finest-looking antelope. But I was unable to note any difference. All were equally plump. I sighted my gun first at one and then at another. The farthest one was not more than the width of the street away. There was one with its head turned toward me. How easily I could shoot it between the eyes! But as I had heard old hunters say that behind the left foreleg was the surest spot, I waited until one placed itself so as to be shot there. Of course I thought, when I shoot the game will be mine. I glanced about for a huggy way to the spot where my quarry would presently lie. I felt no mistrust of my splendid rifle. Only the day before I had shot several ducks at long distances as they sat on the waters of Ladder Creek, and missed not once, and I thought to myself, when I shoot and kill one of those beautiful creatures I shall yet have fifteen cartridges in the magazine of my gun, and I may be able to drop one of the others as they scamper away.

Now! See! There is one in position. Quickly I took sight. "Spang!" went the rifle. Bad luck to me. The ball struck the sand over and beyond where the antelope stood, and that antelope and all its companions were gone. Rapidly I fired again and again at them as they dashed away up the gorge, until all my loads were gone, and I stood dumfounded at the result.

I looked at my gun and then at the antelopes as they stood away across the gorge, with almost overwhelming disappointment. Max, having heard my shots, came driving up the gorge from below.

"Well," said he, "how many?" "None!" I answered in desperation. "I overshot." "Look here," he replied, "how are your gun sights?" Then it flashed over me. I had forgotten to lower the rear sight of the rifle after having raised it for a long-distance shot when the antelopes were first sighted.

A hot match was that between Frank Parmalee of Omaha and J. A. R. Elliott, of Kansas City, recently, at the former place, where Frank Parmalee won on a score of 98 out of a possible 100 to Elliott's 91 on picked birds. Good shooting, we should say.

A report of the match, appearing in the American Field, says:

When I arrived at the grounds I found two hundred selected birds. Elliott had selected one-half of them and Parmalee the other half, for there might not be any duffers. George Hughes, of Fonda, Ia., was chosen stakeholder, referee and trap-puller, and all three of these thankless positions were acceptably filled by him.

Mr. Parmalee was called to the score at 12:30 P. M. and grassed his first bird, a straightaway from No. 3 trap, using the second barrel, which was badly needed. Mr. Elliott followed suit and stopped his first bird with one barrel. Up to the fifth bird Mr. Parmalee fell far short with his first barrel, killing nearly all his birds with the second, while Mr. Elliott killed his first five with his first barrel. Many comments were made on Mr. Parmalee's shooting and at this time it was thought by many that Mr. Elliott would prove a sure winner; but the thought was short lived. Mr. Parmalee stopped his sixth bird with the first barrel, while Mr. Elliott let his get away, to die a little beyond the flags. Parmalee from this point steadied down and dropped fourteen out of his next twenty with the first barrel, while Elliott lost his ninth, a fast driver, and his thirteenth, a low right-quarterer, the score standing at the end of the first twenty-five, Parmalee 25 straight, Elliott 22. In the next twenty-five Mr. Parmalee scored them all, while Mr. Elliott lost his forty-first, a daisy-cutting right-quartering twister, and his forty-seventh, a rapid rising driver. If any wagers were laid after this I did not hear them, except that of the possibility of Parmalee killing one hundred straight, and as his score shows he only missed it by two. Parmalee's fifty-fifth bird was a strong, towering incomer and was undershot with both barrels. The regularity with which the referee called "dead!" made ninety-nine look suspicious, and but for the death struggle of his ninety first bird, carrying it a few feet beyond the flag, such would have been the result. However, I claim this equal to, if not the best score ever made in this country. Elliott finished strong after shooting an uphill race and losing four birds in the last fifty.

Parmalee used his second barrel eight times on the last twenty-five birds, and Elliott used his six times, although a part of these were for safety.

The grounds and birds were fast, but the traps used were a little slow. The traps were set to face the east, and quite a stiff, cold breeze was blowing from the northwest, which assisted the birds in making a quick start and carried some of them beyond bounds. Parmalee would have scored straight on the old 80-yard all around circle.

Parmalee is quite a bit heavier built than Elliott and resembles Charlie Badd somewhat in that both are stoop-shouldered, owing, I presume, to carrying home such heavy loads of wealth, their winnings at tournaments. When he calls "pull!" he grasps his Greener ejecter and holds it to his shoulder with a vise grip, like unto Capt. J. L. Brewer. Elliott handles his gun with ease and uses good judgment.

I am inclined to the opinion that Mr. Parmalee had the most effective load, and Mr. Elliott's hacker expressed a similar thought, although Mr. Elliott made some of the cleanest kills possible. Mr. Parmalee's load was 3 drams of American E. C. powder in a 2 1/2-inch U. M. C. Trap shell, wadded with a thin card, two No. 11 U. M. C. 1 1/4-inch thick black-edge wada, a scant 1 1/2 ounces of Omaha No. 7 chilled shot and Squires' top wad over shot.

Mr. Elliott loads his own shells, and, after much experimenting, has settled upon the following load as best suited for his use: His load is 3 1/2 drams of American Wood powder in a 2 1/2-inch Eley gas-tight shell, a thick cardboard wad next to powder, a 3-8-inch thick pinkedge, then another thick cardboard, 1-3 ounces of Leroy chilled shot, and Squires' top wad over shot.

The scores in detail follow, the figure 2 indicating the use of the second barrel, but does not necessarily mean that the use of the second barrel was required every time used, except for safety.

Mr. J. E. Sanford, in Amateur Sportsman, gives an account of the sport of our youth in the following language:

Come, now, let's go squirrel-hunting; it's a Saturday morning in lovely May, seven o'clock. I hear the boom of a gun once, twice, thrice. It must be my friend C—, who promised to be there this morning. I am unavoidably detained for a few minutes, but at last am free and ready to go. My dog, a little black fice, is prancing around, anxious to be off. My gun (I was not then the delighted owner of an "Ithaca") a "Perfection," single-barrel, made by Bacon Arms Co., is taken from its accustomed place in my room, and my belt, well filled with cartridges, is buckled around my "bread basket." The shells were loaded with only two and a half drams of powder and one ounce of No. 5 shot, but when fired in this little 12-gauge they rarely failed to hurt something. It was certainly a splendid shooter, and could not fail to satisfy anyone who desires a single-barrel gun. But we must leave the subject of guns and ammunition now. So away to the creek bottom, which ever and anon reverberates with the merry sound of the gun. I proceed about a mile direct up the bottom to join my friend, not stopping to give the attention to my dog that he desired for his often-treed game.

Having now reached the neighborhood of my friend C—, I will wait for his next report. In the meanwhile, I discover a squirrel high up in a tree which stands across a slough of water, when the smoke of my first shot of the day flows aside, he is seen no more. C— now fires again, and his shot fall around me startlingly. He soon comes up, however, and I find that my shot had fallen around him also. Hurrah! he has a string of five already and I—not one. Says I, mentally, "See here, old fellow, you will have to look very sharp for the next ones you get."

Knowing that squirrels are fond of mulberries, which are just ripening, we wander out in search of trees that bear such fruit. As we pass a thicket the lusty notes of a "bob-white" is tempting, but on without success in finding mulberries. Yonder! My dog has one up a tree. The "Perfection" speaks and he tumbles. Come here, C—, and help me; here are three or four up one big sweet-gum. They seem to be playing hide-and-seek over its stalwart branches, but it will soon be a hide-and-seek of death to some of them. Again my little twelve-horn vomits forth flame and smoke and another bunty bites the dust. I then go around and "turn" one for my friend, which he brings down. We wander up the creek about three miles from our starting point and think perhaps it would be best to begin our return. Being about a hundred yards apart, my sporting companion spies another, which he secures, but it is the last for him to-day. The next one was a smart one, I judge, by the way he could hide. We would fire alternately into the tree top so as to scare him. I got a glimpse of his gray fur and down he came too.

Often did my dog, after tracking around, sit down at the roots of a tree, but so thick would be the foliage that we would look in vain and pass on. So when our canine adjunct took his seat at the base of a large, densely covered oak, we examined it but casually and started on, but had gone only a few yards when a rustling sound was heard in some limbs that grew from the tree only a few feet from the ground. Just as I turned to see what it was C— shouted to the dog to "catch him," and immediately he was in full pursuit. I saw instantly that it was a squirrel. My gun was against my shoulder and discharged before I had time to think of the danger to which I was subjecting my dog, for he was not more than five or six feet behind his object. However, to my intense gratification and the great surprise of C—, I hit the little fellow fairly in the side, knocking him several somersaults, stone dead.

This was raising our ambition to fever heat, though, of course, in a friendly way. This was my fourth since I joined him, while he had added but two. He was anxious to keep ahead, while I strongly desired to catch up. So it was "nip and tuck" for every one. Only two more were seen, the first after an ineffective shot or two, made good his escape by getting in a hollow tree. This is what exasperates the sportsman and strongly inclines him to the use of unbecoming language. My friend had told me of leaving one in a tree near the point where he entered the bottom in the early morning, and just before we reached that place my little dog once more sat down and looked up a small gum with a very bushy top. We fully realized that this was our last chance, and of all slipping and peeping, now I tell you each of us did it to see which could "get there" first. At last I saw the squirrel move just a little through the leaves so that I had him located. It filled me with great joy, for C— had not yet found him. So up goes my gun, but when I pull the trigger the hammer says clang, to my disgust. I open and look in at an empty chamber; not even an empty shell there. You ought to have seen me throw a cartridge into the breech, snap goes the bolt, click the hammer and the next instant the explosion awakes the echoes and the prize is mine. I have a habit of loading the first thing after each discharge, but, strange to say, had simply removed the exhausted shell without replacing one that was loaded. I reached home about three o'clock, pretty well tired, but satisfied. Our hags footed up a total of twelve, which is something rare in this section nowadays. The time was, I am told, when forty or fifty could be butchered in a day, but it is passed now and the nimble little rodent is rapidly following the nobler game.

An Improved Shot-Gun Lock.

Mr. Clarence M. Wollam, gunsmith, of this city, has recently patented an invention which will, we are persuaded, after a careful examination of the model, prove a blessing to the sportsmen of the whole country. The patent hammers, for hammerless guns may be best described in the words of the patentee. He says:

My invention relates, generally, to breech-loading firearms and, particularly, to improvements in that class thereof in which the barrels are hinged or pivoted to the frame at points forward of their breech ends, so that the rear ends of the barrels may be swung upwardly for opening or exposing the cartridge-chambers, and in which the hammers are concealed within receivers in the frames and brought to their cocked positions during the opening movement of the barrels, this class of arms being usually double-barrel, but this invention is equally applicable thereto and to single-barrel and other break-down guns; and it consists in the peculiarities of construction and arrangement or combination of parts and features hereinafter fully disclosed in the description, claims and drawings.

The objects of my invention are, first, to provide improved means of effecting the cocking of hammers by the direct contact therewith of the mainsprings, which, during the opening of the barrels and the simultaneous cocking of the hammers, will be compressed to a very great degree of tension for imparting the necessary force to the hammers when they are released, and which, during the closing of the barrels, and after the hammers have been fully cocked, will automatically move forward slightly, independently of the hammers, and place themselves in the most advantageous positions for giving great momentum to said hammers, after they have been released from the sears, and, second, to provide novel and improved lock-mechanism of this character which will be simple or of not few parts, light and strong in construction, not liable to undue strain or wear at any point and comparatively inexpensive to manufacture.

The United States Gun Club held a practice shoot last Sunday at Alameda. It was over the usual 16-yard rise and at 25 blue-rocks. J. C. Richardson won with a score of 22. The full score was as follows: G. C. Billington 15, R. Baker 16, J. C. Stewart 20, Wheeler 15, G. C. Dupue 13, Schultz 10, T. Thomas 10, Baum 15, Wehh 17, E. Olsen 16, C. Andrus 15, A. Varney 18, L. E. Hall 13, C. W. Debenham 17, P. J. Newman 13, Slack 8, Fischer 16.

The medal shoot at 15 birds was won by Bellington with a score of 11 in the first class and Stewart with a score of 11 in the second class. The other scores were: Baker 9, Varney 10, Dupue 8, Slack 6, Richardson 7, Wheeler 7, Debenham 7, Wehh 11, Andrus 6, Baum 3, Olsen 8, Thomas 6, Hall 7, Newman 3, Schultz 4.

The removal of the old reliable sportsman's emporium of R. Liddle & Son from Washington street to 110 Montgomery Streets, marks a change but in location only, we are pleased to note of one of the oldest landmarks of the city. Away back in early days when that part of the city south of Market Street was one vast marsh, when Uncle Robert was wont to shoot snipe, his store was on Washington Street where it has ever remained until now. The old friends and patrons with we trust many new ones will be cordially welcomed at the new stand, 110 Montgomery Street, where a full line of sportsman's goods will be handled. Give them a call.

The annual meeting of the Iowa State Sportsmen's Association was held on Clear Lake on May 30—June 1 inclusive. The officers for the ensuing year are President, N. S. Young, of Burlington; Secretary, C. E. Rainer, of Independence.

Old Bones.

Old Bones dead, that good old dog,
We ne'er shall see him more;
He used to hunt all o'er the bog,
On Alameda's shore.
His master shot poor, good Old Bones
Down on that dreary marsh;
I seem to hear his dying groans,
I know the act was harsh.
Why did you do the cruel deed?
You ought to have known better;
Unto your call he would not heed,
He was a pointer, not a setter.

Anent the Seattle Awards.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I note in your issue of June 10th Mr. E. C. Kirby's spasmodic kick in which he speaks of your correspondent's report of the late Seattle Bench Show. He also incloses clippings from the Seattle Post Intelligencer showing his side of the question, but evidently failed to send any that would show the other side if there was a reply, if indeed any once thought the same worth a reply. No doubt had such been offered, the paper would have published it. He states that the writer's report was "simply ridiculous," and that he should confine himself to a subject that he knows something about, before making such rash decisions. Now, how does Mr. Kirby know it was a rank decision? What does he know about St. Bernard's? He simply denies the correctness of the judge's decision and thinks he should have been awarded first. It is quite evident that Mr. Kirby can not see beyond his own dog. He certainly is ignorant of bench show rules when he played the baby act in removing his dog from the show. He states that he was informed that his dog would be "snowed under." Who told him such would be the case? Surely not Mr. Raper, and he did the judging.

Mr. Kirby, by his letters, throws slurs at the judge and the officers of the club. It is such actions as this that does so much harm to the kennel interests. Does not Mr. Kirby think, should Judge Raper feel inclined to favor parties showing dogs, that he would select a much larger and better show than the one at Seattle? Common sense would show that much.

Now, in regard to my report, I knew neither of the owners nor any of the dogs, until I saw them at the show. Now Mr. Kirby makes a challenge to the club the looser, to pay all expenses of having a St. Bernard judge come to that place from the East to re-judge these dogs. How often does one hear this same old bluff offered at bench shows? Now looking at it from a disinterested view, what would the club gain by it? They certainly would be compelled to have a big bank account should they take up every dissatisfied exhibitor's "kicks." It would be compelled to employ several clerks to attend to all such matters. It certainly would be pursuing a very peculiar course, and one which no doubt, Mr. Kirby knew, that it could not or would not do. Should the committee decide to put this matter before the American Kennel Club Mr. Kirby is most likely to learn something concerning dogs and dog shows that should prove a big advantage to him in the future.

Of course, any who read Mr. Kirby's letter or knows of the transaction will see that Mr. Kirby ought to do something to try and justify him for his action of removing his dog and, the very ungentlemanly manner he has attacked the officers and members of the club. What is the trouble? Has he been refused admission to the club? We trust he will cool down and exhibit his dogs, and hereafter take the awards as one should, and work for the good of the dogs instead of trying to place obstacles in the way.

Training Dogs to Perform.

"Do you think you could teach an old dog new tricks?" asked a New York Times Reporter of Prof. W. S. Shedman, who has been training dogs and exhibiting them for years, and whose dogs Jim Cassidy, Nuisance, Gypsy Swipes, and others amused the visitors to the pet dog show at the Lenox Lyceum last week.

"Well," said the professor, "of course, I could. But what would be the use of it? It would be time wasted. What I do is to teach young dogs tricks and then when they get old they're already taught, and I have had the use of them when they were young."

"How do you go about it?"
"I find that I get the best results from dogs with whom I am best acquainted and who are best acquainted with me. To bring this about I breed and raised all my pups. They get used to me, and when I want to use them for exhibition the training is only a question of a few days. I mean, of course, that the ordinary training is only a matter of a few days. It takes longer to teach a dog to turn somersaults, or, rather, it doesn't take any longer to teach him, but it takes longer to get him into condition so that he will do it. It isn't every dog that can. It requires a dog of nerve and one that is willing to submit to practice."

"What class of dogs are best at tricks?"
"You're the one thousand and twentieth man who has asked me that question. Any dog with sense can be taught to do tricks."

"But not so very many years ago," said the reporter, "exhibitors in circuses and variety theatres used French poodles almost exclusively, and the impression was very general that they made better trick dogs than others."

"Yes, I know," said the professor, "and that impression prevails yet to some extent. But its nonsense. A smart dog of any breed can be made a trick dog. It's just the same with dogs as with children. When they're dumb that settles 'em. Now that little foxterrier, Nuisance, who rides on the back of McIntyre, the pointer, was taught to ride in four days. The reason Nuisance could be 'broken' so quickly was that she knew me and I knew her. And, so far as the ordinary tricks are concerned, when you know your dogs, their education is a matter of a short time. I can teach any dog of average intelligence in my kennels to 'die for your country,' in four minutes. If I need any new dogs for show purposes, I select those that are eight or nine months old, the ones that I've been feeding or petting ever since they were babies.

"All the intelligence of trick dogs does not appear to the audiences in theatres and circuses. What is wanted, naturally, is variety, and as the time is limited, dogs whose repertoires include a great many interesting feats can only give a few of them. Now, no one would give Jim Cassidy credit for a knowledge of two languages. Yet he understands Spanish as well as English."

Cassidy is a beautiful specimen of the Cheshire hull terrier. He turns wonderful back somersaults, and waltzes on his hind legs with exceptional dignity. He was snoozing in his kennel in the basement of Lenox Lyceum.

"Cassidy," called the professor, "Venga."
That means "come here," and Cassidy bolted out of the kennel and made for his master.

"Hetcha uno Sarto Mortarile," commanded the professor, and Cassidy began throwing himself backward into the air, turning and landing on his feet.

"I taught him Spanish when I was in Mexico, and the Mexicans thought him a wonder," said the professor.

"Do you have occasion in teaching the dogs to use harsh measures?"

"Oh, no. Harshness doesn't help any. It rather retards a dog that is willing to learn. I've only had occasion to make a dog uncomfortable in one instance. That was in little Nuisance's case. But it's all over now, and I guess Nuisance has forgotten it. To make her light enough so that McIntyre, the pointer, could carry her, I had to stunt her. Ordinarily I feed little puppies all they can eat, but with Nuisance I adopted severe restrictions in the matter of food and confined her for some months when she was very young. I hated to do it, but I knew she would come out all right, and she did. Now she gets whatever she wants that's good for her."

The American Kennel Club held a special meeting recently for the purpose of considering the subject embodied in the following resolution:

"The management of this association shall be intrusted to an executive committee consisting of thirteen members, one of whom shall be the president of the associate members, the remaining twelve members serving for three years; except that of the first committee elected, four shall be chosen by lot to go out at the end of the first year and four at the end of the second year, but to continue in office until their successors are elected, in order that four members of this committee shall be elected at each annual meeting of the association. They shall from among their number elect a president and vice-president, who shall serve for a term of one year and perform the duties as prescribed in the by-laws and generally such duties as pertain to the office."

There were only three votes cast in favor of the resolution, Dr. Perry and W. A. Power, of Boston, and James Watson, of Philadelphia. Twenty voted against it and it was hopelessly lost. A great deal of feeling was manifested over the motion, as it was a sort of aspersion on the present management of the A. K. C. The president, August Belmont, spoke for over an hour against it and offered to resign if the feeling of the delegates was so shown. Dr. Perry, in speaking to the motion, said in a thorough canvass of the members of the A. K. C. he did not receive one word in favor of the present state of affairs, and said a rupture and the formation of a new association of kennel clubs would undoubtedly be the result if things continued as they are. The president said if anybody in Chicago attempted to start a new club the A. K. C. would make it ridiculous in a year, no matter how much money they had, because they would not have the history nor the stud book possessed by the American Kennel Club. It was decided on motion of Dr. Perry that one meeting of the American Kennel Club executive committee be hereafter held each year in Chicago in order to give the Western members a chance to have their say in the management which, through distance and lack of time, they now have not. September was decided on as the date for the executive committee to meet in Chicago. The following clubs were elected members of the American Kennel Club: Rhode Island State Fair Association, Saratoga Poultry and Kennel Association, Danbury Agricultural Society and the City of the Straits Kennel Club, of Detroit, Mich. President Belmont brought up the matter of his dispute with the New England Kennel Club of Boston, who refused to return his check for entry fees for his dogs at their last show, although he notified them by telegraph before they had received his entries by mail that he wished to withdraw them on account of a personal objection to one of the judges. The Boston Club were ordered to return the check.

The Coming Field Trials.

The committee appointed to select grounds for the coursing field trials to be held in January next have decided in favor of the grounds at Salinas. They report that the grounds are ample and that there are plenty of birds on the grounds for the purpose of the trials. The committee were assured by reliable residents at Salinas that every accommodation necessary would be gladly furnished and substantial aid given the club.

This is a matter upon which the club is to be congratulated, as the grounds are much nearer this city and the most of those interested.

It is not only pleasing but gratifying to the many fanciers throughout the northwest, says the Portland Review, to learn of the grand success of the late Seattle bench show at stated through these columns some time since. Everything regarding the exhibits was much more than could reasonably be expected, considering this was the second show given in that city. The success, however, can justly be credited to all the various officers who work early and late with untiring energy, and any club who could be officered by these kind of gentlemen need have no fear of giving a bench show as its success is assured. Considerable complaint was made through the daily papers concerning the awards in the St. Bernard class. This is a fact we are very sorry to state, but it is the old saying over again, one man cannot please everyone, and all we can say is, that any gentleman who desires to see the advancement of dogs and the continuance of bench shows would not allow himself to take exception to as honest awards as were made in Seattle even if they were not in accordance with his own ideas. Mr. Raper's honesty cannot be questioned by any fair minded person.

ROD.

Angling as an Art.

A recent article in the New York Times from the pen of Williams C. Harris is most interesting. It reads:

Angling, or fishing for sport, is the art of capturing fish with either an artificial or natural bait placed upon a hook. It is of great antiquity. We read of it in the Old Testament, in the records of ancient Egypt and Assyria, and in the polished literature of old Greece and Rome. The Greek poet, Oppian, in his "Halientica," written in the second century, gave to the world the first systematic treatise on fishing. A lapse of ten centuries then occurred, when Dame Juliana Berners or Bernes, the prioress of St. Sophwell, England, wrote "The Book of St. Albans, a Treatise of Fysshinge with an Angle."

In the latter part of the fifteenth century three books appeared on angling, written by Leonard Maschall, William Greendall and Samuel Gardner. About seventy years later (1653), Izaak Walton's "Compleat Angler" was published, which, although full of errors, particularly in natural history, had so great a charm of style and is so imbued with the sentiment of the art of angling, that Walton is held in reverence as "the father of the craft of all good and true anglers."

Anglers are of diverse natures, each with his hobby or favorite line of fishing. Some prefer to fish in salt, others in fresh waters, while many "look down" upon the "bait fisher" and turn up their noses at any lure except the artificial fly; and then, again, the angler's equipment and the fish sought for vary with the locality fished in, and the tackle used very often is subject to the whim of the angler. Hence it would be impossible to describe with accuracy the outfit of the fisherman or the bait used, except when treating of the individual fish which the angler is seeking. This method will be followed, and as there are two distinct classes of anglers, widely separated by their estimate of the sport and the locality of their outings, we will take up each fish and the manner of capturing it under the headings of "Fishing in Fresh Water" and "Fishing in Salt Water."

Fresh-water fishing is done in lakes, ponds, rivers and in brooks or spring-fed streams. Different methods are followed, to wit: Trolling, still fishing, skittering, casting the bait from the reel and casting the artificial fly.

In trolling, the boatman rows slowly along the edge of the water grass, or, when that does "not grow," he keeps the boat within forty to sixty feet from the shore, or rows over rocky ledges, or in the channel ways where the fish are known to feed. The fisherman sits in the boat and allows his line to trail 50 to 200 feet, the distance being dependent upon the depth of the water and the species of fish sought.

Still-fishing consists in anchoring the boat on selected ground and the baited hook is sunk to the bottom or in mid-water.

Skittering is casting a minnow or other lure, generally a frog, by the rod on a restricted line, 30 to 50 feet in length. It is followed on lakes and ponds for black bass and pickerel, and is considered by many anglers not entirely sportsman-like.

Casting from the reel is done by the fisherman standing on the shore or in the boat. In casting the line is reeled up to within two or three feet of the tip of the rod, which is then made to sweep rapidly from rear to front, thus giving an impetus and outward direction to the bait, which strikes the water from 50 to 150 feet from the shore or boat, according to the skill of the caster. Practice, not written instruction, can alone make an expert in the method, the great art being in making the proper sweep of the rod, and the knack of stopping the line as it runs from the reel at the moment the bait strikes the water. In making the cast the rod should be held firmly by the hand piece, with the thumb placed lightly upon the revolving reel. The rod should be brought well to the rear and then swept rapidly in an upward and outward direction, with the tip pointed to the spot where the bait is intended to alight upon the water.

In casting the artificial fly, the beginner, in making the first cast, should with his left hand take from the reel line of equal length to that of the rod; then, with a backward and extended wrist of the rod, send the line to the rear, which, when extended at full length, should by a forward spring or flirt of the rod be brought to the front, falling end first and fully extended upon the water. After practicing this short line it should be lengthened a few feet after each cast, until thirty or forty feet can be thrown without the line hunching in the forward movement. This mishap can generally be averted by taking care to allow the line to become fully extended before the forward cast is made. The rod should be lightly but firmly held by the hand-grasp, and the motion given to it should be of the gentlest character. Practice of these simple directions, if the capacity to learn the art exists, will insure proficiency as a fly-caster, to which, however, must be added years of experience on the streams before you can earn the title of a skilled trout angler.

The fishes sought for by the fresh-water fishermen are the salmon, land-locked salmon, trout, lake trout, black bass muskallonge, pike, pickerel, pike perch, yellow perch, white perch, rock bass and silver bass, to which may be added a number of other fishes called pan fish, that are usually sought for by ladies and youths. We will take up the principal fishes seriatim:

The salmon is the royal fish of fresh water, into which it comes solely for spawning purposes. The streams of the Atlantic coast which it visits are mostly in the Canadian Provinces, with the exception of the Penobscot River in Maine, where numbers are taken by anglers every season. The attempts now being made to stock the rivers lying south of which is conjectural. The equipment of a salmon angler is expensive, and an outing for the purpose more so, placing the sport beyond the reach of all except the "well-to-do" anglers. If you intend to indulge in salmon fishing go to a reputable dealer, who will fit you out at an expense of about $100. Every article needed for your equipment bears the name of "salmon"—salmon rod, salmon reel, salmon flies, salmon line, etc., so no mistake can be made if your dealer is honest.

The method of casting for salmon is identical with that for trout, except that both hands are used in casting. The rods are 15 to 18 feet long, and the flies are larger than those used in trout fishing. Another exception is: When the salmon takes the fly care must be taken not to strike the hook into its mouth; the salmon invariably hooks itself. The flies used in salmon fishing number several hundreds, but for general use fifteen to twenty of different patterns answer every purpose. The annexed list gives the names of the most popular: Jock Scott, Silver Doctor, Black Jay, Butcher and Durham Ranger.

The land-locked salmon is anatomically identical with the sea salmon treated above. From preference in some localities, and from necessity in others, this salmon has become land-locked and never visits the sea, even when living in waters that flow into it. They inhabit lakes of considerable depth, but, wherever practicable, run into streams to spawn. They are caught in the fall on or near their spawning beds with the artificial fly, and in the spring in the shallow waters, generally rocky ledges of some of the Canadian rivers, where they are known as the "Quanniche," or "winnish." In lakes the favorite and most successful method of taking them is by deep trolling.

This consists in using a line well weighted, so that the lead will touch the bottom as the boat is rowed slowly. Attached to the line are two leaders made of silk-worm gut, one three and the other five or six feet from the sinker. These are at least three feet long, and are baited usually with a live minnow. The boat is rowed over the deepest part of the lake, the most successful fishing period being during the dog days. Still fishing for land-locked salmon is another favorite method, the bait used being a live minnow, hooked just in front of the first fin on the back, care being taken not to touch the spinal cord with the hook. Similar methods and tackle for fishing for land-locked salmon are in use for the lake trout. This fish is only found in deep lakes, but comes to the surface early in the season, when it is caught by surface trolling. It has been taken with the artificial fly, but this is exceptional.

Although the beautiful brook trout is often taken with common natural baits, such as the garden worm, grubs, beef, fish, roe, &c., and is often caught by the trolling spoon and other coarse artificial lures, the accepted and scientific method of killing them is by casting the artificial fly. To do this properly a rod of 6 to 7 ounces in weight and 9 to 10 feet in length, with sufficient elasticity, and yet backbone, to cast the line (see former directions for fly-casting) 40 to 50 feet, is required. Lighter rods (even as low as 2½ ounces) are getting more and more in general use, but the beginner should not venture casting with a rod less than six or seven ounces in weight. The reel used in trout fly-fishing is what is known in the stores as the "click reel," which has a simple yet musical device, which prevents the line running too freely. It should be large enough to hold twenty-five or thirty yards of letter F enameled water-proof line.

The reel, which is a basket slung by a strap over the shoulder, should be of wicker work, and care should be taken to keep it perfectly clean and sweet by scouring and airing after use. The stock of flies should be kept in a fly-book, and many forms of these are made, the best being furnished with hooks by which the snoods (gut) of each fly can be kept extended and ready for immediate use. The leader is from three to nine feet in length and is made of several strands of silk-worm gut, which is dyed to a water tint as nearly as possible. To the leader one to three flies are attached, one of which—the lower—is called the "end," or "stretcher" fly; the others, "dropper flies." A landing net is an important adjunct to a trout fisherman's outfit. The best is that known as the collapsing net, which comes apart and occupies only the space of a walking cane. In fishing a rapid stream it is well to use a net with a long handle having a spike in the butt, as it will be found handy for a supporting staff.

In the brief space allotted it is not practicable to give minute directions as to the best methods of fishing a trout stream; suffice it, then, to impress upon the young angler, first, that the utmost care must be taken not to disturb the pools and stretches by careless wading; second, to place the flies as gently as possible on the water, and, thirdly, to fish "up stream" whenever practicable, as the trout always lie heads to the current. A cast of 30 to 40 feet is all that is necessary; longer ones are seldom required or successful. Over 1,500 different patterns of artificial flies are made for and used in trout fishing. Each has a different name, and most of them are kept in stock by dealers. Old and experienced anglers believe that only one or two dozen of those patterns are necessary to kill trout in any of the known waters of America. Of some of them we give the names:

Brown Palmer, or Hackle, Black Palmer, Ginger Palmer, Grizzly Palmer, White Miller, Black Gnat, Red Ant, Cowdung, Royal Coachman, Red Spinner, Alder, Red Fox, Oak Fly, Grizzly King, Jungle Cock, Brown Hen, March Brown, Yellow Sallie, Professor, Beaverkill, Seth Green, Light Montreal, Queen of the Waters.

The black bass is conceded by many anglers as the game fish par excellence of American waters. In shallow rivers where relatively deep pools and alternate riffles prevail, it is fished for with the artificial fly; also, by still-fishing with the live minnow. When using the fly the angler wades the stream and places the flies upon the water in a manner very similar to that of casting for trout, except that the flies are permitted to sink an inch or two below the surface, and then, by a slight but continuous twitching of the top of the rod, they are made to simulate the action of a struggling and drowning insect. Casting the fly for black bass in lakes is also followed, in which case the flies are larger and more gaudy than those in use on running waters. The latter are serviceable when tied to Nos. 4 to 6 Sproat hooks, the former on Nos. 1½ and 2. The rod used for black bass fly-fishing should be at least 8 ounces in weight and 10½ feet long. The reel, a multiplier, holding 50 yards of Letter D enameled water-proof line, tapering 5 to 6 feet at the outer end.

When casting the minnow, the rod should be 7½ feet long and the reel a multiplier, holding not less than forty yards of line. In still fishing for black bass the boat is anchored at the foot of a rapid or in the smooth water of the pool, and minnow is impaled through both lips when fishing in a current, and in front of the first dorsal fin when fishing in still water. A rod 9 feet in length, with plenty of spring, but not "whippy," is best for this method of fishing.

The muskallonge is the largest member of the pike family and is found in lakes and rivers. It is generally caught by trolling with a spinner or spoon lure. These baits are of many sizes and forms, and when used are attached, singly, to the end of the line, where they spin or twirl in an attractive manner as the boat is rowed slowly through the water. A live fish, 5 to 10 inches in length, is also a good lure, but more so when casting from the reel, which is done by the fisherman standing in the bow of the boat and casting the bait among or at the outer edge of the water grass. This method of fishing for muskallonge is considered the most scientific, and certainly is more sportsmanlike than the common one of trolling along the shores, in which the boatman, not the angler, finds the fish, and by controlling the movements of the boat after the fish is hooked, is entitled to the credit of killing it.

Fishing for pike or pickerel is identical with fishing for muskallonge, except that both of the former are still fishing and the latter is not, although we believe that it can be done successfully, if the angler uses good judgement in the selection of grounds and baits. Still fishing for pike and pickerel varies but little from that of other fish. Care, however, must be observed, first, in hooking the minnow, as bait, in the hack, so that it will balance nicely and have full play for swimming naturally; second, in allowing the biting fish time to gorge the bait, not striking or "plucking" too soon. The first movement of the pike or pickerel on taking the live minnow is to swim slowly away with it 5 or 10 feet; then, halting a moment or so, and finally moving off with increasing speed, but not hastily. The latter movement indicates that the minnow has been swallowed, and now is the time to strike the hook into the fish. These indications as to "when to strike" apply also to black bass, pike-perch and other fish that take the bait leisurely when the angler is still fishing for them. Fish that come with a rush and seize the bait greedily generally hook themselves, but even then with the black bass, pike, &c., in still water, it is well not to "pluck" too quickly. In swift water the fish is generally hooked before the angler knows it.

Pike-perch, or wall-eyed pike, are always known as "glass-eye," "Susquehanna salmon," "Ohio salmon," and other names, and particularly, as "Dore" in the Canadian Provinces. This fish is not a pike, but belongs to the large family of perches. It is caught by trolling, still fishing, and by casting the artificial fly. This latter method is followed with success on the Upper Susquehanna river, where the fish is known as the "salmon," and where it grows to the weight of fourteen pounds. Specimens have been taken in Lake Pepin, Minnesota, weighing thirty pounds. The weight of those generally caught runs from one to five pounds.

The yellow perch, white perch, catfish, rock bass, silver bass, or fresh-water striped bass, sunfish, strawberry bass, and other small fish, known in a general way as pan fish, are caught on light rods and small hooks (Nos. 8 to 12), baited with garden worms, grubs, pieces of meat, and, in the case of the catfish or bullheads, very often with cheese and raw cotton mixed. The yellow perch and the sunfish, however, take the artificial fly and fight bravely when found in shallow water.

The methods of fishing in salt water do not differ widely from those used in fresh water. In the tidal portions of the rivers the boat is anchored, either in the tideway, on the edge of the channel, or in the eddies, and the line, with a light sinker attached, is allowed to drift slightly below the surface with the tide, or the line is weighted sufficiently to place the bait on near the bottom. The rod varies in weight according to the skill of the angler in handling it, but should not be less than seven ounces nor more than twelve ounces, and when the tide is not swift the former should be preferred. The reel should hold fifty to one hundred yards of line and have a free action, with a drag attached to prevent overrunning of the line.

The baits in use are numerous; those most popular are the crab—those known as "peelers" or "shedders," and the soft shell or "paper" crab—shrimp, salt-water mussels, clams (hard or soft), eel tail, live minnows and pieces of dead fish, especially the menhaden or mossbunker. Salt-water fish are not as fastidious in feeding as those of fresh water. The size of the hooks to be used, of course, depends upon the fish to be caught, but those sold at 1-0 to 4-0 in size will generally hold the fishes taken near the Atlantic coast line. For fishing on the shallow flats or in the channel ways of the estuaries the same methods, bait and tackle are used as in or near the mouths of rivers. In all localities where salt-water fishing is followed the tide is an important factor of success, except on the fishing banks, where the fish, when found on them, are apt to bite freely in all conditions of the tide. In most localities the incoming tide gives the greatest success, but in others, slack water, high water, low water and the ebb tide are most favorable to a large score.

Fishing in the surf for striped bass, large weakfish, channel bass (red drum) and blue fish is a favorite method with anglers who have mastered the rudiments of the art. The principle of casting is similar to that before described as minnow casting from the reel, except that a heavier rod (twelve to sixteen ounces) is generally used, and the cast is made with both hands. Either crab, menhaden or eel-tail bait is used, and the caster stands at the inner edge of the surf and hurls the bait and sinker, which is generally two ounces, among or beyond the outer breakers, reeling in slowly as the undertow sweeps his bait shoreward. Casts of 260 feet have been made by experts.

Trolling for bluefish is done from a sailboat running five to ten miles per hour with the line trailing 100 or more feet astern. The bait is usually menhaden or the squid, the latter being a long, narrow triangular-shaped piece of lead with a strong hook soldered to it.

Chumming for bluefish is another favorite method. The boat is anchored on selected ground and, a quantity of menhaden are cut into small chunks, which, when thrown overhead, create an oily trail or "slick," which is a powerful attraction to the bluefish, which are caught on rods from nine to ten ounces in weight with a piece of menhaden as a bait.

Thousands of anglers for sport and fishermen for "meat" throng daily the excursion steamers that ply between Fishing Banks and the City of New York. These steamers are fitted out especially for this business, having commodious decks, ice chests and fishing tackle for hire and bait for sale. They leave the city docks in all weathers as early as 8 A. M., returning about 6 P. M., which, allowing for time in transit to and from the banks, gives five or six hours for fishing. Upon arriving at the banks the steamer is anchored, and hundreds of lines drop into the water, the hand line being in the majority. The bait in general use is the raw hard clam on a strong Virginia hook, attached to a heavy line, which is generally successful in hauling up large weakfish, bluefish, sea-bass and codfish, some of the latter weighing as much as thirty pounds.

The tarpon is the largest fish that is taken in either salt or fresh water on rod and line, and its capture is much sought for by anglers. It grows to a weight of 350 pounds, and specimens have been taken weighing 212 pounds on rod and line. It belongs to the herring family of fishes and inhabits semitropical waters, being numerous during the Spring and Summer months on the East and West coasts of Florida, with straggling specimens as far North as Long Island. The method of angling for tarpon is by anchoring the boat on their feeding grounds and casting a mullet bait from 50 to 100 feet into or near the channel or shallows where they are nosing for food. The proper rod is about six feet in length, with 600 feet of No. 15 Chuttyhunk line on a large, free-running reel, with a drag attached.

RANCHO DEL PASO YEARLINGS.

The Last Batch of the Haggin Thoroughbred Disposed of.

The sale of the Haggin yearlings was concluded at Morris Park yesterday, says the Daily American, of June 3rd, Mr. William Easton disposing of the 44 head remaining unsold for a total of $33,925, an average of $771. This makes a total of $159,525 received for the 133 head disposed of. Yesterday's offerings, with but few exceptions, went at short prices. Yet there was for the entire lot disposed of the very handsome average of $1,154, which is remarkably high and due to the presence of the first get of Salvador.

Details of the sale, with the breeding of the horses offered and the names of the purchasers, are as follows:

Sale of Yearling Thoroughbreds.

At Tattersalls, on the night of June 5th, Mr. Easton sold fifty-odd head of yearlings from the Iroquois, Nantura, Stockwood, Patmos and Old Fort studs of Kentucky. The customary assembly was on hand, and although the bidding was generally slow, the ultimate results were excellent. The colt by Longfellow, dam Belle Knight, brought $7,800, the highest price paid this season for a yearling.

Western Breeders' Sale.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 3.—The Western breeders' sale of yearlings and two-year-olds was held at the Fair Grounds today, and attracted a large crowd of buyers. The sale was conducted by Auctioneer Parmer, of Nashville, Tenn. Many horsemen from Nashville, Memphis, Cincinnati and Louisville were present, and the bidding was spirited. The prices generally ruled good for all the stock offered.

Gen. W. H. Jackson, a two-year-old, by Duke of Kent, dam Gold Bug, was the first animal sold. He was knocked down to J. J. McCafferty for $3,200. Joseph D. Lucas, of the Goodwood Stud, disposed of eighteen yearlings for $8,125, an average of $451.50 a head. A chestnut colt, by Corduroy, out of Grissette, was bought by Starter James McLaughlin for $900. Summary of the sale follows:

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

HORSE BREEDING FARMS OF CALIFORNIA

OAKWOOD PARK STOCK FARM.

The ranches of California which are used for the breeding, rearing and training of fine horses are, without doubt, superior in many respects to those of any other section of the world.

