James Elliott, Philadelphia, Pa., owner of Aline, 2:14, writes of Absorbine: "I think it can't beat." N. P. Pond, Secretary of the Democrat and Chronicle, Rochester, N. Y., writes: Some time since I sent for a bottle of Absorbine and liked it so well that I want (6) six bottles sent by express at once.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

NELSON, 2:10, will haul a twenty-five pound aluminum hike this season.

JOHN A. GOLDSMITH will prepare the San Mateo trotters on the Poughkeepsie track this season.

The spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association promises to be well attended.

GRANDMOTHER, 2:20½, dam of Jocko, 2:16½, is in foal to Mambrino King. She is now owned by F. U. Swarts of Penn Yan.

In the Kentucky Futurity Stakes the names of a number of California-bred sires and dams appear in almost every breeder's entries.

THERE are forty-five head of trotters and pacers in training at Witch Hazel outside of the twenty-five owned by Witch Hazel Farm.

ZEPHYR, the dam of Storio, 2:08½, has foaled a filly by Brown Hal, 2:12½, that is a full sister to the famous pacer recently burned.

THE crippled Gene Smith, 2:15½, will join the ranks of half-mile track warriors this year and "do" the pumpkin-show free-for-all.

WM. CORBITT, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, has had nearly all of the colts in this famous breeding establishment gelded this spring.

JANE L., 2:19½, dropped a filly by Eagle Bird, 2:21½, April 15, at Bowerman's Wilton Home Farm. She will be bred to Wilton, 2:19½, this season.

MR. KEMPER, of Oakville, Napa county, has sold his colt Will Justus, by Election, out of the dam of Alwood K., to Joe B. Edington. The price paid was $400.

BERNAL, 2:17, will get a mark of 2:15 this year. He never looked better, and his colts and fillies at Palo Alto are already attracting notice by the way they go.

FERNDALE, by Simmocolon, out of the dam of Thistle, trotted quarters last year in 36 seconds. But this year he has gone to pacing and his owners are encouraging him.

JOHN MANN, of Portland, Oregon, may not take his stable east of Montana this year. He entered in some races at Council Bluffs, Ia., and Superior, Neb., but they failed to fill.

THE following have been appointed Agricultural Directors by Governor Markham for District No. 3, which embraces Butte County: F. C. Williams, L. H. McIntosh and Daniel Streeter.

CAPT. MILLEN GRIFFITH'S gray pacer White Cap, is a pure gaited trotter, but as a pacer he is much faster, consequently he is kept in the "side wheel" persuasion by John Kelly at Pleasanton.

A FINE filly owned by Henry Baker, of Santa Rosa, sired by Robin and out of an Anteo mare was found dead in a hollow stump in George E. Guerne's pasture near Guerneville a few days ago.

SIMPLY neglecting to give an injection of warm water with a small rubber bulb syringe has caused the death of many a well-bred foal this season. It is strange that men who have the care of foals don't read and learn.

THISTLE, 2:14, by Sidney, will be out this year for a mark of 2:10. Thistle sired the three-year-old To Order, 2:14, and his crop of young pacers is said to be most promising. He is owned by Mr. Shults, who paid $6,000 for him.

THE latest man talked of as about to send a lot of trotting stock to Europe is Mr. C. J. Hamlin. If "Pa" ships a lot over next fall, he will take a better class of goods than the people on the other side of the Atlantic have thus far seen.

THE young Silver Bows belonging to Williams and Morehouse at the Silver Bow Stock Farm are the talk of San Jose. They are all of good size and color, and are as stylish as their sire. Next year there will be a few of them to enter the list.

THE most famous trotting broodmares have been prolific. Primrose had twenty foals, Waterwitch and Dabria nineteen each, Miss Russell and Jessie Pepper eighteen each, while Green Mountain Maid, the best of them all, is credited with seventeen.

ONE of the horses that came on the train Wednesday to be added to Mr. Salisbury's string was Haviland, a pacer, with a record of 2:27½. He is to be given a thorough course of training and an attempt will be made to lower his record.—Pleasanton Times.

JOHNSTON, 2:06½, now sixteen years old, is as fast as the shadow of a cloud this spring, and in a recent brush on the covered track at Buffalo he carried Robert J., 2:09½, to a break. It takes a good horse to do that, and he has to be at his best, too.

ALREADY Belle Acton, the pacing filly that lowered the yearling pacing record to 2:20½ last year, has paced an eighth of a mile in 0:14. This was a 1:52 gait, and if she holds this form she should be able to beat any two-year-olds she may meet this year.

PLUNKETT, 2:13½, has wintered well and will be a dandy in the free-for-all pacing races this year. He is only six years old and has filled out in every way. He ought to be able to make a much lower record this year as he is one that improves as he grows older.

AMERICAN GIRL, by Toronto Sontag 307, was foaled in 1874, and has had sixteen foals, the last one being by Palo Alto, 2:08½. She is one of the most reliable broodmares at Palo Alto. Her son Antonius will have a few 2:30 performers in his credit this year.

THE new race track at Santa Maria is now completed, and with a little working down will be one of the best tracks on the coast. It is level as a floor and the curves are true as steel, and the horse that makes a record on this track will make it honestly. This will prove a big benefit to our local trainers, and we shall expect to see some surprising speed developments in the next few months.—Santa Maria Times.

C. W. WILLIAMS, the Independence horseman who owns Allerton, 2:09½, and Rush Park, has given four mortgages, aggregating $100,000, on his lands and hotel furniture to the First National Bank, of Independence, and Richard Campbell and Jack Rich, of Dubuque, Ia.

PETER CONOVER the well-known trainer and colt-handler who has been with Colonel Z. E. Simmons for many years, and who has been sick for several months, is no better. His physicians say he will never be able to drive again, and thus the trotting turf loses an honest and conscientious reinsman.

THERE are only a few trotters at the Petaluma track at present. Our Sonoma County friends have been too busy putting in their crops and building fences to devote much time to the trotters, but in a month or two they will all be seen, as usual, trying to get speed out of their colts and fillies.

H. K. MOORE has in training at Lewiston, Idaho, Dolly Withers, 2:29½; Warwick Medium (2), 2:35½; Pearl, 2:40; Shadeland, Norgregor (3), Shadeland Conduit (3), Belle Medium (3), Shadeland Vintoman (2) and the two two-year-olds by Alexis, as well as one two-year-old by Surprise.—Pacific Rural.

ABOUT the best Sidney that has been taken up this year by Millard Saunders is out of Roseleaf (dam of Falrose, 2:19), by Buccaneer; second dam Fauny Fern (dam of Gold Leaf, 2:11), etc.), by Flaxtail 8132. He is a trotter, and for a yearling he is large, evenly made and very much like Sidney in conformation.

THERE has been a rejection of all bids for construction of the buildings proposed for the Portland Speed and Driving Association's track at Albina, and new ones are advertised for. The revised plans show a grand stand that will be a thing of beauty and comfort, and the latter quality will be dominant in the stables.

SENATOR LELAND STANFORD arrived at Palo Alto last Monday; he is delighted with the appearance of the trotters there. This time last year nearly all of the best ones that were kept in the stalls were sick and a number died; but the new sanitary regulations adopted since then have proven very efficacious in preventing sickness.

THE Vancouver, B. C., Jockey Club Association met on the afternoon of April 4. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, F. C. Cotton; Vice President, F. C. Cope; Second Vice President, D. Oppenheimer; Secretary, W. Campbell; Committee, W. Templeton, E. E. Penzer, J. A. Fullerton, T. Dunn, C. A. McKinnon.

J. P. SARGENT, who lives about six miles below Gilroy, has a number of young trotters by Jim Milvanna, 2:19½, Brown Jug and others that are as fine looking as any youngsters in Santa Clara Valley. Mr. Sargent is a good judge of horseflesh, and the mares he selected are of the kind that will produce colts and fillies that will sell.

NEAR Oro, Wash., are several bands of wild horses. Most of them are small, but some are good horses. The ancestors of this band were part of Okanogan Smith's best horses and cavuses from the reserve. The horses, when caught, are hard to break, and when turned loose, immediately rejoin the band, taking a few tame horses along for company.

A CHECK for $1,000, signed by J. P. Mann, the owner of Altai, is the price Postmaster Biers, of Vancouver, Wash., received for his ten-months-old colt Onecona. The colt is by Oneco, out of Venetia, and much is expected of it in the future. The bargain was very quietly made and the check handed over by Mr. Mann with apparent satisfaction that the bargain was a good one.

C. J. HAMLIN, owner of the Village Farm Stables, Buffalo, has made an engagement with the State Board of Agriculture to attempt to beat the world's double team record during the State Fair at Indianapolis. The team will be made up from Belle Hamlin, Globe, Justina and Honest George. Mr. Hamlin says he believes he can beat the world's record on the Indianapolis track.

THE following have been appointed and commissioned Agricultural Directors of District 43, Tulare County, by the Governor: Henry Perkins, G. S. Berry, Jasper Harrell, Visalia, W. C. Cartmill, A. P. Merritt, E. D. Castle, Tulare City, Jacob Hayes, Poplar, and G. A. Dodge, of Hanford. J. B. Griffin, for District No. 40, for Colusa and Yolo Counties, was also appointed.

PROF. E. P. HEALD'S broodmare Norma (dam of Grandee, 2:23½, and Grandissimo, 2:23½), by Arthurton, second dam Nourmahal (dam of Cassidy, 2:30), by Blackbird 401, has a yearling bay colt by Dexter Prince that shows more trot for its age than any youngster on the Napa Stock Farm. Next year he will be given to a competent trainer. He ought to be a game trotter if there ever was one.

J. D. CARTER bought a horse in Polk county last week that is a perfect mammoth in point of size. He is seven years old, well built, and stands twenty hands high. Though very poor his girth measure is seven feet. When properly fattened he should weigh 2400 or 2500 pounds, which would probably make him the largest horse in the country, as the largest horse yet found for exhibition at the World's Fair weighs only a little more than 2200.—North Pacific Rural.

SANDY SMITH is jogging half a dozen likely-looking light-harness horses at City View, Portland. The string embraces "Squire" Fay's two-year-old Billy Smith, by Ham; Charlie Sliker's five-year-old S. S., same sire; Bud McAllister, a rangy four-year-old, by Lemont; Charlie Lohuire's young Rysdyk horse, a yearling colt by the same sire and an Altamont dam, and a promising pacer by Smuggler. All the well-known performers at City View are wintering through this spring very nicely.—Oregonian.

THE Standard Trotting Horse Company of Kenosha, Wis., is willing to match Alix, 2:10, against Martha Wilkes, 2:08. Morris J. Jones measured the stride of Alix last fall and when going at speed her stride measured twenty-two feet. This was not a single measurement, but was almost exactly the same all the way up the stretch. Alix went a half mile in exactly one minute, and Ed Tipton says if there is any horse that can beat Nancy Hanks it is this sweet-gaited daughter of Patronage. Mr. Jones himself is conservative, but he admits that he believes Alix will hold the five-year-old championship when 1893 draws to an end.

A CURIOUS state of affairs exists in Connecticut. The anti-pool law strikes at one of the most vital interests of the State. By its provisions it not only forbids pool-selling or wagering on races, but it attaches a penalty to giving races for purses and stakes. The headquarters of the National Trotting Association are at Hartford, and the law deprives that association of a number of members.

THERE is owned at Pleasant Hill, Ky., a gray stallion by Young Jim that has sired so far fifty-four foals out of mares of all colors and has never yet sired a gray, says the Harrodsburg Democrat. His dam was of Denmark stock and black, while his sire is a bright bay, with no gray ancestors. This is another instance in which the gray color is present without either sire or dam being a gray, which is something not met with once in a lifetime.

THE Palo Alto string for the California circuit will be made up of the following trotters: Truman (4), 2:12; Mohawk (5), 2:20½; Orphina (4), 2:19; Rowena (3), 2:17; Donchka (3), 2:24; Othena (3), 2:25½; Elwina (3), 2:27; Jesse (2), 2:34½; Rio Alto (2), Palatine (2), Welbeck (2), Cressida (1), by Palo Alto; Nordica (1), by Advertiser; Glubar (1), by Electricity; Mittera (1), by Advertiser; Eric (1), by Azmoor, and Nazir (1), by Amigo.

WHILE all the other prominent stallions are having various claims of excellence made for them it is just as well to remember that Sidney in addition to what he has accomplished as a sire of speed at both the pace and trot has also given the world five yearlings that have taken records of 2:40 or better. Even in these days when yearling trotters are a common sight there is no other stallion that in this respect can make a showing equal to that of Sidney.

THE horse breeders in the Northern circuit have had a serious time this winter with the heavy floods, but now that the waters have subsided they are turning their attention to their trotters and pacers. Messrs. Woodard, McIntosh, Boggs, Newton, Reavis and a score of other horsemen, are busy seeing how their little equine youngsters are doing. There will be a number of fast ones appear on the northern circuit this fall, and most of them are royally bred.

FRED HAIGHT, the trainer at the Moorland Stock Farm, is very busy driving the young Soudans on the new three-quarter mile track, just finished on this farm. It is in splendid condition, and is the only one of its kind in the State. The turns are similar to those of a regulation mile course, and each of the stretchers are one-eighth of a mile shorter. Mr. Murphy contemplates moving one of his rows of stables closer to the track than it is at present. The stock on this farm always looks well, for there is plenty of feed and water there throughout the year.

COLUMBINE (dam of Anteo, 2:16½, Coral, 2:18½, and Antevolo, 2:19½), by A. W. Richmond, has a two-year-old by Electioneer called Speedwell at Palo Alto that is one of the "coming" wonders. Last week the grand-looking bay mare dropped a bay colt by Electricity, 2:17½, that is as handsome as a picture, and as Electricity is the first sire the mare has been bred to that has a record, much curiosity is manifested among every one at the farm as to whether this new-comer will not be as fast, if not faster, than the others. There is plenty of good hot blood in him anyway.

CLAYTON and Tempest are the latest New York road team. Each has a record of 2:19, and they are reported to be going well together. Tempest is the California mare that was shipped to the Argentine Republic several years ago, and then brought back to America and started out on a "ringing" tour, making her debut in a slow class race at Cleveland. As she had never trotted east of the Rocky Mountains it was the idea of those who controlled the mare that she would pass muster as a green horse, but suspicion was aroused and the driver escaped a term in the Ohio penitentiary only by jumping a bail bond.

A LOCAL veterinarian informs me that never before in the history of Kentucky has the castrating knife been so freely used as it has this season. He says that he alone has castrated over 200 young stallions ranging in age from one to eight years. He has over a hundred unfilled orders on his book now, and he says that he expects to castrate, all told, fully 1,000 this year. As there are five or six other veterinary surgeons here who will also do a large business in the castrating line, it is reasonable to suppose that not less than 3,000 horses will be gelded in this section in 1893. Youngsters of the very best breeding are being castrated, and every breeder in this section is having the knife used freely. Many well-informed horsemen believe this is the proper way to reduce the ever-increasing output of young trotters. If they are right the veterinarian's work in Kentucky this year will be of great benefit to the trotting-horse business.—Horseman.

THERE is every reason to believe that there will be fewer mares bred this season than for a long time past. Especially is this true of young mares that give promise of speed. It has been the custom in the past to breed young sound mares that gave considerable promise, because their offspring by a well bred stallion would sell for a long price. Men would lay aside the race mare they already had and try to get another one for years to come. Now they are no longer doing this and it will have a tendency to decrease the production of trotting stock. If breeders raise fewer animals, but train those better which they do raise, they will make more money. There are on nearly every stock farm animals three or four years old that have never had a harness on. Until the breeder breaks and trains every horse he raises he is overstocked.—American Trotter.

YOUNG PORTIA, by Mambrino Chief, out of Portia, by Roebuck, has had her ranks as a broodmare increased. She is the dam of Voltaire, 2:20½, by Tattler; of Nora Lee, 2:29½, by Woodford Mambrino, and of Emblem, dam of Manette, dam of Arion, 2:10½. Yolande, one of her daughters, produced Yuba, 2:24½ (dam of Zircon, 2:25½); Yazoo, 2:27½, and Yuletide, 2:28½. Another, Consula, is the dam of Connaught 2:24. Nora Lee trotted last season, after long use as a broodmare and at the age of eighteen, in 2:29½. What would she have done had she been trained earlier in life? She is owned at Hill-and-Dale Farm by W. E. Dickerman, and is the dau of Sylvan, 2:27½, and Chatham, sire of Chattel, 2:29½. Emblem, the dam of Manette, dam of Arion, 2:10½, is also the dam of the Middletown mare, the dam of Flying Jib, the great pacer with a record of 2:05½. Portia, the dam of Young Portia, was out of a daughter of Blackburn's Whip, a thoroughbred. The breeder who is looking for a gold mine sticks closely to the great broodmare lines.

The Saddle.

B. C. HOLLY has purchased of Wilber F. Smith, Sacramento, the bay colt Steadfast, by Sobrante, dam Narcola; consideration, $600.

TOKEN, a two-year-old filly by imp. Sir Modred—Carissima, won a good race at Elizabeth, N. J., this being her first appearance on the turf.

CHARLES REED, who lost twenty five broodmares by lightning firing a barn on Fair View Farm, proposes to build stone barns hereafter.

"DAGGIE" SMITH has leased of C. A. Brown the chestnut four-year-old mare Folly (sister to Sinfax), by Wildidle, dam Fostress, by Foster, for the season.

TAMMANY occupies the stall at Monmouth that once sheltered Salvador, and the one Sir Francis is in was once occupied by the great little Firenze. Matt Byrnes regards this as a good omen.

BUSH SMITH left last Tuesday morning for Helena, Mont., with his horse, Cyclone. There he will join his brother Bob in the work of preparing the Kirkendall horses for this season's campaign.

It is stated that Col. M. Lewis Clark will officiate as presiding judge at the inaugural meeting of the Americo-Mexicana Blood Horse Association, to be given at the City of Mexico about November 1st.

BELFAST, W. M. Murry's good Longview gelding, was badly cut down in the mile and a sixteenth handicap last Saturday, and will not be able to race again in many a day, being cut in the bone below the fetlock.

IT SEEMS to be the impression now that Van Ness has simply been the trainer of Morello for William Singerly, of the Philadelphia Record, and that the horse will be allowed to fill his engagements under his proper colors.

MY BADGE, sister to the famous little horse, Badge, by imp. The Ill-Used, dam Baroness, by Kentucky, last week foaled a bay colt by Emperor of Norfolk. She is owned by Charles Kerr, of Bakersfield, who is very proud of her.

MR. A. F. WALCOTT'S bay mare Ruperta, by Prince Charlie, dam Marguerite, has foaled a brown colt to imp. St. Blaise at the Fairview Stud. Ruperta will be bred back to the Derby winner on the same terms as last season, viz., $2,500.

TAMMANY has developed into a grand four-year-old. He is much better-looking than his sire, Iroquois. He stands 15.3 hands high; his head in its outlines is perfect, his heart is deep and his loins are stout and staunch, while his legs are clean and sound.

A GREAT change is being made in the St. Louis Jockey Club bourse. The timers' stand, which has heretofore been opposite the judges' structure, has been torn down. A second story has been added to the judges' stand, and in this the timers will be stationed.

ST. DOMINGO, the big colt by St. Blaise, dam Lady Primrose, for which Jacob Kuppert, Jr., paid $30,000, promises to be a sensational three-year-old. He is large and powerful, and has great speed. Last season he was not started because he was so large and powerful.

S. C. LILLIS, manager of the great Laguna de Tache rancho, stretching for seventeen miles on the Kings river, has gone to the World's Fair. His family is already in Chicago.—Visalia Delta.—S. C. Lillis bred that good horse St. Croix, by King Daniels, dam by Bayswater.

THE Bybee mares, Oceanica (sister to Flood Tide and Annie Lewis), Billow (dam of Eclipse, by Longfield), Kobinoor, by Hyder Ali—Assyria, have been purchased by John Mackey, of Rancho del Paso, for a friend. They are a royally-bred collection, and fit to grace any harem.

THE Oriental Stable have purchased from Messrs. J. A. & A. H. Morris the three-year-old chestnut colt, Frieze, by The Ill-Used, dam Fillette, for $2,000. This colt should be able to win many races in moderate company, but there is considerable doubt about his ability to stand training.

JAMES R. KEENE will have Jockey Doggett brought before the Board of Control for impertinence. The trouble arose over Taral's being put up on White Rose instead of Doggett. Doggett, who says he had been engaged to ride the mare, lost his head and his temper. He will probably be severely disciplined.

CHARLES KERR, of Bakersfield, Cal., has purchased of Mrs. R. E. Bybee, Portland, Or., the bay mare Lina, foaled 1881, by King Alfonso—Titania, by Lexington, and Lenora, bay mare, foaled 1885, by imp. Kyle Daly—Lina. Terms private. Mr. Kerr is getting together a splendid lot of broodmares, surely.

DON ALONZO took up 123 pounds and won a mile race by two lengths from the good Prince George at Elizabeth, N. J., on the 24th of April. Gold Dollar, by imp. Sir Modred—Trade Dollar, won a good four and one-half furlong race on the same date, and old Kingston won easily at six furlongs from Bolero, St. Denis and Strathmaid.

THE Antrim Stable horses (Charles Kerr's) left last Tuesday for Sacramento. There they will join the string being handled for Mr. Kerr by Billy McCormick, and the entire lot will leave for Hawthorne Park, Chicago, on the 20th inst. S. G. Reed's horses go at the same time. In this collection are some high-priced youngsters, and, in McCormick's hands, the Californians will be heard from.

THE DOCTOR, a two-year-old colt in W. O'B. Macdonough's string, died of pneumonia at Ogden on his way to Brooklyn in Henry Walsh's hands. He was by imp. Sir Modred, dam Trade Dollar, therefore brother to the fast Gold Dollar and half-brother to Trade Mark, the colt that won the California Stakes in 1888, when Don Jose jumped the fence and killed Sidney Marsb. The Doctor was very fast.

IT HAS been announced that the Elkwood Park people had abandoned their intention of opening their new track, now near completion, this season. They had expected to begin racing there on July 3, running in opposition to the Brighton Beach meeting. But something has happened to change the plans, and if there is racing at the track it will not be before August 1st. What the trouble is could not be ascertained.

ACCORDING to the London Referee, Donovan won in stakes $55,153: Ayrshire, £39,900; Gladiateur, £30,627; La Fleche, £29,050; Ormonde, £28,465; Lord Lyon, £15,565; Seabreeze, £24,266; Achievement, £22,445; Orme, £21,197; Formosa, £21,080; Memoir, £17,300, and Hannah, £16,464. Of this eleven, Achievement won most as a two-year-old, Donovan most at three years, and Ayrshire most at four years.

PIERRE LORILLARD'S two-year-old division in charge of Trainer Donovan are a grand-looking lot. De Courcy, by Spoudthrift—Kitty, is a big, rangy fellow with lots of power, good body and legs, and decidedly good looking. His string comprises twenty youngsters, among which are Chaos, a full brother of Rubicon; Morocco, a full brother of Morelli; Tolusa, Lochinvar, Parthian, Cataract, Monte Cristo, Kabama and Traitor.

LAST Saturday there was sold at auction at Bay District track two most excellent mares—Billow (dam of Eclipse), by Longfield, dam Medea, by Norfolk, and Keepsake, by Flood, dam Katharon (dam of Kyo), by Harry of the West, second dam Kathleen (dam of George Kinney), by Lexington. Billow brought $1,000, Keepsake $500, C. A. Brown purchasing the latter. S. J. Jones bought in Neyella (dam of Rosebud) for Mrs. R. E. Bybee, the owner of the mares disposed of.

BUCHANAN, the sire of the winning youngsters on the turf this year, is a Boyle-county product, having been bred by Col. J. W. Guest, of this county. He is by Buckden, dam Miss Grigsby, the old mare that always threw winners, and that died at the Magnolia Farm a year or so ago. Buchanan was a crack-a-jack in his day and is doing just what his breeder claimed he would do—get race horses of high class. He is owned by Scoggin Bros., of Louisville, who purchased him some years ago.—Danville (Ky.) Advocate.

THE bay filly Lola A., own sister to Engarita, three years old, by Enquirer, dam Ogaria, by imp. Great Tom, was bought at Memphis, Tenn., April 25th, by Cusbing & Orth, Minneapolis, Minn., of D. A. Bradley, Nashville, Tenn., for $5,000. Lola A.'s work in private indicates that she holds many a stake race at her mercy. Last season her record as a two-year-old read two wins and one second in three starts, and so well has she done this spring in her preparation that horsemen expect her to prove the Yo Tambien of the year.

SAM GAMBLE, the well-known trotting horseman, has patented a device for telling the positions of horses at the finish of races—a light belt which goes around the waist, in which is attached a white shield-shaped piece of leather, fitting to the right side of the rider, on which is painted, in red, the various numbers corresponding with those on the programme. These numbers do not slip around, and are easily distinguishable by spectators. The scheme, we understand, is favored by Secretary Brewster, of Washington Park, Chicago.

GEORGE C. ROSS, administrator of the estate of Richard Ten Broeck, who died at San Mateo, has begun suit in the Superior Court of San Francisco, to recover from Mrs. M. C. Ten Broeck, wife of the deceased, $14,700 on a written instrument executed at Louisville, Ky., November 3, 1887. By that instrument Mrs. Ten Broeck admitted owing her husband the amount sued for, he having advanced the money in order that she might travel for health and pay certain medical expenses. She promised to pay the debt in four years from the date of the instrument, with five per cent. interest, but has failed to do so.

THE Great Metropolitan Stakes at Epsom, about two miles and a quarter, was won this year by Madame Neruda II, a daughter of Fiddler, himself the winner in 1882, and son of the expatriated Preakness. Preakness still holds the record for two miles and a quarter in this country with the 3:50½ made in his famous race with Springbok at Saratoga. Madame Neruda II. covered the distance in 4:13, beating Seaton Delaval, White Feather, Busby Park, Colorado (last year's winner), Madame d'Albany, etc. She was second last year. The time she made was the second best in the last ten years, The Cob in 1887 going in 4:11 1-5. Fiddler's time was 4:17.

It looks now as if there would be racing in California during at least eleven months of the year, as Henry Schwartz and his intimates are, according to report, going to have a race meeting at Oakland track, lasting 120 days, commencing after the Trotting Horse Breeders Meeting, which begins on the 27th of this month. Some of our best stables will take part, viz: the Maltese Villa, Appleby (Orrin, William and John), Burns & Waterhouse, Elmwood Stock Farm and H. D. Brown. Schwartz is to put up the purses, Whitehead & Killip will sell pools and Ben Wright have the hotel and bar privileges. It is proposed to make books at the track on Eastern events, so the speculator is thus amply provided for.

CHARLES KERR, the Bakersfield turfman, purchased at private sale last Saturday, of Jones & Bybee, agents of Mrs. R. E. Bybee, Portland, Or., the chestnut mare Whynot (dam of the famous Misty Morn), by George Wilkes (by Asteroid, and a half-brother to the great Mollie Jackson); second dam Flora A., by Tom Bowling; third dam Florence I., by imp. Australian; fourth dam Charlotte Buford, by Lexington; fifth dam the famed Kitty Clark, by imp. Glencoe, and on to twenty-first dam, Layton Barb mare. Whynot will be bred to Mr. Kerr's imported English horse, Reggy, by Hermit, dam by Musjid, winner of the Derby and son of Newmiuster. Whynot should throw something good to Reggy.

ONE of the best stables in the East this year will be that of J. A. and A. H. Morris, who have among others such well-known horses as Russell, Reckon, Ambulance, St. Florian, Mars and Rainbow. The latter is a candidate for the American Derby, and if he should start there, Chicago will see Fred Littlefield, the dunc jockey of the board of control track, in the saddle. Rainbow has grown into a magnificent specimen of a Longfellow, and it would be hard to find a better-looking three-year-old anywhere. Mars, that game three-year-old of last year, has improved in every way. The rheumatism which bothered him greatly then has completely disappeared. St. Florian has developed and thickened to a wonderful degree. His leg is still considerably enlarged, but it is perfectly cool. Hard to the touch, there is not the slightest suspicion of fever about it. He is receiving a careful preparation and his first outing will be in the Metropolitan handicap, which Mr. Morris is particularly anxious to win.

EGENE LEIGH, of Lexington, Ky., sold the bay five-year-old Prunty, by Spendthrift—Janet, to a Canadian gentleman, for a saddle horse. The bargain did not turn out well, for the first time the purchaser had the horse out he ran away with him, and, it is said, seriously injured him. Mr. Leigh has sold Rico, brown gelding, 6, by Shannon—Fannie Lewis, to the Khaftan Stable, and Gamester, bay colt, 3, by Bramble—Daisy Hoey, to J. Fleming. He has returned Blackburn, black horse, 6, by Luke Blackburn—Tomboy, to M. T. Downing, at Gloucester.

TWO new factors have appeared in the Brooklyn Handicap—Charade, the little black colt for which $20,000 was refused last year, and Illume, the "track-scorcher," as he was called last summer in the West. Both are in very light. Charade is the most advanced horse in the Eastern tracks. He is a mud-lark; over a heavy track he will be dangerous. Illume, like all of the Ill-Used, does not like the mud. With a hot day and a dry track he can go the Brooklyn distance in record time. Last year Charade defeated Tammany in the Tidal Stakes at one mile, each carrying 132 pounds in the fast time of 1:41 1-5. Then at Saratoga he ran a dead heat with Stratmeath at a mile in 1:41½.

THE Morris Stable's Russell has wintered splendidly and looks the picture of health. His legs are hard and as clean as a whistle, not a spot or pimple being discernible on any portion of his anatomy. His feet trouble him a good deal, and when they begin to hurt him he sbuts up suddenly. Muddy going is his forte, and with a heavy track he will have a great chance for the Brooklyn Handicap. Reckon, of the same stable, whose nose was broken when she fell last fall at Morris Park, has mended perfectly, and it will not interfere with her breathing. She is doing wonderfully well, but will not be seen until late in the season. When the racing is over she will be shipped to England and mated with the best sire procurable next spring.

THERE is some trouble about the starter for the races at St. Louis, for which the club had engaged James F. Caldwell, who is under a yearly contract to the Hudson County Jockey Club. The latter organization has now notified Mr. Caldwell that it expects him to be on hand to start the horses at the Guttenberg meetings, which are to begin on May 6th, after the close of the racing at Elizabeth, and on June 1st, during the Morris Park meeting. The Hudson County Jockey Club has decided to race during the Morris Park and the Coney Island Jockey Club meetings, though it will not run in opposition to those held at the Brooklyn and Monmouth tracks. Mr. Caldwell tried to get Mr. Rowe to start for him either at St. Louis or at Guttenberg during the May meetings, but had not succeeded in his efforts up to last evening.

THE Hook died on the 27th of April, at Santa Anita, Los Angeles county, of lockjaw. The Hook, imported from Australia, was a brown horse, foaled in 1871, by Fishhook (son of the famous Fisherman), dam Juliet, by Touchstone, therefore having the Touchstone cross closer up than had any horse in America. E. J. Baldwin purchased the Hook, who was remarkably well preserved, about two years and a half ago, and as he proved a sure foal-getter, has some twenty sons and daughters that will keep his memory green in this country, and besides has served a dozen or more of Baldwin's best mares this season. These youngsters are said to be among the most promising at the famous breeding establishment, and the loss of this horse will be keenly felt. In Australia his get have run with considerable success. Submission, one of his daughters, winning a number of good races recently, as has Leviathan.

W. O'B. MACDONOUGH has rented for a term of years the Selby field opposite Mrs. Collins' place, for the purpose of constructing a race course thereon. J. C. Flood, years ago, utilized this field for a similar purpose. The course is to be a mile. Work began early this week. Stables, sheds and the like will be built near the track. Mr. Walsh, the well-known trainer and former employe of the Palo Alto Stock Farm, will take charge of the entire affair, and Mr. Macdonough's famous horses will be brought here and exercised on the track. Considerable training will also be done, and this will necessitate the employment of a large number of men. The track is expected to be in good order by the 1st of June. Mr. McDonough has become, within the past few years, one of the noted turfmen of the coast, and his horses have been successful in a number of races. He possesses now some of the best blood stock in the country. The track and buildings of course will be strictly private. All of his stock will be trained on this track and given a record before entering contests of note. Clever drivers are already engaged, and nothing now remains to be done in the way of carrying out the plan excepting the completion of the track and buildings. The Times-Gazette will give a full and detailed account of the scheme as it progresses.—Redwood City Times-Gazette.

WE have all heard wonderful stories of the ordeals to which waggish trainers subjected aspirants for the honors of jockeyship, but the following, which is vouched for by the New York Tribune, is certainly a shade taller than any that has yet appeared: "A good-looking young man applied for a place at one of the Morris Park stables a few days ago, and his reception was simply 'immense,' as one of the owners put it. He weighed 115 pounds. 'Too heavy,' said the trainer to whom his application was made. 'I'll reduce,' was the reply. All the trainers and stable-boys on the track were apprised of the fact that there was a new-comer, and they gathered on the backstretch to see the fun. It was about 10 o'clock, after all the horses had had their morning's work. Visitors to the club-house saw something coming down the stretch the like of which had never before met their eyes. It was the young man. His legs were swathed in red bandages, he carried four horse-blankets on his body and a cradle and a hood on his head and neck. He ran at top speed down the hill three or four times and then was taken to the scales to see how much he had reduced. He tipped the beam at 113 pounds. 'Not enough,' said his employer. He was turned over to the tender mercies of the stable-boys, who took him to a manure-heap and buried him up to his neck, where they left him to suffer and reflect for an hour. When taken out, more dead than alive, he scaled 111 pounds, and the boys took him off behind a stable to rub him down. Brushes and curry-combs were liberally applied, and after he had suffered a terrible laceration the hose was turned on. He was game to the backbone. His weight was now 109 pounds, and the trainer said: 'My boy, you'll do.' He did do. He is now at work and has the respect of the entire track. A boy who can go through what he did is bound to succeed. And he was only a 'dude.'"

Treatment of Roaring.

[Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

Professor Smith, of the Army Veterinary School, Aldershot, England, at a recent meeting of the Central Veterinary Society in London, gave a short address on this subject. The methods of surgical interference which have been hitherto adopted for the relief of roaring have consisted of the removal of some portion or portions of the larynx. The result of such interference has not, up to the present time, proved very satisfactory, and it occurred to Professor Smith that we might perhaps tackle this disease through its original channel, namely: through the nervous system.

The worthy Professor believed it was possible to put the left recurrent nerve, which had lost its function, on to a sound motor nerve and suture it there, and endeavor thereby to effect a union, and, if possible, to get motor power supplied to the originally paralyzed larynx. To this end the left recurrent laryngeal, having been divided, was sutured to a branch of the spinal accessory. The Professor was surprised how rapidly union took place, but something besides mere union was required, and that was the conveyance of motor impulses to the larynx through the branches of the united nerve. This was not clearly proven, however, when the time came to exercise the animal experimented on, the amount of noise during progression was something comparatively slight; whereas, considering the left recurrent was completely divided, he ought to have roared badly. The animal remained at exercise some weeks and made distinct improvement. This improvement was so great at the time he was destroyed for dissection that Professor Smith did not hesitate in saying that the slight defective breathing could only be detected by an expert. Examination of the parts showed that a complete union had taken place between the left recurrent and the spinal accessory. The condition of the larynx was a feature of the greatest importance.

The laryngeal muscles were wasted on the left side, but instead of finding them of the usual yellowish, white color, they were pink, and so distinctly pink, that Professor Smith was obliged to obtain the assistance of three or four unbiased persons to determine, if possible, what difference of color existed between the muscles of the right and left side. Microscopically examined, the muscles of the left side showed a fatty change, but it was perfectly clear that a certain amount of nerve force existed on the left side of the larynx, and sufficient nerve force to prevent the horse making any considerable amount of noise. Dr. McDonald has recently performed a similar experiment, and, as the case is now on trial, no definite results have as yet been published. Professor Smith is to be congratulated on the scientific ground he has taken in regard to this dreaded malady, and it is to be hoped that his efforts will be crowned with success, and I am sure professionals as well as laymen await the final results of such experiments with no little amount of interest, especially as such an operation, if proved finally satisfactory, may be the means of saving many a favorite hunter or race horse's early consignment to the cab-stand, or perhaps, further down the equine scale.

Oregon News.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

The July race meeting of the Oregon State Breeders and Speeding Association is going to be largely participated in by the best horses of the coast. The programme as arranged is an attractive one, and contains many novel races. The races will cover four days, commencing on July 4th. The track will be in prime condition, for already several dozen speedy horses are here being worked.

The racing for the fall meeting of the state fair is going to be far ahead of that of any previous meeting given under the auspices of the State Board of Agriculture. A new programme has been arranged from first to last and there is every assurance that the number of horses in attendance for participation in the rich events will be considerably larger than at any previous meeting. The late legislature made an appropriation of $11,000 for the purpose of improving the fair grounds and nearly the whole of this sum will be expended in the construction of new grandstands, judges' stands, etc., and in the construction of a new regulation track. The present course is of the old-fashioned pattern with four sharp turns. The new track has been surveyed and work will soon be commenced on it. It will be a mile and will be first-class in every particular.

Van deLashmuit, the millionaire horseman and banker, was at Salem several days this week looking at property near this city with a view to purchasing a farm upon which to breed trotters. He realizes that this city, centrally located, is at an distant day to become the fast-horse center of Oregon.

Notes From Napa.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

NAPA, Cal., May 1—The Napa race track is in excellent condition, and everything is being done by Mr. Scott to make it the best race course in this State. The trainers and drivers located there are satisfied with what is being accomplished by this able superintendent. James Berryman has a promising string in training, among them Stonewall, by Director besides a very promising son of Antevolo, 2:19 that looks like a trotter, and the once promising Sidney stallion Ringwood; he seems to be getting back to his old form. Jim seems to be well liked around Napa, and has thus far made a favorable impression. He is very painstaking and considerate. Thos. Kinney has converted the chestnut son of Gay Wilkes, 2:15, Blonde Wilkes, 2:34, to pacing, and another Rupec may be looked for. George Hewes is sharpening up Lenaur, 2:16, and he has lost none of his last year's speed. He seems to have lost his heavy grip on the irons, and moves along at a lightning clip without special exertion. The three-year-old son of Nutwood, 2:16, Alwood K., moves very business-like, and will be prepared for the stakes by Mr. Hewes. The Vinceland Stock Farm string are all improving, and Mr. Loeber and his able assistant, Clarence Hill, seem determined to prove Grandissimo one of the coming sires. Myrtle Thorne, 2:35 as a two-year-old, has grown into a very large mare. She has plenty of speed, but will have to go slow this season on account of her size.

The three-year-old Altissimo, of Mr. G. C. Fountain's, is looked upon as one of the coming colts the way he moves through the stretch.

Cameo, a black two-year-old Grandissimo, out of Eva, by Whippleton, is a very likely filly.

Grandora, by Grandissimo, dam full sister to Burton, 2:30, owned by Mr. Sterling, of San Jose, is well thought of and moves well.

The one all the boys are struck on, and are trying to find some one to blame because they did not buy him at the recent sale, is the yearling pacer Alco, by Alconeer, dam Jessie E., by Whippleton. This is a great colt. The second time he was hitched to a sulky he stepped an eighth in 21½ seconds.

We had a visit by that very interesting horse lover now on a visit from the East, Mr. Cadagan, the former owner of Bayonne Prince, 2:21. He is sojourning around Napa for health and pleasure and, as naturally to be expected, his love for the horse attracts him to the Napa track. He is much pleased with our track and surroundings, and takes pleasure in an occasional visit.

Mr. McGraw, who became famous as the trainer and owner of the great race mare Lilly Stanley, 2:17½, and the race horse Silas Skinner, 2:17, talks of returning to Napa, his old home, to live. No doubt he has hopes of discovering some more of the same kind, as Stanley and Skinner here.

Mr. John McCord never fails to visit the track when he is up on Saturday from San Francisco; that's his day of rest and he always shares it with the equine race.

Alconeer, the son of Alcon 730, out of Madonna, seems to be doing well in the stud at Mr. McCord's place where he is making a season.

Mr. R. G. Head is daily expecting something par excellence from his mare Nellie Steinway and the great Elector.

Napa will turn out many surprises this season.

Stamboul at Terre Haute.

E. H. Harriman of New York, who paid $41,000 for Stamboul last December, has been at the Terre Haute track looking at his famous horse. The weather has not been propitious for a speed exhibition, but the New York banker, who has not seen Stamboul since he bought him, is enough of a judge of horseflesh to know he is in first-class condition. Sunday, Mr. Doble escorted Mr. and Mrs. Harriman to the driving park, where the costly string of record-breakers were being carefully protected from a St. Patrick's day atmosphere. More Park, where Doble has the broodmares and the infants, was also visited, and later a trip was made to Warren Park, Mr. Jjams' stock farm, the home of Axtell. Sunday, another visit was made to the driving park, and Stamboul, Nancy Hanks, Belle Vara and a few others were hitched up to show Mr. Harriman how well they could step off a mile, says the Buffalo Enquirer.

Mr. Doble when asked if his consultation with Mr. Harriman had resulted in any programme for Stamboul's work the coming season replied that nothing more could he told now than when the stallion came here. Neither Mr. Harriman nor himself would venture to map out the season's programme at this time. "It would be foolish to do so," he added, "because no one can tell what the effect will be of the change in climate. It is a big change in the life of a horse that had never experienced anything but California weather to bring him here. He is now in first-class condition, and there is every promise that he will develop finely as the season progresses."

Doble is the most conservative of all trainers in his comments upon horses in his care, and what his hope may be for Stamboul he would impart to no one. Mr. and Mrs. Harriman left for the East in a special car in which they traveled here.

Palo Alto Trotters.

Orrin A. Hickok has selected the following Palo Alto trotters to take East:

Azote, b g, 7 years old, record 2:14½ in a fourth heat, by Whips, 2:27½, dam Josie, by Whipple's Hambletonian. Azote is therefore eligible to the 2:15 class.

Advance, b h, 4 years old, record 2:22½ as a three-year-old, by Electioneer, dam Lady Amanda, by imported Hurrah. Advance is entered in $11,000 Spirit of the Times Stakes for four-year-olds, the free-for-all, four-year-olds and the 2:20 classes.

Elden, b f, 4 years old, with a three-year-old record of 2:19½, by Nephew, dam Eleanor, by Electioneer. She is entered and eligible to the same stakes and classes as Advance.

Avena, ch f, 3 years old, with a two-year-old record of 2:19½, by Palo Alto, dam Astoria, by General Benton. She is entered in the stallion representative stake and free-for-all three-year-old stakes.

Altivo, b c, 3 years old, by Electioneer, dam Dame Winnie, by Planet, and is therefore a full brother to the celebrated Palo Alto. He is entered in all the big three-year-old races.

Sweet Rose, b f, 2 years old, with a yearling record of 2:25½, by Electioneer, dam Rosemont, by Piedmont. Entered in the big two-year-old trotting stakes.

Expressive, b f, 2 years old, by Electioneer, dam Esther, and therefore a full sister to Express.

Hickok, besides the Palo Alto string will take East Hulda, 2:14½, Angelina, 2:18½, Adonis, 2:11½, Charley C., 2:18 and Elhendre, by Dexter Prince.

OVER two thousand trotters started to obtain tin-cup records last year, which is the best possible evidence that marks of that character do not mean a great deal. A trotter that with the aid of the kite track and bicycle sulky cannot step a mile in 2:30 against the watch on a still day and with the pole all the way around would not beat a good 2:40 nag in a race. Not so much will be heard of tin-cup records this season as last, and the top of the market in regard to this peculiar phase of the trotting horse industry was reached in 1891. So general has the knowledge of the worthlessness of such performances become, that nowadays a man is ashamed to talk about his stallion getting a record against the watch unless the mile is done in 2:15 or better, and even that is nothing like as good as an old-fashioned race record, when it was first money that the battle was being fought about and every contestant drew a high-wheel sulky. Breeders can make no better resolve, now that the opening of the trotting season is at hand, than to forswear time records of all description.

Swigert 650.

The family of which Swigert, whose death occurred a few weeks ago, was the most distinguished representative, although much less numerous than several others, is one of the oldest and has produced some very superior trotters in each generation. It has all along had quite marked family characteristics. The members of this family have generally been large, well-finished animals of fine style, pleasant dispositions, pure gaited, with often rather excessive knee and hock action. Though for many years most prominent in the South and West, this family originated and first acquired considerable reputation in the North and East.

About 1827 James McNitt, of Salem, Washington Co., N. Y., brought from near Montreal, Canada, a beautiful, large, gray horse, 16 hands high, weighing about 1200 pounds, described as of far more than ordinary beauty, fine style, lofty carriage and excellent trotting action. It is claimed that this horse, though then somewhat along in years, could trot a mile in a little less than three minutes, which was fast for a stallion at that time. He was called European, and was represented as having been imported into Canada from France. He was probably foaled about 1810, and although there is no very positive proof of his importation to Montreal it is not all improbable, but if such was the case he was of entirely different stock from the Norman draught horse of France. This McNitt horse, or "European," as he was named, being quite old when brought to Washington County, probably got very few foals there, and the only one of any special note was the Morse Horse, from a highly bred daughter of Harris' Hambletonian.

The Morse Horse was foaled in 1834. He was also a gray of about the same size, and was owned for several years in Rensselaer County. He was the sire of Gray Eddy, one of the first to take a record of 2:30, and Gen. Taylor, which was taken to California, and proved one of the most famous of long-distance trotters. Gen. Taylor took a 10-mile race record in 1857 of 28.41½, which was the fastest at that date. The same year he took a 30-mile record of 1:47.59, which still stands unbeaten. He is the sire of Controller, which still holds a champion 10-mile race record of 27.23½, and a champion 20-mile wagon record of 58.57. Controller also has a five-mile race record of 13.15½. Daughters of Gen. Taylor are the dams of seven, with records from 2:18 to 2:30, and a few quite good sires and dams.

Norman was the only son of the Morse Horse to achieve any special distinction as a sire. He was a large, brown horse, foaled in 1846. His dam was an excellent mare, concerning the breeding of which there have been at least two different versions, but according to each she was highly bred. Norman was owned for several years near Johnstown, N. Y., and when fourteen years old was purchased by Mr. Alexander and taken to Woodburn, where he died in 1878. He was a large, well-finished, handsome horse, and nearly all who have owned his descendants have regarded this as a very stout and valuable cross.

Among his get were Lula, 2:15, one of the very fastest of her day; May Queen, 2:20; Blackwood, three years, 2:31, which was then the champion three-year-old record; Swigert, foaled the same year; Norma, 2:33, dam of Norval, 2:14½, sire of the champion yearling trotter Norlaine; Norris, 2:22½; Lucy Cuyler, etc. May Queen is the dam of May King, 2:20, and Maiden, 2:23. Lula is the dam of Advertiser, 2:16, one of the leading stallions at Palo Alto. Alice Drake, a daughter of Norman, produced Norman Medium, 2:20, Alice Addison, 2:28½, and Australia, 2:30. Topsy Taylor, another daughter, is the dam of Viola Medium, 2:35, and Storm King, 2:29½, sire of Paragon, 2:13½.

Blackwood was sold to Harrison Durkee, Long Island, N. Y., for $30,000, was fairly successful as a sire, having to his credit Proteine, 2:18; Sutor, 2:21; Blackwood Jr., 2:22½, which in turn is proving quite successful as a sire; Blackwood Prince, 2:23½, and several quite famous broodmares, Four Lions being the dam of Merry Thought, 2:22½; Nemesis, 2:28, and Woodline, 2:19, the latter having to his credit when only four years old the yearling trotter Ella Woodline, 2:29½, no other having had a representative in the 2:30 list at as early an age.

Norman's greatest son, however, was Swigert, and he in several particulars was decidedly the best bred. Swigert, a dark-brown horse, 15½ hands high, bred at Woodburn, was named for the superintendent of that farm, and was purchased when a yearling by Richard Richards, of Racine, Wis., was sold at auction for a comparatively small amount after Mr. Richards' death at the closing-out sale, but was purchased soon after by Frank J. Ayers, of Burlington, Wis., whose property he died March 25, 1893.

Swigert has been to Wisconsin what Blue Bull was to Indiana and Daniel Lambert to the East. Opportunity considered, he has had very few equals. Not only was there marked superiority in the direct male line, but Blandina, his dam, has no superior in number of producing sons, each of which was an excellent individual, King Rene in particular having been sufficiently superior to take numerous prizes in the show ring, and he has also proven a successful sire. Barcana, daughter of Blandina, is in the great broodmare list, having to her credit Alaric and Bayard Wilkes, 2:15, and dam of Diablo, 2:14½.

The Burch Mare, Swigert's second dam, was by Parker's Brown Pilot, a strain which also appears in the pedigree of the champion trotter, Nancy Hanks, and several other superior ones. The Burch Mare won many prizes in the show ring, where it is claimed she was never beaten. She is the dam of Rosalind, 2:21½, Donald, 2:27½, etc.

Swigert now has to his credit thirty-two trotters and two pacers with records from 2:17½ to 2:30. Twenty-two of his sons have representatives in the 2:30 list, and twelve of his daughters have twelve trotters and three pacers to their credit, one of which is the famous Vic H., 2:13. There are many others by Swigert which have been good colt trotters and race-winners in the localities where they have been bred, but which have not yet entered the 2:30 list. Except for broodmares, the Norman strain has never been really popular, and the class of mares bred to Swigert have been, as a rule, far from the best, so that, everything considered, he must certainly be acknowledged as a sire of exceptional merit.—"Vision," in Dunton's Spirit.

W. C. DALY ("Father Bill") has purchased of the Ohio Stable the chestnut gelding Gold Dollar, by imp. Sir Modred—Trade Dollar. This fellow won a good race at Elizabeth, N. J., this week.

HOOF-BEATS.

MONTANA has been declared out of the Suburban Handicap.

THE Salisbury string of trotters will start for the East about the tenth of June.

CUPID's number is 22,872, his brother Sidney Dillon (belonging to Henry Pierce) is registered 23,157.

MATT STORN's string of eleven will arrive in Brooklyn a day or two before the meeting begins in the City of Churches.

LOBASCO trotted thirty-four races during his turf career, and never was behind the money but twice, and eighteen times he finished first.

THE bay mare Quality, by Electioneer, dam McCa, by Almont, grandam Dolly (dam of Director, 2:17, etc.), in W. J. Andrews' string, is stepping fast.

THERE was a meeting of the District Board of Appeals on Thursday evening at the rooms 313 Bush street, to hear testimony in the case of B. D. Phillips, who was expelled at the last meeting of the Breeders' Association.

THE Duke of Beaufort has sent the brown colt Strathrose, by Highland Chief from Queen of the Roses, as his representative in the American Derby at Chicago, June 24th. After the race he will be at once taken to England.

WILDWOOD will not go to Brooklyn, we are informed by Mr. Ottinger, and in all probability will be sent to Chicago to fill his engagements in rich handicaps at Washington Park. The famous horse may go along with the Holly string of flyers.

DAN DENNISON left Bay District track last Wednesday for St. Louis with seventeen thoroughbreds, the property of W. O. B. Macdonough. There are a lot of bread-winners in the lot, and a few that will develop into excellent stake horses. In the latter category we place Fatality, Valencia and Bessie W.

W. M. CORBITT will only send four youngster East this year; Freedom (champion yearling 2:29½), by Sable Wilkes, 2:18, dam Laura Drew, by Arthur-on; Freeland, foal-d 1890, by Sable Wilkes, 2:18, out of Mollie Drew, 2:37 (sixth heat), by Winthrop 505; Chris Langand Double Cross. The pedigrees of the two latter we have not learned.

A NUMBER of strings left this week for St. Louis, Chicago, Brooklyn and other points, among the number being those of Jones & Bybee, and the stables of D. R. Dickey, Matt Storn (bound for Brooklyn), and Charles Kerr. The last-named gentleman's horses went to Sacramento to join the lot being handled by Billy McCormick, and the Kerr and Reed strings leave "The Arcade" for Hawthorne Park, Chicago, about the 20th of May.

GEO. BEMENT, of Oakland, the gentleman who owned Gen. Taylor, and was noted as the first driver of trotting horses in California, was talking about color in horses the other evening and said he had a bay mare by Rustie (gray), dam Mary B. (gray), by Ulster Chief (hay), second dam Highland Mary (gray), by Paddy Magee (gray), he by Gen. Taylor (gray), he by Morse Horse (gray). She must have bred back to Ulster Chief.

IF touts are to be kept out of the grand stand a number of people say that the color line should not be drawn. Last Saturday one of the patrol men became very abusive to Long John Wilkins because he was called upstairs by one of the spectators. There was no necessity for his using such language in the presence of ladies. Long John showed that he was more of a gentleman than the one clothed with authority, who seems to have missed his calling.

JIM LEE, the John Happy-Olive colt that has won a couple of good races this spring at Bay District track, is a remarkable fellow, when it is considered that he was winning when only about twenty-two months old. He will be two years old on the 2d of June. Jim Lee (named after his owner, James Lee Miller, of Oakland), will, with age, like wine, improve, and as he looks a racehorse all over, will be heard from as a frequent winner, or we miss our guess.

THERE is no question as to Don Alonzo starting in the American Derby, as Mr. Dwyer, as well as the Eastern public, believe him to be a sure winner. There is a good deal of reason for this opinion, as he is now in form, shown by his easy victory over Prince George. He is regarded by many as the coming three-year-old. He has a stride like that of Potomac, the winner of both the Futurity and Realization stakes, and his easy gait and action seem well-nigh perfect.

A CHICAGO dispatch dated May 4th says: "Frank Van Ness was to-day reinstated by the Board of Appeals of the American Trotting Association. Van Ness was expelled for entering a horse under an assumed name and out of his class. Van Ness proves that he merely followed instructions, and that the horse had been entered in the race before he was added to the stable of Van Ness. Van Ness is well known in this city, and is principal owner of the great Morello, of Fitzsimmons and other turf celebrities.

A TELEGRAM from Chicago dated last Thursday says: "Trainer Dick Havey with the Fair string of thoroughbreds, including the American Derby candidates Dare and Floodgate, have arrived at Washington Park. The string includes Floodgate, Colorado, Dare, Yo El Rey, Challenge, Elder Smith, Dolly Mack, Princess, Virginia and Gibson. The start was made April 24th at Ogden, Utah. Floodgate and Colorado took cold and were threatened with pneumonia for a time, but came out of their illness all right, and Havey expects to send Floodgate to the post. Interest naturally centers in Dare and Floodgate."

THE Todhunter sale, held last Wednesday at Killip & Co.'s saleyard, Van Ness avenue and Market street, was a success, the prices being very satisfactory. The gem of the sale was the two-year-old colt by Prince of Norfolk, dam Haidee (sister to the Kentucky Derby winner, Joe Cotton), this fellow going to the nod of W. M. Murry, of Sacramento, at $1,100, he bidding, we understand, for A. Gonzales, of this city a young gentleman who is getting together a select string of thoroughbreds. B. C. Holly purchased a bay colt by Prince of Norfolk, dam Amy B., by Ballot Box, for $600. The Intruder—Lady Foster filly was also knocked down to his bid of $400. Another bargain which he secured was a bay colt by Sinfax, dam Minnie B., by Prince of Norfolk, for $300.

The Story of Bronco.

The following, taken from the Chronicle, will be interesting to those who attended last Thursday's races and wished to know why Carter was supplanted by Kelly as rider of Bronco:

The greatest coup of the season was contemplated yesterday, but it did not come off. It was to occur in the fifth race. Bronco was to do the trick. His failure to capture the first money will make an interesting story. In the first place Danny McIntosh dug up Bronco from his obscure home in Inyo county and secured a lease of the horse from McBride, the owner. At the opening of the Blood Horse meeting Bronco surprised the talent by capturing a race in fast time. Just about this time the owner thought that he had another Kingston in the son of Joe Hooker and Laura Winston, and he sold him to a Mr. Rose, also of Inyo county, for fifty head of cattle. Rose's appearance in the saddle at the Blood Horse meeting will long be remembered, and before he left for the ranch he is said to have remarked: "Well, it was worth $250 to find out what a big sucker I was to come to the city to be joshed by a lot of jockeys."

H. C. Gercken then purchased Bronco, paying something like $3,000 for the embryo Kingston. The horse was turned over to Jack Garrity to train, and a once famous jockey of California was secured to ride Bronco in yesterday's race. The matter was kept very secret. Sam Carter was the jockey retained to ride Bronco to victory. It is some half a dozen years since Carter has been in the saddle, as he became too heavy to continue riding. At all events, Carter promised to be ready to ride at 124 pounds. He ran out to the Cliff House several times and took Turkish baths by the dozen, and there was great rejoicing when the stable found out that Carter would be able to ride at the weight. At last the eventful race came around and Bronco was played to win a small-sized fortune. The names of the jockeys were posted up and the judges asked one another who Carter was that was hallettined to ride Bronco. They held a confab and concluded that it would be a good scheme to put up some jockey on Bronco who was better known to fame than Carter. Accordingly Mike Kelly was sent for and was instructed to ride Bronco. The owner of Bronco was mad, very mad. He swore in two languages and said that he would not allow his horse to start. It was rather rough after securing a crack jockey to have him pulled down because the judges were in doubt in regard to his ability as a rider, especially as Carter several years ago rode for Baldwin, Winters, Haggin and other crack California stables. He rode Duchess of Norfolk in the Derby, and has piloted such horses as Gano, Ferida and Jim Douglass to victory, yet he was not permitted to ride Bronco in a "skate" race. Gercken now says that the judges burnt up his good money by substituting riders, but that the laugh is on them.

Starters Should Give the Wherefores.

Secretary Crickmore, of the Monmouth Park Association, makes a suggestion that ought to be agreeable to everybody connected with the turf. There is too little system and method in the conduct of American race tracks. The starter, for instance, has not felt it incumbent on him to mention to anyone occurrences at the post of an ordinary nature, such as the fining of a jockey for disobedience, or his suspension for impertinence or rascality of some kind.

The mere fact that so-and-so is put down is reported in the course of time, but the public seldom learns the reason why. Matters occur at the post which even the secretary and judges know nothing about, but concerning which they should be informed immediately. It is not the starter's fault that this is so. It is the fault of the system. The judges are in the same boat as the starter. They often do things as a mere matter of routine which nobody seems to think worth reporting for the edification of the public.

Mr. Crickmore thinks that the people who support racing are entitled to all the news of the track, and he would arrange matters so that they can get it.

He believes that the calendar of the English Jockey Club should be followed in this respect.

If a jockey gives offense to a starter, and is fined or suspended, the full particulars should go on record. There is no reason for keeping such things from the eye of the public. Of course, no effort is made to do that; the trouble is that the Board of Control has not thought it necessary or interesting to publish such trifles. Mr. Crickmore's suggestion is a good one. Everything that happens should be reported, and the local club would do well to bear Mr. Crickmore's suggestion in mind.

The Original Kiang Horse.

A small party of French men of science, which included Prince Henry of Orleans and M. Bonvalot, lately returned from a journey of exploration through the vast and almost uninhabited regions of Central Asia. The expedition brought back several stuffed specimens of rare animals found in that part of the world, and among them a specimen of the hemoine, or Kiang horse. This animal probably approaches as near to the primitive horse as any now found in a wild state.

The home of the Kiang horse is the high plateau of Chinese Turkestan, between Lake Lob Nor and the mountainous region of Thibet. This plateau is covered with a growth of grass, upon which the wild horses graze. The climate is very cold, the mercury in winter sinking to forty degrees below zero.

The Kiang horse is a shaggy, unkempt-looking animal, having somewhat the aspect of a donkey, except as to tail and ears. It is, however, a genuine horse, having rather delicate legs and feet, and ears by no means resembling those of a donkey or mule.

The color of the head and of the upper part and sides of the body is a reddish tan, shading to a bay, and though his color grows lighter from above downward, it contrasts strikingly with the pure white of the animal's belly and the inner side of the forelegs.

Along the spine runs a well defined stripe of thick, blackish-brown hair, extending to the root of the tail. The hair is long and shaggy, and adapts the horse to living in a cold country.

The Kiangs, like all other wild horses, live in bands of 100 to 200 individuals, each presided over by an old male. The leader gives the signal when any danger approaches.

Mr. Robert Bonner Speaks of Shoeing.

There can be no doubt that it pays to look after one's horses, not only from a humanitarian point of view, but from its practical business side. The horse, properly fed, properly cared for, and above all, properly shod, will look better, work better, and if in the market will sell better. It is only under the refining influences of civilization that men and horses are shod. The way it is generally done adds credit and luster to his often difficult feat of keeping his legs.

All owners should superintend and criticize work done for their horses, says the New York Herald, for grooms, stablemen and blacksmiths, as a rule, are the most careless and yet most astute shirkers of their duty. Every horse lover admits that the crying evil of the day in the equine world is had shoeing or ignorant and slovenly blacksmithing. Such an exquisite piece of mechanism as the horse's foot can be most cruelly tortured by the mistake of one-hundredth of an inch, and yet most smiths hack and chop it as if it were all as hard as steel, whereas, the only really hard part is the outer shell.

After careful survey of the horses last week an expert veterinarian said: "Eight out of every ten horses that passed me were not properly shod and did not go freely. Under existing circumstances nearly every horse has at least one foot that he 'favors,' and that foot's uneasy because of the blacksmith's carelessness. Every one of the feet ought to come down with a firm, even stroke, and ring out clear and true."

When a certain science is a passion with a man, when he has lovingly and conscientiously devoted thirty years of hard study to it, when he possesses every hook written on the subject in any part of the world and sleeps with them in reach of his bed, that man knows whereof he speaks, and his opinion is worth having. All this applies to Mr. Robert Bonner, who probably knows more about horses' feet and horseshoeing than any man living.

"In the first place," said the owner of Maud S. and Sunol the great secret of successful shoeing is—keep the foot level. A true hoof is usually a sound hoof, and this simple rule is universally ignored. Keep the foot level; there is the condensed lore of a hundred veterinary colleges in that sentence.

"Now, as to the dreaded navicular disease. No man can tell, or ever will be able to tell, whether a horse has navicular disease or not unless he dissects the foot. Fully two-thirds of the alleged navicular diseases are merely sufferings caused by improper shoeing." Why when Dr. Lewis A. Sayre brought his handsome mare, Fanny Miller, to me she had been lame for months. I examined her, drove her to the blacksmith's and had her shoes taken off, her hoof trimmed and the shoes reset. The mare was all right immediately and has never taken a lame step since, yet before that one of the most prominent veterinarians in the city advised Dr. Sayre to get rid of her, as he said she would never be well again.

"There's another point upon which the veterinary authorities unanimously agree, and upon which they are entirely wrong.

"That's a sweeping statement, isn't it? But it is truth itself.

Professor Williams, even, the British text book writer, errs with the rest when he says that if you raise the heels of a horse's shoes you raise the animal's ankle, and if you raise the toe you depress the ankle. I've proved that it's wrong over and over again. Anyone reading their theory would think it reasonably and apparently correct, but when you get the bones of a horse's leg, from the knee down, and test the theory, you will see at once that it is and must be fallacious from the conformation of the horse's bones. Therefore, when you raise the heel you depress the ankle, and when you raise the toe you raise the ankle also, all the colleges and gilded faculties in the world notwithstanding.

"About spavin? Well, here's my opinion regarding it. It's far too common, and is brought about by the cruel and gross neglect on the part of the people whose duty it is to look after horses. It is absolutely impossible—absolutely impossible—for a horse to throw out a spavin unless he is too long in the toe. The prevention, therefore, is the easiest of matters.

"A general misconception is the popular impression that a running or trotting horse lands on the ground flat-footed. This should be corrected, for a man should know exactly how the foot works. In both running and trotting, as the foot lands, first the heel strikes the ground, then the toe—two distinct motions, and so wonderfully quick that the foot seems to land flat.

"I repeat and emphasize the point—keep the horse's foot level. For instance, strained tendons are most common, and the horse is obliged to limp, the pain is so great, and there can be no pleasure in riding or driving a horse that is suffering at every step he takes. The most common cause of distress is the fact of one side of the shoe being higher than the other. This strains the sesamoid ligament on the low side. The average veterinarian will bathe and blister for this. The absurdity of this is evident, for until the strain is removed from that ligament, all the bathing and blistering in the world won't cure.

"Yes, as you say, many people want to know how a saddle horse should be shod. Use a smooth shoe on him, one without calks. Have the foot leveled properly, and do not go at any pace except a walk on paved streets; when on mother earth then it's time enough to extend your steed.

"A horse should have its weight evenly suspended, and none of the sole should touch the ground. The foot is elastic and contracts and expands, the frog being especially porous and elastic. Anything that tends to bind the foot is undesirable. The trouble is, very few blacksmiths understand the conformation and structure of the horse's foot, and how can they fit a shoe under such circumstances? He tries to shoe all horses exactly alike, and makes no allowances for differences of conformation, which, though of the highest importance, are by him regarded as unworthy of notice."

THE great race horse Tournament, by imp. Sir Modred, out of Plaything, by Alarm, has been declared out of the Suburban Handicap, and the probabilities are that he will never race again. He was given a thorough trial but found not able to stand training. Immediately after declaring him out of the Suburban Tournament was shipped to Kentucky, and is now out at Dr. E. M. Norwood's place, Hazleton Stock Farm, near this city. He will wear than likely be put in the stud. He is a fine individual, well bred, and at one time was a great race horse, so he should be a successful sire.

THE KISBER STUD, HUNGARY.

Hungary and Its Peoples—Description of the Famous Sires and Mares in the Government Stud—Interesting Facts Gathered by Our Correspondent.

(Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY, March 20, 1893.—A large number of people know there is such a place as Hungary, but very few have an idea of its location, population, government, soil or resources, so if it would not be taking up too much space before describing the famous stock farm, or stud, as we call it here, I will give an outline of this thickly populated place. Hungary occupies a portion of central Europe, and consists for the most part of a large, fertile and generally well-wooded plain watered by the Danube and its affluents. To the north and east this plain is bounded by the Carpathian Mountains, while on the west it impinges upon the provinces of Moravia, Styria and Lower Austria. To the south the course of the Danube and its tributary, the Save, mark the line of its Turkish frontier. Hungary has an area of 82,867 square miles. It is rich in mines of the precious metals, iron, copper and coal, besides it teems with agricultural wealth, growing large crops of cereals, hemp, tobacco, etc. Its wines, especially those of Tokay, are of excellent quality. There is a population of 14,234,205, consisting of a number of races; there are at least seven distinct ones, viz: The Magyars (Hungarians proper), Slovaks, Croats, Rusniaks, Jews, Germans and Wallachs. The Magyars were originally an Asiatic race that subdued the Avari, the holders of the land in 894, nearly 1,000 years ago. Six years after, under Arpad, their chief, they formed a monarchy under Stephen I (surnamed the Saint). For four centuries it flourished under the rule of the Magyars, but in 1526, the Turks invaded the country and then the Austrian government assumed control in 1570, and until 1848, every one was loyal to that dynasty. The Magyars have been struggling in defense of their country against Turks, Russians and Tartars for almost a thousand years, and as a people they are considered the most peculiar in all Europe. As a nation they have always had the best horsemen and best cavalry in Europe, and perhaps in the world, but they knew little or nothing about horseracing, as conducted in England, until about the third decennium of our century.

Count Szecheny was then traveling in England. He was invited to see the races between the thoroughbreds, and became so infatuated with the sport, that on his return to Budapest, the capital of Hungary, he inaugurated similar races. The prizes were small and often very ridiculous, for instance, a sword adorned with precious stones. Racing became an amusement for the noblemen only, but in 1848 the war of independence came, and the Magyars were conquered, their allies, Austria and Russia, triumphed. Many leaders, generals, officers and deputies were executed, and their property confiscated. Large numbers emigrated to England, France and America, and during these years of national grief, all thoughts of horse racing were dispelled.

Count Bathany some years before the war founded a large stock farm which he called the Kisber stud. Here he bred some thoroughbreds of a very high class. After the war he emigrated and by confiscation the stud became the property of the Austrian government, where horses were bred for the Austrian cavalry, remounts, as they are called here. Eighteen years after the war Austria was vanquished by the French and Italians, and to save Austria's position a reconciliation was arranged with the Hungarians, the Emperor Francis Joseph being crowned King of Hungary, the Hungarians received their autonomy, parliament, etc., the emigrants were recalled and their confiscated property as far as possible returned; order, discipline and peace reigned throughout the country.

With the dawn of peace came the desire for amusement. All thoughts of the bitter conflict must be eradicated, consequently racing became the popular sport of the community. Meetings were arranged, mares, stallions and yearlings were imported from England, and the breeding of thoroughbreds extended. Count Bathany died and his heirs sold the Kisber stud to the Hungarian government, the officials of which at that time were buying broodmares and colts of the first-class in England; in a few years the Kisber stud became famous as the largest and most important one in Europe. Kisber is (by rail) four hours ride from Budapest, and five hours from Vienna. It is situated upon an extensive sandy plain and the breeding establishment occupies about 15,000 English acres.

One of the first sires brought to Kisber was the celebrated Buccaneer, son of Wild Dayrell and the Little Red Rover mare. He was purchased for 2,200 guineas in England and for twenty-two years was the premier stallion or, as we call it, the Sultan of the Kisber Harem. We might say he laid the foundation of the thoroughbred blood to which is due the reputation which the horses from Hungary have enjoyed during the past twenty-five years. Some years after his importation an offer of 25,000 guineas was made for him by a Mr. Stephenson, but the government refused, and Buccaneer remained at Kisber. His best sons in England were Berserker and See-Saw; in Hungary among others he was the sire of Kisber (named after the stud), who won the Middle Park Plate, English Plate and Grand Prix de Paris. Kisber has a daughter called Fairy Rose on Scentor Leland Stanford's farm in California that is the dam of Racine and Fairy. There is a brother to Kisber's now located at the Kisber stud, Buccaneer is also sire of Vedreno, Vinca, a winner of the Derby at Vienna, besides being the sire of many winners; Waisenknabe (sire of the winner of the German Derby, Stronziann), and Triumph.

One of the best and most promising younger sons of Buccaneer is Fenek, who once won for Count Pestetich, the Vienna Derby and in a canter the Union Stakes at Berlin beating the nearest of his competitors forty lengths. Other good sons of this great son of Wild Dayrell were Balzann, Jacob, Ugod, Fillbuster, Young Buccaneer, Good Hope, Pirat, etc. Buccaneer died in 1887 at the age of thirty years and during his twenty-two years of service at Kisber he was bred to 260 mares of the stud and over 500 belonging to other owners. During the time he was here the other stallions in use were Teddington, Chief Justice, Bois Roussel and Ostregor; these covered all the half-bred mares in the stud, consequently they had very little influence in the breeding of the thoroughbreds.

In 1872 the government gave 6,000 pounds sterling to Lord

Stamford for the stallion Cambuscan, son of Newminster and The Arrow (sire of Idalia, the dam of your imported Australian horse, Sir Modred and Cbeviot). Cambuscan was another good acquisition and sired the good mare Kincsem. She was, perhaps, the best mare of her age, and won fifty-four races and never was beaten. In England she won the Goodwood Cup; in France, the Grand Prix de Deauville, besides more than twenty races in Germany, amongst them the Jubilee prize of Baden Baden three times in succession. During once in her entire career, in a jubilee event, the Count Henckel's Prince Giles I ran a dead heat with her; some said it was in consequence of foul riding. In the deciding heat another jockey was placed on her, and she beat her rival in a canter by six lengths, and her glory was saved. Cambuscan had, before he left England, a very good son, Camballo, who in turn, was the sire of The Lambkin (winner of the Doncaster St. Leger) and Eurasian. Cambuscan's best sons in Hungary were Pasztor, winner of the Budapest St. Leger, Czimer, Milon, Cambusier and Kethely.

The third great stallion of Kisber was Verneuil, the costliest horse ever imported to Hungary. A massive chestnut was this mighty son of Mortimer and Regalia, and his cost was 9,000 guineas. He was bred in 1874 by Mons. Lefevre, at the Charmant Stud in France, and was an excellent stayer, and won many races in England and France. He was one of the most productive of sires, his fertility was on an average of seventy-five per cent. with thoroughbred and seventy per cent. with half-bred mares. He died in 1890 of acute peritonitis, and his death was a great loss to the Government. Verneuil's temper of late years had not been of the most agreeable and gentle kind, and I remember he made visitors climb the trees in his paddock more than once. His progeny were generally "late" horses; they showed their best form seldom as two-year-olds, but later on they were remarkably fast, all having good constitutions. The best of them were the horses Metallesh, Goliath, Muvers, Pajzan, Trick Track and the mares Zomancz, Cintra, etc.

Rnperra (a son of Adventurer and Lady Morgan) was another sire of whom we expected much, but although a distinguished performer in England he had a very delicate constitution and died at an early age. He left two sons, Rajta Rajta and Achilles II., both of these won the Vienna Derby, but they inherited the delicate constitution of their sire.

The fourth great sire was the famous Doncaster, sire of Bend O'r, sire of Ormond the great stallion that will soon be seen in the evergreen paddocks of California. Doncaster was called the sweet and shapely son of Sockwell and Marigold, by Teddington. He was purchased for 15,000 guineas from the Duke of Westminster. Although he died last year, he never seemed to lose his charming conformation that was so noticeable when he won the Derby, Ascot and Goodwood Cups.

In the list of Hungarian winning stallions he always held a prominent place, but unfortunately he never sired but few prominent sons. One was Kincsor, a good son of the grand mare Kincsem. This horse died a few hours before the Hamburg Derby was run; he was the favorite. The other son was Prince II., an excellent stayer, now four years old, who will win, I hope, some very good races this year. Now let us look at the present list at Kisber.

The youngest stallion there is Gaga (Galopin—Red Hot). He was bred by Count E. Bathany, and won the Vienna Derby for him last year. He is a powerfully built bay horse and will only be bred to a limited number of mares, some twenty in all, at 500 florins ($250) and his book is filled already.

The chestnut black spotted Craig Millar (Blair Athol—Miss Roland) is a Doncaster St. Leger winner bought for 6,000 guineas from Mr. Hume Webster. His fee has been placed at 400 florins ($200), but his book is still open. Very few thoroughbred mares will be bred to him this year, as his progeny has not proven to be of the best; most of them are "soft" and like short distances. Craig Millar has lost the confidence of breeders, consequently if his book is filled it will be with the names of half-bred mares.

There is another, a later importation, called Sweetbread (Brown Bread—Peffar) which was bought from Lord Gerard. The breeders have lost confidence in him, also, so the stud has leased him to Count Eszterhazy for the moderate sum of 2,000 florins ($1,000) per annum, and he is now standing in the Count's stud at Tata.

A long-neglected but now favored one is Sunnersburg (by Hermit—Hippia, by King Tom; Hippia is a full sister to Hippolyta, dam of Fairy Rose, now at Palo Alto); he was purchased for the moderate sum of 2,000 guineas by the late Mr. Cavaliero from Baron Rothschild. His list at $200 is full; thirty-four mares owned by private parties will be bred to him, among them being Haweswater, Italy, British Queen, besides six mares belonging to the stud, so that he will have forty thoroughbreds and three half-breds to cover. His progeny are all fast, and can go over a distance of ground.

Salaor (by Isonomy—Fideline), at $150, has thirty-four private mares, four belonging to the Kisber stud and six half-breds. He was bred in France by Mons. A. Lysin, and was bought for 4,000 guineas by Mr. Lucerenbacher on behalf of the stud. Salaor was a good race horse—reliable, strong and very game. He won many races, beating, amongst others, Le Lancy, one of the best horses ever bred in France. Amongst the mares sent to him are three from Russia. His stock, now yearlings, are very promising, and some of the mares booked to him belong to the highest class of thoroughbreds.

Kisber-Ocse was bred at the Kisber Stud. He is full brother to the Epsom Derby winner, Kisber, now standing at Harsburg, Germany, being by Buccaneer, out of Mineral. He was a more promising colt than his brother, having greater length below, a shorter back and better limbs, but owing to an accident he never appeared on a track. His service fee is $150, and there are thirty-six outside mares, four of the stud and seventeen half-breds belong to the stud to be stunted to him this year.

Pasztor (by Cambuscan—Lady Patroness), is another favored young sire. Bred in Hungary by Mr. Blaskovics, he won several good races besides the Budapest St. Leger. He is a powerful-built chestnut, showing great quality. His book at $150 is well filled, having the names of six thoroughbreds and seventeen half-breds of the stud, besides seventeen from other owners, including two famous mares from Russia.

The other stallions of Kisber are young horses of second rate, still we hope some of them will become prominent as sires. They are Baldear, by Doncaster, out of Freia, at $100; Metallist, by Verneuil, out of Metallique, at $50; Montbar, by Buccaneer, out of Dulart, at $50; Biro, by Sunnersburg, out of Birdce, at $50; Edgar, by Ostregor, out of Veile, at $50, and Filou, by Sunnersburg, out of Fidget, at $50.

The stud has twenty-eight thoroughbred mares and 154 half-breds. Amongst the former are Peffar, a grand old mare by Adventurer, out of Caller Ou, and she is still a beauty; Snapshot, by General Peel, out of a mare by Weatherbit; Gaydene, by Albert Victor, out of Flora Macdonald, by Scottish Chief, a good race mare and the dam of many winners in England; Nyl, by Hermit, out of Nyl Gau, a lovely mare. There is Duchess of Edinburgh, not a very old mare, although she looks aged. She is a full sister to Prince Charlie; she is the dam of Advocate, Equity, Pettitot and Hopscotch. There are many other mares of note in the paddocks of this famous farm.

The annual unreserved sale of yearlings is held in May during the Budapest meeting, and a singular feature to be seen at the sale is that every yearling is loosened when led to the rostrum and allowed to gallop around the large ring for the benefit of the buyers. This is done before the bidding actually begins. At the sale last year there were sixteen yearlings sold. The highest prices received were for Marigold, by Bend Or—Miss Maria, $4,025, to the Baron Springer; Ambassador, by Verneuil—Apollinaris, $3,550, to Mr. Pecky; Vignano, by Minting—Fortune's Wheel, $2,750, to Mr. Szemere; Adonis, by Craig Millar—Altona, $2,325, to Mr. Pecky; filly by Doncaster—L' Eclair, $1,725, to Mr. Schindler; Petiotte, by Craig Millar—Maria Galante, $1,525, and Vicomtesse, by Kisher Ocse—Verbena, $1,425; the others did not reach $1,000. The average ranges annually from $1,500 to $1,000, considering the circumstances, a very good one.

I will send you accounts of other studs of the Government, besides some private breeding establishments, at some other time. There is a growing interest among the people in Central Europe regarding the great horses in America that are making their sires famous, and any information I can send to your able and enthusiastic journal will be forwarded to you cheerfully.

RENSOR.

Sires From "Unknown" Dams.

The recent establishment of the fact that the dam of George Wilkes was a mare of unknown pedigree adds a star of the first magnitude to the list of great sires whose dams were of obscure lineage. Apropos of this interesting fact memory recalls the trotting progenitors whose pride of blood is paternal alone. The first you note is Alexander's Abdallah, "dam Katy Darling, pedigree unknown." She was a good mare and doubtless carried clean blood, but history fails to record the lines. Her son will always rank in the records as one of the most prepotent of the foundation sires of the trotting breed, and there are many who stoutly maintain that the line that comes through the sire of Almont, Belmont and Goldsmith Maid is the most productive of the Hambletonian branches. Black Hawk, the trotting progenitor of Vermont, was out of a mare of unknown blood but reputed speed, and his greatest son, the pure-gaited and handsome Ethan Allen, came from a mare of unknown breeding but also of reputed speed. Henry Clay, the founder of the Clay family, was out of "the trotting mare Surrey, pedigree unknown," and his best son, the original Cassius M. Clay, was out of Jersey Kate, the mare of undiscovered lineage that produced the old-time trotter John Anderson. The dam of Edward Everett, the sire of Judge Fullerton, is given as "said to be by imp. Margrave," but her pedigree has really never been established. Wood's Hambletonian was out of a roan mare of unknown but such potent blood that it controlled the color of her son and stands itself upon his descendants to the third and fourth generation. Topsy, the mare that produced Hambletonian Mambrino, 2:21½, the sire of Wild Rake, came from the ranks of the "unknown," and the dam of Mambrino Chief, the family next in rank to that of Hambletonian, came out of "the mists of the West." Ericsson, the champion four-year-old of thirty years ago, had a dam with a name and a reputation, but no pedigree. Magna Charta, the noted foundation sire of Michigan, was the son of a mother who belonged to the equine canaille, and Pilot Jr., the founder of that great producing broodmare line, came of undefined maternal blood. Smuggler, the one-time stallion champion, conqueror of Goldsmith Maid and the radiant comet of an historic season, was the son of a pacing mare whose blood "came from the woods," and so the list might be far extended were sires of humbler reputation embraced.

A point in this connection that should not be forgotten is that almost all these mares whose sons proved successful are found upon investigation to have been good individuals, animals some of them of speed, and mostly all of forceful organization. The fact that their blood is unknown should not be construed to mean that it was necessarily base; on the contrary the merit that came from them argues that in their veins must have flowed strains good if unknown to fame. But the sires from unknown dams are the sires of a past day. Everything has had a beginning, and the trotting breed was necessarily founded upon the individual merit and success that creates pride of lineage in the descendants. The "royal blood of all the Howards" was not always royal, and if you trace either the most exclusive racing or trotting lines to their source, you find at the further end a great plebeian. The further away from the plebeian the better the blood, for good blood generation after generation rises upward and onward by "the gravitation of natural fitness." In the Year Book of the future, as in the racing calendar of to-day, the word "unknown" will be itself practically unknown. In the younger racing breed the history of the older will repeat itself, and though we are not yet far away from the foundation, the day is not distant when a flaw in a trotting pedigree within five or six generations will be regarded a bar sinister just as in the thoroughbred domain.—Horseman.

FLOODGATE, Charles L. Fair's great son of Flood and imp. Rosetta, it turns out was not as sick at Ogden as first reported, for the colt and balance of the string left Saturday and were in fair shape on their arrival at Cheyenne Monday. Floodgate is considered the most lively bidder for American Derby honors from California by those who should know whereof they shout. Dare is speedy, but is not thought to like the route very well.

COMANCHE, a Rancho del Paso-bred colt, by Sir Modred—Ethel, won a six-furlong race at Elizabeth, N. J., April 26th, defeating Nicc, Gold Dollar (another Californian), White Rose, Harvest Hammie and Barefoot, who finished in the order named. The time, 1:15½, was excellent, time of year considered.

Our Thoroughbreds.

Col. S. D. Bruce writes thus in defense of our American thoroughbreds:

Glencoe left but few males, as he, like Diomed, was more famous through the female than male line. Diomed got no winner of the Derby or St. Leger, which "St. George" regards as the only requisite of a successful stallion. How, then, about St. Simon? Although unbeaten, he never won either of these events, and he has been at the head of the list of winning sires for the past three years. Isonomy did not win either event, yet he sired Sea Breeze, winner of the Oaks and St. Leger, and Common, winner of the Two Thousand Guineas, Derby and St. Leger. Hampton, an ex-selling-plater, won neither event, yet sired Ayrshire, winner of the Two Thousand Guineas and Derby, Merry Hampton, winner of the Derby, etc. Springfield did not win either event, but is sire of Sainfoin, winner of the Derby. Sterling won neither event, but is the sire of Paradox, Enterprise and Enthusiast, winners of the Two Thousand Guineas, and Harvester, winner of the Derby. Wisdom never won a race nor won either of these events. Buccaneer, Master Kildare, Bendigo, Adventurer, Melbourne, Voltaire, Rataplan, Speculum and Bertram did not win either event, yet all these sired winners of one or more of the events. Bertram sired Robert the Devil, winner of the Derby and Grand Prize of Paris. Buccaneer, Kisher, winner of the same two events, and Formosa, winner of the Oaks and St. Leger. Master Kildare got Melton, winner of the Derby and St. Leger. King Tom got Tormentor, Hippia and Hannah, Oaks winners; Hannah also won the St. Leger, and Kingcraft, winner of the Derby. Melbourne got West Australian, winner of the Two Thousand Guineas, and both the Derby and St. Leger; Blink Bonny, winner of the Oaks and Derby, and Sir Tatton Sykes, winner of the St. Leger. Voltaire got Voltigeur, winner of the Derby and St. Leger, and Charles XII., winner of the St. Leger, and from Voltaire in direct male line descend Galopin and St. Simon. It is worthy of note that a decided majority of the horses which won the two great events of the English turf, the Derby and St. Leger, were gotten by stallions which did not win either event, viz.: Iroquois, West Australian, Voltigeur and Melton. Diomed is not the only stallion that won the Derby that has no male line descendant in England. What has become of those from Young Eclipse 1781, Assassin 1782, Saltram 1783, Sergeant 1784, Aimwell 1785, Noble 1786, Sir Thomas 1788, Skyscraper 1789, Rhadamathus 1790, Eager 1791, John Bull 1792, Dædalus 1794, Spread Eagle 1795, and a host of others? Diomed's sons in America were Sir Archy, the Godolphin of America; Florizel, a superior racehorse, never beaten; Potomac, second to no horse of his day; Duroc, who won races as good as any horse in his day, and got American Eclipse and many valuable broodmares, Ving'un, Hamiltonian, Duchess of Marlborough, Hanie's Maria and the dams of Henry, Shylock, Cicero, etc. In England Diomed got Young Noisette, the dam of Navigator, Clermont, Marmion, etc., Young Giantess, dam of Sorcerer and Eleanor, the first mare that ever won the Oaks and Derby, and the dam of Muley, the sire of imp. Leviathan, Margrave, Muley Moloch, The Little Known, Marpessa (the granddam of Stockwell, Rataplan, etc.), Morgiana (the dam of Sheet Anchor), Julia (dam of Phantom, Lydia and Cressida, the dam of imp. Priam). It would seem his blood is valuable in England to this day in the female lines. Sir Archy got Sumpter, Rattler, Sir William of Transport, Contention, Bertrand, Pacific, Stockholder, Sir Charles, Director, Gohanna, Timoleon, Virginian, Marion, the good mares Vanity, Reality, Lady Lightfoot, Firtilla, Gabriella, Lady Burton, etc. These, or nearly all, were superior racehorses, and as good as the best of their day in England. Timoleon was a good racehorse and sire of Boston, a superior one, who challenged the best racehorses of England to run one race in America and one in England for $50,000 a side, which was declined, and again to run him four miles against any number of horses they might import, the owner of Boston betting $50,000 to $40,000 and allowing them to name their horses at the post. This was also declined. Boston got Lecompte, Lexington, Red Eye, Ringgold, Madeline, the granddam of Iroquois; Nina, dam of Planet, Exchequer, etc. He defeated all comers, and when nine years old and in the stud was beaten by Fashion, four-mile heats, in 7:32, 7:45, the fastest and best races run up to that date in the world.

In this race Boston carried 126 pounds. Lexington was the best race horse of his day and the best stallion that ever stood in America. His daughters and granddaughters have made the reputation of all the imported stallions in our day, many of them failures in England, upon the best producing families, and his sons who have had a chance in the stud have left a brilliant record, and could the best of them have been in England, would have won the Derby or St. Leger. In the male line to Diomed are found such successful stallions as Joe Hooker, son of Monday, by Colton, by Lexington; Bishop, by Shannon, by Monday; Argyle, sire of Fairy, by Monday; Grinstead, by Gilroy, by Lexington; Uncas and Wanderer, by Lexington; Tom Ochiltree, sire of Major Domo; Pat Malloy, sire of Favor. The get of these will compare favorably with the get of any of the English stallions mentioned by "St. George," in proportion to the number of colts sired by each, and none of the pedigrees are manufactured, as the great authority intimates, and are as well authenticated as those to be found in the English Stud-Book, and as free from error. America is a great country, reaching from ocean to ocean, while England is not as large as the State of New York. Her noblemen have been breeding for over 200 years, and feeding to the hounds all the animals possessing no individuality, except when they could send them to America or other gullible nations. Falsetto and Emperor, sons of Enquirer, are decided successes in the stud. Jils Johnson, Leonatus and Long Taw, sons of Longfellow, are successes. The Bard and Linden promise well. None of the sons of Eolus are old enough to show their quality, but Elkwood and Eon, from their high-racing qualities, promise well. Eolus has sired many first-class race horses, and his son, Morello, was the best two-year-old of the year. Long Taw will probably leave a worthy son in Don Alonzo, while Powhattan, Onondaga and Sensation will doubtless hand down the Lexington blood unimpaired. Can any stallion in England show so many worthy representatives of this blood? Iroquois, at the head of winning sires this year, promises to leave a son worthy of him, if he is not already done so, in Tammany. King Alfonso is a success, judging by Foxhall, King Lee, Fonso, a good sire, Joe Cotton, etc. The best sons of Revenue and Mahomet perished in our civil war. In mentioning that there is no producing grandson of any imported sire, "St. George" omits Glencoe, whose son Vandal got Virgil, the sire of the unbeaten Tremont; Hindoo, the sire of the mighty Hanover, whom every unprejudiced man must admit was good enough to win the Derby; Ventilator, a successful stallion; Voltigeur, now dead, and Vanderhill, both successes.

There are male winners of the Two Thousand Guineas, Derby and St. Leger, foaled from 1800 to date, 210. Of this number only forty-five were able to sire a winner of the One Thousand Guineas, Two Thousand Guineas, Derby, Oaks, or St. Leger, whereas 106 sires that were not able to figure in these events as winners claim paternity of the winners. We will only speak of the non-crowned division.

Birdstcher, Adventurer, Camel, Hampton, Isonomy, Sterling, King Tom, Langar, Liverpool, Lottery, Melbourne, Pantaloon, Rataplan, Rosicrucian, St. Simon, Scottish Chief, Selim, Sir Hercules, Sterling, Sorcerer, Springfield, Sultan, Sweetmeat, Toxophilite, Tramp, Voltaire, Weatherbit and Wisdom. Are they inferior or superior to the winners? Facts are stubborn things.

The other statement that the winners of the great stake events in the last ten years are about equally divided between native and imported sires, and that the native sires in use outnumber the imported ones in ratio of ten to one, is not true. In the last ten years 453 stake events have been run; of these 282 were won by the get of native sires and 171 by the get of imported sires. If we deduct Richmond, Pontiac and The Admiral, that won four stakes, the proportion is 281 to 167; this shows the fallacy of the statement. Lexington's daughter Sprightly made Billet, Diomed's granddaughter Nantura and Lexington's daughters Fanny Holton and Lida made Leamington. St. Blaise got his best son, Potomac, from Sultana, a daughter of Leqington. The Lexington blood made Rayon d'Or, Phaeton, Glenelg, and in fact every imported horse that has figured conspicuously in the last twenty years, and no unprejudiced student of the stud book and racing statistics will stultify himself by stating to the contrary. The Diomed blood is still a potent factor in both England and America, and but for the cultivated prejudice of Americans against native sires we will yet expect the blood necessary to build up and strengthen the English racehorse sent from America.

The Value of Horses.

The sooner the farmers in the United States realize the fact that the ordinary and commonly-bred horse is likely to deteriorate in value year by year, the better it will be for them. The use of cables to drag street cars has already reduced the service performed by horses in the cities, and the extension of the trolley system in the suburbs and the perfection of electric motors will relieve many other thousands of horses from such service. It has not been so very long since nearly all the threshing was done by horses; now only a very small percentage of even the threshing machines are worked by horse-power. Practically all of the ploughing is now done by horses; but a cheap and practical steam plough will be shown to visitors to the World's Fair, and it is not improbable that in ten years from now quite a large percentage of ploughing will be done without the aid of horse. The need in the cities and on the farms for fewer horses will tend more and more to reduce their market value. Commonly-bred horses will be the first to deteriorate in price; indeed it is doubtful whether finely-bred horses will suffer at all. There is no reason why they should. The purposes for which they are used will not be affected by any inventions revolutionizing methods of transportation or tillage. Even though we could fly in the air with a balloon entirely under control, a spin on the road behind a pair of trotters or a gallop across country would give lust as much pleasure as ever it gave. The horses who get the blue ribbons in the horse shows will continue to be as valuable as ever, while humbler animals—those that drag street cars and ploughs—will be less valuable year by year.

This increase in value has already been noted, so far as farm animals are concerned, by the statisticians of the United States Department of Agriculture. In 1892 the average value of a farm horse in the United States was $65.01, and of a mule $75.55; in 1893 the average farm horse is worth only $61.22, and the mule $70.68. Here is a depreciation of $3.79 in horses and $4.87 in mules. Notwithstanding the fact that there are 708,662 more horses and 16,429 more mules on the farms this year than last, the total value of the horses and mules has depreciated more than twenty-five million dollars. This is very hard indeed on the farmers. Though they have to feed more than seven hundred thousand more horses and mules than the year before, the stock in the market is not worth as much as it was the year before by more than $25,000,000. That sum does not really represent the loss, for the horses are eating all the while, and a source of continuous expense. Had this increase in the number of horses been entirely of those that were well-bred, the value of the farm horses would probably have appreciated instead of decreased, and the books would have shown a profit instead of a loss.

A well-bred horse costs no more in food and attention than a common one, and he is a very much better investment. A horse of common breeding is sure to be a common and uninteresting horse; but one with a crossing of good strains of blood is apt to be very interesting. In such a horse there are attractive possibilities, similar to those that invest a lottery ticket with charm. Who cares to watch the development of spindle-legs of a suckling colt when it is well known that the mature horse will only be fit to draw a cart? But what a difference when you look upon the awkward youngster and recognize no reason why it should not lower the record of Salvador or Nancy Hanks? Failing in such high deeds, either runner or trotter would be just as serviceable in a cart as the cold-bred colt for whom there was never any high ambition.

The facts gathered by the statisticians, and the prospects for changed motive power for transportation and for farming, appear to indicate clearly that in the future there will be less and less profit in breeding other than from good strains of equine blood.—Harper's Weekly.

CHARADE is going to be a hard horse to beat this year, from present indications. On the 26th the brown son of imp. Charaxus, four years old, heat Banquet, aged, with 120; Lepanto, five, with 95, and Riot, five, 103 pounds. He won by two lengths from Banquet, doing the mile and an eighth in 1:57. On the same date at Elizabeth Chateau, by imp. Charaxus, won the Pamrapo Stakes, for two-year-olds, beating nine good youngsters, doing the half-mile in 0:49, and Blue Blood, by the same sire, beat the much-touted St. Domingo, Traverse and Clysium in a six-furlong dash. Three of the six winners were therefore by imp. Charaxus.

Champion Pacing Records Compared With Trotting.

While there is no question but that the pacing gait is faster than the trotting, less interest is taken in champion pacing records, and many of them have been all the way along, and several are still considerably behind the corresponding trotting records. Until quite recently the colt trotting records have been very much faster than the pacing records for the same ages, but during the past two years several which have been considerably slower are now as much in advance of the trotting records. The best yearling pacing record until within two years has been more than 10 seconds slower, but the champion yearling record, held by Belle Acton, is now 4½ seconds faster than the best yearling trotting record, says American Horse Breeder.

Of the two-year-olds the trotting record is still ahead, and is held by the trotting stallion Arion, whose record is a quarter of a second faster than that of Online, the fastest pacing two-year-old. Of the three-year-olds Sunol and Arion each have records of 2:10, while the fastest three-year-old pacing record is held by Manager, and is a full second slower. Of the four-year-olds, according to the American Trotting Register Association, the pacers Robert S. and Manager led the side-wheeled division with records of 2:09, while Alix and Moquette are the fastest trotters of that age with records of 2:10, a difference of only a quarter of a second in favor of the four-year-old pacer, but according to the records of the Trotting Association, W. Wood, with a record of 2:07, is three seconds faster.

Of the five-year-olds Kremlin is a half-second ahead of the pacer Blue Sign, so that for colt records honors are about even. The harness records, trotting and pacing, are now exactly the same, still the advantage is with the pacer in that Mascot's record was taken in a race, while the record of Nancy Hanks was made against time.

When we come to the double teams, the advantage at present is decidedly with the trotter, but this is chiefly from the fact that comparatively little attention has been given to fast pacing teams. There would, in all probability, be no difficulty in getting a mate for Mascot, Hal Pointer, Direct, or some of the other fastest pacers capable of making a mile against time considerably below the 2:12, which is the champion trotting team record, held by Belle Hamlin and Honest George and made last season. The fastest team race record, trotting is 2:18, and was made by Maxey Cobb and Neta Medium eight years ago. The fastest team race record, pacing, is held by Belle Button and "Thomas" Ryder, and is, according to the Year Book, "2:20."

It is not surprising that the Californians protest against the way the Year Book handles their champion records, throwing out entirely all Stamboul's champion performances, also the champion four-year-old pacing record of W. Wood of 2:07, setting him back to 2:11, and setting Stamboul back to 2:11; but neither of these is any comparison to the cut there made in the pacing team record, which is ten full seconds. As there is no ground whatever for the rejection or suppression of ten seconds in time in this record, we have no doubt the compiler of that work will claim it is one of the numerous typographical errors.

The facts in connection with this fastest team pacing race record are that it was made Saturday, October 15, 1892, in the first heat of a race, against Our Dick and Turk Franklin, at Oakland, Cal., and the latter team, though their average harness records single were 5½ seconds faster than the average records of Belle Button and Tom Ryder, they were distanced the second heat. There is another instance of mistake, or at least lack of uniformity, in the Year Book of this particular. In Vol. 1 there is no "Thomas" Ryder, but numerous races are there given as paced, and quite a proportion of them won by the brown gelding "Tom" Ryder, while nowhere in the second volume does the name "Tom" Ryder appear, though a difference of less than three letters has often occasioned a fine, and in some of the States might be even more serious.

Belle Button and Tom Ryder are both by Alexander Button. Belle Button's dam is by Dietz St. Clair, son of old St. Clair, while Tom Ryder's dam is by Black Ralph, a descendant of Vermont Black Hawk. Belle Button has a harness record of 2:19, and Tom Ryder a record of 2:17, making an average of 2:18, which is 2½ seconds slower than their double harness record. The heaten team, Our Dick and Turk Franklin, have proven faster and better in single harness, but were probably not as well matched. Our Dick is by Gihralter, a grandson of Hambletonian, and Turk Franklin is by Prospect, a direct lineal descendant of Vermont Black Hawk, with additional Morgan through his second dam.

Our Dick has a harness record of 2:10, while Turk Franklin's record is 2:16, making an average of 2:13, which is 5½ seconds faster than the average record of their competitors and 3½ seconds faster than the fastest pacing team record. It is quite probable that pacing teams are not as easily managed, particularly when either or both makes a break, still for all that we are confident that there are plenty of pacers which could be matched, and very materially reduce the present pacing team record.

A CURIOUS operation in veterinary surgery was performed at Sheephead bay last week by Surgeon Shepard. Fred Graf's horse was troubled with a disorder of the eye and became very nervous and fractious. Dr. Shepard washed the eye with a lotion which removed a film, and then he was able to discover the cause of the trouble. He saw something wriggling rapidly about in the eye-ball, and at once recognized it as a case of "snake-in-the-eye," a very rare disease in these latitudes but more common in hot countries, and especially in India. He had the horse thrown and tied so that he was perfectly motionless. First an incision was made in the eye at the inner angle. Into this was inserted a small silver hook formed on the plan of a button hook. Then he had to wait. The shank of the hook filled the incision, while the hook itself was in the aqueous humor where the rapidly-moving creature was. Finally the doctor managed to hook the "snake," or let it hook itself near the middle, and then with a dexterous movement he drew it out. "The 'snake' was so active that it was with difficulty held. Upon measurement it was found to be three and one-half inches in length. When dropped into a bottle of alcohol it quickly died. It was perfectly white and looked very much like a section of coarse cotton spool thread. The technical name of this disease is filaria oculi. Dr. Shepard said that in all his experience he had seen only three cases and that this was the first in which he performed an operation for its relief.

Encouraging News From Everywhere.

The latest reports from all cities in the United States are to the effect that entries to the trotting and pacing races this year, surpass those of other years. The number of horses in training for races (not for time records) proves that if there is anything to elevate the trotting-horse market by showing the people that horses can be and are bred to race, the breeders are trying to achieve it.

The crash had to come, and we are satisfied it could not take place at a more opportune time. The time-record craze was a short-lived but dangerous one; it left its mark upon the annals of the turf that will be referred to by horsemen in the future as a "curiosity horn of a mythical necessity, nurtured by ambitious horse owners and destroyed by overwork."

The man who offers a horse for sale that made his record on the kite track, cannot take much pride in stating the fact. He dodges the question "Where did this horse get his record?"

The magic of the words "race records" will elevate prices, and breeders who are trying to make a success of the business are taught that this little recommendation attached to the name of every trotter and pacer they offer for sale will help prices amazingly. When one considers it from a financial standpoint, it looks well, but how much better is the priceless pride that an owner takes in the broodmare that produced that trotter, and if she appears as the dam of two or more, what a warm place she has in his estimation!

Here, in California, the directors of every district fair are astonished to see the long lists of entries received; they could not divine the cause, but, if they stopped for a moment to reflect, how plain it would all appear? Therefore, they should, to keep up the reviving interest, help the owners of these colts and fillies by giving races that will enable the trotters to make race records.

dropped out of the market," are astounded to see such long lists of entries; it is something they never dreamed of. Why, according to these "soreheaded" doubters the distance flag on our race courses would be used by the sheriff, and the racecourses of the land would all be turned into paddocks, the buildings destroyed and all traces of the great industry obliterated long before the trees in the orchards were budding, or the blades of grass were bursting from the ground.

The Greatest Show on Earth.

"Everybody should pass right in and see the greatest aggregation of equine beauties ever assembled. The largest number of the very rarest of man's best friend, the horse! Here you will see Arabians from the desert of Sahara; Orloffs from Russia; Shaggy ponies from Shetland; Zebras from Africa; coach horses from Germany; hackneys from England; Flemish horses from Holland and Germany; Percherons and Normans from France; wild mustangs from the prairies of America; Clydes, Shires and Suffolk Punches from Great Britain; thoroughbreds from England, Australia, Kentucky, California, and many of the States of the Union!

The above announcement is not copied from a circus poster, but is suggested by the reports of the great numbers of horses that are being placed on exhibition at the Columbian Exposition at Chicago. There are thousands of our readers who would like to go to the "White City" just to look at the collection of horses there.

The work of comparing the various types or breeds of horses will be one that will excite much interest, and in the great shuffle for superiority between the imported and American-bred stock it will be seen that the breeders of American horses have nothing to be ashamed of. Many a horseman who comes to that exhibition believing he has the only breed of light-harness horses will trade for the best road horses in the world, known as the American trotter.

pression as the chariot races in the Circus Maximus left upon the thousands who were congregated to see them. The effect will be beneficial and awaken an interest among these people that will redound to the credit of our American-bred trotters, and awaken in them a desire to drive one of these fleet-footed horses. No one can fully comprehend the magnitude of the benefits to be derived from this great exhibition in all of its many forms, but especially in this—when one contemplates the field that will be opened by the exhibition of our greatest pride, the trotting horse of America.

THE attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of the Spring Meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, to be held May 27th to June 3d inclusive. Every one who has horses in training should bring them to the Bay District track; there will be plenty of over-night events, and the officers and members of this organization are taking a more active interest in this inaugural meeting than ever.

The Todhunter Sale.

This auction sale, held by order of Mrs. Elizabeth D. Todhunter, executrix of the estate of W. B. Todhunter, deceased, was a most successful one from every point of view, and shows that there is a good market for high-class stock at any time in San Francisco, especially in the line of thoroughbreds. The sale, conducted by Killip & Co. at their salesyard, Van Ness avenue and Market street, was well attended by our representative thoroughbred horsemen, and the bidding was spirited. Below will be found a list of the animals sold, the purchasers and prices:

Blue Laws.

By the recent legislation enacted in Connecticut a death-blow was dealt to the trotting horse interests of that State. It seems almost impossible that men of ordinary intelligence would blindly legislate out of existence an industry of such dimensions as the harness-horse breeding industry has reached in Connecticut. The first object of this legislation was undoubtedly to stop the city pool-room gambling that is conducted in many cities, but the members of the Legislature seem to have made the mistake of confounding harness-racing with the so-called winter-racing that is kept up for the benefit of the pool-room gamblers, when in fact there is no possible connection between the two.

Harness-racing is a sport that has become a national sport, and it attracts the leading citizens of our country, regardless of rank or profession. It has resulted in the founding of a breed of horses that has become famous the world over, and that has added millions of dollars to the breeding interests of this country. It is carried on in a manner in striking contrast to that employed in the running races, and while betting is indulged in on the results, as it is on almost every sport or business where there is an element of chance, it is a secondary consideration and is restricted to the track where the racing takes place. A law in all the States similar to that passed in Connecticut would ruin an industry that furnishes employment for thousands of men and sets into circulation millions of money. To those who have given little thought to the matter, we would ask such a condition a pleasant one to contemplate? While the governments of Europe are aiding their breeders to improve the light-harness horse in every possible way, our prejudiced law-makers seem to wish to legislate the breed out of existence in this country.—Horse World.

THE St. Louis Jockey Club proposes to enforce strict rules this spring in reference to jockeys' valets. No valets will be allowed on the grounds, and the association will provide attendants for the jockeys. Directly a boy is weighed out he is to be kept in seclusion without being allowed to speak to any one but the trainer of his mount until called to the post. It looks rather as if this was overdoing the thing, and that the jockeys will make a strenuous protest. Certainly there does not appear to be much confidence in the integrity of the riding division in the West.

MCCAFFERTY & WISHARD's chestnut horse Hoeksey, aged, by Glengarry, out of Montie, went mad last Tuesday morning in his quarters at Montgomery Park, Memphis, and had to be killed. He tried hard to get at the stable boys and other horses, but was lassoed and killed before he could do any damage.

Value of Handling Horses.

Each driver of a horse or team as well as the owner or those that have to depend upon the harness horse for pleasure or business, admits the great value of systematic training or handling. We all appreciate the advantage in a team, yet as in many other matters, we are negligent in the majority of cases in taking the means to secure the desired effect. The time has come in the history of the horse with its established lineage and high individual merit, that it must have care and treatment commensurate with its inherent value. No one would pretend to say that the equivalent in time of half a year's work should be spent upon a broncho or any such creature but it is almost an axiom that training must be applied to every draft and roadster as well as the high bred and sensitive horse. It is only economy in the true sense of its significance to provide the most careful handling and attention for the equine which is to be sold for remunerative prices. Material to work upon and that, too, on an extensive scale is demanded, if paying results are to follow. With the great progress and rapid growth of wealth in this country, thousands of people are more ready to give $500 and upwards for a single well-broken horse, or $1000 for a double team than pay $50 to $200 for the common roadster, yet this $50 roadster is oftentimes made the $500 horse, all by close and systematic training and attention. It must be remembered that this fiery animal is, in a natural state, far more ungovernable than is the inspiring steam engine or electric motor.

In the case of such mechanical appliances for power, almost any skillful artisan who understands a device of one kind can almost at sight operate any similar device and do it successfully. Every colt, however, is a separate new creature in the world, and must be proceeded with in its training and handling with a trifle at least, of variation in every case to meet its disposition and to render it fully the trained thing of beauty or joy, as may be the case to its owner, who aims to derive from it either pleasure or profit. Starting with a well bred colt whose ancestors for two generations on both sides are known to be of reasonably good natural disposition, one may feel as confident in ultimate success in training and developing the youngster into a finished, animate product as is the machinist who works on an engine or motor. This statement must be qualified, however, with the further limitation, namely that the trainer, to accomplish positive and unvarying results, must be as skillful in his line of work as is the mechanic referred to. Many farmers and people who have only a few horses are disposed to undervalue the importance of skillful labor upon the young horse, think that they or their farm hands or help can occupy their spare time in developing what has cost them when old enough to wear $100 or more; here a great mistake is made. While a trainer with less skill will require more time for accomplishing the same results, his time, as a rule, is very much less valuable than that of the skilled artist in this important work. It is true that many people lack method in their plans of exercising their horses and colts.

The majority of farmers and other people who have horses as an incidental investment with other lines of work think only of devoting such bits of time as are not needed in their regular line of work, and consequently the colt is neglected when he should be receiving attention, and receives a double dose when half would suffice. Such spasmodic efforts accomplish but little. It would be similar to sending a child to school for only half a day once a month, and then he surprised that no advancement is made, in which case the horse as well as the child is liable to forget in the intervening time all that it has learned during its brief lessons. To guard against the extremes of too little handling and of the dangers of too much work, is the principal occasion for anxiety in giving the first lessons to the coming horse, and here is where skilled labor is worth double the amount of inexperienced. Horses, unfortunately, cannot talk, and one must be able to tell how far to go, and not go too far, from experience and study of the various kinds he has handled. It is the history of too many animals that their owners have more work to do than horses with which to do it; put upon a two-year old the work of a mature horse and the same is true in developing the promising colt trotter, for the inexperienced trainer will put a promising colt beyond his limit in his desire to get more speed, and thus ruin what might have been a very skilled trainer. Occasionally there will be found the rare strength and constitution which enables such a victim to survive his burden and he afterwards a fairly good horse, but where there is one such case there will probably be found a dozen in which sluggishness, indifference to life and sometimes stubborn laziness have been the results. Yet when it comes to the choice between the two evils, the future of the high-bred candidate for proper treatment will be a better one from overwork to a limited extent than the one that is neglected entirely and allowed to roam at its own free will till five years old, which is often the case. Place a halter upon your colts as soon as they are able to stand, be firm yet kind in your treatment. You will find that the little fellow will soon learn to obey and enjoy it. If the colt is to be developed as a colt trotter in its yearling or two-year-old form then it should be handled by an expert from the time it is weaned and even then the colt is not expected to make a reputation for its father and mother. By trotting, as a yearling or two-year-old, it should by all means, be broken in the fall at its yearling form and thoroughly broken, as there is much less danger of accident if taken at that age than when allowed to wait till they are four or five. Frequently an old gentleman is the owner of young colts and lacks tact to give them their regular exercise and systematic care, such a one should be aroused from his lethargy and engage the services of an expert for a month or more to give steady judicious handling and training, such an outlay will be returned a hundred fold in the price attainable when the colt is put on the market, and if such a course was freely adopted you would not hear the pessimistic ideas advanced by the owner of a few years and a rapidly increasing band of colts, and instead of his finding fault because of the dullness of the horse market he would be disposing of his well broken colts at remunerative prices.

A month or two of work or handling by an expert given a colt, when two years old, will enable any owner to continue safely with his care and training, unless he or she should show promise of speed, then it is much better to leave him where he received his early training, for a man who lacks experience can do more to kill speed in a month's work than the most skillful can remedy in two months. The length of time for preliminary work will vary, with different animals.

Where the owner or trainer knows the disposition of the ancestors, he can usually judge of the amount of time he should expect it would require, for an expert to turn him over to his owner. First teach your colt what the harness and bit is and get him accustomed to being guided with the reins, after which he must understand what it means to have a buggy or cart rolling and rattling behind him. Don't put on a cheap harness for the first time, or hitch him to a cheap cart, for a lesson or accident learned when young is sometimes very hard to forget. This preliminary work should be given a colt one at a time with an older horse. It is counted by many that all this fuss does not pay. Of course it does not pay if you haven't a good colt to begin with, but a youngster that is sound and right, having a good disposition and in its veins a predominance of the great blood of the land, can be trained expensively with great profit if training and developing by the owners of colts was more liberally indulged in, throughout this section, there would not be the feeling existing as it does at the present, regarding the breeding of the favorite mare. There is always a market for the well-broken, promising youngster, whereas the unbroken grows and increases until by the weight of numbers, the owner's heart as well as his bank account is broken.—E. O. Van Bokkelen in Salem Journal.

The Castration of Horses.

The horse-raising public are now debating castration, and a few words may prove of interest. Since the market for stallions seems rather over-stocked, many colts will be gelded that would otherwise be kept entire, thus supplying the market with geldings, which are always in demand at lucrative figures as gentlemen's roadsters.

The months best adapted for this operation are, in my opinion, April, May and June, and from September 1st to March 1st. The reason I omit July, August and March are that in March in this New England climate the roads are usually in had condition and the weather very unsettled. In March the new growth of hair appears, and if the animal is thrifty the old coat begins to fall out. This process is more or less debilitating. Another objection is that the diseases to which young horses are most subject, such as strangles, influenza, etc., are most prevalent during that month. During July and August it is my theory that the heat is somewhat trying, together with the irritation caused by flies and other insects. Surgical wounds, under such circumstances, do not granulate and take on a healthy action as readily as when these conditions are absent.

The methods which are still in use differ greatly. The most favorite one is that used by farmer Miles, and in my opinion it is the best. First, because it is the quickest, both testicles being removed at once, consequently it is the most humane. Second, because it reduces the danger of hemorrhage to a minimum. Third, because in opening the tissues enveloping the testicle the nervous system receives no shock, the testicle being uninjured. Fourth, because the operation can be used to remove a testicle from a crypt orchid (ridgling), and all methods other than those originated by Miles have fallen in such cases.

Many veterinarians prefer the "tortion" method, and some still cling to the elamps or red-hot iron.

The method of casting and securing the animal is of great importance, and each has its advocates. Probably practical operators will judge "Miles's" method superior, but there are modified forms of using the old fashioned side lines which are good. A very secure and safe casting apparatus is one used by Dr. George Bailey of Portland, Me. The English hobbles are unsuitable and dangerous, but perfectly secure.

Some operators claim it is needless to cast and secure an animal to operate upon, but I have observed and heard of many accidents to man or horse, and have treated complications resulting from such methods enough to convince me that it is not the best way to perform this operation. Besides, all cannot be done this way, and if properly performed no accident or injury need follow casting.

The complication which is most commonly seen resulting from castration is hemorrhage, primary or secondary, which is seldom fatal, and a competent operator can easily control it. Inflammation and swelling of the dependent parts are common, but may be normal and seldom fatal. Tetanus or peritonitis is the usual complication when the subject dies, but death may ensue from blood poisoning (septicemia) or from debility.

The operation for the castration of ruptured colts and stallions should be performed by what is known as the covered process. It is my experience that every operator should take the temperature of an animal before the operation. If the animal is at rest the thermometer will register about normal; if it registers many degrees above normal (93.5-d. F.) the operation should not be performed until the fever subsides.

After the operation, its success depends largely upon the care and judgment of its attendant. The colt or horse should be exercised regularly, and the incision noticed, to see that they remain open. If the edges of the incisions adhere, the secretions into the circulation and cause constitutional disturbances.

The action of the muscles in exercise encourage discharge of secretions, and prevent accumulations and subsequent swelling. Excessive or violent exercise before the operation is objectionable, but moderate exercise either before or after does no harm.

The castration of ridglings should be entrusted only to those operators who have by experience proved that they possess an accurate anatomical knowledge of the parts, and special surgical skill and manual dexterity. A lack of any of these qualities will lead to failure and endanger the life of the patient. Such a man is competent to perform all difficult operations in castration.—F. A. Ingram, V. S., in Horse Breeder.

A WRITER who was with the Splan-Ketchum party in Austria, says: It was really laughable to stand and watch the crowds in Vienna discuss the merits and demerits of an American turnout, when Ketchum or Splan appeared behind one of their American trotters with low, swinging gait, dressed neatly in a perfect-fitting set of harness, so light and airy that; the Austrians were loath to believe it of sufficient strength to hold together. But when their eyes rested on the light and handsomely proportioned top wagons, then was their surprise and astonishment complete, though, to state the case fairly, it must be said that they were highly pleased with the carriages, and purchased them eagerly at fairly good prices.

The Newspaper Man.

"My son, I don't know if your youthful conception
Has breadth in the scope of its nebulous plan
To wield comprehension of that one exception
To work-a-day mortals, the newspaper man;
But, if you'll agree to a feeble description
From one of their number, I'll do what I can
To blend in the way of a little prescription
The mixture that's known as a newspaper man.

"Take a brain that is steeped in solution of knowledge,
Most varied and picturesque under the sun;
Then add just a pinch of the salt of the college,
A flavor of wit and a soupçon of fun.
For a relish, Bohemian sauce is a capper,
And a mind that will stretch from Beersheba to Dan,
In fancy or fact, when it comes to "the paper,"
Or touches the heart of the newspaper man.

"To a memory that clutches the veriest trifle,
And a hand that is quick as the flash of a rifle,
Add an eye that is quick as the flash of a rifle,
And keen as the eagle that flies to the sun.
Take strength, and endurance, and loyal devotion,
And add all the grit and the courage you can
To the heart that's as big and as deep as the ocean:
A hundred to one on the newspaper man!

"With a brew of ideas that, seething and boiling,
Run out into moulds that are models for man,
Add a ceaseless encounter with planning and toiling
For the world of to-day that is ruled by the pen.
Add the honey of friendship, the dew of affection,
And the esprit de corps that gets down to hard pan;
And paste in your hat the whole mortal collection
As the regular stock of the newspaper man."

Worms in Colts.

Few breeders are aware of the amount of suffering caused annually among horses and colts by the several varieties of worms, which often exist in their stomachs and intestines in such numbers as to stop the growth of young animals and not infrequently result in death, says an exchange. How they originate and multiply to such an extent in foals only a few months old is something of a mystery, but when the youngsters exhibit a lack of thrift, as indicated by a rough, staring coat, with the hair on the body pointing toward the ears, a craving appetite, a loss of flesh, the passage of mucus with the feces, it is pretty safe to predict that worms is the cause. The discovery of one or more of these parasites in the evacuations is conclusive evidence that the subject is suffering from these pests, which are appropriating the material necessary to supply the constant waste of the system. There are several varieties of these parasites. That most commonly found in young stock is a long white worm, which bears a quite close resemblance to the common angle worm. They inhabit the lower intestines, and are from six to ten inches in length, even in foals five or six months old. One of the most effective remedies for this variety of worms is tartar emetic, prepared and given in the following manner: Go to a druggist and have him put up 14 powders, each of which shall contain tartar emetic one dram, powdered ginger one-half dram. Each powder is a dose for a full grown animal. If a three-year-old, take three-fourths; if a two-year-old, one half; a yearling, one-third, and a six-months-old foal, one-sixth of the quality mentioned.

One of these powders should be given before feeding every morning for a week. On the eighth morning give the animal, if large and fully matured, a quart of linseed oil, which should be poured down the throat from a horn or rubber bottle. Some use a glass bottle, but there is great danger of its being broken and injuring the animal. If the subject is a few months old foal, give a gill of oil; if a yearling, a half pint is about the proper dose. For a good-sized two-year-old give one pint, and for a three-year-old, three-fourths of a pint. Be careful to use raw oil. That which has been boiled will not answer the purpose. The effect of the oil will be a smart operation that will dislodge most of the worms. It will not answer to work the animal during the time the oil is operating, and a few days afterward. After giving the oil omit all medicines for a week, then give another course of the powders and follow with another dose of the oil. The powders should be given in the form of a ball. Take a tablespoonful of linseed meal for a full powder, put into an earthen saucer, add sufficient boiling water to make it the consistency of a thick dough, then add the powder, mix thoroughly and roll into a ball some 1½ inches in length, tapering to a point at one end. Take the large ends of this between the ends of the middle fingers of the right hand. Step in front of the patient. Grasp the lower jaw with the left hand, pressing the palm upon the tongue so as to hold it in place. Thrust the right hand containing the ball as far down the throat as possible and place the ball low down on the roots of the tongue. Withdraw the hands, elevate the head and keep the patient's mouth closed until the ball is swallowed. Some recommend drawing out the tongue. This is a dangerous practice, and should never be permitted. A few years since that organ of the noted trotting mare Cozette was drawn out for the purpose of giving her some medicine, when she closed her jaws and completely severed her tongue. It is very important that the powders be followed up with a dose of raw linseed oil. Unless the work is to be done thoroughly it will be best to adopt some other remedy. After the effects of the second dose of oil have passed, have the druggist mix thoroughly two ounces powdered coppers with two ounces powdered gentian root. Give a teaspoonful of this in the oats twice a day for from four to six days, but do not continue it longer than one week. Poplar bark made fine and fed in the oats is also a good remedy for worms, and acts as a tonic at the same time. There is little danger in giving too much of this. Twigs of sassafras, a shrub which abounds in many New England pastures, chopped fine and fed in the ration of grain, will also rid the horses of long, round worms. Another simple but effective remedy is pumpkin seeds, thoroughly dried and ground in a coffee mill or pounded in a mortar until fine. Give a teaspoonful of the powder in feed morning and night for a week, then give one pint of new milk mixed with a half pint of West India molasses. Any molasses made from sugar cane will answer as well, but the glucose which is so extensively sold for molasses will not prove so effective.

Pumpkin seeds will act upon the kidneys, and horses which are kept at work should be used with great care when taking any kind of medicines which act as a diuretic. Another simple, effective remedy easily administered is super-carbonate of soda. Before giving this the patient should have the three bran mashes. Begin with a liberal mash at night, give another the following morning, and a third the next night. This will relax the bowels somewhat. The morning following the third mass mix one pint of new milk with a half-pint of sugar cane molasses, and add to this a tablespoonful of super-carbonate of soda. Administer this by means of a bottle or horn, and let the animal fast a few hours. Feed the patient as usual one week, then repeat the mashes and follow with the milk, molasses and super-carbonate of soda. This, on the whole, will probably prove the most satisfactory remedy of the lot and care should be taken to adapt the dose to the age and size of the animal. The man in charge must exercise his own judgment in this matter to a great extent, as no fixed rule can be laid that will apply to all cases. Some well-grown two-year-olds will need as great a quantity as ordinary three-year-olds. It is generally believed, however, that when the dose of a grown animal is any given quantity, say one ounce, that of a four-weeks-old foal should be about one-sixteenth of an ounce; a six-months foal, one-sixth of an ounce; a two-year-old, half an ounce, and a three-year-old, three-fourths of an ounce.—Horse World.

The Mare During Pregnancy.

Too many colts are lost at foaling time, or soon after it, because of something wrong with the sire or dam or the handling of the mare during pregnancy. The colt inherits the family vigor or weakness of both sire and dam. Whatever was defective, or weak, or diseased in either horse or mare, will be inherited in a latent or prominent condition by the colt. The young thing when it comes is the result of all its grand parents, and all the good and bad usage they may have had. It is more affected by its immediate ancestors than by those remote, and the sire and dam should have most consideration.

The usage of many stallions is very reprehensible. They are quite often too fat, with tissue that has not been put on contemporaneous with exercise. The greatest vigor is never found in connection with fat. The idle stud is not at himself, his nervous system is excitable, his respiration is not normal, his circulation is not good, nor is his alimentary system in perfect order, and his powers of endurance are low.

Now this condition has no name among diseases, but where stallions are kept this way for generations they lose vigor and the progeny becomes more liable to disease. The speed horses and road horses are not abused by idleness as much as draft horses, and still too many men own driving horses who do not attend to their exercise. Powers of fecundity become low with such usage, and the weakness is transmitted to the colt.

Another evil needs attention. Stallions are used too much, and the study of the laws of life show us that weakness in the progeny results from overmating the sire.

The colt is the depository of all transmissible diseases as well as tendencies to them. Europe has given us many specimens of the horse in this respect says James Wilson in Brooklyn Chronicle.

The mare transmits just as the horse does, she has equal prepotency with the horse if her blood is as intense and no more. If the horse and the mare both have latent weaknesses, the colt will have them with added force, but she is not as likely to transmit the weaknesses that are the result of idleness, over-feeding and pampering as is the horse.

Men and women in the wealthy class cease to have large families, children come seldom, come feeble and are short-lived, then barrenness results, when the family dies out and is replaced by the newly rich, that reform in living or go through the same degenerating process. Reasoning by analogy it is the same with domestic animals. There are more deaths among well-bred colts from pampered ancestors than among the colts of Indian ponies that are half-starved. And, on the other hand, it can be said that the wisely-managed, well-bred horses are the most vigorous of the equine breeds. They live to old age, are impressive and fecund, and their progeny are hard and vigorous.

When the mare is pregnant she needs more than the ration of support for herself, and requires different nutrition than she otherwise would, and different handling. The embryo horse must be fed through the ration of the mare. Its bones and muscles and tendons and skin and hair must grow and get nourishment through the feed of the mare. Nature shows us object lessons here. The pasture furnishes the proper nourishment and the broodmares thrive best on grass and bring the healthiest colts. The winter season is the dangerous time for the pregnant mare if she is kept indoors.

Corn is the fattening cereal of America. It has no rival in stuffing the tissues with fat, but nature never offers a ration compounded as corn is to any young animal. There is not enough of the bone and muscle-making material in corn to grow the fetus. The steer will fatten on corn alone if you give him enough of it, so that he can get what proteine he needs. He will waste the surplus carbohydrates. If you add oil meal he will waste less, but the pregnant mare tied in a stall with a colt to develop must eat what you give her.

The milk cow needs a different ration from the feeding steer. He will lay on fat with one part of flesh formers to six or nine of fat formers. The milk cow has a different product to make. Nature designs her to suckle a calf and give milk, and for this purpose she needs one part of proteine to four or five parts of carbohydrates.

The mare has the same requirements as the cow, and her requirements during pregnancy are quite similar to those after foaling. When the pregnant mare foals in midsummer, after being on grass, nature gives her the proper ration. Young grass has one-third to one-fourth or one-fifth of the flesh formers or proteine or nitrogenous matter. During winter the pregnant mare needs something succulent. Roots are good for her and the coming colt, if fed wisely.

We fed at the experiment station pregnant cows on oil meal and flax meal, as high as eight pounds per day to a cow of each, after a gradual increase. None of the cows were injured in the least. One cow dropped a calf weighing 108 pounds during the experiment, very strong and vigorous.

I suggest careful trial of a little flax to the pregnant mare, or oil meal, depending on the rest of the ration. Oil meal and flax meal are very different in composition.

I need not state that pregnant mares should be carefully handled. No sudden backing, no fast driving, no irregularity in feeding, no slipping on ice, no floundering in snow-drifts, no associating with kicking companions, no foul smells about the stable, no rough usings, no contracted quarters.

If we do not have healthy, sound horses it will be our fault. If the colt dies young it is not its fault. We have failed to study its wants in caring for the dam, or those who had charge of its progenitors entailed early death upon the progeny.

For Young Trainers.

Now that the training season is at hand it will not be out of the way to call the attention of the younger generation of drivers to the fact that nearly every sensible man who has investigated the subject has reached the conclusion that in the case of a sound horse the practice of bandaging the legs after a heat or during a work-out is productive of harm in most cases, and in any event cannot do the animal any good.

One by one the old-fashioned ideas about training trotting horses that obtained for so many years are losing their sway and the preparation of animals for a campaign is conducted on a common-sense basis instead of by a rigid adherence to rules formulated a couple of decades ago and which in the line of recent developments are not at all applicable to the case in hand. It is not so many years ago that the practice of using sweat-hoods on horses was an almost universal one, and yet at the present time the intelligent driver who has a sweat-hood in his outfit is looked upon as being a little too much wedded to old fogyism to stand the progress of modern ideas regarding the preparation of a trotter or pacer. It is not possible in the case of a sound horse to point out one good effect which can be produced by the use of a hood, and even with animals that have a thickening of the windpipe it is beyond the ken of most people to discover in what particular the application of a hood will clear the obstructed passages. There would be just as much sense in putting a hood on a horse's back as on his neck.

The idea used to be prevalent that it was the production of profuse perspiration that caused flesh to disappear from a horse whose carcass was overloaded with fat and muscle to take its place, but when somebody asked how much fat could be tried out of a barrel of perspiration it began to dawn upon a large percentage of trainers that the sweating had primarily nothing to do with the destruction of the fatty tissues. That is accomplished by the exercise or work which a horse is given, and the perspiration is simply an adjunct and result of such exercise. Fat men sweat profusely when they do not take any exercise, if the weather be warm, and yet every man who is overburdened with flesh knows well enough that he can put on more fat by drinking one glass of water than he can take off by a day of perspiring. The same line of argument holds good in relation to the use of sweat hoods as applicable to the bandaging of horses' legs. If a trotter has been given a fast mile or jogged until he is leg-weary, the first thing that an ignorant rubber, under the tutelage of a driver whose intellect is equally beclouded by adherence to custom, does is to wrap around the horse's legs a series of layers of flannel which have been wet in water or some liniment, and he generally finishes the job by tying them tightly. The manner in which this bandage is put on, fold after fold, makes it a physical impossibility for the blood to circulate in the limbs of that horse as it should, and there is also another evil result produced through the inability of the skin to throw off such excretions as would naturally be disposed of in that manner with the leg left alone. It is well enough when the horse has been given severe work to hand-rub each leg a few times, but after this is done it is only common sense and humanity to let the limbs alone.

Another practice that is applied by a good many of the non-thinking and unprogressive set of trainers is that of walking a horse between heats. In a majority of cases no more idiotic proceeding could be imagined. If a horse is tired, a long walk after a heat is the last thing on earth that he wants, or that will do him any good. Some men argue that unless a horse is walked around he will catch cold, but such people do not know what they are talking about, and their oracular utterances are not based on any scientific knowledge concerning the horse and his anatomy. A trotter which comes in from the track perspiring profusely after a hard drive would not, on an ordinary summer day, catch cold if he were left entirely alone for twenty minutes, and any doctor will testify to the truth of this proposition. Instead of being left alone, however, the horse is generally loaded with blankets, wrapped, bandaged, rubbed, and then walked until it is time for him to trot another heat, nearly everything that has been done to him tending to worry, annoy and tire the animal instead of refreshing him.

Another class of people who train horses as their grandfathers did are very particular that only a swallow or so of water shall be given a distressed horse, and that anything in the way of food should be put into his stomach during the progress of a race would to them seem suicidal. On the other hand, some people who are naturally intelligent and who are also willing to learn as they go along find that in the case of most horses a generous allowance of oatmeal gruel between heats is of the utmost value. There are other points that could be developed at length did space permit, but in a general way it may be said that the men who have the greatest success in training trotters and bringing out their speed are those whose methods are conducted on a basis of common sense.—Breeders' Gazette.

As horses of the best constitution will go wrong sometimes—fall off in their appetite and lose condition—it is well when they are in health to teach them to eat certain substances not in the usual category of food for horses. They may be treated to tit-bits of bread and biscuit, taught to drink milk and oil, to consume eggs beaten up in milk or mixed with corn or a mash. These will form, if they are accustomed to them, useful relishes and nourishing foods when there are any signs of debility—such as during the period of convalescence after an attack of a serious and weakening disease. They should be taught to like them in health, so that they may eat them with avidity without loss of time when they are presented to them during illness, or at least when they are recovering therefrom, and when coarser, bulkier food has lost much of its attraction. Soup or beef-tea should also not be neglected. Professor G. T. Brown says that wonderful effects have been produced by feeding animals on soup made by boiling pieces of any kind of ucat. The liquor, when cold and freed from fat, may be used to make a mash by mixing it with bran. At first, he says, the animal's taste may be cultivated by putting small portions of the mixture into the mouth, but in a short time they become exceedingly fond of the new diet, and thrive upon it in a remarkable manner.

CALIFORNIA JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

Mackey, Jim Lee, El Rayo, Regal, Claire and Reno Win on the Opening Day—All the Events Described.

FIRST DAY—TUESDAY, MAY 2.

Although the card presented for the opening of the California Jockey Club meeting was a fair one, the attendance was not very encouraging to-day, being estimated at 1,200. Thirteen hookmaking firms did business, against twenty-one last week. It was a good day for the shouters of odds, four favorites being defeated in the six events. The same officials presided over the destinies of the speculators, and there was little change except in point of attendance.

There was considerable talk of building a steeplechase course in the enclosure, but as it would entail an outlay of several thousands of dollars in filling up the gulches, we do not believe the Blood Horse Association would care to take the risk, especially in view of the fact that the old course may have streets cut through it within the next year. However, should a steeplechase course be built and such races given, they would doubtless be very attractive and bring a number of celebrated jumpers from the East.

Mackey showed marked improvement in Vic Jenkins' hands, and won the first race easily by a length, leading all the way. Jim Lee won the second, Peters taking the lightly-weighted gelding, The Lark, back to his field after getting away a length in the lead, for some reason unknown. With that straw hat weight up The Lark should have made a runaway race of it. El Rayo won the mile and three-eighths race easily from Almont and Morton. Regal, at 15 to 1, getting away well, led all the way, and won by half a length from Joe Cotton, who swerved (accidentally or "on purpose" is not known) from the inside to the extreme outside. Sir Reel was left standing at the post, and did not get under way until the field had a lead of fully thirty lengths. He made up a large amount of ground, and finished seventh in a field of nine. He must have run the six and one-half furlongs as good as 1:20 1/2, Regal winning in 1:22 1/2. The odds laid against Joe Cotton (3 to 1), in view of the superior form he had shown, and meeting a lot of selling-platers, as he was, made it look as if there was a very black Senegambian hovering around the odd-layers' money pile. He should have been, on form, not better than a 7 to 5 shot in the hooks, and certain it is that the "general public" plunged on the old hay gelding in the Ottinger stable heavily, and their money was burned up by that very queer swerve at the finish. Cotton has always run straight and fast down the homestretch—and he is most too old a dog to catch on to any new tricks at this late day.

Claire won the half-mile dash, but had Warrago gotten off in the hunch, or near it, Donathan's filly would undoubtedly have won by a big margin. She wound up a good third, and was timed separately by several in 0:49 1/2, some making it even better. Claire won in 0:50 1/2 by a nose from Tillie S. Reno, Peter Weher's recent purchase, won by a short neck from Joe D., who was certainly not ridden very hard by King. Guadalupe, the "good thing," finished sixth. Little Tough went to the post a favorite at 2 to 1 in the opening event, five and one-half furlongs. Orrin was well supported at 3 to 1. Mackey went heging at 6 and 7 to 1. He got off slightly in advance to a pretty good start, was not headed, and won easily by a length from Little Tough, who got off eighth and last and ran up third at the three-quarter pole. Orrin ran second for over a quarter of a mile, then Mountain Boy took his place. He shut up in the last sixteenth, St. Patrick coming up like a shot and taking third place easily at the finish, a length behind Little Tough. Time, 1:09 1/2.

Silver State, with little Weher up, was plunged on, going to the post at 8 to 5, Jim Lee, the original favorite, receding from 8 to 5 to 2 1/2 to 1. The Lark was well played at 3 1/2 to 1. The last-named got away with a length lead, Happy Band second, by a head, Silver State third, a head from Jim Lee. Peters took The Lark back at once, foolishly, and he led Silver State but a head passing the half and three-quarter poles. As they turned into the homestretch Jim Lee had his head in front of The Lark, and it was then all over, Lee winning easily by a length. Silver State died away badly soon after striking the straight, The Lark and Happy Band fighting it out for place honors, which the former secured by half a length. Time, 1:04.

El Rayo was at 1 to 8, Almont 5 to 1 and Morton at 50 in the mile and three furlong race. Almont led El Rayo by a length into the homestretch on suzerance. A sixteenth from home Clancy gave the favorite his head, and he won easily by three lengths from Almont, who was six from Morton. Time, 2:24 1/2.

Joe Cotton was played heavily at 2, 2 1/2 and 3 to 1 in the fourth race, six and one-half furlongs, and it appeared that the more money played the larger the odds got. Charmer had lots of friends at 3 1/2 to 1, and Sir Reel was well played at 5 to 1. After a long delay, caused by the bad actions of Sir Reel, Charmer and Annie Moore, the flag fell with Sir Reel standing still at the post, Annie Moore all but left. Regal, third away, was in front before a sixteenth of a mile had been gone, and leading Nellie G. and Joe Cotton to the homestretch by from two to three lengths, won by half a length from Cotton, who swerved in the last sixteenth of a mile from the inside to the outside of the track, Clancy finally hitting the gelding hard on the right side of the head to make him go the other way and keep from coming in contact with the fence. Nellie G. was interfered with by Cotton near the head of the homestretch, but finished third, three parts of a length behind Joe Cotton. Inkerman was fourth. Sir Reel eat up a large amount of space when he got under way, and finished seventh in a field of nine. Regal's time was 1:22 1/2, and Sir Reel must have done the distance better than 1:21 from his position thirty lengths in the rear.

To a poor start, Tillie S. soon took command in the half-mile dash, Jovita attending her in the homestretch, where Claire came up with a rush against the rails and won in the last stride by a nose, Tillie S. second, a scant length from Warrago, who got off last, two lengths behind Claire, who was fifth away, but in the hunch. Warrago was backed down from 8 to 1 to 2 1/2 to 1 at the close, and would have won easily with a clever hoy in the saddle. Silver Plate finished fourth, at quite a length behind Warrago, the Donathan entry. Time, 0:50 1/2.

Guadalupe was considered a good thing in the last race, five and a half furlongs, and was backed down from 2 to 1 to 8 to 5. The rest of the field were at from 5 to 1 to 15. North was played so heavily that he receded from 30 to 1 to 10. Reno was nibbled at. Reno got a flying start from the rear, and was first half a length when the flag fell, with North second, a head from Joe D. Joe D. shot to the fore in the first 200 yards, and attended closest by Reno and North, led into the straight by two lengths, Reno second, a length from North. Reno was running easily, and Joe D. unusually so, King looking over his shoulder at Reno and laughing. Reno, hard-ridden by Johnny Weber, came out at the drawgate like a flash, collared Joe D., and shook him off in the last few strides, winning by a scant neck, North third and coming fast, but half a length behind Joe D., and Vendome fourth less than half a length behind North. Time, 1:10 1/2.

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY, MAY 3.

A very fair-sized crowd attended the races to-day, and saw four favorites beaten in the five events. The first fall was given to the hookmakers in the opening race, when Lodi romped in a winner with odds of 8 to 1 against him. The second race fell to the favorite, Realization, who romped in quite an easy winner from Silver State, who was at 4 to 1 for place. El Rayo defeated Motto (a warm favorite) and Joe Cotton in a six-furlong dash, in which it was thought the good-looking son of Ginstead would cut little figure, the popular notion being that the winner was too short. A prettier finish was never seen on any race course, El Rayo getting his head in front in the very last stride, Motto second, a short head before Joe Cotton. A number of cante persons played Nellie G. for a good thing, but Quarterstaff was a torrid favorite at 3 to 5. When it came to a finish Quarterstaff and Garcia did not appear to be in it, Nellie G. fighting it out with the long shot, Steadfast, whom B. C. Holly recently purchased. Solitude, at 3 to 1, made a show of her field, over which Ahi P. was a favorite. The first-named actually won pulled to a dog trot in 1:15, showing that she could have gone the distance as good as 1:14, if not better. J. H. Davis' horses (Lodi and Nellie G.) and Watson's Hogg's Realization and Solitude won, and it speaks volumes for the trainers. Ida Glenn was for a time favorite in the first five, five and one-half furlongs, at 3 to 1, but strong plays on Clacquer, Huguenot and Jim R. sent the odds on Glenn up to 4 to 1, so that there was no decided favorite. To a pretty fair start Jack the Ripper was first, Ida Glenn second and Jim R. out the fly, third. The Ripper only led for a very short time, when Glenn and Jim R. drew away and appeared to have the race to themselves. Lodi ran up from sixth to third place as they neared the final turn, where Jim R. looked a sure winner. W. Claucy, on Jim R., evidently thought he had the race in hand, when Lodi came up with a fine burst of speed, collaring the big brown gelding at the drawgate and winning rather easily by half a length, Jim R. second, two lengths from Huguenot, who made a grand run from the extreme rear coming into the homestretch. Time, 1:09 1/2. Jack the Ripper finished fourth.

Realization was at all times favorite over the field in the second event, five furlongs, for two-year-olds. Vivace, an unknown quantity, half-sister to Picton, Nomad and Kinfax, was well-touted, while the play on Silver State, Happy Band and The Lark was confined pretty much to place. Silver State was at 4 to 1 against for second honors. Realization and Silver State drew away from the others at the fall of the flag, The Lark being third, three lengths behind Silver State. Realization led into the homestretch by two lengths, and little Weher, on Silver State, went to the bat. Under the whip Silver State crawled up to the favorite, and less than an eighth from home a shout went up from the admirers of Senator Thompson's filly, who, however, only managed to get within a length of Realization as he went under the wire in 1:03. Three lengths behind Silver State came The Lark, third.

Motto, El Rayo and Joe Cotton were slated for a six-furlong run, and Motto, at 3 to 5, was played with all kinds of money. El Rayo went from 8 to 5 to 2 to 1, and then down to 8 to 5 at the post. Cotton opened at 5, went to 6 to 1, and then, well-played, back to 4 to 1. For a time as good as even money was offered against Cotton getting a place. Motto, as usual, was out in front, leading Cotton two lengths at the half-pole, the latter three lengths from El Rayo. Coming into the homestretch it was Motto first a length, Cotton second, nearly three lengths from El Rayo. Once straightened in the homestretch a Cotton shout rent the atmosphere, but it was not of long duration, for El Rayo was howling away the daylight space at every stride. One hundred yards from the wire Motto was leading but a head and was apparently in distress, Cotton second, half a length from El Rayo. A great fight ensued, and in one of the prettiest finishes ever seen at the old track, El Rayo, timed almost too finely for comfort, won by a head, Motto second, a scant cranium from Joe Cotton. Time, 1:14 1/2.

Quarterstaff, in his wonderful win a few days ago, was a hot favorite at 3 to 5 and 7 to 10 in the fifth race, seven furlongs. Nellie G. was warmly tipped and heavily played by a select few at 4 to 1, and many tacked their faith to Garcia, also a 4 to 1 shot. Garcia led Quarterstaff a head passing the quarter-pole, Nellie G. only a head behind the favorite. At the half the order was Garcia, Nellie G., Quarterstaff, heads apart. One hundred yards from the three-quarter pole Nellie G. assumed command, Quarterstaff being second, half a length away, Garcia a tiring third and Steadfast a fast coming last. A hot fight was witnessed in the homestretch between Nellie G. and Steadfast, but the gray mare came away 75 yards from the wire and won by three parts of a length. Steadfast second, two lengths from Quarterstaff, who was as far from Garcia, who was last. Time, 1:29 1/2.

Ahi P. was backed down from 8 to 5 to 6 to 5 in the last race, Sidney going at 2 1/2 to 1 and Solitude at 3 to 1. Orta was at 8, Wildflower 15 and Louise at from 20 to 30 to 1. Ahi P. led Wildflower passing the half, with Solitude third. The latter passed Ahi P. as soon as they were straightened out in the homestretch, and drawing away with wonderful ease, won in a gallop by two lengths, Ahi P. second, three from Sidney. Time, 1:15.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY, MAY 4.

This was a day of fine sport, and some 1,500 enjoyed it immensely. Six events were run off, and in no less than three of these were there nose and nose finishes. Remus, the Elmwood Stock Farm's half-brother to Ledalia, and reputed to be chain lightning, got away badly in the opening race, and was an ignominiously beaten last. Carmel won by a nose from Tillie S. Green Hock, B. C. Holly's American Derby colt, won by an eyelash from the fast-coming Charmer, and the second favorite was downed. Almont could not do better than finish third behind the easy winner, Steadfast, and the driven out Red Cloud. Steadfast's mite of a jockey, "Corn-cob" Kinney, came in for no end of applause. Inkerman, backed from 4 to 1 down to 2 1/2, won in a canter by three lengths from Bronco, who had his rider changed twice. Finally Mike Kelly piloted the big Nevada huck-jumper. Red Cloud came up in the fifth race again to tackle the once good Martinet. The last-named was at 1 to 10, Red Cloud 12 to 1 and Wild Robin 50 to 1. Martinet and Red Cloud, together, ran slow to the homestretch, where Martinet, stale and clearly not "at himself," got the lash in large quantities, only to be beaten a nose by the long shot in a vigorous drive. A great shout went up by the long-shot players, and the faces of numerous plungers on the horse that it was popularly supposed couldn't lose told a tale of woe pitiful to behold. It showed how fast good things sometimes crawl, and taken altogether Red Cloud's victory was the most crushing blow to the talent of the entire meeting. Lady Gwen, with a length the best of the start, won cantering by three lengths, with Sidney, Vanity and Broad Church behind her as named, heads apart. Carmel opened a warm favorite in the first race, four and a half furlongs, but it soon became spread abroad that Remus was another Bonnie Jean colt, and the odds fell rapidly from 3 1/2 to 1 to 9 to 5, Carmel going to 2 1/2 to 1 and Tillie S. to 3. Carmel led all the way, against the rails, but had not Burlingame slumbered, Tillie S. would have won easily. As it was, Carmel won by a very scant nose, Tillie S. second, three lengths from the despised Button, Polaski fourth and the "good thing" last. Charmer was at all times an odds-on favorite in the second race, six and one-half furlongs. Ledalia was played down from 4 to 1 to 3 to 1, and a wild plunge was made on Vendome also toward the close, he being at 5 to 1. Green Hock receded from 4 to 1 to 7 to 1. Orta was at 8 to 1. Vendome and Green Hock drew away from the field, Orta being third passing the half, Charmer fourth and Ledalia last. It was Green Hock, Vendome, Charmer into the homestretch, where Green Hock looked an easy winner, leading, as he was, by about two lengths. Charmer, under strong urging, gained rapidly on Green Hock, and in a rattling drive Holly's colt just managed to win by a nose from Charmer, who was three lengths from Ledalia. Time, 1:23 1/4.