That is the expressed opinion of men who have visited all countries, and who are familiar with the prominent farms at home and abroad. But with few exceptions the encomiums have been restricted to the horses, and the notabilities of turf and track been the chief subjects of portrayal. After them the stables and fields, and paddocks, kindergartens, and adjuncts of breeding and training presented with minute accuracy.

No matter if there were repetitions and reproductions of words and phrases which are found in horsey vocabulary, and none too plentiful to avoid the same worn-out term, there was a pressing necessity to go over and over the descriptions of stallions, of broodmares and foals, of the animals in training, etc., etc., in order to place a satisfactory picture before owners and readers. In following this well-trodden path, however, it strikes me that one of the most important features of breeding racehorses and trotters, and the life which is intimately blended with their production has been, in the main, omitted. That is the homes of those who are connected with the pursuit, especially that class which has engaged in it from the pleasure afforded. In the production of trotters quite a percentage of the large breeders have become interested from the fascination there is in creating, as it may be termed, a type of animals of superior speed and beauty. Wealthy men and with families accustomed to the luxuries of life, and, as a rule, keenly sensitives to the enjoyment which life affords. Not merely sensual life, but that in which animal and mental are in harmony, in which soul and body are educated to a high plane, which demand gratifications of a high order. Those of the palate must not be ignored; those of the brain duly provided for, or the fondly anticipated pleasures will not be forthcoming.

So far as my experience extends there is no part of America, at least, which can compare with California in attractive country residences, or it will, perhaps, be better to state where situations can be obtained which are so admirably fitted for rearing fast horses, and at the same time present such varied attractions for the horses of the class alluded to in the above lines. I have seen many of them between the valley of the San Gabriel and towards the head waters of the Sacramento, from the Pacific Ocean to the Eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada, and not a single place that does not present attractive features, some of them in with such a profusion of desirable "points" that it would appear extremely troublesome to imagine better. It is far from my intention, however, to institute comparisons, and to give one a decided preference, something which candor would not sanction. The purpose of this article is to give a slight sketch of a place which I visited, for the first time, on Saturday last, and that is somewhat remarkable, inasmuch as for the past sixteen years I have been anxious to make the trip, and it was no further away than just beyond the Contra Costa range, and on the southern base of Mount Diablo. Every time when returning from the Bay District course and the double peaks of the mountain came into view the promise was mentally repeated that the very first leisure should be employed in making the journey that was anticipated with so much pleasure. It is not necessary to rehearse the many breaks made in the contemplated visit, and to commence without further circumlocution. Mr. A. H. Cohen, of Fruitvale, drove down to my place from which we started at 1:20 P. M., on a beautiful afternoon, the objective point being Oakwood Park Stock Farm. Just "the rig" for a trip of that kind, a good pair of horses and a light, uncovered roadwagon, roomy and comfortable, and best of all offering no obstructions to a range of vision on every side. From the start a rising grade, up Telegraph avenue, on a gentle slope to the opening of the gorge at the foot of the canyon, and with steeper gradients up, up until the summit is gained. Attractive if somewhat steep, a dense growth of shrubbery, with glimpses of a tiny brooklet laving the roots and then a grand view, westward the ocean, bay, the mountains on the Marin peninsula, to the eastward the summits of Mount Diablo over the tops of those which would rank as high mountains in any of the Middle States of the Union. Right merrily the horses trot down the grade, round bare and shrub covered points with plenty of the yellow poppies, and blue and crimson blossoms, and then the creek leaping over boulders and among alders and vines, and eddies and pools where speckled trout are lurking, and where there is a strong temptation to lie in the shade and listen to the aqueous notes tinkling tales of the past "in this leafy month of June." Few more obstacles to hinder a rapid round trot between the smaller valleys which border the creeks, and then there is a fine gravelled drive through the pretty little town of Walnut Creek, and we turn to the left and in a few minutes the Western boundary of the rancho is past. Close to the track, one mile in circuit, and like a majority of California race courses constructed after the best "regulation" pattern, and kept in tip-top condition. Too late for this day to see the horses at exercise, and without a stop we pass the boxes in which the flyers are domiciled, and a short distance beyond the drive leads through the grounds which suggested the naming of the place. I had heard this described as a valley and in one sense that was appropriate. Bounded by hills on either side, a cross-section of the interval would be nearly level, longitudinally there is quite a slope, enough to give perfect drainage, not a road where there is depression enough for water to lie in the rainy season, and yet so easy of ascent that the grade is scarcely noticed. "Grand old Oaks" in profusion, the deciduous varieties predominating, though occasionally mammoth live oaks, the foliage so heavy that only the lower portion of the branches can be seen, the deep green of the leaves with enameled surfaces making a crown of beauty. Among them fruit trees in plenty, pears, apricots, etc., and then rows of olive trees and almonds, trees twenty inches in diameter and cultivated shrubbery as we approach the house and parterres of flowers, and vines, and the rich soil brought to such perfect tilth, and cultivated with so much care, that the chocolate and amber-colored surface was in perfect keeping with the luxuriant growth on every side. The absence of grass on the lawn struck me at first as being a singular luck, which to perfect the loveliness and make it complete was surely an omission to be regretted, but the explanation changed my views. In the long, dry months of a California summer so great a quantity of water was required to keep the herbage green that there was a constant exhalation under the sunbeams, and that malaria and rheumatic affections a sequence that could not be avoided. Habit, and the songs which have been sung and the poems recited in which the green, grass-covered glade, and daisies, and tripping milkmaids, and the thoroughbred mare and her foal, household pets privileged to feed in the lawn and come for lumps of sugar from fair hands, made pretty pictures, but when the companion piece was a chill, or a twinge of the muscles, and then an acute dart of agony from nerve ends to nerve centers, and sciatica and loss of appetite, the chocolate and amber, and even the darker shades when there is a mixture of adobe in the soil, must be placed above the green, and there is an appropriateness which a fair understanding of the subject will bring sufficient appreciation. Were there clods and weeds, and an absence of careful cultivation, amends would not be made for the ruthless breaking up of the grass which Mr. Boyd insisted upon, but horticulturist and floriculturist would look at the change with hearty approval, and even the most devoted disciple of a Downing, an Olmstead or any other of the high priests of æsthetics, become reconciled to the change.

Less than three hours from the hay to the house stables, and, by the way, that essential part of a country residence is just what it should be for a large establishment of which it is a part—boxes, open stalls, plenty of carriage room, closets, storage for hay and grain, sleeping rooms, etc.—well-planned in the whole and in detail, a handsome structure in every respect, showing that the head of the horse, which is above the carriage way, has a wall eye. Fairly carved, however, but there is a grotesque leer at one from that orbit which has not a parallel in the 250 pair which are taking in the beauties of the scenery in adjoining fields and paddocks.

The team housed and there is a better opportunity for observation. Driving past the house and grounds I was impressed with the fitness of the whole, a closer inspection adds to the appreciation. A large house and yet evidently none too large for family and visitors and the necessary force of servants. A handsome house with just ornamentation enough to give it effect, square and commodious, heavily corniced and with generous-sized windows, but without these fripperies which so oftentimes disfigure country houses as well as those which rule in suburban places.

The stories are high with wide verandas on three sides. On one side of the main entrance an immense mass of passion flowers draping the veranda from ground up, on the other a wistaria of like proportion, both so thrifty that leaves and bloom make a perfect whole. This is the southern exposure. On the east and west there are openings in the vine-clad trellis, the view from the west being a lovely picture of sylvan beauty. The grand oaks, some of which support a growth of ivy, hanging in festoons from every branch, mistletoes pendant from others, and evergreens and shrubbery, and flowers and vistas between the trees through which fall the rays of the setting sun, and away off the golden haze which one knows rests on the far away ocean and through that, as the sun sinks, there is brilliant pathway and for the nonce you are a fire worshipper and offer adorations to the great Father of Light and Life.

A hammock is swung under the canopy of the passion flower, and when the sun god is somewhat too fervent in his embrace, when his beams are unrestricted, in that the siesta is almost too sybaritic. Then there are easy chairs and sofas in that wide veranda, and in the evening in the gloaming to lounge there and smoke and listen to the vesper songs of the birds, and note the shadows falling heavier and thicker, and then the cheery flashes through the windows and the happy, though sad, feelings which retrospection awakens, give way to the charm of music and song, the gay companions in hall and parlor, the merry peals of laughter, jest and repartee without the "sermons and sodawater" which are sure to follow a night of even mild dissipation in urban circles.

This is no fancy sketch of life at Oakwood Park, and though Mr. and Mrs. Boyd are so peculiarly well-fitted for host and hostess of one of the large horse-breeding ranches of our glorious State, with like environments there will be similarity of enjoyments and similarity in capacity of making others enjoy themselves. But this is a break in my intended narrative, or rather description, of a place which Nature has so bountifully endowed and which large expenditure has done so much to perfect. It was planned on an original scale; it was laid out for the purpose of gratifying tastes which required a very large outlay of money to consummate the idea, and by gentlemen of wealth who had abundance of means to ensure completion. A far larger expenditure than would really be necessary to equip a farm for horse and cattle-breeding and training horses; far larger than would be required to make a country residence attractive to people however wealthy; in fact, the natural advantages are so great that moderate outlay would result in giving a more desirable place than could be obtained where scenery, soil and climate were not so favorable. And yet large as the sums expended "figure up" to one who had the means and like tastes to gratify, there is a good return. The house and grounds could not be retrenched without encroaching on the desirability, and the investment which appears to be the most out of the way is that which was needed to erect a large building which has inappropriately been termed "the club-house." Pleasure-house for guests and family will give a better idea for the purpose it was built to serve.

There is a stream a few yards from the rear of the house and which adds greatly to the beauty of the place. Some of the largest of the oaks and other trees grow upon its banks, and such a luxuriance of shrubbery that is almost bewildering. Rustic bridges span it in several places and on a rounded hill just above the creek the building is erected. A very large building with still wider verandas than those of the house, the interior being an assembly room of large dimensions which is lighted from above, surrounded by bedrooms, bathrooms and closets. On a lower floor are ten-pin alleys, the whole being of pleasing design and admirably constructed. There is a still grander view from the veranda on the west side of this building owing to the higher elevation. All of the lower portion of the valley is in sight, and the rounded hills contiguous to the pleasure-house are planted to fruit and olive trees with the same high cultivation which characterizes the plate nearer the dwelling. A rich, dark soil, and it goes without saying that ere many years there will be a good return for the outlay.

On the same side of the creek and embowered among the trees is a laundry, extensive enough to do the work of a large hotel, and at the time of our visit, a Chinaman finishing a big pile of linen, white and crisp as if bleached on gowans. A dairy house not far away, everything tidy, neatness prevailing everywhere.

Although retiring later than my usual custom the intention was to be up betimes, but I had mistaken the influence, Sonnets reigned supreme, and though it could not be termed

"A pleasing land of drowsy heat it was,
Of dreams that wave upon the half-shut eye,
And of gay castles in the clouds that pass,
Forever flushing round a summer sky."

The sound of the puff of the engine and the clang of the bell on the Berkeley train did not awaken one, and if vigilant chanticleer was keeping watch and word he was too far away for his shrill summons to elicit a response. Half-past seven, an hour and a half later than my usual breakfast, and regrets at my indolence, as I perambulated under the oaks, were keener at the loss of ninety minutes at this most enjoyable portion of the day. A call on Superintendent Wiley at the office, and an item of information from him made me resolve that no late-rising should occur on future visits to Oakwood Park. That was where breakfast could be obtained any time after 5:15 A. M., and the place was as neat and attractive as a private room at Marchand's. Mr. Lafferty gets his breakfast there so that he reaches the track in the early morning. Breakfast with the family was a pleasant meal, but then again the early dejeuner, and one later on comes within the range of a hearty appetite, and that is what life with the horses is sure to engender.

A look at the stallions in the big stable, which is built after nearly the same plan as that near the house, though Steinway has quarters by himself, consisting of a paddock containing several acres, and a roomy box which admits him whenever inclined, and better quarters it would be hard to furnish. He is looking as well as it is possible for a horse of seventeen years to be; in fact, a stranger would not call him more than ten, without he got a clew from his teeth, and to do that an expert knowledge would be required. Prince Red, the latest addition to the Oakwood stallions, is a magnificent brown horse, and being by Red Wilkes, from a Mambrino Patchen mare, his breeding is of the gilt-edged order. Derby, however, is my especial favorite, and his clear-cut, intelligent head, powerful development of muscle and general quality would please anyone who was not ultra-hypercritical.

The broodmares, colts and foals range in the fields that lie east of the farm-buildings and the hills on either side of the slope. They are a superior lot in every respect and in admirable condition. Not one which I saw that was thin in flesh, and the foals, from the youngest up, healthy and so full of life that the large fields were none too large for a playground. But as the greatest interest centered in the place, the only notes taken of the animals were those which memory has preserved, and though distinct as to many of those notabilities, will be kept for future reference.

As stated before, the general configuration is a gentle slope between ranges of hills, the five thousand acres embracing some rolling ground. The valley, as it has been termed, widens as we approach the east, and on the further boundary there is a hill which separates it from one which slopes in a contrary direction. There are lateral valleys, one which is projected to the north being one of the most beautiful features. From its borders Mount Diablo ascends, forming the background of the picture, and though the summit is hidden the massive buttresses rise in grand proportions. Some of them are covered with a dense growth of chapparal of a dark green and above that the yellow herbage, the warmer tint making a pleasing contrast. There are glens and ravines and crags, and above all the clear blue sky, with an occasional fleecy cloud resting on the mountain side. There are groups of the large trees in the valleys and clumps of smaller growth, the most conspicuous at this season of the year being the huckeye, with its full, rounded crown and the profusion of white blossoms on their cone-like support. The most skilled landscape gardener would fail in producing as happy an effect as the good Mother shows in her work, though she has scattered her favors so lavishly here that on every side there is enough to elicit admiration. Oakwood has absorbed several farms, and while constituting such a grand whole, there is a feeling of commiseration for those who failed to retain the homes which must have been dear to them.

On the side of the mountain a dam has been built across a ravine and there is a pretty little loch, as a Scotchman would call it, shimmering in the sunlight. Water as clear as that of a mountain stream, and it could not be otherwise as there is no possible chance for contamination, with bath house and boats and a myriad of young black bass, which in a couple of years will give sport for fishermen, and the lake is at such an elevation that there is a pressure of eighty pounds to the inch at the buildings. Miles and miles of piping, not a field, paddock or stable without a full supply, and a surplus for irrigating a field of alfalfa which furnishes lots of green feed for mares and foals, and until the corn blades come into use is a handy apartment for the horses in training.

The track is about three-quarters of a mile from the house, and as $15,000 was expended in the grading, and due care taken that the adjuncts should be first class, that essential part of a breeding and training farm is in keeping. I saw the horses in repose as the work had been concluded on Saturday before arriving, and Sunday is a day of rest. They are looking remarkably well, however, and though the owner and trainer are not given to rosy predictions, it is nearly certain that there will be some prominent performers during the grand circuit credited to Oakwood. Wood looks so much improved from last year that it is not a token of over-sanguineness to say that he has a good show to capture the pacing championship ere the season of 1893 comes to a close. The youngsters are a fine-looking lot, and judging from the satisfied look that the trainer and groomers displayed when some of them were led from their stalls, there is lots of speed among them and not latent at that.

From this imperfect sketch it will be apparent that Oakwood is a very desirable country residence, and that people who could not enjoy life there are sadly deficient in their capacity for enjoyment. Without the horses there is no lack of opportunity for recreation, but to anyone who has the least fancy for fast and fine horses, and other live stock, the pleasures are greatly enhanced. A constant source of pleasure from watching the foals in their gambols to the flights of speed upon the track.

Then the "handiness" of the place. Three hours' drive from Oakland, less than that by rail and ferry to San Francisco, the railway station within easy reach, the pleasures of city and country life can be combined, heightening both.

Mr. Cohen drove over a different route on the return journey, and the interest was increased. The return was by way of Walnut Creek, following the course of the stream for many miles. Sylvan scenery of the highest type, many of the views being perfect pictures of wood, coppice, stream and flowers.

Up Redwood Canyon with nooks and glens, and dells which would delight an artist, and then when the summit was reached, the very top of this portion of the Contra Costa range, a view which would well repay a long, long journey to witness.

I have promised myself a jaunt to the very top of Mount Diablo if the time can possibly be taken during this or the next month. Then I will see more of the horses and he enabled to tell what the horses of this grand rancho is like, and guess, perhaps, at their future.

One important feature has been neglected in the above sketch. That is the climate, and forming an estimate on what I have heard, and the part of two days when there, that is as desirable as the most exacting could wish. Certainly there could not be finer than during my visit.

"TROT FASTER THAN RUN."—From what I learn from other papers some one connected with The American Trotter has raised a huge tumult [by declaring that a horse cannot trot faster than it can run. At least three editors have taken him to task, and one correspondent of the paper in which the offence was committed, outdoes them all by testifying that he drove a horse which could trot faster than he could run, and also writes: "I have driven him with a thoroughbred running-horse following, and the driver of the runner laying the whip on at every bond. I could leave him fifty yards behind going a quarter of a mile." He also adds "He will either run away at a trot or break everything to pieces." That may all be though it only proves that the "thoroughbred running-horse" was the sorriest sort of a jade, not as fast as a Texas steer. I should by all means let him run away at the trot and be pleased to indulge him so long as he could go as fast as the correspondent intimates.

That any sound horse which can trot fast enough to trot a mile in 2:30 or better, can be made to run faster than it can trot, is so well established in my mind that if any one can bring such a specimen of equine singularity here I will enter into "good and sufficient bonds" to pay him well for the trouble and expense of the journey, and a good bonus besides. Or if he is speculatively inclined I will wager two thousand to one thousand dollars or in that ratio up to five thousand dollars, that no sound horse capable of trotting a mile in 2:30 or better, can be produced here which can trot one-quarter of a mile in faster time than he can be made to run the same distance. These proffers are not made in the way of argument but as a token of my faith in the soundness of the position which The American Trotter man has taken.

Any one who will analyze the fast trotting stride, and compare that with the flying gallop, cannot fail to discover that the most faultless trotting action is inferior when the object is to attain the highest rate of speed that the same horse can accomplish. It is not likely that Nancy Hanks can approach the rate of a fast galloper if trained at a gallop, though that she could knock off several seconds from her best trotting mark, for even so short a distance as a quarter of a mile, if put to the test, is reasonably certain.

Apropos of running away at a trot. A man was working for me who had groomed and jogged horses for years, but had never driven at a fast pace. He was driving in company with myself, the horses going about a 2:30 gait when he called for me to pull up. Thinking that something about the harness or sulky had broken, his request was complied with when in answer to the enquiry, what was wrong? he answered: "Tom was running away." He had not made a break but the speed, and the vehicles in close proximity, had rattled him so badly that he was completely demoralized.

A GRAND CIRCUIT IN FACT.—Never before in the trotting history of California has there been such a chance for light harness horses as there will be the present season. From July 22d to October 7th the time is taken up without a missing week, and for quite a portion of this time there will be duplicate meetings, but at such distances apart that no injury will result from the clash. Liberal purses, too, and low rates of entrance in comparison with what has formerly ruled, and a liberal classification enabling horses of nearly every grade to participate.

There is also a prospect that there will be a cutting down of the number of 3 in 5 races and replacing them with 2 in 3 and dashes.

Among other causes for gratification is the adoption of a resolution by the Board of Directors of the San Joaquin Association that there should be no more tilts against time on that celebrated track, and were a similar law passed by all of the associations California would have the honor of being the first State to throw off that incubus on genuine trotting. There is still another point which will insure to the benefit of all, that being arranging the days of trotting so that there will be ample time between like classes. For instance, the 2:20 class will be trotted on the same days of the week at all of the places or when impracticable to have it absolutely on the same day it will be placed as closely thereto as is permissible.

One meeting may commence on Monday and another on Tuesday so that there can only be an approximation to the exact time, but whenever practicable a week will intervene.

Trotting sports are fewer, being moribund on the Pacific Coast in this year of our Lord 1893, and as there is a good prospect of the evils, which now threaten all kinds of sport, being corrected, there are ample grounds to sustain the prediction that trotters and pacers will gain in popular favor hereafter.

GOOD STARTING.—Every candid person who has paid close attention to the starting at the two last meetings of the Breeders' Association must admit that it was far superior to that which usually prevails, and that Captain Harris is worthy of a great deal of credit for the skill he displayed.

A suggestion from H. D. McKinney, of Janesville, Wis., is well worthy of consideration in connection with this subject; that being, that the pole horse, when selected for the others to "score by," should take the outside of the track when returning after a false start, and that the others keep the same relative positions as they will hold when started. The driver of the pole horse shall turn from the outside in, followed by as many as can secure this position without interference. In a large field those which were jogging back on the inside could turn to the left, something after the same way in which a military evolution is effected, and by regularity of movement—imperatively demanded by the judges and infringements punished—the random turning would be done away with and system in place of hap-hazard prevail.

It will be seen at a glance that if a more rigid plan is observed that now obtains regarding marshaling trotters preparatory to a start, one of the greatest drawbacks to prompt starting will be obviated. Mambreno's idea is a good one, and if no more is affected at present than stimulating discussion, that will be a step forward.

THREE PER CENT. ENTRANCE.—It may have been somewhat premature for the P. C. T. H. B. A. to mark the entrance fee at three per cent. on the purse, and the compromise to five per cent. judicious. Especially when that was adopted by the others associations, and owners have gained an important point in obtaining that much relief. And yet there is nearly a certainty that Time will bring further concessions and with an increase of popular support the burden upon owners will be further reduced.

"HOT BLOOD" AND CONTROLLING THE SEX.—Some time ago there appeared a paragraph in a turf paper that little was heard nowadays of near thoroughbred blood in fast trotters and "controlling the sex." It was a queer combination and probably originated in the mind of one who is disgruntled that notwithstanding the obstinately made predictions that near crosses of hot blood would eradicate the trotting tendencies of those which had a flow of cold blood, every year is adding to the number with the infusion which can trot and trot fast, so that there is no longer necessity for advancing arguments further than quotations from Register and Year Book. As to controlling sex anyone who had a fair knowledge of the laws of reproduction and familiar with the principles which lead to conception are well aware that fixing the sex of the future foal by human agency is an impossibility. There is little doubt that the sex is already established in the spermatozoa or ova, probably in the spermatozoa. A large number of these are injected at one service and that which vivifies the egg may be of either sex.

Experiments demonstrate the value of thoroughbred blood in fast trotters; there is no way of carrying the other through a tentative stage.

Jottings From San Luis Obispo.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SAN LUIS OBISPO, June 13.—Boreas has been exercising his lungs of late in this part of the world, and most particularly on the track, so that the youngsters have had a hard time to beat up against him, in spite of this, however, good progress is made, and when the Southern Pacific, now close at hand, runs into town we ought to have many a good one to ship up to try their luck through the Grand circuit.

The Vachell Bros. are working a few good colts and amongst others a black two-year-old filly by Steinway, dam by Guy Wilkes; second dam Alla, by Almont which shows a world of speed. Their two-year-olds and yearlings are also moving and looking well, possessing as a rule, that fast low gait forward, characteristic of a racing sire. Amongst their alfalfa pastures are colts at play which would be an honor to any farm. These gentlemen are caring for an embryo trotter by Acrobat, dam by Chas. Derby; second dam Ramona, by Anteo, which they predict will some day lower the laurels of his famous uncle, W. Wood.

It certainly appears that the San Luis horsemen are beginning to take an intelligent view in regard to the breeding proposition; they are leaving the heaten track which tends more and more to close inbreeding, and are harking back to the old fountain head of trotting speed, the hackney crossed with pacing and thoroughbred blood. The Pioneer Horse Company has been standing this season their imported hackney stallion Lord Mowhray, whose potent blood will endow many a future trotter with action, bone and iron feet, the essentials of a good campaigner.

R. E. Tolle means to be well up with the times, and has shod his mare Bijou with aluminum shoes; it will be interesting to note how this metal will stand the wear and tear of a hard and fast track. Perhaps the expense of shoeing an animal in this manner, may induce his owner to watch his horses' feet more closely, this will amply compensate him for the extra cost.

Bartlett Springs.

To the seeker for health, pleasure or rest the celebrated Bartlett Springs of Lake County meet all requirements in every way. Thousands of delicate people have visited these famous springs and returned fully restored to health. The mountains and valleys team with game of every description, while the mountain streams are unsurpassed as the home for speckled beauties. The pine forests, shady dells and beautiful climate of this place are noted everywhere. The "waters of life" that issue from the mountain side are superior to those of the famous springs at Ems, Germany, and as a table drink they surpass Shaster, Seltzer, Azule, Apollinaris or the other waters so extensively advertised. Read the advertisement and send for a circular; it will give you all the information you wish about the "greatest health resort in the world."

DAVID BONNER, one of the deepest thinking men identified with trotting interests, in a recent interview sizes up matters as follows: "There was a time when I thought mile heats, three in five, necessary to preserve and develop gameness, but now when we have made such progress in breeding, I believe that the system of trotting should be changed. We need dashes at various distances, and mile heats, best two in three, to hold popular interest and enthusiasm. The agitation of the distance will do good, and it strikes me that the proposed change to seventy-five and one hundred yards should be given a universal trial."

The Two-Year-Old Performers of 1892.

[Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

Sires of Two or More Two-Year-Old 2:30 Performers.

Table with columns: NAME, Record, SIRE, DAM BY. Lists various horses and their parents.

Sires of One Two-Year-Old 2:30 Performer.

Table with columns: NAME, Record, SIRE, DAM BY. Lists various horses and their parents.

The above tabulation shows that seventy-eight two-year-olds entered the 2:30 list in 1892. Of this number twenty-eight were performers in California—over one-third of the whole number.

The average speed of the California performers, twenty-eight in number, was 2:25, while the average from all other States, fifty in number, was 2:26.

While but one Eastern sire, Bonnie McGregor, contributed one performer, Adelaide McGregor, to the California lot, California contributed through Chimes, Ansel, Anteros, Anteo, St. Bel, Wildnut, Bell Boy, Egotist and Candidate ten of the performers credited to the Eastern contingent.

Give Adelaide McGregor to the East would make the total number of performers fifty-one; add the performers by California sires to the California contingent would make the number thirty-seven—almost fifty per cent. of the entire production of two-year-old 2:30 performers in America for 1892.

This is a grand showing for our State, and the results an instructive lesson to breeders. Electioneer and his sons give twenty-one of the seventy-eight—a little less than one-third of all.

Through his daughters, Electioneer contributes two, his grandsons Wild Boy and Wildnut one each, and his granddaughter Monique one other.

Green Mountain Maid, Electioneer's dam, contributes two through Lancelot and Antonio.

George Wilkes through his sons contributes thirteen, through his grandsons eleven, and through his granddaughters four.

The Wilkes and Electioneer families are represented in the two-year-old thirty list of 1892 by fifty-five performers leaving a balance of twenty-three to be distributed among all other families in America.

One stallion, General Benton, has contributed five dams that have produced an average speed of 2:24.

Nutwood has four producing dams with an average speed of 2:25.

Up to the year 1880 the handling of colt trotters was in its infancy in California, and no colt had trotted better than 2:31 as a two-year-old in America. In that year the great filly Sweetheart, by Sultan reduced the two-year-old record to 2:26 1/2; later on the gelding Fred Crocker trotted a mile in 2:25 1/2, then the world's record. And now in the short space of twelve years California comes to the front with a representation of 23 two-year-old colts with an average speed as fast as the world's record of 1880.

RIO ALTO.

STEAKING of selling trotters to Englishmen, Dr. J. W. Day, who has tried it, says: "I made nothing upon the horses I sold in England—in fact, there is not much market for trotting horses in England. They want a 2:20 horse for 2 pounds, 20 shillings, and then kick if you do not give them a harness and 'trap,' as they call it, to drive them with."

THE dam of the trotter Albert T., 2:21 1/2, is out of a mare by Whipple's Hambletonian.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

JAMES NOLAN has resigned his position as trainer and driver at Palo Alto.

YOLO MAID paced a half-mile over the Denver track in 1:01½ at Denver on the 9th of June.

ALL of the stalls at the Pleasanton track have been engaged until the return of Salisbury horses.

THERE will be a liberal supply of good horses on the circuit this year, and all the classes will fill well.

MILLARD SANDERS was disappointed in not getting suitable cars to ship the young Sidneys East last Saturday.

HUNTRESS by Arthurton out of Old Huntress by Skenadoah, 2:26, is the dam of Hidalgo, 2:27, and Beverly, 2:30.

F. H. BURKE started for Chicago to-day. Besides "doing" the Chicago exposition he will be on hand when the "Derby" is run.

K. O'GRADY is handling a number of colts and fillies at the Hohart Stock Farm and will have them on the circuit this fall.

WM. HELLMAN, formerly of Santa Rosa, has taken his two Anteo mares, Ella H. and Maud Fowler, to the Petaluma race track.

REMEMBER the sale of A. T. Hatch's choice trotters takes on the 29th of this month. Some rare bargains will surely be secured at it.

THE horsemen of Alameda and Fruitvale find much enjoyment speeding over the Melrose race track; it is kept in splendid order.

IN England as far back as 1542 an act of Parliament made it compulsory for men of wealth to keep trotting stallions for the public good.

OWING to the accident to Monroe Salisbury, the shipment of the Pleasanton string of trotters and pacers will not take place until to-day.

WALTER MABEN, it is said, will have more winners in his string of trotters this year than any other trainer who will appear on the California circuit.

PEEP-O-DAY, by Dawn, that is in John Splan's string, won his first race in a field of seven starters. The time was slow, however: 2:54½, 2:53, 2:52½.

T. C. SNIDER, of Sacramento, will not bring his string of trotters out of the State. He will have Creole, 2:20; Duhec, 2:27½, and a few "green ones" on the circuit.

A YEARLING by Frazier's Secretary out of Elmorene by Elmo, trotted a quarter at the Petaluma track last Saturday in forty five seconds, and she is hardly broken yet.

EVA W., 2:25½, sister of Redwood, 2:27, by Nutwood, has a bay colt at foot by Advertiser, 2:16, and has been bred to Kremlin, 2:07½. She is owned by Ariel Lathrop.

THE grand circuit has been formed, and owners of trotters and pacers in California will have no reason to complain of the arrangement of places nor the conditions adopted.

JOHN KELLY, the well-known driver at Pleasanton, recently drove Dr. H. Latham's big chestnut Dexter Prince mare a mile in 2:28. It was the first full mile she has had.

IT is understood that perhaps Andy McDowell will handle the gray filly Secret that belongs to Payne Shafter, as that gentleman has hardly time enough to devote to her training.

THE trotters and pacers have again been compelled to leave the Bay District track. Many have gone to Oakland, while a few have been shipped to San Jose, Petaluma and Napa.

PEEP O'DAY by Dawn is winning his races and lowering his record wherever he goes; his mark is 2:35 made in a race at Dayton, Ohio, June 2d; he heat a field of six trotters.

JAMES DUSTIN, of Santa Rosa, has had two good trotters sent to him, viz., Shylack, 2:16½, by Tom Benton, and Vidette, 2:23½. Both of these will be prepared for the fall campaign.

THE trotters belonging to I. DeTurk, of Santa Rosa, that are stabled at the Petaluma track, are in charge of that excellent reinsman, George Locke. Everyone is moving and looking well.

HENRY HELLMAN is busy preparing a number of young Dawns at the Agnew Stock Farm's race track. This is the first year the progeny of Dawn, 2:18½, the Dandy of the Turf, has had a fair show.

THE Dexter Prince gelding, Fitzsimmons, that got his record of 2:20 at the Bay District track last August, has been turned out. His trainer and driver, John Gooby, has taken charge of T. W. Moore's string of trotters.

P. J. WILLIAMS had twelve horses in the car he shipped from San Jose to Montana last week. There were nine trotters and three hangtails, and all will render a good account of themselves before the snow falls on the Sierras.

A. A. HUNTER, of Sacramento, is the proud possessor of a handsome colt by Noonday out of a Prompter mare, second dam Madame Buckner by Tom Hal. It is a pure-gaited fast-moving trotter and will be seen on the circuit.

MARY MAGDALENE, the chestnut three-year-old daughter of Superior, trotted the second heat in the three-year-old stake at Denver in 2:27½. She is engaged in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN'S Futurity stake to be trotted this fall.

CAPT. BEN E. HARRIS sent three of his most promising trotters to the Petaluma race track. They are Melvar, 2:24½, Phantom and Rival. Ben Bowman, who has Robert S. Brown's horses in his string, will handle this trio of good ones.

MEYERS & MEYERS, of Pleasanton, recently lost a fine mare by Simmons. She foaled a beautiful filly by Wilkes Boy only a few days previous to her death. Mr. Meyers placed the youngster in charge of another broodmare, and at last accounts the little one was doing well.

IT is hard to tell at what period in the life of a stallion he is at his best. This is illustrated in Joe Bassett, who was but two years of age when he sired Johnson, 2:06½, and Tom Hal, who was twenty-three years of age when he sired Hal Pointer, 2:04½.

"THE Director-Electioneer filly Inspiration, purchased by Mrs. A. P. Severance, of Los Angeles, is doing well at Los Angeles, and when thoroughly conditioned will go down the line with the best of them," is the way a subscriber, who was recently visiting Los Angeles, speaks of this valuable filly.

THERE are more California-bred horses to be seen on the Eastern circuits than ever before, and there are some very good ones among them. The one that is supposed to carry home the crown as king among trotters, Directum might be superseded by some other youngster that is very little spoken of at present.

THE handsomest colts and fillies ever seen on the Rancho del Paso Stock Farm are by Knight, 2:28½, out of the Albert W., Nutwood and Echo mares there. Knight is by Woodford Wilkes, out of China Wilkes (dam of Jenny Wilkes, 2:21½), by Adrian Wilkes; second dam Mambrino Queen, by Mambrino Patchen 58.

ALMAMONT, a fine young trotting horse belonging to Henry Wortman, of Griffin Creek, Oregon, met with an accident at Central Point last week which will probably prove fatal. While being broken to drive, the animal reared and fell over backwards, striking on his head and neck. His neck is badly swollen, and the extent of the injury is not known.

F. H. BURKE purchased Bright Eyes, by Gen. Benton, at the first Stanford brood mare sale. Since then two of her produce have entered the 2:30 list, Marvin, 2:25½, and Brilliant, who lowered her record in the third heat of a winning race at Denver on the 9th, to 2:24½. Bright Eyes has a colt by Eros at her side, and is in foal to this handsome sire again.

DR. THOMAS McCLOY, president of the State Board of Veterinary Surgeons, while returning in a buggy with a lady to Petaluma from the club-house at Lakeville last Monday, were accidentally thrown to the ground by the overturning of their conveyance. The lady was uninjured, but Dr. McCloy had his arm dislocated at the elbow-joint and was seriously injured.

SIDNEY'S entire list of 2:30 performers came from mares that if sold, when bred to him, would not average $150. The class of mares mated to him during the past two years were superior to them, however, in every way. Now that the horse will be mated with some of the choicest matrons in the East it can easily be figured out that his list of performers will increase rapidly.

WE do not know of a single fast mile by a trotting stallion which can fairly be said to equal that of Palo Alto when he made his record of 2:08½ on three legs. The horses which have beaten his time have had the advantage of the bicycle sulky, and this should not be overlooked in discussing the merits of the champion trotting stallions.—National Stockman and Farmer.

BUCKNAM & CARRAGHERS' fine Dexter Prince colt Geo. Dexter is now three years old and is fit to go into a race at any time. His game race at the spring meeting with Alfreda by Steinway will not be forgotten by those who witnessed it; many claim that it was the best contested event ever seen between two-year-olds in California. Geo. Dexter will get a low mark this year.

AN American horse lately distinguished himself in the Emerald Isle. At a trotting meeting held at Newtownard, near Belfast, the black four-year-old colt, Dark Wilkes, won first money in the free-for-all trot. The race was two-mile heats, and Dark Wilkes won them in 5:40 and 5:27. This colt was sired by Wilmar, dam by Buccaneer, and was bred and raised by E. P. Denton, of Hancock County, Ill.

DIRECTOR JR., the coal-black son of Director and Brainerd by Echo, since being owned by P. F. Shields of Sacramento has had a most successful season in the stud. He is looking splendidly, and from the class of mares sent to him there is no doubt he will become noted as a sire. His brother Cor-rector has a number of promising trotters around Pleasanton, and he is now standing for public service in the last. These horses were both very speedy.

WHITE CAP, the gray gelding that is said to have paced so fast at Pleasanton will, we fear, prove a dangerous one to bet on. If he ever breaks it is all up with him, and those who are "inside" will not wager all their money on him. The "dangerous uncertainty" of his performances can be traced to the uncertainty in his pedigree and a disposition to stop and consider when he makes a mistake. We trust he will agreeably disappoint many who have watched his career.

IT is reported that Arion is being worked this spring and is moving exceedingly well. When one thinks of this colt's two-year-old record of 2:10½, and considers what it means for a colt of that age to draw an old style sulky in that phenomenal time, he cannot help but think that his is the best record on the books. Great as many other performances have been, and difficult to lower as the several records are, the two-year-old trotting record is undoubtedly the hardest one to break, and will probably stand to the credit of Arion for many years to come.

A NEBRASKA farmer tells an exchange that a remedy for scours that has never failed for colts is raw eggs. The best way is to break the egg in a cup, hold the animal's head up, open the mouth and drop in, keeping the head up until swallowed. Don't be afraid of giving too many, anywhere from four to six at a time, and then in a short time repeat the dose; have known as high as two dozen to be given in a day. Milk, in which mutton caul fat has been boiled, is also an excellent remedy for scours.

WM. McCLAUGHLIN, formerly with W. J. Ijams, of Terre Haute, is now at Haywards race track, San Mateo, handling Panjah, El Pastore, a green trotting mare by Connaught, a three-year-old by Reverisco, and a four-year-old mare by James Madison, 2:17½. Mr. McLaughlin is a son of the late W. J. McLaughlin, who brought out Mambrino Gift, 2:20, Lady Turpin, 2:23, Bay Billy (pacer), 2:13, and others. This young man is a chip of the old block, and has brought out Chimes E., 2:17; Gaslight, 2:23; Chiquerta, 2:27; Nemesis, 2:23; Glenwood Prince, 2:28, and others, and is considered one of the best drivers that ever came to California. We shall see him on the circuit this fall.

ONE of the best-known breeders in this part of the country was talking in the presence of a Toledo Journal reporter the other day about "like producing like," when he made the following remark: "I tell you I don't want a sire on my farm that doesn't look like a stallion. There's not a sire or speed in America to-day that doesn't bear all the marks of a stallion clearly and distinctly himself. Form and breeding are all right, but for me I want a horse at the head of my farm stud that no one can mistake for anything but a stallion."

TENNYSON is the name chosen by Chas. W. Welby for his yearling colt by Electricity, 2:17½, out of Swift, by Sidney, 2:19½; second dam Bay View Maid, by Gen. Benton; third dam Minnie, by Skenadoah; fourth dam Lottie, by Williamson's Belmont. Swift, the dam of this colt, is training, and two others of Bay View Maids' produce will also go in the 2:30 list this year. Tennyson is being gently handled by John Kenner "Curly Jack" at San Mateo and shows that he will need very little work to make him a very fast trotter. As for as his breeding he can be truthfully called "royally-bred."

DEXTER PRINCE had a number of wonderful trotters appear on the turf last year, but this year few of them will appear. Aster, 2:16, is laid up, but may be ready in September. Crown Prince, 2:17½, is used as a road horse; so is Chice, 2:24. Dexter Princess, 2:24, is the mother of a Palo Alto filly; Fitzsimmons, 2:20, is turned out; Jessie, 2:22, and Maggie, 2:20, are in the East; Cherokee Prince, 2:22½, is out of the pacing contingent; Iree, 2:25, is bred to El Benton; Princess Alice, 2:16, is in the East, and it is doubtful if she will appear again on the turf; Lottery Ticket, 2:19, James L., 2:29½, and Erin, 2:29½, are the only ones that may be seen on the race track out of the eighteen that trotted and paced during 1891 and 1892.

THE secretary at Tulare writes: "The Board of Directors of the Forty-third Agricultural District, comprising Tulare and King counties, will hold its first annual fair and speed contest October 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th, 1893; being the week after the Fresno fair as now dated. It is the intention of the management to make this fair a success in every respect, and innovations will be made on the usual plan of holding fairs on this Coast. Some of the most representative men in the two counties are bestirring themselves in the preliminary work, and you will undoubtedly hear good reports from here next October.

AN observant old timer who has been at every race meeting in California for years, remarked at the Bay District Track to a number of horsemen: "There is one strange feature I always notice at trotting meetings and that is that there are so many owners and trainers who bring their horses to the track, enter them in all the events they can and then go around boasting, if one of the colts should win, that the youngster was only taken up three weeks and this is the first time it was given a mile. It's too thin. I always look upon such a fellow as either a knave or a fool. Horsemen who have spent the better portions of their lives as I have, handling trotters and pacers, know that the horse or filly never was foaled that can go out with that little work and trot two or three heats steadily in 2:35, without being put in condition. Idle boasting does not help the trainer or the colt one bit."