Almont was an even-money favorite in the third race, one mile. Red Cloud and Initiation, at 4 to 1 each, and Steadfast at 6 to 1, were well played. The last-named had a cunning little fellow on his back that had never in his young life ridden in public, and his stable name was "Corn-cob" Kinney. Red Cloud led till nearing the quarter pole, when Initiation went up and led a neck. Red Cloud again assumed command, and Almont came from the rear. Passing the half-pole it was Red Cloud first by a neck, Almont second by a length, Initiation third, St. Patrick fourth and Steadfast last, two lengths behind the Encino Stable gelding. Half-way between the half and three-quarters Wee Kinney made his move with Steadfast, and he said good-bye to Initiation and St. Patrick as they swung into the homestretch, and in a jiffy had collared Red Cloud and Almont. Near the rails came Steadfast and little Kinnie, and half way down the straight it was apparent that the little son of Sobrante and Narcola held them all safe. St. Patrick was in a pocket. Steadfast won easily by one and one-half lengths, while Red Cloud, in a hard drive the last sixteenth, managed to win place money by a nose from Almont. St. Patrick was fourth and Initiation last. Time, 1:44. The cheering for Steadfast's good little rider was loud and long continued. Inkerman and Huguenot went to the post equal favorites at 2 1/2 to 1 in the fourth race. Bronco's rider was changed twice, Carter and Williams being supplemented by Mike Kelly. Gladiator led at the start and passing the half. In the homestretch it was The Drummer, Bronco, Gladiator, Inkerman, Huguenot, (the latter off last). Inkerman, once in the straight, made suckers of his opponents, winning easily by three lengths from Bronco, who was half a length in front of Huguenot. Time, 1:15 1/4.

Then came the "dump" of the meeting. Martinet was at 1 to 10, and played for thousands at those figures, Red Cloud at 10 and 12 to 1, Wild Robin at 50. Red Cloud and Martinet drew away going around the first turn, and had it ding-dong clear to the homestretch, which Martinet reached a head in advance, ridden vigorously. Every second the plungers expected to see Martinet draw away, but he didn't draw worth a cent, and, in a hustling, slashing finish, through superior jockeyship, Red Cloud won by a short head, Wild Robin thirty lengths away. Time, 1:51 1/4. Miss Walling was played for a killing in the last race, as was Broad Church. Lady Gwen and Sidney were well supported also. Lady Gwen led at the start by a length, and was not headed, winning easily by three lengths from Sidney, who had a great struggle to secure the place from Vanity by a head. Only a head behind Vanity came Broad Church. Miss Walling was never in the hunt, finishing eighth. Time, 1:16 1/4.

The Eaton Horse of Maine.

A Vermont horseman asks Minor and Farmer for information about the Eaton Horse 122. J. W. Thompson, in his work on "Noted Maine Horses," writes of him as follows:

The Eaton Horse was a sorrel stallion with mane and tail the same color, a horse of immense size and substance, standing 16 1/2 hands high, and weighing in good flesh 1,450 pounds. He was foaled in 1842, and hence the same age as the Drew horse, and one year older than Rising Sun. He was bred by Thomas Pelton, of Anson, Me., near Madison Bridge, got by the Avery horse, and his dam the Pelton mare (so-called), by Winthrop Messenger.

Pelton sold him when two years old to E. D. Robinson, of Wilton, and he to Elijah L. Eaton, who owned him several years and from whom he took his name. Eaton sold him in 1854, to William Beals, of Winthrop, who kept him for three years, and then sold him to Fanning & Allen, of Nashville, Tenn., to which place he was taken in April, 1857. Up to March, 1873, nothing was known in Maine concerning the subsequent history of the Eaton Horse, but in Wallace's Monthly for the above date, Mr. A. J. McKinnin, of Nashville, says that "the Eaton Horse was kept in Nashville but one season, where he was not appreciated, and he was taken from thence to Hopkinsville, Ky." He further says that "he left several good horses in Nashville, two or three of which made trotters."

The name of Eaton Horse appears but once as a sire in the 230 list, as follows:

Grey Stranger, gr. g. by the Eaton Horse..... 2:30

Among his descendants are two more in the 230 list which trace in the direct male line to the Eaton Horse.

hepherd Knapp Jr., gr. g. by Shepherd F. Knapp, son of Eaton Horse..... 2:27 1/4
Gratuel, ch. g. by Brown Horse, he by a Sandy River Horse, son of Eaton Horse..... 2:28 1/2

Among his entire sons are Shepherd F. Knapp, Beals Horse, Mount Vernon, taken to Philadelphia, Keuebec Messenger, Sandy River Horse, or as he was perhaps better known, "Sandy River trotter," Bennett Horse, who founded a family of considerable local repute; Red Cloud, Oaks Horse, Roman Eaton, Black Morgan and many more. The most prominent of the above, perhaps, is the chestnut stallion Shepherd F. Knapp, that went to England. He (Knapp) was bred by George Shell of Turner, Me., got by the Eaton Horse, and his dam by Whalebone, known by many as the Clark horse, and he by Sherman, son of Justin Morgan. Knapp was owned from a weanling to a three-year-old in Backfield, adjoining Turner, and was regarded as an exceedingly promising colt, and there was talk of forming a stock company to breed and retain him for stock purposes. The Eaton and Whalebone families were popular at that time, but the project fell through, and he was sold and taken to New York, and afterwards to England. As a three-year-old he got Shepherd Knapp Jr., 2:27 1/4, and the sorrel mare Carouche, 2:35 1/4, out of less than a dozen, which proves that he would have been a successful sire here, whatever he may have been in England. Knapp was a trotter himself and won a race of two miles and a half, near Paris, France, in 1865, the time being 6 minutes, 14 seconds, a trifle better than 2:30 to the mile.

The daughters of the Eaton Horse were famous breeders, and have produced the following, with records inside of 2:30. Latham, blk. h. by Gilbert Knox, dam by Eaton Horse..... 2:29 1/4
Sann Curtis, b. g. by Winthrop Morrill, dam by Eaton Horse..... 2:28 1/2
J. G. Morrill, ch. g. by Winthrop Morrill, dam by Eaton Horse..... 2:29

Beside the above there descended from the Eaton Horse Daniel Boone, What Is It, Village Maid, Troublesome, Copper Bottom, and many other fast and useful animals.

JOHN SPLAN, in a recent letter to an Eastern paper, says: "I have just returned from Kentucky and must say I never saw good horses as scarce as they are now. All the talk about the horse business being overdone is hosh. More people are looking for good useful horses than at any time in the past five years. The only thing the bottom has fallen out of is the demand for pedigrees attached to cheap horses. It has gone never to return. The next thing to go will be the combination sale business. No practical horseman need worry, as the business for him is better than ever."

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

MAYBOY—PLOWBOY—I wrote Mayboy and the compositor changed it into Ploughboy, and the proofreader could not be expected to be well enough posted on oldtime horse phrases to correct the mistake. In fact a part of the error is due to my using a word, which was common in the days of my boyhood, to denote a showy young horse with curving neck and flashing eye, tail carried proudly when first out of the stable. A sort of "flatcatcher" for those who wanted a peacocky saddle horse, but which a person with a very limited knowledge of "form" would reject at a glance. English writers give Maybird as the title for that sort of a "garron" and it is certainly better than Mayboy and in that case there would have been no chance for changing it to Plowbird. Mayhey thus explains: "The phrase last employed—'Maybird'—may not be intelligible to all readers. Therefore, the equestrian must pardon the author, if he interrupts the course of the present description to explain the meaning. A 'Maybird' implies an animal of no great height, with some showy points, but with no constitution to stand work. These quadrupeds are kept during the spring seasons in the stables of most London dealers; and they are shown to young gentlemen as handsome saddle horses. The majority, however, soon succumb to work; many yield as the warm weather increases; and but few endure even to a second season." It will be noticed that Dr. Mayhey uses two words to denote the animal; and this would also be a guard against change. The use I made of it was in connection with a definition of "quality" in horses which has started on another tour of the world, and which is somewhat misleading. The sentence as written was "I have heard a 'weed' extolled as an embodiment of quality, and a 'Mayboy' pronounced a paragon when both together were not worth their accoutrements." According to the paragraph which was the basis of the criticism there might be no lack of quality in a veritable Maybird, but among horsemen it is only when combined with evident force that it is thought worthy of laudation. The ideal racehorse must possess this constituent in perfection. Many years ago in the neighborhood of thirty summers and winters, I purchased an Englishman a full set of prints of noted English racehorses and racing scenes. Twenty-odd which cost something over one hundred dollars. With one exception all were given away that being Beeewing, the dam of Newminster. Englishmen who knew "T" and mare" well, pronounced it an admirable likeness, and as it was copied from a painting by Herring and colored by hand, by a noted colorist, in all probability it is nearly correct, the fault being, if there is a fault, in hinging head, neck and legs. Immensely powerful wherever power is needed, the whole of the body, arms and gaskins being so nearly a model that I am unable to say where change could be made without injury. The pose is perfect and in all the years I have studied that portrait it has never lost its charm. Not to me alone. A good friend gave warning that if he ever got the opportunity he would confiscate it, and I can well understand the feeling which prompts a theft of that kind. In 1859 I was doing the big St. Louis Fair for the Evening Democrat. Wearing a press badge the superintendent of the art gallery notified me that it would be closed for a short period at noon when a better view could be obtained than during the crowded intervals. Excepting a few workmen no one was present. On a small panel was the representation of a namesake, in a scene wherein he did himself much credit, but showed such a lamentable non-appreciation of what he might have enjoyed, according to the rendering of the artist who depicted the occurrence, that admiration of his nerve power in resisting temptation was overcome by a stronger feeling—such as most young fellows of ardent temperament would harbor before a painting which showed as perfect a type of female loveliness, as the "After Herring" does of a rocemare. Something of the same temptation, though in a modified degree, to break the seventh commandment, that this namesake of old had to fracture another, and therefore extra caution was observed in not tantalizing our friend by giving him so good an opportunity as was offered me in St. Louis a third of a century ago. The letter press under the print tells how Beeewing won 51 races in 64 starts, and it must be borne in mind that this was when longer races were in vogue, and when great racehorses were "tramping the turf" in companies. No wonder she was the dam of the founder of a dynasty when form and performances were so happily united. The first time I saw Firenze she struck me as being a good deal after the pattern of Beeewing, but the last time, as she was within a few days of foaling, and therefore not "in shape" to compare with the picture. She has since "thrown" a filly to Salvator, and if that one is not "full of quality" and with the other essentials to make that effective, heaps of people will be grievously disappointed.

"AUDIENCE."—Now that Aurelius and Iconoclast have commenced the good work of correcting the phraseology of writers on the horse, I hope that they will take to task the very many scribers who persist in using the word "audience" when mentioning the assemblage of spectators on race courses and trotting tracks. It is surely a misnomer. People go to races to see the spectacle, not to listen to the cadence of the footfalls of gallopers, which Virgil described so melodiously, or the measured rat-tat rat-tat of the impact of steel-shod hoofs with the hard surface of trotting ground. A blind man can be an auditor, not so handy for him to be a spectator, though I knew one blind man, Phil Casswell, who enjoyed the racing from sound alone. But that was supplemented by having an attendant who kept him informed of the position of the horses he was most interested in. His knowledge of the moving was entirely gained through auricular sources, and were it possible to have an assemblage of race-goers of like character it would be eminently proper to call it a combination of auditors and spectators, and, per consequence, audience would be half-right.

Then there is another kind of turf amusement which is supported by an audience, just as rightly named as the frequenters of theaters and lecture rooms. That is when city pool-rooms were the order. And right here I must enter an emphatic protest against making pool-selling the scapegoat to carry all the odium of turf gambling. Bookmaking is the life of these resorts, and though pool-selling has been a feature in racing which was in progress thousands of miles away from the buyers, it makes a small figure when compared with transactions in the books. When "pauper-ally" was lined with these resorts, and when the rooms were crowded with excited auditors, the scene was lively. These fervent listeners were not attracted by any of the brilliant lights of the platform or stars of the stage. The oratorical display was, to say the least, confined to a strange jargon of words, which, to an unenlightened listener, would not have carried any intelligence, much less account for the evident excitement. The tinkle of a small bell would at once hush the tumult of hundreds of voices, and the hoarse tones giving the changes of position as the far-away animals rushed from start to finish, had little fascination to an ear that was not trained to such uncouth, rasping notes. My experience was not extensive enough to rehearse the jargon of words, but if memory is not entirely at fault the vocabulary was quite limited.

But in taking exceptions to using the word audience, in describing the attendants at a bona fide race course, I shall not fall into the same error as Aurelius did in not proposing a substitute for the tabooed equine, although whenever the absurdity of the term, now in constant use, is recognized any reporter will not need prompting to find a suitable word or words. An audience, tersely defined, a gathering of hearers. An assemblage, a collection of individuals; spectators, those who look on. Synonyms are not lacking. When the stands, balconies, hetting ring and other places are thronged then crowd takes the place of assemblage, which the adjective prefix will afford a gauge to estimate. There must be a throng to constitute a crowd, assembled without much order or regularity. Again it may be stated, however, that when the wrong word is discarded the reporters who assemble at race and trotting meetings are bright enough to present suitable phraseology, and it is ten to one that those who have used the word audience, never gave a thought to it being right or wrong.

SCORING.—On Tuesday last there was a general "working out" among some of the trotters at the Oakland track. Five were working together, three of them four-year-olds which are likely to rank high in the trotting circles. A Dexter Prince, an Anteo and a Mambrino Wilkes. Apparently so closely matched in speed that when they come together in an actual race picking the winner will be no easy task. Quite an attractive spectacle to witness them in their mimic strife, but sadly marred by the prolonged scoring that was surely a tiresome feature. How many times I do not know, but judging from the number of games of draw pedro two of the spectators sought to while away the tedium, consequent upon the hack and forward movements, which were played, the prolongation was like "linked-sweetness long drawn out" and must have taken a good half hour. When the chances were favorable for an interminable amount of scoring in every trotting race that had as many as five starters, it was an important part of the curriculum to teach the trotting youngsters especially, this part of the programme, and accustom them to a state of affairs absolutely certain to be presented. But when it is just as certain that hereafter this system will not prevail, and that in lieu thereof brevity will rule, it will be just as important that horses be taught to get off without waste of time. Much time will be saved on working out days, and with less likelihood of ruffling the temper of those which are of a sanguine temperament, while the lymphatic class will be benefited by not expecting to be pulled up a hundred yards or so from the starting point. It is not altogether unlikely that the practice of working out gangs of horses together, and scoring and scoring until it suited the will of all the drivers to make a start, has done a good deal to make "had actors" at the post. Expecting several false moves before they were sent around the circuit of the track, they are not in readiness when the word is given at an early stage of the proceedings. The plan I advocated last year of placing the starter a little way in the rear of the stand has many merits, though it is one of those radical changes which "trotting men," or at least a great majority of them are loath to accept. The innovation introduced at the Fall meeting of placing the starter on the opposite side of the track from the judges, and making starting his sole and only duty, worked well, and it will not be long before the owners of trotters will acquiesce in following the racing method of stationing the starter a short distance from the starting point. There is one objection urged that was very trivial, horses breaking between the starter and starting point, when that can be no worse than if the mishap occurred the same number of yards after the start. It would appear that the change having proved so beneficial in racing that one of the same kind should be accepted in trotting, but strange as it may seem, a few ultra bigots have their objections on their antipathy to all racing methods, and still stranger there is one "turf paper" in the United States which advances the same argument.

GOOD FEELING.—Last week one of my texts was "good prospects," and pleasing as was the theme, a still pleasanter is that which gives the title for this paper. It was published in the papers that on the conclusion of the Blood Horse meeting Mr. Henry Schwartz would open his at the Oakland track and continue it indefinitely. While I put little faith in the printed stories, and felt the utmost confidence that Mr. Schwartz was too sensible to inaugurate a warfare which could not result otherwise than detrimental to the horse interests of his country, it was more satisfactory to hear the denial from this own lips. Saturday last I met Mr. Schwartz on the Bay District course, and he informed me that he had no such intention. That his meeting would not open until the trotting meeting came to a close, and that before the fall circuit commenced it would be brought to an end. This will give him June and July, or nearly the whole of three months, as the trotting meeting take three of the June days, which will be long enough for one race meeting. The California Jockey Club terminates that meeting on May 20th, and the two weeks which will intervene, when the trotters will be on the stage, will give the race horses a chance to recuperate. During the Oakland race meeting the trotters can be conning their lessons for rehearsal when the circuit begins, so that all will have a chance for a "fling at fame and fortune" without any clashing of interests, and what is far worse, a stirring up of bad blood. Hawthorne and Garfield should be a potent monitor to avoid the rancor which follows turf antagonism. Competition may be the life of business in a mercantile sense, and competition between racing associations may also inure to the benefit of all parties. But bitter rivalry cannot be called by a name which should represent emulation to excel, and the aim, when that feeling predominates, is to injure the rival if even there should result mutual loss. There was a bloody culmination to the Chicago feud, and those who were instrumental in bringing about the crisis must sincerely lament, in their reflective moments, the vindictive feelings which led to riot and death. For all that the lesson was of such recent date, there is the likelihood of another struggle of something the same character, though it cannot reach the magnitude of the Chicago war.

That is the contest between the clubs which are on opposite sides of the Mississippi river, St. Louis and East St. Louis. The managers of both courses are well aware that their action will be seriously detrimental to racing interests, and therefore it appears rather singular that a compromise could not be effected. War, however, in the center of racing is not nearly so deplorable as it would be on this far-off side of the country. In the first place the population is too limited to draw upon to support two meetings not much further apart than those on different sides of the Mississippi, and there are few horses here in comparison with the huge army of the Orient. Still worse is the acerbity of feeling which is sure to follow, and nearly certain to extend its sway to friends of both parties. "The press" also becomes partisan, and what would be "idle words" when spoken, rankle and sting when type lends its potent aid to vilify and abuse. There is no necessity for jangles. There is for harmony, and whoever is is not willing to forego private interests, or personal feelings, for the benefit of the cause cannot be classed as a supporter of California or its interests.

There is a clear sky and good prospects all around, now that good feelings prevail.

TROTTING STALLIONS AT DEL PASO.—There was little time during my late visit to Rancho del Paso to look at anything but the thoroughbreds. Small space for that, but owing to the admirable arrangements to economize time which Mr. Mackey had made, scarcely a minute was lost. At one of the stables on the bottom, however, where a number of yearling fillies were housed, or rather in an adjoining stable, were two of the trotting sires, Knight and Alhert W. The first-named I had never seen before, the last an old and highly valued acquaintance. Knight is an in-bred Wilkes, being by Woodford Wilkes and his dam by Adrian Wilkes. He brought his double grand sire vividly to my remembrance, though it is twenty-five years since I saw the noted founder of a notable family, although if that recollection can be depended upon, the youngster is a horse of higher finish. As the dam of his sire was by Woodford Mambrino, a thoroughbred cross is not very far away, but the striking likeness is, doubtless, due to inbreeding. Knight is a very handsome shade of brown, his color could hardly be excelled in the eyes of a most exacting critic, and his form superior. "The boys" speak highly of his trotting proclivities, and do not hesitate in claiming a very fast mark for him whenever given the opportunity. He should be a fast trotter, as form, action and breeding are not the only basis to build the estimate upon, as his sister, Jenny Wilkes, has a record of 2:21½, and Knight got a three-year-old record of 2:23½ in 1891 which gives it additional significance, as that was before the era of the pneumatic low-wheel speed-promoter. But the number of seconds that his admirers say he will surely subtract from that mark is so startling that readers will have to guess for themselves. The grandam of Knight was by Mambrino Patchen, so that there is a double cross of the staunch blood of Mambrino Chief, all the coarseness which might come from a doubling of that strain eliminated by finer currents.

I was favorably influenced to Albert W. before I ever saw him. The nominations to the Occidental Stake of 1881 closed on January 1st of that year. Just before that date a stranger came into the office to make inquiries in relation thereto. Fred Crocker had trotted in 2:25½, and Sweetheart in 2:26½, both being eligible for the stake. The visitor proved to be Mr. Waldstein, the breeder of Albert W., and his queries were directed to the probabilities of the champion two-year-olds being named in the Occident. I told him that it was quite likely that such would be the case, but after a moment's study he replied, "No matter, I have a good colt and will take the chances." It was a spirited resolve, and that "spunk" brought the proper recompense, victory, when the odds appeared so great against any others than one of the two which had startled the trotting fraternity all over the country.

I never saw Albert W. when he looked so well as he did on that sunshiny April day. He is a fine specimen of the highly-bred trotter, and had his colts been granted the opportunities which others have enjoyed, there is little question that he would stand still higher than he does. Mr. Waldstein also bred Little Albert, and he, too, was quite a favorite of mine when a two-year-old, for though he was of a diminutive pattern, hence his name, he was a "clean-gaited" youngster with a nervous organization to carry him through. His sire was "game as a pebble," though that old-time comparison is rather difficult of comprehension, and if it ever had a meaning that has been lost in the mists of the "hoary past." He trotted many trying races with a hook as big as two should be and never flinched however hard the struggle.

By-and-by the trotters from Rancho del Paso will have high places in the Year Books, vying with the Racing Calendar in telling the story of the aptitude of that place for breeding fast horses, racers, trotters and pacers.

STEEPLE-CHASING.—The daily papers say that grand steeple-chasing in the future is marked on the trestle board of the Bay District course. While not always positively right in their prophecies about turf affairs, in all probability, in this case, they pronounce with authority. Just as a theatre manager is on the watch for novelties, and does not hesitate to go far outside of the legitimate to attract public attention, it may be that race course officials will adopt the same tactics, and successfully, too, until the farcical features are made manifest. In the first place there is not a possibility of getting anything but a farcical steeple-chase course on the circumscribed grounds. Down into the hollow and up again, a hole might be dug in the clay, which is the super-stratum of the lower part of the basin, which would hold water, and a horse which could make a good standing jump clear it if not too wide. Or by excavating and puddling the sand, in the portion allotted for carriages, might be made a receptacle for fluid which a little stretch of the imagination could transform into a taking "water-jump," and stone walls, and hedges, fine barred gates, a plowed field, and even a stretch of turf for the finishing run could be improvised for the occasion. A forty-acre field, though that is rather more acreage than there is inside of the track, is larger than the stage of a theatre, which would give scope for bigger machinery than is used in the representation of the County Fair, and I am told that the counterfeit is actually more real than its prototype. If the purpose be to burlesque the "cross-country sport" there is an admirable chance, and if it can be managed so as to evolve the dangerous part it will be no worse than many other spectacular ventures. A steeple chase on each of the racing days is the announcement, and it is claimed the whole of the coming winter months is to be occupied that will mean at least one hundred of the exciting events.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

The Bilz Carts and Sulkies.

The little village of Pleasanton, Alameda County, has, through the performances of the trotters and pacers that are trained there, achieved a world-wide reputation. It is the winter home of a coterie of trainers that are the stars of their profession. Their endorsement and use of an article at once places it in the front rank of "indispensables" for training, and as the celebrated carts and sulkies manufactured in Pleasanton by the pioneer, J. A. Bilz, are used by all the knights of the sulky there, they have been adopted by every stock farm in California. While on a visit to see Messrs. Salishury, Sanders, Kelly, McDowell, Shaner, Lawrence and a number of other horsemen, we could not pass by the establishment of J. A. Bilz, for on the sidewalk under the huddling louest tress were boxes filled with pneumatic sulkies, top carts, breaking carts and carts for training colts to be shipped to Chicago, New York and San Francisco.

Mr. J. A. Bilz has been forty-three years in the business of manufacturing vehicles, and has been granted as many patents for improvements in them and farming implements as any man in California. He employs thirty-five men the year round, blacksmiths, wheelwrights, machinists, painters and trimmers, and the class of work turned out daily will compare favorably with that of any similar establishment in this state. Every piece of steel is tested, and the good reputation his work has, is one reason why his business is always increasing. His road cart is the simplest, strongest, lightest and best ever used, and for driving colts it cannot be surpassed. Frou Frou made his record in one of them, for there was no pneumatic sulky known when she gained the crown. Everyone who has ever used one of these handy carts endorses them. The rage for pneumatic sulkies came last summer, and Mr. Bilz designed and manufactured one that is considered by John Kelly, Andy McDowell, Jos. Cairn Simpson and Millard Sanders, to equal, if not surpass, every other one made. It is light, though strongly made, and has points of superiority unapproached by any other. A large number have been ordered and his force of men are very busy manufacturing them. At the Chicago exhibition they will be shown in competition with those of every other make. The agent in this city is J. A. McKerron. Besides these vehicles Mr. Bilz patented an orchard plow that gives universal satisfaction. Nearly every orchardist in this State has one. It is cheaper, lighter and stronger, besides it can turn up the soil within three inches of the trees without injuring the trunks or limbs in any way.

Time Will Tell.

Was it Marvin, was it Stanford, was it Electioneer, was it California climate, was it the hush system that gave to Palo Alto the record-breakers year after year, or did they all assist in producing the remarkable results. Marvin was not there last year and, as the showing made was, in many respects, the equal of the previous years when he was there, Marvin cannot have all the credit. To be sure, there was no two-year-old to trot in 2:10½, no three-year-old to trot in 2:10½, but a yearling did trot in 2:25½, and this is faster than Marvin ever drove one, two two-year-olds did trot in better than 2:20, and this was never before accomplished at Palo Alto in one year, and a four-year-old stallion trotted in 2:12, a much faster record than Marvin gave one during his thirteen years at Palo Alto. Many thought when Marvin left Palo Alto that little was left, and Palo Alto would never again be the Palo Alto it was while Marvin was there, but the results show that Stanford and the trainers that follow his instructions are still able to produce speed far in advance of all other stock farms in the country, and until Mr. Marvin brings forth some youngsters from his new home somewhere near the equal of the Palo Alto performers, he cannot receive any more than his share of the credit belonging to that establishment. At Miller & Shibley's Marvin has practically the same material to work with that he had at Palo Alto, in fact Prospect Hill Farm is called the Palo Alto of the east. Their foundation blood came from Palo Alto, and the number of animals to be found there by the great Electioneer are not a few and the get of his sons are a great many. Now, if Marvin does not, with the same material he has moulded for the past fourteen years, show the world now and then a phenomenal youngster somewhere near the equal of those he developed at Palo Alto, then it will be almost a certain thing that the California climate does more in producing extreme speed than Marvin did or any other trainer can, and also more than the blood of Electioneer.—Aurican Trotter.

Pierce's Annual Sale.

On May 25th there will be a sale of trotters, carriage horses and horses of all work from Pierce's Santa Rosa Stock Farm. Seekers after fast, trotters and pacers will find just what they want at this sale, for there are representatives of all the leading sires that have made California trotters famous. Everything offered will be sold without reserve. Nearly every animal is broken single and double and registered standard. A glance at the advertisement will show that there has not been such a list offered in California before. Over sixty head will be sold. The sale will commence at 10 A. M. In a future issue we will give a more extended notice of the listed.

The Sunapee Saibling.

I was under obligations to Dr. Bashford Dean, of the Department of Biology, Columbia College, for material assistance in determining the following anatomical description of the Sunapee saibling:

Two specimens, of one pound and two pounds respectively, were carefully examined:

In young specimens, the gill cover overlaps the root of the pectoral; not in adults. There are spots on the dorsal fin, and attention should be called to a post-ventral dermal appendage.

Such differences in individuals from the same locality would seem to impair the value of anatomical peculiarities as diagnostic marks. In fact, in a most able paper on the saiblings, published in The American Angler (February 7, 1891), Prof. Garman states that, in foreign specimens examined by him, the dentition differs, corresponding more or less nearly with that of the New Hampshire fish—that differences of age imply radical differences in teeth, fins, stomach, and especially gill-rakers, which latter Prof. Garman believes to be "important in function early in life, and to deteriorate with change to coarser food." The deterioration consists in a distortion not alike in any two individuals; "the rakers curve and twist in every direction like a lot of writhing worms suddenly become rigid." In old specimens they lose their points and grow club-shaped. As to the number of gill-rakers, in saibling where Dr. Bean found ten and Prof. Jordan fourteen to fifteen, Prof. Garman counted fourteen to eighteen. And in the New Hampshire charr, where the first four fourteen and the second eleven to twelve, Prof. Garman counted thirteen to sixteen. In our specimens, eighteen were counted in each row.

The external characteristics of the Sunapee fish, however distinguish it conspicuously from the three other charrs of New England. Its graceful build, small and delicately shaped head, small mouth, excessively developed fins, more or less markedly emarginate caudal, spots without the blue areola, and unmottled back, at once separate it from the brook trout and link it as closely as its structural peculiarities with Austrian, British and Swiss congeners. The nuptial coloration is gorgeous beyond example among our indigenous salmonidae. Throughout the spring and summer the back is dark sea green, blending on the sides into a flashing silver, which in turn deepens below into a rich cream. But, as the October pairing time approaches, the fish is metamorphosed into a creature of indistinguishable brilliancy. The deep, purplish blue of the back and shoulders now seems to dissolve into a dreamy sheen of amethyst, through which the inconspicuous pale lemon spots of mid-summer flame out in points of yellow or vermilion fire, while below the lateral line all is dazzling orange. The fins catch the hue of the adjacent parts, and pectoral, ventral, anal and lower lobe of caudal are ribboned with a broad, white margin. As in the case of the Windermere charr, these white margins of the fins are very conspicuous in specimens seen swimming in the water. There are great differences in intensity of general coloration, and the females are not usually as gaudily tinted as the males. The intermediate types and different depths of hue observable in an autumn school recall the public promenade in a West India city, where all shades of transition are found, from pure white to tawny black. Those who have seen the flashing hordes on the spawning beds, in all their glory of color and majesty of action, pronounce it a spectacle never to be forgotten.

Sunapee saibling kept in confinement entirely loose the sexual instinct, and with it the wedding garment. So sensitive are the females that their removal from the spawning beds to the State Hatchery on the opposite shore of the lake, only one mile distant, seriously interferes with the maturing process, so that it is almost impossible to be returned to the water several times during the operation. Hence, as far as possible, ripe specimens are selected on the natural spawning beds, and there stripped rapidly and returned to the lake. Instances are not exceptional in which females refuse to part with their eggs, and carry them over to the next season. This tallies with Cholmondeley-Pennell's suggestion that some of the Windermere charr in alternate years.

Although a vigorous fighter, the white trout is very easily injured, the prick of the hook often being followed by fatal consequences, especially in young specimens. Hundreds are thus unavoidably killed every summer. In this respect the Sunapee charr is very unlike the blue-back of Maine, of which Commissioner Stanley said:

"They are a hardy fish, and nearly as tenacious of life as the eel or bullhead. I have frequently seen them alive in the morning after lying all night on the shore."

One other phrase of anoreolis life is a marked tendency to deformity. Remarkable differences in shape, as well as coloration, are normal to the quadrons and octorons of the Sunapee spawning beds; but these differences are sometimes carried to the verge of distortion or even monstrosity. Humped backs are not infrequent; but the most repulsive, and, at the same time, most common malformation, is the shrinking of the mature fish into an eel-like shape, with abdominal respiration, and an intensely reproachful lumbar look in the cavernous eyes which fix your gaze with a mysterious intelligence. The death scene of such a fish will haunt one for days, tempting him to speculation in the field of metempsychosis.

Prof. Garman has proclaimed his belief in the identity of the Sunapee, Dan Hole and Flood's Pond charrs with the European saibling, and that "the affinities of these forms are closer to the saibling by way of an Atlantic steamer than by way of Greenland and Iceland."

Prof. Jordan has said: "The American charr is probably not a distinct species, but native to the waters where it is now found, and not an importation from Europe." "Should it appear," he continues, "that the saibling in that part of Germany from which specimens have been brought to America, have gill-rakers like those of the Sunapee trout, this opinion would be reconsidered." Prof. Garman has disposed of the gill-raker argument, but, as far as I know, Prof. Jordan has not further expressed himself in regard to the Sunapee form, although, in a recent article on the salmon and trout of the Pacific Coast, he states that in the lakes of Greenland and the eastern part of British America the European charr is as abundant as it is in Europe, a fact which has only lately been manifest."

Senator Creighton, of Ottawa, Canada, writes under date of February 16, 1893: "From the height and character of Sunapee Lake, it is not at all improbable that an Arctic variety may have survived there which has perished or been transformed elsewhere south of fifty-five degrees or sixty degrees north latitude. Arctic species must have been common to all our waters in the glacial period."

Prof. Garman writes November 17, 1892, that, in his opinion, "no good evidence has been advanced of the existence of this species on this continent previous to 1884." It is a matter of record, however, that 60,000 German saibling eggs, the gift of the Deutsche Fischer Verein, were sent to New Hampshire in January, 1881. It is further to be taken into consideration that the writer of this paper had in his possession at Sunapee Lake, in the summer of 1882, a four-pound specimen of the saibling in question—which could not have developed from fry hatched the preceding year. No saibling have ever been sent to Maine by the United States Fish Commission; and, as has been shown, it is impossible that the fish in Flood's Pond can be descendants of the New Hampshire charr. The theory that there was nothing to prevent the Salvelinus alpinus of Sunapee Lake, in recent years, from descending the Connecticut River to Long Island Sound, and thence making its way into streams and connecting lakes from the shores of Connecticut to those of Greenland, may be disposed of in a single word—dams.

The Sunapee charr is undoubtedly a representative of the European form, but reasons have been given why it is believed to be a native of this continent. It differs no more extensively from the several European varieties than they do among themselves. Von dem Borne, Profs. Benecke and Dalmar, Wittmack, of Berlin, all speak of important differences in form, size and color, according to age, sex, season and habitat. All authorities allude to the solid sea green or dark blue of the black, the yellowish sides and the red or orange belly. Benecke and Dalmer refer picturesquely to the half-moon tail. As to spots, there is endless variety. Some forms have none; some, large spots; others, small—orange and red—round singularly, in certain species, each spot is surrounded by a white ring or halo. The fins take their color from the back and sides, and have the broad white band. The foreign saibling is gregarious like the Sunapee form, lives similarly on crustaceans, worms and fish food, and seeks the deepest and coldest waters.

The greater the altitude, the more intense the coloration and the smaller the fish. In Lake Zug, the saibling run eight or nine to the pound; in Lake Geneva, they are said to attain a weight of over twenty pounds. The flesh is white or red, which, however, makes no difference in the flavor. The foreign saibling is taken in nets, or with hook and line; it is eaten fresh or smoked.

Col. Hodge has attempted to prove a dissimilarity between the German saibling and the Sunapee charr, by crossing each with our common brook trout, and noticing differences in the markings of the resulting fry. He writes me that the eggs of the cross between the German saibling and our brook trout are larger than those of the cross between the Sunapee anoreolis and the brook trout, and that there are conspicuous differences in the fry of the two hybrids, both of which are fertile. Crossing our brook trout with other forms of the foreign saibling would certainly give different results again, so the experiments of Col. Hodge cannot be regarded as conclusive beyond establishing the fact that the anoreolis of Sunapee is in no way connected with the particular form of German saibling sent to New Hampshire in 1881; but this is a most important fact in the induction of its aboriginality to New England. Col. Hodge further states another supposed difference: "The anoreolis does not seek the streams to spawn; the saibling does." But the saibling does not always spawn in streams; the rule is the other way.

At Windermere, the charr spawn both on the rocky bed of the Bratly and in the lake. Schroeder, in his "Katechismus der Kunstlichen Fischzucht," expressly states that the saibling in October and November ascends from the depths in which it usually lives, and spawns off sandy shores in the lakes. Profs. Benecke and Dalmar describe great schools of fish spawning in October or later, even as late as January and March, on sand or gravel near the shores. The Sunapee fish, then, simply follows the practice of its European relatives.

Finally, there can be no doubt as to the economic value of this new fish. It is one of the most prolific of our salmonoids, the female averaging 1,200 eggs to the pound, or 200 more than the brook trout. It is also a singularly rapid grower where smelt food abounds. The extreme weight known to have been attained in Sunapee is about eight pounds, although accounts exist of much larger fish in this water, and of specimens from Dan Hole and Flood's ponds weighing from fifteen to twenty pounds.

The Sunapee saibling takes live bait readily, and affords the angler superb sport if the tackle be light. With a seven-ounce rod and 200 feet of line, the killing of a five-pounder from a sailboat running across the wind, implies a delightful excitement that, to be appreciated, must be experienced. Three tons of this fish have been taken with hook and line, in a single season, at Sunapee. The flesh is of a light salmon color, and, when in its perfection, excels in delicacy that of all other salmonids.

We most confidently recommend this charr to the attention of State commissioners interested in placing a valuable and easily propagated food fish within reach of the people. It is facile princeps, from its rush at the east smelt to the finish at the breakfast table. Those who best know it most enthusiastically endorse, with a slight amendment, Prof. Jordan's apothegm: "Nothing higher can be said of a salmonide than that it is a (Sunapee) charr."—John Q. Quackenboss, A. M., M. D., in The American Angler.

Spearing Through the Ice.

A shining February morning and a great white, shining world—white as the soul of a child! says Ed. W. Sandys in Outing. Over it all an infinity of flawless blue, with never a token to prove that from it fell, but a few hours before, the world's fair garb of snow. Eastward blazed that gold-faced god who makes a typical winter day in Canada the wondrous, indescribable thing it is.

It was cold outside, and I knew it. My argument with a deviled kidney had been interrupted more than once by sharp reports like pistol-shots, which told that the frost had touched a tree, or started a nail in the clapboards. When the kidney had acknowledged getting the worst of it, moccasins, heavy pea-jacket, fur cap, warm gloves were donned, and forth I fared to find what such peerless day had in store. The air was keen as Eastern lance and glittered with myriad diamond lights; it was as exhilarating as iced wine, and three chestfuls of it started me running down the snowy road in sheer exuberance of animal spirits. Presently a merry jingle of bells sounded and a merrier voice exclaimed: "Look out! or I'll run you down."

No need to look round, for I knew the voice; so I merely answered: "You couldn't run a lame dog down with that old skate!" Then I ran as if the fiend was on my track, for a four-minute bay roadster and a dainty Portland were behind, and Jim would as soon do what he said as not.

For a hundred yards we had it hot as we could lay foot to snow; then I heard the dull blows of flying feet and a sharp "Hi!" and dodged aside just in time to clear the rush of one of the tidiest gentleman's roadsters in the county.

Jim could hardly pull up inside of fifty yards, for the good bay's blood was hot; but finally the horse staid, and Jim sang out: "Come, pile in here! I want to use you."

"What for?"

"I'm off for the bay. Spearing's prime and we'll have a try at it. Everything's ready down there—spears and all in the shanty—so in you get."

No better fun was wanted, and away we jingled through the town and thence westward over an excellent country road toward Mitchell's Bay, on Lake St. Clair, famous for black bass, lunge and waterfowl since the days of "Frank Forrester," until at last we reached the frozen marsh and the small hotel beside the bay.

We were soon in our shanty, one of several similar in construction that were scattered over the ice. These shanties are built of rough boards and are large enough to accommodate two men comfortably and leave room for a small stove. The roofs are high enough to allow the use of a short-handled spear, and frequently the shanties are mounted upon runners of plank to facilitate moving from point to point. It is comfortable and dark inside a shanty when once the door is shut, for there is no window, the object being to exclude all light save what strays upward through the clear ice-floor.

When a shanty is ready for business it is stationed on the ice above some known shoal or channel favored of fish; a little snow is banked up around the house outside, and an opening of convenient size cut through the ice inside. This hole is carefully cleared of all fragments of ice, and when the shanty door is closed one can readily enough peer down into the haunts of fish. The grandest prize to fall to the spearman's skill is, of course, a "lunge," as the muscallonge is termed, and to attract his lordship within striking distance, an artificial minnow is attached to a string and caused to play about a short distance below the surface of the exposed water. When a fish of goodly size shows within safe reach, a swift thrust with the three, four or sometimes five-tined spear secures or misses the game, as the case may be. Jim and I sat side by side in our darkened shanty, gazing downward steadily. I manipulated the minnow, while he held the spear ready for instant action. Below were soft, shadowy, green depths, half-illumined by a weird, ghostly light which seemed to come from nowhere and to reveal nothing.

But soon our eyes seemed to focus properly, as it were, and the view broadened. We could distinguish faint forms of water-weeds, and once or twice a gilded perch sailed solemnly across the silence below, like a seared leaf wind-driven. It was very pretty and fascinating, and I swam the lure minnow in most artistic style for a considerable time. Then something came! It came, it saw, it vanished, leaving a phosphorescent gleam in the water to mark its lightning flight. I had barely time to note that it was a sturdy old bass, and Jim's hand hardly closed on the spear ere it gained the dim whence. It evidently wanted naught of the spear or minnow.

More time passed, and then came a pickerel. Slow and shining he floated upward, his wall-eyes glowing on the fancied prey, and Jim poked fun into him vigorously; and the pointed joke was too much for pickerel self-control, and he let his life slip away in his excitement. Three or four more were taken in the same fashion within the hour, and they were all fine fish of their kind. Then Jim insisted that I should take the spear and let him play the lure.

For half an hour I sat and stared at the water. Then I yawned and filled my pipe anew, and then it may be that I fretted at the hard luck on general principles. Be that as it may, I presently spied something which roused all the fierce impulse of sport in me. Jim saw it too, and he played his minnow a trifle farther away.

From under the lower edge of the ice crept something that looked for all the world like the toe of an old rubber boot, surrounded by a luminous halo. Farther and farther it crept, so slowly that it seemed scarce to move, until it showed a greener cast and bony ridges. Then the gleam in the water increased, and we saw two terrible eyes that glowed like wee incandescent lamps. Then Jim suddenly lowered his minnow a few inches, the apparition glided forward, and I drove the spear downward with all the force and speed my arm could impart. Through the wooden handle I felt the crush and grind of steel through bones, and knew 'twas well. The shaft swept round in response to a falling, swirling rush, and we promptly lifted from the hole a dead fish, for the spear had cut the spine just at the junction with the head. The fish was by no means as heavy as many I have seen, but it was large enough for our ambition, and, best of all, we had it safe.

The Weekly Journalist of Boston contains a regular letter from the bright and facile pen of Eliza D. Keith (Di Vernon), of this city. These letters contain pleasant and timely mention of the work of the journalists of the Pacific Coast, and are a credit to the workers generally, as well as to the fair writer.

THE GUN.

The Clabrough, Golcher & Co. Match.

On Sunday last was held at Oakland Shooting Park one of the most interesting matches ever held at inanimate targets on this coast. We take particular pleasure in speaking of the events there presented, as they confirm all that we have repeatedly urged in these columns for years past on the efficacy of class shooting in bringing out the full representation of the shooters of this city and vicinity.

Never before in any similar gathering have so many sportsmen been presented at the score. The grounds were fairly alive with spectators when the sixty-six guns were ready for the first match. This match occupied much of the day, and while a number of other matches were shot off, we must be content with giving the result of this one.

The entire shooting contingent of this coast is to be congratulated on the excellent showing made in the day's shoot.

The scores show that the sportsmen attending, as a class, have never fired much at inanimate targets, but we predict that future matches of this nature will develop a higher degree of skill. The shooting was conducted on the rapid firing system, as otherwise it would have been impossible to have shot off this one match, to say nothing of other events. Traver, Dinuba, Los Angeles and Sacramento were represented. Mr. Edgar Foster referee. The score:

A match at 6 pair followed the main event. Allison won with nine, Kearney second with eight, Cate third with seven. A second match at 10 singles was divided by Cate and Daniels, with seven each.

The Babcock-Sprague Match.

On Tuesday afternoon of this week a very interesting match was witnessed by a number of the friends of Messrs. Babcock and Sprague.

The match was shot off at Oakland Shooting Park commencing at 2 o'clock P. M.

The conditions of the match were 100 birds each, Mr. Sprague being allowed ten dead birds to start with, shooting at ninety, Mr. Babcock shooting at the full 100 birds.

The birds in the main were excellent, their flight being accelerated by a very pronounced breeze which rendered the outgoing birds very swift, and having a tendency to carry rapidly-rising birds out of bounds, even when well shot, thus scoring a large number of birds dead out of bounds.

In the early part of the match Mr. Babcock took the lead and maintained the same until the close, although pressed closely at times by his competitor. The shooting of each of these gentlemen was very good, indeed the score for a number of runs is rarely beaten by amateur shots anywhere.

Mr. John K. Orr acted as referee. The following is the score:

Table showing scores for Harry Babcock and R. H. Sprague.

Mr. Wm. Berry looked after Mr. Babcock's interests and Mr. John O. Cadman coached Mr. Sprague. The match was one of the most pleasurable events ever held at the traps in this city or vicinity.

A number of the gentlemen then engaged in pool-shooting until the birds were disposed of.

Pleasures of Sportsmanship.

It is a rare pleasure to visit the office of Mr. F. S. Butler, who, as a sportsman, is in a peculiar measure prepared to enjoy the subject of field sports. Being a devoted lover of nature in all of her varied forms as presented in the fields and forests, he has cultivated assiduously some of the more artistic lines that tend to the enjoyment of the rod and gun. On entering his office one is forcibly struck with the presentation of a magnificent elk head which hangs on the wall of the office opposite the entrance. This head is one of the finest and most complete we have ever noticed. It has the "royal crest" in perfect form and in every part is one of Nature's perfected productions. It was secured by Mr. Butler by laying an order with a sportsman in Victoria with instructions to spare no expense in procuring a perfect specimen. This his agent finally succeeded in doing and all sportsmen agree in saying that it is "one of a thousand" and practically priceless.

Mr. Butler has found one of the greatest fountains of pleasure to a sportsman in his artistic skill in handling the brush. He is a painter of no mean pretensions, as is amply evidenced by the paintings which adorn his office.

"The Dead Canvas-back" is a painting which would do honor to a professional. Nothing but the fervor of the sportsman combined with true artistic merit could have produced such a picture. The outlines are not only well nigh perfect, but the limp and lifeless attitude of the dead bird conveys perfectly that peculiar impression with which lifeless forms are so marked.

"The Valley Quail" and "The Mountain Quail" are painted with that faithfulness to life and environs that make them peculiarly interesting.

It requires a sportsman to appreciate the painting of game life of any nature, and a painter, writer or narrator, we care not how skillful, must fall short in their efforts to paint, write or speak of wild game unless they be intimately acquainted with the habit, habits, nature, poses and delicate attendant elements that enter into the life and compose the surroundings of the special subject in hand. In this respect Mr. Butler has shown an intimate knowledge with the subjects handled and he has been successful in handling them naturally.

The valley quail is presented on a hillside, the covering of which is bronzed and tinged with ripening gold of autumn's sheen, with gnarled and twisted water oaks in the background, around and over which a truthful bit of sky renders life-like the vista. The vert, alertness and saucy independent air of the gamey little whistler, to which his curving plume adds an air of indescribable interest is depicted with a truly startling distinction; the plumage is perfect in coloring, and the whole scene causes a sportsman to involuntarily throw himself into position for a shot as he expects to hear the whirr-r-r of the bird in its circling flight over the hill or arrowy winging to the hollow.

The mountain quail is presented in a representation of the dense cover which it is their wont to frequent in the mountains.

Mr. Butler has painted each of these birds singularly true to nature, and in the treatment of the subjects with their chosen surroundings he has shown that from a sportsman's as well as from an artist's standpoint he not only knows what to paint but also how to paint it.

In speaking to the principle, as above illustrated, we have previously expressed the thought in the following lines, which we reproduce as they embody the idea we are desirous of enforcing.

Of things we love, one-half or more is lent From all things forming their environment. The violet we love not half so well Elsewhere than in its mossy fern-clad dell, Where dews bejewel every blade and thorn, When golden sunbeams paint the scene at morn. The lily—blowing from her scented horn The incense of the gods—to beauty born. Acknowledged queen of all the floral field, Her throne must sit, or else the scepter yield, Each one must on all other things depend, Or all would be but one—beginning, end, Nature this law of recompense confers, No klag could he without his worshippers.

True sportsmanship is far more than the firing of a gun.

The Columbian Exposition.

On Monday last the event of the age was inaugurated at Chicago, when Grover Cleveland turned the golden key and set in motion the machinery of the World's Columbian Exposition.

The one hundred years last past has evolved all of civilization, culture and improvement to-day recognized as being worth use and recognition. If this be not strictly true, it will pass as a general assertion and be accepted by the general public as true.

Some one has said that the world has been fit to live in only during the past fifty years. This looks true from the standpoint of the present. It is evident that the continually evolving and developing wave of progression creates for itself environments suitable for and adapted to its several wants. Conditions change in conformity with the state of the intelligence of the years as they pass by.

In every avenue of life this fact is noticeable, in none more so than in that of sportsmanship. This is less true in the art and pastime of angling, perhaps, than in almost every other line of sportsmanship. The same implements, practically, were used in angling more than one hundred years ago as are used to-day. In every other line of sportsmanship the change in implements has been most marvelous indeed. The firearms of one hundred years ago bear but little resemblance to those in use to-day. Necessarily the general outlines are in a measure the same, but the changes have been so marked that the wonder is that the perfect arms of to-day have been perfected from so crude a beginning.

It will require weeks for one to look over the firearms presented at the exposition. The rare and curious relics of the olden time and the wonderful improvements of the present form a subject fraught with the deepest interest to each and every one who loves a gun or firearm of any nature. The wonderful effect which will develop from this gathering, as an educating factor, as an introductory to a great mass of the citizens occupying vastly separated parts of the country, may scarcely be measured.

On the Sawdust.

The weather clerk favored the dog show by serving some of his finest samples during that event.

P. D. Linville would have carried off more ribbons if he had a few more setters like those entered.

The veterinary surgeon, F. W. Skaffe, was present, looking carefully to the condition of the dogs.

The pigeon exhibit was of excellent quality, and evinced a high order of the Pigeon Club of this city.

President Edgar W. Briggs was present at all times to see that nothing was lacking in the conduct of the show.

Mr. H. M. Tanner attended the show from Los Angeles with a string of thirteen dogs, mostly of very superior quality.

Mr. George T. Allender, the well known and universally popular trainer of Watsonville, attended the show throughout.

Dr. A. C. Davenport, of Stockton, the ardent Cocker fancier, was an interested spectator of all the proceedings of the show.

The entire management of the show are to be commended for the manner in which the exhibition as a whole was conducted.

The trick dogs at the show were of the best cultured lot we have ever noticed. They did everything intelligent except to talk.

No man carried from the ring a more satisfied smile than Mr. Hugh McCracken after decorating Lady Glendyne with the blue ribbon.

Messrs. T. J. Watson, E. P. Schell, J. B. Martin and Capt. Thos. Higgs as bench show committee were each active and efficient in the discharge of their duties.

The fox-terrier class sustains the excellent reputation of the fancy in this line. There is no breed more thoroughly represented on the Pacific Coast than this one.

The Fox-terrier Club gave a banquet on Friday evening last to Judge Raper, at which most pleasant and enjoyable time kennel matters galore were discussed at length.

The St. Bernard class, as the dogs were led into the judging ring, created the liveliest interest from the fancy. The judge's awards in all cases are generally very well received.

Dr. A. T. Regensburger is, and of right ought to be, proud of his St. Bernard puppy Reglov. If this puppy develops as now evidenced, he will make a strong class hustler for "first" next year.

Mr. Clarence Haight, financial secretary and treasurer of the club, and one of the oldest workers in this line on this Coast, was seeing to it that everybody was made comfortable and happy at all times during the show.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam, and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

The San Francisco Show.

The third annual bench show given by the Pacific Kennel Club of this city opened on Wednesday and continued for the week at the Mechanics' Pavilion.

The ample proportions of the Pavilion gave splendid room for the arrangements of the dogs in the best possible form. This was well done, the Pavilion being well lighted and ventilated, rendering the show as free from all objectionable features as possible. The entries numbered 360, which made this the largest bench show ever given in the West.

The improvement in almost all classes was quite noticeable, and on the whole the kennelmen have just cause to congratulate themselves upon the success which has attended the show from the kennel standpoint. Mr. George Raper appeared in the ring shortly after one o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, and with a directness of attention to business and none of the "see-what-a-great-man-I-am" air, frequently seen on the sawdust, went to work with a will that soon evinced the desire to get through with the judging with promptness and dispatch. His awards, in the main, were commended by the fanciers of almost all of the classes. This is not to be wondered at when one pauses to reflect that save in sporting dogs, Foxterriers and perhaps one or two other classes, the judging was made easy by the fact that the dogs could not well be misplaced.

We can only give the awards this week, leaving whatever of comment we may have for next issue.

Mr. D. M. Walter, of Galt, was in attendance at the bench show and quietly remarked with an arching of the eyebrows and a bit-settles-it shake of the head, "You just look out for my string at the coming field trials."

A great many "dog men" talk too much and say too little. In the vernacular of the gutter we feel constrained to add the oft-repeated punctuation "See!"

Mr. Wm. DeMott, the handler of "first" in the late field trials took particular interest in the pointers and setters.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.
 STAR, LANE CO., OREGON, Feb. 8th, 1892.
 DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
 Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Carh of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt lady sweated; tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or.

CHAS. I. LOWELL, Lodi, Cal.

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/2 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:08.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoora Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darebin). He stands 15.3 hands on steely legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong back, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster, one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone, who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis; The Peer (sire of Darebin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darebin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, for apart from his truly grand breeding on the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, if, indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caractus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, a most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid racehorses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt, Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire, Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first, the rest nowhere" fame.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.) and Lone Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13 1/4, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31 1/2, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20 1/4, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32 1/2 to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foot-getter.

TERMS $50. Season to close August 1st. Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars address

WIL DIRECT, Black stallion, three years old, 15 1/2 hands. Very handsome, powerfully built, the best of feet and legs, and a trotter that will make his mark as a sire and a race horse. Sired by Sable Wilkes, who stands at the head of all stallions of his age as a producer and sire of race horses. First dam Fidelia, by Director; second dam by Reavis' Black Bird, sire of Vic H., 2:13 1/4; third dam by Lanet, son of McCracken's Black Hawk, sire of Overman, 2:19 1/4, Ha Ha, 2:22 1/4, Moses S., 2:22 1/4, and others. $100 for the season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud, 2:19; Annie W., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/4; Mollie C., 2:37 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 3 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

OSSIDINE

RESULTS OBTAINED AT THE WELL-KNOWN KALAMAZOO FARM.

Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Hinges, and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where firming failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used. Very respectfully yours,
S. A. BROWNE & CO., PROP'S.
Kalamazoo, Mich.

Owner of Cole, St. Saviour, Eolist, etc., says:—

I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Cole's Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,
F. GELHARD,

Training The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, galting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any wish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address the post favorite at 9 to 5. Joe D. was well supported at 2 1/2 and 3 to 1. Jack the Ripper was played at 12 to 1. Lame little Joe Harding made his first appearance this spring in this event. Jessie Sturgill and Fred Parker were the other starters. Jack the Ripper, Gypsy Girl, Joe D., Jim R. was the order at the start, but Gypsy Girl assumed the leadership of the sprinting band going around the far turn, with the Ripper and Joe D. for her closest attendants. The Ripper was first into the homestretch by a neck, with Gypsy Girl second and Joe D. third. At the draggate Gypsy Girl drew away, and was not thereafter headed, winning easily by a length from Jim R., who came like a shot the last eighth of a mile and beat Jack the Ripper a head for second place. Time for the four and one-half furlongs, 0:56.

Little Tough opened at 2 to 1 in the second race, six and one-half furlongs, but a speedy plunge forced the odds down without delay to even money and 4 to 5. Broad Church was backed down from 6 to 1 to 2 1/2. Vanity, at 4 to 1, was also well supported. The latter was first to show after the fall of the flag, with Broad Church a close second and the favorite third. Broad Church passed to the front at once, leading Guadalupe two lengths at the half, Vanity third and Little Tough fourth. The favorite ran up second going around the back turn, but could not catch Broad Church, who, full of running, won, eased up, by a length, Little Tough second, three lengths from Vanity. Time, 1:22 1/2.

The third race was one of five furlongs, for two-year-olds, and Seaside was a first choice at almost prohibitive odds. Bordeaux and Alexis, her only opponents, were at 6 and 12 to 1 respectively. Alexis led Bordeaux into the homestretch a neck, where the favorite came up and won under a pull by a short neck from Bordeaux. Alexis, pulled up and bleeding, third. Near the draggate Bordeaux had come up and driven the good-looking colt against the fence, taking the skin off at the stifle and destroying his chances in the race, which looked very good at the time the accident occurred. A complaint, made by little Donathan, rider of Alexis, against Bordeaux, was unheeded by the judges. Time of the race, 1:04 1/2.

Revolver was for a long time an even-money favorite in the fourth race, one mile, but toward the close the odds against him went to 6 to 5. Garcia was backed down from 5 to 1 to 3 to 1, while Bronco and Patricia had quite a number of supporters. Joe Cotton, it was generally thought, could not go the route, and was quoted at 10 to 1 at the close. Morton tried his utmost to kill three or four horses and their riders at the post, and narrowly missed little Clancy and Weher with his heels on several occasions. Rinstein, on Bronco, occasioned roars of laughter by edging away from Morton whenever that horse came within twenty yards of him. Garcia, St. Patrick and Democrat, too, were not very angelic at the starting point. Revolver was away a neck in advance when the flag at length fell, after a wait of nearly three-quarters of an hour, Bronco second, Patricia third and Joe Cotton fourth. Bronco led Garcia half a length at the quarter, the latter horse having run very fast around the first turn. Revolver was third, Patricia fourth and Cottou fifth. Garcia and Bronco changed places nearing the half, but Bronco led Garcia a good length at the three-quarters and into the homestretch, Revolver still third, Cottou next and coming up fast. Bronco looked a sure winner until within an eighth from home, when Revolver, with Cotton at his heels, came up like hay streaks of lightning, and had him beaten at the draggate. Revolver won handsily by a trifle over a length from Cotton, who was under whip, Bronco third, one and a half lengths behind Joe Cotton, Garcia fourth, Patricia fifth, St. Patrick sixth, Morton seventh and Democrat, bleeding profusely from the nose, pulled up, last. Time, 1:43 1/2. The officials decided not to allow the Kicking King, Morton, and the unfortunate Joe Hooker gelding, Democrat, to start in future at Bay District track, Morton being a very dangerous horse and Democrat one that bleeds from the nostrils almost every time he starts.

The mile and 50-yard handicap came next, and El Rayo (120 pounds) opened favorite at even money, the speedy little Tigress (89 pounds) going at 8 to 5, Little Esperanza (90 pounds) 5 and 6 to 1, Sympathetic's Last (112 pounds) at 8 to 1 and Donna Lilla (82 pounds) at 50. Mr. Holly declared to win with El Rayo, and the odds receded to 7 to 10 at the close. Little Esperanza was first to show, and she and Tigress raced off together at a breakneck clip, with Donna Lilla third, Sympathetic's Last fourth and the favorite, El Rayo, last. Tigress led Little Esperanza a head at the quarter, Donna Lilla third, a length away. Tigress drew away, and led passing the half pole a length, Esperanza second, a head from Sympathetic's Last, El Rayo fourth, a length further away, but beginning to make his run. Going around the turn into the homestretch Little Esperanza was labeled very dangerous, but El Rayo led her a neck into the straight, Tigress in front of all a length and half and apparently running easily. It was a hot race between Tigress and El Rayo from the eighth-pole to within 75 yards of the finish, Taylor and Miller working like the proverbial Trojans. El Rayo, however, about 75 yards from the judges' stand, got his head in front, and it was all over, the grand-looking son of Grinstead winning a beautiful and very fast race by half a length, Tigress second, two and a half lengths from Little Esperanza. Sympathetic's Last was fourth and Donna Lilla last. Official time, 1:45; timed by a score or more of horsemen in 1:44, mile from wire to wire in 1:41, one of the fastest runs ever made in California with 120 pounds up.

Warrago, the favorite at 6 to 5, ran second to Claire (8 to 5) in the draggate, when she easily passed to the fore and won under a pull by half a length, Claire second, three lengths from the well-played Jim Lee, who was at 24 to 1. Jovita (50 to 1) was last. Time, 0:56. The San Jose plungers made a heavy haul on Warrago, who is one of the best fillies at the track. Billy Donathan, her owner, is lucky indeed that she was not run up over her entered selling price, $600.

History of the Levity Family in Brief.

The following, taken from the McGrathiana Stud catalog, will prove interesting:

An important fact in connection with Mr. Young's yearlings is that so many of them are members of the great Levity family, the most successful one of the present or any other generation in this country. Under the circumstances, the following resume of this family may not prove uninteresting:

From the Levity family, upon which Mr. Young has built his stud, have come a greater number of race horses than any other American racing family. It has even produced a greater number than the Pocahontas or Queen Mary families did in England.

The Bard, Luke Blackburn, Leonatus, Monarchist, Salina, Volturno, Monitor, Janet, Sultana, Nevada, Grinstead, Louise, Burch, St. Augustine, Salvator, Longstreet, Monte Rosa, Onaway, Tammany, Red Banner, etc., a galaxy of star performers, such as no other family has produced, all trace directly to Levity's daughters, while Levity's half-brother, Vandal, was the sire of Virgil, Voltigeur, Versailles, Ventilator, Vanderhilt, Vandalite, Mollie Jackson, etc.

In order to present in a plain and comprehensive manner the stud achievements of the Levity family, we have prepared the following statement: Vandal's dam, a bay mare, was by imp. Tranhy, from Lucilla, by Trumpator.

Volga also threw Alice Mitchell and Tecalco, dam of Tolu (Smugler's dam), Rock and Rye and Hot Scotch.

Vandal was the sire of Virgil, Mollie Jackson, James A. Connoly, Voltigeur, Vandalite and Capitola (King Alfonso's dam).

Salina was the champion three-year-old filly of 1871, and at the stud she produced Danicheff, Saltpetre, Verleim (dam of Viscouness) and Salvator.

Sprightly was the dam of Volturno, Lady Way (dam of Lady Wayward and Foxglove, Foxford's dam), Elias Lawrence, Avalon and Aretino.

Crucifix was the dam of St. Augustine, Blanche (dam of Blantyre and Sea Shell, dam of Longshore and Toss Up), Cripple (Quito), St. Alhans, Fairplay and Semper Felix (dam of Leonatus, Warder, Leopold, Felicia I. and Semper Vive, she the dam of Fordham, Folsom, Portchester and Semper Idem, dam of Longstreet, Long Beach and Longford), and Latonia, dam of Sena and Lew Weir.

Nevada was the best three-year-old filly of 1872, and is the dam of the renowned Luke Blackburn, Greenland, Bradford, Bravo, Ecuador and Sierra Nevada, dam of Mountain Range, dam of Monte Rosa and Monte Viso.

Gulnare is the dam of Costello and Satisfaction.

Strathmore, Kinkead and Longstop were all winners on the turf, and Strathmore has done wonders at the stud for so young a horse.

Athalaric is the dam of the noted horse Tom Martin, winner of the Twin City Handicap and other great races; Atom an Ethel.

Bradamante was a capital race mare herself, and dam of the renowned race horse The Bard, Joseph, Bracelet and Vivacity, dam of Tenacity.

| B f Gilly Flower..... | by Gilroy. |

Grinstead was one of the best race horses of his day, and is the sire of Volante, Gano, Solid Silver, Silver Cloud and Geraldine.

Viceroy was a very superior race horse. Kelpie was the dam of Janet (dam of Sir Peter, Golden Reel, Speculation, Leon T., Sinaloa, Volunteer's dam, and Spaldie, Lizzie D.'s dam), Duke of Montrose, Miss Austine (dam of Teuton and Faraday), Annette (Shoemaker's dam), Kelp (dam of Onaway, Luella B. and Kempie), Ovation, Overture and Astrakhan. Ermengarde was the dam of Baltic, Bellevue and Brocade, and the dam of Burch, Jennie B (dam of Jester), Bertha B. (dam of Lizzie Baker, Judge Murray and Pat Kelly) and Long Cloth (dam of Strathmand).

This family, as will be seen from the above, has produced such a large number of great race horses that it is impracticable to enter into the performances and merits of the animals enumerated individually or collectively. To do so would, no doubt, make an interesting and readable history of many volumes, which could hardly be embraced in a sale catalogue. Under the circumstances the condensed information as to the members of the family mentioned will, it is hoped, be considered quite sufficient.

FROU FROU, the daughter of Sidney, that lowered the yearling trotting record to 2:25 1/2, and hitched to a high-wheel sulky at that, is entered in $45,000 worth of stakes for three-year-olds this season, and now that she is being handled by Harvey Ernest, who has had such good luck with colt trotters, giving the yearling pacing filly Mill Lady a record better than 2:30, the people who are entered against Frou Frou are beginning to wonder if the California-bred filly will be as much in advance of the three-year-old trotters of her day as she was of the yearlings of 1891, says the Breeders' Gazette. There is an impression among horsemen that the get of Sidney do not train on, and the fact that the son of Santa Claus and Sweetness has not yet given the turf a high-class campaigner, is pointed to significantly. But a good many people think this is all moonshine. Just as sure as the get of a stallion do something brilliant there are always plenty of capacious critics who find fault because they have not done something else. It was so when the Electioneers first became prominent. Fred Crocker was followed by Bonita and others, and after it was evident that the Electioneers were the greatest colt trotters in the world there went up a cry that they would stop. Then somebody called attention to the fact that whenever it came to going against trotters of their own age the Electioneers were at any rate as game as the other youngsters. Then it was decided by the critic that Electioneer had not sired a campaigner, but Palo Alto came along and knocked that idea in the head. The third attack was on the line that although Electioneer himself was unquestionably a great sire, his blood would not breed on. The last two seasons have dissipated that notion, the sons of Electioneer siring trotters with remarkable uniformity, while his daughters are producing foals that trot into the list as soon as they are given a fair chance. At the present time no one disputes the greatness of the Electioneer family, and it is altogether probable that the position of the Sidneys in trotting-horse history will be rendered impregnable by what the family accomplishes in the next few years.

THE FARM.

His Longing.

I'm a-goin' back to the country; I'm sick o' this derned old town; It's a reggerin' Dutchman, a-whirrin' aroun' an aroun'.

Death in the food an' water, an' nary a soul to care; Death on the streets an' crossin' an' death in the cussed air;

A-sittin' there in the sunshine an' smokin' away like a Turk, An' up in the furdest corner a-watchin' the wasps at work,

An' squintin' 'cross to the orchard where apples is goin' to waste, A-sizin' up the highest an' wonderin' how they'd taste;

An' I'll make you waller in clover, till you've clean forgot the choke Of the dust of your taroal city, an' its hangin' clouds o' smoke;

So come with me to the homestead, an' rest your heart aa' eyes, An' git your fill o' chicken an' doughnuts an' apple pies.

I'm dyin' to see a river as clear as a pane o' glass— I'm like old Nehykhudnezzar, so turn me out to grass.

Loss of Cud in Cattle.

An important factor in dairying, though perhaps not much thought of by the average dairyman, is the cud which the cow chews as industriously as does the sailor his quid of tobacco.

The ceasing to chew the cud is an accompanying symptom of several diseases, including all those which may be classed as fevers or which are marked by feverish symptoms, including bronchitis, pneumo-pneumonia, cattle plague, etc., and it will be better to call in an expert veterinary to decide what may be the primary cause of the trouble.

Give this as a drench about three times a day, omitting the aconite after the fifth dose. As it is a tonic it may be continued until the animal recovers its appetite, but it will be safer, as we said before, to get a good veterinarian before it is too late.

Wheat For Hogs.

Prof. James W. Robertson has recently issued a bulletin giving some informat on regarding the use of damaged wheat for swine. A number of tests were made with wheat that had been frozen, prepared in various ways, and as to the outcome of these the following are some of the conclusions given:

In a letter requesting me to write something for this occasion, the president of this association assigned me for a subject "The Holstein Cow." In looking over the printed programme, I noticed the subject assigned me was "The Farmer's Cow."

Then first, let me inquire what a farmer wants a cow for? Oh, any school boy can answer that. To give milk, of course. But let me give you my answer. A farmer should keep cows for the profitable production of milk, veal and beef.

With the closing up of our Western free ranges, which emigration is rapidly accomplishing, our markets will cease to be overstocked with range cattle and our farmer's cows will not be compelled to meet this competition in the beef market.

Now it is not my purpose to weary you with a long paper extolling the merits of my favorites, or to slander any other breed except the scrub. All breeds have some good qualities, but I believe but one breed has produced a cow capable of giving 30,318 pounds of milk in one year and another cow capable of making 1,153 pounds of butter in one year.

She is short in the horn and long in the tail; She is slim in the neck and full at the pail. Her eye is mild; her appearance is neat; Her escutcheon is wide; her disposition sweet.

Her color—should be black and white.—W. Cheney.

Feed Wet or Cooked.

One of the largest feeders of swine gives his experience and judgment as follows: "I find that if I take ten bushels of meal and wet it in cold water and feed twenty-five hogs with it, they eat it well; but if I take the same quantity and cook it, it doubles the bulk and will take the same number of hogs twice as long to eat it, and I think they fatten twice as fast in the same length of time."

A Sure Cure for Roup.

A subscriber whose old chickens have a white substance around the entrance to the windpipe and become wheezy, while the young pullets are affected with swollen eyes, asks for a cure.

From the symptoms described, it is impossible to say whether or not it is a case of true roup. Roup proper is a contagious disease and appears to be induced by cold, damp, dark and filthy quarters.

The symptoms of true roup are dullness and general languor, ruffled feathers, loss of appetite and rapid, wheezy breathing. There is a watery discharge from the nostrils, which later become thick and foul-smelling.

Perfect Butter at One Operation.

If a little skill is developed in making, washing, salting, working and packing butter at one operation, the results are quite satisfactory. John Gould describes his process as follows:

"Taking slightly acid cream, put in a revolving churn, and churn until it begins to show signs of breaking, when a little brine should be added to the cream to assist in the separation. When the butter grains are the size of small shot, and before taking out any buttermilk, add two-thirds of much cold water as there is butter, etc., in the churn.

A Sign of Prosperity.

In traveling through the county, when a tidy farm is passed, with fences in good order, buildings looking neat and trim, trees pruned and clean, all know the resident is one who takes pride and interest in his farming, and it pays him to do it.

A WRITER in the Maine Farmer states that his remedy for garget is alum, which he has used for the last thirty years. He gives it the same as saltpetre, a great spoonful once a day.

THE following racers have died this year: All Black, 4, by Blythe-wood—Virginia; Capt. Swift, 4, by Bend Or—imp. Lady Wenlock; Cold Deck, a, by Sam Bass—unknown; Coldstream, a, by imp. Rayon d'Or—Pride of the Village; Dagonet, 4, by Tremont—Fair Lady; Fulstaff, 3, by imp. Deceiver—Falsino; Gayoso, 4, by imp. Great Tom—Buttress; Gen. Boulanger, a, by Algerine—imp. Cathedral; Joe Lee, a, by Valtgeur—Bonheur; Langar, a, by Lyttleton—Vixen; Philanthropist, 3, by George Kinney—Mayonnaise; P. J. H., a, by Bertram—Lady Langtry; Queenie Trowbridge, 5, by Aliunde—Ida Lambert.

D. C. Walker, Baltimore, Md., says: "I am using Absorbine on a very valuable trotter. So far it has been good." Chas. Henry Lawrence, Tex., writes: Send me large bottle of "Absorbine" at once, as I am in great need of it, knowing by experience its great merit.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

ORRIN HICKOK has engaged stabling at Glenville track, Cleveland.

ROBERT BROWN, of Petaluma, has a fine filly by Eclectic, out of a Sultan mare.

ENGLEWOOD, sister to Wedgewood, 2:19, dropped dead in the pasture at Woodburn, April 10.

REMEMBER the sale of the Pierce Bros. choice trotters which is advertised in another column.

CON. GRIFFIN is thinking seriously of moving his string of trotters from Oakland to the Napa race track.

ELEN SWIGERT (dam of Vic H., 2:13), has been bred to Arthur Wilkes, 2:28, son of Guy Wilkes, 2:15.

M. O'REILLY, of Petaluma, has a Secretary colt out of Emma Taylor that can pace his way into fame this fall.

DAN MIZNER will be able to ride in a sulky next week. Dan has had a hard siege of sickness and we are glad to hear that he has recovered.

THOS. MURPHY has about twelve colts and fillies at the Petaluma track. The colt Alden W. is improving fast, Tom says he has a sure winner in this one.

THE time to breed your mare is when other fellows fail to breed theirs. By the time you are ready to sell your colt there will not be so many youngsters for sale.

THE pacer Almont Patchen, 2:15, is seen at the San Jose track every day. His owner and trainer, C. H. Corey, believes he is faster and better than ever.

BEN WRIGHT has had all the fences, stables and grand stands at the Oakland Trotting Track whitened until they are "pure and white as the beautiful snow."

VIVETTE, dam of Stoner Boy, 2:26, and sister to Steinway 3, 2:23, by Strathmore, foaled a black filly by Baron Wilkes, 2:18, April 18, and will be bred to Simmons, 2:28.

THE long spell of wet weather in Oregon has prevented the development of trotters and pacers there. The owners say they have never seen such a "backward spring."

So long as farmers and others patronize mongrel stallions, just so long will the country be full of them, as well as with a surplus horse stock for which there is no earthly use.

THE horsemen of Sonoma are beginning to get their sulkies out for the season. They are a little behind this year, but will catch up with the procession when the bell rings.

J. BERRYMAN, of Napa, has had the hay yearling colt by Alcona Jr., out of Emma Taylor, sent to him. This colt is called Idaliun and is owned by A. Zollner of Oakland.

SOME men boast that they never read the advertisements in any papers. Some day these same men will die and won't know where to go to buy a coffin in which to bury themselves.

THE horses at Pleasanton are being given longer work every day, and it is no unusual sight to see Flying Jib, Directum and the rest of the fast ones driven miles at a lively clip.

THE pacers to be seen in the free-for-all class races on the circuit this year will include Eclectic, 2:14, Plunkett, 2:13, W. Wood, 2:07, Our Dick, 2:10, and perhaps Chris. Smith, 2:14.

ORRIN A. HICKOK started East last Wednesday. He understands the shipment of horses as well as any man in America. It was a pleasure to see how he had everything arranged on the cars.

THE race track and the buildings on the grounds of the fair association at Independence, Oregon, are completed, and in June will be held the spring races, lasting over the 15th, 16th and 17th.

REMEMBER the great sale of trotters and pacers that is to take place in this city on the 25th of this month. The greatest trotting stallions will be represented by their greatest sons and daughters.

THERE is more joy nowadays on a breeding farm, says one philosopher, over the one patron who pays in advance for service than over the ninety and nine who want to wait till the colt is foaled.

JOHN SPLAN says that he would not turn over his hand for or against the new distance rules, as he has made up his mind never to start another horse that is not only ready to win, but also a clever actor.

A. ZOLLNER's hay mare Emma Taylor (dam of Alto) foaled a bay filly by Alfred 5323 (sire of Langton, 2:26) on the 10th of April, that is said to be one of the finest looking youngsters in Oakland.

VAN B. DELASHMUTT is contemplating a removal of some of his promising colts from Witch Hazel to Eastern Oregon, where the bunchgrass is juicy and the topographical conditions are favorable to muscle-building.

FROM present indications trotting in California will "boom" this fall. Commencing with the great Breeders' meeting on the 27th of this month, a series of races will take place that has never been approached in California.

THE Electioneer Gen. Benton cross produced Sunol, 2:08 and Truman, 2:12. The Gen. Benton-Electioneer cross produced Daly, 2:15. It is the only cross that has produced 2:15 trotters with the blood milled both ways.

THE promising young broodmare Annie Russell, by Maubriano Russell, dam Annie Steele, by Fearnaught, died near Lexington Wednesday. She was a full sister to Kentucky Russell, 2:20, and was in foal to Anteco, 2:16.

A MEETING of the biennial congress of the American trotting association was held at Chicago, May 21. The secretary's report showed the association was in good condition financially. W. P. Jans, of Terre Haute, was elected president and G. B. McFall, of Okaloosa, Iowa, vice-president.

THE following order of holding the meetings on the principal California circuit has been suggested: Breeders' Summer Meeting, Oakland, Napa, Petaluma, Sacramento, Stockton, San Jose, Vallejo and Breeders' Fall Meeting.

THE Directors of the Olympic Club of this city is trying to get up a grand exhibit of equestrianism at the Bay District track next August. If it is properly managed and the opinion of prominent horsemen heeded it will prove successful.

IT is said that perhaps Millard Sanders will go East in a few weeks with a consignment of young Sideuys. They are all doing excellently and will compare very favorably with any lot of youngsters ever sent from the Valensin farm.

GIL CURRY, one of the best-known of the younger reinsmen of the country, had his shoulder broken by being thrown from a sulky at West Side Park, Nashville, recently. He will be laid up for several weeks as a result of his accident.

H. F. RUDISELL's fine broodmare, Orphan Girl, by Del Sur, foaled a beautiful red sorrel filly by Dictatus last week. Mr. Rudisell says in his letter that this is the first representative of Dictatus in Los Angeles county, and he calls her May Day.

THE approaching sale of stock from Pierce Bros., Santa Rosa Stock Farm, is absorbing the attention of horsemen. The catalogue now being prepared by Mr. Pierce will contain the names of some very fine ones by the most fashionable of stallions.

JOHN ROGERS will have a string of trotters from the San Mateo Stock Farm on the circuit this year. Mr. Rogers is a very capable young man and has been the chief colt handler at the farm for years. He is an excellent driver and will do well in every race.

STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:14, may be seen in Millard Sanders string on the circuit this year. What a free-for-all race he will see if McKinney, 2:14, Truman, 2:12, Daly, 2:15, and Richmond Jr., 2:15 start. Beaury Mc, 2:14, will not be seen on the circuit this year.

LAST Saturday Senator Leland Stanford, Stephen T. Gage, Joseph Cairn Simpson, A. Hickok and a number of others spent an enjoyable afternoon watching the yearlings, two year-olds and three-year-olds trotting fast quarters and halves. The number of "surprises" shown was a revelation to the delighted spectators.

THE Chico track has been raised on the turns and is now in perfect order. L. H. McIntosh's colts and fillies by Arthur Wilkes, 2:28, are being worked there every day, and all of them are doing well. Mr. McIntosh has some representatives of the Le Grand family also that will enter the "charmed circle" this fall.

IT is said that more money was paid for Ambrosial 3, 2:18, than for any horse ever owned in Canada. We believe the price was $10,000. Those who have seen this colt in a race remember him as one that much is expected from. He hasn't a tin cup record, but made it in a six-heat race. He was a length behind Directum in 2:11.

THE chance for breeding a 2:00 trotter is better to-day than the chance of breeding a 2:25 trotter was twenty-five years ago. The opportunities to procure broodmares of suitable quality are decidedly better. Stallion fees are cheaper. Information in all branches of the business has been disseminated. In fact, there is now a system and a plan.

GEO. WOODARD has a big string of trotters and pacers in charge of E. Bigelow at the Woodland race track. He is one of those quiet, observant horsemen that never says much about his horses, but every one notices that when the bell rings he always manages to have a few "Bantons" to surprise the boys. The holes they fit in the 2:30 list are changed every time they race, and at the end of the circuit the top hutton-hole seems to fit them very easily.

C. NEEDHAM, of Bellota, owner of Steve Whipple, 2:14, has had nearly every one of his fifty colts gelded this spring. When it comes to having stylish game trotting horses, the youngsters on his place by Steve Whipple, Prindex and Voter, out of the daughters of the Black Hawk and Morgan mares he has, ought to be hard to excel. He intends to have a number trained exclusively for road teams. He will find an excellent market for them at any time of the year.

BEN BOWMAN is at the Petaluma track. He has quite a string of promising youngsters in training, among them being Plunkett, 2:13, Stammor, by Stamboul, 2:07, dam Moor Maid, (The Moor); Rayonetta, by Anteco, 2:16, dam Deborah, by Sultan, 2:14, and a very good pacing filly by Frazier's Secretary that will wear watching this year. Ben was with Sid Sperry for years. He trained and drove Nelly R., 2:17, and also worked for J. H. White, of Lakeville, for two years.

MESSRS. WILLIAMS & MOREHOUSE's stallion Silver Bow, 2:16, is a wonderful sire. At the Silver Bow Stock Farm where he is "Sultan of the Harem," there were nine mares of all colors bred to him last year and the seven fillies and two colts that came this spring were all solid bays, handsome, well formed and stylish-looking just like their sire. Mr. Morehouse is thinking seriously of selling all his interests in Montana and settling in California; the climate seems to agree with him better than that of his old home.

COMPLAINTS are being made by horsemen that the track at Petaluma is not near as good as it was last year, simply because it does not receive proper attention. The absence of watering carts, harrows, scrapers and teams cannot be claimed, but the lack of labor and a disposition to have the course look like the "rocky road to Dublin" is apparent. It is hoped that something will be done by Directors Brown, Putnam and Higgins in this matter. Perhaps this reminder will bring Secretary Maclay's eagle eye to bear upon the course.

H. W. PHELPS, of this city, has sold to George Flett, of Fargo, N. D., the grandly bred young horse, Delta, by Palatka, by Nutwood, the great speed producer. Delta's dam is Heptagon, by Harold, the sire of Mand S., and many other speedy trotters. Delta is a handsomely finished horse and he is surely destined to make a good sire of speed and fashion, if he is not a trotter himself, but as he has never been trained his prospects are promising for the track, as he is a good-gaited, speedy going horse. Mr. Orcutt, president of the Central Transit Company of New York, paid $15,000 for Palatka, and the horse is a grand individual.

MR. WHITE, the public-spirited owner of the stallion Russia, 2:29, offers to present trainer Starr with $1,000 if he will give Czar, 2:12, a record of 2:10 the coming season, and $500 for each additional half second that he reduces the record below 2:10. Czar got his record of 2:12 last year as a three-year-old. His sire, Russia, is remarkably well-bred, being by Nutwood, 2:18, out of Reina Victoria. The latter was by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, out of Hyacinth, by Volunteer, and Hyacinth's dam was the famous Clara, which brought Dexter, 2:17, etc.

PIERCE BROS., of Santa Rosa Stock Farm, sent their mare Vida Wilkes, 2:18, to the Palo Alto Stock Farm to be bred to Advertiser, 2:16. The produce of this winner will be extremely valuable. Electioneer, Guy Wilkes, Nutwood, Geo. Wilkes, John Nelson, represent the sires with the following great race records ornamenting the names of its relatives: Advertiser, 2:16, Vida Wilkes, 2:18, Guy Wilkes, 2:15, Nutwood, 2:18, Lula, 2:15, Geo. Wilkes, 2:22, Sahledale, 2:18 and Sister, dam of Albert W., 2:20, besides all the great ones to the credit of the mighty Electioneer. There is no doubting the fact that Messrs. Pierce Bros. will almost hold the youngster, when it comes, invaluable. From such a sire and dam it ought to be.

DON'T breed to a horse because the service fee is low, nor because it is high, says an exchange. If you have in your neighborhood a stallion that has been bred in a certain line for several generations and one that has been bred a less number of times in the same line, breed to the one that has been bred until the characteristics of the breed are so thoroughly imbued as to enable him to universally transmit them to his progeny. A horse need be in a neighborhood but one year until you can tell his breeding by his colts. If the colts show they are from the same sire and are good, then patronize the horse, but if they are of all colors and kinds, then shun him, for he is too dear at any price.

JOHN DRISCOLL will open the campaign with a stable of Parkville Farm horses at Philadelphia. His pupils are as follows: Regal Wilkes, 2:11, by Guy Wilkes, dam by Sultan; Jay Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15, out of Sweetness, the dam of Sidney; Mozart, by Stamboul, 2:07, by Baron Rose, by Stamboul, out of Minnehaba; Chan Q., by Sidney; Thistle, 2:14, by Sidney; Edith Rose, two year-old filly, by Baron Rose, out of Edith R., 2:17; Eagle Princess, three-year-old filly, by Eagle Bird; Lou Wilkes, 2:26, by Sable Wilkes; Ferndale, by Simmocolon, out of Fern Leaf; Maggie Pandect, by Pandect; Talapa, two-year-old filly, by Baron Wilkes, dam Hildegarde, by Harry Clay, and a gelding by Stanford, 2:29, dam by Electioneer.

EVERY colt-owner should own a foot-rasp; never mind about a knife—the less a knife is used around the foot the better. The first time the smith gets at the foot he will probably cut it enough to last a lifetime. When the colt is weaned, if it has been handled and gentled, it will allow the feet to be raised and leveled with the rasp, and this should be done at least every two or three months. If the colt has a tendency to walk on the heel or frog and develop an abnormal length of toe, rasp the sole toward the toe to take away the thickness accumulating and shorten the toes. If the foot is worn at the toe, and the heels have become too high, lower the heels with the rasp so the frog will just touch the ground and receive the necessary pressure to keep the foot expanded. When a foot has kept in good shape, but the edges or rim of the hoof have grown, leaving the frog and center hollow, rasp the edges so the frog rests upon the ground lightly, or lower the heels to a level with the frog and take away the toe with the rasp in the same proportion. The more frequently the foot is put in proper shape, the more it becomes fixed in growing in that shape.—Ex.

THE weight of ordinary bicycle sulkies varies from 37 to 65 pounds, and they are now manufacturing aluminum "racers" weighing from 18 to 25 pounds. "I do not believe a horse can go any faster in an extremely light sulky than one of ordinary weight, say 47 pounds," remarked A. P. McDonald at the Driving Park recently. "Of course you want to know the reason. Here it is. An eighteen-pound sulky is so frail that it must quiver, and at that moment it draws harder than a stiff sulky. Again, a horse must take hold of the bit enough so you can steady him, and this is sufficient to draw any bicycle sulky. Science in sulkies has reached its meridian, I think, and the new aluminums will not cut much of a figure. Aluminum shoes are good for some horses. For instance, a four-ounce shoe is as big as an ordinary one weighing twelve ounces, and protects the hoof on the trotters and pacers that can wear them just three times as much as the narrow steel shoe. They would not do for the pavement under any circumstances, as you would need a new pair every other day. The metal comes in bars, like lead, and can be bent to fit any hoof. They are especially adapted for pacers, which carry as little weight as possible, some of them only three-ounce shoes."

RECENTLY, unless the daily press misstate the facts, the Ohio Legislature passed a stringent law against docking horses' tails, and it is pleasing to observe by the Stock Farm that the Kentuckians are thinking about suppressing that particular feat of fashionable barbarism. Judge Halsey does not too strongly state the case when he says: "Certainly this practice should not be tolerated in any civilized community. Viewed from any aspect it is barbarous. The operation frequently results in lock jaw. It is cruel and entails unnecessary suffering on the unfortunate animal that is selected as its victim, and it deprives him of a very useful member, almost his sole means of defense against an annoying and troublesome enemy. It does not add to the beauty of the horse, but is adopted in obedience to a senseless and pernicious fashion. One of the most attractive features in a really fine horse is a handsome flowing tail. Nature made it not for utility only, but for ornament. It is an extremely vitiated taste that leads one to prefer an animal deprived by human cruelty of one of his chief adornments. Many years ago docking was very common in this country. With the growth of civilization the practice was discarded. It was too shocking a barbarity to be tolerated. There is now an attempt on the part of some people who see nothing good in what is American, but blindly ape English customs, to reintroduce it. Were it merely a matter of taste these Anglo-manics might properly be left to pursue their fad in peace. But it is more. It is a matter of humanity, and the cruel innovation should be met by the stern hand of the law. No man should be allowed to mutilate for the sake of a senseless fashion so noble an animal as the horse, and if men will not be restrained by the ordinary dictates of humanity the strong arm of the law should be used to restrain their cruelty."

PITTSBURG PHIL'S good horse Parvenue is lame, having wrenched one of the muscles in his left hip. He will not be a starter in the Brooklyn Handicap.

NOMAD, son of Wildidle and imp. Amelia, beat Fidelia, Nick and several other good ones at Elizabeth, N. J., on the 1st of May, the distance being six furlongs.

LITTLE ACCLAIM won another good race at St. Louis last Monday. She is apparently as good as she was in California two years ago, when the best of them had to take her dust.

JENNY ROWETT, dam of Good Bye, by Uncle Vic, and the broodmare Noradam, by Falsetto, died recently at Quindaro Stud, near Louisville, Ky. Both mares were owned by Dr. F. E. Corrigan.

SUPERINTENDENT BELLAIRS, of St. Louis, telegraphed us last Monday: "Kindly remind owners that second payment $20 in Club Members' handicap must be made on Monday next or horses will be struck out."

THE name of Dan Miller was inadvertently left out of the table of "Winning Owners" in last week's issue. We find that the horses of the popular young owner won $920 in purses at the Blood Horse meeting.

GENOA, the three-year-old filly by Flood, dam Goula, by Exminster, broke down in her work last Saturday, and Charles Treathan, her owner, will send her to James B. Ferguson's great horse, Prince Royal.

ST. PETER, to new arrival—"From where?" New Arrival—"Connecticut." "Occupation, please." "Member of the Legislature." "Excuse me; can't admit you. You're too good for heaven; better go back to Connecticut."—Drake's Magazine.

BILLY DONATHAN'S good-looking bay colt Alexis was run into the rails by Burlingame, on Bordeaux, last Saturday, scraping the skin off his stifle and losing the place besides. The colt was exhibited to the judges after the race, but nothing was done in the matter.

MR. J. M. YOUNG, of Bardstown, Ky., has sent four mares to this city to be bred to Teuton. They are Marion C., by Harry O'Fallon, dam Zuma; Lady O'Fallon, a full sister to Marion C.; Bessie Bevins, by Ban Yan, dam Bettie Magruder, and Blue Maid, by Blue Eyes, dam Duet.

THE Elmwood Stock Farm owners will send to Chicago on or about June 1st three or four of the best ones, including the Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt (if not sold to Brooklyn parties), Sir Walter and the Brutus-Ariola colt. One or two untried youngsters by Brutus may be sent also.

THE underground passage from the amphitheatre to the inside portion of the track is one of the features that is said to be a sure go at the new mile track at Lexington, Ky. This will avoid accidents and prove a great convenience for persons wishing to cross from one side to the other during the progress of a race.

A SISTER to the great Bonnie Jean colt made its appearance on the earth last Saturday morning at Elmwood Stock Farm, to the great delight of its foud owners. The youngster was nearly forty-one inches in height at foaling time, and is more promising than the Bonnie Jean colt was at the same period in his career.

ISINGLASS won the 2,000 Guineas at Newmarket, Eng., last Wednesday. Rose's colt, Ravensbury, was second and the Duke of Portland's Raeburn third. Ten started. Insinglass, by Isonomy-Deadlock, the property of Mr. McCallmont, was a good two year-old, and we believe was favorite for the 2,000, although the quotations are not now at hand.

WILLIAMS & MOREHOUSE, of Milpitas, Cal., have purchased of Charles Kerr, the Bakersfield turfman, Gussie, ch f, two years, by Hyder Ali, dam Attraction, by imp. King Ban, second dam Attractive, by Kentucky; third dam Attraction, by imp. Balrownie; fourth dam imp. Maud, by Stockwell, and on to the nineteenth dam, a Royal mare.

EL RAYO'S win last Saturday at a mile and fifty yards was a remarkably good one. He was carried a merry clip by Tigress and Little Esperanza, the mile being run from wire to wire in 1:41 and the mile and fifty yards in 1:43 or 1:44, the official timers, however, making it 1:45. As El Rayo carried 120 pounds and won handily from Tigress, who packed but 83, Holly's horse must be of a very high class.

PHIL DWYER recently claimed that Luke Blackburn was the greatest horse he ever owned, not excepting Hanover, Kingston, Dew Drop, Hindoo, Longstreet and Tremont, owned by him. He is the only sire of winners of both the Futurity and American Derby Stakes, the richest stakes in the East and the West. He was the sire of fifty one horses starting last year, thirty-two of them winning a total of 117 races and $51,374 in money. His get won from 1886 to 1892 the sum of $359,925.

PHILOPENA, the winner of the Lassie Stakes at Memphis, is the first of the get of imp. Top Gallant to start, and her victory does credit to the promising young sire at Willamette. Philopena is trained by that astute horseman, Will Scully. She was sold at Milt Young's sale at Lexington, Dec. 1, last, and at that time was big and fat. Up to that time she had never had on a bridle, while nearly every other yearling in the country was already broken. She is in none of the stakes at Cumberland Park, Nashville, but is fairly well engaged farther up the line.—Breeder and Turfman.

A LONDON dispatch of May 5th said: "The Newmarket first spring meeting closed to-day, the principal race of the day being for the 1,000 guinea stake for three-year-old fillies, to carry eight stone twelve pounds each, the owner of the second filly to receive 200 sovereigns out of the stakes and the third to save his stake. The Rowley mile (one mile and eleven yards) was the course. There were seventy-three subscriptions. The race was won by Sir J. Blundell Maple's chestnut filly La Belle Stillense, by Saraband, out of Assay. The same owner's black filly Dame President, by Barcardine, out of Geheimniss, was second, and Lord Roscherry's chestnut filly Treasure, by Bend d'Or, out of Bonny Jean, third."

E. J. APPLEBY, the well-known young horseman, brother of Orville and William L., has purchased of the Todhunter estate, Sacramento, the chestnut filly, foaled March 7, 1892, by Prince of Norfolk, dam Kitty Lamb, by Boots (son of imp. Hercules); second dam Emma Barnes, by Norfolk; third dam Evadne, by Winnebago, etc. He has named the filly Lucky Day, on account of finding a silver dime on the floor immediately after the sale.

CALIFORNIA horses did great work at St. Louis last Saturday. Tim Murphy, the old roan gelding, Cy Mulkey used to own, won a dash of five and one-half furlongs, with Baldwin's Esperanza second, while in the mile and 100-yard handicap little Acclaim got home first in 1:50, an exceedingly fast run on a slow course. The seven and one-half furlong race just previous was run in 1:37, while speedy Tim Murphy did the five and one-half furlongs in 1:08.

LAST week G. Pacheco, of Novato, Marin County, was made happy by the appearance on earth of two little strangers of the equine race, both by imp. Idaliun. Marin, by imp. Kyrle Daly, dam Marian, by Hubbard, foaled a brown filly, while Julian P., by Wheatley, dam Mercedes (dam of Adolph), by Lodi, foaled a bay colt. Mr. Pacheco owns a very choice little collection of thoroughbred mares, and quite a number of excellent turf performers have come from his place in Marin county. Abi P. was bred there, and has run second in both the races she has started in.

THE Fair string arrived in Chicago on Wednesday, May 3d, and quartered at Washington Park. The Inter Ocean of the 5th inst. said: "Floodgate, who was reported sick at Salt Lake City, is with the lot, and appears to be all right. The stable consists of Floodgate and Dare, candidates for the American Derby; Gibson, an aged horse; Princess, three-year-old, by Cheviot—Music; Yo El Rey, full brother to Yo Tambien, by Joe Hooker—Marian; Dolly Mack, two-year-old, by Joe Hooker—Lou Spencer; Ella Smith, two-year-old, by Joe Hooker—Countess Zeika; Challenge, two-year old, by Joe Hooker—Mattie Glenn."

SNAPPER GARRISON put in an appearance at Elizabeth Tuesday with a fringe of stubble only remaining of his moustache, says a New York exchange. Garrison looks and feels in good shape, and says that his training operations have already been so successful that he can do 119 pounds. He has, by the by, made an arrangement by which Mr. C. L. Fair, of San Francisco, will have second call on his services. Hugh Penny and Snooky Taylor have been reinstated at Hawthorne Park. Penny seems to have made a clean breast of it and promised to stick to the paths of rectitude in the future, avoiding the insidious bowl.

HENRY PAYTEN, of Sidney, New South Wales, has patented what he calls the phonoscopic starting signal, the adoption of which he believes will put an end to the seemingly everlasting starting difficulty. The phonoscopic starting signal is coupled to a portable and convenient stand attached to a light under-carriage, which may be readily moved from one starting point to another. The signal is worked by a light lever or trigger, by which the starter, when opportunity offers, may, without effort, dispatch large fields of horses on even terms from the flash of the signal (which consists of a neatly constructed semaphore) and the instantaneous report from a large metallic gong, thus giving the jockeys the intimation from a simultaneous sight and sound signal that the start has been effected.

THE trust in horse racing is as much a power in the East as it is in sugar or cigarettes. The poor owner has no show in even a selling race at Elizabeth this spring. The magnates there are Mike Dwyer, Croker and "Bill" Daly, who are in a position to enter a winner for every race that is run. This trio this year will come pretty near coralling the bulk of the purses on the great Eastern tracks. It is true Lorillard has Lamplighter and Marcus Daly has Tammany, but these only start in great events, while Dwyer, Croker and Father Bill will enter for all races, both handicaps and selling purses, in which they can outclass all competitors. Old Blitzen has lowered their colors several times, but he is no match for the Kingstons, the Longstreets and the Yorkville Belles that they can bring out against him.

FIGURES on the late meeting at Montgomery Park, Memphis, show in the fifteen days of racing there eighty races were run off, and $51,000 in stakes and purses were distributed among the horsemen. Pekin and May Thompson each won four races, and the latter leads the successful performers with $3,690 won. Three stable boys won $5,000 and over, they being Cushing & Orth, $7,075; Scoggan Bros., $5,729, and the Bedford Stables, $5,215. Of the stallions, the get of Buchanan put him in first place with $6,458 taken into camp. Of the fifty-one jockeys that rode during the meeting eighteen won races, Thorpe leading with fifteen winning mounts, followed by Kunze with thirteen, Perkins ten, Reagan and J. McDonald eight each, H. Shields and McCann five each, F. Carr three, Perkins, C. Smith and Thompson two each, J. Paul, Hennessy, Sargent and J. J. McCafferty one each.

A MAJORITY of our turfmen are of the opinion that the Brutus-Bonnie Jean colt is the best two-year-old that ever raced on California soil, as he has made every youngster he has met look like a sucker, and can pack weight a la Longstreet. He has a yearling brother and a suckling sister on Elmwood Stock Farm that are said to be very promising. Charles Boos this week called our attention to several points of resemblance between the famous Ormonde and the Bonnie Jean colt. The points of their hips are much further forward than those of ordinary racers, their backs are extremely short, and while there is quite a long sweep from hip to hock, they are longer from the hock to the ground than most so-called judges desire to see a race horse. The stiles of each horse are muscular, but do not sink in the center a great deal, and bulge out again, as is the case with many of our flyers, but look strong all through. Lexington had hips well forward, a short back and innense length from hip to hock, but was short from hock to ground. Enquirer is built on the same lines as Ormonde and the Bonnie Jean colt, and was a wonderful race horse in his day. El Rio Rey is of the Lexington type. Marvel, the wonderful Australian miler, has the well-set-forward, prominent hips noticeable in Ormonde, Enquirer et al., and is extremely long from the hock down, and while his body is longer than any of the horses mentioned, his back is very short. Kingston and Raceland are of a different type altogether, as was old Boston, having rather long backs and not at all prominent hips—that is, if the pictures we have of them are to be relied upon.

THE weather at Gravesend was wretchedly cold and raw, with several heavy showers of rain Sunday morning, but good work was done on three adjoining race tracks. Leonawell, in Phillip J. Dwyer & Son's stable, is moving in fine shape. The son of Leonatus and Nettie Howell is a much improved race horse, and many first-class judges predict that the colt will win the Brooklyn Handicap for President Dwyer. The Dwyers have been popular horsemen since the first day they owned Rhadamanthus, but it is popular to say that Phillip J. Dwyer, Jr. is the most popular turfman East to-day. Leonawell worked a mile in 1:49 over a heavy track. The little horse went the journey in an easy, resolute style that made him many friends.—New York World.

R. PORTER ASHE and Thos. H. Williams are both dissatisfied with the result of the late lawsuit for the possession of Geraldine and the four yearling colts. Oddly enough each of them filed a notice on the other last Monday of intention to move for a new trial at the earliest possible date. The motions will be made on almost identical statutory grounds. Sifted down, though, each turfman thinks he can make a better showing in the next trial and get a better judgment. The case before Judge Hunt several weeks ago will be as nothing compared with the drive from post to wire the next race is expected to be. Owing to Mr. Williams' influence Ashe has been unable to race Geraldine on the Bay District track, so he sent her East last week. As yet he has not paid Williams the four thousand nine hundred and odd dollars the jury decided that he owed. The present motion for a new trial suspends that payment in a measure, and Ashe will have the racing of Geraldine for some time to come without question.

A. F. WALCOTT, President of the Monmouth Park Racing Association, has arrived home from Europe, says a New York exchange. He visited most of the principal tracks, saw about all the prominent owners of crack racing strings, and fully informed himself on all the details of English racing. "When it comes to accommodations," said he, "we are far ahead of the English. There the general public are poorly provided for, and it is only the very rich who are well taken care of. In England the stand accommodations are wretched. The public are hustled around the field without much regard for their feelings. Of course, in the club-house stands everything is provided, but it is very expensive compared with similar privileges here. It amounts practically to what a grand-stand ticketholder gets here, but instead of costing $1.50, as it does here, it costs three guineas or $15. The stands, too, are small. All the grand-stands in England could be put under the grand-stand at Monmouth Park, and the grand-stand at Guttenburg is bigger and better in every respect than the best stand in all England. Then the betting rings on the other side are badly managed and still worse off for accommodations." Mr. Walcott says that our method of starting is a great deal better than that in vogue in England. In speaking of the training of thoroughbreds on the other side, Mr. Walcott said: "Taking into account the differences of climate here and in England I think their system of training is as good as the American. I inspected several of the best stables and found that all did probably the best under the circumstances which surrounded them."

THE percentage of foals will die annually from retention of the meconium, or first excrement, and from diseases having origin in the navel is very large, and has been known to represent on one farm which might be named, as high as 75 per cent. of the entire crop of young things for a given year. Much of this loss is preventable, as experience has demonstrated time and again that the use of an enema of warm castile soapsuds, given about thirty minutes after the foal first stands up, will usually induce an evacuation of the colon, and that dusting the cord-stump and navel with iodoform, boric acid or other antiseptic substance twice a day until the parts are all nicely healed, will reduce the mortality wonderfully. But this treatment, simple as it seems, will fail utterly if it is not applied with some degree of skill and intelligence. The delay of one or two hours in the administration of the enema referred to or to the insufficient or negligent application of the antiseptic powder to the navel, will negative the entire proceedings. If the attempt at exhibiting either of these preventive measures fail, it must be tried again until satisfactory results are obtained. Great watchfulness must be a constant accompaniment of the treatment of these cases. Many a foal has been ruinously dosed and clattered because the veterinary or attendant failed to notice the passage of the meconium shortly after birth, and many a foal has been lost because the exposed navel surface was untouched in some little spot by the antiseptic dressing. Eternal vigilance is the price of success—to misquote an old axiom—holds as good here as anywhere in the world. Probably 90 per cent. of foals lost from two causes above named could be saved by the methods described if intelligently applied.

THE poolroom men have won the day in Alameda county, and gambling in horse-racing has been licensed, said the Chronicle of Wednesday last. The work was done so cleverly by the bookmakers that the people of Oakland do not yet understand the exact situation of affairs. In a very short time, however, they will learn that just outside the city limits the gamblers will be in their glory, betting on all the big Eastern races this summer. When Henry Schwartz secured control of the Oakland Trotting Park a couple of months ago, it was said that this was only a part of the scheme whereby the bookmakers were to be restored to power. At that time it was known that Schwartz and his colleagues were working for but one purpose, and that was to establish a feeling among the people that the races at the track were all right, and then, when the proper time came, have bookmaking licensed. The whole plan was very smoothly carried out. Schwartz and his colleagues, for some unknown reason, were favored by the Oakland Supervisors without the latter being petitioned so far as known, to establish a license tax for the selling of pools on horse races. This tax is something new in the history of the country, and was evidently made just at this time to assist the Oakland Trotting Park. The ordinance was passed by the Board late in the afternoon and went through without a hitch, Supervisor Pelouze being the only member voting against it. The first provision of the ordinance says that no person, upon any trial or contest of skill or power of endurance between horses within the county of Alameda, except within the enclosure of a race track, shall sell any pools. The ordinance further provides that any person who shall make books or sell pools under the same shall pay an auctioneer's license. The great point made is that gambling in horse-racing has been licensed. The provisions of the ordinance do not prevent betting on the Eastern races, and nothing about a prohibitory ordinance has been mentioned.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam, and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

The Pacific Kennel Club's Show.

The third annual bench show given by the Pacific Kennel Club has come and gone. It was a good show; an excellent one in all respects for San Francisco and the Pacific Coast. There were 362 dogs benched, which is over one hundred more than any other show on this coast could boast of. The quality of the dogs benched would compare, as a whole, with most other shows the country over. The arrangement, management and general features of the show were handed in first-class shape, standing and in marked contrast to the shows heretofore given in this city. The public entered into the spirit which permeates the active kennelmen and gave the club the best of encouragement by attending in great numbers. During the past week dogdom of the Pacific Coast has received new life and a full added measure of vitality. Everybody was pleased with the event, but this was to have been expected, for the work of preparation was well done, the whole ground being well covered.

Judge Raper won a warm place in the hearts of the fancy here, and he did it by his straightforward manliness in the treatment of the subject in his official capacity, as well as in his private demeanor toward the earnest kennelmen of this coast. He carries with him a number of orders to purchase for various parties, the very best dogs obtainable in England of a variety of breeds. We are glad to know this as it will assist in developing kennel matters here very materially. But of the show.

MASTIFFS.

Open Dog Class.—This class presented eight entries. Ingleside Crown Prince was an easy winner. He has few superiors in the whole country. Grand head, excellent body and bone, good coat, in short, a typical specimen of this grand breed. Lion, second, was placed as last year, although he is hardly out of coat. Chino, third, is probably rightly placed. Has good bone but moves poorly; ears not well hung.

Open Bitch Class.—Louisa Minting, first, is too light, but may improve; she is stilted, slight behind. Venus, second, is deficient in head and lacks very much in substance.

Dog Puppies.—Lomita Caution, light in head, fair body, good limbs and feet. Lewis, second, is deficient in head; bad coat. Lomita Minting, first, in the bitch puppies. Queen V. H. C. received more letters than she was entitled to. She lacks quality and has no feature that could not be vastly better.

GREAT DANES.

Open Dog Class.—Titan, first, a blue dog; has a very fine head of the proper type; full of the correct expression; fine, long well-muscled neck tapering to a pair of excellent shoulders. He is well-muscled and trim and lithe as one seldom sees in this section. Ribaud, second, is of the right type but is in striking contrast to the winner of first, and in comparison to him should have fallen into the alphabet. Leggy, light, deficient in head and body. Hector, third, was properly placed; weak behind, has fair head and shoulders. Lap, reserved, is fair in head, ears poorly carried. Karl E. Meyer's Hector, V. H. C., is not of the winning type; too heavy, but is a well formed dog; moves easily and is well muscled and strong in every way, but his expression has been ruined by the butcher who "chopped" his ears. Caesar C has a passably fair head but is otherwise very deficient.

Open Bitch Class.—Majel, first, is a beautiful fawn bitch of the proper type; excellent head, neck and body; good easy mover; grand expression. Mirthe, second, is heavy, and while having good head and bone, is not otherwise of the right type. Hagar, third, is equal to winner of second. Belle, V. H. C., too short, thick, low and heavy.

Dog Puppies had but one entry and this one was a very poor specimen. Ko-Ko by name, and for what reason we know not, was given third.

ROUGH COATED ST. BERNARDS.

Open Class Dogs.—California Bernard, first, is a fair-sized, well shaped, well formed dog, strong and muscular, good action, nice head, good expression, deep, well-formed body, sound and firm loin and hind quarters.

California Alton, second, has a larger skull than winner of first, but is not so well formed; good markings. He has grand bone, strong in front but weak behind, consequently, a poor mover.

Regloy, third, is an excellent puppy and gives much promise. Good head, strong boned and well formed.

Duke of Wellington, reserve, is a large dog, but lacks in most other respects.

Grand Chancellor V. H. C. is weedy; not so good as Columbus V. H. C.

Open Bitch Class.—Fernwood Inez, first, is a very excellent bitch and was alone in her class, having no competition whatever. Grand head, bone, body and markings.

Lady Delight, second, is a very good bitch, good markings, good bone, good expression.

Victory, third, is fair in head, good bone, shown with litter.

Lady Sylvia, reserve, is a very fair bitch of good quality.

Puppies—Regloy had a "walk-over" for first; Columbus, second; Junho, H. C., fair head and good bone and body; Monk, H. C., got all be was worth.

In bitch puppies Lady Grace, first, is a very excellent one.

NEWFOUNDLANDS.

This class was of very poor quality; not proper type.

GREYHOUNDS.

Open Dog Class.—Peter Jackson, first, is an excellent dog; finely-shaped head of proper type; good neck, well-muscled and properly set; good shoulders; trim, well-formed fore legs; neat, well-padded feet; deep chest; back strongly muscled; finely arching loin; nice tail; good, well-developed and well-muscled thighs; well let down in hocks; a good mover. Donard, second, is good in front; not so well muscled as winner of first; rightly placed. John W., third, and Examiner, reserve, were properly placed, each being good specimens. Flea, V. H. C., is also a very good one. The entire class was very fair.

Lady Glendyne and Valley Queen, in hitches, rubbed close for first, the former winning, the Queen second. Each are clean, smooth, well-formed hitches of the proper type and built on very nearly perfect lines. Cleverness, third, but slightly beat Lady Olga; Maid of the Valley, V. H. C., and Lillie W., V. H. C., both good, but not up to the ones first mentioned; the latter with litter not in good form.

Puppies—Stamboul, first, in dog puppies, is a very fair puppy; Extra Pale, second.

Eureka, first, in bitch puppies, is full of promise; Stamboul Queen, second, and Yreka, third, are indifferent specimens.

DEERHOUNDS.

Open Dog Class.—Stag, first, is a fair dog, of the proper type, not a good mover, but appeared to be strong and well muscled; Leo, second, and Scott, third, presented but little to distinguish a favorable difference; Lance, reserve, was properly placed.

In hitches Lassie, first, is very good, ranking well for first honors. Lufra, V. H. C., is an indifferent bitch.

AMERICAN FOXHOUNDS.

Open Dog Class.—Paddy, first, had a very good competitor in Carlo, winner of second. The former has won three "firsts" in this city, and is a strong dog in all respects of the proper type. Fine expression, excellent character, good head, fine ears, well hung; strong, well-muscled jaws and neck; deep, well-rounded chest; good bone, legs and well-padded feet, strong behind; tail nicely carried. Carlo is nearly his equal. Jack, third, did not push them closely. The balance of the class were only fair specimens.

The open bitch class Julie, first, is a very good, well-formed specimen.

Puppies.—In puppies Tasso took first in dog class. A very fair specimen. Jeanette, first in the bitch puppy class, is light; lacks substance and bone. Lady Cloud is not of the approved type; too thick headed.

ENGLISH FOXHOUNDS.

Landlord and Landress, two first, each in their respective classes.

BLOODHOUNDS.

Premier W., the only entry, is a very good specimen, but lacks in length of skull and wrinkle.

POINTERS.

Challenge Dogs.—Duke of Vernon N. F. C.

Challenge Bitches.—Sally Brass II, first.

Jap, second, well-formed white and lemon dog, good neck, good body, ribs well sprung, firm bone, good legs and feet, heavy in shoulders. Pat P., third, has a fair head; good in muzzle but thick in skull; falls off behind. Eran, reserve, is off in shoulders, and is a poor mover, scarcely entitled to his place. Wade Hampton, Professor's Lad, Billy B., Old Black Joe II. were given three letters each, and were doubtless entitled to them. The balance of the lettered dogs were in no sense show dogs, although practical, intelligent ones for field work.

Bitches (over 50 pounds).—Rose K. has a good head, but might be cleaner cut; a bit thick in skull, fair body, bone and feet. Jill, second, is thick and wide in head, short in muzzle, a racy, lithe body, good mover. Horuell Bess, third, was not in condition, but showed a very good head, good muzzle, good body, light in bone. Vera, reserve, has a good head, fair muzzle, ears too long, fair bone, falls away behind. Donna Sensation, Miss B., Lillie P., were each given three letters and were entitled to them.

Open Dogs (under 55 pounds).—Ben Koo, first, a very fine looking, good easy movement, locks in muzzle and too light in eye; good body, loins, legs and feet. Bruce R., has a fair head, but shoulders are ungainly and out of line. Jim P. is a very fine-looking hack pointer, but not a show dog.

Bitches (under 50 pounds).—Amaryllis, first, is a bitch of great quality, she is not clean cut under the eyes, but is very good in shoulders, back, loin and limbs. Dede, second, is a nice little bitch of good type, but shallow in back ribs and a bit light in body. Meg Merrilles, third, has a nice head of the proper too, a little wide between the eyes. She is beaten by Dede only in length of leg and in loin. Meo, reserve, has very fair skull and muzzle, but is short in couplings and straight in stiles. Betsy B., V. H. C., and Fly, V. H. C., are much too light in muzzle. Irene, H. C., was rightly placed.

Bitch Puppies.—Marion, first, is good in skull and muzzle, light in eye, good in body, back and loin and a good mover. Little Nell, second, is short in head otherwise very good. Chic M., third, has a good, clean head and good muzzle, excellent back and loin, but straight in stiles. Dinah, reserve, has a good type of head and good body and limbs. Patti of Bloomo, V. H. C., got her letters from her better head, being too small to compete with the class. Cricket of Croxteth, H. C., is good in body, but short in head and bad in expression. Susie R., H. C., is short in head and very bad in eyes.

ENGLISH SETTERS.

Open Dog Class.—Pop K., first, is possessed of a very good head, good muzzle, but it might be squarer; good mover; good coat; fine eye; good bone and substance; good back and loin. Kash, second, has a fair head, good shoulders, good bone, back and loin, hind legs might be better; not in best of condition. Dictator, third, fair head, deficient in muzzle; good body, deficient shoulders. Mercury, reserve, is a very likely appearing dog, but is somewhat coarse and heavy. Smoky, V. H. C., is a very fair looking; fair head, good skull, but deficient in muzzle; splendid bone, legs and feet; good body, good coat. Merchant of Venice, V. H. C., has good muzzle, a bit heavy in head. Warspite, H. C., and Alki, H. C., were worth their letters.

Open Bitch Class.—Flake L., first, is a very sweet bitch. Good head, good body, good quality, but deficient in bone; good shoulders; might be better in ribs; good loin, back; excellent coat. Florine, second, good skull, fair muzzle, excellent coat, well-sprung ribs. Dottie Day, third, is pinched in muzzle; not so good in body as those above-mentioned; good mover.

Minnie Noble, reserve, should have been placed higher. Good head, fair muzzle, good coat; good bone and character. Zippo's Zip, V. H. C., was shown in whelp and notwithstanding her wholly coat, her grand head, should have placed her very much higher in the awards. She might be squarer in muzzle but has good length, good stop, fine eye, good skull of the proper type. Estrella, Betsy Mark and Bell were all given three letters; Bell T., and Dream o' the Elus H. C., and were deserving of their honors.

Dog Puppies.—Bunch, first, only one in class. Gives evidence of becoming a good one. Lady R., first, in bitch puppies, is of the right type. Dame Trot Noble, second, is a very nice looking puppo, but too young to have judgment upon.

GORDON SETTERS.

Dick II., first, is a very fair dog of the approved type; fair head and coat; good bone. Rock II, second, was properly placed. Orear's Grause, third, is thick in head.

Open Bitch Class.—Bijon, first, is possessed of fair head, but otherwise falls away. Nurza, second, is light and off in coat. Each of them could have been with justice dropped into the alphabet.

IRISH SETTERS.

Open Dog Class.—Ross, first, is a finely-formed dog of excellent style and character. His head is not of the type more recently bred for bench show form, yet it is a good one; the somewhat high-rounded skull gives an appearance of shortness to the muzzle, good coat, good color, fine eye, excellent mover. Ben Harrison, second, is deficient in head, lacks quality; too rough and coarse; not a good mover. Glenmore Hoodlum, third, has a fine head, but is yet a puppy and was in poor condition, or he would have defeated the winner of second. Dan II., reserve, is a bit heavy in head, coarse in neck and shoulders.

Open Bitch Class.—Lightening, first, is a handsome little bitch, trim and active; fair head, muzzle could be much better, well bodied, good coat. Ruby M., second, is deficient in head. Lady June, third, and Fawn, reserve, were properly placed.

Dog Puppies.—Glenmore Hoodlum, first. Above described True, second, is a very promising puppy. Good head, good bone and coat. Jim Corbett, third, is fair in head, good bone and substance.

IRISH WATER SPANIALS.

Barney S., first, is a fair dog of good type, strong, well-muscled, good bone. Gofney, second, is deficient in head and has poor expression. Jack, third, was rightly placed.

Nellie, first, was an easy winner in bitch class. Nora W., second, is far less pronounced in type and character than her competitor.

RETRIEVERS.

Dude and Flora were the only specimens of this interesting class presented. They each represent in a very fair degree the breed.

CHESAPEAKES.

Trout, first, in dogs, was shown too fat and heavy. Only fair in coat and color. Bess, first, in bitches, is much better in form, coat and general expression. Ripple, second, is an indifferent specimen of the breed.

COLLIES.

Open Dog Class.—Fordhook Paragon, first, is a very good specimen of the better type of this class. Good head, ears well carried, good coat, good tail, good body, bone, legs and feet and good expression. He was rightly placed. Fordhook Challenge, second, lacks in head, has poor expression, otherwise very good. Fordhook Brave, third, is equal to Challenger. Stratmore Ben, V. H. C., is quite on a level with the two last above mentioned. Roslyn Jr., H. C., is out of coat and lacks expression.

Open bitch class.—Spoiled Miss, first, is very good in head ears nicely carried; good coat, good expression, very promising. Aunt Dinah, second, has the proper head outlines; excellent expression. Fordhook Sage, third, has a very fair head, promises well. Fordhook Smilax, reserve, has a very good head, ears might be better set on and carried. Good first coat. Tarry Lodge Rex was given first in dog puppies. Good body, bone and fair head, good coat, very promising. Aunt Dinah was given honors in bitch puppies.

COCKER SPANIELS.

This was a very good class. Challenge class had only one entry but that was a very typical one, being Bronta, a very excellent specimen, proper type, excellent head, coat, ears and body.

Open Dog Class.—King Bee, first, was shown in excellent condition, improving his appearance vastly over that of last year. He has a very good head, fair muzzle, excellent coat, well feathered, nice eye, good ears well bung. Monte Cristo, second, was rightly placed but is a tardy second to King Bee. Snipe, third, has fair expression but lacks somewhat in quality. Goon coat, good bone. Rio E., V. H. C., black and tan which sets heavily in a class of blacks. Debcient in muzzle, but otherwise very fair.

Black Bitch.—Broutilla, first, was rightly placed. She is a little heavy, lacks somewhat in quality of coat, light in muzzle. Peg Wollington, second, is not a good form, too long, very fair as to other points. Bessie Woodstock, third, is deficient in head, otherwise very good. Jessie M., V. H. C., is deficient in muzzle, fair in head as a whole. Topsy A., V. H. C., is very fair, well entitled to her letters, off in coat.

Bitches in Other Than Black.—Bettie, first, is a very excellently formed bitch; skull domed a little too much, nice ear, eye and fair muzzle, has good expression, coat and bone. Jessie V., second, is a very fair specimen properly placed.

Dog Puppies.—Count Budd, first, is not of the best. He is stilted; head not of the proper type. Jet E., second; Rex, third; Brant E., reserve; Blackberry E., V. H. C., were all, perhaps, entitled to their honors, though following a deficient "first" leaves but little to be said of them.

Bitch Puppies.—Peg Woffington, first, we have before noted. Reah, second, deficient in skull and muzzle, otherwise fair. Fanny third, short in skull, only fair muzzle. Vista, reserve, short skull, fair otherwise. Bronta C., deficient to head.

DACHSHUNDS.

This class was away behind the class of last year. Blitz, first, a very fair specimen. Pusel, V. H. C., and Brunhilde, C., were indifferent specimens. King and Queen, in puppy classes, were each given third.

DALMATIANS.

Spot, first, was in good condition and proved a very good type of this breed; good head, bone and body; good hack and loins, finely marked. Jessie II, second, good specimen.

BULL DOGS.

Britisher, first, good head, but falls away in body, so much so as to place him very nearly the alphabet in a good class. Boxer, second, is fair in head and in body. British Lass, first in hitches, has a fair head, but is deficient in shoulders and forelegs.

BULL TERRIERS.

Adonis, first, but he had no meritorious competition. Dan, V. H. C., but why? Twilight, first, in hitches is about the only good specimen in the lot. In puppies, Jim Corbett, second; Victor third.

FOX TERRIERS.

This was a very good class, presenting some excellent specimens. In Challenge Dogs Champion Blempton Volunteer stood alone. He is a very fair dog, but is growing heavy and out of form. Good head, ears well carried, good expression.

Open Dog Class.—Le Logos, first, Blempton Reefe, second, were properly placed. The former has a shade the best of his competitor in carriage, of ears and expression. These two specimens are away ahead of their competitors in almost every respect. Lansdowne Desperado third, Frisco Joker, V. H. C., are good specimens.

Open Bitches.—Bonnie Bess, first, a neat, trim, well-formed bitch of excellent quality. Dauntless Suzette, second, is well-nigh the equal of the winner of first. Flossy, third, was rightly placed. White Rose, reserve, fully equal to winner of third. Judy and Blemton Rapture, each V. H. C., were well entitled to their letters.

Dog Puppies.—Lamita Patch, first, reserve in open class, "stood head and shoulders" over Hillside Orlando and Idol, which were placed in order named, second and third. The balance of the dog puppy class were of indifferent quality.

Bitch Puppies.—Golden Gem, first, appears to be a gem; full of quality, light, trim, well-formed on proper lines. White Rose, second, is a good "second" to Golden Gem's "first"; Dauntless Maid and Pytchley Pearl, third and V. H. C., respectively, were very promising ones.

In the Wire Hair Dogs. Dodge, first, is a very fair specimen; Jack, second, was a slow one for the position given.

In hitches but one entry, Bettie, third.

In Skye Terriers the awards were good, fair specimens.

Yorkshire Terriers.—Two very good entries.

Three very handsome Japanese Spaniels were shown.

In Pugs there was not much to speak of, save Puss-in-Boots and Dandy Jim.

Two Black Poodles were good ones. The white poodles were scarcely up to the standard of this breed.

The Spitz entries were scarcely up to the standard.

Tony and Rosette, in black and tan Toys, showed very good character.

The Bench Show.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—A voice from the foothills on the judge's decision on the English Setter Class:

While I do say I believe Mr. Raper is a good judge on greyhounds, foxhounds, foxterriers, collies, pointers and several other classes, his judging on the English setters will bear criticism.

We will admit that Mr. Linville showed three fine bitches, and we will admit that they were entitled to what they were awarded, still we think the judge overlooked a fine bitch, Belle T., owned by Mr. G. Twitchell. In body she is far ahead of Flake. In coat she was perfect; in legs, bone and ribs she was faultless. While Flake was a little better in head than Belle T. in Mr. Raper's opinion, our American judges would have placed Belle T. first, I do believe.

To show you how Mr. Raper made another mistake, I will call your attention to Minnie Noble, who has a perfect Count Noble head.

After judging on the type of Flake and Belle T., with long, slim face and muzzle and high dome, Mr. Raper gives Minnie Noble a reserve over Belle T., who was far ahead of Minnie Noble as a bench dog.

Now, I want to say a few words about the English Setter Kennel prize, which I think belongs to the Shenandoah Kennel, for the reason that this was the only kennel showing a stud dog. Now we all know that Mr. Linville has no kennel; that his dogs, when not with his trainer, are kept in a livery stable in San Francisco; that he does not breed his hitches, while the Shenandoah Kennels are an organized breeding kennel of English setters, and the breeding of every dog belonging to this kennel is first-class. But we feel sure that P. D. Linville had the rabbit foot.

Look for a moment at what we saw when the English setter hitches were ordered into the ring. Instead of allowing the attendants to lead two of them in, as others were obliged to do, Mr. Linville led all three in, and took a position in the center of the ring, and with head erect, much as to say: "Mr. Judge, here I am with my three. Look them well over, and make no mistake." Later on he called two assistants to lead Florine and Dottie. The rest you all know. A few more words and I am done. In Mr. Payne's report he calls attention to Zippo's Zip's woolly coat. Now, we disagree with him flat-footed. A silkier, softer coat never covered a dog than Zip has, laying flat and smooth, except a little wavy on rumps. This was the general remark of all who examined her. The writer was standing by when Mr. Hughes called Mr. Raper up to examine Zip, and asked him to point out her faults. Mr. Raper said she was a little thin in face, but in all other points she was a grand bitch, especially in body and coat, and that she was a better bitch than he had thought.

I forgot to say a few words about the report of the committee in sustaining the decision of Judge Raper on the English Setter Kennel. I think the committee should have withheld their report until the American Kennel Club should have decided the matter, and not sustain Mr. Raper because that was the rule in England.

Respectfully,
C. A. LORD,
Prop. and Mgr. Shenandoah Kennels.
Raymond, Fresno Co., Cal.

Echoes From the Bench Show.

Mr. J. B. Martin will probably attend the bench show at Seattle.

Mr. L. L. Campbell thinks of going to the Seattle show with a string of dogs from this city.

The special prizes, in the form of silver cups, contributed by the Foxterrier Club made a very handsome and pleasing exhibit at the show.

Mr. Gardiner, of this city, sold to Mr. Tonner, of North Ontario, the excellent English setter bitch Estrella, exhibited at the recent show. She is a good one.

Mr. C. A. Loud, contributes a "kick" against the awards in English setters at the recent show. These columns are always open for the discussion of matters affecting the dog in any way, but let it be done in the proper spirit.

We feel that Judge Raper will return home with a kindly feeling for dogdom in California and we feel assured that he has inspired the confidence and respect of all in his visit here. We hope to see him again when the future shall bring his eminent services in demand.

The work done by the management of the recent bench show will never be realized by any save those who have served in similar capacity. The work was well and thoroughly done, thorough in scope and in execution. To the officers, each and all, much credit is due, but we may be pardoned if we single out Mr. Clarence Haight as being worthy of all possible credit for the indefatigable manner in which he labored for the success of the show.

We are very sorry to learn of the death of Mr. L. L. Campbell's promising Irish setter puppy Glenmore Hoodlum (Finglass—Champion Ruby Glenmore). The puppy took first at Los Angeles, third in open dog class and first in puppies at the show here. The puppy was taken out of the show here on the second day owing to the fact that it appeared to be ailing. Dr. Skaife was subsequently called over the bay to attend the dog, but could not save it. We have not, as yet, learned the cause of death.

Mr. George Raper has been spending the week past, up to last evening, visiting the various points of interest in the vicinity of this city. Several days were spent at Napa, and the Judge returned from that beautiful little city delighted with his visit, as he has also been with the genial reception which he has met with all over California. This State and more especially San Francisco is thoroughly cosmopolitan. A visitor from any part of the world cannot fail to enjoy a visit here. Judge Raper has given very pleasing information to our kennelmen, which is to the effect that in English setters and pointers California possesses as fine dogs as are to be found anywhere in the whole country. This, we are led to believe, is, in a measure, true. There can be no doubt about the fact that we have some first-class dogs in the State, and we should be pleased to see a half dozen or more of them at the World's Columbian exposition. But that is a long journey for such a purpose.

On Friday night of last week, the Foxterrier Club tendered a banquet to Judge Raper. About the board were assembled the representatives of the Foxterrier fancy of this city and also of Los Angeles. A most enjoyable evening was spent in discussing the dog in which, as a matter of course, the foxterrier came in for the lion's share of attention. The retiring president of the club, Mr. James E. Watson, presided as toast master and succeeded in keeping the flow of wine, wit and eloquence in motion until the hour when "grave yards yawn and ghosts stalk forth" or words to that effect. Mr. J. B. Martin, the secretary of the club, ably assisted in the entertainment. In answer to a toast Judge Raper made a timely and fitting response, complimenting the Pacific Coast on its standing in kennel matters and upon the energy and push evinced in all matters relating to the subject of dogdom. In response to the toast "The Daily Press" Mr. H. H. Briggs responded in his unusual felicitous manner. Mr. Watson entered into the history of the introduction of foxterriers and pointers on this coast and spoke at length of the early struggles of the "old guard" in arousing an interest in good dogs. Mr. C. A. Sumner, of Los Angeles, secretary of the Southern California Kennel Club and an ardent fancier of the foxterrier breed spoke in complimentary terms of the efforts of the club and predicted for it a favorable future. Mr. J. B. Mitchell, of Los Angeles, referred to his early experience in kennel matters and the feeling which is aroused in the minds of exhibitors over the sting of defeat. A number of other gentlemen spoke on the subject pertinent to the occasion. The party broke up at a late hour full of good feeling for the organization which had rendered the evening so pleasant.

On Friday evening of last week the Foxterrier Club held its annual meeting in one of the committee rooms of the pavilion. President James E. Watson in the chair; Secretary, J. B. Martin.

The minutes of previous meetings were read and approved, the regular order of business taken up and disposed of. Several matters of interest to the organization were discussed at length and satisfactorily settled.

Officers for the ensuing year were then elected as follows: President, A. F. Banningartner, San Francisco; Vice-President, C. A. Sumner, Los Angeles; Secretary, J. B. Martin, San Francisco; Treasurer, George Debenham, San Francisco. Board of Directors: Messrs. W. H. McFee, H. H. Curton, H. W. Fores, of Alameda; J. B. Mitchell, Los Angeles; Dr. K. A. Furguson, of Bakersfield; A. L. Cresswell and Robert Liddle, of San Francisco.

Visit.

J. O. Miller, Bakersfield, Cal., has bred White Rose, fox-terrier bitch by Blemton Shiner ex Popcorn, to J. B. Martin's Blemton Reefe, by Champion Venio ex Champion Rachel, upon April 25th.

Mr. Henry Huber's pointer dog Glenbeigh to same owner's Champion Sally Brass II on April 25th.

Names Claimed.

Echo Cocker Kennel, Stockton, Cal., A. C. Davenport, proprietor, claims the name of OLA E. for black Cocker Spaniel dog puppy, whelped January 29, 1893, by Bronta, A. K. C. S. B., 17,064 (ch Brant, A. K. C. S. B., 5,856 ex Moller), ex Bell Dot E.

Whelps.

E. M. Taylor's English setter bitch Lottie D. (Kittles Luke—Nellie), whelped May 3d, eight, three dogs to T. J. Wattson's Starlight W. 28,542.

"The Los Angeles dog show seems to have attracted considerable attention to the Pacific slope says Forest and Stream. The entries numbered 187, and the attendance is said to have been unusually good. As there were no regular prizes, merely club diplomas or ribbons at this show, it speaks well for the fanciers' instinct which had so many owners of good dogs to strive for the empty honors regardless of the expenses they incurred. A number of San Francisco dogs were in evidence and it is to be hoped that this good feeling will be reciprocated at the show which takes place at the latter city this week." Los Angeles did her part handsomely at the show in this city last week. It is the desire of San Francisco kennel men to secure good dogs and help their neighbors do the same.

ROD.

The Angler's Sweetheart.

By GUY HERNE.

Dame Nature loves to don her fairest dress,
Too woo the angler in his solitude;
Her every attitude is a caress,
To glory for him each transient mood.
For him with lucent gold she doth array
The royal arches of the auroral day.
All spread before his eyes,
Her rose-tipped fabrics drape the morning skies
Like hosts of shining orisons,
Who ceaseless chant adoring orisons,
And tier on tier in pomp and pomp arise
And through the inviolate walls of paradise.
Her smiling mouth, perennially young,
Breathes the first sigh of morning through his hair.
Her fragrant lips meet his: he sipping there
A sweet fruit-flavor, cool upon the tongue.
She thrills with life the faltering pulse of age,
And lengthens out the measure of his days;
To him she yields her choicest heritage,
And woos him to her pleasant waterways.
Each hour new charms she shows from morn till eve,
And, when reluctant be her arms doth leave,
Fulfills his humblest as his loftiest wish,
And sends him home with basket full of fish.

Dooley's and Rattlesnake Creek.

"Why don't you go and fish Rattlesnake Creek?"

The proposition sounded rather startling, for the name was not pleasant, nor did it seem any more encouraging when we were told that Panther Creek flowed into the other one with the snakey name, says George H. Payson, in The American Angler. Our champion pedestrian does not pretend to be much of a trout fisherman. He does not aspire to the delusive fly as a means to entice the wary trout from his native pool, but is content to sit on a comfortable log and drown worms to attain the desired end; and consequently we put considerable confidence in his statement that he had found the trout remarkably numerous in these streams when he had visited them, a couple of seasons before. He described the region to us as being utterly wild, and the forests untouched by the woodman's axe, and it was no wonder that we soon enthused to such a degree that, to our extorted imaginations, the trout became so thick in these mysterious streams that they fairly jostled one another for lack of room. Of course we immediately agreed to go in search of the creeks with the uncomfortable names. Enthusiasm on the subject, and actually getting to the spot, however, were two very different performances, and we discovered that we would fully earn any trout we caught. But our zeal was only fired by difficulties, and the next afternoon saw us leaving camp, amid the sarcastic remarks of some of our company and the encouraging ones of the more hopeful.

The old gravity road running from Hawley to Scranton was our first objective point, and a walk of a couple of miles brought us to "No. 13," our starting place. An hour of novel coasting brought us to Dunmore, where the valley narrows to a deep ravine, and the mountains rise up holdly on either hand, rugged and massive. Down at the bottom, far below us, flowed Roaring Brook, and just then its name seemed rather a misnomer, for we could but faintly hear its silvery ripple over the rocky bed, but when the spring rains pour down the mountain sides, it doubtless does full justice to its noisy title. On the other side of the ravine we found a comfortable little inn, the Nay-Aug House, perched on the hillside overlooking the valley.

As our trip had but just begun, we looked very respectable at this early stage of it, although our fishing costume told our errand at once, so the landlord welcomed us with smiles, and showed us a comfortably furnished room, on the first floor, opening on the piazza, where we sat after a good supper, and enjoyed the magnificent view that stretched out before us.

We hunted up the proprietor and interviewed him regarding Rattlesnake Creek. How far was it? Which road did we take? His ideas seemed very vague on the subject. The road across the valley was the one, but the distance he did not know; it might be anywhere from five to ten miles. He had never heard of anybody fishing that creek, and he didn't think it was much of a "crick" anyway. Why didn't we stay there and fish Roaring Brook, right in front of the house? There was good fishing there. But we were not to be turned from our plans, so he finally gave us up in disgust, and evidently regarded us as a pair of idiots to get tramping off to an unknown stream, when there was fishing at our very door. If this did not confirm him in that belief, our request for breakfast at 4 A. M. certainly did.

"No, sir," he said emphatically, "there ain't no getting breakfast at 4 o'clock, not much."

It did seem a good deal to expect from a man who was not filled with enthusiasm, and who did not care about catching trout. A compromise was finally effected, and he agreed to have some provisions on the table, and gave us permission to get off as early as we chose in the morning, provided that we didn't wake anybody up at unearthly hours.

We stole down stairs in our stocking feet, like a pair of timid burglars, and found some bread and crackers and a pitcher of milk on the office table waiting for us. It was a dyspeptic-looking repast to take at that hour, and not a remarkably good preliminary to a long tramp and a day's fishing.

As we dragged our chilly legs over the stony road, and, with shivers running down our backs, were longing for the genial rays of the sun to thaw us out, our spirits sank lower and lower, and our conversation took a turn that was funereal in its gloominess. We began to wonder where Dooley's was, as the time and the distance slowly went by, and no house that answered to the description came in sight.

We decided, under the circumstances, not to stay to breakfast, and so pulled our belts a little tighter, to keep the crackers in place, and departed, pursued by the snarling dogs, but little wiser for our call.

The morning sun was doing its best to beautify a landscape that man had done his best to make dismal, for our way led over a large burnt tract, plentifully covered with blackberry bushes, a rough but kindly mantle that Nature spreads over the land to obliterate in part the traces of man's destroying hand.

The burnt region was decidedly monotonous to walk through, and it seemed to be interminable. The two miles had certainly stretched themselves into four before we saw a house. The owner was leaning against the door post, with his hands in his pockets, vigorously chewing tobacco, and regarding the prospect of burnt stumps, rocks and hrambles with a discouraged visage.

We put on the most cheerful smiles we could muster up in our enfeebled condition, and politely inquired how far it was to Rattlesnake Creek. The man regarded us languidly a moment, shifted his feet a little so as to get a good footing before drawing on his energy for a reply, deluged the nearest stump with a flood of tobacco juice, and slowly answered, "Bout two miles," and relapsed into melancholy silence.

This was rather startling information. Evidently we were in a mysterious country, whose distances could not be reduced by walking, or were we chasing an imaginary creek that was always two miles away from us? It began to look so. But no amount of questioning could elicit any more definite information from our tired friend, whose topographical information seemed to be bounded by his stone walls, so we had him good morning, and trudged on for a mile or so further without seeing any stream, or any place where one could be hidden, so we stopped at a house and renewed our search for information. It was a woman whom we asked this time, and she looked rather amused at our question, or it might have been at our appearance.

"Well," she said, in reply, "it's about two miles to the creek."

"See here, madam," we exclaimed, "this thing is getting serious. We have been walking ever since daylight in search of that stream, and it is always two miles off." Now, is there really any Rattlesnake Creek?"

It seemed to strike her as quite funny, although we were not in the condition to appreciate the joke.

"Oh!" yes," she replied, "there is, for my husband is cutting logs for the mills over there."

"Mills!" we gasped. "Do you mean to say there are mills on Rattlesnake Creek?"

"Why, to be sure," said she. "They've run a railroad in there now, and there are several mills and a big logging camp."

We went back to the roadside and sat down to wrestle with the situation. If our champion pedestrian had been there then, the outlook would have been bad for him. But, having come so far, there was nothing to do but go on, so we followed the rough, stony road over the hill, and through the woods, where already we could see the traces of the chopper, and frequently hear the sound of his axe in the distance, followed by the dull crash of the falling tree. Presently we saw one of these deviators trimming off the branches of a prostrate hemlock, and we hailed him with the question that was beginning to sound a trifle monotonous:

"How far to Rattlesnake Creek?"

He looked meditative an instant, and, leaning on his axe handle, looked us over carefully before replying. Then he commenced in that ominous phrase:

"Well, it's about —"

"See here," we interrupted, "you're not going to say it's two miles, are you? If you do, there'll be trouble."

"No," he said, "it's only about half a mile, down in that hollow, yonder. You won't get much fishing, though," he continued, "for the stream is full of sawdust from the mills, and the trout are about cleaned out. If you want to catch any, you'll have to go three or four miles up above the mills, where Panther Creek comes in."

A few minutes' walk took us down into the hollow, and at last we saw Rattlesnake Creek. But how different from what our imagination had pictured! Where was the mighty forest that hid its waters from the sunlight? Gone! and in its place rows of jagged stumps and fallen trunks, through which arid desert rusted the creek, choked with logs and debris from the mills. In front of us was a long row of rough hemlock shanties, squalid and dirty. A big steam saw mill was working up the great logs, which several teams were bringing in from the woods, into heavy planks, and pouring a stream of chips and sawdust into the water below. In the distance was a large gang of men, leveling the roadbed for the new rails, and a construction train was pulling and snorting over the uneven track, and a husier, more noisy sport we could hardly have found if we had started out for that express purpose.

We sat down on some logs, utterly used up and discouraged, and a wandering small boy, seeing two city chaps in the blues, came and looked at us curiously. The native small boy, if he be at all wide-awake, is generally an interesting subject, and this one proved no exception to the rule. He regarded it as a huge joke that we should have left the fishing at Dunmore and tramped away over here for nothing, and, from an outsider's point of view, he was about right. He soon scattered any lingering hopes we had of finding a quiet hit of stream, for the whole region was being opened up, and logging was going on all along the creek.

But we came to fish, and fish we did, wading around through the sawdust, getting our shoes full of the rough stuff, and spending most of our time picking our flies from the floating chips, so it was rather surprising that we actually caught a few small trout under such circumstances. An hour or so of this questionable sport finished us, and tired nature gave way. We crawled under some bushes, ate the few crackers that were left from our morning's supply, and fell asleep from sheer exhaustion, and it was late in the afternoon before we awoke to the fact that ten long miles of rough road lay between us and the Noy-Aug House. If the distance seemed long in the morning, it was interminable on the return trip, and it was a pair of very bedraggled, dispirited and worn-out wrecks that slowly limped up to the hotel door at Dunmore, late that evening, too utterly tired to care for anything. The landlord regarded us with a grim smile. He looked at our dusty legs, our empty creels and our dejected appearance. He sized us up carefully, and concluded that we were a risky pair of customers, with no salable baggage, and forthwith moved us from our comfortable room, and put us up under the roof, and our spirits were too broken even to expostulate.

We spent the night catching, in our troubled dreams, all sorts of horrid monsters, that ate fried pork and swam around among logs, and chased us over fallen trees, until it was a relief to wake up and get rested, and it was a sadder, if not a wiser pair of fishermen, that left the next morning for our camp on Jones' Lake.

THE GUN.

The World's Fair Shoot.

There now appears to be a very poor outlook for having any tournament at the World's Columbian Exposition worthy of the time and place. Dissentions seem to have arisen which bid fair to leave this splendid opportunity practically unoccupied. Will the sportsmen of Chicago so allow it to remain? It would seem that something should be done in order to present a programme worthy to be designated as a World's Tournament. As the matter now stands the proposition is for any one to go to Chicago and shoot for just whatever the sportsmen may see fit to contribute to the pools. This is a World's Tournament with a vengeance. The sportsmen over the country could meet at their own convenience and shoot under the same encouraging conditions.

It is a sad commentary on the conditions of sportsmanship in America that an adequate amount of money has not long since been hung up in purses for a grand tournament at Chicago at some time during the progress of the Exposition. But such is life.

The "hot shot" that has been fired ament this subject in Forest and Stream should have stirred up the energies of the powers that be at the "Windy City," but it would seem that no good has come of it.

If you take your gun to Chicago you will have a chance to put up your money and shoot for it just as you are at liberty to do at any time and place. It is never too late to do good, but is there any organized disposition to do it, in this matter? We fear that there is little hope for a favorable outcome to this matter.

The California Wing Shooting Club.

On Sunday last the California Wing Shooting Club met at Oakland Track for their regular monthly recreation. The attendance of shooters were small but some excellent shooting was done by some of those present.

The birds was a good lot and many were the swift flyers that were liberated from the traps.

The score stood as follows:
Edward Fay..... 2 2 2 2 1 1 1 2 2 2 2 2-12
"Slide"..... 0 0 1 1 1 2 1 1 1 1 2 1-10

Pool shooting was then indulged in for some time. Mr. Fay shot at 100 birds during the day, killing 92 of that number in good form. For two years Mr. Fay has been practicing his present style of shooting, which we have often had occasion to commend. As all know who have seen him shoot, he fires a quick first following the same by a well-nigh instantaneous second.

This is the style that wins when one has accustomed themselves to it. A deferred "second" is all too often the cause of losing the bird from the fact that it has passed beyond the point where the gun makes a killing pattern. It requires a great amount of practice to shoot well in this manner, but it is the only way in which a better than 80 per cent. record can be made. If you want to make a good record you must shoot quick enough to catch the swift drivers before they get well under way.

It Was a "Goose-Egg" Victory.

Nothing is so certain as uncertainty; nothing is more interesting and novel than the unexpected. When the current of events runs counter to all well-nigh, universal predictions the outcome, the results, furnish food for reflection. Surprises must expend their force before one is enabled to accommodate themselves to the new environments which consist of unlooked for developments.

It is not often that matches at the trap develop so many surprising features as that witnessed on Saturday last when the Country Club's picked team of ten men met like a number of picked men from the Alameda Gun Club to contest for honors in a match at which each man was to fire at fifteen birds. The preliminaries being arranged, they met at 2 o'clock P. M. on the day above mentioned at Oakland Shooting Park under conditions most favorable, as far as outward or observable features were concerned, for shooting a good match.

The match was good enough, if the evenness of shooting govern the judgment, but if skill in shooting be the standard of judgment, then the match must be rated as a very poor one.

We favor, however, the former element as a standard in recording our judgment on this event and have no hesitancy in saying that it was, on the whole, one of the most interesting events ever held at the trap in this vicinity. The birds were an average lot, many of them being very swift ones. A good breeze favored the outgoing birds and they lost no time in taking advantage of it, wheeling away in fine form, eluding the aim of most of the sportsmen very frequently.

As the score of this match attests, the shooting on the whole, to use a current and forcible word of description, was "rotten." If the intangible "goose eggs" produced on this occasion could be placed in an imaginary incubator the air would soon be filled with invisible "honkers" as most of the "eggs" were as perfect specimens as one usually sees.

It will ever remain a mystery to most of the sportsmen engaged in this event, as to how and why, they missed so many birds. It would be a safe wager to lay, if the same match were to be shot to-day, that the shooting of each club would be from 20 to 25 per cent. above that of last Saturday, as the scores, on the whole, are far below those usually made by the gentlemen participating. Each club was provided with a scorer. C. W. Kyle, referee.

The scores of each frame were announced as made and when the first three "twenty-birds" had been shot at and the Country Club stood six birds ahead of the Alamedas, every body predicted that the first above mentioned club would have what is currently termed a "walk over." But subsequent events proved this impression to be premature. Why? Why, because. That is the best reason that can be given. The Alamedas are to be congratulated on their lusterless victory. Why? Because it was a "goose-egg" victory. But what matters, every body was happy and more genuine fun was derived from the match than if each team had killed 85 per cent. of the birds fired at.

The first match of these series was won by the Country Club last year, when the scores were very much higher than those obtaining in the match shot on last Saturday.

Mr. A. C. Tubbs for the Country Club led in the shooting doing some very commendable work, scoring 13 out of a possible 15 kill. Mr. Charles Lainer scored an equal number on behalf of the Alamedas. The score.

* Dead out of bounds.

This necessitates another match in order to decide the final winners of the series. This will probably be shot off some time this season.

The San Francisco Gun Club will hold its regular annual picnic in Ross Valley, near Tamalpais, on Tuesday, May 30.

The Recreation Gun Club holds its regular monthly match to-morrow at Oakland Shooting Park.

The Alamedas hold their regular monthly match at Oakland Shooting Park to-day.

The birds furnished so far this season at the traps have been of excellent quality.

The Dog.

"In life the firmest friend,
The first to welcome and the foremost to defend,
Whose honest life is all his master's own,
Who fights, lives and breathes for him alone."

So sang Byron and so thinks every true lover of man's steadfast friend. Pictures of dogs from the toy pet to the gigantic mastiff, charming and characteristic sylvan scenes showing the pointers, setters, retrievers and spaniels as they appear at work in the field. Pictures that are at once ornaments and educators; these with countless other works of art, a view of any one of which will well repay one for a visit will be seen and courteously shown to any one interested by visiting the art rooms of Sanborn, Vail & Co., 741-745 Market St.

At the Oakland Track.

The fences and buildings which "fringe" this famous course have just received a new coat of whitewash and everything has a lily-white hue. Mr. Ben Wright has spared neither money nor time to make it one of the best racecourses in the State. He has had a new inside track made on which the horses can be exercised while the main course is being prepared for the races. The betting pavilion has been furnished with a number of booths in which the "odds shouters" can ply their vocation during the 156 days' meeting soon to commence here. The stalls have all been repaired and a gang of laborers are cleaning the avenues and passage-ways between them. The pathway through the vegetable garden will be closed and a straight path to a neat station on the railroad is contemplated. The only one who has a string of trotters at present at the track is J. H. Crow, although a large number of Oakland people can be seen jogging their youngsters on the circular course every morning.

The first one looked at is the stallion Anteeo Jr., 2:25½, sire of Hailstorm, 2:25. This is an Electioneer all over, and is one of those evenly-made, strongly-built horses it is a pleasure to look at either in the stable or on the track. He will get a mark close to 2:20 this fall.

Sidwood, the handsome daughter of Sidney that got a mark of 2:18 as a three-year-old in the adjoining stall. Her dam is called Lynn, by Lynwood, and is now at the Valensin Stock Farm. She belongs to Judge W. E. Greene, of Oakland. The three-year-old St. Nicholas colt next looked at is the best one of this horse's get we have seen, and there are very few green trotters that have a license to beat him. His dam was a thoroughbred.

A Sidney mare of a daughter of John Nelson is also in the row of stalls. She is a promising trotter, but very little has been done with her. One of Mr. Crow's pets is called Jakey Holmes, by Redwood, 2:27, out of Lady Sherman, by Sherman. This fellow is a trotter, and a good one, too. "De boys had better keep dere eyes on Jakey when de hell gets a-ringin'," said the admiring colored attendant as he carefully adjusted the blanket on the colt.

In the next stall is a mare that will always pay for her feed and a little bit more in the races, and when her hike days are over will be invaluable in the harem, and that is the beautiful bay mare Electrina, 2:23½, by Richard's Elector, dam Stemwinder, 2:30½ (dam of Directum, 2:11½, the greatest living race stallion of his age). Electrina has filled out and looks much stronger than she did last fall; she is a beautiful mare. This year, as she seems to be very speedy, it would not surprise us if she gets a very low record. Her owner, John Green, says he wants no tin-cup marks.

Mountain Boy is the name of the sire of the intelligent-looking, dark brown colt that has for a dam the great broodmare Pansy (dam of Almonition, 2:24½, and King Orry, 2:23½). This youngster belongs to J. Adams, of Oakland, and if ever a man ought to be proud of a trotter he has a right to be.

The Dawn colt, Examiner, owned by General Fine, of Santa Rosa, was next inspected. He is "fast as the proverbial bullet" and will add his name to that of the other sons and daughters of Harry Agnew's horse that will get in the list this fall.

Chas. Babb has sent his gray pacer Pet to lengthen Mr. Crow's string. She is a nicely made mare and will be seen at the Breeders' spring meeting.

There is in an adjoining stall a horse by Richards' Elector out of a mare by Hambletonian 725. He is peculiarly shaped, in fact, was foaled that way, but he can trot fast and never seems to tire. He is from Los Angeles but will be seen on the circuit here this fall.

Judge W. E. Greene's Sidney filly, called Croppy, is turning out just as we predicted last year, a sensible, pure-gaited, strong-moving, fast and consistent trotter. She will make friends wherever she is, and in a race she will never be anywhere but in the lead.

Mr. Crow has all of his horses looking and feeling well, and on the circuit this year he will be seen piloting a number of them to victory.

Studebaker Carriage Repository.

On the corner of Tenth and Market streets, in this city, is one of the largest and most complete carriage and wagon repositories in the United States. It is owned by the famous Studebaker Bros. The building is of pressed brick, and is very handsome, and from the time the visitor steps inside the large bronze doors until he returns, the many specimens of carriage makers' skill there will absorb all his attention. There is not a vehicle known, from a dump cart to a sulky, nor from a platform spring country wagon to a $2,500 carriage that is not on exhibition. The five rooms are 90x140 each, and the vehicles are classified according to their quality. At the entrance is one of the latest and best-made pneumatic sulkies ever manufactured. It is called "The Frazier latest improved." It is a marvel of lightness, strength and beauty, and will at once commend itself to all practical horsemen and drivers as the finest thing of the kind ever shown here. There is no doubt that a number of orders will be given for these forty-two-pound vehicles.

The people of this State who have never had an opportunity of seeing the very latest styles of traps, landaus, carriages, apiders, tally-ho coaches, wagonettes, buggies, dog carts and houches, should call and be convinced that for excellence of workmanship, beauty of design and artistic taste shown, this display surpasses that of any other in this State; we doubt if it is excelled at the Chicago fair. On the first floor is displayed the finest lot of harness, blanketing, robes, etc., on the Coast. The room in which these articles are kept is a model of neatness and convenience. Mr. Ames, the superintendent, takes great pleasure in speaking of the advantages of this as well as the other rooms in the building. On the second floor a full line of Frazier sulkies and carts are shown, buggies, spring wagons, coupes, carriage and park rigs. The third floor contains a large number of vehicles made exclusively for the country trade. We noticed the men preparing three spring wagons for shipment to Central America here. On the fourth floor are farm wagons and heavier vehicles used in the country. One portion of this floor is used exclusively for the exhibition of the celebrated Studebaker watering carts. Almost every race track in America has one, while all of the cities of any size have these sprinklers in use on their streets and park roads.

On one side of the room and enclosed with an air-tight dust-proof partition is the painting room. Here a number of men were busily engaged painting and varnishing vehicles. Across the building and directly opposite is the carriage trimmers' apartment. In the cellar, all goods are unpacked, and here were all the component parts of vehicles separated from each other in bins; wheels, axles, shafts, bodies, tongues, covers, etc., all arranged systematically. From cellar to roof everything about the immense place has been arranged with a view to show the various articles in a proper manner. System and cleanliness seemed to be the prevailing rules, and the courtesy of the salesmen makes a visit to this splendid establishment one not only long to be remembered, but also teaches the visitor that great perfection has been reached in the manufacture of "everything on wheels."

The Northern Circuit.

The preparations being made by the officers and directors of the northern circuit for their race meetings this fall speak volumes for their enterprise. The dates claimed by them will receive the endorsement of every horseman there. Commencing August 1st with a five days' meeting at Woodland; the horses, with their hicks, will go on to swell the numbers at Willows, thence to Red Bluff, Chico and Marysville, and wind up with the State Fair. Many will follow on and go to Stockton, San Jose, Vallejo and the Breeders' fall meeting. These places are all alive and wide awake. The class of horses that will compete in the various events are known as all-day horses, and as many of the greatest campaigners have come from this rich agricultural country, it would not surprise us if the year 1893 will be noted as the Columbian year for the greatest surprises seen on the turf, and they will come from the paddocks, fields and meadows of Colusa and Yolo counties.

At Woodland there are at present some seventy-five horses at the track in training, and still there are more to come. To accommodate them seventy-five additional box-stalls have been built this spring. With the one hundred and fifty already there it will place the course in the first rank. Under the supervision of one of the best track superintendents in this State, the course is absolutely perfect. No complaints of horses "becoming sore" are heard, and every one of the drivers seems anxious to have his horses "ready when the bell rings." There will be fast time made on this, and in fact all of the tracks on this circuit. The people in this section have been liberal patrons of the sales in Sonoma, San Mateo and Santa Clara counties, and have established some excellent stock farms, and the colts and fillies they will bring to the races will compare favorably with any in this State.

Many of our horsemen who have never been on this circuit have already signified their intention of going this year. The hotel accommodations are first-class, the people hospitable and a welcome is accorded every visitor.

The Lompoc Races.

Quite a number of our people attended the races at Lompoc on May Day, and our representative reports a good time and lots of people to enjoy it. The people of Lompoc and Santa Rita valleys turned out en masse for a good time and they had it. The day was perfect and every one seemed bent on having the best time possible. The town was crowded all day long and the ball at night was a grand affair.

The races were fairly well patronized and those who were there enjoyed it as much or more than though it had been one of the regular circuit meetings for the reason that the races were well run and honestly won and those who take special interest in such matters got a good many "pointers" which they are confident they can use to good advantage during the coming fall races.

The following tally was kept by our representative who was on the ground during the entire races: The first was a three-quarter dash, between Dolly West, Lost Sister, Bay Dave, May D., each carrying 119 pounds weight. The result: Bay Dave first, May D. second, Dolly West third, Lost Sister fourth. Time, 1:23½.

The second race was a three in five trot, three-minute class and first money ($120) was won by W. S. Lierly's horse Excelsior in three straight heats. Time, 3:03, 3:00, 3:02½.

The third was a two-in-three trot for two-year-olds, and was won in two straight heats by Aberdeen, driven by Mr. Ranu, Boc, driven by DeRome, second, and Farewell driven by McMann, third. Time, 3:47.

The fourth race was a half mile dash for two-year-olds, won by Florida in 0:52½.

On the second day both the races and the attendance was better, but the proceeds were too small to justify giving full purses as advertised, and they were cut down in accordance. The buggy race was highly interesting, and was won in three straight heats by Buffalo in 3:02½, with Morganti B. from Santa Maria, second heat.

The second was a trotting race for two-year-olds and was won by Rainey's colt in 3:47½.

There was a mile dash between Red Jacket, Acute and Bay D., and was won by Red Jacket in 1:50. There were two exhibition heats, in which McKay's Hippolite scored a 2:38, and Parkville Dude a 2:43 gait.

The quarter mile and repeat was won by Grover in 0:25 and Garrett Blosser's mare Lily won second money.—Santa Maria Times.

A WRITER in a contemporary, after canvassing the field for the probable stallion champion of the year, and referring to Stamboul, 2:07½, Moquette, 2:10 and Directum, 2:11½, remarks: "I don't know of any stallion promising enough to beat any of the three I have designated." We have an idea, however, that when Nelson, 2:10, makes his debut on a smooth mile track and hitched to his new hick, the critics may be set agog as they were in 1890.

A MAGNIFICENT, complete set of dental instruments, the property of the late Herbert King (who met death in such a shocking manner near Pleasant last week), are for sale at this office at a very low rate, considering their original cost and excellent condition. Here is a grand opportunity for some horse dentist to secure as good a set of instruments as can be found anywhere for a ridiculously small sum.

"SNAPPER" GARRISON has been engaged to ride Banquet for Mr. Dwyer in the race for the Brooklyn Handicap.

William Mulkey's Start.

A very interesting story of Mr. Mulkey's rise in the turf world is told by a Kansas City exchange. It was at St. Joseph, Mo., while attending the races one afternoon about twenty years ago that he saw a mare belonging to John Brown, of Seneca, Kan., run the second mile of a heat race in 1:45, and at once decided to buy, paying $1,000 for her. That mare was the foundation of a stable which, in twenty years of honorable racing, has won more than a quarter of a million dollars, and although its owner has purchased many horses since that time the money that paid for all of them came from her winnings. Her name was Chiquita.

Chiquita was brought to Kansas City and placed in the hands of a trainer whose experience had been entirely with "quarter" horses. His name was Green B. Morris, and Chiquita was the first thoroughbred he handled. Morris had recently come from California, where he had been a stage driver, and was "broke, flat broke." He had gone to Mr. Mulkey, and the latter had told him he would give him his meals and "let him sleep out in the barn if he would help 'tend the horses.'" This same Green B. Morris is still training race horses, but they are his own, and his name now stands near the top of the list of successful American turfmen. Last spring his Judge Morrow won the Brooklyn Handicap, worth $20,000, and the year before his winnings for the season were $80,000.

Morris was instructed to give special attention to Chiquita, but she was a disappointment that year, and he became more interested in a mare called Pocahontas. Pocahontas was famous for her speed; no four-legged animal in the West; it was declared, could give her a race. Her reputation reached St. Louis, where Matt Allen, now a famous trainer, trained for Captain John Shaw, a horse of which he thought highly. His name was Jim Walker. A match for $250 a side was arranged to take place at the race track in the East Bottoms. Pocahontas and Jim Walker were given special preparation, and no two horses ever had trainers with greater confidence in their ability to win. Each "plunged" to his limit. Allen, besides betting every cent he had in the world, mortgaged Captain Shaw's horse and wagered the money on Jim Walker. When the hour for the race came he gathered saddles, bridles, blankets and all his stable trappings and wagered them, too. The race was run, and Pocahontas won. Green Morris made his first "killing," and Allen walked back to St. Louis.

As a five-year-old—that was in 1875—Chiquita was taken East with Henry Avis, who had been with Mr. Mulkey long before that time, and who is with him yet, in charge. At Jerome Park she won the Fordham Handicap of later days in the fastest time for a mile and a quarter ever made on the track. Chiquita won many other races in the East, defeating the best horses of the day. Before her retirement Lucifer, a son of the great Leamington and Lady Motley, was added to the stable, having been purchased from Mr. Pierre Lorillard for $1,000. After a creditable career, East and West, he broke down as a five-year-old and is now the premier on the Mulkey farm, near Lexington, Mo. His son, Joquita, was a good race horse and added luster to his name and to the name of his dam, the famous Chiquita, whose only offspring he was.

After Lucifer, Topsy reigned as the star of the Mulkey stable. She was a little brown mare, by The Ill Used—Black Slave, and was bred by Mr. Pierre Lorillard. Topsy was one of the best race horses that ever represented Missouri on the Eastern tracks, and a bright page in the history of the stable is her defeat of the mighty Parole. Parole years ago returned from his victories abroad, where his stable companions, Iroquois and Foxhall, had won the English Derby and Grand Prix. Topsy met Parole in a handicap at Monmouth Park. The great Monitor was also in the race. In the betting Parole was the favorite, Monitor second choice, and "the little runt from Missouri," as they called Topsy, scarcely thought of. It was a bruising race and a head and head finish between Parole, Topsy and Monitor, but Topsy had her head in front. The mighty Parole had been beaten, and by "the little runt from Missouri."

It was no "luke," for she defeated many of the Eastern cracks, among them Eole, and once raced George Kinney to a head. Topsy died on the Mulkey farm, near Lexington, Mo., a few years ago. Her only progeny was Top Gallant, an animal of fair quality.

Other thoroughbreds that have carried the maroon and white of the stable to victory many times are: Rosalie, who had the record of one mile and a furlong for three years; Belle of the West, Jim Nave, Jim Carlisle, Hotachomie, Le Premier, twice a Derby winner and, the great Western Handicap, winner Verge d'Or.

The Mulkey stable has a reputation for honesty that few racing firms possess. When a horse bearing its colors is in a race, speculators do not inquire; "Is he meant?" or "Do they want to win?" They ask: "Does Henry think he can win?" And by "Henry" they mean plain, honest Henry Avis, whose ability as a trainer has been one great factor in the success of the stable. In racing, as in everything else, "honesty is the best policy." It has certainly been a paying policy for the Mulkey stable, for, as Mr. Mulkey says, "Henry has brought home for $2,000 to $26,000 every year."

Again this year the maroon and white will be found battling for the prizes of the Western turf. The horses have been shipped to Memphis for their early spring work, and from Memphis they will "go up the line." The stable this year is composed of:

Verge d'Or, blk h. 6, by Virginia—Golden Slipper.

REMARKING the reinstatement of Frank Van Ness by the American Trotting Association at Chicago last week, the Inter-Ocean had the following to say: "When Van Ness was expelled he was driving for Joe Emerick, and the allegation against him was that he entered a horse under the assumed name of Lexington Chief Jr., out of his class at Kansas City, St. Louis, and Dallas, Texas. In his testimony before the Board the strangest point developed was his assertion that at the time of his being ruled off he was driving for Emerick; that the latter sent him the horse in question for entry, and that he carried out his instructions in entire ignorance of the fact upon which his expulsion was based." The truth of this statement was believed by the Board with the result already stated.

California as a Racing Center.

It looks very much as if California, taken all in all, will be from this time forth the greatest State for racing in America, if indeed not the world. From the far East comes reliable information to the effect that the managers of the New Jersey, Illinois and Indiana winter race meetings have at last capitulated to their enemies, the legislators and the mass of humane people that have protested against the racing over icy tracks, in blood-freezing weather, of a lot of broken-down dogs that have earned lives of quietude on their inhuman masters' farms. This being the case, it is apparent that in two places only can winter racing be conducted humanely and successfully (from a financial standpoint)—San Francisco and New Orleans. And these cities alone will have next winter such meetings as no one in this portion of the world ever imagined they could have. The indications are that Bay District track and vicinity will shelter at that time at least 1,000 race horses, and there will doubtless be seven or more races each day.

It is to be regretted that the Blood Horse Association is not going ahead in the work of raising money enough to purchase a suitable tract of land whereof they could erect grand stands, stables, etc., that would be a credit to this great, wealthy city and its sport-loving inhabitants. The fact is patent that the accommodations at Bay District track are not at the present in keeping with the organization. There should be a new grand stand, capable of seating at least 15,000 people, with a restaurant and other attachments that would be joys forever. We note that 30,000 persons saw the Kentucky Derby run last Wednesday at Louisville, Ky., a city of perhaps 200,000 inhabitants. Where could we put 30,000 persons so that they could see a race? Why, 15,000 spectators within the gates at Bay District track would take up every inch of available space, and at present there is not seating capacity for over 3,500, we should say, at a reasonable estimate. Therefore, with the carrying on of a racing meeting next winter on the scale of magnificence intended, with two or three thousand visitors (horsemen, speculators and searchers for health) from the country east of the Rockies, it can at once be seen that plenty of work must be done within the next five months if the old Bay District is to be made fit for the accommodation of man and galloper. Let us hope that we shall have a new track, grand stands, stables, etc., BELONGING TO THE ASSOCIATION, by the time the bell rings for the first race of next winter's meeting at San Francisco.

To the present management, however, the greatest credit is due for bringing racing on this Coast up to its present high standard of excellence, and to Thomas H. Williams, the Blood Horse Association's most energetic officer, the greatest portion of praise is due. We have seen in the past few years wonderful changes for the better. The inaugural move in the right direction (recommended strongly months before in a series of articles in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN) was the employment of a professional starter that knew his business thoroughly. Formerly fields of over five were seldom dispatched within half an hour, and those vexatious waits and the poor flagmanship did much to disgust our people with the sport of kings. Then a little coterie of hookmakers in this city used to make hooks that would shame the paid off a wooden Indian's face. Copper-bottomed "cinch" odds hardly express the airtightness of the "hooks" made on races of former days. Where four or five years ago 10 to 1 was about the largest odds offered on a rank outsider, 100 to 150 to 1 are now given. The jockeys used to virtually ride over the starter, and when that official would fine or suspend a "fresh" horse-pilot, the Board of Directors generally remitted the fine and set aside the suspension. Games of "chance" (small ran riot directly in front of the grandstand, in full view of the occupants of the ladies' stands, and the costumes of the riders were about as handsome and cleanly as the face of the average Digger Indian. The judges were formerly selected, for the most part, from the ranks of the Majors, politicians and capitalists—good fellows generally, with little knowledge of racing rules, and altogether too lenient and short-sighted. All this has been changed; everything is run well and will be improved with each succeeding meeting beyond all doubt.

A MEETING of representatives from all the associations on the main California Circuit will be held at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, next Wednesday, May 17th, at 1 o'clock P. M., to take action on the selection of dates for the fall meetings and arrange other matters that may be brought forward. It is necessary that delegates be given authority, by the directors of the various associations which they represent to ACT AT ONCE.

Attractive in Various Ways.

From Shasta to Los Angeles and from the Sierra Nevadas to the sea the interest in trotting and pacing this year seems to have taken a greater hold upon the community than ever. There is not a village, town or city where a race track is made that some young man is not seen gently coaxing along some well-bred youngster that has shown evidences of a speed inheritance and implants a hope in his trainer that it will be in the front rank of a field of horses this fall.

"The bottom has dropped out of the business" of breeding, developing and training trotters that only can trot when "booted to elbows and stifles." The aim of all intelligent breeders seems to be to get colts and fillies that do not need so much of the "paraphernalia," and horses that have crooked hoofs, narrow chests, weak joints or bad dispositions do not pay for their handling. In the great search after extreme speed many a horse-man has gone into bankruptcy through owning one of these "speedy" animals that, when properly hooted, hobbled, balanced and hitted could go like the wind, but, if everything was not fitting well, all his chances for winning were destroyed by the fractious animal doing every thing but going as his owner intended, and just as that gentleman had wagered large sums of money he would do.

The man who would keep such an ill-shapen horse entire does not deserve to have a dollar. He is not just to the horse interests of the country; every deformed colt that comes is a reminder of this owner's folly, and no greater proof is requisite for the cessation of the breeding-on qualities of that stallion. The eraser should be used on every ill-shapen, rattle-headed colt, and the filly that inherits such "deformities" of conformation and disposition should be sold without a pedigree to some peddler of fish on the highway. The demand for a fixed type of a trotter has never been more forcibly brought to the attention of breeders than at present. In the Eastern States the classes of horses shown at the sales of trotters have caused a number of breeders to cross the briny deep and purchase hackneys and other classes of light-harness horses. They claim that outside of the California breeders very little attention has been paid to form as well as speed. As Californians, we are proud of this acknowledgment, for it's about the only credit a number of our Eastern friends accord us. The horses sent from California are noted for their size, color, beauty, style and speed, as well as the prices they bring. The judgment used by our breeders therefore, is commended.

There are many reasons for the superiority of the class of horses seen on this coast. In the early period of this State's existence, the gold fever spread into every little village and town in America, and everyone who owned a good team felt that the best way to go to the land of gold was across the continent, and forthwith they started forming large trains for protection against Indians and to save expenses. Only the very strongest roadsters survived. The "survival of the fittest" was exemplified, and if one was to ask the pioneers about the horses and mares that made this State famous through their performances and that of their progeny, how the old men's eyes would glisten, and in a most enthusiastic manner would be described the beautiful Williamson's Belmont, General Taylor, Jack Hawkins, John Nelson, Winthrop, Skenadoah, St. Clair, Old Echo, Bell A'ta, Signal, Billy Hayward, Gen. McClellan and a score of other famous horses whose names will be perpetuated on the annals of the turf as long as California will be known. These horses needed neither boots, hobbles nor weights to balance them, neither did they produce. Their limbs were like steel and their pure trotting action, level heads and superior intelligence added much to the value of their stock.

Their descendants were bred to Electioneer, Guy Wilkes, The Moor, A. W. Richmond, Director, Geo. M. Patched Jr. and other Eastern horses that came later, but were direct from the fountain head of trotting and the result, as above mentioned is, that in every village, town and city on the Coast, wherever a track is made, some good ones are in training, and there are few, very few, that are seen hooted and balanced as described. They are not bred that way. Too much inbreeding has not been indulged in. The aids to trotting, such as smooth, springy tracks, aluminum shoes, kindergartens and last, but not least, bicycle sulkies, have done much to revive the interest in the sport everywhere. The large number of young men who have taken an interest in developing trotters is also a factor not to be forgotten, and as we in California, shall have plenty of places where money will be given liberally for good racing, there need be no fear that the trotters and pacers will be forgotten. There are at least four circuits in this State; the Northern, Main, Central and Southern, he sides the meetings that will take place in Inyo and the extreme Northern counties. The earning capacity of the light harness horse was never better in California than at present. A real good trotter or pacer can win more money this year than ever before. While we do not expect to see the world's trotting record made on this Coast, (we are confident it will be captured by a California bred horse, however), we shall, have the best series of race meetings ever given, and the number of 2:20 performers that will retire to "pasture during the winter" will eclipse that of any other year. Let everyone who has a trotter make all the entries for him he can and have the horse in fit condition to trot when the bell rings. There will be large crowds of Eastern people as well as foreign visitors, who will come to California from Chicago to avoid the heat and rush of the Columbian Fair this fall to witness the races here and see our great stock farms.

The Breeder's Meeting.

Two weeks from to-day the gates of the Bay District Track are to be thrown open, the hell will ring and the officers of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will be in readiness to receive the crowds that will come to witness the inaugural trotting races of the year.

Reports are coming in from owners of horses everywhere. "Reserve stalls for my string of trotters and pacers. I want to give my horses a chance in those dash races!" says one. Another writes: "I have three good trotters and I want to get in some of those over-night events." Another says: "Let us do our best to make this the greatest trotting meeting ever held in the spring of the year in California!"

The great campaigners, Flying Jib, Directum, San Pedro, Little Albert, Truman, Advertiser, W. Wood, Our Dick, Aster, Wanda, Lindale, will be all here. The seven races during each afternoon will take place expeditiously and there will be no long waits between heats. The officers are working hard to show what can be done at this trotting meeting and no complaints, from horsemen or spectators will be heard if they can prevent them.

The over-night events will excite the curiosity of the spectators as much as it will incite the owners of horses to "get out and win." There "will be no laying up of heats" or "driving to suit the pool box." Every heat will be honestly contested, and the best horse must win. There will be novelty races also introduced that must prove attractive, and the system of dash races besides being a novelty, will also prove to be a guide for other organizations to follow, should it be successful; therefore, the eyes of all trotting horsemen in America are upon us. We must do our best to make this meeting a success. It will be, if every member assists by bringing his horses here.

The Advancement of Sportsmanship.

The recent bench show in this city admirably illustrates the tendency of the age in one of the more important lines of recreation. Everybody loves a good dog. It seems that Nature has given to the canine rare faculties so peculiarly developed as to render them man's most pleasing companions. To own a dog is to enlarge the affections, and, in the line of true sportsmanship, to be enabled to derive the greatest possible amount of pleasure from association with them.

The object which is the end of bench shows is laudable in the highest degree—that of elevating and perfecting the dog. In what manner may our leisure moments be better occupied than in developing the animal race, especially when we consider that in assisting the animal race, we are elevating ourselves?

The recent bench show was instrumental in developing the fact that the kennelmen of the Pacific Coast are in earnest in their endeavors to secure the highest possible types of the canine race. The Pavilion was crowded on each evening of the exhibition, showing that the public is in hearty sympathy with the efforts of the fancy here.

Judge Raper, of Sheffield, England, showed himself to be thoroughly familiar with the work in hand, and the fact that he won the universal respect and approval of the fancy here, shows him to be a just and able judge.

The fact that the best judges of dogs are secured, regardless of expense, to attend and place the animals properly, in accordance with the most advanced intelligence on the subject, is a warrant for the progression of dogdom.

Notwithstanding the great expense of the exhibition, the public was so generous in its patronage as to leave $1,000 in the treasury as a guarantee fund for future shows.

Death of Herbert King.

On Friday evening, May 6th, as Herbert King, superintendent of the new Macdonough farm, Pleasanton, was driving a team hitched to a load of lumber to the farm the horses became frightened at a gaily-colored wagon that passed them very rapidly and ran away, throwing Mr. King out in front of the wheels. He fell on his head, breaking his neck, and the wheels of the wagon passed over him. The horses, relieved of the pressure of the lines, ran into a telegraph pole, demolished it and came to a standstill by being tangled in the wires and wreck. The remains of the unfortunate man were conveyed to Pleasanton and an inquest held. Mr. King's son had only arrived from Minneapolis the week before, and was completely prostrated at the sudden death of his father. On Sunday the funeral took place at Livermore. His remains were followed to the grave by a number who, only a few weeks before, had welcomed him as a neighbor, and now mourned him as a dear departed friend.

Herbert King was born in Dorsetshire, England, in 1844. He received a splendid education, and spent some years in France and Germany; he then started for Australia. Here his love for horses found full scope, and he took charge of a large station near Sydney. He remained there until 1874; he came to America, and soon after purchased a number of thoroughbreds. Mr. King made trips to England, and there secured the celebrated St. Mungo (sire of Aloha) and London (sire of London Smoke and others). He was very observant, a natural student, and soon took up the study of veterinary practice, and at Denver, where he located, he became very well known. He also became the leading horse dentist in that city; but the climate, not agreeing with his family, he removed to Minneapolis. He made many friends wherever he went, and a few years ago was appointed superintendent of Garfield Park, Chicago. He remained there until the closing of that course, and then came to California. Since arriving on this Coast he pursued his vocation as a dentist very quietly. His kindly ways, gentlemanly manner and thorough knowledge of horses was appreciated, and his untimely death was a shock that those who knew him can hardly realize. He was upright in all his dealings, charitable to a fault, and never spoke ill of anyone. He never made an enemy. His son returned to Minneapolis Tuesday. Mr. King leaves a widow and three children to mourn his loss.

HOOF-BEATS.

MR. BUNN DOBLE will receive this week Campbell's Electioneer, 2:17½, from Pawtucket, R. I.

HANDLE the young foals enough to get them tame before turning them away to pasture with their dams.

THERE is more profit and far greater pleasure in raising one first-class foal than a dozen of the common sort.

FEWER in number, but of greatly improved quality is the motto of progressive breeders, and a good one it is too.

IT is claimed that Flying Morgan, when thirty years old, at the State Fair, Dayton, O., fall of 1868, paced a half mile in 1:18.

THE Rancho del Paso yearlings start for New York from the Arcade next Sunday. There are over 150 of the youngsters.

THE owners of Guy, 2:06½, have placed a chip on their shoulder, and defy the owner or owners of any pacer on earth to knock the same off.

THE Northern circuit, comprising Woodland, Willows, Red Bluff, Chico and Marysville, will commence at Woodland August 1st and follow in the order named—a week at each place.

MISS FLUSH, by imp. Kyrle Daly—Little Flush, foaled a very handsome chestnut filly by Major Ban last week on the old Winters place, near Sacramento. The mare belongs to a young gentleman of this city.

JOCKEY REAGAN rode the winner of every race at Lexington, Ky., on the 5th inst., five in number—Oliver at 2 to 1, Rook Laidley at 11 to 5, Puryear D. at even money, Zophill at 8 to 5 and Pittsburg at 3 to 1.

COL. S. D. BRUCE, of New York, compiler of the American Stud Book for thoroughbreds, is now in Lexington. He stated to a newspaper man that he had sold the Stud Book for $75,000, but did not say to whom he had sold it.

B. C. HOLLY, of Floden, has sold to Reuben Clark, of Monticello, Cal., the chestnut colt, Woodside, by Woodnut, 2:16½, dam Veronica, 2:29, by Aleona 7:30; second dam Fontana (dam of Silas Skinner, 2:17, and Flora Belle, 2:25), by Almont 33. Consideration, $1,000.

HORSEMEN throughout the country will regret to learn of the death of Gen. Edward F. Beale, which occurred on the 29th ult. The General was an admirer of good horses. He bought a very handsome son of George Wilkes Jr., a few years ago, of Messrs. Barnjum Brothers, if we remember correctly.

AT the sale of the trotters of the late George I. Seney in New York Thursday, Nettie Thorne, 2:25½, by Thorndale, brought $2,000; Leo Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, out of Sahle, and consequently full brother to Sabie Wilkes, 2:18, brought only $950; Belleville, a five-year-old stallion by Epaulet, was sold for $1,000.

MR. JOHN SHEPARD, of Boston, has always had an ambition to own the fastest double team in the country, and to get a record with them. He is now looking for a mate to Arab, and, with one, he is sanguine than he can grasp the highest mark.

COLONEL WATSON PICKEREL, formerly of the United Agricultural Department, recently from Beatrice, Neb., made us a pleasant visit last Thursday. The Colonel is an enthusiast on the trotter, and is visiting California's leading breeding establishments.

THE much-talked-of trade between Senator Stanford and the Czar of Russia for Orloff trotters, must have fallen through for nothing has been heard of it for some time. The Czar's representative returned to Russia some months ago without making any selection.

MR. WICKHAM, who bred Boston, sold him to Mr. Timothy Rives, of Richmond, for $800, the exact sum that the latter gentleman had won at a game of cards. Mr. Rives then named the son of Timoleon after the game of cards which had brought him success. The supposition that the great chestnut was named after the city of Boston is a common error.

METUCHEN is doing so well in his races and his work that he will probably be sent to Chicago along with his stable companion, Don Alouzo, to run for the American Derby, as M. F. Dwyer's "second string." Mr. Croker will probably send his filly Red Banner to the same meeting to run for the Isabella Stakes for three-year-old fillies, in which she will have to meet Lady Violet and Helen Nichols, two of the best fillies of last year.

PALO ALTO fillies are scarce; Dr. H. Latham writes as follows regarding the one his great race mare has: "Dexter Princess, 2:24½, foaled a bay filly by Palo Alto, 2:08½, last Sunday morning, May 7th. In form, color, style and finish it is an exact copy of the sire. There is one exception to the likeness, however, as the filly has unmistakable marks of 8½ seconds, more speed than Palo Alto had to his credit. Dexter Princess is to be bred to Directum, 2:11½."

THERE are some Napa Wilkes colts and fillies at Fresno and Salinas, Monterey county, that are said by the horsemen who have seen them, to be the finest-formed, best-limbed and most-promising ones they have seen. Napa Wilkes was the first yearling, by Guy Wilkes, that ever showed Mr. Corbitt phenomenal speed, but the colt was injured and never was able to be given a record. He is now standing at the low price of $30, and considering his breeding, he is the cheapest stallion standing for service in California.

DR. HASBROUCK will hardly be a starter in any of the riel handicaps of the spring for which he was entered, and for which he was thought to have a good chance. He was given a fast trial at the Gravesend track on Tuesday afternoon, May 2nd. When he was pulled up it was found that he was very lame, and the chances are that he will not be able to face the starter this year, if he ever gets into racing condition again. Dr. Hasbrouck was one of the fastest and best horses about here, and there were few sprinters that could successfully race against him. It is to be hoped that he has not broken down permanently, though this is probably the fact.

WHEN the judges of the pacing race at Lexington, October 16, 1889, asked Geers to get up behind Roy Wilkes for the third heat, L. A. Davies rushed to the reporters' stand and begged the pencil-shovers to state in their respective journals that the change was made at his request. This was a brazen falsehood, as Davies had not been consulted, and he protested against the substitution. Davies subsequently denied that he had said to the reporters that the change was made at his request, but the judges did not believe him, as the testimony of the newspaper men was clear and positive. The only mistake the judges made was in not expelling Davies and Roy Wilkes instead of letting them off with a fine of $1,000.

BERGEN has again got into trouble owing to his temper and his surly disposition. In the fourth race, in which he rode Lento, he acted so badly at the post that Mr. Rowe, the starter, fined him $250 for disobedience and had conduct generally. The jockey did not like that fine, and so when he came back to the judges' stand to weigh in he was some distance away when he asked permission to dismount. Mr. McDowell told Bergen when he went to the scales that he wished he would come up nearer the stand when he asked for permission to dismount. Bergen was surly and snapped back an answer to the effect that he would ride his horses into the judges' stand if they wanted him to, and for his impudence he was fined $100 more. Bergen seems to be getting back into the frame of mind he was in two years ago, when he had so much trouble with Starter Caldwell.

REPORTS of fast halves, and occasionally a mile, have begun to be received. It can be put down as a certainty, however, that the trainers that are now being swollen with enthusiasm over the fast clips their charges are showing will, by the time the money is ready to start for, be in an entirely different mood. There is no time of the year when good, sound judgment can be more profitably utilized by trainers than the present. It is the time of year when winter and summer are in battle one against the other for the supremacy—when one day winter with her chilling winds is in possession of the temperature, and the very next balmy summer holds full sway. Figuratively speaking, it is a time when the weather is made to order for the purpose of blasting to the four winds the pent-up and swollen hopes of both owners and drivers; when a horse can be placed in a condition of uselessness through a moment's indiscretion on the part of the trainer. No horse, no matter how carefully he may be cared for, can go fast miles during this period of changeable weather, and at the same time be sure of preserving his speed. It stands to reason that he is more liable to contract colds and other ailments. Therefore the wise trainer, the one who will wear a nice, warm overcoat next winter that will be paid for from the winnings of his horses, is taking matters easy at this time and doing all he can to keep from showing fast clips. He is of the kind that can wait for the weather to settle, and when it does he will be riding so fast as to cause his less discreet brother to experience a sort of pain in his palpitating organ. Remember that there is more money in a mile in 2:20 in August than one in 2:15 in April. So patience should at this time be the chief stock in trade.—Western Horseman.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

GREATLY INTERESTED.—Many times since fixing upon California for a home for "good and all" I have been interested in horse which were "carried" across the mountains to show their capacity on Eastern tracks and Eastern racecourses. Duchess of Norfolk and others of the Norfolk—Marion family probably excited the feeling in its greatest intensity, and then Palo Alto, although there has never been a California-bred racer or trotter sent on the long journey which did not have my fervent wishes for its success. But notwithstanding the interest taken in the past there has been no diminution in the fervor, or the least shading-off in the anxiety and hopefulness that each succeeding venture may prove satisfactory, and now that Californians have gained, in so many instances, the highest places in the calendars and Year Books, there is an additional height of expectancy for them to go still further upwards.

So long as there is another round in the ladder to surmount, Excelsior! must be the motto; when that is gained, splice the sidepieces and put in new rungs. In one respect there is a greater interest felt in one band of California-bred trotters, which will have started on their Eastern journeys before this is published, that being a practical exemplification of the results of a theory I have so persistently advocated for thirty odd years. To begin with the awakening of the interest. Some time last fall an arrangement was made whereby O. A. Hickok was to take the Palo Alto trotters, which were to go East in 1893, under his charge. He was to make his selection after full trials of their merits. It is useless to spend time in arguing that a more competent man to make the selection could not be found. During his past season in the East, he saw all of the prominent candidates for future renown, and under the most favorable conditions to estimate their capacity, and no one more thoroughly recognized the magnitude of the undertaking.

Soon after the arrangement was made he began his task. Frequent visits to Palo Alto from that time, carefully noting the peculiarities of every animal which gave indications of being worthy of membership in the company. He studied them in the hands of the home trainers until thoroughly satisfied with his knowledge of what could be learned from that point of view. After that much knowledge was gained, then the letter ordeal of driving them himself.

There were changes which it is not necessary to repeat, and the seven selected, it is needless to say, is extremely gratifying to me. I may, however, be permitted to express "great" sorrow for a mistep which befel one of the earlier selections, that being an injury to the youngest son of Columbine which necessitated his withdrawal from the list.

Here they are:
Advance, bay stallion, four years old, by Electioneer, his dam Lady Amanda, by imp. Hurrah. Advance has a three-year-old race record of 2:22½. I brought his dam here and sold her to Governor Stanford; raced her successfully, and after making all allowance for favoritism feel safe in rating her high as a race horse. A half sister to Malcolm, Regent, Ontario, and sister to Lady Middleton, it must be conceded that she belongs to a racing family.

Altivo, bay stallion, three years old, by Electioneer, his dam Dame Winnie. It would surely be supererogatory to say more than that he is a brother to Palo Alto, the horse which I regarded as the greatest trotter of all, and it might be thought that it were to order any predictions they were based on this high estimate of the elder member of the family.

Expressive, bay filly, two years old, by Electioneer, her dam Esther, by Express. As Esther is the dau of Express, 2:21, and Elwina, three-year-old record 2:27½; this choice has the backing of being from a tried broodmare. Thus three of the seven are from thoroughbred dams, and the "potency" of this cross cannot be denied by the most bigoted opponent of "hot-blood" so far as form and beauty are elements to be considered.

Avena, chestnut filly, three years old, by Palo Alto, her dam Astoria, by General Benton. Avena has a two-year-old race record of 2:27, and trotted at Stockton in 2:21½, 2:19½.

Azote, 2:14½, bay gelding, seven years old, by Whips, his dam Josie, by Hambletonian 725.

Two by stallions whose dams were thoroughbred.
Elden, brown filly, four years old, by Nephew, her dam Eleanor, by Electioneer, grandam Sally Gardner (thoroughbred), by Vandal. Elden trotted at Oakland in a race in 2:23½ and at Stockton in 2:19½.

Six of the seven close, very close, to the thoroughbred, the furthest off being a grandam, and the seventh a member of one of the greatest families of trotters, which cannot be denied by anyone who has a spark of candor in his composition. That is Sweet Rose, two-year-old filly, by Electioneer, her dam Rosemont, by Piedmont; second dam the renowned Beautiful Bells. There is scarcely a doubt that if the rains had held off a couple of weeks longer, that she would have gained the yearling record and that on a regulation track. She marked 2:30 in a race at Oakland, and at Stockton she made 2:25½.

It cannot be charged that the selections were due to sentiment, as those who know Mr. Hickok are well aware that he is eminently practical, and he is so full of the "courage of his convictions" in this case that he preferred to take them for a moiety of their winnings than a certainty in the shape of a fixed amount. When I learned that the choice had been decided upon, there was, of course, some anxiety to see the animals destined for the Eastern journey. When it was known that the selection was as given above, anxiety was increased to a far greater degree, therefore a trip to Palo Alto was resolved upon, and last Saturday the date fixed for the outing.

Glorious the early morning on the Eastern side of the bay, the water as placid as the surface of a small lake encircled by forests, and even in the early hours the temperature of the air such as to make a seat on the upper deck outside of the cabin enjoyable. The railway journey very pleasant, and the morning paper soon thrown aside, far greater attractions in watching the beauty of the country in its vernal garb. Still pleasanter the drive from the station along the county road, and that pleasure augmented when following the sinuous windings of the roadway along the bank of the San Francis-quita, shaded by grand trees, beautified by flowers, shrubbery and such a carpeting of thick, green sod filling all the spaces between parterres of bloom and plants of brilliant foliage.

But if I were to write of the beauties surrounding the residence at Palo Alto in terms at all adequate to convey an impression of what they are, there would be little room for horses.

At the house we learned that Governor Stanford was at the racing department of the big breeding farm, and got there in time to see two gangs of the colts enjoy a spin down the stretch. A merry spin, or rather a series of them, as there were four couples to flit over the four hundred and forty yards and 24½ seconds was the slowest of the moves. As a similar system of training prevails with the racehorses as has been so successfully followed in "turning out" such a collection of harness notabilities as no other place can equal, there was no lack of speed, and that shown without other urging than a willing spirit evolves. In all but one instance there was little difference between the first and second, and therefore the test was more nearly of what the slower could force the faster to do than a limit of the first. I was fully satisfied that one filly could mark as fast, or faster for the quarter, as I ever took the time of, as she was only a fifth of a second behind.

From the race course to the paddocks, where Mr. Mulkey had the mares and foals assembled for inspection, and a better-looking collection it would be difficult to find. Gov. Stanford had given his superintendent, Mr. Mulkey, the liberty to select forty thoroughbred mares—all above that number had been sent to the trotting quarters—and so far as could be told from looks and breeding, very judiciously the selection had been made. Still he grieved that so many good ones were consigned to plebeian alliances, although forced to admit that so much good had come from the union in what could be called the tentative stage, that he was reconciled to the situation. There is only one foal by Racine, and that very nearly the "pick of the basket," although the Flamheans with great quarters and powerful loins, and the sons and daughters of Cyrus so highly finished, and the Floods so evenly made, that if the task had been allotted to me to pick a dozen of the best, the answer would have been, decision reserved until May or June, 1894; or, better still, the October of that year when they could take up equal weights and give a practical illustration of which were entitled to the prizes. Attractive as was the display of the royal lines, the day was wearing away, and the major point of interest was the ellipsis where wheels were to whirl. It was too near the time of departure to give the horses named for the Eastern tour any fast work, and some of the home division had played their parts before we reached the track, but by no means were the speedy ones exhausted. Right lively work, or rather right joyous play. A 2:20 gait or better in all that rated over yearlings, and some of the juveniles not very far away from that standard, and all of them so squarely gaited. Differences in action, of course, but no single-footing, hobbling, hitching or "half-bammoned" way of progression; and that without hobbles, toe-weight, over-draws, straightening straps or any of the many appliances which are thought to be indispensable in the education of trotters. A large proportion have the "Electioneer gait," rapid and clean of stroke, covering more ground in their stride than would be thought by a person who was depending on hearing, or on eye and ear if the watch were not consulted. When a furlong is made in 15 seconds, and a quarter in 30½ seconds, there must be a combination of celerity of action and a good length of stride. For the first time in my life I "timed" a furlong in 15 seconds made at a trotting gait, and it is needless to say that in this era of great speed very many fast brushes have come under my observation. That was done by Advertiser, and done so neatly that there is little risk in predicting a very close place to the top-notch for him before the year is closed. He was hitched to a "hike," all the others to an old-fashioned sulky, and the track was too soft to be rated fast. The next best performance to that of Advertiser, in my estimation, was a quarter by a yearling in 39½ seconds. That on the sixth day of May, and the last furlong of the distance so much the fastest, that the indications are good for a return of the yearling record to Palo Alto and that with an allowance for reducing the present mark by other youngsters. Much could be written in praise of individuals, the foundation being what was shown on the track, but it has always seemed to me a breach of etiquette to publish what one has seen without the permission of those interested. But there is no violation of even an implied obligation in saying that in all the visits I have made to Palo Alto, and these embrace the whole time from the first purchase sixteen or seventeen years ago until now, that I never was so well pleased with the horses from the snappings up. A clean bill of health, a surprising absence of ailments, when the number of horses in training are taken into consideration, and a development of speed that is truly wonderful. The system has been exemplified in the past to be very nearly the best, if not the very best, that has been tried, and those who have put it in force are worthy of the highest praise for the skill and industry displayed in attending to the business.

With a fair share of good luck, it will be better to say, with casualties which cannot be guarded against, this will be a great year in the history of Palo Alto. Even with the draft of seven of the best, according to the present showing, the home stable will contain a whole lot which will win distinction, just as surely as anything in the future can be foretold. I have no hesitation in predicting a series of victories on both sides of the country, and though the Eastern division will be brought more prominently before the public, the home battalion will compel a fair share of attention.

The young sires will have to fight the battle for the yearling supremacy, and those who have prognosticated that the glory which Palo Alto had won, through the greatest of all sires, will be dimmed hereafter, may be relegated to the already large army of false prophets. I will be chary of vaticinations, and that Arion will be dethroned from his two-year-old seat is, to say the least, improbable. The next step, however, is not so high, and the joint occupancy of the three-year-old empire is not so firm a foundation. Whether the next queen or king will be in the first or second generation from Electioneer, is a question which is too intricate to be solved before the trial comes off; but which ever way the prize may fall, the second will make a bold attempt to clutch the diadem. It was a son of Electricity that moved the fast quarter on May 6th, but I saw a daughter of Advertiser that is likely to be troublesome to the near relative of Maul S., and then there are Palo Altos and Azmoors and — a whole lot of yearlings which must not be overlooked.

Through the paddocks where the yearlings were taking their daily bath of sunshine, along the stalls, and a glance at the broodmares and foals which were the nearest, and every place visited confirmed the impression that this year was destined to be marked with a white stone in the calendar of Palo Alto. As stated before the day was surprisingly lovely, and that beautiful section of the country was arrayed in its best garb. There was enjoyment everywhere, and a seat on the veranda which fronts the offices and overlooks the track, had its share of comfort. When the place was first improved there were glimpses of the hay through the openings between the trees, but the spreading branches had cut off that part of the view. Governor Stanford informed us that he determined to cut away a portion of the obstacles so as to restore the water effect, and though it seems too bad to destroy a single branch, it will surely add to the pleasure of those who admire the beautiful of nature.

While seated there Mr. Covey had Altivo, Advance and Electioneer Rex brought out and shown together. Altivo and Advance, as noted previously, are in the Eastern gang and their pedigree given; the other is from a daughter of Lady Amanda, Lady Viva. Three finer looking young stallions would be hard to find, and this was the general verdict, but there was a good deal of argument as to which should have the preference, form being the test. Governor Stanford, Captain N. T. Smith, Mr. S. T. Gage, Mr. Hickok, Frank Covey and myself being the committee, though as the "Governor" did not signify his preference, and as Mr. Covey followed his example, the award was left to the remaining quartet. I was decidedly in the minority, the trio awarding the pride of place to Altivo while Advance was my choice. For beauty of color, perfection of head and muscular development, Electioneer Rex cannot be excelled. For harmony of proportion, general "usefulness" in his make up, equality of balance, Altivo is very close to the highest standard.

Advance has more the look of a race horse of high class than either of the others, and my favoritism for his dam may shade my judgment, as when the contest is so very close, a slight leaning is enough to give a wrong bias.

While partialities for families of horses are so generally prevalent that there are few, especially breeders, who are free from the feeling, it is not an entirely blamable trait, provided it is not carried so far as to be offensive to those who have fancies for different strains. There are great individuals among all the prominent families, racing and trotting, and though there may be a preponderance of the very good ones in one sept, it does not follow that there are none in other tribes. It is a source of deep satisfaction to me, that horses I have owned, particularly those I have bred, turn out well, and therefore there is likely to be a proneness to overestimation. It is nearly as much gratification when trotters with near thoroughbred crosses prove that the theory so ardently supported for not far from half a century, has, when put fairly in practice, resulted so well, and Palo Alto has done more towards giving it a fair trial than all the other big breeding farms combined. Necessarily I am greatly interested in the highly-bred trotters, and those which are trotting-bred, too, which have been turned out in companies and regiments, and this select guard, which will be on the Eastern march before this is in print, has awakened a keener interest than ever before.

CLOSE AT HAND.—Two weeks from this Saturday, viz., on May 27th, the trotting meeting will commence. Should the track be susceptible of being brought into proper condition before that day there may be some preliminary sport of the harness order. That will greatly depend on the early attendance of the horses which will take part in the meeting. The soil of the Bay District is readily compacted by wetting, light harrowing and the pressure of wheels, so that if the horses congregate when the stalls are first in readiness for them, viz., the 22d of May, the work of consolidating will be accelerated.

At the State Fair the racing and trotting take place on alternate days, and there is no difficulty in having it in good condition for both. The long period during which the Bay District has been used entirely for galloping does not make the job so great as many assume, and should the horses appear on the first day the Trotting Association take possession there will be a chance to exercise. It is very important that the horses be on the ground the first of the week, as the number likely to be in attendance must be approximately estimated in order to give proper consideration to the programme. With sufficient horses to make good sport, all the seven days will be occupied, and with five or more races each day, from all that can be learned now the prospect is good that a large gathering, but as will be readily recognized, they should be on the ground several days before the date fixed for the commencement. This will greatly lighten the labor of arrangement and facilitate the progress of the work. The Executive Committee held a meeting last Monday, and all that can be done previous to the arrival of the horses will be accomplished. There is nothing in the way or any good reason to delay assembling at the track, and when those who intend to bring their horses realize the importance of an early appearance he response will be in accordance with the wishes of the Association. Of this I have no doubt, the fear being that the inference between the coming meeting and those to which the entries closed some time before would not be understood. There will be a man in constant attendance from Monday morning, May 22d, to allot stalls, and on that morning the work of preparing the track will be inaugurated. I feel perfectly safe in assuring those who will take part in the meeting that every effort will be made to render it acceptable to participants. The members of the Executive Committee are not only energetic, but also well informed as to what should be done to satisfy owners and trainers. The importance of details is recognized, and "little things" will receive care as well as those of magnitude.

As I have oftentimes stated, this new departure in trotting affairs is likely to have a potent influence for good all over the country. It may be that enthusiasm gives a brighter tinge to the prospect than is warranted, and that the time has not yet come for a general appreciation by the owners and breeders of fast trotters and pacers. In endeavoring to lighten the burden of owners, and to augment their receipts, besides the reduction of expenses, too much faith has been placed on the hearty co-operation of those who are the most interested. Without that the outlook would not be so bright, but in my intercourse—limited, it is true—with owners, I have only met one individual who refused to assist, and I still have hopes that he will reconsider his determination and take part in popularizing the "American sport." To compensate for the falling off in receipts by the reduction of an entrance fee from ten per cent. to three per cent., increased attendance has to be depended upon. That portion of the sport-loving public I have come in contact with are unanimous in their approval of the innovations, and with horses enough to give them a fair trial there is scarcely a reasonable doubt that the augmentative of gate receipts will overbalance the loss occasioned by smaller percentages. Then it must be borne in mind that any surplus of receipts over expenditures will inure to the future benefit of the men who lend their aid in establishing trotting on a more popular basis than it now enjoys. The premiums offered will be gauged by the money in the treasury. Should the balance be large the amounts given will be in proportion, and with every possible effort to make the distribution general. The great aim is to "increase the earning capacity" of light-harness horses, and while having that in view there will be strenuous endeavor to have the appreciation benefit all classes. By aiding the smaller "stables," the larger share in the reward. Increase of receipts means proportional adjustment, and while the big guns of the track obtain enhanced amounts, there will be a residue for division among those who are not so fortunate as to possess horses which take high rank.

The most nonsensical argument advanced in opposition is that which takes the ground that by offering premiums for horses which are inferior, a prize is given for breeding inferiority. When that class can win more money and sell for more than the better, the ground will be tenable but not until then.

Superiority will always be sought but in the effort to obtain the best the preponderance will be below the highest grade. Stimulate enterprise in breeding by making the business of rearing fast horses surer of return, enabling those who have limited capital to keep trying for the best. That is one of the objects of the P. C. T. H. B. A.

ROLAND, in The Horseman, is now advocating following the plan of thoroughbred stud books in the registration of trotters. Some twenty-five years ago, when Wallace issued his first and only volume of a thoroughbred Stud Book, the system was adopted and carried out in the trotting calendar of pedigree. Arguments were of little avail then, too simple by far, and hence the present cumbersome methods of recording the breeding of trotters. The only condition on the other side that had any weight was the necessity for members so to separate and afford the means of identifying animals which bore the same name.

A few figures appended to each of the progeny which appeared under their dams. If I am not greatly mistaken in the person Roland has an intimate knowledge of the Register in its early days, and at that time was not thrown into such close connection with thoroughbreds as he is at present. Any journalist who has to consult both of the genealogical gazetteers will not be long in arriving at the conclusion that the thoroughbred is vastly superior and it is not all surprising that Roland should write "The thoroughbred system of registering animals under their dams is the most concise, the most convenient, and the most entirely satisfactory method of registration."

The ball was started rolling in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of April 22d when I wrote, "There has been a singular want of common sense in instituting a Trotting Stud Book. Unwieldy and erudite it will be a source of amazement to people of the hereafter, how such a monumental blunder was conceived, or under what possible state of affairs it was continued." Roland is the first to join in the scrimmage and as an auxiliary in the good work his aid will be valuable. It may be that it will strike him that there are other things connected with thoroughbred practices which it will be safe to follow, and in the not very far-off future he will see some merit in near strains of the blood-horse in fast trotters.

Now that registration is in the hands of an association the change can be made. A Trotting Stud Book once in four years, a Year Book every twelve months, and a magazine to make public the newcomers since the previous Trotting Register will give ample opportunities to do the business to the satisfaction of all.

JOS. CAIRN SIMPSON.

Description of Markings.

Such horsemen as Colonels Bingaman, Kenner, Elliott, Peyton and their associate turfmen would have thought the new style of describing the markings of horses ludicrous, and if lucky Jos. Boswell had read as I did, just now, in a very popular turf journal, that "Lexington had four white legs," nobody but his most familiar friends could imagine his disgust.

My education may be all wrong, but all the gentlemen whom I have most admired as turfmen, including my father, taught me, when I was a little fellow, the following lesson about marks:

- A white spot in the forehead is a star.
- A white face from eye to eye is a bald face.
- A white strip in the face is a blaze.
- A strip between the nostrils is a snip.
- A white eye is a glass eye.
- A horse has pasterns, not ankles, and there is no such joint as a hind knee or fore shoulder.
- The left side of a horse is the near side; the right side is the off side; but for heaven's sake don't understand me to say your left or right side if you stand in front of the horse.
- White below the pastern joint is a white pastern. Above the pastern a white leg.
- White around the top of the hoof is a white coronet.
- A star, blaze or bald face can't be anywhere except on the face. A snip can't be anywhere except on the nose.

According to my instruction an accurate description of Lexington would be: Bay, with star, broad snip, both front and rear hind pasterns and off hind leg white, for such is his portrait, painted by Troye for Ten Broeck, now before me, and also as I remember him well. Whenever I hear about a scar on the right fore shoulder, a scar on the left hind hip, a swelling on the right hind knee, rearing up in front and kicking up behind, I get away as quickly as possible.—B. G. Thomas in Spirit of the Times.

HARVEST, who won the selling race at Elizabeth yesterday, the last race on the card, was entered to be sold for $1,000, which is far below his value. So when he was put up for sale Jeter Walden, who ran second with Perrier Jonet, bid $2,000 for him. Mr. Dwyer retained him for his stable by a bid of $5. A bid of $5,000 would hardly have secured the horse, and had Walden bid that amount instead of $2,000, he would have received $2,000 instead of $500, which he gets as one-half of the surplus under the rules. This was the first bid on a horse in a selling race at the Elizabeth meeting.

Royal George.

This is a much more valuable family of trotters than many people are willing to admit. Royal George became noted through a force of circumstances. A man named Dougherty, buying cattle in the western part of Canada, came to the barn of one Frank Munger to look at a blind stallion that was noted for his speed as a roadster. Dougherty took a notion to the horse and purchased him. He could then outfoot any horse in St. Catherine. He was soon matched to trot on the ice and was never defeated. Munger often drove him seventy-five miles in a day, and on one occasion traveled one hundred miles with him in the same period. Raised in the wilds of Canada, and with nothing but common mares he founded a family that should be appreciated for all time to come. The parentage of this horse traces back to a black stallion called Tippoo, foaled about 1820. The breeding of Tippoo has been in dispute, some claiming he was by Ogden's Messenger, son of imp. Messenger. In June, 1892, I wrote an article for a certain turf journal, and in February, 1893, it appeared in the Picton Times, a Canada paper, and on February 27, 1893, I received a letter from an aged gentleman named Wilson Searles, of Wellington, Ontario, Canada, Prince Edwards County, as follows: "I saw your history of the Royal George horses in print. You are all right, but your foundation of Tippoo is not very solid. I am the only man living that knows the history of Tippoo; my age is seventy-one. Old Tippoo died when I was fourteen years old. Tippoo was foaled in 1818, was a coal black and large. He was sired by a horse called Scapegoat, brought from Rhode Island, Narragansett Bay. He was large, nearly black, dappled in the spring some. He was a fast pacer and had no other gait. When the war of 1812 was over the cavalry horses in Kingston were sold at auction. A fine dark chestnut mare was bid off by Erastus Howard, of this county. He bred her to Scapegoat and the produce was Tippoo. In 1836, while covering a mare for Parson Dorian, Tippoo broke his leg and was destroyed. Scapegoat was brought here by a man named Whitlock, traveled one season and died that fall. He traveled from farm to farm, stopping over one night each week with my uncle, Stephen Niles, and he, Niles, was employed to procure hay and grain for the cavalry horses, and knew the whole circumstances concerning Tippoo. Wallace wrote me he was twelve years trying to get the pedigree of Tippoo. One man said the dam of Tippoo was brought here from Lawville, N. Y., with foal; another said he was sired by an imported horse; others said Tippoo was imported, thrown overboard in a storm, swam ashore and was found eating rushes on Long Island Sound. Black Warrior was sired by old Tippoo; his dam's breeding is not known. His owner, Mr. Johnson, in the year of 1840 started to take Warrior to Michigan. When traveling twenty miles south of London, Warrior got too lame to travel, he traded him to a man named Barnes. A Mr. Billington, of Middlebury, Vermont, came there with a pair of Messenger mares, lamed one in a bridge and sold it to Mr. Barnes, the then owner of Black Warrior, and this mare became the dam of old Royal George. Why did I study the pedigree so close? Because I owned a brother of Black Warrior. I saw your letter in the Picton Times. You may depend on this description being correct. Signed, Wilson Searles, Wellington, Ontario, Canada, Prince Edward county." Tippoo sired Black Warrior about the year 1832 out of a dark bay or black mare, owned by a British officer. This mare was nearly sixteen hands high, strongly made at every point, and right here the Royal George family inherited the stamina its members are noted for. The mare, by her breeding, implanted in the family the blood of the English thoroughbred, and Black Warrior resembled his dam very much.

A Mr. Billington, of Middleboro, Vermont, brought a dark bay mare to Canada, sired by Vermont or Harris' Hambletonian. She was bred to Black Warrior, and the produce was Royal George, the fountain-head from whence sprang the remarkable family which bears his name. He was a dark bay, the same color as his dam, and owed much of his trotting qualities to this daughter of Harris' Hambletonian. The breeding of the dam has been given as unknown by most writers and by the stud books, but there is no doubt that she was a high bred trotting mare. Royal George sired Toronto Chief, 2:24; he in turn got Thomas Jefferson, 2:23, that won a ten-thousand-dollar stallion race at Buffalo in 1875, and another of the same amount at Boston in 1875. Thomas Jefferson, like the Royal George stallion Alvin, 2:13, the bulldog trotter, was an all-day trotter, and at Buffalo it required five heats to finish the race. In 1871 he trotted with George Wilkes for the stallion championship and won, Wilkes taking the second and third heats, and Jefferson the first, fourth and fifth. In his career on the turf Thomas Jefferson won $47,000, a larger sum than was ever placed to the credit of any other stallion by reason of his earnings on the turf. Jefferson was one of the handsomest horses in the world in his prime. The Royal George stallion, Alvin, is a wonder, as his six-heat race at Chicago last season proves him to be, as he was in exceptionally fast company. Many of the best general purpose horses owned in Ontario county, N. Y., have some of the stout Royal George blood in their veins, and one writer says there never was owned in Erie county, N. Y., anything that could compare with the Royal Georges as general-purpose horses.

Field's Royal George, once owned at Buffalo, was a very fast trotter in his day. He also had a temper that would bear watching. I have a slight scar on one of my hands, caused by getting it too near his mouth at the Palmyra, N. Y., race track, many years ago. The stallion's driver, Young Fields, had finished a heat and stepped from his sulky, the horse started to run, another person and myself caught him, and he in turn caught me. They always led him to the track and hitched him to the sulky, walking up or down the home-stretch. The second dam of Belle Hamlin had Royal George blood in her veins. One of the very best general purpose stallions ever owned in this country was a powerful formed chestnut stallion with a white face. He was purchased by Frank Fox and John Norton, of Victor, this county, of Charles Morrow, of Dundee, Canada. He was sired by Tempest, trial 2:30, son of old Royal George, and his dam was by old Royal George; second dam a running mare, foaled in Kentucky. He had a fine thoroughbred ear, a large, full hazel eye, and the most powerful back ever seen on a horse; was wide through the stifles behind, hips smooth and narrow, legs clean, like a thoroughbred, but heavy. This horse was a naturally born trotter and won every race here he was entered in; his record was no better than 2:45, but it was back some time in the sixties, and at that time they did not care so much for a low record. He could speed a 2:30 clip, and if he had been driven out in a race in fast company could have been in the 2:30 list. This horse left much good, serviceable stock and general purpose horses, and his sons are natural trotters, and his daughters are No. 1 brood mares, and are about the right size, 15 1/2 hands. This stallion was a little dull in a race; it was said he was overdriven when a colt in Canada. I have seen him lashed with the whip from wire to wire and he could not be made to change his gait—the trot was born there. For this reason he was entered and won his races by the name of Honest George, and he was never known to disgrace it.—S. W. S., in Dunton's Spirit.

The American Association Congress.

The third Biennial Congress of the American Trotting Association convened at 12.30 A. M. Tuesday, May 2, at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago. President Beaman presided over the deliberations, and among those present were E. C. Lewis, G. B. McFall, Edward Hayes, C. L. Benjamin, G. H. Ely, N. J. Colman, H. J. Kline, D. T. Mount, E. S. Beach, James Culberstone, L. W. Hess, W. P. Ijams, Morris J. Jones and Edward Pyle. The principal business transacted was the receipt of the report of the committee on rules and the discussion of the changes suggested. The committee spent some time in conference with a similar committee from the National Association, comparing the rules of the two organizations and making changes to secure uniformity. The changes recommended were mostly minor alterations proposed with this end in view, and they were accepted without comment, says The Horseman. The new rule regarding the distance caused some discussion. Mr. Colman moved that the changes recommended be adopted without alteration, but Mr. Culbertson objected to the distance clause and spoke at some length against it. E. C. Lewis, of Ottawa, Ill., favored it and introduced Secretary Hess, of that city, who advocated the change. He said that while it might tend to reduce entries it would give better satisfaction to the public. Secretary Kline, of the St. Joseph (Mo.) Association, opposed the change, on the ground that entries would be reduced. After considerable discussion Mr. Colman withdrew his motion to adopt the report of the committee, and a motion to strike the new distance rule out of the report was made. This was lost by a vote of 27 1/2 to 29, and it was moved that the report be adopted as a whole. On the roll call this was carried, and the changes suggested by the committee were thus adopted without alteration. The new distance rule as adopted reads as follows:

RULE 100—In all races seventy-five yards shall be a distance; but where eight or more horses contend the distance shall be increased to one hundred yards, and in any heat wherein the number of starters shall be reduced to less than eight the seventy-five yards distance shall be restored.

Among the most important changes made in addition to the above was the insertion of a clause providing that when a recording fee for change of name has already been paid to the National Association, or when the change is required by the rules of the Register Association, no recording fee shall be necessary for the horse to start.

Some unimportant changes in the by-laws were reported by the committee and adopted, and the question of licensing drivers was taken up. Considerable discussion ensued, but the proposition was finally decided to be impracticable and the motion to adopt it was voted down. A resolution proposed by Secretary Hess condemning the continuous winter racing carried on by some of the running tracks in the State of Illinois, and which has had a tendency to bring about legislation inimical to the entire breeding and racing interests, was adopted as showing the sentiment of trotting horse men on the subject.

The election of officers was the concluding business, and resulted as follows: W. P. Ijams, of Terre Haute, Ind., President; G. B. McFall, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, Vice-President; M. J. Jones, of Kenosha, Wis.; C. L. Benjamin, of Saginaw, Mich.; N. J. Coleman, of St. Louis; E. C. Lewis, of Ottawa, Ill., and G. H. Ely, of Elyria, O., Directors.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors, held immediately after the election, Edward Hayes, of Chicago, was elected Treasurer, and J. H. Steiner, Secretary.

Words of Wisdom.

- Never buy a delicate horse.
- Blood that wins is the blood to breed to.
- The test of racing is the highest standard.
- A horse with a tough constitution is the one to buy.
- It would be a good thing for the trotting-horse industry if legislation could prohibit unsound horses being used in the stud.

Breeders have learned that it is the real trotting horse that brings remunerative prices, not the one that is a trotter in name only.

The successful breeder in the future is he who will study the requisities of, and aim first and last to produce, the desirable horse for the road.

The breeder of the future who succeeds will be the one who conducts business according to the rules of trade which govern all legitimate business enterprises.

An unsound gelding may be regarded with equanimity, but an unsound stallion, particularly a great one, is in danger and a menace to the breed to which he belongs.

Many of the most prosperous branches of business in the world are now conducted on a smaller margin of profit than is the breeding of the trotting horse at the present prices.

There will be fewer animals bred this year than heretofore. Many will breed only what they can conveniently train; others will select their best mares and breed them to the best horses within their reach.

There will always be a place for the gentleman's road horse—a place that can never be filled by my other style of horse than the high-class American trotter that has size, style, soundness and speed to recommend him.

It is better, says a turf authority, to send the scrubs, both mares and stallions, to the superphosphate and glue factories than to keep on breeding them, no matter how fashionable their pedigree may look on paper.

The essence of wisdom in the exportation business and in the work of developing foreign markets for American trotters and roadsters is to give the foreigner value received for his gold, to the end that he will want to buy again, and that his countrymen will do likewise. Very little sharp practice will kill the goose that lays the golden egg in other directions just as the Argentine goose has been killed.—Mirror and Farmer.

CALIFORNIA JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

SIXTH DAY—TUESDAY, MAY 9.

Not a single favorite caught the eagle eyes of the judges this pleasant afternoon, and six races were run, too. Over 2,000 persons took in the events to-day, and the bookmakers had things very much their own way. Ida Glenn lost the first race by a breath to North, an 8 to 1 shot that was heavily played by several moneyed gentlemen in the know, while the favorite, Mount Carlos, struggled in an indifferent third. The horses of B. C. Holly won two races (Francesca and Green Hock), and those of W. Gardner did the same (North and Tillie S.). Motto at last won a race, heat Joe Cotton, and did her mile in 1:42 1/2. Solitude made a runaway of the fifth race, in the homestretch, where she was pulled up and cantered in in 1:14 1/2 for the six furlongs. We would hate to gamble that this mare could not run three-quarters of a mile in 1:13 1/2, so easily did she win from Inkerman et al. to-day. Green Hock won the last event almost as easily as Solitude did the fifth, though Huguenot was pocketed clear up past the drawgate, and when he did get out it was through a narrow aperture.

Mount Carlos, at 2 to 1, was a favorite in the first race, five furlongs, Aerolite second in public favor at 4 to 1. Ida Glenn was backed down from 8 to 1 to 5, while the others went from 8 to 50 to 1. Jack the Ripper, to a poor start, led Ida Glenn by a head into the homestretch, with Joe Harding third, Mount Carlos fourth and North fifth. An eighth from home Glenn had disposed of the Ripper and appeared to have the race at her mercy. At the drawgate North came out of the hunch like an arrow from a bow, and gave the little chestnut mare battle. They passed under the wire in what looked like a dead heat (North going strongest), but the verdict went to the latter. As he got the worst of the start, the best horse to-day was undoubtedly given the race. Ida Glenn, in the place, was two lengths from Mount Carlos, third, who was a length from Aerolite. Time, 1:02 1/2.

Eleven three-year-olds of not very good quality came to the post in the second race, one of six furlongs. Angelo, at 2 to 1, was favorite, Clacquer going at 4 to 1 and Francesca (sister to Acclaim) at 5 to 1. After a long delay the flag fell with Angelo slightly in the lead, Connaught second Francesca third and Orta next. Connaught sailed to the fore without delay, and led to the three-quarter pole, attended by Angelo, Clacquer and Francesca, in the order named. Francesca came into the home-stretch second to Connaught, and an eighth from home took command, winning easily by one and one-half lengths, Connaught second, a neck from Angelo, who was the same distance from Clacquer. Time, 1:17. W. Clancy did an excellent piece of riding on Francesca.

Joe Cotton was backed down from 7 to 5 to even money in the third race, one mile, and Motto receded from 8 to 5 to 2 1/2 to 1. Broad Church was at 5, Castro 6 and Wyanashott 10 to 1 at the close. Joe Cotton was played for a "killing," and was first a neck at the fall of the flag, Motto second, Castro third. Motto went to the front going around the first turn, and led Cotton passing the quarter by three lengths, and by five at the half. Between the half and three-quarters Cotton made up a lot of ground, and a shout went up that the favorite would catch Motto easily. He got within a length of the fleet mare in the straight, but little Weber was only nursing Motto to a finish, and she sailed away from Joe Cotton after passing the drawgate in great style, winning by a length and a half, Cotton second, four lengths from Broad Church, Wyanashott fourth and Castro last. Time, 1:42 1/2.

Claire, plunged on heavily, went to the post favorite at 6 to 5, Tillie S. at 7 to 5, the other five at from 10 to 30 to 1. Tillie S. led from start to finish, and won easily from Polaski by two lengths, half a length from Button. Jovita struck herself when well up in the hunch, between the half and three-quarter poles, and finished last. Claire ran disappointedly, being sixth at the finish. Time, 0:56 1/2.

All kinds of coin flew in an Inkerman, who was packing 121 pounds in a six-furlong run. He went to the post a favorite at 8 to 5, Solitude going at 2 to 1, Gladiator at 4, Lady Gwen, Charmer and Lodi at from 8 to 10 to 1. Solitude, second, but off flying, took the lead before fifty yards had been run, and simply made her field look ridiculous. She led Inkerman three lengths into the homestretch, and eased up for the last eighth of a mile, won in a canter by three lengths from the whipped-out Inkerman, who was five lengths from Charmer. Lodi was fourth. Time, 1:14 1/2.

Nellie G. was backed down from 2 1/2 to 1 to 9 to 5 in the last race, also six furlongs. Patricia was at 3 to 1, Green Hock 4 and Huguenot 6. The balance were quoted at from 8 to 150 to 1, the latter being Redlight's price straight. It was 50 to 1 against him for place, 25 to 1 "a show" in a few books. Redlight led Huguenot and Green Hock into the homestretch by a very small margin—in fact, was in front an eighth from home. Then W. Clancy sent Green Hock along, and he showed that he outclassed his field by drawing away and winning easily by a length from Huguenot, who came out of a very small space between Patricia and Redlight at the drawgate and secured the place by a length. Redlight, the despised skyrocket, was third, a head from Patricia. Time, 1:16. The bookies did not get rich on this race, as many took a chance on Redlight for a show.

SEVENTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, MAY 10.

An enthusiastic, good-sized crowd took in to-day's races. The day and track were perfect, but "the talent" was again wide of the mark in endeavoring to pick winners. Jim R., with a stable boy named Campbell for a pilot, started the agony hall a-rolling by winning from the fleet favorite, Gypsy Girl, and other noted sprinters. Then the Brutus-Ariola colt made his field of good ones look quite ridiculous by winning easily. Silver State, at 8 and 10 to 1 for place, finished second, while the badly-ridden Thornhill and Seaside (favorite) finished third and fourth respectively. It is doubtful if any worse rides were ever seen on the local track than the one on Seaside. W. Clancy, one of the very best riders on this coast, usually, took a siesta on the hack of the easily-winning Ahi P., with the result that old Mero, coming like a minnie-ball under Seaman's urging, nipped the race right under the wire by the scantest of noses. Thousands of dollars were thus burned up for the players of Ahi P., who were legion. It was a case of over-confidence, pure and simple, and when Ahi P. went past the finishing post she was almost walking. Mero's burst of speed was truly phenomenal, and as he was at from 30 to 50 to 1 in the hooks, his friends were handsomely rewarded. A jockey should never, under any circumstances, pull his mount to a common canter an eighth of a mile from the wire, for a horse saved for the finish can come with a wet sail, and (as in this case) before the leader can be got going well on its stride an inferior horse can come up and win, as Mero did to-day. Ahi P. outclassed her field badly, and could not have lost had she not been eased up so far from the wire. Tigress won her race easily by three lengths from Revolver. Thomas H. Williams, Tigress' owner, is credited with winning a handsome sum on the filly at odds of 1 to 3 on. Sir Reel and Conde had the hottest kind of a struggle all the way in the last race, and Sir Reel, through sheer gameness, won by a head, with the favorite, Sympathetic's Last, two lengths off.

Gypsy Girl, with Miller up, was considered a certainty in the first race, four and one-half furlongs, going to the post at 4 to 5. Volita, at 6 to 1, was second choice. Jim R., ridden by Campbell, a stranger here, went at 8 to 1, the others from 10 to 60 to 1. Jack the Ripper was first away, attended closely Gypsy Girl and Reno. Gypsy Girl soon forged to the front, leading The Ripper and Jim R. into the homestretch by over a length. "All over!" shouted Gypsy Girl's backers. To the surprise of nearly everyone, however, Jim R. got on even terms about a sixteenth of a mile from home, and drew away handily at the finish, winning by half a length, Gypsy Girl second, one and one-half lengths from Jack the Ripper, third. Time, 0:55 1/2. Seaside was a hot favorite in the second event on the card, five furlongs, going to the post at 6 to 5. The Brutus-Ariola colt receded from 2 to 3 to 1. Thornhill, with H. Smith up, was not much fancied, going at 6 and 7 to 1. Warrago was at 3 1/2 and 4 to 1, Silver State anywhere from 20 to 30. Thornhill was first away a head, Silver State second, well on her stride, the Ariola colt next, Seaside fourth and Warrago last. Silver State led Thornhill a length at the half-pole, the Ariola colt but a head behind the Cheviot youngster, Warrago fourth and the favorite last. The Ariola colt made his run between the half and three-quarter poles, passed Silver State and Thornhill and led Silver State into the homestretch by a length, Seaside now third, Thornhill at his head, fourth. Seaside was ridden badly, going about as straight as the Snake river. The Ariola colt was not thereafter headed, and won easily by one and one-half lengths from the whipped-out Silver State, who was a length from Thornhill. Seaside was fourth. Time, 1:03.

Ahi P. was played for all kinds of money in the third race, six and a half furlongs, going to the post at 6 to 5. Initiation was next in favor at 4 to 1, Folly 6, Farewell and Little Tough 8, the others from 12 to 30 to 1 (latter Mero's price in most books). After a long delay at the post, caused by the circus antics of Initiation and Miss Walling, Initiation took the lead, with Miss Walling second, Mero third, Ahi P. fourth. Miss Walling led Initiation a head at the half-pole, Farewell three parts of a length away, about one length from Ahi P. Miss Walling fell back at a great rate nearing the three-quarter pole, and Initiation led Ahi P. half a length into the homestretch, with Farewell at the favorite's head and Little Tough fourth. Soon after entering the straight Ahi P. took the lead, and was over two lengths to the good an eighth from home and apparently an easy winner. W. Clancy, her rider, now eased on his mount, thinking he had the race at his mercy. Old Mero, sixth into the straight, had gradually mowed down all but the favorite, and 100 yards from the wire came out from the hunch behind headed by Farewell and Little Tough. Seaman saw that Clancy was slumbering and that Ahi P. was all but waking, so, making a great rush with the Fresno gelding, won right under the wire from Ahi P. by the scantest of noses amid the groans and oaths of the favorite-players. Farewell was third, about two lengths off. Time, 1:22 1/2.

Tigress, at 1 to 3 in the fourth race, selling, fifteen-sixteenths of a mile, led Revolver and Red Cloud, her only opponents, almost from the very start, and won easily by three lengths from Revolver, who came away from Red Cloud in the homestretch and secured the place by four lengths. Official time, 1:36 1/2; unofficial, by several watches, 1:35 1/2.

The last race of the day, a handicap, was one of six furlongs, and Sympathetic's Last, Bronco, Conde and Sir Reel went to the post. Sympathetic's Last and Sir Reel were at one time equal favorites, but the former was played much the hardest, and was at 4 to 5 at the close, Sir Reel at 8 to 5, Conde at 8 to 1, Bronco at 10. The start was delayed by something happening to Bronco's gearing, Sympathetic's Last and Sir Reel's had actions. Conde and Sir Reel ran heads apart to the homestretch. Sympathetic's Last went up fast at the half-pole, but soon after dropped out alarmingly, acting as if he had struck himself or something had given way. A sixteenth from home the race looked as if it was Conde's, as he led Sir Reel a short neck and both little Weber and Burlingame were riding hard. Less than 100 yards from the wire Burlingame gave Sir Reel several hard blows with the hat, and the bay colt responded so gamely that he won at the wire by a head, Conde second, two lengths from Sympathetic's Last, third. Time, 1:14 1/2.

EIGHTH DAY—THURSDAY, MAY 11.

Two favorites managed to win to-day out of the five events carded—Redlight and Farewell—but long shots won three of the races easily. Redlight played with his field in the opening race, half a mile, winning in a canter from Mount Carlos and other skates. The Lark, with George Miller up, won a good race for "Slim" Murry, of Sacramento, with odds of 7 and 8 to 1 against his chances at the close. The hot favorite, Carmel, managed to get third place. Little Esperanza led from flag-fall to finish in the mile race, beating Steadfast and St. Croix (favorite) four lengths in 1:41, the fastest mile of the spring-time, gentle Annie. Farewell, the North country horse by Nimbus, won all the way, with the long shot, Vendome, in the place. Jack the Ripper also played drum-major for his band, though Lodi (the favorite) was at his neck when they finished.

Redlight, at 2 to 1, was installed favorite in the first race, for dogs, selling, half a mile. Mount Carlos was next in public favor at 3 to 1. A long, tedious wait was had for the skyrockets to get in position. Redlight, Mountain Boy, Joe Hooker Jr., Joe D., Mount Carlos was the order at the bunting-swish. Redlight was never molested, and won in a canter by a length from Mount Carlos, who ran up third near the three-quarter mark. Joe Hooker Jr. (30 to 1 straight) was third, one and a half lengths behind Mount Carlos. Time, 0:49.

Carmel was for a time an even-money favorite in the second race, four and one-half furlongs, though plunges on Polaski and Realization sent the Carmel odds to 8 to 5 at the close. The Lark opened at 3 to 1, and though Miller was slated as his pilot, went to 7 and 8 to 1 at the close. Carmel led Polaski into the homestretch by half a length, Realization third and The Lark next. In the straight Miller went to work on The Lark, but Polaski, who had disposed of Carmel easily, looked a dead-easy winner less than an eighth of a mile from home. The Lark got on even terms near the drawgate, and won handsily like a racehorse by a neck in 0:56, Polaski second, two lengths from Carmel.

El Rayo and Tigress being scratched in the mile handicap, St. Croix was made an overwhelming favorite. Little Esperanza was supported so well, however, that the odds were cut from 5 to 1 to 3 at the close. Garcia opened at 4, was cut to 3 to 1 and went to the post at 5 to 1. Steadfast was 12 to 1. Little Esperanza led all the way, and though closely attended by Garcia until passing the half, shook him off and made a great gap of daylight once they were in the homestretch. Garcia fell back badly just before reaching the three-quarter pole, and Steadfast commenced to come like a flash from the rear. Esperanza won by four lengths rather easily in 1:41, the fastest mile of the two meetings. Steadfast and St. Croix had the hardest kind of fight down the straight, the former getting the place by three parts of a length, to the surprise of nearly everyone.

Connaught and Farewell were equal favorites in the fifth race, seven-eighths of a mile, with Little Tough next in favor at 5 to 1. After another long delay (over half an hour), occasioned by the cussed actions of Sidney and Miss Walling, the flag fell to a straggling start, Farewell went in front, Little Tough second, Connaught third, Miss Walling next. This was the order at the quarter, where Farewell had three lengths' lead, but at the half Vendome had run up fourth, past Miss Walling. Farewell was not molested, and won in a canter by three lengths. Vendome came up fast in the homestretch, passing the poorly-ridden Little Tough and Miss Walling (who had come again), and getting the place from Connaught by a trifle over a length. Time, 1:30.

The last race, five furlongs, had for a favorite Lodi, though Jack the Ripper and Angelo were played for all kinds of money. Jack the Ripper led all the way, and won after an exciting finish from Lodi by a neck. Angelo and Volita were second and third into the homestretch, The Drummer seventh, but the latter came up at a great clip and secured third place, being one and one-half lengths behind Lodi and gaining. Time, 1:03.

Money Spent on the Turf.

There is yearly spent upon the race tracks of Guttenburg, Gloucester, Sheepshead Bay and adjacent courses, says a correspondent in New York, is a far greater sum of money than is required to conduct the municipal affairs of the great cities of New York and Brooklyn. The annual budgets of the two big towns do not call far over $60,000,000. More than $100,000,000 or nearly double that amount, is yearly lost or won—principally lost—at the race tracks, and nobody in particular seems to be benefitted by the enormous expenditure.

Throughout the United States more money finds its way to the pool-box than it costs to run the federal government, yet few seem to be better off by the circulation of this vast amount of coin and greenbacks.

That I may not be accused of exaggeration I will adduce the figures furnished me by a well-known sportsman, who is an authority upon the subject. There are in the cities of New York and Brooklyn, including suburbs, about 3,000,000 people. Statistics show the proportion of male adults is one out of every six persons. This would give 500,000 to the cities with their suburbs. My sporting informant tells me that one out of every eight men, not to speak of boys, in and about New York and Brooklyn play the races. This means that 62,500 men daily tempt fortune. Some gamblers play away up into the hundreds; others invest only a five or a ten "spot," while the lowest that can be wagered is $1. The mean between these extremes—I am speaking of men's play now, and not of boys—has been found, after close study and observation, to be about $5.50. Five and one-half times 62,500 the men who play are $343,750. Just think of it! Between a quarter and a half million dollars a day spent on the race track in this immediate vicinity. As there are 313 week days in the year, that would mean that the Titanic sum of $105,437,500 is annually expended in the same way.

In the United States there are 66,000,000 of people. The male adult population is 11,000,000. The proportion of gentlemen with sporting blood in their veins is not, of course, in the interior commensurate with that of New York or Brooklyn. In cities like Albany, Troy, Syracuse, Rochester, Cincinnati, Chicago, Denver, Leadville, Portland and San Francisco, the ratio is in favor of the smaller towns. In the country proper, however, the "dead game sport" is a rare bird. Of the 11,000,000 male adults, it is estimated that only 1 out of 22 tries the "equine paradox." That would make 500,000 "farmers"—as all people outside of New York are facetiously termed by metropolitan sportsmen—who endeavor to tap the pool-box. The average investment is considerably lighter in the interior than New York, say $3 to each speculator. That would make $1,500,000 for each day, or about $500,000,000 for the 313 working days in the year. A tidy sum that—half a thousand billion—the "farmers" of the smaller towns and cities yearly spend in a futile attempt to "beat the horses."

Where does all this money go? Who reaps the benefit? Certainly not the player, for outside of "Pittsburg Phil"—George W. Smith—"Lucky" Baldwin, Mike Dwyer, "Cull" Holland and Col. Bill Harding you never hear of a plunger who does not "go broke" trying the well-nigh impossible task of winning the smiles of the equine siren. The Marquis of Hastings, the greatest of all plungers, blew in one of the finest estates in England. His loss approximated £1,000,000, or about $5,000,000. "Jubilee"—so called because he inherited and wasted a fortune by fast and furious playing at the time Queen Victoria celebrated the fiftieth year of her reign—spent $2,000,000 on turf ventures in a single year. Our own famous plunger, Walton, won $700,000 in England in 1881. Walton backed the winning horse at three big contests and raised havoc among the English bookmakers. From Arthur Maginis, the greatest of British sportsmen, Walton took $400,000 alone. Two years after that the "king of American plungers" again visited England, and he not only lost the $700,000 he had won in England, but about $200,000 more he had picked up on the American turf the season following his English venture. Arthur Maginis got the lion's share of the plunder. In fact he was the bookmaker who "broke" Walton. He got back his $400,000 with tremendous interest.

Who makes the money, then? Is it the race horse owner? August Belmont, Pierre Lorillard and ex-Mayor and ex-Congressman Michael N. Nolan, the Albany Croesus, sold out their stables although they had the best horses in the country, because they could not stand the draft on their purses. Owning and racing horses is adjudged upon all sides to be a costly luxury. Who sweeps in the coin, then? Is it the bookmaker on the track? Ask any one of them and he will tell you that he counts himself fortunate indeed if he comes back to town with a thousand or two. The hundred dollars a day he has to pay to the association for the privilege of hanging up his shingle in the betting ring at the track and the keen rivalry of his brother bookmakers keep him guessing as to how he will meet his obligations.

At last we have it. It must be the city pool-room keeper who catches the nimble dollar as it wings its silvery flight across the equine firmament. Here, again, we are disappointed. The pool-room keeper, if he is a friend and confides in you, will whisper in your ear that his lot is the hardest of all. First of all the landlord insists upon three times the rent he would get from any other tenant, and then here the whisper becomes less audible and more tragic in its intensity—the police must be cared for. Without "protection" the pool-room keeper can do no business. To crown his misfortunes, he will add, the officers of a certain society founded for the purposes of social regeneration, insist upon their "bit," and he must "give up," or seek for pastures new. With a sigh he concludes by saying that he counts himself lucky to have the where-with to pay rent and buy bread for his family.

Whose capacious paw, then, grasps and holds the "long green"? Is it the high-priced jockey? Some of these midget monarchs, I know, make all the way from $10,000 to $25,000 upon their season's mounts. Here, again, we are at sea, with the exception of dashing Fred Taral, none of them has any money to speak of. A brief investigation, however, shows the reason for this. With the exception of Taral they all back their mounts or some other fellow's mounts. "Snapper" Garrison, the "demon rider" of the American turf, is as daring a bettor on a limited scale as the Marquis of Hastings or "Plunger" Walton. Although his earnings yearly approach $25,000, he is generally "plum broke." Lately, however, he has wooed successfully that fickle jade fortune, and is about $30,000 to the good.

Jimmy McLaughlin, too, a few years ago was worth $100,000 or more. In course of time Jimmy became too heavy to take a mount and turned horse owner. Then began his troubles. He backed his horses and luck went back on him. Recently, however, he made a few hold coups and has some odd thousands of dollars that he can lay his hands on.

Fred Taral has, however, a beautiful mansion at One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street and Lenox avenue, for which he paid $27,000 in cash. He spent $10,000 in furnishing and fitting it up, going so far even as to construct a handsome Turkish bath.

He can afford to be humorous over his theories as where all the money goes. "I think the public gets it," said he when broached on the subject, "for I cannot see where anyone else does." First the association has to lease its grounds from one citizen, the pool room keeper in town leases his rooms from another, and the public at large come down here and charge upon the pool boxes. But, seriously, I think it is an almost even distribution. The money is spent, and everybody, including the public, gets a part of it.

Further inquiry in other quarters failed to throw any light upon the enigma, and the question, "where does the money go?" still remains unanswered.

The Kentucky Derby of 1893.

LOUISVILLE, May 10.—Thirty thousand people saw the Kentucky Derby of 1893 won by Lookout, the fleet son of Troubadour and Christina, by King Alfonso, at Churchill Downs this afternoon. A finer day never smiled upon Derby day, which to Kentucky is the greatest festival on the calendar. The attendance was one of the largest in the history of the Jockey Club, and almost rivaled the crowd in attendance at the famous Ten Broeck-Molly McCarthy race of years ago.

After the breakaway and some delay at the post, Pettingill dropped the flag with Lookout in the lead, Linger second, Buck McCann third, Plutus fourth, Boundless fifth and Mirage last.

Lookout at once went into the lead by three lengths and maintained his advantage clear to the end under a pull, winning as he pleased with lots to spare.

Plutus, Buck McCann and Mirage ran in a bunch nearly all the way, but Plutus left them in the stretch and got second place in a whipping finish, one length in front of Boundless, who was nearly two lengths in front of Buck McCann. Linger was beaten at the end of the first mile, coming in five lengths behind Mirage.

The grand-stand and club-house were bouquets of crinoline and big hats, for the helles of Kentucky were there, and the Republican brethren from the League Convention were out in force.

Six fine-looking three-year-olds faced Starter Pettingill. They were: Lookout and Boundless of Cushing & Orth's Stable, Scoggan Brothers (fleet Buck McCann, Elmer Raley's Linger, Plutus of the Bashford Manor Stable and James E. Pepper's Mirage.

The betting ring was jammed and thirty-five bookmakers laid odds. Cushing & Orth entries, Lookout (Kunze) and Boundless (R. Williams), were favorites at 7 to 10; Buck McCann (Thorpe), second choice at 3 to 1; Plutus (A. Clayton), third choice at 4 to 1; Mirage, with the great Isaac Murphy up, fourth at 12 to 1, and Linger (Flynn), a rauc outsider, at 40 to 1.

The Pierce Bros. Sale.

One of the greatest sales of trotters, broodmares, colts and fillies held in California since the beginning of the year will take place one week from next Thursday at Killip & Co.'s salesyard. A synopsis of the breeding of a few of the animals to be sold are given; it will be noticed that they are by sires as Rupee, 2:11; Simmocolon, 2:13; Guy Wilkes, 2:15; Director, 2:17; Mount Vernon, 2:18; Nutwood, 2:18; Sidney, 2:19; Bay Rose, 2:20; Steinyard, 2:25; Whips, 2:27; Soudan, 2:27; Dexter Prince; Whippleton; Hawthorne; Mambino Wilkes; and Memo, out of dams that are royally bred. The Pierce Bros. employed a first-class trainer this year for the first time in the history of their farm and his time is taken up so completely with the young trotters by Bay Rose, 2:20, he cannot find an opportunity to develop the representatives of any other. A large number of the Pierce Bros.' latest purchases are offered at this annual sale. Buyers at all of the previous sales from this farm have realized more than 50 per cent. advance on their purchases, and this sale offers superior advantages for buyers to do likewise. We shall give a more extended notice next week. Send a postal to Killip & Co., for catalogues.

Capital Turf Club.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of the Capital Turf and Driving Club's Spring meeting, which will commence June 6th. Six thousand dollars in stakes and purses will be given, and entries for the trotting and pacing events will close Thursday, May 25th.

The success of the last meeting of this association in Sacramento has not been forgotten, and from the way in which the officers and members are now working, the meeting promises to be one of the best ever held. Owners of trotters and pacers can take them direct from the Breeders' Meeting to Agricultural Park, Sacramento. The races will be well-managed, the course will be perfect; the climate, as everyone knows, cannot be surpassed, and in regard to the accommodations, there is not a horseman in the State who does not know they are first-class.

COL. NORTH's horse, High Commissioner, is very ill at his quarters at Sheepshead Bay track, and none of the string are in the best of health, as the weather does not agree with them.

Different Ideas of Horses.

Much is said at the present time of the desirable type of horse to breed. Inasmuch as there are various uses for the horse in the world's work, it is not necessary that one should give very anxious thought to the question of type. Various people have their ideas of the horse which they desire. The man who confines himself exclusively to breeding and handling a given type narrows very much the circle of his buyers. This is no disadvantage in the end if one contemplates an extensive special business of breeding, growing and selling direct to the users of his horses. The average breeder, however, finds himself accosted continually by professional buyers who have their calls from their trade, as a rule, for a variety of the equine tribe. With a lot of irregular stock of common breeding and low-grade quality there is difficulty often in selling such stock in a lump to a single buyer, unless there is one or two pairs of unusually desirable horses in the lot; in this case a buyer may often be induced to pay considerably more for the indifferent stock in order to buy those of better grade. This being the case, the average farmer makes it a point to sell out only the culls from his stock in trade at first, reserving for the last the very best of his annual crop. Of course this is not an unvarying rule. The average buyer is more shrewd in plying his trade, and usually meets the ordinary seller more than half way in the arts of driving a good bargain. It is often said that the horse is the only animal which the farmer sells on which he can place his own price. This, however, is only true to a limited extent. Where one has an unusually desirable animal it is possible at times to force even the shrewdest buyer to pay all that it is worth; inasmuch as a buyer usually desires a few choice "tops" to give character and attraction to his lot of stock when he gets into market. It is accordingly a truth that there is no product of the farm in which there is so wide a range of prices that the ordinary shipper will ask for his stock when he arrives at a general city market. It is very unfortunate for the growers of really choice animals when they are located at a great distance from a city of 100,000 population or more that they have not an established acquaintance with the managers of city markets, so that they may feel safe in consigning their stock to the sale stables to be sold on commission in the way that the fat stock from the farm is often sold in the general stock market. The managers of city horse sale stables are often misjudged by the producers of such stock, and are too often blamed for making poor sales of stock consigned to them largely from a lack of acquaintance on the part of the salesman with the character and reputation of the breeder and consignor of the stock.

For instance, a very attractive team, bred and trained thoroughly and carefully on a farm, in the course of which the owner knowing the desirable qualities which make a driver valuable in the city, and hence is scrupulously careful to prepare and turn him out, as it were, a finished product, is consigned by the breeder to the city sale stable with the terse statement that "this team is sound and all right in every respect." Although these attractive words are down plainly in "black and white," the words have not half their deserved weight as a rule, from the fact that the high character and the financial standing of the man who furnishes such a written statement is not known. Hence this highest type of driving horse frequently sells at a price far too low. It is this lack of understanding between the producers and the final users of the stock that makes the production of high-class animals really discouraging. The average remote breeder too often concludes that the only safe thing to do is to let the colts grow as to his calves and pigs, and sell them "on the run" when two or three years of age for what they will bring. In this case his responsibility for the stock ceases at once, as it is sold altogether without any statement other than the ordinary one: "Take the animal as you see it." This sort of selling applied to the different grades of stock at times works great sacrifice to the seller, inasmuch as a buyer without character is inclined to be suspicious that the animal is really defective in more than one respect, and if he happens to know that the seller is a man of limited means he feels that he has him largely in his own power. This is often too true, and there is some ground for the feeling often expressed by farmers in characterizing their sales that "the horse was stolen from me."

Much alarm is often felt by a breeder in looking over his broodmares and discovering that he has perhaps a half dozen or more types of the horse. He has perhaps been reading an article on "The Desirable Horse" by some writer who has but a single idea, and that applied to drivers to be used by a comparatively small class of people. The height of horses is urged as very important, and in the theories of what constitutes a horse, perhaps there is no one thing that is considered and included in the estimate by people generally than this one. Yet almost any buyer in comparing two animals, one of them taller than the other, will probably allow almost any other point of clear superiority in the lower horse to turn the scale in favor of this animal; and, as a rule, most bystanders would approve the judgment of his action.

The composition of the equine to meet the fancy of the various buyers is so complex that it is seldom that one can ever describe just what he wants until he sees the animal. It is also true that a seller is in the same predicament in that probably one-half the superior qualities of his animal do not occur to him as he gives a description of his stock to the sale stables, or to a correspondent who writes for full and complete description. The man who feels discouraged over the different types in his broodmares has the consolation, if he will reflect, that the animal which he thinks least of will prove to be the favorite of some buyer who may chance to come along. This is often illustrated where the ordinary buyer is offered his choice of two or more animals at the same price, in which case the most undesirable one in the estimation of the seller is selected. A notable case of this kind illustrates our point clearly: An importer some years ago printed a catalogue of his horses, including the price of each. About the time his printed document was ready for distribution a skilled buyer came along, and not being shown the printed list, was, at a venture, given his choice in this way, and actually picked upon the one that was priced in the printed list lowest. Of course the importer at once burned up all of this printed matter and prepared a new list without prices attached.

The conclusion in this case in the mind of the reader would be that the buyer was the foolish one in the transaction. This being a case, however, of selecting a breeding horse, is one which has a sequel to this incident. Seven years later the importer and a witness of the transaction found, on investigation, that the buyer in question had really selected the best horse for breeding purposes in the whole list which passed in review at this time.

The unfortunate feature of all live-stock breeding is that the great majority of men who know most about horses and are able to apply this knowledge to their own benefit are almost utterly unable to impart any advice to others, even in ordinary conversation, that will be of ultimate service to the recipient. Books have been written, but too often the best of them have failed in extensive circulation from the fact that the author and publisher had failed in business management to extend a good work to its greatest good effect.

A definition of the desirable all-round equine is never complete. Our language has not yet terms to describe several important features of the animal when considered for certain uses. The impulsive man will say that only a tall horse will suit him, and when he is making this suggestion he has in mind the deep mud or the drifting snow or the fording of swollen streams, in some of which experience he has noted good or had results attending, in his estimation, the matter of height in his animals. These points, of course, for the average man, apply largely to exceptional cases. Probably in three-fourths of the area of the civilized world a difference of one hand in the height of a driver or riding horse would, on the whole, be in favor of the lower animal, where it possessed superior substance, greater weight or better disposition. The occasions on which a horse will be balked on a load are a hundred times more numerous than those where its height would cut any figure. The animal with shorter, stronger limbs, more compact form and greater maturity will do more with a load, as a rule, than a slender animal with longer limbs.

There is advantage in the two prominent types which have been mentioned in that each, by crossing, may lend strength to the other in breeding. Immediate results often follow in which the progeny of one undesirable parent is even more desirable in conformation than either them. Encouragement hence follows where the mating of such a pair can be continued up for several years. However, the old law of variation is almost sure to disappoint one who expects the progeny of several years' mating of the same animals to be entirely uniform. The compensation for this is found in the aggregate of average results. In cases where it is out of the question for a breeder to patronize various sires, the meetings which do not result favorably in one season are liable under nature's laws, as modified by our lack of skill in applying them, to give much more favorable results in a succeeding year. The theory may be advanced at this juncture that where matings one season are unfavorable that at least the next year should pass over without breeding. In such cases there is time for an invigoration of the system of the female which may result very favorably where only biennial breeding is the rule.

Probably one of the mistakes of the past decade has been that of crowding, as it were, the regular breeders. The best broodmare should rest every third year, and it is a serious question whether or not biennial breeding is not sufficiently frequent in all cases. This system would, of course, do away with the profit of the average breeding farm where broodmares are kept only for breeding purposes. With more thoughtful and conscientious devotion to the breeding business, it may be that the wide distribution of broodmares amongst the people would be the real salvation of the business. The traits most desirable in work horses can certainly be best inculcated by working broodmares carefully and regularly. Whoever would succeed best in these times with assurance of constant and continued progress would do well to take lessons from the experience of the past in this respect. In the matter of endeavoring to follow a type, the ordinary breeder who gives but casual thought to the subject need not be discouraged if he finds in his hands only half of the desirable element. Any observer of great excellence in a particularly noted equine will be surprised often when he has taken pains to review carefully the ancestry of such an animal. Of the six immediate in the pedigree, usually not more than two will show very close similarity to the type. In the third and fourth generations back of the twelve progenitors of these grades it is seldom that more than three are of the type pure and simple. Yet these three are liable to represent the type of animal before us as completely as the two mentioned above. This great variation applies of course to the usual miscellaneous breeding among the unskilled, and is to be deplored as showing the lack of systematic thought and attention to the progress which should be made. Occasionally a giant in the breeding business has the prescience to see with his mind's eye the image which he desires and at the same time knows the combination to effect such a result. It is fortunate for those who are disposed to be progressive that there is now much literature which points in the direction of improvement, which, for those who have time to devote to it, enables them to effect the object of their desires. It is unfortunate, however, that many with limited means, and still more limited time for reading, cannot avail themselves of the advantages of the scraps to be found in the great storehouses amid so much rubbish. Yet there is dawn of a much brighter day for all with the records, cyclopedias, digests and other helps, and the breeder's way grows brighter year by year.—Ray Marshall in Wallace's Monthly.

Heaves.

Heaves, or broken wind, is a condition in which there is an obstruction or interference with normal respiration. Inspiration of air being easily accomplished, the trouble is noticed on expiration or the expelling of the air. Where any impediment exists this is partially accomplished by the regular muscles of respiration. Then the abdominal muscles are called into play, and, by forcing the viscera against the diaphragm, assist it. There are three conditions of which "heaves" are a symptom. First, asthma, a nervous disorder, in which the circular muscles of the bronchial tubes contract, thereby causing the labored breathing. This may be hereditary, as seen in narrow-chested, round-barreled horses, but is more often due to over-feeding, driving on a full stomach, or to eating large quantities of musty hay. This, if not hereditary, and of not too long standing, may be relieved by feeding small quantities of hay and keeping the bowels lax. Fowler's solution of arsenic in two-drachm doses, increasing gradually to four drachms, will be the remedy indicated. Secondly, we have chronic bronchitis as another form of heaves. This does not yield readily to treatment. Powdered nux vomica and dried sulphate of iron, two drachms of each in feed twice daily for a week, alternated with iodide of potassium in drachm doses, are the remedies employed. Thirdly, emphysema, a rupturing of one air vesicle into another, is the worst form of heaves. It is incurable, but may be relieved by feeding a nutritious diet in small quantities four times daily and giving four ounces of caron oil in feed twice daily.

Long Distance Trotting.

My attention was called a few days ago to an article in a Western paper devoted to the trotting horse, with the above caption, and written by George T. Floyd, who gives a very interesting account of some long-distance trotting. Mr. Floyd says that the celebrated Tom Thumb in 1829, in England, trotted 100 miles in ten hours and seven minutes in harness, which is a mistake. He trotted the distance on Feb. 2, 1829, in 10 hours and 23 minutes, over five miles of road on Sunbury Common, which was considered and admitted to be an extraordinary feat. But the records show that as long ago as 1785 a match was made to trot 30 miles in 2½ hours, which was done, leaving four minutes to spare.

Tom Thumb trotted in February, and on the 25th of April, Rattler, another American trotter, the property of the same party, beat the celebrated Welch mare Miss Turner, over 10 miles of road between Cambridge and Goodmanchester, going the distance in 30 minutes and 40 seconds, which was certainly a fact unprecedented in the annals of horseflesh in any country.

On the 4th of July, 1832, Rattler, driven by his owner, Mr. Osbaldeston, beat Mr. Payne's Rochester by a length, five miles on the road, between Whittleford bridge and Royston, in 13 minutes and 58 seconds. On Friday in the July meeting, Rattler, ridden by his owner, beat Mr. Lawton's Driver (a pony which had recently trotted 17 miles within the hour), trotting 34 miles in two hours 18 minutes and 56 seconds.

Now, taking everything into consideration at that time (60 years ago), and the season of the year, we must confess, when the state of the roads is considered, they were great performances. So great, in fact, we think the horses of our present type would be greatly troubled to do it, but in those days men were men and horses were horses.

If, however, the feat of Tom Thumb was considered unprecedented, we have been told of a time-match which puts his performance in the shade; that of a mare, the property of Mr. Dixon of Knightsbridge, which bore the appropriate appellation of Nonpareil, and which went over precisely the same ground and completed the hundred miles in nine hours, 56 minutes and 57 seconds. A match cart had been provided for the occasion, and at twenty minutes to six o'clock on Wednesday morning, the 27th of April, the mare started, driven by Mr. W. Stacey, a farmer residing in the vicinity of Kingston, under whose care she had been in training since November, at which time the match was made.

She finished her first twenty miles with apparent gaiety in two minutes less than two hours, and was then taken out and given some gruel. In three and a half minutes she was again on the move, and rather increased her speed for the next twenty miles to make up for her halt, but was still within the four hours; and thus she continued "jogging on" at the same pace until she had completed 100 miles (having been taken out at the completion of every twenty miles, and cordial halls washed down with gruel administered at each stop), and finally won with three minutes and three seconds to spare.

The mare showed no symptoms of fatigue, and on entering her stall began to eat her hay as if she had only come in after her usual drive. After resting an hour she was gently walked to her training stable, a distance of seven miles, without manifesting the least fatigue, and always continued well for years after. This, you will say, Mr. Editor, was a great performance hitherto unequalled, and the mare was "English from top to toe." Her sire was Mr. William Flanders' Fire-away, of Littleport, Isle of Ely. When we take into account the fact that there were no trotting tracks in England in those days, and the great performance was done on a piece of road five miles long, we must confess it knocks in the shade all subsequent long-distance races. Have we one in America to-day that can do the same? There was no doubt entertained at that time but she could have performed her great task in much less time. And so confident was her trainer of her powers that he offered to back her to trot the distance in two and one-half hours.

Mr. Floyd says Conqueror was by imported Bellfounder. Conqueror was by Latourret's Bellfounder, he by imported Bellfounder. His dam was also by imported Bellfounder, and he trotted his 100-mile race on the Centreville Course, Long Island. When the horse stopped down below the draggate many thought he was done and lost the race. But McMann, McDonald and Spicer had the track measured and found it some feet over a mile, which they deducted from the whole and finished way down the stretch. If there ever was a deed that came under the head of cruelty to animals 'twas this case (but we had no law to that effect in those days), because that horse (Conqueror) was most cruelly treated. After a little over half the distance had been completed the horse refused all nourishment, and it was quite evident if he completed his dreary task his life must be sacrificed, and so it was. His managers lost the animal by their own neglect. They had no cordial balls or gruel to horn down his throat, which should have been given at the end of every twenty miles, especially when the horse commenced to suffer.

None of the other great performers, Trustee, Lady Fulton, Capt. McGown, etc., were treated in like manner, and they all came out right and did well afterward. But Conqueror was of a different temperament. He was a horse no man could ever make walk in harness, nor ever drive less than four minutes to the mile. He was one of my first patients in Orange County. I had to treat him in his four-year-old form for an acute case of strangles. Here let me say I tried hard on the day of the race to get his managers to give him stimulants, but anything a horse got in those days, according to tradition, was poison. In the whole 100 miles the noble animal did not micturate once.—John Minchin, V. S., in American Horse Breeder.

CHARLES MARVIN will have Belleflower, 2:16½, Ah There, 2:18½, Answer, 2:20, Free, 2:25, Belton, 2:25½, and Antella, 2:26½, in his stable this year. He has only been at Miller & Sibley's a little while, nevertheless he has made a great showing. This year it will keep the best of our trainers and drivers hustling to get better trotters or more of them than he.

The Patriarchs of Our Turf.

"Claims of long descent."—TENNYSON.

The extremely interesting and instructive letter of Mr. Huntington on the Arah horse which appeared in one of the late numbers of The Rider and Driver makes a happy opening for some on account of the earliest importations of the Anglo-Arah and other crosses of the English stock with horses of this and other Eastern origin, if one may so term the Barh and the Turk. Mr. Huntington pleads the cause of the Arah Barh with such warmth and conviction that no doubt he will be glad to have some testimony as to the "reputation of the family" in the time of our fathers.

Mr. Huntington draws the distinction between the Arab and the Barh; the horse from the banks of the Euphrates and his African descendant. We are told in Chronicles that Solomon "had horses brought out of Egypt," and that he paid for them one hundred and fifty shekels each; the present equivalent of which, in the fluctuating state of the silver market, it is idle to compute.

There is a delightful Eastern romance, "Auhar," which recites the lovable qualities of this the companion of the children of the desert. It is rare, and to be found only in the libraries of the curious in chivalric literature. But the Arah horses with which Ben Hur won his triumphs in the Roman amphitheater are fresh to all our memories.

The hell rings and we must get to the starting post, or rather to the paddock, which is the theme of this paper.

The most valuable of the allusions to the subject in hand which appear in the Colonial newspapers are those which advertise stallions "to cover" valuable because they invariably give something of the pedigree, as well as of the performances of the horse.

The first is found in Gaines' New York Mercury of April 12, 1762.

"To cover the season at Perth Amboy at ten pounds proe: (i. e., proclamation money) each mare for the season, the brown horse Falstaff. He was got by Old Cade, out of a well-bred mare, and is the stoutest horse of Cade's get. Falstaff's pedigree is found in a notice to cover of his son Americus. It reads: Falstaff, the sire of Americus, was got by Old Cade, esteemed the best of the sons of the Godolphin Arabian, his dam by the Duke of Bolton's Fearnot, his grandam by Basto, his great-grandam by the Duke of Newcastle's Turk; his great-great-grandam by the Byerley Turk; his great-great-great-grandam by the Tatfield Barb; his great-great-great-great-grandam by Place's White Arabian, out of a Barton Barb mare."

Now for the pedigree of the dam of Americus. It appears in Rivington's Royal Gazette in April, 1774:

"Americus, a beautiful brown, full-blooded horse, fifteen hands and a half high, will cover the season at Elizabethtown in New Jersey, at five dollars a mare, and half a dollar the groom. Enquire for Mr. Thomas Woodruff, at Dr. Barnet's. Americus was got by Falstaff, out of a beautiful chestnut mare got by Wilson's Arabian; her dam by Slip, own brother to the dam of Suap; her grandam by Old Partner; her great-grandam by Grey Hound; her great-great-grandam by Corwen's Bay Barb; her great-great-great-grandam by Lord Darcy's chestnut Arabian; her great-great-great-great-grandam by White Shirt, out of the famous old Mares mare (here follows the pedigree of Falstaff given above). Americus was bred by the Earl of Sterling at Baskinridge in New Jersey."

Baskinridge was the seat of James Alexander, later the famous general, Lord Sterling, of the Continental Army.

Mention has been made of the challenge of Waters and the answer of that typical jockey, John Leary, who took defeat and success with equal humor, and who believed, as Halifax said of the statesman, that "his first business was to stick to the saddle." The horse on which he relied with such confidence was famous for many a year. Leary advertised him "to cover" in 1764.

"To cover, at John Hoogland's at Flushing, on Long Island, the 20th April instant, at five pounds a mare for the season, and half a dollar to the servant. The groom to be paid at the stable door, or when the mare is taken away; the fine bay horse called Old England, bred and purchased by John Holme, Esquire, of Carlisle, in Cumberland. He is a horse of size, strength and beauty, and was got by Young Sterling, his dam by Regulus, his grandam by Roundhead, a son of Flying Childers (the fleetest horse that ever started), his grandam by Brimmer, out of Trumpet's dam, which was got by Place's White Turk; his dam by Dods-worth and the Earl of Ayrton Barb mare. Young Sterling was got by Old Sterling, out of Matchem's dam."

JOHN HOLME.

John Holme was evidently a famous breeder in the old country. Leary follows up his certificate:

"It may not be improper to illustrate the pedigree of this horse with some observations which are little known in this country. His sire and grandam were remarkable for getting more beautiful stock than any other horses. The character of Old Sterling as a stallion will never be forgotten as long as the capital performances of his sons, Teaser, Torrison and Martin Dale's Sterling, can be remembered. Regulus (the sire of Old England's dam) was got by the Godolphin Arabian, his dam by the celebrated Bald Galloway, son of St. Victor's Barb; in the course of one year he won a £50 prize, and eight King's Plates of an 100 guineas each, for getting more beautiful stock than any other horse that started against him. Such a series of victories were never acquired by any racer (his own son, Careless, excepted, who in the same space also won eight Royal Plates). He left the turf invincible, and in a single season gained 1,000 pounds in the capacity of a stallion. It is needless to enlarge upon the merits of Old England's ancestors, as every one that is acquainted with pedigree pronounces the best and most valuable upon the remembrance of the Godolphin Arabian, Old Partner, Matchless Brimmer, Dods-worth and Matchem. Good grass for mares, and the greatest care taken of them by the owner of Old England, and the Publick's most obedient servant.

JOHN LEARY, a Lover of the Turf.

"N. B.—Good grass for mares at three shillings."

English horses were brought over in rapid succession at this time. Here is another advertisement, also of 1764, and the place this time is that of Cornelius Vanderburg's, which has already been located at the Church Farm, where the Astor House now stands, then on the outskirts of New York town. (Valentine says that this tavern was called the Drovers' Inn, but on what authority we know not.)

"To cover at Cornelius Vanderburg's, at five pounds for the season, the bay horse called Childers, five or six years old. He was got by Ruth's Crazy, a well-bred son of the Flying Childers, the fleetest horse that ever was known in England; his dam was the mother of the celebrated racer called Top, which was got by Tarrant's Black Barb, out of a Royal mare. Childers' dam was a celebrated mare of Mr. Jennison, master of the King's Buck Hounds, and got by Nevison, a very famous and high-bred stallion in the north of England.

"The above-mentioned horse is lately brought from England and is allowed by judges to be superior in size, strength and figure to all others that have appeared in any part of America, and master of eighteen stooc."

As this stallion was "lately brought from England" in 1764, he could not have been the American Childers, belonging to Lewis Morris, Jr., which won the New York subscription plate at Jamaica in the spring of 1757; that race was for four-year-olds. There was still another native horse; Mr. Lynch's Noble, "esteemed the Childers of the South." A great match was run, for a thousand pounds a side, on the Charleston course, in 1768, and heavy sums were staked, in the high state of feeling against Great Britain but the honors and the money were carried off by Sentinel, "a horse, late the Duke of Ancaster's," in two four-mile heats, which the account reads, "afforded more sport than all the contests ever seen in Carolina."

Out of the abundance of material, it is difficult for one not "to the manner hone," to cull the choicest bits, but as the veteran Mr. Huntington mentions Wildair, "the Arah bred repurchased by England," what is found of him will be recorded, and this rather technical recital he brought to a close. At the risk of sameness, tediousness even, the newspapers will again be allowed to tell their own story. It is a fair presumption that Wildair was imported in 1765, by James de Lancey, Esq., and the "Bowery" named was the site of his stables, training course and paddock.

"To cover, at the Bowery, at six pounds a mare and six shillings the groom, the fine bay horse called Wildair, lately the property of Jennison Shafts, Esq. He was got by Old Cade, son of the Godolphin Arabian, his dam by Steady, son of Childers, out of a daughter of Old Partner. Wildair won a match of one thousand guineas and two great subscriptions at New Market, besides several prizes at other places, was esteemed by all sportsmen the fleetest horse of his time, and is thought to be equal to any horse in England as a stallion. It is expected that the money will be sent with the mare, and that no person will be offended if she is sent hack uncovered unless this condition is complied with; which is particularly to save trouble. Good grass for mares at four shillings per week."

Thomas Hodgson seems to have had charge of the de Lancey paddock. The Childers mentioned in the pedigree was the Devonshire Flying Childers. Some additions to this statement are gleaned from an advertisement of a two-year-old colt sold at the Merchants' Coffee House in 1768:

"Gotten by Wildair, out of a daughter of the old Dawson horse, so well known in these parts."

The parentage of Wildair's dam and grandam have been given.

"His great-grandam was got by Greyhound, his great-great-grand-dam was got by Matchless, his great-great-great-grandam by Croft's Councillor, his great-great-great-great-grandam by Place's White Turk, of a Layton Barb mare."

Angelica, the first of Wildair's get that started, won the Lady's purse for three-year-olds at the Centre Course, Philadelphia, in 1769, beating five horses, and the same day walked over the course for a subscription of twenty-five guineas each; nothing appearing to run against her. The next year, 1770, she took the purse for four-year-olds on the same track.

Wildair was sold and embarked for England in 1773, and in the notice to cover of Mr. James de Lancey's not less famous horse Latb, a winner of numberless courses in England and America, it is said of Wildair that "his blood was in so great repute, though nineteen years old, a large price was paid for him."

Some attention will be paid in our next to the attempts to improve road horses.—John A. Stevens, in Rider and Driver.

The True Type of the Trotter.

"Is the war interminable? Shall we never have peace?" asks Mark Field in the Horseman. We say that there will be no cessation in the arguments as to how to breed the trotter. Arguments will not convince breeders against their own pet theories. Nothing but time will prove the survival of the fittest, and fifty years will probably be required to settle this vexed question. Principles of trotting horse breeding are now in a chaotic state. They are in about the same condition that those of the runner were two hundred years ago. The English commenced to breed racers and preserve their pedigrees in the seventeenth century, but it was as late as 1770 before the majority of breeders would acknowledge that the desert horse was superior to theirs in size and in every other quality that is desirable in a horse. All their native stallions, that is, those that trace in the male line to the native breeds, dropped out one by one under the law of the survival, and to-day there is not a thoroughbred in the whole world that does not trace in the male line to either the Godolphin, the Darley or the Byerley Turk.

In the last sixty years there have been a good many fast trotting stallions in this country that did not trace in the male line to the Arab, but such horses have all disappeared, and the trotters that are now foremost in the race and in the stud are descended in the male line from the Arah pony. This looks like the working out of the same law of the survival of the fittest. At the commencement of this century there were many stallions from Eclipse, but he has survived only through three of his sons, namely Pot-8-os, King Fugus and Joe Andrews. Pot-8-os left a good many stallions but he was perpetuated through Matchem. Fifty years after Pot-8-os' time his family had dwindled down to Stockwell and Touchstone, and fifty years from to-day we are convinced that both Touchstone and Stockwell will be represented by only two male descendants each. The rest will have disappeared under the hard struggle for supremacy.

Matchem, the descendant of the Godolphin Arabian, has left only one trace through Conductor, Trumpator, Sorcerer, Comus, Humphrey Clinker and Melbourne. Hurd, from Byerley Turk, has left two prominent families, one through Woodpecker and the other through Highflyer. King Fugus has one coming down through the Blacklock family and Joe Andrews, Tramp, Lottery, Sheet Anchor, Weatherhit and Beadsman. It has not been much more than fifty years since Mambrino died, yet his male descendants have all passed away, leaving only his two grandsons, Hambletonian and Mambrino Chief, and in a short time all the male line from Mambrino Chief have gone by the board with two exceptions, namely, Woodford Mambrino and Mambrino Patchen. Hambletonian had many sons in the stud, and it will take some time to weed them out, but it looks now to us as though he will be perpetuated through Electioneer and George Wilkes. So far, Hambletonian, as a trotting progenitor, takes the place of Eclipse as among runners, and Woodford Mambrino as the Blacklock family, and the Clays as the Matchem line.

But the next fifty years may develop a new family. The Orloffs are a much older breed of trotters than ours, and are more regular in their breeding. There is not so much variability in size, shape and color as there is in our trotters, and this fact shows that the Orloffs are more of a true type or distinct breed. We understand that Senator Stanford intends to import some of these horses, and we shall look for happy results by the crossing with our trotters. The French also have some good trotters that are purebred Arah and thoroughbred cross, and some of them have trotted long distances at a rate better than 2:40 to the whole, which is better than Hambletonian or Mambrino Chief ever did. These horses will certainly be imported by some wideawake breeder, so that in fifty years hence there may be quite a change in the affairs of the trotter.—St. George.

Prepotency.

Prepotency is a term in very common use among breeders. The word is defined by Mr. Webster to mean in relation to biological matters: "The capacity on the part of one of the parents, as compared with the other, to transmit more than his or her share of characteristics to their offspring."

In so far as the use of this term by breeders is concerned, a better definition might possibly be the following: "The ability of a parent to transmit, with uniformity, an unusual amount of its individual characteristics to its progeny."

Prepotency may be manifested in different ways by different animals. For example: Alexander's Abdallah, measured alone by the number of his performers in the 2:30 list, could lay no claim to any particular degree of prepotency, but when his blood is followed to the second and succeeding generations, the grandeur of his prepotent powers is manifested. Madam Dudley displayed none of the leavening qualities of her blood in the first generation, but in the produce of the second, third and fourth removes from her may be found ample demonstration of her intrinsic worth. Green Mountain Maid and Beautiful Bells have demonstrated their prepotency, particularly in the production of 2:30 performers, while Blandina shines brightest in her numerous producing sons. Primrose and Miss Russell show forth their prepotent characteristics in their individual produce and in the 2:30 progeny of both sons and daughters, showing their powers to be comprehensive and far reaching. Mambrino Patchen, American Clay, American Star and Pilot Jr. were prepotent only to a moderate degree, if measured by the performances on the trotting tracks of their immediate progeny, or if gauged by the demonstrations of prepotency made by male descendants, but in the female lines descending from these sires is demonstrated a prepotency that has made for each of the above sires a name and a fame that grows brighter as the years go by.

As a rule a trotting sire or dam which produces one or more performers in 2:15 may be prepotent, but if the 2:15 performers "drop out" in succeeding generations as well, the question of prepotency is probably established. This test applied to broodmares, gives but meager returns, the showing being, so far as a somewhat thorough investigation of the records indicate, as follows—the intention being to give the names of all mares which are both the dam and grandam of a 2:15 performer: Madam Headley, by Edwin Forrest (Stanhope's), is the dam of Expert Prince, pacer, 2:13½ and the grandam of Lockheart, 2:13; Coral, by Clark Chief, produced Coralloid, 2:13½, and her daughter, Colon, produced Simmicolon, 2:13½; Bashaw Belle, by Green's Bashaw, is the dam of Strong Boy, 4, pacer 2:12, and the grandam of Manager, 4, pacer, 2:09½; an unknown mare produced the pacer Lucy, 2:14, in turn the dam of the pacer Chris Smith, 2:14½; Fanny Fern, by Jack Hawkins, produced Balkan, 2:15, and her daughter, Molly Drew, 2:27, produced the pacer Alannah, 2:11½; Barcana, by Bayard, produced Bayard Wilkes, pacer, 2:15, and the dam of Diablo, 3, pacer, 2:14½.

Among sires which show remarkable prepotency in the production of 2:15 performers generation after generation Alexander Abdallah and George Wilkes stand prominent. An example of the first mentioned being: Alexander's Abdallah sired Goldsmith Maid, 2:14, and Belmont; Belmont sired Fred Arthur, pacer, 2:24; and Nutwood; Nutwood sired Manager, 2, pacer, 2:11½ and Russia; Russia sired Czar, 2:12½ making four unbroken generations of 2:15 performers through the male line to the credit of that oft-quoted sire, which, we believe, is an honor no horse enjoys, Care of Horses' Legs.

When bandages are on the leg the cords and muscles are confined, the circulation obstructed, the pores of the skin clogged, the air and light excluded, and the effect is an unnatural and unhealthy condition. If a horse's leg is swollen the swelling will generally go down by driving the animal. Now, nothing could be worse than applying a bandage when he comes in. Although the exercise may reduce the swelling, the cause is not removed. If the bandage keeps the swelling in one place to the proper size for a time, the swelling will go to some other part, and when the bandage is removed the inflammation will appear in a more aggravated form.

The force of an ignited blast of powder can be confined as easily as a fevered leg can be prevented from swelling, says a communication to an Eastern paper. If the swelling is confined or forced back in one place it will appear in another. If there is no fever in the leg, perhaps a bandage wound from the bottom of the ankle up, if not applied too tightly and left on a couple of hours, might not be injurious.

Hand-rubbing of the ankles, and a good deal of it, will keep them compact and strong, and is preferable to any other treatment. We see a great many wind-puffed and weak-ankled trotters from too much bandaging.

Blankets for horses are also unnatural and unhealthy, although they have to be used to a certain extent in this cold climate. Too warm and ill-ventilated stables and too many and too heavy blankets have been forerunners of colds and much pneumonia, and have doubtless caused the death of many valuable trotters.

When scratches appear put the horse as near as possible in the condition he would be running out to grass (as scratches generally soon disappear after a horse is turned to pasture), by taking off the heavy grain rations, which have a tendency to inflame the system, giving simple food of a laxative nature. Give plenty of moderate exercise to prevent the leg from swelling. Keep the parts clean and soft and from cracking by applying some simple ointment. Don't try to heal by outward applications while the horse is standing day after day with his legs swollen. If an animal has a cut or wound, put nothing on at first, only carefully covering it to exclude the air and dust, and wait and see if it will heal by first intention, as it generally will with a healthy animal, not leaving much of a scar. Strong applications produce irritation and inflammation and then suppuration, and the result is an unsightly callous and scar. If the wound should become inflamed, counteract it by cold applications. Be patient and let Nature effect the cure. We all acknowledge that Nature is the great restorer, and all we can do is to keep the conditions favorable. We cannot be reminded too often, in the treatment of man or beast, to keep as near to Nature as possible, and to discard all advice that is not supported by reason.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses of cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address, that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by two dollars and addressed to Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., 1117 Golden Gate Ave., San Francisco.

J. M. G. La Vina—I have a two-year-old July 10th; he is by Clovis, very large, five-moving, young horse, but seems weak in his knees. Please let me know through your paper what I can do to strengthen them, if anything, and greatly oblige. Answer.—Do you keep him in stable or out to pasture? Have you worked him any, and do you work him now? Does he shake in the knees when standing, or are they merely a little "knee sprung"? In either case a run to pasture, or even in a large corral is better than standing in the stable. Please answer my questions, and I shall give treatment if necessary.

C. K. Oakland—I have a mare that is lame in the hip for the last six months. I got a seaton put in it and gave her a month's rest, but she was still as lame as ever. I then blistered it two or three times, with the same result. She still goes lame starting out, but warms out of it, until she rests again, when she starts off as lame as ever. Answer.—The symptoms are of spavin lameness. Get a veterinary surgeon to fire and blister the spavin, not the hip, and give her six or eight weeks' rest.

Answers to Correspondence.

Answers to this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

J. K. C. Victoria.—If a horse has entered and run in a previous race and taken second money is he still a maiden and eligible to start in the Queen's Plate? Answer.—Yes, he is entitled to enter until he wins a race.

I see in your answers to correspondence an inquiry of Thos Raymond. He is in Walla Walla and has been there all winter. Any mail sent there, care of race track, will find him for the next thirty days. W. J. HARRIS.

J. F. City.—Will you please inform me through the columns of your paper the pedigree of a stallion known as Dixie, once owned by Mr. J. H. Brown, of Salinas, but now owned near Fresno, Cal.? Answer.—We do not know, but trust that some of our subscribers will send us the pedigree.

F. N. S., Prescott.—1. Did Jay-Eye-See pace a public mile last year better than 2:20? 2. Was he trained last year as a pacer? Answer.—Yes. He got a pacing record of 2:06 1/4 at Independence, Ia., August 26, 1892. 2. If he was not trained as a pacer he could never have earned that wonderful record.

W. H. T.—Is A. T. Stewart, by Mambrino Patchen 58, dam by Mambrino Chief 11, registered. Answer.—In the advertisement in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN in 1892 A. T. Stewart has no number, but in the register he has a number, and it is 1588. In our answer to this question some time ago we were in error, and hasten to correct it.

M. W. S., Colusa.—Will you please give the breeding of a horse named Alpha? Did he ever trot in 2:30, and what relation is he to Stamboul? Answer.—There are three Alphas, one by Alcantara, that got a mark of 2:23 1/4, one by Pilot Champion, 2:25 1/4, and one by Whalebone Knox, 2:29 1/4. None of these are very closely related to Stamboul.

L. L., Oakville.—1. Can you inform me through your paper what record the horse Rustic had and if he is alive? He is by Whipple's Hambletonian 125. 2. Also the mare Lady; what record and how old. She is by George M. Patchen Jr. And who bred her? Answer.—1. Rustic, 2:30; he is living at Olema, Marin county. Payne Shafter is his owner. 2. Can find no mare called Lady by George M. Patchen Jr. 31 with a record.

I saw your inquiry in regard to Commodore Mambrino in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN of the issue of March 25th. You can obtain the information you desire from Mr. Owen, of Paris, Ky. The dam of this horse was farmed to Mr. S. W. Hulcher, of this city in 1872, and Commodore Mambrino was the produce, and was published as bred by Jonathan Owen. Mr. Hulcher may give you some information. His address is Abbott Hotel, Seattle, Wash. C. G. HIGGINS, Seattle, Wash.

J. P. S.—Can you give me any information regarding the breeding and record of Lady Clinton (formerly called Lady Champlin). She trotted at the old Bay View track early in the 60's. He dam is said to have been by Guy Messenger. Answer.—Lady Clinton was owned by a man named Clinton, who built the White House in San Francisco. He sold the mare to Pat Farrell, and he in turn sold her to some one whose name we have forgotten. She showed a wonderful trial previous to the sale. We publish this in the hope that some of our readers may enlighten us on the breeding of this mare.

H. P. A., Woodland, Cal.—I wish you would inform me through the columns of your valuable paper the following questions: 1. The breeding of Kentucky Hunter and whether he has any colts in the list, name them, or whether he is the sire of any dams that got 2:30 performers. Name them. 2. The breeding of Skenandoah. Answer.—Skenandoah 926 was known in California as Kentucky Hunter. He was by Broken Legged Kentucky Hunter, out of Sikes' mare, by Kentucky Hunter. He is the sire of Daisy Burns, 2:29 1/4, and Erwin Davis, sire of two in the list and the dams of Adrian, 2:26 1/4; Bonner, 2:23; Laverly, 2:23; Niles Beatty, 2:25 1/4; Lady Duwson, 2:28; Slander, 2:28 1/4; Lynette, 2:28 1/4, and Wormwood, 2:25.

A Track Impervious to Moisture.

Great difficulty is experienced in getting a good training track at Flemington during the winter months, writes "Terlinga," in the Australian Referee, and a large amount of interest therefore attached to a trial on Monday of a piece of asphaltum tan track which was laid down in the inside of the course last July, and which it is claimed is peculiarly adapted to stand wear and tear during rainy weather. The material used in the formation of the track is Trinidad asphaltum—tan, tar and other substances, the whole of which goes to form a track as springy as turf, and which, it is said, is impervious to moisture. A coating of tan is laid on top of this, and the trainers who have tried the stretch, about 100 yards of which has been laid down, pronounce it a great success. Mr. H. Byron Moore, secretary of the club, is the originator of the asphaltum-tan track, and his invention appears a valuable one. Several horses were on Monday last galloped over the track, when its elasticity was very apparent, the indentations made by the horses' hoofs almost at once disappearing like an impression in india rubber.

Afterwards the track was well moistened by means of water carts, so as to gain a good idea of how it would act in wet weather, and the result appeared to be entirely satisfactory. As the material used is waterproof, no difficulty is anticipated in the way of drainage; and this at Flemington is a very important matter, the extreme difficulty experienced in adequately draining the various circuits having hitherto been a serious drawback to the making of good winter tracks at headquarters. Mr. Mephan Ferguson, one of the patentees of the material as applied to the formation of training tracks, was present and explained the nature of the composition and its capabilities to the visitors. It is estimated that a track twenty-five feet wide and a mile in length can be laid down to a depth of four inches with asphaltum-tan at a cost of £1,000, and it is contemplated by the V. R. C. Committee to have such a track formed. The particular part of Flemington where the new track will be made has not yet been decided, but a position which lends itself in some way to draining will doubtless be chosen.

Have An Object in View

No one having good broodmares is justified in letting them remain idle this year, simply because undersized and unsound, but in many cases well-bred horses have been found unsalable at prices that pay the cost of their raising, says the Horse World. There is no question but that fewer mares will be bred this year than has been bred in any previous year for some time, and that is exactly why the man possessing mares of real merit should not neglect to breed them, to some sire that has demonstrated his power to sire foals that make good-sized, sound and serviceable road-horses, a fair proportion of which possess the speed and stamina that are necessary to enable them to become first-class race-horses. There are two classes of horses that are and that always will be in active demand as long as the present conditions of life exist. They are good, sound trotters that can race and win, and horses having the size, style, speed and soundness that are called for in the perfect road horse. All conditions are now more favorable for economically producing horses of these classes than they have been for several years. Stallion fees are low, breeders who have been flooding the market with counterfeits are dropping out of the business, and the public is better prepared to discriminate between desirable and undesirable animals than ever before, and at the same time more willing to pay for animals of real merit. If these facts are kept in mind there is no reason for any breeder to feel at all discouraged over the present state of the breeding industry. Have just one object always in view, and let that object be to produce what the market demands, and the breeding of light harness horses will be found to be a more profitable business than at any previous time in its history.

THE election of W. P. Ijams, of Terre Haute, in place of Mr. Beaman, of Denver, to the presidency of the American Trotting Association will no doubt be a popular one, as it is a recognition of the younger and more aggressive blood of the association. Mr. Ijams is the president of the Terre Haute Trotting Association, and the owner of Warren Park, one of the leading stock farms in Indiana. He is a part owner of Axtell and sole owner of Jersey Wilkes, the good son of George Wilkes. The American started in 1887 with seventy members and now has 700.

DAVID H. BLANCHARD, of Boston, announced that his proposed $11,000 stallion race for September is declared off because enough entries have not been received to fill, according to the conditions advertised.

THE pacer has come so the front by force of merit, not by any boom. Prejudice against the pacer, merely because he is a pacer, is a thing of the past.

Nominate the Youngsters.

There are two roads open to the breeder of light-harness horses, and either leads to profit if judiciously followed. A breeder can produce race horses successfully, or he can produce a high type of driving horse to advantage, but in either case he must produce the best or the venture will be a failure.

Owing to the inflated state of the trotting-horse market during the past few years, the business of breeding has not usually been conducted on the thorough business principles necessary to permanent success, says L. C. Underhill. Now, however, with the great change in the market, the breeder must also make a great change in his methods. Stock can no longer be sold on the pedigree and the performance of some relative. Breeders must plan business now from a business standpoint, and if race horses are bred, the first step should be to make liberal nominations to stakes, and then put the youngsters in shape to show buyers speed enough to warrant the expectation of winning a share of the money.

Fast trotters formerly were sold to wealthy gentlemen to be used as a means of amusement. The supply of fast trotters to-day far exceeds the demand of this class of buyers, and breeders must now realize that the trotter has a market value according to the earning capacity. We must follow the example of the thoroughbred breeders and buyers, and regard the trotting race horse just as the running race horse is held. How much can he win? This is business, and sentiment and gush have had their day in trotting affairs. With a young trotter well engaged, and speed enough developed to show a buyer a reasonable certainty of winning out the youngster, breeders will find a ready market for all such at remunerative figures.

The associations all over the country are coming forward and devising stakes that enable breeders to make nominations, and engage youngsters at a nominal cost, covering a length of time sufficient to test the speed of the youngster, and ascertain if farther payment are expedient.

The sooner we bring the business of breeding trotters to this basis of earning capacity the sooner we may hope to see a new era of prosperity, not, as before, founded upon wind, but upon a substantial basis that will insure lasting results.

THERE are nearly 300 of the most beautiful horses in the world in the stables of the Czar Russia, of many of them being pure Tartar-bred. They are luxuriously cared for, and stand with straw to their knees. Their magnificent tails are never cut and reach to their feet, and the long silky hair of their bodies is never clipped.

BUDD DOBLE has bought for Eastern parties the stallion Major, 2:14, by Dou McGregor, owned by Thomas Wilson, of Pleasant Plain, Ill., and the filly Nemoline, by Jersey Wilkes, three-year-old record 2:29, owned by W. P. Ijams, of Terre Haute, Ind. Mr. Dohle declines to give the names of purchasers or prices.

THE following well-known horse trainers are at Terre Haute, and nearly all of them have a pacer or two in their string: Budd and Charley Dohle, Thomas and John Dickerson, Dr. Hollenbach, George Starr, Gee Grimes, Rhody Patterson, Sam Fleming, Hurley Cole, Shirley Lane, Leonard, Judge Darham and others.

STARTER CALDWELL rules the jockeys with a rod of iron. During his short stay at St. Louis he distributed his fines and suspensions quite liberally over owners, jockeys and trainers alike. His $100 per day salary is always more than covered by his fines, and costs the association nothing.

LUCY ASHTON, the dam of Wolf's Crag, winner of this year's Lincolnshire Handicap, foaled the same day her son won, a full brother to him by Barcalaine. The colt was named Lincoln.

PIERCE'S SANTA ROSA STOCK FARM'S ANNUAL SALE OF Trotters and Horses of All Work

WILL TAKE PLACE AT 10 A. M. ON THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1883, AT SALESYARD, Cor. VAN NESS AVENUE AND MARKET STREET

The following is a synopsis of the breeding of a few of the animals to be sold. It can be seen that the best sires are represented. All of the younger individuals to be sold were selected especially to be trained, but the youngsters by Bay Rose, 2:20 1/2 (the premium stallion of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm) are so many that Jas. Dustin, the first trainer ever employed by the Pierce Bros. finds that to develop them will take all of his time and attention, consequently, the following list are to be sold without reserve. They are grandly bred, and individually, first-class. The few older mares offered were purchased to breed to Bay Rose before the large consignments were bought at the Eastern sales, consequently, buyers will have an opportunity of securing individuals at this sale that may never occur again. This list will be increased in our next issue:

Table with columns: Year, Color, Sex, Name, Sire, Dam's Family. Lists various horses and their pedigrees.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

STAR, LANE CO., OREGON, Feb. 8th, 1892.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,

Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Curb of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly swelled; tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or. S. Z. FAYTON.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

THE MAGNIFICENT GRANDSON OF STOCKWELL!

IMP. LOYALIST

Is Located at 715 Twenty-Third Street, Sacramento

LOYALIST was one of the very Greatest Race Horses in Australia, winner, among other races, of the Brunswick Stakes, 1 1/2 miles, on TURF COURSE, in 2:08 1/2, the best time on record until beaten by the renowned Carbine, who ran in 2:08.

There are Only Two Grandsons of Stockwell (the Greatest Sire that Ever Lived) standing in America, and Loyalist is One of Them.

IMP. LOYALIST is a dark bay horse, foaled in November, 1884, bred by Mr. Samuel Gardiner, of Bundoola Park, Melbourne (breeder of Darebin). He stands 15.3 hands on steely legs, and has great joints and the best of feet. Loyalist is a typical Marquis horse, being hard and muscular, standing over a lot of ground, with short, strong back, and with wonderfully muscular quarters. His head and neck are models of symmetry, his shoulders are well-placed, and he is all over "horse," showing a grand constitution—a most excellent point in a sire.

The success of The Marquis' sons as sires in Australia is truly remarkable, Newminster one of them, being admittedly one of the best in the Colonies. Loyalist's sire, The Marquis, won the Doncaster St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas of 1862, and only lost the Derby by a head. He was by the Emperor of Sires, Stockwell, from Cinizelli, by Touchstone who was one of the greatest broodmares in English turf history, producing, as she did, The Marquis, The Peer (sire of Darebin); Towton, sire of a host of winners; Marchioness (winner of The Oaks and dam of the great Fishhook and Rose of Denmark, who have left their mighty impress on the horses of Australia).

LOYALIST'S dam, Loyal Peeress (by The Peer, sire of Darebin), produced, in addition to Loyalist, Loyalstone, who will ever be remembered in Australian turf history as having been beaten only by a nose by Vengeance in the rich Caulfield Cup of 1890, one and a half miles, in the best time on record (on a turf course), in a very large field. Many people always contend that Loyalstone really won it. Vengeance, who received the verdict, was by Newminster, son of The Marquis.

LOYALIST comes of wonderful sire lines, for apart from his truly grand breeding of the sire's side he has on his dam's side of the house breeding unequalled in America, it indeed, in the world. Loyal Peeress produced Loyalist, Loyalstone and Loyal Lady, the latter in turn dam of Submission, a heavy winner last season; his second dam, Loyal Devoir, produced the winner Caracacus; the third dam, Letty West, produced Glorious, most successful Australian sire, and Fitzharding, Danebury and Letty Lyon, splendid race horses; the fourth dam, Bay Letty, gave to the world Libelous and Letty Long; the fifth dam, Miss Letty, winner of the Oaks, produced that renowned sire, Weatherbit, and ten others that were racehorses and producers, among the number Letitia, sixth dam of Palo Alto's great colt Cadmus; Loyalist's sixth dam, the Orville mare, is the third dam of that famous English sire Adventurer, while his 10th dam, Proserpine, was sister to the mighty Eclipse, of "Eclipse first the rest nowhere" fame.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud, 2:19; Annie W., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/2; Mollie C., 2:27 1/2, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 3/4, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 8 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 3/4, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having at in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I must see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible nick and should get that in times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

CALIFORNIA JOCKEY CLUB RACES.

Long Shots Capture a Number of Races—St. Patrick Wins Two Days in Succession—Col. Burns Makes a Big Clean-Up—All the Events Described.

NINTH DAY—FRIDAY, MAY 12.

ASERIES of unpleasant surprises made the talent extremely tired this afternoon, especially where the despised St. Patrick made the great odds-on favorite, Abi P., look like a native of Suckerdom. Volta, a 12 to 1 shot, won the first race easily, the favorite, Connaught, managing to finish third. Clacquer, the second choice, got away badly, and was fourth at the wind-up. Jennie Deane, the Sir Modred-Ecbota filly recently leased of Charles Kerr by "Daggie" Smith, won the second race, for two-year-olds, five furlongs, easily, Button and Vivace making a dead heat of it for second place. Remus, the much-touted, ran well for nearly three-eighths of a mile, and then finished last. Inkerman, a well-played favorite, led soon after passing the half-pole in the third race, and won with ease by two and one-half lengths, with the despised Mero second and Broad Church (for a time equal favorite with Inkerman at 2½ to 1) third. St. Patrick, backed to win a comfortable little fortune by Col. Dan Burns, led from start to finish in the fourth race, one mile, at odds of 6 and 8 to 1, and won very easily from the whipped-out Abi P., who was at 1 to 3 most of the time. Orville Appleby, who has no superior as a trainer on this coast, was confident St. Patrick would win, and was presented by Col. Burns with a ticket on the horse reading: "600 to 100 St. Patrick (straight), 100 to 100 (place)." The closing St. Patrick odds were 3 to 1, so that one can easily imagine that the Judge McKinstry gelding was well backed for this race. "Kid" McCarty is credited with making the pencilers several hundred dollars poorer by St. Patrick's win. Lodi and little Joe Harding had a warm struggle in the last race of the day, the last-named opening a daylight gulf on his field that was truly alarming to form-payers. However, Lodi collared the pony cripple about 150 yards from the wire, and then went on and won by a neck. Annie Moore, the odds-on favorite, finished a sickly seventh.

For quite a time it was 2½ to 1 each in the first race, eleven-sixteenths of a mile, against both Connaught and Clacquer, with Angelo third choice at 4 and 5 to 1. Clacquer, however, went to the post at 3 to 1. There was a great plunge on the black John A. gelding in the Reavey stable, and a tip of fair proportions was propelled through the excited atmosphere on Volta, who was at 12 to 1. After a long delay and several breakaways had been made that did not cause much applause from the male portion of the audience, Angelo got off a neck in front of Volta with Samantha a close third and Connaught fourth. Clacquer was clacquer his disapproval of the send-off in sixth place, and getting worse as the seconds rolled around. Volta was electrifying her backers meantime, by the velocity with which she propelled herself to the front. She led Angelo into the homestretch by a length, and Michael was two lengths from Connaught, who had run rapidly up from fifth place, past Samantha and Miss Adda. Volta was not bothered, and though both Angelo and Connaught made meteoric rushes at the end, the Merced county mare won by half a length from Angelo, who came up on the inside. Connaught, coming like a shot, was third, three parts of a length behind Angelo. The claim of foul against Volta made by Jackson, rider of Angelo, was disallowed, as it was clearly nonsensical. Time, 1:10.

Jennie Deane opened favorite at 9 to 5 in the second race, five-eighths of a mile, and closed at 6 to 5. Remus, Vivace and Polaski were at 5 to 1 each, the others from 8 to 30 to 1, the latter being Button's price. Remus led Jennie Deane a length until about 100 yards from the three-quarter pole, when the favorite took command and Remus fell back as if he had been shot. Jennie Deane won easily by two lengths.

Button and Vivace had a hammer-and-tongs contest from the drawgate, and finished in a dead heat for place. Time, 1:04. Inkerman went to the post favorite in the third race. Broad Church was well thought of at 2½ to 1 and Nellie G. at 3. A sizzling tip was out on Regal for place. The race was at six and a half furlongs. Nellie G. led at the start and passing the half-pole by a head, with Inkerman (fourth away) second, a head from Charmer. Inkerman drew away soon afterward, leading Nellie G. into the homestretch by a solid length, Regal third, close up to Nellie G. Nellie G. fell back badly in the straight and Inkerman had an easy victory, winning by two and a half lengths. Mero came with one of his cranky bursts at the close from sixth place, and beat Broad Church by a trifle over a length for place honors. Charmer was fourth, half a length behind Canny Scott's brother. Time, 1:22.