MONROE SALISBURY is confined to his bed at his residence here, and will be unable to start with his stable of fast trotters and pacers which will leave Pleasanton this morning. He was at the Pleasanton track last Saturday watching the "workouts," and after he had seen San Pedro go by, he stepped over to see if the horse's hoof struck the ground fairly as the gelding had been a "little off" for a few weeks and he was afraid he was not moving square. As he was watching the impressions on the soil, a big mare driven by a young man came along very rapidly, and before Mr. Salisbury noticed it the animal and sulky struck him with sufficient force to knock him about ten feet away. He was picked up, and Dr. Latham, Millen Griffith, and Joe Neal and others did all they could to make him comfortable on his trip to his home in this city. Upon examination it was ascertained that the principal injury consisted of a badly wrenched leg, which will prevent him from leaving his residence for some weeks. Mr. Salisbury had a very narrow escape.

WHILE speaking of the greatness of the Alexander Button's as trotters and pacers the other day, Wm. Hendrickson, the gentleman who owned and brought Geo. M. Patchen Jr. to California, remarked "His sire, Alexander, was a real good horse, too. I remember his dam Lady Crumb; she was a yellow bay mare with blaze and four white legs that Alexander Ely, a prominent San Francisco attorney, used to drive on the roads. It took a very fast trotter to heat her and she could keep trotting as long as her competitors would. I don't believe Patchen was ever bred to a gamer one. When the foal came in 1864 it was a high-headed, aristocratic-looking fellow, and he received the name of Alexander after Mr. Ely. He trotted in 2:31½, and got a three-mile record of 7:54½. The old mare was bred back to Patchen, but I think the colt died. She was bred to Whipple's Hambletonian one year and produced that good-looking, blaze-faced horse Gen. Dana, that William Bihler owned for a long time. Lady Crumb came out from the East and was by Brown's Bellfounder, at least that was the pedigree Mr. Ely always claimed for her and he ought to have known."

THE grading on the new race track at the State Fair grounds, Salem, Oregon, will be finished next week, probably about Thursday. Then only the smoothing, harrowing and sprinkling will remain to be done to put the track in condition for the races. Thirty-three teams are now employed in this work, but after next week only a few will be retained to finish up. The grading of the north turn, which is by far the heaviest on the whole track, is already practically completed. The straight stretches will not require much work. The old track has not as yet been interfered with where the new one crosses it. It is kept in good condition for horsemen who need it to exercise their stock. Next week a number of horses will leave to participate in the races at Independence, and from there go to Portland and Vancouver before returning here. During their absence the old track will be abandoned and the new one put in prime condition. One of the running horses entered for the July races, and of whom much is expected, is Charles Foster's Billy Ayers, by Connor, is entered in three races. During the past seven years, while Superintendent Wilson has had charge of the State Fair track there has not been a single instance of a horse going lame there. This is not merely good fortune, but is the result of skillful management of the track. Mr. Wilson says this track cannot be excelled.

The Saddle.

GREEN B. MORRIS has purchased Illume from John E. Madden of Lexington, Ky., for $9,000.

THE horsemen gathered at Chicago, have formed the same opinion of Peter the Great that we have—he is a wonder.

TILLIE S. ran a big nail into her foot last Tuesday, but it did not lame her as badly as such things usually do, we are happy to state.

PLANTONI is regarded as the most reckless jockey at Hawthorne, and when "Piano" yells to get through the other boys generally make room for him to pass.

FRANK SHAW has definitely announced that there will be no race meeting at St. Paul, Minn., this year. He thinks it would be impossible to get together good horses.

STARTER JIMMY McLAUGHLIN last week fined Jockey Fred Jordan $1,000 for disobedience at the St. Louis meeting. Jockey Mike Hennessy was, we understand, also fined $500.

DAN DENNISON won another race at St. Louis on the 9th inst. with Fatalily, the Sir Modred—Faux Pas filly, and Una Colorado, trained by Dick Havey, ran third in the same event.

GYPSY GIRL, a two-year-old filly in Eastin & Larahie's string, by Sir Modred, dam Gypsy, by War Dance, won a six-furlong dash at Latonia on the 3d, beating a fine field of youngsters.

GEORGE MANSUR, the English light-weight jockey, who came to this country to ride the Duke of Beaufort's horses at Chicago on June 7th, secured a license to ride on the Board of Control tracks.

NORMAN BROUGH left for Chicago and the East last Monday night in the interest of the Blood Horse Association particularly, but will incidentally take in the great Washington Park meeting at Chicago.

MATT STORN's string arrived in Chicago last Sunday night in good shape, and after being given some exercise, proceeded on its way to Morris Park, Westchester, where fourteen stalls have been reserved.

EL RENO, a three-year-old colt by Emperor of Norfolk, dam Experiment, by Monarchist, won a six-furlong race in 1:16½ at Latonia on the 9th inst. Dow Williams is training this fellow, and is doing excellent work.

DR. HASBROUCK, by Sir Modred, dam Sweetthriar, won the New Rochelle Handicap by a neck at Morris Park on the 9th inst. Stonenell drove it out with the winner the last sixteenth of a mile. The seven furlongs were run in 1:26½.

DANIEL EISEMAN, the well-known pool-seller, left for Salt Lake Wednesday night, having just time to finish his big cattle sale for Killip & Co., and catch the train. The Salt Lake meeting which begins to day promises to be a grand one.

AT the Sydney (N. S. W.) Hunt Club races last month (amateur riders), Nihilist, gray horse, 5 years, by Suwarrow, dam Topaz, by Fireworks, won The Lady's Bracelet, one mile, carrying 154 pounds, in 1:45½—a cracking good performance.

THE Board of Control on June 7th adopted the following rule, which is made an additional paragraph to Rule 64: "If a horse shall weigh in short of weight, every horse in the race belonging wholly or in part in the same interest shall be disqualified."

JOHN A. MORRIS has sent word to England to engage for him five seasons to Isinglass, winner of the Derby, during the first season of the horse in the stud. Mr. Morris will have five American-bred mares bred to him if the services of the horse are secured.

JOCKEY CLAYTON is not to be investigated by the Board of Control after all. It seems the charges of having pulled Comanche were not pressed by either Starter Rowe or Patrol Judge Fitzgerald, and there was no case against the jockey to go before the Board.

LAST Monday California horses did nobly at the East. Una Colorado (by Joe Hooker, dam Jessie R.), won for Charles L. Fair at St. Louis. Princess ran second and Pescador third at the same place. At Latonia Dolly McCone ran third to Clifford in a mile dash, run in 1:40½, close to the track record at the distance.

SPEAKING of the desire of Senator Stanford not to play second fiddle to anyone as far as having a renowned stallion at the head of Palo Alto is concerned, we have it on very good authority that his choice will be an American horse of reputation, not an English one. And the horse in view is on the turf and doing splendid work.

ROBERT B. MILROY, Secretary of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, left last Monday night for Chicago. He will on the trip, combine business with pleasure, and doubtless influence a number of Eastern owners to race their horses at the great fall meeting of the Blood Horse Association.

MANSUR, the English Jockey who is over here to ride the Duke of Beaufort's Strathrose in the American Derby, had his first ride on an American race course yesterday. He had the mount on Aurelian in the second race, but could make no show, as the colt seems to be of little account.—N. Y. Times, June 7.

IN 1886 Longview (sire of Billy Murry's Belfast) defeated Eole and other cracks of the turf in the Metropolitan Handicap, mile and a half, at Jerome Park. He did the distance in 2:38 with 113 pounds up. As a three-year-old he had to his credit a defeat of the aged celebrity, Parole, at a mile and an eighth, and he beat the crack mare Wanda and Richmond for the Breckinridge Stakes, two miles, at Baltimore.

"DOCK" CUSHING and John Orth, who have been in partnership for some time, have divided their stable, Mr. Cushing retaining Boundless, Lookout and Torrent, and all of the oldest stake horses, Mr. Orth taking the younger ones. The dissolution of partnership was effected one afternoon last week. The stable has just come here from St. Louis, and it was only last recently that Lookout won a good race at Hawthorne. He is now a prominent Derby candidate.

HIS HIGHNESS, when he made a dead heat with Raceland in the Hudson Handicap, ran one mile and three-sixteenths in 2:00½, with 124 pounds up. Lorenzo's fastest on record, 1:59½, also made in his four-year-old form, was with 104 pounds up, certainly not as good a performance as His Highness.

GEORGE MANSUR, who will ride Strathrose for the Duke of Beaufort in the American Derby, arrived at New York, June 2d. He is a light weight and can do 95 pounds. His father is W. H. Manser, the well-known trainer of Newmarket. George Mansur is considered a very promising lad by many good judges.

THE work of building the cooling-out sheds and saddling paddocks at the north of all the stands at the Bay District track is well under way. The old rookeries of stables that stood on "Windy Row" have been torn down to make room for the new trainers' and jockeys' stands, paddocks, etc., and people will not know the old place when the hell rings in the fall meeting.

SECRETARY CRICKMORE, ever on the alert to provide new conveniences for trainers and the public alike, has adopted a feature in the official programmes at Morris Park that might be imitated to advantage at other courses. The entries for each race are preceded by the record time for the distance, thus enabling the spectators to form a quick comparison of the running of each race.

W. O'B. MACDONOUGH won the rich Casanova Stakes at Morris Park last Monday with the two-year-old sister to Sir Walter—Milan. Kentigerna, the favorite, was second, and Miss Lily third, time for the six furlongs, 1:11. Singularly enough, Sir Walter, Milan's three-year-old brother, won the previous race, mile and sixteenth, in 1:47½. Milan's odds ranged from 60 to 100 to 1.

FOLLOWING are the probable starters in the rich American Derby of 1893: Chorister (Taral), Don Alonzo (Lanley), Oporto, Lookout (Kunze), Floodgate, Dare (Hill), Clifford, Buck McCann (Thorpe), Strathrose (Mansur), Fidelia (Miller), Lady Bess (Morris), Sir Francis (Garrison), St. Croix, G. W. Johnson, Monowai, High Penny (McCafferty), Ramapo, Rainhow and Eltham Queen.

THERE has been considerable talk about the Sir Modreds not "going the route." Tournament and Dr. Hashrouck being given as notable instances. As Plaything and Sweetthriar, the dams of these horses, only run back five generations on the dam's side of the house, of the same line, the argument will not hold good. Comanche seems able to go on well enough to beat crackerjacks over a distance of ground.

DANNY MILLER of San Francisco, well-known to horsemen all over the West, was in the judges' stand yesterday at Overland Park. He has sent his famous mare Charmion on to Chicago, together with his colts Gordius, Relampago and Ida Glenn. Accompanying these were Charles Trevathan's mare Genoa and C. W. Chapell's horse Peel, the crackerjack of California as a three-year-old.—Denver Daily News, June 6.

ON Saturday of next week there will be a purse of $500 hung up by Schwartz & Co. for a Reporter's Derby, mile and a half. The rider must be connected with the staff of some local paper. Ben Benjamin, Frank Cusack and several other lights of the sporting press have declared themselves in, and it is understood that Cusack cunningly collared Canny Scott as soon as he had heard of the offer of the purse. It is shillings to pennies that two-thirds of the "riders" fall off before the Darby is finished.

BEN WRIGHT, lessee of the Oakland race track, will widen the inside course considerably, making its width at least fifty feet all the way around. This will be finished in time for the Golden Gate Fair in August, and thus an excellent innovation will be introduced. The outside course will be hardened and used exclusively by the harness performers, the inside by the gallopers alone. The Golden Gate Fair officials contemplate having seven races of an afternoon—four running and three trotting or pacing, sandwiching the events so that there will be waits of not over twenty minutes between races.

IT seems that the scheme to establish racing in Mexico backed with American capital may be successful. Advices from the West state that Col. R. C. Pate has reached the City of Mexico and will begin work at once on his race-course, which he intends to have ready by Nov. 1st. The site secured is at El Penon de las Banas Hot Springs. For the opening day Col. Pate announces the Mexican Derby, with $5,000 added money. He expects that with the nominations and entries the value of the stake will be $20,000. Mr. Pate has a score of secretaries with him to look after the enormous correspondence he receives from American horsemen relative to his venture.

MARCUS DALY arrived in New York last week from Montana for the express purpose of witnessing his great colt, Tammany, run in next Tuesday's Suburban Handicap. On Tuesday he went down to Sheephead bay to see the colt work, and much to his mortification the brilliant son of Iroquois and Tlallahoma pulled up lame. On being examined by Matt Byrnes it was found that his off forefoot had split. Thus all hopes of seeing him oppose Lamplighter must be abandoned. Such a regrettable incident has not happened on the turf for many days, and apart from Tammany being a strong, popular favorite for the coming big struggle, it is a deep and sad blow to his owner, who ranks among that element of owners which so greatly benefit the turf. Mr. Daly will now rely on The Pepper.

A PECULIAR thing was noticed one day last week by frequenters of the Oakland pool-room. At Gloucester, N. J., an excellent rider named Ham had the mount on Hyacinth, Artillery and Minnie J. in the first three races of the day. As the first letters of these horses' names spell "ham," and they were all ridden by Ham, it struck some genius that it would be a good idea to make a "ham" combination. Scores of others followed in his wake, and soon the combination man had to shut down on the supply of ham or ruin the institution. There was a child-like grin on the faces of the buyers of "ham" when Hyacinth won. It changed into a soft laugh when Artillery won, and when Minnie J. was first past the post the rafters of the newly-erected building creaked and shook with the roars of applause emitted from the throats of the buyers of "Our Choice" ham. Who says there's nothing in a name?

FLOODGATE won his initial Eastern race last Tuesday at St. Louis. It was a mile affair in the mud, and he did the distance in 1:47½. Green Hock, Holly's Derby colt, won a five furlong dash at the same place Tuesday, add Guido ran third. Mary Stone, by Sir Modred, won a mile race at Morris Park in 1:40½. At Latonia Baldwin's El Reno won a mile and 70-yard dash in 1:47, Yo Tamhien ran second to Maid Marian in the Merchants' Stakes, mile and an eighth, in 1:53, and Galindo was third to Seleua D. and Chimes, the mile being run in 1:41½. Verily the California horses are showing well.

GEORGE MANSUR will have his first mount in America on one of Mr. W. O'B. Macdonough's horses to-day. If his work is as good as his English reputation would lead one to suspect he may sign with the stable. Mr. E. D. McSweeney, Mr. Macdonough's representative, would like to have him if he is a capable jockey, and while Mansur would not make any engagement without consulting his father, he may be permanently retained. Manser says the Duke of Beaufort's Derby candidate, Strathrose, is a stayer, which makes his chances at least a fair one with the lot that are in.—Daily America, June 6.

THE career of Isinglass has but few precedents on the English turf. Trained at Newmarket by Jim Jewett, he made his debut on that historic heath in a two-year-old maiden plate and entirely eclipsed a field of ten, winning literally pulled up. At Ascot he captured the New Stakes in almost as easy fashion, the unfortunate Ravensbury being behind. Returning to Newmarket he won the Middle Park plate, or two-year-old Derby, in an equally easy manner, Ravensbury being second, Le Nicham third and Raehurn fourth. He was then retired for the winter, but the hook-makers were hushy with his name, and he shared with Squire Ahingdon's Meddler the position of winter favorite for the Derby. The disqualification of the last-named, owing to the Squire's death, left Isinglass without a foeman worthy of his steel. His recent victories in the Two Thousand Guineas and Newmarket Handicap were achieved in the same easy way, and to quote Col. North: "He would have won the Two Thousand running away had not Loates pulled him back twice to the extreme rear."

THAT we are going to have a decidedly short supply of high class three-year-olds is unfortunately too evident, and any man who owns a reasonable good colt, such an animal as Chorister may be expected to be, is sure to win good money. Early as it is, several have been tried and found wanting. Rainhow has been found to be an animal of poor courage. G. W. Johnson is at best a magnificent cripple. Don Alonzo is a sprinter, and Sir Francis, though he has not been much in public, has by no means delighted the eyes of critics since he put in an appearance at Morris Park. Most important of all is the fact that Chorister is engaged in the American Derby. Of course, as yet we do not know whether he can go the Derby distance, but there is more reason to suppose that he can than that he cannot. He is a rare, stoutly-bred one, very closely inbred to Lexington, and tracing with but little interval to the great Levity family. He should be a racehorse of courage and stamina, and, though it has been deemed advisable to decorate him with a rogue's badge, still he seems to run kind and true enough in the hands of a man. His form has made some impression at Chicago, but if anybody wants to get a bet on the big event he should snap all the 30 to 1 against this colt that Joe Ullman will give. It probably will not be much.—Francis Trevilian in Daily America.

THE revised sheets in the "future" books for the American Derby reached this city last week. Many changes have been made. Don Alonzo has been cut from 6 to 4 to 1, and Rainhow has gone back from 4 to 8 to 1. Cadmus, Lady Violet and Monowai have also receded in the betting, while Lookout is now an even favorite, with Don Alonzo and G. W. Johnson at 4 to 1. The following list includes the most probable starters, with the latest odds: Buck McCann, full, Chiswick 40 to 1, Cadmus 30 to 1, Clifford 20 to 1, Chorister full, Don Alonzo 4 to 1, Dare 10 to 1, Decapod 50 to 1, Enthusiast 50 to 1, Eltham 50 to 1, Evranus 40 to 1, Fort Worth 50 to 1, Floodgate 10 to 1, Fidelia full, G. W. Johnson 4 to 1, Greenhock 50 to 1, Hasty full, Hugh Penny full, Ingomar 10 to 1, Lady Violet 40 to 1, Lookout 4 to 1, Martinet 20 to 1, Miles Standish 30 to 1, Monowai 30 to 1, Plutus 50 to 1, Perdition 50 to 1, Prince Deciever 20 to 1, Runyon 15 to 1, Rainhow 8 to 1, Ramapo full, Reynard 50 to 1, Sabine 50 to 1, Strathrose 15 to 1, St. Croix 40 to 1, Sir Francis full, Spartan 20 to 1, San Francisco 50 to 1, St. Leonard 10 to 1, Turquoise 50 to 1, Tyro full, The Reaper 20 to 1, Tiny Tim 50 to 1, Voorhies 40 to 1, Wormser 30 to 1, Walnut 30 to 1, and Will Elliott 30 to 1. The other entries are quoted from 60 to 1000 to 1. The above quotations are those of Munsell & Co. of New York. The extravagant odds of 20 to 1 are offered against Martinet. It is 100 to 1 that the colt will not be in Chicago on Derby day. No less than eight horses are marked full, while three are at 4 to 1.

"OUR American cousins" are to be congratulated upon the fact that Mr. C. E. Lowe will leave by the Alameda on her next trip, accompanied by two thorough representatives of the Chester stock, Stromboli and Clieveden. Clieveden is a fine raking stallion, and the sire of several good ones. He is by Yattendon from Lady Chester, by Stockwell from Austrey, by Harkaway, from Zeila, by Emilius, from Apollonia, by Whisker, etc. Clieveden's sire, Yattendon, was the champion of his day, and as a sire has had few equals. He was by Sir Hercules from Cassandra, by Tros (imp.) from Alice Grey, by Rous' Emigrant (imp.) from Gulnare (imp.), by Young Gohanna. Stromboli is a beautifully-bred fellow, for he is by Chester from the speedy Etna, by the celebrated Maribyrnong from The Alpaca, by Kingstou from Lilla (the dam of Javelin and Commodore), by New Clum, from Eva, by Young Marquis, etc. Among the many good races won by Stromboli are the V. R. C. Sires' Produce Stakes, the A. J. C. Sires' Produce Stakes, A. J. C. First Foal Stakes, A. J. C. Derby Hawkesbury Guineas, and the Sidney Cup, 2 miles, with 8st up, in 3 minutes 21½ seconds. Chester (Stromboli's sire and full brother to Clieveden) was a wonderfully good performer, and classed among his victories are the A. J. C. Champagne Stakes, Breeders' Plate, Sires' Produce Stakes, Mares' Produce Stakes, Cumberland Stakes (twice), A. J. C. Plate (twice), Randwick Plate, Spring Stakes (twice), and the Craven Plate, while the V. I. C. events that have fallen to his share are the Derby, Melbourne Cup, Mares' Produce Stakes, Town Plate and the Melbourne Stakes (twice). Mr. Lowe has done well for his constituents, and the introduction of the Chester blood into America will mark an era in the turf of that great continent.—Sydney Mail.

Just previous to this journal going to press, it was reported that Monroe Salisbury is rapidly recovering from the injury he received at Pleasanton last Saturday, and may be able to go East in a fortnight. It would be a great hardship for him to keep away from his string of "pets" on the circuit this year.

The Grand Circuit.

The last convention of delegates from the various associations comprising the Grand Circuit, was remarkable for the harmony which prevailed. The moving forward of the meetings of the P. C. T. H. B. A., Oakland, Napa, Vallejo and Petaluma, while it may, in a measure, affect the horticultural and agricultural exhibits in the latter three places, the extra additions of entries to the races from Woodland and Vallejo, and the prospects offered horsemen for the extension of the season of trotting and pacing, will more than compensate for losses in the other departments. The thoroughbreds that will be through racing at the Bay District Track will also follow the circuit, and a greater interest will be taken in their appearance than ever. Where there have been only a few entries at the races given at all previous meetings, there will be dozens this year. The "drawing power" of the "Sport of Kings" cannot be denied by every observant citizen, and as the jockeys have been taught to "ride to win," the people who have not seen first-class racing between the "bangtails" for years, will have an opportunity of witnessing races they will never forget.

The rule adopted at the convention of representatives, that the amount of entry shall be uniform throughout that portion of the Grand Circuit, which they represent, i. e., five per cent. and five per cent. from winners, is one that will receive the endorsement of every horse owner, and the entry lists will be twice as large as when ten per cent was charged.

The two-in-three system will also be in vogue and dash races can be "sandwiched," thus keeping up public interest so that all that remains now, is for the officers to give as many races as possible every afternoon and allow no long waits between events. Money will come into the towns where the meetings is held, for a large number of horsemen and their friends are sure to follow the races; therefore, it becomes an imperative duty for the directors of every association to do their utmost to make the meetings of 1893 so attractive that the attendance in 1894 will increase at least four-fold.

The placing of Vallejo and Woodland within the circuit will open up new fields for horsemen and attract the attention of visitors to the many advantages these long neglected places possess. The citizens of these two cities will see what an impetus to all kinds of business the annual race meeting gives, and farmers and stockmen with their families who have long wished to enjoy the week's annual vacation, will have an opportunity of doing so and at the same time enjoy seeing races between the best horses in California.

After the Stockton meeting horsemen can choose between San Jose and Fresno, as the associations from these two live cities have decided to hold their meetings on the same dates. The rivalry to get patronage will no doubt cause representatives of both organizations to strive harder and offer larger purses than they otherwise would. Many horsemen will prefer going to San Jose while others will seek a change from the usual route and visit Fresno. In either case, they will be well treated, and return to the Breeders fall meeting to again contest for the valuable purses offered by that association.

There is one item that will contribute materially to the success of all the meetings on the circuit, and which has been heretofore overlooked, and that is to have a good live representative from each fair on the circuit commence at the Breeders and work in the interest of the association that they represent, to have these agents well supplied with information regarding stalls, hotel accommodations and arrival and departure of trains and the costs of shipment. Much of the success of the meetings will depend upon this effort, and by properly attending to this preliminary work, liberal advertising, great good will be accomplished. Entries to the Breeders meeting will close July 1st.

To show how closely breeders are paying attention to getting pedigrees of their stock, it is only necessary to read "Rio Alto's" able article on the "Two-year-old Performers" in this issue, to learn that out of seventy-eight two-year-olds but three have dams that are untraced. Such a thing was impossible ten years ago. Ten years hence the second and third dams of all the developed ones at that time will also be known.

On the posters issued by H. Schwartz & Co. for the race meeting at the Bay District Track the omission of a comma and the word "the" leaves it to be inferred that the meeting is under the auspices of the P. C. T. H. B. A. It is a curious typographical error, and, while the latter association is getting a free advertisement, it has nothing to do with the meeting now in progress.

Facts About Breeding Race Horses.

"What a puzzle race-horse breeding is, after all," said a well-known horseman the other day—one who had an experience of nearly thirty years, a careful observer, in short, a practical student of most points that would be calculated to improve the breed of thoroughbred racers. "Perhaps it is for the best that all men engaged in the business do not make successes. We would soon be surfeited with high-class performers, and the third-class horse and the skate would be entirely beneath our notice. My old father used to say that great sires of race horses and poets were only born about twice in an hundred years, and I think he was not far from correct. At any rate, I think I can truly say that I can count the really great sires of the past fifty years on the fingers of two hands, and the same can he said of the stud matrons entitled to be called queens." What the gentleman meant by a great sire was one that got winners from all sorts of mares, and phenomenal performers from high-class matrons. And about the same with the queens—mares that threw winners sired by any horse and cracker-jacks when mated with a stallion of merit. Leamington, Lexington, Longfellow and Bonnie Scotland are the four horses that stand out in bold relief as sires of grand performers in America during the past thirty-five years, and Leamington's sons and the daughters and granddaughters of Lexington and Bonnie Scotland will keep their memories green.

The Leamington seems to be a wonderfully good "sire line," while the blood of Lexington and Bonnie Scotland shows to the best advantage through the female members of the illustrious families. True, Lexington had three good producing sons in Norfolk, Asteroid and War Dance, yet mares by these sons of Lexington are much more sought after by the breeder who studies blood lines than their sons. Not one of the sons of celebrities mentioned has achieved a notable success at the stud, to the best of our belief. Bonnie Scotland's two sons, Luke Blackburn and Bramble, have done fairly well, but do not shine as brightly as their grand old sire. But look at Leamington's sons! What a splendid array of sires he left, and his grandsons in the male line are keeping up the reputation of the old house in an admirable way. Longfellow, Enquirer, Eolus, Blazes, Reform, Iroquois, Onondaga, Ecuador and Falsetto are making themselves almost as famous as did their sire or grandsire, Leamington. Stallions of great promise that we have noted recently through the performances of their progeny are Himyar (son of Alarm and Hira, by Lexington), imp. Charaxus (son of Distin and Sappho, by Kingston) and Buchanan (by imp. Buckden, dam Mrs. Grisby, by Wagner).

The truly wonderful matrons of the past thirty-five years in America, proven by their produce, were Reel, by Glencoe (the dam of Lecompte, War Dance, Captain Elgee, Priores, Starke and Fanny Wells), Erotite (dam of Fellowcraft, Spendthrift, Miser and Ru'herford, by Lexington), Levity (dam of Lever, Lightness, Legatee, Ruric, Sister to Ruric, Mildred and Brenna), by imp. Trustee; Marion (dam of Emperor of Norfolk, Prince of Norfolk, King of Norfolk, Duke of Norfolk, Duchess of Norfolk, The Czar, El Rio Rey, Rey de Rey and Yo Tam-hien), by Malcolm, son of imp. Bonnie Scotland and Hennie Farrow (dam of Flood, Shannon, Mimi, Electra and Mollie McCarthy), by imp. Shamrock. Other American matrons closely approach the line labeled "Truly Great," viz.: Belle Knight, Nevada, Nora Worth, Sprightly, Ada C., Susan Beane and Tallulah, for instance, but the ones we have enumerated above at the commencement of this paragraph founded race-horse families of their own, almost invariably throwing animals that either raced exceedingly well or made a name at the stud.

Our friend, mentioned above, went on to tell of a great mistake many breeders made, in his opinion—that of mating the broodmares every year. He declared that in stock farm owners clutching for the almighty dollar they sacrificed the breed of race horses. He had given close attention to this matter, and had tried the two different methods. Foals from mares bred only once every two years outstripped those from matrons bred every year at every point—were more vigorous, developed quicker and were nineteen times out of twenty far superior as race animals. He contends that few mares have the strength year after year to suckle a foal at foot and give the foal in embryo all the nourishment and impart all the strength desired. It stands to reason that the embryonic foal takes a great deal of strength and vitality from the broodmare, and that consequently the mother cannot stand the constant strain, and rear sturdy, speedy colts with any degree of regularity. Another mistake, in his opinion, was the mating of a mare with any certain horse twice or more times in succession. If the "nick" did not prove a happy one the mare might be ruined for all time. That is, she might never throw a good performer, whereas she was in reality, if used with judgment, a most valuable stud matron. He believes a mare is very likely to become tainted by an oft-used stallion. This belief is based on the fact that he has bred thoroughbred mares to common draft horses, and they have always thereafter, when stunted to thoroughbreds, thrown foals with most of the characteristics of the common horse. The zebra and jack taints are well-known. Mares bred to the animals once have, ever after, in most cases, thrown foals by well-bred horses that had the marks of the striped beasts about them. There are so many points to be considered by the person desiring to breed horses of great speed and endurance that it would take a series of articles of this description to result in much good. While it is not possible to have a host of Salvators or Yo Tambiens running around your stock farms at all times, certain it is (to our minds) that there would be a greater ratio of fleet racers with ability to "go the route" if the suggestions given above were followed.

The Portland Meeting.

It is with pleasure one reads of the great progress being made by the associations devoted to the interests of the trotting horse in Oregon. From every town are reports of trainers handling colts and fillies by the stallions that are making our sister State famous. The list of entries for the spring meeting of the Portland Speed and Driving Association, which commences next Saturday, June 24th, are on a par with the one usually observed at the State Fair here.

Dashes of one mile and over for pacers and trotters are also on the programme, while the two-in-three rule is one they abide by to keep alive the interests and make their racing events "square" and "profitable." The preparations at the track at Albina, which is across the Willamette River, directly opposite the thriving city of Portland, is described as follows in the Oregonian:

"An army of workmen are putting the finishing touches on the new track and building at Albina, and enough labor has already been done to carry out the association's promise that it would have the finest racing grounds on the Pacific Coast, if not in the entire United States. Viewed from the magnificent grandstand, the track is suggestive of the rim of a huge basin, so clearly and evenly does it rise above the centerfield at every point. This splendid speed ring is now receiving a top dressing of springy loam, which will be harrowed, sprinkled and rolled until it possesses the elasticity of a hilliard cushion, and will be soft as a velvet carpet for the feet of the horses. Construction of the grandstand is progressing as rapidly as a large corps of carpenters can work, and Contractor Bennett will turn it over to the association to-day. Its lowest seat looms up so high as to give the occupants a clear view of every foot of the track and the magnificent landscape beyond the fences. Five thousand people can comfortably sit up there, beyond reach of sun, rain or dust, and watch the races. In front of the stand are thirty-five private boxes, which will be elaborately furnished for the accommodation of those patrons who would rather pay extra money than participate in the crush which the attractive programmes are sure to create. The ground floor of the stand is partitioned into various spacious compartments, which will be occupied by a restaurant, with private rooms attached, a bar-room with cozy boxes, where parties can rest, a betting ring with open sides, and numerous other apartments which will be utilized as necessity or convenience dictates. To the right of the stand is the inclosed paddock where the horses will be groomed between heats, and to its left is a village of stalls. The grounds are daily visited by scores of people, and when the first race is rung up next Saturday, a big percentage of Portland's population will be admiring them."

This augurs well for the success of their first meeting and shows what an enterprising association can do to make a race course second to none. The steamship to Portland last week conveyed a number of promising trotters and pacers from here whose names are among those entered for the various events. There will be a number of well-contested races, and those who attend will never regret their visit to the inaugural meeting of this course while under the management of the live and progressive association that has contributed so much toward infusing new life to the trotting-horse business of the Northwest.

The attention of all lovers of racing is called to the advertisement in another column regarding the summer running meeting now in progress at Bay District track, and which lasts four days per week—Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The racing of the past week has been of a high order of excellence, and the starting of H. D. Brown has been admirable. The finishes in most cases have been close and exciting, and the people have supported the affair in a more than encouraging way. The experiment of holding a summer meeting is, to all appearances, going to prove a most successful one.

At Ascot Heath last Thursday four horses ran for the gold cup. Marcion won, Buccaneer second, Ragimunde third. The distance was two and a half miles. Orme won the Rous Memorial stakes and Phocion won the St. James Palace stakes.

Meeting of Delegates.

On Tuesday evening, pursuant to call, a meeting of delegates was held at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to arrange dates and decide upon uniform conditions and dates of closing of entries for the various associations composing the Grand Circuit. The following representatives were present: Frank H. Burke, presiding, representing the Breeders Association; F. W. Loeher, of Napa; A. H. Cohen, of Oakland; R. S. Brown, of Petaluma; G. W. Woodard, of Woodland; J. Whittaker, of Vallejo; F. P. Wickersham, of Fresno, besides a number of others who were interested.

The question of admitting Woodland into the Grand Circuit was the first one debated, and on motion the dates adopted at the previous meeting were canceled, and the meetings to be held at San Francisco, Oakland, Vallejo, Napa and Petaluma were advanced one week ahead, and Woodland added, the meeting there to precede the State Fair. The admission of this live district will strengthen all the others, as there are numbers of fine horses owned there that will start in at the Breeders meeting and continue right on through the circuit. The directors of Woodland have a number of carpenters busy making new stalls, and the track is in perfect order. By the time the horses reach there, nearly two hundred stalls will be in readiness, and every thing will be done to make all visitors comfortable.

A letter was received from the Secretary of the Santa Clara Agricultural Society stating that the dates, September 25th to 30th, claimed by that association, will not be changed as they have had those dates for twenty years. The delegate from Fresno said that "if that's the case we shall not change ours," and therefore the meeting at these two places will occur at the same time. The horsemen who bring their strings of trotters and thoroughbreds from the State Fair to Stockton, can have the choice of the two places.

Upon motion, the dates and order of meetings selected are as follows:

|--------------------------------|--------------------|
| P. C. T. H. B. A. Meeting..... | July 22 to 29. |
| Oakland..... | July 31 to Aug. 5. |
| Vallejo..... | Aug 7 to 12. |
| Napa..... | Aug 14 to 19. |
| Petaluma..... | Aug 21 to 26. |
| Woodland..... | Aug 28 to Sept 2. |
| State Fair (Sacramento)..... | Sept 4 to 16. |
| Stockton..... | Sept 18 to 23. |
| San Jose..... | Sept 25 to 30. |
| Fresno..... | Oct 2 to 7. |

It was also resolved that the uniform rate of entrance to purses to be given by the associations represented at this meeting be five per cent. to enter and five per cent. additional from winners. This is in accordance with the rules adopted throughout the Eastern circuits. The stake events, as closed, will not be altered; each association's arrangements in this respect are in no way affected by this change.

It was also recommended that it would be advantageous and agreeable to all if the associations on the grand circuit follow the programme of the P. C. T. H. B. Association as closely as possible, therefore there would be very few three-in-five contests.

P. C. T. H. B. A. Meeting.

The Directors of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association met last Tuesday evening, June 13th, at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. Joseph Cairn Simpson presided and the Directors present were F. H. Burke, F. W. Loeher, R. S. Brown, E. P. Heald, G. W. Woodard and Wilfred Page. Secretary Kelly read the report of the spring meeting. It was shown that over $5,000 was paid to horse owners at that meeting in purses, in excess of the amount received for entrance. The receipts at the gate were not as large as expected owing to reasons already stated in these columns. The success of the innovation of dash races was merited, and all owners who brought their horses to this meeting expressed themselves as well satisfied. It was decided to hold a summer meeting either at Oakland or the Bay District Track, San Francisco. The following races and purses were arranged, the two-in-three rule to be used in all:

Trotting, free-for-all, purse $800; 2:18 class, $700; 2:20 class, $600; 2:22 class, $500; 2:24 class, $500; 2:27 class, $500; 2:30 class, $500; 2:40 class, $500; three-year-old 2:35 class, $300; four-year-old 2:30 class, $300.

Pacing, free-for-all, pacing purse $700; 2:20 class, $500; 2:25 class, $500.

Besides these there will be the following dash races: Pacing, two miles, 2:25 class, purse $300; trotting dash, one mile, for two-year-olds, eligible to the 2:40 class, purse $200, and a two-mile trotting dash, purse $300. Entries to close July 1st.

The speed committee of the association is composed of Messrs. Burke, Loeher, Woodard, Brown and Page.

The Coming Auction Sale.

Catalogues are now issued by Messrs. Killip & Co., for the sale of trotting-bred broodmares, colts and fillies and roadsters bred and raised by A. T. Hatch, sons and daughters of Guide, 2:16½, Lenmar, 2:16½, Corrector, My Guy (son of Guy Wilkes—Gracie, by Arthurton), and Admar, out of mares by Admiral Brigadier, and Gladiator suitable for track, road or breeding farm are to be sold. They are all large and well-formed, and will be found useful anywhere. Bred as they are from a strong Morgan and thoroughbred foundation they should suit the most exacting of horsemen.

Myers & Myers, of Oakland, consign to this sale three very choice animals. Send for a catalogue at once and attend this sale which takes place Thursday, June 29th, at salesyard corner Van Ness Avenue and Market street.

MARCUS DALY'S colt, Sir Francis, will not be a starter in the American Derby, unless Matt Byrnes changes his mind within a day or two. Secretary Brewster has received a letter from the famous trainer asking him to reserve six stalls for the copper king's horses, and saying that he did not think he would bring Sir Francis, and that in all probability his shipment would not be made until some days after the meeting had commenced. This will be a great disappointment to numerous backers of Sir Francis, who believed in him even after the poor showing he made in his first race this season. Garrison, in that event, will be at liberty to ride the best of Fair's colts for the big event.

Stockton Fair.

The Board of Directors of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural association held an important meeting Monday afternoon. The directors went to the track first, and then talked business in Secretary Ashley's office. A number of important improvements were ordered, tin-cup records were abolished, and the details of the racing for fair week were arranged.

The board ordered the moving of the grandstand north twenty-five feet. The stand is to be raised three feet and the ground sloped in front for a betting ring. It was also voted to make a temporary stand 200 feet long with six or seven rows of seats. This temporary stand is to be placed on the other side of the kite track, so that it will give a good view of the home stretch on that track. The old judges' stand will be moved up where the kite track stand now is, and starts on both tracks will be made there. The Directors were very favorable to the asphaltum track project, that is having a track made of asphaltum. Messrs. Langford, Needham and Shippee were made a special committee on the subject, with instructions to report at the earliest possible moment.

The question of record-making was then taken up, and it was voted that there should be no more tin-cup records on this track. Hereafter records will be made here only in purse and dash races for a stake. This is a matter of great consequence to all breeders and horsemen, and it will probably work much annoyance at first. It was the only thing the Directors could do, however, for the rules are now so strict that great care must be taken to make records that will be accepted by the Trotting Register Association.

The new conditions adopted by the board for 1893 are as follows:

Entrance fee in all races of ten or more entries five per cent. of purse, with an additional five per cent. of purse from starters. Where there are less than ten entries, entrance fee is ten per cent. of purse. In all races there will be four moneys. Fifty per cent. of purse goes to first, twenty-five to second, fifteen to third and ten to fourth. A horse not winning a heat in four or making a dead heat is barred from starting again in that race.

The following purses are offered for fair week:

|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Free-for-all, trotting, purse $1,200, to close August 26th. |
| Free-for-all, pacing, purse $1,000, to close August 26th. |
| 2:30 class, trotting, purse $1,000, to close August 1st. Horses making a record of 2:22 or better on or before August 26th are to receive return of entrance money, and shall be barred from starting in this race, but may re-enter August 26th in proper class. |
| 2:20 class, racing, purse $1,000, to close August 26th. |
| 2:20 class, trotting, purse $1,000, to close August 26th. |
| 2:23 class, trotting, purse $1,000, to close August 26th. |
| 2:16 class, pacing, purse $1,000, to close August 1st. Horses making a record of 2:14 or better on or before August 26th to receive return of entrance money, and shall be barred from starting in this race, but may re-enter in proper class August 26th. |
| 2:27 class, trotting, purse $1,000, to close August 1st. Horses making a record of 2:22 or better on or before August 26th are to receive return of entrance money, and shall be barred from starting in this race, but may re-enter August 26th in proper class. |
| 2:25 class, pacing, purse $700, to close August 1st. Horses making a record of 2:20 or better on or before August 26th are to receive return of entrance money, and shall be barred from starting in this race, but may re-enter August 26th in proper class. |

At the Valensin sale which is to take place in New York June 21st, 22d and 23d there will be sold: An own brother to Red Sid, being by Sidney, out of Florence Wilkes; a full sister to Maggie McDowell, 2:21½; a full sister to Odd Fellow, that showed a quarter in 0:35 at ten months old, and sold for $2,000 at the recent Cleveland sale; a half-sister to Myrtle, 2:19½, being by Sidney, out of Luella, by Nutwood; a fast colt by Sidney, dam by Director, second dam by Harold; a speedy one by Sidney, out of a Dictator mare, and she out of a mare by Mambrino Time; an own sister to Allan Roy, 2:19½, and Sanders, 2:26, and many others of this character. Undoubtedly, however, the one which will be most fancied among the Sidney lot is the bay colt Sidney Union, a good one by Sidney, out of an own sister to the famous Kentucky Union, three-year-old record 2:13½, by Aberdeen, she out of the fast mare Kentucky Central, by Balsora, and she out of Nonesuch (in the great broodmare list), by Brignoli. There are many acute turfmen and breeders who believe Kentucky Union to be as fast as anything ever foaled, and regard her as very probable to become the reigning queen of the turf.

From the following St. Louis dispatch of June 15th it would appear that W. O'B. Macdonough was disposing of the whole string which has been doing so well in the hands of the veteran, Dan Dennison: "Of the horses in training here belonging to the California millionaire, William O'Brien Macdonough, nine head were sold at auction to-day at the fair grounds track. The sale was due to the owner being overstocked with racing material, and was a flattering success, the horses bringing a total of $20,975, an average of $2,330. The best prices obtained were: Fatality, two years old, by imported Sir Modred, dam Faux Pas, sold to McCafferty & Wishard, Columbus, Ga., for $8,700; Rosalie, two years old, by Hyder Ali, dam Rosemary, to E. Shrieber, St. Louis, $4,000; Centurion, two years old, by imported Cheviot, dam Lizzie P., to B. C. Holly, Denver, Col., $2,150; Valencia, two years old, by Hidalgo, dam Yum Yum, to C. Doyle, St. Louis, $1,625; Abess, two years old, by imported Kylie Daly, dam Abra, to J. B. Moore, St. Louis, $1,400; Ovation, two years old, by Three Cheers, dam Hattie Ball, to George Wyle, St. Louis, $1,300."

L. J. ROSE'S recently-engaged trainer, Mr. Trieyer, of Fordham, N. Y., arrived at Los Angeles this week with fifteen royally-bred yearlings lately purchased by the popular California gentleman. Mr. Trieyer, the trainer, is a young man, but comes here with an excellent reputation. For several years he was a neighbor of Peter Weher (now of E. Oakland) at Fordham, N. Y., and these horsemen are great friends. Mr. Trieyer attended the races at Bay District track last Thursday, and will make many friends here we have little doubt.

THE sensational filly May Thompson, two years old, by Kosciusko, dam Delphine, was sold last Thursday in St. Louis by Captain W. G. Cannon of the Bedford stable to J. S. O'Brien of Stillwater, Minn., proprietor of the Lakeland stable for $10,000. May Thompson is the Helen Nichols of the West this year. Her record was seven wins in eight starts. She is engaged in $75,000 worth of stakes in her two and three-year-old form.

E. H. HEARD demonstrated how good a track the half mile ring at Parkway is by driving Senator John McCarty's chestnut colt Ben Davis, 2:19½, an exhibition mile in 2:16. Ben Davis is eight years old, was bred in California by B. C. Holly, and made his record of 2:19 on a mile track at Lexington in 1891. He is by Great Tom, by Pathfinder, a grandson of the famous Morgan trotting stallion Vermont Black Hawk.

The fourth race had but four starters, but was the prettiest of the day and the best contested of the meeting. The entries were Get There, Wedgefield, The Judge and Silverman. The Judge and Silverman had few backers in the betting. Get There, the speedy four-year-old, who showed his heels to Revolver the other day and left Wedgefield in no better position than third place, had probably the call in the betting, though he sold at even money, as Wedgefield did. Wedgefield, since he ran away from Belle P. and Baychester last Friday, has been fit as a fiddle. The two favorites carried a considerable amount of money when they went to the post, and both appeared in beautiful condition.

The coat of the trim bay horse Get There glistened like harnished bronze. In his strong, well-turned limbs, his deep chest and powerful quarters he looked every inch a racer. Wedgefield was staturesque. The Judge had some little hacking and so did Silverman, but the interest of the race centered in the two favorites.

The quartette of horses got off to a good start, with Get There slightly in the lead and Wedgefield running well up. In the dash around the turn Silverman shot into the lead and held it momentarily. Then Get There and Wedgefield moved up together. They were going lapped in the lead at the quarter and both were running free at a pace that killed off the other two contestants. Through the long backstretch the two fleet animals were sea-sawing back and fourth. Now the head of one appeared in front, now the head of the other, and the crowd in the grand stand was breathless with excitement. Neck and neck they swung into the stretch and straightened away for the run home. The struggle to the wire was fought out inch by inch. Neither jockey raised a whip until the race had neared the eighth pole, but both were lifting their mounts with every stride and riding like demons. Then Nixon on Get There began to ply the rawhide. The horse answered gamely. In the last jumps Get There got his head in front and passed under the wire a winner of one of the most exciting races ever run over the Overland course. Silverman was third six lengths away. The Judge was beaten off. The mile was gone in 1:42 3/4.

In that slashing finish no whip was used on Wedgefield and many wondered why. The horse does not run well under a whip. When his jockey had dismounted after the race was over the horse's sides were covered with blood from the rowels of his rider's spurs.

SUMMARY.

Fourth race, owners' handicap, one mile. Mesquite Stables' b b Get There, 4, by Getaway—Laura Lee, 85 pounds.....Nixon 1 W. L. Thompson's r g Wedgefield, 5, by Governor Hampton—Viog' Un, 90 pounds.....Thompson 2 Al Shore's rn g Silverman, 4, by Richelieu—Nannie Fox, 85 pounds.....Davis 3 Time, 1:42 3/4.

Won by a head. Six lengths between second and third. Post betting: Get There and Wedgefield even money, Silverman 10 to 1. The Judge, 85 (Locklear), 6 to 1, also started.

The fifth and last event of the day was a five-furlongs race for three-year-olds and upwards. Blakemore, Cassa, Boh Austin, Venture and Boh were the contestants. Boh was first away with the drop of the flag. He went out to make the running, and set so good a pace that his field was strung out behind him. Boh Austin was second, well up, and Blakemore was third. Coming through the stretch for home, Blakemore dropped away and finished last. Boh won by half a length. Boh Austin was second, two lengths in front of Venture, third. Time, 1:03 3/4.

SUMMARY.

Fifth race, five furlongs, for three-year-olds and upward. G. W. Thompson's b g Bob, aged, 119 pounds.....Neal 1 C. G. Sotou's cb g Bob Austin, aged, by South Australian—Bright Eyes, 114 pounds.....Derby 2 Al Shore's b g Venture, aged, by Voltigeur—Lucy A., 104 pounds.....Davis 3 Time, 1:03 3/4.

Won by half a length. Two lengths between second and third. Bob 3 to 5, Bob Austin 10 to 1 and Venture 8 to 1. Blakemore, 122 (Nixon), 2 to 1, and Cassa, 106 (Parks), 6 to 1, also ran.

EIGHTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7.

There was an increase in the attendance at Overland to-day and more enthusiasm was manifested than on any day before. To-morrow's card is a most inviting one, and will, without doubt, be witnessed by a large crowd. Besides being ladies' day, the famous pacer, Yolo Maid, is down on the hills for a try at her record. She made a mile in 2:12 at Detroit three years ago and has lately been gotten into splendid condition for another try at it. The polo ponies will have another go and J. G. Gilpin, of Colorado Springs, will ride his namesake, and he promises to give Guido the dust. There will be six races, two of them trotting events.

First race was painfully easy for the favorite, and the only betting done was through fear of his breaking and losing the place. He made every heat without a skip, and won in a jog. Lizzie S. was the only one to approach him, and even she failed to get nearer than a length at the finish.

SUMMARY.

Trotting, purse $300, 2:30 class. J. W. Page's b g Gonzales McGregor, by Norton McGregor..... 1 1 1 Francis Smart's b m Lizzie S., by Iowa Chief..... 2 2 2 W. T. Duncan's b m Gene, by Bona Fide..... 3 3 3 DuBois Bros.' b m Dazzle, by Steador..... 4 d F. S. Byers' b m Belle M., by Copper Duke..... d O. L. Godfrey's b g Col. D., by Prospector..... d Time, 2:19 3/4, 2:18 3/4, 2:20.

Betting, first heat—Gonzales McGregor, $10; field, $14. Second heat—McGregor, $10; field, $6. Third heat—McGregor, barred; Lizzie S., $10; field, $10.

The favorite was the first to show after the drop of the flag. Rebecca was well up, Little Nell second, with Maelstrom a length away, leading the bunch. At the half Rebecca was leading, with Bert Hart second, and Maelstrom gaining. Little Nellie was fourth, and Derby seemed to have her well in hand. Coming into the stretch Maelstrom jumped to the front, but wore himself out in doing so. Bert Hart was second, and the race was expected between he and Rebecca, who was running third well up on the leaders. As they neared the wire from out the center of the bunch shot Little Nell. On she came with a magnificent burst of speed, passing Maelstrom, Bert Hart and Rebecca as if they were stills, and winning the race by two lengths with Bert Hart second, leading Rebecca by half a length.

SUMMARY.

Running, selling, purse $200, for horses that have started and not been first or second at this meeting; $600 weight for age allowance; 5 pounds each $100 less. Five furlongs.

Maelstrom, King Pluto, Kate Claxton and Minnie Beach ran in the order named. Betting—Bert Hart, favorite, even money; Rebecca, 4; Little Nell, 3; Maelstrom, King Pluto, Kate Claxton and Minnie Beach, 6.

Bay Chester and The Judge alternated for the position of favorite before the race, the lowest odds being first on one and then on the other. Narvaez got The Judge out to the front early in the race, Bay Chester was second and Omen a third to the quarter, where she fell with a thud to sixth place. At the half The Judge was leading by a length and Bay Chester away from the neck by two lengths. Barton H. was third and Lilly G. fourth. The Judge came into the stretch only half a length from Bay Chester, who was doing, to quote Lowry, "good, consistent work and gaining at every stride." He soon overtook The Judge, who laid the motion to pass on the table. Omen, Lilly G., Barton H. and Razzle Dazzle were harmoniously hunched, and out of the medley came Barton H. Bay Chester won the race by a length with The Judge eight lengths away from Barton H.

SUMMARY.

Running, selling, purse $200; $800, weight for age; 5 lbs. for each $100 less. Winners at this meeting to carry 5 lbs. extra. Seven furlongs. Omen, Razzle Dazzle and Lilly G. finished in the order named. Betting—Bay Chester, 3 to 2; The Judge, 8 to 5; Lilly G., 4 to 1; Omen, 8; Barton H., 6; Razzle Dazzle, 6.

King won his second race on a 5 to 1 shot, Viceroy, who defeated Jennie Schwartz, the favorite, by a length. The flag dropped to the field well hunched, but with Bowling a length short. Lucy Clark was the first to show, with Tucker half a length away, leading Jennie Schwartz by a neck. At the half the same position was maintained, the leader having the place by a head. Jennie Schwartz responded to the spurs and came into the stretch a neck in the lead, Viceroy being third and away from Lucy Clark by a length. There began a pretty race, Viceroy acting splendidly and obeying every wish of Wash King's, and winning the race by a length from Jennie Schwartz, who was a length away from Lucy Clark.

This was the surprise of the day, the long-shot Laniard winning after a wonderful burst of speed by half a length. After the flag dropped Sam Jones was the first to show, leading Ranger and Trooper, Laniard being fourth and Balance All last. At the quarter Sam Jones still led by two lengths, with Ranger a length away from Laniard. Coming into the stretch Laniard dropped back to five to get a straight-away course and Goedertz began to whip. On came the long shot, apparently as fresh as a daisy. At every cut of the whip the pace was increased. Ranger was passed, and he dropped like a cur. Sam Jones, too, was passed by Laniard, Trooper and Balance All, and the race of the tail-end long shots began. It was a pretty one, but Laniard clearly outclassed them all and won the race with ease; Balance All was second and Trooper third, the favorites being a poor fourth and fifth. The talent had been dumped.

SUMMARY.

NINTH DAY—THURSDAY, JUNE 8.

It was ladies' day at Overland park to-day. The young miss, with the vigor of youth, jumped on the benches and shouted for her favorite regardless of all the proprieties. The venerable matron was much more circumspect. She bought her ticket from the official pool seller, and calmly awaited the result. If she won her eyes would flash as in days of yore; if she lost the horse was mean and the jockey horrid.

The features were the victory of Himyar and the try at the record made by Yolo Maid. The half-mile pacing record 1:00 1/4, is held by Manager, who made it against time on a kite-shaped track at Independence, Iowa, October 28, 1892. Without a skip Yolo Maid went the distance yesterday in 1:01 1/4. This time was caught by a dozen timers under the wire and a number caught the little pacer at 1:01. The wrangling over the start given Cassa and the kick over the second five furlong race added spice to the occasion. The critics were on hand and they handled the starter and the judges without gloves when those officials differed with them. The races were finished with dispatch to-day, considering the number of heats and running events there were on the programme.

This was a very hollow victory for Brilliant, as the little mare was never approached in the race. Jennie Thoms did not act well and broke frequently at critical times. Some pinned their faith to the field in the last two heats, but at no time was there anything but picayune betting. Jennie Thoms is a very tidy little mare, but was outclassed by Du Bois Brothers' Brilliant, who had also won the second trot of the meet from Rosie and Josie C.

This race was full of inglorious uncertainties. The crowd wanted a running race and waited with much impatience for the finish. It was conceded that the race would be between Tip Tyler and McLeod. Coming into the stretch Eli Almont looked like a winner and the prospects were bright for a repetition of Saturday's performance. Fortunately Eli went up in the air, and finished third to Colonel D.'s second, Tip Tyler winning the heat by five lengths and the race by three straights. Colonel D. was put back for running and Eli got the place in the heat.

In this race considerable money was placed on Cassa, a three-year-old filly owned by Kilkenny & Fisher. The tip floated about that he was in prime condition and in winning form. The horses went to the post with Seaman on Cassa. The flag dropped with all the horses well hunched except Cassa, who was from eight to ten lengths away, and he had not struck his gait. Handicapped in this way, there was no possible chance of a victory, and a howl of displeasure went up from those who had hacked Seaman's mount. At the half Little Fellow Jr. led with Country Girl second and A. C. Tucker third. King Himyar was fourth by two lengths. They all came into the stretch well hunched, excepting Cassa, who was trailing. Country Girl, led with Little Fellow Jr. and Tucker close behind. The leader was tired and the race promised to be between the second and third, but out of the dust came King Himyar. With a magnificent stride the high black forged his way to the front. He had a patent breathing apparatus, and he gave the others the "horse laugh," as under the wire he passed half a length away from A. C. Tucker, who led Little Fellow Jr. by a neck. There was an immediate howl from the Cassa portion of the talent. Clem Craveling said the start was a good one and Seaman said he never broke and that the flag dropped with him away in the rear.

SUMMARY.

This race was brought about by the owner of John Gilpin, who believed that Mr. Benton's ride in the former race lost him the honor of owning "the" polo horse of the State. Mr. Benton, it should be explained, went into the former race with a heard of several days' growth, and as a consequence lost the race and the plaudits of the grand stand. Mr. Gilpin rode his own horse yesterday, and if his illustrious namesake made his famous ride with but half the acrobatic merit of yesterday's performance it deserves to be handed down to posterity as a unique and interesting feat. What the elder John lacked in raiment his descendant made up in gorgeousness of color. Joseph's coat was tame and uninteresting compared with Mr. Gilpin's. Dandy got his nose to the front in the start yesterday and held it to the stretch, where Gilpin overtook him. Then began the contention act of the day. The horses seemed to be going one way, the gentleman jockeys another. Mr. Kuykendall's classic features were lost sight of occasionally, for he had been indiscreet. He wore his high collar and lost the race by a length to Gilpin. He dismounted in front of the grand stand, but not a cheer greeted him. Four days ago he was the idol of the chieft. Yesterday he did not get a nod of recognition. Such is the irony of fate.

SUMMARY.

Betting—Gilpin favorite, with Guido second choice.

Al Watts must be the bright particular star in the first part of every act or he sniks. If not doing a skirlless dance or marking out a point lace design on the dust at the post, he is running away, rearing or otherwise delaying the game. After a weary wait to-day he took it into his head that Robinson had not become sufficiently acquainted with his mount, and started around the course. He ran away for half a mile, made a killing pace and landed at the post winded and without a silver tube. The Al Watts men then began to hedge, and they hedged by sinking deeper in the financial sea. The horses got the starter's flag well hunched and started for the wire. Boh was the first to show, and Cactus Blossom a moment after crawled to the front. Parole was third and Belle P. fourth. Hal Fisher and Al Watts took the dust until the half when the favorite passed Belle P. They came into the stretch with Boh leading, but going heavy. Parole was second and Hal Fisher third. Belle P. was urged and responding, passed all others and got after Hal Fisher, who was leading by two lengths. King dug his spurs into the big fellow's sides and he too responded with a will, finishing first four lengths away from Belle P., who led Cactus Blossom two lengths and the field by a length. Al Watts was fifth, ten lengths away from Hal Fisher. Before the jockies had a chance to weigh in those who had lost their money on the field against Fisher set up a dismal howl. The cry was raised that the timer's flag had not dropped, and they urged that it should therefore not be declared a race. The judges went into secret session. They argued the disputed point to a finish and declared Hal Fisher the winner, with Belle P. second. The hookies made a killing on Fisher, and the official announcer championed their cause.

SUMMARY.

Betting—Hal Fisher, favorite, 4 to 5; Al Watts, 10 to 5; Belle P., 3; Cactus Blossom 2; Parole 10. Winfield was the first to show. He led to the quarter and quit. Venture was second, The Judge third, each a length away from one another. At the half The Judge was leading by a length, with Venture second, two lengths away from Sam Brown. Coming into the stretch the same position was maintained, Omen being fourth. The leaders were urged and the race was a pretty one. Davis, on Venture, rode a very poor finish. The Judge won by two lengths from Venture, who was half a length away from Sam Brown.

TENTH DAY—FRIDAY, JUNE 9.

There were several good races to-day at Overland, and the talent did not pick out all the winners. This was one of the refreshing features of the day. The trotting features were not interesting, and the dispensers of liquors were made glad because of it. The rain did not come but the promises of it freshened the air and made the day an ideal one for racing. The attendance was very good and the crowd was well pleased with the programme presented. A pleasing and popular thing was done to-day by Clem Creveling in reinstating little Seaman, who rode Cassa on Thursday. Neal had the mount to-day on Cassa, and the filly acted in such a way as to convince the starter that Seaman was more sinned against than sinning.

The first race was won by Rose, who jogged in in a go-as-you-please gait. The only interest in the race was centered in second place. Each of the three horses in the race after the first heat won a second and third place in the succeeding circles. Instead of settling the disputed point by another try the owners decided to divide the purse for the second, third and fourth places in race.

Trotting, purse $300, stake, 2:45 class.

John Sandkuhl's b m Rose by Bashaw Chief..... 1 1 1 A. D. Carson's br m Ella O., unknown..... 2 3 4 D. G. Marple's b g Bill Sherwood by Iowa Chief..... 4 2 3 J. W. Page's b g Nickel Plate by Bay Tom, Jr..... 3 4 2 Time—2:29 1/4, 2:35, 2:25.

Billy Bird and Rowena distanced in first heat. Ella O., Bill Sherwood and Nickel Plate divided second, third and fourth money. Betting, Rose, $10; field, $5.

It was expected that Supposition would open favorite in this race, but the filly had not got into perfect condition and did not have her own driver to-day. The race was therefore won by Nellie Campbell, with the greatest ease, in three straight heats. Supposition will be a lively and speedy animal before the season is over.

SUMMARY.

Trotting, purse $250, for two-year-olds. J. H. Johnson's b f Nellie Campbell, by Waddington..... 1 1 1 Du Bois Bros.' b s Supposition, by Superior..... 2 2 2 T. W. Page's b c Sharp, by Idavon..... 3 3 3 Time, 2:31, 2:37, 2:37.

Betting—Nellie Campbell, $10; field, $4.

Lucy Clark was a very lukewarm favorite in this race, Cassa and Balance All being played heavily at a trifle better odds. At the start Lucy Clark was the first to show, Remus being second and Cassa third. At the quarter Remus was leading Lucy Clark by half a length, while she was two lengths away from Cassa, who led the field by three good lengths. Coming into the stretch Remus had increased the lead to a length and Lucy Clark was away from Cassa about two lengths. The race in under the wire was a pretty one, Lucy Clark responding to the whip and winning by a length from Remus, who was five lengths away from Cassa. The latter got the money by a head from Maelstrom, who was three lengths away from Balance All.

SUMMARY.

Running, purse $200, for horses that have started and not won at this meeting, to carry 110 pounds; those running not better than third allowed three pounds; unplaced, seven pounds; maidens allowed five pounds additional; four and a half furlongs. A great many pinned their faith to Sutton's colors in this race, and after some delay at the post, caused largely by the bad acting of Little Nell, the horses got away. A moment later it was noticed that Vail had pulled up Little Nell, and the cry of "bad start" was immediately set up. The little mare was clearly out of the race. Of the others Podiga was the first to show, Rebecca being second and Investigator third, the rest being strung out in procession order, with Jennie Schwartz leading. As they neared the stretch Investigator was leading, and the Kid Davis seemed oblivious of the fact that he had a winning mount. Jennie Schwartz came in at a lively gait. She passed Rebecca and Podiga, and got after Investigator, but failed to catch him by two lengths. Podiga also passed Rebecca in the run in and finished third, a length away from Jennie Schwartz. On Little Nell's arrival at the judges' stand Vail headed off a reprimand by calling attention to the fact that his stirrup strap was broken. He was excused. Had this misfortune not befallen her she ought to have won the race with ease, as she made faster time with more weight on Thursday.

SUMMARY.

Running, selling, purse $200, $400, weight for age; 5 pounds each $100 less, winners at this meeting to carry 5 pounds extra for each win. Four and a furlongs. The favorite in this race was again victorious. He was the fourth to show after the flag dropped, Little Fellow Jr., being the first, Sam Jones the second and A. C. Tucker third. It was only a fair start, and Tucker got slightly the worst of it. At the quarter Sam Jones led Ben Harrison by two lengths, Little Fellow was a length behind Harrison and leading the bunch by five lengths, A. C. Tucker was fourth, leading Bob Austin by three lengths. Into the stretch they came, with Sam Jones in the lead. He was weakening, however, and succumbed near the wire to Ben Harrison and Tucker. The race in under the wire was a pretty one, Harrison winning the place by half a length. Tucker was second, two lengths from Sam Jones, who was but half a length nearer the wire than Little Fellow Jr. Bob Austin was fifth, five lengths away, and Kiowa last.

SUMMARY.

Running, purse $200. Conditions same as third race. John A. Campbell's ch Ben Harrison, 6, 110.....Narvaez 1 W. L. Thompson's c h A. C. Tucker, 5, 110.....Thompson 2 J. M. Shields' blk g Sam Jones, a, 110.....Neal 3 Time, 0:55 1/4.

ELEVENTH AND LAST DAY—SATURDAY, JUNE 10.

The programme to-day at Overland was an excellent one, and considering the fact that it was the closing day of the meeting everything was conducted with commendable dispatch. The starts were all good and the judging was satisfactory. The only misfortune of the day, or of the whole meeting, occurred to young Thompson, who was riding Viceroy in the last race. He was well up on the second horse, when he stumbled and fell. Immediately behind was The Judge with Graver as the mount. He, too, fell and the four rolled into the dust together. Graver and the two horses were quickly on their feet, but Thompson did not stir. The interest in the finish of the race was lost and anxiety over the condition of the plucky young jockey took its place. He was immediately taken to Secretary Rhodes' office, and was attended by Dr. Rogers. He regained consciousness soon after and it was found that his injuries were not of a serious character. His eye was cut and his cheek bruised and the hoof of Viceroy coming in contact with his mouth, he lost one or two teeth. The boy was game, and almost his first words were, "And I had the race won. Tough, wasn't it, boys?"

The attendance was very large, the presence of many of the fair sex lending an additional interest to the enjoyment of the day. The crowd was fully as large as on Decoration Day, the spring meeting thus opening and closing with all the eclat so much appreciated by racing associations. Secretary Rhodes says the Overland Association will come out about even as far as finances are concerned.

DuBois Bros.' magnificent pacer made another try at the record and, if she did not succeed in lowering it, she did succeed in treating those assembled to a most remarkable performance. When it is considered that the record was made on a kite-shaped track, in the fall of the year, by a horse thoroughly trained and conditioned for the event, the trial to-day was indeed phenomenal. Yolo Maid is fat and soft and not in trim for the feat attempted to-day. She will be heard from later on in the season.

The first race was won in a jog by Marquis, Charley Baldwin being the only one of the others approaching him in the race. There was little or no betting in the books and the mutuels put up the shutters on the race.

It seemed to be the ambition of the drivers in the second race to divide up the honors. W. W. P. dropped out after the first heat, and the next fell to Uncle Jack, who was six lengths to the good coming in. The third heat was also won in one-two-three order by the favorite, with Maritana second and Cebron third. Maritana surprised all by winning the fourth heat by six lengths, Uncle Jack having broken badly all through the race. In the fifth heat Uncle Jack didn't try to win, and in consequence all bets were declared off. He won the last with ease and terminated the agony.

The third was a good race, but Mr. Holloway's ringer won with ease. This Flying Bird mare was purchased a few days ago by Mr. Holloway. She was taken out to Athletic park and qualified for a polo pony by three days of chasing after the elusive ball. Mr. Kuykendall stood a good chance of winning the race, but neglected his pony to save his lap as the ponies neared the wire. Mr. Benton rode a good race on Pedro, but the big card got his Pedro. Johnny Ernest should have won the race and would have done so, had he not tried to get under the wire before his pony.

In the fourth race Little Seaman, who rode his first race after being reinstated, brought in the winner a length away from A. C. Tucker who had been touted to win. Bert Hart was the first to get away with the bunch after the flag dropped. King Pluto was second with A. C. Tucker third. At the half Tucker was leading with Trooper second and Sam Brown third. Coming into the stretch Tucker was leading by three lengths with Sam Brown second about a length away from Bert Hart. Seaman applied the whip and the horse jumped to second place and then to first. It was then that Thompson had a chance to bring Tucker the first money, but he let it slip and Tucker came in dead with a log on his back. Bert Hart crossed the wire a length away from A. C. Tucker, who was a length from Sam Brown who led the field by half a length.

Tom Parks was the first to show after the bunch got the flag in the fifth e. Thread was second at the half, with L. G. S. third and Wall Paper fourth. Coming into the stretch Tom Parks led by a length, and kept it up, coming in an easy winner by a length. Thread was second, and had it by ten lengths from Wall Paper. The entry finished fourth and fifth, L. G. S. pursuing a zig-zag course all through the race.

SUMMARY.

The betting ring was carpeted with Hal Fisher tickets after this race was over. He was looked upon as a sure winner with Narvaez on his back, but he missed it by a head. The start was a good one, Lela being first to show, Sam Jones second and Hal Fisher third. The race was between these three. At the half Lela was leading by a nose with Sam Jones second and Bob had crawled up to third, a head away from Hal Fisher, who was coming in aery fast on the outside. Coming into the stretch Narvaez put on the whip and the big brown horse came in at a terrible gait. He passed Bob and crawled up steadily on Lela, who was also being whipped to a finish. The San Angelo stables wanted another victory, and they got it with Lela by a head. Hal Fisher started in too late and Narvaez found it impossible to nvertake the winner. He led Sam Jones by two lengths.

Seaman again played in luck in the last race, and brought in Cactus Blossom in good style the winner of the longest race of the day. Venture, with Midget Davis on him, came in second and Lilly G., the longest shot, was third, the others having fallen back when nearing the wire. Cactus Blossom had a head the best of the start, with Venture second and The Judge third; Lilly G. was last, with Viceroy a length behind her. At the quarter Cactus had fallen away to fourth place and Viceroy had forged his way to the front, with Venture still in second place, two lengths away from The Judge. At the half Cactus Blossom crawled up into third place and came into the stretch a head away from Viceroy and a length from Venture. The Judge was the last into the stretch, with Lilly G. two lengths in front of him. When about a hundred yards from the wire, with Venture still leading and Cactus Blossom hugging the fence, Viceroy attempted to get in on the inside and collided with the fence. He lost his stride and stumbled, falling to the ground and rolling over his jockey. The Judge was close behind and fell over Viceroy. When the dust settled the two horses were scampering over the field and Graver, the mount on The Judge, was making for the fence, wondering what had happened. Thompson did not move and he was quickly conveyed to a room near by. In the meantime Cactus Blossom had forged his way to the front and to victory by half a length. Venture was second and Lilly G. third.

Racing at Oakland, Cal.

There was some good racing at Oakland last Saturday, and a crowd of close to 1,000 saw it. There was not much money in it for the horsemen, who were only dividing the gate receipts and the money received from the privileges. Tacoma, a 4 to 5 favorite, won handily from the well-played Samantha by three parts of a length. Cyclone, at 4 to 1, won with wonderful ease by a trifle over a length from the flogged-out 1 to 4 favorite, Gypsy Girl. Guadalupe, at 8 to 5, fought it out with Prince, a long shot, Mackey, a 1 to 2 favorite, last. Bronco (1 to 3) had an exciting struggle with Currency, whom he beat handily enough at the end by not quite a length. Lady Gwen easily disposed of the favorite in the fifth race, seven furlongs, and Jack the Ripper, at 4 to 5, ridden out, won from Vnlita in the last race by half a length, Lodi pulling up lame. Altogether it was a good day's sport.

THE SUMMER MEETING.

Gypsy Girl, Jovita, Morton and Sir Reel Successful on the Opening Day—Close Contests, Big Fields and Beautiful Weather.

BAY DISTRICT TRACK, June 13, 1893.

VERY respectable crowd—variously estimated at from 1,000 to 1,200—hied to old Bay District course this truly perfect afternoon.

marked the inauguration of a summer running meeting hooked to last from June 13th to July 12th—an out-and-out godsend to the army of thoroughbred-owners that were not wealthy enough to make the trip across the Rockies in search of lucre and fame, and who, but for Schwartz & Co., would have kept their strings in idleness to "eat their beads off," in the language of the horseman.

Of the sport this afternoon it can with truth be said that it was of a very high order of excellence. The contests were exceedingly close in two of the four events, and in the remaining two there was enough excitement to suit the majority of the assemblage. But there was a series of "intolerable prolongations" at the post that sent people homeward hound with anything but kind words for Dr. C. W. Ahy, the starter. Dr. Ahy aimed to do well, and did send them away fairly hunched in the first three events, but oh how long he was doing it, what tiresome unnecessary turning about of the gallopers—and the countless breakaways. It was agonizing in the extreme. In the last race the Doctor shouted to the jockeys to come back, and when three of the six horses were pulled up he changed his mind, and dropped his flag. The result was that the money of his admirers of Huguenot, Jackson and Lady Gwenn was incinerated at the very outset, and groans flew fast through the summer air. Many thought all bets should have been called off, under the circumstances. Had the start been a good one Huguenot would probably have won, and Lady Gwenn would have secured third place, if, indeed, not second. In our opinion it should have been declared "no race," as Sir Reel was past the starting-point several lengths when the boys were told to "go."

Charles Trevathan was the presiding judge, and he was assisted by Arthur Bennett and A. Forsland, very well-posted gentlemen. The officials had a couple of close finishes to judge, but their decisions gave general satisfaction.

Several hookmaking forms did business, and it is thought they quit the day with a goodly balance on the side of the ledger that did not suit the talent.

The fields to-day were large in three out of the four events—much larger than at the California Jockey Club meeting, and of course Dr. Ahy, a comparatively new hand at the work of starting, is to be excused in a measure for the delay in dispatching the fields. An excellent hand was in attendance, and Manager Schwartz and Secretary Newman did their utmost to make everything pass off pleasantly. The attendance was decidedly encouraging, and something like $600 were realized for the wives and children of the brave firemen that lost their lives rescuing property in last week's great conflagration. The hookmakers' odds were exceedingly liberal, and it looks as if the summer meeting at Bay District track is going to be a success in every respect.

Gypsy Girl was a well-played favorite in the opening race, half a mile, at 9 to 5. Lottie D. was hacked so strongly that her price receded from 3 to 1 to 11 to 5. Cyclone, at 4 to 1, had many admirers with coin in their clothes. Jack the Ripper and Volita were 8 to 1 shots and Joe Harding went heging at 50 to 1. After a hack-jumping and sulking performance lasting about forty minutes, in which Cyclone and Joe Harding were the chief actors, the flag fell with Cyclone over a length in front of a fairly hunched field. The big old gelding entered the homestretch a length to the good of Gypsy Girl, who was two from Lottie D., who had passed Joe Harding at the head of the straight. Cyclone held his lead until within a sixteenth from home, when Gypsy Girl, under Peters' urging, said "ta-ta," and was running away from Cyclone as she passed under the wire a winner by a length in 0:48. Cyclone second, two lengths from Lottie D., who managed to beat Joe Harding half a length for "the show." Jack the Ripper was fifth and Volita last.

Normandie, at 2 to 1, was a much-liked favorite in the second race, also half a mile, but for two-year-olds. Sands Forman, a "green" brother to Dinero, was second in public estimation, opening at 4 to 1 and being hacked down to 3 to 1. The Helen Scratch and Premium fillies were each at 5 to 1, Jovita 10, the others at 20 to 1. Again there was a long, vexatious delay, and Jovita showed in front a good length as the bunting flopped, Sands Forman second, the favorite, Normandie, third, Raphaels' next, nicely hunched. Jovita ran like the proverbial scared wolf, and Sands Forman and Normandie did not make up much ground until well in the homestretch, when there was a closing-up of the three. Under whip Jovita, in a grand finish, won by half a length, Sands Forman second, three parts of a length from Normandie, third. Time, 0:50. Two lengths behind Normandie came the Premium filly, The Helen Scratch filly was fifth, Raphaels sixth, Kitty Kerr seventh, Joe Franks eighth and Two Cheers last. Ristine, Normandie's rider, was, for disobedience, fined $50 by Starter Ahy.

Tacoma was a slight favorite in the third race, six furlongs, though Currency seemed to receive the strongest support at 3 to 1. Guadalupe was at 5 to 1 and well-played, North and Queen Bee went at 8 to 1, Morton, Joe and Joe Hooker, Jr., at 10 to 1, the others at 20 to 1 each. The audience was nearly wild with impatience when the flag fell (the horses were nearly an hour at the post). Joe Hooker Jr. was first away, with Mseekey second, Joe third, Morton fourth and North fifth. Heading the second bunch was Queen Bee. Then came Bay Dick, Vanity, Guadalupe and Tacoma, in the order named. Joe Hooker Jr. held his lead until the head of the homestretch was reached, where Joe, who had been third and second, moved up and passed the old gelding, North being third and Morton next. Half-way down the homestretch Joe Hooker Jr. gave it up, and Morton, jammed against the rails, managed to get out, immediately challenging Joe. Queen Bee had run up fast, but found herself in a pocket, and when she got out it was too late. In a slashing finish, and a masterly one, Morton won by the shortest of noses from Joe, who was a scant length from Queen Bee. Currency was fourth, Joe Hooker Jr. fifth, Guadalupe sixth, Mackey seventh, Vanity eighth, North ninth, Tacoma tenth and Mackey last. Time, 1:16. This was a fine race, but Queen Bee would probably have won had she not been pocketed half-way down the straight.

Huguenot went to the post a favorite in the last race of the day, one mile, at 2 to 1, Sir Reel's odds receding to 5 to 2 from 2 to 1. Red Cloud was at 3 1/2 to 1, Lady Gwenn (hacked down from 10 to 1) at 6 to 1, Mero and Jackson at 10 each. There was not such a delay as in the former races, but about the worst send-off seen in many months was made, all through Dr. Ahy getting rattled. He shouted to the boys to come back, and then, as three of the six pulled up, he dropped the flag in token of a go. Sir Reel was in front of Red Cloud over a length, Mero close up. Then came Huguenot, about three lengths behind, owing to the pull-up, then Jackson, with Lady Gwenn absolutely last. Sir Reel led all the way, attended clear into the homestretch by Red Cloud. Huguenot ran up very fast going around the first turn, and was third at the quarter, Mero fourth, Jackson fifth and Lady Gwenn last and apparently out of the hunt. The positions were unchanged until nearing the homestretch, when Lady Gwenn ran past Mero and Jackson and took fourth place. Sir Reel kept on in front, and won rather handily, under the circumstances, by not quite one and a half lengths from Huguenot, who flew past Red Cloud at the drawgate. Red Cloud, third, was a length from Lady Gwenn. Mero was fifth and Jackson last. Time, 1:42 1/2.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY, JUNE 15.

A beautiful day brought at least 1,200 persons to Bay District track, and they saw some excellent sport. H. D. Brown took the position of starter left vacant by the resignation of Dr. Ahy, and a better series of starts were never seen on a race course than those made by Mr. Brown to-day. He not only got every field off in a hunch, but he dispatched the horses in every race inside of ten minutes. The result was that the last event on the card had been run before 5 o'clock.

The first race was for two-year-olds, nine-sixteenths of a mile, and ten youngsters faced the flag. Romulus and Montalvo opened equal favorites at 2 to 1, but toward the close the close odds against Montalvo receded to 4 to 1. Jennie Deane was also at 4 to 1, Don Mongana at 6, Sands Forman at 8, the others from 10 to 30 to 1. To a grand start Carmel came out of the hunch, about sixth. There was no material change in the positions until the homestretch was reached, though Romulus had moved up a peg and Jennie Deane looked a little dangerous coming around the turn. Romulus, with Realization at his heels, came up to the leader not quite an eighth from home, and the favorite won handily by a length and a half from Realization, who beat Carmel half a length for place. Montalvo was fourth, a length farther back. Time, 0:56 1/2.

Aerolite was favorite in the second event, at 2 to 1. Yokel was plunged on the strength of his run a few weeks ago against St. Patrick, opening at 4 to 1, and closing at 11 to 5. Tacoma was first to show to a good start, with Aerolite second and Vanity third. Aerolite passed to the front between the half and three-quarter poles, and was never thereafter quite headed, though Vanity challenged the filly in the straight and looked a winner for a moment. Lucy S. came fast around the last turn, but could not get up, and gave it up, Aerolite winning quite easily by nearly two lengths, Vanity second over two lengths from Tacoma. Lucy S. was fourth, Yokel fifth and Zamantha last. Time, 1:16. The attention of the judges being called to Yokel's poor run, on examination of the horse by Messrs. Appley & Henry Schwartz it was found that he had been badly cut by the spurs, and that he was, besides, not in the best racing condition possible. His rider, Bozeman, on being questioned, declared that he had ridden the horse so hard that he was ashamed of his actions.

Broadchurch was a favorite at 9 to 5 in the third race, six furlongs, selling, though Joe and Morton were well supported at 2 1/2 and 3 to 1. Mount Carlos led Joe until nearing the homestretch, with Broad Church third, Morton sixth and last and apparently out of it. A cracking good finish resulted in Broad Church winning by a head from Joe, who was three parts of a length from Morton, who made up a vast amount of ground and got third place, close against the rails. Mount Carlos was fourth, Joe Hooker Jr. fifth, and Little Tough last. Time, 1:16 1/2.

Dinero was at 11 to 10, Huguenot 6 to 5, Charmer at 8 to 1 and Jackson at 15 in the last race of the day, one mile and fifty yards. Jackson opened up a gap of about two lengths, and held it clear into the homestretch, where Dinero and Huguenot, who had been tailing the procession, came up with wet sails and had a fighting finish. Dinero won by three parts of a length, Huguenot second, half a length from Charmer, who was a scant head in front of Jackson—a close enough thing all around. Time, 1:47.

The Choice of the Elite.

The famous brand called Antediluvian Whiskey is at last to be found in San Francisco. The John T. Cutting Company are the agents. Antediluvian Whiskey won the gold medal at the Paris Exposition of 1889 as being the highest grade of whiskey made in America. It is rich as cream and smooth as satin, and for medicinal uses it stands higher than any other whiskey made.

This firm is also agent for that choice brand of champagne Piper Heidsieck "Sec." It is the wine of the elite and is famous all over the world. For dryness, delicacy, bouquet and quality this champagne leads, and compared with all other brands, it is far superior. It is sold at as low as consistent with a modest notion of a reasonable return of capital invested; in fact, it is the best value of any high class wine in America. When ordering either the choicest of whiskeys or the best of champagnes, buyers should not forget these two great articles and the firm of John T. Cutting Co., who have, by their characteristic business enterprise, secured the agencies for them.

Caloric Vita Oil.

The fame this celebrated liniment has achieved on its merits without being advertised extensively is remarkable. It has been used by all the prominent horsemen in California and they would not have any other. "It is the safest and most reliable pain-curing and healing remedy ever discovered," they say, and for the purposes for which it is used it is unsurpassed. Every stock farm in this State is supplied with it, and owners of our thoroughbreds and trotters would not be without it for anything. For lameness, strains, sore throats, sore hacks, soreness and, in fact, for all ailments which afflict man's best friends this Vita Oil seems to have performed marvelous cures. It is used internally and externally. Read the advertisement and send for circulars.

"PLUBIUS," our Santa Rosa correspondent writes that he was misinformed regarding Mr. Thos. Bonner receiving a share of an estate; for in his communication (which has already gone to press) this piece of news was inserted.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., F. E. V. M.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address, that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by two dollars and addressed to Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., 1117 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco.

Subscriber, Alameda.—What kind of firing is best for bone spavin, stripping or dotting with a sharp-pointed iron? Answer—We prefer the pointed iron. It can be put deeper, and appears to give better result without leaving such a bad hemish.

L. P., San Rafael.—I have a mare that was foundered two or three times some years ago. She is not very lame but appears to be a little sore on both front feet. Her hoofs are small, and the soles flat. What would help to make the hoofs grow out better, and take the soreness away? Answer—Blister her around the coronet with caustic alder blister; or to six of lard, or vaseline.