Fourth on the day's programme was a mile race that close figurers on racing matters said Abi P. couldn't lose unless she fell down, and the mare was considered quite sure-footed. This being the case, money rolled in on Abi, who was at 1 to 3. A fashionably-dressed, medium-sized man with a cigar cocked jauntily out of his determined-looking mouth sauntered across the track and scanned the unbeautiful shape of St. Patrick, who, like the singed cat, is much better than he looks. Orville Appleby, who controls the horse named for Erin's patron saint, was closely examining the gelding's limbs, and when Col. Burns arrived informed that gentleman that he believed St. Patrick would, if played well, separate the innocent hookmaker from a large wad of money. Col. Burns plunged into the sea of speculation, situated northwest of the saddling paddock, and held up his finger to the watchful pencilers as he strolled up and down the shores. Some of shouters of odds hushed as they saw the Colonel approaching, and wiped the odds off into the seething sea of nothingness. Had they not done this a breaker would have struck some of the frail crafts that would have sent some of them on the rocks of the sea of finance. At any rate, Col. Burns backed the son of Judge McKinstry to win a very respectable sum, variously estimated at from $5,000 to $10,000, the odds he received being 6 and 8 to 1 and even money for place. Initiation was at 6 to 1, Folly at 8, Vanity at 20. St. Patrick was quoted at 3 to 1 at the close, Abi P. 2 to 5. To a good start St. Patrick was sent to the front by little Weber at once. He darted across the track, taking the pole from Vanity, and soon opened up a gap of three lengths on Folly, who was running a length in front of Abi P. After passing the half-pole St. Patrick even lengthened the space of daylight. Folly fell back bearing the three-quarter pole, and Abi P. took second place. Whipped nearly the entire length of the homestretch, Abi P. could never catch St. Patrick, who, eased up quite a bit, won, amid the shouts of his friends, by one and a half lengths, Abi P. second, five lengths from Folly, who was third. Vanity was fourth and Initiation last. Time, 1:43½. Orville Appleby was correct in his estimate and happy.

Annie Moore, with Johnny Weber up, was played for all kinds of money at 4 to 5 in the last race, eleven-sixteenths of a mile. Lodi was backed down from 6 to 1 to 2 to 1. Ida Glenn, too, had many friends. A long delay was had at the post through the tantalizing actions of Joe Harding and Mount Carlos. When the flag fell the little cripple, Joe Harding, went to the front like a quarter-horse, leading Lodi two lengths at the half-pole and three lengths in the homestretch, Mount Carlos (seventh away) third. A sixteenth from home, even, it looked as if Harding would win comfortably, but Lodi came up like a flash less than 100 yards from the wire, and collaring the tiring Joe Harding, who was under whip, won by a neck easily, Joe Harding second, one and a half lengths from Mount Carlos, who was but a nose from Ida Glenn (coming fast) at the finish. Time, 1:09½.

TENTH DAY—SATURDAY, MAY 13.

This was another day of surprises, only one favorite getting the verdict. The sky was cloudy and a very hard, raw wind blew during the whole afternoon, chilling every one of the 4,000 persons present that did not secure a liquid substitute for an overcoat. Never in the memory of Frisco's most ancient resident was such an exciting finish seen in a race as the one finally won by St. Patrick. Steadfast, on the outside, was catching the leaders, St. Patrick and Broad Church, at every stride (after being sent away to a frightful start), when the trio went under the wire less than two inches apart in a game, driving finish. To the writer it looked as if St. Patrick, in the middle, had won by the scantest of margins. Many clamored for a dead heat between the three. After a few moments' deliberation, however, the judges declared that St. Patrick and Broad Church had run a dead heat and that Steadfast was third. From the run Steadfast made from a position close to the rear (to a very bad start) we very much incline to the belief that he would have won easily had the flag fallen to a creditable send-off. Little Kinnie, Steadfast's clever young pilot, felt so badly over not winning that tears bedimmed his baby eyes. He is a conscientious, energetic little boy, and will make a fine rider. In the run-off St. Patrick, going to the front without delay, won easily by three lengths in 1:31 (official time), but in 1:42, according to a number of horsemen. They also claim the first heat, put down at 1:43, was really run in 1:43 ½.

Orville Appleby's charges, Little Esperanza and St. Patrick both by Judge McKinstry, did wonderful work, and the trainer should be proud.

The first race, half a mile, saw the star sprinters of the Coast come together, with the small exception of April Fool

Geraldine and Red Dick. Gypsy Girl ran the distance last season in 0:47, Cyclone had quite a number of times run in 0:48 or close to that mark. Nellie Van had shown a private trial better than 0:43, while Redlight was thought to have the ability to beat 0:43 a trifle under favorable conditions. Thornhill, the Cheviot two-year-old, had shown great speed in his work—in fact, not one of the eight contestants were out of the hunt, in the opinion of the talent. Gypsy Girl was an even money favorite, Redlight next in favor at 5 to 1. Several times the horses broke away, and some ran about an eighth of a mile before they could be stopped. Once they were under way and fairly well bunched, yet the flag did not fall in token of a go. "He never will get them up as good as that," shouted a number of the watchers, and they were eminently correct. The horses, with the exception of Thornhill, lined up pretty well, but that youngster's head was turned in the wrong direction and he was back over a length when the hunting cleft the atmosphere. Thornhill's backers were greatly enraged, and declared themselves robbed by the starter. The start was certainly not a creditable one, and a fair send-off in such a race meant everything. Mountain Boy, Cyclone, Nellie Van, Redlight was the order as they got under way, with Thornhill eighth, last and out of it, burning up the money of his admirers. Nellie Van, always remarkably quick on her feet, dashed to the front at the end of the first sixteenth, and Redlight came out of the bunch. The pair came into the homestretch a length apart, and the balance of the field did not figure at all. Redlight drew up to Nellie Van near the drawgate, and her rider went to the bat. Head and head they came along, but Redlight was under a pull. Passing the finishing-point, on the uneven stride, Redlight had an advantage of perhaps two inches—a too finely drawn finish, perhaps, but nevertheless he won. Nellie Van, second, was a trifle over a length from Gypsy Girl, Jack the Ripper fourth, Thornhill, the unfortunate, fifth, Mountain Boy sixth, Happy Day seventh and Cyclone last. Thornhill ran a much better race than the winner, considering the start. The time, 0:50, occasioned much surprise, for while a strong wind prevailed it was expected the half-mile would be run close to 0:43.

The Brutus—Ariola colt was a well-played favorite at 7 to 10 on. Gordius, Dan Miller's Argyle-Gerbardine youngster, out for the first time in public, was on the strength of speedy private trials, backed down from 8 to 1 to 2 to 1. The favorite led Seaside by over a length into the homestretch. Warrago was third, and the "green" one was fourth and last. An eighth from home, under Johnny Weber's vigorous riding, Seaside got on even terms with the Ariola colt, who soon gave up the race, and, under whip, just beat out the fast-coming Gordius a scant half-length. Time, 1:02½. Seaside won easily by two lengths, and it was by most persons considered an astonishing reversal of form. The matter should be looked into, and if Seaside has been run in a crooked manner the parties to such a job should be severely punished—kept off race courses for life.

Little Esperanza, Tigress and Sir Reel came together in the fourth race, one mile and 50 yards, and Tigress was selected by a majority of the heavy bettors to win. Esperanza was backed down from 9 to 5 to 7 to 5 at the close, Tigress remaining at even money and Sir Reel receding from 2 to 1 to 3 to 1. At the fall of the flag Tigress went out and set a merry pace, leading Esperanza a length at the quarter-pole, Sir Reel trailing two lengths behind the little chestnut pony. Tigress was a length and a half to the good at the half-pole, and but a length into the homestretch, Sir Reel only a length behind Little Esperanza. An eighth from home Esperanza had Tigress beaten, and coming on in the gamest fashion, won by four lengths from Sir Reel, who quite easily disposed of Tigress, whom he beat half a length. Time, 1:44.

A mile race, with seven starters, followed, and the fleet Solitude, opening at 6 to 5, was backed down to even money at the close. Steadfast was also heavily played, opening at 6 to 1 and closing at 2½. St. Patrick and Broad Church were at 8 to 1, Nellie G. and Wyanashott 10 to 1, Lady Gwen 20. The start was one that the veriest amateur need not be proud of, Broad Church and St. Patrick being off necks apart, Nellie G. over a length behind the pair, the rest strung out, a dozen lengths perhaps separating the leader and last horse, Wyanashott. Solitude, the favorite, against the rails, was fifth and Steadfast sixth. St. Patrick led Broad Church a neck passing the quarter and half, with Solitude, interfered with at the start, third, four lengths away, Nellie G. fourth, a length behind Solitude, then Steadfast, a couple of lengths further behind. Soon after passing the half-pole little Kinnie went to work on Steadfast, who then passed Nellie G. and Solitude and crawled up inch by inch on the leaders. Broad Church was a head in front of St. Patrick at the three-quarters, but St. Patrick was first into the straight by a head, Broad Church second, over three lengths from the game son of Narcola. All the way down the straight St. Patrick and Broad Church ran heads apart, with Steadfast gaining but apparently out of the bunt. Kinnie called forth all the powers of Steadfast at the drawgate, and as the trio neared the wire there was not the width of a hand separating the three. Steadfast was on the outside, St. Patrick in the center and Broad Church on the inside. St. Patrick appeared from the press stand to have won it by perhaps an inch, but after a moment's deliberation the judges declared it a dead heat between Broad Church and St. Patrick, Steadfast third. No one outside the judges' stand could separate them, and while many wanted to see the officials declare it a dead heat between the three, believing Steadfast would win, the decision was met with favor. The time given out was 1:37. Nellie G. finished fourth and Solitude fifth.

In the run-off, which took place after the last race, it was 4 to 5 at the close and take your pick. St. Patrick went to the front without delay, led all the way by a big margin, and won easily by three lengths from the whipped-out Broad Church in 1:43 (official), 1:42 (unofficial). Col. Burns lost heavily on Broad Church.

Tillie S. was an odds-on favorite in the fifth race, four and one-half furlongs, The Lark next in favor at 2 to 1 at the close. Realization led Tillie S. at the start and passing the three-quarter pole by a head. Then Tillie S. took charge of affairs, when The Lark, coming with a wet sail, gave her the go-by a little over a sixteenth from home and won easily by a length and a half, Tillie S. second, two lengths from Realization. Time, 0:56½.

In the Lime Kiln Club Suburban, mile and fifty yards, colored pilots, Revolver (Chauncey Treadwell up), was a favorite at 1 to 2 and 3 to 5, Red Cloud and Green Hock at 3 to 1 each, Nipper, Monte Bello and Wild Robin at 30 to 1 each. Revolver, well-riden by Treadwell, led all the way, winning by three lengths from Red Cloud, who, with "Mun" Johnson up, was nearly dead as he passed the finishing-point. Green Hock, three lengths behind Red Cloud, was third, Nipper fourth. Monte Bello was last, only about an eighth of a mile behind when Revolver passed the judges' stand. Time, 1:49½. Chauncey Treadwell, Revolver's rider, has never lost one of these welter-weight races, and was several pounds better than every rider in the race, with the possible exception of Williams.

Fair's Horses in Chicago.

Trainer Dick Havey, with the Fair string of thoroughbreds, arrived at Washington Park last week. The string includes Floodgate, Una Colorado, Dare, Yo El Rey, Challenge, Ella Smith, Dolly Mack, Princess, Virginia and Gibson. The start was made April 24th. At Ogden, Utah, Flood Gate and Colorado took cold and were threatened with pneumonia for a time, but came out of their illness all right, and Havey expects to send Flood Gate to the post.

Interest naturally centers in the American Derby candidates, Dare and Flood Gate. Flood Gate is the better-looking colt. He is sixteen hands, and in color a dark brown, with a star, white to the pastern on the right fore leg, white from coronet to heel on the side of his right fore foot, and white to above the pastern on his right hind leg. He is a slow galloper, and in exercising with Dare falls far behind. Although a loafer, he can and will run when asked. He has started twice—once in a dash of three-quarters, September 14th, won by Dare, and again September 17th, when, with 115 pounds up, he beat Grandee and Castro at a mile and finished in a common canter in 1:42.

In the first start he acted badly and was almost left at the post. He closed up considerable ground in the first half, but was never near Charmion or Dare, but there are persons who were standing at the head of the stretch and are ready to swear that Cook took him back at that point. One thing is certain: Havey was not satisfied with the race, particularly the colt's work at the post, for he had intended to save him for the American Derby and get a maiden allowance, but becoming anxious about his temper decided to scratch Dare, who was to carry 125 pounds, and put Hill on Flood Gate, to see how the colt would act. With Hill on his back he got away all right, jumped to the front, made his own pace, and won pulled up with his mouth wide open.

Dare is a dark brown or black colt, standing 15.3 hands high, with a star and a little white on his right hind heel. He has a good head, but otherwise is a plain-looking colt, and alongside Flood Gate looks much the smaller. He has a pleasing way of going, and is seen to best advantage in action. He was highly tried at Rancho del Paso, some quiet tips being to the effect that he showed better than any two-year-old ever exercised there. September 9 he packed 118 pounds and ran three-quarters of a mile in 1:14½, defeating Castro, Charmion, The Drummer, Alliance, and Conde, and won in hand. Five days later he carried 122 pounds and beat Charmion, 117; Grandee, Flood Gate and Duke Stevens. He got off third, and at the end of half a mile Charmion was two open lengths ahead of him. He stood a drive home, brought the filly to a drive at the eighth pole, and then drew away and won by two lengths in 1:14.

Yo El Rey, the brother to Yo Tambien, is a colt of extraordinary conformation. He is a bay, with a white face, four half white stockings, is slightly watch-eyed in the right eye, and toes in slightly; 15.1 hands high, weighs 1030 pounds, and will girth six inches more than his big three-year-old stable companion Flood Gate. Behind he looks as big as Racelud, and he is considerably longer barreled. A long and immensely big colt on short legs, he is exquisitely coupled, and the most remarkably-turned piece of horseflesh ever in this or any other country. This is not an overdrawn picture. His body presents not a single angle; so completely and beautifully is he set that every line is a graceful curve. He has short cannon bones, and at first sight looks a little light in his legs, but is not. To particularize his points would be superfluous. Havey covered the subject when he said to a city reporter: "There he is, and I defy any horseman to find a flaw in him except those toes, and I don't mind that, for the best racehorse I ever saw, Norfolk, toed in."

Yo El Rey has size, substance and speed. Those who have watched him closely say the question to be determined is bow far those short legs can carry that big body at a high rate of speed, for, far as he will go, nobody's colt will beat him. In a break through the stretch last fall he held his own with Flood Gate, the quarter being run in 24 seconds. Speeding he goes close to the ground and is a rapid strider. Galloping he goes slower than a well-trained saddle-horse. Flood Gate is an unusually slow galloper, but when prancing at his easiest gait he will lose Yo El Rey and the latter will be galloping all the time. A better-dispositioned animal never stood in a stall. He is in the World's Fair and Hyde Park Stakes at Chicago, the Junior Champion at Monmouth, the Futurity, Great Trial and Great Eastern Handicap at Coney Island, and many other valuable events. He is usually exercised with Challenge, a brother of Bonanza, and Una Colorado, by Joe Hooker, dam Jessie R., two colts of high type and considerable speed, but they are plainly not in his class. Challenge and Una Colorado are well engaged. Challenge has developed a quarter-crack, which is a pity, as he is more than useful.

Dolly Mack, sister of Dolly McCone, is a chestnut, with an all-white face, four white legs and dashes of white on her body. She will be easy to identify. Bigger and stronger than Chris. Smith's speedy filly, she promises to be equally good, if not better, as a race mare. Ella Smith, sister of Ed. Corrigan, is another fine-looking filly. She is working well, and Havey has confidence that she will more than pay her way. Virginia, named after her owner's sister, is a rangy bay filly, by Joe Hooker, dam Bonita. She was undersized and conky as a yearling, but has grown and spread, and may prove worthy of her name.

Princess, by Cheviot, dam imp. Music, is a bay, with a star and strip and black points. She is 15.2½ hands high, and among the three-year-old fillies of the coast is classed as second to Charmion only. She is engaged in the Queen Isabella and Boulevard Stakes of Washington Park. Since Charmion clipped her wings she has been rated fast, but not able to stay a distance under high pressure.

A horse that will bear watching is the five-year-old chestnut gelding Gibsor. He is by Joe Hooker, and his dam is said to be by Oregon Charley or Walnut Bark, or some other sire of doubtful or untraced lineage. He can step five furlongs at a merry clip, and there are persons who predict he will go further under Havey's training.

All of the ten but Virginia are well engaged from Washington Park on. Gibson is the only aged horse of the lot. Here are their Washington Park engagements:
 Gibson—Boulevard Stakes.
 Princess—Boulevard and Queen Isabella Stakes.
 Flood Gate—American Derby, Columbus Handicap, Wheeler Handicap, Great Western Handicap, Sheridan Stakes and Drexel Stakes.
 Dare—American Derby, Columbus Handicap, Wheeler Handicap, Great Western Handicap and Drexel Stakes.
 Yo El Rey—World's Fair Stakes, Hyde Park Stakes and American Derby of 1894.
 Una Colorado—World's Fair Stakes, Hyde Park Stakes, Kenwood Stakes, Sheridan Stakes of 1894 and American Derby of 1894.
 Challenge—World's Fair Stakes, Hyde Park Stakes, Kenwood Stakes and Sheridan Stakes of 1894.
 Dolly Mack—Lakeside Stakes.
 Ella Smith—Lakeside Stakes.

The two-year-olds were bought from Theodore Winters and were a job lot that Mr. Fair had to take to secure Yo El Rey, Yo Tambien's full brother. The stable jockeys are W. Hill, of Al Farrow fame, and George McDonald, who can ride at ninety pounds.—The Horseman.

Care of Horses' Feet.

It is often said that the foot is what the blacksmith makes it. This is only true in a limited sense, as the blacksmith is not usually given very much opportunity to either preserve or ruin the average horse's foot. The blacksmith is not to blame if your horse is given water when too hot, and his feet foundered in consequence; neither is it his fault if, through the negligence of owner or attendants, a horse is allowed to contract thrush, or picks up a nail, or pounds himself over rough and uneven roads until ring-bone or stone-bruise form. It is not the blacksmith's fault if the shoes are allowed to stay on until corns have developed; nor is he to blame when the toes grow too long and a spavin is thrown out in consequence; nor when the foot contracts at the heels and the horn of the walls becomes dry and brittle because of latent congestion. The care of a horse's foot devolves more upon his owner and immediate attendants than upon the blacksmith, who is too often made the scapegoat of those who are unwilling to shoulder the blame of unfortunate results of their own negligence. The smith's duty is at an end when, after calling attention to any apparent wrong in form or condition, he levels and prepares carefully and shoes skillfully the feet of horses which are brought to him. Don't blame the blacksmith for your horses' bad feet unless you have given him an opportunity to manage their care and treatment every day and night in the year. It is true that many blacksmiths contribute, through ignorance and unskillful farriery, very materially to the destruction of the feet of horses, which are brought to their attention, but it is just as true that a great many more horses' feet are ruined outside of than in a farrier's establishment.—Horse Review.

DIABLO WON THE BROOKLYN.

Absolutely the Longest Shot in the Race—His Pedigree and Performances.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Amidst deep and oppressive silence Diablo, the aged son of Eolus and Grace Darling, won the rich Brooklyn Handicap at Gravesend this afternoon in the presence of 30,000 persons.

Lamplighter, the favorite, who went to the post carrying a ton of money, was second and Leonawell third. The winner's time was 2:00, made fractionally as follows: Quarter, 0:25 1/2; half, 0:51; three-quarters, 1:16; mile, 1:42 1/2; mile and a quarter, 2:09.

The reason for the chilly silence with which Diablo's victory was received is rather difficult of explanation. Even though the winner was an extreme outsider, which fact of course had its effect, the race-going public are too generous to allow that to weigh in the balance, and generally applaud where applause is due. The probabilities are that the people felt instinctively that they had in a measure been the victim of what is termed a "grand coup."

Diablo was regarded as being in the first flight in his two and three-year-old form, but after his third year his legs became shaky, and since then he has been regarded simply as a high-class selling plater that was likely to break down permanently in any race in which he started.

The horse raced three times at the recent Elizabeth races, winning once out of three starts. Raceland and Charade, two horses that run in the handicap to-day, were winners of those races, and beat him easily. His wonderful improvement in form to-day was therefore more stunning in its effect.

The Brooklyn Handicap ran to-day was the seventh in the history of the event and was guaranteed to be worth $25,000. Of this sum the winner gets $15,000, the second horse $5,000 and the third $2,000. The day dawned bright and fair, much to the delight of the many thousands of persons that had determined to see the rich stake contested for.

As the day advanced and the prospects of the morning were really realized, people set their faces toward the race course, and soon the different driveways and railroads leading thereto assumed an animated appearance. By 11 o'clock a few hundred spectators had already reached the course, and these eagerly seized upon the best points of vantage, which places they retained until the last event of the day was decided. By noon several thousand lovers of the sport of kings had entered the enclosure, while the rapidly-arriving trains deposited thousands of others outside.

The crowd was gradually and steadily augmented until, when the bell rang for the first race, it was difficult to move about with any degree of comfort on the lawn or in the betting ring, while the clubhouse and grand stand were filled to overflowing. At least 25,000 persons had crowded into the track at this time, still the trains were rapidly arriving with thousands of others.

At handicap time at least 30,000 persons were present. The betting ring presented a wild and boisterous scene. The jam was something awful. Men rushed madly about looking for the odds they wanted and shaking greenbacks in the faces of the bookmakers when they found them.

When the bugle called the horses to the post for the big event excitement was on tiptoe. It was just 4:01 o'clock when the horses was summoned from the paddock. Fidelio, of William Daly's string, was the first to appear, quickly followed by his stable companion, Terrifier. Then came Banquet, Nomad and Raceland, Michael F. Dwyer's candidates. "Old Bones," as Raceland is affectionately called, was loudly cheered, as was Jockey Garrison, who had the mount on Banquet. Charade was the next to come on the track, and following were Judge Morrow, the winner of last year's Brooklyn Handicap, and Illume, the only representative of the West in the race.

Morris' representative was saddled at the other side of the track and did not pass the stand. Lamplighter, Diablo, Pickpocket and Leonawell were the last to appear and went to the post together. Lamplighter was enthusiastically applauded, his ovation showing where the hopes and dollars of the public were. The usual parade was dispensed with, the horses going to the starting point as they do in any ordinary event.

Thirty thousand pairs of eyes were glued on the proudly-stepping thoroughbreds as they lined up for the start. Illume broke ahead of his field and spoiled what would have been a good start at the first attempt. Pickpocket's testiness was responsible for some further delay.

After several attempts to get them in line for the start, Starter Rowe got down out of his box and gave the jockeys a good rating. At the next break Lamplighter, Pickpocket and Judge Morrow came to the head of the stretch without the others.

Finally, at 4:19 o'clock, the horses got the flag to an almost perfect start. Judge Morrow, Leonawell, Terrifier and Fidelio were a little in the lead, while Lamplighter, Charade, Pickpocket, Illume and Mars in a bunch in the rear. Terrifier, true to the Daly tactics, immediately shot to the front and set a clinking pace past the stand and into the backstretch. Here Leonawell, who had been struggling for his head, passed Terrifier and took a lead of two lengths. The race all through the back stretch was an exceedingly pretty one. All of the horses were running well together and within striking distance of the leader.

At the far turn Leonawell increased his lead and a shout went up from his admirers. Their joy was short-lived, however, for turning into the homestretch Diablo, Lamplighter, Judge Morrow and Illume moved up and joined the leader. A desperate and highly exciting drive ensued, the horses running almost head and head through the stretch. Less than a quarter of a furlong from the wire Diablo began to draw out, and, soon getting clear of the others, won the grand race by a length and a half.

Lamplighter beat the tired but game Leonawell a neck for the place. Illume, who was fourth a nose away, was lapped at the withers by Pickpocket and Charade, who had come from the rear in the last fifty yards.

Taral, who rode the winner, was placed on the seat of a floral horseshoe and carried in triumph from the judges' stand to the paddock. A floral horseshoe was also placed about the neck of the winning horse as he was led from the track. Scarcely a ripple of applause greeted these ceremonies.

Following are the horses in the order in which they finished, with jockeys, weights and post odds:

Table with columns: HORSE, WEIGHT, JOCKEY, ODDS. Lists horses like Diablo, Lamplighter, Leonawell, etc., with their respective weights and odds.

As good as 60 to 1 against the winner could be obtained on Diablo's chances in the early betting, so little were his prospects of winning the race considered. Straight mutual tickets on him, of which only twelve were sold, paid $294.50. One hundred and seven bookmakers did business in the betting ring, but they were utterly unable to perform the task of taking in the money offered them by the crowds.

WINNERS OF THE RICH HANDICAP.

For the past two seasons Diablo, the winner of 1893, has been considered but a good sort of selling plater that could go a mile and a quarter, or even further. His best race in 1892 was when he took up 117 pounds at Washington and ran a mile and one-sixteenth in 1:48 1/2, beating a number of good ones, Lowlander among the rest. As a two and three-year-old Diablo was considered of a high class, winning nine races out of twenty-one starts in 1885, when two, and four races out of eighteen as a three-year-old. At four he was successful eight times out of twenty-six races. In 1891 the horse sunk to the selling-plate level, being first past the post but twice out of thirteen starts. He picked up considerably last season, however, winning seven races out of the nineteen times that he faced the starter. One point about Diablo, who is now a seven-year-old horse, is that of the five seasons he has been on the turf he has won his first race (in the spring) on three occasions. In 1888 and 1889 he was owned by the proprietor of the Castle Stable, passed into the hands of A. F. Walcott in 1890, and in 1891, when Walcott & Campbell became partners, became their joint property. Following is the pedigree of Diablo:

Diagrammatic pedigree chart for Diablo, showing lineage from Eolus and Grace Darling through various sires like Imp. Leamington and Fanny Washington.

It will be seen from the above that Diablo is a product of the cross that has given us so many great performers—the Leamington-Lexington, and has besides two crosses of imp. Trustee, through his best son, Revenue, and two of Boston ("Old Whitnose"). Several wonderful producing mares figure in Diablo's pedigree, notably—Nina (dam of Planet and Algerine), by Boston; Alice Jones (dam of Jonesboro, Caraboo and Annette, and a sister to Nebula, the dam of unbeaten Asteroid); Fanny Washington (dam of Eolus, Consolation and Scathelock), by Revenue; Sarah Washington (dam of Slasher and Olive Branch), by Garrison's Zingane (son of Sir Archy); imp. Frolicsome Fanny (dam of Tom Corwin, Miss Margrave and the famous Nina), by Lottery, and last, not least, Diabo traces twice to the great Emma, by Whisker, who was the dam of imp. Trustee and of Cotherstone and Mundig, both winners of the classical Epsom Derby. Experts claim the producing mares in a pedigree count more than the producing sires. If this conclusion be correct, then Diablo has reason to be a performer of high degree.

Below will be found the winners of the Brooklyn Handicap since its inception:

WINNERS OF BROOKLYN HANDICAP—1 1/4 MILES.

Table listing winners of the Brooklyn Handicap from 1874 to 1893, including names like Dry Monopole, The Bard, Exile, etc., and their times.

In 1887 came the famous heads-against finish between Dry Monopole, Blue Wing and Hidalgo. Castaway's win was on a slow track, and the time made was very creditable. He was at 10 to 1 in the betting. Judge Morrow was at 7 to 1 last season when he won it. Diablo's odds ranged from 30 to 60 to 1.

It will be seen from the above table that no stallion has to its credit two winners of the Brooklyn Handicap, but The Bard, Castaway II and Diablo are all grandsons of imp. Leamington.

June 5.—Debutante Stakes, for two-year-old fillies, five furlongs, and the Hudson River Handicap, for all ages, one mile and three-sixteenths.
June 6.—Bartow Stakes, for two-year-olds, six furlongs, and the Withers Stakes, for three-year-olds, one mile.

- June 7.—Van Ness Stakes, for two-year-olds, six furlongs, and the Cherry Diamond Handicap, for all ages, one mile and a sixteenth.
June 8.—Control Stakes, for two-year-olds, five and a half furlongs, and the Fleetwood Stakes, for three-year-olds, one mile and a sixteenth.
June 9.—Bayhester Stakes, for three-year-olds, one mile, and the New Rochelle Handicap, for all ages, seven furlongs.

June 13.—Throg's Neck Stakes, for three-year-olds, seven furlongs, and the New York Jockey Club Handicap, for all ages, at a mile and a quarter.
June 14.—Larchmont Stakes, for two-year-olds, six furlongs, and the Pocantico Handicap, for three-year-olds, one mile.
June 15.—Long Island Lightweight Handicap, for all ages, at one mile, and the Ladies' Stakes, for three-year-old fillies, one mile and a sixteenth.
June 16.—Anticipation Stakes, for two-year-olds, five and a half furlongs, and the Vreedland Handicap, for three-year-olds, seven furlongs.

During the past week Steve Estes has been backed for the Metropolitan Handicap to the full extent of the local book of Munsell & Co., on the race. Bet against Charade have backed him down to 15 to 1. Adelhert, Beansey, Parvenu and Wildwood have also had support for the race. The changes in the odds are Wildwood, from 40 to 1 against to 30; Adelhert, from 50 to 30; Charade, from 20 to 15; Kennebec, from 40 to 25; Julien, from 20 to 15; Sir Matthew, from 25 to 30; Beansey, from 100 to 40; Runyon, from 40 to 30; Illume, from 30 to 40, and Monowai, from 25 to 20.

The Kentucky Derby.

The nineteenth running of this classic event occurred yesterday, and another renewal of Kentucky's Blue Ribbon has passed into history along with the victories of Aristides, Hindoo and Joe Cotton, says The Horseman. This race is among the oldest of the fixed events whose annual renewals make up the stake-racing history of each year, and it has come down to the present generation of turfmen redolent with memories of the good old days when men raced horses for glory more than for lucre, and when the owner of the winner was envied the distinction his horse had won, and not the dollars he had gained him. But, alas! for sentiment. The stake was never a rich one, and the commercial spirit of the times drew the mightiest racers from the Southland to the great Northern tracks, where more money though less renown awaited the successful ones; and as the tide that swept past the blue-grass course on its Northern way increased the decadence of the famous race became more marked.

The stake was inaugurated in 1875, when Price McGrath's Aristides, the "red horse," as his owner fondly called him, defeated a field containing Volcano, Verdigris, Ten Broeck, Bob Woolley, Chesapeake, Searcher, Vagabond, Bill Bruce, Gold Mine, McCreehy, Warsaw, Enlister and Grenoble—all good horses, many of them afterwards becoming famous on the turf and in the stud—running the distance in 2:37 3/4. The next successive winners, Vagrant, Baden-Baden, Day Star, Lord Murphy and Fonso, were all good racers, and most of them are represented on the turf these days by their sons and daughters. Among the placed horses in these years were Himyar, Falsetto and Stratimore, all of whom have since become successful sires. In 1881 the princely Hindoo added the slake to his unbroken list of victories, and the following year Apollo won from Runnymede and Bengal. Leonatus and Buchanan were the next winners, and they were followed by Joe Cotton, who defeated Bersax, with uncertain Ten Brooker third. Ben Ali won in 1886, defeating Blue Wing and Free Knight; and because there were no bookmakers on the opening day, owing to a disagreement with the parties who had the betting privileges, and he could not back his horse, Mr. Haggin took his stable away and never again visited a Kentucky track. After Ben Ali came Montrose, who defeated Jim Gore and Jacobin, and the next year Macbeth II. beat the much-touted Gallifet, with White, that unfortunate racer after Derbys, third. Spokane won in 1889, defeating Proctor Knott, the winner of the first Futurity. In 1890 Corrigan's Riley and the Chicago Stable's Robespierre fought out on the track the battle their owners had so long waged in Chicago. Riley won in 2:45 on a muddy track, and Hankins' pride, the winner of the Tennessee Derby, was third to Bill Letcher. Kingman won in 1891, beating the overrated Balgowan and the unfortunate High Tariff, and last year, with only three starters, a good race occurred, Azra beating Huron by a nose after a driving finish, with the latter's stable companion, Phil Dwyer, beaten off.

From 1875 to 1879 inclusive the weights were: Colts, 140 pounds; fillies, 97 pounds. In 1880 colts carried 105 pounds, fillies and geldings 102. In 1884 the scale was raised five pounds all around, and in 1886 was increased to 118 pounds for colts, 115 for geldings and 112 for fillies. In 1890 the weights were again raised, being placed at 122 pounds, with a five-pound allowance for fillies and none for geldings, and thus they still remain. The fastest race ever run for the event was in 1889, when Spokane won by a neck from Proctor Knott, and the slowest in 1891, won by Kingman, who galloped away from Balgowan. The history of the race to date is as follows:

Table listing winners of the Kentucky Derby from 1875 to 1893, including names like Aristides, Vagrant, Baden-Baden, etc., and their jockeys and times.

The field this year was of very cheap quality, the starters being Cushing & Orth's pair, Lookout and Boundless; Mirage, Linger, Buck McAnn and Plutus. All carried 122 pounds, none of the lot having won a race of sufficient value to entail a penalty. The track was heavy and Lookout won in slow time, his stable-mate, Boundless, ridden by Graham, third, and Plutus, with Clayton up, "splitting the pair."

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

SEND in your lists of foals.

THERE is to be another mile track built at San Diego.

ALCONA, JR., 2:19, will be seen on the circuit this year.

S. H. CRANE, of Turlock, recently sold the bay gelding Melrose, 2:27.

REMEMBER the great sale of trotters next Thursday. See the advertisement.

IT is reported that neither Kremlin nor Ralph Wilkes will be seen in public this year.

THE pair of brown mares shipped to Charley Reed by Budd Dohle have already trotted in 2:25.

ROBERT J., according to Ed. Geers, will reduce his record of 2:09½ several seconds this summer.

L. C. STARR, of Napa, has gone to Vacaville to take charge of the horses belonging to Cal. Reams and others.

THERE has not been but one death among the broodmares, colts and fillies at the Palo Alto farm this season.

SINCE the free-for-all stallion races have fizzled out, would it not be a good idea to have free-for-all gelding races?

I. DE TURK, of Santa Rosa, sent his string of trotters to the race track, Petaluma, to be prepared for the fall meeting.

C. J. HAMLIN's horses will not race in the New England Breeders' meeting next Fall, owing to engagements in the West.

BRING your strings of trotters and pacers to the Bay District Track. The gallopers will depart for other places next week.

GEORGE H. HICKS will look after Beacon Park track again this season. The track has been improved and is now faster than ever before.

WILLIAM SIMPSON has forty-six entries in the Futurity Stake of the Kentucky Horse Breeders' Association. Allen Farm has ten less entries.

"NOVELTY, novelty, all is novelty," will the visitors say at the Breeders' meeting which commences next Saturday. Everybody should see the great races there.

CARTER BARKER, of Wisconsin, has bought the California gelding Homestake, 2:14½, by Gibraltar, that won several races for Monroe Salisbury in 1890 and 1891.

THE managers of the race tracks throughout the circuit are working hard to have their race courses and all the buildings around them in perfect shape for the fall meetings.

IN many portions of California the lack of lime is noticeable, so nearly all the managers of our large stock farms clean their watering troughs at least once a week and place lime therein.

THE spring meeting of the Capital Turf and Driving Club promises to be the most successful ever held. A number of thoroughbreds are going direct to Sacramento, to prepare for these races.

THE abandonment of the Oakland Trotting Park by the trotters and pacers will commence next Monday. The thoroughbreds that are to run there for 156 days must have the course to suit them.

ALL the Piedmont fillies that have received training will prove valuable in their races this fall, and as broodmares after their seasons on the turf end, they will be unsurpassed by any others at Palo Alto.

THE discouragement of some in the breeding business was owing to a too great anxiety for a successful issue at once; they could not apparently wait. The most acute sting of adversity springs from man's impatience.

THE trotting horse breeders in the southern part of California are having a larger number of colts and fillies trained than ever before, and, from what we can learn, there are at least a score of "cracker-jacks" among them.

C. J. HAMLIN, Buffalo, and J. E. Green, of Louisville, Ky., have matched a trotter and pacer, each foals of 1891, sired by Chimes and Egotist, two sons of Electioneer, for $1,000, race to take place during the Lexington meeting next October.

THE stable of the DuBois Bros., of Denver, will open the campaign at the Overland Park meeting May 30th, whence the line of march will include Salt Lake City, Detroit, Terre Haute, Independence, Mason City, St. Joseph, Sedalia and Nashville.

PALO ALTO sired but thirty-three colts and fillies and everyone that has been harnessed shows such pure-trotting action that Superintendent Frank Covey believes the 2:30 list will be very easy for them to enter, and 2:10 will not stop the majority.

W. H. RAYMOND, proprietor of Belmont Stock Farm, Mont., has recently returned from Kentucky, where he has several good mares breeding to choice stallions. He says the trotting-horse market has reached the bottom, and that prices are advancing.

T. J. CROWLEY has sent his three-year-old chestnut filly Madcap, by Steinway, 2:25½, dam Maggie McGregor, by Robert McGregor, to William Fieldwick, to be prepared for the fall races. Madcap is a very promising pacer and one that will "stay the route."

THE pasture on Josiah White's Lakeville Farm is looking better than it has for many years. This place ought to be well patronized by owners of horses who desire to send them to an equable climate where they can have more feed and water than they can consume.

DO NOT forget to attend the Pierce Bros. sale of high-class trotters and pacers that is to take place in this city next Thursday. Horsemen who are in need of first-class fillies, standard-bred broodmares and choice young stallions should be present. Bargains will be secured.

SENATOR LELAND STANFORD has decided to not make any more applications for registration to the Registry Association. A large number of our California breeders have similarly declared themselves on this proposition, and present very strong and valid reasons for their action.

AMONG the hundreds of horses sold from Palo Alto and those now on the farm the name of one pacer appears and that one is Peruvian Bitters, 2:23½. He trotted very fast until he was injured and then, like little Jay-Eye-See, he took to pacing. This is a wonderful showing.

WHILE "phenomenal" trotters are not expected among the great ones at Palo Alto this year, it is believed that a larger number of good trotters will appear than ever before, and most of them are of the age and calibre to arouse the enthusiasm of all the spectators in every race they appear.

THE spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association commences next Saturday. Every horseman who can possibly spare the time should attend. The importance of the success of this meeting is apparent to every horseman and breeder of trotters in California.

THERE will be over one hundred and ten foals dropped at Palo Alto this year. The percentage of mares that proved with foal is eighty-five per cent. This is remarkably good when one considers the large number of old mares bred, and the amount of sickness there was during the entire breeding season last year.

AT Palo Alto the horseshoer is never allowed to use a knife on the feet of the trotters. The rasp only must be carefully used, and should there be any marks of it on the outside of the hoof a prompt dismissal of the employee would follow. Very little trouble is ever experienced with the horses' feet on this immense farm.

THE people of the East will have a better idea of the class of racehorses raised in California this year than they have ever had. Hickok, Salisbury and Goldsmith will have samples of what we have and they will "prove sufficient" for a large number that are selected from among the thousands of the best ones throughout the Union.

J. A. BLIZ, the well-known sulky manufacturer of Pleasanton, has perfected his aluminum wheel for pneumatic tire sulky. It weighs with rubber tire just five pounds and is a model of lightness, strength and beauty. Monroe Salisbury has ordered the first pair; he will use them on the sulky to be drawn by the "King of Trotters," Directum.

THE chance to make fifty per cent. on an investment will occur next Thursday at the sale of trotting stock that is to take place in this city. The animals offered are all first-class, and we advise all our readers to send a postal with their address to Killip & Co., and get a catalogue forwarded them in time. This will be one of the best sales of the season.

ALTA BELLE, William Simpson's daughter of Electioneer and Beautiful Bells, has been bred to Mambrino King. She is the dam of the Stamboul colt Daghestan, owned by Joseph Outhwaite, of Savanna, who took a record of 2:25½ last season. W. J. Andrews has been working her over the Jewett covered track, where she has shown ability to beat 2:30.

GEO. P. BULL, of San Jose, is jogging the Guy Wilkes stallion, Hock Wilkes, and has strong hopes that he will give the horse a record. This young stallion is out of a strictly thoroughbred mare, and when quite young showed his ability to become a fast trotter. He met with an accident, and his owner, Dr. Farnum of this city, never allowed him to be worked again.

THERE is at Palo Alto a little colt by Stamboul, 2:07½, that is a "picture of his dad". He is out of Susette, 2:23½ (sister to Suisun, 2:18), and Pitti Sing, 2:26½, by Electioneer 125; second dam Susie, 2:26½ (dam of three in the list), by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31; third dam Santa Clara, by Owen Dale; fourth dam Mary (dam of Ida May, grandam of Lady Ellen, 2:29½), by Red Buck, son of Bertrand.

ED. LAFFERTY has quite a string of promising youngsters at the Oakwood Park Stock Farm race track. His pet, W. Wood, never looked better, and when this horse meets with the other fast side-wheelers on the circuit this fall we believe he will hold his own. It would not surprise us if the champion pacer was to make his record on this coast. Wonder if the managers of the Register would allow it?

D. HARRIS, of Pleasanton, has a colt by Sidney, 2:19½, out of the dam of Delmas, 2:25½, that is a "phenomenal yearling trotter," and that is saying a great deal in this age of extreme speed. He surprises Kelly, Neal, McDowell and all the rest of the horsemen at the Salisbury track every time he comes out. Mr. Harris bred the dam of this one to Direct this year, and expects to get a record-breaker.

THE stallion Boodle, 2:21½, has been well patronized this year. There will be at least two of his progeny seen taking part in the races this fall; one is a yearling out of a mare by Junio, 2:22, and the other is a three-year-old out of a mare by Nutwood, this one is called Ethel Downes. Jno. Woods, the trainer, believes he has two very good ones in these and everyone who has seen them move inclines to the same opinion.

THE Jerome Eddy mare Fanny Wilcox, that made a record of 2:17½ a couple of seasons ago, and that was then looked upon as one of the best trotters in the 2:20 class, will be handled this season by John Shillinglaw, who gave the mare her record. She was handled last season by the Jewett Farm drivers, but did not make a success of it. Lizzie Mont, a full sister to Fanny Wilcox, has a pacing record better than 2:20, and is another of the many evidences continually cropping out that trotting blood produces some pretty good pacers, as she is by the trotter Jerome Eddy, 2:16½, and out of a mare by the trotter Piedmont, 2:17½.

A GOOD deal has been written about the black horse Black Cloud. This horse was a great trotter ten years ago. It is said that, when a colt, he was purchased by the late Gen. Custer and named Black Cloud for the noted Indian chief. Custer rode the now noted trotter in his campaign up to the time of his death at the famous battle known as the Custer massacre on the Little Big Horn River. After his owner's death, the horse drifted about and finally reached the hands of George Voorhees at Detroit, Mich., who put him in training and soon developed his speed and made him famous as a campaigner and game race horse.

THERE was another Pleasanton matinee last Saturday at Salisbury's track, and the crowd cheered the horses and drivers as they came down the homestretch. The verdict of the spectators was that they had seen the prince of trotters (Directum) and the prince of pacers (Flying Jib), and when both of these speedy ones returns from the East they will all bring a bumper to Directum, the "King of the Trotting Turf," and Flying Jib, the "King of All Pacers."

THERE are three half mile tracks in England, one in Ireland and one in Scotland, which have adopted the American system of trotting and which are doing well. In France the horses are started with a flag, and there is no scoring. If a horse gets off with the right foot foremost, well and good; if not, he must make the best of it. Horses have to be specially educated for this kind of work. The attendance at the French tracks is large and there is a great deal of betting.

SOME men are so constituted that they wish to attribute all the success of their horses to their own skillful manipulation. This is not always true. What the horse had not from nature man could not give him; man simply developed natural possessions. It often happens that horses receive more abuse for what they fail to accomplish than praise for what they actually perform. Some men would rob their horse of merit that they themselves might shine bright in borrowed plumage.

FRED W. BIER, Vancouver, Wash., writes us: "I have just sold my black mare Aileen, 5, by Altamont, dam Lady Kismont, by Young Kisber; second dam Klamath Maid, by Altamont; third dam Pet, said to be by San Francisco Patchen, son of Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., to Ralston Cox, our genial and energetic representative of the Equitable Life Insurance Co., consideration $500. Mr. Cox will be a valuable addition to our growing list of trotting horsemen. Aileen is due to foal to Vinmont."

S. A. BROWNE, of Kalamazoo Farm, has just taken a run down to Terre Haute and had a look at Belle Vara, 2:08½, whom he found looking and feeling as fine as split silk. Heretofore the brown daughter of Vatican has been a very hard puller, both at exercise and in her races, but she has been patiently schooled all the past winter in company, and her temper is much improved. She is jogging with two ounces less weight forward than ever before, and Doble's forecast is that she is a mare whose chances for holding the record are more than good.

MESSRS. GUERNE & BAKER, of Santa Rosa, started for the East about three weeks ago, and are interesting prominent horsemen there with the model of a Santa Rosa race-track harrow. As these harrows are the only kind used in California, the people of the East who have examined the model declare it is no wonder the tracks are so perfect in this State. Monroe Salisbury, Chas. Marvin, O. A. Hickok, Frank Covey, Millard Sanders, L. U. Shippee and others say it surpasses any ever made. We hope Messrs. Guerne & Baker will receive many orders for this California invention.

THERE is no employee on a stock farm that has greater responsibilities than the one whose duty it is to care for the broodmares and foals. He must be gentle, vigilant and careful at all times; he must love the business and understand the natures of all the matrons in his care; and must know their pedigree and the pedigree of their foals. At our prominent stock farms the men selected for these positions take as much pride in their work as the superintendents of the farms. At the Valensin farm this position is held by G. Mazzini; at Palo Alto, by Geo. Woods; at Rancho del Paso, by M. Cassidy; at San Mateo Stock Farm, by Gus Lang; at Moorland Stock Farm, by H. Costigan; at Oakwood Park Stock Farm, by Fred. Booth.

THERE is a two-year-old pacing colt at Augustus Sharpe's place, Louisville, Ky., that is said to have shown remarkable speed. He is by Baron Wilkes, dam by George Wilkes. He has already developed a 2:20 gait, and it is believed by those who have seen him work that he will be equally as fast as the sensational Victor Mazzone. There are two other sensational colts at Mr. Sharp's place. They were the property of Marcus Daly, and cost Mr. Sharp $3,900. He has since refused $12,000 for them. One is by Wilton, out of Mary Sprague, by Gov. Sprague, and the other by Guy Wilkes, out of Minerva, by Nutwood. They have shown to be very speedy, and in their work last week both trotted quarters in less than 45 seconds.

IT APPEARS that there is more truth than superstition in the ancient claim that the horse, when led out of a burning barn, will almost invariably return and perish in the flames if given an opportunity to do so. At least a very apt illustration of this propensity of the horse to suicide by voluntary cremation was shown in the recent burning of no less than three horses, who succeeded, after being rescued from a burning barn, in breaking away from their attendants and returning to the flames, which consumed them. Whether this characteristic exists as a reality or only in imagination it may be as well to consider it a trait peculiar to the horse and be guided accordingly. It has been often demonstrated that a horse can be easily led from a burning barn if the precaution to first blindfold him be taken, and, as suggested by a contemporary, a very few minutes' work will convert an old quilt, blanket or piece of carpet into a loosely-fitting hood, which, in case of fire, could in a fraction of a minute be adjusted over the head of the horse, enabling the attendant to lead him to a place of safety.—Horse Review.

A GOOD many breeding years ago, E. M. Teakle and Frank Jones, two well-known California sporting men, were going down the Mississippi river on one of the famous stern-wheel vessels. They met some other genial souls who loved to play poker, and in a little while the money drifted into the piles held by Messrs. Teakle and Jones, the silent men from California. On board the vessel was a very fine-looking mare which belonged to one of the players, and in sheer desperation he put a price on her, and Teakle, who at one time had an interest in Dexter, 2:17½, was as good a judge of horseflesh as he was of human nature, soon owned the mare in partnership with Jones. They brought her to California, and at San Jose, where she was known as the Indigo mare, she won several very well-contested trotting races. She was bred to Nutwood, and had a bay filly which is now known as Amrah (dam of Electwood, 2:30). This mare is a large, well-formed, strongly-built type of a broodmare, and one which cannot help becoming noted as a matron of speed. She has a colt at her side by Palo Alto, 2:08½, that has every appearance of being a good one.

The Saddle.

THERE are 367 racehorses in the stable of the late "Squire" Abingdon, which are soon to be sold at auction.

THE report that that great sprinter Dr. Hasbrouck broke down in his work at Sheephead Bay was erroneous. He ran second to Kingston at Brooklyn last Monday.

MACDONOUGH'S MONOWAI, now at Gravesend, who is in the Brooklyn at 95 pounds, shows up in most excellent condition after his twelve days' trip from California.

THE cowboy race to the World's Fair will start from Chadron, Neb., and will end at Buffalo Bill's grounds in Chicago. Mr. Cody has added $500 to the $1,000 already offered.

FROM Sheephead Bay word comes that Colonel North's Idlesleigh worked a mile and a quarter in 2:19 with 130 pounds up—a good move for a horse that is essentially a sprinter.

REMUS, the Brutus—Leda colt in the Elmwood Stables, has shown some of the best work imaginable—in private. But the brown colt has a bad leg, and has generally wound up last in his races.

THE famous English jockey, J. Watts, who was under contract to ride for the late Abingdon Baird, having become released by the latter's death, has now signed a three years' contract to ride for Sir John Blundell Maple for a retainer of $10,000 per year.

H. D. BROWN, who did excellent work with the flag at Oakland last winter, has been engaged to do all the starting (of gallopers) on the Montana circuit this season, and in all likelihood will send the fields of horses on their journey at Seattle and Portland.

A St. Louis dispatch says: "J. C. Alexander, of this city, sold to-day to Al Orth, owner of the North Star stables, the brown filly Minnie L., four years old, by Iroquois, dam Fannie Mattingly, and the bay filly Nellie Peare, same age, by Iroquois, dam Boulotte. The price is private, but is said to be $4,000."

SINFAX, holder of the two-year-old record at one and one-quarter miles, 2:07 1/2, is making a season in the stud at Lakeview, Oregon, at $25 the season, with usual return privilege. This is a mighty small service fee, considering his breeding and individuality, and the further fact that he was a wonderful race horse.

COLONEL S., a three-year-old brother to Phillips & Ottinger's great horse Wildwood, won a good race (mile and fifty yards) in the mud on the 12th inst. at Louisville, Ky. This colt was sold by Billy Murry, of Sacramento, when he crossed the Rockies last season, and was bred by H. C. Judson, of Santa Clara.

BUCKRENE, the winner of the Iroquois Stakes at Nashville, is by Buchanan, son of imp. Buckden, out of the blind mare Irene, that a few years ago came up out of the bushes in the Southwest, and ran over almost every sprinter in the Western country. His race in the Iroquois stamps him as a colt of no ordinary merit.

WASHINGTON PARK, during the present fine weather, is undergoing a thorough overhauling. New earth is being put over the track, and the turns thrown up and made wider. The lawn in front of the club house is being decorated in the gardener's best skill, and everything is being done to make the track unusually attractive this year.

IDA GLENN, Dan Miller's game little mare, runs well for an eleven-year-old. She is by Glen Elm, dam Queen, by Lynx. Regal, the Regent gelding in the Suisun Stable, is twelve years of age, and also a native of Montana. Cyclone, the Ironclad sprinter, is eleven, Jack Brady nine. These are the oldest horses racing in California that we can call to mind at present.

LODI, the consistent hay gelding now controlled by S. B. Smith, is bred to go the route, though the opinion prevails that he is only a sprinter. Lodi is by Ned Parkinson (son of the famous Lodi), dam (we are informed) a sister to the renowned race mare, Nell Flaherty, owned by George Treat in the early 70's, therefore being by Rifleman, dam Jennie Hull, by Belmont.

AT St. Louis the pool-room keepers are in trouble. The St. Louis Jockey Club are determined to prevent down-town rooms from receiving the results of the races. They have notified Gardner & Ditmus, who control the Western Union racing service, that if St. Louis pool-rooms are furnished with results of races at the Fair Grounds they will remove all telegraphic instruments from the track.

AN attachment has been obtained in this city against William O'B. Macdonough of San Francisco for $3,250 in favor of Treacy & Wilson of Lexington, Ky. Of that amount $2,500 was for the stallion Dr. Nave, which they claimed was purchased by John H. Mackey as agent for Mr. Macdonough, but which purchase the latter repudiated.—New York Times.

THE loss of an annual revenue approximating $2,000,000 will be the effect on the Western Union Telegraph Company by the closing of the pool-rooms in New York. It is estimated that the number of pool-rooms doing business in New York prior to their closing by Superintendent Byrnes was about 100, and these were taxed $75 per day each by the Western Union, a net income of $7,500 being collected daily in advance on an average. The pool-rooms were opened 300 days in a year, thus making a total of $2,250,000 per annum.

H. D. BROWN, the well-known turfman, has decided to sell off his race horses and embark in the business of sending thoroughbreds off on their journeys in quest of glory and coin. Mr. Brown, as a starter, made an unqualified hit at the Oakland winter meeting, and as he is a horseman that likes to see everyone get a fair deal, will give it at all times and commands the respect of jockeys and owners, he cannot but be successful in his chosen calling. We predict that he will make a name for himself as a flag-wielder second to no man in America, for he knows how to start horses, is thoroughly impartial when officiating in this capacity, and is as firm as a rock.

ONE of the fastest races ever run in England was that of Juvenal, who won the Nottingham Spring handicap on March 27th last, be going the mile in 1:38 1-5. Juvenal is a four-year-old, and carried 100 pounds. The only horse which holds a better record for a mile in England is Bendigo, who, in 1855, won the Lincolnshire handicap at a mile in 1:36 4-5 with 117 pounds up. He was then five years old.

A LETTER from Nashville states that "Tom Griffin's Henry Young, winner of the Cumberland Prize, worth $4,710, without whip or spur, after being thrown clean to his knees by The King, outclasses any three-year-old for gameness and staying qualities in the West, and will have the Hawthorne Derby and other Chicago stakes at his mercy this summer." He is by Duke of Montrose, dam Perfection, and cost $1,800 as a yearling.

IF Geraldine, Red Dick and April Fool has been in the first race last Saturday, one of half a mile, the greatest collection of Pacific Coast sprinters would have been completed. Gypsy Girl had run the distance in 0:47 with 119 up, Red-light had shown 48 seconds, Nellie Van (in her work) better than 48 seconds, Cyclone had run it in a race in 0:48, while Happy Day, Jack the Ripper and Thornhill have broken several watches in their private trials.

SANTA ANITA horses did excellent work last Saturday. Esperanza won a sprint race at St. Louis while her little namesake was giving dust to Sir Reel and Tigress in San Francisco. At Louisville, on the same date, Lady Bess, by Emperor of Norfolk—Arittita, won the Louisville Hotel Handicap, mile and a sixteenth, in 1:49, defeating the crack Clifford and others. This win of the California miss will send her odds in the American Derby down from 100 to 1 to 50, at the least.

THE horses trained by Orville Appleby, of the Encino Stable, have recently been in far better shape than those of any other horseman at Bay District track, as evidenced by the grand victories of Little Esperanza and St. Patrick. Orville Appleby is not only thorough, but as square a turfman as lives in any country. A person can always feel certain that if his horses have the ability to do so they will win, and there is a good deal of satisfaction these days in feeling that one gets "a run for the money."

CHAUNCEY TREADWELL, who rode Revolver in the Lime Kiln Club Suburban last Saturday, is a very successful young colored trainer that has become too heavy to ride during the past two years, though he was a most excellent jockey in his day. Chauncey used to work for George Lorillard, in fact, was employed by that turfman for years. In California Treadwell has made a remarkable record in the saddle. He has ridden but four times (all welter-weight races), and has been in front with his mount at the finish on every occasion—a great showing, truly, and one Chauncey should be proud of.

THE great two-year-old colt known to the public as Pop Gray is, according to his owner, Shep Williams, running under a false name. The colt was named Pop Graves, and is entered in Western stakes as such. He was entered in an East St. Louis purse some time ago as Pop Graves, but owing to a misprint the colt's name appeared as Pop Gray. Williams says he tried to get the entry corrected, but did not succeed. The colt is one of the best in the West and will have to race as Pop Gray until Williams corrects the error, which he will have to do through the American Turf Congress.

A CHICAGO daily quotes Edward Corrigan, the President of the Chicago Racing Association, as follows: "Hawthorne will close on November 1. I think winter racing is dead in Chicago, and I am glad of it. I hate to have it said I ever ran a winter race-track. I am not sorry I did it, for I was bound to crush out that gang at Roby. I was bound not to let them get a foothold. But I don't like it. As winter racing goes I think Hawthorne gave great satisfaction. We tried to prevent jobs and to have racing on its merits, and we succeeded just as well as any winter track could. But I am not in favor of winter racing and never have been, and, what is more, I never will be."

HERE is what a writer on the New York Spirit of the Times had to say of Diablo (the Brooklyn Handicap winner) in the issue of May 10, 1893, five days before the race took place: "Diablo was moved a mile and a quarter for the first time this year, doing the distance in satisfactory time and manner. The fractional times of his trial were 0:26 1/2, 0:52 1/2, 1:05 1/2, 1:18 1/2, 1:32, 1:45 1/2, 1:59, 2:13. Diablo is a horse that does not require a great deal of work, and it is doubtful if another bard trial will be given him. Diablo and Taral is a combination that cannot be considered out of the handicap by any manner of means."

THE Jockey Club of England has made the following amendment to the Rules of Racing: "Nor shall a broodmare which is in the forfeit list be qualified to be entered in a produce stake." This is a wise step in turf legislation, especially for England, where produce stakes are so numerous. Breeders enter largely, and if they do not race, but sell, it is impossible to collect the forfeits, as they never come to the scales. Meantime they can sell their valuable foals and do a good business without settling their just debts. The new rule holding the mare will check this evil. It is perfectly legal, as in produce stakes it is the mare which is nominated, and the nomination qualifies her prospective progeny. The action of the Jockey Club in scorning to swell their entries at the sacrifice of honor and principle shows a commendable sporting spirit—as commendable as it is unfashionable.

VIVANDIERE, the winner of the Thora Stakes at Cumberland Park, Nashville, Tenn., is a handsome brown filly with a few roan hairs in her coat, a blaze in her face, and four white feet. She stands 15 hands 1 inch, is quite lengthy, has a good body and weighs about 800 pounds. Vivandiere is by the Suburban winner, Troubadour, out of Enkonka (full sister to Reporter), by Enquirer; second dam Bonnie Meade (the half-sister to E. F. Fallon's Tallada and dam of Basil Duke, Exile, Nellie B., C. H. Gilcock, etc.), by Bonnie Scotland. Vivandiere's engagements are the great Eclipse, Cassanova, Dunmow and Fashion Stakes at Morris Park; the Double Event at Sheephead Bay; the August stakes at Monmouth Park; the Hurst-bourne and Runnymede at Louisville; the Clipsetta, Sen-starr, Zoo Zoo and Kentucky Central Stakes at Latonia; the Lakeview Handicap and Quickstep Stake at Washington Park; and the Lassie and Chicago Horseman Stakes at Hawthorne. It is probable she will be sent East after the Latonia races in start in some of the big stakes. She was cut off in one of her races at Memphis, otherwise her people think she would have won.

IN examining the legs of a horse the purchaser should first stand with his face to the broadside of the horse as he stands on the level ground and observe whether he rests perpendicularly on all his legs, having the natural proportion of his weight on each straightly, squarely and directly, or whether he stands with all his legs straddled out, or with all drawn together under the center of his belly as if he were trying to stick them all into a hat; or, lastly, whether he favors one or more of his legs either by pointing it forward or by placing it in any position in which no weight at all or a very small stress of weight is thrown upon it.

THE following dispatch came from Chicago last Saturday: "The fate of the old Garfield Park track seems to be sealed. The City Council last night ordered five streets extended through the grounds, and as soon as the Department of Public Works take action as ordered the racetrack will be no more." Garfield Park track is one of the safest, fastest and best in all America, and the grand stand is a mammoth affair capable of seating over 15,000 persons comfortably. It seems too bad that this place should be torn up. However, it would not have met such a fate had there not been such a bitter fight between the managers of Garfield and Hawthorne Parks, and had not attention been called day in and day out to these officials through the medium of a sensation-loving daily press. Had the Messrs. Hankins and Corrigan joined hands, shut up one of the tracks in the fall and both during the winter, Garfield Park, a most beautiful spot, might have been allowed to remain, notwithstanding Chicago has been built up all around it.

THE LARK, who has been beating some of the real good ones among the youngsters lately, is a brother to Alfarata and the result of a cross that has seldom if ever proved unsuccessful in the line of racing—the Wildidle-Monday. Wildwood is bred the same way, as are lots of others that have achieved distinction as race horses. These two horses (Wildidle and Monday) have done more to attract attention to this State as a breeding center than any horses ever brought to our shores. Williamson's Belmont lived at a time when there were few thoroughbred mares in the State, but wherever he was mated with one of these a race horse almost invariably resulted from the union. Owen Dale, Langford and Bonnie Belle were notable instances. Grinstead has been a most successful sire, but it must be remembered that he has had some of the best American-bred mares in his harem to be found. What a success that son of Grinstead and Katy Pease (Judge McKinstry) would have proved if he had been given some good mares! It is a pity that horse died without being given an opportunity to prove his great worth.

THE jockeys that have secured licenses to ride on Turf Congress tracks are as follows: Mike Costello, W. H. Cole, Charles Durnell, Rich Fishburn, Ed. Frazer, William Fairgood, W. S. Fox, Joe Flynn, Wallace Graham, Leon Gemoets, F. L. Gardner, Thomas Griffin, John T. Gorman, Julius Blair, Lee Brown, Warner Baker, Will Beatty, G. W. A. Bellairs, Lee Blevins, Brad Blevins, Jere Blevins, Clarence Bryant, Thomas Britton, Joe West, William White, George Withers, Alonzo Clayton, Felix Carr, George Hamline, Ed. Henderson, M. Hennessey, J. Hill, R. Jones, Thomas Kiley, E. J. Kehoe, William Kunze, James L. Lawrence, John Larkin, Ollie Lavissey, George Le Crvs, J. J. McCafferty, John McCann, John McDonald, J. W. Mitchell, Charles Macklin, E. J. Newington, Nelson Porter, William Perkins, Joseph Perkins, John Paul, Fred Richardson, Charles Rowe, J. Reagan, H. Ray, Lester Reiff, George Seaman, H. Shields, T. Sargent, Louis Soden, John Seguin, Louis Stevenson, Charles Thorpe, J. Vignes, R. Williams, Ollie Wooster.

W. H. CHEFFT, who is one of the oldest bookmakers on the turf, to-day, acting for the owner and a party of his friends, closed the book on M. D. Richardson's Derby entry, Voorbies, a gray colt by Longfellow, out of Aconite, betting $200 against $15,000, while another party placed $50 against $2,000 on the Kentucky stable's entry, Ingomar, for the same race, says the Chicago Dispatch. "What do you know about Voorbies?" I asked Cheffu. "Not a thing on earth," was the reply, "save both that he is a good-looking fellow who traces back to Lightning, from whom he gets his color. It is too early for anyone to know very much about their colts yet, and this fellow was only brought in from the farm the day I left Lexington. Every man that has an American Derby candidate in Kentucky has a big following, and 'Mack' Richardson is no exception to the rule. All of Mack's friends are anxious to have a bet on his horse, and so they have clubbed together and made up the purse that I have placed. The odds against him when I left home were 100 to 1, but somebody placed a hundred on him before I got here, and cut the odds down to 75 to 1, at which price I got in. From what I can see now I judge there will be a great big field of starters, and the man who can pick the winner now will be entitled to a chromo."

LATE on Friday evening thirteen horses belonging to W. O'Brien Macdonough, the young California millionaire, who has just gone into racing, arrived at the track. A few of them wintered at Jerome Park. Henry Walsh, who is in charge, has secured the range of stalls close to the Boulevard which "Lucky" Baldwin once occupied. The string left San Jose, Cal., April 24th. They had a rough and wet journey. Fourteen started, but The Doctor, full brother to Gold Dollar, died of pneumonia soon after they passed Denver. Just before reaching Pittsburg the partitions in one of the cars broke away, four or five horses fell down, and though fortunately none had any bones broken, they were so knocked about and strained that it will be fully a month before they are fit to work. Grandee, Galaxy, and two others are badly cut about the hips. When a New-York Times man saw them yesterday many were lying down in the straw, but enough was seen to show that they are a good, level, likely-looking lot. Most of them are two-year-olds. The full list is: Grandee, gr c, 3, by Warwick—Helen Scratch; blk c, 2, by Darchin—Alfarata; chestnut colt, 2, by Sir Modred—Tourmaline (a full brother to Fitzsimmons and a big, powerful colt, with a splendid set of legs); Spelex, ch c, 2, by Sir Modred—Schoolgirl; Aurelio, b c, 2, by Sir Modred—Aurelia; King Bowl, b c, 2, by Sir Modred—Mabel (full sister to King Fox and perhaps the best of the lot on looks); Dorin, b c, 2, by Sir Modred—Glendora; Amiel, ch c, 2, by imp. Kingston—Jewelry, by War Dance; Monowai, b c, 3, by Midlothian—Eliza, by Joe Hooker; Corsicade, b f, 2, by imp. Cyrus—imp. Getaway (a beautiful, truly-built filly); Milan (full sister to Sir Walter), ch f, 2, by Midlothian—La Scala; Flina, b f, 2, by Darchin—Fleurette; Galaxy, b f, 2, by imp. Galore—Glendalia, and Miss Marlowe, b f, 2, by imp. Cheviot—Mary Anderson.—N. Y. Times, May 8.

THE FARM.

Song of the Farmer.

J. WHITCOMB RILEY.

There's a prejudice allus 'twixt country and town
Which I wisht in my heart wasn't so.
You take city people, jest square up and down,
And they're mighty good people to know;
And whare's better people aivvin' to-day
Than us in the country? 'Yi good.
As both of us is, we're divorced, you might say,
And won't compermise when we could.

Now as nigh into town for your pap, ef you please,
Is the what's called the suburbs. For there
You'll at least ketch a whiff of a breeze and a sniff
Of the breath of wildflowers everywhere.
They's room for the children to play and grow, too,
And to roll in the grass or to climb
Up a tree and roh nests, like they orten to do,
But they'll do anyhow 'ev'ry time!

My son-in-law said when he lived in the town,
He jest natchudly pined, night and day,
For a sight of the woods or an acre of ground,
Where the trees was tall and cleared away.
And he says to me on't whist a-visiting us
On the farm: "It's not strange, I declare,
That we can't coax you folks without raisin' a fuss,
To come to town, visitin' there."

And says I: "Then get back where you sorto belong—
And Madaline, too—and yer three Little children," says I, "that don't know a bird song,
Nor a hawk from a chick-des-dee,
Git back," I says-I, "to the hinc sky."
And the green of the fields and shine
Of the sun with a laugh in yer voice and yer eye
As hearty as mother's and mine."

Well—long and short of it—he's compermissed some—
He's moved in the suburbs, and now
They don't have to coax when they want us to come,
'Cause we turn in and go anyhow.
For there—well they's room for the song and perfume
Of the grove and the old orchard ground,
And they's room for the children out there and they's room
Fer their graa' pap to waller 'em round.

Young Boars.

Many persons who have a stock of common hogs they wish to improve by buying a thoroughbred boar fail to realize their expectations and lay the blame on the party they bought of, while the true cause of failure is almost always their own. A fine young animal is bought and is turned in with a lot of sows and other hogs and allowed to run with them, and quite often neighbors see or hear of the hog, his looks and qualities, and an arrangement is made to have the hog taken over to their farm for a few weeks, and the consequence is the hog is stunted, loses vitality, and his progeny are very poor specimens. The hog is either not properly fed or if he is fed enough the food is not suitable. It is quite likely to be corn and nothing but corn. This is the case more than likely where hogs have been running on a range for years. Now the range has become settled up the farmers find their "wind splitters" are not profitable and have determined to act on that wise suggestion—"buy a thoroughbred boar and improve your herd by crossing with your common sows."

Nearly all boars sent out by breeders are young, say from six to ten months old, which if properly managed will give better satisfaction than older ones. They are more thrifty and stand change of conditions and climate better. When a young hog comes he should be put in a good large inclosure where he may graze and root at will, but he should be fed twice a day, enough to keep him in good growing condition, but not too fat. Shorts or fine bran, wet up with skim-milk and dish water, make good feed. Give plenty of good fresh water to drink. He should have a variety of food, such as small hoiled potatoes, cabbage, etc. I have found that summer squash and kohlrabi boiled and fed with a little shorts will make pigs weigh one hundred pounds when they are one hundred days old. A little corn should always be fed in cold weather. It is always best to have the boar gentle; handle him while young, scratch and rub him when he is eating. Never hit him or drive him about to make him wild. He may be taught to follow you or be gently driven anywhere you want him to go if he is not afraid of you, and soon learns to look for a reward for good conduct.

A young boar should only serve a very few sows until he is fifteen or sixteen months old. A sow to be served should always be in full heat and placed in a pen by herself and made as quiet and contented as possible. The boar should be gently driven to her pen and let in through a gate and not lifted or thrown over the fence. Immediately after the sow is served, and that but once, he should be taken back to his own yard and the sow allowed to remain in her own pen for three or four days. Too much care cannot be taken of a good animal, but do not pamper them up by over-feeding or by keeping them in heated or glass windowed houses. Give them shade in hot summer weather and a good warm dry place to sleep in in the winter, but never let their sleeping places become filthy or full of dry dust. A cold, wet day has often proved fatal to pigs two or three months old in a few hours. Cold and wet weather seem to hurt worse in the south than further north. They seem to take something like pneumonia and die in ten or twelve hours after they show signs of sickness; but if a hog dies down here it is said he died of cholera or from eating cottonseed, no matter what the symptoms of the disease were.

Weight of Cattle by Measurement.

To determine the weight of cattle by measurement several rules have been presented to the public, but one of the authorities on the subject says that there is no rule that comes nearer than good guessing, and that no two animals will weigh alike according to measurement. The same authority further remarks that a rule as good as any is to find the superficial feet by multiplying the girth just behind the shoulder blade by that of the length from the fore part of the shoulder blade to the root of the tail. Thus an ox girthing seven feet nine inches and measuring six feet in length would contain seven and three-fourths times six, or forty-six and one-half superficial feet. For cattle, grass fed, the following is given as the weight per superficial foot:

|-----------------------------|-----------|
| Girth less than 3 feet..... | 11 pounds |
| Girth 3 to 5 feet..... | 16 pounds |
| Girth 5 to 7 feet..... | 23 pounds |
| Girth 7 to 9 feet..... | 31 pounds |

Thus the steer, as per above measurements, should weigh 46.50 by 31, or 1411 pounds gross. Under this rule it is usual to deduct one pound in twenty on half-fattened cattle, from fifteen to twenty pounds on a cow having had a calf, and if not fat an equal amount. The author of this rule suggests its use only in the absence of the scale.

The Berkshire.

[A paper by Geo. W. Berryton, Kan., read before the Kansas Improved Stock Breeders' Association.]

The origin, development and improvement of the Berkshire hog form a respectable portion of the improved breeds of live-stocks. Conscious of this fact, we may not, with propriety, attempt to add anything of importance to the volumes which have been written about the much-admired breed; and what we shall say will be in reference to matters of interest on the history, characteristics and management of the Berkshire.

Being the first breed of swine to have established records, no other can lay as valid claim to authentic and remote origin, established by reliable evidence, tracing the breed distinct and certain more than a century, and following the lines just as certain back one or two more centuries.

The Secretary of the British Berkshire Society, in an article on this favorite English breed, traces the identity of the breed in the county of Berks to the beginning of this century, with such certainty as to lead him to believe the Berkshire may be traced back another couple of centuries. For instance: "The points of color, though desirable in those days, seem to have been in correspondence with our present markings; a dash of white in the face, four white feet, a tip to the tail, and generally a few white hairs on one or both elbows, also a patch somewhere under the throat." He states "that such distinctive points on a background have been a characteristic of the breed for over seventy years, and that they were bred with as much certainty as to color then as they can be now." In speaking of cross-breeds, Mr. Humphrey, the Secretary, says: "It is a matter of certainty that they were never used in any of the herds of that time that were carefully bred. If they had, it would come out occasionally now." It is said that in those times the owner would wager with a neighbor on the uniform markings of an expected litter of pigs. One of our countrymen, Mr. A. B. Allen, of New York, who visited England as long ago as 1841, and who made the subject one of special researches, inquiries and observations, and who wrote an essay nearly twenty years ago, noting the characteristic of the improved Berkshire as described by several aged men in different parts of Berkshire, who had personal knowledge of the breed as far back as 1780, and who stated that the breed at that early time possessed as great perfection as in 1841. Mr. Allen says: "Thus it will be seen that the improvement is now at least a century old, and more probably a century and a quarter; for it would have taken some years back of 1780 to begin a new breed of swine, and get it up to a fixed type at that period."

This fixity of type in color and markings, with size, quality of meat, early maturity and feeding qualities and adaptability to climatic influences are the glowing traits which have sent the Berkshire forth conquering and to conquer wherever civilization has made it possible for improved breeds to advance.

While the description given of the breed, even in its early history, almost fits the ideal Berkshire of to-day, yet the finishing qualities have been much improved of late years. The head is finer, the neck is shorter, the hock, if possible, is better quality, with greater depth and length of body, retaining all the size with improved style and finish.

The first authentic importation of Berkshires into this country was in 1823, followed by others in 1832, 1833, 1839 and 1841. These were scattered mainly through New York, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri and the South. Strange to say, the greater part of those early importations were bred out and the pedigrees forgotten, and would not be worthy of further thought were it not for the fact that the state of neglect in which they were left to run in the woods gave cause to the dislike and prejudice which arose and exists to a certain extent to-day against the "little black prick-eared Berkshire." But while the breeders in the United States lost interest in the Berkshire in the years preceding and during the war, at the same time the breed was being handled and improved with that degree of skill which has made England famous as the home of our best breeds of cattle, sheep and swine. It is due to the importations from England since the civil war that the magnificent herds have been built up in Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas. These late importations, with the stock bred from them, constitute what is known as the large or English Berkshire, as distinguished from the little Berkshire of former years.

No representative breeder of Berkshire to-day will keep a sow of less than 500 pounds weight at maturity, or use a boar of less than 700 to 750 lbs. at maturity in good flesh. The produce of such sires and dams of this breed when properly mated possess a marked tendency to lay on flesh easily at any age, a characteristic that has fairly earned for the pigs a reputation for early maturity.

The pigs often reach 100 pounds at the age of one hundred days. We had five pigs of one litter which averaged fifty-six and one-half pounds at the age of fifty-six days, a small fraction over a pound a day at less than two months of age. Five pigs of another litter averaged seventy-eight pounds at the age of eighty days, and 108 pounds at one hundred days, making an average daily gain at that period, immediately after being weaned, of one and two-fifths pounds per day. These five pigs weighed 285 pounds at seven months, making an average gain during the last hundred and ten days of one and three-fourths pounds, less a very small fraction. My father butchered some Berkshires at the age of nine months which dressed 302 pounds. They had ordinary keeping on the farm. Two of his pigs dressed 300 pounds each at eight months. They were runts put up in a pen and fed slops. Longfellow's Model, a boar now in our herd, at exactly ten months weighed 446 pounds, an average of almost one and one-half pounds the first three hundred days of his life. A Kansas breeder some years ago claimed a sow weighing 500 pounds at nine months. Twenty-three head of barrows, registered Berkshires, at the American Fat Stock Show, in 1886, the average age of which was thirteen months and twenty-one days, averaged 440 pounds in weight, and it is said, they included all the runts of a certain celebrated breeder's crop of pigs. These figures and statements are not made for the purpose of boasting or to disparage other breeds, but rather to substantiate by facts the claims of Berkshire breeders to the early maturing, easy feeding qualities and ready fitness for market at any age. We believe that, taken for size and finish, combined with early maturity, and considering the quality of the hams and bacon, the Berkshire stands without a rival.

As an outcome of one steady line of improvement, we have a hog well-nigh approaching the ideal. The Berkshire among swine is what the Shorthorn is among cattle—the poor man's taxpayer, rent-payer and mortgage-lifter; and what the thoroughbred is among horses—the standard of comparison, and the source from which many late-improved breeds have largely drawn. "The height of one man's ambition is to produce a hog that is heavier than the Berkshire; of another one that will feed as well; or one that is as prolific and hardy; or that will graze as well; or that will produce as fine hams and bacon; or in some one or more ways resemble the Berkshire—the pattern hog."—Swine Breeders' Manual.

Selection and management.—As pointed out before, the sire should be large. He cannot be too large if free from coarseness. He should be broad between the eyes, with well-dished face, snout rather broad but tapering. His jaw should be medium to heavy; ears fine, soft and erect; neck short; chest broad and deep; back broad and moderately arched; rump nearly level with the hock; body of good length and depth, smooth and even; ribs well sprung, and straight sides; shoulders thick but sloping smoothly to the body and down the forearm; ham broad and deep, and well rounded down to hock; hock strong; neat, short legs, and standing firmly upon the feet; hair fine, close, and no bristles; markings clear white, distinct and even; carriage stylish; disposition docile, and a quiet, easy feeder. The points of the sow are much the same as in the boar. She may be thinner in the shoulder, and she should be extra fine and well dished in the face, with short nose. In size she should approach the medium, with smooth quality, rather than large with much coarseness.

This paper is already too long to devote much time to "management," a question which may be started at any point and never exhausted. The Berkshire has been called a rustler. He probably can exist under as varied and unfavorable circumstances as any member of the genus Sus. However, the best specimens of the breed are not found standing on their heads, in some field or marsh, rooting and hunting for a morsel, or lying comfortable in the shelter of a narrow plank fence from the howling blasts of winter, or in the shade of a barbed-wire fence or a sunflower weed from the heat of a mid-summer sun. On the contrary, they have ever been found ready throughout the long history of development and improvement to respond to rational treatment in the way of good shelter and good feed by netting satisfactory weights. The native of a country great in richness of resources, great in production of grains and grasses essential to make growth in flesh and size of carcass, it is natural and essential that an animal possessing the great assimilating powers of the Berkshire must be dependent upon the environments of improved live-stock husbandry. These environments are found on the well-regulated farm; and the foundation elements consist of grain, grass and the dairy. These are found nowhere else in the world to greater advantage than in the great Mississippi basin and its valleys—the adopted home of the Berkshire.

Dairy Notes.

The dairy farmer who knows about what income he may expect each week can gauge his expenses according to his means much better than the man whose income depends upon the sale of wheat or some other crop that he only realizes profit from once a year.

In testing milk with the Babcock machine it has been found that the morning's milk is richer than the night's, because the cow goes through less motion at night, and all motion robs the milk of fat. This is a great argument for keeping the cows stabled all winter, if not all the year round.

Do not wait for more than three days' cream to accumulate in order to get "enough for a churning." Three times a week is none too often, and the butter will come with less labor, and there will be less chance of litter butter or butter-milk. We would prefer to churn three times a week than twice or once, as we think it could be done with less labor, and know it would be sure to make better butter.

A traveler asked a dairyman how it came that his cows were all so perfect as regarded milking quality. The owner replied: "When I find a good cow I buy her. When a cow does not come up to my expectations I sell her. When I get a really good one I keep her." If every dairyman in the country would adopt that policy their bank accounts would wax fat, and it would be but a few years before they would be denounced by their less fortunate fellows as capitalists and bloated monopolists.

The Jerseys seem to have the inside track in the coming dairy test at the world's fair. It was announced some months ago that Holsteins, the closest competitors of the Jerseys in the dairy class, would not be entered in the tests; more recently the Ayrshire breeders decided to take no part in the test; and now the owners of the red polled cattle which had been imported for the express purpose of entering them in the test have decided not to compete. It seems that all the rules and regulations governing the proposed test have been dictated by the Jersey men, and are of such a character as to effectually preclude the possibility of a fair competition. The result is that the owners of cows of other breeds refuse to make any entries, and the test, which it was expected would offer a very fair indication as to the relative merits of the different dairy breeds, will be little more than an exhibition of what Jerseys can do in the way of butter production under the best and most favorable conditions. It will be of some value as it is, but it would have been infinitely more valuable in the dairymen and cattle breeders if it could be conducted on a basis that would permit of fair and equitable competition.

In some dairy localities no calves are raised and pigs are scarce. In such cases it is economical to feed skim-milk to the cows. Deep setting or a separator on the farm will be necessary, as separator milk which is returned from a public creamery is not, as a rule, fit to feed cows. Such milk is often partially decomposed. Mr. J. E. Dorman reports the following in Hoard's Dairyman: We have been practicing it here with very good results. The milk is taken directly from the separator and given to the cows while yet warm and sweet. In every case the flow of milk has been increased, some cows showing an increase of fifteen pounds a day. The herd is made up mostly of pure-bred Holsteins, which are naturally very large eaters, but I notice those that get skim-milk do not eat as much hay as before. When a cow gets a good drink of warm milk just before she is called upon to contribute her share of the produce she is perfectly contented to stand still, and does so with good grace. Should any one have trouble in getting the cows to drink, a little grain mixed with the milk will, in most cases, induce them to taste of it, and, when once they get to drinking, they become very fond of their warm drink.

THE KENNEL.

Dog owners are requested to send for publication the earliest possible notices of whelps, sales, names claimed, presentations and deaths in their kennels, in all instances writing plainly names of sire and dam, and of grandparents, colors, dates and breed.

One Note and Then the Chorus.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Under the caption "A voice from the foothills on the judges' decision in the English setter class," Mr. C. A. Loud sees fit to attack the awards of Mr. Geo. Raper in the above class, and at the same time to cast insinuation on the Bench Show committee and myself in particular.

It is useless to take up the defense of the above-mentioned committee, as those gentlemen are too well known for Mr. Loud's article to attain its object, but his letter is misleading and I desire to call attention of your readers to its inaccuracies.

He has the goodness to say that Mr. Raper may be a judge of pointers, greyhounds, foxterriers, etc., etc., but if Mr. Loud is not more conversant with the above named breeds, than his judgment on the above named breeds indicate, as shown in his criticism, I fail to see the effect of his compliment to Mr. Raper in the breeds he has mentioned. I can hardly understand the remarks of Mr. Loud when he starts out by asserting that my wins under Mr. Raper are correct, and that I (in his opinion) am entitled to the wins and positions my dogs were placed in, and before the ink has dried covering this assertion Mr. Loud complicates matters by drawing comparisons, and states "in his opinion our American judges would have placed Belle T. over Flake L. while Mr. Loud has already admitted that Flake L. was entitled to the place she was awarded, and he virtually claims that our American judges would have reversed both Mr. Raper and himself in this decision; surely this must be a reflection on the good judgment of "our American judges," and if this be the intent of Mr. Loud's article I will give him another chance and go him one better; I will not take the best show bitch I have either, to make things interesting, I will make the following proposition, viz: I will agree to deposit a sufficient sum of money to pay expenses, against an equal amount of Mr. Loud's, to be placed in the hands of any responsible party, and we will determine the ability of our American judges in English setters, I to send my third best bitch Dottie Day, and Mr. Loud to send any English setter that was exhibited at the last bench show of The Pacific Kennel Club, to the World's Fair bench show, the dog being placed the highest in the class to take the money in hands of stakeholder; whereas, I am perfectly satisfied with Mr. Raper's judgment in this matter, I feel that Mr. Loud is in the wrong and I wish to prove to his entire satisfaction that Mr. Raper has done as any good American judge would do in this case. Mr. Loud states that I have a kennel—that I do not breed my bitches—that my dogs when not in training are kept in a livery stable in San Francisco, and that the Shenandoah Kennels (Loud's) was the only kennel showing a stud dog. Now, to the above I desire to state for Mr. Loud's information that my kennels are located in Geyserville, Sonoma county, Cal., and it was at this place that Dottie Day and Flake L. were reared. If I do not breed my bitches who should have the credit of breeding Dottie and Flake, who, with their dam, were the best three specimens of English setters exhibited at the show.

I find that a box-stall in a first-class livery stable a very desirable place to house my bitches during their sojourn in San Francisco, and I wish right here to refute the idea that the last-mentioned place is their home.

Let me ask Mr. Loud why he should send his bitches to San Francisco, to be bred to such dogs as Starlight and Fred W., if his Dictator is a worthy subject to win a prize in a bench show as one of the principal exhibits of the Shenandoah kennels?

It seems to me that Mr. Loud's policy is a wrong one in trying to force matters to win a prize through a technicality when his dogs do not come up to show form.

The Pacific Kennel Club has given prizes in previous shows for the best three dogs entered of the same breed irrespective of sex, and owned by one person or firm; while there is no rule established as to what shall constitute a kennel I consider the committee was correct in sustaining the judge under the circumstances, as the prize was offered without reserve, and I believe I had a right to compete and that Mr. Loud's protest was uncalled for.

Now to conclude, Mr. Loud, take my advice, stop howling—never compete unless you can suffer defeat—get next to yourself and get some good ones of your own, of proper type, and when you beat me as fairly as I have you, I will accept gracefully and will never object, nor cast innuendo toward the integrity of honest judges and committees. I remain your friend

Hugh McCrackin's handsome greyhound bitch Lady II Glendyne (29,250) has again added to her laurels by winning first prize at Seattle. This with her previous winnings at Los Angeles and San Francisco, makes her the champion bitch on the Coast and her owner has just cause to be proud of her.

World's Fair Kennel Exhibit.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I deem it best to call the attention of those interested in the Kennel Exhibit of the Exposition to the fact that the Committee on Awards of the National Commission under the general plan do not desire to make precedent that might be injurious to other exhibits by naming the judges for the Kennel Exhibit in advance of receiving entries. They appreciate fully the force of custom and their desire in common with the breeders and this department is for the best show possible. I can heartily endorse their interest and can assure exhibitors that the judges for this exhibit will be persons whose ability, integrity and prominence are such as will render them acceptable to exhibitors. I have waited until this late date for such a decision, hoping that I would be able to print a revival premium list containing some additional classes and corrections, with a list of judges. The late date at which this decision reached me renders it inadvisable to do this, consequently no edition of the premium list for the Kennel Exhibit will be issued other than the one now in force, until near June 1st, when a new edition of the entire Live Stock Premium List will be issued, containing all corrections up to June 1st. Copies of the present list with entry blanks can be had by addressing the undersigned. I deem it important to state that the date for closing entries in the Kennel Exhibit has been extended from May 20th to June 1st, and in addition to state that the Department of Live Stock has authority to create such additional classes in any division as in its judgment will add to the interest of the exhibit, and that this course will be pursued in the Kennel Division. Wherever a sufficient number of entries (ten) or in any breed not mentioned in the printed premium list, is offered, an additional class will be created with such premiums as seem proper.

Breeders and owners of dogs will, I trust, appreciate the earnestness and desire of this department to make the kennel exhibit one worthy of the kennel interests of this country, and I assure them I will do whatever lies in my power, either in the creation of separate classes or in any other way to make the kennel exhibit an unqualified success.

Mr. James Mortimer, superintendent of the exhibit, can be addressed on and after the 15th day of this month at Chicago.

I sincerely trust we shall have the continued encouragement and aid of all clubs, and take this manner of thanking the clubs we have generously offered special premiums and trophies and we have so frequently taken opportunity to show their interest and their support of this feature of the Live Stock Department.

Any information desired by those interested will be gladly furnished by this department. Very respectfully yours,

W. J. BREHANAN,
Chief, Department of Agriculture,
(In charge, Dept. of Live Stock.)

Coursing.

This sport comes properly under two heads, says John Mayer in his book on the dog; some persons keeping greyhounds wholly for the purpose of public racing for prizes, others using them merely as instruments of private amusement. In both cases, however, the rules for breeding, rearing and training, are essentially the same. There is a popular fallacy existing in many districts where coursing is only followed as a private pastime, that greyhounds for mountains and rough wild downs should not be too highly bred. There is a passage in Beckford that applies directly to such impressions:—"I have often heard, as an excuse for hounds not hunting a cold scent, that they were too high-bred. I confess I know not what that means; but this I know, that hounds are frequently too ill-bred to be of any service."

The fine thoroughbred greyhound, known to all coursers, is no new species (though, until the hare became the quarry in coursing, the wire-haired race was used as alone fit to pull down the mountain and forest deer), as, in its silky coat and blood-like shape, it is found in most of the pictures of Charles the First. No doubt it has since undergone many changes for the better, more especially in the crosses to which it was subjected by the skill and industry of the late Lords Orford and Rivers. All that the moderate courser of the present day has to attend to is, how he manages the best blood that he can now procure at little trouble and moderate outlay; of course the brief treatment of the subject in a work of this nature, is not intended for such as to keep large studs for public running.

The earlier in the year you breed, the better; late puppies rarely turn out well. When you put a favorite sort to the dog, it will be a serviceable precaution to have another bitch mated at the same time, which will enable you to rear all your litter without injury to the dam. The advantage from this system is, that you will have trial of all your produce; when you destroy any, you may destroy the best. This was Lord Orford's system; he never got rid of a puppy till he had experience of his quality. When the whelps are removed, it will serve the mother to give her some gentle medicine; three purging pills, one every other morning, will be found to set her right sooner than if nature were left to herself. For rearing greyhound puppies, the same general rules apply as with all others, except that being more delicate they require a greater share of care and attention. Their bitterest foe is distemper, so long considered as beyond all hope from human aid or skill. Modern improvement seems to have, at last, found a remedy for that formidable disease; in the Appendix a recipe is given, as infallible, upon an authority there is every reason to respect.

The maxim that "the good that is in a horse goes in at the mouth," is equally applicable to stock of all descriptions. Above all, let it be ever present with those who rear greyhounds—that if neglected in their youth, no after process avails them aught. Their food should be substantial, such as oatmeal and broth, very thick, oatmeal cakes made thick and soaked in tepid milk, and flesh hung up so that they may have to use exertion to reach it; the pulling at it giving liberty to the neck and strength to the jaws. Never confine them long. Constant exercise is as necessary to the development of their powers as judicious feeding. Let them accompany you as much as possible in your rides and walks—in the former, as they grow in strength and age, increasing the speed when an opportunity is afforded of doing so, without injury to their action, the certain consequences of fast work on roads or other hard surfaces. A greyhound, to be symmetrical, should be shark-jawed, prick-eared, with a long neck, thin withers, deep shoulders, broad-hooped back, broad loins, flat sides well let down, deep gaskins, straight legs, short from the hock to the pastern joint, thin feet, pointed, a very long fine stern, and large floating veins. It will improve greyhounds' looks, and save their health, to dress them daily with a moderately hard brush, using a little oil.

The disturbance raised over the judges to be chosen for the World's Fair kennel show continues. There does not seem to be much of a chance for candid comment as yet, upon this subject. It has been said that the American Kennel Club has made a demand on the authorities of the World's Fair for the names of the judges. A very peculiar proceeding we should say. Even the A. K. C. should not be so assuming as to demand anything from the World's Fair committee. A request couched in proper terms and setting forth whatever of reason that body may have deemed sufficient for having the announcement of judges in the kennel department to take precedence over all other commencements in the live stock exhibit, would have better served the purpose.

Any committee after listening to the howl sent out by numerous kennelmen anent this matter, would naturally be slow to throw out the bone of contention for the different factions to fight over.

Stop kicking over this matter, the kennel interests will be the better subserved by some united action. Sports and Amusements has the following to say on the question.

"It is said that the American Kennel Club has made a demand on the World's Fair authorities for the announcement of the names of the judges for the bench show, and that the committee on awards have refused to make known the names. John Boyd Thatcher, of New York, the chairman of the committee, bases his reasons for a refusal of the names on the grounds that if the demand of the American Kennel Club was complied with, all other exhibitors could demand a similar announcement. It is evident that Mr. Thatcher is unacquainted with the modus operandi of running dog shows. If he were he would know that the names of the judges is of the utmost importance in determining the number of entries. In no other exhibition of animals is so much stress laid upon having proper, competent men to judge. The dog, entering so deeply into the affections of mankind, he exceeds any other animal in the affection bestowed upon him by the human race, even almost as much as he returns that love. On this account no other exhibition excites so much interest, except it may be a baby show, as does a dog show.

If Mr. Thatcher understood this he would no doubt have no objection of giving to the world the names of the judges; if he continues to withhold them, he virtually strangles the dog show, and what would have been a great international exhibition is likely to dwindle down to a small local exhibit. Mr. Buchanan, the chief of the department of agricultural, says exhibitors may depend upon it that none but competent men will judge; that may be so, but dog breeders and exhibitors generally consider themselves the only judges of who are, and who are not, competent to decide on the merits of their pets, and unless they know the names of the judges, they will very likely refuse to enter, and leave the World's Fair dog show alone.

It is a great pity that this show, which was expected to be a record show in the annals of dogdom, is now almost doomed to become a fizzle; who are the responsible parties? Most decidedly a clique of New Yorkers, backed up by a Chicago alleged sporting paper, and the publication by that paper of a list of judges, many of whom were utterly distasteful to the great majority of dog owners in America. The World's Fair authorities of course went to the recognized authorities in dogdom, viz., the American Kennel Club; several of the men high up in that organization allowed their personal prejudices and enmities to stand in the way of the nomination of competent men of established reputation, and substituted the names of comparative novices in dog judging, while omitting the names of old, experienced judges and breeders, men who were dog judges and owners and breeders of prize winners for years before fashion or fancy induced the others to become identified with dog interests.

There can be no questioning the fact that the growth of the kennel interest on this coast has now reached such a stage as will insure smooth sailing for the future. The good dogs now owned on this coast, we are persuaded, will compare favorably with the dogs in any part of the country. This is a matter upon which every lover of good dogs is to be congratulated.

Who could have anticipated that so large and heavy an affair as the kennel show at the World's Columbian Exposition would go off without some friction. We trust that the parties interested will combine and help make a good show. There will be a long time in which to kick after it is over.

The American Kennel Club held a meeting on Thursday last to consider amendments to the constitution and by-laws of the club.

Advices from Seattle indicate that the bench show held there this week was in every way satisfactory.

THE GUN.

The Alameda Gun Club.

On Saturday last the Alameda Gun Club met at Oakland Shooting Park to celebrate their May meeting at the trap. There was a goodly attendance, and a most pleasurable afternoon was spent by the club membership. The birds were very strong and swift, giving the sportsmen all they could do to make satisfactory scores.

Mr. T. R. Barney always shoots well, and on this occasion scored twelve birds in the main match.

Mr. Hugo Sebroider covered himself with glory by doing the same neat work, all of his twelve birds falling neatly within bounds, and all save the first three at first shot.

Messrs. Wilkie and Mathews allowed but one bird each to escape them.

Messrs. Osborn and "Slade" scored ten out of the twelve fired at in the main match.

The following score for the club shows very well indeed as a whole. It stands:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Barney (2-2-2), Sebroider (2-2-2), Wilkie (1-2-2), Mathews (1-2-2), Osborn (2-2-1), Slade (2-2-1), McArthur (2-2-1), Morrison (2-2-1), Haskell (2-2-1), Adams (2-2-1), Capt. T. Knowles (2-2-0).

March scores were shot off as follows: Wilkie, 8; McArthur, 7; Mathews, 7; Haskell, 6.

The recent match, in which this club succeeded in scoring the victory, was the subject of much "light mention" by the membership generally.

The Recreation Gun Club.

On the first of the week the Recreation Gun Club met at Oakland Track for their monthly contest for the club's monthly prizes. The day was fine, the birds good and the shooting very fair, yet not fully up to the standard of this organization.

The score of the main match stood as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Echert (2-1-2), Slade (2-1-2), Barney (2-1-2), Worth (2-1-2), Simpson (2-2-0), Hughes (1-1-1), Allen (0-0-0), Randall (0-1-1), H. C. Golcher (0-0-0), Gere (0-0-0), Liddle (2-1-0).

Mr. F. S. Eckert, of San Diego, led the shooting, scoring eleven of possible twelve birds.

Messrs. "Slade," Barney and Worth took the prizes, which consisted of a combination camp knife, a hunting knife and a pair of hunting shoes.

The first pool resulted as follows:

The second pool gave the following result:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Simpson (2-2-1), Barney (1-1-2), Slade (0-1-2), Eddy (1-1-2), Worth (1-0-2).

In another event the following score was given:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Barney (1-1-2), Eddy (1-2-2), Fay (2-1-2).

Messrs. Barney and Eddy shot at six more birds and being still a tie, they divided the purse.

Inanimate Target Shooting.

On the first of the week the inanimate target shooting at the Oakland Shooting Park, under the management of Clabrough, Golcher & Co., was of the first interest. The manner in which this firm have provided for sport in this line is duly appreciated by every lover of the gun in this city and vicinity. On the occasion above mentioned the shooting was as follows.

The first match at 10 singles, $1 entrance, resulted as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Ecker (1-1-1), Levi (0-1-1), Allen (0-1-1), Slade (0-1-1), Thorn (1-1-0), Venker (1-1-0), Golcher (0-0-1), Mellish (0-0-1), Quinton (1-0-1), Karney (0-0-1).

The money followed the markings as above given.

Event second, was six pairs, $1 entrance. The result:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Ecker (11-11-10), Quinton (10-01-11), Levi (10-11-10), Golcher (10-11-10), Potter (11-10-11), Barney (10-00-11), Karney (10-11-10), Mellish (10-10-11), Slade (10-10-10), Thompson (00-10-10), James (01-01-00), Greener (00-10-00).

Ecker took first money, those scoring eight each divided equally the money in second and third purses.

A third event at 15 singles resulted as follows:

Levi and Barney divided first money; Golcher and Allen divided second and third.

Subsequently, Levi scored in another match 15 straight, Allen 13, Quinton 13, and Golcher 12.

Mr. E. Foster acted as referee and scorer to the complete satisfaction of all interested in the match, and indeed a better man could not be secured to keep the sport moving along in the best possible manner.

These events are steadily growing in interest. If you can not shoot inanimates you would have but little sport at the trap outside of San Francisco.

The Spoonbill Club.

There was a large attendance of members of the Spoonbill Shooting Club at the Red Men's picnic yesterday to shoot for the prizes offered, says Monday's Record Union. The shooting was at hlurocks (inanimate targets), twenty-five "birds" to the man, and the scores made were as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Stevens (11-11-11), Helms (11-11-11), Zentgraf (11-11-11), H. Hoxie (0-0-0), Mrs. Morrison (1-1-0), Burstin (1-0-1), Fitzgerald (0-1-1), Newbert (1-1-0), G. Hoxie (1-0-1), Chapman (0-0-0), Lyon (0-1-1), Gaffney (0-1-0), Flour (1-0-1), Soule (1-0-1), Tebbats (0-0-0), Bergan (0-0-0), Wubbeua (1-0-1).

Stevens won first money, $9; Helms, second money, $8; Zentgraf, third money, $7; H. Hoxie, fourth money, $6; Morrison and Burstin divided fifth and sixth moneys, $2.50 each; Fitzgerald, Newbert and G. Hoxie divided seventh money, $1 each.

Two Months' Shikar From Secunderabad.

We are exceedingly fortunate in being permitted, by the courtesy of Mr. John K. Orr, of this city, to present to our readers the following interesting and thrilling account of a two month's tiger hunt which is taken in whole from the notes of the trip as written by Col. Wm. M. Hooper, N. C. 4th Madras, Prince of Wales Light Cavalry, during his stay in India. Col. Hooper has, perhaps, killed as many tigers as any living man. He is now on a visit to our city, en route to his home in England from India. It reads:

Numerous confabulations, assisted by the consumption of much beer and many cheroots and pipes, resulted in the formation of our party of four, viz., Hanbury, of the Artillery; Stewart and Knox, of the 18th Hussars, and myself. The line of country fixed upon in which to perform prodigies of valor was to the North, near Wurrungul, we having received good reports through our shikarries respecting the number of tigers in that district. Hanbury and Knox having longer leave than Stewart and myself, had started together with Harrison, of the 18th, about the middle of March, and we were to post out and join them when our leave commenced. We sent our kit on ahead, as the place where we expected to catch them up was about ninety-five miles off.

Accordingly on the 2d of April, 1871, I drove down to Stewart's house at the other end of cantonments at 12 o'clock in a trap belonging to our regimental vakeel. We had a good tiffin together at the 18th's mess, and at 2 o'clock set off in a buggy on our journey. We drove out to Gulkaiser in about an hour and a half, where we found the bullock coach which we had posted there waiting us. We had a pair of good bullocks for it, and they took us out in grand style to Bonaghir, about twenty-eight miles off, where we arrived about 8 o'clock. Here we were delayed nearly two hours before we could get fresh bullocks; in the meantime we had some grub and a bottle of Porter each, and as soon as the bullocks came we started again, and both of us went to sleep. The bullocks were very bad ones, and we must also have stopped a long time at some place, for by daylight, to our disgust, we found on waking that we had only got as far as Arlair, about seven miles from Pemherly, which place is only about twenty-five miles from Bonaghir, so our progress during the night was not much. We got another pair of bullocks for the Bandy, and then walked on to Pemberly, where we had a refreshing bath in a howrie and then breakfast, after which we again made a start and crept on to Neddigoondah, where our horses were posted. It was a very hot, unpleasant day's journey.

We left Neddigoondah about 5 o'clock p. m.; cantered on eight miles to Sbagul, where we got a note from Hanbury saying they were at a place called Koomalloopully, fourteen miles to the northwest. We at once changed our horses, and, taking a guide with us, continued our journey. Luckily there was a bright moon, but we found the ride very tedious, as we could only go at a walk, and were not sorry at 11 o'clock to find ourselves in camp. Grub and liquor was at once produced, quickly disposed of, after which we retired to roost, but not before we had learnt that two tigers had already been slain, and that the khubber (news) for further shikar was good.

April 4.—Some ten or twelve young buffaloes had been tied up over night in places where tigers were said to be, but no kill was reported, so we stayed in camp. I employed myself in doctoring my arm with cold water, for though it was none the worse for my long journey out, it was still considerably larger than it ought to be. In the evening we went to a hill about a mile off to wait for bears coming out, as some were said to live there. I saw a she bear and two cubs, but they didn't pass me within shot. Nothing was fired at.

5th.—We all went out at 5 A. M. to the bear hill, but saw nothing. On our return we found that our shikarries had come in with news of a kill by two tigers about a mile off. As soon as breakfast was over we set off, but we didn't know the exact spot where the buffalo had been killed. The fools of shikarries took us too near to it, the consequence was we had the mortification of seeing not two but four tigers moving off over the top of a rocky hill some four or 500 yards off! It was a fine sight, certainly, but not gratifying to us under the circumstances. Thinking they had most probably gone off to another hill about half a mile distant, we had a bear there, but nothing was seen of them (I must tell you that the tigers in these parts live in rocky hills). We then formed a line through the jungles, but failed in coming across the game. We came on a dead bullock recently killed, and some of the heaters said a tiger moved off from it on their approach, but we saw nothing of him. It was now late, so we returned to camp and sent out a lot of heylahs (young buffaloes) to be tied up.

6th.—I went out by myself early to the bear hill but saw nothing. A kill reported on the rocky hill near which we saw the four tigers yesterday. Breakfast over we started, and were taken round to the other side and posted so as to command three gorges on the top of the hill, while the heaters were directed to heat up the side of the hill towards us. We got into position as quickly as possible; I on a rock and the others on trees, and presently the distant sound of the tom-toms (drums) and rattles announced the commencement of the heat. For a long time nothing occurred to excite us. At last we heard tremendous shouts and yells from the heaters which put us all on the qui-vive, as evidently something had been viewed by them. Before long the crack of Hanbury's rifle was heard, followed by two or three more shots, and from my position I just caught a glimpse of a tiger among the trees where he was posted. Presently another shot was heard from Knox's post and then one from Stewart's further on, but what the result of all the shooting was I couldn't tell. When the heaters came up I went across to Hanbury and found that two tigers had come past his tree, one of which he had wounded, but that it had gone on into some rocks beyond. Knox and Stewart now joined us; the former had fired a snap shot at a tiger with no result, the latter had killed one with a single ball. As soon as we were all ready we went and posted ourselves and beat for Hanbury's tiger. Blood was found leading into some rocky caves, so we could not succeed in making the tiger show again, so we thought it best to leave it and have another search to-morrow. We then went down to Stewart's tiger; it was shot in the hack. It proved to be a young tiger, measuring eight feet four inches in length; forearm, nineteen inches; girth of head, twenty-seven inches. After this we had a beat for the third tiger, but could not find it, so returned to camp.

7th.—Started soon after 6 A. M. to look for the tiger. We got on the blood tracks, and after climbing and crawling about through the rocks and caves for some time, we came on the beast, dead. With some difficulty we dragged it out of the cave; it was an exact match to Stewart's tiger—brother, I should think. On getting back to camp I took a photograph of it as it was carried in. This was a very hot day, with clouds about, but no wind. In the evening Stewart, Harrison and I went for a stroll, with our guns. I shot a brace of birds.

8th.—No khubber, but a goat driver said he had seen a tiger go into a small hill near by the night before, so we went at 12 o'clock and had a beat on speck; nothing, however, turned out. In the evening we amused ourselves by fishing for little fishes in a howrie. We caught many of them—about as long as your hand—after which we all jumped in and had a very jolly swim.

9th.—In camp all day. Bathed morning and evening in the howrie. A thunder-storm passed to the north of us along some hills which are composed entirely of ironstone, but we did not get any of it; it made the air very cool and pleasant at night.

10th.—Stewart and I got up at 4 A. M. and went to the bear hill. I had no sooner got to my position than I saw the old she bear and her cubs approaching the hill. I waited a bit, as they appeared to be coming in my direction, but in the meantime Stewart, having seen them, ran along the foot of the hill to intercept them. I saw him coming, and immediately after heard a loud oot! oot! followed by the crack of his rifle and then a scream from the old lady. I scrambled down from my rock, rushed through the bushes to join the fun; before I could get there one of the youngsters had received a punt in the ribs, and I saw him dimpling up the face of a big rock. I at once gave him a hall which tumbled him over dead. The old woman now came staggering along out of the bushes, and with my left barrel I settled her business. Just then the other young one was espied high up among the rocks. Stewart led drive. He staggered for half a minute, and then came rolling head over heels down and fell with a crash into the bushes about sixty feet below. We dragged them all together and sent to camp for coolies. I then took a turn round the hill, but saw nothing else. Back to camp and ordered the people to pack up, as we intended to move to Yerabully, but while we were skinning the bears news came in of a kill at "Tiger Hill," as we had named the hill where we killed the two tigers, so we countermanded the march, and as soon as beaters were collected set out for the place. We were, however, unsuccessful; the beat had gone into some extensive caves from which it was impossible to dislodge him. Bathed in the evening. A heavy storm passed along the Iron hills, but we only got a few drops of rain.

11th.—Harrison left for cantonments. We got news of a kill at Arlair, about four or five miles off to the west, so we sent off our camp to Yerabully, which was in the same direction, and went ourselves to beat for the tiger, who was reported to have lain up in a small, rocky hill. The beast was at home, sure enough, but we were posted too far off, and though the beaters turned him out of the hill, he managed to escape without being seen by us. We were greatly disgusted, and the shikarries came in for a good measure of abuse from one and all of us, after which, feeling somewhat refreshed, we rode off to our new camp.

12th.—Stewart, Knox and I got up at 3 A. M. and rode over to a place called Mulkanoor. It was a most awfully close morning, and the distance, eight miles, much more than we expected, so we didn't arrive at the hill where we hoped to get a shot at a bear till too late. We saw fresh tracks of one, and the village shikarries said there were six living in the hill. We cantered most of the way back and found on arrival that there had been another kill on "Tiger Hill" in the same place as we had shot the two tigers on the 6th. We were soon on the spot and were posted so as to command the same passes as before. Stewart was on the right of the line, and before long he saw the tiger coming his way. It passed behind some rocks, and presently its head appeared some twelve or fifteen paces from him. He fired at once but missed. As the beast was bounding off over a shelving rock he fired again; this shot took effect. It bit the tiger behind the right shoulder, came out at his chest and smashed his under jaw, carrying away the two lower fangs, which we picked up on the spot; it then disappeared in some extensive caves close at hand. We had a beat for it but it was not seen again, though quantities of blood was upon the rocks; we therefore agreed to leave it till the morrow, expecting we should then find it dead.

13th.—Stewart, Knox and I went to look for, as we supposed, the dead tiger. The search was cautiously commenced by Stewart, Knox and the shikarries crawling about with lights in amongst the caverns. Some of the passages through the rocks were extremely difficult, consequently I, with my game arm, could not join in the search. After some time the alarm was raised that the brute was alive. One of the village shikarries who was in advance, came scuttling back, saying that he had seen it moving. A retreat was at once sounded, and it was considered advisable to leave it till evening, then have another look. In the evening Stewart and Knox went to the cave again, but finding the tiger still alive they left him. I went out towards the Kotakoondah hills, saw some spotted deer and had one shot, which I believe I missed, though the shikarrie declares I hit. A very heavy storm of rain and hail while I was out, but it didn't last long and I got shelter under an overhanging rock, every now and then darting out to capture a hail stone and enjoy the luxury of ice in the hot weather. After dinner I tried to prepare some dry-plates to take photographs of the hills, but the insects were about in swarms so the result was a failure.

14th.—We went again to bring home the tiger, but on entering the cave he was still found to be alive. Pochaloo (one of our shikarries) got a sight of him and fired, but with no result beyond that of making him move out of sight. Left him again. I tried two photographs, but they turned out failures. In the evening I went out but saw nothing.

15th.—Up at 5 A. M. I went out towards Kotakoondah but saw no game. Stewart and Knox went to look up the tiger. Not dead yet! nevertheless he has never left the cave.

16th.—I got up at 3:30 A. M. and went to Kotakoondah. There is no village in existence now, but there are many old ruins of temples about. The hills are very fine and the jungles look very likely for game; I, however, saw nothing to fire at. Stewart and Knox went again after the tiger; they found him alive still, but Stewart managed this time to creep in and fire at him. He sprang up when Stewart and Pochaloo both fired together, and at last he fell dead. He was with much difficulty dragged up to daylight, as the passages were in many places so low that a man had to go on all fours to get through them. The tiger was a male; length, eight feet three inches; height, two feet ten inches; head, twenty-six inches; fore arm, eighteen inches. The two elephants which Salar Lung had lent us arrived at last from the city. I went out in the evening but saw nil.

17th.—A very high wind all night; cloudy and cool; did not get up early. News brought in of three kills and also a bullock killed towards Kotakoondah hills. The tiger was reported to be lying asleep by the latter, so we went off there, but when we arrived he was gone. We had a heat but failed to come across him. I walked back through the jungles but saw nothing; the others went and beat for one of the other tigers, but he escaped, though he was seen by the beaters.

18th.—Windy and cool again; quite like a monsoon morning. No kills, so we stayed in the tents all day. In the evening Stewart, Knox and I went out to look for hares; we shot five. Very stormy night. The wind was tremendously high, but we had very little rain.

19th.—A kill in the same place that we first saw the four tigers, so we turned out sharp and were taken to our posts by Pochaloo. Just as we got there the tiger was seen in a cave on the hill, so we got into position as quietly as possible and sent back word for the beaters to come over the hill and the elephants to come round the base of it. Almost immediately the beaters began to shout we had the delight of seeing the tiger come slowly forth from the cave and begin very quickly descending the hill towards the line we guarded. He disappeared in the thorn jungle at the bottom, and we all watched in breathless excitement to see where he would reappear. Presently to my joy I caught sight of him through the bushes coming towards my tree a little to my left; he was walking slowly and going lame in the rear fore arm, consequently he had not quite so majestic an appearance as he would otherwise have had, nevertheless he looked very fine as he came on, quite unconscious of the close proximity of a loaded rifle.

I waited perfectly motionless till he was passing within ten or fifteen yards of me, and then gave him a shell behind the shoulder. He gave a loud roar and hounded forward when I fired the other barrel after him, but without effect, and he disappeared from sight in the jungle behind me. On the elephants coming up, Stewart got on the "Begum" and I on "Badul-Guz" and gave chase. We had gone about a couple of hundred yards when I heard a savage roar to my left; my elephant faced round towards it. There was the tiger charging slap at me from about twenty paces off. I let him come half the distance and then gave him the contents of my right barrel in his back; it did not check him in the east, and I had only just time to fire again as he was actually prying at the elephant. The shell caught him in the back of the neck and rolled him over like a rabbit right under the elephant's trunk. This was too much for the nerves of poor Badul-Guz. With a loud trumpet of alarm he spun round and bolted, crashing through the jungle in a most unpleasant manner. One of my rifles was swept out of the howdah by the boughs of the trees through which we passed; my hat was carried off. I had sundry very narrow escapes from decapitation. At last the brute got quieter and the mahout slid down and got in front of him to make him stop, but just then a shot fired in the distance started him off again, and away he teamed as before, the mahout legging after him in the rear. This was too much like being on a ship without a steersman, with breakers ahead to please me, so I thought the sooner I got out of it the better. Accordingly I skeddaddled over the back of the howdah and held on by the beast's tail, where I hung on till he ran foul of a big tree, when I took the opportunity of dropping to the ground and so got clear, without further damage than a goodly show of scratches on the hands and face. On arrival at camp I photographed the tiger. He was a heavy brute and very old, though, like all hill tigers, of lengthy; he measured nine feet two inches long, three feet two inches high, thirty-two inches round the head and eighteen inches round the fore arm. In the evening Knox and I went out a short way and shot a hare. A very quiet cool night.

20th.—We all went out with Pochaloo to see if there had been a kill. First we visited the place where the tiger was killed yesterday, and where we had again tied up, but we found the buffaloes untouched. We then went on to the next hill, approached quietly to within 100 yards of the kyalah, and to our delight saw it, toes up. We saw nothing of its eye so retired at once, and sending back for beaters to be sought and also for our breakfast. We went on to the end of the hill and sat in the shade to wait for them. In about a couple of hours they arrived and we were taken to our posts, on the heat commenced and a tigress broke past Stewart's feet, between him and the foot of the hill; he fired right and left, but missed. The beast hounded off at a great pace through the jungle, and I attempted a long snap shot but I could not turn myself round properly in my tree and the result was . . .

The tigress was kept in sight by the men on top of the hill and was seen by them to go into the big rocky hill, and we much feared that he would get into the caves from which it would be useless trying to eject him. The "Norwegian" with its hot breakfast was now produced, so we sat under a tree and had a good feed and drink. We were then taken and posted between the big hill and the caves, and the music of the tom-toms again resounded. Almost immediately Pochaloo came running towards us calling to us to come quick; we lost no time in doing so when it appeared that the tigress had been seen in amongst an isolated mass of loose rocks on the hillside. Hanhury and I took up our positions on elephants at the bottom, while S and K stationed themselves about twenty or thirty yards apart on the hillside between where the tigress was and the caves. The heaters were sent up above, and in a few minutes their shouts and a couple of blank shots fired caused the tigress to make a move. She went towards Stewart who was in a mere stump of a tree not three feet from the ground, and catching sight of him went straight to him with a roar. He gave her a shot in the chest which had no immediate effect; on she came, but his second shot smashing her forehead, though it did not upset, luckily turned her slightly and she passed within a foot or two of him at undiminished speed. I fired another shot after her when she disappeared from view amongst some rocks. So the shikarries were soon on her tracks and it was found that she had got into a cave where she was heard growling. They got over the cave and lowered a cloth in front of it, but though she roared on seeing it she would not show up. Blank charges fired had no effect. H. and I now joined the others, and at last we discovered a crevice in the rock just above where she was lying. A housekeeper's jacket was fastened to a rope and let down; instantly, with a roar, she seized upon it and Pochaloo, looking down the crevice, saw her head. We handed him a gun and he fired at it. A few groans and some heavy breathing followed for about a minute and then all was still. The tigress was dead; by some trouble by the aid of ropes she was dragged out. She proved to be an old tigress with much worn teeth, probably the wife of the old fellow killed yesterday. Measurement: length, eight feet nine inches; height, three feet; head, twenty-seven inches; forearm, sixteen inches. We had a heavy storm of rain during the operations before the cave, consequently we had a pleasant cool ride home on the hatties. We had not time to go and beat another hill where a heylah had been killed last night, but we sent off to tie up there again to-night.

ROD.

June in the Hills.

[BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

Oh, sweet is the music now heard in the hills,
Where the mountain brooks, laughing with glee,
Voice loud a rejoicing which all the air fills,
With notes of a pure melody.
The wild birds at morning all join in the song,
And the pines echo back to the sea,
The soul of the notes of its billows so strong,
As they plead to the shore to be free.

The hills are all robed in their mantle of green,
The flowers are all blooming and fair,
The mosses and ferns are now best to be seen,
As the glory of God they declare.
Then come to this feast which the gods have prepared,
For all who love beauty and wealth,
For nothing of comfort or joy has been spared
In this temple of peace and good health.

A Persistent Kingfisher—A Skeleton Pike.

We think we have just as good fishing here as there is anywhere, and a great deal better than they have in most places, says a correspondent in American Angler. We have Lake Neachtawanta, which is two miles long and one mile wide, it is full of big-mouth bass and pickerel. And then we have the beautiful Oswego River, with all kinds of fresh-water fish, pike, pickerel, perch, hull-heads, eels, big-mouth bass and small-mouth bass (the king of all fish on a light rod and in swift water). And we have good trout fishing here, and it will be better in a year or two, as I have put 40,000 trout fry in the adjacent brooks within the last two years. I have also 20,000 ordered for this spring from the State hatchery. We have the Johnny Grinnles here, plenty of them, and one caught here in the lake last summer weighed sixteen pounds. I caught two in the river that weighed three pounds apiece.

Now let me tell you a little incident or two that happened to me last summer: One day, as I was walking along the river bridge with two friends, and happened to look down in the water (which, by the way, is about forty feet distant from the bridge) I saw a pickerel about two feet long lying there in the clear water near the shore. I told my friends to stay there, and I would get my rod and line and a live minnow and catch the fish. I did so, and put a nice little shiner on the hook (I had an automatic reel with ninety feet of line on it). I let the minnow down in the water, and it hardly reached there before a kingfisher came down from under the bridge, seized my minnow, and started down the river. When he got the line straightened out, he let the minnow drop, and I supposed he went on down the river, so I started once more to catch the pickerel, but had hardly got my line in shape again, when down came Mr. Kingfisher and took the minnow again. This time, however, he went back under the bridge, and, after a moment or two, let the minnow fall back in the river, and I then went after the pickerel again, and for the third time down came Mr. Kingfisher; but he got the hook along with the minnow, and I had him fast. He flew right straight up in the air, and I let him have the whole ninety feet of line; then I reeled him in from the sky, and you never heard such a noise as he made, but I landed him all right. I then took him and showed him to all the fishermen in town, and then let him go, and he went back to the bridge.

Now another:
One afternoon I thought I would go down the river and troll a little while. I had on my hook a live minnow, and, in a little while, had a strike, and I hooked my fish, which seemed to be quite a large one. I reeled him where I could see him, and found it was a large pike, twenty-five or thirty inches long. I pulled him up to my boat, but, when I lifted him from the water, he was as light as a feather. I measured him and he was just thirty inches long, and should have weighed eight or nine pounds, but he weighed only two pounds. He was just skin and bones. I killed him, took my knife and cut him open, and what do you think I found? A live lizard, five inches long, in his stomach! He was as black as coal and very lively, living twenty-four hours after I took him from his prison.

In speaking of the pleasures of angling Clou d'Argent voices the following:

Sings the lover: "To woo thee not long may I dally:
'Tis the mission of rivers to sweep thro' the valley,
To gladden the globe, and the lowland to lighten;
The fields to make fruitful; the landscape to brighten;
The blue bay to seek, and its waves keep in motion;
And long is the journey from here to the ocean.

He brings her a name, famed in freedom's fair story,
And asks her to share in his fortune and glory,
And the brooklet beams bright in her maidenly grace,
As she peacefully steals to the river's embrace.

In fond benediction, the willow bends over,
To hallow the union of maiden and lover,
'Mid soft, sighing zephyrs, their sweet vows are plighted,
And let no power sever whom God hath united.

I have sat 'neath the willow, or stood in the stream,
With the last fading flashes of daylight gleam:
And have floated my "feathers" 'till its foam fleeks among,
While its bright "speckled beauties" responsive have sprung,
And I've thought that no bride, robed in radiance so fair,
Ever wedded such bridegroom, 'mid music so rare.

A current writer attributes the following to an ex-Governor of Wisconsin: "There is a species of fish that never looks at the clothes of the man who throws in the bait, a fish that takes whatever is thrown to it, and, when once hold of the hook, never tries to shake a friend, but submits to the inevitable, crosses its legs and says, 'Now I lay me,' and comes out on the bank and seems to enjoy being taken. It is a fish that is the friend of the poor, and one that will sacrifice itself in the interest of humanity. That is the fish that the State should adopt as its trade mark, and cultivate friendly relations with, and stand by. We allude to the hullohead. The hullohead never went back on a friend. To catch the hullohead it is not necessary to tempt his appetite with a porterhouse steak, or to display an expensive lot of fishing tackle. A pin hook, a piece of liver and a cistern pole is all the capital required to catch a hullohead. He lies upon the bottom of a stream or pond in the mud, thinking. There is no fish that does more thinking, or has a better head for grasping great questions, or chunks of liver, than the hullohead. The hullohead has a fine India-rubber skin that is as far ahead of fiddle-string material for strength and durability as possible."

Information has been received by the Fish Commissioners that on Thursday last a shipment by special car would leave New York containing 100,000 fry of muskallonge for this city. The gamey qualities of this fish made it a great favorite with anglers generally and its advent into the water of this State will be hailed with delight by all lovers of the rod. It is the hope of the Fish Commission that the fish will prove an enemy to the detestible carp and thin them out at least, if not totally annihilate them.

The fishing should begin to improve speedily now. During the next two months the anglers, and more especially the fly-fishers must be alert to catch their measure of sport.

From the first of June to the fifteenth of July the upper lakes of the Sierras should furnish first-class sport. The brook fishing may be relied on for a much longer period.

Clahrough, Golcher & Co., have issued an elaborate and most complete catalogue calling attention to their large line of fishing tackle. The catalogue contains some truthfully-colored plates illustrating all kinds and classes of flies. If you consult this compendium of camping and outing goods, you cannot fail of finding just what you want.

Mr. John Butler, the well-known angler, has been enjoying some of the pleasures of lake and stream this season and contemplates making his favorite annual Eel river trip later on. The Eel, for large fish, holds the palm over the other streams of this State, or for that matter on the Pacific Coast.

The upper Kern river, with its tributaries and the lakes of that region, furnish first-class sport with the rod. In anticipation of the pleasures to be derived from such a trip a number of parties have already arranged for outings in that region during July and August next.

The County Club expects to reap the harvest of their expenditures in trout planting, in a full measure of sport this season. The fishes in their lakes and the trout in Bear Valley are reported to be very prouising.

A visit to Lakes Tahoe, Independence and White Lake is the initial in the line of California sport with rod and reel. The time is rapidly approaching when such a visit may be made with the best of results.

Mr. John Benn, the well-known fly-tier, reports his orders unusually large for this season, showing that the use of good flies are on the increase. Benn's flies are especially adapted to the waters of this Coast.

Messrs. Murdock and McNeil have been on a trip this week to Shovel creek and the Sissons' hatchery. The work there is moving along in the very best of shape, and the commissioners are much encouraged.

Mr. Michael Geary, the indefatigable angler, reports some very favorable outings recently. What Geary does not know about practical angling is very hard to find out.

The Creel Angling Club, of Los Angeles, received this week 40,000 fry of the New Hampshire trout from the State Fish Commission.

Limber up your rods and see what amount of damage you have to attribute to the moths on account of ruined flies

Reports from the lakes and upper Truckee are very favorable for trout fishing.

THE COMING SPRING MEETING.

Trotters and Pacers to Have Their Inning the Bay District Track Next Week. Great Sport Assured.

"Away with the pigskin, hring on the bike!" The cavalcade of fleet thoroughbreds and little jockeys, their fortunate and unfortunate owners, the obtrusive touts and the bookmakers must desert the famous battleground at the Bay District track to-morrow for pastures new and courses that are far away. The starter in his box, the man with the flag, must with the overweight jockey and the great army of bettors leave for awhile, and in their places a different set of officials and betting individuals will come. The track that is now heavy and soft will be rolled, watered and packed so that the noiseless "bikes" will roll smoothly over its surface. The boys that were seen exercising their sprinters at daylight will be replaced by older men who will be conditioning their horses for the inaugural spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association which commences next week. This promises to be one of the most important meetings ever held in the history of the trotting turf. Many of the old-time methods that have outlived their usefulness will be discarded and in their stead new features will be introduced which, it is hoped, will kindle anew the spark of interest in trotting events that was almost extinguished by the lack of enterprise and the adherence to rules that had become almost obsolete.

The importance of this meeting has been referred to, not only in this journal, but in every other turf journal published in the United States, and the attention of breeders and owners of light-harness horses everywhere has been called to it. Should it prove successful, an impetus will be given to the industry of breeding and racing trotters that will benefit everyone, hence it behooves every member of this live and growing association to make a personal effort to have this meeting terminate successfully. They should bring their trotters and pacers (there is stable room for 300 at the track) early in the week. There has not been a trotting meeting at the track since its surroundings were changed, consequently a large number of friends of the trotting horse in this city and State know nothing of the improvements there. The racing will be of the novelty order; six or seven events will take place every afternoon between the hours of two and six. There will be dashes of two miles, and shorter distances; handicap races wherein the contestants will appear to sulkies, to carts, and wagons, trotting under saddle and two-in-three races. There will be overnight races, entries to which will be 3 per cent., and the management will endeavor to give every horse-owner at the track an opportunity of having his horse trot or pace some time during the meeting. Several novelties are now under consideration which will enlist the attention of the general public and have them attend. One is called a Butchers' Race. This is to take place on Decoration Day. The drivers are to wear their immaculate aprons and high hats, and contest for valuable prize. It is the talk of the city, and as trotting first found its warmest friends and supporters among the "knights of the cleaver," this revival of their old-time races will recall the past and create a desire among them to take an active part again in "developing the light-harness horse."

Conspicuous colors must be worn by the drivers in all races. A large number of our leading stock farm-owners have already claimed their colors. The rule in regard to the wearing of distinguishing colors will be rigidly enforced.

The public will not be forgotten, even if the hook-makers are not to be seen in their little hoots shouting themselves hoarse. The management know that without the privilege of betting racing would relapse into a state of "innocuous desuetude" so they have made arrangements to have a number of Paris mutuel boxes placed in the betting ring, where everyone can bet on their favorites. There will be $2, $3 and $5 boxes for the winning horses and $2 and $5 for place horses. Besides these there will be auction boxes, conducted, as they always have been, for those who wish to wager larger amounts. It is believed that everyone who invests by this method will be better satisfied than if the hook-makers were allowed to pursue their methods.

This is the last notice before the meeting, and we therefore most emphatically urge upon everyone who has an interest in trotting horses to be present. Let us see if there is any enthusiasm among trotting horsemen. There can be no excuses that the track is too far away from the city, for the cable cars convey passengers to the entrance. Complimentary tickets to ladies will be furnished on application to the secretary. We want to see the grandstand a perfect bower of beauty and a bouquet of female loveliness. The wives, daughters and sweethearts of the many devoted friends of the association should be there, by all means.

application to the secretary. We want to see the grandstand a perfect bower of beauty and a bouquet of female loveliness. The wives, daughters and sweethearts of the many devoted friends of the association should be there, by all means.

Now a last word to the members: Let everyone that can possibly do so bring their horses, colts and fillies. Remember there will be races for all and opportunities to win money and get the little trotters and pacers used to going in company.

Grand Circuit.

Never before in the history of trotting in California has the growth of this great industry become so prominent as at present. A large number of people have been "looking on the dark side" of the trotting horse business in this State for months. The apparently low prices realized for trotters; the great sales of stock that had to be sold at a sacrifice to close estates; the annihilation of tin-cup marks and the doubts cast upon bona fide records made here, have had a most serious effect we must admit. There is, however, always a "silver lining to every cloud," and when these people (and we mean the majority of breeders and trotting-horse men), read of how many hundreds of horses are in training in all parts of this State; when they see futurity stakes advertised by nearly every association, entries to which can be made for five dollars, and when they learn from the lips of every lover of horses that a better class of colts and fillies are to be seen this year than ever, it is about time to throw aside the cloak of despair and gird up the loins for the contests of speed to be seen on the circuits this year.

At the meeting of delegates recently convened in this city, it was a pleasure to hear the statements made that at least 150 horses were in training at most of the tracks. As these delegates only represented one circuit, an idea may be had of the interest in the business in the northern and southern circuits, besides the counties on the coast and those in the extreme northern part of the State.

The belief that in unity there is strength seems to be the great and only one that is guiding the opinions and operations of the gentlemanly owners of these hundreds, aye thousands, of trotters now. They have learned that good lesson, and, as in time of a common danger, all feelings but that of defense and preservation are forgotten, so it is that now all who are interested in the business are trying to fortify and sustain every effort made by the leaders in the great battle to elevate the trotting-horse industry from the slough in which it was unconsciously falling.

At the meeting above mentioned the welcoming of a new district, wherein many choice trotters and pacers are known to be bred every year, was a most cordial one, and the representatives of the other associations gladdened the hearts of the delegates from Vallejo by saying, "Yes, we will make room for you." It was said in a true and generous spirit.

When the delegates from Fresno arose, and in a feeling manner described how the association he represented was battling for existence, notwithstanding it was started under most favorable auspices and the endorsement of the horsemen in this circuit, was looked upon as a certainty; but through, by a clashing of dates and the lack of interest, its hopes were blasted. He alluded to the geographical position of the city, its nearness to Stockton and its right to hold its meeting after the one at that place, and added, that unless their district was recognized and the fair and races held at that time the gates of the beautiful place would be closed, and the many breeders of trotters and pacers would be compelled to sell all their possessions and go elsewhere. It would work not only financial ruin to the association, but would strike a death blow to the hopes and aspirations of every lover of trotting horses in that district.

The delegates present saw the force of his arguments, and thereafter passed a resolution giving Fresno the dates sought. The Santa Clara and San Mateo Agricultural Association, which holds its fair in San Jose, has been communicated with in regard to this change, for it compels them to hold their meeting one week further away. As this association has no pavilion exhibits, and as it gives one of the best displays of live-stock, as well as the best race meetings on this coast, the directors should not, for the sake of harmony, object to the date selected; besides, owners of horses at Fresno will come over to San Jose and compete in the races, and by their presence and that of their friends lend a new charm to the meeting. The entries to the various events will fill better, and everyone will be satisfied. It will all be done for the sake of harmony, and that is one of the principal aims of our associations, we believe.

Last year Fresno and San Jose held their race meeting during the same week and many stables were divided. People lost interest, and the lack of unity created jealousy that should never have existed.

THE department edited and conducted by Jos. Cairn Simpson is under his exclusive management. The editorial, "California as a Racing Center," which appeared in this portion of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN last week, voices our sentiments, and we do not retract one iota of any criticism on the Blood Horse Association, or its methods, as therein made.

GRAND CIRCUIT.

Meeting of Representatives of Associations to Arrange Dates.

One of the first meetings of any importance to the trotting-horse interests in the central portion of California convened at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN last Wednesday at 1 o'clock. There were present Delegates W. M. Kent and A. P. Waugh, of the Oakland Association; John McCord and F. W. Loeher, of the Napa Association; Robert S. Brown and Josiah H. White, of the Petaluma Association; Thos. Smith and Benj. Rush, of the Vallejo Association; Frank P. Wickersham, of the Fresno Association, and F. H. Burke and Robert Brown, representing the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association.

Table with 2 columns: Meeting Name and Dates. Rows include P. C. T. H. B. A. Summer Meeting, Oakland, Vallejo, Napa, Petaluma, State Fair, Stockton, Fresno, and Breeders' meetings.

A motion was made and carried unanimously that it was the sense of those present that San Jose be solicited to take the dates of October 2d to October 7th, inclusive.

On motion, the meeting adjourned until June 3d at 8 o'clock when delegates from all the associations mentioned as comprising the grand circuit are requested to be present with authority to take action in regard to the closing of dates of entries for their races at the respective meetings and the arrangement of programme.

HOOF-BEATS.

SEND in your applications for stalls at the Bay District Track at once.

BRING your trotters and pacers to the Bay District as soon as possible. The earlier the better.

ENTRIES to purse races at the Salt Lake Driving Park spring meeting will close June 1st.

HARRY CARPENTER, the well-known veterinarian, was kicked in the head last Saturday and seriously injured; it is feared that blood-poisoning has set in.

B. C. HOLLY's excellent string of horses left San Francisco last Wednesday morning for St. Louis. In the lot were Sympathetic's Last, Happy Day, Revolver, Green Hock, and Francesca.

BEAURY MC, the game trotter that has been suffering from rheumatism since last fall, has been sent to San Jose. It is hoped that the genial climate of the Garden City will have a beneficial effect upon him.

R. PORTER ASHE's celebrated mare, Geraldine, ran third in her first appearance at the East this season, which was in St. Louis last Wednesday. Ray S. was first, Pedestrian second, and the time for the six furlongs was 1:16.

EARLY in June another important sale of trotting and road horses will take place. They are owned by A. W. Foster, Esq., of the Hopland Stock Farm, and comprise most of the principal trotting strains. The sale will be conducted by Killip & Co., and will take place at their yard.

JOHN A. PENNER is going to Portland on the 1st of June. He will take Graceful George (pacer), by Alcona Jr.; Rustic King, by Rustic; Ida D., by a son of Elmo, and three other very promising trotters. Mr. Pender intends to go through the Northern circuit, and will return to Santa Rosa this winter.

ST. KILDA, by Woodnut, 2:16, dam Girofle, by Elmo; second dam Lady Comstock, by Norfolk; third dam Mary Butte, by Belmont, will be sent to a trainer and given a record this year. St. Kilda is a remarkably handsome black stallion, and in conformation is a perfect picture. He is at Mr. Seale's farm, Mayfield.

LAST Tuesday Thomas H. Williams received a telegram from Winnemucca, Nev., telling that the great Derby colt, Cadmus, was dangerously sick. Dr. Masero was at once sent from this city to attend Cadmus. In the afternoon a second dispatch was received stating that there was a marked improvement in Cadmus' condition.

WILDWOOD and Joe Cotton leave to-morrow or next day in charge of Trainer Dan Miller (Charmion, Relampago, Gordius and Ida Glenn) on the same car. "It is unfortunate for us that Wildwood was not at Brooklyn in time to run for the big handicap," said Mr. Davis last Wednesday, "for I believe Wildwood could have won easily."

THE immense pool-room operated by Henry Schwartz & Co. will open at Oakland track next Monday, unless something unforeseen happens, hooks being made on the races now going on at leading Eastern racing centers. The Supervisors of Alameda County, at a meeting last Monday, refused to reconsider their actions whereby the pool-room was licensed, and it is said the Grand Jury will endeavor to prove that the Supervisors were bribed.

GEORGE S. DAVIS, a capitalist from Detroit, who recently bought large ranches, each in Cajon Valley and below at Jamacha, left San Diego, May 12, for Detroit, and on his return will bring some of his fine horses. He has just had work begun on the Jamacha ranch for an 850,000-gallon reservoir, which will take San Diego flume water to irrigate the place. Stakes are being set for a 1,000-acre citrus orchard, to be planted on contour lines. The plans have been prepared also for a one-mile kite-shaped track on the ranch.

THE Santa Anita horses are doing fine work at Louisville and St. Louis. Galindo, the gray four-year-old colt by Gano, dam Freda, won the Merchants' Handicap, $50 for starters, $1,000 added, mile and a sixteenth, from the pick of the horses at the Kentucky metropolis, doing the distance in 1:52 on a muddy track. Helen was second and Tulla Blackhorn third. On the previous Saturday, Florida, by imp. Cheviot, in the Santa Anita stable, was beaten a scant head by May Thompson, by many considered another Helen Nichols. Florida was at 15 to 1.

HELEN NICHOLS comes by her racing qualities honestly. Her sire, Iroquois, was a great performer, while her dam, Orphan Girl, by Muggins, was a wonderful race mare, winning as a three-year-old, in 1874, five out of her six races, nearly all at mile and two-nile heats. Among others she defeated Vanderhill, Vocalist, Velocipede, Fairplay and Dolores. Although Orphan Girl's pedigree is not a long one (on the dam's side) it goes into the family that gave us Betsy Malone, Charmion, Marion (dam of El Rio Rey, etc), Jerry, Fortuna, Beeswing and Birmingham.

SPOKANE is the only horse that ever won both the Kentucky and American Derbies. This feat was accomplished in 1889. Had there been an American Derby in 1881, however, Hindoo would have captured it beyond doubt, as easily as he did the Kentucky Derby of that year, and had Leonatus been started in the American Derby of 1883 he would have won, for there was no three-year-old out that year capable of making the Kentucky Derby-winning son of Longfellow and Semper Felix stretch his neck.

THE good race mare Cheerful, by Three Cheers, dam Queen Emma, has been mated with Simon G. Reed's royally-bred English horse, Martenhurst, son of Wenlock and Hiron-delle, by Adventurer. Through Martenhurst a foal will get a double cross of both Rataplan (a great winner and brother to Stockwell), and of Newminster, a famous race horse and (sire of Hermit). Wenlock, Martenhurst's sire, was by Lord Chifden, son of Newminster, out of a mare by Rataplan, while the dam of Martenhurst, Hiron-delle was by Adventurer, son of Newminster, and her dam was Lady Langden, by Kettle-drum, son of Rataplan. Three Cheers was by imp. Hurrah, son of Newminster, so that Cheerful's foal will have three crosses of Newminster close up and two of Rataplan. Queen Emma, by Woodburn, is the dam of Cheerful, and through her a double cross of Boston is secured.

THE Western Resources utters a valuable truth when it says: "If it was ever desirable on the part of the farmer—and please remember that the farmer is the horse breeder of the world—to breed to standard-bred sires, it is at the present time, for if one fails in producing a valuable campaigner he is certain to find a quick and profitable market for his geldings. Of course these geldings must be good individuals, and if they can trot in four minutes and are of good style and size some one will want to buy them the first time he drives them to town."

"VIRGINIA" BRADLEY found the job of patching up Kingmaker after his accident beyond his powers. The horse's knee was fractured, beside the horrible wound in his neck and shoulder. Even had the wound healed there would have been no chance of the horse being any use for racing, so his career was ended with a merciful bullet.—Daily America, New York. Kingmaker was a six-year-old brown horse by Warwick, dam Sister to Jim Douglass, therefore a half-brother to Hot-pur, holder of the record at one mile and three-quarters. Kingmaker was bred at Rancho del Paso.

THE first issue of New York's new sporting paper, Daily America, dated May 10th, and edited by the clever writer, George H. Dickinson, for years sporting editor of the World, reached us last Wednesday. It is a model seven-column-to-the-page paper of four pages, containing sporting news of all kinds, a specialty, however, being made of "horse" matter. Daily America will have capable correspondents in all the principal cities of this country, and cannot fail to be popular with all true lovers of sports of every description. We welcome the arrival in the field of sporting journalism of the Daily America.

THE good four-year-old hay racehorse Joshua, son of Cyclone and Partisana, died of pneumonia at Bay District track last Wednesday morning. He was the property of Dunlap & Prowse, of Stanislaus County, and had won during his turf career seven races out of thirteen starts, was second three times and replaced three. His best performances (all as a three-year-old) were: Five furlongs in 1:02, beating Jim R., Gypsy Girl and other good sprinters; six furlongs in deep mud in 1:17, 98 pounds up, heating Pescador, Esperanza, Motto and others; six furlongs in 1:14, with 115 pounds up, heating Sympathetic's Last, Esperanza, the Daren-Iris filly and others; one mile and a sixteenth in the heaviest kind of going, 117 pounds up, in 1:54, defeating Revolver, Marigold and Minnie Elkins. This was his last appearance on the turf, and owing to having a bad leg he was retired and placed in the hands of veterinarians. Recently the good colt contracted pneumonia, which carried him away, as narrated above.

THEODORE WINTERS, the noted California breeder, has under consideration transferring his great unbeaten El Rio Rey to Minneapolis, Minn., placing him in that city in the bands of a firm of veterinary surgeons, who have been very successful in treating trotting horses for the same ailment that retired this sensational two-year-old from the turf, says "Hidalgo" in the Los Angeles Herald. Outside of his wind El Rio Rey is as sound as the day he was foaled and his breeder believes that should these veterinarians be successful in their operation in relieving his defected wind power, Marion's greatest produce will become king of the turf again. If unsuccessful the marvelous performer is still saved for the stud and at any reasonable cost it looks like the experiment in his case is worth trying. The operation performed by this firm consists of opening the throat of the animal and removing the affected glands, which are in the shape of crumpled heavy tissue paper like sail daps. The operation, while very delicate, is by no means dangerous.

ON December 12, 1872, at the Pacific race track, Alameda, a number of thoroughbreds belonging to George Treat were sold, among them being the stallion Venture. In the catalogue he is described as follows: "Venture, chestnut stallion, 16 hands high, foaled April, 1864, sired by Belmont; first dam Miss Mostyn, by American Boy Jr.; second dam Bay Fanny, by Kenner's Grey Medoc; third dam Imp. Lady Mostyn, etc. Venture is without doubt the most high-bred trotting stallion in California, and his form and pedigree is all that can be desired for breeding purposes. His trotting-record is an excellent one. In the great three-year-old colt trotting stake of 1867 he trotted a mile in 2:54, and lost the race only by swerving at the outcome. October 23, 1869, he beat Harvest Queen in a match for $4,000, two miles and repeat, over the Bay District course, in the splendid time of 5:12, 5:15. November 3, 1869, beat Ajax in a match for $3,000, mile heats, three in five, over the Bay View course. December 31, 1869, was beaten by the celebrated pacing horse Longfellow, four miles and repeat, to wagon, in the fastest time upon record (both heats), 10:42, 10:34. In the last heat Venture was only a short length behind."

FAUSTA, that in 1891 lowered the yearling pacing record to 2:22, and that last year was, on account of the death of her owner, not placed in active training, is reported to be the smoothest piece of goods in the pacing line that has been seen at the Buffalo track for many a day. W. B. McDonald, who has Fausta in charge, is pretty well known in connection with pacers, having had Mascot, Bay Billy and others that did well. He was not anything like as successful with Mascot, however, as was Billy Andrews, who trained the bay gelding last year. Mascot is a pretty ambitious horse, and McDonald did not seem to suit him, as each was pulling the other and on one occasion this resulted in the horse choking down. Fausta is believed to be about as fast as any three-year-old pacer in the world, although of course she has not done anything like the sensational brush work reported in favor of the present yearling champion, Belle Acton, who is said to have recently gone an eighth of a mile in Kansas at a 1:52 gait. Belle Acton made a yearling record just two seconds faster than Fausta, but it should be remembered that the last-named pulled an old-fashioned sulky, and there is certainly, especially to a yearling, more than two seconds difference between a vehicle of that style and a pneumatic-tire one. On public form as yearlings Belle Acton certainly has none the best of Fausta, and as the latter is in grand shape bodily, and has an excellent set of legs and feet, it is only fair to suppose that among the three-year-old pacers this year she will be cock-of-the-walk.—Breeders Gazette.

JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

THE OLD BLOOD HORSE AND THE NEW BLOOD HORSE.—I have no fault to find with the turf writers who seek to apotheosize President Williams of the Pacific Coast Blood Horse Association, and surround him with a circle of lesser deities; but I do strenuously object to the abuse which is heaped upon those who organized the Association, who carried it through severe struggles, and who made racing on this coast a popular sport with the people. The governing thought with some writers appears to be the idea that praise is not half strong enough without it is coupled with censure of some one else, and in order to be laudatory it is necessary to disparage. If it were claimed that modern racing drew larger assemblages than those of the past, and that modern methods were superior to those which were followed here a few years ago, it would be a fair contention, and the advocate who took the affirmative of the proposition would stand on tenable ground. In some respects I cheerfully concede that the new is better than the old, in others far inferior.

But let me recount a small part of what the "old" Blood Horse has done for racing and the breeding of race horses in California. The By-laws and Rules were adopted in December, 1878, preliminary meetings having been held during the fall, though the proper date to mark its organization will be when it had a code of its own. At that time there were few thoroughbreds in California, and these scattered in small groups. There was only one place worthy of being called a breeding farm, that of Theodore Winters on Putah Creek. E. J. Baldwin had bought Grinstead and Rutherford, and raced them East, and at the solicitation of L. R. Martin, he purchased a few yearling fillies, which would make the nucleus of a stud when their racing days were over. Governor Stanford had sent H. R. Covey to Kentucky and Tennessee to buy a few thoroughbred mares, the primary intention being to cross them with the trotters. John Hall, of Alvarado, had been breeding to a limited extent, George Treat, of San Francisco had a few, but both at the date of the organization had practically withdrawn. William Boots, W. L. Pritchard, Judge Shafter, with a few small breeders scattered over the State, comprised the thoroughbred brigade, and these were also the active men on the turf. There was distrust, however, in the minds of those who were partial to turf sports, the big four-mile races having engendered a feeling of "want of confidence," but, in a measure, this was removed as soon as the society was organized, and entirely eradicated after a few meetings had been held.

And here I must say that the influence of the old association in overcoming the belief that racing was prejudicial to the interests of society, and that racing was only another name for rascality and robbery, was the most important of all the other considerations affecting breeding racehorses and turf interests. Paramount and effectual in obtaining the support of men whose assistance rescued it from odium which in a great measure was deserved. Governor Stanford was one of the trustees under the old regime, and he diverged from his original intentions to couple his thoroughbred mares with trotting stallions only, and commenced breeding pure-breds. J. B. Haggin joined the Association, was also a Trustee and took part in the turf sports of the Coast, and the incentive which led him to take an active part in racing affairs has culminated in the largest breeding farm in the world. George Hearst also joined, was elected a Trustee, and was a valuable auxiliary in promoting the welfare of the turf. Theodore Winters had been the most prominent figure in racehorse circles before the organization, but he had become, in a part measure, disheartened, and had the Association failed to correct the abuses which prevailed, he would have withdrawn from breeding and racing. He was altogether the most active individual in securing the organization and in sustaining it after organization was effected. Time and money cheerfully given, and still better an inflexible determination that fraud and chicanery must be stamped out, and under no circumstances should violations of racing ethics be condoned, and that the laws must be enforced with inexorable firmness. These were the sentiments of all of the old-time officers of the Association, and the limited membership was practically imbued with the same determination. There was another safeguard. In nearly every race were horses owned by the members and fortunately, too, of so high a class that others had to run for the money, as no arrangement could be made for "division and silence," and there was little chance to make anything outside of an honest course. But the certainty of punishment following transgression was the most aid to hold in subjection those who had crookedness in their minds. A better opportunity for detecting frauds than when the old system prevailed. Longer races, no short courses of four, four-and-a-half and five furlong sprints for others than two-year olds and for them only in the spring time.

But the charges to which I take exceptions do not imply dishonesty on the part of the old-time officials, so far as these have come under my observation. One of the latest pronouncements contains the following:

Formerly fields of over five were seldom dispatched within half an hour, and those vexatious waits and the poor flagmanship did much to disgust our people with the sport of kings. Then a little coterie of bookmakers in this city used to make books that would shame the point of a wooden Indian's face. Copper-bottomed "cinch" odds hardly express the arbitrariness of the "books" made on races of former days. Where four or five years ago 10 to 1 was about the latest odds offered on a rank outsider, 100 to 150 to 1 are now given. The jockeys used to virtually ride over the starter, and when that official would fine or suspend a "fresh" horse-pilot, the Board of Directors generally remitted the fine and set aside the suspension. Games of "chance" (small) ran riot directly in front of the grand stand, in full view of the occupants of the ladies' stands, and the costumes of the riders were about as handsome and cleanly as the face of the average Digger Indian. The judges were formerly selected, for the most part, from the ranks of the Majors, politicians and capitalists—good fellows generally, with little knowledge of racing rules, and altogether too lenient and short-sighted. All this has been changed; everything is run on a high level and will be improved with each succeeding meeting beyond all doubt.

Taking them in the order given, there is no question that a man who makes a business of starting horses is superior to an amateur, and I heartily concur in securing the services of a competent man. Whoever wrote the indictment which is copied must have overlooked that portion of the code adopted December 1878, regarding the starters and his duties among which will be found: "Any fine he (the starter) imposes within the limit of $25 the jockey must pay; heavier fines or penalties subject to the revision of the judges." Insubordination was less frequent than now, and there was a rule which compelled a start to be made within thirty minutes after the order to moult was given; in the words of the rule: "The horses shall be ridden, or led up, on a walk, as the starter may direct, and when the lines marked by the starter is reached, he shall drop his flag, and any horse left at the post "shall be considered as having started."

"The 'Rowe system' of starting was made compulsory under the old law. The first sentence of Rule 45 reads: "The starter is prohibited from making a running start; the horses must walk up, and be started from the walk."

As I have oftentimes written the starter has an arduous task, the most so of any of the racing officials, and he has my hearty sympathy under the load of reproaches he has to hear, always has, and always will be subjected to unwarranted abuse, and even under the present condition of improvement as stated by the author quoted, last Sunday one of the San Francisco dailies the "headings" of the racing column were: "Crooked Racing"—"Ferguson Does Some Very Nifty Starting"—"The Public Has no Chance" duly displayed in big and small caps and heavy faced type.

In all probability there was no call for such violent denunciation, and these headlines are quoted to offset charges that are equally offensive. Book-betting and the odds offered are matters which do not pertain to the management, further than by extending the length of the meetings and offering a class of races, which give superior opportunities for gambling, are a part of the management. Six days' racing and fewer races on each day did not offer inducements to hookmakers from a distance to put in an appearance, and then again that system of betting is of comparatively recent date in California. Whether the increased facilities for gambling are a sufficient plea to extol those who have made the change is a moot question, and I am not alone in the belief that the greatest danger to the future well-doing of turf sports lie in that direction.

These short races and big fields are the life of hookmaking. Even when run straight luck has a big pull, and when the odds are arranged so that the hookmakers have at least twenty per cent the best of it, it makes no difference whether the outside is at 10 to 1 or 100 to 1. The odds merely show what horses are supported by the bettors, and a single ten dollar investment will shorten the last-named race, down they will go with a big thump. There were seven races on the opening day of the Blood Horse meeting, the longest seven furlongs, and I cheerfully concede that a hill of that description has better attractions for hookmakers than one of the old-fashioned sort.

As to the "games of chance (small) that ran riot, etc.," the same "wheel of fortune" on the same scale is still an element, and as for the "Digger Indian" type of jockeys, that is entirely in the imagination of the writer. But the last formulated section of the general indictment in relation to the selection of judges is particularly unfortunate for the advocate of the present dynasty—the detractor of the old. Let anyone go over the files of the dailies, the columns of the turf papers, and he will not find one hundredth part of the accusations under the old system that have been charged under the new. Grant that very many of these charges are without foundation, that owing to the peculiar situation between employer and employe, the judgment of reporters has been warped to see leanings which did not exist, and yet there are good reasons for giving the preference to the old. Rarely, indeed, when "the stand" did not contain one man who was not thoroughly conversant with the rules and usages of the turf, and had also an intimate and practical knowledge of the business. Mr. Winters was president for several terms, and on every occasion when his horses did not take part he occupied the leading position. No question about his ability, integrity and general fitness, and I could name several others which were only second in capacity to him from not having had so much experience, and not so good a judge of whether a horse was going straight or crooked. This is of more importance than a knowledge of the laws and rules of racing, and can only be acquired by long practice in racing, and a man who has owned race horses for many years, given personal attention to their training and watched horses from the ground with a scrutinizing eye, can be called an expert in this branch of "judging."

I claim with the utmost confidence that so long as I was cognizant of the management of the old Blood-Horse, there was a presiding judge in the stand who would not have failed to detect some of the cases of wrong-doing which have escaped punishment under the new system. The most notable case to represent the necessity of some other information than that derived from the betting (which is now held to be the chief enlightener of the judges) is that of Belfast; inasmuch as the race was one mile and therefore the start was from the judges' stand. Whether from the grossest stupidity on the part of the boy who rode or the result of instructions, there never was a more palpable case of endeavoring to "take the word" behind; and successfully accomplished, as he was the last horse in a field of seven. That he was without support in "the ring" was evident from the odds being 25 to 1 against his winning. Subsequent events proved, or at least intimated, that the first races were not "meant." In the next he was backed from 15 to 1 to 6 to 1, and according to the published description, which reads as follows: Bronco led Wicklow and El Rayo until nearing the three-quarter pole, when Belfast commenced to gain on everything at an astonishing rate, and, when called upon in the homestretch, came away and won in a romp by a length and a half. * * * Time, 1:30—a fast race on such a track."

These races are given as an instance where the "majors politicians and capitalists" would not have failed in seeing that something needed correction, and if the starting in the first race had been overlooked, or rather while it was out of the question not to take notice of the dilatory tactics by men who had any knowledge of racing affairs, the result of the second would have instituted a rigid examination, and unless proof was positive that the riding of the stable boy was not in accordance with the preconceived place the extreme penalty would surely have been inflicted. Salaried judges are necessities in extended meetings, as no one who is competent to fill the office can spare the time which is covered by the racing of the present. Nor is it an office which is at all enticing. Subject to adverse criticism at the best, not infrequently accusations implying a lack of morality that would disgrace a road agent, and these promulgated without a shadow of proof to sustain them. I have not for a moment entertained a thought which would warrant a suspicion of the integrity of the judges who have presided at the late meetings. That they may have been "altogether too lenient and short-sighted" in discharging the duties of their position, may or may not be true. My attendance at the late meetings has been too limited to give an opinion excepting on the one race which I have instanced, and that I witnessed.

There is a legitimate field of discussion presented by a comparison of old and modern racing. That a union of both could be made with advantage is beyond reasonable denial, and the true reformer will endeavor to amalgamate the good, reject the bad.

PLEASANT CONTROVERSIES.—It may appear that it is a solecism to call controversies pleasant, and the apparent anomaly strike some people as an absurd phrase. There are differences in people and a wide, very wide dissimilarity in controversialists. The manly debator is the one that I enjoy a tilt with, and however hard the knocks my adversary bestows so long as good feeling prevails there are sure rewards to follow discussion. I have quoted before, though there will be no harm in borrowing the same words again, a remark of the old historian Froissart. When travelling in Scotland towards the close of the fourteenth century, nearly five hundred years in the by-gone, one peculiarity in the Scottish character struck him as being very singular. That was that after a battle in which they had the worst of the contest they thanked the Lord for giving them so good a fight. Thus I may have inherited something of that feeling from horder forebears, or, perhaps, as on another side of the house there is a Gaelic strain, it may be that highlands and lowlands have had a share in establishing the propensity.

Sound logical arguments, though used on the side of the question one does not favor, may lead to a change of base, whereby apparent defeat ends in victory, or it also may be that one has been on the wrong tack and should be thankful for being put on the right course. When arguments, however, are met by weak and flaccid replies there is little satisfaction, and one of these trivial opponents supplements his argument by personal abuse, or attempts to close the breach in his stronghold by equivocation there is no gratification in the encounter.

Without ever having come in direct antagonism to "Iconoclast," we are diametrically opposite in a portion of our views regarding trotting-horse breeding, though it may be better to say the production of fast trotters. That point is in the propriety of near crosses of thoroughbred blood. So far as I can recall the views he has expressed in other respects there is a consensus of opinion, and it is rare that he occupies a position which is not strongly fortified. I have read his contributions to the trotting-horse literature of the era with much pleasure, and from these have formed a high estimate of his critical acumen. Still, like all others of us who write horse, mistakes will slip from the pen occasionally, and in the last Kentucky Live Stock Record which reached me there is what looks to me like a "short skip" in the heat. I called his attention to John Morgan being the fastest of the get of Pilot Jr. and in reply he says: "I said that Tattler, 2:24½, was the fastest of his get. For the nonce I had forgotten John Morgan, that heat the record by just one-half second. I still contend that this was not a very fast record for that period. It was made in 1864, and five years before that time Flora Temple had beaten it four and one-quarter seconds. It was a very good record, but the qualifying phrase "very fast" was a little too strong for it even then." I was not the one who used the phrase, very fast, that being the words of the person whose statement called out Iconoclast's criticism, but surely when the proportion is taken into consideration, John Morgan stands in the same relation to Flora Temple as Kremlin does to Nancy Hanks. If 2:19½ give 4½ seconds what will 2:04 give and the answer 3½ seconds. Therefore if we call Kremlin very fast under the present record, John Morgan is also eligible to the same rating. Stamboul is the only one which is faster when that measure is applied, but after all the adverb hardly presents a debatable quality. What I consider very fast, very good, very beautiful some one else has just as good a right to pronounce mediocre.

Iconoclast concludes his remarks on that topic with the following paragraph:

Pilot Jr., as is well known, was one of the best horses to control the actions of foals out of thoroughbred mares, which, to my mind at least, is a very strong argument against the alleged fact that his dam was by a thoroughbred horse. His great value, however, was in furnishing a good "nick" through his daughters for Hambletonian horses, and this is proven by the fact that he has been immensely greater in the female than in the male line. In most respects he was the antithesis of Hambletonian, and supplied just the qualities that were wanting in that great sire.

As Azmoor has beaten his sire from the same thoroughbred dam, Rowena being 10½ seconds faster than the Electioneer from Emma Robson in this instance; at least, it is not incompatible for a horse from a thoroughbred dam to get trotters from another one which is thoroughbred. My idea is that so long as there is "very" fast trotting action the more "blood" there is the better, until the mixture is so proficient in the gait, and the form approximates the highest type of the thoroughbred, when the necessity will not exist. The descendants of Pilot Jr. having a near thoroughbred cross are prominent members of the family. As Iconoclast states, the maternal side has been more "prepotent" than the paternal, though Bayard and Tattler have done very well in the stud. Bayard occupies the first place and as the thoroughbred strains were a good way off in him, he will strengthen the position taken by Iconoclast.

The proposed change of distance, and which has been adopted by The American, has kicked up more dust and elicited more discussion than its merits demand. Years ago I set forth its advantages in one direction, viz., counteracting the pernicious influence of laying up heats. Much is better accomplished by making it absolute that a heat cannot be laid up.

If associations dread a lessening of their revenues from a loss of entrance money that is easily remedied by stating in the published conditions that the old distances will govern. On this subject I heartily concur in the views expressed by Iconoclast, especially recognizing that the public interest paramount above all others. Honest racing is demanded, and good sport is demanded and no longer the "intolerable prolongations" of the trotting races of the past will be supported. The readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN can give careful attention to the following quotation and I am greatly mistaken if there is not a general concurrence in the views presented by Iconoclast.

It may, of course, be mistaken, but I do not fear the dire consequences predicted by the writer above quoted, from the adoption of the new rules. I can scarcely conceive that the experienced driver and track managers, who concur in the view that the new rules will be beneficial and not prejudicial to trotting interests, can be so badly mistaken. There is one argument against R. F. J.'s position that in itself all but conclusive. It is the public that must be pleased, and if there is one thing that does not please the public, it is a trotting race protracted through many heats. They want short, sharp, decisive racing, and there is one thing above all others that track managers can not afford, and this is to weary out the patience of the spectators. It is from them that the money comes to support the business, and the prime necessity is to afford them amusement. Under the new rule horsemen will be vigilant in preparing their horses for their races. They will not so frequently rely on wearing out the best horses by protracting the struggle. They cannot safely rely on combinations by which the best horses will be beaten by slower contestants. They will be obliged to drive for each heat or lose their chance of winning. Diplomacy will not so frequently take the place of speed.

I can conceive why men who expect to fleece the country through the pool-box should be bitter against the proposed innovation (of course I do not mean to intimate that the gentlemen who are opposing the new rules in the public press are moved by such considerations). Much of their occupation will be gone, but the honest bettor, who backs his judgment on the merits of the horses, will have more chances to win. Few will regret that the "high-binders" cannot so easily manipulate trotting races.

I am in hearty sympathy with a good deal that R. F. J. has to say about the "tin cup." I do not regard it as an altogether lovely way of obtaining records. The record, however, should be an incident and not the chief object of the performance. This is its legitimate place. To win races, and not merely to make an exhibition of speed, should be the first consideration. Great speed, except in races, is comparatively useless. The tin-cup record, however fast, does not prove that the speed attained can be made valuable in races. Horsemen now generally see this, and they prefer to exhibit the speed of their horses in races. The proposed rules do not diminish the chances of good horses making fast records in races. It may reduce the opportunities of animals that are not sufficiently steady to go well in actual contests. The "skip-jacks" and the "skivers" that R. F. J. talks about are not of much account, anyhow, and there would be little philosophy in altering, or refraining from altering, the rules in order to adapt them to this class. The real race horses will still take their chance in real races as a rule, because the public sets a much higher value on this class of performances than on those against time.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

Jessie Button, one of the best matrons at Rose Dale Breeding Park, has a fine filly by Daly, 2:15.

A large number of producing dams have been brought to Rose Dale to be stunted to Daly this season. Some of them are from distant parts of the State.

The Hon. John Bailhaiche, of Healdsburg, was here Saturday. Rumor has it that he will send his great stallion, Anteo Richmond, down here soon to be added to Jim Dustin's string.

One of the best road teams that comes to this town this summer is that owned and driven by R. L. Crooks, of Mark West. The pair is well-bred and Mr. Crooks allows nobody to throw any dust in his eyes.

Rey Robinson and Lil March have returned from the North. Robinson is working for R. L. Crooks of Mark West. Crooks has a fine young stallion, and we hear, contemplates buying another soon.

Councilman J. B. Overton drives a very well-bred two-year-old. Nobody in this town likes a good horse better than the Councilman, and he usually has a number of good ones at his barn.

It is reported that De Turk's horses are to go to Petaluma to be trained this season. George Locke is handling them and they are all doing nicely. Myrtle, Julupa and two others are being fitted up by him. Mr. Locke says Myrtle is as gay as a gazelle this spring.

W. E. Hanley has six horses, and some of them are very choice ones. He has a fine Skinner weanling from his pacing mare Puss, also a Redwood yearling out of the same mare. Then, he has a fine Saladin colt out of a General Taylor mare. And not satisfied with six horses, he has recently purchased a '93 Columbia bicycle to aid him in rapid transit.

The track at Pierce Bros' grounds was never in better condition than now, and that guarantees that it is one of the best tracks in the county. Dustin says that he has driven over a great many tracks in the United States, but that he never saw a better one than this, and if he is not pretty good authority we don't know where one can be found.

Dr. Long's horses are still at the track, and the reports from them are quite assuring. The doctor spends most of his time at the track watching them, and it is doubtful if there is a more enthusiastic horseman in the county than he.

Daly, Digitals and two others from the Rose Dale Breeding Farm will move to the track this week. In a few days the stalls will all be full again. A number of horses were expected from Lake County, but they have not shown up yet.

One of the best young horses in the county is Mart Rollins' Red Chief. This young trotter is a Hercules in size, and the way he is filling out is astonishing. He was sired by Redwood, 2:21, one of the best sons of Anteo. Red Chief's dam was sired by Zulu Chief, son of Mohawk Chief. Her first dam was by Chas. Dickens, he by Geo. M. Patchen Jr., out of the dam of Sam Purdy; second dam Mary Ann, by Muldoon, son of Geo. M. Patchen Jr.; third dam Mary Ann, by Pilot Jr., sire of the dams of Maud S. and Jay-Eye-See. Mr. Rollins' colt has magnificent bone and action, and he will make a great trotter, judged by the way he is going now. Rainbow, the Silver Bow, dam by Alliance, trotter, in Mr. Rollins' training, is developing good speed, and is making a very satisfactory showing for the work she has received.

All the best ones have not been sent away from Pierce Bros' place. We visited the fair grounds one day this week and there saw as thrifty a looking lot of mares and foals as we ever inspected. Adriana, by Alonzo Hayward, has a fine colt, sired by the premier stallion Bay Rose. Sallie Trix, by Patchen Vernon, out of Katie Trix, has a splendid Bay Rose filly. Genie, the General Benton mare, has a Bay Rose filly. This yearling has a yearling by Electricity. Pansy, the dam of Almonition, has a filly sired by Sidney. Poscora Bell, full sister to Poscora Hayward, 2:23; has a filly by Bay Rose. Madonna, the grand old dam of Alcona Jr., 2:24, has a filly by Bay Rose. Sallie Scott also has a Bay Rose foal—a colt. The mare Trix, out of Sallie Trix, has a filly sired by Bay Rose. Sallie Wattles, by Abbottsford 707, dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, has a Bay Rose colt. Maud, the dam of Maudee, 2:24, also has an attractive youngster at her side. One of the most interesting colts is that out of Kittie Wilkes and sired by Bay Rose. This chap is very gentle and of a very inquisitive turn of mind. Everybody that goes to the grounds gets acquainted with him. All of the youngsters are big, healthy-looking ones, and the man who says that trotting stock is puny and spindle-shanked ought to go out and see Pierce Bros' colts to have that absurd impression knocked out of him.

PUBLICUS.

Santa Rosa, May 15.

The Undine Stable flyers in George Covington's hands (Cadmus, Picton, Fidelia and Flirtation) left last Monday for Chicago. George Miller, the stable's first jockey, did not leave at that time, but remained and won a number of good races during the past week.

Spokane News.

Spokane is to have two race meetings this year. The summer meeting will be held July 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, and the fall meeting in September, just in time to catch the horses on their return from the Montana circuit. Heretofore the fall meetings have been held too late to secure the attendance of the best horses.

At the earnest solicitation of a number of the leading local owners and breeders of fast horses, John A. Todd has selected the fair grounds, and the work of placing the track in fine condition will begin this morning. D. Schilling, who will hereafter devote his entire time to the breeding of trotters and pacers, has been appointed superintendent of the grounds and track.

Spokane now possesses the elements of a great racing center—the fastest track in the Northwest, horses owned here that will meet all-comers and railway communications with all sections. Independence, Iowa, has grown from a village to a city through the reputation gained on account of the great racing events that have occurred there. Through the efforts of one man in successfully managing the track the town of Independence has become known throughout the United States. This was accomplished through having a splendid track, hanging heavy purses, and the breeding of horses that could hold their own with the flyers that came from great distances to compete for the purses. Remarkably fast time was the natural result, and Independence became famous.

Spokane already has some of the fastest horses in the Northwest and more are constantly being added to the list. Where is there a pacer that can lower Gold Medal's record of 2:14? It will be gratifying to horsemen to learn that this speedy horse will be on the turf this year ready to measure strides with all-comers.

Col. W. W. D. Turner has purchased both Gold Medal and C. W. G., the pinto pacer, from A. J. Ross, and will put them on the Montana circuit this year. C. W. G. has a record of 2:22. Although both of these fine animals have been owned in Spokane for the past two seasons they have never been raced. Mr. Ross loves fast horses, but he never raced for money. Colonel Turner thought it a shame to allow so much speed to go to waste, and finally induced Mr. Ross to part with the flyers.

Several other horses of royal blood that give promise of great speed have been added to the list of Spokane's fast ones this spring. D. Schilling recently received from Nebraska the stallion Demonstrator, whom the knowing ones say will show fast time when his owner sees fit to race him. Demonstrator is a beautiful cherry bay, with a small star in the forehead and white hind feet. He is six years old and very stylish. He was sired by Walkill Prince, by Hambletonian 10, and his dam is out of an American Star mare. Demonstrator combines the blood of the great Hambletonian 10, Blue Bull 75, Mambrino Chief 11, American Star 14, and Pocohontas Boy 1790.

Mr. Schilling also has on the way from Nebraska the pacing stallion Security, 5 years old, sired by Secure 9,233, first dam by Drennon, second dam by Gilroy.

Thomas S. Griffith is the owner of a valuable new importation—Delpho—a promising three-year-old, by Patronage, the sire of Alix, 2:10, as a four-year-old, and Pactolos, 2:12. Delpho's dam is by Tramp. He is a handsome sorrel, with white face and white stockings and light mane and tail.

Lou Childs, the well-known driver and trainer, arrived from Walla Walla yesterday to take charge of Mr. Griffith's horses.

E. J. M. Hale recently received twelve horses from his breeding farm near Boston. The lot included a fast pacing stallion, several well bred Morgan fillies and two pairs of fine carriage horses.—Review.

Eastward Bound.

The Rancho del Paso, famous the world over as the greatest breeding establishment for thoroughbreds in America, forwarded to New York recently, to be sold at auction, the finest lot of yearlings, consisting of both colts and fillies, that ever left the rancho. The youngsters will be sold by auction at the Morris Park race course, Westchester county, New York, during the first week in June. All the yearlings will be sold, with their engagements.

The thoroughbreds left Ben Ali station on the Rancho shortly before noon in a special train made up of fourteen cars, which will travel on passenger time to New York.

The special consisted of two large furniture cars loaded with feed, two carloads of harness horses consigned to Chicago for a horse buyer named Merseran; a car containing sixteen runners, the stables of Charles Kerr and S. J. Reed, in charge of trainers Billy McCormick and Ben Timmins. The racers will be taken off at Chicago, where they have been entered in the races. Eight cars contained the yearlings to the number of 123, loaded sixteen in a car. In the list were five or six Shetland ponies.

The last car was the private car of John Mackay, Superintendent of the Rancho. If the train has good luck, the yearlings will reach Morris' Park six days from to-day.

On the train with Superintendent Mackay were his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kerr, of Bakersfield, Dr. McCallum, the veterinary surgeon of the Rancho, and Fred Gotobed, as steward. J. D. Sullivan went along as far as Truckee.

About thirty men were on board to look after the stock. Five or six boys went along to exercise the runners en route to Chicago.

Not a finer day could have been selected for the train to leave than yesterday. The weather was glorious and Mr. Mackay and his numerous assistants were feeling happy at the pleasant manner in which everything had passed off. The special train never left the Rancho before in such good shape and early time.

Quite a crowd of gentlemen drove to the Rancho to see the train off and bid Mr. Mackay good luck on his trip. Among some of these there were Major B. L. Steinman, Colonel H. I. Thornton and C. M. Chase, of San Francisco; J. W. Wilson, Ed. F. Smith, H. M. Bernard, Abe Stemler, Bart Cavanaugh, Ned Culver, R. D. Irvine, Homer Buckman, W. O. Bowers and a Bee reporter.

The sale at Morris Park will be the sixth annual sale of Rancho del Paso yearlings. The first annual sale was held in 1888, when sixty-four yearlings were sold for a total sum of $112,775. From these came twenty two-year-old winners in 1890. The 1889 lot realized $113,750, and the following year the animals bred by Mr. Haggitt credited their owners with $197,887.33 in first money. In 1891 the Rancho del Paso bred horses won enormous sums of money. In 1892 the same great success was continued, and from New York to California the representatives of the Rancho del Paso were daily seen in the van. During the year just passed its sires furnished to the turf no fewer than 117 winners, who captured more than 500 races.

The collection which was shipped yesterday is made notable by the fact that in addition to the large number of yearlings by the tried sons of Rancho del Paso, it includes the first of the get of the great Salvator, fifteen in number, from dams whose equal cannot be found anywhere. In his first offspring this foremost of racehorses clearly demonstrates that he is certain to achieve equal renown in the stud, his get showing that he is a sire of the most positive style. Besides those of his own stallions, Mr. Haggitt also offers representatives of Argyle, Three Cheers, Imp. St. Blaise and the unheated Tremont. The colt by the last named is a half-brother to Salvator, and he should be worth his weight in gold if there is anything in breeding. There are three by the great sire St. Blaise, which includes a full brother to the great American stakes winner St. Carlo. The collection is the entire thoroughbred product of Rancho del Paso for 1892, and as such is the most wonderfully bred and promising lot of youngsters ever brought together in one sale.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

As the special train was pulling out of Ben Ali, Charles Kerr, of Bakersfield, whose stable of runners was on board, came within an ace of meeting a most horrible death. Superintendent John Mackay saved him in the nick of time.

Very close to the track is a chute, which is used in loading the cars with horses. When the train started Mr. Kerr jumped on. He caught the railings of the platforms of the last two cars, with one foot on each platform, his back towards the chute. In that position, and hanging on, and before he could possibly, without assistance, have stepped on to one of the platforms to be out of the way, the train had reached the chute. Then it was that Mr. Mackay who was standing on the platform, observing Mr. Kerr's dangerous position, by a dexterous movement caught hold of him just in time to save him from being mangled by the chute. As it was, the chute scraped Mr. Kerr's back. Mrs. Kerr was on the platform at the time and almost fainted.

Several persons observed Mr. Kerr's narrow escape, and they held their breath with fright as the train was passing the chute.—Sacramento Bee.

ALBERT SEALES, of Mayfield, recently shipped a valuable lot of broodmares to Los Angeles, to be bred to McKinney, 2:12. Following are their names: Accident (dam of Wanda, 2:17) and three others) by Elmo; Nora Marshall (dam of Alfred S., 2:16) by Union; Elmatta (sister to Alfred S., 2:16) by Elmo; Solita, 2:27 (sister to Wanda, 2:07); Maraquita, 2:30, by Eros, dam by Chiefain; Primetta, by Primero, dam thoroughbred. Primero was by Elmo, out of Bracelet, by Black Swan. Mr. Seale is bound to have something good. As the Elmos are noted for their low, stealing gait and McKinney has, like all the Alcyones, plenty of knee and hock action, he hopes to strike the happy medium.

ELEVENTH DAY—TUESDAY, MAY 16.

This was a very chilly day for favorite-players, only one first choice getting home in front—Romulus (formerly the Brutus—Beauty colt). The attendance was close to 2,000—this notwithstanding the threatening state of the weather and the fact that there had been quite a rain during the early morning. The sun came out and the wind blew good and hard, and as a result the track was in splendid shape.

Mount Carlos was favorite in the opening race at 2 1/2 to 1, but Joe Harding was played hardest, opening at 6 to 1 and closing at 3. Ahi P. was at 4 and 4 1/2. Ida Glenn receded in the betting from 6 to 1 to 8 to 1. The others ranged from 10 to 40 to 1. Joe Hooker Jr, Mount Carlos, Joe Harding was the order passing the half-pole, Mountain Boy fourth, then Ida Glenn. Mount Carlos led Joe Hooker Jr. into the homestretch by a head, Joe Harding still third, a length from Mountain Boy, then came Glenn and Ahi P. Half-way down the homestretch it looked easily Mount Carlos' race, but Ahi P. and Ida Glenn got up a sixteenth from home, going like the wind, and in an exciting finish Ahi P., with F. Narvaez sitting as still as a statue on her, won at the wire (rather handsly, though) by a nose, Ida Glenn second, three parts of a length from Mount Carlos, third. Time, 1:02 1/2.

Connaught and Clacquer were equal favorites in the second race, six furlongs, for a time, but Connaught went to the post at 2 to 1. Clacquer 2 1/2, Angelo 4, Sidney 8 (from 15), Linville 20. Sidney led Clacquer about a length passing the half-pole, Linville a hang-up third. Nearing the three-quarters Clacquer took command, being first into the homestretch by two lengths, Sidney second and quitting, Connaught third. Clacquer was not headed, winning easily by two and a half lengths. Connaught passed Sidney about a sixteenth of a mile from home, and was in front of Holly's colt a length and a half at the finish. Linville was fourth and Angelo last. Time, 1:16 1/2.

Steadfast, with only 90 pounds in the saddle, on his run of Saturday looked a good thing in the fourth race, one mile, selling. Red Cloud was well supported, as was Farewell. Quarterstaff opened at 3 to 1 and closed at 5. Louise led passing the quarter, with Farewell second and Red Cloud third, not much over a length separating the three. Red Cloud said good-bye nearing the half, where he was a neck in front of Farewell, Louise third, a length from Quarterstaff. Red Cloud was from this out not headed, winning easily by two lengths from the fast-coming Mero, who heat Quarterstaff but a nose for the place money. Time, 1:43 1/2. Jackson, on Quarterstaff, made a very poor finish, and was afterward suspended by the judges for the balance of the meeting.

Romulus, a warm favorite at 6 and 7 to 5, ran third to Vivace and Polaski, in the order named, to the homestretch, where he came through and won with great ease by two lengths in 0:57 for the four and a half furlongs. Polaski, second, was two lengths from Vivace, third, who was a neck from Valparaiso. Cherokee was last.

Happy Day was at one time as good as 3 to 1 in the concluding race of the day, six furlongs, but toward post-time money of all kinds flew in so fast that he was hacked off most boards, being on a few at 7 to 5, however. Regal was well-hacked at 3 and 4 to 1. Volta was supported so well that the odds against her receded from 12 to 8 to 1. The flag fell to a start out of the hest, Happy Day being off sixth and Alfred B. last. The favorite stumbled to his knees with Miller when they had run about 100 yards, losing four or five lengths. Volta, Regal, North, Jim Lee was the order at the half, Happy Day fifth, having shown lots of speed. North, Regal, Volta, Jim Lee was the order at the three-quarters, and until the horses were all straightened out in the homestretch, when Jim Lee, the two-year-old, came on like a cyclone against the rails and won in fine style by two lengths. North second, as far from Happy Day, who made up lots of ground. Time, 1:15—good work for a two-year-old against a field of old horses. B. C. Holly hid the winner, Jim Lee, up to $1,900, at which figure he secured him. This was $400 over the entered selling price. As Jim Lee will not be two years old until June 2d, he is likely to be more than a useful horse.

TWELFTH DAY—WEDNESDAY, MAY 17.

The usual crowd—close to 2,000—attended the races at Bay District track to-day. Two favorites won out of the five races contested. The track was perhaps 1 1/2 seconds slow to the mile, owing to the rain that fell last night.

Gypsy Girl, at 2 to 1 and 9 to 5, was a slight favorite in the opening race, nine-sixteenths of a mile, though Thornhill at the post was at 11 to 5. Starter Ferguson appeared anxious to dispatch the field of sprinters, so much so that he did not wait until Lottie D. got up with the others. The result was a send-off that will long linger in the minds of our race-goers as one of the very worst ever seen at the local track—saying a good deal, too. It resembled an Indian march more than anything we can call to mind. Jack the Ripper was two lengths in front of Volita, then came Gypsy Girl and the others, about a length apart, except in the case of Lottie D., who was virtually out of the race when the flag fell, two lengths behind Thornhill. Jack the Ripper held his advantage until nearing the three-quarter pole, when Gypsy Girl got up on even terms and soon passed the horse with the hood-curling name. Gypsy Girl was not headed thereafter, winning under a pull by a length from Jack the Ripper, who was three-parts of a length in front of Mount Carlos. Thornhill finished fourth, with Lottie D. close behind him, and Volita last. Time, 0:56 1/2.

Seaside, with J. Weber up, at 1 to 2, was regarded as having no hard task to dispose of The Lark, Ora Belle, Alexis and Montalvo, who were at odds of 2 1/2, 50, 30 and 10 to 1 respectively. Montalvo, to a good start, dashed to the front without delay, leading Seaside two lengths at the half-pole, The Lark but a head behind the favorite. Into the homestretch it was Montalvo first by one and one-half lengths, The Lark second, a neck from Seaside. Alexis, fourth, against the rails, made a good turn, and an eighth from home had taken second place. Montalvo won, running away, by one and a half lengths, Alexis second, a trifle over a length from The Lark, the top-heavy favorite one and a half lengths behind Murry's representative, hurrying up the money of the talent. Time, 1:04 1/2.

Vendome, at 2 1/2 to 1, was favorite in the third race, six and one-half furlongs, though there was quite a plunge on Miss Walling. In fact, every horse in the race was well hacked excepting Joe, at 12 to 1. Miss Walling, off flying, was first clear into the homestretch, where Joe, who had been running a close-up second, came away and won handsly by one and one-half lengths, Miss Walling second, three lengths from Vendome, he a length in front of Little Tough. Time, 1:23.

Quarterstaff opened at 8 to 5 in the fourth race, fifteen-sixteenths of a mile, and was hacked so strongly that he went to the post at 7 to 10. The odds against Inkerman, who has been running exceedingly well lately, for some reason not apparent to strangers at the track receded from 3 to 1 to 5 to 1. Nellie G. was well played at 3 and 3 1/2 to 1. Quarterstaff, last away, was in front of Nellie G. a neck at the quarter, a length at the half, and but a head in the homestretch. An eighth from the wire it was hard to tell which of the pair would win, but at the draggate little Weher called on the gray mare, and she drew away sufficiently to win by a neck, Quarterstaff, second, six lengths from The Drummer, third, Inkerman last. Time, 1:37.

Conde and Bronco were for a time equal favorites at 2 1/2 to 1 in the last race, six furlongs, but Conde went to the post first choice of the talent at 2 to 1. Solitude and Sir Reel, at 5 to 1 each, had quite a following. To a good start, Conde soon put daylight between himself and Solitude, who had run up rapidly from sixth to second place, with Louise third. Conde entered the homestretch about three lengths in front of Solitude, and won easily by nearly that much, Solitude second, two lengths from Sir Reel, third, who was a head in front of Bronco. Louise was fifth and Nellie Van last. Time, 1:15 1/2.

THIRTEENTH DAY—THURSDAY, MAY 18.

The favorites took a good, long inning this very pleasant afternoon, four first choices and one second getting the money. To-day's attendance was fully up to that of yesterday, but the racing was not very exciting except in one instance—where Mero beat Huguenot a head in a punishing finish. All the top weights won.

Redlight, with 125 pounds up, was an even-money favorite at the post, with Cyclone and Jack the Ripper next in favor at 6 to 1. Redlight, off second at the flag-fall, soon passed Mountain Boy, who attended him to the homestretch. Redlight won with great ease by a length. Joe D., who came up fast at the wind-up, was second, one and a half lengths from Volita, who ran up from sixth place and heat the Ripper out of third place by a length. Time, 0:49 1/2.

Romulus (formerly the Brutus-Beauty colt) was an even-money favorite in the second race, selling, nine-sixteenths of a mile. Tillie S. was next in demand at 2 1/2 to 1. Realization was at 4 to 1, the others from 12 to 30 to 1. Realization led Romulus into the homestretch by two lengths, Silver Plate third, two lengths behind the favorite, Tillie S. (who got away absolutely last and kicking like an opera singer) fourth. Romulus, with quite a bit up his speed sleeve, won by one and a half lengths from Realization, who was as far from Tillie S. Time, 0:56—this, with 121 pounds up, being one of the very best performances of the meeting. J. H. Miller (who lost Jim Lee last Tuesday out of a selling race) fought Romulus out of this one to-day for $1,650, at which figure the winner is a great bargain.

Vendome, at 2 1/2 to 1, was a slight favorite in the third event, one mile. Folly and Connaught, at 3 to 1 each, were much fancied, however. Vendome, Miss Walling, Initiation was the order passing the half. Then Initiation passed Walling and looked very dangerous, coming into the homestretch but a neck behind Vendome, with Miss Walling only as far from her. Folly was unloosed once the straight was struck, and Vendome and Initiation soon gave it up. Miss Walling also quit about an eighth from home, and Folly, eased up, won by a length from Miss Walling, who was two from Initiation, third. Time, 1:45 1/2.

Mero was a favorite in the fourth at 2 1/2 to 1. Huguenot was well-played at 3 and 3 1/2 to 1. The others were only nipped at. Alfred B. led by a small margin passing the half, with Charmer second and The Drummer third. The latter then took up the running, and Huguenot, hard-ridden by Johnny Weher, commenced moving down his field. The Drummer was first into the homestretch by half a length, Broad Church third, as far behind the Three Cheers colt. In the straight Huguenot looked a certain winner, being two lengths in front of his nearest competitor, The Drummer, Mero now coming with a wet sail. Weher went to the whip on the faint-hearted colt nearly an eight from home, instead of riding with hands and feet, and the result was that he quit badly and lost to Mero at the wire by a good head. Three lengths away, third, was The Drummer. Time, 1:23.

Inkerman and Annie Moore opened at 2 to 1 each in the last race of the day, five and one-half furlongs, selling, but the former was hacked hardest, going to the post at 8 to 5, Annie Moore receding to 3 to 3 1/2 to 1. Warrago was strongly supported, and went to the post a 3 to 1 shot, as did Lodi. Huguenot, out for another whir, was at 15 to 1. Lots of trouble was caused by Annie Moore and Inkerman at the post, and the start was delayed for about half an hour. Annie Moore, to a fairish start, soon opened up a great gap, leading four lengths at the half-pole and three lengths into the homestretch. Here the Weher mare shut up like the saffron-hued canine that she is on most occasions, and Inkerman got up in the last 100 yards and won quite easily by half a length. Annie Moore, second, was two lengths from Lodi. Time, 1:00.

Won handily. Winner b g by Trooclad—Alice. Entered by W. P. Fine.

At the conclusion of this race P. Weber bid Inkerman up to $1,250, an increase of $350 over his entered selling price, and W. P. Fine, Inkerman's owner, waxed wroth over the matter. A complaint having been lodged with the judges against Inkerman's in-and-out way of running, Jockey Epperson was called into the stand. It will be remembered that only yesterday Inkerman, with 111 pounds up, was a poor last in a field of four in a dash of fifteen-sixteenths of a mile. To-day he took up 125 pounds and won in a much better race than the one Nellie G. captured yesterday, from every point of view. It was apparent yesterday that something was wrong, for Inkerman's odds got longer and longer as post-time approached, as good as 6 to 1 being finally offered against the gelding's chances in a field that did not outclass him a bit—in fact, only one horse, fit and well, was as good, and that was Quarterstaff. On questioning Epperson he stated that no amount of urging yesterday did any good, for Inkerman would not run as gamely or as well as usual. The jockey was exonerated, but continuing the investigation at the Palace Hotel after supper, enough was elicited to make the judges believe that Fine's fast gelding had been "dosed" on Wednesday and had run in the interest of some of the bookmakers, and that his excellent run to-day was not at all consistent. Therefore W. P. Fine and his trainer, W. Short, were suspended for an indefinite period, and Fine's horses, Volita, Abi P. and Inkerman, are also under the ban. The talk that the cry of fraud came from some "injured" bookmakers cuts no figure. Crooked horsemen should be promptly punished, and the judges should be praised for any action taken looking to this end, no matter where the charges came from.

Big Brooklyn Racing Scandal.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The Brooklyn handicap scandal apparently will not down. Pierre Lorillard, owner of the mighty Lamplighter, is convinced that his horse was beaten by fraud, and he demands an investigation. Acting on a telegram which Mr. Huggins, trainer of the Ranococas stable, sent to his employer on the night of the race, Mr. Lorillard has requested De Courcy Forbes, president of the New York Jockey Club, to see John Hunter, president of the Board of Control, and arranged for an investigation of the race. In his telegram to Mr. Forbes Mr. Lorillard, who is sick at his stock farm near Jobstown, N. J., paid his respects to some horse owners who have been noted for their antagonism to him.

Mr. Lorillard, in this telegram, denounced the running of seven horses in one interest in one race as not at all conducive to the elevation of the turf, and declared that he would not have started Lamplighter had it not been that John Hunter earnestly solicited it. The seven horses in one interest referred to were "Bill" Daly's Fidelio and Terrifier, Michael F. Dwyer's Raceland, Banquet and Nomad, Green B. Morris' Judge Morrow and J. E. Madden's Illume, trained by Green B. Morris. Mr. Lorillard also announced that he would never start a horse in the Brooklyn Handicap again. He was particularly severe in his remarks about J. Lambley, the rider of Fidelio, believing from the report that he received that this little jockey did more than any other boy in the race to ruin Lamplighter's chances. He recalled the fact that young Lambley had been guilty of a similar offense last year, and wound up by asking that the race be thoroughly investigated.

There can be no doubt about whom Mr. Lorillard aims at when he refers to "seven horses run in one interest." He means Michael F. Dwyer. If Mr. Dwyer did not pay the necessary $1,000 for the starting of W. C. Daly's two horses, some persons who think they know a little about the facts in the case are woefully mistaken. Rumors were current before the race to the effect that Lamplighter was to be fouled and interfered with, and as he subsequently was in the race it lends color to the belief that something was wrong.

The name of the distinguished horse-owner who was so sure that there was a job that he announced the fact before the race and told those who were about him at the time to watch closely and see if Lamplighter was not pocketed and fouled just as he said he would be, was Frederick Gebhard. Mr. Gebhard's information about the matter was so good, or he thought so well of it, that he refrained from placing the "swell" bet that he had intended to put on Lamplighter.

Mr. Lorillard was asked last night for his opinion of the Brooklyn handicap. He confined himself to saying: "I thank God that I got my horse out of that race alive, and when I think of that pack of villains and scoundrels who were in the scheme I feel doubly thankful."

Buffalo's Great Meeting.

Just think of it! $10,000 to be given for pacers in the free-for-all class at Buffalo. No one would have believed a few years ago that such a thing could be possible. The terms and conditions are most liberal. Eight horses can win money in each free-for-all. Subscriptions to these purses received up to June 1st.

The Buffalo Driving Park is known from Maine to California and from Canada to Mexico as one of the finest in America. Its track, buildings, stables and appointments are as perfect as they can be made. Some of the greatest races that ever occurred in this history of the turf have taken place there and as many of our California horsemen intend to go East this year with their strings, the opportunity presented for making entries in the events at Buffalo should not be overlooked. We believe that it is only necessary to mention the fact that the advertisement appears in this journal to call the attention of all the horsemen that are going East. The following taken from a Buffalo journal anent this meeting will well repay perusal:

The chief topic of conversation among Buffalo horsemen during the past week was the free-for-all trotting purse of $20,000 opened by the Buffalo Driving Park Association and the large number of high-class entries already received for it.

The ten horses named are all well known to horsemen, but some of them will come before the public under different conditions than in former seasons. For instance, Martha Wilkes, 2:05, will not have the advantage of Budd Dohle's experience and skill this year, for she will be driven by a young man named Palmer, who has yet to make his reputation as a Grand Circuit driver, and he will find Dohle opposing him with that fleet little mare, Belle Vra, 2:03 1/2. Alix, 2:10, will also be in charge of a different trainer, as her old driver, Jack Curry, will be seen behind the Jewett Farm stallion Favora, 2:19 1/2. Favora's record looks slow for an entrant in the greatest free-for-all ever trotted, but those who saw him work a mile and repeat at Nashville last fall in 2:12 1/2 and 2:12 believe him to be one of the fastest horses in existence. Nightingale, 2:10 1/2 (Hamlin's) improved all last year, and was a better mare at the close of the season than ever before, and she has never been so good in the spring as she is now. She can race all day and is pretty sure to be found close to the front when this race is trotted. The Simmons Greenleaf, 2:10 1/2, is perhaps as good a horse to watch as almost any in the race, for his last season's campaign showed him to be a race horse of the very highest order. Ryland T., 2:11 1/2, is fast and game, but one of the most erratic and cranky brutes ever seen on a track. If he is on his good behavior he will be well up in any race he starts in, but if not, he generally lands the wrong side of the distance flag. Little Albert, 2:10 1/2, has a leg that is liable to trouble him, and Nightingale, 2:13 1/2 (Anderson's), and Walter E., 2:11 1/2, would probably be somewhat overlooked in this field, although anyone of the three, if just right, will go a great race. There are good grounds for believing that at least three other nominations will be made to this purse, although with the entries already made it will bring together the grandest lot of horses ever seen in one race.

Portland Races.

By reference to our advertising columns it will be noticed that the Portland Speed and Driving Association are going to give a spring meeting at their new track at Albina, which is considered the finest in the Northwest, beginning June 24th and ending July 1st. The officers of this association are determined to give the best meeting ever held at this time of the year on the Pacific Coast, and their offer of $10,000 in stakes and purses is one that proves this fact. The track at Albina with its 300 handsome, well-ventilated stables, is considered unequalled even in California. It is entirely free from gravel, the soil is springy as that of Stockton's famous kite, the turns are made to the regulation pitch, and in every respect it is a model. The grand stand has a seating capacity of 4,000 people. Over $30,000 have been subscribed by the liberal citizens of Portland, and the stockholders are among the representative men in Oregon.

Two lines of cars from the heart of the city will convey visitors to the track, and everything will be done by the management to make visiting horsemen comfortable. Entries to trotting and pacing events will close June 1st; to running events June 15th.

Capital Turf and Driving Club.

Next Thursday entries for the various events to be trotted and paced at the spring meeting of the Capital Turf and Driving Club, Sacramento, will close. The success of last year's meeting will be eclipsed this year. There are a number of trotters and pacers that will be sent directly from the Breeders meeting to the Agricultural Park, Sacramento. The large sum of $6,000 is offered in stakes and purses, and as the members of this live organization are doing their utmost to make this meeting a success, every owner of trotters, pacers or thoroughbreds should not hesitate to send them to this meeting. The track is in splendid condition, the terms are liberal and a most enjoyable time will be had. Remember entries will close next Thursday.

In another column of this paper will be found an advertisement regarding the Oakland meeting which is to be managed by Henry Schwartz. This will begin on the 6th of June, immediately after the conclusion of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' meeting, and will last until August 1st, when the main California racing circuit opens. Books will be made at Oakland track on Eastern events, and patrons will be amply accommodated. Work was begun on the betting quarters some time ago, and everything is now in readiness for the transaction of business. Mr. Schwartz says he never made any statement warranting the talk indulged in about his meeting conflicting with others in this State; in fact, when the circuit opens August 1st he will send his string of thoroughbreds out to contest for the stakes and purses offered by the various racing organizations on the main circuit. Dr. C. W. Ahy has been engaged to do the starting at Oakland, and as he has been a success thus far in this line of work, and is an old-timer in racing circles, there can be no reasonable doubt felt about his ability to get the fields off on their journey fairly. Competent, unimpeachable judges will preside at Mr. Schwartz's meeting, and everything will be conducted with the utmost fairness to every one. As only about seventy-five horses will leave California for the East this season, there will be no scarcity of good racing material here, and everything points to a successful summer meeting at Oakland.

THE NATIONAL TROTTING ASSOCIATION.

Report of the Conference Committee to the Board of Review.

At the May meeting of 1891, the Board of Review in session at the Leland Hotel, Chicago, Illinois, adopted the following resolutions:

"RESOLVED, That the President be, and he is hereby directed to appoint a committee, of which he shall be a member, whose duty it shall be to confer with committees of the same number from like associations, and immediately report to the President with reference to the adoption of a more harmonious system for advancing and protecting the interests of the country."

In accordance with said resolution the President appointed the following named members: M. G. Bulkeley, Chairman; G. M. Fogg and P. P. Johnson.

As per previous notice, a meeting was held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, commencing at 8 p. m., on March 13, 1893. M. G. Bulkeley not being able to attend, Mr. David Bonner was appointed and served in his place.

There were present as members, representing the National Trotting Association, Messrs. P. P. Johnson, David Bonner and G. M. Fogg; on the part of the American Trotting Association, Messrs. G. E. McFall, C. L. Benjamin and W. P. Fjams. By invitation, the following were present, representing the American Trotting Register Association: William Russell Allen, F. E. Perkins and H. C. McDowell.

The meeting organized by the selection of P. P. Johnson as Chairman, and J. H. Steiner as Secretary.

The following proposed rules for the acquirement of records in performances against time were approved, and it was resolved that they be recommended to the next Congresses of the American and National Trotting Associations for adoption:

Performances against time must be conducted in accordance with the following Rules and Regulations:

Must be made at a regular meeting of a society in membership with the National Trotting Association, or American Trotting Association, said performances to be conducted by the regular appointed judges and timers for the day, strictly in accordance with the rules of said National or American Trotting Association adopted by the member.

No animal shall be permitted to start against time pending a heat or trial by another animal, nor until the result of such heat or trial shall have been duly announced.

Time shall be taken by three timers engaged in the stand during the performance.

The shall be three judges in the stand during such performance, who shall not act as official timers.

No performance against time shall be earlier than 10 o'clock a. m. There shall be no performance against time at a postponed or continued meeting unless such postponement or continuance is made in accordance with the rules of the National or American Trotting Association to which the member belongs.

In performance against time the animal must start to equal or beat a specified time, and a losing performance shall not constitute a record or a bar.

A regular meeting is hereby construed to mean a meeting advertised in at least one newspaper not less than one week before the commencement of said meeting, and at which meeting no less than two regular events (purse or stake) are advertised for each day, one of which must take place. A match race shall not be considered a regular event.

"Matches against time" will not be allowed.

Entries to "performances against time" must be made with the secretary not later than 7 p. m. the day before the performance, and must appear in the published programme of the day, or, if there is no printed programme, then a written copy shall be posted conspicuously at the judges' stand.

MATCH RACES.

Match races shall be regarded as "performances against time," and time made in such races shall be similarly treated and designated.

Pending the investigation of a reported record by either the National or American Trotting Association, the reported record shall operate as a bar until the matter is adjusted.

The rules of the National and American Trotting Associations were then compared, considered, and proposed alterations suggested with a view to more uniformity, and the consequent better government of the trotting turf.

These changes are also to be recommended to the first succeeding Congress of each association to be adopted.

Upon motion it was resolved, subject to the decision of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association, that "the Secretary of the National Trotting Association shall furnish to the Secretary of the American Trotting Register Association, a certified copy of the summaries of all races and performances against time, and of all records occurring on the tracks of members as soon as possible after the receipt by him of said summaries at the cost of copying same."

The following new rule was also recommended for adoption by the next Congress of the National Trotting Association:

"Any fine of $25 or more imposed by the American Trotting Association shall, after due notice, be recognized and enforced the same as like fines imposed by the National Trotting Association.

All collections of such fines shall be promptly paid to said American Trotting Association."

A proposed rule, which was adopted by the National Trotting Association conditioned upon its adoption by the American Trotting Association, requiring drivers to be licensed, was presented and without action was directed to be referred to the coming Congress of the American Trotting Association.

The following was also recommended for adoption by the respective Congresses of the National and American Trotting Associations:

First—There shall be a joint standing committee on rules consisting of the president of each association and four others, two from each association, the president to name the members to represent the association of which he is an officer.

Second—Such committees shall meet two days prior to each biennial Congress at the place of the meeting of such Congress, and shall remain in session during the time of such Congress, and all proposed changes in the rules shall be referred to such committee, to be reported on by them to the Congress.

Third—The Joint Standing Committee on Rules shall constitute a board of arbitration to whom all questions of difference arising between the National and American Trotting Association shall be referred for final determination, and for that purpose they may call in one person who is not connected with either association to preside over their deliberations, and such a person shall have a vote in case of a tie.

No further business being presented, on motion the committee adjourned. M. M. MORSE.

Sale of Work Horses.

At eleven o'clock to-day there will be a sale of work and draft horses at San Jose under the supervision of Messrs. Killip & Co., the well-known auctioneers. There will be one hundred and twenty-five head of horses sold; they were bred and raised by D. M. Murphy Esq., of San Martine Rancho and are very fine individuals.

GREAT STAKES.

The Northwestern Breeders' $15,000 Stake and Others.

The list of stakes opened by the Northwestern Breeders' Trotting Horse Association, which closed recently, have filled so superbly that their World's Fair meeting at Washington Park, Chicago, will undoubtedly be the great event of the trotting season. The $15,000 Columbian Exposition Stake, open to all trotters, has received the greatest list of fast performers ever brought together in one race, and a resume of the ages, sex, records and breeding will be in order. Alvin, 2:13½, is a chestnut stallion, eight years old, by Orpheus, dam Nancy, by Toronto Chief Jr. He was bred and raised in Canada, and is the fastest stallion which the Dominion has produced. He is a game campaigner, made his record in a hotly-contested race and is a dangerous competitor in any company.

Belle Archer, 2:12½, is a six-year-old bay mare, by Rene, by King Rene, dam Mary Dake, by Enfield; second dam Mary, by Mambrino Paymaster, son of Mambrino Chief. She made her record at the Nashville Autumn meeting of 1892 in the second heat of a winning race, in which she defeated Fred S. Wilkes, Aline and Bonnie Wilmore. This performance stamps her as a race-mare of rare merit.

The five-year-old bay mare, Alix, 2:10, will be watched from the day she begins the season's campaign with more than ordinary interest. She is by Patronage, dam Atlanta, by Attorney; second dam by General Hatch. Not content with beating the best of her age, she won the $5,000 stake for five-year-olds or under, at Lexington, Ky., on October 14, 1892, in straight heats, having behind her such good ones as Belle Archer, Florida, Constantine and Gratton. Her time for the three heats was 2:12½, 2:12½ and 2:13. She made her time record of 2:10 at Nashville, Tenn., November 8, 1892. She holds the four-year-old championship jointly with Moquette, 2:10, and like him is looked upon as one of the likely candidates for the all-aged championship.

Another famous mare entered is the six-year-old Belle Yara, 2:08½, by Yatican, dam Nelle, by Estill Eric; second dam by Embury's Son of Lexington. Her record was made in a race, and she is, therefore, only second to Martha Wilkes in the race championship, and is in front in this respect of every other great trotter, either mare, stallion or gelding. She is another likely candidate for the queenship of the trotting turf. The race queen, Martha Wilkes, 2:08 time and 2:08½ in a race, is in the list. She is the brightest jewel in the crown of her sire, Alcyone, and at the same time sheds luster on her dam Ella, by Clark Chief. The long stretches of Washington Park will suit Martha Wilkes, and as she is now ten years old, she should be in her prime.

Greenleaf, 2:10½, has the high honor of having defeated Martha Wilkes in a race after she became the queen, in the greatest race of five heats ever trotted. In the 2:19 class at Nashville, Tenn., on Oct. 19, 1892, he won the second, third and fifth heats in 2:10½, 2:12 and 2:11½. Martha Wilkes won the first in 2:13, and Nightingale, by Mambrino King, the fourth in 2:10½. Greenleaf is a seven-year-old gelding by Simmons, dam Nelly Monroe, by Jim Monroe.

Ryland T., 2:11½, is a bay gelding by Ledger Jr., dam May, by Ulverstone son of Lexington. He was up to last season a horse of the most erratic disposition, and though known to be equal to an effort in 2:10, was utterly unreliable. In 1892 he settled down to work and became one of the great campaigners in the free-for-all classes. He made his record in a hot six-heat battle at Terre Haute, Ind., on Sept. 30, when he defeated such well-known champions as Little Albert, Jack and Charleston. He won the first, fifth and sixth heats in 2:11½, 2:11½ and 2:14½.

The bay gelding Globe, 2:14½, is the patriarch of the party. He is twelve years old and is by Almont Jr. 1829, dam Kate Patchen, by Hamlin Patchen. His principal efforts of late years have been to the pole, but he was started in the $10,000 Charter Oak Stake at Hartford on August 24, 1892, winning the first heat and his present record.

Nightingale, 2:13½, is a black mare, nine years old, by Patchen 17023, dam Mabel, by Mambrino Howard. She was one of the sensations of 1892, beginning the season early and winning a grand series of valuable stakes, including the $10,000 Charter Oak Stake.

Magnolia, 2:12½, is a six-year-old bay mare by Haw Patch, dam Mary, by Bourbon Chief Jr. At Connersville, Ind., on September 1st, in a contest for a $500, she defeated Coraloid and New York Central in 2:14½, 2:12½ and 2:13½.

The youngest and one of the brightest stars of this brilliant constellation is the four-year-old colt Drectum, 2:11½. He is the three-year-old race champion, and has to-day the fastest race record of any living stallion. His chances are second to none in this greatest battle of the giants.

The $5,000 World's Fair Stake for the free-for-all pacers is a fitting companion to the Columbian Exposition Stake. It has in its list the champion Mascot, 2:04, who holds the triple crown, for he is the race champion, the all-aged champion and the champion gelding. His presence, however, did not deter entries. Flying Jib, 2:05½; Guy, 2:06½ (champion race stallion); Blue Sign, 2:18½; Yvette, 2:09½ (champion pacing mare); Manager, 2:09½ (ex-champion three-year-old pacer); Reflector, 2:10½; Robert J., 2:09½; Adonis, 2:11½, and Yolo Maid, 2:12, provide a field of ten, from which the most phenomenal speed results may be confidently expected.

The other stakes have all filled well with the elite of their respective ages and classes. The 2:20 stake has twenty-one nominations, so that after the sifting-out process has been applied a large field of the fastest may be expected to face the starter. The free-for-all three-year-old stake has twelve, and the two-year-old seventeen entries. The full list of purses and stakes for the two weeks' meeting will foot up to $100,000. Beautiful Washington Park will be at its best, and the thousands of foreign visitors at Chicago will be able to see the great National sport under the most favorable auspices.—Spirit of the Times.

Spelterine.

The demand for this celebrated hoof stalling is on the increase, and every owner of thoroughbreds at the Bay District track has been using it on their stock. Now that the trotters "will have an inning," it behooves every owner of light-harness horses to lay in a supply for the season. It has received the unqualified endorsement of every horse owner that has ever used it. They say it surpasses everything they have heretofore seen.

Marysville Spring Races.

FIRST DAY—FRIDAY, MAY 5.

Friday was the first day of the spring race meeting, and the attendance was much larger than is usually to be recorded on the first day of the meeting held annually by the District Association, says the Marysville Appeal of May 12th.

The weather was delightful, and many of the fair sex were in the carriage enclosure and on the stand. The large attendance was an agreeable surprise to the promoters of the meeting.

The track was in splendid condition and not in the least cuppy, consequently the time made in the different events was good.

The programme consisted of a running race, two trotting races and a bicycle race, and they were all well contested.

The following were the judges: S. H. Bradley, George W. Suttiff and T. B. Hopkins. The time-keepers were Norman Rideout, James Littlejohn and John H. Kimball.

William Leach acted as Grand Marshal, and he fulfilled his duties in a most satisfactory manner.

The first event was won by Butte county, the second by Yuba and the third is still undecided. The wheelman's race was also won by Butte county.

The ball was set rolling with the running race. First race, half-mile and repeat, purse $80. The following horses started: P. J. Schwartz named Mooreana, Ed S. Strain named Edward S., and John Moore named Nettie Moore.

First heat pools—Mooreana, $10; field, $5. There was considerable delay at the start, as Mooreana made several attempts to throw his rider, Jake Gunther. When they were finally started Nettie Moore went off with the lead, closely followed by Edward S., the favorite several lengths in the rear. Coming down the homestretch Nettie Moore was still in the lead, and half-way down the stretch Bill Luck, who was riding the "watermelon" horse, Edward S., gave him his head, and he won easily from Mooreana, who came with a rush at the finish. Time, 0:53½.

For the second heat Mooreana still sold favorite at $10 and the field at $5. The riders started themselves, no flag being dropped. Mooreana went off with a long lead and won a very unsatisfactory heat easily; Edward S. was second, Nellie Moore being distanced. Time, 0:54½.

Third heat, no pools sold—To a wretched start the flag dropped, Mooreana assuming the lead, which he maintained to the finish, Edward S. being distanced. Time, 0:55½.

Second race, two-year-old trot, one mile heats, 2 in 3, purse $80. The following horses started: D. E. Knight named S. G. Glen H., and Suel Harris named B. Everglade.

First heat—Pools sold, Glen H. $5, Everglade $3. After scoring several times they were let go to a good start. Everglade assumed the lead, which he maintained for the first quarter, after which he was passed by Glen H. When half the distance had been gone over they were even, but Glen H. then assumed the lead, and coming into the homestretch Everglade broke and the favorite won easily in 2:51.

Second heat—No pools sold, Everglade being reported to have met with an accident, a nail having been run into her hoof. She, however, showed no signs of being lame. Glen H. went off with a good lead, which he maintained to the finish, winning easily from Everglade, who got off her feet coming into the homestretch. Time, 2:50½.

The wheelman's race of one mile, which was the third event of the day, excited considerable interest. The distance was a mile, and the prize a gold medal. The following started:

Dr. J. E. Moore, of Marysville, F. F. Bartels, of Oroville, G. K. Hooper, of Palermo, Frank Aaron, of Marysville, and S. W. Swezy, of Maryville.

In the pools Hooper sold favorite at $10 and the field at $6. A pistol shot announced the start, the five riders, all of whom ride very gracefully, being well bunched together for half the distance which was passed by Dr. Moore, who was slightly in the lead, in 1:57. After the three-quarter pole was reached Bartels, who rode a Victor bicycle, and Hooper who rode a Phoenix bicycle, commenced to draw away from the others. It was a pretty finish between those two, Bartels passing under the wire about half the length of his front wheel ahead of Hooper. Arion was a good third, and Dr. Moore close up. Time, 3:39½.

The fourth race was for named horses, purse $80, one-mile trot, 2 in 3. The following horses started:

Eugene Hornung enters Jumbo, E. S. Mercer enters Elisa S., W. J. Walton enters Arctic, and Sam Gray enters Rattlebones.

First heat, pools sold: Rattlebones $5, Elisa S. $4, the field $2.50.

After scoring five times they were let go to a good start, but at the first turn near the stable Jumbo and Arctic got off their feet. When the half was reached Rattlebones was still in the lead, Elisa S. close up. Coming on the homestretch Elisa S. broke badly and allowed Rattlebones to win easily. Jumbo and Arctic were distanced. Time, 2:35½.

Second heat—No pools sold. Rattlebones took the lead at the start, which he maintained for the first quarter, when he got off his feet. Elisa S. then took the lead, but she soon broke, and when the half was reached Rattlebones had a good lead. Coming on the homestretch the mare closed up the gap rapidly and when half down the stretch Rattlebones was off his feet, Elisa S. winning a well-contested and exciting heat. Time, 2:36½.

Third heat—Pools were now sold lively. Rattlebones was at first the favorite, but before the pools closed Elisa S. sold for $10 and Rattlebones for $7. They were let go at the first attempt, but Rattlebones was off his feet soon after passing under the wire. Elisa S. was in the lead when she broke at the quarter and allowed Rattlebones to assume the lead. Before the three-quarter pole was reached the mare had closed up the gap rapidly, and as they trotted on to the homestretch it was anyone's heat. They came down towards the wire very close together, but the mare got off her feet at the distance, and old Rattlebones won a well-contested race. Time, 2:36½.

Then came the first kick of the day. Mercer, the driver of Elisa S., claimed that Gray, the driver of Rattlebones, had fouled him at the quarter-pole. The judges said they would render their decisions at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The majority of those present thought that the old horse who was sold at public auction a few years ago for $35, had fairly won the race.

This ended the first day's racing, which was a most enjoyable one.

SECOND DAY—SATURDAY, MAY 6.

The Spring race meeting was brought to a close yesterday, there being a much larger attendance than on the first day. The track was in splendid condition, and nothing occurred to take from the pleasure of the meeting. A large number of ladies were in the enclosure and on the stand. They seemed to take much delight in the bicycle contests.

Before the day's racing commenced the judges gave their decision in the race for named horses, in which a protest had been made the night previous by Mr. Mercer, the driver of Elisa S., against Rattlebones, on the grounds of a foul. They decided that Mr. Gray's horse was entitled to the heat and race. The decision gave general satisfaction.

The ball was set rolling with the five-mile race.

Five mile running, purse $50, three horses to be used by each rider, change every mile. T. P. Schwartz entered Mooreana, Nettie Moore and Edward S., for whom Jake Gunther rode. W. P. McAlpine entered Fleetwood, Dolly S. and Tommy R., for whom W. Look rode.

In the pools both horses sold for even money, although three race horses were contesting against three saddle horses. Those who backed McAlpine's horses however had the straight tip, as his horses won the five beats in the following time: First, 2:17½; 2nd, 2:12; 3rd, 2:18½; 4th, 2:15; 5th, 2:28. Total time, 11:31.

Farmer's trotting race, purse $50, for horses that have no record, mile heats, two in three. The following horses started: Ed Proper's Darkness, Tom Giblin's Dexter, P. H. Smith's Dick, John Stevenson's Charles H. and Ed Strain's Maud.

Pools sold lively. Dick was favorite at $10, Maud $4, the field $2. After scoring twice they were let go to a good start. Dick, who had the outside position, taking the lead, followed by Dexter and Maud. This position they retained until half the distance had been gone over, when Maud passed Dexter and closed up the gap Dick had made. For the last quarter the pace was too fast for Darkness, Charlie H. and Dexter. Coming down the homestretch Maud tried to catch Dick, but was not fast enough for the Nicolans horse, who won easily. The other three were distanced. Time, 2:42½.

Second heat—No pools sold. There was no scoring; both horses started off slow, and were soon off their feet. Maud led at the quarter, Dick being a short distance in the rear. They maintained their positions until coming on to the homestretch, when Dick went off his feet. Half-way down the stretch Dick, who was catching up very fast, again broke, Maud winning easily. Time, 2:49½.

Third heat—Pools sold: Dick $4, Maud $8. Maud got off her feet after passing under the wire, but caught quickly. Dick led for three-quarters of the distance, when Maud closed up. Coming down the homestretch Maud came with a rush, but could not catch Dick, who won easily. Time, 2:50½.

Dick won first money, $35, and Maud got $5, second money.

Then came a special match trotting race, one mile, for a purse of $50, between P. Carrigan's Rondo and Ben Mansford's Maud.

In the pools Rondo sold favorite at $10 and Maud at $5. After scoring once they were let go, Rondo assuming the lead, closely followed by Maud, who were driven by Hogboom. When the three-quarters of the distance had been gone over, Maud got off her feet and lost considerably. Coming down the homestretch Maud came with a rush, but could not catch Rondo, who won easily. Time, 3:00.

Special saddle horse race, 600 yards, two in three, for a purse of $50, to be divided as follows: First, $35; second, $10; third, $5. The following horses started: Lane Bros.' Little Darling, George Summy's Black Daisy, Fred Park's Grey Prince, W. P. McAlpin's Chip, George Sterns' Brown Dandy and S. P. Swartz's Protest. Pools sold, Black Daisy, $5, the field $5.

First heat—There was one false start in which all the horses finished, except Protest and Grey Prince, Black Daisy coming in first and Brown Dandy second. This caused the pool-selling to change, Protest being made favorite. The horses were again started and finished in the following order: Protest first, Grey Prince second, Brown Dandy third, Black Daisy fourth, Chip fifth and Little Darling distanced. Time, 0:36.

Second heat—Black Daisy, having cut an artery was withdrawn. The race was between Protest and Grey Prince, the riders of all the horses except the one on Protest being busy with the whip coming down the homestretch. Protest finished first, Grey Prince second and Chip third, and in this order they received the money. Time, 0:38.

This was the four-minute trot for a purse of $10. The horse making the mile nearest four minutes to win, goes away please. The horses that started and time was as follows:

W. C. Look, Knighthood, 3:55; T. Giblin, Dexter, 3:44½; Ed Proper, Tim, 3:38; G. Eager, Dot, 3:38; Geo. L. Chandler, Bailey, 3:33; J. Carrigan, Midget, 3:30; C. Hearing, Johnnie, 3:26; Frank Tomb, Prince, 3:24½; C. Gottwals, Maud S., 3:23½; W. P. McAlpine, Crazy Jane, 3:15.

The purse was awarded to Knighthood, after a protest being made that W. C. Look, the driver, had a watch, which he denied. He stated that he had given Mr. Hogboom his stop watch before the race, and Mr. Hogboom corroborated him.

There were two interesting bicycle races during the afternoon. For the half-mile novice race for riders who had never won a medal the following started: Otto J. G. Trantz of Biggs, Frank Aaron, J. Hendricks and E. A. Boulton of Marysville.

This was a pretty race until near the finish, when Mr. Trantz went to the front and won easily.

The five-mile bicycle race for a special medal had the following starters: George K. Hooper, of Palermo; Otto J. Trantz, of Biggs; F. F. Bartels, of Oroville, and Dr. J. E. Moore, of Marysville. Dr. J. E. Moore led for the first three miles, when he ran into a ditch and lost considerable ground. Bartel and Hooper were leading at the end of the fourth mile, with Trantz close up. When it came to finishing up in the last quarter, Hooper, who was the favorite in the pools, went to the front on his Phoenix bicycle, and, having the most endurance, as well as being the most graceful rider, he won rather easily from Trantz, Bartel being third. Time, 19:54. Bartels rode the same bicycle as on the day previous.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stalls, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; as John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

Nutwood Boy.

Sired by Nutwood, 2:18 3-4. Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1125 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest living likeness to his celebrated sire, Nutwood of any stallion in California. Nutwood Boy's opportunity in the stud has been of the most limited description. He is a square, level-gaited trotter, and with only five weeks track work a year ago, trotted a trial in 2:28; last half in 1:13. After his stud season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "fall circuit" and gaining him a record. Nutwood Boy will make the season of 1893 at Lodi, Cal., at $10 the season, with usual return privilege. Good pasturage furnished at $3 per month. Mares will be carefully handled, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, or complete circulars, address CHAS. I. LOWELL, Lodi, Cal.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

STAR, LANE CO., OREGON, Feb. 9th, 1892. DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Carth of long standing. When I had a four-year-old colt badly sweened; tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your Ointment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder tilted all right, and the other, a four-year-old that had a Thoraxpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or. S. Z. PAXTON.

Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Spring Tendons, Curbs, Kingbone, and Spavins; there is nothing equals it; and for us it effected a permanent cure where fring failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any other ever used. Very respectfully yours, Training The Trotting Horse. BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed and superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."

SUCCESSFUL STALLIONS—STATISTICAL.

The Sires of California, 1897, and Their Principal Money-Winners—Crackjacks of the Season.

The following shows the principal winners by the various sires quartered in California, or bred here, during the year 1897. The showing of imp. Sir Modred, imp. Midlothian, imp. Darebin, Apache and several younger sires is worthy of attention, and this season (1898) more new and young stallions are represented in California than ever. Nomad, imp. Golden Garter, imp. Goldfinch, Orizaba, Darriwell, Rio Bravo, imp. Crighton and imp. Watercross have racing representatives in America for the first time, and all are doing well. Next year we will have some of imp. Star Ruby's get, besides some of Eolos and Trentolas and youngsters by imp. Artillery. The sons and daughters of the latter are doing exceedingly well in New Zealand, winning important stake races from the best in the land. We believe there is a great deal in the Bruce Lowe theory regarding "sire blood," else those of the No. 3 family would not be at the top of the "winning stallions" list or near it in the great thoroughbred horse breeding countries—England, New Zealand, Australia and America. In a short time we will print the Bruce Lowe figures (the top four crosses) of some of the successful stallions of this part of the world and give our opinion of some horses that on "the figure system" ought to make great names for themselves at the stud, though they are as yet untried.

The incomparable Ornament easily headed the list of individual winners of 1897, having earned $53,375 in stakes and purses during the season. The next biggest winner was L'Alouette, the Futurity winner, who gathered in for her owner $40,540, beating Hamburg who came third with $40,070. It is rare, indeed, that a three-year old is the biggest winner of the year, as the richest stakes are given for the two-year-olds, and emphasizes the fact that Ornament was the champion of the year at any age. The Friar was the next largest three-year-old winner, he having won $25,925, the bulk of which came from the Realization, decidedly the richest three-year-old stake of the season. Of other three-year-olds, Typhoon II. only won $13,400 and Algol $1,070. Buckvidere won $6,550; Dr. Catlett won $4,500, Cavalero $4,346, Howard S. $7,150, On Deck $4,210, Rensselaer $10,521, Fleischmann $7,150, Octagon, $12,710 Don de Oro $10,735, Voter $9,835, Cleophus $5,165, Sunny Slope $5,550 and White Frost $11,945.

Among the good two-year-olds, besides L'Alouette and Hamburg, Previous (by imp. Meddler) won $19,622, Bannockburn $10,030, Frohman $11,000, Plau lit $8,710, Malvolio $4,250, Traverser $3,960, MacIvor $3,050, and Howland $2,810.

The great Hanover led the stallions of 1897 in the number of winners, he having 49 to his credit, though he is hard-pressed by Fonso with 35 winners. Imp. Deceiver is next in order with 37 winners, and Strathmore 35; then comes Hindoo, Leonatus and Sir Dixon with 31 each; imp. Rosington with 29, and Falsetto, imp. Midlothian and imp. Pirate of Penzance with 28 each; Himyar with 27 and Bramble with 26.

A full list of the number of the stallions in California which sired ten winners or more in 1897 is given below, with an additional list of their get who earned money, i. e., were second or third, but did not win. The list is compiled from Goodwin's "Winning Sires of 1897," which gives a complete list of the winnings of each horse which started in 1897 arranged under the respective sires:

AMERICA'S GRANDEST STUD MATRONS.

The Most Distinguished Mothers of Racers Ever Known in This Country and Their Descent in the Female Line—Our Ideas Regarding Selections.

While the marked excellence of such comparatively short-bred stud matrons as Marion, Belle Knight, Betsey Malone, Picayune, Magenta, Balloon, Maggie R., Sweetbriar, Thora and Miss Woodford indicates to us that it is the "individuality" and not the blood lines that make these mares so valuable as producers, still it may prove interesting to pedigree students to trace the most wonderful mothers of American-bred gallopers to the "tap root." With this in view we will give this week a list of fifty of the most celebrated mothers of American racers from the earliest day as far as it goes—mares that grew three or more notabilities of the turf or stud. Next week we will trace fifty more of the great mares.

It is our opinion, however, that if a mare is an individual far above the ordinary and has four good top crosses, breeders will make no mistake in using her at the stud. And the chances are she will, if not put to the stud too soon after her racing career comes to an end (the hard muscles of an athlete allowed to relax and become the muscles of a matron, soft and motherly) give to the world something out of the common as a racer. There have been so many short-bred stud matrons that have thrown such a host of horses that could go long journeys at a high rate of speed and such a host of well-bred mares whose foals never do well at any distance beyond six furlongs that we begin to believe that "individuality" is the great desideratum in a mare to be sent to the stud. The "weeds" of the thoroughbred garden should be cast aside forever, and if more attention was paid to the bona, roominess and muscular development of brood mares than to pedigree, regardless of power, a much better race of horses would be the result. The breeding of stallions, it would appear, counts for more than that of mares in a breeding establishment. There seems to be a great deal in the Bruce Lowe theory that the most successful sires come from Nos. 3, 8, 11, 12 and 14 families, in other words, stallions tracing their female descent respectively to the dam of the two True Blues, the Bustler mare (dam of the Beverly Tork mare), the Sedbury Royal Mare, the Royal Mare (3d dam of the Old Montague mare) and the Oldfield Mare are the best to breed your mares to if you desire to get a good turf performer. If there is nothing in the theory, it is at least peculiar that the most of the great stallions in the four great horse-breeding countries (England, New Zealand, Australia and America) should be of the No. 3 family. The best stallions, by the records, ever known in England were Stockwell and Sir Peter, and they both traced to the dam of the two True Blues. Musket, the greatest stallion ever known in New Zealand, traced to the same source. Australian Newminster was of the No. 3 family, and imp. Medley, American Eclipse, imp. Rayon d'Or, Reform and imp. Glengarry, in this country, were descendants of the dam of the two True Blues. Therefore, with such statistics at hand, and also that regarding the members of the Nos. 8, 11, 12 and 14 families, if we were going to purchase a stallion we would not look outside of these lines for a sire. But if we were looking for a mare she would have to come up to our physical standard first and the breeding would be a second consideration. Of course, the stallion would have to be sound and "masculine looking," but breeding would be the first requisite in his case.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN]

The yearling sales of March show the market to be in a very healthy condition, and that good racing material will still fetch fair prices. The Messrs. Campbell & Sons sold Mr. Andrew Chirside's Newminster Park yearlings at the City Horse Bazaar, and there was a goodly attendance of racing men on hand. The best prices were: 610 guineas (about $3,132) for a gelding by Zilinski from Nemesis, Mr. W. Allen being the purchaser. Other good prices were 250 for a brown filly by Vengeance from Primrose, Mr. G. Gray; 210 guineas for br f by Zilinski from Queen Bee, Mr. Chas. Ayrey; 200 guineas for hr f from Busy Bee; 170 guineas for a bay gelding by Vengeance from Constellation, Mr. Chas. Ayrey, and 150 guineas for a bay filly by Vengeance from Forest Queen, purchased by Mr. G. Gray. The average of the sale was 128½ guineas, or $672—very good, truly.

At the sales of thoroughbred yearlings on Wednesday following the Newminster Park yearlings, the best prices were 400 guineas for hr f by Malua from Cipriote, bought by Mr. R. G. Talbot; 260 guineas for ch c by Carnegie from Ledy Disdain, bought by Mr. A. Morphy; 240 guineas for ch c by Pilgrim's Progress from Lady Belle, bought by Mr. G. Towton; 230 guineas for h c by Carnegie from Princess Alice, bought by J. N. McArthur; 230 guineas for hr c by Bill of Portland (son of St. Simon) out of The Fortune Teller, bought by Mr. S. McKay, and 270 guineas for b c by Trenton from Gardenia, purchased by Mr. J. N. McArthur.

W. R. Wilson's Aurum (by Trenton Aura), who goes to Mrs. Langtry, won the V. R. C. St. Leger February 26th with 122 pounds up, ridden by H. J. Morrison. He won by ten lengths with esse. The Tola was second and Keera third. Time, 3:12. Anrum's sire, Trenton, is now in England. The fourth dam of this great colt, Lady Evelyn, by Don John, won the Oaks in England, as did her dam, Indostry, by Priam.

S. Fielder's Amiable (blk m 5, by Lochiel—Affection) won the Newmarket Handicap with 124 lbs. up in 1:14, Reaper second, with 106 lbs., Resolute third with 129 lbs. There were twenty-six starters and the mare won easily by two lengths in 1:14 flat.

R. Cherside's Cordite (by Zilinski—Busy Bee by the Marquis) won the Sires' Produce Stakes in 1:14½, 117 lbs. up, Cocos second, Bobadil third.

Battalion, winner of the Essendon stakes (mile and a half in 2:36½, with 124 pounds in the saddle) is by Battelios out of Nancy Till.

The first crop of youngsters by the Melbourne Cup winner, Tarcoola, are fine-looking, and as a family took first prize at the horse show held near where the son of Newminster and Imogene is standing. More than twenty stallions were represented, too. Last season Tarcoola served some fifty-six mares, and it is said fifty-three of them are safely in foal. The conqueror of the record-breaking, Portsea, et al., is bred on sire lines with a vengeance, he being by Newminster (No. 3, Lowe plan) out of Imogene (of the 12 family). Besides, he has close up the blood of Stockwell (3), The Marquis (2), Newminster (8) and King of the Ring (3). We never saw a horse better bred for a sire than Tarcoola, and with his great record on the turf behind him, should be a valuable stallion.

The Brunswick Stakes (once captured by Loyalist, now at Palo Alto stud, California) was won this season by S. G. Cook's h m The Parisienne, 5, by Trenton—Marie Louise, in 2:09, Vakeel second and Pinfire third. Loyalist won in 2:03½, which was the Australian record for a time, if we remember right.

At the V. R. C. meeting March 1st, R. Batty's Clondalkin (by Goldsbrogh—Songstress) won the hurdle race, two and a half miles, with 142 pounds up. W. R. Wilson's Bohadil (by Bill of Portland [son of St. Simon]—She, by Nordenfeldt) easily captured the Ascot Vale Stakes, six furlongs, with 122 pounds up, Cordite (127 pound) second, Cocos (132 pounds) third. Pretty good weights, these, for two-year-olds. Mr. Wilson's Aurum won it in 1897, and his Challenger in 1895. W. H. Davidson's hr h Ayrshire, 5, won the Australian Cup by three and a half lengths, Battalion (a, 135 pounds) second, Aurum (3, 129 pounds) third. The winner's closing price was 16 to 1. Ayrshire is by Dunlop (winner of the Melbourne Cup) out of imp. Hinomongie, by Blink-hoolie, second dam Patchwork, by Young Melbourne. The steeplechase, about two miles, was won by S. Miller's b g Wherside, by Glorious—Mildura, with 178 pounds up. He won by eight lengths. W. R. Wilson's blk c Ormuz, with 113 pounds up, won the Junior Handicap, five furlongs. The winner is by Bill of Portland (St. Simon—Electric Light, by Sterling) out of Cooye. W. R. Wilson's h c Resolute, 4, annexed the Bourke Handicap, seven furlongs, carrying 134 pounds. D. S. Wallace's Moonlyong, second, had but 109 pounds.

On March 31 (V. R. C. meeting) Mr. Batty's Clondalkin (156 lbs.) won the second hurdle race. J. Wilton Jr.'s Avalon (by Strathmore—Chintz) won the Maiden Stakes, one mile. J. Crozier's b g Vakeel, a (by Robinson Crusoe—Eileen) foished first in the Autumn Handicap with 105 lbs., running the mile and five furlongs in 2:52½. W. Duggan's b c Amberite, 3 years, (by Carbine—Duenna, by Lecturer), carrying 110 lbs., won the Champion stakes by twenty lengths, from Bundock (the only other starter). J. Wilson's Relic (by Off Colour—Tonia), 101 lbs., won the Nursery Handicap, seven furlongs, and D. S. Wallace's hr f Moonlyong, 4, by Mentor—Sierra, 113 lbs., time 2:08½ for the mile and a quarter.

The Takapuna (Auckland) Jockey Club wound up a most successful three days' summer meeting. Marksman, a son of the Musket horse Foulshot (who is in America) won the Maiden Hurdles from a half-dozen others. The leading flat event was the summer handicap, one mile; and in a field of seven Anita was made a great favorite, but the winner turned up in Supplejack, a four-year-old son of Hippocampus and Empress, by Maribrnyong out of Peeress, who won easily from Castashore; the second favorite, Lufra, finishing third; Anita was hadly beaten. Pansy, by King Quail—Winnie, won the three mile Steeplechase easily from Miss Nelson and three others. After a great race the two favorites, St. Inis and Daphtree, were beaten over the four furlongs of the two-year-old race, the Marme Handicap, by Roxana, a daughter of Cuirassier and Vieux Rose, whose first win it was. The victory was only gained by a head. The double winner of the first day, Rex, beat nine others in the six-furlong Devonport Handicap, The Sharper finishing second and Miss Anua third. Amongst the unplaced division were the favorites, Supplejack and St. Elmo, the latter of whom had won, earlier in the day, the four furlong Borough Handicap from Atlanta, the Sharper and nine others, including Rex and Cuirassier.—"Leonatus" in the Australasian.

The Musket blood was greatly in evidence at the meeting, being considerably assisted to a prominent position by the aid of the Tocal-owned sire Medallion, says "Leonatus" in The Australasian. What sort of a stud, had he wished to breed on a large scale, might Mr. Stead have had with Medallion, Maxim, Lochiel, not to mention Trenton and others. But to return to the Riccarton racing, of which it will be only necessary for the Australasian readers to touch on the principal events. There were a couple of 250 sovereign races on the first day, and out of the first, of which the Middlepark Plate, for two and three-year-olds, special weights, over six furlongs, Mr. Stead's crack two-year-old Conqueror, by Medallion from Siesta, frightened all opposition; but Falka, a two-year-old daughter of St. George and Melusina, running in Mr. E. Cull's name, with 8 sterling 3 pounds, including a penalty of 10 pounds, and conceding Faika 15 pounds, Conqueror simply walked in in 1:21; and to show what the public thought, I may say that the only investments on the totalisator consisted of £2 on the winner. Conqueror claims several valuable engagements yet this season. Like many other of New Zealand's special weight races, Mr. Stead's name figures prominently in conjunction with the Middlepark Plate, which he has won eight seasons, the four last consecutively. Another Medallion prevailed in the other big race, the Midsummer Handicap, one mile and a half. The winner was Mountebank, a three-year old son of Vaultress, by Albany (Thormanby—Griselda) from Miranda (Traducer—Belle of the Isle). Mountebank who is owned by Mr. Harry Goodman of Dunedin, and has grown into a fine looking colt, was made a bit better favorite than the uncertain Skirmisher, Eulverin, and Star Shot, a trio that were pretty equally hacked. Cuirassier's three-year old daughter from Radiant, Sequin, owned by Messrs. Stephenson and Hazlett, was a great tip, but she failed to run up to expectations, and could only get third behind Culverin, a neck away, while after a great finish Mountebank was only able to get home by a bare length. The time was 2 min. 39 2-5 sec., and the dividend (£5) was a good one in a field of nine, which included Epaulet, the four-year-old son of Medallion and Dudu, who ran last behind Sir George Clifford's filly Goldleaf, the other starters being Red Lancer and Rangefinder. As on the first day, so on the second, the new weight-for-age race, the Champion Plate, of 300 sovs., for three-year-olds, one mile and a quarter, was reduced to a match—albeit a very unequal one—between two, for Mountebank was the only one sent out to oppose Gold Medallist. Speculation was limited again, and while there were ten investors on Medallion's son, there were only two on Mountebank, who was beaten at the finish easily by nearly two lengths.

Mr. W. R. Wilson is a long way ahead of everyone as far as stakes are concerned, says "Terlinga" in the Australasian, notwithstanding that the Newmarket Handicap, Australian Cup and Champion Race went else. The crack two-year-old Bohadil was the principal winner, and the success of this colt and Ormuz was very satisfactory, inasmuch as it established Bill of Portland's worth as a stallion. Aurum won £380. This is not much for him. Before the meeting began it seemed almost a certainty that he would secure the Champion Race and the Loch Plate. If he had not been such a favorite for the Australian Cup, I fancy he would have been withdrawn from that race and reserved for the Champion on Thursday. Amiable's own win brought Mr Fielder £1,404. After the Newmarket she was a failure. Amiable was advertised for sale on Monday, but she was withdrawn and sent back to Sydney. Amiable, Amberite and Cravat won the only New South Wales horses to win. As it happened, the horses from Sydney did not prove as formidable as was expected. They had a grand innings in the spring, and when Spectator and Johansen came down and won their races at Canfield so easily, it looked as though history was about to repeat itself. Only one race went to South Australia, and about £10,000 of the £12,909 given in stakes remains in Victoria.

Mr. Ben Richards, at one time a well-known supporter of the turf in South Wales, died last week. He was the breeder of Cap-a-pie, Sir William, Anteaus and Milbrodale. Mr. Richards was 80 years of age when he died.

At the V. R. C. meeting, March 5th, W. R. Wilson's Bohodil, two years, won the All-aged Stakes by seven lengths; with 96 pounds up, mile in 1:40½, Waitabit (126 pounds) second, Relic, 2 (93 pounds), third. Wherside won the second handicap steeplechase with 139 pounds up. Battalion (129 pounds) beat Amberite (124 pounds) and Bundock (126 pounds) for the Loch Plate, while A. Yuille's h c Spencer, 3, by Carbine—Silvia, won the Ferewell Handicap in 1:41 with 93 pounds up.

The Aspendi Park races (March 8th) were won by Cannonite, Ray Olaf, Goodman, Carmyle and Flint, respectively by Matador, Cheviot, Malua, Segenhoe, Trenton and Gang Forward.

The winners at the A. J. C. meeting (Sydney) May 5th were Etebah, Mirella, Alaria, Raven's Plome and Eastern King, respectively by Invader, Nordenfeldt, Far Niente, Carbine and Sunrise. Eastern King, winner of the Welter Handicap, is a half brother to A. B. Spreckela Crighton, being out of Ghinni Ghinni.

W. Walter's Swordfish by Hotchkiss—Fish Girl, won the Wanganui (N. Z.) Jubilee Cup, one mile and three-quarters. On the second day of the Stratford Club meeting the big event, the President's Handicap, one mile and a quarter, fell to a four-year-old son of Cuirassier and Aida, in Uhlun, who had no trouble in defeating three others, including the Castor horse, Adam, who was third. Vanguard had three winning representatives at the meeting, and one of Major George's breeding in St. Vincent, by Nelson—Florence, won the seven furlongs Welter. Foulshot, who is in America, occasionally gets a turn by one of his get prevailing, and at this meeting Singleshot, a five-year-old by him, was awarded the five furlongs race, the winner being disqualified for crossing. More Musket blood was to the front, through one of the progeny of that well bred horse Lebel—whose son, Tukapa, from the jumping mare Jenny, won easily over six furlongs. This is the first winner by Lebel, who was got in 1888, by Nordenfeldt by Polchra, dam of Formo and Co., and as a two-year-old bore the "yellow jacket, black cap," of Mr. Stead to the front in the Great Northern Foal Stakes at Ellerslie.

Aurum is reported to be amiss, and will not take part in the A. S. C. Autumn Meeting.

Three or four well-known racehorses were put up for sale by Messrs. Wm. C. Yuille and Co. (through Messrs. Campbell and Sons) at Kirk's Bazaar on Monday, says the Australasian. The hurdle-racer Podaces was the only one sold, he finding a new owner in Mr. J. Campbell at 100 guineas. Mr. S. Miller was anxious to get Clondalkin, but his best bid was 295 guineas, at which price the son of Goldsbrogh was passed in. Olaf was passed in at 260 guineas, and Telegraph at 170 guineas. Messrs. Campbell and Sons sold Barratta to Er. T. J. Burke for 8½ guineas, and Mazeppa to Mr. R. Powell for 7½ guineas.

The winners at the Victoria Amateur Turf Club meeting March 12th, were Cardamon (Federal Stakes), Nilus Goodman, Blue Peter, Aluminum and E idepord.

R. Bay's h f Starshot, 4 (by Chainshot—Veno) won the Dunedin (N. Z.) Cup and the Dunedin Jockey Club Handicap respectively, at a mile and three quarters and a mile and a half.

Mr. J. B. Clerk came out second best in his complaint against Mr. R. Dakin in connection with the handicapping of Jack Hanwell, the V. R. C. Committee's finding being as follows: "Having considered the statement submitted by Mr. J. B. Clark, the committee is of opinion that substantial justice was done by Mr. Dakin, and that there is no occasion for the committee to interfere."—AMERICAN.

Saddle Notes.

FRAWLEY is to ride on the Montana circuit for Farrar & Tuberville.

NEWSGATHERER won a mile race at Lakeside in 1:42½ on the 12th of May, beating a field of eight.

TENDER, a two-year-old winner at Morris Park May 12th, is a bay filly by the great swayback, Tenny, out of Drine.

JUDGE J. H. TAMM ran Lucky Star up to $500 after the 1st race May 17th, at which price he secured the useful Friar Tack horse.

MR. BAITER, a winner at Morris Park May 12th, is by Iroquois—Carlotta, therefore a brother to the $8,000 counterfeit, Eakins.

MRS. NETTIE HARRISON will send Alma, Beautiful Girl, Lola Montez, B. & W. and Cazalero to Montana in charge of Trainer Tom Burns.

COL. BURNS says that both Altsmax and Mt. McGregor will be fit to race next season. The great firm will ship twelve horses to Chicago next week.

GALLEN BROWN leaves for Chicago on Saturday. Yesterday he concluded arrangements with I. P. Diggs of Woodland to lease Diomed, the yearling brother of Olinthus.

RED BIRD was not eligible to start in the race on May 13th, in which he finished second, and has been disqualified by the judges. This decision gives second money to Wenoma and third to Celoso.

JOE WEBER rode Marito to victory at Lakeside May 11th. The son of Volanta and Maori was at odds of 8 to 1 and won by two lengths from Enchanter and ten others in 1:14 for six furlongs.

SPENCER, who went East recently to ride for the Thompson Brothers, piloted Tha Huguenot to victory in a mile race at Morris Park May 12th. The brother to Henry of Navarre closed at 6 to 1.

KINGDON who won the Bonquet Stakes at Morris Park by four lengths, is by the "brown whirlwind" Kingdon, out of Lady Ballard. He belongs to M. F. Dwyer, who owned Kingdon when he raced.

THE HUGUENOT, brother to Henry of Navarre, won a mile race at Morris Park on Saturday, Our Johnny, by Fresno, won at a mile and a sixteenth, and Jean Baraud captured the National Stallion Stakes.

MERCUTIO had a pair of Capt. Harris patent blinds on May 17th, and they worked to a charm. He got away pretty well and won cleverly from a good field. Matt Storn is now training the bad actor, and had Mercutio in condition to run for a kingdom.

MIDLIGHT, the four-year old mare by imp. Madlothian-Electric Light, who belongs to the comedian, Richard Golden, was histered yesterday and the effect was to throw her into a fit. Of necessity she was scratched in the second race.—Chicago Inter Ocean, May 10.

THE New York Herald advocates the barring of the starting gate and the early return to flag starting. The Herald man forgets what vexatious delays the gate saves and that two or three more races can be comfortably run during an afternoon now, when the gate is in use.

A NEW YORK paper claims that Glenheim is another Hamburg. He captured the Juvenilla Staka at Morris Park in a decisive manner, but was afterward beaten by Jean Beraud. Glenheim is a full brother to Handsome and a half-brother to Ferrier, Plaudit and Hastings.

EARLY next week Trainer Billy Short will leave for Denver with the crack sprinters, Rubicon, Roadwarmer, R. Q. Ban, Kaiser Ludwig, Midas and a couple of others. The big meeting which commences in that city on June 2th will attract a large number of horsemen from this part of the country.

GEORGE BAYLESS, the well-known trainer, who died suddenly in Oakland on Sunday, first came to this coast with the great horse, Trua Blue. The deceased horseman was one of the most capable trainers in this country, but continued ill health had kept him in the background for the past two or three years.

TERRENE, by Terra Cotta, Duchess of Montrose, a two-year-old winner at Louisville on Saturday, May 7th, is one of the four fillies that Messrs. Clay & Woodford unsexed in the yearling form, believing that the operation would make them more reliable racing performers. The others were Factory Girl, May-Be-So and Duplicate.

SIOMUND ISAACS, of this city, has been very successful as a turfman in Japan. His horses, Idaho and Oregon, won the Emperor's Vasa and the Ladies' Purse, the two great events of the Yokohama meeting. He also has an unbeaten Chinese pony racing there. Mr. Isaacs has relatives in this city and a host of friends who will be pleased to hear of his success.

MR. BATES, who rode the winner of the gentlemen's race Saturday, is one of the prominent members of the Reliance Club. As soon as he knew his mount in the race he sought out the owners, and in business fashion asked to have a work-out on the horse, and also worked out J. O. C. and several others in the stable. Judging from the clever manner in which he handled William O'B. Saturday, he is possessed of more than average speed in the saddle, for he has fair hands, a good seat and is a good judge of pace. Mr. Bates is a son of C. R. Bates, President of the Alameda Macadamizing Company, and one of the old residents of Oakland.

PRESIDENT THOS. H. WILLIAMS JR. said May 16th to the Chronicle representative: "Our association will not get out a stake book until September, but it is our idea to give specials instead of some of the guaranteed stakes. It has taken a few seasons to find out what is best in these matters, and we intend to give fewer stake events, but will endeavor to make them richer and more attractive." President Williams is very well satisfied with the outcome of the present season and holds the opinion that the class of horses was better than last year. At the conclusion of the meeting he will sail for Japan for a three or four months' trip.

MESSRS. NORTON AND HEADLEY, owners of Ornament and May Hempstead, returned from New York Monday. Their horses have been placed in the hands of "Jimmy" Rowe, one of the most famous of American trainers. Rowe trained Requit and L'Alonette, Futurity winners. Mr. Rowe has The Hogenot and other young horses in his stable, but nothing that would conflict with Ornament. Mr. Patterson sold the two cracks without reservation, and probably did not expect to train them for the purchasers, as he took charge of Macy and Algol, both Brooklyn and Surbauban Handicap candidates, the two big events for which Ornament is being pointed. The relations between the two parties are however exceedingly friendly and Mr. Patterson took charge of them on their journey East and gave them the same care as he had when they were in his charge.—Thoroughbred Record.

JOCKEY CASSIUS SLOAN reached here yesterday from San Francisco. He will ride at Lakeside and he expects to be able to reduce so as to ride at 108 pounds this year. Starter Dwyer will begin schooling two-year-olds again. To-day at 11 o'clock the gate will be placed and he will be present in person to teach the youngsters. Jockey Kitley, the lightweight under contract to J. W. Schorr & Son, has gone to St. Louis to join the Western string of his employer. He expects to ride Timemaker in the Inaugural, but this is not likely. "Skeets" Martin has broken a number of engagements he has made to ride horses since his arrival here, and he was in bad odor with the officials and owners until yesterday, when it became known that he was married Thursday night. Paul Miles, who winters his horses at the Little Rock track, gave Kirk, the horse that won the third race yesterday, to an Arkansas farmer last Decomba. The agriculturist looked at the horse and agreed to send for him, but he neglected to do so, very likely considering him worthless. He has won $600 for Miles this week.—Lakeside items in Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THE Two Thousand Guineas was run last week at Newmarket in England and won by Disraeli, a son of that grand old horse Galopin, now past 26 years of age. This makes his second winner of the Two Thousand, Galliard having won in 1859. Galopin was by Vedetta, who won the Two Thousand in 1857, and had been entered in the Derby and St. Leger that year it is not likely that either Blink Bonny or Imperieuse would have ever been bracketed outside of races reserved for fillies exclusively. Voltigenet and the Flying Dutchman were the contending horses of 1850, and while both were comparative failures at the stud, a union of their blood produced Galopin, a horse that literally donkey-licked (as they say in Australia) every good race horse of his day. He beat stayers like Craig Millar at long distances and sprinters like Lowlander at the shorter ranges. It is worthy of note that the second and third horses in this year's Two Thousand were both by Sheen, the Cesarewitch winner of 1891. He is by Hampton, out of Radiance, by Tithorpe; and Hampton, who died about four weeks ago, got three winners of the Derby and one of the Oaks, while his get were twice second for the St. Leger.—Los Angeles Phoenix.

MR. W. H. ROWE writes The Spirit: "I have seen no mention in our American papers of the loss which Mr. Leopold de Rothschild recently sustained in the death of his three-year-old filly Isabinda, by St. Simon, out of Isabel, and hence full sister to his recent champion, St. Frusquin. Isabinda was of unusual promise, and her engagements were very heavy, so it is genuinely bad luck for St. Simon to lose so likely a representative just when his star seems a trifle on the wane. Isabinda did not start last year, but it is a favorite trick with our English cousins to reserve their stars for later struggles. Would that the valuable events in America were so regulated as to induce our owners to follow the same tactics! Mr. Rothschild has a two-year-old in training which is more than half brother to St. Frusquin and Isabinda, this being the colt St. Gris, by Galopin (sire of St. Simon), out of Isabel herself, and it will be interesting to see how he conducts himself in his heavy engagements for the future. Isabinda is not the first of Isabel's produce to meet an early grave, for it will be remembered that her son, Kallierates, by Hermit, met an untimely death in this country shortly after entering upon his stud career, in which, with but comparatively meagre opportunities, he sired the winners Masterpiece, Myth, Ollean, Panchita and Honeydew."

J. E. MADDEN, the owner of Plaudit, has had a remarkable run of luck, if luck it can be called, in the last few years. He has a keen eye for the good points of a thoroughbred or trotter, and as he is essentially a trader, he has developed some of the most noted of equine flyers and sold them to the very best advantage, and this, too, after winning a small fortune by their performances on the turf. Hamburg alone made him a rich man, and he opens the present season with an extraordinary run of good fortune both East and West. Madden, who is nearly forty years of age, was born in Pennsylvania, but has lived in Kentucky a good portion of his life. He has a splendid stock farm near Lexington which he calls Hamburg place, and which is now his home. The Derby winner, Plaudit, is not one of those animals purchased for a song as a yearling. In fact he was the star of the Woodard & Shanklin sale in Lexington in 1896 and after spirited bidding he was knocked down to "Brown Dick" for $4,000. Last year Mr. Madden purchased an interest in the colt and later secured him outright. Plaudit has a number of valuable stake engagements, both East and West, including two or three Derbies. Albert Simon, the trainer of Plaudit, was born and bred here in Louisville. Years ago he was a trotting horse driver, but gave up the reins in favor of the thoroughbred. He handled Glenbaim before the latter was sent East.—Louisville cor. Spirit of the Times.

JAMES T. WILLIAMS, one of the best known turfmen in the West, has holdly branched out into politics, and is a candidate for Congress in the Louisville District. He is a rampant free silver man, and as politics are beautifully mixed hereabouts, with the Democrats and the Republicans divided, and the A. P. A. a working factor, Williams tells me he has a great chance to win. The silver wave that swept a portion of the country a couple of years ago produced political demoralization here in Louisville, and the Courier-Journal, a pronounced goldbug organ, very seriously felt the effects of the storm, a new free silver daily supplanting it in the affections of tens of thousands of people. The silver element in the Democratic party have the whip hand now, and so it is "Jim" Williams expects to quit the turf for the halls of Congress.—Louisville cor. Spirit of the Times.

GEORGE BAYLISS, the well known trainer of race horses, died of dropsy at the Ranlett House, Emeryville, about 1 P. M. May 15th. He was found dead in bed. (Bayliss, who had been ailing for about three years, had an operation for dropsy performed about a month ago, and was supposed to be on the improve. His colt Flaudes has won two good races within two weeks, and the deceased was giving his personal attention to the horses in his charge. Bayliss was about forty-five years of age and a thorough horseman. Editor Joseph Cairo Simpson remembers him as an exercise boy in Illinois as far back as 1869, and later he became a jockey. After George got too heavy he trained and drove horses on the California circuit, and with great success. His last season with trotters was with Mr. Perkins, of Visalia, this, though, after he had trained runners for D. J. McCarty and later for the Messrs. Boots, of Milpitas. It was Bayliss who had the first marked success with the get of imp. Brutus. He was careful and attentive, thoroughly reliable, and a host of people will be sorry to hear of the death of George Bayliss, a man that always ran his horses to win.

W. M. MURRY has leased the River View Ranch, a few miles below Sacramento, and from the quite imposing list of stallions and broodmares he has on the place will be a breeder of no little importance in the coming years. The stallions are Thornhill, Yankee Doodle, King William, Abalanzar and Rey del Bandidos. The broodmares are Miss Walling (due to foal to Thornhill), Miss Pickwick (bred to Rey del Bandidos), Circe (bred to Yankee Doodle), Julia O. (has a filly at foot by Thornhill and bred again to the white-faced horse), Mamie E. (has a handsome light bay filly by Thornhill and bred to Yankee Doodle), Claire (bred to Thornhill), Tillie S. (has a bay colt at foot by imp. Loyalist and has been bred to Thornhill), chestnut El Rio Rey mare (bred to Yankee Doodle), Laura C., by Three Cheers (has a filly at foot by imp. True Briton and bred to Thornhill), Nita Murphy (bred to Yankee Doodle), Abbie W. (bred to Thornhill), Major Ban mare (bred to Thornhill), and Scarf Pin (bred to Yankee Doodle). The following yearlings are also on the place: Brown or black filly by imp. True Briton—Circe, brown or black filly by imp. True Briton—Miss Walling; chestnut colt by — out of Miss Pickwick, bay colt by Metal out of Claire, colt by Three Cheers out of Wilda, and chestnut filly by imp. Loyalist from Tillie S. Tod Sloan has three or four thoroughbreds on the place, two of them mares that have been bred to King William.

ALTHOUGH Marcus Daly is one of the great captains of peace and industry, he seems to be taking a very lively interest in the war. The town in which he lives and in whose prosperity he is an important factor, has sent two splendid companies to the front. In Butte a few evenings ago he assured one of the local companies that he would help the widows and orphans should any casualties happen to its members while fighting for Old Glory, and to-day he proposes that Captain Stivers, of the Butte cavalry, shall have as a present the finest horse in the service if he will go to the Bitter Root ranch and select the charger. Thus Mr. Daly has set an example which all patriotic citizens of means may follow. He would go to the front himself if he were not suspected of being a trifle over 45 years of age. So he will remain ready to be mustered into the home guards if necessary, and in the meantime commanding a peace army of nearly 10,000 copper miners, coal miners, smeltersmen, lumbermen and other industrials.—Butte Inter-Mountain. Later—This afternoon Captain Stivers left for Marcus Daly's ranch in the Bitter Root, to arrange for a shipment of horses to this city for his troop. Mr. Daly has entered into the matter of the equipment of Butte's troop with considerable enthusiasm and has announced his intention of doing something handsome for the troop, and his liberality will be displayed before many days. It is reported that he will present Captain Stivers with a magnificent animal valued at $2,500. A consignment of horses will arrive from the Bitter Root farm before Friday.—Butte Inter-Mountain.

"CURLY" BROWN, the starter, was at Lakeside yesterday, and the Brown-Foster feud is on again. Just after the official announcement of the result of the last race, which was won by Deyo, with Headlight II. second, and Sutton third, Brown filed a claim for the Foster horse with the clerk of the scales. Headlight was entered for $300, and $600 accompanied the claim. While the horse is conceded to be well worth the amount, the action is attributed to the outcome of the quarrel which began with the running up of Glenmoyna at New Orleans by the starter of the Palmer-Hendrie syndicate, last winter. Matt Foster resented the action of Brown, and threats, a blow or two, and a war of words were exchanged by the men on the Crescent City track, and Foster was fined $50. Soon after this the two men met at a West End resort in New Orleans, and after an exchange of compliments, Brown assailed Foster with the butt end of a revolver—at least a Justice of the Peace so decided, and fined the starter $25. Matt Foster swore out the warrant for assault, and the evidence produced was convincing to the Justice. The incident was supposed to have been closed, but the claiming of Headlight II. will probably reopen hostilities. "Curly" Brown, who has just finished an engagement as starter at Newport, shipped two horses to Lakeside. At least, Deyo, who won the race yesterday, and Carrie Lyle were given to the starter, although they are registered as owned by T. F. Buckley and Deyo runs in his name. The claim of yesterday was made by Brown in the name of Buckley. Aside from the Headlight II. incident, there was nothing to indicate that a selling race was in progress. This was due, doubtless, to the fact that the other horsemen, who are fighting each other, did not have any horses in the two selling racing on the card.—Chicago Inter Ocean, May 10.

The year 1898 is to be a memorable one in the history of light harness horse affairs in California. While fewer meetings will be held in the State than in any year since the district organizations were first organized, which is a natural result of the drought now so seriously affecting many of the interior counties, there will be so many new features introduced, diversions from the old stereotyped plan of harness racing, that in the records of the future, 1898 will have a very prominent place. There are many existing circumstances which seem to detract from the assured success of meetings this year—the war, the drought, the high prices of hay and grain, and the consignment to Eastern sales rings of many of our fastest trotters and pacers; but on the other hand, there is a determination on the part of so many owners to give the new ideas a fair trial, and an expressed desire by the public to see the reforms and innovations introduced that it seems to be the general opinion that the new order of things will prove so effective that they will more than offset the losses which the elements and other conditions have brought about. That the proposed plan of a four or six weeks' meeting at a central point, made up of a majority of dash races and a minority of heat affairs, will be advantageous to horse owners is certain. The earning capacity of the average trotter or pacer is so evidently increased by the new plan, and the expenses of a stable so materially reduced that the extra price asked for hay and grain will be much more than offset. In the matter of railroad transportation alone there will be enough saved to feed the horses during the entire season. It being the consensus of opinion among the trainers, drivers and owners of trotting and pacing horses that the new plan so formulated by the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association will be an improvement over old methods, they, of course, will give proof of the faith that is in them by making many entries to the events already advertised to take place during the first two weeks of the meeting. It lies entirely with the horse owners to make it, and from all reports so far it is almost an assured fact that this year's entry list will equal in number and class that of any previous meeting. The first of June will tell the story.

Taking it for granted that the California horsemen are sufficiently alive to their own interests to do their duty in this matter, the question arises, will the public do its part and give the meeting a sufficient patronage to make it a success? It will not be assuming too much to answer this with an emphatic "yes." The public of San Francisco and Oakland attend the racing meetings here for six months continuously, and the attendance during this, the closing week, has been as large or larger than during the first week of the meeting. The interest and attendance are kept up because the public as a whole believes it is (in the vast majority of instances) getting a square deal—or in the parlance of the track, "a run for its money." Ninety-nine out of every hundred race-goers in San Francisco will assert that though there may be a race now and then which has a bad appearance, a very large proportion are good, square contests, and the jockey clubs show a disposition to mete out justice and punishment in cases where fraud is proven. If the officers and members of the Breeders Association will adopt the same policy to discover fraud, and give something of the same punishment in punishing those who attempt it, begin operations the first day of the meeting and continue it throughout, at the same time using every effort to bring horses together so that good contests will result, there need be no fear but that the public will show some of the old-time enthusiasm over harness racing which was shown in this State years ago, and which has been wanting in the East lately year that on many occasions has been the case. People congregated to see trotters and pacers in California for the first time. The city crowds in California are intelligent enough to realize the interest of the business in the institution, would which he is eager to have his horses driven to win in every race in which they start, but if there are owners, trainers or drivers who believe otherwise, then it is the duty of the officials of the association to enforce the rules, strictly and to the letter, that the men who are interested in clean and honest racing may not be injured by the few whose regard for the sport consists entirely of the opportunity it affords them of making a little spare money from the pool box. There should be a thorough understanding between the drivers and the judges before the races start, and after having announced that the rules will be enforced, let there be no eyes closed to infractions and no disposition to refrain from punishment of violations.

An opportunity is offered this year to the P. C. T. H. B. A. and to the owners, trainers and drivers in California to not only make harness racing popular, but to add to the value of harness horses. They have but to do their whole duty and the public will respond with its presence, and its approval of the new plan.

Trotting Stock for California.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15th, 1898.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—As I have purchased quite a number of highly bred and handsome driving and breeding stock during the last three months for various parties, among them fourteen head of young mares and fillies for parties in California, I will enclose you the list of the trotting bred mares together with the stallions bred to them this season. This is one of the handsomest fillies in the land, with the best of feet and legs, speedy and a better gaited one is hard to be found. She trotted a quarter as a yearling last fall in 39 seconds.

SAMUEL GAMBLE.

The Next State Fair.

The State Board of Agriculture met at Sacramento last Monday for the purpose of considering reports of the various committees. The report of the Premium List Committee was the most important, inasmuch as it contained a revision of the entire premium list for 1898, making such changes as were deemed advisable. The principal change was to have expert single judges in all classes where practical, and the Secretary was directed to correspond with several experts of various classes of live stock.

The dates of the State Fair were fixed from September 5th to 17th inclusive.

The admission rate to the Pavilion was reduced to 25 cents. This change was made at the earnest solicitation of many exhibitors, and considering the condition of the times, the board deemed it prudent to make the change. The admission to the Park will be 50 cents, as heretofore.

After considering other matters of minor importance, the board adjourned to call of the Chair.

Successful Meetings Depend on Honest Racing.

Successful race meetings from a financial standpoint depend almost entirely upon the amount of gate receipts. If the receipts are good the meeting will be all right and horsemen will get their money. But if not there is a like-warmness about the meeting that savors of distrust and lack of interest.

If horsemen will show the public they mean business and will race their horses as they should be raced the gate receipts will be all right, if not the same old song year after year will continue to be sung. The biggest force in the world is a fixed race and the public will know it just about as quickly as the men who fixed the race. The people must have a contest and if the contest is a hard one all the better for all concerned. There is nothing cheaper than a tame race, even the horse will show it.

It is to be hoped this year will be marked with the best horse racing ever witnessed. If it should prove so the people of the whole United States will endorse it. This will insure good gate receipts and good receipts will pay horsemen their premiums. The horse business will then be strengthened and established on such business principles as will guarantee every man engaged in it an honorable standing with the world. Too much cannot be said against sham racing and the sooner horsemen realize the fact of racing horses upon their merit just that much sooner will the horse business be established on honorable calling.

In talking with a man last year who had won fifteen second moneys out of that many starts admitted that he had not only done himself a wrong but that he had misled the public. He said that he had not made a dollar whereas, if he had gone and won the races which he could have done he would go home with a goodly sum of money. He also said he was through with that kind of business, and would have quit it long ago if he had only looked at the proposition from a practical business standpoint before. Horsemen, he said, as a rule meant to do right, but get into wrong channels of thinking about the matter. The only practical way for horsemen to do is to win right from the start if they can and if they cannot the sooner they know they cannot and act in the matter as they should the better it will be for them. What is the use of trying to win 2:10 races with a 2:20 horse. It means great expense and poor satisfaction. A horseman of that kind is always behind in all matters.—Spirit of the West.

The Career of Oro Wilkes 2:11

One of the best horses ever bred in California, is Oro Wilkes 2:11, by Sable Wilkes 2:18, from Ellen Mayhew 2:22, by the great Director 2:17, second dam by Speculation, third dam the dam of Lou Whipple 2:26 1/2. Oro Wilkes began his trotting career as a two-year-old, trotting seven races at that age, winning three, was second in two, third in one, fourth in one, taking a record of 2:21 1/2. As a three-year-old he trotted eight races, winning five, was second in two, third in one, taking a record of 2:15 in the third heat of the great Stallion Representative Stake ($11,850), for three year-olds, a five heat race which he won at Lexington, Kentucky, October 9, 1893, when he won the third, fourth and fifth heats in 2:15, 2:16 1/2, 2:17 1/2, from a field of eleven, including the Conqueror 2:22 1/2, Georgie Lee 2:12 1/2, Baronmore 2:14 1/2, Medio 2:14 1/2 and others. His winnings that year amounted to $14,000. In 1894, as a four-year-old, his record of 2:15 made the previous year forced him to compete against aged horses of a very high class and in fields numbering in most instances 12 to 18 composed of such seasoned campaigners as Azote, Trevillian, Dandy Jim, Prince Herschel, etc, and others of like quality, yet of the eight races trotted that season, he won two, was second in three and third in three, taking his present record of 2:11 in the second heat, forcing Trevillian to go the third and fourth heats in 2:10 1/2, 2:09 1/2, to beat him, with Azote, Prince Herschel and six others behind him. During his turf career he trotted 24 races; won a share of the purse in every race, and with a single exception won either first, second or third money, and has been timed in a race in 2:03 1/2. He was placed in the stud at Mr. Corbitt's San Mateo Stock Farm in 1895, and consequently his oldest foals are two years old. These were sent east at Mr. Corbitt's March sale this year, and their grand individuality attracted bidders and they brought good prices. Oro Wilkes himself sold for $4,700 at that sale and the average for the 42 head was $456.

The Colusa Meeting

The meeting given by the Colusa Jockey Club at that place last week was not largely attended, but everything passed off pleasantly and there was some good racing.

"The most effective way of softening and taking the fever out of contracted feet," says J. L. McCarthy, "is hot water and poultices, but it is well to remember that after a foot has been soaked for some time in hot water it will dry out very rapidly, consequently it should be wrapped in a wet swab for several hours after it is taken from the water in order to have it dry more slowly."

The Horse's Speed.

A man on a horse is twice a man. He feels more secure, is braver, is in every way more formidable. European officers know this. In cleaning the streets of Paris only cavalry are used.

I believe that the horse is the swiftest animal in the world. One hears strange tales of the speed of the antelope, the white-tailed fawn, the springbok, the elephant, the jack rabbit and the wolf.

Good One From This Coast.

J. L. McCarthy, formerly of Chicago, who has been in the far West for two seasons past, is back in the windy city, says the Chicago Horse Review.

"Chehalis," says Mr. McCarthy, "is simply the best hobbled horse that stands on iron. I think he should beat Frank Bogash easily. Yes, I mean it. Why, he was only ogging, with the exception of a little piece of the way, in 2:07 1/2, and twenty feet from the pole at that."

"Searchlight is the fastest and gamest colt that I ever saw. jChahalis held him safe easily, but the way he tried to head him was wonderful. I believe that he is championship timber."

"Anaconda was good, but not so awfully good as he showed later on the coast. That is also true of Caryl Carne, the gray trotter that Andy McDowell is to bring over, but I think the Californians have overruled him a little."

"If Stam B. trains sound you will see a great trotter. He went very lame in his last race at Anaconda, but, although they were beating 2:12, he never gave up, although he was so lame it was pitiful to see him. He is, altogether a very high-class horse."

Speed Sustaining Oats.

Along in the 70's Fletcher Smith, of Drakeville, Ia., was campaigning a pacer named Sealskin. After winning his race at Keokuk one afternoon, says Yarrum of the Horse Review, a match for a half-mile dash was arranged between Sealskin and a Keokuk mare, to be paced the following afternoon.

Golden Gate Club at Oakland.

Memorial Day being a legal holiday, offers the members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association an opportunity to have a grand day of sport, and the Oakland race track has been selected as the place where the events will be held and the races decided.

There will be no admission fee charged but the gates will be open to all. Three purses of $90 each are to be hung up and it begins to look as though the entries will be so numerous that another purse will be necessary.

The races are open to horses owned by members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association only, and none but members must drive. They will be mile heats, two in three and strictly to rule.

There will be hook-making on all the events and every effort will be made by the officers and members of the club to make the day an enjoyable one for all who attend.

The Faesig Sale.

Telegraphic reports of the Blue Ribbon sale of trotters and pacers at Cleveland this week are very meagre. Enough is known, however, to warrant the assertion that it has been the best sale held in the United States for some years.

Betonica, 2:10 1/2, brought $7,800 and was bought by Senator Frank H. Jones, of Portsmouth, N. H. Batonica made his record as a three-year-old, and at the same age paced a trial in 2:06 1/2.

The gray mares, Pasonta, 2:13, and Peko, 2:11 1/2, were bought for Cleveland horsemen. George W. Saunders paid $2,000 for Pasonta and Charles Tannar bid off Peko for $1,000.

Other notable sales were as follows: Hyita, ch f, by Dexter Prince, Palo Alto farm, to James Alden, Boston, $1,900. Lillian May, hr f, by Advertiser, Palo Alto farm, to M. Playfair, Vienna, Austria, $850.

Patents Granted May 10th of Interest to Horsemen.

Wm. H. Bordner, Burr Oak, Michigan, Marsh Horse-shoe, 603,675. George Brown, Long Island City, N. Y., Automatic Indicator for Truing Wheels, 603,782. Charles S. Carkin, Hindsdale, N. H., Hanger for Harness, 603,940.

Sulky Notes.

RACINO will be in full swing in the East this year by the first of June.

THE outlook for giving a meeting in Spokane this year is not very bright.

D. J. CAMPAU's mare Lulu, by Axtell, out of Daisy Cuyler, has foaled a fine colt by Directum 2:05½.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Association will have some good racing at its meeting at the Oakland track, May 30th.

ENTRIES for the races of the Alameda Driving Association close to-day. Look at the advertisement and make your entries.

PHYLLIS KELLY, a two-year-old sister to Directum Kelly, 2:23½, by Direct, is a member of John Kelly's East View Farm stable.

ST. LAWRENCE 2:34, founder of the St. Lawrence family, was on the turf from 1848 to 1856. He started in 37 races, 14 of which he won.

THE California trotting mare Visalia, 2:12½, after changing hands a number of times, will be campaigned by John A. Davidson, of Pittsburg, Pa.

E name Commodore Dawey has already been claimed by W. Estil, of Lexington, for a colt foaled April 21st, by Bells, dam Macedonia, by Onward.

FRANK JESSEN, of King City, has sent his pacer, Frank, to Henry Helman at Hollister to be fitted for the pacers' meeting, which begins at Oakland, June 25th.

FIVE hundred head of horses were driven through Napa Valley last week on the way from the San Josquin ranches to Miller & Lux to the green pastures of Lake and Mendocino counties.

A LETTER from James Dustin received in this city states that he has entirely regained his health and will very likely return to California this fall after the trotting season is over in the East.

CHINA WILKES, by Adrian Wilkes—Mambrino Queen, by Mambrino Patchen, has six living foals. Four of these have records of 2:22½ or better, and the records of three of them average 2:10½.

FAVOR, the horse that defeated Menlo Belle and others at Hollister, May 1st, was sired by Daly, 2:15, the premier stallion of Rosedale Stock Farm, Santa Rosa. Favor is said to be able to trot in 2:20 easily.

ALL kinds of farm stock enjoy a change of food, and both hay and pasturage would be better relished and do more good when the field consists of several kinds of grass and clover instead of a single variety.

BETONICA, 2:10½, and Searchlight, 2:09½, are both entered in the 2:08 pace which will be decided at Cleveland, Ohio, in July next. Chehalis will be in the same race, and the Pacific Coast should carry off first money.

G. LAPHAM has built a row of stalls at the Alameda track for the stalling of his trotters and pacers. There are ten large, roomy box stalls in the row; they are substantially built and will make comfortable quarters.

LITTLE GEM 2:15½, claimed by his owner, H. T. Booth to be the fastest horse in the world for his size, remains with Huber's Ti Point string again. Huber says he will put him against any horse in the world of his size.

OF the two stakes opened by the Buffalo Driving Club which are declared filled, the Queen City, $5,000 for 2:16 trotters, received twenty-four entries and the Electric City, $5,000 for 2:30 trotters, received twenty-six entries.

At least twenty-five buyers were in Philadelphia Friday last, looking for common riding stock to use in the United States cavalry. They visited all the dealers and markets. These kind of horses are scarce and but few were purchased.

B. O. VAN BOKKELEN will start East next week with his string of trotters, consisting of Wayland W., 2:12½, Ellert, 2:19, and Stamboulette, 2:19. The last two named are both sons of Stamboul, and are likely candidates for that sire's 2:10 list this year.

A VERY great interest is being manifested in this city over the race meeting to be held at Honolulu, June 11th. The race where Loupe, 2:09½, Our Boy, 2:12½, and W. Wood, 2:07, are expected to meet should be a contest worth crossing the briny to see.

IRA RYERSON, who was expelled by the N. T. A., on a charge of ringing, recently carried his case into the civil courts. He undertook to compel the N. T. A., to reinstate him, but he was promptly set upon by the judge, who refused to entertain his motion.

"HOBBS has a theory about the war." "What is it?" "He says it was intended to make the bicycle go to the wall and push the old-fashioned four-legged horse once more into the shade."—Chicago Record.

THE good name of Wilkes 2:03½ and Zephyronian Wilkes, son of Phoebe from Pleasanton back to the latter than 2:30 has been taken head, Green Meadow Stock Farm, his owner, John Moorhead, has bred to quite a Clara County. He says this season while at Pleasanton, and with the prospect of good racing in California are among the most promising young ones in the country. He is in training and will be heard from this year at the city.

FROM the city, its large substitution, would

REMEMBER that the entries for the Breeders meeting close June 1st, and that the classes provided for are more numerous than were ever offered by any association in the United States for two weeks' racing. If the two weeks are reasonably successful, there will be three or four weeks additional races provided. If you want to help the harness horse business, enter your horse in as many of these races as possible.

"WHAT is the outlook for the trotter?" Major Bean, the well known auctioneer, was asked in Chicago last week and replied: "It is good—better than for many years. There will be more demand for good trotters this year than for men to go to war. I believe I can say without fear of being disputed that more breeders are buying, or rather are seeking to buy, broodmares to replenish their studs, than during the past five years combined."

THERE is a horse in the string of Doug. Thomas at Paris, Kentucky, that is looked upon in that section as being a coming wonder. This is Kodras, 2:15½, a bay horse foaled in 1891, by Norway, son of Electioneer. Kodras took his record in 1896, but was not out last year. It is told of him that he has worked quarters this year in 30 seconds and at a faster gait, and some of his enthusiastic admirers believe he is the coming champion trotter.

THE Goshen Driving Park Association will open for its circuit meeting in August a 2:05 pace and a 5:00 trot, and will permit them to stand if three entries in each are received. It is hoped to bring Ooqua, 2:08½, Bush, 2:09½, and Page, 2:09½, together in the 2:09 class.

MIKE McMANUS, who has trained and driven Loupe 2:09 and other fast pacers and trotters in this State, recently resigned his position at Patchen Wilkes farm in Kentucky, and has gone to New York, where he will probably be seen with a string of horses on the State circuit.

THE 2:12 trot which is to come off over the Cleveland, Ohio, track during the last week in July, has a California look when the entries are scanned. Among the horses named for this $2,500 event are Feko, 2:11½; Pasotta, 2:13; Stam B. 2:11½; Wayland W., 2:12½, and Caryle Carna, 2:11½.

THE trotting stallion Melbourne King, sire of Jubilee, 2:17½, the pacers Bella, 2:11, and Helen, 2:16½, etc., died recently, the property of C. L. Shipp, Frederickton, N. B. He was a son of Mambrino King and Helen McGregor, dam of Almont Rattler, etc., by Rattler and was 21 years of age.

P. H. QUINN, of Humboldt county, has sent Eureka 2:15½, Arthur W. and Forrest W., by Wayland W., Brica McNeill by Dudley, and John A. (2) by Wayland W. to Santa Rosa, where they will be placed in training for the Breeder's meeting which opens at Oakland next month.

THE Goshen Driving Park Association will open for its circuit meeting in August a 2:05 pace and a 5:00 trot, and will permit them to stand if three entries in each are received. It is hoped to bring Ooqua, 2:08½, Bush, 2:09½, and Page, 2:09½, together in the 2:09 class.

MIKE McMANUS, who has trained and driven Loupe 2:09 and other fast pacers and trotters in this State, recently resigned his position at Patchen Wilkes farm in Kentucky, and has gone to New York, where he will probably be seen with a string of horses on the State circuit.

THE 2:12 trot which is to come off over the Cleveland, Ohio, track during the last week in July, has a California look when the entries are scanned. Among the horses named for this $2,500 event are Feko, 2:11½; Pasotta, 2:13; Stam B. 2:11½; Wayland W., 2:12½, and Caryle Carna, 2:11½.

THE trotting stallion Melbourne King, sire of Jubilee, 2:17½, the pacers Bella, 2:11, and Helen, 2:16½, etc., died recently, the property of C. L. Shipp, Frederickton, N. B. He was a son of Mambrino King and Helen McGregor, dam of Almont Rattler, etc., by Rattler and was 21 years of age.

JOHN DELANY has received word from Willows that his pacer Captain Hackett is doing well this year at the Willows track, where he is in the care of that well known trainer, James Sullivan. Jimmy thinks the Captain is steady enough to win a race or two this year. He always had the necessary speed.

WE are in receipt from Messrs. Lewis & Albaugh, of the Grand View Farm, Circleville, Ohio, of a very handsomely prepared and printed history and description of their great horse Wilton, 2:19½. With twenty-nine of his get in the 2:20 list at eighteen years old, Wilton stands high in the list of great sires.

THE Rural Spirit wants to know who owns the pacing stallion Prince Almont, 2:13½. He is owned by J. Nightingale and is at the owner's stock farm at Cordelia, Solano county, California. We understand that Prince Almont may be put in training and entered in the races to be given by the Breeders Association at Oakland next month.

MAJOR P. P. JOHNSTON, President of the National Trotting Association and also President of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, is being pushed for Brigadier General of the Kentucky troops for the war with Spain. He was a distinguished officer in the Confederate Army under the noted J. E. B. Stuart, and was recognized as a splendid organizer.

THOSE two great sires McKinney 2:11½, and Almont the leading sires of 2:10 performers, together with Monterey 2:13½, will be exhibited on the track at the Alameda Driving Association's course, Monday, May 30th. Any one of these stallions is worth going a long way to see, and where there is an opportunity to view three such great ones, it should not be overlooked.

DAN McCARTY recently sold a gelding by Col. K. R., 2:22½, out of a full sister to Hanford Medium, 2:11½, to a Los Angeles gentleman for the munificent sum of $112.50. The gelding had the name "White Hat" bestowed on him, and as evidence of his speedy name and breeding recently went a mile over the Los Angeles track in 2:09½. Look out for this fellow when the bell taps.

ALLEGRO, 2:11, will be started in some of the dash races at the Breeders meeting which commences June 25th. Many of the trotters and pacers which have been sold during the past few years for rood purposes are being fitted for the dash events, which show that the owners realize the excellent opportunity offered by the new system whereby a horse can earn something more than his oats.

A FULL sister to the great Beautiful Bells, heavy with foal to Oro Wilkes, 2:11, ought to be worth a nest sum, and when it is further understood that this mare is herself the dam of two in the list, there should be no trouble to find a purchaser for her. The mare in question is Atlanta, by The Moor out of Minnehaha, that great broodmare by Stevens' Bald Chief She will be sold at the Corbett sale at Burlingame June 2d.

SABLE, the dam of Sable Wilkes, was foaled in 1874 and is therefore twenty-four years of age. She has produced four Sable Wilkes (3), 2:18, Burlingame (4), 2:18½, Ulee Wilkes (4), 2:23, and Leo Wilkes, 2:29½. Sable is now heavy with foal to Prince Airlie, a grand individual and son of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½. The foal should be worth a great deal of money. The mare will be sold at the Corbett Sale, June 2d.

REMEMBER that the entries for the Breeders meeting close June 1st, and that the classes provided for are more numerous than were ever offered by any association in the United States for two weeks' racing. If the two weeks are reasonably successful, there will be three or four weeks additional races provided. If you want to help the harness horse business, enter your horse in as many of these races as possible.

"WHAT is the outlook for the trotter?" Major Bean, the well known auctioneer, was asked in Chicago last week and replied: "It is good—better than for many years. There will be more demand for good trotters this year than for men to go to war. I believe I can say without fear of being disputed that more breeders are buying, or rather are seeking to buy, broodmares to replenish their studs, than during the past five years combined."

THERE is a horse in the string of Doug. Thomas at Paris, Kentucky, that is looked upon in that section as being a coming wonder. This is Kodras, 2:15½, a bay horse foaled in 1891, by Norway, son of Electioneer. Kodras took his record in 1896, but was not out last year. It is told of him that he has worked quarters this year in 30 seconds and at a faster gait, and some of his enthusiastic admirers believe he is the coming champion trotter.

COMMENTING upon the action of the Messrs. Hicks in requiring drivers and grooms to be properly attired at their tracks on race days this season, Trotter and Pacer says: "If all track managers would see to it that these rules are strictly observed they would add not a little to the picture-queeness of their meetings. We have all too often seen drivers slovenly, indeed, hardly decently dressed, parade before audiences largely composed of ladies, and as for the usual attire of the grooms it is certainly not calculated to increase public respect for trotting sport. The public will appreciate reform in these particulars."

PLUNKETT, 2:13½, now owned by Mr. Stevens of this city, will be out with the pacing brigade again this year. This great little horse is now eleven years old, and as fast or faster than he ever was. Though being so unfortunate as to get a record at almost the limit of his speed in his four-year-old form, thus compelling him to wait the fastest pacers on the Pacific Coast, every year thereafter he has consistently paced nearly every heat in which he has started very close to his record, and has been a good second more than once to horses that have won heats in 2:10 or better. Plunkett's owner drove him a half in 1:04 the other day.

UNCLE SAM is not the only one who has no docked horses in his cavalry, as the following story from Halifax, N. S. proves that "there are others." An officer recently wanted a charger and a citizen undertook to provide one. He produced a very fine mare at a cost of $200, with a certificate as to soundness. On being taken to the officer the dealer was astounded by his saying: "It will not suit." "Why not?" he asked. "It is a splendid animal." "Yes," said the officer, "but its tail is docked, and the queen's regulations prevent us from using it. Her majesty's orders are that horses with docked tails are not to be used in the service." The mare eventually sold for $60. Don't dock the horse intended for the government's use.

"THE American Stock Farm," distinctively a Kentucky organ, sends out the following cheering intelligence: "We do not claim for the Blue Grass region that it is as extensively engaged in breeding trotters as in former years, but we have not gone out of the business by any means. On the contrary we are taking on a new life, and there are more being bred in Kentucky than have been known for years, and all the stallion owners report a good business. Within a few years we expect to be back upon the same footing which we held when the panic came upon us, though we can hardly hope to ever again see the exorbitant prices of boom times. We will then have just as many and just as good ones to sell as we ever had, and probably better ones."

THE pacer Fred Wilkes, 2:12½, by Allectus, owned by Mr. J. B. Rhodes of New Bedford, Mass., was killed by an accident lately, having become frightened at an electric car and ran away. The horse had a splendid funeral for one of the equine sort. The body was placed in a huge air-tight coffin lined with tin, and his harness and blanket, traps, etc., were hermetically sealed with it. The prominent horsemen of New Bedford were invited to take a last look before interment and quite a party assembled; then the coffin was placed on a gear-covered with an American flag. Four hacks containing the mourners escorted the gear to Acushnet, where the interment took place. The horses were draped in black, and the cortege passed through the city with all the horses on a trot. This was done as a last mark of respect of Fred Wilkes, who, it is said, was never known to walk.

THEY breed many a fine road horse out at the Chino Ranch, owned by Richard Gird and Wilbur Parker, writes Capt. Tom Merry of Los Angeles. Before Sunol 2:08½, achieved any record or victory whatever, Mr. Gird, who was then mixed up in Arizona mining enterprises with the late "Ned" Schiefelin, went to Palo Alto and bought Wolsey, a full brother to the afterwards famous Sunol. After the filly had trotted her first exhibition mile in 2:12, the Governor sent a friend to Mr. Gird to buy back Wolsey, but Mr. Gird was not a trout and refused to hita. While Wolsey has no race-winners and is not known as a sire of extreme speed, he gets the finest and most stylish driving horses in this part of the State, all either beautiful bays or chestnuts, and gifted with the soundest of legs and feet, which is something unusual for the mala line of Humblatonian 10. Another Electioneer horse that Mr. Gird bought of Governor Stanford was Albion, who got old Alcro, that won a race here at the fair of 1895. Alcro is rather too fat to drive well at long distances but the old chap is hard to beat for style. Moreover, the Wolseys are all of excellent disposition, while Sunol was always as cross as a bear. How do you account for it? [Capt. Merry is mistaken in his assertion that Wolsey got no race-winners. Race-goers in this State will remember that good mare, Nelly W., 2:17½, who won many races, also Alias, 2:19½, and Princess, 2:19½. Then there are Abeto, a pacer with a mark of 2:10½, and the mare Loyseer, 2:30. Wehina, 2:21, never won a race, but she won many heats in long-drawn races and got her mark in the fifth heat of a race. As to Sunol's had temper there is a good deal of newspaper romance about the stories told of her.—Ed.]

THE Executive Committee of the National Horse Show Association has adopted for the November exhibition at Madison Square Garden all of the later suggestions with regard to trotting and roadster classes made by the committee appointed for that purpose. The amended conditions of class for stallion to be shown with four of his get, oldest of get not to exceed six years, require that the stallion and get shall be judged by their individuality, the pedigree of the sire and the racing end showing ring qualities of the progeny. The first premium is $500, the second $200 and the third $100. This should in a way be a most interesting competition. In class for broodmare to be shown with two of her produce, one a weanling, the other not to exceed four years, the condition is that they are to be judged by their individuality, the pedigree and producing qualities of the dam and the showing ring qualities of the progeny. The premiums are $200, $100 and $50. The class for mares or geldings with records of 2:20 or better has been stricken out, and so has class for fillies three years old. The added classes are 13, for mares or geldings four years old or over with records of 2:30 or better, to be shown in harness; and 14, for mares and geldings three years old and under four, to be shown in harness. In all breeding classes the name of the dam and the name of the sire of her dam shall be given. With this information before him, the compiler of the catalogue should be able to extend pedigrees and furnish information valuable to visitors to the show.

The Two Thousand Guineas Winner of 1898.

At the second day's racing of the Newmarket First Spring Meeting (April 27th), the Lorillard-Beresford Stable's bay colt, Elin, won the three-year-old Welter Handicap. This race is of 400 sovereigns, by subscription of five sovereigns each, and ten sovereigns extra for starters; the second to receive fifty sovereigns out of the plate. There were thirteen starters, over the Rowley mile. The result in detail was as follows:

Lorillard-Beresford Stable's h c Elin, by Sensation, out of Quality..... 1
Wallace Johnstone's ch g Nikko, by Trayles, out of Dolly Varden..... 2
E. C. Clayton's h c Boy of Egre-monte, by Noble, Chieftain, out of Glib Beck..... 3

Wallace Johnstone's bay colt, Disraeli, won the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes. This race is 100 sovereigns each, for three-year-olds; the second to receive 300 sovereigns out of the stakes and the third to save his stakes. Fourteen horses ran over the course, the Rowley mile, and the following was the result in detail:

Wallace Johnstone's h c Disraeli, by Galopin, out of Lady Ardley..... 1
The Duke of Portland's h c Wantage, by Sheen, out of Satchel..... 2
Prince Soltykoff's c c Niub, by Sheen, out of Nina..... 3

The One Thousand Guineas Winner of 1898.

At the last day's racing, April 29th, of the Newmarket First Spring Meeting, Sir J. Blundell Maple's bay filly Nona Nicer won the One Thousand Guineas Stakes. This event is of 100 sovereigns each, for three-year-old fillies, the owner of the second filly to receive 200 sovereigns out of the stakes, and the third to save his stakes. There were fifteen starters, including the Lorillard Beresford stable's brown filly Chinook and the chestnut filly Bloozen, belonging to the same stable. The course was the Rowley mile, and the following was the result in detail:

Sir J. Blundell Maple's h f Nona Nicer, by Common, out of Priestess..... 1
Aira and Graces, h f, by Ayrshire, out of Abacost..... 2
Lord Derby's ch f Alt Mark, by Marsden, out of Aldora..... 3

CHARLESTON, S. C.

DE. H. CLAY GLOVER, Dear Sir—I have a fine setter dog which last winter I placed in the hands of a trainer. When returned to me he was badly broken down with distemper. After giving him careful attention and finding that he was growing worse on recommendation concluded to use your Distemper Cure. I am happy to say the animal entirely recovered and is now in excellent condition. I. O. LEA, Treasury Office.

ON the strength of his victory in the Two Thousand Guineas, Disraeli is the favorite for the Epsom Derby, one mile and a half, to be run May 25. About him 3 to 1 is offered, though Diendonne is a strong second choice at 4 to 1. Hawfinch, 7 to 1, and Batt, 8 to 1, come next to order. Mr. August Belmont's candidate, Bridegroom 11., is at 33 to 1, Archduke 66 to 1.

THE New York "Spirit of the Times" representative recently asked Mr. Powers, representative of Mr. Marcus Daly, what was going to be done with Hamburg this season, and received the following reply: "Mr. Daly was here only a few days ago and I was able to consult him upon the subject, and our plans dependent of course on the horse's condition at the date of the various events, are as follows: Hamburg's first start will be in the Belmont at a mile and three furlongs, which will be run for on May 26th, the last day of the Morris Park spring meeting. The Realization at a mile and five furlongs, to be run on July 4th, the closing day of the Coney Island Jockey Club's first summer meeting, will see his second appearance, and if he proves that he has stamina as well as speed, as we think he will do, we shall start him in the Brighton cup, at two miles and a quarter, on July 30th. During all this time Hamburg will be trained at Brigeton, where Lakeland has him now, and will only be shipped to Morris Park for the Realization upon the day the events are run for. We did think of sending him to Washington Park, Chicago, for the $10,000 American Derby, but the data for its running is too close to the Realization for us to risk the journey. After the Brighton cup we have formulated no plans as yet."

The following cut represents the residence of the late Josiah H. White, a man who was intimately connected with harness horses, a large breeder, and on his farm at Lakeside constructed the best shaped track I ever saw. In place of being semi-circles the curves were parabolas, the connecting stretches being, of course, straight. The advantages of the parabolic "turns" are evident; the curve gradually grows sharper so that the horse becomes habituated to the change from straight, going to circular, not so abrupt a change as when a semi-circle has to be "negotiated." Mr. White was a civil engineer; he laid out the Bay District and the old Oakland tracks and his profession suggested the shape of the Lakeside course.

A very short acquaintance with Mr. White was enough to discern he was a man of superior attainments, further intimacy resulted in the discovery of so many admirable and lovable qualities that he was endeared to his friends, and if he had enemies even those were forced to respect him for his sterling worth. There was general rejoicing when he made the "rich strike" in Arizona, and what is somewhat wonderful, the radically envious did not express their feelings audibly.

Mr. White was the first president of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association.

RESIDENCE MRS. I. H. WHITE, ALAMEDA.

The following picture was taken as a fair representation of a street scene in Alameda, corner of Grand St., and Santa Clara avenues, one block south of Bay Street station.

STREET SCENE ALAMEDA.

BONNIE SCOTLAND, MALCOLM, REGENT. Owing to the type becoming misplaced, after the proof was corrected, there was a slight error in the notes regarding Bonnie Scotland in the paper of Saturday, that being that I owned the horse in Waukagon, Ill. In order to straighten that and add something to the information about the greatest son of Queen Mary, gaps are filled up.

Mr. Kutz sold his interest in all the horses owned by him and Mr. Reher to a Cincinnati party, two of which were E. A. Smith and Samuel Leonard. In a division Bonnie Scotland and Ontario were among the horses which Messrs. Smith and Leonard got. They sent Bonnie Scotland to Kentucky and raced quite a strong stable, winning many races with Ontario, at that time the "queen of the turf." Leonard's father-in-law, "Deacon" Stevens, had loaned them a good deal of money, and took a bill of sale of the horses. Hearing that Bonnie Scotland was for sale, and would be sold for a great deal less than Mr. Robert Alexander had offered, after some correspondence I went with Mr. Smith to Kentucky to see the horse and Mr. Stevens accompanied me to Iowa to look at the farm I proposed to trade for the stallion. The price put on him $6,000, was satisfactory and mine for the farm $8,000, was also sufficient inducement for Mr. Stevens to make the journey.

A close bargainer was the Deacon, and the "swap" was finally consummated by giving me Bonnie and $1,750 for the little farm.

Lamenting the outlay of "ready money" already invested, Mr. Smith asked me if I would not take other horses for the balance due, or a part of it.

"What will you take for Ontario?" I replied.

"He answered, "one thousand dollars.

"I will take her" my reply.

"Wait a moment," he said, and referring to a little memorandum book, added, "the boys have marked her not to be sold."

"Will you take the mare and square the account," was my reply.

"Let it rest until I go home and I will send the mare or the money."

Feeling sure that "the boys" would not agree to part with her the only chance to secure the mare was to have the question decided then, though I finally concurred in the offer to await his decision until we got back to Chicago.

Evidently a great struggle whether to offend the boys or pay the $1,750, though the advances to his son-in-law and Smith was not so sore a point as losses made in a partnership with a Mr. S. S. Grant, and Smith in army contracts, through Grant not only gambling away recent profits, but absorbing a draft of $90,000, which Mr. Stevens had sent him to purchase horses and mules. The boys carried the day, but he swore that would be the last money he would furnish.

I sold a half interest to Hon. D. A. Gage for $3,000, and that season Bonnie stood at Mr. Gage's farm, Riverside, that beautiful suburb of Chicago now occupying the ground which barns, buildings, fields and paddocks covered, adopting the name of the farm as well as the other "appurtenances," and hereditaments thereto belonging.

The big barn, the largest at that time in the country, was moved some two miles up "the ridge" in 1869, and the breeding farm of Atwood Place established.

Few thoroughbred mares I can recall, two were bred to Bonnie in 1868, Eva Shepherd by Sovereign, and an Endorser mare, neither having foals.

The fall of 1868 I sold my interest in the horse to C. C. and Robert Parks of Waukegan, Illinois, and he made a few seasons there. Few thoroughbred mares in that stud; trotting horses, Durham and Jersey cattle, being also a part of the business; still the veteran campaigner, Joe Howell was bred there; (his dam Eva Shepherd), and a mare I sold him, Maud, by imp. Australian foaled Paper Maker at Glen Flora.