C. L., Oakland.—I have a colt that has been lame in one of his forward feet for three or four months. I first thought it was in the shoulder and applied a liniment to that part, but it was of no benefit. Then I showed him to a veterinary surgeon, who fired and blistered him for ringbone, but he is still as lame as ever. What can I do for him? He is no use as he is, and I cannot sell him. Answer—Get a qualified veterinary surgeon to nerve him.

J. F., Merced.—I have a four-year-old colt that is lame in the hip; I think in the upper joint in the hip. He is not very lame. What is the best to do? He is a stud. Answer—There is only one joint in the hip, not an upper and lower joint. The joint below the hip joint is the stifle. As you are not quite certain as to the seat of the lameness, please give me the history of the case, as well as the symptoms of lameness, and I will help you to locate their trouble.

FATHER BILL DALY was offered $5,000 for Gold Dollar after the first race at Morris Park on June 2d. Bill was not a little flattered, but declined the offer. He has the horse looking splendid, and his style of winning yesterday was most impressive.

It is stated that lady patrons of the East St. Louis track are presented with a half-pound of chewing gum, and each of the other sex with a pretzel, or schooner of beer, and a hard-boiled egg.

THOROUGHBREDS FOR SALE.

THE AUSTRALIAN RACEHORSE

STROMBOLI

Winner as a two-year-old of the Victoria Racing Club Produce Stakes and the Australian Jockey Club Produce Stakes, and as a three-year-old of the Australian Jockey Club Derby (1 1/2 miles), Sydney Cup (2 miles in 3:32), Howkesbury Guineas and Bourke Handicap, Melbourne.

STROMBOLI was bred by the late Hon. James White, is a handsome dark mahogany bay, foaled in 1889. Sired by Chester (son of Yattendon and Lady Chester, by Stockwell) dam Etta (dam of Volcano and Lava), by Maribyrnong (by Fisherman—imp. Rose de Florence, by Flying Dutchman); second dam The Alpaca (dam of eight winners—she never produced any colt or filly that did not win races on the turf), by Imp. Kingston; third dam Lilla, by New Chum. Lilla produced, when mated with Yattendon, Javelin, winner of the Australian Jockey Club Derby, and Commodore, winner of the A. J. C. Leger. Etta, dam of Stromboli, is a sister to Woodlands, who beat Chester for the Australian Jockey Club Derby.

STROMBOLI stands 16 hands and is a horse of grand conformation, with good shoulders, strong loins and excellent feet and legs—in every way a model horse.

ALSO

CLIEVEDEN,

Brother to the Mighty CHESTER, the sire of more winners of classic events than any other in Australia.

CLIEVEDEN was sired by Yattendon out of imp. Lady Chester, by Stockwell; second dam Anstry by Harkaway; third dam Leba, by Emilius; fourth dam Appollonia by Whisker, etc. His breeding is equal to that of any sire in the world, combining the double strain of sir Hercules through the Immortal Stockwe I. and also a double strain of Emilius. It can therefore be seen that Clieveden is invaluable as a sire, representing a change of blood for American-bred mares. Clieveden was reserved by his breeder, the late Hon. E. K. Cox, to take the place of his sire, Yattendon.

CLIEVEDEN is 16 hands in height and is a beautiful golden bay with black points. He is a very symmetrically proportioned and a grand horse in every way.

These two stallions can be seen at Dennis Gannon's private race track, near San Rafael.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

DEXTER PRINCE is one of the best-bred horses of his time, and in the last few years he has proved himself a sire of pure gait and extreme speed, although bred to few mares of merit and kept in a section where nothing but his individual merit and wonderful producing powers enabled him to prove himself one of the greatest living trotting sires.

He is a blood bay, sixteen hands high, of great power and substance and the biggest finish. It is well known that he was one of the fastest colts ever at Palo Alto. He is a sure producer of finely-finished and fast foals.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands high and is half inches high, and is the sire of Maud, 2:09; Annie W., 2:09; Albert H., 2:27 1/4; Mollie C., 2:37 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

(For pedigree of Nutwood 600 and Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 see tabulated pedigree above.)

NOTE. You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mares. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 1/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $8 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

Fanny Fern.....

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Fron Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.) and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13.5, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the sires of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District track, the second heat of which was made in 2:51.5, the first in 2:52. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20.5, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32.5 to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal-getter.

Training The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three-hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."

Richard Cole

RESULTS OBTAINED AT THE WELL-KNOWN KALAMAZOO FARM.
Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Kinbone and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where fine failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinaries on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used. Very respectfully yours,
Kalamazoo, Mich. S. A. BROWN & CO., Prop'rs.

Owner of Eole, St. Saviour, Eolist, etc., says:—
I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Cole's Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,

Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Curb of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly swollen & I tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now even and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or. S. J. PAXTON.

THE SUMMER RUNNING MEETING.

North, Lady Gwenn, St. Patrick and Montalvo in Front at the Finish—All the Events to Date Detailed.

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY, JUNE 16TH.

Again our race-goers were favored with a most pleasant afternoon. The attendance was about 1,500. A series of surprises flattened the pocket-books of the talented to some extent, only one favorite getting home in front. In three of the four events starts were made that one could enthuse over, but in the mile dash three of the pilots (with defective ears) pulled up, making the start look had when in reality it would not have been had the jockeys been attentive.

In the first race, selling, five furlongs, Conde was backed down from 6 to 5 to 4 to 5. Queen Bee, at 3 1/2 to 1, was second choice. Solitude nearly pulled the arms off Starter Brown in doing her usual huck-jumping act. Queen Bee and Conde led for about a quarter of a mile, with Jack the Ripper a close-up third and North fourth. About 100 yards before the three-quarter pole was reached North, going like a shot, ran towards the pole, and Jack the Ripper humped into Conde, throwing the favorite back into fifth place. North assumed command at the three-quarter pole, and passed the wire an easy winner by two lengths in 1:02 1/2. Conde gamely came again, and beat Queen Bee handily for place by a length. Bronco was fourth, Jack the Ripper fifth, Solitude last.

In the second race, seven furlongs, Lady Gwenn, a slight favorite over Wyanashott, Erolite and Currency, led all the way, and won with great ease by a trifle over a length. Erolite ran into second place passing the half, and kept it thereafter by a length. Currency, third, was a length and a half from Cody B., last. Time, 1:29 1/2.

Sir Reel was backed down from 6 to 5 to 7 to 10 in the third race, selling, one mile. St. Patrick at 3 to 1, was second choice. Red Cloud acted very badly at the post, kicking and breaking away unceremoniously with H. Smith, and Garcia was in anything but an angelic mood. Starter Brown got down from his stand, and tried to conquer Red Cloud. Getting them pretty well hunched, he let Red Cloud's head go and shouted "go!" Three of the six boys pulled up and Sir Reel, the favorite, was among the unfortunate number. Garcia, with St. Patrick at his head, raced off in front, half a dozen lengths from Red Cloud, who was as far from the last division. St. Patrick gave Garcia the go-by 100 yards from the finish, and won in a drive by a head, Garcia second, one and one-half lengths from Red Cloud, who, with Sir Reel, made up lots of ground in the last three furlongs. The Joe Hooker—Una gelding was fifth and Mero last. Time, 1:44. This was a sad blow to the talent.

Seaside was an odds on favorite in the last race, four and one-half furlongs, for two-year-olds. Warrago was next in favor at 3 to 1. Montalvo was at 4 to 1, and Jennie Deane 8. Montalvo dashed to the front in the first half-dozen strides, and was over two lengths to the good as he struck the homestretch. Jennie Deane was scored until nearing the straight, when Warrago and Seaside passed her. Montalvo won handily by about a length, and Seaside, coming very fast the last eighth, secured the place by a neck. Warrago was third and Jennie Deane last. Time, 0:55 1/2—a grand run for a two-year-old with 113 pounds up.

FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY, JUNE 17.

The day was as pleasant as the most fastidious could desire, and the programme of five excellent races drew to Bay District track a crowd of fully 3,000. Two favorites and three horses that were not got home in front, so that the hook-makers had a shade the best of it.

Cyclone and Gypsy Girl were equal favorites in the first race, three furlongs. Red Light was backed down at the close from 4 to 1 to 3 to 1. Nellie Van was a 4 to 1 shot. The last-named led Red Light over a length into the homestretch, with Cyclone close up on the inside. At the dragate Red Light easily drew up on even terms, and Spence, on Nellie Van, went to the hat. Murphy sat down on Red Light, and the big bay gelding drew away easily and won by a head in 0:34 1/2, which he could have made 0:34 had he been forced. A length away came Cyclone, and behind him followed Gypsy Girl, Joe D. and Moreanna, in the order named.

Realization was a slight favorite in the second race, four and one-half furlongs, over Fortuna and Normandie, and the remaining trio was little thought of. Realization led all the way, and won easily from the whipped-out Fortuna (second all the way) by three parts of a length. Happy Band made a fine run from the extreme rear, and finished third, two lengths behind Fortuna. Time, 0:56. Normandie was fourth, Jovita fifth and Raphaels last.

Sands Fordham was an odd-on favorite in the third event, also four and a half furlongs. Claire was well backed at 7 to 5. Memoir was left at the post. Claire led Sands Fordham to the homestretch by about a length. Then the favorite gradually gained on the filly. Sallie M. and Don Mongano closed up rapidly at a great pace, and in an exciting finish Sands Fordham won by half a length from Claire, who was a neck only from the fast-coming Sallie M., she a head from Don Mongano. Time, 0:57 1/2.

Romulus and Inkerman divided favoritism at 2 to 1, Quarterstaff was at 3 to 1, and Conde 3 1/2. The odds against the remaining four ranged from 7 to 1 to 40. H. D. Brown, owner of Quarterstaff, retired from the flagman's position during this race, and H. Forstand, the efficient clerk of the scales, took up the hunting. The big field was dispatched to a rather straggling start, Quarterstaff half a length in advance, and well under way, Conde second, Garcia third. Then came another bunch headed by Romulus. Inkerman and Atossa were the last to move. Quarterstaff soon opened up on his field, and with Conde at his heels entered the homestretch over a length to the good. Romulus had eaten up a lot of ground, and was third at the head of the homestretch and looking dangerous. Garcia was at his neck. A little over half way down the straight Garcia swerved in toward the rails, knocking Conde off his stride. Quarterstaff was not headed, and won easily from the fast-coming Romulus by three parts of a length, Romulus second, one and one half lengths from Garcia, who was promptly set back last for fouling Conde, the latter being given third place. Time, 1:15. Behind Conde came, in the order named, Louise, Mero, Inkerman and imp. Atossa.

Canny Scott, supposed, from his excellent Sacramento performance, to be in good shape and known to like the route, one and one-quarter miles, was a favorite in the last race at 7 to 5, Dinero going at 2 to 1, Sir Reel at 3 and Lady Gwenn at 4 to 1. The last-named, with but 88 pounds up, set the pace, leading Sir Reel two lengths at the stand and three at the quarter-pole, Dinero and Canny Scott trailing about four lengths behind Sir Reel. Dinero went up fast and collared Lady Gwenn nearing the three-quarter pole, and shouts went up for that leggy, white-faced son of Alta as he swung into the homestretch over a length in advance. Here Burlingame commenced urging Sir Reel, and Alta's younger son responded nobly, gaining at every stride and winning in the gamest fashion by one and one-half lengths, Dinero second, two lengths from Lady Gwenn, who in turn was about three parts of a length from Canny Scott, the heavily-played favorite. Time, 2:10. Cook's ride on Canny Scott not being considered vigorous enough, he was suspended for the balance of the meeting.

FIFTH DAY—TUESDAY, JUNE 20.

Fully 1,200 persons attended the races to-day, notwithstanding the prevalence of a cold, strong wind. Only one favorite got home in front—Carmel. Gypsy Girl, Huguenot, Vanity and Dinero were the sure things that crawled.

Nellie Van being scratched in the first race, nine-sixteenths, Gypsy Girl went to the post a heavily-played favorite at 9 to 10. Lottie D. was scarcely less fancied, being played from 3 to 1 down to 2 to 1 and off some boards. Mount Carlos jumped away in the lead, attended closely by Lottie D., Jack the Ripper third. This was the order until nearing the three-quarter pole, where Gypsy Girl, fourth away, took third place and began to be labeled dangerous. Mount Carlos and Lottie D. had a whipping, ding-dong finish, the black mare winning handily by a good head, Mount Carlos second, a length from Gypsy Girl. Time, 0:55. Jack the Ripper was fourth, Charger, fifth, and Hiram E. (who spoiled a number of good starts) last.

In the second race, five furlongs, Carmel was backed down to 7 to 10 at post-time. Cherokee, at 3 to 1, was next in favor. Normandie led from the start to the homestretch, with Button second. Carmel gradually improved his position and was second into the homestretch. Half way down the straight Carmel gave Normandie the slip, and in a rattling finish won by half a length, Normandie second, one and one-half lengths from Happy Band, who came fast from the rear. Time, 1:03. Cherokee was fourth and Button last.

Huguenot was now plucked on to win the third race, six furlongs. Broad Church at 4 to 1, was well played. The odds against Morton and Aerolite receded, the former going to the post at 10 to 1. Huguenot, Morton, North was the order at the start. The latter ran past Morton in the first 100 yards, and was second, but a head behind Huguenot, at the half, and running fast. Into the homestretch North was first by a neck, Huguenot second, Claire third, Morton fourth. Half-way down the straight Morton commenced to assert himself, and at the wind-up simply romped by the whipped-out favorite, Huguenot, winning by nearly a length, Huguenot second, a length from North. Time, 1:10. Joe was a good fourth, Claire fifth, Broad Church sixth, Aerolite seventh and Prince last.

There was a long delay at the post in the fourth race, also six furlongs, owing to the high-jumping and general bad behavior of Mooreana, who was finally led to the stable (to be broken over, it is just possible). Vanity was favorite at 8 to 5, while the Una gelding, Lucy S. and Joe Winters went at 4 and 5 to 1. Kitty Kerr led Vanity clear to the homestretch by about a length, with Una gelding and Joe Winters alternating in third place. Kitty Kerr gave it up soon after entering the straight, and Joe Winters ran up and shot by Vanity in the final 100 yards, winning by nearly a length. Vanity, fast fading away, managed to last long enough to get the place from the fast-coming Lucy S. by a short head. Time, 1:18. Kitty Kerr was fourth, Una gelding fifth, Late sixth, Lida Ferguson seventh and last, Mooreana in the stable.

Dinero looked to have the best chance in the last race, one mile, and was backed to win a tidy fortune. Every horse in the race was played, though. A lot of trouble was experienced in effecting a start, owing to Red Cloud's bull-headed actions principally. Finally, after half an hour's delay, Jackson and Charmer danced away in the lead, with Dinero third. Charmer soon opened up daylight, and was not headed at the wire, winning by one and one-half lengths from Red Cloud, who was a neck from Currency. Dinero was fourth, Nellie G. fifth, Jackson last. Time, 1:43. Dinero looked dangerous in the straight, but disappointed his many friends greatly.

The First of the Trotting Year.

Dan D. Donnan, the able turf writer of our esteemed contemporary, the Chicago Inter-Ocean, has the following articles in a recent issue:

The dead Palo Alto, more maligned than any horse that ever lived by the all-trotting and no-running class of men, has for a second time been heard from. Over the same track that he so frequently trotted upon in the days gone by his two-year-old filly, Palatine, won her race and secured a record of 2:30. Those who talk about the world-beaters not breeding on should listen for sounds from the Bay District track. Here we have two youngsters by the sire who has been written down as a sure failure by all the anti-thoroughbred, anti-development theorists, and yet his progeny go right on trotting fast just as if they had inherited it from somewhere. It seems that if early development saps the vitality, that any filly, that like Sadie D. could secure the world's trotting record as a yearling would never show up as a successful mare, but Allabreve—out of this developed yearling—has paced in 2:26 1/2.

Speaking of development, it may be pertinent to cite the fact that among the sires that are already represented by new performers this year are: Wilton, 2:19 1/2; Sidney (p) 2:19 1/2; Palo Alto, 2:08 1/2; Epaulnet, 2:19; Antevolo, 2:19 1/2; Albert W., 2:20, and over a dozen others with records below 2:30.

The speed that Yolo Maid has developed this year, although eight years old and supposed to have touched the lowest notch when she paced the Detroit track two years ago in 2:12, has turned attention again toward her sire. Alexander Button is a California product, having been bred and owned on the Pacific Coast, but he came of good old Patchen stock, and the blood of Champion flows in his veins. He is one of the pronounced examples of continuous lines of developed ancestors. He himself has a trotting record of 2:26 1/2, made when he was four years old, and at a time when Trinkel was the only one of that age that had ever beaten 2:30. It represented a much greater degree of speed then, for the age, than it does to-day, when the record has been scaled down to even 2:10. His sire, Alexander, had a record of 2:31 1/2 and was a famous long-distance trotter, having covered three miles in 7:54. His grandsire, George M. Patchen Jr., trotted in 2:27 over a quarter of a century. His great grandsire, George M. Patchen, lowered the world's record for trotting stallions four consecutive times, and held it undisputed for nine years. Previous to the present year Alexander Button sired six trotters and three pacers out of a class of mares that had little breeding. His greatest success has been from mares sired by Dietz's St. Clair, a son of the horse named St. Clair that was taken across the plains, and of whose breeding nothing was known. He starts the present season with a showing that is especially good, as, in addition to Yolo Maid's fast performance at Overland Park he has already put two new ones in the list—Alexander Button Jr., 2:27 1-5, and Mattie B., record 2:24.

The vast number of new trotters and pacers that appeared last year was credited in the main to improved tracks, new-fangled sulkies and better methods. These things had their effect without question, but this is an age of improved breeding, and the safe-gated American trotter has become a piece of mechanism that can be evolved with absolute certainty. The day is approaching when the 2:30 trotter or pacer will be an absolutely sure thing to men who follow the lines established by their predecessors. The work of the Alexanders, the Withers, the Backmans and scores of other experimental and empirical breeders has not been in vain. The name of John H. Wallace, bigoted and tyrannical although he may have been, will go down to posterity as the greatest of all the old regime that took the swaddling clothes off the industry and carried it forward to a healthy, sturdy age. The fact that more horses trotted to records of 2:15 or better in 1892 than had accomplished the feat in all the previous years of history is not the most gratifying result of the total summing up. The acme of successful breeding is not the future 2:00 phenomenon. The highest aim that breeders should have is the establishment of a family of horses, every one of which shall have speed of a high order. That time is just as sure to come in breeding trotters as it is safe for the breeders of heavy horses to count with absolute certainty upon having every foal attain a weight of 1,600 pounds at three years of age.

From Santa Barbara.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN]

SANTA BARBARA, June 19.—The weather appears to have a desirable effect on the horsemen and their steeds, for the track is actually alive with them and new ones keep coming. F. Menchacer's string of runners of nine horses, of which I made mention in my last, has been increased by two more gallopers. Young Ward has begun to work Bruce, the stallion from Palo Alto by Foxhall. The trainers of trotters are more earnest with their horses. Don Patricio by A. W. Richmond, is very speedy; San Miguel is looking like a trotter, and Dietz Wilkes by Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/2, is showing trotting qualities of merit. He is handled by Gilbert, who has also a very fast 2-year-old pacer. Steve has a mare by Electro that has a beautiful way of going and is improving wonderfully. She is owned by our popular chemist, A. M. Rinz. Our annual fair that opens on the 22d of August, is certain of success. The purses for the stallion trotting race for the 2:40 class and young trotters, are well worth trying for, while the runners have also good purses hung out for them.

There has never been so much interest manifested in the American Derby by horsemen of Santa Barbara as this year, and I believe that their judgment is sound. About as many favor Don Alonzo as Chorister, perhaps the latter will carry more money from the sports here. All are glad to hear that Garrison will ride either Floodgate or Dare, for they seem anxious that their horses make at least a good showing; while Floodgate is the one more favored of the stud, there are horsemen here who like Dare and who say that he will beat Floodgate, and that if the Derby is won by a Californian, it will be Dare who will carry on by the money. If the track at Chicago on Derby day is in good condition, all expect that the distance will be run in 2:36 or better. T. B.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

SANTA ROSA, June 19.—The headquarters of the Santa Rosa horsemen has shifted nearer the Postoffice. Formerly one would have to go to Fourth, near the corner of D, to find the congregation of chief horsemen. Now the wizards can be found at Belden & Helters store, next door to the postoffice. Nearly every evening the gang assemblies there and "hoss" talk continues late into the night sometimes. It is a jolly set that draws up there and some entertaining yarns are spun at that same place. Among those who show up pretty regularly are: Dr. Long, Jim Dustin, Mart. Rollins, Tom Bonner, M. J. Streining, Wyman Murphy, Andy Compton, Lil Morch, Mr. Purrington, "Doc" Button, Frank Steele, DeTurk, Lumsden, Rose Dale's proprietor and a good many other "horsey" good fellows, whom we know to be sincere admirers of the best servant known to man. Before Pender went north he was a frequenter of the horseman's haunts and also McGraw. "Mc's" tall form generally loomed up there every Saturday evening. While these meetings are entirely informal, yet we will gamble on the proposition that more good suggestions have come from them than from some of the regularly organized societies in Sonoma county.

A very ugly story comes from a certain part of the county; one which should be thoroughly investigated, for it involves a matter of much importance. It was reported here this week from Petaluma. The story as we heard it was about as follows: That a groom was discovered in the act of "fixing" a well-known trotter; that the trotter had been going well, but suddenly went wrong and fearing that all was not right the driver set a watch over the stable and saw the groom in the act of feeding the animal some hay and salt, which, it is claimed has a very detrimental effect on a horse. It has also been reported that the same trotter went wrong last year after having made a very good start. We do not like to think that there is a horseman in California capable of doing such a contemptible trick and shall await further developments before passing final judgement. The report has stirred up quite a hitter feeling here, where the animal in question is owned, and there has been a lively discussion over it. The groom has been discharged, further than that, no action has been taken in the matter.

William Dolan, the genial Southern Pacific conductor, owner of Jennie D. and other good horses, has had his "run" changed. He has been running from Santa Rosa to Vallejo for nine years. Now he will have charge of a passenger train from Oakland to Sacramento. He will not relinquish his interests here, for he says he has not yet found a better town than Santa Rosa. His Washington colt, out of his game little mare, is a splendid one, and he is very proud of it.

Frank Otis has opened a new saloon, next door to Falton & Hood's livery stable, which is conceded to be the finest in Sonoma county. A number of horsemen find it convenient to drop in there to slack their thirst, for Frank is a liberal fellow, and always "puts up" when anything is on the tapis.

J. Rollo Leppo, assistant district attorney, is one of the most eminent hunters and fishers in Sonoma county. In order to be able to gratify his desire to hie himself away to the mountain streams with facility, he has purchased a trotter and road wagon, and, as the boys say, he is "strictly in it."

Silas Skinner Jr. was sold to a man in San Francisco, and we understand went cheap. The man who bought him has a higher bargain than he knows anything about, and time and training will prove it.

Jim Dustin has another good horse in his string. It is Shylack, he came here from the Asylum Farm at San Rafael a few days ago. Mr. Dustin has a number of horses that are not to be sneezed at.

Dr. Long was tendered a good price for his black stallion, Jerome, last week, but he thought too much of the brother of Florida to let him go at the figure.

Frank Steele's three-year-old, a stallion by Daly, has been worked out a number of fast miles recently. This horse is an elegant individual, and gives promise of being a great credit to his illustrious sire.

George Guerne and Henry Baker were in Michigan the last time we heard from them. Baker is on the way home ere this, however. What those astute horsemen are working up in the Wolverine State is a mystery that is puzzling some of their friends here.

Frank McGregor's Redwood filly is going pretty fast this summer, and there is a good deal of enthusiasm about her among the stable boys. Frank has an Illustrino and a Philosopher colt that are well worth taking a good look at. He is not one of the fellows who believes the bottom has gone clean out of the horse business.

Al Guerne, who has been spending a few weeks with his old friends here, left a few days ago for Lexington, Kentucky. He likes the Blue Grass region very much, and has become a thorough-going horseman.

Ira Pierce was here a few days ago inspecting his stock at the fair grounds. Mr. Bonner, the superintendent, has entirely recovered from his recent accident, and is jogging some of his favorites again.

George Tuffer's Ned Locke filly has filled out until she is one of the sweetest pieces of horseflesh in Sonoma county. George is very proud of her and he has a number of others that will be inspection.

In about a month our horsemen will be out on the turf with their fast ones and they are putting in their best licks now getting ready. They are not making so much noise as some of them made a few years ago, but we believe they are doing better work than they ever did before. There have been a number of fast miles driven here this season and there is no question in regard to some "hot stuff" being in Sonoma county. It is a wise saying that the man who says least sees the most wood, and on that hypothesis we can expect some lively sawing among some of our horsemen this year.

Jack Renton's Chance.

Owing to a variety of causes the autumn meeting at Davenport had been postponed until the last day of October. Huhert Granville, having hurried from Scotland the night before, found himself driving his young wife to the course in a state of almost painful excitement.

"You see, Dorothy," he repeated for the twentieth time, "Fielden is a capital man. I don't believe there is a jockey in England with better hands, and he has written fine accounts of Scapegrace. Talking of 'hands,' there was a fellow at Cambridge with me, the finest rider I ever saw. Where he got the love of it I can't think, for his people were a straight-laced lot, though the horse the invention of the evil one, specially contrived for the degradation of man. Poor Jack gave them good conformation of their theory."

"Was he a friend of yours?" inquired Dorothy, seeing a cloud on her husband's face.

"We saw a good lot of one another. By George, what scrapes we got into. I had the luck to get out of them pretty creditably, and was able to hold him out now and then. But he never had any luck himself."

"What has become of him?"

"Can't say. He took to betting and playing too high, mixed with a shady set on the turf, and finally went under, as many a good fellow has done before him. Everyone liked him, too; you couldn't have helped liking Jack Renton."

"No," answered Dorothy, faintly.

Granville turned sharply to her: "Did you know him, Dot?"

"Yes, Bertie," she replied, raising a troubled face to meet her husband's gaze. "I knew him when he was at Cambridge."

"A friend of yours, I suppose?" and there was a suspicion of jealousy in Huhert's tone.

"I don't know that I can call him that. I certainly did think him nice at first, but afterwards he was foolish and quarreled with me."

"Why?"

"I think," said Dorothy with a smile, as she drew a little closer to Huhert's side, "it was because of you."

After that they returned once more to the subject of Scapegrace and his perfections.

"I wish almost I had given up those Scotch visits and watched his gallops."

"You could not have done any good, Bertie. He was going on capitally before you left."

"Yes, and Fielden assured me he can hold his own even against Gamester. Tell you what, Dorothy, if he wins well he will have some real good hunting this season. There's a brown horse of old Neville's I've had my eye upon for some time. I'll write and make him an offer to-night."

As the young couple entered the inclosure they were greeted with the utmost cordiality, and hopes were expressed on all sides that Scapegrace would cover himself with glory.

"He's the first racer you have owned, is he not?" said Lord Silverbridge, the M. F. H.

"He is my wife's property," replied Huhert gaily; "given to her as a wedding present—intended, of course, by her worthy godfather to carry her safely across a field or two when out with the pack. But, so-show or other, we discovered that he had a turn of speed."

"Why, to look at him, my dear chap, one could see at a glance he was born a chaser," interrupted Silverbridge. "Indeed, Mrs. Granville, it would have been almost a shame to deprive him of his hereditary rights."

"You think, then, he stands a good chance?"

"Sure of it; though there are not many can stand to win against Gamester and Victrix. Let's go into the paddock and look at him, and then if you care to come up on the coach you will get a good view of the course."

There he stood, the admired of admirers, his fiery glance roaming restlessly from one to another, his glossy coat shining a golden brown in the sun; rather lightly built, perhaps, but clean-jointed, well-shaped, with strength enough in his square quarters to land him easily over far worse obstacles than he would find on the Davenport steeplechase course. Huhert and Dorothy eyed him lovingly—the latter with undisguised enthusiasm, the former with the silence of an intense excitement. He was still a boy at heart; his interest in all that he undertook was so keen as to be infectious, and Scapegrace owed many a supporter to his owner's popularity. Silverbridge and Dorothy moved away, leaving him to go in search of Fielden. Scarcely had he left the paddock when he was accosted in a low voice by a man at his elbow.

"Mr. Granville, is Scapegrace to start?"

Huhert hardly turned his head.

"Of course he is."

"And is he meant to win?" continued the same voice.

This time Huhert faced about, his eyes blazing with anger.

"What the devil do you mean? You know my name and you seem to know my horse. Who are you, and how do you dare insinuate that I should play such a scurvy trick?"

"You don't know me?"

"No, I don't; but I'll take jolly good care you explain that question. Stop a hit! Hullo!—why, Jack—Jack!"

Yes, it was his old college chum, broken down in health, looking dissipated, half-starved, but handsome still, and bearing the indefinable stamp of a gentleman.

"I would not have spoken to you," he said quietly, a deep flush rising to his very temples, "only I wanted to find out for myself. I knew I was right; I knew you could not have changed. Look here, Granville, do you stand to lose much if Scapegrace don't win?"

"Quite as much as I can afford. What is it Jack? What are you driving at?"

"Just this: Hedge all you can, for your horse won't pass the judge."

Huhert's lips tightened.

"Explain yourself."

"You may think I am talking rot; but I bear a good deal one way and another, and the fact is, Fielden has been 'got at,' and you won't be given fair play."

"Jack, this is a hoax—one of your old jokes."

Renton laughed bitterly. "I'm past joking. Oh, I know Fielden has kept pretty straight hitherto, and I'm only a poor devil going from bad to worse; but it is true for all that, and I say again, lay off all you can."

"It isn't the money so much; but, hang it all, it's the disappointment. We'd set our hearts on it."

"I've heard it is your wife's horse," said Jack in a low tone.

"Is that so?"

"And she's just bent upon his winning. I can't believe this. You must be mistaken. Anyway, I can't do anything now. Time's up and Fielden has got him out by now."

"I'm not mistaken. I've watched his gallops. Have you ever known him refuse water?"

"Never."

"I thought not. You'll see him do it to-day."

But Huhert would not credit it. "I think you are wrong. But Jack, old man, come up to-night to my place. Come and dine and have a smoke and a talk."

Again the crimson flush of shame. "You forget your wife. She would scarcely care to know me now."

And before Huhert could reply he was lost in the crowd, and in another few minutes all eyes were fixed upon the starting point.

A field of eight, a good start, Victrix, with the impatience of her sex, striding away with the lead; Gamester, under firmer control, lying fifth, immediately behind Scapegrace, who seemed to be in grand form. Jack Renton, stationed close down to the water, watched him with an admiration amounting to enthusiasm, his contempt for Fielden swelling to hatred. If he were a bad horse—but such a; mover, such a mouth, and the cur knows he could win all the way if he choose. Her horse—set her heart on his winning! What if—if—suppose he were to win after all?"

Meanwhile Huhert's misgivings were vanishing rapidly as Fielden lifted Scapegrace over each fresh obstacle and kept his place in a quiet, masterly manner. "I half wish, though, Jack Renton were my jockey," he muttered. "Dorothy, we must get hold of him, poor old chap, and cheer him up."

Round the curve, pace too hot for Quickstep, and Victrix came back to the field, waited on by Carmelite and Mischief. The post and rails brought Youngster to grief, and in the next few seconds both Fielden and Gamester's jock let themselves be passed by the ruck. Still Jack watched and waited by the water. Perhaps Fielden meant to ride straight after all. Down they came, the thunder of the hoofs drawing closer, Carmelite's white blaze showing more clearly, the autumn sunshine lighting up the silks.

Closer, closer. Would he do it? Would he give Scapegrace his head and land him safely? Let him cross the water, and all would be well. Mischief leading—Bravo, the white blaze. He should take off now. Victrix was out, with a bit of a scramble. Gamester cleared it in his stride, and reached forward bravely handled. Now, Scapegrace, now.

Scapegrace, whose temper had not been humored, who hated to be passed, had been pulling viciously. Fielden's face was inscrutable; the water flashed for an instant before him. Now or never. The temptation had been too great. Avarice was his besetting sin. The old trick, a turn of the wrist so slight that only Jack's keen eyes detected it. Ah, but Scapegrace's blood was up. This was not an ordinary gallop; he obeyed the now familiar call too late; instead of the refusal Fielden had counted on, he merely blundered in his take-off, made a mess of the jump, and fell on the other side, flinging his rider headlong.

Huhert swore beneath his breath; Dorothy turned away, sick with fright and disappointment. There was general consternation among their group of friends. And Jack?

His opportunity had come. Fielden lay motionless. Quick as thought Renton snatched up the reins from his hand. Scapegrace, unhurt, stood chafing; a leap into the saddle, no whip, no stirrups—but the finest rider in England looked forward to the field ahead of him and smiled. No voice, or whip, or spur needed; only the feel of the hand—a master hand. Scapegrace sprang forward, flung white specks of foam behind him as he dashed on, and finally settled into his long, swinging, easy stride.

A roar from the crowd greeted this new development. The act was so prompt and so daring; it took the hearts of the spectators by storm. "Good man! Good horse!"

Jack scarcely breathed. He had laid his last sovereign on Gamester. What matter! He had done this thing for the sake of the woman he had once loved so passionately, of the man who had held out to him the hand of friendship even now. Yes! for their sakes before the accident, but now for love of the brave horse under him, for love of the sport. Ah! that was a big drop! How's this? Mischief in trouble, one after another coming back to him, the right side now of the in and out.

"Bravo! Huzza! Ride him, ride him!"

Then only three as they turned the bend—Gamester, Victrix and himself—the mare distressed, losing the lead.

"A race! A race! More power to him, whoever he be!"

Yes, a race it was. Gamester going strong, his young rider smiling exultingly—Victrix was heaten, and was not Scapegrace out of the running altogether? The boy thought he could afford a backward glance. Great heavens! there was Scapegrace close upon him. Was it a miracle? The blood leaped to his face, the sudden surprise ruined his nerve; up went the whip, Gamester's head gave an uneasy jerk; he lost something of his advantage.

It was a struggle—a noble struggle. Would Jack's fine riding gain the day? Hands down, knees pressed close, the tension leaving his face pale as death—a moment worth living for, worth dying for, he thought; he must not, could not disappoint the gallant horse who had raised him from the lethargy of misery to this elysium of excitement.

They tore down the straight; they heard the deafening shouts which echoed from the throng of onlookers. Dorothy clutched her husband's arm. "Oh Bertie, will he lose? Can he win?"

Up rose the boy in his stirrups, whip and spur fretting his good horse, and behind him—close behind—nay, at his side—at Gamester's head—was the dreaded rival.

"Scapegrace! Scapegrace!"

"Only a length between them!" "How about the weighing in?"

The question hushed the cries to a breathless silence.

Up went the numbers.

They shouted themselves hoarse; they crowded round Jack—would gladly have carried him shoulder high. But Huhert and his young wife laid their hands in those of the man who had steered their horse to victory, and Jack knew that his life of shame and misery was to be put away like an ugly dream.—London World.

This is the age of the dollar mark. Sentiment has vanished as though it had never existed. It is no longer an honor to own the best unless the best can demonstrate that it has an earning power. Fame cannot in this age take the place of a dollar. Men do not buy kings and queens for the pleasure of owning them. The great per cent. of sires are no longer looked upon with the reverence they once commanded. It is an age in which the earning power is placed above anything else.

Marvin at Meadville.

The kite track at Meadville was visited by a reporter Saturday, and the greater part of the day spent in looking over the grounds, watching the speedy trotters and pacers undergoing preparation for the coming campaign. The damages done to the kite tracks by the recent floods have been fully repaired, says the Pittsburg Times, and it is again in excellent condition. The covered track is still an unsightly ruin. Congressman Sibley was asked if the covered track would be rebuilt, and said they had not yet decided what they would do in the matter. In its present location it will have to undergo the same injury if there should be a recurrence of the late deluge. Mr. Sibley states, however, that the recent flood measured three feet higher than was ever known in that locality.

The big track is very fast now and the trainers say their horses have just about regained the condition they were in when the high water forced them out of training. The track in the early morning hours presents an animated appearance, as fifty or more trainers are there with their speeders, ranging in age from the yearling to the old campaigners. There are now about 250 horses in training at the track, forty-eight of which belong to Miller & Sibley.

Congressman Sibley is no slouch of a driver himself, and is never so happy as when holding the "strings" over a fast stepper. He says it is the only recreation he now has from the solicitations of office seekers. He drove the six-year-old Answer a mile in 2:22, Saturday morning, in company with Amti Hull and Bell Towne. Charles Marvin was up behind the former, and assistant Tom O'Brien piloted Bell Towne around the course.

Marvin was asked if the trotting records made last year, in his opinion, would be lowered this season. He said he did not think they would be disturbed, and probably not for some years. The records made last year were made with the pneumatic sulky, and future contests would be made in the same way. So far as his knowledge went he did not know of any new candidate who would be able to lower the record.

When asked what they had in the way of youngsters that would be able to make a good showing, he said that they had a St. Bel yearling, not yet named, that was showing great speed. In two-year-olds Ellihel, another descendant of St. Bel, had shown them quarters at a 2:30 clip, and they have entered her in the circuit.

Silver Ore, a grey gelding by St. Bel, is a promising three-year-old that has been entered for the Hartford $10,000 stake. He was given an easy mile in 2:23. Antella, a beautiful bay filly by Ansel, has been entered in the circuit, and is fit to go out and make a "killing" any day. She does halves in a 2:25 clip in comparative ease. Free, a bay mare by St. Bel, is entered in a number of stake races, and will be prepared to go in fast company. Bellflower, by Electioneer, dam Beautiful Bells, is fit to race for a king's ransom. She, it will be remembered, won the $10,000 three-year-old race at Hartford last year. She goes along a mile, while taking her "constitutional," in 2:20, and the last half at a 2:16 clip. Amti Hull, a three-year-old chestnut mare by Hull, was sent for a first mile and came home, without urging, in 2:20. She has been entered in the circuit. There are many others that might be mentioned, but will speak for themselves before the season is over. Antella has been bred and will not be campaigned.

The entries for the July races are very large, and Mr. Sibley thinks there will be some of the finest exhibitions of speed that have ever been witnessed in this part of the State.

J. Malcolm Forbes' beautiful Arion, with a three-year-old record of 2:10, Marvin said, is expected now from Boston at any day. When asked if he would handle Sunol, or any of Mr. Bonner's trotters this year, Mr. Marvin said he did not know, as he had not heard from Mr. Bonner for some time.

Holly's El Rayo and His Poor Run.

It would appear from the following St. Louis dispatch that B. C. Holly is not having a very pleasant time in the Missouri metropolis with the newspaper men:

"No racing event in St. Louis of recent years has created so much talk of a scandalous character as that in which Eli Kindig yesterday defeated El Rayo in the Missouri Selling Stake. There are demands on all sides for an investigation by the St. Louis Jockey Club officials. To say the least, the race developed the most glaring reversal of form ever seen on a Western track.

El Rayo and Eli Kindig had run before within a week. One week ago yesterday El Rayo ran a bang-up third to Morrello and Ray S. in the Club Members' Handicap. On Wednesday he was entered in an owners' handicap, and on the strength of his previous performance, was made an odds-on favorite. With 110 pounds up he defeated Sir Walter Raleigh and Falero handily, going his mile and 100 yards in the fair time of 1:49, track conditions considered. His form that day, compared with that of Eli Kindig's, made the bookmakers feel that they were giving money away, even in posting such odds as 1 to 7 yesterday afternoon.

Eli Kindig has been out twice during the week. On Tuesday he ran a poor third to Belfast and Roquefort, both he and Roquefort shouldering the same impost of 111 pounds. On Thursday he was entered in an owners' handicap carrying 90 pounds. Walter, carrying the same impost, won handily. Roquefort with 100 pounds up was second and General Marmaduke, 90 pounds, was third. Eli Kindig finished fourth.

Yesterday this horse beat El Rayo by a clear length in the remarkably slow time of 1:57. Considering the time and previous performances of the horses one can find no justification for the result.

Since yesterday's race other circumstances have come to light which the Board of Stewards can hardly afford to fail to inquire into. The stake was a selling affair. Eli Kindig was entered to be sold for $1,000, and El Rayo's entry price was $2,000. Yesterday morning Senator O'Brien, Kindig's owner, went to B. C. Holly, the owner of El Rayo, and offered to buy the horse for $7,000. Holly refused to accept. Later on Charles Muhlolland, a trainer at the track, met Holly and told him that he had made a mistake, that O'Brien had said he would run the horse up on him if he won the race.

Jocky Perkinson visited the downtown poolrooms yesterday morning and placed all the money he could on Eli Kindig at 10 to 1. B. C. Holly, the owner of El Rayo, was seen after the race. He admitted all the facts stated above. "I wouldn't let them bluff me, though," he said. "My horse was out to win," and in support of his statement Mr. Holly produced several tickets showing that he had made sundry bets on his horse, but the biggest bet was only $10.

The San Francisco Gun Club.

On Saturday last the San Francisco Gun Club held their regular monthly trap meeting at Oakland Shooting Park.

Owing to the mid-summer season a great number of the membership were absent, only about one-half or less of the usual number of sportsmen appearing for the competition, yet this fact did not detract one particle from the full measure of enjoyment for which these meetings are always noticeable.

The majority of those participating took the twelve o'clock boat, and as a result, the shooting closed quite early in the day compared to the usual run of events at the meetings of this club.

The birds were hut a fair lot taken as a whole and yet, perhaps, they may throughout the entire event averaged fairly well.