I bought Regent, then two years old, of Mr. Reher early in the spring of 1869 for myself, Columbia and her sister Wauanita on joint account with Mr. Gage; those and several other horses Mr. Coyle trained for us at Dexter Park after Riverside was dismantled. Regent was a "natural horn" race horse and an exceedingly handsome colt. Smith and Leonard induced Mr. Stevens, he being the owner of Malcolm, to write me several letters proposing a trade, Malcolm for Regent, and would pay a reasonable difference. I refused to name any sum, but when the summer race and trotting meeting came to an end and people were leaving for their homes, I fully realized that for the first time in many, many years myself and family were without a home of our own. Good quarters at the Transit House, my children at the best of schools, but the yearning for the little farm became so strong that I offered Mr. Stevens a sum for it in cash or would take Malcolm and let him have Regent at $2,500 less money. From his reluctance to pay any more money out I supposed he would take the all money offer, though much to my surprise I received a telegram: "Accept offer; have sent to Nashville for Malcolm; ship colt at once."

A friend who was a warm admirer of the colt urged me not to send him, and though fully believing that he was one of the best colts I ever saw could not do otherwise than comply. And thus I became the owner of Malcolm, and lost Regent. That fall he won the young America stake at Nashville and Mr. Stevens was offered $7,500 for him.

George Baylies who died so suddenly at Emeryville last Sunday rode Regent in his exercise while I owned him, and it almost broke his heart when the colt went away. A quiet, well behaved lad, a general favorite and with good promise to make a first-class jockey.

"TUNNEL DAY" Saturday next the racing season will wind up with a benefit day, the proceeds of which will go into the tunnel fund, and from the outlook at present it will be the largest gathering of people of the winter at the C. J. C. course, excepting, perhaps, that of Thanksgiving day. If all the people of Oakland fully realized the advantages that will follow from a good road through, in place of over, the mountains, everyone who can afford to pay a dollar will surely do so.

An extra good programme for that day has been arranged, so that there will be a double return, the pleasure of witnessing high-mettled racers in exciting contests and aiding a laudable enterprise. To those who have not seen the course, the buildings and grounds on a racing day will be well repaid for the time and money spent by the beauty of the place, one of the very finest race courses in the United States; the finest in many respects.

ALAMEDA DRIVING CLUB } Quits safe to say, and that without equivocation, or any tendency to flatter, that so far as tracks are concerned, the Alameda Driving Course and Boulevard adjoining form the best training ground for harness horses in this or any other State. It may be better to qualify the statement by changing best to the equal of any training grounds where ever located, though I cannot imagine where the track and boulevard could be bettered when the object sought is to teach horses to trot or pace, and to bring them into such "condition" as will best fit them for races.

The "regulation track" i. e. a mile in circuit the turns semi-circles of a quarter of a mile each, connected with parallel, straight stretches which, of course, are also a quarter of a mile each, is nearly faultless, though the turns might be "thrown up" somewhat more with advantage. The track was built by a few men who have a fondness for driving, and who did not look for a money return on their expenditure. Then a satisfactory lease could not be obtained and the only improvements a rail on the turns and some other fencing, cooling out sheds, a few stalls, and the judges stand, the cut represents the stalls, the angle forming a better protection from the western winds than if on one straight line.

A MORNING SCENE, ALAMEDA TRACK.

Watching the horses exercise is fully as attractive to some harness-horse fanciers as to go to the races. There is this advantage, there is something going on every minute. It may be that there are several parties "working out" together, two, three or it may be more in competition, while one section is cooling out another is on the track, and scarcely an interval of ten minutes without something to interest.

The Boulevard is not properly appreciated, one mile and an eighth in length, one hundred feet wide, straight with the exception of an easy curve that with so long a radius that it virtually "straight going." The material the same as the track, and better for dry weather could not be, silt pumped from the estuary, so that it is on nearly level that a few inches will mark the difference. The advantages are so many and so great that a long article, with advantages for training purposes of the Alameda boulevard for a text, will be required to do it justice. Were those stalls commensurate with the demand, more horses would be in training on the Alameda track than any other one in the state, and it seems to me that if stables like those occupied by Mr. Nelson, and Mr. Williams were built the rental would make the investment a paying one.

Alameda is one of the most beautiful towns in California. It may appear like rank heresy on the part of one who has resided in Oakland for twenty-four years to say that as a residence place it is superior, in many respects, to the bigger city across the creek. Just as convenient for those who do business in the metropolis, and though Oakland has advanced in its larger population secures, there are commensurate, won't set.

Good Lessons Taught Us by Our Eastern and Australian Friends.

The marked success of racing at the East under the jurisdiction of The Jockey Club, the increasing popularity of the galloper with the masses, the confidence felt in the officials having matters in charge, all largely due to the strict enforcement of the rules under which the club is working, has had the effect of elevating, in public opinion, the turfman, the trainer of horses and the jockey. They command the respect of all sorts of citizens, for their actions are above reproach. It is to be regretted that trainers and jockeys out this way, as a class, are not looked upon as they are at the far East. There is not that feeling of confidence in either class that should be felt and naturally one looks around for the cause. At the far East there are hookmakers, just as here. There are the same direct rewards for fraudulent practices, the running of "dead ones" and "dividing the sheet," sending horses to the post "short" when the trainer knows the public will bet long and furiously on the animal, etc. The solution of this problem, then, must be that there is no catering to the low-class racers or to the owners of "dogs." Besides, there has been a lengthening of the distances in races since The Jockey Club took the helm of the racing ship at the far East, an increase in the weights, so that a rider can remain at the business for many years and become proficient in his art.

The craze for "time" is dying out, too, and this is mainly due to the action of the governing turf body of the far East having many of the races at odd distances, such as 172 feet short of six furlongs, about a mile, mile and fifty yards, &c. In this way the race-goer is made to forget a good deal about "time." The great increase in the weights carried has also crushed the stickler for "time" somewhat.

The rule which says it is unlawful for "plungers" to make presents to riders is also a good one, the club doubtless arguing that if a jockey would accept money for winnings he would also accept coin for losing, and that the time would soon come when a rider would not greatly exert himself to win if he were not promised a substantial sum from the plunging brigade. The late Admiral Rous did not approve of plunging, and tried to have a law passed that any member of the Jockey Club of England trying to win over £20,000 on any event should be expelled from the organization. The "plungers" should be kept as far away from the jockeys as possible, so that they could neither offer a reward to a rider for being honest or dishonest. "Plungers" have ruined many a jockey. They have, through their liberality given jockeys a false idea of their importance upon this mundane sphere, and as the cranium of the knight of the saddle swelled his usefulness decreased in proportion. The successful race rider of to-day is flattered until he begins to believe himself a Napoleon, a Dewey or an Edison—a veritable genius that all the world should salaam and scrape to.

If the West will not follow in the footsteps of their successful Eastern brethren, placing the turf upon a higher plane of morality, the introduction of the totalizer will do the good work. It will do away with the direct reward for fraud. The dishonest trainer, running his horse to lose, cannot gain anything. A winner has to be picked in a race, and that's not always so easy. The "plunger" who wanted to make a heavy "clean-up" would have to "fix" nearly every ride in a race in order to have his horse "shooed in," and one of the jockeys would "give him away." Besides, on a totalizer, a heavy play on a particular horse would reduce the odds materially. Therefore, the "plunger," generally a non-producer, will not look upon the "tote" with much favor. But it will come just the same and be the savior of the sport. It will enforce honesty and render the efforts of the dishonest useless. It will increase the revenues of the clubs through having a larger "gate." It will make the public have confidence, a belief that they will at all times secure a "run for the money." If the clubs are as liberal in the future as they have been in the past, they will increase the size of the purses and stakes, and that will insure the entrance in races of a higher class of horses, the "skate" being relegated to the background. Larger purses and stakes means larger breeding operations, an improvement in our breed of horses—supposed to be the chief aim of all racing organizations in the world. All of the above predictions will be verified here if the racing clubs would only use the totalizer adopted in New Zealand and South Australia. Racing was at a very low ebb in those countries when the totalizer took the place of the hookmaker. The purses were small; little interest was felt in turf affairs (caused through lack of confidence in the squareness of the sport), and bettors kept their coin in their pockets. With the introduction of the totalizer, all this was changed. The interest and the gate receipts commenced to swell, the coin came out of the feather beds and banks, the purses and stakes were increased four-fold and the breeding interest was stimulated as breeders never dreamed it would be. All this was due to the use of the totalizer by the racing clubs, and every sporting paper in those provinces sing the praises of "the tote" in every issue, pronouncing it the saviour of the sport of kings in those localities, as indeed it was.

ON the 31st instant Messrs. Killip & Co, live stock auctioneers, will sell at the salesyard corner Market and Van Ness avenue in this city, by order of A. W. Foster, Esq., twenty head of Hungarian ponies, twelve hands and under. This is a choice lot and they are perfect beauties. The sale will be positive and without reserve. The firm will also sell a consignment of trotting bred and draft horses from the Yerha Buena Farm. Full particulars of this sale next week.

HORSE owners and trainers should remember that they have but one week more to study over the programme of the Trotting Horse Breeders' Association races, and arrange for making entries. It will be the best meeting ever given in California in all probability. Don't be left out in the cold when there is so much money to be earned. The entries will close June 1st.

THE meeting to be given by the Alameda Driving Association Monday May 30th, promises to be one of the most enjoyable ever held on that club's excellent track. The races are open to all and the conditions are set forth in our advertising columns. Entries close today, Saturday May 21st, with the Secretary A. O. Gott, 1413 Park street, Alameda. Get your entries mailed to-day.

MR. ALLISON says that "roaring is not by any means of necessity a serious matter at all, whereas under no circumstances is it anything like such a drawback to a horse as stilly forelegs, calf knees, spavined hocks, bad feet, or hereditary tendency to break blood vessels—which is the most hereditary trouble of all. Clover, the successful French sire, is by the roaring Wellingtonia (son of the roaring Chattanooga), out of Princess Catherine, by the roaring Prince Charlie, and Clover was a sound, good race horse." Resolute is demonstrative proof that a horse may be touched in the wind and still retain his race.

VOLLEY, Strathmore, Patron, The Officer and Annon are the only horses who have won the double, Caulfield Guineas and V. R. C. St. Leger.

THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN'S mailing clerk has gone to be a soldier. Albert Jackson Martineau, is a native of Vallejo in this State, and he has been connected with this office for some months. A young man of brains and strict uprightness, he always seemed to take his greatest pleasure in doing his duty. Prompt and reliable his aim was to do everything in the proper manner and on time. A member of Company C, First Infantry and Third Battalion of California Volunteers, our "Jack" will, in a few days, be on his way to Manila to defend his country's flag and honor. We know he will faithfully discharge every duty required of him, and we hope to see him return safe and sound, wearing the shoulder straps of an officer. An honest, kind, and gentle boy is "Jack," and the idol of the employes of this office, but now

"Dreams be of cutting foreign throats
Of breaches, ambushes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathoms deep."

TON SLOAN is riding in superb form at Morris Park. Hardly a day passes but that he rides a couple of winners. A scribe pays the following tribute to his work of last Thursday: "Tod Sloan's riding was the feature of the day. There are those who have claimed that Sloan is no finisher, but all doubts as to his ability in this line were dispelled by his efforts with Geisha. The little crack in two of the races had the satisfaction of beating his great rival, Tommy Burns." Sloan started in badly at the Aqueduct, but there was little doubt in the minds of his friends but that he would soon round to his best form.

AN impression exists in New Zealand that Uniform was purchased from Mr. Stead, on account of an English owner, but the seller states that he has neither disclosed the name of the purchaser to anyone, nor the amount for which he sold the son of Hotchkiss and Formo. O'Toole who came out with the blood stock Mr. Stead purchased when on his visit to England, will take Uniform to England. The total winnings of Uniform during his career as a three and four-year-old have amounted to £2,100—Melbourne Leader.

GEORGE BARRETT, who recently died in England, had a most successful career as a jockey, and amongst the numerous winners steered by him were Common (2000 guineas, Derby and St. Leger), Ormonda (2000 guineas), Buccaneer (City and Suburban), La Fleche (1000 guineas, Cambridge and Oaks), Carlton (Chester Cup), and Orme (Eclipse Stakes and Middle Park Plate).

VENGEANCE (whose yearlings recently brought such good prices in Australia) is by Newminster, for years the leading stallion of Australia, the sire of Newhaven and Taroola, winners of the Melbourne Cup.

THE success in Australia of Bobadil and Ormuz omens favorably for the St. Simon-cum-Musket experiments now being instituted by the Duke of Portland through the agency of Carhina.

MCDONALD, who has been riding excellently here of late, left for St. Louis May 19th. He will ride for Hughey Jones, and ought to do well.

EDWARD CORRIGAN has been publicly warned that the people of Cicero township will not stand for the opening of Hawtborne.

CLEVELAND SALE.—The "Blue Ribbon" sale at Cleveland from the accounts received up to this time was undoubtedly an "unqualified success," the Palo Alto contingent bringing prices far beyond any previous sale this year, and according to my recollection $7,800, the price paid for Betonica, the highest figure ever reached at an auction sale for a four-year-old pacer.

The two year-old, Idolita, by Monaco from Edith Carr by George Wilkes, at $4,100 has taken the highest place when measured by money value, than anyone of his age has brought in several years. And dirt cheap at that, in my opinion, as he takes the lead of all the colts that have been driven on that famous track; even Arion never equalled the time made by Idolita so early in the season, 2:24½ in April. Monaco shows good indications of being a first-class sire. The Beautiful Bells yearling is certainly the best looking of her colts at the same age, and all the Monacos I have seen are highly formed.

Plenty of near infusions in Idolita. The third dam of Edith was by imp. Margrave and the next dam the thoroughbred mare Kitty Muss by Shakespare, and a filly by American Eclipse from Kitty Muse was the dam of Idol a son of Mambrino chief. The third dam of Monaco was by Piedmont and the second dam of Piedmont was by the thoroughbred Grey Eagle.

As is well known Betonica is half thoroughbred through his sire and dam, and were all the other thoroughbred strains he carries collected, little but thoroughbred would remain.

Pasonte by Palo Alto brought the next highest price, $2000, and she is by a "half-and-half" sire. With careful handling this highly-bred mare (her grandam being by Billy Townes thoroughbred, and her third dam was by Sir Charles, who was so well thought of that he was matched against American Eclipse, but unfortunately went amiss) and highly formed mare as all good judges must admit, is almost sure to get a mark very nearly at the top-notch of the measuring rod.

The next in price Hyita, two years old, $1,900, is very close to the infusions. Her dam was by Carr's Mambrino, his dam vary nearly thoroughbred, and her second dam by Owen Dale by Belmont (Williamson's), her third dam by Belmont, and as Directum has two strains of Belmont, the most capacious must admit its value in fast trotters.

The second dam of Peko was Plauetia by Planet, then La Henderson by Lexington, Kitty Clark by imp. Glencos, not only thoroughbred, but that of the highest class. Nordean, $1,000, is from a daughter of Wildide, end her sire, Norris, is by Ansel, and Ansel from Annette, through bred, by Lexington. The dam of Norris by Norman, his second dam by T. Chunter's Sir Wallace very nearly, if not entirely thoroughbred, and the third dam Eagletta, thoroughbred, by Grey Eagle.

These confident prophets who predict that nothing good would come from Palo Alto, owing to Governor Stanford's strange infatuation in using thoroughbred blood with the vain expectation of getting even moderate trotters if at all fair-minded and sensible enough to know and understand what Palo Alto has done, they will be ready to acknowledge that the crowning glory of that famous breeding comes from the mixture of thoroughbred blood, closely up, too, with trotting strains.

The above is a representation of the end stalls in the north row of etables, and the filly the folks are admiring I think is Nordean, at all events one of the lot sold at Cleveland.

ANENT INCORPORATING. I must acknowledge that I was so densely ignorant in regard to the laws of California, or any other State, governing incorporations, or the necessary steps to secure articles of incorporation, that when I offered the resolution at the annual meeting, Dec. 6, 1897, that the P. C. T. H. B. A. should be incorporated, I supposed that there would be no change in the organization. That the constitution under which the Association had conducted its affairs from the first, or one amended in accordance with that constitution, would be the groundwork: that the directors and members would remain the same, the only difference from its present standing, a legalized body, in place of an assemblage of men associated to advance harness-horse interests.

In place of that should the projected Association be incorporated, I find that everything will be changed excepting the name, everyone of the Association, save those who sign the articles of incorporation before it is filed, will be thrown out. In place of fifteen directors eleven the limit; not a member, however good his standing, of the present Association that will be a member of the one proposed, until elected by the new in accordance with the by-laws, articles of incorporation, or whatever the new conditions may be that will govern.

It is my fault that I am ignorant of the provisions made in the articles of incorporation. Mr. Cohen brought the document into the office requesting, urging me to sign it, but having firmly resolved not to sign whatever the conditions embodied therein might be, the opportunity was lost. Since then I have been unable to obtain a copy for publication, and considering the importance of the issue it will be well if the secretary has copies printed in time to mail them to the members the first of the week. In all probability a large majority of the members are as ignorant as I was in regard to the effects that will follow incorporation, and with a copy of the articles they can note the difference between those and the constitution of the P. C. T. H. B. A. as it now stands.

That the constitution can be amended advantageously is beyond question, and the adjourned Annual Meeting which will be held on Thursday next will have the power to change it or adopt an entirely new instrument.

Members who have sent proxies without being aware of the changes that can be wrought, and have placed it in the power of some one to vote directly contrary to their wishes after realizing the true situation, should send a later proxy if unable to attend the meeting. In that case it will be well to state whether they are in favor or against incorporation. Hon. D. E. Knight of Marysville, John F. Boyd of San Francisco, John A. McKerron of San Francisco, Colonel Park Henshaw of Chico have not as yet committed themselves to either side of the question, and the gentlemen named will surely be in attendance.

I wish to state further that I had an object in offering the resolution favoring incorporation. That was to make changes in the constitution. It could not be amended at that annual meeting, December 6th, 1897, as the necessary three months notice had not been given. The meeting of the directors to elect officers for the ensuing year was put off two weeks. At that meeting, December 26, 1897, there was a good deal of argument many contending that the directors had the power to incorporate and adopt a new constitution. This I stubbornly contested and as the constitution Article III, Sec. 1 reads "The association shall meet annually on or before and as the 26th of April gave the necessary time for notification that it was set for that date. The following two paragraphs cut from the special department of January 1st shows the views that I held at that time and have not changed.

"There is a general consensus of opinion that the outlook for harness racing in California the coming year is anything but favorable. Some quite despondent, others who are somewhat hopeful, a few who have faith that with methods of management which will secure the approval of the public there will follow a break in the dark cloud. This is my belief, and there are many others who agree in the opinion, among them people who have come to the conclusion from a careful study of the situation. An influential body of men who advocated a course that, in my opinion, will prove a great detriment to the future of harness racing. That is for the only association which was organized to "promote" harness horse races to become a sort of quasi jockey club, give a "mixed meeting" where gallopers and harness horse racers will all be awarded a chance. This was thoroughly canvassed before the fall meeting of the Association, and at a gathering of members held in Sacramento there was an "overwhelming majority" opposed to the innovation.

"In order to effect the purpose the plan proposed, in fact already agreed upon, is to change the name of the Association and amend the constitution so that running races can be incorporated in the programme. If that is carried out in accordance with the requirements of the constitution, and the necessary number of votes secured to legally effect the change, I will do all in my power to aid in making the meetings successful. But if the attempt is made to secure the end by means not recognized by the fundamental law, to arbitrarily grasp the power and issue an edict that the name has been changed, the original object of the organization disregarded and an entirely different course pursued, those who favor such autocratic methods must not be surprised should there be a stubborn determination to thwart the conspiracy. Too plainly apparent to anyone who will give the question a little consideration to require long arguments that the members of the association are the owners of whatever property belongs to the Association. The directors may vote that the Board has the power to transfer this property to another society, that it can sequester, or rather confiscate property belonging to one set of contributors into other coffers, but is that equitable? Is it an act which 'law of the land' will sanction?"

After the meeting on the 26th of April, adjourned to next Thursday, the 26th inst., I wrote something of the same tenor.

The mere fact that I offered the resolution under a misapprehension, and with the further purpose of securing a "legal meeting" empowered to make necessary changes in the constitution did not bind me in any shape to support incorporating.

AN OLD-TIME RACE HORSE. The following is copied from "The Leaf Herald or Annual Racing Calendar 1824," and is well worthy of a place now, inasmuch as there are few instances of a horse lasting that long.

The race was run at Tunbridge-Wells, County of Kent, England, and there two others, at the like distance, on the same day, though in both others there were three heats.

The Editor is induced to swerve from his course on the present occasion; the rarity of a horse, not only continuing to run, but to win, at the age of seventeen years, creates an interest in his favour which cannot, perhaps, be better gratified than by detailing his pedigree:—MARKSMAN, the property of T. Brown, E. q. was foaled in 1808; he was got by Paynator (a son of Ld. Clermont's Trumpator); dam by Drsgor; grandam Queen Mab (sister to Mercury and Venus), by Eclipse; great grandam the famous old Tartar mare; great great grandam by Mogul; great great great grandam by Sweepstakes—sister to Sloven, by Bolton.—Carwen Bay Barb—Old Spot—White-legged Lowther Kart—Vintner mare. Through his sire, it will be observed, that he is descended direct from the Godolphin Arabian:—Paynator, a son of Trumpator—Conductor—Match'em—Cade—the Godolphin Arabian.

A correspondent who requested the pedigree of Marksman, says: "This is the seventy-second time the old horse has started, and the 40th plate he has won." This statement does not agree with the Racing-Calendar; but Marksman may have run on courses where no account of the sport has been preserved. We find him to have been thirty times "crowned victor of the laboured races."—J. F.

TURFMAN PAT DUNNE lost his excellent California-bred colt, Estaca, in a selling race at Louisville May 14th. Estaca was in for $900, and when offered for sale J. G. Murphy, a stranger to most of the horsemen and race followers generally, bid $1,500. Mr. Dunne raised the bid $5, as he did with each successive boost of $100, until he had gone to $1,805, and when Murphy bid $1,900, the Chicago horseman stopped and the colt was knocked down to the stranger. Murphy was reported to be an agent of the Mexican Government commissioned to buy up good, well-bred horses, but this is a mistake, growing out of the fact that his father is connected officially with the Mexican Central Railroad. A Mexican by birth and speaking broken English, notwithstanding his name, he became infatuated with the racing game at New Orleans, and has since been backing a book run by Al Slofel, at whose suggestion he bought Estaca. They will ship him to race on the Northern circuit.

ACCORDING to that widely recognized authority, John Porter, the strain on the horse is much greater when the animal is called upon to run in short races than it is in long ones. "To be convinced of this," says the famous trainer "you have only to watch a start for a five furlong race, with the excitement to get off, the false starts and the horses "snatched" upon their haunches. This treatment, repeated as I have seen it as many as twenty times over, is ruinous, whereas in a race of a mile or upwards the horse starts smoothly, the pressure is not put on so soon, he gradually increases his speed, and the chances of his breaking down are not one-tenth as great as when he is pulled about and hustled in a short T. Y. C. Neither is his temper so likely to sour." Another eloquent testimonial for the starting machine.

THE racing critics of England place Bridegroom II. property of August Belmont, among the formidable Derby candidates. He is a chestnut colt by Rayon d'Or out of the great race mare imp. Fides. Bridegroom was bred in America.

Scouring and Hide Bound Horses.

Both are annoyances to owners of such afflicted animals. Both evils are positively cured by feeding a liberal amount of Manhattan Food, Red Ball Brand. The undersigned has had great success with it. One of my favorite horses would scour after being driven a mile and keep this up until the dashboard would be completely covered. No matter what I fed him, he would not digest his oats. He was run down and weakened until he looked like a living skeleton. He was hide bound in the worst way. I then thought to again feed Manhattan Food and it was so efficacious that in ten days it cured him of scouring; he digested his oats thoroughly, picked up in flesh and in two months looked his old self again. He has a slick coat, is full of life and in the pink of condition. I am now convinced more than ever that it is an infallible remedy for ill conditioned horses.

ALBERT MANNING, Trainer.

Mr. Wm. Corbitt, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, says: I found it an excellent remedy.

Wm. F. Egan, V. S., says: I prescribe Manhattan Food whenever the case demands it.

Messrs. Hale & Son of Independence, Ia., write: "Some time ago, we had a colt that hurt his hind leg so it was swollen almost the size of your head; thought he was spoiled. We sent for Quinn's Ointment, used one bottle, and to day he is as smooth as ever." For curbs, splints, spavins, wind-puffs and all bunched use Quinn's Ointment. Price $1.50 per package. Address W. Striped Bass in the Bay.

Striped bass anglers on the other side of the bay were very successful this week, quite a large number of these fine fish having been caught from the railroad wharves. "Andy" captured a ten pounder. A bunch of spile worms on the hook seems to be the taking lure.

Striped Bass Fishing—The Tackle Used.

Having fished for striped bass, called rockfish in the south, for ten years, I have seen many changes. A few years ago we seldom hooked striped bass along the New Jersey coast before July 1st, but during the last three years June has been the best month, especially on full moon tides.

To be successful in fishing for striped bass, one must learn where they feed. This is usually in holes along the beach, but the fish move from one hole to another, so one must hunt them. As a rule, if one can find a small stream running into the ocean, bass will be found there. The streams turn up small soft-shell crabs in the sand, of which they are fond.

There are three runs of striped bass, viz.: spring, summer (or school bass) and the fall run. The summer bass are much smaller than the spring and fall runs.

The best rod for ocean fishing is a one-piece, hand-made split bamboo 5 feet long, with a separate butt 18 inches long, German silver mountings, agate guides and tip. As these rods are expensive few anglers have them. Greenheart, hethabara, snakewood and lancewood make excellent rods. Calcutta bamboo makes a good rod, and is light and strong. Always have the agate tips, as the line does not wear so much. If German silver guides are used, have the hell guide. These rods are unhandy to take on short trips. A two-piece stick with separate butt (always carry an extra tip), will be found more convenient. Great judgment should be used in the purchase of these piece sticks, for the ferrules are apt to cut them, but this has been overcome by an invention of Frederick Malleson, with L. F. La Roche, 161 Fulton street, New York, who is the patentee of the double-jerrated ferrules, which enables the maker to bind over their ends, thus preventing the rod from becoming water-soaked at the ferrules. This ferrule is also made to take off the knife-blade edge that some of the old style had. How many rods one has seen break off just at the end of the ferrule!

In purchasing a rod pay a good price and get the best. It is cheaper in the end. When through fishing always clean and dry your rod thoroughly; keep it well varnished. The hard rubber, German silver, steel pivot multiplying reel is the only reel for salt water, and should have a 600 to 900 foot spool. In line get the best of Irish linen, 12 to 13 thread, length 600 to 900 feet. Never have a knotted line, for it interferes with casting, also of handling a fish. From experience I find the O'Shaughnessy hook the best, 5 0 to 8-0, with 3 to 4-ply long loop gut snell, and a 3-foot best gut leader, 3 or 4-ply, with patent swivel, bass-casting sinker, 2 to 5 ounces, according to the sea and current. As a rule, 2 or 3 ounces of lead is plenty. Never use two sinkers. Brass triple action swivel is the best, for it is impossible to make a mistake in arranging tackle.

Soft-shell crabs, thoroughly cleaned, are mostly used for bait. Do not leave a particle of shell on them, for the striped bass is a suspicious fish, and if it strikes a hard substance it will throw it from its mouth before the angler can hook it. If fishing at an inlet always have good, fresh blood-worms, and use two leaders, one above the other far enough so they will not tangle. Bait with crabs and worms; a crab will make four or five good baits.

Night fishing for striped bass is always the best, for then they are feeding. Never be afraid to let your fish run to sea. Have just enough pressure on the reel to tire him out. Once you have the king of salt water fishes hooked your fun begins. Bass vary greatly in size. I have seen them from 1 to 42 pounds.

I took a trip to Port Deposit, Md., the 20th of last September. Fishing all day the 21st I took three bass. On the 22d I went out again and was rewarded with twelve striped bass weighing 80 pounds, the four largest of which weighed 15, 15, 14, 10 pounds respectively; The other eight from 3 to 6 pounds. These four large fish were caught over a deep hole. Whenever I located that hole right I was sure of a fish; but when you have 150 feet of line out and a swift current running, it is hard to find a given point on the water.

Trotting is the approved method of fishing for striped bass in southern waters. A small spoon, not as large as a silver quarter, is what I used, with six to ten bloodworms on the hook, and a small sinker, just enough to sink the line 3 or 4 feet.—J. F. Marshall, M. D. in Shooting and Fishing.

Flies.

I might as well confess that in the matter of flies I am a Philistine, because the adherent to the natural school will rise and call me so. Many books have been written about artificial flies and how to tie them so as to imitate the natural insect, and I may have a dozen such hooks besides the chapters on flies in a hundred general works on angling, for my angling library is a large one, a collection of over thirty years. Besides this I regularly read the London fishing Gazette, in which hardly a week passes without an article or at least an item about dressing flies to imitate some fly, caterpillar, moth, or other thing on which trout feed, and by an imitation of which they may be deceived into taking the hook that is concealed therein. I mention this to show that I have studied the subject in the books and on the streams, and I hereby avow my opinion that fidelity to nature in trout flies is a humbug.

I know scores of anglers who use all sorts of nondescript flies, but know of none who has had the courage to assail this antiquated, yet popular, belief. This is the rankest kind of fly-casting heresy, and will be so received in England, where they are more conservative, and have more reverence for traditions than we have; but it may not pass unchallenged on this side of the water. But as I have already called myself a Philistine, they are spared the trouble.

For years anglers have shed tears in asking: "What does the salmon take the fly for?" And it has not been satisfactorily answered. A salmon fly, let it be a Jock Scot, silver doctor or other well-known killer, does not resemble any insect that ever inhabited the earth, and as the adult salmon when ascending rivers to spawn takes no other nutrition than Jock Scots, doctors, silver doctors, mandarins and the like, all of which have a barbed steel sting in their tails, the question is a puzzle at which we all may guess. Most of the salmon flies are as gaudy as flies can be made, but they are creations of the fly-tier's fancy; but salmon take them, and there our knowledge ends.

The long and lengthening list of trout flies contains more nondescripts than alleged imitations, and I use the word "alleged" advisedly, for when I see a beautifully illustrated page of natural flies and their imitations I wonder that a trout could think them genuine. As I write I have before me the third edition of "The Practical Fly-Fisher," by the late John Jackson, London, 1880. The lithograph plates are fine, but I will only criticize the first plate. Here are four natural flies and their alleged imitations. Three of them may pass, but No. 3 illustrates what I have said: The natural insect has the shape of a bedbug; has four wings; the hinder pair are drab while the others are scarlet. The imitation looks like a brown hackle, all hairs. If the student will turn to Plate VII. and note the pictures of Insects Nos. 35 and 33, and their "imitations" and can then believe that a trout can see any difference between the imitations, then he has the gift of imagination.

Size, color and form attract trout in the order named. Trout in some streams and lakes will only take large flies, but these waters are usually remote, and the fish have not had the caution bred into them that trout in waters which have been fished in for years have got. Men may argue about reason and instinct, but it is a fact that a green backwoods trout will rise to anything that is offered, just as the Sheriff of Wayback came to New York to buy green goods and gold bricks; but an old trout often pricked, learns caution, and transmits that quality to its progeny; the heedless young trout takes the first lure, and has no progeny to transmit its rashness to. If this statement needs proof let us look at ducks, deer and other animals which once merely kept out of reach of the man who had the bow and arrow, and see how their progeny have increased the distance as man has lengthened his reach, first with flintlock rifles, good for 100 yds, to their caution to-day. Their is no instinct in it; it is reason, pure and simple. The wounded that survived learned a lesson and transmitted it to their posterity.

If we admit this, why not admit it in the case of the trout? We might as well do it, because the evidence is all on our side. In the State of New York there is the great Caledonia Creek; it would be a "river" in some parts of the world; it has been fished many generations and a man might cast several days over thousands of trout and not get a rise. Then comes a day when they will rise for natural flies by the thousand, but a strange angler who uses as large a fly as he takes trout in the Adirondacks with would have the torment of Tantalus about him, trout rising every where but at his flies.

A glance at a list of trout flies will show that most of them are nondescripts, such as red ibis, Ferguson, Parmachenee Belle, Montreal, queen of the water, grizzly king, Abbey, jungle cock, heaver-king, king of the water, Governor Alvord, St. Patrick, Professor, Rangeley, Henshall, black prince, General Hooker, and a hundred more. Many of these are favorites of long standing and great reputation as killers. Against this we have but few so-called imitations of the natural fly, such as white miller, green and gray drakes, stone fly, cow-durg, black gnat, sand fly, alder fly, May fly, black and red ant, and a few others.

All flies can be made on different sized hooks, and as a rule you may use a larger fly where the fly is not much used, and they seem to attract green trout better than small ones. Some twenty-five years ago I fished some mill-ponds back of Peterboro, Ont., and they preferred flies tied on No. 4 Sproat hook to the smaller ones, while on Long Island I never used a larger hook than an 8 Sproat, and often a No. 10. Therefore no special directions can be given as to the size of the hook the fly is tied on.

The dealer has a bewildering display of flies to offer, because he has occasional demands for some of them, and the names are on them, or even he would be in doubt as to their "pedigree." I freely confess that of the vast numbers of trout flies "I know them by sight," but cannot name more than twenty; and that is enough to be intimate with, although one may have a nodding acquaintances with many of the herd.

From eight to twelve kinds of flies are enough for most waters, but the angler will need half a dozen of each kind if he is out for a week's trouting, for flies have a way of eloping with a handsome trout, of preferring to remain imbedded in a sunken log, or of choosing a rest in some tree top, and if the trout are choosing to feast on that kind of fly at that time, and you have no duplicate, why there you are!

Ignoring the names, the angler, having settled on the size, will do well to select an assortment of colors. Suppose he decides on eight varieties; then he wants a white-miller for dusk, a royal coachman or some fly with both white and dark for early dawn and late afternoon, with browns, grays, reds, yellows, and a couple of combinations of these colors. If he takes a dozen varieties he can select four more variations, for flies are made in kaleidoscope variety. Flies are made in such great variety for the same purpose that Peter Pindar's razors were.

If, however, the trout angler be a worm-fisher, as many unconverted good men are, then I will say unto him: Use the slim, long-shanked hook known as the New York trout hook; or, if that is not obtainable, the long-shanked Kirby will do; but for the worm the ordinary shank of most hooks is too short.

As this article has been taken up by talk about tackle, I will reel up and consider how it is to be used for trout, both with fly and worm; but what I have said about flies may bring a hornet's nest about my ears from those who are shocked at my disregard for tradition when it does not accord with experience; but what can they expect from a Philistine, if that is the proper term for a man who does his own thinking?—Fred Mather in Forest and Stream.

Advices from Santa Cruz, of the 12 inst, state that on account of the wind in the morning a large number of salmon fishers were compelled to come in early. They all made catches, although they were not large ones.

Frank Maskey caught two very fine fish a week ago. Wednesday was one of the best days this year, about a hundred salmon were caught. Every boat was lucky, many coming in with six, seven and eight fish. The average weight of the salmon was about twelve pounds.

The Stockton Independent of May 13th has the following: "Freeman Black, Gus Ruhl and Frank Goodell made a trip down the river last evening on a fishing expedition. They returned about 11 o'clock with twenty four shad and report some great sport. Shad are running in the stream in large numbers, and taking them is one of the most enjoyable branches of sport at this season of the year."

A steel head measuring twenty nine inches was caught in the upper Carmel ten days ago by J. B. Sheehy. It was the largest trout caught in that section this season and only lacked three inches from being the largest ever caught in the Carmel.

A display of half a dozen fine cutthroat trout, from the Klamath river, in the window of E. T. Allen Co's attracted a great deal attention last Monday. The fish were beautiful to look at, but

F. W. S. Van Slyke while prospecting about the islands of the San Mateo bay shore last Saturday, made a large catch of very fine perch. He used a light rod and tackle.

Salt water anglers have recently had good sport on the old San Quentin wharf, catching flounders and soles. The fish are plentiful and in fine condition.

Dr. Cluness and A. S. Carman returned from Bartlett's last Saturday with a fine catch of beautiful trout. The fish in their baskets weighed 25 lbs.

Al Wilson caught a number of fine striped bass of good weight in Russian river, near Duncans, during the week.

Red Rock and the Two Brothers afford the best rock-fish fishing spots in the bay at present.

John Bemis' latest fly, the "Dawey" has been in evidence among the anglers this week.

Paper Mill was higher after the rain last week, than at any time during the winter.

At Point Reyes fishing in the tide water has not been good for a week past.

The run of salmon in the Sacramento has been very light so far.

Blus Rocks in the Rain.

Despite the inclement weather last Sunday, the blue-rock shoot of the Lincoln Gun Club at Alameda Junction was fairly well attended. The heavy rain which poured down continuously all day and the high wind which at times blew almost a gale, interfered with the making of high scores. In the club race at twenty-five targets, Edgar Forster was high man with a score of twenty-two breaks. Frazzen, Wehh and Bekeart tied on twenty-one for second place. Eugene Forster, Flickinger and Price tied for third place with twenty each. The scores were as follows:

Table listing scores for Edgar Forster, Frazzen, Flickinger, Eugene Forster, W. J. Golcher, Haight, Klevesahl, Bekeart, Shaw, Javette Sr., Shackleton, Lewis, Mudd, Bekeart, Golcher, and others.

In the second event, which was a pool at twenty birds, $1.00 entrance, Wehh won first money with nineteen, Klevesahl second with seventeen, and Haight and Edgar Forster tied with sixteen for third place. Following are the scores:

Table listing scores for Wehh, Klevesahl, Edg. Forster, Frazzen, W. J. Golcher, Flickinger, Eug. Forster, Shaw, Karney, "Slade", Shackleton, Javette Sr., Lake, and Griffith.

In a fifteen target race, $1.00 entrance, O. Fendner and Klevesahl divided first money on straight scores. F. Fendner and Wehh split second money on a string of thirteen, and Lake, Haight and Flickinger put a carving-knife through third money on a triple tie, the scores were:

The "couple shoot" or coursing event started with sixteen entries et ten birds per man, the shooters were drawn in pairs, the loser in each case dropping out, leaving the winners to shoot against each other until the final round was reached. In the final Frazzen and Wehh were pitted against each other, Frazzen won on a straight score. In this race winning moneys commence in the second round, the amount increasing down to the final, the winner of which, of course, receives the largest share of the pool, the scores in detail were:

Dixon Trap Shoot.

The second regular blue-rock shoot of the Rising Sun Gun Club shows an increasing average in good scores and also a better attendance of members at the traps, the boys seem to be getting into form rapidly. In three races the scores were as follows:

Los Angeles Gun Club.

The live-bird shoot of the Los Angeles Gun Club was held at West Leko Perk, last Sunday, May 15th. Bruner successfully defended the live-bird championship medal in a hundred-bird race, scoring 87 against Van Valkenberg's 78. It was a very disagreeable afternoon to shoot, owing to a heavy, cold wind blowing across the traps, making extra hard right-quartered birds. Both contestants made some extraordinary stops that pleased the spectators. The birds were strong flyers, and with the assistance of the wind and a 32 yard boundary (which was short from the center trap) made really difficult shooting and cut down the scores materially. The scores in detail were as follows:

In a ten-bird race, $5 entry, with six men in the pool the scores were as follows:

Pelican Gun Club.

The stormy weather last Sunday prevented the usual good attendance at the Pelican Gun Club's live-bird shoot, only seven members showing up.

But one match was shot—the regular club medal event—which was won by Fred Gotobed by a score of 18 out of 20, Joe Hill was the official scorer, and his figures show these results:

Trap Shots

To-morrow, the local event of principal importance will be the Olympic Gun Club shoot at the Ingleside grounds. The regular monthly programme has been made, an open-to-all tournament as an inducement to shooters who desire to practice on the grounds for the coming State tournament next week. The club race will take place in the morning, and non members will be allowed to participate. A side pool will be made, entrance $1 and birds extra. Four events are arranged for the open shoot in the afternoon. Two matches will be at fifteen-birds each and two at twenty each. The entrance in fifteen-bird events will be $1, and in twenty-bird races $1 25. In each of the twenty-bird races the club will add $10 to the purse. Such other matches will be arranged as time will permit.

The Alert Gun Club members will practice on their grounds at Birds Point.

The live bird shoot of the South Eod Gun Club will take place to-morrow, the rain last Sunday causing the postponement of this shoot. The attendances promises to be good, and a number of rattling races will be shot out.

The challenge of the Empire Gun Club has been accepted (as was stated in the daily press a week ago) by the Olympic Gun Club. The Empires have not yet received any communication in relation to the matter through the usual or proper channels. A great deal of surprise has been manifested by the Empire members as to the reason for a press announcement only. The inadvertence however, can readily be explained probably.

The interest in the State tournaments grows stronger as the time approaches for the two great events, the indications for a large entry of trap shooters are good. The programmes for both the blue rock tournaments and the live-bird shoots have been issued for a week. In both events the money inducements are liberal. Ample arrangements will be made tending to the comfort and convenience of visiting shooters.

The annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the California Inanimate Target Association will be held at the Occidental Hotel Headquarters, Sunday May 29th, at 3:30 P. M. Officers will be elected for the coming year, and a decision reached as to the time and place of holding the next tournament.

As an indication of the increasing popularity of the L. C. Smith gun it is safe to say that these guns will be strongly in evidence at the coming tournaments. The No. 2 Crown steel barrels and No. 3 Nitro steel barrels seem to have become great favorites, judging from the orders already given for them. A. M. Shiede, of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, will soon receive the new Smith gun which he ordered recently.

Destruction of Song Birds.

The following communication recently received by a gentleman in this city speaks volumes and is a pertinent commentary on the efficiency (?) of State end county game supervision. The nefarious practices noted ere within the cognizance of the State law. The depletion of the Marin and Sonoma county trout streams, with dynamite, by the same breed of Mediterranean scum is only another illustration of what is continually done in the way of persistent depletion and robbery of field, forest and stream by a set of ignorant vandals who respect neither God, man nor law. In certain parts of Europe, Italy in particular, the appearance of song birds is looked upon as an omen of bad luck; so completely have the human locusts cleaned out the feathered tribes, that for several generations past the average peasant has only known what a bird is by tradition. Even the flight of migratory birds has been taken advantage of, nets being erected and held up in the air on poles, etc., to the height of 40 feet across known flight grounds. In Marin county a favorite night indulgence of these small bird murderers is the dragging of a net over the fields and meadows for larks and other birds who nest in the open fields. Some of our eastern states have passed stringent laws for the protection of birds. New Jersey has a set of vigorous laws that are observed. It would be a very easy matter to have the proper legislation enacted next session of our legislature, this would be better than none at all. There would then be a chance of arrest and prosecution now and then, even in a desultory manner, which might eventually lead to some good results.

Last Sunday, I took a spin into the country on my wheel and witnessed a sight I never expected to see outside of Europe. I was following along on a levee when I came upon two Italians who had a net of fine mesh, about fifty feet long, stretched along a patch of brush. This brush extends along the levee for miles and is inhabited by thousands of small birds, especially the Intermediate White-crowned Sparrow and Heerman's Song Sparrow. When I saw this net I supposed it was used for catching fish and that the Italians were simply repairing it. As I was tired I dismounted and sat down to watch the men fix the net and was very much surprised to see them begin to heat the brush with sticks. They began about one hundred yards from the net and came toward their snare, all the while keeping up their whipping of the brush. As soon as I saw this I thought they were snaring birds, and sure enough when they had finished their drive they had captured about fifty birds, which was a very small number as I afterwards found out. When they had removed the birds I examined them and found about twenty Intermediate Sparrows, fifteen Heerman's Song Sparrows, five Spurred Towhees, five Golden-crowned Sparrows and several California Towhees. These happened to be all the varieties in this brush, for had there been more, they would have captured them, as not one bird escaped. In that one afternoon they captured 300 birds. I began to question these Italians and found that they had been practicing this same thing for some time and had captured as high as 2,000 birds in one day. It makes no difference what kind of a bird they drive into their snare, and I think it is kept up it will prove disastrous to some of our songsters. These Italians go out nearly every Sunday, and probably there are more practicing the same thing. I have heard of parties in San Francisco shooting sparrows for the markets but never had any idea that they were capturing birds in such large numbers and so near home. If you have heard of or seen anything of this kind in your vicinity, kindly let me know."

The San Francisco Bench Show.

The second annual bench show of the San Francisco Kennel Club opened at the Mechanics Pavilion last Wednesday morning in a most auspicious manner. The number of entries this year was 554.

The arrangements of the benching, and the many numerous details of the show under the direction of Superintendent Oldham were nearly perfect. The Committee work has been harmonious and satisfactory. The attendance was very good on the part of the public at large, and at times during the evenings of the show the exhibit took on the phase of a society function.

The judging was commenced on Wednesday at 2 P. M. Mr. Geo. Bell judging all classes, excepting the collies, who were judged by Mr. J. W. Burrell. The judging has been satisfactory in most respects, excepting, of course, the usual differences of opinion which seem to be an integral part of a bench show. The judging was concluded last evening with the awards of the special prizes which were valuable and numerous.

The exhibit of dogs was a good one; the general average being of a fine standard, excepting in a few of the classes.

The show will be further commented upon next week. The awards not having been completed in time for our going to press, prevented a full list of results being given this week. The following is a partial list of awards:

Union Coursing Park Notes.

The attendance at this popular park last Saturday and Sunday was up to the usual average. The coursing on Sunday was a fine exhibition of the sport, the hares being a superior lot.

The open stake races were run to the finals and there left unfinished, for both first and second prizes went to E. V. Sullivan, the owner of False Flatterer and Mira Monte. The Puppy stake was won by Bad Shot.

On the run-off of the final preconcerted exhibition of ruffianism was shown when the judge's decision was announced. An attempt to do violence to Mr. Bull was frustrated by the port attendants. The decision was satisfactory to all coursing men present, as it was warranted by the rules of the game.

Seventy-two dogs were entered last Wednesday evening for the coursing meeting which will be held at the Union Coursing Park Association grounds to-day and to-morrow. Among the entries are many crack flyers. The total amount of cash prizes for the stake is $310, including the regular and special prizes. The result of the drawing was as follows:

- Open Stake—Orient Kennel's Uncle Sam vs M Nealon's Van Knop; L A Hansen's Wheel of Fortune vs W S Glasson's Terrons; M Michalek's Fireball vs Derby Kennel's Fleeting Fancy; Curtis & Son's Vanity Fair vs R C Scott's Mystery; J McCormick's Black Prince vs McGarry & Caveny's Pigeon Toe; J Kennedy's Lillie Wheeler vs Cropin & McDonald's Dottie Dimple; J J Edmond's Forget vs E J Brennan's Empire; Gibson & Sader's Mollie Bawn vs J McKnell's Sportsman; C Strahl's Moonlight Chippie vs J Connell's Senoritis; H Brandon's Moore's Prescription vs R B Kay's Crosspatch; J Goldman's Sarcastic vs J H Harrison's Hettie M; D Hooper's Koolawn vs E V Sullivan's Electric; S E Portal's Lanrelwood vs Rvan & Anderson's Killboy; S E Portal's At Last vs Pasha Kennel's Metallic; Shaler and Dempsey's Captain Jack vs Brown & Luther's Van Nide; Larkey & Rock's Hercules vs J McNella's Master Glenkirki; A Johnson's Lissack vs Al Austin's Glenstone; J Littish's Crusada vs John Kerrigan's St Lawrence; S E Portal's Gallagher vs M Michalek's Sir Walter; Derby Kennel's Little Dorritt vs E J Heaney's Barkaway J F Dodgers' Little Dottie vs Derby Kennel's Wildflower; P Gorman's Kingstone vs Pasha Kennel's Ray Alfonso; F Sullivan's Hicks vs Orient Kennel's Promise Me; J Ferrigo's Belle Seward vs T M Rodgers' Olga; J F Rodger's Presito Girl vs Curtis & Sons Maud S; E Jones' Gsflight vs Pierce & Sullivan's Santa Belle; J Connell's Log Roy vs T Butler's Susie; J J Edmond's Morning Glory vs J M Littish's Rosewood; Curtis & Son's McKinley vs T Boyle's Mission Boy; Orient Kennel's Fair Rosalind vs T Hayes' Chiquita; R B Kay's Eclipse vs J McCormick's White Lily; E V Sullivan's Skyball vs J J Edmond's Move On; Pasha Kennel's Gilt Edge vs J Lennan's Little Doubt; H O'Donnell's Elma G vs C F Ingersoll's Gleawood; E V Sullivan's Jessie Moore vs Gibson's & Moore's Monitor; R B Kay's Diana vs J Segerson's White Chief.

R. L. Taylor, who has acted in the capacity of s'ipper since the inauguration of coursing at Union Park, resigned his position on Monday last and the managers of the park have wisely selected the veteran and champion clipper of the plains, genial Jim Wren, to fill this important position.

COURSING.

May 21-22—Union Coursing Park. Regular meetings every Saturday Sunday and holidays. Drawings every Wednesday evening 909 Market street.

A noted collie, formerly owned by Barney Barnato and imported by him from England at a high price, is now on his way from Capetown, South Africa, to this city. This fine collie has been purchased by Thos. H. Browne, the President of the St. Bernard Club of California. His pedigree and the price paid for him has not yet been given out; he is claimed, however, to be a high class dog in every respect; his record as a stud dog has been excellent; his bench end field qualities are said to be of a high standard.

Exports of Horses 1897.

The following article, an editorial in the Spirit of the Times May 8th, shows that the European demand for horses bred in the United States is large now, likely to increase into such proportions as will bring the business of horse breeding into its old-time standing.

As is stated in the article: "The value for American bred horses for general utility purposes is recognized by all persons and breeders will do well to cater to this demand."

Great Britain being by far the largest purchaser it is well to bear in mind that a very small proportion of the 19,350 that were shipped there were fast trotters. "Useful horses," those which are likely to perform well in any of the many branches of business in which horses are used, from the "cob" to the "machiner" will meet their requirements. Well-formed horses, of good solid colors, bone and tendons in proportion to their size, good feet, etc. "Blocky horses" that is horses of compact shape, muscular and short-legged, or rather, if there is any deviation from what would be considered the proper length of limbs it must be on the short side.

Absolute soundness is a sine qua non, and those who buy for the markets of Great Britain are, in the main, expert judges. If even the hocks are wide, if the set is wrong, or there is a tendency to roundness or puffiness of the joint, the animal with these defects would be rejected.

Farmers on this side of the continent can breed and rear horses at less expense than Eastern breeders, and, by selecting the very best for shipment, that will, in a measure, overcome the expense of the "long haul" to Chicago. Then there is a prospect that railway freights will be greatly reduced, there being an absolute assurance of competitive roads in the "near future." Carriage, coach horses, matched pairs that are too small for the carriage, but nicely matched and that can "step some" are sure hereafter to command prices that will well repay the cost of transportation from the Pacific, and when farmers pay proper attention to the selection of sires and dams, keeping in mind that size, color and shape of the progeny should, as far as can be secured, be uniform, whatever the aim may be, there will be more than a fair chance for making the business remunerative.

The demand for American bred horses for the English market is larger to-day than ever before, and the rapid rate at which the demand has increased in the past seven years is surprising. The United States custom records show that in 1890 England was put down as the destination of 220 horses, and the value placed at $91,785. In the following year England imported 399 horses, their declared value being $141,693. The trade steadily increased in the two years following, as in 1893 the English total was $204,035, or about two-sevenths of the whole value of the horse exportations of that year. In 1894, which was a low price year, following the panic of 1893, the horse trade showed decided growth, and the English figures for that year were more than double those of 1893. The continental trade also showed an improvement, and the story of the next three years is best told by the following figures:

|---------------|-------|-------|--------|
| Great Britain | 1,355 | 5,834 | 12,062 |
| Germany | 12 | 1,314 | 3,636 |
| Belgium | 77 | 900 | 1,184 |
| France | | 511 | 337 |
| Italy | 2 | | 4 |

VALUE OF EXPORTATIONS.

| | 1894 | 1895 | 1896 |
|---------------|-----------|-----------|-------------|
| Great Britain | $307,395 | $952,531 | $1,776,600 |
| Germany | 35,500 | 260,452 | 614,362 |
| Belgium | 4,200 | 25,960 | 174,161 |
| France | | 60,875 | 58,600 |
| Italy | | 3,000 | 15,000 |

In 1897 England received from American ports no less than 19,350 horses of the declared value of over half a million sterling. If the rate of increase of the past few years is maintained the total for the present year will be about 26,000 horses. This does not include horses shipped from Canada, though many alleged Canadian horses are bred in the United States.

The value for American bred horses for general utility purposes is recognized by all persons, and breeders will do well to cater to this demand.

Not only has the English trade maintained a steady growth, but the Continental trade, with the exception of France, has been equally good.

The following is a summary from the official statistics of the custom service of the past year, showing the growth of the trade.

CATTLE.

Cattle Breeding in California.

SEVENTH PAPER.

The Mission San Francisco de los Dolores was founded October 9, 1776, Santa Clara January 18, 1777, San Jose June 22, 1797. San Diego, the oldest of the missions, was founded 1769, the last Sonoma, April 25, 1820. Twenty-one in all, the most northern the last named, San Diego the Southern point, but all within six degrees of latitude, none of them however, far from the coast line of the ocean, which gives a similarity of temperature and all favorable for the breeding of cattle, the only drawback being occasional dry seasons. In the early days of breeding the range was practically boundless, and nearly the whole dependence on natural forage little provision otherwise, if any, for cattle, sheep and "wild horses" and at the best a small stock of hay and grain for the most favored animals. The accumulation of stock from the date of the founding of the first Mission to 1825, fifty-six years, so that under the conditions which prevailed, it is a marvellous exhibition of the adaptability of the country for stock breeding. When it was decided to establish Missions in upper California, two expeditions were organized. One by sea to carry all the heavy materials and supplies, the land division to drive the flocks and herds. The information as to the numbers brought cannot be obtained, but from the following quotation it is not likely that many horses, cattle and sheep were brought.

"The land expedition was formed into two divisions Don Gaspar de Portalo, who had been appointed Military Governor of the new territory by Don Jose de Galvaez, the special agent of the King of Spain, appointed Captain Rivera y Moncado to take charge of the second. Rivera and his party, consisting of Father Crespo, twenty-five soldiers, six muleteers, and a party of Indians from Lower California, started from Villacuta on the 24th of March 1768, and arrived at San Diego on the 15th of May. This was the first white settlement in Upper California."

Busy in establishing missions, five being founded in the first three years it is not likely that the breeding department received much attention until the others were well under way and whatever the number of the importations might be the following compiled from the report made by the Rev'd Walter Colton, Chaplain of the U. S. ship Congress, the first protestant Clergyman that resided at California, and the first Alcalde of Monterey after that port had been taken by Commodore Sloat, will show the enormous increase of stock in fifty years after the first settlement of the country. The report furnishes the basis for the following tabulation, that giving a better opportunity to understand the vast stockbreeding business carried on by the Mission Fathers than the long accounts from which the information was obtained:

A—Broken to saddle. B—Broken horses. C—Horses and mares. D—More horses and mares than any other miscell. E—Mares and colts.

As additional evidence of the magnitude of the business, and also corroborative of the correctness of the count, Santa Clara Mission branded, in the year 1823, 22,400 calves, as the increase of that year.

In the report of the San Francisco Mission are included "84 stud of choice breeds," stud, in all probability, meaning stallions, the omission of the final s in stud a typographical error.

To show the riches of the missions the report states "one of the Fathers of this Mission (San Luis Obispo) took $100,000 when he left for Spain in 1828. "All the other Missions were equally rich in live stock" is the language used, and after making due allowance for those established after the close of the eighteenth century; Santa Inez, 1804, San Rafael 1817, and San Francisco de Solano de Sonoma 1827, the aggregate of the cattle in the twenty-one missions must have been in the neighborhood of 1,200,000. In a work published in San Francisco, "The Natural Wealth of California," 1868, says: "The present number of cattle in California is about six hundred thousand."

Quite a contrast when forty odd years before nine of the Missions had 610,550.

One of the most striking features of the table, however, are the vast numbers of working oxen. Two thousand five hundred and eight yokes on the nine big farms and that in a country where so little attention was paid to agriculture. The 11,740 "tame horses" and the 826 mules were saddle animals, and for draft purposes oxen held supreme sway. An argument in favor of doing a share of the work of the farm now with cattle as one of the like conditions still prevails. Comparative cheapness of the motive power. As the laborers were mostly Indians, the simple yoke in favor of the more complex harness, ease of management, less liability to accident suited their capacity the best.

The Missions covered a great many acres of the best part of California, giving practically the whole of the State, from the Golden Gate to San Diego, for a pasture field. This immense area was nearly all covered with the most nutritious grasses furnishing almost constant pasturage for nearly the whole year. The only period when the feed was poor was after the commencement of the rainy season, the rains spoiling the dry forage and the new was not far enough advanced to give sustenance. Still there was a reserve in the fat accumulated before the rains came, and then there was a choice of location from plains to hills, and though cattle would lose flesh it would not be long till the sunshine and warmth of that genial climate brought the herbage so far forward that it was sufficient to restore a part of the lost condition. Never grasses, indigenous to a country, so well adapted to keep herbivorous animals the year round on what nature supplied. Soon after the first rain fall Alfilerilla (fillaree) and wild oats in profusion. Burr-clover starting about the same time. Unless forced by a scarcity of wild-oats or fillaree cattle will not eat the green clover, but when fully ripened and strewn over the surface it is eaten with avidity, and when to a person unacquainted with the country its looks like bare ground it is covered with the small burrs and these contain minute seeds, rich in oil, furnishing so much nourishment that cattle will keep rolling fat when the supply is adequate.

Alfilerilla, to a stranger, looks like a weed akin to wild geraniums. Flattened to the ground, after it has got some of its growth, one would not expect such a mass of herbage as is disclosed when mised, and it, too, has seeds which are relished and highly nutritious.

But wild oats are, above all others, the dominating native grass of California. In the days of the Mission the whole country was an immense oat field in appearance, so strongly resembling the cultivated varieties that however close an observer an Eastern agriculturalist might be, from a little distance he would be unable to see any difference. Growing so high on the mesas that cattle would be hidden among the stalks, and even on the hills a luxuriant growth. When in "the milk" it has fattening properties almost beyond belief. Oxen which had been worn out with a long journey, after a few weeks run would trouble their owners to recognize them. When the seed was ripened in place of falling to the ground, as the cultivated varieties do, they are held firmly in the enclosing husk, and the straw so stiff as to keep upright until the rains come. Hay mow and granaries, forage and grain together, and these in fields measured by hundreds of square leagues. All these natural advantages made it possible for the padres to breed and rear these immense herds. The conditions which now govern are so different that a parallel cannot be drawn.

The big cattle and horse-breeding ranches of California of the present time are insignificant when acres and numbers of animals are the test, though to make amends there is about as great a difference in the characters of the stock. The success, however, of the Mission Fathers prove the adaptability of California for stock-raising, and so in that way be serviceable.

Notes.

Two cars of cattle were shipped from Petaluma to the Western Meat Co. on Monday last.

The Lakeview, Org. Examiner says: E. B. Edson, the Gazelle cattle buyer, has purchased 1600 head of Southern California cattle, 500 of which are for Mike Hartery of Tule Lake valley. Mr. Hartery will have them shipped to Montague and driven across the mountains to Klamath hunch grass. Here they will recuperate from the effects of the California drouth.

Kansas commission dealers are advertising in the San Francisco dailies to lay down oat hay in any large city in California for $17 to $20 per ton.

The recent rain fall has caused dealers to cut the price of hay both in this city and the interior. The best wheat hay is being retailed at $22, while inferior grades bring less money—oat $20 and alfalfa $16 to $17. There is some new hay in the market, but as yet it does nothing more than act as a governor of prices.

Miller & Lux sent in twenty-two carloads of cattle from their Kern county ranch to the tule pasture on the 16th inst.

Considerable feed for stock is being shipped from Humboldt county to the southern part of the State. The outlook throughout that State is reported as being very promising and pasture is fully up to the ranchers' expectations.

Thomas Groves, of Gonzales, Cal., has shipped over one hundred head of cattle to his mountain ranch in Monterey County during the past week.

Twenty-five carloads of cattle were brought into Stockton on the 16th inst, and transferred upon a barge where they were towed to Bouldin Island, where they will pasture this summer.

Alfalfa hay has been selling this week at Oroville, for $7 per ton in the field with farmers very reluctant to dispose of their crops at this figure.

Our correspondent from Honcut, Cal., writes: The Prewett cattle, 700 head, recently unloaded from the cars here to be driven to Merrimac are reported to be badly scattered. I am informed that only about one-half of the band reached the destination.

The sale of Mavericks held at Helena, Mont., last week, developed some brisk bidding, and a sale was ultimately made to Thomas A. Cummings, at $19.25 per head. They sold last year at $17 per head, and the price of this season is, with one exception, the highest on record. The mavericks consist of unbranded yearlings and upwards.

In a competitive show of beef breeds in England, a Shorthorn, a Devon, a Red Poll, a Hereford and an Aberdeen-Angus heifer were pitted against one another. The weight of each had been carefully registered from time to time. The final weighing test showed that the Red Poll had made a larger daily gain than any of the rest except the Shorthorn. In proportion to age and time of feeding the Red Poll also came out the heaviest of any except the Shorthorn.

Our Montana correspondent writes: It is reported that there will be a falling off of 40 per cent on beef shipments from Montana this season compared with that of last year. Southern stock growers are making a great mistake in not placing 100,000 head of cattle on Montana ranges this season. There is plenty room on our ranges in Custer county for 200,000 head more cattle. Things are not so bad as they were a few years ago, when we had 9,000,000 more cattle than we have now and an Irish friend of mine wrote me that, "Cattle are gone to the devil and the Chicago market has gone to h— and I'll be there to-morrow."

It is a very common thing to come across dairy farmers, who commencing with a herd of native cows, have used first a Jersey sire, then a Short-horn, or Holstein, or Guernsey, or some other of the well known breeds. They do this under the mistaken notion that they are going to get a more profitable cow thereby, says Hoards dairyman. They are trying to get a little more butter through a Jersey, a little better flow of milk through the Holstein, a little more beef through the Short-horn, and a little more color in the milk through the Guernsey. All very nice in theory, but it is a theory that don't work. Almost invariably the herd goes down in dairy capacity and gains nothing for beef. It is "general purpose" with a vengeance. Much better and more profitable cows are produced where the breeding is kept "in line." If one starts with any of the four dairy breeds, Jersey, Guernsey, Ayrshire, or Holstein, he had better stay right by it, and under no circumstances cross in any way with the beef breeds. If the latter is done he will lose a good deal more in dairy capacity than he will gain in meat.

Feed on the tule lands was never better at this season of the year than at present, the recent flood tides having come in the right time to do a vast amount of good. Solano county seems to be the Mecca for stockmen, many thousands of cattle having been shipped here from other counties to be pastured during the remainder of the year. Local buyers have also purchased much outside stock and will do well.

Henry Miller was in Stockton during the latter part of the week superintending the shipment of a large band of cattle which passed through town on their way to the tule pastures on the river. Mr. McBride was in charge.

DAIRYING.

The Average Cow

"The average income from dairy cows in localities where the milk is sold to condensing factories is said to be about $33 a year. It sometimes runs as high as $75 to a cow, and sometimes as low as $25, but the general average is estimated to be about $33, says Hood's Dairy-man."

If two things were better known by the farmers who keep these cows, there would be more of the $75 type and less of the low average $33 cows. These two things are:

First—That the way to raise the capacity of a herd of cows is to breed up. Too many dairymen think it is all in the feed. They do not realize that one might as well try to fatten a fanning mill by running oats through it as to get a profit from certain cows by costly feed.

Second—That the money a man has left after a year's work with a cow depends not upon her gross product, but rather on her net profit; for instance, we know of instances where one man received from a neighboring creamery not quite 100 per cent. more in gross returns per cow than another patron, but his profits per cow were six hundred per cent. more. What a change it would make in the fortunes of thousands of these cow keepers if they could be persuaded to look at things as they are and try to make dairymen of themselves. By their actions, at least, they proclaim that they think that the more a man spends for heefy cows and costly food and the less he spends for sound dairy knowledge the more money he will make.

The Raising of Calves.

Selection of Calves—In any case the calves from the best milking cows only should be selected for rearing. The herd bull should have a pedigree linking him to a family distinguished for milking qualities.

His points should indicate the possession of powers that do credit to his pedigree. If a calf with a big body at one, two, three or six months old be what is wanted, it had better be allowed to suck its dam. But if a calf having a large profit on its rearing at two years old and a large profit on its milking, or fattening, be the object sought for, then it should be reared another way. Where a calf is allowed to suck the cow, even for a few days, the cow is in a less contented condition to yield her milk to the hand for some weeks. The restlessness thus caused will tend to the lessening of the milk yield in most cases. The task of teaching the calf to drink is doubly difficult after it has acquired the habit of getting rations in the natural way. Invariably where a calf has been permitted to run with its mother for ten days, it will be found to go back, or at least fail to gain in condition for a fortnight or more, when a change is made to hand feeding. The checking of its growth and thrift at that early stage in its development entails more loss of possible profit in after years than a partial starvation when eighteen months old. The organs of digestion, whose functions it is to get for the animal all possible good out of its food, for maintenance, growth, beef, milk or work can never be injured with impunity. The treatment from the day of birth should be to preserve the assimilating power.

The First Milking—Milk from the first six milkings of the dam should be fed to her calf three times a day. The first milking is of medicinal as well as food value to the young calf. For two weeks the calf will not need, nor take, much besides the two or three quarts of milk of each feed. The milk should be fed as near the blood temperature, 98 degrees Fahrenheit, as practicable. After the lapse of a fortnight a gradual change can be best effected by putting skim milk, in gradually increasing quantity, with the whole milk till it is wholly substituted for it.

Sweet Milk—The skim milk should always be fed sweet. The sourness of milk is evidence that some of the feeding value of its sugar of milk (of which it contains, say 4½ per cent) has been lost by the change into lactic acid. Besides the sourness renders the food unsuited to the stomach of a yet tender calf. Sour feed favors growth in hut two ways. The calf so fed will develop marvelous girth extension. "Pot bellied" is hardly sufficiently expressive of the enlargement from that cause. Then the growth of hair is effectually and speedily promoted. It becomes so strong in "stalk" that it stands out in daily protestations against that kind of food.

Warm Milk—The skim milk should be fed warm; hood beat is the best. Where no better convenience exists for the heating of the milk, hot water may be added with advantage. A feed of ice-cold milk, such as comes from the deep setting cans will leave the calf uncomfortable. That condition is but the evidence that indigestion exists and may easily be made partially permanent by a continuation of such injurious treatment. The power and practice of digesting and appropriating all that is possible out of its feed should be encouraged into a fixed habit, by giving the young animal only easily digested food in the best condition of preparation.

Regularity—Attention to strict regularity in the line of feeding and the quantity of milk given, is essential to health and safety as well as to profitable increase of weight. These points about the feeding of skim milk will apply to young pigs as well as calves. A gutty, thriftless hog is the necessary product of a careless and wasteful mode of feeding even excellent skim milk.

The Ration—To make up for the butter taken out of the milk in the shape of cream, some supplementary feed should be given with the skim milk. Linseed, oil-cake, cotton-seed meal, bran, oats and peas are all good. Bran is frequently mixed with chopped oats and peas, and fed raw in the milk. That practice is most objectionable, and frequently results in the loss of the full value of the grain fed, besides inflicting injury upon the calf by scouring. The better plan is to put the bran, and chopped oats and peas, with ground linseed in a dry state into a box conveniently placed within the reach of the calf. Between the ages of one and three weeks most calves will begin to eat the mixture. The chewing necessary to comfortable swallowing fits the food for proper digestion and prevents all risk of scouring from that cause. The chewing also favors the free flow in the mouth of a great deal of saliva needed to thoroughly digest the milk gulped down so hurriedly from the feeding pail. Linseed, oil cake or cotton-seed meal may be hoiled or well scalded and mixed in a syrupy state with the milk. The composition of additional feed might be about equal parts by bulk of bran, oats and peas.

No fixed quantity per head for feeding need be mentioned. It has been found desirable to allow the calves to take as much as they care to eat. Handsful of the best clover hay (and all hay for fodder should be cut on the green side) may be offered, and most calves will eat it with relish at a month old. As soon as grass can be got it should be given in liberal quantities after calves are three months old.

Notes

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is constantly on the look-out for all that may be of interest to breeders of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry, in fact all that is of interest to the up to date rancher.

The butter shipments from Humboldt last month showed a most surprising increase over those for the previous months of the year, being nearly three times greater than those of the preceding month, while a comparison with those for January and February make them appear insignificant. For the year so far the shipments have amounted to 618,465 pounds divided as follows: January 98,300 pounds, February 66,100 pounds, March 132,970 pounds and April 321,095 pounds. Other dairy products show a corresponding increase, there having been 575 cases of condensed milk and 395 dressed veal shipped.

Ranchers in the vicinity of Penn Valley have subscribed $1000 worth of stock in the new creamery which it is proposed to establish there.

A meeting of the directors of the Woodland Creamery was held at Woodland last week, at the office of the Secretary. The report was highly satisfactory to both the directors and stockholders.

The dairymen of San Luis Obispo County are reported as having disposed of their cattle at shameful prices. Some have been shipped to different parts of the State for feed and some have been let out on shares. Dairymen are very cautious to keep only a reasonable portion on hand and are trying to carry them through the season.

San Francisco buyers of dairy cows are in the Salinas Valley purchasing desirable milk cows. Good prices are offered for choice dairy stock.

Watch the cow which gradually declines in yield while her mates, under the same management, do not. Pedigree counts for nothing when a cow will not respond to good feed with a fair yield of milk.

In butter making everything is being sifted down to a business proposition. Dairymen make more money now than in the days when butter was higher because of more scientific methods, more creameries, more summer crops raised and better cows kept.

Failure will be certain to the dairyman who has not the gift of punctuality and he had better quit. No employment requires more method. Every part of the work must be performed every day, and almost the same hour in the day. Any variation is actual loss.

It has been again and again demonstrated that the less the butter is worked the better. If the granular system of churning is practised, and ample time given for the water to drain out, no wording will be needed, or only enough to bring the butter to a solid condition. If the buttermilk has all been washed out, there will be none left to work out.

SHEEP.

Where Are We At.

We have been spending many years in attempting to find out where we are at in the sheep business, and the more we study the question, the more confirmed we are in the belief that we have not made the advancement which this important branch of live stock industry demands. Years ago, it was predicted by well posted authorities that everybody would rush into the sheep business, and in a short time sheep could not be given away. We listened then to such talk as we do now when we hear it, with much amusement, and we have stoutly maintained, that if the right kind of sheep be grown, there would be no such dire calamity befall the sheep industry of the country.

We have always entertained the idea that the sheep that can be profitably grown without the aid of tariff tinkers, is the sheep that can stand up under all the vicissitudes of oppression. If the hog can be made the source of profit amid attacks of cholera and kindred complaints, when the only object sought is meat, why can not the sheep be made profitable when it yields its fleece as an additional source of revenue which the hog has not?

We are at a stage when the demand calls for the very best grade of mutton sheep. The mutton eaters are not only demanding it, but the high price of land is compelling the sheep breeders to breed and keep that grade of sheep, for they cannot afford to keep any other on land that will sell for $50 per acre.

We were once of the opinion that the largest sheep was the coming sheep, and we advocated largely the growing by flock masters of this class of mutton. We are still of the belief that this sheep is not without its purpose, its purpose being to build up the little common sheep and to make them presentable at trade marts. Once whilst visiting at the State Fair, and conversing with one of the leading breeders of short horns, he said, he would cheerfully give $5,000 for a short horn which would class in size with the elephant Jumho, and we felt that this remark would be equally appropriate as regards sheep. The demand for large mutton has been greater in all the large meat centers of the West and Middle West the past season than for years. In fact, there were not enough of them in sight to fill the demand.

The sheep which in our opinion will be most in request in the near future is the sheep that will combine both quantity and quality of mutton. We have them in almost all the mutton breeds, and the breeder and feeder who can put them in the finest condition for the flock with feed and blood is the sheep owner who knows where he is at.

It would not be out of place for us to suggest that the breeder of sheep paint an imaginary typical sheep, and then breed to attain that end. Next to the introduction of good blood is the eradication of poor blood. If there is a sheep that fails to come up to the standard, cull him out and dispose of him. Keep the flock uniform. Care for them as you would a delicate child, and beauty will be stamped on the flock, and when sale day comes the owner will find where he is at.

Sheep and Wool Notes.

The losses among sheep men in California will undoubtedly be very heavy and the lamb crop will be cut very short. Heavy losses are reported throughout the Southern and Middle portions of the State, and the only escape from still heavier losses is for the sheep men to move their flocks eastward where fair pasture can be obtained.

Flock masters are always on the look-out for some feed which will enable them to fatten their sheep for market in the quickest possible time. A good plan which has proved very successful in the Eastern States is to give the following rations: Oil meal mixed with grain, of the former about six ounces, daily. It is an excellent plan to vary the feed; the following week give corn with the same amount of oil meal. Following that give peas oats with oil meal. This will make the due proportion of fat and lean meat, besides the sheep like it and they fatten very readily.

The very considerable increase in the consumption of mutton in this country was caused by the depression in the sheep industry. During the time of this depression thousands of breeders, desirous of going out of business, rushed their flocks to the markets, and mutton became a cheap enough food to induce many to purchase, who under former conditions, had not learned to appreciate it. The consumption will probably be still further increased by the higher price of beef, which will for several years be a more costly food than during recent years. Indeed, it is not at all unlikely that the demand for mutton will outgrow the increase in flocks, and the large marketing of lambs, for which, especially, the demand is strong, will delay a production equal to the requirements of the markets.

The sheepmen of northern Montana are preparing for their busy season and the arrangements being made all tend to show that the flockmasters expect the most prosperous year since Cleveland almost bankrupted them.

A lamb is considered to be a sheep so soon as it gets its permanent teeth. This is when it is about a year old generally, so that as a working rule a yearling lamb is to be set down as a sheep. In city restaurants, however, a sheep is a lamb all its life.

"Sugar lambs" is the latest fad. They come from Colorado and are fattened upon sugar beets and finished on corn. Some few were handled in this manner last winter, and it is said that the result was so satisfactory that next winter the most of the feeding will be done with the beets, says the Denver Stockman. As a material for a sugar factory, the beets are worth $1.00 per ton, but as feed for lambs and cattle they are said to be worth $4.50 to $5.00 per ton, and for cattle feed it is not necessary to take such care in producing as for sugar. There will be many thousands of acres raised this year, and a market is certain for all that can be produced. In northern California lamb feeders are particularly anxious to have a supply of sugar beets for next fall's feeding, and there is great interest in the experiments that have and are being made. "Colorado fed lambs" are already celebrated all over the world, and "Colorado sugar lambs" sounds inviting and should make even a greater hit.

Shear the sheep before sending them to market. There is no profit in selling the fleece at meat prices.

We learn from Stockton under date May 19th that the Valley Road brought in forty-three carloads of sheep from Angola last night and unloaded them at the chutes on the water front. There were 6280 head in the lot and they will be shipped to Whiteley slough and pastured. The steamer A. C. Freese will take about half of them down on the barge Echo and expects to return before night after the others. There will be twenty-five carloads of cattle in from Merced this afternoon for transfer to the islands and on Thursday there will be about the same number of care in from the upper part of the valley.

SWINE.

Feeding Pigs

Having stated in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN a couple of weeks ago, under the heading of "Feeding Milk to Pigs," that independent relation in the selection and use of foods will place a man on a high vantage ground, we shall now attempt to briefly explain our meaning of "independent relation."

All food compounds, whether for man or beast, can be divided into two elementary classes—carbohydrates and protein. Carbohydrate foods contain three chemical elements—carbon hydrogen and oxygen. These three elements chemically united in the life of the plant make all of the carbonaceous food; sugar is a pure carbohydrate, starch is another; the woody fibre in corn stalks, in oat or wheat straw and these when fed make carbonaceous food. The second element—protein or nitrogenous food contains four chemical elements—carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and nitrogen. One of the most concentrated of nitrogenous food for the human body is eggs; cheese is another; skim milk, containing as it does the cheese of milk is nitrogenous; lean meat is also, and so too is blood. Among the foods fed to live stock are shorts, bran, oil meal, cottonseed meal, all of which are rich in protein, while of the rough foods, clover and alfalfa is the richest that we have. Remember that there is a broad distinction between Carbohydrates and Protein foods, that feed like bran, shorts, oil meal, clover and alfalfa hay all have the elements of nitrogen. In Germany the chemists at Experimental Stations have been at work for many years, feeding animals, with the view of ascertaining how much of these different kinds of food each should have, in order to make perfect growth and at the same time do it the most economically. If an animal body is naturally made up of certain proportions of Carbonaceous and Protein materials, does it not follow that we can so feed such animals as to maintain such proportions through life and waste nothing. The farmer may be feeding an animal injudiciously and perhaps would so continue did he not know something about this—that is to say: he may be feeding too much protein in proportion to Carbohydrates, or the opposite and thus not only wasting but failing in accomplishing the best results. The mason in preparing his mortar to be used in the building of a brick structure, uses certain proportions of lime and sand. Were either of these elements supplied in excess of its due proportion, the ingredients or the compound would not only be wasted, but if used the existence of the structure would be endangered. So it is with feed. The proper proportions of carbohydrates and protein must be supplied in order that there be no waste and that the best results will ensue.

The pig, when young, needs one pound of protein to each five pounds of carbohydrates and the farmer that feeds disparately wastes more or less of his feed. In California, barley and Indian corn, generally speaking, supply the cheapest carbohydrates that can be procured. One hundred pounds of Indian corn contains over seventy pounds of digestible carbohydrates, while it contains but about eight pounds of digestible protein. If we divide eight into seventy-two, the product is nine, so that there is about one pound of protein to nine of carbohydrates in Indian corn—while the pig needs only one to five. This explains why Indian corn is not in itself a perfect food for the animal when young. Sweet skim milk is one part protein to two of carbohydrates—so that skim milk in itself is too rich in protein to feed alone. The best results, therefore, are obtained by mixing skim milk with the Indian corn, or barley, which is of similar nature to corn and make a perfect ration of the two.

As the pig grows older and is fattening, it needs less protein matter—the ratio being then one to eight, which is pretty near the proportions existing in Indian Corn. This explains why Indian Corn or Barley are such perfect and economical foods by themselves for fattening hogs and why they are poorer feeds alone for the younger animal. Protein matter goes to make red meat and muscle, while carbonaceous feed goes to make fat in the body, whether it be men pigs or babies—the principle is the same. Our bodies must be kept up to a temperature of ninety-eight degrees and to keep that heat in the cold months we eat carbonaceous foods, while to keep up the muscles of our bodies we eat eggs, lean meat, whole wheat, graham flour and materials of that kind. To make muscle for our live stock, such as the pig, horse or ox, we feed oats (which is rich in protein) bran, shorts, oil meal or alfalfa hay, with our rough fodder. This is best illustrated when attention is drawn to the well known fact that if a dog be shut up in a room and supplied with all the water it could drink and all the sugar or starch that it could consume—that it would live comfortably for a few days after which he would become emaciated, its muscles would shrivel, and it would die for want of protein food. If on the other hand it had been fed on cheese, lean meat and blood it would keep on in good health. Protein foods can take the place of carbohydrates, but carbohydrates cannot take the place of protein, so that we might with safety pick out protein feeds and get along with them, while we could not with the carbohydrates. But the difficulty is that protein foods cost more than carbohydrates. Straw is always cheaper than bran because it is more easily raised and so it is with other protein foods and they therefore have a high market value. Nitrogen is an expensive element wherever produced. The problem of rational feeding therefore is in combining the two elements—carbohydrates and protein—in proper proportions needed and so as not to use the expensive protein needed in greater quantities than is required.

Bran is one of the cheapest feeds we can buy to furnish protein. Nature, in growing the wheat grain, put the protein around the outside of the wheat grain; the inside is starch, and the ambition of the miller is to get into his flour as little of the protein feed as he can, much to the detriment, consequently, of the human family. Our stock get the best part of the wheat grain.

If we were to sow a ton of starch upon our field hoping to get a fertilizer therefrom we would miserably fail, but in a ton of shorts or bran made from wheat lies about all the elements of fertility that there are in the wheat grain. Every farmer knows that the growing of wheat robs his land of fertility; it is somewhere in the grain, and if it is not on the inside of the grain it must be in the outside. If the miller puts all the starch in the flour, we must get the protein in the bran, and that fertility passes into the animal and goes into the body and then passes out in the excrement and we have the benefit of it in fertilizing the land.

Care of the Pregnant Sow

There is a prevalent opinion quite common among hog raisers that brood sows must not be fat, says a writer in Breeders' Gazette, but we are satisfied from our own experience and observation that more loss results from underfeeding and injudicious feeding than from overfattening. Liberal feeding of the right kind of feeds is desirable, for the reason that, other things being equal, the fleshy brood sow, at the time of farrowing is always best prepared to nonish and suckle a large litter. The same principle applies in the management of dairy herds. A good suckling animal always makes milk, not only from the daily ration consumed, but draws upon stored flesh of the body as well, and the surplus of flesh fortifies the dam for this task, which is always severe. The important point to be observed in the management of brood sows, however, is the supply of suitable feed and exercise. They should be so handled that they will be obliged to take daily exercise; and it is especially important that during the latter part of the period the grain ration consists largely of bran, oats, shorts, oil-meal or something of that character that is laxative and nutritious and not heating. In this connection there is no more valuable adjunct to the brood sow's rations than roots, both prior to and after farrowing. We invariably advise the practice of root-feeding to all brood sows on the farm, and are abundantly satisfied with its results. The opinion is also prevalent to some extent, that brood sows cannot be fat on the droppings of fattening cattle without injury, but there is no practical foundation for this belief provided some roots and nitrogenous grain-feed be furnished in addition. In many cases, however, we have seen good results where they have had practically no other feed and the cattle being fed almost exclusively on corn. It is best, however, to properly supplement this ration. When sows are handled as outlined above, a fair degree of flesh is beneficial rather than injurious.

Notes.

There are several good breeds of hogs. Select the breed you prefer and stick to that in breeding up. Few good results are obtained by cross breeding.

Select a boar with a good chest, feet, back, loins and ham, and one of a pedigree that traces back through families that have the same characteristics and that have the faculty of transmitting them.

Don't keep the hog too fat in the summer and give him plenty of shade and pure water. The feeding should be done on a clean place. Regularity of feeding is important, but if there is good pasturage there is little need of feeding.

What the English call "a bacon pig" is lighter than the most marketable hogs in this country, as the weight of the "bacon pig" is 160 to 200 pounds. They are said to bring the best prices. The feed recommended consists of rye, peas, barley and shorts. It produces the lean meat preferred in this country as well as in England.

In selecting young sows to be used as breeders, take those that are well developed, and that feed well and thrive on their feed. These things indicate a good constitution and good digestion with ready assimilation of food, qualities that will be valuable inheritances of their offsprings. These qualities are necessary to early maturity, now so highly prized and always so valuable in all classes of live stock especially in those that are raised for the meat market.

POULTRY.

Why First Crosses are Desirable.

So much has been written from time to time in poultry journals upon the desirability of first crosses without exhausting the subject that further discussion does not appear out of place. It is a well established fact that the largest, fleshiest and most hardy specimens of the market fowl have been secured by crossing. Short-sighted breeders of pure bred stock oppose the teaching of these facts and try to dispute and argue them down, with little or no satisfaction to themselves. Writers who preach the doctrine of pure breeds only, are seriously injuring the development of this important industry more than they are helping it end virtually are going back on both the farmer and producer. If poultry raisers could be converted to these views, taught how to avoid the evils of and how to realize the greater profits to be gained from choice pure bred breeding birds, the demand for stock would increase one hundred fold.

No one believes more in the value of pure bred birds than we do, or the importance of insuring their distribution throughout the country. The producer would be in a very bad boat without pure breeds to draw on. We are, however, strongly of the opinion that the practical raiser, one who simply raises for the market, does not make the best use of his pure breeds if he does not raise crosses. The market producer who also sells pure bred stock and eggs for breeding purposes, if successful, probably gains more than he loses by refraining from crossing. The producer of either eggs or poultry for market, who owns pure breeds and does not cross them, is in our opinion not making the best of his opportunities and is decidedly behind the times. It requires undoubtedly more knowledge to do it right, but why not acquire it? If he does not adhere to the proper course the results will be disastrous; it is much easier to sail along with pure breeds, perhaps, but we believe the game is worth the candle. The trouble heretofore has been that those who have tried it, had but a slight knowledge of how it should and should not be done.

When crossing is followed, it is wise to use pure bred birds on both sides. The first cross produced should not be bred from, but should be marketed or only for egg production, except when females are to be graded up. These birds are usually such fine specimens, that although the raiser is told never to breed from them, especially from the females, he is tempted to disregard this advice, and the result after one or two seasons is that he has the most inferior lot of fowls he has ever owned. First crosses may be depended upon, but second or third crosses or fowls mixed indiscriminately deteriorate very rapidly. The pure bred has a strong influence in one direction. When two breeds are crossed each has a strong influence on the progeny, which is like both. Crossing destroys this influence. The cross progeny have little prepotency; there is little strong influence in any one direction.

All sorts of ancestral influences effect their progeny and there is no uniformity. Cross-bred males are worthless for this reason, no matter how choice they may look they are almost sure to produce inferior stock. There is a wrong way to cross as well as a right way, and the former course is the worst in breeding. If this plan is adopted, be sure it is done in the right way, then the evils will be avoided and the benefits secured.

Notes.

Do not feed stimulating feed to poultry now.

Poultry can not be kept healthy on wet ground or in damp houses.

Hatch the guineas under common hens, they will be gentler.

A dusty house is not so likely to be infested with lice.

Make the hens scratch for a living by scattering their grain.

Little chickens do not need food twenty-four hours after scratching.

A capon is equal to a turkey as a table fowl.

Red pepper is only a temporary stimulant and increases the appetite only a short time.

Old geese should be kept for breeding and the surplus goslings marketed as soon as possible.

For keeping fowls in good health in small rooms their quarters should be kept clean and be occasionally disinfected.

Thoroughly scalded ground feed will give better results than feeding it when wet up with cold water or milk.

One point in favor of the white fowls is that when dressed the pin feathers do not show as plainly as the black breeds.

Beware of over-feeding; it is variety of feed and shell-producing articles that bring the best results, the quantity must be determined by the condition.

While hens may readily get too fat to lay this will rarely be the case with pullets and it will pay to feed them liberally, even when on a good range.

Whole wheat is the best grain for laying hens at this season and where they have a good range is almost the only grain that is actually needed.

With matured fowls those weighing not over four or five pounds will sell readily and bring the highest price, and it will pay to sell when this weight is secured.

The perfect and rapid development of spring chickens depends greatly on the start they get.

Twisted combs in fowls is often caused by the hen being allowed to cover the chickens after they should have been left to themselves.

If a chick has once been chilled, no matter what excellent care it may afterward receive, it will never thrive as it would have done otherwise.

Some decomposition is necessary in order to make the droppings most available. The best plan is to mix a little fine soil with it as it is gathered up, let stand in a vessel a few days, when it will be in a good condition for use and can be applied to a good advantage either in the hill or as a top dressing.

There is no good or sufficient reason for landing one variety to the skies and condemning others as worthless. Nearly or quite all breeds have their excellencies and at the same time have their drawbacks, so that there is no breed that excels in all things that are needed in fowls. Up to eight or ten weeks of age there is practically no difference in the growth of chickens of different breeds. But as layers of eggs, or as table fowls, there is a considerable difference but no one breed excels in both these items.

A capon is considered nearly or quite equal to the turkey as a table fowl. A cockerel that at eight months old would weigh five pounds would if caponized in good season will with the same amount of feed weigh eight pounds and would bring nearly or quite double the amount and of course would be considered more profitable. The art of caponizing is not difficult to learn and a little experience is needed. But to make the most out of them one must be reasonably close to a good market.

While cholera may be almost impossible to cure once a fowl is infected, yet in a majority of cases the loss may be considerably lessened by proper precautions to prevent its spreading. It is very contagious and at the first indication the sick fowls should all be separated from the well ones and put to themselves and the quarters thoroughly cleaned up and thoroughly disinfected. One of the most common ways of spreading the disease is by the excrement, hence the necessity of thoroughly cleaning up as soon as the disease is noticed among the fowls. Coal oil is a good remedy if given in the first stages of the disease. All things taken into consideration, hydrosulphite of soda dissolved in water is as good a remedy as can be used. Some give small doses of laudanum. Some venetian red or Spanish mace. But with all there will be more or less failures to cure and this with the fact that once it gets fairly started in a flock it is difficult to eradicate all reasonable care should be taken to prevent its development.

The Latest Crop Report.

The following summary of the climatic and crop conditions is based upon reports received from nine Weather Bureau Stations, fifty two telegraphic reports received through the courtesy of the Southern Pacific Company and many reports scattered throughout the State received from correspondents in their districts.

The heaviest rainfall, except one, since January and in some sections the heaviest of the season, occurred in California at the close of the week. Over an inch of rain fell at a number of stations in the central and southern coast portion. At Los Angeles the rainfall amounted to 1.46 inches. The rainfall in excess of the normal varied from about three-quarters of an inch to one inch and over, except on the northwestern coast, where the rainfall was below the normal about one-tenth of an inch. The rain breaks the long drouth and while too late to be of much benefit to the chief agricultural interests, reinforces the water supply, and will in many ways be of the utmost advantage. The temperature has been below the normal, and the weather generally cloudy. The cold, cloudy weather has been beneficial to whatever late sown grain is still alive; summer fallowed grain is heading out and some patches will yield a fair crop. All hay that was cut was damaged somewhat by the rain. Owing to heavy rainfall, beans will probably be planted. The rain has greatly benefited beets.

Shasta County.—Vegetation not suffering so badly here as elsewhere. Figs are doing well. Cutting alfalfa; fair crop. Rain Saturday and Sunday will benefit grain and vegetables.

Butte County.—Horticulturists busy irrigating. Showers along the higher foot-hills. Feather river two inches below low water mark last year and falling rapidly.

Placer County.—Haying in full blast; about three-fourths of a crop. Cold weather filling wheat and barley nicely, and these now promise average yield; fruit doing well.

Yolo County.—Rsin very beneficial to fruit and late sown grain, but will damage cut hay.

Sacramento County.—Heavy rain will injure cut hay but benefit grass, grain, orchards, vineyards and hop fields, which show need of moisture.

Solano County.—Cool, cloudy weather beneficial to late sown grain and all fruit. Cherries improving. Heavy rain Saturday and Sunday may damage hay, but otherwise will be beneficial. Only enough hay cut for home use; expect half crop of barley and summer fallowed wheat.

San Joaquin County.—Half an inch of rain; will do very little damage, as but a small quantity of hay was cut; will benefit growing grain and late fruit; prospect for plums and pears good; apricots and peaches a failure.

Stanislaus County.—Rain and cool weather will make fair crop on summer fallow; winter sown grain will make straw. Grain and hay inside canal limits doing well. Considerable hay in shock during storm.

Merced County.—Wheat heading out on summer fallowed land and some patches will yield fair crop if cool weather continues two weeks. About nine-tenths inch of rain Saturday will do no particular good to grain and will damage some hay just cut.

Fresno County.—Rain helped growing grain; no damage to cut hay. Fruit trees doing well. No apricots or peaches. Grape vines sprouting. Rsin will make hay of some wheat; otherwise a total loss. Thrips not doing damage expected.

Kings County.—Deciduous fruits will be almost a total failure on account of severe frost March 17th. Not much hay damaged by rain. Feed prospect good; full crop of raisins.

Tulare County.—Rain Sunday will probably injure dry faed and hay. Some grain in irrigated sections will be cut for hay. Prunus Simoni and peaches doing well; orange trees set full.

Kern County.—Rain beneficial to growing grain. Bulk of first crop of alfalfa cut and cared for. Cotting grain hay on irrigated lands. No apricots, peaches or almonds. Good crop of grapes.

Lake County.—Rain did more damage than good; first crop of alfalfa nearly cut and hauled; yield fair. Some grain hay being cut. Grain crop will be three-quarters of normal yield. Vines are very thrifty and making excellent growth. Fruit trees look well, but the fruit crop is short. Not much pasture except along the lakes.

Sonoma County.—Last sown grain very light. Apples, pears and prunes good; peaches and cherries light. Rain Sunday damaged volunteer hay already cut; great benefit to everything except range feed.

Napa County.—Fruit doing well. Cherries not far enough along to be injured. Grapes promise a fine yield. Hay short, but good quality. Grain not over half crop. Corn doing well.

Alameda County.—Rain will do much good to beets, fruit, hay and grain. Black Tartarian cherries blighted badly. Dry feed injured. Vegetables all in.

Santa Clara County.—Fruit trees continue to look well in most parts of valley. Cherries ripening rapidly, but small; in some places they will probably not mature.

San Benito County.—Cool, foggy weather benefited hay. No grain will be harvested. Prunes doing well. Light crop of peaches and apricots.

San Luis Obispo County.—Fair horses sold for $1.25. Cattle nearly all sent out of county.

Santa Barbara County.—One inch of rain Sunday, too late for grain. If sufficient rain falls grain will be planted. Apricots and walnuts setting well but large proportion will probably drop.

Ventura County.—One inch of rain Saturday followed by heavy west wind which dried the ground. Late barley and fruit benefited, grain and beans too far gone.

Los Angeles County.—Baset, One and a half inches of rain. Hay on ground will be damaged, but more good than harm. Duarta. Heavy rain of great benefit for irrigation. Los Angeles. Heavy rain; great benefit to beets, sugar beets, corn and all crops. Palmdale. Showers will start pasture; fine crop apples, pears and small fruits. Fernando. One inch of rain, will greatly benefit fruit; hay and grain all dried up. Moving stock. Pomona. One inch of rain greatly benefited orchards and beets.

San Bernardino Co.—Rain helped feed and in some places hay and grain. Heavy rains in mountains have increased summer supply.

Orange Co.—Good rain. Some damage to hay, other crops improved. Farmers busy mowing hay. All fruit trees looking well.

San Diego Co.—Heavy crop of prunes, plums and apples. Eureka summary.—The dry weather was beginning to affect grass and grain, but the late rains gave impetus to all kinds of crops.

Los Angeles summary.—Cool, cloudy weather favored crops. Week ending with rain, which will benefit feed, trees and root crops, besides adding to water supply.

BUTCHERTOWN.

Arrivals of all grades of cattle at butchertown continues very heavy, and this has a depressing effect in holding prices down. Our quotations are a fair indication of market prices, though at times throughout the week concessions have been made. We do not look for any immediate change in the beef market; in fact, it is highly probable that prices will have a further set back before a permanent improvement will take place. MUTTON—Shipments of sheep this week have not been so heavy and on the strength of this price have slightly advanced; there is, however, plenty of stock to meet all requirements. CALVES are coming in plentiful both as regards range and dairy, the demand is good and prices steady. HOGS—The demand for hogs this week has much improved, and good hard grain stock is readily obtainable. The condition of the Eastern market is reported as very strong with a sharp upward tendency, and we look to higher prices in our local market at any moment. STEERS—First quality, very choice, 6c; Steers, No. 1, 6c to 6 1/2c; Steers, No. 2, 5 1/2c to 6c; Steers, No. 3, 5c to 5 1/2c. HIDES AND SKINS.

The recent reports contained in the last two issues of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, regarding the condition of the local hide market has turned out precisely as we stated. Local dealers are at last compelled to raise quotations all along the line and prices are advanced a strong half a cent on all grades of hides, including calf and veal. We look to a further improvement as the demand for the best grades is very strong, with an upward tendency. The demand from tanners is reported quite good and they are ready to pay the highest values for desirable stock.

WET SALTED HIDES—Heavy Steers, over 50 lbs, 10c; culls, 9c; Medium, 45 to 55 lbs, 9c; culls 8c; Light Steer, under 45 lbs, 9c; culls, 8c; Heavy Cows, over 50 lbs, 9c; cull 8c; Light Cows, 30 to 50 lbs, 9c; culls, 8c; Stags, 7c to 8c; culls, 5c; Kids, 1 1/2c to 2c; Veal, 9c; culls, 8c; Calf, 10c; cull 9c; Dog, 1c; Hides, 1 1/2c; culls, 1c; Dog, 1c; Kid and Veal, 1 1/2c; culls, 1c; Dry Calf, 1 1/2c; culls, 1c; Dog, 1c; Kid and Veal, 1 1/2c; culls, 1c; Medium, 2c; small, 1c. We quote: No. 1, Rendered, 3c to 3 1/2c per lb; No. 2, 2c to 2 1/2c; Oseas, 1 1/2c to 2c per lb.

WOOL REPORT.

Nothing but extreme dullness is noticeable in the local wool market, and nothing has transpired so far which will permit of our giving any absolute figures for spring wools. Considerable wools are coming in and going into warehouse; in fact, we may say that the only activity noticeable in the warehouses, where grades of the new clip is being made. CALIFORNIA FALLOW—Wethers, 60c; Mountains, 50c; Northern, 40c; and Northern defective, 40c; Mendocino and Humboldt, 15c to 18c. NEVADA SPRING—Light and choice, 10c to 13c. OREGON SPRING—Eastern choice, 12c to 14c; Eastern poor, 10c to 11c; Valley choice, 11c to 12c; Valley low grade, 10c to 12c.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

BUTTER—The tone of the butter market is in much the same condition as reported by us last week. The recent rains have materially improved the outlook for green feed throughout these portions of the dairy districts of the State. The stocks of ripe cream butter in the city are very light and what has been sold has been mostly from the creameries and little, if any, has been shipped. We quote: Creamery extras per lb, 20c to 21c; firsts, 19c to 20c; seconds, 18c to 19c; Dairy select, 18c to 20c; 18c to 19c; Dairy soft and weedy, 17c to 18c; Mixed tops, 16c to 17c; Creamery in tubs, 15c to 16c; Pickled roll, 14c to 15c; Dairy in tubs, 13c to 14c; Firkin, Cal., choice to select, 19c to 21c; Firkin, common to fair, 16c to 18c. CHEESE—Owing to a number of good sales this week stocks have been very much reduced, yet there is ample on hand to meet all requirements. The better qualities are bringing over full figures and have at the close of the week an upward tendency. We quote: California per lb, Cheddar, 10c to 11c; Flava, mild, new, 9c to 10c; fair to good, 8c to 9c; Young America, 10c to 11c; Eastern, New York cream Cheddar and Flava, 12c to 13c; Western, 11c to 12c. EGGS—The upward tendency we spoke of last week in the egg market has been realized. There has been a sharp advance of 1 to 1 1/2c per dozen with a strong market at increased quotations. Arrivals of the domestic product has been very light and offerings of Eastern scarce. The market closed firm. We quote: California Ranch, 15c to 16c; California Store, 13c to 14c; Eastern, 11c to 12c; Duck eggs, 16c.

POULTRY—The market continues to remain over-supplied with old poultry and quotations are slightly reduced. The heavy arrivals are sold out due to the high price of feed, and the new clip is being sold at a profit in the market; prices, except for young chickens, are reduced all around. We quote: Old Roosters, per doz, $3.25 to $3.50; young, $4.00; Fryers, $5.50 to $6.00; Broilers, large, $1.75 to $2.00; small, $1.50 to $1.75; Turkeys, old, do, 2c to 3c; young, $1.50 to $2.00; Turkeys, live, Heavy, per lb, 10c to 11c; Gobblers, 10c to 12c; dressed, per lb, 12c to 14c; Geese, pair, 7c to 8c; Goslings, pair, $1.25 to $1.50; Pigeons, young, $1.00 to $1.50; do, old, $1.00 to $1.25. Eastern Poultry—Old Roosters, per doz, $3.10 to $3.40; Hens, $1.50 to $1.75; Fryers, —; Broilers, —; Young Roosters, —; Ducks, $1; Turkeys, per lb, 11c; Geese, pair, $2.

WHEAT—The downward tendency continues here and all along the line. There is very little doing here in California wheat, for the reason there is very little to do it with. The bulk of the stock is coming from the north. The water quotations are as follows: $1.65 to $1.70 for shipping and $1.75 to $1.80 per ctn. for a milling.

Veterinarians Know Its Use.

POMONA, Cal., June 7, 1897.

Since I have practiced my profession (Veterinary Surgeon) in this place I have had occasion to prescribe "Gom-haul's Caustic Balm," contrary to my usual method of practice, which is to avoid the use or recommendation of any proprietary medicine, but experience has shown me its value. When I came here in '93 the remedy was unknown. I think if I can make some arrangement with you for an exclusive agency for this community I can push the sale of the same in a way that will be highly satisfactory to you and profitable to myself. If you will come to some understanding with me, please advise me of the terms you are willing to give. WALTER P. KELLY, V. S.

THOUGH the club did not have much time, forty-three horses are entered for the American Derby, to be decided at Washington Park, Chicago, this summer. The most promising are Lieber Karl, Plaudit and Traverser, who are already Derby winners at a mile and a quarter or over. The American Derby is a sweepstakes for three-year-olds (foals of 1895), $25 to accompany the nomination, $175 additional to start; $10,000 added, of which $2,000 to the second and $1,000 to the third horse. A winner of a three-year-old stake of the value of $3,000 to carry three pounds; of two such stakes, or one of $5,000, five pounds; of three or more three-year-old stakes of the value of $3,000 each, seven pounds extra maidens allowed seven pounds. To be run the first day of the meeting. One mile and a half. The entries are: Linstock, Pingree, Depending, Sir Joseph Lister, Borgia, Traverser, Brometene, Van Antwerp, Noto, Eddie Jones, Sarumont, Eva Rice, Bitter Root, Bangle, The Danphin, Algareta, Fonsovannah, Goodrich, Frank Thompson, Duke of Haven, Dr. Black, Plaudit, Gihaltar, Lizzie Cavalier, Bannoockhorn, Marcato, Mirthful, Warrenton, Pacemaker, Midian, Count of Flanders, Lieber Karl, Presbyterian, Alleviate, Ed. Farrell, Sacket, Isabe, John Bright, Hampden, Pink Coat.

THE owner of the English two-year-old "Nenrasthenip-ponselesterizo" has named another of his two-year-olds "Alice Where Art Thou."

A Jockey With Merit

Michael Hennessy, who left for Montana on Monday evening last, and will ride this season for Marcus Daly, the Montana Copper King, is a self-made man and one of the promising jockeys of the country. Born in Springfield, Mass., in August, 1867, he came at an early age to California, and being a lover of man's best friend—the horse—he found employment as an exercise boy with the well known turfman, J. B. Haggin. Hennessy, was then but a stripling of sixteen years of age, and after serving his apprenticeship with that stable, acquired sufficient confidence to ride and follow the California Circuit. It was then that the training he had received as an exercise boy with the Haggin stable showed itself and he won his first laurels on the turf by bringing under the wire such horses as Daisy D., Captain Al, Mero and other prominent horses of their day. He then accepted an engagement with Porter Ashe to go East, and during his two years contract with that gentleman rode the famous Geraldine to many successful victories. We find Hennessy, the following year employed by Otto Steifel, the St Louis brewer, and he acquitted himself by putting in for his owner a very successful summer. The well known racing stable of Burns & Waterhouse, were the next to engage Mr. Hennessy's services.

As a steeple and hurdle rider, he has achieved considerable prominence, having brought to the front more winners in comparison to the amount of mounts than any rider of his time. Among the jumpers which we recall are Three Forks, with 170 pounds, 1 1/2 miles, in 2:17; Flashlight, winning with the latter at Oakland, a stake the first time he ever faced the sticks; five straights with J. O. C. etc. We have omitted the fact that Hennessy has ridden in the most prominent races throughout the country, viz.: The Futurity; he was also third on Briar Sweet, in the Great Eastern at 150 to 1; rode "Guido" to six successive victories at Garfield Park, and is credited with riding the winner in the last race which was ever run at that course on "Fakir," the property of Chas. Romsal. There are few boys who are quicker in getting away from the post than Hennessy and as a judge of pace he is certainly in the front rank. We predict a season of prosperity for Mr. Hennessy under his new engagement, and are satisfied that a warm welcome will await him in California on his return next fall by the many friends he has left behind.

JUDE J. H. TAMM, who purchased Lucky Star out of a selling race on Tuesday, sold the useful sprinter to B. C. Holly, who will take him to Montana.

HUGH JONES bought Adam Andrew and Pat Murphy from Atkin & Lottridge May 18th, and shipped them with the balance of his stable to St. Louis.

OCTAGON won the Toboggan Stake last year and again this. Irish Reel ran second to him on both occasions. Belmont has won this event four times, while no other stable scored more than once.

B. C. HOLLY has decided to drop out and try and win a purse or two at his old home, Colorado Springs, on the way to Denver.

The San Francisco Race Track Speculators.

The racing season which is now rapidly drawing to a close has been a disastrous one for the bookmakers and heavy plungers. But one pencil is a big winner on the season, and that is Joe Rose, who is fully $50,000 ahead on the three books operated by him. He and his confreres appear to be able to win where nearly every one else has failed. Rose is $25,000 winner in his own book, while W. Jackman, better known as "English Bill," is $20,000 ahead on a bank roll of $2,000 which Joe Ross staked him to originally. Jackman is a strange figure in the gambling world. When poolrooms were in full blast in this city ten or twelve years ago Jackman ran the proverbial "shoeing" up to $27,000, which he afterward lost in a few weeks. He has been "broke" for five or six years. Jack Atkins, who has been operating for Joe Rose the past month or two, is $5,000 to the good.

Peta Riley went away about $10,000 winner in the early part of the season. W. E. Applegata is also credited with winning a like amount, but he won the most of his money from the outside. John Humphreys, a very conservative bookmaker, Tom Hurlick and Phil Archibald are small winners, anywhere from $3,000 to $6,000.

But the array of losers is a most formidable one. George Rose is said to be $27,000 loser, although he was fully $40,000 behind on the season at one time. He paid a princely sum for the field book privileges at both tracks and they have not been remunerative this season and, in fact, have just about paid expenses. For a while George Ross operated three books and a fortune was gobbled up in a losing streak of a couple of weeks.

Maxey Blumenthal dropped a bank roll of $20,000, but he is still on deck. Barney Schreiber possibly quit $5,000 loser and John Coleman lost a similar amount, notwithstanding that he was $25,000 winner at one stage of the game. John O'Neil and Frank Eckert are about even on their operations, losing their winnings of $30,000 the latter part of the meeting. Joe Harlan let a bank roll of $10,000 slip through his fingers. Charles Walter, who has a penchant for laying the longest prices against horses that look to have no chances, was a consistent loser throughout the season and went home $20,000 to the bad. Sam Sommarfield and George Wheelock were small losers, but nothing to speak about. Jack Newmsn of St. Louis got rid of $10,000. Hugh Jones and W. Chappu are each probably $5000 loser by going on the block. W. Bevarly is behind this year on his ring operations, which is quite a new experience for him. Herman Hoffman, the Anaconda Club, Ed. Wallace and Caesar Young quit loser. Every book that went on periodically during the season with a small bank roll fell by the wayside, with the exception of two or three noted above.

Charles Quinn was the only plunger on the outside who won anything to speak of. He went East $25,000 ahead of the game—Chronicle.

Plunger Ed Purser had a most disastrous season, but is supposed to have recouped some of his losses on Cromwell, who won at odds of 15 to 1 the other day.

Elia Perler, as usual, had access to more bank-rolls than any other layer of odds in this vicinity.

William Fitch made money on the block, but lost it back "on the outside."

The Sullivan-Harrison combination was credited with being $5,000 to the good at one time, but the impression prevails that they have lost about $25,000 of this sum.

At Castleton Stud, May 8th, Logical foaled a bay colt by Chorister. May 8th imp. Dutch Flag foaled a bay or brown filly by Tournament. May 9th imp. Edith (own sister to Melton) foaled a chestnut filly by Domino. This makes the fourteenth Domino for 1895.—Thoroughbred Record.

JOCKEY BEAUCHAMP, who has been riding Will Wallace's horses this spring, will leave him next month to fill his contract with Marcus Daly on the Montana circuit. The Wallace stable will probably have Will Woodward's boy, Dupee, as its jockey after the Louisville meeting.

COL. JACK CHINN and George Lindenberger undertook to have a little sale of their own on the quiet at the Louisville race track last Monday. The result is told as follows in the Courier-Journal:

"The thoroughbred sale at Chnrchill Downs yesterday morning proved to be a fiasco. Only a small number of purchasers were present, and when the owners of the horses saw how Mr. George H. Lindenberger's lot was going, they did not put theirs up for sale. Col. Jack Chinn said that he has a good pack of hounds at his farm and he would rather ship his colts back there to be killed for dogmeat than to take the prices that were bid. There were no bids at all on some of the offers, and the auctioneer was frantic. He implored the crowd to make just a small bid. 'If you don't start this one,' he yelled in desperation, 'I will start him myself, but it will be back where he came from.' A two-year-old Candlerman colt was purchased by Mr. J. H. Jones for $200. Mr. Boh Dorsey bought a two-year-old for $25. Desdama, a young broodmare, was knocked down to Ike Frost for $35, and a gelding, O'Haarn, went to J. Weissen for $10. The last two gentlemen will use their purchases as huggy-horses. The four comprise the full list of purchasers."

At Fleetwood Stud, property of J. B. Tarleton, Esq.; Missive, dam of Roseland, Marsian, Roslyn and Greatland, foaled a colt by imp. Aintree. Other recent foals at Fleetwood are:

Claret, brown filly by Portland.
Aileen, by George Kinney, brown colt by Portland.
Mr. Tarleton has a yearling out of Missive by imp. Aintree, which will be sold at the Fleetwood sales this spring. He is a chestnut in color, as are his great half brothers, and Mr. Tarleton says looks like the Stockwells.

BOWLING BROOK, winner of this year's Metropolitan Handicap, is blind in one eye and his forelegs are bad. He has three more engagements at Morris Park—the Tohoggen Handicap, for horses three years old and over, to be run over the Eclipse course on Thursday; the New Rochelle Handicap, for three-year-olds and over, at seven furlongs around the upper turn of the Withers mile, to be run on May 19th, and in the Belmont stakes, at one mile and three furlongs over the hill, which will be the feature of the last day's card. The Belmont is for three-year-olds exclusively, and in it Bowling Brook will likely meet August Belmont's Firearm, M. F. Dwyer's Previous, P. J. Dwyer's Handball, John E. Madden's Howland, Marcus Daly's Hamburg and one or two more of last year's good two-year-olds.—Thoroughbred Record.

L. P. TARLETON, the breeder of the two-year-old colt Greatland, by Blue Eyes—Missive, in speaking of that good youngster, said: "Greatland is a striking illustration of the inbreeding of the Lexington and Glencoe blood. His sire, Blue Eyes, although descended in the female line from Lexington's dam, was by Enquirer, whose dam was by Lexington. Missive, Greatland's dam, is by Congressman, by War Dance, the son of Lexington and Reel by Glencoe, while Saratoga, the dam of Congressman, was out of a sister to Pryor, by Glencoe. Then Missive's dam was by Daniel Boone, the son of Lexington and Magnolia, by Glencoe. In addition to all this, Greatland's fifth dam is the great mare Peytona, by Glencoe.—Thoroughbred Record.

THOMAS H. WILLIAMS JR. will take a summer's rest in Japan, but will return in time to attend to the details for the winter meeting.

The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colts capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm. Mailed postpaid for $3.50. Address

LIMITED TO TWENTY-FIVE MARES.

ALTAMONT shares championship honors with Baron Wilkes, a horse of great opportunities. In having six 2:10 performers to his credit. He has taken a leading position among the foremost trotting sires of the country under such conditions that phenomenal ability alone has saved him from oblivion. A very small proportion of his progeny has been trained, and an extremely small number of these by competent men. As a partial illustration of his meagre advantages, it may be stated that he has never produced a colt from a paring-bred mare or from one with a fast record. Nor until 1897 had he ever been crossed with a descendant of George Wilkes, Electioneer, Dictator, Sidney or Dexter Price. Oregon and Washington have produced seven 2:10 performers, and EVERY ONE of these are ALTAMONTS.

ALTAMONT is a horse of iron constitution, and at twenty-three years of age is in the full vigor of his prime, a sure foal-getter, and, except for his blindness—the result of an accident—is without blemish. He has never sired a sorrel, all of his colts having been solid colors—bays, browns or blacks.

NOTE—Besie Rankin, by Altamont, sold November, 1897, brought the highest price obtained for a harness horse at public auction in California during the year. Address

SEYMOUR WILKES, 2:08¹/₂

(REGISTERED 0232)

WILL MAKE THE SEASON OF 1898 AT

J. H. White's Stock Farm, Lakeville, Cal

TERMS—$25 FOR THE SEASON

SEYMOUR WILKES was sired by the King of the Wilkes family, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¹/₄, dam Early Bird, by Playmail (brother to Barney, 2:25¹/₄); second dam Lucy, by Odd Fellow (son of Chloroform); third dam by a son of Williamson's Belmont; fourth dam by Blackhawk 767. Playmail was by Mike 3403 (the Vermont 322, out of the Peniger mare), out of Kate McDonough (dam of Ella Lewis 2:27, and grandam of Saladin, 2:09¹/₄).

SEYMOUR WILKES stands 16 hands high and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a seal brown in color, and in conformation is one of the most symmetrical of any in California. His qualities as a level-headed, game and speedy race horse are known to all horsemen. He is the fastest son of the mighty Guy Wilkes, and on his maternal side traces to the very best of sires and dams. He has an iron constitution, and all owners of good mares that want horses that will have breeding, size, bone, quality, good disposition and extreme speed should not overlook this horse. His service fee is placed at a very low figure considering his merits. He never was bred but to a few mares, and his progeny are models of perfection.

Mares can be shipped direct to the ranch via steamer "Gold." The best of care taken of them on the farm, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. Pasturage $3 per month. For further particulars apply to

TROTTING SEASON OPENED.

Spring Meeting of the P. C. T. H. B. A. at the Bay District Track.

GRAND SUCCESS OF THE DASH SYSTEM.

Three Horses Enter the List in One Day—The Prospects Most Encouraging for Trotting-Horse Men—The Earning Capacity of Trotters and Pacers Increased.

FIRST DAY—SATURDAY MAY 27.

The spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association opened under rather disadvantageous circumstances. The weather was cold and foggy and prevented a large number from attending. Still, for a first day it compared favorably with those of previous years. Among the spectators were many prominent breeders from all parts of this state. The letting was conducted by the Paris mutual system and the auction pools, and large amounts were wagered on the results. Everyone was anxious to see how the dash system would succeed, and before the afternoon's sport ended it was pronounced a decided success.

The starter was Capt. Ben E. Harris, and by using starting flags similar to those used by Ferguson and his attendants at the Blood Horse meeting, the fields of horses and "bikes" were sent away very evenly.

The judges were A. H. Cohen, Wilfred Page and Robert S. Brown. The timers were Samuel Gamble and Peter Brandow.

The first race on the programme was for trotters, 2:28 class. There were eight entries—Daylight, by Eros; Pet, by Orphan Boy; Rex, by Anteeo; Flora S., by Dexter Prince; Menlo Falls, by Fallis; Princess, by Woolsey; Alex. Button Jr., by Alex. Button, and Neva, by Steinway. Princess was made a favorite in the letting, the pools selling as follows: Princess, $25; field, $20; Alex. Button Jr., $10. It was some time before Starter Harris could get them away, and after the flag dropped they scattered over the course like a band of sheep. Flora S., a plain-looking, quick-moving daughter of Dexter Prince, took the hell-wether position in the flock and led all the way to the wire. Menlo Falls forged ahead of Rex at the half-mile pole and took second position, Alex. Button Jr. third, Daylight was fourth, Rex was fifth, Princess, the favorite, sixth and Neva last. Time, 2:27. Every one who had Princess tickets determined to plunge on Flora S., and in the next heat their change of judgment did not prove false, for Flora S. trotted in quite easily in 2:26. Rex was the only contestant. Menlo Falls made a gallant fight for second place, but could not out-foot the son of Anteeo, Neva was fourth and Daylight fifth, the other three, Pet, Princess and Alex. Button Jr., were distanced.

Flora S. is the first one by our California sire, Dexter Prince, to get into the 2:30 list this year.

The first dash race of the year of one and one-eighth miles, was the next one to start, and the spectators watched it with much interest. There were five entries—Kitty B., Hera, Antioch, Abanteo and Alviso. Antioch was made favorite; he sold for $45 in the pools against $17 for Kitty B. and $16 for the field. There was very little delay at the start. Antioch led past the stand, with Kitty B. at his throat-latch. Abanteo was third, Hera fourth and Alvisolast. On going to the quarter-pole Kitty B. was alongside of the leader, and like a double team they trotted to the half; here Antioch went up in the air and Shaner shot out to the front with Kitty B., and took the pole and kept it all the way to the wire, notwithstanding the hard struggle made by Antioch to gain his lost position. Hera was third, Abanteo fourth and Alviso last. Time, 2:42. The time for the mile was 2:25. In the second race, which was for pacers, there were four entries—Ashton, Pascal, Orland and Loupe. Ashton sometimes called "watch eye," was made favorite and Andy McDowell smiled benignly as he took the lead with his pet, and although Orland kept right at his wheel all the way, he could get no further ahead. Pascal came in two lengths behind him and one length in front of Loupe. Time, 2:27.

In the second heat Orland took the lead and kept it all the way until the middle of the hack turn between the half and three-quarter pole, where he was seen to slacken in his gait, and Ashton, who was at his girth, passed to the front followed by Loupe, leaving Orland to bring up the rear; in this order they came under the wire. Time, 2:28.

The mile-and-one-eighth dash was a drawing card, and the betting was very lively, Edenia selling for $30, Wanda for $9 and $10 for the field. Edenia had the choice of positions, but it was not the best place for trotting; the ground was quite soft near the pole, and before she had trotted one hundred yards she broke and Ottinger and Wanda passed her, the former leading by half a length. Wanda came up even with him on the backstretch and together they moved toward the half, Edenia three lengths behind and still one length in front of Manning. The mile was made in 2:19, but Edenia could not get near the leaders. Ottinger came in under the wire in 2:38, one length in advance of Wanda, Manning last.

The broodmare Memento, by Electioneer, out of Mamie (dam of Hyperion, 2:26), by Hambletonian Jr., was sent for a record, J. Phippen driving, with Superintendent Frank Covey behind the runner. After scoring once she started on her journey. She trotted to the quarter in thirty-six seconds, the half in 1:11, the three-quarters in 1:43, and it looked as 2:24 would be the mark for her, but she made a little skip at the drawgate and came under the wire in 2:25. The first Electioneer to get in the list in 1893.

C. F. Bunch, driver for the Vendome Stock Farm, came out with the handsome Electioneer stallion Antinous; he is out of American Girl, by Toronto Sontag. This horse was injured as a two-year-old, and never was handled for speed since. He came up the homestretch for the word, Superintendent Covey at his side with the runner. The word was given, and as game as Palo Alto the horse trotted to the first quarter in 0:36; the half was made in 1:12, the three-quarter mark was passed in 1:50 and the mile in 2:28. Thus another Electioneer was added to the list, who as usual he leads all winning sires up to date.

In the last race of the day, which was a one and five-eighths mile-dash, there were four good ones entered—Langford, Hera, Abanteo and Erin. The first quarter was made in 37 seconds. Langford led all the way, with Hera at his wheel; they opened a big gap between their sulkeys and the noses of the other two. Erin was a little in front of Abanteo at the three-quarter-mile pole, and closed up the gap. On entering the stretch he was alongside of the leaders and struggled hard, but Langford shook him off. Abanteo was a little unsteady, as it was her first race, nevertheless she is dead game, and after Erin gave up the struggle and let Hera take second place she took the third position away from Erin and kept it. Langford came in first. Time for the whole distance by quarters was as follows: First quarter, 37 seconds; half, 1:13; three-quarters, 1:50; mile, 2:27; mile and five-eighths, 4:01.

The following are the SECOND DAY—TUESDAY, MAY 30.

The sun was hidden behind the fog bank, and the early riser who had thoughts of visiting the races this holiday felt as if he could not venture out to the Bay District track. At 10:30, while the bands of music, companies of soldiers, and veterans of the war were marching toward "God's Acre" to lay wreaths and flowers on the graves of those who fought in the great civil war, the sun came out in all its glory, and the hearts of all who anticipated a day of rest were overjoyed.

The success of the dash system of races last Saturday at the opening meeting of the Breeders' Association was talked of by everybody interested in horses, and the novelty of seeing every horse doing his level best to win seemed to meet with the approval of all who attended, consequently others were told of the sport, and at two o'clock the officers and members of the association were delighted to see car after car unload, and processions of pedestrians and vehicles coming from all directions to the entrance of the track.

There were six races on the programme, besides one event against time. The butchers' race was quite a feature and the "sporty boys from over south" were there in full force ready to cheer the winners or condone with the losers. The judges of the day were A. H. Cohen, D. J. Murphy and R. S. Brown; timers, Samuel Gamble and Gilbert Tompkins; starter, Ben E. Harris.

The first race was a mile dash, for two-year-olds. There were six entries—Soubrette, by Eros; Glendora, by Sable Wilkes; Little Mac, by Stone's Election; Silver Bee, by Silver Bow; Genevieve, by Eugeneer, and Marchioness, by Sidmore. A finer sextette of two-year-olds it would be hard to find anywhere. After scoring five times they got the word. Soubrette, driven by Lafferty, took the lead; at the quarter-pole it was noticed that Little Mac was second, Marchioness third, Silver Bee fourth, Genevieve fifth and Glendora last. Little Mac broke after passing the quarter-pole; Marchioness passed her and Genevieve, coming along last, soon captured third place, the rest fell back. Soubrette was three lengths in front of Marchioness, who was a length and a half the best of Genevieve as they turned into the hack turn. Soubrette made a handy break, and although coming fast, Marchioness seemed to be closing on her, with Genevieve a dangerous third. Coming toward the three quarter pole there was less daylight between them. Taylor, behind Genevieve, was making a splendid drive, and although Shaner lifted Marchioness, the hackilly from Salinas was the steadiest and speediest. It was a pretty race, but Silver Bee was noticed coming like a streak. Wilber Field Smith, driving with rare good judgment, was soon among the leaders, and at the drawgate the positions were Soubrette, Genevieve, Silver Bee, with Marchioness breaking. After passing this point Soubrette went up in the air and Genevieve slant to the front, with Silver Bee at her girth. Marchioness, catching handily, passed Soubrette, and they came under the wire in the following order: Genevieve a length in front of Silver Bee, who was half a length ahead of Marchioness, Soubrette a length behind her, Little Mac fifth, Glendora last. Time, first quarter, 42 seconds; half, 1:21; three-quarters, 2:02; mile, 2:42.

The second race was for pacers, free for all, two in three. There were three side-wheelers to contest, Rosie C., by Oregon Pathfinder, Tom Ryder, by Alex. Button, and Our Dick, by Gibraltar. In the pools, the latter was favorite, selling for $100 against the other two in the field. In the choice for positions Tom Ryder got the pole, Our Dick second and Rosie C., outside. It took some time for them to get away. Tom Ryder took the lead and kept it all the way around to the half-mile pole, where he made a break and Our Dick passed him, but Ryder kept right on and down the stretch the three came, not a length apart. McDowell on the outside made a splendid drive with Rosie C., and when within 100 yards of the wire had snatched the second position away from Tom Ryder by a neck, Our Dick a length in front. Time, quarter, 0:34 1/2, half, 1:03 1/2, three-quarters, 1:43, mile, 2:16 1/2.

In the second heat Our Dick cut out the pace, with Rosie C. at his wheel; Tom Ryder was three lengths behind at the quarter. Down the backstretch their relative positions remained unchanged; coming toward the last turn at the head of the stretch Rosie Mac moved up and was only a head behind Our Dick. Down the stretch they came, both drivers doing their very best. The spectators began to manifest their approval by shouting, as nearer and nearer the leaders came. The bright green suit of McDowell's was a little in advance of Keating's dark blue jacket as the drawgate was reached. The whips were now brought to play, and inch by inch Our Dick gained, but Rosie C. was game, and for twenty feet before the wire was reached they were perfectly even. The spectators yelled with delight and excitement as Our Dick and Rosie C. passed beyond the goal as perfectly even as if hitched to a double-tree, Tom Ryder one length behind. The judges announced a dead heat between Our Dick and Rosie C. Tom Ryder third. Time, 2:17 1/2.

Our Dick was still favorite, selling for $28 against $8 on the other two. The start was a very poor one, Our Dick fully a length in front of Rosie C., with Tom Ryder behind a similar distance. The positions were never changed all the way around, Our Dick being first, Rosie C. second and Tom Ryder last. Time, 2:16 1/2.

Alviso, a fine looking, bay gelding, belonging to James W. Rea, was now brought on the track to beat three minutes. He is sired by Brown Jug, dam Big Lize, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr., 31. Accompanied by a runner, C. J. Bunch did all he could, but the horse was not able to get better than 2:38 1/2.

The third race was the event of the year. It was called the "Butchers' Race." The prizes to be contested for were two elegant road carts manufactured by Studebaker Bros. There were four well-trained geldings, and many punters said they never "sausage" a race "before." Charles Johnson sat behind a gray gelding called Dandy, and seemed to have no fear of the lines breaking. A. Decourieux drove a dark chestnut gelding called Manzanita; R. Schrader had a strawberry chestnut, while J. Lacoste steered the gray gelding, William P. The judges did all in their power to teach the quartette how to get their horses around to face the wire, after which the butchers were invited to take their horses off the track until a heat of the 2:24 class was trotted. As soon as this was over the butchers came out and were sent away to a straggling start. Dandy, with mouth wide open, took the lead with a vengeance. Manzanita was his only competitor. The other two drivers started behind, as they did not think it was exactly right for them to show how fast their horses could go in a race with such world-beaters as the leaders. Dandy came in under a strong pull in the excellent time, 2:37 1/2; the other two distanced, but they received an ovation from their friends that will encourage them to purchase a few good trotters for the next year's race.

In the second and concluding heat Dandy led all the way, with Manzanita forcing him to do his best to the wire. Both drivers laid the whips on from the drawgate home, but neither of the geldings broke, but trotted well. The time made, 2:37 1/2, was excellent, considering the weights of the drivers, the carts, and lack of preparation the horses have had.

The fourth race was for the 2:24 class, trotting 2 in 3. Donchka, by Wild Boy; Antioch, by Antevolo; Electrina, by Richards' Elector, Moro, by Pasha and Teheran, by Mambrino Wilkes, were the contestants.

In the pools Donchka $6 was favorite, selling for $78 against $33 for Electrina and $65 for the field.

This race was a different one for the guessers, but when the horses came out for the word the big betting room was deserted. Teheran having secured the choice of positions, it seemed a difficult matter for the other five to get away with him; Moro came up as if it was the end of the mile, and wanted to be at the wire first. Starter Ben E. Harris warned the drivers to score by the pole horse several times. Finally he sent them away to a very fair start, Electrina leading, Antioch second, Donchka third, Teheran fourth and Moro last, and breaking at every fifty yards. Electrina moved away like her half-brother, Directum, and steady as a clock, she gained ground on the rest. Down the backstretch the five behind her were stretched out like a procession of stragglers. At the half she seemed to ease up a little, and Donchka, passing Antioch as he broke, came up second, but it was only for a short distance, for Antioch "came like a race horse" and won second place before the three-quarter pole was reached. On coming into the stretch Electrina seemed to play with her followers. Antioch had to trot very fast to keep ahead of Donchka, while Teheran and Moro were lost behind the flag, the former being shut out about one length, and still he was five lengths in front of Moro. Electrina came home a winner by a length, Antioch second, a neck in front of Donchka, the other two distanced. Time, 2:26.

In the second heat Electrina led all the way a length, Antioch second and Donchka at his wheel; in this order they came under the wire. Time, 2:26.

The match race between Daylight, by Eros, and Langford, by Mansfield Medium, $500, distance two and one-quarter miles, reminded one of the old-time match races that made the trotting turf popular.

This was the first race at this distance, we believe, ever trotted, and when the two got the word at the head of the stretch they trotted very evenly for about an eighth of a mile. Langford then broke and Daylight took the lead. He broke at the turn and Langford led to the half; the latter made a "bohlee," and Daylight came upon even terms with him, but held it for a very short distance for he broke and fell back. At the three-quarter mile, Langford was two lengths in the lead. One mile of the distance was passed in 2:30. Coming into the homestretch Viogot sent Daylight ahead, and as Langford made a break at the drawgate he passed him and led under the wire. On entering the turn Langford, who seemed to be the speediest, again took the lead, and kept it all the way until into the homestretch. Viogot then brought Daylight out to the middle of the track, where the footing seemed to be better, and by gently tapping and lifting his game horse he gradually decreased the distance between Langford and his horse's nose. At the drawgate while Hendrickson, the driver of Langford, was preparing for a grand finish to the wire, he looked to the right and saw Daylight coming fast, and before he knew what happened his horse Langford broke and Daylight came in a winner by a length amid the loud cheering and shouting of the vast audience. The following is the time made: first quarter 0:39 1/2, half 1:17 1/2, three-quarters 1:52 1/2, mile 2:30 1/2, mile and a quarter 2:07 1/2, mile and a half 3:45, mile and three-quarters 4:21 1/2, two miles 5:00, two miles and a quarter 5:40. The contestants were evenly matched, and many believed they should meet again in a similar race. It was pronounced a success by everyone.

The last race of the successful afternoon's sport was a one and one-eighth mile dash for trotters. There were three contestants—Belle Medium, by Happy Medium; Richland and Jim C., by Tommy f.

Jim C. took the lead, but broke and fell back. Belle Medium then assumed the first position and kept it until past the quarter; she trotted very true and even, but Jim C. came fast and got ahead, by breaking several times. Richland kept at Belle Medium's wheel all the way. At no part of the mile was there a "length of daylight" between the three; it was one of the prettiest races of the day. Down the stretch the horses came abreast, and every inch was well contested. The driver of Belle Medium is a cool, courageous, level-headed reinsman, and the contest was so close that if he made a mistake the race was up. With persuasive eloquence and a liberal use of the whip, the three came under the wire head and head, Belle Medium first, Jim C. second and Richland third. The judges set Jim C. back for making five breaks. Time, quarter, 38 1/2 seconds; one-half, 1:16 1/2; three-quarters, 1:51 1/2; mile, 2:29 1/2; mile and one-eighth, 2:43 1/2.

Thus ended one of the best days' racing that has been seen in California for years. "Every race was for blood;" there was no laying up of heats. The decisions met with approval, and every one seemed satisfied.

Following are the summaries of the days races:

THIRD DAY—WEDNESDAY, MAY 31.

The attendance was not so large to-day as yesterday, consequently those who stayed away missed seeing another series of good trotting events that were worthy of the Grand Circuit. There was no complaint about the limited number of Paris mutual boxes, and everyone who cared to invest had plenty of opportunities. There were four races on the program, but the first event, 1 1/16 miles, was divided on account of the large number of entries. There were twelve trotters in all, but Jake Holmes and Tanis dropped out, so Judges Brown, Page and Coben drew lots to see which should go in the first division, and they decided that Sidlette by Sidney, Tiptinous by Antinous, Lady O. by T. O., Secret by Secretary, and Bird Button by Alex Button were to contest. A finer lot of three-year-olds would be hard to find anywhere. Sidlette was favorite in the pools, selling at $50; Button, $15; and Field, $13. The tip was a good one, for the great daughter of Sidney and Silverthreads led all the way and walked under the wire seven lengths in front of Bird Button, Secret, third, Lady O., fourth, and Tiptinous, last. Time, 2:45.

The second division consisted of Willena, by Eros; Alwood K., by Nutwood; Maud Alameda, by Gaviota; Moorzouk, by Sidney, and Phantom, by Fordstan. The youngsters all started away even, Maud Alameda took the lead and Moorzouk was a close second, and before the first eighth was passed he had Maud Alameda in trouble and the rest at his mercy. He opened a gap of five lengths and kept it all the way. The contest for second place between Phantom and Maud Alameda became very interesting but the latter came in one length in advance for that position, Alwood K. fourth and Willena last. Time, 2:40.

The second race was a good one; it was a trotting event, best two in three. The contestants were: Molly Patten, by Whippleton; Humbug, byson of Richard's Elector; Kodiak, by Mambrino Wilkes; Electionetta, by Prince Albert, and Alwood K., by Woodnut. Humbug was the first one made favorite at $20 to $17 for the field, but in a few minutes Electionetta was installed in the place of honor.

The starting occupied some time, but when the word was given Prineewood took the lead and won so handily in 2:36 that everyone who saw him move rushed to the pool-box and bet heavily on him. The favorite, Electionetta, was two lengths behind Prineewood at the wire, Kodiak third, Humbug fourth, Mollie Patten fifth and Alwood K. distanced.

It Ought to be Settled.

A question appears to have arisen between Mr. Dudley Miller and the Registrar as to the duty of the latter in regard to changing the pedigree of George Wilkes so as to conform to the newly-discovered testimony. The evidence which Mr. Miller published seems to establish the fact pretty conclusively that the dam of George Wilkes belongs to the great unknown. This evidence has been pretty generally published, and many who heretofore thought that there could be little doubt that Dolly Spanker was a daughter of Henry Clay have had their faith shattered, says Iconoclast in Kentucky Stock Farm.

The Registrar's position was stated to be that he can do nothing in the matter till a formal petition is lodged in his office suggesting or requesting that the pedigree be made to conform to the facts as they now appear. It would follow, therefore, that if no person outside the Registrar's office takes sufficient interest in the matter to commence proceedings of this character the Registrar and Year Book are to go on indefinitely publishing to the world facts about the breeding of George Wilkes that are not true.

I do not know that the Registrar takes this view of the situation, but if he does, I beg leave most respectfully to dissent. The Trotting Register is the source from which the public derives its knowledge of trotting pedigrees. It is the record, and imports verity. Whenever a strong probability is raised that one of its pedigrees is untrue, the proper officer or officers of the association should take steps to have that pedigree corrected. They should use all proper effort to see that their record does as it professes to do—speak the truth—instead of perpetuating a falsehood. It is the business of the Register Association more than any one's else business to have the records correct, because they are its records, the records which it holds out to the world as the truth. They are not the records of the owner of the horse or of his produce, but of the Register Association, and so far as the general public is concerned, the Register Association is the party responsible for their accuracy. This being true, why should the association wait till some one else files a complaint in regard to the pedigree of any animal? No one has greater interest in making the correction than it, and it may very well be that no one else has any special interest in the matter, but certainly the Register Association has.

Now, if the evidence which Mr. Miller has adduced is not sufficient to raise a reasonable presumption that the pedigree of the dam of George Wilkes is incorrect, the Registrar is entirely right in ignoring it. If, on the other hand, it does raise such a presumption, the matter should be investigated and determined by the association without waiting to be moved to do so from the outside. More especially is this true where a great historical pedigree like that of George Wilkes is the subject matter of investigation.

For myself, I think Mr. Miller made a very good showing, and so far as I have observed, no one has attacked his conclusion. There are those that claim to be able to trace the Clay characteristics in the Wilkes family, but in my judgment a good deal of this is imaginary. One of the horsemen who owned Dolly Spanker thought she had much more of the character of Mambrino than of Clay, and when Mr. Simmons bought George Wilkes his dam was represented to have been a Mambrino mare. This may have been imaginary also. But the fact remains that she has apparently been traced to an unknown source, and there does not seem to be any real foundation for her alleged Clay paternity, at least the facts now appear to be stronger against it than in its favor. So far as the George Wilkes family is concerned, it is really a matter of no importance whether his dam was a Clay mare or a Mambrino mare, or either. The ascertainment of this fact would not add one cubit to his stature as a sire or a progenitor, but it would be a satisfaction to the breeding public to know either what his dam was or that the fact cannot now be ascertained.

MR. ARIEL LATHROP paid a visit to Allen Farm on Tuesday to see his mare, Eva W., who had dropped a very fine colt by Advertiser, and is booked to Kremlin. Eva W. is a grand-looking chestnut, eleven years old, by Nutwood, out of Alice R. (dam of Redwood, 2:27), by Nahuac, and she has a record of 2:25 1/2, obtained in Nevada in 1889. Her Advertiser foal would please any good judge, and she should throw speed to Kremlin. As we walked through the pastures, crushing dandelions and violets with our feet, Mr. Lathrop stated that he brought to Albany from California, December 19th, two weanlings (one by Palo Alto, out of Lenore, by Madrid; the other by Stamboul, out of Eva W.) which weighed on arrival 500 and 502 pounds respectively. He kept them in a warm stable and fed them grain, and May 8th he sent them to Saratoga and turned them out. Each on that day weighed 630 pounds. The growth was remarkably even. The advantage which California has over New York in horse-raising is simply due to climate. The colts are able to run in the open air so much that they mature rapidly. At Palo Alto the broodmares and colts are grain-fed. If they depended upon grass alone there would be weakness and slow development. Mr. Lathrop will visit Cleveland June 15th to meet the stable of Orrin A. Hickok there, and after looking the trotters over will go to Chicago to direct the Palo Alto stable of thoroughbreds, at the Washington Park meeting, which will begin June 24th. The stable will move from Chicago to Saratoga. Mr. Lathrop feels confident that Hickok will make a good showing with the Palo Alto trotters, and he predicts that Elhendre, by Dexter Prince, will astonish some of the circuit visitors. He regards Dexter Prince as one of the greatest speed-producers on the Pacific Coast.—Turf, Field and Farm.

It has long since become an adage that trotters come in all shapes and sizes. Red Wilkes would be taken any time for a grade draft horse of rather an inferior quality, being heavy enough in the body and broad enough across the hips to pass for a representative of one of the heavy breeds, although his legs are too light and clean for a Shire or Clyde. In spite of his size he was considerable of a trotter, and has sired more speed than any son of Geo. Wilkes. Wilton, on the other hand, also a son of George Wilkes, and sire of the champion 4-year-old Moquette (2:10), is a dapper little pony-built horse, not as large even as his sire, who was characterized for many years as "Bill Simmons' Pony" until he achieved name and fame in spite of the handicap. Nancy Hanks, 2:04; Belle Vara, 2:08 1/2; Alix, 2:10; Direct (pacer), 2:05 1/2; and Jay-Eye-See, 2:06 1/2, are all of small size, while Kremlin, 2:07 1/2; Martha Wilkes, 2:08; Sunol, 2:08 1/2; Allerton, 2:09 1/2; and Nelson, 2:10, are large, several of them being over sixteen hands high.

In This Columby Year.

There's lots of things a-happenin' in this Columby year
Tbat strike a fellow now an' then as rather mixed an' queer.
The way the "Trottin' Industry" is being overhauled
Makes ka'm old-fashioned men like me stand by and look appalled.

I never was a "kicker," an' the championship may go
Till it fetches down the record (I wouldn't care how low);
But when I read the papers, an' hear what people say,
I think they handle horses in a mighty curious way.

Their feet are shod with 'luminum and soaked in coca-aign;
They bandage, steam an' blanket 'em until they sweat like rain;
An' they hev' rheumatic suikes made up of little wires,
That make you think of sulkbeams set in injry rubber tires.

The folks that run the races are awful fond of change,
An' they cudgel their invention fur somethin' new and strange;
They want to find a burnin' wrong, so they can set it right,
An' start a revolution so somebody can fight.

They're bridlin' the standard "with their heavy harness" rules,
An' shortenin' up the distance flag, an' shuttin' down the pools—
They're stewin' up their arguments to try an' keep 'em warm,
An' dishin' soup fur horsemen from the kettle of "reform."

But your racin'—without-bettin' talk ain't ev'rywhere admired;
It sounds so much like jokin', it makes a fellow tired;
From the "loaf of inconsistency," it seems as big a slice
As swimmin' without water, or skatin' without ice.

Revised Rules of Racing.

The revised Rules of Racing, as issued by the Board of Control, will be found in the Racing Calendar, published in The Spirit and Sportsman to-morrow. This is the first revision made by the Board, and is important in many particulars. The rules are published in convenient book form. The preface states the powers of the Board as follows: "The Board of Control shall exercise jurisdiction: 1. In regard to the issuing of licenses to all trainers and jockeys. 2. As to the forfeit list. 3. As to the registration of partnership. 4. As to all racing and racing matters which shall be submitted to it on appeal. 5. As to the registry office. 6. As to the Rules of Racing and amendments thereto, and in regard to such new rules as may from time to time be found necessary.

The following changes have been made in the rules: Rule 18, in regard to the registration of horses, is amended so as to apply only to horses foaled in 1892 or thereafter. Rule 29, in regard to entries and declarations, as revised, provides that declarations as well as entries made by telegraph shall be binding. Rule 41, as to proof of transfer of engagements, is amended by omitting the last clause in the old rule, which read as follows: "Sales to parties debarred from racing on the race-courses under the jurisdiction of the Board of Control shall have the effect of a declaration as if made in the declaration date last preceding the sale; the forfeits then due must be paid by the vendor, who shall give immediate notice of such sale to the secretary of the course where the race is to be run."

Rule 44, with regard to the liabilities of nominators, as amended reads that every horse shall be considered as having started and be liable for whatever is due for so doing, "when its jockey has been weighed and its number displayed." Rule 50 reads that after a horse is in the hands of the starter, any subsequent change must be sanctioned by the Executive Committee instead of by the judges as formerly. In Rule 51, the gelding allowance of three pounds is restored. Rule 55, as to signals for the start, is changed to read that a second bell will be rung when the horses shall have started, instead of at the time for the start as formerly. New Rule 56 provides that the positions of the horses when starting shall be determined by lot, that is, a numbered ball shall be drawn from a bottle by the clerk of the scales when the jockeys weigh out. Rule 57, as revised, provides "that a jockey shall not be allowed to dismount except to set right insecure equipments, and then only with the permission of the starter." A clause is added to Rule 59 about declarations to win, which states that a jockey riding a horse, with which his owner has not declared to win, must not stop such horses, except in favor of his stable companion, "and then only when it is evident that his stable companion can win."

A clause is also added to Rule 60 in regard to jostling or crowding, as follows: "But nothing in this rule shall prevent the judges taking cognizance of foul riding." The rules governing selling races have been changed in important respects. Under the new rule (72) fifteen minutes is allowed for the payment of a horse sold at auction, and owners can claim horses for their own account only. "Every claim must be made in writing to the clerk of the course or the clerk of the scales not later than a quarter of an hour after the winner has passed the scales, and must be accompanied by the purchase money, if required." Revised Rule 73 provides that any person who shall attempt to prevent another person from bidding on the winner of a selling race, or claiming any horse in such race, shall be ruled off, instead of warned off as formerly. Under the revised rules (84) racing colors must be filed with the Board of Control, instead of with the clerk of the course. Revised Rule 87 provides that no owner or trainer shall engage any discharged attendant who has not a written discharge from his last employer, "which discharge shall not be captiously refused."

In the rules relating to the regulations of the course, only one change is made, which provides that only one attendant shall be allowed to assist a jockey dismounting. The only change made in the rules on betting is that when the number of a horse has been exhibited, all bets on him stand. The old rule read, "unless otherwise ordered by the Executive Committee." The changes in the rules, especially those relating to selling races, have long been needed, and will undoubtedly meet with the approval of horsemen.—Daily Spirit, May 18.

LA JOYA, the best two-year-old that has yet been shown in the West, will be sent East to run for the Matron Stakes at Morris Park and for the Futurity at Coney Island. This, at least, is the intention of her owners at present. This is based on the theory that no two-year-old so good as she has been seen in the East yet. If that is what the Western people are counting on, they are liable to be sadly disappointed, for none of the best two-year-olds in the East have yet faced the starter, unless Chateau should chance to be among them. After the Brooklyn meeting the Western people may change their minds about the invincibility of their champion filly. The estimate of the greatness of the filly is apparently based upon the fact that "Lazarone, the big Guttenburg colt, has also had a chance at the filly and could do no better than reach her saddle." That does not make her a world-beater by any means.

The National Trotting Association.

BOARD OF REVIEW—OFFICIAL REPORT.

By authority of the Board of Review, the President called a special meeting, which was held at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, Ill., commencing at 8 p. m. on Tuesday, May 9th, 1893.

Present: P. P. Johnston, President; David Bonner, First Vice-President; Charles Dana Palmer, of the Eastern District; George W. Archer, of the Atlantic District; William Russell Allen, of the Central District; John L. Mitchell, of the Western District; Jesse D. Carr, of the Pacific District, and the undersigned, Secretary.

The President called the meeting to order promptly at 8 p. m., when those who were present and desired to give oral testimony in litigated cases were first heard.

The following are the most prominent cases presented and judgments ordered:

1,932—The National Trotting Association vs. C. H. Nelson, Waterville, Me., and b s Nelson; F. L. Noble, George G. Robens, Grand Rapids, Mich., and gr s Alcyron.

Application for an order in the matter of alleged fraud in the $10,000 Stallion Stake race trotted at Beacon Park, Boston, Mass., on September 23, 1892. Temporary reinstatement of Nelson and Robens continued.

2,242—H. G. Barrett, West Somers, N. Y., vs. William H. Wilkins, White Plains, N. Y., and b s Jim. Application for an order.

The member of White Plains offered a purse for two-year-olds, the condition of which was "owners to drive." The race was half-mile heats. Judges declared defendant Barrett's filly Miss Wilkes distanced in the first heat, the driver coming in two pounds short weight, whereupon he protested the eligibility of defendant's bay stallion Jim, claiming he was not owned by Wilkins, the driver.

ORDERED, That Miss Wilkes was properly ruled out for coming in short of weight, and that the protest against b s Jim be sustained.

2,246—J. Capehart, Point Pleasant, W. Va., vs. Athens County Agricultural Association, Athens, Ohio. Complaint and application for an order.

Plaintiff claims $100 extra which the Society offered "to beat track record in trotting race." The member claims that they only offered the extra premium in the open-to-all trotting race, which did not fill. It seems a 2:25 stallion race was made up with plaintiff's b s Marquette and two others as starters, which race was won by Marquette in 2:21, thus beating the former track record of 2:23. It is ADJUDGED, That under the published conditions Marquette having beat the track record in a trotting race, is entitled to the $100 offered therefor.

2,310—Hubinger Brothers, New Haven, Conn., vs. Franklin Trotting Park, G. H. Copeland & Co., Proprietors, Franklin Park, Mass. Application for an order.

Plaintiff's claim that defendants owe them for winnings at a meeting given by the latter in July last, $407.50. Defendants have been repeatedly notified from the office, but make no response.

ORDERED, That G. H. Copeland & Co. be suspended until they pay the premiums lawfully won at the meeting given by them at Franklin Park in 1892.

2,320—E. D. Houston, Manchester, N. H., vs. Granite City Trotting Club, Tilton, N. H.; W. A. Richardson, Woodsville, N. H. Application for release from expulsion imposed July 23, 1892.

Plaintiff was temporarily reinstated at the December meeting of 1892, and the case continued for further investigation. He had charged Mr. W. A. Richardson with being interested in pools on a race in which he was acting as judge. The case against Richardson is dismissed, and application of plaintiff for permanent reinstatement is granted.

Plaintiff also charges that while he, himself, was under expulsion imposed by the Granite City Trotting Club, he occupied the judges' stand as one of the judges with and by invitation of W. A. Richardson and D. J. Smith as judges, and was extended the courtesies of the track leased by the Granite City Trotting Club. It is further ORDERED, That the Granite City Trotting Club be cited to appear and show cause, if any, why it should not be fined for allowing an expelled man in the stand.

2,323—D. A. Holmes, Hubbardville, N. Y., Ex parte. Application for release from suspension imposed May 31, 1892, by order of the Board of Review.

ORDERED, That the applicant be temporarily relieved from the suspension.

2,324—H. B. & H. D. Allen, Waterloo, Iowa, vs. Iowa City Driving Park Association, Iowa City, Iowa. Application for release of themselves, E. Tibbits and the b s Richard Jay (pacer) from suspension imposed October 7, 1892.

Applicant claims exemption from payment of entrance money on his b s Richard Jay. He sends evidence showing that when the entry was made by his driver it was stipulated that the race should be performed on Saturday, while the member responds through the secretary that he agreed to start the race either on Saturday or Monday, and did start it on the latter day. He claims also that had the horse performed in the race on Monday he could still have arrived at Knoxville in time to fill his next engagement on Wednesday. The letter of entry is without conditions. It may be stated that the association advertised the right to change order of events and to postpone or declare off any or all races on account of weather or other causes. The plaintiffs were not present in person when the entry was made. The secretary appeared before the Board and gave his evidence in person. Although the evidence sent by plaintiffs is positive that it was agreed that the race should be paced on Saturday, yet it is just as positive on the other side that both Saturday and Monday were named, and this, together with the fact that no reservation was made in the entry, seems to force a conclusion in favor of defendant. It is ORDERED, That the application be denied.

2,328—Thomas Smith, Vallejo, Cal., Ex parte. Appeal from decision of the Pacific District Board in the matter of F. C. Chapman's appeal from decision of the judges in the three-year-old special race at Vallejo, Cal., Oct. 11, 1892.

The decision of this case by the Pacific District Board was published in full in the turf papers a short time ago. Plaintiff asks to have the case remanded back to the District Board for re-trial. The decision of the District Board is affirmed and application for re-trial denied.

2,329—San Mateo and Santa Clara County Agricultural Association, No. 5, San Jose, Cal. Ex parte. Appeal from decision of the Pacific District Board in the matter of W. B. Bradbury's liability for entrance fees contracted.

This case was also tried by the Pacific District Board and the full report published.

2,330—J. W. Bailey, Portland, Ore., ex parte. Application for an order under Rule 40, as to the alleged record of 2:31 given the b. s. "King Patchen" at Salem, Ore., Sept. 16, 1892.

Plaintiff asks the Board to correct the record given his three-year-old colt "King Patchen." At the Oregon State Fair in the second heat of the above named race the two leading colts made a dead heat for first place. The Judges having taken the time of the third horse, gave him the record of 2:31. Rule 39 having been compiled with as to above facts, it is ORDERED, That the above mentioned record was improperly given and is void.

2,332—H. C. Jewett & Co., Jewettville, N. Y. ex parte. Application for an order under Rule 39, Section 3, as to alleged record of 2:26 obtained by the b. s. "Pearlo" at Cubs, N. Y., Sep. 20, 1892.

ORDERED, That applicant be temporarily reinstated. 2,360—B. D. Phillips, Oakland, Cal., vs. Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, San Francisco, Cal. Application for release from expulsion imposed Oct. 26, 1892.

In October, 1892, there was a race at Oakland, Cal., in which applicant participated with his b. m. "Laura B." The Judges removed the driver under authority of Rule 28, and at the conclusion the Judges ordered the expulsion of Mr. Phillips, whereupon he appealed through the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association to the Pacific District Board of the National Trotting Association, which Board, taking into consideration the circumstances as presented by witnesses, and the sworn testimony of Mr. Phillips, recommended that the sentence of expulsion be set aside, and that in place thereof Mr. Phillips be fined in the sum of $500 and suspended until such fine is paid, which recommendation is hereby approved and ordered to be placed on the records.

The Secretary presented the report of the Pacific District Board in the matter of the record of the b. s. "Stamboni," which has been heretofore reported and printed in the turf papers, and on motion of Mr. Archer, said report was accepted, and the proceedings and findings of said Board were approved.

The Secretary laid before the Board a printed report of the Treasurer and Secretary, which was approved, also a list of new members, which was approved.

The President presented without reading the report of the Conference Committee of the National and American Trotting Association, and supplemented the same with an oral report. After some discussion the report was accepted and ordered placed on file.

On motion of Mr. Palmer, seconded by Mr. Allen, the President was authorized to call a Special Congress at such time as he might see fit previous to the regular Congress, by the following vote, the ayes and noes for which were called for by Mr. Archer; Allen, aye; Archer, no; Bonner, aye; Carr, no; Mitchell, no; Palmer, aye; the President, aye. On motion of Mr. Archer the Secretary was directed to send to each member a copy of the proposed amendments with the notice of the date set for Congress.

On motion of Mr. Bonner, it was ordered that the Secretary call the Special Congress to meet in New York at the Murray Hill Hotel, on Monday, June 5, 1893, at 8 o'clock p. m. On motion the Board adjourned to meet again, as per By-Laws, unless sooner convened by the President.

M. M. MORSE, Secretary.

Col. Pate's Mexican Venture.

Col. R. C. Pate, of St. Louis, Mo., has secured from the Government of Mexico permission to establish a horse-breeding farm and race-course in that country. The first race course will be established in the suburbs of the City of Mexico, and Col. Pate expects to have it ready for operation by November 1 next. The City of Mexico is a place of about 500,000 people, all of an out-door sporting disposition, so, with such a large populace so close at hand to draw from, the venture at that location is sure to be a grand success.

After the race course at the City of Mexico is in full operation, others will be projected, it being Col. Pate's intention to build tracks at Pueblo, a place of about 100,000; Quaid-lasha, 60,000; San Luis Potosi, 60,000, and Monterey, with a population of 60,000.

The climate of Mexico is very mild and equitable, and when it is midwinter in this country, it is pleasant as June weather down there, and all kinds of out-door sport is possible.

This great enterprise will be of no little interest to Kentucky and Tennessee breeders of the thoroughbred. It will open up a new and extensive market for this class of stock, and will effectually, for a long time, at least, remove all fear of an over supply of thoroughbred horses. In the course of time, perhaps, many racehorses will be bred in Mexico, for it is a country well adapted to that business; but it will be some years yet, before it is done on a scale of any magnitude. In the meantime many thoroughbred mares and stallions will be required to start the studs down there, and the breeders of the United States will have to furnish the bulk of them. Kentucky and Tennessee have more good ones than can be found in any other section of the United States, and when the exportation of the thoroughbred to Mexico begins, the breeders of these two States will find a strong demand for their stock.—Live Stock Record.

"All bets off; twenty minutes for new betting," is now a reminiscence as far as Board of Control race courses are concerned. The new rule, as amended, will read as follows: "When the number of a horse and the name of the jockey have been displayed, all bets on him stand." The observance of this rule will put an end to the delays and changes in betting—a great and constantly-growing abuse—and therefore prove a boon to race-goers as well as owners.

ACCORDING to an Eastern writer Charles Reed, the famous owner of Imp. St. Blaise, Miser, Exile, Thora and many other celebrities of the turf and harem, will found a breeding establishment in this State, where he lived in "early days." If true it means a great deal for California, for Mr. Reed has a legion of friends that would doubtless follow in his wake and make the Golden State the greatest section of the earth for breeding racehorses—if it is not already.

THE FARM.

A Common Disorder in Lambs.

Diarrhoea is, beyond doubt, one of the most dreaded diseases lambs are heir to, and it is the lamb that falls a victim to this disorder rather than the adult sheep, although the latter are not exempt from its attacks. When attacked by this disease the names variously applied to it are "black scours in lambs," "dysentery," "skit," and diarrhoea, any of which are proper names for the disease which so often proves fatal to the lambs. The disease is caused by and is the direct result of indigestion, and anything in the management of the lamb flock that will cause the lambs to fail in food assimilation is liable to superinduce diarrhoea, and if not attended to at once with curatives will prove fatal. The direct causes of this disease are: Eating rank grass in a wet season, the herbage on low, wet lands, frozen clover in the fall of the year, frozen turnip tops, weeds which have grown soft and watery in the shade, frozen or damp hay, musty hay which has cryptogamic growth, sudden changes of feed or pasture, exposure to cold and wet after having been heated by driving or chased by a dog, or anything that can directly or indirectly derange the digestive organs. Some writers believe the disease to be constitutional with some sheep and the causes to be cumulative in their effects. In such sheep the system is lacking in vigor and the blood, being deficient in red corpuscular iron and nutritive matter, does not deposit in the abomasum or fourth stomach a sufficient amount of gastric fluid, or in the gall duct the proper quality of bile, or in the pancreas a full supply of pancreatic juice. This, in addition to the improper mastication of the food, becomes a source of irritation to the stomach and intestines, the mucous membranes of which set to work to secrete an unusual amount of mucous to wash the offending matter out of the system.

Treatment consists in something that will arrest the unusual secretion of mucous and restore the perverted functions of the stomach and intestines to their former condition. To do this the cause, if known, must be removed or the medicine will be of no avail. In my experience in the sheep business I have had but little of this disease, and have never had a case of it which would not yield to the remedy of feeding wheat bran. It will arrest incipient attacks, and it is then when it must be met with correctives. Bran will be considered the sheet-anchor of lamb-raising if once used in the flock. It is not the best method to arrest the scours too suddenly; it is Nature's method of expelling from the intestines something which is offensive to them. It should always be remembered that an animal in poor condition is much more liable to attacks of scours than one which is more robust.

Sheep afflicted with diarrhoea should be separated from the flock to an enclosure with little or no green feed, and fed bran till the looseness of the bowels be corrected. If the disease is persistent and cannot be corrected by this remedy, and the patient voids a thickened mucous, a tablespoonful of castor-oil should be given an adult sheep and half that amount to a lamb to remove any matter which may be irritating to the bowels; this should be followed up within three or four hours with two teaspoonfuls of a decoction of white oak bark or blackberry root, with half a teaspoonful of chalk or soda morning and evening. These remedies are simple and generally on hand, but if they should prove to be of no avail, a preparation of chalk, one ounce; catechu, four drams; opium, one and one-half drams, should be mixed with a half pint of peppermint water and bottled for use. When needed shake well and give the lamb a teaspoonful twice a day, a grown sheep twice as much.

Diarrhoea is generally a sign of weakness and poverty, incestuously-bred lambs being subject to attacks of this disease to an alarming extent sometimes; and it is thought by some excellent authorities on the sheep that the lambs which have been bred to a ram which is permitted to waste his energy in a large flock of sheep in useless service are easy victims of this disease. In seasons when the diarrhoea is prevalent their present conditions should be changed, and they should have grain at least once per day, and twice will be better if of the right sort, and they should have shelter.

I am a firm believer that many of the disorders we have to contend with in not only flocks of sheep but with poultry and other farm stock are due to the practice of incestuous breeding. Young turkeys will not live which are the result of such breeding. Weak lambs are the result of such practice, and it should never be resorted to unless in very extreme conditions of circumstances.—Spex, in Breeders' Gazette.

Improved Stock.

Good stock generally indicates a good farmer, writes ex-Governor Glick, of Kansas. It inspires a desire to better all the surroundings of the farm, and soon manifests itself in improved facilities for farming; in better buildings, in better and more beautiful surroundings, all showing the value of improved stock as a money-maker and debt-player over the "scrub" farming that is the sure index of the "scrub" raiser. The breeder of improved stock is a public benefactor in a measure, and the scope of his good work and the profits he may realize on his business will often depend on how far he is removed from "scrub" practices himself. The example of the breeder has much to do with his success.

If he is engaged in raising thoroughbred horses, or, to be more exact, I will say an improved breed of horses, it will not inspire the man who visits his barn to see on his way a "scrub" hull paying his devotions to a lot of "scrub" cows, or to have his ears greeted by the razor-back porcine beauty borrowed from a neighbor to add numbers to the "scrub" squealers who block the way to the stable where the beautiful Clydesdale or thoroughbred stands to be admired. The practices of such a man detract from his arguments in favor of his fine-bred horses, and his practice is as strong an argument to the unthinking or ignorant as his good horses are to the appreciative visitor.

The breeder of fine stock must, as soon as he possibly can, divorce himself from the breeding of "scrub" stock, and make all the surroundings as near thoroughbred as possible. It will even add to the beauty of the barn to have the chickens belonging to an improved breed, and such an example may strike even a dull visitor and educate him up to an appreciation of good stock, and in the future make him a purchaser and breeder of some one of the improved kinds to which his inclinations may lead and his purse enable him to embark in. I have remarked that the breeder of fine stock is a public benefactor. I know of no greater benefit that can accrue to the farmers than to enable them to replace their "scrub" stock with the improved kinds.

It will enable them to largely increase their income without increasing their labor, expense or care; and if human happiness is of any use to man I do not know of anything in nature that will inspire more genuine happiness in a man than to view and admire his own herd of fine cattle, horses sheep or swine. While this is the acme of human happiness to the successful breeder, it is no less a benefaction worth very much to mankind. How, then, shall the breeding of fine stock be made profitable to the breeder and a market secured for his surplus products? One important consideration is to keep, breed and sell only the best for breeding purposes. Make the stock its own standing advertiser of its merits.

Breed as near perfection as possible, having an ideal to which you will endeavor to model the produce of the head. In breeding cattle the indifferent male will make a good steer, and will make as much money as if left entire, and may save the reputation of the breeder. A poor breeding animal leaving a herd is of no credit to it, and while it may leave a few dollars in its place it will prevent any more dollars going to that herd from the neighborhood where it has taken up its abode. This same policy should apply to all kinds of fine stock. It is not creditable to a good breeder who knows what a good type of breed is to sell or impose one for breeding purposes on a man who is not familiar with the merits of the breed, or who is ignorant of the defects of the animal he buys.

Roup and Gapes.

Roup in winter and spring destroys the adults, while gapes in the spring and summer makes havoc with the young chicks. The difficulty in the way of curing diseases of poultry is that the "numbers" are to be met with. That is, where it would not be difficult to handle and treat one or two sick fowls, the cost of such work, in the bestowal of labor and time on a whole flock or brood, will be too great in proportion to the value of the birds; hence, in treating such diseases as roup and gapes, the only methods that can be used are such as will permit of attempting the use of remedies as a whole, and in administering them by admixture with the food or drink.

Of all the diseases which are mentioned to us by our readers, and of which the greater number of inquiries are made, the roup stands first. It is a disease which covers a great many ills, but it is used principally to designate that form of disease in which the bird really has scrofula, or tubercular consumption, not only an offensive odor resulting, but the disease is communicated to other members of the flock. Catarrh, cauter, croup and other forms of disease resultant from "catching cold" also come under the term roup. To attempt a cure means more work than can be given with the malignant roup, but the canker, bronchial affections, swollen eyes, etc., may often be treated successfully, many remedies having frequently been given in this department. The best preventive is air-slaked lime, used freely over the floor and yards. If an ounce of spirits of turpentine is intimately mixed with a peck of air-slaked lime, it will be much more efficacious. When a flock of fowls remain ill for weeks and do not show signs of improvement the ax or hatchet should be applied.

Gapes in little chicks is another difficulty which demands much more labor than can be bestowed on a few broods. The best preventive is the lime and turpentine, as suggested above, and if the ground is kept clean by turning the soil under occasionally, with an application of lime made at least once a week, there will be but little danger of gapes appearing. In fact, it is cheaper and better to aim to prevent diseases than to rely upon the making of cures afterward.

The work of prevention should begin early in the season. After the chicks have reached a suitable age and have been shipped to market the proper plan is then to apply lime, spade the ground, and apply lime again. In this way disease is destroyed, and if the work is repeated in the following spring, before the chicks are hatched, the liability of loss will be reduced to a minimum, and as it is much less laborious to do this than to treat for diseases, we trust the readers will give the subject their consideration.

Keeping the Brood Sow.

G. W. Hervey: She is a constant bill of expense, and we know that if farmers would carefully figure what a litter of pigs cost them at birth there would be more care taken to save them at this time. In the winter time the sow can do much to pay her way. When she follows the stock in the feed lot she puts to a profitable use much that would otherwise be lost. The grains of corn that the cows do not digest, or those lost in the waste of the fodder box she will save, but the good, honest work she does for the farmer is in stirring the corn stalks and waste straw in the feed lot until she fines it up, so that it can go to the fields as manure in late winter or early spring. Under the manipulations of a few brood sows the manure is in better shape to go out in the spring than it will be in the fall after the heat of summer, if left without stirring. This work is no disadvantage to the sow or the young she carries, but rather to their great benefit. The brood sow can be made a source of profit in every feed lot. Yet do not understand us to say that the gleanings of the ordinary feed lot will furnish all the necessary food for the proper development of the coming litter.

The secret of healthy swine is plenty of good, succulent food. They cannot be kept healthy without it. Neither can pigs be made grow rapidly to maturity without it. A writer says with truth that the natural food for hogs in the wild state is grass, the mast of the forest, roots and bulbs of plants. The necessity for food of this character is well recognized by Nature in providing the hog with a roofer for the purpose of obtaining it. Even after generations of domestication, with ample sustenance to satisfy all demands, this proclivity or desire to root, independent of necessity, remains as a prominent characteristic. Farmers who have practiced from this pointer, and during the winter months have at stated intervals, at least twice a week, given one feed of potatoes, beets, artichokes or turnips, have found that the hogs not only relish them but derive great benefit therefrom. They are conducive to a perfect condition of the system, stimulating the action of the various organs in the performance of their functions. They aid in digestion and assimilation of the more solid food. Brood sows as well as their young are especially benefited by a liberal supply of root diet. Indeed it is almost compulsory to insure strong, healthy pigs, and a natural farrow.

Poultry Notes.

The usual number of hens allowed to one gobbler is from 15 to 25, so that there should be five gobblers with 100 hen turkeys.

Diarrhoea may be stopped by mixing a little chalk with their soft food. Put a half-teaspoonful of tincture of iron in two quarts of their drinking water. Acting sleepy is an indication that either they or their roosts are lousy.

Coal ashes are good both for a dust supply and to furnish grit, but wood ashes, owing to the potash or lye contained in them, will bleach and roughen feet, skin and plumage, and should not be put into the chicken yard.

We see no reason why young turkey gobblers could not be profitably turned into capons, though we know of no breeder who has tried it. The chance of loss and increase in size would be about the same as with chickens similarly treated.

The poultry business cannot be made anywhere to net $1.50 to $2 per hen yearly, season after season, unless the manager is exceptionally well qualified to make it profitable. An average of $1 per hen yearly, however, with good management, is not too much to expect.

The pin-feather age, i. e., when they are about four weeks old, is the critical period in the growth of any chickens, bantams included. They need the utmost care then to tide them over the dangerous time. Generally they are not warm enough at night. Bantams can scarcely be given too warm quarters nor reared too carefully, as they are naturally more delicate and tender than larger fowls. But those who once acquire the knack of raising them are usually successful in getting a good percent. at maturity.

Scaly leg is caused by a minute parasite burrowing beneath the scales, and the way to cure the disease is to kill the parasite. This may be accomplished without much trouble by first washing feet and shanks in warm soap-suds so as to soften the scales; wipe dry and then apply with a stiff brush either strong carbolic salve or kerosene oil. The latter is most effective, but has a bleaching tendency which might be objectionable in treating yellow-legged fowls.—Fanciers' Monthly.

Diseases of the Throat.

Hoarse breathing, rattling in the throat, choking, yellowish substance in the throat, resembling diphtheria in children, and sometimes accompanied with swollen eyes, may be combined as one difficulty. It is usually due to a draft from some source, and the ventilator is more at fault than anything else. The best remedy is to swab the throat in the morning (usually a feather) with a mixture of one part spirits of turpentine and three parts of sweet oil, at the same time injecting a few drops of the mixture in each nostril. At night sprinkle a pinch of chlorate of potash down the throat. Put ten grains of powdered permanganate of potash in each quart of the drinking-water, and keep the birds warm. The handling of the birds is laborious, hence all sick ones should be removed from the others.

Dyspepsia manifests itself in various forms, and farmers are more often afflicted with it than they imagine. The laws of health are an unknown quantity to most farmers. They get up early in the morning, eat a hurried breakfast of indigestible food, work hard until noon, come in tired, and in fifteen minutes after sitting down to dinner they have hurriedly swallowed more indigestible food and washed it down with a lot of strong, hot coffee. The stomach is not in condition to digest food when the body is tired. Every farmer should rest by lying down at least fifteen minutes before going to dinner or supper. Then he should partake only of food that is nutritious and easy to digest. I have seen on hundreds of farmers' tables, even in hot weather, fat bacon swimming in pure grease, mashed potatoes soppy with grease, hot hiccuit, none too light, strong, hot coffee and the inevitable pie, made generally of green apples and with heavy, doughy, crust; and this goes on day after day until finally the doctor is called in to right up the system with a course of medicine. How much better it would be to spend a little time in setting out a good patch of strawberries, raspberries and currants and a few grape vines, and then subscribe for a good agricultural paper and learn how to care for them! Plenty of small fruit during the hot weather will save many a doctor's bill, to say nothing of the pleasure of having it, and the greater ease with which one can work when properly fed.

The heifer's first milking period should be continued as long as possible in order to fix that tendency for life and make it transmissible. A good cow should not milk less than ten months of the year, as a rule, though here again different cows vary greatly, it being almost impossible to dry some off. Always treat the growing heifers kindly and accustom them to be handled, so that there will be no need of any "breaking in" or kicking straps. The farmer who calls out for a kicking strao for his cow probably needs one himself. A dairyman who kicks or clubs a cow or hurts her with a dog is not fit to own an animal with maternal instincts and nervous tendencies. The noble services she is capable of rendering deserves better things. But she will get even with her brutal owner by putting less milk of poorer quality into the pail, and probably both pail and owner will be kicked into the manure gutter, where he richly deserves to go.

Professional men invariably have their working libraries. The most successful physician is the one who consults his text books most. The safest lawyer is one who refers to his digest oftener. The farmer or breeder may not feel the need of the information contained in volumes written for his benefit as much as does the doctor or lawyer, but there are many times when the consultation of a standard book relating to the many departments of farm work would be of inestimable value. There are always little things coming up which are not fully understood by the average man. Many of these little things are important in their way and should be made a matter of investigation.

Men should never travel in countries where snakes abound without having a hypodermic syringe (which can go into the waistcoat pocket) and some permanganate of potash in crystals, to be obtained from any chemist, which, dissolved in a little bottle of water, can be instantly injected into the wound, and the man is saved. All South Americans carry this remedy, and it is getting known in the North, and is a perfect antidote for all American snakes. Of course, brandy could be taken also to strengthen the action of the heart. It would be well for our readers to paste this up for reference.—London Field.

THE GUN.

Immortal Love.

[By CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.]

Dear form—sweet face—bright hair—
My love for thee is one
Sweet fervent breath of prayer,

Begun as soon as sight
From those dear eyes to mine
Shot glances of delight,

By laws as fixed at birth
As pleasure or of pain,
Or any of the earth,

As flowers to the sun,
As rivers to the sea,
As time flows ever on,

My sorrows, tears and grief
Vanish before thy face,
And perfect, sweet Relief

When thou art gone the sun
Shines dimly on my path,
And all the fleecy clouds

The birds sing not so sweet,
And weary is their song,
Their notes do harshly greet

'Tis strange, but yesterday
When thou wert here, their notes
Seemed streams of melody

The sunlight's golden gleam,
The fleecy cloudlets sail,
Were shimmering, pulsing stream,

Morn, noon and night I raise
My soul to God in prayer
And thankfulness and praise,

To guard thy precious head
From every source of harm,
And, o'er thy slumbering bed,

Love lies beyond the tomb,
In heaven pure and free
Its sweet flowers ever bloom

The Country Club.

On Saturday last the Country Club held its monthly match for May at the traps at Oakland race track. There was a very good attendance and the birds were an extra good lot.

This fact may atone, in a measure, for the low scores made as a whole on this occasion. Mr. Austin C. Tubbs and Mr. H. E. Hall tied for first honors with ten kills each. Nine kills out of the dozen can be said to be very good shooting considering the class of birds shot at. The score:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Tubbs, Austin C. (2-10), Hall (2-10), Hamilton (2-9), Kittle (2-9), Sprague (2-9), Webster (2-9), Woodward, R. B. (2-8), Ewing (2-8), Tubbs, W. B. (2-8), Murdoch (2-8), Woodward, H. W. (2-8), Babcock (2-8), Buckbee (2-8), Eddy (2-8), Tallant (2-8), Stelson (2-8), Richards (2-8), Oxnard (2-8), Crocker (2-8), Worden (2-8), Sperry (2-8), Atherton (2-8), Wilson (2-8), Sperry (April score) (2-8).

There was much amusement had in the match as bird after bird eluded the shots of the usually skillful gentlemen and the score seemed to narrow down to the point where it was questionable as to which one of the contestants would score the fewest number of kills.

In a subsequent six-bird match the scores stood as follows, those killing five birds each dividing the purse.

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Sprague (1-5), Wilson (1-5), Tallant (1-5), H. W. Woodward (1-5), Hamilton (1-5), Ewing (1-5), Atherton (1-5), Eddy (1-5), Crocker (1-5), Worden (1-5), Richards (1-5).

In the second event, miss-and-out the score stood:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes Wilson (2-4), Tallant (2-4), Richards (2-4), Hamilton (2-4), Sprague (2-4), Eddy (2-4), Crocker (2-4), Worden (2-4), Woodward (2-4), Ewing (2-4).

Sprague and Woodward divided the next purse; again, Sprague and Richards; Woodward and Richards, coming in on the succeeding event, while Sprague, Richards and Woodward divided the final on account of lack of birds to fight it to a finish.

The Selby Medal.

The Selby medal contest, which took place at Oakland Shooting Park, last Sunday, presented some first-class sport. The birds were a good lot.

These contests have been going on for so long that all interest has been lost in the events save by some four or five sportsmen who have succeeded in winning the medal more than once. Robinson, Haas and Merrill have each won the medal three times, and either of these gentlemen winning it once more will take it out of the circle of sporting events. This will be good news, for it has become a decided "chestnut," so to speak, in sports at the trap.

The match was refereed by Mr. A. Russell Crowell, the score on the whole showing some remarkably good shooting. Mr. Merrill won the medal on nineteen clean kills, his losing bird falling dead out of bounds. This is a remarkably good score, especially when the quality of the birds is taken into account. Robinson and "Slade" scored seventeen each, while Fay, the winner of the medal at the preceding contest, scored one bird less.

Two Months' Shikar From Secunderabad.

[CONCLUDED.]

19th.—Stewart and I started at 4 o'clock for the hills near Bagerlipett to search for hison. H and K were to take the camp to our old halting place at Bagerlipett and we were to join them there. We got to the hills just as it was getting light and then separated. Before going very far I came on the fresh tracks of a tigress and cub which from their size I concluded were made by the mother and brother of the young tiger I killed in these parts on the 4th. I went on in the direction they led, not expecting to see anything of the beasts, when suddenly Pochaloo who was in front stopped and whispered, "Bgh ata" (tiger's coming). Looking in the direction he pointed I saw a young tiger coming slowly towards us; we instantly squatted and looked out to see if the old one was anywhere about, but we saw nothing of her. The youngster came on totally unconscious of our close proximity. He was evidently searching for his mother, as he was making the peculiar noise that tigers do when they are calling one another. When he got within thirty yards he turned away again and began walking straight from me. I fired at once, and over he tumbled making a most tremendous row. I now fully expected to see the old lady coming to the rescue, so did not fire again at the young one, though he had picked himself up and was moving off. Evidently she was nowhere about as nothing appeared, so I fired again through the trees at the retreating tiger but missed him. He now saw his enemy for the first time and charged toward me with great demonstrations and noise; his pluck, however, only brought him to within twenty or thirty yards of me when he lay down growling. Reloading I walked forward a few yards and finished him with a ball in the chest. S., who was not far off and had heard the firing, now joined me, we sent off the young tiger, who measured about six feet, to camp, and continued our wanderings. We failed to come across hison, though we found plenty of old tracks, and we saw no other game. We arrived at B— before the others came up, so I set to work and skinned the tiger, and as soon as the tents appeared we pitched in the old spot under a kangar tree. The water we found very bad, as the tank had nearly dried up. The day was very hot, but we had a little rain at night.

20th.—To-day I determined to make a last desperate attempt to get a hison, so I started early with Pochaloo for the hills. I went over some very likely-looking ground and found in one or two places tracks of them only one day old, but though I walked for miles and climbed rocks and hills innumerable, I was completely unsuccessful. I did not get back to camp till near evening, having had a tremendously hard day's work with no result.

21st.—We turned out and heat for a tiger hut saw him not. A panther was put up but no one got a shot at him.

22d.—Marched to Kanpuriz, ten miles; we had breakfast half-way, at Purkul. The encamping ground at this place was a very good one and the water first-rate. In the evening S. and I had a delightful bathe in a large bowrie of very clean water the other side of the village.

23d.—We sent our camp on to Moripett, sixteen miles, as we have made up our minds to hurry back to Koomsoopolly in hopes of getting some more tigers out of the hills there. We all got up early and went off to some rocky hills before daylight, to look out for hears, but none put in an appearance. S. left us here to go and see Hannimkoudah, H., K. and I went on to Nagarum where there is a very large tank, we had breakfast here and then continued one march, arriving at our destination late in the afternoon.

24th.—Marched once more into Koomsoopolly. This is the place where S. and I joined the Shikar party at first. We got up pretty early and encamped in the old spot under some fine tamsrind trees. We were cheered by the report that there were still tige s about. In the afternoon a bullock was killed near Bear Hill, but the cow-herds drove off the tiger and brought in the dead bullock. We tied up a lot of heylahs. K. and I bathed in the old bowrie in the evening.

25th.—No kill; greatly to our disappointment, as we had fully expected one. We therefore spent the day in the tents, and a precious hot day it was. K. and I went out a short way from camp in the evening, and I shot a hare. On our return we had a bathe. Just as we were going to sit down to dinner S. made his appearance, having ridden over from H—h. We tied up a good lot of heylahs to-night.

26th.—Our expectations of a kill was realized this morning with a vengeance; our shikarries, when they came in from their rounds, reported four heylahs killed round Bear Hill, two had been dragged up into the hill the other two were not eaten at all. Beaters were soon collected, and the hill not being more than a mile from camp we were soon on the spot and stationed at our respective trees and rocks up the hill side. After waiting some time we heard the heaters approaching and presently some men, who had been placed up trees as stops to prevent anything leaving the hill before arriving at our positions, began coughing and making noises, which set us all on the lookout, as we knew that they must have seen a tiger, and were doing this to keep him in the hill. Nothing appeared for some time, at last I caught a glimpse of something moving in the bushes straight in front of me, and the next minute a fine tigress appeared in view. She got onto a rock where she stood still for a few seconds looking about her, I remaining perfectly quiet but quite ready to fire should she catch sight of me. She did not suspect my presence, and jumping off the rock advanced stealthily toward me. I let her come to within fifteen or twenty yards so as to make sure, took a steady aim at her head and pulled the trigger, over she went and commenced bounding and tumbling about in such an extraordinary manner that I thought it best to give her the left barrel; the ball passed through her heart and after another roll or two she lay dead. A cub was repo. to have been seen with her but it must have hidden somewhere amongst the rocks for it did not come past us and none of the beaters saw it go back. The tigress measured eight feet seven inches, and was very handsomely marked; my first ball had taken her just below the left eye. After this we heat out the rest of the hill but nothing more was seen. I am pretty certain she was not the slayer of all four heylahs, the two that were not eaten were, I expect, killed by a tiger, who, after doing so, went off to another hill; the tracks near the bodies of these two heylahs appearing too large to have been made by a tigress. It was a tremendously hot day so we made tracks for camp, H. and I going on one elephant, S. and K. on another. On the way I got a shot at a buck cheetul (spotted deer) and wounded him, but we lost him in the thick thorn jungle. S. left for Secunderabad in the afternoon. In the evening K. and I bathed as usual. A very heavy storm passed near us at sunset, but we only got a slight shower. The night was delightfully cool and refreshing after the hot day.

27th.—No kill. In the tents all day, and having nothing much to do we felt it decidedly hot. Our customary bathe in the evening revived our drooping spirits a little.

28th.—A kill at a place about two miles off. The hill was a very difficult one to beat as one side of it consisted of huge boulders of rock and caves; we had to be posted on trees in the jungles below. Before long a hyena came loping along past my tree but was, of course, only looked down upon and allowed to continue his move to a quieter abode. Soon after this we heard the tiger roar and then the beat stopped, from which we knew that the beast must have broken back. This proved to be the case, he had remained quiet under a rock till the heaters came up and then charged right through them, one of the men had a very narrow escape. They described him as a huge beast, and we believe him to be the one that has done so much damage and that has two or three times managed to escape us. We tried a beat back but he was not again to be found, so we made towards camp. On our way we were caught in a tremendous storm of rain and hail, accompanied by lightning and a perfect gale of wind. The camp on our arrival presented a most forlorn appearance. A river of water was running through the cook's room and past the tents, and our servants were plunging and splashing about in it in pursuit of sundry articles belonging to the culinary department which were being carried off. The tents luckily stood their ground but they had a very dragged and semi-collapsed look about them. The storm did not last very long, and the rest of the afternoon was spent in getting things a little ship-shape again.

29th.—No kill. As it was a cool morning I got my photo things out and took a picture of a tamsrind tree close by, which was torn down by the gale yesterday. When we arrived here I thought of pitching my tent under this very tree, but I found that there would be no good shade under it from the afternoon sun which, as things turned out, was very lucky, otherwise there would have been what the Yankees would call "an almighty smash." The picture being a good one I took my things and went off and got a view of Tiger Hill. Bathed in the evening. A little rain at night.

30th.—Joy! One of the shikarries is seen coming along in distance; he is anxiously watched; his pace increases as he comes nearer; its all right. Yes, his report is "Gara Hua." The kill to-day is in the place where I shot the big male tiger, and it is a very good place for heating, so our hopes run high. On arrival I am posted on the same tree as on the former occasion (our posts are always decided by drawing lots with pieces of straw of different lengths), the other two guns are on my left. The beat had hardly commenced when the stops on the extreme left began to speak, and in a minute or two I heard a roar, instantly followed by a shot from Hanuro's tree. Looking around I saw an immense tiger charging straight towards my tree across an open piece of ground. When he was within ten or twelve paces of me I fired, and over he rolled into a thick bush; recovering himself he moved off to the left and I should have got a capital shot but a bough of the tree I was in caught my rifle as I swung round to fire, and the shot only slightly wounded him in the belly. He disappeared in the thick bushes but was marked down by the look-outs. H. and K. now got onto Baded Guz, and I mounted a tree to look on. Watching the course of the elephant I presently heard four shots in rapid succession and saw the villain of the battie beating a retreat with all speed, this time, however, he was stopped before going many hundred yards, and when they rejoined me I heard that on their getting near the spot where the tiger was lying, he up and came straight at them. The elephant was so unsteady that the first three shots had no effect, and it was only when the tiger was within a single spring of the elephant that K. fired the last shot in the locker, and tumbled him over. When we went up we found him stone dead, the last shot had hit him in the back of the neck and gone through his heart. He was a most formidable-looking brute, the most powerful and massive heart I have ever seen. His measurements were as follows, length nine feet four inches, height three feet eight inches, circumference of head thirty-four inches, and of forearm twenty-two inches. We now got our horses and galloped home, and on the arrival of the game his portrait was taken and he was skinned, and, I believe, eaten, for the villagers flocked round and carried off every morsel of the flesh.

31st.—No kill. In tents all day. In the evening K. and I went out for a short walk before our bath. I shot two hares.

1st June.—No kill. I expect we have pretty well cleared the place of tigers. All the villagers declare that the big tiger killed the day before yesterday was their great enemy. Their rejoicings at his death were loud and long. They say that between the time of our leaving this place and our return he had killed sixteen bullocks, and we put down at least half a dozen heylahs that we had killed to his account. Altogether he might be put down as a most destructive animal to have living in the neighborhood. In the afternoon we struck tents and moved a few miles toward home to a place called Mullikoodala, where we found a splendid howrie to take headers into.

2d.—Had a bathe directly we got up, and then having taken some breakfast we marched to Taldikondah, where we tied up heylahs at night.

3d.—I got up early and went round with the shikarries but found all the buffis untouched, so we set off for Neddigoonah, where we had breakfast and rested till the afternoon, and then rode on to — where we arrived soon after sunset. Bathed, dined and went to bed.

4th.—Having to be in at Bowenpilly this evening (my leave being up), and the distance being nearly sixty miles, I got up a 2, went a few miles on an elephant and then got on one of my horses and galloped about twelve miles, changed and galloped on another twelve or fourteen miles to ghir, where I had Morris' bullock coach waiting for me, and with some breakfast and a welcome packet of English goods which I took into the coach with me and read as I went along. With two changes of bullocks ready along the road I got on very comfortably, luckily there had been rain so there was no dust and it was a nice cool day. I got in all right about 3 o'clock, and found everything much as I left it and so my shikar trip of 1871 came to an end.

The English Setter.

No breed of dog has higher claim for public favor than a typical English setter. Few varieties excel him in good looks, while his practical excellencies render him almost indispensable to a sportsman fond of the gun. His general contour shows a combination of agility, speed and endurance which eminently fits him for field work. His beautifully chiselled head, intelligent expression, supple neck, symmetrical build, elegance of every outline and grace of movements, combined with high intelligence and scenting powers, naturally entitle him to hold a high position amongst the sporting breeds.

The Head—In proportion to its width should be decidedly long. The skull, from the occiput bone to the brow, about equal in proportion to the length of the muzzle. The skull should neither be broad or too flat, but moderately domed and deep, showing no undue development of cheek muscle. The occiput protuberance marked; the frontal bones of the forehead moderately raised, with a slight indentation between the eyes. Viewed sideways, the skull presents a somewhat rounded appearance, being moderately flat at the sides and higher at the occiput than at the brow. The muzzle, although long, should neither be weak or snipy, neither should it be very broad; it should be moderately deep, cleanly-cut at the sides and rather square, the width being well sustained to the end. The nose should be large and the nostrils open; a small, pinched nose is very objectionable.

Eyes—Brown or dark hazel in color of moderate size, neither sunk in the skull or too hold or prominent. They should not be set too close together or very wide apart, and should be very expressive, mild yet intelligent in expression.

The Ears—Should be moderately large, set low on the skull, not too flat or wide at the base and should hang gracefully at the side of the skull. They should be well protected with hair and be slightly fringed at the tips.

The Neck—Long and graceful, supple and muscular and well-set, back into the shoulders.

The Shoulders—A very important feature; should not be too wide between the blades. It is very essential they should be oblique and sloping and well clothed with elastic muscle. They should not be loaded, broad or heavy.

The Elbows—Being well under, neither turned inwards nor outwards, so that the fore-action is perfectly free and in no way impaired.

Chest and Body—The chest rather narrow than broad but deep, the brisket being well defined; behind the ribs should be moderately rounded, long and deep. Back neither too long or too short; symmetrical in outline and slightly arched at the loin, the hips slightly prominent from where the back gradually falls away to the set on of the tail. The loin should be firm, muscular and rather deep, well rubbed up. The dog should stand over plenty of ground.

The Forelegs—Viewed in any direction should be straight, firm, but elastic pasterns, bone moderately strong and of good quality, the elbows just clear of the sides, feet moderately long, but firm, toes slightly arched with strong nails, the pads on soles very firm and sound and for protection feathered between the toes.

Thighs—Rather broad, long and muscular. The muscles well distributed, but not too bossy. Stiffles well defined, backs well bent and not too long. Action perfectly level, true and graceful. Weak hams, light second thighs, cow-hocks should be avoided.

The Tail—Not set on too high, should be carried gracefully almost in a line level with the back. It should be moderately long (a very long tail, or if carried too high is decidedly objectionable). It should be rather thick at the base, gradually tapering towards the end, and well feathered with hair of silky and fine texture. The feathering more abundant and longer in the center than at the base or end.

Coat—Should be fairly profuse on the body, dense flat, glossy and of fine texture. The hair on the face and skull should be short and smooth; any display of top-knot shows indication of a spaniel cross. The inside of the fore-legs, the belly and the thighs should be profusely feathered.

All points should be in perfect harmony with the others, no one property showing an undue prominence over the other.

Faults—A short, broad or heavy head showing too much stop or too much width between the ears, light colored eyes, broad or heavy ears, wide chest, upright shoulders too long, hollow or slack back, light or too heavy or coarse bone, light or weak hind quarters.

ENGLISH SETTERS AT SAN FRANCISCO.

I was both surprised and delighted at the all round excellence of the English setter bitches, which in my opinion was decidedly the best class in the show. It is seldom I have had the pleasure of meeting in one class two higher grade gitches than Mr. P. D. Linville's "Flake L." and Florine. Both exhibit immense quality and high breeding, and the condition in which they were put down reflects great credit in whoever has them in charge. I cannot, nor do I claim much credit in selecting this brace for first and second place, for I consider them right ahead of the rest of the competitors, therefore it would be almost impossible for any one, who has ever studied the Standard or has at all interested himself in English setters to have placed them otherwise. Whether Mr. Loud agrees with this decision is not made very clear in his letter of May 13th, for he commits himself by saying "That he believed American Judges would have placed Belle T., first." Who are those American Judges Mr. Loud, and upon what grounds, or upon whose authority do you make such a sweeping assertion? I will now proceed with my criticisms, taking the bitches in the order of merit in which I placed them.

It was only after a very careful and minute scrutiny that I decided in favor of Flake L., for premiership honors; for her kennel companion "Florine" pressed her most severely; in fact there is very little between them. From a show point of view Flake L., is a very nice size—She shows immense quality and style, and is very symmetrical in build and general outline. Her head is beautifully chiseled, well balanced and correct in profile. Her muzzle while being a good length, is neither weak nor snipy, but clearly and squarely cut and moderately blunt at the finish, as it should be. "A slim face say you, Mr. Loud?" "Bah!" Her skull exhibits plenty of depth, without any undue coarseness or width. The brows are well defined, and the gradual rise from the stop to the occiput bone is very fine. Her ears are correct in shape and size and set well down on the skull, thus displaying her high forehead to advantage. Her neck is lengthy, muscular and is set well back into a pair of clean, oblique shoulders. Her forelegs are correct in length, the bone being of good quality—though not absolutely perfect, nearly so. I should like the bone a mere shade heavier and the pads of her feet thicker and firmer. Her chest while being moderately deep, might display a little more brisket, her ribs are deep and nicely sprung. She is a splendid topped bitch, her back being very proportionate in length, is both muscular and firm, and none but the most fastidious can find much fault with the length, shape or carriage of her stern. Her hips and top thighs leave little to be desired. The second thighs might with advantage be a little broader and more muscular, her stifles are well bent and hocks not too long. I have now only to deal with her action and movement; a very important consideration in any sporting dog. From a sideview her movements are perfectly even and graceful; she travels as true as an arrow in front, but not so behind. Here I detected what I consider her most prominent fault—It must not be understood by these remarks that I consider her conspicuously faulty—otherwise she would not have held the exalted position she did, however, to a slight degree her hind gait was not altogether pleasing, her hocks while in action being too close together.

Florine, placed second, is grand behind, her action and gait being worthy of commendation. She is quite equal in formation and outline of back to her more fortunate rival, and also exhibits a little more muscular development in thighs. In ribs and brisket she compares very favorably, a remark equally applicable to her legs, feet and bone. It will be seen that so far she has some slight advantages—what she gains behind the shoulders she fails to sustain before them. Her head, while being correct in shape and length, would be improved with a little more substance all through. Therefore, Flake L. serves a point or two in head, she wins another in neck and scores decisively in shoulders. With age Florine has developed a little super-abundance of muscle and flesh; hence, had she been shown two or three pounds higher in flesh, it would have been to her advantage.

Dottie Day's condition materially assisted her in securing third place. Her head is very fair, but on comparison with her more favored kennel mates, is faulty in several minor details. It should be longer, especially from the eye to the nose end. The muzzle at the finish might also be deeper and squarer. Her skull at the base is also broader than is desirable. Her neck, while being very supple and muscular, would be improved by a trifle more length, and her shoulders are not so oblique or sloping as I thought requisite for perfect action. Behind the shoulders I consider her excellent, and I fail to agree with Mr. Loud. What conspicuous faults can be found with her legs or feet. I am certain her chest is deep, ribs exceedingly well sprung, loin firm and deep and her stern, hind quarters and hind action left little to be desired. Her fore action I grant is somewhat short and catchy, the result of her somewhat upright shoulders.

Mr. Loud kicks at my placing his representative Minnie Noble so high in the list—he charges me with not sticking to type, and is candid enough to inform your readers that "Belle T." is far ahead of Minnie Noble as a bench dog. This statement appears to me to be very inconsistent for in the circular issued by the Shenandoah Kennels, one of which Mr. Loud kindly presented to me, describes Minnie Noble thus: Minnie is a beauty and a hard one to heat in the field or on the bench. Then again it tickles my fancy to see Mr. Loud admonish me, with regard to type. I admit at times it is very difficult to do so, and to a great extent depends upon the uniformity of the animal brought before the judge; for illustration let me take the seven representatives from the Shenandoah Kennels of which Mr. Loud himself is part owner and manager. How in goodness could any judge be consistent and stick to type with such a mixed lot before him. Every one of the seven dogs exhibited by Mr. Loud, is some degree or other varied in type. I will, however, proceed and give my reasons why I considered Minnie Noble worthy of reserve. She may have a "Count Noble" head, but I will remind Mr. Loud that although the head is an important characteristic in any breed of dog, yet their are many other important points that must be taken into consideration in judging a sporting dog. Minnie Noble's head while not being perfect in every detail, is far removed from being classed as bad. It is certainly a little too much dishd between the eyes and too strong throughout; in fact, it is decidedly masculine, nevertheless it closely approaches the right type and her good expression and eye adds to its character. She is a good size and if properly mated (not with Dictator) should produce a show bench winner. Where she scored heavily, was her grand-sloping shoulders, deep chest, brisket and loins and well-developed thighs, and the longer she moved the better I liked her. Her action was true all around. She was not shown to the best advantage; her coat required attention, and a bitch of her build would have looked better if shown a few pounds lighter in flesh.

Belle, V. H. C., in some particulars, is a very nice bitch indeed. Her head, to some degree, more nearly approaches that of the winners; in fact, if her muzzle was a trifle longer and squarer at the end, I should say her head was distinctly typical. Her eyes, expression, set on and carriage of ears don't all much, but her neck is decidedly short and not set low enough into the shoulders, which are to a slight degree upright. She has very fair legs and feet, good-shaped ribs, long back and loins, but it was her faulty hind action that prevented her gaining higher distinction. She is almost cow-hocked—looking at her from behind, her hocks, when in action, almost meet.

I now come to Zippo Zip, V. H. C. I find in his letter Mr. Loud misquotes me. Mr. Hughes and Mr. Loud himself must have misunderstood me when I was asked my opinion of Zippo Zip. She was on the bench and I had not seen her move, and not having judged the class I was naturally reserved in my criticism. As a rule I positively decline before judging to be interviewed, I did pass my opinion on her head, but as regards her coat, what I said and wished to convey was, that when it was in condition it would be profuse and probably of good texture. At present it is not so, for in places it is decidedly ragged and too wavy about the hips. Her head is lengthy, the skull and muzzle very well balanced, so far as their respective lengths are concerned. Her muzzle is too narrow both at the base and finish, and too much scooped out at the sides; her eyes are also too light in color, but her skull is almost perfect, and her ears are decidedly well-placed. Her shoulders are not quite so oblique or clean as they might be, and her hind-quarters, if better furnished with muscle, would be more preferable. Her hind-action is objectionable, and, like Belle, she inclines to be cow-hocked.

I have now only "Belle T." to deal with. Mr. Loud states I overlooked her. Not so; I gave her highly commended. This is the bitch Mr. Loud says "our American judges would have placed first," and in his description of her he writes: "Belle T." in coat was perfect, in legs, feet, bone and ribs she was faultless. In making such rash statements Mr. Loud has certainly allowed his prejudice to outweigh his judgment. All men of common sense know perfectly well that there is no such thing as perfection. No animal was ever created or bred that was faultless, even in legs, feet, bone, ribs or coat. Accepting Mr. Loud's description as approaching the truth, he has studiously omitted to criticize her head, eyes, ears, neck, shoulders, hind quarters, stern and action. My notes tell me that her head is too short, the skull wants more length from the eye to the ear, it is also too broad and coarse. Her muzzle is too short and tapers off too suddenly towards the end. The ears are rather wide at the base and set on higher than I like. Her neck is not quite long enough and her shoulders are inclined to be upright and coarse. Behind the shoulders she scores up well and her hind action is decidedly praiseworthy and better than her fore action, (she moves rather stilly in front) hence in comparison with Dottie Day she lost points in head and ears, and is also slightly inferior in neck, shoulders and condition, and in my opinion not one wit better in any other essential qualifications.

It will be seen from the above criticisms that while making every due allowance for type, qualities and style, I hold also in high esteem other qualifications, absolutely necessary to enable a sporting dog to fulfill to the highest degree the duties he is called upon to perform. In a setter give me the dog with a reachy supple neck set well back into sloping shoulders, a deep chest, good hips, broad hams (the muscle well distributed), well-defined stifles and bent hocks; if such a dog does not combine both speed and stamina, he will sadly belie his looks.

How About the Animals?

Fast and furious rise the voices and fall the fists of the "divines" on the question of opening the gates of the World's Columbian Exposition on Sundays. A Pullman car porter's flails beating out the dust from the cushions where languorously idle wealth reclines, while whirling across the continent, scarce beat a tattoo more rapid than do the lily-fingered fists of the non-working servants of the impractical dreamers who assume to be the guardians of the world's morals. The Exposition represents the best thought, the best culture and the highest products of God's highest form of creation.

Some centuries ago, we are not definitely informed as to the exact date, the Lord set about the work of world making. After he had created every part, he is said to have announced, on looking it over that it was good. Good for all time. He placed the fishes in the sea, in the lakes and rivers and streams; the animals on the plains and in the mountains and hills. Then the greatest system of electrical appliances ever known was created; and set in motion and light and heat has been furnished this grandest of exhibitions ever since. He has never sput off the power of the great machinery for a single moment—evidently having more consideration for the animals he has made than for any space of time since that glorious event. He has never closed the doors for a moment and as far as we know has never given expression of any such intention. His example would be a good one for the World's Fair management to follow.

The sea roars, the sun shines, the animals roam about at will, the birds sing on each and every day alike. He thinks his work's worthy of perpetual exhibition and He is right. The animals of His creation should not be shut up on Sunday. Let man be as liberal as the Almighty and there will be no attempt to force people into listening to the vapors of the clergy, whether they will or not, on one day out of seven.

Distemper in Dogs.

The cause of distemper, as stated in my last article, which appeared in your issue for March, says A. J. Sewell in The Kennel Gazette, is solely due to contagion, and I believe it is quite impossible for the disease to be induced by any other means such as had management in the way of feeding and kenneling, or from worms, or teething, as suggested by some; though I admit anything that upsets a dog's system, whereby he is reduced in condition, renders him more susceptible to an attack, if he has not had distemper before. It is not necessary for a dog to contract the complaint for him to come in direct contact with one affected, though this, of course, is the most ready way; for the germs may be conveyed by a person's hands or clothes after handling a distemper patient, or by a healthy dog coming from infected kennels, which often occurs, I am afraid, at shows, for shows are doubtless the principal means of spreading the contagion.

Some shows are much worse in this respect than others, the ill effects being particularly noticeable after a crowded show in a badly-ventilated building. On the other hand a building like the Crystal Palace, which is light and dry, lofty and

ROD.

A Terrible Haul.

Day was just breaking on a delightful summer morning, where the river ran deep and slow, says "The Squire," in the Shooting Times and British Sportsman. The river is a favorite salmon stream in the Western Midlands, and at the particular spot I name is a favorite pool with anglers. The pool never gets shallow, though the gravelly streams at the top and bottom often run so fine that a big fish could not find his way between the boulders. On one side of the river stands a tall line of poplars, whose little beads waved gently in the breeze, while the leaves rustled and seemed to whisper to each other as though they had a secret. On the other the shore is broken and unequal, where a considerable but sluggish river joins the main stream. I cannot give more definite particulars of the locality because the whole of the actors in this little story are alive, and the event occurred but three years ago.

It generally happens that if a certain stream is a favorite with the angler it is also generally well looked after by the poacher. This was the case with this particular stream, and though the river-keeper kept a pretty vigilant eye on the place, he could not always be wide-awake. On this particular night he had been the rounds a good many times, and just as day was dawning he evidently came to the conclusion that the poachers were giving things a rest for that night, and that they would certainly not dare to come after darkness had given place to daylight. The secret that the poplar trees whispered one to another was this—that in a lot of bushes at their feet was a particularly sly-eyed young man watching the movements of that keeper. And as the keeper walked away the young man dodged from one tall tree to another, keeping his eye on the keeper till he was out of sight. Then the young man turned round and ran back swiftly to a place some distance below the pool where a fishing punt was moored. He put the punt across with considerable skill, and then brought it along the shadow of the bank until he reached a landing place opposite to a small public house, also surrounded with tall poplars.

When he got near the house he gave a low whistle. In a moment the back door was cautiously opened, and a male voice spoke:

"You can't be served. It is after closing hours."

"Not w'en the road's clear?"

This answer was sufficient. In a moment one man came out followed by a second, a third, and a fourth. This little band certainly did not look like poachers in the generally accepted motion. They were fairly well dressed, and were a jovial crew of farmers' sons living in the surrounding neighborhood. The fifth man, a tall, lean, keen-eyed individual, was the landlord of the little public house.

"Have you got the net, Bill?" inquired young Jones, who had been watching under the trees.

"All right, Fred, it's in the cart."

"Come on, boys; there is no time to be lost, the sun will be up directly." The young fellows thereupon set to work with a will, and got a very long salmon net out of a cart under a shed, where it had been hidden by several trusses of hay. While the landlord looked on, the net was got into the punt, and three of the amateur netters began paying out while the others remained on the bank holding the stay ropes. Patiently, silently, and in perfect order, the net was paid out up the pool, and then across sharply and quickly to the opposite bank again. Very slowly the net was gathered in, those holding the ropes working towards each other. Eventually the two parties met at the mouth of one of the little springs by which the slow river joined the bigger one. A little distance up this is a barrier so placed that salmon cannot get up.

"This will make a capital place to land them," said Jones. "Right! steady! not so fast with the top lines, keep the bottom a bit forward."

Then slowly and monotonously the net came in, and was coiled up on either side.

Then came a thump and quiver of the net, followed by a brisker thump on the other side.

"That's a nose under for one," said young Brown.

"Steady! by jove, sbe is heavy. We've got a good night's work here. Got the mallet ready, Willie?"

And so they worked, as yard by yard and foot by foot the net reached the bank. It seemed to get heavier. The preparation rolled off the operators.

"Now then; one, two, three for the last. We shall never get them home. The cart won't hold them. Now altogether for a final!"

Up came the net and revealed its contents. One of the party raised a wild yell, dropped his rope, leaped into the air and bolted off across the meadow, hedge and ditch like a hare. It is said that he did not stop for three miles.

The others stood spell bound and gazed at the haul. There may have been a salmon. There may have been two, but what riveted all eyes was the chief catch—the corpse of an elderly gentleman in a mackintosh!

In the bright morning sunlight the hideous thing seemed to grin at them as if in mockery.

"My God!" exclaimed Jones, "bere's a pretty mess. 'Why, we are cleaned bowled. There will have to be an inquest. We shall have to give evidence; the net will have to come out and we are in for six months certain. Oh, Jerusalem!"

In horror-stricken tones they discussed the situation in all his terrible bearings—the corpse grinning and giving evidence on the morning air that it was in no trance. At last one of the men seemed struck by a bappy idea to which the others appeared to agree. Then one cut a piece of rope from the net and fastened it securely to a bough of a bush which thickly overhung the river. The other end was fastened to the corpse's leg, and the old gentleman, mackintosh and all, went back into the stream and slid away under the bushes. The net was folded up and speedily returned to the cart.

In the neighbourhood there lives an old river dodger, who is supposed to catch eels and small bait, to get gravel and other odd jobs. He has the reputation of being a notorious old poacher, and had once or twice been the inside of a goal. He was having his breakfast when a young farmer came into his house.

"Morning, James."

"Morning, Sir."

"What's it worth to you to find a corpse in the river?"

"What are you driving at, Mr. Fred? I baint going to mix myself up with nothin' wrong."

"I don't want you to. But what do you get at the coroner's inquest?"

"Well, may be, a matter of ten shillin'."

"Well, now, here's a couple of pounds for you, look," and then followed some whispering.

"Wbey! I tumble," was the old man's remark. About middle day intimation was given to the local coroner that a corpse had been found in the river, and that it was lying at the little public house.

Good Smelt Fishing.

The smelt have commenced running in the bay quite a bit earlier this season than usual. During the week large baskets have been filled with little trouble and a great deal of sport.

On this side of the bay, the best points for fishing for these gamey finsters are at Lombard street wharf, Fourth street wharf and Long Bridge. The long wharf on the Oakland side and points at Tiburon, are reported as being very good points.

The best time to "drop a line" for them is a low water. The sport is fair, presented by these fish and serves to while away an hour on the bay to very good advantage.

The Gun Club's Picnic.

The San Francisco Gun Club held its annual picnic over in Ross Valley on Tuesday last. These outings have been regularly held by the club for a number of years and have long been looked upon as "red letter" days in the programme of the season's trap events. A large number of ladies always attend and the recent occasion was graced by the presence of a number of them.

The grounds selected for this season were the same as last year and a most beautiful spot it is for a day's pleasure of this nature. Running back of the grounds and semi-circling them is a small stream the east bank of which, fringed with large spreading trees was chosen as the reserve line to the shooting stand, the small plat of open grass-covered valley, skirting an abrupt mountain suggestion to the northern boundary, fronting eastward.

The grounds had been placed in good condition for the sport and every arrangement which the club could devise had been carefully prepared to the end that the day's sport should lack nothing that would conduce to the pleasure of the sportsmen and their guests.

A number of the participants in the shooting took the eight o'clock boat and found themselves early upon the grounds.

The day was a most lovely one—just such a day as the terminal bead on the rosemary of fair May should and of right ought to be, with its wealth of fern and vine, of flower and foliage.

Mr. J. O. Cadman and Mr. John K. Orr, as President and Secretary of the club, did everything possible to render the day pleasant to all, as did also the entire membership present.

The sport was opened at the traps about 9:30 and continued, with the exception of the luncheon hour, until 5:30. The birds were good, strong flyers, and the sportsmen kept up the record of the club as good shots fairly well throughout the day. In a number of the events the shooting was very fine indeed. The score in the main match is as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes names like R. B. Woodward, Harry Babcock, J. H. Jellett, W. S. Kittle, J. K. Orr, R. A. Edgerton, F. S. Butler, Wm. Brown, J. O. Cadman, Howard Black, W. A. Chapin, F. K. Webster, R. H. Sprague, H. W. Woodward, A. Havens, F. H. Swett, Robert Oxnard, Alex. Hamilton, J. H. Kilgariff.

Messrs. Babcock, Jellett, Sprague and Kittle divided the purse on second bird in a miss-and-out, sixteen entries.

A six-bird sweep was then shot, resulting as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Score. Includes names like Kittle, Orr, Cadman, Sprague, R. B. Woodward, Jellett, Oxnard, Webster, H. W. Woodward, Black, Kilgariff, Hamilton, Babcock, Eddy, Brown.

In a subsequent miss-and-out Messrs. Babcock, Kilgariff and H. W. Woodward divided the purse on second bird. In another event Messrs. Cadman and H. W. Woodward divided the purse on four kills each.

Miss-and-outs were then shot for the balance of the day, when some very good runs were made by Messrs. Babcock, R. H. Sprague, Cadman and Mr. R. T. Sprague who, though in the September of his years, proved that he was able to bundle the gun with skill.

Mr. John K. Orr's little cocker, McGinty, proved himself a most admirable retriever during the day's shoot. He is a merry little worker.

The day closed most satisfactorily to all present. The only drawback to the day's sport may justly be said to be the inconvenience caused by the large crowds, which literally packed the steamers and trains on their way to various picnics up in the valleys of Marin county.

"A friend who was duck shooting in a marsh in western Wyoming," says the Forest and Stream, "having discharged both barrels at a brace of passing ducks, discovered a female redhead flying close by his head. Unable to load in time he yelled at the bird, which fell in the water and was retrieved." We have no doubt about it. We have known men whose brant was strong enough to have killed a whole flock of ducks at long range.

The next and, perhaps, final contest for the Selby Medal will take place to-morrow at Oakland Track in conjunction with the California Wing Shooting Club's monthly event. Special prizes; free to all.

The Country Club's annual hull's head breakfast comes off tomorrow at the club's country seat in Marin county. Extensive preparations have been made for this event.

well-ventilated, and in cold weather fairly warm, in consequence of its being artificially heated, is, in my opinion, an ideal place for an exhibition of dogs in the spring or autumn. I know by experience that when care is taken to exclude cases of distemper, puppies may be exhibited there without much fear of contracting the disease, compared with many other places. The weather, too, no doubt, has a good deal of influence in the spread of the disease, for I have often noticed that when it has been wet and cold during a show, distemper has been more rife afterwards than when the weather has been dry and fine, or even frosty, and the same bad effects follow after an exhibition in an enclosed building when the weather is excessively hot.

A good deal has been said about showbenches being the medium of conveying the contagion. I have no doubt they would; if not properly cleansed after dogs suffering from the disease has been lying on them, but with washing and fumigating with sulphurous anhydride, which is produced during the burning of sulphur, they are rendered perfectly safe under any circumstances. I have had wooden and other kennels treated in this way that have recently had distemper patients in, and immediately the process has been completed, and the building ventilated so as to allow the fumes to escape, puppies have been put in without any bad effects following.

As to the kind of germs which constitute the distemper virus, at present nothing definite seems to be known. Those described and depicted by one investigator are totally different to those demonstrated by another; in fact, no two seem alike, so in these circumstances it is impossible to come to any definite conclusion as to their exact form.

The period of incubation varies from four to fourteen days. I have known a dog in perfect health enter a show, and four days afterwards exhibit the primary symptoms of distemper, and I have seen similar occurrences the result of a puppy coming in contact with an infected dog when at home; then, on the other hand, there is no doubt that in some instances a dog will go from ten to fourteen days after having been infected before the symptoms develop, but as a rule the period of incubation may be reckoned as eight or nine days.

Dogs may, it is said, have distemper twice, but a second attack, in my experience, is of a very rare occurrence. There is, no doubt, a something not yet discerned remaining in the system after distemper, that renders, as a rule, the germ powerless to do harm to a dog a second time. I have many times kept dogs that I know have had the disease in a kennel full of distemper patients, and with the exception of two or three of them developing a husky cough, no other signs of the disease have occurred. There has been no rise of temperature or loss of flesh, and the dog has generally continued to take his food as usual, and appeared full of spirits.

The International Coursing Meeting.

Huron, South Dakota, has fairly won the honor of having the great International meeting. Fifteen hundred dollars is the price she has paid for the honor, thus out-bidding her sister town of Mitchell, in the same State, which offered $800, and Merced, in this State, which offered $600 and a gold cup, the intrinsic value of which would be $750.

The sporting men of Huron have certainly shown that they are in earnest in this matter as they have already forwarded the money to the treasurer, Dr. Rowe, of the American Field, and by the last issue of that paper, that gentleman acknowledges the receipt of the money.

Mr. J. Herbert Watson, of New York, has also collected from his friends in New York about $1,000, so that the necessary sum for the purse is now insured and if the English dogs will come across, and it is almost certain that they will, the great meeting will take place about the second or third week in October next.

The coursing men of the country are much indebted for this great success to Mr. J. Herbert Watson; he has been nntiring in his efforts ever since the scheme was first mooted and now that he has got over the money difficulty there is scarcely any danger of a failure of nominators, native and foreign.

Of course it is an expensive job for the coursing men of California to travel such a distance, especially as but very few of them are in any sense men of capital, but this difficulty can be overcome if some half a dozen of them would club together and send some five or six of the pick of our kennels in care of one or two responsible men. In this matter the coursing men could take a lesson from the gentlemen who take an interest in the bench shows, nearly all of whom send their dogs to the shows in care of trustworthy keepers. Mr. Curtis, of Santa Clara, one or two of the Merced men and possibly Mr. Edmonds, of this city, are the only ones that we can at present mention who are likely to go, but no doubt as the time for nomination approaches, combinations will be formed that are not now thought of.

The entrance money will be $50 and nominations must be sent to the secretary enclosing half the money ($25) not later than the first of August; the balance ($25) with the name, color, sex and pedigree (sire and dam) of the dog entered one or two days before the draw at Huron, S. D. If any one should take up an entry and that something happened preventing him from filling up the same, he will be allowed to dispose of it to the best advantage, but of course he must give due notice to the secretary.

Huron is from two and a half to three day's travel from here and the railway charges are at present at all events $40, but it is possible that by October next fares may be something less.

The great English judge, Mr. James Hendly, if he can be prevailed on to come over, and Mr. John Grace, of this city, are the two men that are the most spoken of at present, who are capable of giving the most satisfaction to the nominators and it is more than probable that one or the other of them will be in the saddle on the eventful occasion.

We will in the course of a few weeks be able to give all the particulars as soon as the committee have perfected arrangements. It is not too soon, however, to suggest to our coursing readers the necessity of taking care of their good dogs and keeping them in perfect condition, for whichever of them may go to Dakota they can rely on it they will have some clever opponents to meet.

We are sorry to learn of the death, recently at West Berkeley, of the Irish setter bitch Elcho Belle (Ch. Elcho Jr.—Katy IX, imported), belonging to Mr. W. M. Cunningham, of Honolulu. The bitch was sent here to be bred.

The Spring Trotting Meeting.

The spring meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association will close to-day after six days of enjoyable racing. The attendance was not as large as expected, but the cold, foggy, and windy weather that "blessed" the meeting on the first two days chilled the ardor and enthusiasm of many who intended to go. Those who "braved the elements" and watched the numerous trotters and pacers make their first appearance in races have no reason to regret it. The drivers did their best to win in every event—from the very nature of the new style of racing they had to. The two-in-three races put a stop to jobbery and the crowding of the racecourse with "skivers" and "handy breakers." Every inch of the way in every race was contested, and the horses that have been reported as making wonderful trials against the watch were, in the majority of instances, defeated by others that were more consistent trotters and pacers and proved they were able "to go the route."

The great keystone of the trotting turf of the future that has been placed where all horsemen could see it by the trials given by this association has proved a success beyond the most sanguine expectations of its promoters. The drivers, when once shown its merits, entered into it with full accord, and the series of dashes given demonstrated to them clearer than any theory that by this innovation the earning capacity of the trotter will be increased; the best horse must win, and the horse with the purest gait, level head and endowed with gameness is the one to be sought after by them. The animal must be driven every part of the distance. The experiment has been tried, and, although the purses were not large at this meeting for the dashes because it was in the nature of an experiment, the directors are encouraged beyond measure and will increase the amounts for this system of racing at the next meeting, giving three moneys where they have been giving two. The low price of entrance and the many opportunities horsemen have of racing their horses is a great advantage over the old style. There were consolation purses given for those that were defeated in the early part of the week, and the best horses won.

The heat races of half miles, mile and an eighth and mile and a sixteenth were also novelties that aroused enthusiasm, and large sums of money were wagered on the results. There was no hedging for entries; every owner of a horse that was able to trot in 2:40 had an opportunity of seeing that trotter race, and, even if it did not win, the experience it received in going in company will be valuable. In this respect this meeting was also a success, for it was noticed that those youngsters that did not know how to score during the first two days of the meeting behaved admirably later on and acted like old campaigners, while the new drivers also gained knowledge that will more than repay them for coming to the Bay District Track.

The utmost harmony and good feeling prevailed, and many prominent horsemen from all parts of the State who attended have remained all week in order that they should not miss a race. The starting, which was conducted on the same principle as that in vogue at running meetings, was pronounced a success, and no complaints were made. The timing was accurate and everything passed off as smoothly as if it was the last meeting of the year wherein all the horses and drivers had been contesting through the circuit, instead of the first meeting where every guesser was at sea, and the abilities of the drivers and the speed of the horses were unknown.

BEFORE the bell rings for the great fall Blood Horse Association meeting we would like very much to see some rules passed looking toward the purification of the turf as far as it lies in the power of the local racing association to do that. A few of our prominent jockeys and trainers were reported as interested in hooks at the last meeting, as partners in betting firms, while another jockey in the employ of a hookmaker made himself very conspicuous by acting as "scout" for his employer, by whose side he stood on many afternoons when not engaged to ride. It does not look right to the public for a jockey interested in a hook to have a mount in a race, and bettors will not believe that, if it would "hurt the book" for that certain horse to win, the animal will prove victorious. Therefore it is in order that a rule be passed that a jockey, trainer or owner will not be allowed an interest in a hook at a Blood Horse Association meeting, and that the names of EVERYONE financially interested in the books MUST be given to the directors of the organization, failure to do which will result in the offending bookmaker, his partner or partners being ruled off. This is just one of many good rules that could be suggested. One good move intended is the isolation of jockeys from the corrupting influence of "sure-thing" people, some of whom are "go-betweens" between the bookmaker and jockey. It is to be regretted that the Paris mutuel does not become more popular with the general public, but the way they were sold here during the last week gave no one a chance to play a "long shot" and reap a rich harvest. There were generally two choices and then the field. One thing that has popularized bookmaking is that a person can back any horse in the race. Mutuels must be sold on the same principle. Next fall it will be a good idea to have all three styles of betting—mutuels, books and auction pools, thus protecting the bettor to the best of the ability of the association.

Hints to Fair Managers.

There are many important things pertaining to the welfare of our agricultural associations which might not be out of place to mention at this time. The need of live Secretaries, first-class track and pavilion superintendents, energetic directors and men of brains in the judges' stand and also in the places where all judging is to be done.

The value of properly advertising the fair weeks before its date of opening should be impressed upon the minds of every director, and, besides the advertisements in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN which, of course, meets the eye of every horseman on the coast, the local papers should be recognized as able factors in "booming the fair." The editors should vie with each other in giving publicity to every item that will help interest the public.

Litographs of agricultural and racing scenes should be procured in time and posted where the attention of the farmers and their families will be attracted as they ride in and out of town.

The Secretary, as stated above, must be a "live" one, for upon him devolves much of the hard work of the meeting. If he has any forethought he will begin making preparations at once so that when the gates of the fair open he will have everything in readiness. He should be paid for his services, and the directors who think a man should devote his time, night and day, attending to all the details preliminary to getting up a fair ought to pay him for his labors. The money spent in this way will never be missed, and it may prove the best ever invested.

The secretary should try and attend each fair that precedes his, and have programmes and premium lists distributed among the horsemen and exhibitors. His duty will be to "talk up" his fair and get every one interested and get the people talking about it. This missionary work will pay well.

The track superintendent should be a horseman capable of attending to his duties without consulting the committee on track and grounds. He should understand what is meant by a "perfect track"; if he does not, the quicker a qualified man takes his place the better, for of all the positions at a fair that requires the praise of horsemen it is that of a good track superintendent. He should have the course thoroughly watered, harrowed and scraped daily; his work must commence at daylight, and every inch of the track must be made even. With the many improved harrows and scrapers invented in this State no excuse can be offered for not having the course in perfect order. If horsemen have cause for complaint about the track the probabilities are good for them never returning, but wherever they go these expressions will be heard: "The worst track I ever saw; I almost ruined my colt there; the course was hard as concrete in some places and soft as mush in others."

In the judges' stand another great improvement is needed, not in the building, but in the occupants thereof. The advantages of having qualified men there are manifold, and we look for a decided improvement there this year. The judges who cannot see, lack decision, are ignorant of the laws, and stand like humps on a log while the spectators howl at their decisions and manifest their disapproval of long scoring and bad judging, should be politely requested to vacate their places of honor and make room for men better fitted by nature and education to preside.

The judges of cattle and live stock are no so hard to select, nevertheless, it would be unjust to have their places filled by unknown incompetents who are always willing to serve whenever asked, and especially if a personal friend has some choice stock to be judged, and they can help them in any way, even though they have to present a minority report.

The great object of drawing the public and giving an entertainment that will not be a failure should never be forgotten. The farmers with their families and invited guests must have this week of enjoyment, and at the track delays during the day must not be tolerated. Sweet music, exciting events, close contests, halloo ascensions, equestrianism, bicycle races and all the novelties which an active Barnum-like Secretary and his able directors can devise should be provided. At night while the town is "alive" with people, the pavilion with its choice collection from farm, garden, household and factory well displayed becomes attractive to old and young. Here the hand sits on a gaily-decorated, raised platform at one end of the highly polished dancing floor, and on all the other sides are neat and tasty hoots containing gems of needlework and cases of candies, presided over by beautiful young ladies. On the tables adjoining are fragrant flowers and selected horticultural, viticultural and citrus fruits, while the mammoth vegetables and stacks of cereals add a substantial appearance to the display.

The music begins, and from sequestered places in the art galleries, shady nooks and vine-covered arbors stroll forth the maidens and their gallants to dance. From the chairs in the balconies and around the spruigly floor, old and young, with sparkling eyes, gaze on the scene pictured by the poet who wrote :

I gazed upon the dance where ladies bright
Were moving in the light
Of mirrors and of lamps. With music and with flowers,
Danced on the joyous hours;
And fairest bosoms
Heaved happily 'neath the many roses' blossoms
And it is well;
Youth hath its time,
Merry hearts will merrily chime.

Alameda's "Killing" Ordinance.

The ordinance passed by the Board of Supervisors of Alameda county at the instance of a host of goody-goody women and their cranky male relatives will result in killing racing in that county as effectually as the tom-fool legislators of Connecticut have done that same in the land of the wooden nutmeg. Alameda County has in the past been the scene of some of the greatest struggles on the Californian turf, and unless the foolish ordinance passed early this week is rescinded the race tracks in and around Oakland will be turned into graveyards and the prime-movers in the work of getting up idiotic measures against racing and hetting will be given positions as grave-diggers and weepers-in-ordinary.

There was no need for all the row made over the pool-room conducted by Henry Schwartz. It is situated in a secluded place, far removed from churches and clergymen, schools and school-boys, clerks and capitalists, and if a person wanted to take the train and repair to Oakland race track, which is situated outside the city limits of Oakland, to make a few hets on the races at the East, we say it seems to us that if a man would take the trouble to go so far he should be allowed to het. No harm would have resulted. Under the provisions of the ordinance passed this week, the Supervisors settle on whether they will allow Killip & Co., for example, or any other firm, to sell pools on any track in the county.

If a hoy should happen around, become interested in the hetting, and get an older friend to buy a ticket on a horse for him, the seller of the pasteboard, no matter how innocent he might be in the matter, could be prosecuted. If these extremes do not result in closing up the Oakland track in fair time, and at every other period, we shall be greatly mistaken. Following is the new ordinance :

SECTION 1. No person upon any trial or contest of skill, speed or power of endurance between horses at any place outside the limits of the county of Alameda shall, within the limits of the county of Alameda, sell, issue or dispose of any ticket, certificate or other evidence of payment, etc.

SEC. 2. Upon any trial or contest of skill, speed or power of endurance between horses at any place outside the limits of the county of Alameda no person shall, within the limits of the county of Alameda, purchase or acquire for money any article of value or any other consideration, etc.

SEC. 3. No person shall knowingly lease or rent, or allow to be used or occupied any building, structure, room, apartment, place or premises whatever, except within the inclosure of a race track or racecourse, where the trial of a contest mentioned in the preceding sections of this ordinance is to actually take place.

SEC. 4. No person shall allow or permit any minor to participate or be interested in any pool or book, or be present at any time or place where the sale of pools or the making of any book is being carried on or conducted.

Section 5 makes a violation of the ordinance a misdemeanor and the penalty $500 and not over six months imprisonment, or both.

SEC. 6. Every person who may engage in the business of making books or selling pools shall first obtain the permission of a majority of the Board of Supervisors at a regular meeting of the Board, which permission may at any time be withdrawn without notice and the license at once revoked and canceled for any reason that to the Supervisors may seem sufficient, and pay a license of $100 a month or part of a month for each stall or auction-room or concern so engaged.

SEC. 7. Any person or persons who may now hold an auctioneer's license, and who is conducting a business or establishment wherein any of the sections of this ordinance are violated, shall at once return to the License Collector of Alameda county any license which he may have or hold and present to this Board a claim for payment of whatever sum may have been paid for the said license, as such license is hereby revoked, recalled and declared invalid, and the Sheriff of Alameda county is hereby requested to enforce this ordinance, and particularly this section, and to incur any expense necessary to carry out its provisions immediately upon the operation of this ordinance.

Suppose that the Supervisors of every county were to pass measures similar to the above, and not be satisfied with any of the pool-sellers, what then? Why, racing in the Golden State would receive about the same impetus that it did recently in Connecticut, when hetting was prohibited altogether. The sport of kings would be struck with an ax. It is a settled fact that if there is no betting on contests between horses there will be no interest felt in the principal features of the fairs, horse-racing, and the farmers' annual holiday will be changed from one of pleasure to one wherein all feeling is lost in the proceedings of such dead-and-alive shows as they would be. Betting on "foreign" racing events—in other words, on races outside of the State—awakens an immense amount of interest in affairs of the turf, but we should not like to see pool-rooms open in and around San Francisco when a race meeting is in progress here or in the vicinity, for a large number would remain in the pool-room and give their attention to betting on outside races, which are minutely described in the betting-rooms. Close the pool-rooms during the progress of local race meetings, keep minors and disreputable characters out of these places, and everything will be all right, an interest being awakened in racing that could not be felt so strongly if there was only a chance to wager money on equine contests one or two weeks during the whole year.

Green Mountain Maid.

As Green Mountain Maid is the dam of the greatest number of 2:30 performers, and also of the sire who by far surpasses all others in the number of his sons and daughters with low records, Green Mountain Maid ranks, for the present at least, so decidedly at the head of the list as to make her breeding and individual qualities of especial interest. Her sire, Harry Clay took a wagon record of 2:23, was by one of the most highly-bred members of the Clay family, and from a daughter of imp. Bellfounder, the combination of these two strains giving him very superior though perhaps rather excessive trotting action, so that while not a success as a sire of trotters, he did possess valuable characteristics for combining, particularly with stouter strains. The compilation of facts here given is the work of an Eastern writer (revised to date) whose especial forte is industry and persistence in accumulating those aggregations of facts, great and small, that completed and arranged make the most valuable and interesting horse biographies.

Nothing is definitely known of the breeding of the dam of Green Mountain Maid, though from her appearance, disposition, speed and gameness it is very certain she must have possessed a considerable amount of superior blood. The earliest point in the history of Shanghai Mary of which there is any definite knowledge is the trading for her by Horton Wilcox, about four miles from Canton, O., in the fall of 1850, she then being three years old, and, as it subsequently proved, was with foal. The trade was made in very few words, nothing whatever being stated by the young man from whom this mare was obtained, as to her breeding or previous history, and his name was either not given or was very quickly forgotten. In the section where she is presumed to have been bred there was at that time considerable Cadmus stock, and from her appearance it is not improbable that she may have belonged to that family, though it is now almost certain nothing definite will ever be known of her breeding. As she was sold for $200, then for $700, and then for $1400, won numerous races, mostly to wagon in about 2:30, took a record of 2:34 at the first State Fair held at Elmira, N. Y., and trotted trials in 2:28, there is every probability that Green Mountain Maid was fully as much, and those who knew her best claim that she was very much more, indebted for her own superior qualities to her dam than to her sire.

Green Mountain Maid was a brown mare, with a star and white hind ankles, 15 hands high, foaled in 1862, and died June 6, 1888, in giving birth to her seventeenth foal, which was also lost. She was bred by Samuel Conklin, Middletown, N. Y., was sold when two years old to Elijah Dusenberry, and while owned by him acquired quite a reputation as a lot trotter. When two and three years old she was given an unusual amount of trotting exercise, as she would stick to the trot even when chased by dogs and urged by men and boys with hats, whips, etc. As these exhibitions occurred almost daily, it is very probable she received more actual development those two seasons in the lot than was given to almost any other trotter of the same age in harness.

The fall she was three years old she was sold to D. B. Irwin, also of Middletown. He owned the first half-mile track in that vicinity, where he attempted to break this young mare to harness. She was driven double once around this track, and then showed her peculiar disposition by kicking for some very slight cause until she got over the pole, and had to be unharnessed. Neither she nor the horse with which she was harnessed was much injured by the outbreak, which was such that Mr. Irwin immediately gave up the idea of breaking her, as he fully realized that it would be no easy task, and it was never attempted afterwards. The next spring Mr. Backman went to the farm where she was owned, intending to purchase her for $500 to breed to Hambletonian, but on arrival was greatly disappointed in finding she had already been bred to Middletown, and at first gave up the idea of buying her, but subsequently concluded to take her for $450. The following is a description of all her foals, the first being by Middletown, the second, Electioneer, by Hambletonian, while all the others are by Messenger Duroc :

(1) 1867—Storm, 2:26½, a bay mare, 15½ hands high, was sold at auction when three years old for $330 to N. Salsus, of Brooklyn, then to J. D. Shaw, of New York, who used her on the road most of the time until seventeen years old, though during that time he raised one foal from her. He then sold her to J. B. Perkins, of Ohio, who started her with very limited preparation to beat 2:30. She trotted the first heat in 2:28½ and repeated in 2:26½, her only public performances. Mr. Shaw claims that had this mare been properly fitted earlier in her career she would have beaten 2:20 easily, which is not improbable. She had only four foals. Gale, her first, as a four-year-old trotted at Fleetwood track in 2:31½

the fifth time she was harnessed to a sulky. She subsequently won a wager in 2:21½, trotted a trial at Fleetwood in 2:26½, a half in 1:10½, but died at five years old with a technical record. The next two have shown ability to take low records, and both will probably be given the opportunity. The fourth is a promising two-year-old by Baron Wilkes. Storm died in 1890.

(2) 1868—Electioneer, a dark bay horse, with white hind ankles, 15½ hands high, remarkably fast, though never given an opportunity to take an actual record. It is claimed on the best of authority that he was the fastest three-year-old ever bred at Stony Ford. He was broken to harness that year, and without special preparation trotted quarters in 38 seconds to wagon, and occasionally showing wonderful flights of speed, so that in all probability he would have been given a sensational record but for occasionally hitting his knees. At Palo Alto he regularly trotted the last quarter in his daily exercise at about a 2:20 gait. His list of performers places him as a sire far in advance of all others, and also as a sire of extreme speed at an early age. He was sold in 1877 for $12,500 to Leland Stanford, taken to California, and died December 3, 1890.

(3) 1869—Prospero, 2:20, a black gelding, 16 hands high, won his first race as a three-year-old, distancing the field the first heat in 2:33½, and was certainly the most sensational three-year-old at that time. He was sold soon after for $20,000. Two years later he again distanced the field in 2:22½, winning a purse of $10,000. When eight years old he reduced this record to 2:20 in the third heat of a five-heat race, which he won. Prospero died in 1879 at Prospect Park from "big head."

(4)—1870—Dame Trot, 2:22, a black mare, 15 hands high, took a three-year-old record of 2:40, four-year-old record of 2:37½, which in 1878 she reduced to 2:22, and trotted a trial soon after in 2:27. She was sold as a yearling for $1,000 to K. W. Sears, of Boston. She subsequently passed to J. and F. H. Bole, Pittsburg, Pa., and has produced quite a number of foals, neither of which, however, has as yet taken a low record, though several are claimed to be fast.

(5) 1871—Paul, chestnut gelding, 15½ hands high, sold as a yearling for $1500, was driven as a three-year-old in 2:50 with very little handling, was subsequently used solely for road work, though he could speed better than a 2:30 gait, and would undoubtedly have entered the list had he been given an opportunity, but died in 1883 with no actual record.

(6) 1872—Miranda, 2:31, chestnut mare, with strip and white hind legs, 15½ hands high, as a three-year-old took a record of 2:42½. After being used as a broodmare she was hastily fitted for a broodmare race, winning the first heat in 2:31, and led under the wire in 2:30 the next heat, which was unjustly taken from her. Later that season she trotted a full mile trial in 2:25½, and on another occasion a half in 1:12½. She is a very superior road mare, and several seasons has been kept for driving purposes, not being bred.

(7) 1873—Black colt, so promising that before being weaned $6,000 was offered for him and refused. Not long after his leg was broken and his owner had him killed.

(8) 1874—Elaine, 2:20, a brown mare, with white hind ankles, 15½ hands high, started in her first race as a three-year-old at Fleetwood, taking a record of 2:33½, and two weeks later at Hartford distanced the field the second heat in 2:28, then, and for several years, the fastest three-year-old record. As a four-year-old, after winning in Rochester in 2:26½, she started at Hartford to beat the four-year-old record of 2:24½, then held by Keene Jim, which she did on the first attempt. As a six-year-old she reduced her record to 2:20, subsequently trotted a trial mile in 2:15½ and a half-mile in 1:05. She is the dam of Norlaine, 2:31½, the fastest yearling record when made, and also of Anselma, 2:29½. Elaine was sold as a two-year-old for $700.

(9) 1876—Mansfield, 2:26, a chestnut horse, with star and white on both hind legs, 15½ hands high. He won his only three-year-old race, and could easily have distanced the field, though the time was only 2:47. He has never been started since, except in a match race in 1887, for giving him a record, when his present record of 2:26 was made in the second heat. Since then he has trotted quarters very fast, and could probably have reduced his record several seconds. He is the sire of five in the 2:30 list, including Dawson, 2:19½.

(10) 1887—Elise, a brown mare, star, snip, both forward ankles and hind legs to the hock white, 15½ hands high, was shipped as a yearling, but was driven a mile as a three-year-old in 2:51 with very little preparation; could doubtless have been given a record of 2:30 or better a year or two later.

(11) 1879—Elite, a bay mare, 16 hands high, was sold as a five-year-old to J. D. Ripley, New York, for $4000, and while owned by him trotted a half-mile trial in 1:08 to 1:09, and full miles in about 2:30. When eight years old she was sold at auction to A. J. Alexander, Woodburn Farm, Kentucky, for $3,100. She is the dam of Elita Russell, 2:29½.

(12) 1880—Antonio, 2:23½, bay horse, with star and white on each right ankle, 15½ hands high. September 7, 1883, he won a match race at Fleetwood, distancing his competitor in 2:44½, but this did not constitute a record. October 3, at the meeting of the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders, he distanced the field in 2:41½, and the following day won the Nursery Stake in 2:46½ and 2:43½. He was carefully fitted as a four-year-old, but was distanced by Early Dawn, in the first heat of the only race in which he was started in 2:26½. As a six-year-old his record of 2:28½ was obtained in the first heat of a match-race for that purpose. He was subsequently started twice against the same mare, but failed to produce this record. It is claimed that he has trotted quarters in 33 to 34 seconds. He wears neither weights nor boots. He is the sire of Tuscaraos, 2:22½.

(13) 1881—Black filly, that resembled Dame Trot, but died when only a few months old.

(14) 1883—Elista, 2:20½, a brown mare, with star and right ankle white, was sold to William Russell Allen as a five-year-old for $10,000. Took a record as a six-year-old of 2:22½, which she reduced the next year to 2:20½.

(15) 1885—Elina, 2:28, black mare, with star and right hind ankle white, 15½ hands high, took a five-year-old record of 2:35, and in 1892, reduced this to 2:28.

(16) 1887—Lancelot, 2:23, bay horse, 15½ hands high, owned at Allen Farm, Pittsfield, Mass., having been bought for $12,500. Took a record of 2:23 in 1892, and is the sire of Leone, yearling record 2:28½, and Unkamel, two-year-old record 2:27½.

There is little doubt but what each of her sixteen foals possessed natural trotting capacity sufficient to have been given records of 2:30 or better, if fairly well developed. Of the fourteen that lived to maturity, eight are already in the list; another has a record of 2:31, and still another is also another the greatest sire that ever lived, while three other sons and two daughters have produce in the list.

TURF AND TRACK.

The Sulky.

The dash system of trotting is a success.

DICTATUS is registered standard; his number is 23,306.

MUTA WILKES, 2:14½, has wintered well, and will be even a better mare this year than last.

ELECTIONEER has two new ones in the list to his credit—Memento, 2:25½ and Antinous, 2:28½.

On Tuesday, at the Bay District Track, $5 place tickets in the Paris mutuels paid $62.50 on Genevieve.

NAVIDAD, 2:22½, by Whips, is looking and acting all right, and Splan thinks he will do to campaign again.

ST. NICHOLAS, son of Sidney, has saken to pacing. He can reel off quarters in thirty-five seconds quite easily.

J. L. McCORD, of Sacramento, has Mary Lou and several other good ones at the track there in splendid shape.

C. H. COREY has a big string of trotters and pacers besides Almont Patchen at San Jose, and they are all working fast.

SENATOR LELAND STANFORD'S health is improving at Palo Alto. He enjoys looking at the mares and foals in the paddocks every morning.

WM. HOUSER of the Vina Stock Farm has several trainers under him, and with their co-operation he will bring out a string of good ones this fall.

BEAURY MC., 2:14½, is at San Jose, but there is little or no improvement noticeable in his condition. It is feared he never will be able to trot again.

The handsome Billy Thornhill filly, Minnie B., 2:29½, is improving very rapidly in her way of going, and Ed. Topham, her owner, believes she will be in excellent trim for the races this fall.

SAN PEDRO is a "little off" at Pleasanton; it is hoped he will be able to start East on the 10th of June. Perhaps he has been "keyed up" a little too high and with a little rest may be better than ever.

WALTER MABEN says there are more really fast trotters and pacers in Los Angeles than he has ever seen before. He says everybody seems to take a great interest in the breeding and developing of good horses.

G. C. FOUNTAIN, of St. Helena, Napa County, has a magnificent foal by Pilot Prince, dam Ada by Whippleton, second dam by Toronto Chief. The name given to the youngster is Pilot Royal; he was foaled May 8, 1893.

The track at Petaluma is first-class in every way. Mr. McDonald, the superintendent, has it in better shape than it has ever been. We expect to see a large number of horses working there after the Breeders' meeting ends.

CAVEL RODRIGUEZ, the well-known trotting horse driver and trainer, has given up his stable of trotters at the Salinas track, and leaves this week for Portland, Oregon, under engagement to W. R. Connor, the well-known hookmaker.

DEXTER PRINCE as a sire is again brought to the front by his daughter, Flora S., who got a mark of 2:26 in the second heat of her race at the Breeders' meeting. She is a plain-looking roan mare, and comes from Lodi. Her dam is untraced.

S. C. HAUGHEY, of Indianapolis, Ind., has bought of H. S. Wheeler, Chicago, a yearling chestnut filly by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, dam Sunbeam (dam of Day Dream, 2:21), by Hambletonian 10; second dam Trusty, by Marlborough, by imp. Trustee.

E. J. SANDERS, a brother of Millard's, has the Needham string of trotters at Stockton, and is doing well with them. After Mr. Salisbury leaves Pleasanton he will bring them all to the famous track there. He has engaged stalls for thirty-eight head.

The Sonoma Stock Farm recently sold the two-year-old colt called Carrick to J. F. Wilcox of Rio Vista; consideration, $1,000. Carrick is by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½; dam, Madame Baldwin (dam of Bay Rose, 2:20½), and Majester, 2:24, by The Moor 870.

SCHULBACH & PARK, Wheeling, W. Va., have sold to F. D. Myers, Oakland, Cal., the bay mare Lalla Meade, by Happy Medium, dam Susan Brady (dam of Numidian 2:31½), by Cassius M. Clay, Jr.; second dam Ahness, by Alexander's Abdallah; third dam by Herr's Cœur de Leon.

SUNOL, by Electioneer, was three years, six months and twenty-four days old when she made her record of 2:10½. Axtell, by William L., was three years, six months and ten days old when he made his record of 2:12. Patron, by Pancoast, was three years one month and one day old when he made his record of 2:14.

The chestnut colt Silver Bee belonging to W. O. Bowers of the "Golden Eagle," Sacramento, is a chip of the old block, and is a worthy son of Silver Bow. Every colt and filly sired by Silver Bow has the reputation of trotting as gamely as he does. When one sees Silver Bee it is easy to understand why these rumors are as well founded.

WM. M. WILLIAMSON, while speaking of Vic II., 2:13½, and Directum, 2:11½, said they were related. Vic H. is a granddaughter of Simpson's Blackbird, son of Camden. Camden was by Shark, out of Invalid, by Whisker. Directum's dam is by Venture, 2:27½. He was a grandson of Fanny Mostyn, and her dam, Lady Mostyn, was out of Invalid, by Whisker.

ANDREW YOUNG'S fine chestnut colt Sidney Wilkes, by Roy Wilkes, 2:07½, dam Primrose, by Sidney, 2:19½; second dam Brown Rose, by Privator; third dam Madame Baldwin (dam of Bay Rose, 2:20½), and Majester, 2:24, by The Moor, is now at San Jose, and competent judges who have seen him move declare that he will be a faster pacer than his sire. He is only two years old and is a large, well-limbed, evenly made youngster. He has been bred to a few first-class mares this year.

HENRY HELLMAN is more than pleased with the Dawn colts and fillies he is handling at the Agnew Stock Farm. Every one who knows "Genial Harry" hopes that fortune will smile upon him this year at the races and that the Dawns will be brightening for him for all time to come.

A HUNDRED men and seventy teams are at work on the Portland Speed and Driving Association's new track. One hundred and fifty stalls are already completed, and the grand, judges' and reporters' stands will be finished before the last of the coming week. It is now a settled fact that everything will be in "apple pie" order for the June meeting, and that it will be one such as was never before witnessed in the North Pacific.

TUXEDO, who broke the English record for trotting stallions by his mile in 2:25½ at the Aintree Course March 20, is announced for a stud season at 10 guineas ($50). Handsome Boy by Ed Kimball, son of Almont, formerly the property of his Grace, the late Duke of Marlborough, is at Birmingham, and Harry R., another American-bred stallion by Ben Franklin, 2:29, with a half-mile record of 1:11, is in service at Manchester, each at a fee of 5 guineas ($25).

MR. DAVID BONNER, in a recent conversation, said: "There was a time when I thought mile heats, three in five, were necessary to develop and preserve gameness, but now when we have made such progress in breeding I believe the system of trotting should be changed. We need dashes at various distances, and mile heats best two in three to hold popular interest and enthusiasm. The agitation of the distance will do good, and it strikes me that the proposed changes to seventy-five and one hundred yards should be given a universal trial."

ORRIN HICKOK has arrived at Terre Haute with his stable of California horses all in first-class condition. The horses from Senator Stanford's Palo Alto farm are: Advance, hr s, 3, record 2:22½; Alliro, hr s, 3, by Electioneer; Avena, ch f, 3, by Palo Alto, trotted at Stockton in 2:19½; Azote, 2:14½; Elden, hr f, 4, trotted at Stockton in 2:19½; Sweet Rose, filly, 2, by Electioneer, record 2:30 at Oakland, and at Stockton she made 2:25½ as a yearling. Hickok also has with him Hulda, 2:14½, owned by Adolph Spreckles; Adonis, 2:11½ and Angelina, 2:18.

The Walla Walla Statesman says: "There was some very fine work done at the race track Sunday. Klamath went three heats in 2:26, 2:24½ and 2:23½ respectively. Charley Blair lowered his previous records, trotting a mile in 2:36½. Darwin, under the skillful handling of Billy Russell, is developing great speed, and promises to go in 2:20 or better before the season is over. A two-year-old colt belonging to Russ Davidson, of Dayton, also did some phenomenal work, trotting a mile in 2:25 with only two month's training."

LAST Saturday another one of the greatest sons of Hambletonian 10 died, leaving a heritage that is a credit to himself, his sire and his dam. We refer to the great Dictator, sire of Director, 2:17, Jay-Eye-See, 2:06½, and forty-three others in the list. He was the sire of twenty sires of sixty-six in the list, and nineteen dams of twenty-seven, including Nancy Hanks, 2:04, Lockheart, 2:13. Dictator was foaled in 1863. He was out of Clara (dam of Dexter, 2:17½), by American Star 14; his second dam was the McKinstry mare.

CHARLEY M. has a queer record. He is a chestnut gelding that has a running record for a half mile of 0:51, a trotting record of 2:24½ and a pacing record of 2:22½. He is a branded broncho, and nothing is known of his breeding. He is believed to be about nineteen years old, but is as fast as at any time in his life, and when he started in the free-for-all at the first meeting this season in Texas, he showed the way to the wire the first heat in 2:23. The performance was over a half-mile track, and is the best on record in that State.

ASHLAND, Nathan Coomb's famous racehorse, was by Glencoe, out of Mary Belle, by Sea Gull, second dam Miss Shepherd, by Stockholder. Miss Russell, dam of Nutwood and Maud S., was by Boston, out of Maria Russell, by Thornton's Rattler, second dam Miss Shepherd, by Stockholder. It's strange how the racehorses on the two sides of the continent were related. Ashland's name does not appear in the pedigrees of many trotters or runners for the reason that he was bred to very few mares. Athena, 2:25½, by Electioneer, out of Ashley, by General Benton, traces to him, for the dam of Ashley was by Ashland.

The dash races at the Bay District track are pronounced "successful" and greater interest is manifested in them than the two-in-three events. The starting is done by flags similar to those in use at running meetings. The starter, flag in hand, stands about ten feet from the mark, while about thirty yards up the stretch a man with a flag stands, when the latter sees the starter's flag signal he drops his and the drivers hearing the word "go," and seeing the flag drop, know it's a start. To facilitate the starting a helper stands at the place where the horse turns to score; he sees that the drivers understand their positions and aids them to get away on even terms.

JOHN GREEN, of Portland, has been reinstated by the American Trotting Association. He was expelled last fall for foul driving at the Breeders' meeting at Vancouver. At the meeting of the Board of Appeals of the American Trotting Association, held May 2d at Chicago, it was shown that the judges of the race, in promulgating the order of expulsion, made a mistake in thinking it the same as a suspension, and supposed the penalty would only remain in force for the remainder of the year. The member, one of the judges and other parties asked that the reinstatement be made, on the ground that the punishment was excessive, and was imposed under misapprehension of the rules, and their request was granted.

SPEAKING of Arion, horsemen of the Huh count him due for the stallion record by the close of the season. Last year he really was not as good as he was as a two-year-old. Giving a two-year-old a year and the benefit of the bicycle sulky, and then with these advantages only lowering the two-year-old record by one-quarter of a second, and you have sure proof that the horse has lost form. Arion was surely not at himself at all last season. While not down sick at any time and escaping distemper, the great little horse was not strong and rugged. The difference in the climate of California and Massachusetts is vast, and without exception it has taken fully a year for horses coming here from the Pacific Coast to get thoroughly acclimated. They find our famous east wind peculiarly trying. So look out for Arion when counting on the stallion record.

TO ALLOW colts to go the gait that comes natural to them is being advocated by many breeders nowadays. Not longer than two years ago it was not uncommon to educate a colt who showed a turn for pacing to become a trotter. Toe-weights were put on, no matter how fast he might be. It is now asserted that the fashion has changed, and that C. J. Hamlin is a strong advocate of the new doctrine. In some places even another turn has been taken, and trotters have been converted into pacers. More attention is being paid to the pacer all along the line, and this year's purses show that visitors to the light-harness races are nearly as pleased with pacing as trotting.

VANCOUVER Register: Engineer Rapp, who is superintending the construction of the new race track at Alhina, informed a Register reporter last Saturday that the work is now progressing finely. He says it will be finished by June 24th, and that it gives promise of being an exceptionally fine and very fast track. The Alhina track will be less oblong than the Vancouver track. The distance on the sides is reduced and added to the ends of the track between the turns. The outside of the track, like the Vancouver track, is thrown well up. The track is of clay and works up nicely. The entrance to the track is just 700 feet west of the corner of Union avenue and Morris street, at which point the P. & V. R. R. touches. If the new track is to prove a better one than the Vancouver track, it will have to lead all other race courses on the coast.

The greatest disadvantage under which the ordinary trainer labors is no doubt his inability to wait—to make speed slowly and gradually in the spring when preparing for the campaign. Given a season of uniformly propitious weather and smooth track, the horses are quite apt to acquire racing form before it is needed and to get stale, a condition from which some of them do not recover until fall. No spring was more unpropitious for track work than last, and no season ever witnessed better or faster race horses all over the West. Unseasonable weather in moderate quantities is useful in curbing the enthusiasm of trainers who can't wait for the day of the race to have their horses in the acme of form. It is quite a long time yet before the earliest races, and with the training which was accomplished during the early part of the month there is abundant time to get the horses ready.

A LESSON goes with the death of Lohasco. It appears that his owner drove him into Beatrice, Neb., on Saturday and put him in a livery stable. A window left open by a careless hostler occasioned a draught, in which the animal remained through the night, and it was then and there that the fatal work was done. The horse was driven back to the farm on Sunday morning, and it was not noticed that there was anything wrong until he reached there, when he refused his food. Unfortunately a veterinarian was not called at the time, as it was regarded but a temporary indisposition. On Monday the throat was so swollen that the horse could hardly breathe. Poulitices were applied, but apparently did no good. From this time on everything possible was done to save him, but the treatment was begun too late. He died from hemorrhage of the lungs, which had become weakened by the continued strain of attempting to breathe. Imagine the owner of a horse valued at $100,000 intrusting him to the care of a livery stable hostler in a country town!—Mirror and Farmer.

GEORGE WILKES made nine seasons in Kentucky; during that time he sired 69 out of his 71 trotters to enter the 2:30 list, while other stallions who had enjoyed a longer period in Kentucky have never been able to approach him as a sire of extreme speed. Belmont was foaled in 1864; made his first season for mares in 1869, died in 1889, making 20 years as a sire in Kentucky. Left 39 trotters to enter the 2:30 list. Almont, foaled in 1864, made about fifteen seasons in Kentucky for mares; left 35 trotters to enter the 2:30 list in the next generation. George Wilkes left 83 sons to sire 652 trotters and 140 pacers; and 51 daughters to produce 53 trotters to enter the 2:30 list, and 12 pacers to enter the 2:25 list. Belmont left 46 sons to sire 229 trotters to enter the 2:30 list, and 26 pacers to enter the 2:25 list; 31 daughters to produce 41 trotters to enter the 2:30 list, and 3 pacers to enter the 2:25 list. Almont left 75 sons to sire 235 horses to enter the 2:30 list as trotters; 34 horses to enter the 2:25 list as pacers, and 49 daughters to produce 61 horses to enter the 2:30 list as trotters, and six horses to enter the 2:25 list as pacers. George Wilkes outrank both as sires. He produced more speed with less opportunities. Belmont and Almont enjoyed more years as a sire than George Wilkes. He surpassed both of them. In 1873 they were considered better bred, their pedigrees were considered of more value than his; but Wilkes as a sire proved as great a success as he was a trotter. He impressed his great speed and stamina on his produce to a wonderful degree, and in general terms nearly all great performers will do the same.

AMONG the more important changes made in the turf rules by the Biennial Congress of the American Trotting Association is the creation of a rule permitting standing starts; the insertion of a new rule providing that "any driver that is intoxicated, or who refuses to comply with the direction of the judges, or who is reckless in his conduct and endangers the safety of horses or their drivers in the race, may be removed and another driver substituted at any time during the race and the offending driver may be fined, suspended or expelled;" that any horse found offending in the way of "swerving," "carrying out," "helping," or "sitting down in front," etc., as described in Rule 73, shall be placed behind all the unoffending horses in the heat—taking this point out of the discretion of the judge; the changing of Rule 73 to read as follows: "In case of any horse repeatedly breaking, or running, or performing in a mixed gait, while another is trotting, the judges shall punish the horse so at fault by placing him last in the heat, or by distancing him. A horse breaking four times in a heat may be regarded as repeatedly breaking, but nothing herein shall be construed into permitting a horse to make four or less number of breaks without being liable to the penalties prescribed. If, in the opinion of the judges, a driver allows his horse to make repeated breaks for the purpose of fraudulently losing a heat, he shall be liable to the penalties elsewhere provided for frauds and fouls;" the following addition to Rule 111: "The time shall be deemed to have been suppressed in any race wherein a record of the same is not copied in writing, whether on Association tracks or others;" and the insertion of a clause in Rule 119 making time, or a record, made to a wsgon a record or bar—as the case may be—in races of every character.—Horse Review.

The Saddle.

ACCORDING to the Chicago Inter Ocean Johnny Weher is to ride Monowai in the American Derby.

THE Ferndale (Cal.) races advertised to begin May 25th and last three days have been postponed until June 15th.

GEORGE COVINGTON, the Undine Stable trainer who has been seriously ill at Council Bluffs, Ia., is rapidly recovering.

THE Thirty-fourth District Fair will be held at Susanville, Lassen county, Cal., September 26th. Eighty-five hundred dollars in purses and premiums are offered.

BOTH Houses of the Mexican Congress have passed a bill giving R. C. Pate, of St. Louis, Mo., a concession to establish a breeding farm and racecourse near the city of Mexico.

FRED CARRILLO has been doing the riding for the Macdonough stable at Brooklyn. Milan (sister to Sir Walter) and Dorian have been started, but have not accomplished much.

LADY FOSTER, one of the Tndhunter mares, foaled a magnificent-looking brown filly by Jackson last Sunday morning. This mare's period of gestation was thirteen months and six days—remarkably long.

NAPHA, winner of the Gazelle Stakes, one and one-eighth miles, at Gravesend, is by Sir Modred, dam Napa, by Enquirer, and was bred at Rancho del Paso. She won by two and a half lengths.

CLINTON C. RILEY, who presided in the judges' stand at the recent Blood Horse and California Jockey Club meetings, will be one of the associate judges at the great meeting to be held at Washington Park this season.

HAPPY DAY was sick with pneumonia at Denver, while Mr. Holly was on his way to St. Louis, and the Floden turfman remained a week in the Colorado metropolis. At last accounts the gelding was out of all danger.

THE filly Fatalitv, by Sir Modred—Faux Pas, that ran the Bonnie Jean colt to a neck here this spring, won a good race at St. Louis last Tuesday. Galindo won the Decoration Day handicap at Latonia, mile and three-sixteenths.

WHITEHAT MCCARTHY made a big killing on his horse Blizzard, a three-year-old, at Hawthorne, on May 25th. The colt was at 20 to 1. Blizzard is a brown colt, by imp. Trade Wind, dam Trampo, and was bred by the late Hon. George Hearst.

SEVEN or eight of the Palo Alto thoroughbreds will in all likelihood race at the great fall meeting of the Blood Horse Association. Superintendent Cy. Mulkey has a number of very likely-looking money-hunters now in training at the ranch track.

THE Racine—imp. Flirt suckling at Palo Alto is said to be as much like the great miler as it is possible for a youngster to be like his sire. The resemblance is truly remarkable, and everyone that visit the thoroughbred department near Mayfield speaks in the same vein.

OLD DIABLO beat Longstreet, Candelabra, Reckon and other celebrities at Gravesend last Monday, in a mile and a quarter race, doing the distance in 2:08 $\frac{1}{2}$ so easily that it is declared that he could have run it in 2:07 $\frac{1}{2}$. As far as that goes, 2:08 $\frac{1}{2}$ was the best run at the far East this season.

MCCAFFERTY & WISHARD, now in St. Louis, have sold to the Climax stable, on private terms, the brown colt Bayles II, by Blazes, dam Selma, and therefore a brother to Barney. The well-known fillies, Lady Useful and Jewel, have been sold by the Lorraine stable to Trainer Bellew for $1,500.

THE Californians did wonderfully well at St. Louis last Monday. Macdonough's Joe Daniela colt, Electricity, won a nine-sixteenths dash; then Colonel S., (brother to Wildwood) won a mile race, and Santiago ran second to Balgowan in a mile and 100-yard dash. At Latonia, Baldwin's El Reno ran third.

ST. FLORIAN is much darker in color than last year, and his short season in the stud has made a different-looking horse out of him. He used to be leggy, but that fault has disappeared. He is high in flesh yet, and shows the careful preparation he is receiving for the Metropolitan handicap, to win which is the ambition of the Morris.

A. F. WALCOTT, owner of Diahlo, winner of the Brooklyn Handicap of 1893, annoyed at the talk over the race, has offered to match Diabolo against any horse that ran in the race at the same distance and same weights allotted them in the Brooklyn for any amount from $1,000 up to $18,000, the winner's portion in the Brooklyn Handicap.

ORVILLE APPLEBY took eight horses to Sacramento last week, and the Encino Stable flyers will in all likelihood gather in a goodly share of the stakes and purses offered at the Capital Turf and Driving Club meeting, which begins next Tuesday. Esperanza, St. Patrick and Conde were sizing equine goods recently, and there may be one or two more in the string that will astonish the natives.

MESSRS. WALCOTT & CAMPBELL made Boyle & Lstlefield an offer for the crack two-year-old gelding Halton, by Himyar—Mand L. They offered $15,000 in cash and the three-year-old Eagle Bird, whom they bought from the same firm for $10,000 last year. The offer, though flattering, was refused, so Halton is evidently held in high esteem by his owners.—Daily America.

MATT STORN and his excellent string of ten left last Wednesday afternoon for Morris Park, Westchester, N. Y. The celebrities in the lot are Marigold, Centella, Topgallant and Hermitage. Several of Mr. Storn's horses have been ailing for some time past, hence his delay in starting. The flyers are well engaged at the far East, and we expect to hear a good account of the work rendered by the Storn horses.

DOMINO, the little black two-year-old by Himyar, dam Annie Grey, by Enquirer, is declared by Easterners to be another Tremont. He recently made Dobbins, Joe Ripley and a host of other clever youngsters look like selling-platers. He is owned by James R. and Foxhall P. Keene. The description of Domino's wins generally read: "Taral gave the little black fellow his head near the three-quarter pole, and he left his field as if they were rank selling-platers, winning in a romp by six lengths."

MR. FREDERICK GEBHARD'S stable has been recruited by a lot of fourteen three and two-year-olds, which arrived at Gravesend Saturday morning. Frank McCabe will handle them. They are homebred ones, having been raised on Mr. Gebhard's Guenoc Stud, Lake County, Cal. Some of the three-year-olds were rather undersized in their two-year-old form, but give good promise for the future.—Daily America, May 22.

THE cherry jacket of L. J. Rose will soon be familiar on our leading race courses. At the Runnymede and McGrathiana yearling sales last week in New York, he purchased the following, in addition to the Charaxus youngsters chronicled in our columns: Bay colt by Hindoo—Alga, by Onondaga; br f (sister to Mabel Glenn and Catalpa), by Hindoo—imp. Calphurnia; h c by Onondaga—Maria D., by Lisbon; h c, by Favor—imp. Consuelo, by Springfield; br f by Argyle—Lady Elizabeth, by Flood, and ch f by Onondaga—Matagorda, by imp. Glengarry.

FRED GEORGE, the little Londoner, writes us from New York that the racing in the vicinity of the American metropolis is grand and the betting a caution. A person has to fight to get near a hook, and there are 100 or more bookmakers transacting business, too. L. J. Rose, H. Walsh, W. O'B. Macdonough and J. G. Follanshee saw the Brooklyn Handicap run. Mr. George leaves for Chicago on June 25th, and will see the Suburban Handicap race ere he leaves. He expects to be in San Francisco in July or August, and will leave his business affairs entirely with his partner, Inkersley, Room 69, Chronicle Building, this city, who will attend to everything.

THERE is nothing like getting reports of meetings from the proper officials, for then you know that you are all right. During the Blood Horse and California Jockey Club meetings Owner A. Leach, Jockey Kinney, Owner William Stinclair and the gray gelding Stoneman were ruled off. None of these were reinstated. Owner W. P. Fine and Trainer W. Short were suspended indefinitely. Fine was subsequently reinstated, but Short was not. Trainer Tom Bally was suspended indefinitely. Jockeys Joseph Narvaez and A. Cook were suspended indefinitely, and neither was taken back, as requested, all talk about the former to the contrary notwithstanding. Jockey Dick Ward was ruled off, but at a meeting of the P. C. B. H. A. directors last week it was decided to allow the youth ride on probation. When he was ruled off his irregular habits weighed heavily against him, but he has promised to reform.

WE have it on the authority of Norman Brough, one of the judges at the recent local meetings, as well as Clerk of the Scales, that Joseph Narvaez has not been reinstated at all, has not been allowed to ride for either the Bootses or Holly, and all the reports that appeared in the local papers stating that the crack jockey would be allowed to ride for any man were erroneous. Mr. Holly did telegraph to President Williams stating that good jockeys were scarce in Denver, and that he would like to have Narvaez at the meeting in the Colorado metropolis. As the judges suspended Narvaez indefinitely, their permission was necessary, and, upon their refusing to reinstate the jockey, that settled the matter so far as the local association was concerned. The Secretaries at Denver and other prominent racing points in the West, as well as East, have been notified of Narvaez's suspension.

LAMPLIGHTER is a favorite for the Suburban Handicap at 4 to 1. Following are the odds against the others, together with the weights: Lamplighter, 127 lbs., 4; Tammany, 127 lbs.; Banquet, 125 lbs., 15; La Tosca, 119 lbs., 30; Strathmeath, 118 lbs., 12; Raceland, 118 lbs., 20; Judge Morrow, 117 lbs., 20; Montana, 116 lbs.; Dr. Hashrouck, 116 lbs., 8; Lochachee, 116 lbs., 25; His Highness, 116 lbs., 10; Pessara, 115 lbs., 15; Major Domo, 115 lbs., 50; Parvenue, 112 lbs., 20; The Pepper, 112 lbs., 20; Leonawell, 112 lbs., 20; Mars, 112 lbs., 20; Nomad, 110 lbs., 40; Russell, 106 lbs., 20; Victory, 103 lbs., full; High Commissioner, 103 lbs., 50; Tournament, 107 lbs.; Two Bits, 106 lbs., 50; Rey Del Rey, 103 lbs.; Lowlander, 105 lbs., 60; Fidelio, 105 lbs., 50; Iddeleigh, 105 lbs., 100; Charade 105 lbs., 30; Cassius, 100 lbs., full; Silver Fox, 100 lbs., 100; Demuth, 100 lbs., 30; Steve Estes, 98 lbs., full; Reclare, 97 lbs., 75; Terriifer, 95 lbs., 30.

THE select little Elmwood Stock Farm string (Sir Walter, Peter the Great, the Brutus—Bonnie Jean, and Torchbearer, the Brutus—Ariola colt), left last Sunday morning for Washington Park, Chicago, in charge of Charles Boots and Trainer Joe Nelson. At Winnemucca Cadmus, who had been ill with pleurisy and kidney trouble, was picked up and taken along to the White City. Dr. Masero hardly thinks the grand colt can be fitted for the American Derby, which is run on Saturday, the 24th of June. Peter the Great is in the World's Fair and Hyde Park Stakes. The former, five and one-half furlongs, is guaranteed worth $20,000 to the winner, while the Hyde Park, six furlongs, has 294 nominations, with $5,000 added. If Peter the Great lands at Chicago in good shape it will take a wonder to beat him in these events. Sir Walter and the Ariola colts are not entered in any of the stakes, but will have a chance to run in some of the good over-night races.

SPEAKING of a recent trial of Rainbow, the Longfellow colt in the Morris stable, Daily America of May 24th said: "Wyndham Walden put Fred Littlefield up on Rainbow, the good-looking son of Longfellow and Buff and Blue. He instructed the jockey to let him run a mile and a half, and as the boy had a whip and wore spurs it was plain that there would be no child's play about the work. The brown colt went away at a remarkable clip, running the first half in 50 seconds and the five furlongs in 1:03. The onlookers whistled as they looked at their watches, and then turned to gaze again at Rainbow as he flashed up the backstretch, going the three-quarters in 1:16 $\frac{1}{2}$, and the seven-eighths in 1:30. The time for the mile was 1:43 $\frac{1}{2}$, for the mile and a furlong 1:56 $\frac{1}{2}$, and when Rainbow had reeled off a mile and a quarter in 2:09 $\frac{1}{2}$ and still kept on, the excitement in the little knot of spectators, including such good judges as Messrs. Rowe, Gideon and Joyner, was intense. The mile and three furlongs was passed in 2:23, and the mile and a half in 2:36 $\frac{1}{2}$, showing Rainbow to be a three-year-old of the very greatest speed and stamina. He had fully 120 pounds up, and this work will compare favorably with anything ever done by Salvador, Longstreet or any of the great thoroughbreds seen during the last decade at the same age. The colt did not appear to be greatly distressed after his brilliant and exhaustive trial, and those who saw the work asked themselves the question, "If this colt keeps right until the day of the American Derby, how are they going to beat him?"

THE following interesting dispatch came over the wires from Chicago last Monday night: "Fine weather makes fast work, and this morning Trainer Havey sent his colt Floodgate and Dare the fastest mile they have gone since their arrival at Washington Park. The Californian was out early with his string, and after the usual amount of walking exercise he took Floodgate and Dare to the three-quarter pole. The colts started at a good pace, with Dare slightly in the lead, but both galloped well and strong. Around the far turn Floodgate drew up even, and the pair raced together into the stretch. Half-way down to the grand stand Dare again showed in front. At the club-house turn he was half a length to the good. He increased his lead at the finish and completed the mile a length in advance of Floodgate in 1:14. Neither colt was distressed, and Floodgate had evidently improved much, although Dare got the better of him. The work and improved condition of Floodgate must have become known, for he was hacked to the extent of $100 in a local book this afternoon at 20 to 1. Yo El Rey has disappointed most persons who has seen him gallop. He is very quick, but moves with a short stride, totally different from all other sons and daughters of Marion. He may be a world-beater, but his action does not denote it. Challenge and Una Colorado are both more taking movers, and it would be hard to find a nicer-looking pair of youngsters."

LAST Monday night the Board of Supervisors of Alameda County, urged on by a host of protesting women and religious men, passed an ordinance prohibiting the making of hooks or selling pools on Eastern racing events. The ordinance was introduced by Mr. Martin, and a few amendments were made by Mr. Plunkett, but which in nowise changed the document as to its terms. Mr. Martin moved that the ordinance be placed on final passage and Mr. Palouze seconded the motion. Mr. Plunkett stated that he tried to have the former ordinance rescinded and had failed. He stated that the Martin ordinance was a limitation of the evil, and as a slice is better than no bread he would vote for it. And he did. Mr. Bailey fell in line and the Board recorded a straight vote in its favor. Mr. Morgan was absent. Supervisor Plunkett did not yet feel entirely satisfied and offered an ordinance of his own entirely prohibiting pool-selling and book-making, and moved its adoption. It received no second. "I cannot second it myself," he said. So it died. The Martin ordinance prohibits pool-selling and book-making on Eastern events, only allowing pools to be sold on races taking place on the track where such pools are sold, under the following conditions: "Every person who may engage in the business of making books or selling pools shall first obtain the permission of a majority of the Board of Supervisors at a regular meeting of the Board, which permission may at any time be withdrawn without notice and the license at once revoked and cancelled for any reason that to the Supervisors may seem sufficient, and pay a license of $100 a month or part of a month for each stall or auction-room or concern so engaged."

THE Miles City Journal, referring to Ryan Bros.' stable, now in Denver, says it consists of Spoon, three years old, by Storey, dam Miss Mungo; Al Watts, four years old, by Pantaloon, dam Glance; Rilla H., four years, by Pantaloon, dam Gold Leaf; Berresford, three years, by imported Keene, dam Gama; Alpha, two years, by imported Keene, dam Gama; Hugo, two years, by imported Keene, dam Uga; Calhoun, two years, by Glyndon, dam Sangaree; Sherbert, three years, by Joquita, dam Sangaree. Spoon is the pride of the stable, and has developed into a magnificent three-year-old. Last season he made the West Side people empty their pocket books on more than one occasion. This season he is even better form, and great things are expected of him. The three-year-old Berresford is another dangerous competitor, and is sure to make his mark. He stands 16.1 in height and is superbly proportioned. Both of these colts are booked for the Anaconda handicap and Butte Derby, and the animal who leads them will win the money. Al Watts also shows up much better this year than usual, and has so far shown a much more tractable disposition than previously. He has always been known to possess great speed, but has been very unruly. It is now thought he has outgrown this, and if he has he possesses the speed to make any of them know they have been in a race when it has been run. The remainder of the stable is a handsome string of colts, all in the best of condition, and possessing speed, with no public records. The stable went direct to Denver, with twenty-four hours' rest at Butte, thence to Salt Lake City, and will return to Montana in time for the Anaconda and Butte races, at the completion of which the horses will be shipped to Chicago, and will there try conclusions with the Eastern cracks.

THE following telegram startled California horsemen on the 26th of May: "Bad luck has attended the stable of Tom Williams, the California turfman, since it left the Pacific Coast. First, Cadmus the stable's chief reliance for the American Derby, was taken sick at Winnemucca, Nev., and had to be left there, and when the string arrived at Council Bluffs Picton, Racine and Tigress were laid up and the horses had to be unloaded. Picton was suffering from inflammation of the bowels, and died this morning. Racine and Tigress were affected with influenza and are coming around. Picton was a strong and racy-looking three-year-old chestnut colt by imported Cyrus, dam Amelia, the dam of Nomad and Rinfax. He did not start as a two-year-old, and in his first essay as a three-year-old, ran third to Cadmus and Hermitage in a nine furlong race at San Francisco. At the same meeting, carrying 119 pounds, he easily beat Gracie S., 111 pounds, at a mile, covering the distance in 1:43 $\frac{1}{2}$. He was entered in the American Derby, and an opinion was prevalent that Picton was really the stable reliance for the \$60,000 prize, and that he was kept in the background the same as Flambeau was with Racine when two years old. Picton is the second prominent California Derby candidate that has died in crossing the continent. The Czar died several years since when only a couple of days out. Picton was bred at Palo Alto, and was really owned by Senator Stanford, Tom Williams having only obtained his racing qualities." Picton was considered by Henry Walsh to be one of the greatest youngsters he ever trained, and Cy. Mulkey, the present Superintendent at Palo Alto, thought a great deal of the big chestnut colt that succumbed at Council Bluffs. Picton showed a fine turn of speed in the two races he ran, and in the first event, where he ran third, demonstrated his ability to go up and win if his stable companion, Cadmus, was not equal to the task. However, Cadmus experienced little trouble in winning, and Picton was not asked to do his best. The loss is a heavy one, as Senator Stanford would not have taken less than \$10,000 for the colt.

SPECIAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED AND CONDUCTED SOLELY BY
JOSEPH CAIRN SIMPSON.

DURING THE HURLY-BURLY of the week in which the trotting meeting is held there is little time for writing in relation thereto, and also, until it can be recorded as an occurrence of the past, the trial will not be perfected. So far as can be determined at the time of writing the innovations are likely to be sustained by the practical test, and that there are good grounds for the belief that the endorsement of the future will be still more emphatic in favor of the change. I have heard only one dissenting opinion in regard to doing away with three in five races, and that was elicited in rather a singular way. A man had a horse in a heat race. He made a better showing in the second heat than he did in the first, and his driver told the owner if there was another heat he would surely win it. The gentleman was an acquaintance of the Secretary of the National Trotting Association, and he at once wrote to Mr. Morse that the California departure was a failure. It is altogether likely that the letter will be published in evidence that trotting will be ruined if the old and venerable 3 in 5 be done away, whereas from the same kind of reasoning if the horse had won in two heats it would have been far superior. At all events, as the winner of the two heats beat the horse very easily in the first heat, and though he bettered his position in the second, was not at all dangerous, so far as heats of a mile are the test, the presumption is that he would have been defeated, however long the contest.

"INTOLERABLE PROLONGATIONS."—The Horseman of the 25th inst. gives two schemes to do away with what it has aptly termed the intolerable prolongations of trotting contests. One of them is my good friend McKinney's proposition, the basis being to terminate the race when six heats have been trotted. It strikes me that that is not far from a tedious drawing out of what should be ended in three heats absolutely, unless dead heats come in the way. John Randolph said that there were three tolerable things which were intolerable—"a tolerable egg, a tolerable oyster and a tolerable racehorse," and it surely seems that six heats of a race could be classed in the same category. Another idea has been extended to cover a final heat, the original being that a horse which won the first heat be awarded "first money," the second the next monetary division, and so on until all of the allotments had been distributed. Now they are to come together for a final heat, and the positions in that decide, but then comes an obstacle that when there are "four moneys" one horse will have to trot five heats to another's two heats, and that after two of his opponents have had long rests. He will be lucky if in that final test the red flag is not flaunted in his face and his weary struggle has been without avail.

The California plan must be altogether too simple to be appreciated by these searchers after some roundabout way to accomplish the purpose. Heats 2 in 3 and dashes from one mile up does away with the intolerable prolongations so effectually, that, united with promptness in getting the horses off, there can be no reasonable complaints of dilatoriness. There was no grumbling on that score last year when three in five races were on the bill, the clause which limited the starters after three heats were trotted and activity in "getting them a-going" proving a potent acceleration. Still better this year, and five and six races in an afternoon were finished in good time to permit dining at the meal hour. It is not likely that so intensely conservative a body of men as Eastern trotting folk are, especially that body of them who are in such dread of a diminution of profits as more races will entail, will adopt the change, but it is sure to prevail before many more years pass. Striving to correct the evil by schemes such as are ventilated in The Horseman is beginning at the wrong end.

MODERN RACING; AN INCIDENT.—That modern racing is mainly an adjunct to betting is so palpable that denial will be either an evidence of lack of candor or a token of want of sense. The whole faleric rests on a basis which has wagering for corner-stones, walls, arch and keystone. As music and luxury are needed adjuncts at Monte Carlo, to taking away some of the vulgarity of the crowds which throng the grounds, and casting a glamour over the portions of the scenes which are repulsive, so the "grand old sport" is made to pander to base passions, and like the gaudily-decked wheel which catches the ball, is merely an allurements, an enticement to "plunge" and to take risks which the victim cannot afford. These people who are the loudest in their denunciations of the slowness of harness racing, and praise with glowing eulogium the short spins of the present day, find no fault with the half hours which are granted, after the finish of one galloping race to calling another, for the avowed purpose of betting. Were that practice followed in harness events, were the track left vacant for thirty minutes after one race had come to an end, and the signal bell give forth no sound for that length of time to warn for another, those who did not wager might make vigorous protests at the waste of time, but what would protests avail when the whole existence of the sport is dependent upon the concession. Should the attempt be made to curtail the allotment the bookmakers would rebel. They must have every available minute to ply their vocation, and from the moment the lists are shown on the boards, for thirty minutes thereafter, and until the tinkle of the starting bell is heard, their work goes on.

Should there be heats it is dollars to cents that a person, if in authority, were to propose "sandwiching," he would raise a clamor which would give him a lesson, a warning that the ground was hot, very hot, he stood upon.

But in trotting sandwiching is a potent aid to correct the tiresome interludes which "time between heats" would present, and gladly accepted.

"TIME BETWEEN HEATS."—The allusion to the practice of sandwiching trotting races brings forward a theme, which, at this time, can only be given a paragraph, but which is well worthy of greater consideration. The only races of heats which were permissible at the present meeting were "two in three." When the distance are heats, one mile, twenty minutes are what the rule gives. It must be clearly evident that no curtailment or lengthening of the space should be tolerated, and when there is an elongation, if not occasioned by unforeseen cause, some one is derelict. The judges have no excuse should it be their fault, and it is imperative that the requirement of the law should be followed with exactness. The race that is first commenced, until it is finished, has preference, and if the start for the second has been delayed until the allotted twenty minutes have passed, it is the bounden duty of the judges to put the horses engaged in the first in the hands of the starter. No matter if the scoring of the second has commenced, when the time is marked they should be sent out of the way of those who are entitled to the track. The mere statement, in the published conditions, that sandwiching will be pursued, does not warrant extension of time between heats, and though it may appear burdensome to those who are called out and sent back without accomplishing anything, it is the only course that the judges can follow. The only method of avoiding the difficulty is to make it plain in the "published conditions," these made prior to closing of entries, that heats of different races will be alternated, and that if there is not sufficient time to finish that sandwiched without infringement of the rule, the necessary time will be taken. Without that notice, or one of similar effect, judges have no more right to delay the starting of a heat in a race, which has already one or more heats decided, than to violate any of the other provisions. A greater necessity for computing with the letter of the law in this case than many others, as the result might depend upon promptness and accuracy in measuring the interval between heats.

NOT A BIT FANCIFUL.—I am so far inclined from having pessimistic fancies that it may be said that there never was a cloud so black to me that rifts of gold were not discernible and silver linings galore if time were only given for the mind to change. But in forecasting the future of horse interests in this and other States it must be a wonderfully dull man that does not see good cause for apprehension. In the "Blue Grass Notes" of the Chicago Horseman the following paragraph closes the article:

"It seems that the Kentucky Legislature is determined to break up all horse racing in Kentucky. A bill is now pending before that body which if enacted will virtually close every race track in the State, as it prohibits betting on the races in any form, either on the tracks or in the pool-rooms. It abolishes pool-rooms entirely. When the measure came up this week it was defeated by the close vote of thirty-seven to twenty-five. While this kills the bill for the time being it is not beyond the range of probability that before the Legislature adjourns, if it ever does, a similar bill will be enacted. The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, the Kentucky Racing Association and the Louisville and Latonia Jockey Clubs cannot be affected by such a bill as the one mentioned, as the charters of these associations, granted by previous Legislatures, give them the right to sell pools on their grounds during race meetings. Such a bill, however, would be a death blow to all the fair associations of the State and would paralyze the trotting-horse business. It would not injure the breeders or runners, owing to the fact that all the running associations in the State can continue pool-selling on their tracks under their charters. The large vote this bill received indicates the necessity of the horsemen going to work with a will at the next legislative election and seeing to it that persons unfriendly to the great industry of horse-breeding are not sent to the Legislature. This is the only way the danger can be averted, and it is to be hoped the horsemen of the State will see the matter in this light."

When a State which has so much at stake in the breeding of trotters and race horses as Kentucky presents an opposition so determined as shown by the above quotation, it is time to give close attention to remedying the evils which lead to such bitter antagonisms. Connecticut and its blue laws are charged with promoting the bigotry which led to the passage of prohibitory laws, but Kentucky can hardly be classed in the list of States which are governed by ancient, puritanical dogmas. The opposition comes from a different motive than ultra morality. Fair-minded men are constrained to admit that there are just causes for complaint, and that the danger is so imminent that if steps are not taken to counteract the poison, the only antidote will be the downfall of trotting and racing interests.

IN THE DARK.—The following clipping from the New York Spirit of the Times of the 27th ult. is somewhat of a puzzle to me.

2,350—B. D. Phillips, Oakland, Cal., vs. Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, Cal. Application for release from expulsion in 1892.

In October, 1892, there was a race at Oakland, Cal., in which applicant participated with his bay mare Laura B. The judges removed the driver under authority of Rule 25, and at the conclusion the judges ordered the expulsion of Mr. Phillips, whereupon he appealed through the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association to the Pacific District Board of the National Trotting Association, which Board, taking into consideration the circumstances as presented by witnesses, and the sworn testimony of Mr. Phillips, recommended that the sentence of expulsion be set aside, and that in place thereof Mr. Phillips be fined in the sum of $500 and suspended until such fine is paid, which recommendation is hereby approved and ordered to be placed on the records.

The part that is troublesome is the connection of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association with the reinstatement, and how the Pacific District Board tried the case without notifying the association which inflicted the punishment. It has been a queer case in several respects, but the queerest feature to me is that Mr. Phillips' appeal went "through the association" of which I was president without my knowledge.

If the fine is sufficient to deter Mr. Phillips from a repetition of such an offense as that he was punished for, so far as he is concerned that will be satisfactory, but the example is hardly as stringent as what it should have been to deter others. Mr. Phillips being a new man in trotting affairs, he may have been misled by had counsellors, and that is the only redeeming feature I see in his case. If the pardon has been gained by deceit and subterfuge, as the above quotation implies, others must be liable.

Probably the Secretary of the Pacific District Board can throw some light on the question.

Jos. CAIRN SIMPSON.

The man who estimates the influence that any noted ancestor has on any animal by the per cent of blood of that ancestor which the animal possesses will get badly misled. There are descendants of Rysdyk's Hambletonian living today which do not inherit three per cent. of his blood that bear a stronger resemblance to that noted sire in form and temperament than some of Hambletonian's own sons and daughters. The same is true of the descendants of almost any other noted stallion. The law of heredity is a very mysterious one.

G. W. POOLE'S sprinter Lorenzo is laid on the shelf for a time owing to the bungling work of a farrier that was trying to plate the horse. The horse's hoof was cut to the quick, and there are fears of lockjaw setting in.

Flaxtail 8132.

Considerable has been published from time to time, particularly in the California papers, relative to the stallion Flaxtail and his pedigree. It appears from what has been brought out during the past year or so that he did not belong, as was at one time supposed, to any branch of the Blue Bull family, but it is now quite well established that he was by Bull Pup, sire of the famous pacer Rowdy Boy (2:13 $\frac{1}{2}$), one of the very fastest of his day.

Flaxtail is registered in Vol. 7 of the American Trotting Register, but there is very little in that registration which is correct, and much which is absolutely incorrect, particularly his registration as standard, as by no rule then existing or that ever had existed, and by none since adopted, was this horse standard, neither was he ever taken to California, as is there stated.

According to the most reliable evidence that can be obtained relative to the history of Flaxtail, he was foaled about 1854, was bred by Newton Wiseman, of Salem, Ind., who sold a half-interest in him to his brother, by whom he was sold to Joseph Mitchell in 1864, then of Salem, Ind. Flaxtail was taken by Mr. Mitchell to Iowa, and sold by him to T. T. Tinsley, of Mahaska county, from whom he was purchased by Dr. M. W. Hicks, whose property he died at La Harpe, Ill., in the fall of 1880, Dr. Hicks having leased him just before moving to California to G. H. Nelson, in whose orchard the old horse died. It is stated that the dam of Flaxtail was a small, fast pacing mare of unknown breeding.

Bull Pup was bred by Warwick Miller, about four miles from Louisville, Ky. He was by Old Pilot, and his breeder has stated that his dam was by Tom Hal, a son of Tom Crowder, by Pilot. Bull Pup was a brown horse, foaled in 1835. He was sold by his breeder to Joseph Dill, of Louisville, Ky., from whom he was purchased when five years old, by J. A. Mitchell, and taken to Bedford, Ind.

Bedford and Salem are in adjoining counties and only a few miles apart, but it is a very long distance from either to Butler County, O., where Pruden's Blue Bull was bred and first stood and about the same distance to Hamilton County, O., where he was next owned, or Boone County, Ky., where the balance of his service was made. Furthermore, there was neither record, claim, nor the least probability of the dam of Flaxtail ever being bred to Blue Bull, while it now appears to have been claimed by the breeder of Flaxtail that he was by Bull Pup, and so given each time he changed hands.

When Dr. Hicks decided to move to California he owned Empress, which afterward took a record of 2:29 $\frac{1}{2}$, Prairie Bird with a pacing record of 2:28 $\frac{1}{2}$, Fernleaf, Mahaska Belle, Mary and Tinsley Maid. Five of these daughters of Flaxtail and their produce he took with him, and each has proven a notable success. There was no records to call particular attention to this strain until 1883, when the filly Flight, at Oakland, Cal., entered the list, taking a record of 2:29. Flight was by Buccaneer, whose dam was a daughter of Flaxtail, and Flight's dam was Prairie Bird, also a daughter of Flaxtail. A pacing record of 2:28 $\frac{1}{2}$ is claimed to have been made by Prairie Bird in 1871.

In 1886 the only trotter by Flaxtail which has ever beaten 2:30 entered the list, Empress then taking a record at Sacramento, Cal., of 2:29 $\frac{1}{2}$, and the same year Apex and Shamrock, whose dams were Mary and Fernleaf, by Flaxtail, also entered the list, Apex taking a three-year-old record of 2:26 and Shamrock a two-year-old record of 2:25, which was then the champion two-year-old stallion record. Fernleaf, the dam of Shamrock, is also the dam of Gold Leaf, which in 1889 reduced the four-year-old pacing record to 2:14, and that record still stands as the best for a four-year-old filly. Fernleaf is also the dam of Thistle, which at five years old had a pacing record of 2:14, and was the sire of Lo Order with a two-year-old record of 2:14. Mahaska Belle, bred to Buccaneer, produced the dam of the champion yearling trotter Frou Frou (2:25 $\frac{1}{2}$), that three times reduced the yearling record and still holds the yearling trotting championship.

Flaxtail was registered as probably by Pruden's Blue Bull, though there really never was any evidence that he belonged to that family, but the compiler of the American Trotting Register was particularly partial to the pacers, had a theory that the pacing ancestors were the true source of a large proportion of our trotting speed, and was very fond of crediting the pacing strains with as much speed as possible, his partiality to the ancient pacers being just about equal to his antipathy to the running blood or crosses in the trotting pedigree, however remote.

The fact that Flaxtail was registered as standard when there was no rule or reason for it seems not to have been noticed by any who have written concerning his history, or if noticed no one has mentioned it. Last September at Monmouth, Ill., in a contest against time, the twelve-year-old stallion Dan, by Flaxtail, with a dam of unknown breeding, trotted in exactly 2:30. Nearly all of the contests against time where 2:30 has not been beaten have been rejected, at least for purposes of registration, but with this admitted, Flaxtail is now standard by only the very narrow limit, though for several years previous, when at no time was he or any of his get except Empress (2:29 $\frac{1}{2}$) and such others as were the dams of 2:30 trotters, entitled to standard rank, his number was allowed to remain.

It has been generally supposed that not until after the American Trotting Register had been transferred to its present ownership and removed to Chicago had the pacers ever figured in conferring standard rank, and then only on a basis of five seconds faster speed, but in Flaxtail we have an instance where under the original Registrar a horse was given Standard rank on the strength of a pacing record too slow to have counted during the short period when what was styled the mixed standard was in operation.

How many other cases of this kind there may have been under the management of the Registrar with so much pacing prejudice we are unable to say, but it is very clear that Flaxtail was accorded standard rank, and had a number appended to his name, for some seven years before he had any right or legitimate title to it. There are others with low numbers whose standard rank would not bear too close investigation.—"Vision" in Horse-Breeder.

DURING the race for the Woodbine Steeplechase at Toronto, on Wednesday, the horse Searle fell at the in-and-out jump and broke his neck, his rider escaping without serious injuries, though he got a bad shaking up.

HOOF-BEATS.

D. J. CAMPAU, of Detroit, was the only one of the steward of the grand circuit that favored the shorter distance.

W. H. FORBES, of Boston, has sent on his racing stable which consists of ten two-year-old fillies, to Morris Park.

DAN DENNISON was successful with Rosalie at St. Louis last Wednesday, Nutwood being second and Captain Sinclair third.

THE races begin at Oakland next Tuesday, and as a large number of horses are quartered at the track, a fine meeting is assured.

THERE were but three horses scratched from their engagements at the Gravesend track recently out of a total of fifty-three entries.

NEXT Monday, June 5, is the date of the special congress of the National Trotting Association to act upon the proposed change in the distance.

FRANK VAN NISS is out with a statement that his half of the famous racer Morello is not for sale, and that no one can buy his interest at any price.

PETER WEBER is working his horses over the old Melrose, or Finigan track, Alameda, one of the best places in this section in which to condition a horse.

THE tipster in Daily America ("San Juan") Vreeland has been doing some remarkable picking. Players of his tips must have been making the bookmakers weary.

GASTON ASHE has been attending the Brooklyn race meeting. He does not think Tom Williams will try to recover Geraldine, as the mare is guarded night and day.

MR. T. W. MOORE's handsome mare Veronica, 2:29, has been bred to Guy Wilkes, 2:15. The produce ought to be valuable; her colt by Sidney is remarkably handsome.

PIERRE LORILLARD pronounces the story that he said a combination had been formed to destroy Lamplighter's chances in the Brooklyn Handicap an unqualified lie.

"DAVE" JOHNSON has been playing in great luck lately and is reported to have made something like $15,000 since the races began at the Gravesend track. That is where he got the money to buy the brother to Dr. Rice for $7,000.

It is refreshing to know that at least one of California's industries is well represented. Young Frank G. O'Kane, of this city, is at Chicago with the only exhibit of California horse goods at the World's Fair, and deserves great credit for the enterprise he displays.

PRINCE GEORGE won the rich Toboggan Slide Handicap, six furlongs, at Morris Park last Thursday, doing the distance in 1:11. Yemen, the heavily-backed favorite, finished second, and G. W. Johnson third. The Infanta Eulalie, of Spain, attended the races, and lost $40 on Yemen.

HARRY BROWN arrived in Woodland May 24th from Lakeport with Advocate and Advocatrix, by Attorney (he by Harold), Pattie P. by Rumont (he by Almont), a filly by Advocate, dam Pattie P., and a filly by Advocate, dam thoroughbred. He is going to work them there and try and get them in shape to start in the races the first of August.

MR. PETTINGILL, who is starting the horses at the Latonia meeting, is having about as hard a time with the jockeys as Mr. Rowe is having near New York, and the result is a lot of complaint from owners and race-goers. McLaughlin had the same trouble at St. Louis, though he had succeeded all right at the Ontario Jockey Club meeting, where he is now acting as starter.

THE leading winning owners at the Louisville meeting were Cushing & Orth, with $7,040 to their credit; Ema Stable, $5,455; Scoggin Bros., $4,905; Ed Brown (Brown Dick), $4,230; Bob Rose, $2,120; Santa Anita Stable, $1,995. Irving headed the list of winning jockeys with eight wins; A. Clayton, 6; Thorpe, 5; R. Williams, 4; Martin, Perkins and R. Taylor, 3 each.

THE Washington Park Club, of Chicago, will give away $250,000 in added money at its meeting to be held during the coming summer. The meeting will last for twenty-five days. J. A. & A. H. Morris, M. F. Dwyer, Walcott & Campbell, August Belmont, S. S. Brown, J. R. and F. P. Keene, J. M. Jeffcott, Gideon & Daly, and the Oneck Stables from the far East that will be represented at the meeting.

A MATCH has been made at Marshfield, Or., for $100 a side, to come off July 4th, one-half mile heats, two in three, between M. L. Noble's colt Hiak, sired by Clatterwoy (by Daly 5341) and F. P. Norton's colt Bonneston, sired by Bonner N. B. (by Daly 5341). The colts are yearlings, are showing up nicely, and it is expected they will do those sires credit in this match race. It is causing lots of talk, as both colts have lots of friends.

SAMUEL GAMELE having resigned the position of director of the State Board of Agriculture, on account of his intended departure for the East shortly, Governor Markham appointed the thoroughly-qualified and very popular Christopher Green, now of San Francisco, to fill the vacancy. Mr. Green has officiated in the capacity mentioned for many years, and therefore a better selection could not have been made by our wise chief executive.

THE Oakland meeting begins next Tuesday afternoon, and continues on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week until August 1st. Charley Trevathanan will be the presiding judges, E. Forsland clerk of the course, and Dr. C. W. Aby wielder of the bunting. A fine meeting is promised, and the character of the officials is so good that little opportunity will be offered jobbers to do anything crooked at Oakland.

DR. RICE, who had an attack of bleeding at the nose during the running of the Derby, has twice been attacked in a similar way during his work. A veterinarian to whom the horse was turned over for treatment announced that the trouble was purely local and amounted to nothing, but the recent attack has convinced the owners, Messrs. Gideon & Daly, that there is some serious trouble, and the colt will get a long rest and treatment to see if the trouble cannot be remedied and the hemorrhages stopped.

At a meeting of the directors of the Capital Turf and Driving Club, of Sacramento, last Saturday evening it was decided to so arrange the programme of the coming meeting that the first three days will be devoted to running and the other two to trotting and pacing races.

MARCELE, the Broodmeade Farm's noted black mare, won the mile-beat race at Victoria, B. C., on May 26th, distancing Johnny Hooker and Patsy Curran in the first heat, run in the slow time of 1:48 4-5. Dart won the 2:35 trot, and his best time was 2:39. Belle A. won the 3:00 class trot, best time, 2:47.