Several of the gentlemen shot extremely well and made good records.

Messrs. Tuhbs, Babcock, Atherton, R. B. Woodward and Chapin shot in good form and made good records.

Mr. A. C. Tuhbs has been shooting very good all the season and the outcome of the season's record will, no doubt, find him well to the front in the contest for the first honors of the club.

Mr. Harry Babcock and Mr. R. B. Woodward stand well in the front rank and will, no doubt, there remain to the finish of the season's sport.

The scores made on this occasion stand as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes A. C. Tuhbs (12-11), Harry Babcock (11-11), F. D. Atherton (2-11), R. B. Woodward (2-11), W. S. Chapin (2-11), W. S. Kittle (2-11), C. E. Stone (2-11), F. R. Webster (2-11), W. S. Orr (2-11), R. H. Sprague (0-2), Howard Black (1-2).

A six-bird sweep was then shot off, $2.50 entrance, resulting as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Orr (1-2), Sprague (0-2), Chapin (0-2), Stone (0-2), Webster (1-1), H. Sprague (0-2).

Messrs. Sprague, Webster and Chapin then shot off a pool, the first two named winning. Messrs. Webster and Sprague then shot off three twelve-bird matches which gave the following results:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Webster (0-1), Sprague (1-2), Webster (1-2), Sprague (0-2), Webster (2-2), Sprague (0-2).

This closed the shooting for the day and the party returned to the city at an unusually early hour.

The Lincoln Gun Club.

The Lincoln Gun Club held an interesting match at blue rocks Sunday last. The shooting was not, on the whole, up to the usual standard of the club but this in no sense interfered with a most enjoyable day. The score:

FIRST CLASS.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Allen (1-1), Foster (1-1), Butler (1-1), Carr (1-1), Whittier (0-1), Daniels (1-1), Quinton (1-1), Wenzel (1-0).

SECOND CLASS.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Fisher (1-1), Olsen (1-1), Cohen (1-1), Ostrander (1-1), Anson (0-0).

The day was then spent in pool-shooting until a late hour. The Lincoln Gun Club ever extends a cordial welcome to all sportsmen, and those visiting the grounds of this club at Alameda Point may be sure of a cordial welcome.

The Columbian Edition of the Sportsman's Directory and year book for 1893 is at hand, and, after glancing over its pages, we are glad to say that it deserves well at the hands of the entire guild of the country. It is handy and useful in many ways to the sportsman. The articles appearing in its pages from a number of well-known writers, are, on the whole, timely and well written. All of them are interesting and many are instructive. The compilation of the names of rod and gun clubs, and of the leading sportsmen, state associations, interested in the preservation of fish and game, dealers and manufacturers of sportsmen's goods, make it a directory in fact as well as name, which will prove invaluable for the purposes intended.

Random Notes.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 15.—I have recently returned from a trip through Southern California, and I was struck with the apparent scarcity of game of all kinds. I had, previous to this visit, entertained the idea that California was well stocked with game of all varieties, from the quail to the grizzly bear, and that waterfowl were almost a scourge. San Diego, from which place T. S. Van Dyke wrote his interesting shooting yarns, is now about as barren of game as the streets of Chicago, and probably in some respects more so. Mr. Babcock, of the Hotel de Coronado, has a small preserve, upon which there are quails and jack-rabbits; but ducks, geese, grouse and deer are almost unknown. I presume it is due to the merciless slaughter to which they have been subjected, or possibly to the inefficiency of your game laws, or both. But in a country so thinly settled as Southern California, and where the natural conditions are so favorable for game of almost every sort, it is a pity that it should be allowed to become practically extinct. How different are the conditions along the Gulf Coast. Here we have an older and more densely-settled country, with a large multitude of enthusiastic sportsmen contiguous, and yet game is in great abundance, even to the larger varieties. Perhaps some of your readers can account for this apparent inconsistency; I am sure I cannot.

Otherwise than a game country, your State came up to my expectations, and I was greatly pleased with its climate and landscape. About Santa Barbara and Los Angeles I found some of the most delightful localities I have ever visited, and if one could only have good shooting at hand I know of no place on the continent which could offer a home more to my taste. But the absence of good shooting is a fatal objection. I did not visit the northern part of the State, but I am told there is more game there, but then you have not the climate and landscape attractions.

The World's Fair is in full blast here, although many parts of it are even yet incomplete. Up to the present I have spent more time in the gun department than in any other section. It is a very incredible display indeed. I believe all American makers are represented with exhibits, and a good number of foreigners. Several of the English makers, whose product I much wished to see, are absent. Notable among them is Purdey, of London, who is considered to be the leading English maker. Some of the foreign makers, I am told, will not exhibit in America owing to the high discriminating tariff; however this was not Purdey's reason for not being present. I was shown a letter from them to a friend of mine in which they answered him that they would have been much pleased to exhibit at Chicago, were it not for the fact that the demand for their goods has been increasing so rapidly as to tax all their resources to meet it. They have therefore found it impossible so devote the time necessary to the preparation of an exhibit worthy the occasion.

Greener, as usual, is on hand with a very attractive display, and his work maintains its accustomed high grade. When it comes to the finer qualities, American work cannot compete with English, and so long as competition is practically excluded there will never be the effort to excel that open markets would engender. This is a pity, too, for a great many Americans know what a really fine gun is, and own one, too, despite the heavy duty; but there are many more who have the taste but not the cash. But the Democrats are now in power, and the time may be near at hand when we shall be able to get a foreign gun without duty, or an American gun of really high grade. As a consumer, I should like one or the other of these alternative.

The Game Laws.

There can be but little question in the minds of the observant sportsmen that the game law as it now stands is at best a blot on the statutes of this State. How it became to be mutilated, hungled and emasculated is a matter of but little practical moment now, suffice it to say that it is ought, but that which could prove satisfactory to any one who knows anything regarding the fish and game interests of this State.

The bill, as amended and past, could not be recognized from its former construction as introduced and first passed by the Assembly.

It is easy to howl, almost anyone may do that, but it comes with poor grace for anyone who failed to take an active part in the work of the formation of some bill or effort to have proper laws enacted fit now be heard attempting to crack the old "chestnuts"—the "I told you so" and "I knew it would suit in this way." It is a matter to be regretted that there should be so much of innuendo and insinuation from men who certainly know that such a course can serve no good purpose to the game laws of our State in particular, and to the great body of our sportsmen in general.

Did the Emeric Game Bill contain any good whatever? All agree that it did contain very much that was of the first importance to the State. Who was it that gave to it any practical earnest endeavor and support? Not, we are persuaded, those who now, with fox-like cunning admit this fact, and then in the same breath seek to cast the slime of insinuation and drool of virulent mistatements and bald assertions of ignorance and arrogance over the earnest efforts of those who labored, disinterestedly, for the enactment of such measures as would prove effective for the good of the whole State.

Now every county has a different law or at least the power to cure, in a measure, the effects of the untought attacks on the late proposed law by exercising the power vested in the Boards of County Supervisors. The whole tenor of the original bill as proposed was for the protection and preservation of fish and game. So much is admitted on every hand. What more could be asked? As amended, the virtue of the bill was almost entirely taken away from it. Who is to be blamed for this? Is the man who proposes the proper course in the enactment of a law to be held responsible because some one else insists on ruinous measures?

It is to be hoped that the supervisors in the counties where deer are to be found in abundance will change the law so as to permit the deer to be hunted when they are fit for food, say as early as July.

For all the central and northern portions of the State especially, quail shooting should not be permitted until October first at the earliest and in many counties the fifteenth of that month would be more suitable.

It is to be hoped that a more uniform and a more just and practical bill may be passed at the next session of the Legislature governing this matter, but we submit that recriminations are not fruitful in good results to that end.

In the Rockies.

Mr. Francis J. Hagin, in Rod, Gun and Kennel, has the following:

One day while we were camped on Lake Ellis, I got back to camp late in the afternoon after a hard and unsuccessful day's hunt. Bigelow and the guide were just pushing off in the canoe to pass the night at the head of the lake. While fishing, Bigelow had found a place at the embouchure of a cañon into the lake where either elk or moose had been nightly coming down. They asked me to go with them and it was but the work of a moment to gather up my blankets, toss them into the craft and embark in this nocturnal expedition.

Across the lake in the solitude and silence of the twilight, our canoe slipped as noiselessly as the funeral barge in Tenyson's "Elaine," and then along the opposite shore beneath the mountainous mass of rock that rises a sheer thousand feet from the water's edge, cut with chasms and caves and graced with fantastic figures by the action of the wind and wave. Weird profiles and masks looked down and frowned from the rocky walls, and a sense of loneliness and mystery fell upon us.

It was rapidly growing dark upon the shore of the lake—night had already fallen within the cañon walls. With a white moth I whipped the stream a short distance up from the lake, and landed a couple of beauties, who put up a noble fight in that swift water. Leaving it I started back on a straight cut through the meadow. As soon as I was beyond the deafening influence of the roaring torrent, I heard, or thought I heard, a sound. Pausing, I peered vainly through the shadows, and concentrated all my powers in the sense of hearing. I had just started on again, when suddenly something startled the stillness, a harsh, swishing sound, and gazing from whence it came, I descried on the mountain side above me a big bear complacently sitting on his haunches and stripping a hush of his berries at one fell swoop. So closely did his color assimilate with his surroundings, that my eye had probably passed him over several times until guided by the sound he was located. With a lurching motion, much like a sailor on land, he strode to the next hush, and, assuming a sitting posture, stripped it of all its berries by sweeping his forepaw upward along its length, the branches passing through and between the long, scimeter-like talons which stripped them of leaves and berries alike. It was a grotesque, half-human posture, and the manner in which he brought the handful of bruised berries and leaves to his mouth and gulped them down was absolutely human in its gluttonous avidity. I had but a fleeting glimpse of this rare and unusual spectacle; his next move was to shamble a little farther off, and his huge gray form grew quickly indistinct in the fast-falling darkness.

Bigelow remained to watch the meadow, while the guide and myself cruised in the canoe along the lake shore. We spread our blankets on the bottom to deaden any sound, and I sat in the prow while Pete propelled the craft as silently as the shadow of a cloud. Hour after hour we stole softly along in the shadow of the shore. At last there came a sound clear and unmistakable, a heavy animal moving through the brush. With frequent pauses it approached. Nearer and nearer came the sound, with intervals of silence when it paused to feed or listen. To our excited senses the sound was exaggerated, and with all my senses concentrated upon it in that intense silence, I felt that the animal was as big as an elephant. Neither of us for a moment doubted that it was aught but the giant of the cervidae, the moose.

We were ambushed in a cove whose surface was dotted with water lilies, and whose shallow bottom was ramified with their long, fibrous roots, the greatest food in the world for moose. We waited with baited breath to see some big palmeto bull wade out into the water and souse his head beneath the surface in search of some delectable vegetable. I determined to take no chances. I made up my mind to wait until he should wrench a root from its bed in the mud, and stand in the bright light perfectly still, broadside on, chewing away in hovine content.

At last the animal is at the water's edge. Each leaf fringing the brush-bordered shore shone like silver in the moonlight. We heard the tinkle of the ice that had frozen along the margin, his hoof splashed into the water, and across the glossy surface a hundred gleaming circles speed in rippling, wavy chase. The next moment the bushes parted and gave egress to—a doe. Pete dropped his paddle with an exclamation of disgust. The deer threw up her head and for one moment stood at gaze, the incarnation of startled terror, then wheeling she bounded back into the brush and crashed up the mountain side.

We returned empty-handed and found Bigelow sound asleep where we had left him. We had our vigil in vain. But I recall it with no regret.

Never shall I forget the scene when the full autumnal moon rode high in the heavens. For a long time I lay awake and looked upon it. Above us towered by the tremendous ranges of eternal snow, silvered by the moonlight which splashed many a jagged precipice themselves and the lower steeps were all in indigo blue. The lake lay like a mirror. Faintly, from far above, was wafted the hugging of the hull elk.

Upon such a scene I closed my eyes past midnight, and when I awoke all was chill and gray, the pine-clad slopes were sombne, and the upper steeps were dun-colored in the dawn.

Grand Blue Rock Tournament.

To-morrow an open tournament will be held at Clahrough & Golcher's shooting ground in the Oakland Race Track, when the following matches will be shot off, the shooting to commence promptly at 10 o'clock: Event No. 1, 10 single; entrance, $1.00, including birds. Event No. 2, 6 pair doubles; entrance, $1.00, including birds. Event No. 3, 15 singles; entrance, $1.50, including birds. Event No. 4, 25 singles; entrance, $2.50, including birds. Event No. 5, 10 singles; entrance, $1.00, including birds. Use of both barrels, second barrel break to count one-half, and as many more matches as daylight will allow. All purses divided 40, 30, 20 and 10 per cent.

It is to be hoped that every county, in the central and northern portion of the State may change the present law so as to permit the shooting of quail not earlier than October 1st, and that deer may be shot during July and August, certainly not later than September 15th.

The Country Club holds its regular montly meeting to-day at Oakland Shooting Park.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam, and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

Constitutional Treatment.

There is no matter requiring the exercise of good judgment more definitely and in such a high degree as in the treatment of disease whether by animal or man. It might be added, with a fair approach to the truth, that there is no subject on which the average man exercises his good sense in so small a degree. This should not be so. If you own a dog your duty to that animal is clearly to give it your best attention both in sickness and in health. Nine-tenths of the diseases to which the dog is subject may be and are cured by constitutional treatment, which term implies but the exercise of that rare quality of mind called common sense.

Sense—good, sound, reasonable action of the mind, applied to whatever subject may come before it for consideration, is not by any means "common." In fact, it is very uncommon. But there should be enough sense, common to all intelligent persons, to convince them on very limited reflection, that constitutional treatment is the reasonable and proper means for the curing of most diseases current in the kennels.

Eczema and in fact almost every skin disease should be treated constitutionally. It is strange how little change in the treatment of a dog will sometimes result in an absolute cure of diseases of this nature. The first broad principle to be applied, if possible, when you find your dog is afflicted in this manner, is to change everything as thoroughly and affectively as possible.

Change your dog's surroundings; change his food, change his kennels, take him into the country, keep his skin moist with some application, lanoline is the best application, and in nine cases out of ten a cure will be effected.

All affections of the skin arise from the state of the blood, and almost any good alternative will be found to meet the requirements of the case.

If any animal or man becomes sick, nature's broad requirements are to cease doing those things to which the patient has been accustomed, and turn to doing something as entirely different as possible. A complete change of occupation and diet is the most natural remedy for any and all ailments of the animal system.

As Our Cousins See Us.

That very excellent kennel publication, The Stock-keeper and Fanciers' Journal of England, has the following in current issue anent our recent bench show in this city.

To judge from his report of San Francisco Show, which appears in the American Field, Mr. George Raper appears to have experienced a thoroughly good time of it in California. An entry of over 360 dogs was secured, and the quality of the competitors was distinctly superior to that seen upon the occasion of former shows. As a natural result, it soon got known in the district that something was going on in the Mechanics' Pavilion which would be worth seeing, and consequently the public flocked into the building, which is capable of holding 1,000 dogs comfortably, in goodly numbers.

Ingleside Crown Prince was far and away the best of the Mastiff dogs entered, whilst in St. Bernards California Bernard and California Alton occupied the leading positions, with the heavy weight of the party, Duke of Wellington, in the reserved position. Greyhounds were a poor lot for San Francisco, and a very similar observation applies to the Deerhounds, but the nine entries in American Foxhounds contained some fair specimens of the breed, but the English Foxhounds were weak in numbers and decidedly deficient in quality. Pointers are popular in California, and at all events in Sally Brass II. her owner has got a bitch which is up to high-class show form, and a workman to boot. According to English views the Setters were well, but by no means remarkably well-filled, perhaps the best of any variety being the Irishman, Ross; but several taking-looking Spaniels—Cockers, in particular—made an attractive appearance in their own section of the exhibition. Bulldogs were a moderate lot, and the difference of type amongst the Bull-terriers upon the bench was very much marked. Fox-terriers are undoubtedly a very popular breed in this district, and many well-known winners being entered, a good deal of interest was taken in this part of the show. The Toy classes were poorly represented, but taken all through the last San Francisco exhibition has proved to be a great improvement upon its predecessors, though there is plenty of room for a still further advance to be made.

H. McCracken has evidently made up his mind to own some dogs that will surpass any yet seen on this Coast, as we understand that he has this week bred the well-known prize winning greyhound bitch Lady H. Glendyne to that noted sire, Midnight, who is also the sire of Skyrrocket, Shortstop, Twilight and others equally as good, all of which have distinguished themselves during the past two years in the coursing fields, and some of which are expected to uphold the reputation of California at the International meet held in Dakota. Midnight is by Friday-night, out of Mother Hubbard.

Dr. F. W. Skaife will leave the city next week for a visit in his old home, Montreal, Canada, and will be absent until about the 15th of September. Mr. Rowat will have exclusive charge of the firm's business in the line of the kennel hospital as well as the other business of the firm during Dr. Skaife's absence. The hospital for dogs has been patronized so well that on the return of Dr. Skaife it is the intention of these gentlemen to build a larger hospital in order to be able to fully accommodate the demands made upon them for this purpose. We wish Dr. Skaife a pleasant visit.

The Field Trial Grounds.

The grounds selected for the coming field trials of the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club are near Salinas, and are reported to be all that could be desired for that purpose. The gentlemen at that place interested in having the trials held there, guarantee that the accommodations will be ample in every respect for that purpose.

The rod and gun club at that point will do all in its power to make a success of the event of the year, and no doubt but that they will succeed in conducting the affairs necessary to the very best possible advantage.

While congratulating Salinas on the fact that in January next there will be a gathering at that point of a large number of whole-souled, clever sportsmen, we cannot but express our heartfelt thanks to the genial, courteous and obliging gentlemen of Bakersfield who have for a number of years past made these annual events so pleasant and agreeable for all who attended them. The jovial and attentive Colonel Morrison, the kind and courteous W. B. Houghton, the quiet and gentlemanly W. H. McKittrick, the ever-present and attentive D. M. Pyle. But we can in truth better, and in full justice to the leading citizens of that beautiful Queen of the San Joaquin, refer to her directory as a whole for the names of those to whom credit should be given for the many acts of kindness received by the club at that point.

The coming trials will, no doubt, be more largely attended than any yet held by the club, owing to the close proximity of the grounds to this city, from which a large proportion of the active membership is drawn.

The entries show a large number of entries from the southern part of the State, and we trust that new blood may be infused into the club, and we have no doubt but that there will be many new faces interested in the All-Age and Membership's Stakes at the coming event.

The Derby entries for the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club's Derby for the coming trials to be run at Salinas next January are as follows:

Mary Kyle-Dallas, some years ago, wrote the following which appeared in the New York Ledger:

"A traveler stopping at an Inn, found the landlord to be a great sportsman, having a large number of foxhounds which were kennelled near the house. Of course they at times set up a chorus that drowned every other noise. At the moment when every dog was testing their lung-capacity to the fullest extent, the landlord turned smilingly to his guest with the query; "Is not that royal music?" His guest was silent, while he assumed a listening attitude for a moment when he said, as a look of vexation spread over his countenance, "I cannot hear anything on account of those confounded dogs!"

A good story has leaked out on Senator Amos Steck, of Colorado. A friend of his residing at Pueblo bet the old Senator that Weaver would not carry Colorado. The wager was a $50 dog. After election the Senator wrote to his friend and jogged his memory about the bet. The next day the Senator received by express two dogs with a letter that read as follows:

"DEAR AMOS—I can't find any $50 dogs. I send you to day by express two $1 dogs, and will send you the other 48 as soon as I can corral them."

The Senator is now trying to prevail upon Edward Eddy and General Campbell to join with him in starting a weincurwurst factory.

The beauty of a small calibre rifle may now be tested on almost any of the numerous bills about the city, where squirrels may be found in abundance. It is sport of the first order to be able to pick them neatly with these companionable firearms.

The Southern California Kennel Club.

The Southern California Kennel Club is in a flourishing condition. The officers elected at a recent meeting for the ensuing year are, T. E. Walker, President; J. C. Cline, T. S. Casey, G. A. Vanderbeck, A. P. Robinson and J. Schumaker were elected as Vice-Presidents, in order named; E. K. Benchley, Treasurer; C. A. Sumner, Secretary.

The next bench show to be given by the club will be on April 18 to 21 inclusive of next year. A number of gentlemen were elected to membership, namely: H. M. Tonner, J. G. Borglum, C. H. Brown, Richard Gird, J. B. Winston, W. H. Holmes, F. N. Notman, E. Clawston, S. H. Laverty and A. P. Kerckhoff.

Mr. Sumner was remembered by a gift in the form of a beautiful album in recognition of his able services during the recent show given by the club. Directors Price, Besckington and Edmonds were tendered a vote of thanks for their services rendered the club on the occasion of the late show.

Whelps.

T. J. Watson's English setter bitch Alice Gladstone II. 28,555 (Dan Gladstone—Miss Alice), whelped June 15th, eight—five dogs, three bitches—by same owner's Sam Weller 14,001 (Roderigo—Dixie).

A Galasbiels man had an exciting adventure with an eagle last week in the hills near Riccarton Junction, says the Shooting Times and British Fancier. The sun was shining brightly at the time, and suddenly the man felt a shadow cover over him, and the next moment a large eagle made a swoop at him and knocked his hat off his head. The eagle returned again and again to the attack, and the man defended himself as well as he could with his umbrella. Finally the eagle was frightened off by the approach of an express train. Had the Scotchman been without any means of defence, there is no doubt he would have been seriously injured. It is supposed that the bird had a nest in the neighborhood.

The Seattle bench show seems to have been unusually prolific in engendering "bad blood" among the breeders and exhibitors, especially in the St. Bernard class at that place and vicinity. We sincerely trust that Battle of Words may prove to be the Waterloo of all Napoleons of the Pen on a subject that has already had its full amount of consideration. Let the matter rest, as no possible good can come from continually agitating the subject. Better turn time and attention to some of the many vital and thoroughly practical questions of the day in kennel matters.

One of the evils which creep into the bench shows and cause more or less hard feelings is that of drawing closely the conditions for winning special prizes. At the recent show in this city a prize was offered for the best kennel consisting of three or more dogs shown by one owner. Now what is necessary to constitute a kennel? Must it contain at least one stud dog? Some think one way, some another. Who will settle the question?

The judging of the International coursing meet to be held at Huron, South Dakota, this season will, in all probability, be done by Mr. John Grace, of this city, since Mr. James Hedley, of England, has found it impossible to be present. Mr. Grace could not be improved upon as a judge of coursing.

Mr. L. L. Campbell, the tenacious and persistent breeder of Irish setters, will not be discouraged by unavoidable set-backs. The death of Glenmore Hoodlum recently was, last week, in a measure forgotten on the arrival of two beauties—dog puppies—(Finglas—Champion Ruby Glenmore).

Mr. Alexander Arkman, Long Beach, offers, in this issue, some fine rough-coated St. Bernard puppies for sale. They are by Sir Herbert, 15028, out of Tabitha, 25280. See advertisement for full pedigree. They are good ones, nicely marked and can be purchased for $50. each.

The retirement of Mr. E. B. Bishop from the Irish setter kennel world takes away one of the most ardent and able fanciers of that class in this country. He will be missed. Few men have done more than he, in so limited a time for the advancement of this breed.

Mr. H. M. Tonner, of North Ontario, is preparing a number of entries for the coming Derby in which Dr. A. DeMonco is also equally interested with him. Pointer blood is in the ascendant with these gentlemen. They have some good ones.

Mr. J. B. Martin received last week from the East his foxterrier bitch Ch. Blenton Brilliant in whelp to Starden's King. The bitch arrived in very poor condition, showing culpable neglect on the part of the express company.

Two days is the remarkable time taken by the express company to ship Mr. Geo. Bell's cocker spaniel from New York to Philadelphia. Death by suffocation ensued. Who is to blame?

The question of holding open-air bench shows is one of the novelties suggested by a few kennel enthusiasts. It is to be very much doubted if such an arrangement will ever become successful.

The heated season is very hard on dogs generally. Keep them as cool as possible, plenty of shade and water, with good range are essentials in keeping them in good condition.

The season for bench shows now has become that of all seasons, as it requires the entire year in which to give each section a suitable time for exhibiting its kennel interests.

Henry Huber's champion pointer bitch, Sally Brass II., is due to whelp in a few days. He anticipates great results from this union with Glenbeigh.

Mr. E. P. Schell reports that his kennels, and those of Mr. Henry Huber, are flourishing finely. The St. Bernards and pointers are all doing nicely.

Dr. W. E. Widans, Santa Clara, has a very promising young greyhound dog, now twelve months old, out of Twilight, by Dan B.

The recent show at Wisahickon Heights was a grand success.

ROD.

Pleasures of the Lakes.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

When the summer skies are wrapping
The great mountains, where the snow,
Their imperial forms are capping,
Looking on the lakes below;
I delight to go a-wooing
Of the trout with line and rod,
In the Idens where are brewing
The rich wines of Nature's God.

There I love to walk and wander
Through the tangled isles of pine;
Hither, thither, gazing yonder,
Far above the timber line,
Whence December sends a blessing
To sweet blooming June below,
All the mountain side caressing
With his crystal jewels tow.

In a light canoe a-rowing,
Where the winds the ripples break,
Making music in their flowing,
Mid the pleasures of the lakes,
When the lily rod bends a double,
And the reel is heard to hum,
Then are drowned all earthly troubles—
Care sits lightly and are dumb.

When the matin winds are sighing,
And the morn in beauty wakes,
There can be no just denying
The sweet pleasures of the lakes,
Every breath is there a blessing,
Every moment is divine;
To our lips, are ever pressing
Nature's chalice of wine.

See the jeweled dewdrops glisten
"Neath the kisses of the sun;
Hark, the music! listen, listen!
Nature's anthem has begun.
Here the twitter of the linnets,
And the robin's cheery notes;
Sweet the day when we begin it
Magic pleasures in our boats.

When the faintest trace of twilight
Steals across the waters blue,
Then I love to watch the daylight
Fade into the deeper hue,
And to feel the thrill of pleasure
Tremble o'er the rod and line,
As the trout heaps o'er joy's measure—
Proves this Eden all divine.

Are Fish Guided by Scent.

The question as to the extent to which trout and other fishes depend upon the sense of scent in gathering their food, is one of interest. That trout, and I am inclined to believe all other fishes, do depend on their sense of scent to some considerable degree, I think no experienced angler will deny.

In fishing with the fly I have noticed first, that the only successful way of inducing a strike in a pool or recess of still water, is to cast your fly so that it may only touch the surface, withdrawing it instantly. What angler has not hesitated when casting under such conditions, only to observe the trout stop suddenly in its dart for the fly, when in a very few inches of it, and slowly change its course and ignore the lure. What was the cause? Is it not probable that the trout was first attracted by sight of the fly, and then when coming so close that the sense of scent failed to confirm the evidences of sight and the trout was thus made aware of the deception? I am inclined to this view of the question. But whatever view one may take of the subject, the fact remains as stated as to the sudden change in determination of the trout as to striking.

Here is a lure so perfect that it would deceive the human eye as to its lack of life, but the trout snaps up the live insect whether floating freely on the water or impaled on the hook as bait and ignores the artificial lure. Why? Because the one gives forth a scent and the other not. Why are ripples always chosen for the best fishing? May it not be an account of the motion given to the lure as well, perhaps, as to the fact that strikes must be made with the rapidity of lightning in order for the trout to secure their food, thus eliminating the chance of exercising so readily their sense of smell.

True, at times and under certain conditions trout and bass strike at almost any bright hue of a metallic or any other nature, but this fact will not account in a rational way for the facts as above noted. How do the blind fishes of the Mammoth cave of Kentucky get their food or strike the bait of the angler? Of course they use their sense of scent.

A little oil of certain kinds placed on artificial lure has been known to be of material aid in catching trout. Again, tipping the small fly-book with a very tiny bit of worm has been known to prove most effective.

Where to Fish.

The season for angling is now full upon us. All lovers of the rod may now go a-whipping of the streams and lakes with full confidence that they will not return with empty baskets. The waters have now subsided and cleared so that good fishing may be obtained in almost any of the more noted points for sport of this nature, and also in many places which have but local reputations as trout resorts.

It is noticeable that where everybody goes angling that the cream of the waves, or the fools of the fly are to be met with in smaller numbers than may be found in many of the lesser noted resorts.

Many waters are fished so constantly that the only wonder remains that there are any fish left at all. But in this respect there are very many places in the State where, owing to the conditions of climate and the nature and habits of the trout, that the season for good sport with the rod is very limited and therefore there may be found in such places an abundance of trout for all who may be so lucky as to visit these points at the right season.

The fruits of the rod for this season should be good. The work of the State Fish Commission has been such as to warrant the expectation of more than usual good fishing, which, we think, is destined to improve in the future.

The Paper Mill, Olema and Lagunitas creeks and Thrackmorton's Ingonn in Marin county are all good streams, and are within easy access of the city.

The streams are very apt to be fished out very thoroughly, and it therefore stands the angler in hand to have a general knowledge of the location of the trout streams that may be easy of access from the city.

Marin county has a number of waters all more or less adapted to the sport of angling. Among them may be mentioned Corte Madera, Ross creek, Blithedale, Gallinas, Olema, Novato, Paper Mill, Lagunitas, San Geronimo, Big and Little Carson, Nicasio, Salmon, Arroyo Sausa, Arroyo San Antonio and Cazadero.

Sonoma county also presents many places of interest to the lover of the rod and reel, notably Sonoma creek and tributaries, Agua Caliente, Hooker branch, Fowler, Calabassas, Stewart's creek at Glen Ellen, Shell creek, Adobe and Russian river.

Alameda county presents San Pablo, Pinole, Wild Cat, Bear creek, Walnut creek, San Lorenzo, Hayward, Arroyo Macho creek, Alameda creek, La Costa, Arroyo Honda, Calaveras creek, San Antonio and Niles.

San Mateo county leads in the number of streams that may be reached easily from this city on short notice. Among the streams that may be visited are San Mateo creek, San Francisco, Redondo, Redwood City creek, Yegnas creek, Grosby's creek, Stevens creek, San Pedro, San Vincent, St. Augustine, Deer creek, Arroyo del Monte, Pillaritos, Purissima, Lobitos, Tunitas, San Gregoria or Arroyo Honda, Clear creek, Boggus creek, Pompanio creek, Pescadero, Peters, Burtano and Torijoles.

Santa Clara county presents Guadalupe creek, Coyote creek, Campbell's creek or Arroyo Quito, Arroyo Seco, Los Gatos, Carnadero and Los Liagos.

Santa Cruz county has a large number of waters in which one may "drop a line" or wield the gaudy fly with more or less success. They are Scott's creek, Arroyo San Vicente, San Lorenzo river and its many branches: Fall creek, Newell creek, Bear creek, King's creek, Lompico, Levante creek, Arroyo Villa or brown creek, Gald creek, Sbaquel creek, Arroyo del Rodeo, Aptos, Corralitos, Boulder and Nadell. Another remote, though popular stream, is Wardell's creek.

In Napa county the Napa river and Suscol creek are said to be very good points to visit.

The reports generally from almost the entire notable waters of the State place the angling far ahead of that of last year.

BAY FISHING.

Just now the time is favorable for rock cod fishing. Many baskets of fine fish of this nature have been taken during the week. Points about Tiburon and Sausalito, Lime Point and near the shore about the head of Racon Straights are the best grounds.

A very enjoyable day's sport may be had by all those who would so choose by taking the ferry to either Tiburon or Sausalito. Boats, fishing tackle and bait may be procured at very reasonable rates.

There is much pleasure to be derived from a turn at the oars in the fresh sea breeze, but all so doing, who are not acquainted with the tides, should obtain information of the boathouse keepers as to the places to be visited with safety. A high tide and contrary wind is very apt to require such an amount of exertion as but few oarsmen, single handed, care or at times are able to put forth.

Good fishing may also be had from the Long Wharf, north of the ferry landing on the Oakland side of the bay, and a great many find pleasure in hay fishing off the Alameda Wharf near the ferry landing.

Sbrimp, pile worms and angle worm are good bait, while many prefer to attach to one hook, at least, a bit of mussel, which is said to be a very enticing bait.

DEEP-SEA FISHING.

The deep-sea fishing near the Farallone Islands is a class of sport that occasionally attracts a party in that direction, but these events are not looked upon in the light of sport as there is much labor in pulling a line from an indefinite depth with a practical dead weight attached, as is usually the case, cannot be said to contain much of an element of sport about it. But many persons annually make a trip to the Farallones for this purpose.

The Fish Exhibit.

All lovers of nature pause to admire the handsome and truly interesting fish exhibit. No other department can be said to equal in interest the display here made. To be an angler is, in a broad sense, to be an earnest student and lover of nature. I have never known a successful angler who was not a true student of nature as well. To all such the fish exhibit is said to furnish a lesson second to no other as an effective teacher than is presented by this department.

The display of live fish is spoken of as being very complete. About the tanks there are always to be found a large crowd of people eagerly inquiring about the numerous species of fish there displayed. Little animal life may be said to present more of attraction than the fish. They are pleasing to look upon and their many graceful gyrations in their native element are the personification of grace and ease of movement. The Sportsman's Review has the following to say of this exhibit:

One of the most attractive exhibits at the World's Fair is the display made in the fisheries' building. It is not, as might be supposed, a mere show for fishermen and anglers, but rather a tastefully arranged exhibition of fish and fish products, out of which the ordinary visitor may find much that is interesting, while the specialist has not been neglected.

In the main building are examples of prepared fish from every quarter of the globe. The means of taking fish are well illustrated by drawing photographs and reproductions in miniature. Boats and coast fishing paraphernalia abound in this building and early as well as modern implements are included in the display.

In one annex is shown fishing tackle in profusion, while in the other is a most interesting display of live fish. The show of trout includes all varieties, and it is almost needless to say that about the tanks in which they live, crowds of people are ever present during the hours of exhibition. The Egyptians, Esquimaux, farmers, sportsmen, anglers and all classes of the human kind seem to be attracted to the trout tanks. The suspicious looking Bedouin from the desert shakes his head and looks wise, and then tells his interpreter how much he marvels at the cupidity of the great civilized public, for he believes the art of man has been called into requisition to put the spots on the beautiful trout. The Bedouin believes he is a good deal of a fakir in a small way, but he admits he is not up to the Yankee idea of painting fish in fast colors.

Fly and Bait Casting Tournament.

The Chicago Fly Casting Club will hold a tournament August 9th, to decide the fly and bait casting championship of the world. There will be three events, to the respective winners of which will be awarded gold medals suitably inscribed and emblematic of the world's championship in each class. Two of the medals will be for fly casting; one for long distance and accuracy combined. The third medal will be for long distance and accurate bait casting. In all the events the casting must be single-handed. Dr. J. A. Henshal and Mr. C. F. Johnson are engaged in drafting rules to govern the contests, and preparatory are being pushed. Those desiring information or expecting to participate should address B. Davidson, Secretary, 127 W. Washington street, Chicago, Ill.

Another interesting article in the Tenth Bulletin is "Observations on the Hatching of the Yellow Perch," by S. G. Worth, superintendent of the Central Station, Washington, D. C. Observations such as were made by Mr. Worth do away with speculation entirely concerning the habits of the fish observed, says Mr. A. U. Cheney. Spawning commenced March 10th and ended April 3d with 236 specimen fish. The eggs were deposited during the night or early in the morning. The eggs were hatched in four to two weeks, the time being modified by the temperature of the water. The yellow perch is one of the most common of our fishes, and yet how little is actually known of its spawning habits which Mr. Worth's experiments have revealed. The eggs are deposited in strings, tough and gelatinous, the strings or lobes being in shape "like an old-fashioned knitted coin purse; that is, a pocket closed at the ends." The egg-lobe has an inner cavity throughout its length that water may pass in and out with a pump-like motion, owing to the springiness of the egg-lobe. This egg-lobe may be stretched to many times its original length, and, when released, contracts in folds like the sides of an accordion. One string of eggs was drawn out to measure seven feet and four inches long by four inches wide at one end and two inches at the other. This mass of eggs, when it became water hard, weighed forty-one ounces, while the parent fish before spawning weighed but twenty-four ounces. It was the rule to find that the eggs after becoming water hard, that is, plumped up by the water absorption, weighed more than the fish that deposited them.

It was rare to find eggs that were not fertilized, and all impregnation was accomplished by the fish themselves, and so few died in the hatching jars that Mr. Worth places the yellow perch at the head of the list of fishes for "simplicity of manipulation, economy of labor in attendance, and in turning out a large percentage in hatching." The smallest number of eggs from one fish was 2,000 and the greatest 90,000. It is estimated that 150,000,000 yellow perch may be hatched annually at an expense of less than $3,000 per year.

Another article in the Bulletin is by Dr. Bean, from material gathered at the different hatching stations of the Commission. Mr. Atkins, at Craig's Brook, Maine, saved 89 per cent. of the yearling Atlantic salmon in his rearing boxes, and the eggs of this species yielded 83 per cent. of fish at the time of distribution. At Schoodie station, season of 1889, the largest male land-locked salmon weighed six pounds and was twenty-six inches long, and the largest 5½ pounds, and was 23½ inches long. The female averaged 2,350 eggs each. At Green Lake station the largest male land-locked salmon weighed 13 15-16 pounds and was 31 inches long; the largest female weighed 11 9-16 pounds and 30 inches long. At Cold Spring Harbor station 2½-year-old brown trout gave an average of 303 eggs and fish of same species, a year older, gave 942 eggs each.

At Northville, Michigan, the loss in hatching Loch Leven trout was four per cent., and in hatching brook trout, fontinalis, two per cent. At Sudusky station it was discovered that pike perch fry began to devour each other when only ten days old. There are a dozen papers all told in the Bulletin, by Capt. Collins, Prof. Bashford Dean, Seth Meek, J. L. Kellogg, Hugh M. Smith and others, many of them profusely illustrated and accompanied with maps.

Since writing the notice of the meeting of the American Fisheries Society, called in Chicago June 15th, I have seen a protest, signed by members of the society now in Chicago, against the June meeting. Members in the East are signing a similar protest. Because, the reason given for the change from August to June is not valid; the change was brought about without a majority of the members being consulted; the change is in direct violation of the constitution, and if effected would establish a precedent that might prove fatal to the best interests of the society; and the time intervening until the proposed date of meeting is too brief to allow of the preparation of papers by many members who had the same in contemplation. This is the substance of the protest to be presented, when the signatures are obtained, to the president and secretary of the society.

The E. T. Allen Co. have just received a large and varied assortment of all kinds of fishing tackle, making their stock one of the largest and most complete ever brought to this city. Have you noticed their sporting goods emporium lately? If not, drop around to the old stand, 416 Market street and look over the extensive display there made of sportsmen's goods of every name and nature. It will do you good to behold them.

Just now the angling department is especially attractive. Lures of every name and nature under the sun are to be found there. Give them a call.

Mr. C. M. Osborn, with his wife, spent a most pleasant outing, from May 16th to June 3d, in Mendocino county. Both Mr. and Mrs. Osborn are enthusiasts in the art of angling, and, as may well be expected, thoroughly enjoyed themselves on this occasion. They spent most of their time on the Gualala river, where the trout fishing was very fine. It was nothing unusual for them to take well toward one hundred fish in a morning or evening bout along the banks of the above-mentioned stream.

The trout fishing at lakes Tahoe, Webber and Independence is reported very good. There is no better sport on earth, with rod and line, than these lakes afford.

The sportsmen who have visited Santa Cruz recently report that striped bass are running there in large numbers.

Some large trout are being taken from the Truckee, and the angling on Prosser creek is good.

Death of D. J. Murphy.

There is not a person who ever met Daniel J. Murphy but will be shocked to hear of his tragic death at his home near Milpitas last Tuesday morning.

An inquest was held, and the testimony submitted tended to show that death was caused by the accidental discharge of a pistol which he was cleaning preparatory to going on a hunting trip. At the time of the occurrence, about 8:30 o'clock, Murphy was seated in his office. Foreman J. A. Costigan had passed by the door to this office but a moment before and saw the deceased sitting in the rocking chair, examining the revolver. When he returned in a few minutes he found Mr. Murphy fallen forward, his bare head resting on the threshold. He gasped three or four times and died. The inquest was held during the afternoon.

His mother, when asked if there was anything noticeable in her son's conduct that could possibly give a ground for suspecting suicide, said there was nothing, but on the contrary that her son was cheerful and happy this morning and was anticipating pleasure in a hunt that he and the foreman were about to take in Sunol valley. She said there was no trouble, financial or other, that could have prompted suicide.

The testimony of George P. Bull, Murphy's brother-in-law, was that the deceased was in the best of spirits the last time he saw him, and was talking about his proposed hunting trip. The pistol was a thirty-eight calibre. It was evident an attempt had been made to remove the cylinder, and the rod was partly displaced. It is supposed Murphy intended to put the fresh bullets in the cylinder, and in order to clean the latter he was attempting to remove the rod. There was some resistance on account of rust; the trigger was at half-cock and a nail had been thrust partly through and was still in that position when the weapon was found.

John Allen, Henry Costigan, Colman Brooks and John J. Costigan all testified to the same facts, and they were also unanimous in stating that the deceased seemed to be in the best of spirits, and was joking with them but a little while before going in to fix the pistol.

J. J. Costigan was also recalled. The first he knew of the deceased having a pistol was about eleven days ago, when Dan brought it into his room and was examining it.

Constable Campbell was called as a witness. He testified that he had been out in the yard and discharged the pistol. "It cannot be discharged more than once," continued the witness, "unless you take out the pin."

He illustrated how the pistol could have been accidentally discharged and made the wound.

After being out a short time the jury brought in the verdict that Daniel Murphy, a native of California, aged 32, married, and a rancher, came to his death June 20th from a gun shot wound in the left breast, in the region of the heart, but whether the wound was accidentally inflicted, from the evidence, the jury did not know.

Those who were familiar with the man, however, have no doubt it was a pure accident. The doubt was probably caused by rumors in circulation of Mr. Murphy being in financial straits. That there was absolutely no foundation for them is shown by the statement of S. F. Leib, who acted as Mr. Murphy's attorney when he had legal affairs to attend to. In response to the question of a San Jose Mercury reporter as to whether Mr. Murphy was in financial trouble, Mr. Leib said: "He was not to my knowledge. So far as I know he was not in need of money."

"Is it true he had obligations he could not meet?" "I know of none, and if he had I am sure he would have told me."

"Was there an unsuccessful attempt to raise money on his place?"

"No. There is a mortgage upon the property, and he had made arrangements to transfer it to another party, who came to me to pass upon the abstract of title. The loan was negotiated and the terms were perfectly satisfactory. The amount was very small."

This statement is sufficient to remove all doubt on that score, and as there appeared to be no cause for despondency, Mr. Murphy being in the best of health and spirits, there is no doubt the pistol was accidentally discharged. This should have been apparent from the condition of the weapon itself as it showed that he had been making an effort to remove the cylinder, in all probability for the purpose of cleaning it.

Mr. Murphy was the youngest son of the late James Murphy, one of the earliest pioneers of the county.

James Murphy, the father of the deceased, established himself on what is noted as the "Ringwood Farm," near where Milpitas now stands, in 1849. James Murphy died in 1872, leaving property valued at $400,000. After his death the estate was managed by Daniel, who was born on the place April 25, 1861.

Mr. Murphy was an active member of the Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Association and the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, and was very well known and highly esteemed in Santa Clara and throughout the State. He was a very large man, of a commanding figure, and weighed about 250 pounds.

Mr. Murphy was married in September last to Mrs. Kate Field at Martinez. At the time of the sad accident Mrs. Murphy was at her mother's residence in San Francisco, but she arrived in the afternoon, and her grief was heart-rending.

Mrs. Ann Murphy, the mother of the deceased, is still a resident at the old home place. She is seventy-one years of age, and is in feeble health. Mrs. Murphy and her youngest son, who met so untimely a death, were very much attached to each other. They were the only residents of the old home place, as the remainder of the children received their portions and scattered abroad after the death of the father. The mother's grief over the accidental death of her son was pitiful to see. But a few moments before he entered the office he had been engaged in a pleasant conversation with her.

Hickok at Terre Haute.

At Terre Haute, June 11th, Nancy Hanks, 2:04, Stamboul, 2:07, and Axtell, 2:12, the three greatest pieces of trotting horse flesh in the world, were all out at once on the track being speeded, and it was an animated and exciting scene for those who chanced to be present. Stamboul was a pretty sight with a flashing red sulky and a yellow blanket floating from the seat as he trotted two miles in five minutes and hushed faster in the next. Nancy Hanks was driven leisurely around the track, and Axtell is being limbered up after his work in the stud. Rodv Patterson was behind Seaside, John Dickerson was behind Native State, and Sam Fleming was behind Marquita. The latter did the last eighth of a mile in 17 1/2 seconds. Boh Stewart repeated. White Stocking in 2:31 1/2, Ethylwyn in 2:29 1/2, and Rodv Patterson sent Mr. Case's Annie C. a mile in 2:22, the last half in 1:09. Tip O Tip paced a mile in 2:20, the last half in 1:08, and Alivo, 3-year-old brother of Palo Alto, trotted a quarter in 0:34, and two quarters, punctuated by breaks in 3:61 each. This brother of Palo Alto, 2:08 1/2, seems to please Orrin Hickok, who finds him better than he thought he was in California, where his best quarter had been in thirty-eight seconds. He goes much like Palo Alto, but with a closer, more gliding gait. Prince Axtell, 2-year-old, went fast in a three-handed spurt and trotted like a veteran. Ellsrd, 2:19, by Charlie Wilkes, the Montana horse, and Lee Russell, 2:18, made a capital mile, in which the last quarter was 0:34 and the last eighth 0:15 1/2.

While Avena, 2:19, as a 2-year-old by Palo Alto, was on the track, Hickok pointed out the manner of marking every foal at Palo Alto farm. On Avena's chestnut neck just under the mane is branded "C 147." The mark looks like corrugations or puffs in the skin and is not a disfiguration, though easily deciphered. If the horse has no marks under the mane it did not come from Palo Alto.—Inter Ocean.

Murder at Bay District Track.

Last Sunday night, between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock, at Bay District track, one of the most fiendish murders in the history of California was committed. The victim was John Kelly, better known as "Red" Kelly, a youth employed by Jack Garrity in the capacity of exercise boy. Dick Ward was placed in "the tanks" of City Prison charged with the atrocious crime. Everything points to Jockey Ward as the murderer, though no one saw him kill Kelly. Early Sunday evening Ward, who, as usual, was intoxicated, met Kelly in Paul Reitter's saloon, corner of Seventh avenue and D street, near the race course, and some one suggested that the pair try their skill with the gloves. Kelly was sober, and almost at the first pass struck Ward on the nose with sufficient force to bring blood, and the jockey, seeing that he was not at the time any match for Kelly, pulled off the gloves. Kelly was, however, one of Ward's few friends, the jockey being a quarrelsome, ugly customer when in his cups, which was often.

Kelly was with Ward until 12 o'clock at Dickey's place, and the latter was trusted by the barkeeper for a round of drinks. On Frank Dickey closing the saloon Kelly declared his intention of going to bed, which it is presumed he did at once, his hiding-place being some straw in one of the new stalls, situated about eighty feet southwest of the barber-shop across the street from the track. A stable employe named Leonard Stevens was aroused from his slumbers by Ward swearing and throwing stones against the sides of the building where Kelly retired for the night, but being accustomed to Ward coming in drunk and noisy, paid little attention at the time. Later they heard running in the passage-way between the rows of stables and Ward cried out: "You want to go to sleep, do you! I'll make you sleep!" Then there was a sound that Stevens describes as similar to a person striking a bale of hay with a club time and again, a cry rent the air, and all was then still. Ward then tried to arouse Dickey's folks, claiming that a man was hurt and a surgeon must be telephoned for at once. Dickey, thinking Ward was only fabricating, told the youth to go away, which Ward did.

In the morning the dead body of Kelly was found lying in the alley by the side of a straw pile, partly covered with a quilt. The sight was enough to freeze the marrow of almost any person's bones. Nearly every bone in the poor fellow's face and head had been broken, his nose was partly torn away, his mouth beaten in, while on a dozen places great gashes had been torn, as if the murderer had struck time and again with the sharp tines of a pitchfork and then pulled the fork around so as to make as ghastly a wound as possible. The head of the unfortunate youth was pressed nearly two inches into the soft earth, and the stable doors on both sides of the alley, fifteen feet across, were bespattered with blood. When found the face of the corpse was one mass of coagulated blood, and did not resemble in the least that of a human being. A bloody pitchfork, twisted out of shape, was also found in the alley.

Ward was at once suspected, and Billy Donathan kept him engaged in conversation at Dickey's in the morning until the police arrived. The suspect was asked to go and see the corpse of the murdered boy, but declared that he and Kelley were such great friends that it would make him feel bad to see it. Ward strenuously denied knowing anything of the murder, and still maintains his innocence of the crime, although on the night of the murder he declared to Albert Ivy that he had "done" poor Kelly.

On Tuesday, at the Coroner's investigation, a dozen witnesses were in attendance. Nothing new was elicited.

After hearing the facts the jury returned a verdict that Kelly was killed with a pitchfork in the hands of Richard Ward and charging the jockey with the crime of murder.

All through the proceedings Ward sat by the attorney who had been retained by his friends to defend him, and not once did he show any signs of sorrow, fear or other emotion. He was as cool as any of the spectators, even when the bloody pitchfork and his blood-stained shirt—tell-tale evidences of his guilt—were being handled for examination.

Two years ago Dick Ward was one of the most popular jockeys in California, and went East to do the riding for L. J. Rose, of Los Angeles. On his return to California he began to drink, fight and carouse until no one had any respect or liking for him. In the saddle he was a perfect dare devil, and on a sulking horse was one of the best pilots we have ever known. For the past year he has eked out a miserable existence, few caring to give him a mount, so reckless and unworthy had he proven himself. Last winter he was given a chance on St. Croix and deliberately pulled the horse up soon after passing the half-pole. Whether he was accountable for the act, or whether he did it for pay is not known, but the judges thought it a "crooked" ride, and ruled him off forever without delay. Since that time he has been working as exercise boy and rubber, and has been drunk as often as he could secure the money to get in that condition. Many men who have known Ward ever since he began work around a rising stable are of the opinion that he has been insane for nearly two years. Poor Kelly was hurried last Wednesday, a subscription being taken up among the horsemen at the track to defray the funeral expenses. Kelly was a native of St. Louis, 19 years of age, and it is believed his mother lives at Elgin, Ill. In a few days the truth will doubtless come out, but at present matters look very dark for Richard Ward, who languishes in jail with few friends to sympathize with him.

Fortieth State Fair.

Secretary Smith of the State Agricultural Society has issued a statement which contains many valuable suggestions for those intending to make exhibits at the approaching State Fair. He says:

The fortieth annual State Fair of California will be held at Sacramento September 4th to 16th inclusive. The premium list just issued contains classified awards amounting to $20,000 in cash for agricultural, mechanical and industrial exhibits. These annual exhibitions have been most successfully managed by the State Agricultural Society for the past thirty-nine years, and it is the intention of this society to give the public a progressive exhibition for the current year. The producers of California demand these annual exhibitions to assist and stimulate the various industries of the State, and, notwithstanding the counter attraction of the World's Fair, find it essential to cater to local trade. Consumption of home products still continue, and the farmer and manufacturer must have opportunity to show what is being accomplished within the confines of our most productive state. Not to do so would invite stagnation of trade and subsequent inattention to our productive qualities. Hence it is quite necessary that unusual efforts must be put forth this year in all the various branches of trade and commerce to prevent depression and encourage the sale of home productions.

California's past activity has probably accomplished more for her than anything that has been done by many sister States, agitation of her capabilities has been a most important agent in the attraction of outside capital. Lands that for many years were used but for the production of cereals have been sold and turned to more profitable use in advanced soil culture, thereby giving California additional variety of products, with corresponding increase of population.

There still remain thousands of acres susceptible of culture, of many undeveloped agricultural resources, the sale and cultivation of which would not only give us increased population, but permit the investment of money that would give most satisfactory returns to investors, with great benefit to the State as a whole. Increased opportunities for productions means additional facilities for the use of our circulating medium, thereby giving an impetus to all kinds of trade.

California's chief industry being agriculture, she must continue to advance it in every possible way. The failure to show her productive qualities one season would give the impression abroad that her capabilities were on the wane, whereas no greater progress in soil culture is being made at the present time in any part of the world than in this State.

The merchant, when trade is dull, inaugurates different plans for stimulating his business. The farmer would do well to follow his example, and when crops are short and prices depressed he should show exertion in keeping his industry conspicuous before the people, lest the outside world would be led to believe that agriculture in this great State had retarded.

Periodical setbacks occur in all branches of trade, and but for the activity of the merchant would be a standing menace to investment. This state of affairs is overcome in many instances by his efforts to stimulate, and success appears in many cases where failure is most apparent.

It therefore behooves the agricultural community of California to make an unusual showing this year at the State Fair; a meager one would be disastrous to our World's Fair exhibition, as the effect would tend to signify our productions as there shown were unusual.

The premium list as offered by the State Agricultural Society contains sufficient cash awards for agricultural products to warrant the various counties in making up a representative display of their varied productions.

To the manufacturers of California we would say as a means of promotion of your interests a general exhibit by factories should be made at the State Fair of 1893.

There is at the present time a growing feeling in this State toward the advancement of our manufacturing interests, occasioned by the prospective development of our most available but heretofore unused water power, which promises, in conjunction with the modern uses of electricity, to give us what has in past been the most important drawback in this industry—cheap motive power. A little agitation at this time of the interest would be most effective.

Therefore, extraordinary efforts should be made to show some of our established plants in operation at a State gathering, not only as a means of encouraging trade, but as a matter of inducement to capital to invest, as there are many factories that could be increased by the use of additional capital now that a cheaper power will soon be available.

The representatives of other States are here each season to display manufactured goods. They readily recognize the value of this agency to reach the consumer. Local manufacturers should not permit those from distant States to meet their trade without an equal showing of their ability to supply this trade.

Exhibitors at the annual State Fairs of the past are familiar with the advantages to be derived by an exhibit of their products; to those unfamiliar, we would say:

The great State Fair of California has been held for thirty-nine consecutive years, and is thereby valuable as an introductory agent by reason of its established permanency.

The California State Fair offers cash awards for State products amounting to $20,000 annually.

The California State Fair includes an exhibition of a most varied nature. The display of blooded stock is a most conspicuous adjunct to the great show of agricultural and industrial products that each season congregates in the largest exposition building on the coast.

The California State Fair Speed Department holds its usual prestige as an attraction for the multitude who desire to witness the equine contests as an amusement, to say nothing of the exhilarating effect of this out-door sport. It has been a most important auxiliary in attracting visitors who are sure to examine during odd times the products of California as shown in the various departments.

The awards of the California State Fair are of much benefit to exhibitors, as competition is great and merit here recognized is surely to be recognized in trade.

EDITED AND CONDUCTED SOLELY BY

Leland Stanford.

Reluctantly, sorrowfully and yet gladly I write in relation to the departure of he whose name is at the head of this sketch. Reluctantly, as I am utterly at a loss for words to convey the feelings which are struggling to find expression in phrases which will be commensurate. Sorrowfully, as the loss is so great to me in being debarred forever from an intimacy which extended over nearly twenty years, and that, apart from near relations, there could be none other so deeply lamented; but glad that I am permitted to add my testimony to that of the great many who enjoyed his acquaintance and revered the man. The shock came so suddenly that it stunned the senses, not only for the time, but has left its traces in a kind of bewilderment from the severity of the unexpected blow. The first intimation in the startling head-lines of the paper received in less than six hours after his death, and from the time of that first notice, on and on came recollections and mental reproductions of scenes, and words treasured and sentiments embalmed—a huge volume of remembrances, every chapter, every page, every sentence, in fact, a memento of the good will, the kindly feelings, the love and charity he bore to all mankind.

It is meet that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN should give a fitting obituary to the largest and most successful breeder of trotting horses in the world, and one of the main supports of trotting and racing at home and abroad. It is eminently proper that I, who have for so many years been identified with horse interests of the country, and the press which upholds these interests, should pay my tribute to the position that Gov. Stanford held in the horse world, and yet my first eulogy must be based on another theme. No one holds his memory in greater esteem on account of what he has accomplished in that line and the benefits he has conferred through his support of that industry, but my first homage is due to his worth as a man. So liberally endowed with the attributes which command esteem, respect and admiration—and if the term can be applied where there is no relationship, and outside of opposite sex, love will be none too strong a word to mark the estimate—that to those who were so fortunate to possess an intimate acquaintance, the more brilliant traits which marked his character were of secondary importance. Manly qualities predominated; companionship with him was a constant stimulus to eschew whatever was derogatory to manhood. One's faith in mankind was strengthened, the appreciation of what is good in life heightened, and were clouds overhanging, sunshine came from his example and words of cheer.

The millions he possessed, the high positions he held, cast no glamour over me, but the knowledge that boundless wealth, prominent station, commanding influence, domination over thousands of people, had not the power to carry him a single degree from a manly course, increased the fervor of my admiration, implanted such a feeling of respect and esteem, that any words I can use to portray that feeling appear inadequate, have so small a force that I am ashamed of the weakness of the portraiture.

I could cover page after page with illustrations of his character in respect to the qualities which have been named, and cannot refrain from presenting one or two instances. Accompanying him in his phaeton through the university grounds when the buildings were nearing completion, he unfolded the plan with such perspicuity that it was evident that every detail had been carefully considered, and in all its immensity it was laid before me so clearly and emphatically that it was like a picture, or rather a moving and changing scene replete with life. In all this enthusiastic description self was ignored. It was not Leland Stanford to be honored and glorified for the benefits conferred; it was the world to be bettered, the thousands and tens of thousands and hundreds of thousands made happier, the heart and the soul of the true philanthropist shining through the casing of clay; the good spirit illuminating the brain and pouring forth prophecies of good will to mankind.

I never heard him express a gloomy thought. His conceptions of Deity were of a benign and beneficent governing power, and his idea of life was to do the most good and increase the happiness of all living creatures. Not very long ago he remarked to me that he enjoyed life, but was not afraid to die, or rather that while life was still full of enjoyment, he had no dread of death. And there is one great consolation in the manner of his departure. In the full possession of his mental faculties he passed quietly to rest, "drew the drapery of his couch about him and laid down to pleasant dreams," his death in keeping with his life. There was none of the pomp, the turmoil which oftentimes surrounds the death of illustrious personages, none of the despair and anguish which wring the heart strings and palsy the brain. Hard though the blow, it has not the poignancy which accompanies being eye witness of dissolution, and if gracious to those who mourn, what an inestimable boon to a man who never indulged a thought of self when the happiness of others was at stake, to escape the pangs of even semi-consciousness of their sufferings, and glide as tranquilly into the haven of eternity as a bird drops into its nest. To me, and I trust to those who have so much heavier reasons to lament, there is deep satisfaction that the closing scene was in harmony with the beautiful life.

I saw in an evening paper of the day on which this is written that Governor Stanford had expressed to the writer that his only present desire was to see the University prosper and grow. That was probably the paramount feeling outside of the happiness of his family, but it is only a very short time ago that he gave utterance to very different expressions in a conversation with me.

It was his custom when I was riding with him to turn the conversation from the horses as soon as they were left, and touch on other subjects, and on the occasion mentioned, a comparison of vigorous manhood and age in relation to enjoyments was his theme. He was only thirteen months the elder, and he spoke of my physical powers being so little affected by years. "Apart from the weakness in my legs," he said, "and a measure of deafness I am not so had, but as my physical enjoyments diminish there is an increase of my relish for mental delights. A lowering of animal capacity to enjoy heightens the pleasure of what may be termed purely spiritual, and hence old age is not such a dread to one who has that capacity." He pointed to where the trees had branched so closely as to hide glimpses of the hay which was an attractive feature of the view years ago, and told that it must be restored, and it did not require words to explain that his enjoyment of the beauties of Nature was as keen as ever. He was as much or more interested in the horses than in previous years, telling me, on my last visit, that he was better pleased with the present youngsters than those which had preceded them, and his confidence in continual improvement under his system of breeding, rearing and educating. He dwelt particularly on further additions of thoroughbred blood in fast trotters, and said that he had resolved to make a more extended trial of pure thoroughbreds than had previously been awarded. Not the least indication that his interest was lessened in affairs which had occupied his attention, not an intimation of giving up the pursuits in which he had found so much pleasure. It is very likely that politics and kindred subjects had become tiresome. Of that I cannot speak as rarely, indeed, our conversation turned in that direction. Education of people and horses, and general topics were the fields of discussion and investigation, and whatever the question the same genial spirit, the same clear conception, the same charm in his handling of the subject. I cannot imagine the Governor Stanford I knew becoming listless, or losing appreciation of the bright sides of life, and in that eulogy which gave the wrong impression there is one sentence which is a truer exemplar of the man. I quote: "But, nevertheless, his greatest claim to consideration, maybe worshipful consideration, was his unbounded sympathy for men, his belief in them and hopes for them, finding sympathy, yes, finding fulfillment in his great university." That fulness of sympathy ensured retention of interest in whatever was worthy of interesting the masses of mankind, nay further, he had the fullest sympathy for individual traits, and however one-sided a person might be if his idiosyncracies were innocent and inoffensive he was careful not to wound the feelings of the enthusiast.

For centuries to come the name of Leland Stanford will be cherished. His fame as a railway builder; his renown as a politician and his management in retaining California loyal to the Union while he held the governorship, during the trying period of the war, will be known so long as history is known. Becoming dim, perhaps, after a lapse of eons of great improvements and startling changes in political conditions, but so long as mankind does not elapse into barbarism, so long as there are aspirations and endeavors to reach a higher plane than mere animal existence the name will be honored and revered.

In mentioning his great achievements it will be manifestly proper to include an illusion to what he has done in the sphere in which this paper has the greatest interest. Mere mention, however, as the recital, anywhere nearly full, would necessitate extensive description, and, in the main, a repetition of an oftentimes told tale. His unparalleled success in the production of fast trotters gave a potent effect to the teachings inculcated in his methods of breeding, rearing and education, and what was principally theory, before the institution of Palo Alto, became established fact. But the practical lessons, valuable as they were, fell short of what may be termed the prestige obtained for the sport by him becoming so much of a part of it, and in such a manner as to be of the greatest benefit. Although there are very many of the best citizens of the United States connected with the recreations of the race course and trotting track, he was the most prominent figure. And while so conspicuous there was no shrinking of responsibilities. Believing that when properly conducted these recreations would add to the pleasure and welfare of the people, he became an active participant, engaging his horses in the East and at home, trotting and racing them publicly and without excuse or apology. Very many who objected to the pursuit from an absence of knowledge regarding it; prejudiced by denunciations printed and preached, had kept aloof, accepted the anathemas as being thoroughly deserved and made up their minds that it was bad from foundation to capstone, changed that belief from the character of a man so well known in all section of the country, and not a few, stimulated by his example, became disciples and sharers in the pleasures of breeding and partakers in the delights of competition.

From this there came substantial additions to the wealth of California, and better still, a removal of much of the odium which retarded progress, by throwing doubts on the respectability of the calling.

There have been persistent attempts on the part of a few writers for the press to misrepresent the state of affairs at Palo Alto, especially in relative to the employment of near crosses of thoroughbred in fast trotters. Now that the controlling voice is silent it is likely that there will be continued misstatements, and these without the semblance of truth to build them upon. Whatever may occur in the future it is beyond question that in place of having doubts of the efficacy of the motive, it was never held in higher esteem.

Some years ago Governor Stanford intimated to me that provisions were made to carry on the breeding and training operations in case of his death. Whether that has been changed or not I have no idea, but if the arrangement has been made, in all probability there will be as close a following of the system pursued in the past as is permissible under the conditions. In that case the breeding stock will be the same and the same methods of rearing and training. There never was a period in the history of Palo Alto when there was the same public interest felt as there would have been from this time on if its founder and proprietor had lived. Progression was anticipated by men of judgment who were familiar with the management. Others claimed that the loss of Electioneer was an insurmountable obstacle, and that all the success was due to fortuitous circumstances. That estimate is already proved to be erroneous, and from the present showing stallions bred and reared at Palo Alto will equal, if not surpass, their illustrious predecessor. Then all the details are in better accord. The lessons of the past have been placed before apt pupils, and it was not likely that the teachings of the past fifteen years should be barren of results. While it is true that the guiding spirit no longer directs, the chart is so plainly marked that the course is clear. Not only plainly traced but all the angles so thoroughly known that deviations could not be made without the breach being known, and it is safe to assert that if continued, an exact compliance with previous orders will be required, and the old rules enforced with inexorable firmness.

The sad story has penetrated all parts of the country. In every hamlet, in nearly every dwelling the intelligence has startled and pained the inhabitants, and it is enough to add—that on the early morning of June 21st, Leland Stanford died at Palo Alto, aged sixty-nine years.

The Pleasanton String.

Nearly all the residents of Pleasanton assembled at the depot last Saturday morning to witness the departure of the candidates for king and queenly honors on the famous Eastern tracks. Seven tons of excellent Livermore hay, besides sufficient grain to last some time, were placed in the cars after the trotters and pacers were in their proper places. [Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

WOODLAND, CAL., June 20, 1893.—I visited the track of the 40th Agricultural Association this morning in order to gather items for your esteemed journal. Dinsdale), sired by Elias Lawrence, he by imp. Billet, dam a famous mare imported from England by Jim Keene. It is expected that these horses will produce great runners when crossed with the Jim Douglas mares, a great number of which are in the county.

A large attendance is expected at the Fair. There will be fine stock of all kinds on exhibition and a good display at the Pavilion. A twenty-mile race, bicycle race and mule race in addition to Stock Parade will constitute morning attractions.

DON D. DORMAN, formerly with Clark's Horse Review, has assumed charge of the trotting horse department of the Chicago Inter Ocean and will make a specialty of giving all the latest trotting horse news daily. This feature will, no doubt, be highly appreciated by the thousands of readers of this able journal.

ALBERT YOUNG (colored) drove the blade of a penknife into the heart of Emory Hartsfield at Morris Park, Westchester, N. Y., on June 16th. Hartsfield died soon after, and at last accounts Young had not been found. Young lived at Lorillard's stables, Sheepshead Bay, and was valet for Jockey W. Simms. Hartsfield acted in the same capacity for Jockey Overton.

DR. C. W. ABY on last Monday forwarded to New York his answer to the suit brought against him by Fred Gebhard for an accounting of his management of the Gehhard breeding farm in Lake county. The complaint sets forth that Aby owes Gebhard in the neighborhood of $6,000, while Aby says that the boot is on the other leg to the extent of $3,000. J. Mulcahy is now in possession of the ranch as representative of Gebhard.

THE Speed Programme Committee of the Monterey Agricultural Association, District No. 7, have decided to have at the coming annual fair a number of dash races in trotting and pacing. They have also determined that they will give a number of two-in-three trotting and pacing races, in which any horse that does not win one heat in three shall go to the stable, and that the race shall be concluded at the end of the fourth heat and the money divided among the horses according to their relative standing at the end of said heat. In three-in-five races a horse not winning one heat in four will be sent to the stable, and the race is to be concluded at the end of the sixth heat. The money will be divided according to relative standing of horses in such cases at end of sixth heat.

GEORGE W. WOODS died in Yreka Saturday, June 17th, at the home of his mother, aged twenty-three years, four months and nine days. The deceased came to Yreka about three weeks ago, sick with malaria fever, that his mother and sisters might attend to his wants and care as no others could. His illness developed into a severe case of typhoid malaria fever. His life quietly ended about 7 o'clock Saturday evening, surrounded by relatives and friends. The deceased was born and raised in Yreka and here he lived and attended school, and had many friends. He leaves a mother and five sisters, two married: Mrs. A. E. Junker, wife of our townsman, Albert E. Junker, and Mrs. E. B. Cavanaugh, of Edgewood, in sorrow for his early demise. The family have the sincere sympathy of the community.—Yreka Journal. George Woods was well-known to horsemen here. Last fall and until recently he was employed by Smith Bros., owners of Cyclone, the big son of Jim Sherwood. Previous to that he was connected with the trotting stable of L. Swan, owner of Georgie Woodthorpe and others, and was a very capable young horseman.

C. HALVERSON, of Routier Station, writes us: This is a report of my mares and foals. March 29, 1893, Fahiola, by Warwick, dam Maggie S., foaled a chestnut filly with star on forehead, sired by Fitz James, son of imp. Kyrle Daly and Electra. The mare has been bred to imp. Loyalist. On June 4, 1893, Maggie S., by Bayonet, dam Mrs. Stoner, foaled a fine, large, rangy-looking bay filly, with small star and a little white on the heels of both hind feet, sired by Three Cheers, but I am sorry to inform you that the mare got ruptured and died from bleeding. The foal is all right and is doing finely, and had the mare lived I should have bred her back to Three Cheers again. She was the dam of May Blossom, winner of the California Derby in 1886, and of Marguerita, by Leinster, owned by P. Herzog; of Kyrle D. by Kyrle Daly, who won as a two-year-old, of Isabella, by Norfolk, also a winner, and also was the dam of Fahiola, by Warwick. These latter two I own. Maggie S., was also the dam of Daniel S., by Joe Daniels (he is dead), and of Alliance, that got a part of the purse in nearly all the races he was in last year. He won five, was second in five or six and third in five or six. He is by Hidalgo. The last one is the suckling filly by Three Cheers. She of course has not won yet, but look out if she gets to the post all right. They will have to run to beat her.

JAS. W. REA, of the Vendome Stock Farm, San Jose, has accepted a challenge from F. M. Burke, of the La Siesta Ranch, for $1,000 a side to trot Pink, 2:23 1/4, the property of Mr. Ed. Senter, of San Jose, against Daylight, 2:27 1/4, two-mile heats, best two in three, to be trotted during the State Fair at Sacramento in September next, Prince to be driven by C. F. Bunch, the trainer of the Vendome Stock Farm, and Daylight to be piloted by the veteran driver, Wm. Vioget, for the La Siesta Ranch of Eros farm. Pink is a well-known campaigner and is by Inca, out of a mare by Echo. Daylight is by Eros, 2:29 1/4, out of an Abbotsford mare. This gelding's staying qualities are unquestioned, and we look forward to see a great race of speed, and especially to one of endurance.

ACCORDING to very recent advices from Chicago the whole Fair stable has gone back, and even if Floodgate and Dare start in the American Derby to-day they are not likely to cut much of a figure. This news will be received here with disappointment, but the source from which we received it leaves room for little doubt. Floodgate has been beaten twice within the past two weeks at St. Louis by horses that are not by any means known as crackerjacks, hence Californians must pin their faith in Fidelia, San Francisco, Lady Bess and Oporto, who are likely starters in the American Derby which will be decided this afternoon in Chicago. It takes time to acclimatize our horses that are to race on tracks east of the Rockies and while Dick Havey has a most excellent string, we will have to wait awhile ere we hear of the Fair horses at their best.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

REMEMBER entries to the Breeders' meeting close next Saturday.

SPHINX, 2:20½, by Electioneer has a pacer in the 2:30 list—Syrena, 2:29½.

CHAS. PREW, formerly foreman of Splan's stable, is now with Orrin Hickok.

REPORT comes from Glenview Farm that Samp Wilson has driven a two-year-old by Egotist a mile in 2:27½.

A NUMBER of horses that did not appear on the California circuit last year will be seen in the races this season.

PREF O' DAY has a mark of 2:36 now. He has not lost a single race and is gradually approaching the 2:30 mark.

FAUSTISSIMA, a two-year-old full sister to Fausta and Faustino, was driven recently at Shady Side Farm a mile in 2:40.

MILLO KNOX, a capable young trainer and driver, is working several very promising young trotters and pacers at the Meek track near Haywards.

THE Oakland race track is in the exclusive possession of trotting horse drivers and Ben Wright is doing all in his power to make it the best one in this State.

THORR by Alcazar, dam Lady Mackay by Silverthreads, second dam Fleetwing (dam of Stamboul, 2:07½), is in training and shows that he will get a low mark this fall.

NELLIE F., by Anteros, that took a four-year-old record of 2:25 last year, has been put to pacing and at the diagonal gait is very fast. She will be a dangerous element in the show classes.

THE many friends of Dr. Thomas Maclay of Petaluma will be pleased to learn that he was able to sit up for a short time on Friday, and that he is gradually regaining his wonted health and strength.

THE death of D. J. Murphy, of San Jose, creates a vacancy in the Board of Directors of the Santa Clara Agricultural Society and the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association.

J. L. McCORD, Sacramento, Cal., has purchased the broodmare Sallie, by McCracken's Goldstud, dam Brown Jennie (dam of Mary Lou, 2:19½; Shylack, 2:16½, and Ned Winslow, 2:15), by David Hill Jr.

BOODLE, 2:21½, is receiving a little work every day. He will be inside the "twenty" list before his first day's racing ends on the circuit. He has just completed a very heavy season in the stud.

THE news received from the various centers of Agricultural societies is most encouraging, and from present indications the race meetings to be given this fall will eclipse all those heretofore given.

INEX (sister to Inez, 2:22½), by Sweepstakes, out of Dolly Bull, by Kentucky Bertrand is one of the best matrons on the Oakland Park Stock Farm. She had a bay filly last week by Prince Red that is a perfect little beauty.

NEXT Thursday, June 29th, at the salesyard, corner Van Ness avenue and Market street, a number of very promising young trotters and pacers will be sold. They belong to A. T. Hatch, of Suisun, and F. D. Myers, of Oakland.

H. GREENFIELD, Moravia, N. Y., has sold to N. J. Ronin, Fremont, Neb., the roan stallion Nopal 18,563, by Judge Salishury, dam Ella, by A. W. Richmond; second dam Grey Dale (dam of Longworth, 2:19), by American Boy, Jr.

WORTH OBER has a string of good ones at the Sacramento track. Some of them are by his handsome Nutwood stallion Ross S., 2:21½; others are by Gibraltar, 2:22, Memo and Noonday. This driver will be seen on the circuit this fall.

LAST week Jas. McFarland, of Haywards, purchased nearly all the trotters and pacers belonging to J. H. Strobridge, the well-known horseman of that town, and started to Vermont with them. Among the lot were several exceedingly well-bred youngsters.

NOTWITHSTANDING his intense sufferings, Monroe Salisbury, "game to the core," started East last Saturday with his string of flyers. He had a supply of liniments and bandages along. His physicians say he will be all right in a little while if he is only careful.

KATIE G. (dam of Chas. Derby, 2:20 and Steiner, 2:29½), by Electioneer 125, out of Fanny Malone (grandam of Maud C., 2:19), by Niagara, had a beautiful bay colt, by Prince Red 9,940 last week. If he proves as fast as his brother Warner Wiley, the Oakland Park Stock Farm people will feel happy.

PORTLAND's well-known officer of Justice Wood's court, Al Thomas, has recently purchased the bg Royal Kisher, 2:41, son of Kisher, by Rydsck's Hambletonian, dam by Ophir, and the gr What Hn, 2:27½, recently purchased of E. S. Rothchilds, by A. W. Richmond, dam by Overland.—Rural Press.

JAMES SANFORD, a young trainer at San Bernardino, will appear behind three promising trotters on the fall circuit. One is called Sir Gird, a two-year-old by Woolsey; another is known as Daisy C., by A. W. Richmond and a four-year-old by Inca Jr. that is credited with showing quarters in thirty-five seconds.

FROM Buffalo we learn that W. B. McDonald drove the California mare Maggie, 2:20, by Dexter Prince, in 2:22, and sent the pacer Dick Wills a mile in 2:21½. He is going slow with Fausta, who has a world of speed. She has gone a mile in 2:23, and she did it so handily that she can easily pace better than 2:20.

THE entries for the races to be held at Vacaville on July 4th closed last Saturday. There were thirty-six entries, and every race filled. Horses from every town in the county will be there. The managers deserve praise for the interest they have aroused in the improvement in fine stock. They have built eight new stalls and all are filled with horses. There are now something over one hundred horses in training at the race track.

THE gray colt Freckles, 2:30, by Wilton, 2:19½, out of Gray Diana, by Administrator; second dam Bashaw Belle (dam of four in 2:30 list), by Green's Bashaw, is being handled by Jas. Maguire at Edgemont Park Stock Farm, and has shown very good indications of being able to lower his record this fall.

WARRINA, 2:25, a full sister to Flying Jih, was sold at auction recently in the East and was knocked down at $3,600. The sale is said to be a fake, however, and it is freely stated that she was sold privately before being put up. The party who got her offered $3,000, or $100 more than the highest bid, and the first offer was taken.

TALKING about conditioning work, John Splan says: "There was a day when I had Charley Dunhar's Johnston, 2:06½, and he stopped, and he stopped hard. Woodmansee and I talked it over, and I told him that stiff work, and plenty of it was what was wanted. The result was that I gave him three heats in about 2:14, and a few days later when he came out for his races, there was nothing short of a locomotive that could have headed him on the trip to the wire."

J. DWAIN is handling a string of trotters and pacers at the Salinas race track, and will "surprise the boys" this fall with a few dark ones he is in raptures over. The association intends to give a splendid fair this year. The directors say that if the road to Fresno is completed by next Fair time, they will have a little circuit composed of San Luis Obispo, Salinas, Fresno, Visalia and Eakersfield. This will put a stop to all "clashing of dates."

MR. H. S. HENRY, the well-known breeder and owner of Penn Valley Stud, Morrisville, Pa., has a stable in training at Sturgis, Mich. He reports the following recent fast moves: A yearling by Anteeo, a quarter in 0:37½; a two-year-old by Count Wilkes, a quarter in 0:33½; a three-year-old by Young Wilkes, a half in 1:10; a three-year-old by Sidney, a half in 1:10; a three-year-old by Anteeo, a half in 1:11. In the same stable Frou Frou, 2:25½ (champion yearling trotter), is going very fast.

THE fall meeting of the Victoria Jockey Club has been arranged to take place at the Driving Park on the 10th, 11th and 12th of August—Thursday, Friday and Saturday—the programme including the events best calculated to please the public, and all the purses being large enough to draw good horses. The Victoria meeting will be the first of the Autumn series, and horses from all parts of Washington, Oregon, Montana, the Northwest and British Columbia will go there to open the fall circuit.

SUPERIOR, 2:17½, by Egbert, dam Mary, by Woodford Mambrino, is reported to be in shape to trot for a man's life. It will be remembered that the day he took his record of 2:17½ at Pueblo, Cal., that in shipping he was severely injured and it was thought he would never recover sufficiently to be in a race again, but time, that corrector of all errors, the greatest of physicians, has finally put this horse into proper form, and it is more than likely he will reduce his record before the season of '93 is over.

Geo. BLELL, "Shorty," arrived from Terre Haute on Tuesday. He says Geo. Starr has a string of magnificent youngsters. The climate there was disagreeable, rain every other day consequently the horses were not as strong and well conditioned as they might be. "It looked like a California track in winter," he said. "A large number of California horsemen are there and in every stall at the course the walls were adorned with 'McKerron boots.' Hulda, 2:14½, and Walter E., 2:11½, are the stars of the Terre Haute track."

THE horsemen of Santa Ana are out in force. J. Hahn, Wm. Wilkinson, Geo. Tedford, L. J. Felton, Thos. Willits, Jas. W. Murry and others are busy getting their horses ready for the fall circuit. The following sires have representatives in their respective strings: Ahhofsford, Silkwood, Steiny, Albert W., Odd Fellow, Blackwood, Mambrino, Oscar Steinway (son of Steiny, 2:25½), out of the dam of Melvar, 2:24½), Othello, Gossiper, Sontag, Atto Rex and Artist. One hundred and fifty trotters and pacers are on the beautiful track at present.

W. C. FRANCE & SON report a recent sale of five head of richly-bred youngsters, four yearlings and one suckling, to C. X. Larrabee, of Fairhaven, Wash., viz.: Miss Red, bay filly, by Red Wilkes, dam Madam Herr (dam of Red Cherry, 3, 2:22½, and Fin Fan, 2:30), own sister to London, 2:20½; Hattie Fraser, chestnut filly, by Allie Wilkes, dam Nun, by Nutwood; Ruth Redman, bay filly, by Red Wilkes, dam Ruth (sister to The Jewess, 2:26), by Mambrino Patchen; Sophie Russell, bay filly, by Lord Russell, dam Sophie France, by Jay Bird, and a bay colt by Red Wilkes, dam Avoca, by Ellerslie Wilkes, 2:22½.

ABOUT the best colt seen on the Santa Rosa Stock Farm is the one by Stamboul, out of Bye-Bye, by Nutwood. It is the intention of his proud owners to keep him as a stallion. When it comes to breeding he has a right to receive an eminent place. His dam is sister to Lockheart, 2:13, and Capt. Mac, 2:29, by Dictator; second dam Madame Headley (dam of Expert Prince, 2:13½); third dam Madame Stanhope, by Mambrino Chief. Then his sire is the King of Trotters, Stamboul, 2:07½; surely, if there is anything in blood-lines, this youngster seems well endowed.

J. L. McCORD will have Mary Lou, 2:19½, out this year. He also has two fine chestnut colts by Tom Benton, and a Hawthorne colt out of a Dave Benton mare, that will make a great trio of good ones when the time comes. Mr. McCord recently purchased a three-year-old filly by McCracken Goldstud, out of Brown Jennie, (dam of Mary Lou, 2:19½, and Ned Winslow, 2:15) by Dave Hill, Jr. He will breed her to Tom Benton, and the produce will, no doubt, be as fast as any of his youngsters that are now in demand among the leading horsemen of the capital city.

A YOUNG man purchased the brown filly Chloe Thorne at the Moorland Stock Farm sale this spring, and then asked D. J. Murphy to declare the sale off, as he did not have any place to keep her. We hear that he is sorry he parted with her now, for she is by Dexter Prince, out of Clyde, by Hawthorne, and Clyde is the dam of Chloe, 2:23½, Dexter Thorne, 2:25½, and the gelding Princewood, belonging to L. J. Smith, of Oakland, that got a mark of 2:36 at the Breeders' meeting, and was separately timed a half in the third heat in 1:15. Chloe Thorne will also go in the list, so Clyde will have four 2:30 performers to her credit.

LOU, by Ira, 2:24, out of Electric, by Newland's Hambletonian's owned by T. F. Ricks, of Eureka, Humboldt county, came to race at the Breeders' meeting, but on the heat coming over the har she threw out a curb and had to be placed in the veterinary's hands for treatment. Ira, the sire of this mare, is a handsome dark brown stallion by Piedmont, out of Irene, by Mohawk Chief, that is getting a very fine class of stock. His owner, Henry Cooper, is one of the most progressive young horsemen in Eureka and next year he will have the pleasure of seeing a number of youngsters by this horse competing for the premiums he has offered.

THE board of directors of the Fleetwood Park met at their office in New York last Saturday, in consultation with Burdett Loomis, secretary of Charter Oak Park, Hartford, Conn. It was voted to move the dates of the Fleetwood grand circuit meeting forward one week to the week set apart for Charter Oak at the recent meeting of grand circuit stewards, and in case the programmes of the two associations were combined to offer purses jointly, trot the stakes of both, and divide the net receipts. Samuel McMillan and W. B. Fasig, president and secretary of Fleetwood Park, were appointed a committee to confer with the Hartford association at a special meeting next Saturday. The joint meeting, if held, will commence Tuesday, August 28, and hold over Labor Day, which is the Monday following, and perhaps all the following week.

No industry has a more brilliant future than breeding a high rate of speed and fine individual specimens of the light harness horse, as the demand for ideal drivers in all the great cities exceeds the supply, while the foreign demand for the American trotter is constantly increasing. Here is a sensible utterance from the able pen of "Hark Comstock": "For my own part while favoring moderate infusion of thoroughbred blood as often as it seemed apparent that previous ones had become assimilated by the trotting currents, I have nevertheless placed so much dependence upon an inheritance of strong trotting proclivities as a predominant part of the requirements of a trotter that I confess that I have doubts of frequent success without a trotting leaven of that kind, no matter how carefully the thoroughbred parents are selected."

SPAKING of Napa Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes, out of Napa Maid, by Irvington; second dam Napa Queen, to a well-known pioneer horseman the other day, the mention of the latter-named mare seemed to interest him. He said: "I remember her well; she was a gray mare by Eugene Casserly, and was quite speedy. She got a record of 2:47½ on the old half-mile track out on the Cliff House road. Her dam was one of a team of hay mares that came across the plains from Milwaukee, Wisconsin. They were good-looking, well-formed animals, and could road along at a forty clip. They were kept in Roe Allen's stable on Market street, and Bill Woodward, the old-time horseman, bought them, paying a good round sum. They were by Steven's Bald Chief, a young sire that stood in Milwaukee, Wisconsin; the dams I never knew, and I cannot think of the man who brought the pair to California. Bill Woodward bred them to Eugene Casserly and got Napa Queen and a mare called Kate Woodward. I never knew that the latter mare ever produced anything. Napa Queen was bought by Wm. Corbitt, and he bred her to Irvington and got Napa Maid, and she in turn was the dam of Napa Wilkes, which was, I believe, a very fast colt but got injured and was never fit to train after."

ABOUT fifty years ago, Mr. McKinstry, then living near Montgomery, Orange County, N. Y., purchased in either Ulster or Columbia County, a brown mare which was then with foal. The produce of the mare was a brown filly with four white feet, which was sold when four years old to Mrs. J. Hawkins, and has always been known as the McKinstry Mare. Less attention was then paid to pedigrees than in more recent years, and it will probably never be definitely known what was the blood of this mare or the foal she was then carrying, though from what was stated at the time and subsequently learned, it is the opinion of Jonathan Hawkins that she was with foal by the horse now known as Long Island Black Hawk, but then called Young Andrew Jackson. Clara, a black mare foaled in 1848 by Seely's American Star, was the McKinstry Mare's first foal. She produced five others, one of which, Shark, was one of the very first of the get of Hambletonian to become noted as a trotter. Shark took a saddle record of 2:27½, a two-mile record of 5:00½, a three mile record of 7:47½ and a mile harness record of 2:30½. Each of the McKinstry Mare's foals, except Clara, had prominent white markings, some of them even more than the markings of Dexter, which occasioned so much controversy. Clara was decidedly under-sized and was considerably bluish. She produced a large number of foals nearly all of which are now prominent, though Dexter, her first, is the only one which has been given a record at all sensational, which is somewhat remarkable, as all that lived were either by Hambletonian or by Volunteer, one of his most prominent sons, and several which were never started were unquestionably very fast.

ON September 15, 1873, nearly twenty years ago, the bay mare Ella Lewis, owned by the old-time horseman Oscar Lewis, made her first appearance as a four-year-old at the Sacramento Fair in a race against Oakland, Maid, Jupiter Dutchman, Frank, Swamp Angel, American Maid and Oregon Jake. She won in three straight heats. Time, 2:30, 2:29½ and 2:31½. The following month at the Bay District Track she defeated Ajax, Jerome, and George Treat easily. A match race was now made with the horse California Dexter for $4,000. She defeated the horse in straight heats in 2:28, 2:27 and 2:28½. Two weeks after, she defeated May Howard in 2:31½, 2:32½ and 2:33. This was also a match race for $2,000. Nothing further was done with the mare until nearly five years elapsed, when she trotted another match against St. Helena and won. It proved an exciting five-heat contest, St. Helena winning the third and fourth heats. Ella Lewis was then retired and bred, and her wonderfully smooth-going pacer son, Saladin that last year got a record of 2:11½, starts in this year as a likely candidate for the fastest pacing stallion record over a mile track. Last week at Wellington, Delaware, on a half mile track, driven by James Geers, he captured the world's record over such a course. He paced the mile in 2:09½, the first quarter in 0:31½, half in 1:03½, and three quarters in 1:36½. As he is a large horse and long gaited, this is a marvelous performance, especially as he has not received much preparation for fast work. Ella Lewis was by the game Morgan stallion Vermont, 2:34, that was owned by S. C. Talcott of this city for some time and afterwards was sent to Oregon. It can be seen that the developed sire and dam theory has another champion in Saladin.

Daniel J. Murphy.

The news of the sudden death of this bright young man came with that peculiar poignancy which sudden death always brings. Buoyant, happy, joyous, then, in a moment, a speechless, unreplying form. Like harshness from the lips of love fell the pall of grief over all those he loved and those who loved him. The unexpectedness of the shock renders but more shocking the grief which follows the final departure of the heart's best objects of affection.

The death of Mr. Murphy falls with crushing force upon his aged widowed mother, for no son was more kind and tender, more loving and devoted than he. For the comfort and enjoyment of his now bereaved brothers and sisters he was ever solicitous, full of affection, and tender in his sympathies.

In the business circles in which he was interested, he was active, bright and honorable. As a citizen, neighbor and friend he was courteous, obliging, and ever willing to aid every worthy project coming under his notice. He took an active interest in the Santa Clara Valley Agricultural Society and the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association, in both of which he was a director. In his labors, while connected with these organizations, no one can recall a single act of his that was not in accordance with the high opinions his splendid presence at all times commanded.

Among the progressive trotting-horse breeders on this sunset side of the continent no one had a more brilliant future or brighter prospects than he. His death leaves a gap impossible to fill, for he was just crossing the threshold of the gateway of success when the fragile thread of life was severed and his hopes and aspirations were forever shattered.

To the bereaved relatives and sorrowing friends expressions of condolence are now tendered. To-morrow, the bells will toll, the requiems be sung, and the last fond look taken of that quiet face, then to the silent tomb all that remains of our much-beloved friend will be tenderly laid away.

Give Full Pedigrees.

If the turf writers and correspondents throughout the United States and Canada will only follow the advice so often given in this journal, and lately advocated by the Kentucky Stock in being particular to give the pedigrees of the trotters and pacers in the summaries of the races, much more satisfaction and pleasure would be found in reading them. Our contemporary in the "blue grass region," has the following article on this important subject, and every horseman and editor should insist on seeing that the important subject mentioned is attended to:

"The summary of a trotting race (especially at the beginning of the season, when most of the horses are unknown) that fails to give pedigrees imparts very little useful information. The great majority of people who read them are anxious to know the blood lines of the performers, more particularly what their sires and dams are, and the reporter who fails to give this information to his paper omits the most important part of his duty, and shows that he has very imperfect knowledge of what the public demand. The portion of the community who read these summaries with the greatest avidity are those who are interested in trotting-horse breeding. A very few individuals are interested in the particular animals. Trotting-horse breeders are desirous of ascertaining the standing of the different families; they want to know what the Wilkeses, the Electioneers, the Nutwoods, the Almonds and the other great families are doing, and where merely the names are given and nothing more this desirable information is omitted, and the reader drops the paper with a feeling of disappointment. Daily newspapers that are published where races take place, or that have correspondents at such places, have it in their power to supply this very much valued intelligence, and where they fail to furnish it they signify disregard a very important feature. The fuller the information they can give the better their patrons are satisfied. We know a good many people who take certain papers, to the politics of which they are opposed, rather than those with which they are in political sympathy, simply because their political adversaries give them fuller and better news of the turf and track. Every summary should be pedigreed. We have preached several sermons on this text before, but we are deeply grieved to state that our well-intended admonitions have not been sufficiently heeded. We hope, however, by dint of persistent iteration to bring about a reformation."

The Summer Meeting.

All horsemen are notified that entries for the summer meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will close next Saturday. Remember the races given by this association opens the grand circuit and every horseman who intends to "go down the line" with his string of trotters and pacers cannot afford to miss this meeting. Entrance is only five per cent, the races to be mile heats two in three, besides, there will be dashes and special races. The programme is printed in another column and the meeting will be from July 22d to July 29th inclusive. The conditions should be carefully read by all who make entries; special attention is called to the paragraph:

"In all races, drivers will be required to wear caps and jackets of distinct colors, which must be named in their entries."

There was a noticeable improvement in the wearing of colors at the spring meeting, but there is still room for more. The wearers of distinctive colors were praised by everyone. There should be no hesitancy on the part of owners claiming entire suits of bright or dark colors and taking as much pride in seeing those colors worn as the owners of thoroughbreds do in the ones they claim. Read the advertisement and send in entries at once.

THE sale of A. T. Hatch's stock, which is advertised to take place next Thursday, has been postponed until further notice.

Death of Leland Stanford.

Last Wednesday morning, at half past one o'clock, there passed beyond the veil of death one of the greatest men of the century United States Senator Leland Stanford. His transition was peaceful and painless. The facts of his demise are simply told. He retired at his usual hour, ten o'clock; about midnight his valet, on some errand, entered the room of his master and immediately discovered that he was dead.

Physicians were summoned, but their coming was useless. Telegrams were dispatched and in a few hours the sad intelligence was known in all parts of the civilized world.

Although a sufferer for some years his death was a surprise to every one. He had, ever since his return from the East ridden in his old-fashioned, comfortable phaeton around to the stock farm, and with Superintendent Covey by his side took delight in watching the trotters move up and down the stretches. His keen eye and thorough knowledge of his pets made his visits always welcome and enjoyable. Even the day before his death he seemed to enjoy the "work outs" of the trotters with much keener zest than was his custom. He made no complaint and gave no intimation of feeling indisposed.

To recount all that this great philanthropist has done would fill a volume. In every undertaking his indomitable will, industry and keen intelligence promoted success. The daily press of the world will have columns of well-deserved praise for his labors in the cause of commerce and education, and not a little portion will be devoted to the impetus he has given to the great trotting horse industry.

He founded the most extensive breeding farm in the world. The fame of Palo Alto is universally known. The following, taken from the Examiner, gives a brief but concise history of the famous farm:

Leland Stanford was a lover of horses. When in need of relaxation he turned to his stock farm and there spent many of the most pleasing and satisfactory hours. His keen appreciation of horseflesh was probably inborn, but it was fostered when as a railroad builder he was one of the owners of a multitude of teams. Soon after gaining his wealth he began to look about for racers. His first purchases were Mohawk Chief and a few mares by General Taylor and St. Clair, but soon after he became possessed of his first noted horse, Occident. Occident was the sensation of his time. Then came Oaward and Ned, the Senator's great road team. Both of these horses, however, participated singly in races. Aurora, 2:27, for which he paid $10,000, was his next investment and this was followed by the purchase of Abe Edgington, 2:23, for $20,000.

The idea of founding his great breeding establishment was then conceived, and Palo Alto Stock Farm, so named from the tall tree which stands in front of its entrance, was laid out.

The first step was to weed out the incompetents and get a new lot of horses. General Benton, by Jim Scott, dam Lady Benton, by Grey's Hambletonian, was acquired, and in 1877 Senator Stanford personally purchased from Charles H. Backman of Stony Ford, N. Y., the great Electioneer, Elaine and several Messenger Duroc fillies. He paid $12,500 for Electioneer. Piedmont, 2:17, was next brought to Palo Alto, and then Nephew, 2:36.

The mares to be mated to this royal quintet were almost always selected by the Senator himself. In fact, only two lots of trotting-hred mares were ever purchased without his personal inspection, and then the pedigrees and descriptions of the animals were submitted to him before the deal was closed. He was thoroughly familiar with all trotting strains productive of good trotters and made a careful study of blood lines and of the anatomy of the horse.

Thousands of dollars were spent in the pursuit of knowledge on the latter subject. During two years, 1881 and 1882, he experimented with instantaneous photography with electrical apparatus applied to the camera, the purpose being to secure legible negatives of horses in rapid motion, thus showing the different positions, action and carriage of horses at speed. This was his own idea, and the information so acquired was very useful to him afterwards.

In 1880 he began the practical demonstration of his pet theory in regard to crossing the thoroughbred and the trotter. "From the thoroughbred," said he, "comes extreme speed and the courage to carry it a distance. I believe that the monarch of all trotters will be the produce of a thoroughbred mare and a trotting stallion."

Thoroughbred mares were purchased in the South by H. S. Covey, father of the present superintendent of the farm, and brought to Palo Alto. They were selected because of individual excellence, color, size, form, breeding, disposition and performance governing their choice. Absolute instructions were issued that they must be mares from racing families, with good dispositions and trotting form and action. Those secured were from the blood of Planet, imp. Australian, Boston, Grey Eagle, Williamson's Belmont and others, and their blood to-day figures in the pedigrees of Sunol, Maud S., Ansel, Palo Alto and many trotters of lesser fame.

Perhaps the greatest exponent of the truth of the Senator's theory that the greatest speed does not come from a cold-blooded horse was Palo Alto, 2:08. Besides Palo Alto there are many others in the 2:30 list out of thoroughbred mares domiciled at Palo Alto. A number of others, including the mighty Sunol, who are out of daughters of thoroughbreds, are also in the list.

When selecting a strictly trotting-hred mare Senator Stanford always had her led before him and afterward had a thoroughbred led by that he might compare them. His breeding in thoroughbred lines has now reached a three-quarters thoroughbred trotter. This is Rowena by Azmoor, a son of Electioneer and Emma Robson by Woodburn. As a yearling she trotted a mile in 2:37, and in her two-year-old form got low down in the list.

In addition to selecting personally his own mares and stallions, the Senator formulated certain rules for their care, breeding and training.

Stallions in service were accorded the same care and attention as horses in training. They were every day driven eight or ten miles, and at some portion of the journey speeded a short distance. The Senator's idea was that a horse in condition and possessed of speed was better qualified to transmit speed than one not in training. In mating animals color, size temperaments and blood lines were considered. Every detail for the comfort and care of mares and their foals was looked after. Excellent stables, roomy stalls and capable attendants were provided and special food prepared.

A regular course of schooling for youngsters was mapped out by the Senator. Foals were weaned at five months of age. They were weaned in pairs in order that they might not grow lonesome because of separation from their mothers, and at seven months, having been halter broken, were put to work in the "kindergarten."

The "kindergarten" was another of the Senator's pet ideas. It is a covered oval track, about three hundred and fifteen feet in circumference and sixty-five feet in width from rail to rail, the track being eight and a half feet in width. The stretches are level, with turns graded on the same principle as the curves of a railroad track. A youngster is turned loose in the enclosure and a trainer is stationed at each end to keep the colt in motion and to teach it that it is expected to trot. The first few times a colt enters the ring it will do anything else, but it soon learns what it is there for and does its work in a manner becoming an old campaigner. Whips are never used except to urge the colt to greater speed or to stop it when breaking from a trot to a run. By this training some of the yearlings acquired wonderful speed.

The next step of the school the Senator provided for his equine charges was the breaking stable.

There for the first time the yearling is hitted and harnessed, and after several days of this new experience is hitched alongside a quiet horse and driven, first on one side and then on the other, until thoroughly "broke down."

Then it went into the hands of a trainer and was tried out under Senator Stanford's rules for the development of speed. These were five in number and were:

"First—No horse in condition to be worked for speed, shall be jogged as it is then a useless waste of force.

"Second—The amount of work to be given a horse and the distance it is to be driven must be determined by its condition.

"Third—To develop and acquire speed, a horse must be driven short distances, but forced in some part of the work to a supreme effort.

"Fourth—Horses shall not be driven far enough to produce exhaustion, as at that time relaxation occurs and breakdowns are the result. Always go to the stable with the full speed left.

"Fifth—When a horse has acquired speed, lengthen the drive gradually until he has developed the necessary motive and lung power to carry the full distance he is expected to go."

Under these rules colts fresh from the breaking stable, shod with six-ounce shoes forward and three-ounce shoes behind, were hitched to a sixty-pound sulky and speeded short distances, never at first more than a hundred yards. Gradually they were worked into the race horses that have made Palo Alto famous the country over.

Success followed the Palo Alto strings, and in 1882 the thoroughbred department was started. It was conducted with the same rigid attention to detail that characterized the management of the trotting stables, and has given to the country some of its most noted runners. Racine, Flambeau, Nomad and many others were foaled at Palo Alto.

The greatest year in the history of the Palo Alto breeding farm was 1891. Then the trotters returned from the summer's campaign with every trotting record of the world. The holders of the two-year-old, three-year-old, four-year-old and all-aged records were among them, to say nothing of Sunol and Palo Alto, who held the mare and stallion records.

Altogether over 600 trotters were quartered at Palo Alto; at the branch farm at Vina were 400 more. The thoroughbreds numbered about 125.

When Senator Stanford turned over the ranch to the university he made two reservations. One, the park in which stands the mausoleum which is to receive his body; the other, his horses. He, however, was anxious to have the stock farm an adjunct and supporter of the university. To that end he wished to establish a chair of heredity, to be supported by the stock farm. His idea was to establish this new department to teach young men the business of breeding horses, and thereby open up a new and profitable field of enterprise to them. The farm would then have been run and worked by students and the proceeds turned into the university treasury.

Stanford, statesman, pioneer,
Thinker thou without a peer,
Armed with theories thine own,
Never faltering, firm as stone,
Fearless of all ridicule,
Of theoretists of the older school,
Reaching beyond their highest sphere,
Deeding us plans all will reverse.

Gone, But Not Forgotten.

The following letter regarding the death of the beloved little race mare Esperanza, the joy of Orville Appleby's fond heart, will be read with interest by our readers. It touched Mr. Appleby deeply, and is a noble tribute to the memory of a tiny animal that had by her courage and consistency endeared herself to every California race-goer:

CHICAGO, ILL., June 18, 1893.
MR. ORVILLE APPLEBY, DEAR SIR:—I have just finished reading an account of the death of Esperanza, your game little race mare. How very sad indeed and how doubly unfortunately you! Meek-looking as a lamb, but brave as a lion at bay, and always true to a trust—verily a Lilliputian Queen—I loved her almost as well as thou didst. Double the decorations on her grave and remember half of the expense is that of DAN MILLER.

LOWLANDER WINS THE SUBURBAN.

Description of the Great Turf Event—We Picked the Winner Last February.

NEW YORK, JUNE 20.—The Suburban Handicap of 1893, the tenth in the history of the event, was a most grievous disappointment to the turf-loving public.

Lowlander, by Lowlander Chief, dam imp. Restless, a horse that has had rather an erratic career, won the race from beginning to end.

Terrifer, "Father" Bill Daly's candidate, was second, three lengths away, while Lamplighter, the even money favorite that shrewd turfmen said could not lose, was third, four lengths behind.

Suburban Day this year opened and continued bright and clear, but oppressively hot. A pitiless sun heat down on the track with withering intensity.

Long before two o'clock every seat in the grand stand was taken. People were on hand early, and they stuck to their blazing seats despite the intense heat.

When the hugh called the horses to the post in the first race fully 20,000 persons were on the grounds, and this was steadily augmented up to the time set for the Suburban to be run.

Raceland and Charade were early declared out of the race, and the betting crowd, therefore, had nine horses from which to pick the winner.

The race was set for 450, and promptly at that time the horses were called to the post. It was 4:58 before the horses had been assigned to their positions.

This order was maintained to the middle of the backstretch, where Lowlander and the other leaders drove away from Lamplighter and those composing the rear bunch.

Lowlander turned into the homestretch three lengths before Terrifer and Dr. Hashrouck, who were neck and neck two lengths before Lamplighter.

The horses in the order in which they finished, their weight and jockeys, were as follows: Lowlander, 105, McDermott; Terrifer, 95, J. Lamley; Lamplighter, 129, Sims; Dr. Hashrouck, 116, Bergen; Banquet, 126, Lamley; The Pepper, 112, Overton; Mars, 112, Littlefield; Idlesleigh, 105, Hamilton; Pessara, 115, Taral.

The crowd when they reached the racetrack had a curious experience. The guards and officials stationed at the gates cried out the warning: "No exit at this gate until after the Suburban."

Inquiry elicited the fact that these extraordinary precautions were taken to prevent the Guttenberg racetrack people and the pool rooms from getting any information regarding the races at Sheephead, but subsequent events showed this was not altogether the cause.

which happened to pass over the Jockey Club's property were cut. Communication was finally restored, and then some person unknown gave out untrue information as to the placed horses in the big race.

The winner is a brown horse of great length and considerable substance, five years old, imported to America in utero by Captain Elmhuist, but bred by T. Goldby, of England.

Table listing pedigree of other horses mentioned, including Bolton, Arabian, Myerly Turk, Tafolet Barb, and Natural Barb mare.

It will be noticed by the above tabulation that Lowlander has no less than four crosses of Touchstone, besides Stockwell, King Tom, Pantaloon, Irish Birdcatcher and Faugh-a-Ballagh blood galore.

Lowlander (once called imp. Douglas), as a two-year-old belonged to C. Maxwell, and started thirteen times, winning on four occasions—once at five furlongs and three times at six, and beating such good ones as Bellevue, Bradford, Alarm Bell and Kitty T.

When the weights came out early last February the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN said in a long article on the various rich handicaps of the year in the issue of February 11th—over four months ago:

"Lowlander, a five-year-old horse is handicapped at 105 pounds, and as he on two occasions during 1892 (within three days) ran a mile and an eighth on a Saratoga regulation track in 1:33 with 105 pounds up, it will be seen that his chances in the Suburban Handicap are, at the weights, very rosy.

As Lowlander was as 200 to 300 to 1 in some of the winter hoops, and as good as 50 to 1 only three weeks ago, we naturally feel proud to pick the winner of the rich stake so many months ago.

Following are the winners of the Suburban Handicap since its inception, with the second horse, the time and the value of the stake to the owner of the winner:

The sale of thoroughbred yearlings at Tattersalls of June 13th was attended by the largest crowd of the season, every seat being taken on the ground floor and the two galleries being well filled.

The lot sold included sixteen of the Fairview yearlings, the property of Charles Reed & Sons, of Gallatin, Tenn.; sixteen of the Hurricana Stud, the property of S. Sanford & Sons, of Amsterdam, N. Y., and twelve from the Mables Stud, owned by John T. Stewart & Son, of Council Bluff, Ia.

In the Fairview lot were several of the first get of Exile. One of these brought $3,750, being bought by Jimmy McLaughlin. Another of Exile's get, a filly, half sister to Don Alonzo, was sold for $1,150 to D. Rogers, who was said to be no other than James E. Keene.

Father Billy Daly paid the top price of the night—$4,200—for a chestnut colt by imp. St. Blaise, a full brother to St. Domingo, amid great applause. Mr. Daly secured the colt, which was big, racy-looking and exceedingly well furnished, only after some lively bidding, the horse being started at $500.

Among those present at the sale were: Dave Johnson, W. O'B. McDonough, Joe Vendig, Ed Grey, Charles Dwyer, Isaac Dahlman, L. Wormser, Dave Gideon, George Wheelock, John Hunter, Eugene Leigh and Dr. Ralph Hall.

Racing at Independence, Oregon.

INDEPENDENCE, ORE., June 15.

The spring meeting given under the auspices of the Polk County District Fair Association began to-day under the most flattering circumstances, a big crowd being in attendance and the racing of a high order of excellence. W. W. Percival, the well-known horseman, wielded the flag.

In the first race, after quite a delay at the post, the nine horses got off to a good start. Siretta showed first, Hello second, Lancer third. At the half Hello fell back to last and was out of the race. There was a fighting finish between Ruby and Siretta down the stretch, and Siretta would have won had she been properly ridden. Pools sold: Hello, $20; Wild Oats, $8; field, for anything bid.

The second race was the 2:29 trot to a good start. Walter led around the first turn. Straightening into the stretch Phallmont Boy passed him and won as he pleased, Van Thromp distanced.

Second heat—Phallmont Boy went away and won as he pleased, the others hardly in the hunt. Betting: Phallmont Boy, $20; field, $8.

In the third race, a quarter-mile dash, they were at the post thirty minutes, but got away to a good start. Funny had a shade the best of it. Black Prince collared him half-way down the stretch, and in a fighting finish beat him by a nose, Roanoke third by two lengths. Time, 0:24. Betting: Funny $10; Black Prince, $10; field, $5.

INDEPENDENCE, June 16.—The races to-day were the finest ever held in this country. The track could not have been in better condition. It commenced raining at 11 o'clock last night and continued a steady downpour until about 9 o'clock, when the sun came out. By noon the sky was clear. Owing to the rain the attendance was about the same as yesterday, but more interest and enthusiasm was manifested, and the betting was much freer. The summaries of the several events were:

The Races at Vancouver.

Upon the completion of the new perfect and fastest track in the North Pacific, the North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders' Association held its first annual meeting, which proved to be a complete success, notwithstanding the drawback as to transportation from this city, which, by the way, has now been arranged. Tickets on this side will be sold at the Stark street ferry. One money transports visitors across the ferry, over the motor, across the Columbia, as well as the electric car line, to the superb grounds on the inside of the gates.

No people ever did more nor better than the citizens of Vancouver to make everyone pleased with their fine grounds and stands. The racing was very attractive. Indeed, but one trotter or pacer was in a heat that had a record but what lowered it.

On the 20th inst. the Vancouver Driving Park Association holds its second annual spring meeting, and from the way the horses look and the people talk there will be no discussion as to the number of white feet the contestants have now as to whether there is a "feather in a horse's face" or one on the "ply" of the horse's thigh. The motto of this meeting, as it was at last, will be the best horse must win.—Rural Press.

E. H. SAUNDERS has moved the horses he had at the Stockton track to the famous course at Pleasanton. These horses, colts and fillies were all bred by Chas. Needham of Bellota, San Joaquin county. Now that they will get an opportunity of demonstrating their true value while under a trainer's careful handling, it is a foregone conclusion that some surprisingly fast ones will be developed. The great Morgan family was never forgotten by Mr. Needham, and as he used rare good judgment in breeding the mares he brought across the plains to the best bred Hambletonian stallions in the State, the produce compares favorably with those bred on any stock farm in California.

"WHITE HAT" MCCARTHY will, it is said, win over $100,000 if Oporto is successful in the American Derby run to-day at Chicago. Few thought C. H. Todd in the hunt in 1887, yet he not only beat the great Miss Ford, Jim Gore, Montrose and Terra Cotta, but ran faster than any Derby candidate at Chicago before or since—2:36. Can Mac repeat his coup?

The Californians did well at St. Louis last Wednesday. B. C. Holly's Francesca (sister to Acclaim), won a mile race, while El Rayo ran second to Soundmore, and Pescador was third in the same race.

Salt Lake Races.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, June 7, 1893.

At the races to-day the attendance was not as large as could have been desired, but considering the fact of its being the opening day, and Saturday, when many people could not leave their business, the crowd was a large one. There were probably one thousand people out. The excitement ran high at critical junctures, and the opening of the meeting was all that could be expected.

The day was a disagreeable one. A strong wind from the south blew incessantly, and brought with it clouds of dust which at times obscured the horses from view.

The contests were fine exhibitions of horse racing, and no kicks were heard on any event of the day.

The judges were I. J. Starbuck, starter; Al Thompson, Tom Jennings and Tom Keogh, associates. Mark McKimmans and L. G. Hurdy acted as time-keepers.

The first race was the 2:20 pace, in which Jaysey, Brino Tricks, Geraldine, Maritana and Cognac contested for supremacy, for a purse of $1,000.

First heat—In the draw for position Jaysey got the pole, Brino Tricks second, Congac third, Montana fourth and Geraldine on the outside. A start was hard to get and the horses scored seven times. They then took a minute to rub them down. Starter Starbuck cautioned the drivers. The next time the horses came up in good shape and were started. Jaysey took the lead and was never headed. Geraldine was second at the turn and crowded Jaysey very close at the quarter, but at that point she made a bad break and fell to the rear, and it was evident she was not in it. Montana took second place and held it. The other horses were quite a ways in the rear, and up to the wire they did not change their positions materially. Jaysey won by a length and a half, Montana second, Brino Tricks third, Cognac fourth and Geraldine distanced. Time, 2:17. The quarter was made in 0:33; half, 1:07 and three-quarters in 1:43.

For this heat the pools sold Montana against the field for $15 to $10, and for the next heat Jaysey sold for $20 against $13 for the field.

Second heat—This heat was a very pretty one. The horses got off on the second trial with Jaysey in the lead and Cognac last. Jaysey let out slightly, but the three, Brino Tricks, Jaysey and Montana, were well hunched and their company was too fast for Cognac, who brought up the rear. The horses kept pretty well hunched all the way around. Up the back Mambrino Tricks and Jaysey went like a team with Montana close third. As the horses came into the stretch Jaysey was a trifle in the lead, but Mambrino Tricks moved up and passed him, but they were so close together that it was impossible to say which was the best. As they came up the stretch there was some cheering, and enthusiasm ran high. Mambrino won by a half length, Jaysey second, Montana third and Cognac fourth. Time, 2:20 flat. Time at the quarters, 0:33, 1:08 and 1:44.

Third heat—For this heat the horses got off very even. Tricks took the lead and pushed ahead at the first turn. Here he made a bad break and went away to the rear. Cognac went up rapidly and pushed Jaysey at the quarter. Up the half Tricks was away in the rear. Maritana was right up, and the three horses were well bunched. Jaysey was behind for a brief period near the half, but rapidly pulled ahead and rounded into the stretch several lengths ahead. The race looked easy for Jaysey, but Tricks moved up at a rapid pace and the shout went up "Tricks wins." Indeed, the heat was so close that it was not until they went under the wire that it could be told that Jaysey had won by half a head, Tricks second, Cognac third and Maritana fourth. Time, quarter, 0:36; half, 1:10; third quarter, 1:46; mile, 2:22 flat.

Fourth heat—At the second score the horses got off in good shape. Jaysey moved off at the first turn, Tricks was a close second, Cognac and Montana were next and close together. Up the back it was a double team race. Here Jaysey moved up and took the lead. It looked as if it was all over for the race, as he held the lead up to the middle of the stretch, with Tricks pushing him closely. Jaysey made a bad break and fell to the rear. Tricks won easily by three lengths. Montana had passed Cognac and taken second places, Cognac third and Jaysey last. Time, quarter, 0:35; half, 1:08; three-quarters 1:44; mile, 2:21.3.

Fifth heat—The horses got off in good shape, although Cognac was a little in the rear. Tricks and Jaysey were in front, with Jaysey a trifle in the lead. Clear up the back Tricks crowded the Utah horse, and once got a little ahead, but at a critical point Tricks lost his feet and before he could recover had lost at least three lengths. All the time Jaysey went along without a skip and won the race easily. Tricks tried hard for the race coming up the stretch, but the gap was too wide and Jaysey was too fleet for any horse to close up. Cognac fought Montana for third place and came in ahead for the place. Jaysey passed the wire three lengths ahead, with Tricks second, Cognac third and Montana fourth. Time, quarter, 0:34; half, 1:07; three-quarters, 1:41; mile, 2:20.

The next race was the 2:40 trot for a purse of $400. The entries were John S., Gray Andy, Dennis and George L. John S. sold favorite against the field at $20 to $12. He took the race in three straight heats.

First Heat—In the draw for position Gray Andy got the pole, Dennis second, John S. third, George L. fourth and Mambrino Goldtuff failed to show up. Dennis, a black stallion, caused a great deal of trouble in starting. When the start was made John S. took the lead. At the quarter John S. was in the lead, and was never headed. Dennis was a close second and George L. third, with Gray Andy a bad fourth. This position was held up to the stretch, when Gray Andy moved up to third. John S. won the heat by a length and a half over Dennis, Gray Andy and George L. fourth. Time, 2:35.

Second Heat—The horses got off even for this heat. Dennis and John S. went ahead and even to the quarter. Here

Dennis made a bad break and went back to third place, Gray Andy went forging ahead, and at the three-quarter post he had almost overtaken John S. Dennis and George L. were fighting for third place in the heat. The horses came up the stretch, Gray Andy under the whip. John S. won the heat by a length, Gray Andy second, Dennis third and John L. fourth. Time, 2:30.

Third Heat—The horses got off all right on the start. John S. took the lead, with Dennis second. At the first turn this horse forged ahead slightly and held a slight lead to the quarter. Here he made a break, which lost for him his chances of winning. He fell behind Gray Andy. John S. forged ahead and was not headed from this point. Andy Gray crowded him into the stretch, but was not fleet enough to catch him. John S. won the heat by three lengths, Gray Andy second, Dennis third and John L. fourth. Time, 2:32 flat. John S. broke once in the race, but did not lose much ground. Dennis broke twice, the second time at the half, and lost considerable each time.

THE SUMMER RUNNING MEETING.

SIXTH DAY—THURSDAY, JUNE 22.

The racing to-day was simply grand. Over 1,200 persons saw and appreciated it. Three prettier contests than the first, fourth and fifth events were never seen on any race course. Again only one favorite was successful (Normandie), two races being won by second choices and two by 5 and 6 to 1 chances respectively. Little "Doc" Tuberville distinguished himself by riding two winners.

Eight maidens of various ages faced Starter Brown in the first event on the card, a dash of five and one-half furlongs. Normandie was a favorite at 7 to 5, the Tyrant-Premium filly going at 7 to 1, Connaught at 3, Sidney at 4, the others at long prices. To a rather straggling start the Premium filly shot away to the front at a great pace, and had opened up nearly three lengths on Normandie, her nearest competitor, going to the half-pole. Connaught was third. Normandie gradually gained on Weber's speedy filly, and the lead into the straight was only about one and a half lengths. Little Tuberville urged Normandie like a little demon in the homestretch, keeping her from swerving into the Premium filly only by being extremely careful. In the last 100 yards Normandie collared the leader, then the Premium filly came again. Finally the favorite made a dying rally, and won cleverly by a good head, the Premium filly second, about three lengths from Connaught, third. Sidney was fourth, the rest spread-eagled. Time, 1:09.

Golden State, Johnny Weber up, was played for a killing, being backed down from 2 1/2 to 1 to 9 to 5 at the close. O.

Bee was at 3 to 1, while the odds against the imported mare, Atossa, receded from 2 1/2 to 1 to 4 to 1. The prices against the rest of the maidens ranged from 6 to 30 to 1. A lot of cavorting, kicking and running away was indulged in, the principal offenders being Lord Dunbar, Sir Gordon and Cooper. The flag fell to a poor start, and the favorite at once assumed command, with the Australian filly, Atossa, second, and the grand-looking O. Bee third. Atossa wrested the place of honor away from Golden State at the three-quarter pole, and notwithstanding O. Bee looked dangerous at the head of the homestretch Atossa drew away in the straight and won eased up by three lengths from O. Bee, who swerved toward the fence a sixteenth from home and lost a couple of lengths. Two and a half lengths behind O. Bee came Cooper. Golden State was fourth, Sir Gordon fifth, Lord Dunbar sixth and Miss Edsall last. Time, 1:10.

Morton was an even-money favorite in the third race, one mile, Broad Church going at 7 to 5, the others at from 4 to 20 to 1. Broad Church got away nearly two lengths in the lead and well on his stride, and Morton, second, cut Erolite off at the first turn, not interfering, however. Broad Church was never headed, and won with a bit to spare by a length, Morton, who swerved in the homestretch when looking very dangerous, second, two lengths from Erolite, who was eight from Cody B., he half a length in front of Kitty Kerr. Time, 1:44. Cody B. was in second place at the quarter.

Seaside was favorite at 4 to 5 on in the fourth event, a handicap for two-year-olds, five furlongs. Realization was second choice at 3 to 1, the others were at 4 and 5 to 1. Carmel was first to show, closely attended by Warrago and the others. Between the half and three-quarter poles the quartet ran as one horse, and a prettier race one could not care to see. Close together they ran into the homestretch. Half-way down little Tuberville called on Carmel, and the colt, ridden beautifully, came away gamely and won by a trifle over a length, Warrago second, as far from Realization, who was a neck from the heavily-punished Seaside, last of all. Official time, 1:05; unofficial by several watches, 1:03 1/2.

Garcia went to the post in the last race of the day a favorite at 8 to 5. Red Cloud was at 2 to 1 (backed from 3), Nellie G. 4 to 1, Huguenot 3 to 1, Solitude 6 and 8 to 1, Nellie G. cut out the running, attended very closely by Huguenot until nearing the homestretch. There Solitude, on the inside, came with a fine burst of speed, passed Nellie G. 100 yards from the finish, and won easily by a length, Nellie G. second, one and one-half lengths from Red Cloud, who really ran a dead heat with Huguenot for third place. As Charley Weber, Huguenot's rider, came in one and one-quarter pounds short of weight, Red Cloud was placed third. Time, 1:44. Garcia, who looked exceedingly dangerous at the final turn, finished last.

THOROUGHBREDS FOR SALE.

STROMBOLI

Winner as a two-year-old of the Victoria Racing Club Produce Stakes and the Australian Jockey Club Produce Stakes, and as a three-year-old of the Australian Jockey Club Derby (1 1/2 miles), Sydney Cup (2 miles in 3:32), Hawkesbury Guineas and Bourke Handicap, Melbourne.

STROMBOLI was bred by the late Hon. James White, is a handsome dark mahogany bay, foaled in 1888. Sired by Chester (son of Yattendon and Lady Chester, by Stockwell), dam Etna (dam of Volcano and Lava), by Marbyrning (by Fisherman—imp. Rose de Florence, by Flying Dutchman); second dam The Alpaca (dam of eight winners—she never produced any colt or filly that did not win races on the turf), by Imp. Kingston; third dam Lilla, by New Chum. Lilla produced, when mated with Yattendon, Javelin, winner of the Australian Jockey Club Derby, and Commodore, winner of the A. J. C. Leger. Etna, dam of Stromboli, is a sister to Woodlands, who beat Chester for the Australian Jockey Club Derby.

STROMBOLI stands 16 hands and is a horse of grand conformation, with good shoulders, strong loins and excellent feet and legs—in every way a model horse.

ALSO

CLIEVEDEN,

Brother to the Mighty CHESTER, the sire of more winners of classic events than any other in Australia.

CLIEVEDEN was sired by Yattendon out of Imp. Lady Chester, by Stockwell; second dam Austr by Harkaway; third dam Lella, by Enllius; fourth dam Appolonia by Whisker, etc. His breeding is equal to that of any sire in the world, combining the double strain of Sir Hercules through the immortal Stockwell, and also a double strain of Enllius. It can therefore be seen that Clieveden is invaluable as a sire, representing a change of blood for American-bred mares. Clieveden was reserved by his breeder, the late Hon. E. K. Cox, to take the place of his sire, Yattendon.

CLIEVEDEN is 16 hands in height and is a beautiful golden bay with black points. He is a very symmetrically proportioned and a grand horse in every way.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

DELWIN 14,681. Record 2:26 1-2. will if he be no set-backs, pace, 1u 2:15 or better, and beat 2:30 trotting. Delwin is one of the handsomest grandsons of The Moor; in color he is a dark dapple bay, sound as a dollar; 15 1/2 bands high, and weighs 1000 pounds; he is one of the finest formed horses for great speed in the land; has the same level head and intelligence that his half-brother, Guido, 2:16 1/4, has. Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:07 1/4; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:07 1/4; one to Mambrino Chief, sire of the dam of Directum, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18 1/4, combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallions. Del Sur, 2:24, sire of Don Tomas, 2:20, San Pedro, 2:21, pacing record 2:10, and Cousin Joe, 2:20 1/4, being a full brother to the dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, sire of Freedom, 2:29 1/4, Sabiedale, 2:18 1/4, and others better than 2:30. Delwin's colts all show the trot out of any kind of mares.

TERMS $10, with usual return privilege. Good water and pasturage at $5 per month, but will not be responsible for accidents or escapes. Mares can be shipped to the farm and home of Delwin, the Meese Stock Farm, Danville, Contra Costa County, Cal., per S. P. R. R., via Martinez. For further particulars, address

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud, 2:13; Anne W., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/4; Mollie C., 2:37 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3-4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as good broodmares.

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mares. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 3 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3-4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding in to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.