COPE STINSON will have the mare Instant, 2:14, that Thomas Greenwood purchased recently. The men who like to play a sure thing will hope that he will learn to balance her a little better than her former driver. Trimble, by shifting the weights, could fix the mare so she couldn't go around the turn without making a break, but when he did want her to go straight she was generally ready to make a great race for his money.

CLARUS, bred at Rancho del Paso, by Hyder Ali, dam Clarissa, by Wanderer, beat a fine lot of two-year-olds at Gravesend on May 26th, with 10 to 1 against his chances. We predicted that this youngster would be a good one in a long article on the Rancho del Paso yearlings about this time in 1892. On the same date Joe Kelly, another Californian, by John Happy—Alannah, won, with Nomad second, while Sir Excess, a Sir Modred, ran second to Discount.

H. W. MEEK's pacer Cricket, 2:10, foaled at Haywards, Cal., a bay colt by Sidney, May 26th—a fine-looker, large, and acts like a pacer. Cricket will be bred to Direct this season, and that will be the fastest "combine" on record. Leda, by Director, dam by Chieftain, second dam thoroughbred, foaled a bay filly by Nutwood Wilkes April 29th, and Beauty, by Mambriño Wilkes, second dam thoroughbred, foaled a brown colt by Centella (he by Antevolo) March 24th.

In our issue of February 11, 1893, "Rezo" said of the Metropolitan Handicap run last Wednesday at Morris Park, after telling of Charade's victory last season over the mighty Tammany, etc.: "So we rather like the chances of Wadsworth, Charade and Wildwood." Now Wadsworth and Wildwood did not start, leaving only one of our choices to go to the post. Charade won the rich event by five lengths, so that we really picked the winner of the Metropolitan Handicap as far back as the early part of February.

W. F. MOSBY, of Butte, Mont., has got together a very excellent little string of thoroughbreds, and the lot, as follows, may go to Chicago at the conclusion of the Montana circuit: St. Brendan, 3, by imp. St. Blaise, dam Guenn; Little Dorrit, 3, by Joe Daniels, dam Louise; Carmen, b m, 5 (sister to Nevada), by Regent, dam Miss Ella; Mike Brown, b g, 4, by Vici, dam Nellie; Eos, b f, 2, by Eolian, dam Pirouette; Carnot, b c, 2, by Regent, dam Mamie Holton, and a bay colt yearling, by Eolian, dam Ordinance. Henry Williams is training the Mosby horses, and we would not be surprised if some of these turned out cracker-jacks. Mr. Mosby is one of the most popular men in Montana, and, while a newcomer to the ranks of turfmen, he appears to be going about the matter in the right way.

At the Pleasanton Stock Farm of Monroe Salisbury are a number of youthful "phenoms" of the equine world. The greatest is the little black colt by Direct, 2:05 3/4, dam by Nautuc. This fellow is as much like the redoubtable little Direct as a youngster can be like his sire. Last Wednesday Kelly hitched the colt up to a bike sulky (the baby's seventh experience in this line), and he paced a quarter in 38 seconds with great ease. The coming world-beater is just twelve months old now. Niles Beauty has been secured of Allen Mayhew by Mr. Salisbury. She is going quarters close to 35 seconds, and if she recovers thoroughly from her lameness may be sent East. Vic H. is doing well. She was purchased not long since from D. M. Reavis, and is now the property of Monroe Salisbury. The Director-Lilly Stanley two-year-old was sent a half-mile last Wednesday, and went in 1:07.

STARTER ROWE is having a lot of trouble with the jockeys this year, and the delays at the post are very annoying in consequence. There seems to be some sort of a combination among the boys to make him all the trouble possible, and but few of them will try and help him while he is trying to make a start. There is a story about the paddock that it is all due to a combination among the lads to try and get some other starter to fill Mr. Rowe's place, because he is so severe with them in the imposition of fines. They do not like to be fined more in one race for disobedience at the post than they can earn in a week's hard work at their business. They will fail in their attempts to drive him out of the starter's box, in all probability, but something ought to be done by the Board of Control to punish the lads unless they try to get fair starts for their horses. The public is getting very tired of the whole business.

"THE greatest difficulty I find in breeding trotters," said L. Brodhead of Woodburn Farm to an Eastern writer the other day, "is to eliminate the inclination to pace. No doubt our trotters owe much of their speed to the pacer, still the trotter is what we want, and he is the animal that sells well for road purposes and has the opportunities to win large amounts in purses. My experience teaches me that the pacer stamps his peculiarity of gait upon his descendants with more regularity than even the thoroughbred. Mr. Wallace notoriously favored the pacer, and as his teachings have been followed by many people for a number of years, pacing crosses are more frequent than they would have been otherwise. It was my idea that a strong infusion of thoroughbred blood would be the best corrective, and I still believe it to be more efficacious than anything else, but have found that, in many cases, it will not conquer the pacing tendencies bequeathed by a remote ancestor. For instance, Alexander's Abdallah had a pacing cross quite well back, but knew nothing himself but trot. We bred him to a thoroughbred mare, Vanity by Vandal, and the result was Vanity Fair, who became a great brood mare, but was a natural pacer and would go no other gait. This is but an illustration of what seems to me to be almost, if not quite, a general rule, that the pacing instinct is very difficult to eradicate and will crop out in the most unexpected and unwelcome places, and even after several generations of ancestors have been free from it. To my mind it is among the most difficult of the various problems of trotting breeding. I would rather get a square trotter that could not show a better gait three minutes, in preference to a mixed gaited one of 2:20 speed."

Lady Surry.

The dam of Henry Clay 8 was the trotting mare, Lady Surry, and it was first said that she came from Canada and was inclined to pace. This statement Mr. Wallace accepted. This was not contradicted until 1881. In the May number of Wallace's Monthly for 1881 is a statement from P. W. Jones, formerly of Amherst, N. H., in which he states that Lady Surry came from the town of Surry, N. H., that Mark D. Perkins, of Mt. Vernon, N. H., bought her of the Mizzy boys, of Surry; that Daniel W. Gilmore, of New York City, bought her of Mr. Perkins when five years old, and rode her to the city (New York) with a young man by the name of Lovejoy, who was a son or relative of the Lovejoy that kept the hotel. The fact that she came from the town of Surry was what gave her the name Surry, with the Lady prefixed. This last statement Mr. Wallace accepted, and it has been so understood that she came from Surry, N. H., and the probabilities are that she was bred there.

It is well to understand that Mr. Jones was quite a horse-roan, that he owned Empress, 2:30, and several sons and grandsons of Cassius M. Clay 18, and would take some interest in the breeding of the dam of the founder of the family.

Surry joins Walpole, N. H. Walpole is quite a center for the people of the adjoining towns to come to trade. It is the home of Frederick A. Weir, one of the oldest and best-posted horsemen in New England. It was in 1885 or 1886 that we asked Mr. Weir by letter if he remembered Mr. Perkins having such a mare, and if so to give her origin and breeding if he could. He replied that he remembered well Mark D. Perkins riding such a mare to Walpole somewhere in the thirties, that she inclined to pace, but he could not then remember her breeding. After some correspondence Mr. Weir wrote that, after thinking it over, it had come to him how it was, and if we would come to his place he would give the facts. We visited him the summer of 1889, and he took us into the town of Surry and to the farm where he said Lady Surry was foaled; that he knew her from the time she was a yearling; that her breeder's name was Perkins, and that he told him when he first saw the filly (Lady Surry) she was on one side the fence and her dam the other, and he gave her breeding, which we have saved. He said that he was present when Mr. Perkins sold her, and that, in 1836, he took to Long Island a span of mares and stayed there several weeks. Saw Lady Surry trot and win a race, and recognized her as the mare Mr. Perkins raised; and he saw her bred to the horse Andrew Jackson—that it was said at the time, if that cross did not produce a trotter they did not know what would. He said that a Mr. Weaver had the care of the horse. Mr. Weir had proof that he was on Long Island in 1836, though he did not know it when he made the statement. In looking over Mr. Weir's old horse bills, some two hundred, we found two of Andrew Jackson's bills for the year 1836, and it states that John Weaver owned or had care of the horse. Mr. Weir then remembered Mr. Weaver's giving them to him, but he had forgotten it. The bill states that his dam was by Whynot and that he was by the imported horse, old Messenger; second dam by the celebrated horse, old Messenger. It is claimed Lady Surry was quite a trotter in her day, but no account of her races have been given. It would be interesting to know how many races she trotted, and how many she won and lost, and the time made.

The horse Henry Clay was bred by George M. Patchen, of Brooklyn, N. Y., foaled in 1837. In 1845 Mr. Patchen sold him to Gen. Wadsworth, of Genesee Co., N. Y., for as many dollars as he weighed pounds, which brought him 1,050. It was said that he became blind, soon after the General bought him, by his son driving him a forced trip to Buffalo. He trotted two races which he won, getting a record at Buffalo in 1847, of 2:35. He was kept in the interior or western part of New York the most of his life, and it is understood that he did not have as good a class of mares to produce from as some of the other great horses have had. His picture does not show him very fine-made, rather blocky, with a large poll. One writer states his hind parts were those of a Kanuck, and that he had sickle hocks.

Many of the Clays incline to have faulty or defective hocks, liable to corks and spavins, and some incline to have weak eyes. Whether it comes from their founder or his son, Cassius M. Clay, it is not stated. The Clay horses are kind and easy horses to break, except, perhaps, some of the Patchens. They do not mature as quickly as some of the other families, nor are they so quick and light under foot, and there are more pacers among them.

The Clay and Morgan cross is a good one. The Clay stride is quicker, and the Morgan stride is longer, and their size is increased. The perfect hocks of the Morgans help to rectify the faulty hocks of the Clays. The marks of Dexter amount to nothing, as to showing that his sire was Henry Clay 45, as his grandam had his marks, which shows Dexter could have taken his marks and color from his grandam. This is the only proof that has been given that Henry Clay was the sire of Dexter, except a statement in the Turf, Field and Farm that says that Mr. Hawkins never said that he bred Dexter, but that he raised him, that Mr. Hawkins' mare lost her foal, and that she raised one sired by Henry Clay 45.

S. A. PARKER, the well-known breeder of Newell, Ia., has a fine bay colt by Hero, son of Director, from Maud Z., by Dexter Prince. His filly Princess, by Electioneer, dam by Nutwood, will soon drop a foal by McKinney, 2:12. The foals by Harold Jr. are coming nicely. Mr. Parker owns West Wilkes, black stallion, 2:12, by Simmons, and is breeding some of his best mares to him. The horse is being jogged, and will be fitted for races. Mr. Parker writes us: "I expect to lower his record this year. He is stepping very nicely, is very handsome, and trots as smooth as oil."

RAINBOW will now be specially prepared for the race for the American Derby at Chicago, says the New York Times of May 26th. His easy victory in the Brooklyn Derby yesterday afternoon settled that matter. The Messrs. Morris now think they have with him a chance second to no horse eligible for the race. Her poor race against Lamplighter in the Standard Stakes is explained by the fact that after the race the horse coughed up about a quart of mucus, which was plainly enough the effect of some bronchial or catarrhal trouble about which the trainer of the horse knew nothing before the race was run.

THROUGH NAPA VALLEY.

A Pleasant Visit to the Famous Trotting Horse Establishments of This Famous Valley.

"Give fools their gold and knaves their power;
Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall;
Who sows a field, or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree, is more than all."

"For he who blesses most is blest;
And God and man shall own his worth
Who toils to leave as his bequest
An added beauty to the earth."

"And, soon or late, to all that sow
The time of harvest shall be given;
The flower shall bloom, the fruit shall grow—
If not on earth, at last in heaven!"

How very appropriate to the scene that lay before us were those choice words of Whittier as we looked from the hillside upon the beautiful valley of Napa below us. As far as the eye could see were fields of ripening grain, vineyards heavy with verdure clad and thrifty orchards surrounding beautiful dwellings, whose gable roofs seemed resting on hoppers of roses and evergreen vines. The lawns in front of these dwellings were dotted with hushes and flowers, while great old oaks afforded shade for cattle and horses that were apparently enjoying a quiet rest in the pastures and meadows.

Our destination was Prof. Heald's Napa Stock Farm, which consists of some 700 acres of rich land about six miles east of Napa, and the road being a wide, yet steep one, afforded us plenty of opportunities for taking bird's-eye views of "the valley that lay smiling beneath us." The scene was one that impressed us so favorably, that time will never efface it from our memories. To do full justice to the view would indeed be a pleasure, and to give scope to our fancy in describing the beauties of the valley that seemed to commence at the foot of old St. Helena and continued more charming as they extended far beyond the confines of the city of Napa, would be only an outline sketch after all. Andrew Carnegie, the Pittsburgh millionaire, summed it up in a few expressive words when he was here by saying: "This is the Paradise of America."

Our errand was not to sit still on that mountain side and gaze like one entranced speechless with awe and enraptured with admiration; we were on a visit to see the horses, colts and fillies that Prof. E. P. Heald, of San Francisco had gathered from all parts of the State and placed in his stock farm. Our programme was a long one and after we had visited that farm we were then to go to John McCord's, the race track at Napa, then on to St. Helena and H. W. Crabb's To Kalon Stock Farm, Oakville.

On arriving at Mr. Heald's neat residence we alighted, and with H. Grigshy, the superintendent of the farm for a guide, we were soon busy inspecting the horses in the barns and the matrons with their families that were enjoying the cool shade of the pines and oak trees in the pastures.

The first horse looked at was Pilot Prince (brother to Lottery Ticket, 2:19); he is by Dexter Prince, out of Emma Nutwood, by Nutwood; second dam Lady Emma, 2:36; by Blackhawk 767; third dam Newby mare, by Gen. Taylor; fourth dam Rosalie, by Williamson's Belmont. Pilot Prince is in every way worthy of his royal lineage. A handsome dark bay, standing about 15.2 hands, and as perfect in conformation as a horseman could wish. He fills the ideal for a sire; is very pure-gaited and as a two-year-old made a record in 2:31. He was injured last year, but is his owner's intention to have him worked this fall. His colts and fillies are all fine looking and are his perfect counterparts in color and build. His brother, Dexter Prince Jr., is a taller horse and will be much heavier than he; at present he is at the Napa track in F. W. Loeher's string.

Mountain King is a handsome rosewood bay five-year-old stallion, by Whippleton, out of Nona Y., 2:25, by Admiral; second dam Black Flora (dam of four in 2:30), by Black Prince. This is a grand-looking individual and will make a valuable sire of high-grade carriage horses that will be speedy as well as heavy-honed, well-formed and stylish-looking.

Silverado is the name of a racy-looking, two-year-old bay colt, by Sidney, 2:19, out of Alida, by Admiral.

Campaigner is another two-year-old; he is of a different type, being heavier in the quarters and more substantial looking. He is by Geo. Washington, 2:20, dam Kate Chapman, by Nauhuc, second dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31.

Sidney is represented by another colt called Sidona, he is out of Nona Y., 2:25, by Admiral.

Dexter Prince, the great sire of trotters, will have one more to his credit in the 2:20 list when his well-formed, strong-limbed son out of Norma (dam of Grandee, 2:23, and Grandissimo, 2:23) by Arthurton, appears on the turf. "He is game as a bull-dog and has as much sense as a human being," was Mr. Grigshy's remark, as he made the little fellow leave us, for he followed as closely as if led by a shoe string.

The last yearling colt we looked at was by Pilot Prince, out of Nellie Nelson, by John Nelson, and Prof. Heald has in this "son of Pilot Prince," a colt he can look at with pride, and feel that in owning the sire he has every reason to look forward to a brilliant future for the progeny of his favorite.

The fillies and broodmares were, like the colts, "fat as butter," and their smooth skins glistened in the sunlight like burnished copper. The filly by Mambrino Chief, Jr., out of Woodnymph, by Woodnut, 2:16, second dam by Irvington, etc., is an excellent individual and will be heard of on the circuit next fall.

Mollie Patten is a well-formed broodmare, in fact she is one of those perfect types of matrons that her sire Whippleton left to perpetuate his name and fame. She is out of Napa, by Nauhuc. Mollie Patten's chestnut colt, by Dexter Prince, has been called Bloodhound, a name that seems "peculiar" for such a handsome, smooth-going, strong-limbed youngster.

The great broodmares, Norma, Nona Y., and Florida, (sister to Nona Y.), Kate Chapman, by Nauhuc, dam by Geo. M. Patchen, Jr. 31, second dam by Vick's Ethan Allen, Jr., and Alida, by Admiral, out of Mag Drake, are among the choicest ones there. We also noticed three sisters to Mollie Patten, viz: Alice L., Bettina and Bird Loeher, all good looking and will prove valuable to breed to Pilot Prince.

This combination of Nutwood, Dexter Prince and Whippleton blood ought to produce a very choice family of horses and speedy trotters.

Irene, 2:25, by Dexter Prince, in foal to El Benton, is well-known to all our readers, while a sister to Senator L., 2:29, would elicit praise from anyone, even though her choice pedigree was never mentioned.

Pansy, by Mambrino Chief Jr. (sire of Geo. Washington, 2:20), dam by Admiral, has just returned from Pleasanton, where she was bred to Direct, 2:05.

Prof. Heald has mares by Hawthorne, Dawn, Director and all the leading sires that will some day make his well-appointed and beautifully-situated stock farm famous. He has a number of trotters in training at Napa, Vallejo and Lodi and will soon send them on the circuit.

On our return to Napa the ride was very enjoyable; with a companion whose father, A. F. Grigshy, was noted as a pioneer among horsemen, and at one time owned those good race horses, Volschan and Dashaway, the road seemed very short.

Meeting F. W. Loeher at Napa we were again "talking horse" behind a slashing big open-gaited son of Alcona on our way to John McCord's farm, about one mile below the city on the banks of the Napa river. "The ideal location for a home and the ideal home for a location," was our first thought as we came in view of the white cottage which is erected on the brow of a hill overlooking a field of alfalfa that extended to the river bank. Surrounded by a porch the building resembles one of the comfortable homes one sees in the South. The front of the porch is trellised with vines, and the garden which separates the house from the lawn is blooming with huds and flowers at this time of the year. In the rear is the orchard, meadows, wheat-fields and imposing carriage house, barn, chicken house and corral, and guard-ian-like, stand long rows of eucalyptus trees sheltering the small barns from the afternoon westerly breezes. Mr. McCord told us the names of the "pets" of the farm that were noted road mares in San Francisco years ago: Lady Sargent, Katie Tricks, Elmer, 2:24, Lucy, and several others which we recognize as being queens of the road, but whose pedigrees were never authenticated. These matrons were feeding knee deep in the fields with their foals gamboing at their side or playing only foals can. In the barn, Mr. Frederick's stallion Alconeer, by Alcona 730, dam Madonna, by C. M. Clay Jr. 22, is looking the picture of perfect health, and as he is remarkably pure gaited and very fast it is the owner's intention to have him prepared for the fall races this summer.

Alden & Hitchcock's Anteeo stallion, Antares, is also here. Mr. McCord's favorite driving team consists of a three-year-old Silas Skinner filly, and a three-year-old by Alcona, and a more promising pair never enter Napa than they. He has a number of fine vehicles in the carriage house, and finds much pleasure in driving with his family over the smooth roads of the valley. The same system that is observed in all his business affairs in the city are noticeable on this beautiful farm.

After bidding Mr. McCord and his estimable wife adieu, we rode to the Napa race track, and were gratified to hear all the trainers and drivers say "the track was never in better condition." Chas. Scott, the superintendent, understands what "the boys" want, and is determined to satisfy them. A number of stalls are occupied, and applications for more stall room are coming in daily. What will be done with the horses to arrive during the fair is a conundrum that will have to be solved.

Commencing in their order we looked at the horses in the first row. These are in charge of F. W. Loeher's string; Clarence Hill is the assistant driver and trainer, and he will make a reputation as a very successful one or we will be greatly mistaken.

The stallion that was first shown was Grandissimo, 2:23; he is by Le Grande, out of Norma (dam of Grandee, 2:23), by Arthurton; second dam Nourmahal (dam of Cassidy, 2:30), full sister to that famous sire A. W. Richmond. Grandissimo is destined to occupy a very high position as a sire before many years elapse. His first crop of colts (now three years old) was limited, he only had six, out of these the four that have been handled will enter the list this fall. He transmits his form, color, limbs, feet and disposition to his progeny in a remarkable manner, and if nothing happens will, through the performance of his get on the track and road, he as eagerly sought after, as Red Wilkes and Wilton are now. Grandissimo will make a mark of 2:13 this fall. He never looked nor acted better.

Mr. Loeher intended to go East the first of this month, but owing to the speed shown by the youngsters by this sire, while they were being broken, he determined to stay in California and bring a number of them to the front on the circuit and then go East. From the way he has been able to show these Grandissimos in their work, his conclusion to remain and develop them is a wise one. H. W. Crabb, of Oakville, is a partner with him in Grandissimo, and it is to his interest to bring the stallion prominently before the public.

The first Grandissimo looked at was Myrtle Thorne, a fine-looking, racy-formed three-year-old that will be in a position to get some of the money offered in stakes and purses this fall.

Altissimo is the name of a three-year-old Grandissimo colt, out of a mare by Toronto Chief. He is owned by G. C. Fountain, of St. Helena. Writer, by Secretary, also in this string, belongs to this gentleman. These colts are both very promising trotters.

Cameo, by Grandissimo, out of Eva, by Whippleton, is a fine filly belonging to E. F. Tallan, of Napa. She is pure-gaited and very fast.

Grandora is a bay two-year-old filly belonging to R. H. Sterling, of San Jose. She is sweet-gaited and fast, and will add laurels to her sire and dam.

The two-year-old filly Topsy, out of Flora B., is encouraging her trainer by the speed she is showing.

In an adjoining stall is a two-year-old colt belonging to Zeke Wilson, of San Francisco. He is by Stone's Election, out of a mare by Whippleton; second dam (dam of Secretary) by Volunteer 55. He is a heavy-honed, well-formed, nice-moving trotter, and is the making of a race horse.

All of these are in excellent condition, and show that they are not being driven to death by too early preparation. When the races commence and the money is up they will be in readiness to compete.

James E. Berryman has his string of trotters looking well, and if there is anything in getting horses in condition, those handled by him show they are as near perfect as possible.

Ian is the name of the best-looking Noonday we have seen this year. He is out of Cressida, by Yosemite; second dam Maud H., by The Moor 570; third dam Katydid, by Fireman.

Annabelle, by Dawn, out of Pacheco, by Hubbard, is also in Jim's string. She got a record of 2:27 at the Petaluma Fair two years ago, and has raised a filly since. She is looking and acting well.

Stonewall, by Director, dam Nellie Steinway, by Steinway, is a large-boned, well-formed young stallion, and, barring accidents, will make a low mark the first time he starts.

Longworth, A. C. Dietz's handsome Sidney, is also receiving a goodly portion of this trainer's care, and will also appear on the circuit. This horse was thrown out of training when quite young, and this is the first time since that he shows any signs of being strong.

Besides these prominent ones, Mr. Berryman has a colt by Alcona Jr. and several others that are very promising.

Thos. Kenny has Blonde Wilkes, a handsome son of Guy Wilkes, in his charge; he has seen enough of this horse's grit to warrant him in feeling sanguine over his prospects.

E. B. Jennings has Lenmar, 2:16, Alwood K., by Woodnut, and Alland by Alcona. These are handled by H. Hughes and they are looking fine as silk.

Henry Bruckman is handling A. T. Hatch's horses, Sid Roy by Sidney, and Omar by Admar, dam Imogene (dam of Guide, 2:15) by Norwood. Sid Roy is a very fast trotter, while Omar is a large, fine looking, dark chestnut horse that can pace very fast.

John Sparks, "Little Splan" had just come in to the track with a string of colts and fillies from Suisun.

Charley Scott's horse, Wilkes Pasha, is also domiciled at the track and is looking well. He has had a heavy season in the stud.

The whistle of the train for St. Helena warned us that there were other places to see, so we drove to the depot at a 2:40 clip and were just in time to catch the last car as it was moving out of the depot. It was a close call.

The next morning a visit was made to the pasture of the Vineland Stock Farm, where a number of fine looking mares by Director, A. W. Richmond, Whippleton, John Nelson, Eugene Caserly, Admiral, Alcona and Nauhuc were taking care of their foals by Grandissima. We noticed Oakville Maid, 2:26; Flora B., 2:27 among them.

The term "thick fat" could be applied to all the stock here most appropriately, and for its size there is a greater diversity of feed than on any piece of pasture land we have ever seen; plenty of clear, flowing spring water being in every field.

The last place to visit on this enjoyable trip was the To Kalon Stock Farm, Oakville, belonging to H. W. Crabb. This is one of the finest appointed farms in the state, and as we rode along the lane shaded by wide-spreading walnut trees, then through the almond orchards, orange groves and garden of choicest flowers, again the words of Whittier applied:

"Who sows a field or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree is more than all."

Vineyards, grainfields, meadows and pastures never appeared to better advantage than on this lovely May morning; but our time was limited and driving into the center of the large open circle around which the box stalls and stables are very neatly built, we were soon busy gazing at the collection of mares, fillies and colts that are being prepared by Hiram Ward, for the races this year.

Like Like, 2:31, Cora C., 2:28, full sisters, by Whippleton, out of Etta, by Nauhuc, appeared to be in the pink of condition.

Uranus, a chestnut colt by Grandissimo, out of the Buttmer mare is the kind that game campaigners are made of.

Flossie, by Whippleton, is a four-year-old that is sure to become famous either on the track or in the harem. She is an ideal mare in every way and is "gifted with speed."

Jupiter is the name of a two-year-old gelding by Grandissimo out of a mare by Hambletonian 725; second dam by Norfolk. Lullaby, his sister, is also very handsome. These will enter the list to a certainty.

Lonus, by Grandissimo, out of a mare by John Nelson, is a type of trotter that brings to mind Nancy Hanks in an instant, and, so far as speed goes for the little handling she has had, she resembles her even more strongly.

To Kalon is the name of a grand-looking yearling by Grandissimo, out of Whip, by Whippleton. He is a more substantial-looking colt than his half-brother Eyraud, and is just as speedy as the latter was at his age.

Neptune is another one of the constellation. She is also by Grandissimo, out of Star, by Nauhuc. She is a two-year-old, and unless we are much mistaken will prove a very valuable race mare.

Besides these there were a number of others that are worthy of notice; one was by San Diego, another by a son of Sultan, and several by Whippleton, Alcona and Director. They are jogged daily on the three-quarter mile track and when the hell rings it will be quite a difficult matter to select which is the best, for they are all excellent. The Grandissimos have a little the best of the rest now, and if they continue improving there is no doubt but it will take the best sire of trotters in California to surpass him.

There are several other stock farms that we intended to visit, but owing to our limited time from the office we were compelled to return. The growth of the trotting horse industry in Napa is a healthy one, and it will only be a question of a few years before the trotters will add as much fame to this beautifully-situated county as its yearly vintages have in the past.

ARNAREE.

A MAN that has had lots of experience says: Now a word or two on leg wash. Ask any trainers you know why they use leg wash, and some of the answers will puzzle you. Some say, "to relieve the strain on the muscles," others, "to keep the muscles from stiffening." Both answers amount to about the same thing. The trainers put on a liquid to take away or prevent an injury to the muscles that was caused by their own ignorance. It is working horses before they are fit that makes muscle-sore, just the same with a man if he performs any extra heavy work. Try it yourself; if you have not been in the habit of running, go out and step off a mile or half a mile and see how you feel next day—so stiff you cannot walk. You can take this stiffness out with a wash; some are better than others, but you have no need of the wash if you run a little each day until you are in shape to go a mile or more. Work your horses the same way; go easy at first and keep off the track until your horse can take a good, stiff road-jog without distress. A two-year-old should be able to put eight miles or more behind him in an hour, and a five or six-year-old 2:20 horse ought to be able to spoil fifteen miles in the same time. When they can do this you can send them against the ticker without worrying about soreness, and you won't need leg wash, but you must have the feet right.

Sacramento Letter.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SACRAMENTO, May 23.—There are now quartered at Agricultural Park nearly one hundred trotters, and from present indications one would be justified in the belief that this city will this fall give to the light harness contingent a fair share of the State's sensational performers.

Properly worked this track is one of the best training grounds on the Coast, and horsemen from all parts of the State are anxious to avail themselves of the opportunity offered for the successful development of their charges.

The approaching spring meeting of the Capital Turf Club may be the incentive to hard work, but whatever the cause, certain it is that the horse that can show anything of speed is called upon to exhibit his prowess.

The track was never in better condition, and the morning hours are made lively by fast trials.

Worth Ober has the largest string here, some fifteen in all, and out of the lot he has six that can heat 2:30, and two of these can do their miles well inside of 2:20.

The star of the stable is the hay horse Ross S., 2:21. Last week he was worked a mile, finishing the last half in 1:08, which would go to show that he will likely have something to say as to how moneys in the 2:20 class shall be divided. In view of the fact that he is an entire horse, and the training season has not fairly begun, this must be taken as a most creditable performance.

Booth Barrett, his son, is doing great work, reeling off quarters and halves close to a 2:20 gait. As yet he has not been asked to go a mile out, but he can enter what has been appropriately termed the "exclusive enclosure" whenever it is required of him.

Col. Hickman, a neatly-turned hay gelding who took a record of 2:25 last fall, is a prominent candidate for free-for-all honors. He is by Nevada, from a mare by David Hill, and is every inch a trotter. Just how fast he can work a mile is a matter of speculation, but harring accident he should finish the season with a record of 2:15 or better. A mile in 2:20 is simply play for him.

A neat little fellow is the brown colt, three years, by Noonday—Etelka, by Sultan. He is green as a gourd, but does his miles close to 2:40.

Frenchy, the once erratic pacer, has settled down into a quiet, easy-going fellow, and is now taking kindly to his work. He went into winter quarters last year with a record of 2:20. Frequently he is given a brush through the stretch, his "teaser" being a prominent local wheelman, mounted upon his bicycle. It is no trick at all for him to pace a quarter in 0:31.

Jim, a half-brother to Frenchy, is a level-headed little fellow and knows nothing but pace, and is without question the king of the road horses, and this city boasts of many good ones. He will be worked for a record, and is already doing quarters in 34 seconds. Ober has yet another pacer in a little gelding called Tommy Pepper. He is by Young Gib, a son of Gibraltar. He drifted in from over the mountains some time ago, and the first thing he did was to pace an eighth in 15 seconds flat. This performance, timed by some half-dozen reputable horsemen. Since then the little fellow has been resting on "velvet."

O. J. Holmes is working Thomas Harper's horses, and right well are they doing under his careful tuition. Brilliantine, 2:29, while eligible to class events, should be excellent material for the free-for-all pacers. Last Monday she did a very fast mile, coming home from the half-mile ground in 1:04, and at the outcome she was "chock full of it." She comes honestly by her speed, for her sire, Brilliant, a son of Sterling, paced in exhibition half-mile at the State Fair in 1884 in 1:13, which at that time was regarded as something phenomenal. Early in his career an accident to his hip relegated him to obscurity, and thus California lost another juvenile wonder. Maud Patchen, 2:25, is taking strong work, and is capable of trotting a mile in 2:20. A three-year-old filly, by Director, dam by Monroe Chief, completes the Harper string. She seems to know considerable about diagonal gait, but as she has taken but little work, her merit is yet to be determined.

Ben Geisman is handling the horses of the Riverview Stock Farm, the king-pin of the lot being George Dexter, 2:25, by Dexter Prince—Nellie C., by Kilrush. This youngster gives promise of being a great three-year-old. He has filled and thickened, and now looks to be a great, lusty fellow, capable of performing any task imposed upon him. In this stable are a number of green ones, and although they are doing finely, and none of them have "stopped a watch," they do not need extended mention.

Dan Peterson came up from Fresno several days ago, bringing the five-year-old horse, Sacramento, by Monroe Chief—by Gen. Reno. The mystery surrounding him is as thick as the blanket which enveloped him on his arrival here in the early morning. It is said that he can trot in 2:20 now, but when questioned about Mr. Peterson recalls that little truism in relation to silence being golden, and becomes as dumb as an oyster on the subject of speed.

Creole, the black son of Prompter, who went down the line a year or two ago, taking a pacing record of 2:20, is being worked by his owner, Thos. C. Snyder. It was Mr. Snyder's intention to convert the little fellow to the trot, but he has now altered his decision and will let him go through the circuit at the pace. This is a disappointment to Sacramentoans, for Creole is a local favorite, and there are many here who would like to see him get a mark at the diagonal gait. He found no difficulty in trotting through the stretch in 33½ seconds, and showed no inclination to pace at any time. But Mr. Snyder says he shall pace, and pace he will.

Duhec, by Sultan—Lady Dey, is also being worked by Snyder, and will doubtless be a serviceable horse this year.

"Rio Vista George," whose baptismal name is George Kensir—he of Princess Alice fame—is training Hugh Casey's horses. In the stable is a mare by Falls, dam by Gen. Reno, that from all accounts should be a terror among the green ones. If a mile in 2:27, the last quarter in 32 seconds, counts for aught, Kensir is certainly in line. Dave Grum, who had Falrose, the pacer, last year, has just commenced work on the hack gelding Dissector, by Director, Jr., dam by Altamont. This fellow is the property of Willard Gardner, whose recent successful venture with the gallopers, North and Tillie S. will be remembered.

Chris Jorgensen is handling a green pacer called Hoodlum, a son of Prompter. He is a blocky-built fellow and a glutton for work. He is another that steps through the stretch in 0:35.

Wilher Smith has just commenced hard work on Kehir, who was a mild sensation in his two-year-old form. He has been jogged all along this season, and is fit to take lots of work.

C. L. Denman has in training the ch c 2, Silver Bee, by Silver Bow, dam by Ensign Gold Dust. He is a good colt, as relates to speed, but a rather surly brute ready to exhibit an abominable temper, thus making him a bit unreliable. However, he will be seen at the Breeders' Meeting and his value as a trotter can be passed upon.

Charles Schlutius has in training several likely-looking green ones and the hay mare Almonta, 2:25. She has had no work as yet, but her owner, Gen. A. L. Hart, is confident she can reduce her record this year.

From the above it will be seen that the Capital City has some very fair nags, albeit the majority are pacers. But there is money in pacers. M.

That Special Congress.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The unseemly haste in convening an early special congress for the purpose of considering changes in the rules gives evidence of an attempt to catch associations and horsemen napping.

The rules have done good duty heretofore, and it would seem that the great expense of a special congress might be dispensed with, for it is but a few months until the regular event occurs. While there are two associations in existence, rules can be identical but a short period, for the reason that at every congress there will be some changes. Then why this meeting, that at best will have the power of making rules identical with those of the American Trotting Association but a few months hence. The distance change is the most important matter for consideration. It is the most unpopular, obnoxious and pernicious movement ever concocted in trotting rules—wholly had at all points. The imbecile excuse which the American Association tailed on to the condition, viz., that associations could do as they pleased about enforcing it, is absolutely nauseating and insulting to the intelligence of American horsemen. There is not a rule in the book—excepting those referring to fraud—that associations have not a right to change by a special condition a clause, and horsemen know it. Now, how about changing this one, thereby making a special condition necessary for ninety-nine per cent. of associations who are opposed to the change for the convenience of one per cent. who favor it? What hardship would it be for the one per cent. fellows to make the "special condition?"

The defiant treatment of the whole question is very similar to that adopted at the time of the T. J. Vail controversy, which virtually resulted in the disruption of the N. T. A. and entailed great damage to the turf. T. J., in all his glory, was no more intolerant or dictatorial, and not half so politic, wily and foxy as the present combination that propose ruling the turf—a bargain and sale alliance of the N. T. A., the American T. A. and the American Breeders' Association. The members of the latter have always made turf associations their "catspaw," they inaugurated the tin cup abolition and played track associations for dupes to give that sort of records. Many prominent breeders wouldn't pay a dollar entrance money, and some of them even deprecated the principles of racing, yet would use the tracks to add value to their produce and pull the chestnut from the fire already roasted for them. It seems that they now expect to continue the dodge, undoubtedly in the hope that by an amalgamation they can float on top. To the coon up the big oak tree it looks like the tail is everlastingly giving that dog a most vigorous wagging.

Isn't it time to say to these people: "We will have none of it. If you want records, pay your entrance money and trot your horses in races the same as other people do." Welcome the day when it will be a misdemeanor to allow a tin cup performance!

It is greatly to be hoped that associations and horsemen may be alert in time to checkmate this distance move. Do not wait until its adoption and then hewail the hardships and injustice; commence now with the word "Go!" and fight it out to the wire.

Every associate member of the N. T. A. should be represented in this special congress; every man who pays entrance money should come to the front in open opposition to the distance change.

While I believe the other proposed changes are good and should mainly be adopted, I think the exigencies did not warrant a special congress which will cost the parent associations and the associate members many hundreds of dollars that might have been saved by waiting a few months for the regular congress.

I shall be in attendance at the special congress to especially fight the distance change; any association not wishing to go to the expense of sending a representative can, if its views agree with mine, send me its proxy to vote against this pernicious measure. Respectfully,
Wm. E. FASTIG.

Judge M. Lewis Clark Scorched.

Broad Church is one of the most conservative writers connected with the American turf, and when he uses such severe language it is evident that the rulings which he criticises must have been extraordinary, says the Daily Spirit of May 19th.

Trainer John Huffman makes affidavit that he and he alone owns Forest Rose, and that he has no interest whatever in Van Buren, who is owned solely by the Kendall Stable.

It is painfully evident that Col. M. Lewis Clark is just now promulgating what the lamented Sage of Brookdale would have called "rural" constructions of racing law. In moments of confidence Col. Clark has many times during the last thirty years advised us that he was the real author of most of the Rules of Racing. We never quite believed him, and his recent illegal decisions, arbitrating rulings and flagrant abuses of power indicate that if he is really the father of the Rules of Racing his mind has become so seriously impaired that he cannot recognize his own children.

Col. Clark's record during the past month has been simply infamous. His Maid Marian-Dolly McCone decision was in direct violation of Betting Rule 6. In the Martin case he acted with indecent haste and without the semblance of an investigation. His rulings not only defrauded those who had hacked Lady Bess, but shamefully abused Martin by an expulsion so outrageously unjust that he was afraid to stand by it, and has not revoked the tyrannical edict—in time to do Martin some scant and tardy justice, but too late to repay the swindled hackers of Lady Bess. In the Forest Rose-Van Buren case he had no shadow of right to couple the two horses in the hetting; the subsequent disqualification of Forest Rose was robbery, and no clause of any rule of racing furnishes a pretext for either act. He not only grossly violated the Rules of Racing, but he robbed John Huffman of $615 just as clearly as if he had knocked Huffman down on the highway and filched the money from his pocket.

Confidence in the occupants of the judges' stand is the foundation stone of racing. Lack of this confidence is followed first by dissatisfaction and complaint, and then comes withdrawal of horses and owners.

It is tolerably hard for the average owner to win on the turf, with honest and intelligent judging, and when he is asked to first beat his opponents and then the judges, he will give up the game in disgust. With fewer entries and lighter fields come loss of public interest, decrease of attendance and eventually the decline and decay of racing. Unless the horsemen and the public have implicit confidence in the integrity and intelligence of the judges, racing will speedily sink to the level of the professional pugilism, and the "Sport of Kings" become the game of thieves.

Years ago, when Col. Clark was in sound health, both bodily and mentally, he did good work on behalf of honest racing. Remembrance of his past services, and pity for his present condition, have led horsemen to overlook his despotic conduct and to accept quietly rulings and decisions which, if made by any other man, would have been answered by immediate deposition from office, if not by personal violence. But patience has now ceased to be a virtue, and further forbearance would be criminal. His continuance in the judge's chair is an injustice to owners, trainers and jockeys, an injury to the best interests of the Turf and a menace to the future of racing.

Judge Clark must go !!!

Injurious Practices.

That a great many of the drawbacks and discouragements arising one way and another, in connection with the trotting horse business are self-inflicted, is beyond the peradventure of a doubt. By self-inflicted, in this connection, is meant conditions and influences exerting injurious hearings on the trotting horse business, that have been brought about by horsemen themselves. One of the most potentially-felt of these is the low prices that many really meritorious animals have brought at some of the many combination sales during the last few months. When facts stare us in the face we had as well "own up," make the best of existing troubles, and try to sufficiently profit by the footsteps of the past as to be able to shun like quagmires in the future. And if, as trotting horse devotees, we fail to learn by the practical and impressive lessons of the past few months, there is certainly but little in store for the future of trotting horse men and the trotting horse business. Tracks in the sands of time are not only plentiful but of magnitude in the trotting horse industry, and it is not only pertinent to ask "where are we at," but "why are we here?" To the former we might properly answer, "We are in the bottom of the sea," and to the latter we can just as properly answer that "we made the sea ourselves."

Injurious practices and questionable methods of one kind and another have contributed largely towards the bringing about of the immediately past and present unhealthy conditions of the trotting horse industry. Too many men have regarded it legitimate to get something for nothing, and the horseman who could get the most fabulous price for the least valuable animal has too often been the one to be complimented for his shrewdness. It is indeed astonishing what prices many worthless animals have been made to bring in the past by divers forms of extravagant claims and misrepresentations, and with the thousands of trotting-bred animals that have been sold at public and private vendue, so very many buyers have been imposed upon that it is now nearly impossible to find buyers that have not themselves been hit or know of others who have suffered through either the false representations or carelessness of sellers.

It is not a pleasant thing to contemplate, but nevertheless it is true, that if different tactics are not soon inaugurated by sellers combination sales will, ere many years, be a thing of the past. The time has now arrived that when a buyer lays down his ready cash for a trotting and breeding animal he wants assurance that the animal does actually possess the merits or qualities that have led to its selection and purchase. If a buyer selects a two or three-year-old colt or filly on account of the gait and speed shown, and buys it on the assurance of the seller that said animal has not been extensively trained, "knocked out," or discarded as a failure, he wants to know that these things are so; or, if it is a brood mare that is selected, that is bred to some noted stallion, the buyer should be furnished with the proper certificates of this fact, and not be left with the burden of proof on his hands after having laid down his good money on the strength of these representations. It has often happened that brood mares have been sold under representations of having been bred to such and such a stallion, that the buyer has been unable to establish the paternity of the foal, and thus, not only damage done, but mistrust generated. Again, animals that are standard bred, are sold unregistered, but with the seller's assurance that all required proofs will be furnished; but when the new owner calls for the proof, through sheer negligence or disinterestedness of the seller, the matter drags, and, as sometimes happens, is never attended to, and again the buyer is defrauded. There can be no objection to a seller getting every cent possible for an animal in a legitimate way, but extravagant statements, and the subsequent proof of their falsity have done unlimited damage to the public sale business, and the business as a whole is now experiencing the results. There needs to be a restoration of confidence between buyer and seller, and without a cessation of many of the pernicious practices of the past, this cannot be achieved. The restoration of the "golden rule" of "doing unto others as you would be done by," will accomplish more for the trotting horse business in one year than all the new "fads," rules, etc., will accomplish in a century.—Dunton's Spirit.

TROTTING SEASON OPENS.

In the second heat Kodiak, like all the Mambrino Wilkes trotters, seemed to like the work better the more he got of it, and soon made himself very prominent by passing Princewood and taking the lead, followed by Electionetta. He kept it all the way until the draggate was reached, when he made a skip, and Electionetta passed him but was only winner by half a length, Princewood third, Humbug fourth, Molly Patten distanced. Time, 2:33 1/2.

In the third heat Hinds drove with his old-time skill and kept abreast of Princewood in the lead all the way down the hackstretch. Head and head to the half-mile pole, the latter broke and Kodiak took the lead. Electionetta came up very fast and lapped him at the head of the stretch. Down to the goal they came, fighting every inch of the way. Just as the pair got within thirty feet of the wire Electionetta broke and Kodiak won the heat by half a length in 2:31 1/2, Princewood third and Humbug last.

Before the deciding heat Humbug was sent to the stable for not winning one heat in three. Kodiak and Princewood had a game struggle to win, but Kodiak was the strongest, speediest and steadiest apparently, and won the heat in 2:37 1/2, Princewood second. Electionetta was distanced. Everyone complimented Mr. Hinds on the able manner in which he piloted his colt to victory, for it was a well-earned one.

The next race was a dash of one and a quarter miles for pacers. There were five entries—Dave Benton, Mattie B., Zephyr, Loupe and Pascal.

Dave Benton led the five until they entered the back turn. Here he got mixed in his gait and almost came to a standstill before he got settled again. Mattie B. went to the front, followed by Loupe and Pascal, and the only one behind Dave was A. L. Hinds' sidewheeler, Zephyr. In this order they came under the wire. Time, 3:03 1/2.

The trotting race, special, that was on the programme as a dash, was altered to a mile and repeat race. There were five entries—La Sista's Ahanteo, Sonoma Stock Farm's Princess, C. Baah's Pet, A. L. Hinds' Hera and W. I. Higgin's Erin.

The horses got a fair start. Princess, who had third position, went right around Ahanteo and took the pole from her on entering the first quarter; she kept going faster and faster, and was four lengths in advance of Ahanteo and Pet at the quarter pole. At this point Pet seemed to let out a "few kinks," and captured second place and held it for a quarter of a mile. Erin was seen to go outside of Ahanteo and passed Pet at the three-quarter pole. It was an exciting race down the homestretch between these two for second place, but Erin won by a length, being seven lengths behind Princess, who jogged under the wire in 2:22 1/2. Ahanteo and Hera, not being within eighty yards of the wire, were distanced, much to the surprise of their drivers.

A number of people were surprised at this sudden reversal of form on the part of Princess, but those who knew the particulars in regard to her condition were not surprised. Last Friday night Dr. Masoro was attending her until daylight. She was very sick when she started, and it was only by sheer pluck that she trotted. Since then she has been carefully nursed, and Mr. Crawford has been with her night and day. Shortly before this heat he had to cocaine her game leg. Every one thought she would not repeat in the same time, and a large number laid their money on Erin and Pet, but when the trio came out Princess took the lead and trotted to the quarter in 36 1/2 seconds, the half in 1:10, the three-quarter pole was passed in 1:45, and the mile was made in 2:19 1/2. A high wind was blowing and the dust from the track was blinding; if it were not for these drawbacks she would have made a record of 2:18. Pet was second and Erin distanced.

The mare Princess will be sent to the Sonoma Stock Farm and bred. The probabilities are she will not be seen on the race track again; she is by Woolsey (brother to Sunol), out of Oakland Maid, 2:22.

Following are the summaries:

FOURTH DAY—THURSDAY, JUNE 1.

The attendance was an improvement in numbers over that of yesterday. The programme of the day was "bristling with novelties," not a contest for a mile being posted. There was a dash of one and one-eighth miles, a race of one and one-eighth mile heats: free-for-all pacing race, half-mile heats; one and one-sixteenth mile dash and a race for pacers one and one-sixteenth mile heats. What would Jim Eoff, Hiram Woodruff or Dan Mace say if they were to arise from their narrow graves and see such a programme?

The one and one-eighth mile dash which commenced the day's sport was the means of bringing out Antioch, by Antevolo, and Ahanteo, by Anteco, a grandson and granddaughter of Elector. Antioch had no trouble in winning this race in 2:45 1/2. Ahanteo is a fine-looking mare that seems to improve in her speed every time she is driven, and before the fall races close will prove to be a valuable race mare. This week's work has done her a great deal of good.

The second race was a special for 2:28 class, trotting, one and one-eighth mile heats. There were five contestants: James L., by Dexter Prince; Menlo Fallis, by Fallis; Jim C., by Tommy T.; Neva, by Steinway, and Alex Button Jr., by Alex. Button.

Menlo Fallis in the pools in the first heat of the 2:28 trot sold at $25 to $20 on Alex Button, Jr., and $20 for a field. In starting, Neva, being a nervous mare, got frightened at the flag, and made a bad break. Alex Button, Jr., and Menlo Fallis cut out the pace. Jim C. passed the latter in the homestretch and came in second to Alex Button, Jr. James L. almost ran away with his driver, and for continually breaking was set back last. Neva never seemed to get over the fright she received at the beginning of the journey, and the distance flag dropped in her face. The time made was 2:46 1/2 for the mile and one-eighth; the mile in 2:28 1/2.

In the second heat, shortly after getting the word, the shaft of the sulky in which Menlo Fallis was hitched broke, so Alex. Button Jr. and Jim C. pursued the journey around the course without the favorite, and as they came under the wire Alex. Button Jr. was five lengths in advance of his contestant. Time, 2:45.

Leta May, by Antevolo, dam Steinola, by Steinway; second dam Phaceola, by Silverthreads; third dam the famous broodmare Minnehaha (dam of Beautiful Bells, etc.) was sent for a record. She is a very handsome pacing mare, and went to the quarter in 0:35 1/2, the half in 1:10, and came home in 2:23 1/2. Ed. Lafferty drove her well.

The next event was the half-mile dash for pacers. There were four contestants—Geraldine, by Mount Vernon; Our Dick, by Gibraltar; Tom Ryder, by Alex. Button Jr. and Belle Button, by Alex. Button.

Capt. Harris, at the half-mile pole, got them away as even as ever Jimmy Rowe started a quartette of baogtails. Geraldine took the lead and came the first quarter in thirty-one seconds, Tom Ryder second, Belle Button third, and Our Dick, the favorite, last. On coming down the homestretch the latter made two breaks, but Keating laid on the whip, and like a bullet from a rifle the son of Gibraltar seemed to fly to the front, and just as the leader, Geraldine, broke, he came in a neck in advance of Tom Ryder, Geraldine third and Belle Button fourth. Time, 1:05. A blanket could almost cover the four side-wheelers as they came under the wire.

The second heat was a representation of the other with the exception that Our Dick made no mistake and came in with Tom Ryder at his girth, Geraldine at his throat-latch and Belle Button at her wheel. Time, 1:04.

In the consolation race, distance one and one-sixteenth miles, there were six entries—Secret, Phantom, Alwood K., Willena, Tiptinous and Lady O. Secret was first choice in the betting, Phantom second. There was little time lost in scoring. Secret got the pole, and although at the first turn Tiptinous was alongside, she gradually gained on the son of Antinous and opened a gap of five lengths at the quarter-pole. Down the backstretch the struggle for second place became interesting, Tiptinous, Alwood K. and Lady O. alternating positions, with Phantom coming along steadily and Willena breaking frequently. At the half Lafferty, behind Phantom, made a splendid attempt to capture the gray Secret, and soon led the rest to battle for third position. At the head of the stretch Payne Shafter looked over his shoulder and saw the Phantom looming up behind him in dangerous proximity to his hack. He spoke to his filly and she got down to business, and the contest to the wire became very interesting, but she had the best of the race at the draggate and came in first by half a length, Lady O. third, Alwood K. fourth, Willena fifth and Tiptinous last. Time, 2:45.

In the last race, which was for pacers, there were three entries—Mattie B., Dave Benton and Pascal. Mattie B. was favorite. After the word was given Mattie B. broke, and, before she could get settled, Dave Benton, heavily hobbled with gorgeous pantalettes, took the lead and kept it all the way until near the half-mile pole, when one of the suspenders, which held up his "panties," snapped and he went up in the air to catch the flying end. Pascal went by him, and, although Dave did his level best, he could not overtake Pascal, who was ably handled by Vioget. Mattie B. was too far behind to be dangerous for first place, so Pascal came in a winner by three-lengths in front of her with Dave Benton four lengths further away. Time, 2:34 1/2.

In the next heat Dave had stronger and better hobbles on. Mattie B. got away well on the outside. Pascal kept at her wheel, while Dave Benton was a splendid chird. This was the prettiest heat of the meeting; for over half a mile the three kept abreast, and their positions did not change an inch. On rounding into the homestretch Pascal broke and Dave Benton followed his example. Mattie B. had the road to herself and came in under the wire in 2:33 1/2. Dave Benton beat Pascal two lengths for second position.

In the last heat of this race Mattie B. won with ease; Pascal got second place and Dave Benton was last. Time, 2:36 1/2.

Goldsmith's String.

An excellent stable of San Mateo trotters, chiefly by that superbly-bred and popular sire Guy Wilkes (2:15 1/2), and his son; Sable Wilkes (2:18), which has made, age considered, a still better beginning as a sire, were wintered at the Goldsmith Farm in Orange County. This is probably the first experiment of wintering a stable of California trotters in the East, to have them ready to begin the campaign on Eastern tracks in the spring. John A. Goldsmith, who has them in charge, is now fitting them at the Hudson River Driving Park, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

All are reported to have wintered well, and are now in excellent condition for beginning the season's campaign. Of course, the spring is considered more backward anywhere in New York State, which is practically the same as in New England, than in Southern California, Kentucky, or other sections in the South. This is probably more than offset, however, by the fact that the entire stable is now well acclimated, consequently they are not likely to suffer from sickness, as has been so frequently the case with many of the best of the California trotters sent East at about this time in previous years.

It will be interesting to watch Goldsmith's stable and compare his results with Hickok's and others having quite nearly equally good material which has been wintered in California. Besides those belonging to Mr. Corhitt, Goldsmith now has in training a few which are the property of more Eastern stock farms. A very promising young mare and one of the best bred in his entire lot is a beautiful four-year-old filly named Siva, owned by Claireview Stock Farm. This filly was bred at San Mateo, but was foaled the property of Allen Farm, and was purchased by Claireview as a weanling. She is a sister to Rupee, with a pacing record of 2:11, and there is another brother at the Village Farm named Golden Gate which is also likely to be started this year.

Siva, by Guy Wilkes, dam Sable Hayward, already in the great brood mare list, by Poscora Hayward (2:23 1/2), son of Billy Hayward (2:31 1/2), by George M. Patchen Jr. (2:27), son of George M. Patchen (2:23 1/2). Siva's second dam is Sable (dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, and three others in 2:30), by The Moor (2:37). As the third dam is the great brood mare Gretchen (dam of Inca, 2:27, Romero, 2:19 1/2, Del Sur, 2:24), by Mambrino Pilot, this pedigree is wonderfully rich in low records, great brood mares and successful sires, as well as the combination of blood lines.

While Siva has not heretofore had the advantage of experienced trainers, she took a three-year-old race record of 2:24 1/2, and trotted trials in 2:20 or better. She has some valuable engagements for this season, such as the Spirit of the Times $21,000 stake, and though there are many entries for this, including Arion (2:10 1/2) and several others with much lower records, there is no certainty as to which ones will start, and it would not be very strange if this young mare should be quite conspicuous on that occasion.

An Alcantara Story.

"Do you know how near Dr. Talbert came to selling Alcantara the fall after he was a yearling? You don't? Well, he only lacked $50 of selling him, or you might say giving him away," said the old colored groom who used to take care of Alcantara to a Kentucky newspaper man recently. "I had worked the colt a little with the halter, and one day when the Doctor came to me and asked me what I thought of him I told him that I believed he had the making of a great horse. The Doctor asked me if he wasn't worth $1,000. I said yes, that he ought not to sell him for less than $1,000. The Doctor then told me that some gentlemen would be out the next Saturday to see the colt, and that they had offered him $1,000, but if I said so he would hold out for $1,200. I didn't want him to sell the colt at all, so I told him that if I were him I wouldn't take a dollar less than $1,200. Sure enough, the men came, and after a great deal of dickering finally agreed to give the Doctor $1,150 for the colt. The Doctor held out for the $1,200 and the men went away without buying him. I got a good deal of abuse for that advice, as the colt didn't do very well until he was three years old. In the meantime the Doctor often said to me that he would have gotten a good price for the colt had I not insisted on holding out for $1,200. We began to work him the spring he was three years old, and one day the Doctor came out and saw the colt move a quarter on his half-mile track. He asked me how fast I thought he was going and I replied that he was going at forty clip. The Doctor didn't believe it, but the next week we took him over to Dr. Herr's mile track and he turned it nicely in 2:40 flat. The Doctor was the best-pleased man I ever saw, and turning to me he said, 'I'll give you a season to him.' But the horse was sold before I ever had a mare to breed. When I did get one, however, the Doctor let me breed her to Alcyone. He failed to get her with foal, and so I have nothing to show for saving Alcantara when he was about to be sacrificed."

CHARADE WINS THE METROPOLITAN.

First by Fivs Lengths Easily—A Bad Accident—The Race and the Winner.

NEW YORK, May 31.—The second of the great handicaps of the year is over, and once more victory rests upon the banner of an outsider, the black four-year-old colt Charade winning the Metropolitan at Morris Park to-day with amazing ease in the remarkable time of 1:52 1/2, which is very close to the record for a mile and a furlong. Charade's victory was hollow, his nearest opponent, His Highness, who was second, being beaten five lengths. Illume was third, finishing at the saddle of his relative, while Colonel North's imported gelding Iddlesleigh was a creditable fourth. The Pepper and La Tosca, first and second favorites, were badly beaten.

Ten thousand people enjoyed the sport. The Metropolitan was the race of the day, and there was much curiosity to see how St. Florian would handle 133 pounds and run over the hill. With Sir Arthur, Stockton, Leonawell and Nomad withdrawn, sixteen horses faced Mr. Rowe. The Pepper was the favorite in the betting at 4 to 1, with La Tosca, Pessara, Illume, Picknicker and Charade the most sought after of the others. There was 15 to 1 against St. Florian and 12 to 1 against His Highness—remarkable odds when one looks back a year or so when they were among the best horses in the land. The English horses were considered out of it, as 40 to 1 could he had sgainst Arthur and 100 to lagainst Iddlesleigh.

John A. Morris went to the post to see one of the best starts imsginable, the entire field moving away as if by one impulse. Picknicker, The Pepper, Pessara, Fidelio and St. Florian were first to show, Arturo and Loantaka being last. Picknicker, St. Florian, Pessara, Charade, Iddlesleigh, The Pepper, La Tosca and His Highness ran on almost even terms up the backstretch to the beginning of the hill, where Arturo, who ran like a wild horse in the ruck, fell. Breasting the hill Charade showed half a length before Picknicker, who was half a length in front of St. Florian, La Tosca, Pessara, His Highness and Iddlesleigh, while The Pepper was most prominent of the others, but appeared to be beaten. Whea well into the stretch La Tosca took second place to Charade, and was running so well in hand that the issue appeared to lie between Mr. Lorillard's mare and the black four-year-old. Price, however, began to ride Iddlesleigh in the windmill style so popular across the water, and the big chestnut gelding drew up to La Tosca, followed by His Highness and Illume.

Pessara, St. Florian and Picknicker were hanging out signals of distress, and it was any odds that they would not be dangerous at the finish. Doggett looked around toward them, and keeping Charade well in hand, did not make his final move until a furlong from home, when Charade drew out with astonishing ease and cantered over the finishing line far in advance of his field. La Tosca stopped so suddenly at the last quarter pole that many thought she had broken down, and the fight for second place was between Iddlesleigh, His Highness and Illume. The two sons of Ill Used, under the whip, drew away from the Englishman, and in a furious drive His Highness was second by a scant half length, Overton riding a strong finish. Iddlesleigh was a most creditable fourth, only a length away. Then came La Tosca, Pessara and Pickpocket, and they ran fast through the stretch in the order named. Picknicker was ninth, Monowai tenth, The Pepper eleventh and St. Florian fourteenth. There was quite a demonstration when Charade returned to the stand, and Doggett received an ovation. The boy modestly refused to sit in the floral horseboe waiting for the winner, and fled to the jockeys' room.

The time for the race, 1:52 1/2, is very close to the best on record for the distance and explains the defeat of all the topweights. It also makes His Highness a race horse once more, as he was conceding the winner no less than twenty-one pounds and the third horse thirty pounds. His Highness ran three ran races at Gravesend and lost them, displaying none of the courage and stamina for which he had been remarkable as a two-year-old. To-day's race, however, restores the horse to the high pinnacle he occupied after he won the Futurity in 1890.

As for the winner, he was much the best horse in the Metropolitan at the weight, 104 pounds being no inpost for a colt that heat Tammany a mile last year at even weights. He ran some very good races this spring at Elizabeth, defeating some of the best horses in training, and was on edge for the Metropolitan, the distance for which is more to his liking than a mile and a quarter. Charade is a black colt by imp. Charaxus, out of Ada Belle. He is owned by W. R. Jones, of Brooklyn, a hookmaker at all the prominent tracks. To-day's race was worth about $16,000 to the winner, $2,000 to the second and $1,000 to third.

Few of the spectators knew that Arthur had fallen on the backstretch. When those who were near that part of the course reached the scene of the accident he was dead, having broken his neck and his nigh foreleg just below the shoulder. The jockey, Edwards, was conscious, but could not stand, one of his legs being broken. The bone is broken above the ankle and again just below the knee. Trainer Hadfield was greatly cast down by the death of his horse and the injury of the hoy. Arturo had been highly tried, ten pounds better than Iddlesleigh, the other candidate, and he ran fourth, and at 105 pounds he might have had a chance for the race.

Hadfield thought his horse would win, at any rate. Arturo ran in blinkers and Edwards did not appear to be able to stop him. He was last away from the post and the dust was very thick. He ran away with the hoy, and, running into the bunch of horses, fell and met his death.

Charade, the winner, whom we tipped to capture the Metropolitan as soon as the weights came out last February, is a black colt four years old, by imp. Charaxus, dam Ada Belle, by Eolus, therefore a brother to that excellent performer, Ma Belle. As a two-year-old he colt won seven races out of twenty-nine starts. In 1892 he only won four races out of twenty-eight starts, defeating, however, the crack Tammany, Mars and other high-class horses. This season Charade has won nearly every race he has started in, being defeated, though, in the Brooklyn Handicap. Charade belongs to W. R. Jones, commonly known as "Bill" Jones, and was bred by Col. R. J. Hancock, of Ellerslie Stud, Virginia, who reared Eolus, St. Saviour, Ma Belle, Knight of Ellerslie and host of other good ones. Below will be found the tabulated pedigree of Charade:

Table showing pedigree of Charade, including sire Imp. Charaxus and dam Ada Belle, with their respective sires and dams.

Table listing various dam lines for Charade, including Alta Vela, Imp. Filagree, Fiddleticks, Exstasy, Miss Wilfred, Royal Oak's dam, Smolensko, Lady Mary, By Highflyer, By Marske, and Regulus.

It would indeed be odd if Charade, royally bred as he is, did not race. He traces direct to Touchstone on his sire's side of the house through Orlando, winner of the Derby, and his sixth dam, Exstasy, was by Touchstone also. Then Charade has two crosses of the great Blacklock (through Voltaire and Vandal), besides Lexington, Leamington, Stockwell, Newminster, Trustee and other great strains. Charaxus, his sire, who was a good race horse and is a successful sire, was once offered to Peter Weher, formerly of Fordham, N. Y., now of Oakland, Cal., for $250, the young owner of Charaxus at that time (about 1885) being in sore financial straits.

Denver Racess.

Following will be found short accounts of the Denver races, which began last Tuesday. Next week we will print full descriptions of the various events at the Colorado metropolis:

DENVER (Col.), May 30.—Fully 5,000 people were in attendance at the opening of the spring race meeting of the Overland Park Club to-day. Of the five races carded for decision two were trots, both of which were captured in straight heats by the favorites, Charlie Baldwin and Brilliant. Six hookmakers were on hand to accommodate those who wished to wager.

The running races were decided on the inside course, which is seven furlongs in circumference, and of the three events one fell to the California division, one to the St. Louis contingent and one to the home talent. It was decidedly a California day, however. B. C. Holly had a horse entered in each of the running races, and they were all favorites. Sympathetic's Last won the inaugural dash at six furlongs in 1:21. Al Watts was second and Lillie G. third.

Jim Lee was quoted at 3 to 5 when the betting opened for the second event. Narvaez got him off head and head with Rapatap, but the Denver colt outfooted the Californian from start to finish and won by two lengths from Jim Lee, who was as far in front of Poco Tempo, a stable companion to Rapatap. The distance was covered in 50 seconds, excellent time for the track.

Revolver was a 6 to 5 favorite in the Decoration-day handicap. He carried 120 pounds, 19 pounds more than the next heaviest weighted starter, and finished second to Get There, who with 10 to 1 against him beat Revolver a length. Edgefield, a heavy-headed tip, was third. Edward Blaser, a San Francisco race-follower, won heavily on Get There.

The Denver Association does not recognize the rulings of the Blood Horse Association, for Jockey Joe Narvaez was allowed to ride in three races. Narvaez is training and riding for B. C. Holly.

DENVER, May 31.—Jockey Narvaez will not ride any more of B. C. Holly's horses, at least for some time to come. Narvaez has been training and riding for Holly, but to-day a telegram from T. H. Williams was received warning Holly not to give Narvaez a mount, as Narvaez has run away from Williams. The fact that Narvaez is harred by Holly did not prevent him accepting a mount in the last race. He rode Boomerang, who was widely tipped as a sure winner, but finished absolutely last, after running third to the stretch.

Before the races began, Long Time, a three-quarter thoroughbred trotter belonging to Gaston Barhee of this city, was sent against the six-mile record of 16 minutes and 53 seconds, held since 1889 by Satellite. He was driven by his owner, and covered the distance in 16 minutes and 8 seconds, heating the record 45 seconds. The sulky broke in the first mile or Long Time would have probably beaten 16 minutes. Long Time is a twelve-year-old gelding by Jack Rowett, a thoroughbred stallion, out of an unnamed trotting mare by War Eagle, also a thoroughbred. Barhee will send Long Time against the ten-mile record next week some time, after which he will take him to France to compete in the long-distance trots which are the rule there.

The six milcs were trotted to-day with but one break, the first mile being covered in 2:40 and the last in 2:46 1/2. The fact that a horse is made a favorite in a trotting event here seems to insure its success. The favorites won both yesterday and to-day. Betsy Cotton and Mary Magdalene, both first choices, won with little effort. Green Hock, piloted by Wash King, captured the six-furlong selling race. He was backed from 2 to 1 to even money, and won as he pleased from the favorite, Viola Belle. Silverman was third. Time, 1:17 1/2.

Hal Fisher, the favorite, defeated Cactus Blossom, a rank outsider, by a length in the first running race, while Blakemore, also a first choice, won as he pleased from Bob H. in the last event on the card.

DENVER, (Col.), June 1.—The attendance at Overland Park grows smaller as the meeting progresses, and the greater part of the crowd only arrived after the trotting events had been decided. As usual the favorites, W. W. P. and Denver Medium, won the harness races in straight heats. The third race, at six furlongs for gallopers, witnessed a pretty contest between Bay Chester, Lucy Clark and A. C. Tucker. Bay Chester and Lucy Clark alternated in the lead to the stretch, when Tucker closed up. In a drive the rest of the way, Bay Chester, who had been backed from 2 to 1 to 1 to 2, won by a length from Lucy Clark, who beat Tucker by a head.

Eleven horses started in the fourth, a selling affair, at nine-sixteenths of a mile. Hal Fisher won easily from Sam Jones, a 20 to 1 shot. Ben Harrison was third.

B. C. Holly had hotb Steadfast and Green Hock entered in the last race of the day, seven and one-half furlongs. Each carried 112 pounds. They were coupled in the betting and quoted at 1 to 10 at the post time. It was thought that the weight would stop Steadfast, and one or two books offered 10 to 1 against him. A stable boy named Whitty had the mount on Steadfast, and King was up on Green Hock. When the horses turned into the stretch Green Hock was leading, but was hard pressed by Spoon, who seemed about to beat Green Hock. Whitty went to work on Steadfast and the game little fellow came with a rush and just nipped Green Hock on the post. Green Hock lasted long enough, however, to heat Spoon out a half length for the place.

The class of the horses running here may be judged from the fact that it took Steadfast, the winner, 1:45 to run the seven and one-half furlongs over a fast track.

Isinglass Won the Derby.

LONDON, May 31.—The great Derby race at Epsom was won by McCalmont's hay colt Isinglass. Isinglass is by Isonomy, out of Deadlock. He won the 2,000 guineas at Newmarket this month. In the Derby to-day, Rose's colt Ravensbury, by Isonomy, out of Penitent, was second, the Duke of Portland's bay colt Raeburn, by St. Simon, out of Mowerina, third. There were eleven starters.

In the great English racing event to-day at Epsom, unlike last year, when Sir Hugo won, with the odds of 40 to 1 against him in the betting, the winner this year was the favorite, the betting being 9 to 4 in his favor. On Rose's Ravensbury the betting was 25 to 1 against and 20 to 1 against the Duke of Portland's Raeburn, 14 to 1 against Irish Wake, 17 to 1 against William, 20 to 1 against Dame President, 23 to 1 against Son of a Gun, and 100 to 1 against Royal Harry, Lord William, Quickly Wise and Peppercorn.

The betting for place was 6 to 1 on Isinglass, 7 to 1 against Ravensbury, even money against Raeburn, 5 to 1 against William, 7 to 4 against Irish Wake, 4 to 1 against Dame President and Son of a Gun, 10 to 1 against Royal Harry, Lord William, Quickly Wise and Peppercorn. Isinglass won by one length and a half, Ravensbury two lengths ahead of Raeburn.

It was exactly 3:10 when the flag fell to a good start. Lord William dashed to the front and set the pace, followed by Royal Harry, Raeburn, William and Irish Wake, running in a bunch close up, followed by Son of a Gun, Peppercorn and Isinglass. Behind the last three named was Ravensbury, with Dame President last. Before reaching Sherwood's Lord William drew clear of the bunch which had been running him closely.

Here the other horses also changed positions, William being first behind Lord William, followed by Quickly Wise, Peppercorn and Royal Harry, running nearly on equal terms, while behind them came Raeburn, Son of a Gun and Dame President, with Isinglass, the favorite, and Ravensbury bringing up the rear.

At the mile post Lord William was being ridden hard, but was still in front. When this point was reached, however, Isinglass, who had been given his head, had come through the ruck and was running second, William third, Raeburn fourth, Irish Wake, Royal Harry, Quickly Wise and Peppercorn in a bunch. Son of a Gun had fallen back and was bringing up the rear.

When the last hilltop was reached Lord William fell back, beaten. Meantime William had passed Isinglass, as had also Raeburn, and William was in front, Isinglass third, followed by Royal Harry, Irish Wake, Peppercorn and Son of a Gun in a bunch, Quickly Wise and Lord William at the tail of the race.

As they came into the straight Isinglass was running on the inside, and went to the front, closely followed by Raeburn, Royal Harry, Peppercorn and Ravensbury. When the distance post was reached Ravensbury had passed Royal Harry and Peppercorn and was running third. Coming on, Ravensbury gradually overhauled and passed Raeburn, but could not get near Isinglass, who was making a beautiful race.

The others were running in this order: Peppercorn, Quickly Wise, Royal Harry, Irish Wake, Son of a Gun, Dame President and William.

Lord William's saddle girth broke, and the jockey, Mullen, was thrown. This, of course, put Lord William out of the running. Isinglass maintained the lead from Ravensbury, and coming on, won the race by one length and a half. There were two lengths between Ravensbury and Raeburn. Time, 2:33.

Rancho del Paso Yearling Sales.

NEW YORK, June 1.—A draft of colts and fillies from J. B. Haggin's Rancho del Paso stud were sold under the hammer in the paddock at Morris Park to-day. Among the lot were fifteen colts, the get of Salvator. One hundred and fifty head are to be disposed in all. The sale will continue for two days. A chestnut colt by Salvator-Ethel was purchased by Matt Byrnes for $5,750. Another of the same color by Salvator-Chimera was also bid in by Matt Byrnes for $6,250.

Table listing details of the sale, including names of horses, their parents, and sale prices in dollars.

The Meadville kite track was entirely submerged during the recent heavy rains in Pennsylvania.

Oregon State Fair Grounds.

The Salem Statesman says: Should this good weather continue, the State Fair grounds near this city will soon be a very busy place, for, in addition to the work of building a new track, grandstand and other buildings, there will be more horses in training there than any previous season.

The old track is rather hard now, due to the incessant wet weather, followed by bright, warm sun rays that are baking it, so that a sprinkler will be needed soon.

Wm. Bright is confining a good deal of his attention to the hay stallion, Rosemon 5256, by Belmont, dam Seagull, by Strathmore.

Bright is also working Loyal, a yearling bay colt, sired by Rosemon, and owned by Wm. Staiger, of this city; an Oneco brown two-year-old, out of a mare by Black Stranger, the property of George Savage, and Abbie, a two-year-old filly, by Rockwood, out of a thoroughbred mare, which is also the property of Geo. Savage.

Sale of the McGrathiana Yearlings.

Tattersall's Sale Repository was crowded with turmen and lovers of horse flesh last night, who were attracted there by the sale of the consignment of McGrathiana thoroughbred yearlings. The sale of the McGrathiana youngsters, the property of Mr. Milton Young of Lexington, Ky., is always one of the most important of the year.

Mr. William Easton accomplished a good piece of work in disposing of fifty head of horses in less than two hours. He didn't allow the bidding to flag one minute, bringing down his hammer promptly whenever there appeared a tendency among the purchasers to pause, and yet getting all there was out of the hidders.

The average, $1,409, shows that the yearlings were of a high class, yet this would have been greater had it not been for three or four which fell before the general run in appearance, and were knocked down for less than $500. The horses, however, that brought less than four figures, were in the minority.

A chestnut colt, full brother to Dr. Rice, by Onadaga—Bonnie Lee, a clean-limbed, racy-looking colt with rare muscular development and a game head, brought the top price, $7,000. Dave Johnson was the buyer.

Among those present were James R. Keene, William Lakeland, Colonel Hall, J. J. Carroll, J. B. Haggin, J. Shields, Charles Oxx, R. C. G. Clarke, J. W. Rogers, Colonel James E. Pepper, F. McCabe, Dr. Street, ex-Mayor Grant, E. A. Buck, D. T. Pulsifer, Matt Allen, Matt Byrnes, Fred Eshner, W. L. Harmsely, C. J. Enright, J. A. Gray, H. K. Vingut, John Daly, Dave Gideon, J. B. Coleman, Hugh Jones, Phil Dwyer, George Forbes, Dave Johnson, Louis Stuart, George Baumann, Johnny Campbell, W. C. Daly, Colonel T. P. Ochiltree, Samuel Rorke, Al Powell, Ridge Levia, Billy Barrett, Henry Schultz, Charles Boyle, J. Croker, J. Flanders and Green B. Morris. Summary:

Table listing various horse sales with columns for horse name, sire, dam, and price. Includes entries like 'Chestnut colt, Onadaga—Elsinore, by imp. Buckden; Eugene Leigh $ 3,500' and 'Total for fifty head $70,450'.

Sale of the Runnymede Yearlings.

Fifty-eight thoroughbred yearlings, the produce of the Runnymede Stud, and all but two of them the property of Messrs. Cluy & Woodford of Paris, Ky., were sold at auction last night by Manager William Easton at Tattersalls, Fifty-fifth Street and Seventh Avenue, says the New York Times of May 24th.

Table listing various horse sales with columns for horse name, sire, dam, and price. Includes entries like 'Chestnut colt (full brother to Boddhist), by Hindoo—Emma Hanley, by Buckden; Meadowthorpe Stud $2,100' and 'Total $2,100'.

Table listing various horse sales with columns for horse name, sire, dam, and price. Includes entries like 'Brown filly, by Si, Dixon—Belle Palmer, by Bonnie Scotland; E. Kelly 1,000' and 'Total $375,000'.

It will be observed that L. J. Rose is going back on the turf again in good style, as he purchased three of the Runnymede youngsters.

Sale of Yearling Thoroughbreds.

A sale of thoroughbred yearlings, the property of the Kennesaw Stud and W. G. Armstrong, took place in the paddock at the Gravesend track at noon yesterday (May 22d.) Bidding was not at all of a spirited nature, and low prices prevailed.

Table listing various horse sales with columns for horse name, sire, dam, and price. Includes entries like 'Bay colt, by Bishop—Summer Rose; J. M. Clark $ 400' and 'Total $1,350'.

Grand Circuit Trotting Dates.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 24, 1893.—The stewards of the Grand Trotting Circuit met here to-day and arranged the programme for the annual meetings. The following resolutions, which are of great interest to horsemen, were adopted:

RESOLVED, That the meetings of the circuit be trotted under the rules of the National Trotting Association as they stand unless specified to the contrary by any member. RESOLVED, That the Grand Circuit oppose the present distance rule as injurious to trotting sport, an unjust hardship to patrons of the turf who pay entrance money, detrimental to the business of the associations, productive of tame racing, thereby depriving the public who pay at the gate of spirited and exciting contests among good fields of horses—in short, bad at all points and a most unwise movement.

Governor Bulkeley, of Connecticut; W. B. Fasig, of New York; George W. Archer, of Rochester, and C. J. Smith, of Buffalo, are members of the committee to carry out the resolutions.

Table listing meeting dates and prize money for various locations. Includes entries like 'Pittsburg, Pa., July 10 to 14 $36,000' and 'Total $375,000'.

Montana State Fair.

No movement has yet been made toward insuring the Montana State Fair Association against loss in case a race meeting in held in Helena this summer. The directors announced some time ago that unless the merchants and business men of Helena, made up what would be equivalent to the amount the association lost last year there would be no race meeting this year. The loss at the last meeting was about $1,800, and this in spite of the fact that the pool privileges brought the association something over $6,000 in the way of commissions. The purses both for running and trotting races were large enough to justify the best class of horses in striving for them, and the premiums given to exhibitors at the fair helped swell the expenses to large proportions. This year there will be no fair even if there should be a race meeting. It was decided to make that announcement in ample time to save intending exhibitors the labor and expense of preparing for it. With this outlay cut off the chances of the association's income running behind its expenses this year will be materially reduced. Still the expenses will be heavy, with good-sized purses and the number of employes it is necessary to have about the grounds. The directors feel that they have run the association as far into debt as they think they are justified. The losses of the past few years have amounted in the aggregate to about $6,000. While it is possible the association might come through another meeting without increasing its debt, yet it is a risk the directors do not care to take. With a guarantee from the merchants and business men sufficient to cover any possible loss, it would not be too late even now to get up a week of creditable racing, as the dates have been assigned Helena, and the horses and their owners would be just as well off by spending that time here as they would be if they were forced to remain idle. The directors do not care to be misunderstood in the matter. There must be sufficient subscribed to cover a loss not exceeding that of last year. What is more, if with the receipts and subscriptions there should be enough to pay all expenses, and something left over, the remainder will be applied toward liquidating the present indebtedness.

A direct intimation has been received from Anaconda to the effect that that city stood ready to take up and fill the dates assigned to Helena, in case it should be decided to have no race meeting here. In other words Anaconda, which practically begins the circuit, will, in such an event, end it also. This would give Anaconda about three weeks of racing, while Helena has none. Many people, including those who take no special interest in horse racing, think it would be an unfortunate thing that Helena should go without that sport this year. They regard it as doubly unfortunate that Anaconda should fill in the gap left vacant by Helena's failure to have a meeting.

A prominent member of the Montana State Fair, speaking of the matter, says: "If patriotic motives will not induce the merchants and other people to subscribe the amount needed, then business reasons may. A meeting brings to the city hundreds of horsemen and others who are interested in racing. It means so much expended for each man and so much for the supplies which are necessary for the horses. The greater part, if not all the amount subscribed, and perhaps even more, comes back through the various channels and is put in circulation right among our own people. That is the business view of it. Now for the patriotic view. Helena has never missed a fall meeting in twenty-eight years. There could be no worse time to begin than now. By the time the date assigned for the Helena meeting arrives there will very likely be a number of officers and soldiers located at Fort Harrison. No class of people enjoy horse racing more than the soldiers. Times may not be as brisk as one might wish, but Helena is in just as good a position as any city and a much better position than most of them. It seems to me the results would more than justify the amount asked to be subscribed."—Helena Independent.

At the Willows Race Track.

The sporting editor of the Journal visited the race track this morning, and in company with James Sullivan, the veteran horseman, who is in charge, took a look at the surroundings.

Sullivan has about twenty head in his string, the most promising of which are: A four-year-old Almont Patchen sorrel gelding, Surprise, the property of J. R. Troxel, bought from Governor Stanford; he has no record and he will be a candidate for the 2:31 pace throughout the northern circuit. Also, a four-year-old bay mare, Tilly Hooper, with a pacing record of 2:36 as a three-year-old, sired by Brigadier, out of a Belmont mare, the property of the same gentleman. Also, a bay filly, full sister to Tilly Hooper, three-year-old, without a record. Bay mare, four-year-old, by Almont, can show a 2:30 gait, owned by Joe Manor, of Williams, Colusa county. An Almont four-year-old sorrel mare, the property of Hon. John Boggs. Black mare, Bessie H., owned by A. B. Aitkin, of Corning, with a pacing record made on the northern circuit last year of 2:23. Also a brown stallion by Antepu, he by Antepu, three-year-old, without a record, owned by the same gentleman.

A. A. Jackson's Electioneer bay filly, two-year-old, has only been handled a short time, but is a very promising colt. A three-year-old bay stallion by Eclectic, owned by George Gregory, of College City, a full brother to the celebrated Arion, with a record of 2:10½ as a two-year-old, never been trained but little, and is without a record, but no doubt in time will rival his illustrious relative. A brown three-year-old filly, by Stanford's Clay, without a record, but a very promising stepper, the property of Asa Peake, of Red Bluff. A four-year-old brown gelding, belonging to H. B. Julian, sired by Almont Patchen, a perfect picture of the old horse, and no doubt in time will equal him in speed. A bay colt, Auditor, three-year-old, the property of C. Kaufman, of Corning, a smooth and level-headed trotter and one of the improving kind.

Nute Wilson's bay gelding, five years old, by Dotey's Challenge, without a record, is a nice, easy goer, and acts like a trotter. Dallman's George A., by the celebrated Almont Patchen, record 2:15, dam by John Nelson, is a promising stallion. Besides the above Mr. Sullivan has a yearling colt of his own, Frank Brandon, sired by Boodle, 2:21½, dam by Nutwood, 2:18½.

W. L. Williams has a couple of runners which he is exercising every day, preparing them for the fall circuit.

W. R. Merrill keeps his horses at home, but can be seen each morning at the track giving them their usual exercise. He has his fine three-year-old Antevolo mare, with a record of 2:21½; Clarence Wilkes, six-year-old bay stallion by Guy Wilkes, without a record; Sable Glenn, two-year-old, by Sable Wilkes, and Eagle Bird, a green pacer, sired by Almont Patchen.

W. W. Marshall can be seen daily behind his horse Stranger, record of 2:25½, besides he has a two-year-old filly, sired by Clarence Wilkes, which he thinks very highly of.

It will not be long before the track will be alive with hooded stock and their attendants, and it is safe to predict that the coming fair will be far ahead of any previous effort.—Willows Journal.

The Fair at Greenville.

On Saturdays last the Directors of the Eleventh District Agricultural Association met at Sierraville for the purpose of locating the Fair and making arrangements for the fall meeting. Messrs. Bransford, Stephen and McIntyre were present from Plumas, as well as Messrs. Nichols and Dolly of Sierra. The report of the treasurer showed that $163 was on hand as a balance from last year. Dr. Pritchard came before the Directors and asked that the same be donated to the local Agricultural Association. This request was denied.

For the location of the Fair for 1893 there was but one bid, that of Greenville. A good and sufficient guaranty was presented for the payment of the first day of the fair of $3,000 in money, and that a fully equipped racing park, including all necessary stables, sheds, grand stand, judges' stand, etc., a pavilion and a hall room, should be furnished the Association free. Everything being satisfactory, Greenville was awarded the Fair by a unanimous vote. The following officers for the ensuing year was duly elected: President, J. S. Bransford; Vice-President, A. S. Nichols; Secretary, J. R. Murray; Assistant Secretary, Fred Blinman; Treasurer, W. C. Brown.

Director McIntyre, Secretary Murray and Treasurer Brown were appointed a committee to decide on the time for holding the Fair.

The committee on speed programme consist on J. S. Bransford, D. McIntyre, Jake Stevens and Dr. Carter.

To prepare the premium list Messrs. McBeth and Nichols were appointed.—Plumas National Bulletin.

Horse Racing and Its Progress.

From time immemorial among savage and civilized people the world over there has always been a liking for amusement of some sort, and to those that furnish this entertainment there must be some recompense, for, to use the slang term, it is "money that makes the mare go." Almost since the world began horse racing in some manner has been a popular sport, and has occupied a strong place in the minds of people who admire nature in a high state of training. During the middle ages it was a sport where kings, nobles, and I might say queens took part. We have extant glowing accounts of mythological races in which the highest dignitaries of the State took active part. In "Ben Hur" we find accounts of chariot races even at that early period. In Great Britain, in France and Spain, it has for centuries been a very popular amusement. However, as the United States rank ahead of other nations in many things, so also is it ahead in introducing trotting races, and we might call it a national sport, as it well deserves to be. This class of races is deservedly becoming exceedingly fashionable and rapidly growing in favor.

The amount of money invested in breeding trotting horses is simply enormous, and a novice would scarcely believe a statement setting forth the value of some of the great breeding farms at which trotters are born. Woodburn, the birthplace of Maud S., embraces within its borders thirty-five hundred acres of rich land, nearly three thousand of which are never tilled, but used to graze the trotters on. I have no doubt the value of Woodburn and its stock is worth at least three quarters of a million of dollars. South Elkhorn, Col. Pepper's estate, is the home of Onward, Norval, Madrid and Nutpatch, as well as more than a hundred broodmares, and we can only guess at its value. W. C. France, at Highland Farm, has Red Wilkes, Allendorf, The King and Sentinel Wilkes, and the value of his stock would reach several thousand dollars. These are only samples of the great breeding establishments devoted to raising trotters, and is very doubtful if these rough estimates are high enough to represent the value of these establishments.

When we have come in possession of a trotter, or rather a horse we hope to make a trotter out of, then the expense of a sulky, harness and essential trappings is large, and the expense of training is not a matter to be carelessly overlooked. It results that to encourage the trotting of horses and the formation of trotting associations all legitimate measures should be taken to make the sport attractive to the people and remunerative both to horsemen and to associations.

The manner of arranging trotting programmes has for years been much the same, and has become to a nearly stereotyped. The growth of the business has been so rapid as to bring about new conditions and create new demands, therefore intelligent thought should be given the subject of meeting these demands and complying with these conditions. The times change and men change with them, and as men change new conditions arise, methods must change. But with change we want improvement, or else leave matters as they are, which in the case of the distance flag would be a very wise conclusion.

Let us glance back at some of the old-time performers and note the progress made in speed during the last century. Today there are so many 2:30 and 2:20 performers that we pass them by without much thought, they are so common, and yet only a short time ago they were thought wonders, and we hardly expected that more than a very small number would ever reach so low a mark. Even to-day it takes some one well up in horse literature to keep track of the events taking place every day, and in order to fully realize the progress we have made, let us compare the past records with the present. We never value anything as highly after we come in possession as before, so it is with records.

Time was when a horse with a record below twenty was a wonder, but to-day that is not enough; we want something lower, and are not satisfied with this. Some little idea may be obtained of the rapid growth of trotting and the phenomenal progress made in this rate of speed by a comparison of a few events happening in different decades during the present century.

It was in the year 1818 that a horse first trotted in three minutes. It was accomplished at Jamaica, N. Y., by a horse called Boston Blue, and was regarded as a notable performance. Nothing else of importance transpired during that decade. In 1843 Lady Suffolk trotted in 2:26½, and the world wondered. In 1845 Moscow trotted in 2:30, and with a notation of these praiseworthy performances the history of that decade is written. In 1853 Highland Maud and Tacony each trotted in 2:27. In 1859 George M. Patchen trotted in 2:26½ and Brown Dick in 2:25½, and in 1859 the sun of that decade set in a blaze of glory on account of the world-famed performance of Flora Temple when she trotted in 2:19½. The news was flashed to the uttermost parts of the earth, horsemen marveled and predicted that the end had come, the sturdy little mare was proclaimed queen, and conservative men shook their heads and indulged in melancholy musings over the fact that it was a fast age, and men and women were going to the dogs because of their love and admiration for a healthful, pleasant sport which many good men and sensible women believed to be perfectly proper in every way.

During the next decade 2:20 was frequently beaten and a lower record had to be made in order to create a sensation. This was done by Dexter in 1867-68-69, when he earned lasting fame by trotting in 2:17½. In 1874 Goldsmith Maid trotted in 2:14, in 1878 Rarus trotted in 2:13, in 1879 St. Julien trotted in 2:12½, in 1878 Hopeful trotted in 2:14½, in 1875 Lula trotted in 2:14½, and in 1876 Smuggler trotted in 2:15½, and in 1874 American Girl obtained a record of 2:16½.

By this time trotting had become a recognized sport, and a good part of the stigma or odium attached to it had been removed, while the breeding of the trotter was assuming a more practical form and becoming reduced to a system. As we follow down the line of record-makers and record-breakers, we come to Maud S., who made a mile in 2:08½, in 1885, and although there were a number of notable performances, probably none from this time on until 1889, when the world's stallion record was taken by Axtell, 2:12, at three years old—and when age is considered, it is without doubt the greatest performance we have had to record.

Who knows? Who can tell whence comes all this speed? We are told that it requires science to train a horse and bring him to such a mark, but Axtell did not have scientific training, which no doubt is one reason he reached a much lower mark than most of his age. Then his breeding was not fashionable, and on neither side was his blood popular. Who among wise men can answer this question—the eminent creators and originators of beautiful theories will rise and explain. We are anxiously waiting. Let him who has fathomed the mysteries of life and death, or the theorist who knows all about it, solve the problem and instruct the rest of us who really know very little about horses, anyway, when it comes to science. The more we study the breeding problem the more we realize we know nothing about it whatever, and the greater is the mystery of it. We have concluded to accept facts and record events, and claim to be only a student of Mother Nature, and leave to abler and more astute minds the task of explaining it to the people. I shall be criticised, of that I am sure, and perhaps deserve to be, but, as the great premier of England wrote, "Critics are the people who have failed," and the poet said, "To every trade man serves apprenticeship save one, the trade of censure." Critics are ready made. What the people need and the horse business demands is, that some sound-minded gentleman who has raised horses himself, not altogether on theories but common sense, and who could tell spavins from heaves, would explain these mysteries to the people. Science is all well enough, but there are many people when they pick up a horse journal and read a scientific article on breeding and care of horses, they don't understand it and are really frightened. If we knew just what kind of a horse could be produced by breeding in certain lines, the country would soon be overstocked, and many of Nature's doings will ever remain, as now, a mystery to those that study them. From three minutes down we have gone in the last century, to the time of Nancy Hanks 2:04, and if she does not reduce that to two minutes flat she will have to give up the crown by the close of the nineteenth century, as there is a number now already knocking at the door. There has always been horse-racing, and will be as long as time lasts, and it is bound to be in favor wherever sport-loving people exist, despite the few that denounce it.—"Mary Green" in Dunton's Spirit.

Pearle of the Trotting Sea.

Our horsemen cannot afford to overlook the great sale of A. W. Foster's trotting stock that will take place at Killip's salesyard next Wednesday. In Mr. Foster's Hopland Stock Farm lot are Lady Hamilton, by Venture, 2:27½ (sire of the dam of Directum, 2:11½ at three years), dam by Hambletonian 725; Lady Claire, by Irvington; Forgie Filly, by Mambrino Wilkes, dam by George C. Gorham; Piracy, by Buccaneer 2656, dam by George M. Patchen Jr.; Countess, by Alert, dam Kate Patchen; several good mares by Rafael 9215 (son of Fallis, 2:23, and Stockton Maid, by Chieftain 721), and from mares by Venture, Gen. McClellan 144, Wovick, Whipple's Hambletonian and Adventure, besides two by Mambrino Wilkes 6083. Terra Cotta is a fine-looking three-year-old bay colt offered by Clay 4779 (son of Electioneer and the famous Maid of Clay), dam Lotta, by Wayland Forrest (sire of the dam of Wayland W., 2:25); second dam Prairie Bird, 2:28½, dam of Flight, 2:29, and Prompter (sire of three). This colt belongs to Charles Dresser, of this city.

Particular attention is called, however, to the sale of Silas Skinner, 2:17, the Black Cyclone, the well-known campaigner by Alcona Jr., dam Fontana, by Almont, and also to the great producing broodmare Madam Baldwin (dam of Bay Rose, 2:20½, Majester, 2:24, and Pasha, sire of Moro, 2:27), by The Moor 870, dam Daisy King, by Ben Lippincott, by Williamson's Belmont. It is not often that such celebrities of the track and harem are put up at auction, and hiding on these should be more spirited. W. P. Fine offers the four-year-old colt Examiner, by Dawn, 2:18½, dam Vashti, 2:32½, by Chieftain 721; and Pocotempo, 2:37, by Antepu, 2:16½, dam by Joe Daniels; second dam by The Moor. Remember that the date of this great sale is next Wednesday, and that catalogues can be secured of Killip & Co.

J. C. Gray, St. Johnsbury, Vt., writes: "Absorbine" removed a wind-spavin from my colt.

Charles R. Cook, East Winsor Hill, Ct., writes: "Absorbine" has proved very satisfactory and shall recommend it in all cases that come under my observation for Wind-puffs.

Answers to this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

G. E. W., San Bernardino, Cal.—Can you tell me in your next issue the pedigree of Sandy Wilkes, by whom he was raised or by whom he is now owned? Answer—We find no trace of the horse, but perhaps some of our readers can give the desired information.

C. R., Grass Valley, Cal.—Please give pedigree of the stallion David Hill. Answer—Dave Hill #57 was by Black Lion (son of Black Hawk 5), dam by Liberty (son of Bishop's Hambletonian). Then there was a Dave Hill Jr. 17,139, by Dave Hill #57, dam called a St. Lawrence mare. The first-named was foaled in 1852, the latter in 1864.

F. P. N., Marshfield.—Greatly obliged by informing me through your paper how a driver obtains a license for driving on association track, who from and by whom recommended? Answer—No license is needed in this section, but on Eastern tracks you might need one. Apply to Charles Marvin, care of Miller & Sibley, Meadville, Pa. He is President of Drivers' Association and can tell you all about it.

S. S., Merced.—Kindly inform a reader through the columns of your paper of the complete pedigree of Bismarck, registered number 12,240, and the number and complete pedigree of Re-Echo. Answer—Bismarck is by Dave Hill Jr. 17,139, dam by McCracken's Black Hawk. Re-Echo is numbered 14,439 and is by Echo 472, dam Belle Mason, by Williamson's Belmont.

W. A. M., Felton, Cal.—To settle a bet will you please give me the time, place and names for horses who have made a (20) twenty-mile record, and if it is on record. A bet that there is or was a horse who has gone to harness for twenty miles in less than an hour, and B bets that no horse has ever gone twenty miles within an hour in harness. There are as follows: Capt. Merowan, m h, trotted the distance Oct. 31, 1865, at Boston, for a purse of $5,500, time, 58:25, best on record; Controller, to wagon, at San Francisco, April 20, 1878, trotted twenty miles in 55:77; John Stewart did the distance on Fashion Course, L. F., September 22, 1868, to wagon, in 59:23; Mattie Howard, at San Francisco, December 7, 1871, on a half-mile track, trotted twenty miles in 59:30 1/2; Trustee (a son of imp. Trustee) accomplished the feat October 20, 1848, in 59:35 1/2, and Lady Fulton, July 12, 1855, at Centreville, L. I., trotted the distance in 59:35.

J. N., San Francisco, Cal.—What does King Thomas weigh in condition, also out of condition, also Major Domo on same terms, and the heaviest runner ever known? Answer—As to King Thomas we cannot say. Capt. Taylor, manager of the Hearst estate at San Simon, Cal., tell you to a pound what the horse weighs. Major Domo, I have read, weighed over to 1,300 out of condition, and I suppose in racing condition would weigh 1,150 pounds. It is almost impossible to say what the heaviest runner ever known weighed. The heaviest galloper I ever saw in a race was Lucky B., raised at Santa Anita, and I should say this horse, who was about 16.8 in height and heavy quartered, with quite a long body, would weigh in racing condition fully 1,250 pounds and perhaps 200 more when he had been out of training for a couple of months. Charles Kerr's Munster was very much such a horse as Lucky B., and would weigh nearly as much. I should judge he is little, if any, short of 17 hands in height. Longfellow is a very large horse, standing close to 17 hands, with a tremendously long body. It is a safe bet that he will weigh at least 1,500 pounds at this writing, because he has an unusually long body and is strongly built. Longfellow was as heavy a horse of note as we ever heard of.

G. H. B., San Jose, Cal.—Will you please inquire through the columns of your valuable paper regarding the breeding and the party that bred and raised a black mare, which was owned at one time by John Livingston, Esq. She was sold by Mr. Livingston to Messrs. Malone & McCord, and they sold her to a gentleman in Watsonville by the name of Mr. McClusky. After Mr. McClusky got her she trotted under the name of San Juan Belle. In Chester's book, page 80, there is an account of a double team race between the following: Mack and Joe, San Juan Belle and Billy Matthews, Dixie and Sorrel Frank, and Frank and Nell Brody. This was on Oct. 10, 1882. What I wish to learn is the pedigree of this black mare, San Juan Belle, also the party from whom Mr. Livingston got her from and the party who bred and raised her. I understand she could trot fast, but was very delicate and could stand no work. I learn through Mr. F. S. Malone that Mr. Livingston does not know who bred and raised her, as he bought her through a second party. Answer—We had that San Juan Belle, driven by W. Woods, won a race at Santa Clara, Cal., making a record of 2:40 1/2, Oct. 2, 1877.

E. D., Ely, Oregon.—1. Can you inform me through your paper who bred the mare Mary Moss, by Imp. Glencoe, dam by Bertrand; second dam by Paeolet, etc. She was sired in Oregon by J. G. Basket, brought here about 1892, and must have been foaled about 1857. 2. Is the following correct: Jack Sheppard, brown horse, foaled about 1855, sired by Nathan Coombs, dam Gladiola, by Norfolk; second dam by Illinois Medoc; third dam by Imp. Glencoe, etc. 3. Can you give the breeding of Illinois Medoc? Answer—1. I do not find Mary Moss in the Stud Book, but there are two mares by Glencoe, dam by Bertrand. One was owned by James Willey, of Tennessee. The other was bred by Gen. T. J. Wells, of Louisiana. The first was foaled in 1849, the last-named in 1841—earlier than you mention. 2. We find no trace of Jack Sheppard in any of Bruce's Stud Books or in Goodwin's Official Turf Guide. Write to Nathan Coombs, of Napa, Cal. He may be able to tell you all about the matter. 3. Illinois Medoc, b h, foaled 1847, was at one time called Bay Medoc, and was by Grey Medoc, dam Rosalinda Jr., by Imp. Trustee; second dam Rosalinda, by Ogilvie's Ozean; third dam by Imp. E. Young, by Ogilvie's Ozean; fourth dam by Grey Medoc was a celebrated racehorse by Medoc, dam Grey Fanny (dam of the great producing mare Blue Bonnet), by Bertrand. And by the way, Grey Fanny, by Bertrand, had a filly foaled by Glencoe in 1843, this breeding being very much like that of the mare you inquire about in your first question.

Stock Farm For Sale.

One of the finest stock farms in California, consisting of about one hundred acres of rich soil, twenty acres of which in alfalfa, well watered and fenced. It is one of the best-appointed places in the famous Napa valley; it is situated one mile from Napa City, on the banks of the Napa river. There are fine stables, barns, sheds and numerous box-stall, small paddocks, and in fact everything to make it a model farm for the purpose for which Mr. McCord intended it. The magnificent two-story residence containing eleven rooms built in the latest style, surrounded by a garden and orchard, makes it an ideal home place, and a more desirable investment than this has not been offered for years; As John McCord, the owner, is selling all of his horses because his business in San Francisco prevents him from devoting the time to them he would wish, he has concluded to sell this beautiful place also.

Nutwood Boy is a fine chestnut, 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1125 pounds, with a powerful and speedy conformation, and the nearest living likeness to his celebrated sire, Nutwood, of any stallion in California. After his first season he will be placed in training for the purpose of campaigning through the "fall circuit" and gaining him a record. He is symmetrical in conformation, perfect in disposition, and as pure-gaited as any Electioneer that ever lived. He has the finest legs and feet, and is remarkably well-muscled throughout; his back is short, his loins strong and quarters heavy; he is stylish and very level-headed. Alect never received a trainer's care, yet he trotted without any work a mile over the Stockton track in 2:26. Alect was bred as a three-year-old to a few mares, and his colts and fillies are all models of symmetry, beauty and trotting action; all are of good color.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD 15,119

LIMITED TO FIFTY MARES AT $50 FOR THE SEASON.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and a half inches high, and is the sire of Maud, 2:19; Annie W., 2:25; Albert H., 2:27 1/2; Mollie C., 2:27 1/4, and several others knocking at the door. He is by Nutwood 600, 2:18 1/2, dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27. This represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses, as well as great broodmares.

(For pedigree of Nutwood 600 and Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31 see tabulated pedigree above.)

NOTE: You will hardly realize the strength of this breeding until you examine the above tabulated pedigree closely, then you will see that there is not only 7 great performers in it, but the greatest of sires, as well as brood mare sires. You also find a number of great brood mares, all of which you rarely find in the pedigree of two young stallions. Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/4, is the only horse living or dead with 3 in the 2:15 list. Nutwood, 2:18 1/2, is not only the greatest living sire, but is also the greatest broodmare sire of 1892, he having put in twenty-seven and his daughters twenty-four. With such a grand combination of bloodlines, I cannot see how one can make a mistake in breeding a good mare to either of the stallions, Nutwood Wilkes or California Nutwood. It looks as if we had everything but the possible neck and should get that nine times out of ten. Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above named stallions must send the mare or 10 per cent. of the service fee with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animals requires it, hay or grain, or both, will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda County, Cal., via broad gauge railroad. All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by Aug. 1st, 1893. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from Feb. 15th to Aug. 1st, 1893.

DIABLO 11,404,

Record, 2:14 3/4 as a Three-Year-Old,

Will Make the Season of 1893, commencing February 10 and ending June 15, at Race Track, Pleasanton.

SERVICE FEE (With usual return privilege), payable at end of Season.....$100

DIABLO was foaled 1889, is a handsome chestnut in color, stands 15 2/4 hands and in conformation, disposition and action is absolutely perfect. He is a pure trotter and will get a mark close to 2:20 at that gait this fall. His record, 2:14 3/4, was made in his second race on the turf and is no mark of his speed as a pacer. His breeding entitles him to be considered one of the most fashionably-bred stallions in America. He is by Chas. Derby (record 2:20 in sixth heat), trotter to Stineer, 2:29 1/2, by Stinway; dam Bertha sister to Bayard Wilkes (record 2:15 in a sixth heat), by Alcantara, record 2:23; second dam Barrena (dam of Alarie, sire of Victor B., 2:20 1/4), by Bayard 53 (record 2:31, sire of Kitty Bayard, 2:12 1/2 on half mile track and 15 others in list); third dam Blandin, dam of six producing sires, including Swiger, and King Rene), by Mambrino Chief 11; fourth dam Burch Mare (dam of Rosalind, 2:21 1/2, and Donald, 2:27), by Parker's Brown Pilot, sire of Sophronia, grandam of Nancy Hanks, 2:04. Chas. Derby, by Stinway, dam Katy G., dam of two in list, by Electioneer; second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Mand C., 2:19), by Niagara (sire of Fairmont, 2:22 1/2); third dam Fanny Wickham, the great twenty-mile trotter, by Imp. Herald, out of a daughter of Imp. Trustee, etc. The great broodmares Katy G., Abbess, Alma Mater, Green Mountain Maid, Barrena, Blandin, Burch Mare, Lady Waltermire and Fanny O., great grandam of Palo Alto, 2:08 1/2, appear in this pedigree, besides such sires as Electioneer, Stinway, Alcantara, Geo. Wilkes, Pilot Jr., Mambrino Patcheu, Hambletonian 10 and Mambrino Chief 11, and the strongest thoroughbred families known. Address

C. A. WILLIS, "Archibald" of the "Turf, Field and Farm," writes as follows:

MR. P. HAYDEN, Newark, N. J.—
DEAR SIR: I am truly glad to see you advertising the merits of the Woodmansee Bit. For the past ten years I have never been without one or more of them, and have frequently given them to my friends and repurchased for myself.

I have purchased every new style of Bit since I was sixteen years old (forty-four now), and I find a large majority of those that are liberally advertised and largely sold are worthless. The Woodmansee is a long way the best bit for general use, either for single or double or other driving, and ought to be used by every owner of horses. My inclination prompts me to write you thus, hoping it may encourage you to place the merits of the Woodmansee Bit before the public. It is the King of Bits and deserves all that can be said of it. A pair of them on a team I was driving once saved my life in California. Yours truly,
C. A. WILLIS.

Training
The Trotting Horse.

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three-hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Silby, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm."

RESULTS OBTAINED AT KALAMAZOO FARM.
THE WELL-KNOWN
Gentlemen:—We have used Cole's Ossidine for the past two years, and consider it invaluable for Sprung Tendons, Curbs, Ringbone, and Spavins; there is nothing equally so for us it effected a permanent cure where firing failed, although performed by one of the most successful veterinarians on the continent. We have recommended it to others with like success, and believe it has more merit than any blister ever used. Very respectfully yours,

I have long used it in my stables, and find it to be all that is claimed for it in removing callous and unnatural bony growths without leaving the slightest blemish. From my experience, I most strongly recommend the use of Cole's Ossidine, and feel that it is a necessary adjunct to every stable. Yours respectfully,

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.
STAR, LANE CO., OREGON, Feb. 8th, 1892.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,
Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Curb of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly spavined; tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Coltoga Grove, Or. S. Z. FAYTON.

THE TROTTING MEETING.

CLOSE CONTESTS, HEAVY BETTING AND SUCCESSFUL DASH RACING.

Entries to the 2:30 List of Palo Alto and Steinyaw Youngsters—The Events of the Closing Days in Detail.

FIFTH DAY—FRIDAY, JUNE 2.

The attendance to-day was a little better than that of yesterday. Although the programme was not a long one, it nevertheless furnished many surprises, and the betting became very lively. The same judges officiated, and no complaints were heard regarding their decisions. The first event was a mile dash, free for all two-year-olds, trotting. There were four good-looking ones to come out and jog up the stretch preparatory to coming for the word. Palatine, a large, well-formed daughter of Palo Alto, 2:03½, and Elaine, 2:20; Silver Bee, a chestnut son of Silver Bow; Soubrette, a well-formed daughter of Eros, and Jessie Temple, a good-looking filly by Jackson Temple. The colors worn by the four drivers deserve special mention, and the desire on the part of the wearers to comply with the wishes of the directors of the association and the public cannot be too highly commended. Wilber F. Smith wore a gray suit and cap, J. Phippen, a dark blue, E. Lafferty, a blue jacket and cardinal cap, while A. McDowell, his mascot suit of green satin, with cap to match. The sulkeys were also painted in different colors—white, red, blue and brown.

In the pools Palatine sold as favorite for $25 against $14 for Silver Bee and $3 for Soubrette and Jessie Temple. The scoring was not tedious, Palatine being half a length behind when the flag dropped, but soon shot ahead and led the others all the way. The struggle for second place between Soubrette and Silver Bee became interesting, the former leading all the way until within one hundred yards of the wire, where she broke, and the son of the mighty Silver Bow passed her and came under the wire four lengths behind the steady-going, level-headed Palatine, and two lengths in advance of his brave little rival, while Jessie Temple was almost lost to sight and memory dear. Her driver, McDowell, laughingly inquired if the others had gone to the stable when he came under the wire. Time, 2:30.

Thus another Palo Alto entered the list. Palatine is a pure line trotter and moves along carrying her head low and showing the same level way of going so characteristic of all the get of the "dead King." As a yearling Palatine was very fast, but a youthful trainer who imagined he was a second Marvin took her out one morning last summer and gave her a mile in 2:45 before she was hardened or on edge, and her prospects for being a yearling 2:30 trotter were spoiled. She has been nursed carefully by Mr. Phippen and to-day demonstrated her ability to get a very low mark whenever called upon. It is needless to add that the youthful trainer was discharged from Palo Alto, and his name and performance is always spoken of whenever Palatine is mentioned. She is out of Elaine, 2:20, second dam Green Mountain Maid. She is inbred to the queen of matrons, and is one that will be heard of again on the track and in the barn.

The second race of the day was for trotters, mile and one-quarter heats. There were four entries made last evening for this—Flora S., by Dexter Prince, Moro, by Pasba, James L., by Dexter Prince and Melvar, by Fordstan. The pools sold as follows: Moro, $25; Flora S., $20; field, $5.

In the first heat Flora S. led all the way until she reached the three-quarter pole—Here "she stepped on a watermelon seed," and the big hay gelding James L. and the handsome chestnut stallion, Melvar, passed her and came under the wire in that order. Moro, the favorite, was bravely holding up the rear rank and sprawling across the track in her efforts to cover the ground, but was distanced. Time, 3:01.

The backers of Flora S. who had seen her do so well the other day rallied to her support, notwithstanding her defeat in the previous heat, and she started out and won very easily in 3:05½, Melvar second and James L. third. In the third heat she tried to keep the lead, but broke at the half-mile mark. James L. took her place and Melvar kept her working hard to heat him for second place. He had not a "work-out" this year, but demonstrated plainly that he is made of the right material, and although defeated for the second place, it was not owing to lack of speed so much as his being out of condition. Melvar will hear watching by the talent this year. The time of the last heat was 3:05½.

In the third race, for the 2:30 class trotters, the entries were Belle Medium, by Happy Medium; Neva, by Steinyaw; Desperado, by Richards' Elector; Erin, by Dexter Prince, and Hera, by Mambrino Wilkes.

In the pools Belle Medium was made favorite, the rest in the field. She took the first position and kept it until about the middle of the homestretch. Erin came along very fast, and in endeavoring to pass this fleet-footed son of Dexter Prince Belle Medium went to pieces and allowed him to get in under the wire first; Hera came near taking the second position away from her, while Neva was huckjumping and trying hard to keep company with Desperado, who was also trying to become an unruly sprinter at the head of the homestretch. Time, 2:25½.

In the second heat Hera set sail for Erin after they had passed Belle Medium while she was "up in the air" at the half-mile pole. Down the back turn and rounding into the homestretch the two horses were head-and-head. The driver of Erin seemed to be afraid of allowing his horse to attain his full speed, while Hinds, behind Hera, was driving in his old-time, courageous manner. Erin came under the wire a winner by a nose. Hera second, Belle Medium was third, but owing to her making five breaks, was set back last. Neva was placed third and Desperado last. Time, 2:27.

The last race of the day was also an exciting one. William Vioget piloted the little daughter of Eros to victory in a manner that elicited praise from every one. The filly's name is Willema; she is out of a mare by Brigadier, and her performance to-day stamps her as a coming Wanda. The other three in the race were Molly Patten, by Whippleton; Con Erio, by Antevolo, and Alland, by Alcona.

In the pools Molly sold favorite at $25 against $12 on Willema, and $7 on the field. Molly took the lead when the flag dropped, but at the first turn broke and Willema came up alongside and trotting gamely soon got the lead and kept it until near the half-mile pole, when she was overtaken by Molly, and as they came near the three-quarter pole there were four lengths of daylight between them. Molly broke again and Willema passed her, and was coming very fast toward the wire; when within one hundred and fifty yards of it she broke and Molly passed her, but Willema "got down to business," and ere fifty yards more were traversed Molly went up in the air and the smooth-going baby, with her 190-pound driver, trotted triumphantly under the wire three lengths in advance of Molly. Time 2:37. Con Erio third, Alland distanced. The cheering that greeted the winner was deafening, and everyone declared they would not miss seeing such a heat for anything.

In the second heat many thought Willema only won by accident, and they bet their simoleons on Molly, at thirty to twenty on the field. When the flag dropped the pace set by Molly was a little too rapid for Willema; she broke, and was left away behind Molly and Con Erio. Vioget did not wait to lubricate the palms of his hands, he just took a fresh grip on the lines, clucked to Willema, and after the leaders she flew. It did not take her long to overtake Con Erio, but Molly, fickle Molly, could not be steady; she broke, and that break cost her the heat, for Willema took advantage of it and soon led the way into the homestretch. Molly gained on her inch by inch until the dragwate was passed. Here the struggle began in earnest, but Molly, poor Molly, went sky-scraping again, and before she got settled on terra firma Willema passed the goal in the excellent time of 2:37. Con Erio third.

SIXTH DAY—SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1893.

The Spring meeting closed to-day, the programme was a good one, the weather was delightful, while the attendance was about twice as large as that of yesterday. There were six events on the programme. The first was a free-for-all dash for three-year-olds, distance, one and one-sixteenth miles. There were three entries—Sidlette, Maud Alameda and Willema, and the judgment of the talent proved correct, for Sidlette won with ease, Maud Alameda second and Willema last. Time for the mile, 2:28, for the mile and sixteenth, 2:38.

The event of the week came next. It was a free for all race for trotters, mile heats. There were four names on the programme, viz., Edenia, Wanda, Flora M. and Richmond Jr., but previous to the race it was ascertained that Flora M. could not start and Wanda was lame, consequently but two came for the word, Edenia and Richmond Jr. The latter was made a strong favorite by the delegates from the orange groves. He sold for $50 against $8 on Edenia, and it was hard to get backers for the mare at that figure. Walter Mahen was up behind Richmond Jr., and Andy McDowell, of course, was to pilot Edenia. After a little scoring away they were sent on their journey. At the turn Richmond, who was half a length in advance, broke, and Edenia was seen in front down the back stretch. Richmond gained inch by inch and to the three-quarter pole no perceptible difference was noted. Rounding into the homestretch it was difficult to see which was gaining, and as both drivers were doing their best, the horses seemed to understand that they were nearly matched, for a few feet Richmond would go ahead, then Edenia would come with a rush, and so they contested every foot until within thirty yards of the wire, when Richmond Jr. made a "hobble" and Edenia came in winner by half a length in the excellent time of 2:17. The excitement among the spectators was intense and cheers greeted modest Andy as he came back to weigh in. The time by quarters is as follows: 0:36, 1:10, 1:43, 2:17.

Hundreds of dollars were now dumped into the pool box at $65 for Edenia and $50 on Richmond Jr., and when the two game trotters came out, the gentlemen from the citrus belt and the talent felt sure that Richmond Jr. would win this heat, but alas! Edenia had her speed with her and a prettier heat was never seen than when the couple started on their journey. Richmond Jr. had the lead all the way by half a length until the middle of the homestretch was reached. Here Andy tapped the grand little mare on the back and she responded with a wonderful burst of speed and was even with Richmond's head in a few yards, and although Mahen drove with his best skill, Edenia beat his horse home by a neck in 2:17. The losers felt that they had seen their horse fight hard to win and were satisfied that Edenia won on her merits. The time for the quarters were 0:35, 1:10, 1:44, 2:17. Edenia was "sore" when she arrived her last Saturday and broke in the first event she started in.

The third race was for trotters, two miles and repeat. There were four entries—Georgie Woodthorpe, Moro, Electrina and Daylight. In the start Electrina took the lead, closely followed by Daylight, Georgie Woodthorpe was in the third place and moving easily with Moro two lengths behind. In this order the first mile was made in 2:24. At the first turn Shaner moved his mare up a little, and at the half was on even terms with the leader, he passed her and came into the homestretch two lengths in advance. Crow with Electrina made a splendid drive for place, but "Shaner was there with Georgie" and would not be cut out. Moro passed Daylight and came in third. The time made was 4:53. The following are the quarters: 0:38, 1:13, 1:44, 2:24, 2:59, 3:37, 4:15.

In the second heat the same tactics was followed by excellent judge of pace Lee Shaner, and again he piloted Georgie Woodthorpe to victory. Electrina's driver weighed 190 pounds and proved that she is made of the right stuff, for she was only beaten out a length in both heats. Daylight showed his lasting qualities by being a splendid third, while Moro was away back near the flag. The time made by quarters was as follows: 0:38 1/4, 1:15 1/4, 1:51, 2:27, 3:05, 3:41, 4:17 and the two miles in 4:54 1/2. It was a pretty race, thoroughly enjoyed by everyone.

Ed Lafferty now came out with Neva, by Steinway, dam Princess, by Administrator, second dam Priceless, by Volunteer, and gave her a trial to heat 2:35. She went to the half in 35 seconds and when half-way down the backstretch broke. Ed drove her back to the stable and came out after a little while and started her again. She went to the quarter in 37 seconds, the half in 1:13, three-quarters in 1:47, and was coming very fast down the home-stretch when she cast a hoot, which threw her out of her gait. She came home in 2:27. Thus another Steinway is in the list.

The next race of the afternoon was a special one and one-eighth mile dash between Jim C., Prineewood, Kodiak, Electionetta and Alviso. Jim C. led all the way and came under the wire in 2:50, Prineewood second, Kodiak third, Electionetta fourth and Alviso last. Time, 2:50. Jim C. is by Tommy T., a son of Nutwood, and is a very fine-looking young horse. His driver, L. Crow, is an old-timer, and handled this colt well.

The last race of the week was a special for pacers, one and one quarter mile dash. There were five entries—Andy, Loupe, T. B., Dave Benton and Pascal. T. B. was the favorite at $35; Andy brought $25, and the field, $35. Andy went out in the lead and kept it all the way. Loupe came in second, and T. B. third. Pascal slipped and fell just under the wire, throwing his driver, Wm. Vioget, very violently to the ground. Ready hands assisted Mr. Vioget into the weighing room and in a few moments after, he got over the shock. Luckily, no bones were broken. The time for this race was 3:04.

Trotting—Free for all three-year-olds. One-and-one-sixteenth mile dash. Thomas Wells gr f Sidette, by Sidney, dam by Silver Threads 1 P. W. Murphy's gr f Maud Alameda, by Gaviota—Mary O. 2 La Sista Ranch's br f Willema, by Eros, dam by Brigadier 3 Time, 2:38.

Santa Barbara News.

[Special Correspondence of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

SANTA BARBARA, June 6.—The good people of Santa Barbara have the horse fever, the track is again alive with horses and trainers. The "tippers" are out early to see the work-outs, and already you hear of fast eights and quarters. The same old trainers are working the same horses that have been trotting quarters in thirty-six seconds ever since they were broken, that is trotting in their preparations, but when called upon to race against horses and for money these same horses are forced to tangled breaks if carried a quarter in 40 seconds. It seems incredible that some of these trainers, already gray-haired in the business, should still insist in killing off their horses before the races. It is the watch they seem anxious to heat. They train without judgment, without pity, and are always running down one another's horses. There are several promising trotters at the track, and if they are judiciously handled they will give full satisfaction.

The runners are doing well. The good string that is trained by the popular young trainer, F. Menchaca, is doing well, and each horse seems to appreciate his moderate ways of training. The stable is composed of that fast and reliable stallion Comet, by Robbery Boy, that has won many a fast, hard-fought race; the large, speedy bay stallion Othello, by Hock Hocking, dam Sunday, by Monday; the black cyclone that won so many races last year, Midnight, by Accident, dam Santa Belle; his half-brother, a two-year-old, Daylight, by Accident, that the boys say will make a crackerjack; a two-year-old by Judge McKinstry, dam Harriet; a three-year-old filly, Flyaway, by Birdcatcher, dam Skipaway; a three-year-old sorrel colt Fairlawn, by Birdcatcher, dam Talluda, and a black five-year-old Black Bart, by Accident.

At Huonome, in Ventura county, a large string of horses is being trained. They say that Santa Fe is faster than the wind, and that the two-year-olds by Sid are promising. Alfred Garcia has a good string of gallopers, while the horses from Camdas, in Ventura county, are doing well under the tuition of Pete Donolech.

On the Fourth of July there will be racing in Ventura city. Santa Barbara will send horses to compete. It is expected that in the one mile and a quarter such good ones as Othello, Hock Hocking Jr. and Santa Fe will meet. This race should be a good one, as they all are speedy and like the distance.

At Loupe and Santa Maria there are many trotters and runners in training, and at the former town there is a quarter horse that can beat the wind.

The introduction of dashes for trotte s is well commented upon by horsemen, and it is probable that at all the meetings of the Southern California District many dashes and two-mile heats will be given to the trotters and pacers. Running races will be all dashes, and all horsemen encourage top weight and longer distances. Few races will be run below five-eighths dashes, while races at three-fourths, seven-eighths, one mile, mile and a sixteenth and so on, will be prominent at all the meetings. The meeting at Santa Barbara promises to be a great success, as horses from all the entire Southern District will be represented. This year Santa Barbara county has been fortunate in procuring many fashionably bred stallions from the Northern District. A. W. Canfield, who spent all of last year in Oakland, purchased while there a very handsome sorrel stallion, with a silver mane and tail. He is a grandson of the famous Nutwood, his dam being by Shenandoah 925. He is a level headed, intelligent looking horse, with a great deal of speed. He has a clean-cut throat and plenty of breathing-room. His shoulders are oblique and muscular, running into a well-rounded body, with broad and powerful loins. He has a good set of legs with an abundance of bone. He looks like a trotter and a sire of trotters. Mr. Canfield brought also with him two standard bred fillies. From Huonome comes the report that Wilkes-Moor, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15 1/2, dam by Del Sur, is traveling fast, and that he will enter the 2:25 list whenever called upon. Henry Delaney is handling him. Leon, 2:22 1/2, by A. W. Richmond, is looking and feeling well, and when he starts against good ones the horse that beats him will have to trot better than 2:20. Harry Stamboul, by Stamboul, 2:07 1/2, dam by A. M. Richmond, is being trained for a record, and at this early date he has shown sufficient speed to enter the 2:30 list. F. Menchaca, the trainer of thoroughbreds, is driving him, and the boys say that Menchaca is becoming an enthusiastic driver and trainer of trotters. Mr. Menchaca will drive Harry Stamboul in all his races this summer. T. R. M.

Well-Merited Praise.

A friend sends a few notes or remarks as follows: "I think, all things considered, the greatest family of racehorses to-day are the descendants of Guy Wilkes, and they were made famous by the greatest reinsman in this country, John A. Goldsmith. He took the slowest son of George Wilkes (Guy Wilkes) and made him the fastest by the records, 2:15 1/2. He was the first to drive a three-year-old in 2:20 or better, and the first to drive a two-year-old within a fraction of those figures, Regal Wilkes (2:20 1/2). He was the first to drive a yearling in 2:30 or better, Freedom (2:29 1/2). Last year he brought out the best four-year-old and biggest winner through the circuit, Muta Wilkes (2:14 1/2). Ten years ago, when he was little more than a boy, John beat Mace, Splan, and all the best drivers on the turf with Director (2:17). To-day, at 35 years of age, he not only stands first in the ranks by personal achievements, but he is, beyond doubt, the richest knight of the sulky in the world."

All readers will fully endorse the above, for no more popular trainer than John Alden Goldsmith sits in a sulky. Mr. Goldsmith wintered his stable at his home in Orange County, believing that he could keep them in better condition for the coming campaign than by undergoing the change of climate incidental to a journey across the continent to the Pacific slope and return. He now has his stable at the Poughkeepsie track, and is training 24 trotters. In addition to the best ones he campaigned, he has several additions this year from San Mateo Farm, including Freedom, the first yearling to beat 2:30, and the big fellow has every prospect now of standing the work necessary to give him a fast record. Mr. Goldsmith has also a number of promising additions to his stable owned in this vicinity. Mr. Backman of Stony Ford has sent him the very promising young mare Sunshine, by Kentucky Prince. I notice Mr. Goldsmith has made a number of entries for the Meadville meeting, July 4 to July 7, and I judge he will open the campaign at that time.—Horse Breeder.

Parturient Paralysis.

Dr. T. W. Carnahan, M. R. C. V. S., veterinary editor of the Farmer and Breeder, says: The above affection is a common one among mares in the country and comes on soon after foaling. In fact, most cases never get up until they either recover or die. It is seen in mares that are very fat and generally those that have an easy birth. The first symptom noticeable is an inability to use the hind parts. The front part of the body is seldom affected and the animal eats and drinks and seems all right, only unable to rise. If nothing is done to assist them they generally become uneasy, make frequent attempts to get up, rise up on the fore feet, throw the head back and after a few days give up and die from either exhaustion or the extension of the paralytic condition to the internal organs. This disease occurs most frequently in cold, wet weather, but may present itself under the best of conditions.

The first thing to be done is the administration of a mild dose of purgative medicine such as a pint and a half of linseed oil followed by stimulants and nerve tonics. Preparations of nux vomica are especially useful. In most cases the application of a counter irritant along the spine at lumbar region is attended with much benefit and can be continued till the parts become tender. The animal must be turned several times daily to prevent bed sores as well as for comfort and must be well supplied with dry bedding and have blankets over the body. When the symptoms do not respond to such treatment try the direct application of the firing iron. When able to rise, give the legs a thorough rubbing to increase the circulation and put on bandages, which should be changed at least twice daily. Feed on warm, cooked food, such as bran and oats, and add to the feed once daily, one teaspoonful of saltpetre. Cold water may be given without danger, provided not too much is allowed at one time.

EVERY horse alllicted with the glanders should be shot forthwith. Every man who owns a glandered horse, knowing him to be glandered and sells him to another, should also be shot forthwith—if not sooner.—Sacramento Bee.

OLDEST IN THE WORLD.

Birdseye Trots Below 2:30 at Twenty Years Old.—A Peculiar History.

The oldest trotter that has ever taken a record of 2:30 or better is the cream colored mare Birdseye, that won a heat in a race at Salt Lake City, Nov. 8, 1892, in 2:29 1/2. Her history is a peculiar one, and is well worth perusing. She was bred and raised by Henry Rawlance, of Cuh Hill, Cash county, Utah. Her sire was a horse called Fred, said to be a son of Bill Wilkes. What the breeding of the latter is is not known further than that he was raised in Illinois. Her dam was Queen, sired by Kentucky Blue, supposed to be a thoroughbred, and also bred by Mr. Rawlance. Her grandam was the fast pacing mare named Puss, of whose breeding nothing was known. Her breeder is a farmer, and knows nothing definite of her breeding further than stated above, and the facts are so meager that it is best to rate her with the innumerable army after which the legion "untraced" is written. There is no doubt that she has good blood in her veins, however, for the road is never too long for her, and her legs are as clean as the day she was foaled. Peculiarly enough in her early days she was used as a runner and was very fast for 400 to 600 yards. Later in life she was placed in a work team used in hauling freight, and later was used on a farm. She was nine years old before she was first trained to trot.

When Secretary Steiner first received information regarding the performance of Birdseye he had grave doubts as to her being twenty years old, and sought additional information. Her present owner is John C. C. Glanfield, of Salt Lake City, who gave positive assurance that she was foaled in 1872, and was, therefore, twenty years old when she took her record, thus being the only one in all trotting history that has entered the list at such an advanced age. That she had much more speed than her record indicates is shown by the fact that she trotted the first quarter of a mile in which she took her record in 0:36 and went to the half in 1:12 1/2, a 2:25 gait.

Birdseye was trotted for a year or more in Cash valley, Utah, where she was raised, and was purchased by Mr. Glanfield in 1883, when she was eleven years old. She had a record of 2:50 at that time, but before she was sold she was driven five heats over a half-mile track, two of them being in about 2:40. She was a very high-strung mare. All the season of 1884 she was worked for speed, but she acted anything but satisfactorily in company, and on account of her frequent bad breaks was unable to win a heat. She had speed, however, lots of it, and showed quarters in 0:35. Late in the fall she trotted a trial mile in 2:31 over a half-mile track that was nineteen feet over length and in poor condition.

She was exercised all winter, and in 1885 was entered in the 2:40 and 2:50 classes at the meeting held over the National half-mile track at Salt Lake City, of which her owner was a director. The first race was trotted June 18 and lasted for four heats, in which Birdseye won third place. The 2:50 class was trotted the following day, and the mare won the fourth, fifth, and sixth heats in 2:37, 2:40 1/2 and 2:40, jogging in the last two heats. The race of the day before seemed to steady her. That summer she won a five-heat race from the pacer, Washakie, over the same track, but did not lower her record. In the fall A. F. Darrow, who had driven her in all her races, gave her considerable work at the distance of two miles, and she trotted one of her trials in 5:05. The offer was made to match her against any trotter in Salt Lake at that time, two-mile heats, three in five, but her speed and quality were too well known, and none cared to meet her.

In the year of 1885 the Salt Lake City association gave large purses, which attracted a strong field of horses. Birdseye was outclassed in her race and did not win a heat. Later a match race was made with the pacer Travis, in which the mare was driven to wagon. In one of the heats she went to the three-quarter post in 1:54, a 2:32 clip, but made a bad break and only finished the mile in 2:38. However, she won the heat and race. She was shipped in the fall to Denver to take part in the meeting over the old Jewell Park course, and the first day off the cars she trotted an easy mile in 2:32 over the mile track. The water did not agree with her apparently, and she was sick before her race came off, and could only play second fiddle to the chestnut gelding, Carl, the fastest heat being in 2:37. No one but Mr. Darrow seemed to be able to drive the mare, as she was erratic and peculiar, and he having gone to Montana, Mr. Glanfield determined to put her to breeding, in the hope that after raising a few colts she might get steadier.

One of her early foals, a bay mare named Caddy, has shown quite a turn of speed, and in the hands of Alex Lewis, who has since brought out the big-hocked pacer, Mikado, 2:13, had trotted trials in 2:32. She was about seven years old at that time and had been worked in a livery stable for two years before Mr. Lewis picked her out and set her to going. Mr. Glanfield naturally believed Birdseye would make a great brood mare, and has bred her constantly until last year, when she missed. Her former driver having returned to Salt Lake, she was again placed in training, and proved much steadier than ever before. She started in but three races last year, all of them at Salt Lake. The first, in which she won second money, Lady Pomp being the winner, was not reported to the Register Association. In the second race, Oct. 6, she was fourth each heat, Coxcomb, the chestnut son of Madrid, winning the race. In the second heat of this race, Birdseye carried the winner to the half in 1:14, trotting the second quarter in 34 1/2 seconds. In her last race, a month later, she defeated the bay gelding Commodore in straight heats in 2:35, 2:32 1/2 and 2:29 1/2. Late last fall this 20-year-old mare trotted eights at a 2:16 gait, and her owner states, as others may well believe, that had she been well-raised and properly trained she would long ago have taken a record in the teens. As it is, she has achieved a record which is unique in its way.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THERE are at least two vacant corners in every stable. Board them in and use one for a harness closet. You can do it with a saw and hammer in a few hours. Then fasten pegs or hooks to the wall. By doing this you preserve your harness, blankets, etc., make them last longer; keep cleaner, and secure them from the corroding ammonia gas, which in time would ruin them. The closets will also serve as a convenient place to keep harnesses, curry combs, lotions, etc. Put these on high shelves.

Are Austrian Horses Superior?

"There is a marked difference between the horse we see passing here and the ones that may be seen any day upon the streets of Vienna," remarked George H. Ketcham, as he sat in the Richelieu and watched the endless procession of fine turnouts on Michigan avenue.

"I refer to difference in appearance and quality," he continued. "Ten good teams are raised there to one in the United States. Good general purpose teams, I mean; not what we would call road horses, but big, handsome, stylish matched pairs that can pull a coupe or victoria in three minutes.

"How do you account for their success in breeding such fine horses?" "It is due to Government control almost entirely. All Austrians are horsemen; they understand what they want and for hundreds of years have been breeding for a type. You may buy a Russian mare in one place and go 200 miles away and buy another. When you hook them up together you have a matched team. They are alike in color, conformation, gait and disposition.

"Where so many good ones are bred are not the prices low?" "There you have hit the very point that puzzled me not a little to account for. It is a universal rule of trade that supply and demand regulate prices, and one would imagine that where the most good horses were raised, the price of a high-class animal would be the lowest. But the reverse is true in Austria. One thousand dollars to $2,000 is not considered a high price for a superior team, and when they are especially desirable as much as $5,000 is sometimes paid."

"Do they develop speed when trained?" "Very rarely. There are a few that have shown trials in 2:24 and 2:25, but nearly all, when development is attempted, at once go to hitching and hopping. The minute speed is asked it breaks up their gait. Nearly all can trot in 3:00, even to the ones in public use. To show the kind of horses used on public carriages and conveyances let me say that while we were there a race was given for the above class, and one team hauled a heavy victoria with top down two miles at a rate of 2:53.

"You have seen many pictures of Russian horses, I presume, with fine rounded bodies and heavy manes and tails. Well, that kind of a Russian horse is all in your eye. They more nearly resemble our highest type of the thoroughbred than any other that I can compare them with—not the finely drawn race horse, but the well-kept thoroughbred of substance and finish. They are light in the flank, clean-necked, and fine in the throat-latch. Under the eyes they are cut away in a peculiar manner, and are not as broad between the eyes, nor have they the full, intelligent face of the American trotter. They have fine legs, clean, hard and cordy, and almost perfect feet. In the latter respect they are far superior to the horses here."

"How about soundness, Mr. Ketcham? That is an essential." "That is the superlative quality of the horses of Austria. I have visited stables where over a hundred were owned, and perhaps not one of the entire number would have a blemish. Go right down Michigan avenue with me here and tell me in how many stables that have as many as six horses in them will I find all without an unsoundness. I'll answer for you. Not one."

"How many men in Chicago that own two or three horses can go out and put them in harness properly? How many know when they are rightly shod? How many can tell, if they are sick, what ails them, or treat them for that ailment? I tell you we Americans are not true horsemen in any sense of the word as compared with the Austrians or the English. They love their horses, study them, take pleasure in driving them, while the coachman sits back where he belongs. I have seen women on the continent driving a four-in-hand with as much skill as I can drive a trotter, and who know all about their horses in all other respects as well as handling the reins. They are obliged to have a better class of horses there than here, because they have more usage. They are driven continually over pavements hard as flint that would knock out our horses in a short time."

"How about their tracks?" "There it is, right there," pointing out of the window. "What, not asphalt?" "Well, no, not exactly, but just as hard. They are made of broken rock with a top coating of sand, and are perfectly level, not being thrown up at all on the turns. It takes a pretty sound and good horse from this side of the water that is able to stand work on the tracks they have over there." "There are two tracks at Paris, one of turf and over two miles in circumference, and the other a paved track of five-eighths of a mile. The latter is without question the best track in Europe, and a number of American drivers are training there. The American-bred horses that are to be seen on European tracks at present are of a very inferior kind and would never pass muster on any reputable track in this country. We have abused buyers over there shamefully by shipping such a poor lot of worthless skates. Of course there are some exceptions. Bosque Bonita, for example, is a splendid mare, and last year trotted in public in 2:17. William Weeks, who drives now for Mr. Terry, is handling her, and she is good enough to be racing right here at home for any of our big stakes. Mr. Terry, by the way, has a number of good ones, including Mollie Wilkes, 2:22. The Austrian Government has five stallions that will compare favorably with the same number owned at any stock farm in this country. I think I can give you their names. They are Brown, 2:18; Gothard, 2:29; Sir Gothard, 2:26; Prince Warwick, 2:15, and Fern Wilkes, by Red Wilkes. I am particularly sanguine in regard to the success of the get of these horses when bred to the splendid individual mares of that country, for it will give them the speed and the courage that they require."

Turning to the consideration of matters that more closely affect the breeders upon this side of the water, Mr. Ketcham said:

"You speak of the standard. There is only one standard now, in my opinion, and that is the one of individuality. Registration should become general. Every animal that may by chance figure in the pedigree of a future trotter should have the stamp of authenticity fixed to its breeding, whether it be long or short, good, bad, or indifferent. It is not sufficient to know only how the best ones are bred, but we should have an authentic record of the breeding of every animal of which it may be desired to preserve a history. If you carry a deed to the court-house for registration you have no fear that the recorder will say: 'My dear sir, this deed is of a tract of land containing but forty feet, and we have a statement that will not permit the registering of any deed that calls for less than fifty feet.' I have a mare on my farm, and nine out of ten men will pick her out of the entire lot as a superior mare. I have traced her breeding, and she is neither eligible to the standard or non-standard departments under the present rules. She produced for me a fine, well-gaited colt, which I sold. Some day he may, yes, probably will, beat 2:30. In the meantime I may have died, my farm be broken up and my papers scattered. The history of the breeding of this trotter must then go down on the records as untraced, simply because I cannot register the mare. The bars should be thrown down, and any and every animal that it is desired to register should be accorded the privilege at a fee sufficient to offset the expense. No one breeds by the standard, buys by the standard or sells by the standard, and it has been demonstrated a thousand times that the standard don't make a horse trot a second faster. So, as I said when you first mentioned the subject, I believe in no standard but that of individuality."

"I do not believe in too radical changes," said Mr. Ketcham, when asked his opinion of the rule adopted by the American Association changing the distance flag from 100 and 150 yards to 75 and 100 yards.

"I would have been satisfied if the distance had been cut down ten and twenty yards as a starter. I do not know that the distance as finally adopted is too short, but we can tell better when it is tried. I may as well say plainly that I favor reducing the distance, and believe in time it will not be more than fifty yards. But the change must come gradually, and as the necessity of the case demands."

Mr. Ketcham will campaign about ten horses this season, although twenty head are now in training at the farm. He does his own driving, and has already won his spurs as one of the crack teamsters at the big meetings. He opens his campaign at the meeting at Bowling Green, Ohio, and from there goes to the kite track at Meadville. Robert McGregor, 2:17 1/2, the premier of the Ketcham farm, is 22 years old, but full of life and vigor. He is a strong, rugged horse and takes his daily road work with the same vim and spirit that characterized him in days of old when he earned the title of the "Monarch of the Homestretch." He is remarkably sure as a sire, and fifty-two foals last year as the returns from fifty-five mares that were bred to him is a record that few sires of his age can equal. The report has gained currency that the old horse would be given an opportunity to show his speed in public again this year, but this is a mistake, as his extended stud season would prevent, were there no other reasons.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Another Idea Advanced.

In connection with the various plans proposed to obviate laying up heats the ingenious suggestion of a correspondent presents itself. He writes us at some length on the subject, and explains his plan in detail. Briefly it is this: Let the winner of the first heat go to the barn, and the remaining starter trot the second heat. Send the winner of this heat to the barn, and let the remaining start again, and so on until as many heats have been trotted as there are moneys. Then let the heat winner start for one "final" or deciding heat, the winner taking first money, the horse finishing second taking second money, and so on. Among the many suggestions advanced in this connection this is probably the most novel, but it has its advantages, as will be seen on careful consideration. In the first place, the race would never exceed five heats, and if there were only three moneys it would be reduced to four heats. A horse would only be compelled to win one heat to entitle him to some portion of the purse and only two to give him first money. There would be a discouragement to laying up heats, for it would be an object to win a heat as soon as possible, thereby gaining more time to rest and recover in the barn while the remainder of the field were trotting the other preliminary heats. This would make each heat a contest, and even if one horse noticeably outclassed his field, he would go to the barn after the first heat, and the remaining starters would battle for the other moneys. It would also give more horses opportunities to acquire race records, which would be a consideration with breeders; and here comes in an objection—the only one that can be lodged against the plan—namely, that a horse would have to take a record to win any part of the purse. But he would have to take a record anyhow to win first money, and probably to get second or third, while the winner of fourth money not infrequently gets a mark, and the record taken by the winner of the fourth heat, after the three fastest horses had gone to the barn, would not outclass him. Under this system the crafty gentlemen who continually finish second, getting a piece of the purse without a record, would find their occupation gone, for they could not win any portion of the money without a mark, though probably not a fast one.—Horseman.

A STUDY OF DEVELOPMENT.

Trotting Mares That Have Entered the Great Broodmare Table.

There is no single line of argument, no solitary fact, however, potent it may be in itself, that can settle the question of merit between developed and undeveloped sires and dams. So many influences converge to render the life of each individual a success or otherwise that it is impossible to pick out a single thread, and say that in it lies the strength of the woof. Judge M. W. Oliver, in the course of articles upon "Breeding the Trotter," which have just concluded in Clark's Horse Review, makes a comparative table of the seventy-two animals that took trotting records of 2:15 or better in 1892.

He shows that twelve of the number were by sires with records as low as 2:30, and only three were out of mares with records of 2:30 or better. The inference from the above is that if breeders wish to secure a 2:15 performer they will keep their sires undeveloped to correspond with the sixty rather than with the minority. Is it not eminently in place in making such a comparison as the above to ask how many more stallions without records have been used in the stud than with records, and how the per cent. of 2:15 performers would compare with the total number of foals produced? But at its best it is but a single link in the chain of evidence, which, if completed, would be as liable to prove one thing as another.

Of one thing we are sure, heredity is not a myth. It is an active, dangerous element that makes kings of some and slaves of others; a champion of this and a cart-horse of that. Dr. Billings will tell you that heredity is environment. The setter dog that comes from generations that have had no work in the field will prove, most probably, a dismal failure before a gun. The way a pup from a good strain will range, recover and perform all the evolutions of a trained hunter the first time he is taken to the field shows that the acquired habits and tendencies of ancestors have been transmitted. Bred from the kennel only and a few years works a wondrous change in a dog descending from the same sources. If, then, acquired characteristics are transmissible, it will be possible to raise any type of horse desired. The Austrians have a funeral horse that is never known to be any color but black. There will come a day in this country when breeders will be able to mate their animals so that every ancestor on both sides for three or four generations will be a 2:30 performer. Then will we have thoroughbred trotters that will be born with speed just as surely as with hoofs and hide.

If development injured it would be natural to suppose that the mares that have taken low records late in life and raised colts both before and after they were trained for speed would have thrown all their best colts at an early age. The reverse appears to be true. A list has been compiled of all mares with records of 2:30 or better that have entered the great brood mare list, and is herewith presented, not with the view to establish the value of development, but simply as composition study, and tending to point the way for future discussions of this already much-mooted question.

There are forty-five mares that were fast trotters in their day that have produced two or more that have taken records or have in time become producers. The following table gives the name and record of each, the year foaled, the year the record was made and the year the first performer was foaled. Seven of the number are of uncertain age. The remaining thirty-seven were, upon an average, 8 years old when they made their best records. Only four of the entire number took records at 5 years or less.

Upon the majority of stock farms it is rarely that a filly is allowed to reach maturity without being bred, and it is probable that many of the mares had early foals. It is a significant fact that many of the number produced their first 2:30 performers after they had been trained and campaigned. The average of the entire number shows that their first performer was foaled at 1 1/2 years of age, thus allowing four and a half years of rest after the severe work of campaigning and record-breaking. In nearly every instance these mares met their greatest success after they had acquired the ability to trot fast. The table which follows will be found to be an interesting study:

THE FARM.

The Future Supply of Pork.

The late scarcity and high price of pork have set the statisticians to work figuring out the limited area of what is called the corn belt as a basis for the limit of profitable hog raising, while the demand for consumption is continually increasing, they claim. From the premises laid down they contend that the future price of pork will not recede much from that which now prevails. If this were true it would certainly be encouraging to those engaged in the production of corn and hogs. We do not mean to say that the outlook is discouraging by any means, for the fact that hog raising has been profitable in the past insures success and fair profits in that industry in the future. The only serious drawback against meeting the future demands for pork products is the fatality of the swine plague. This, it may also be stated, is the prominent factor in causing scarcity and the high prices. By wisdom gained by dear experience by the breeders, they are discovering that causes produce results and that an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure. That the medicinal agency of food elements which are necessary to build and nourish in a healthful manner, the animal economy, is the key to the solution of causes and the cures for hog cholera.

By proper methods of feeding and the wise selection of nutritious food elements by which the entire system is nourished and developed the constitution of the animals strengthened, the cost of production may be cheapened, the quality of the pork improved and the extent of country suited to swine husbandry may be greatly extended and disease prevented by the use of a larger variety of crops which are necessary as foods to promote the highest degree of success for the industry. From the entailed weakened condition of hog ancestry from year to year added to by the common violations of natural law in method of feeding, there is little wonder that the swine die by the millions at a premature age. Corn, as all know, is almost wholly starch or carbon and is capable of adding rapidly to the fatty secretion but not to any great extent to the muscular development, which means vital force and vigor. By this weakening condition the barriers are removed against the inroads of innumerable parasites, which come not in the name of law to kill but as scavengers to remove that which is already effete and dead. A survival of the fittest is the measure of rewards and punishment in nature. Maintain the strength of the animals by proper foods and care and the parasites will cause no harm but be devoured by the higher forms of animal life and the great prairie States of the West are easily capable of supplying the markets with twice the present demands for pork products.—Western Rural.

Teaching Calves to Drink.

To teach calves to drink is a very easy and simple matter, if one knows how. I have been through all the trying experiences narrated by some of your correspondents of straddling the calf and trying to force his head down into a bucket of milk, the calf at same time looking upward for his breakfast and making violent exertions to get there. It was very trying to one's patience. But that was when I was young and did not know any better. I let the calf suck three times—sometimes four. I do this for two reasons. First, it prepares the cow's udder more perfectly for the milk giving function and I think it humane to give her a brief period to enjoy the motherly instinct for her offspring; secondly, it gives the calf a good start in its new state of existence.

I usually let it suck the last time in the morning and do not make any attempt to feed it till the next morning. It then has a good appetite. I go to it with warm milk fresh from the cow. It will take the fingers readily. I then dip the fingers into the fresh milk, and on tasting the milk it commences sucking ravenously; raise the bucket up about on a level with its head and with the hand he is sucking lead the head to the milk; don't touch the head in any manner except with the fingers in the mouth. It will follow the fingers wherever you lead it. As soon as the mouth is fairly in the milk, separate the fingers a little to give the milk free passage and as soon as it takes milk freely, slip the fingers out, and often it will drink right along. If it does not and stops, give it the fingers again, and repeat the operation as often as necessary, and give it only a moderate feed. At the second feeding, as often as otherwise, it will put its head to the milk and drink. If it does not, give it the fingers and lead to the milk, removing them as soon as it gets started. The job is complete. Very rarely do I have to give the fingers after the second feeding. Treat the calf kindly and there is no trouble. It will soon adopt you for its mother. Another thing I do is to tie the calf near, right in front of the mother, for a few days, where she can see the whole operation of feeding, and she soon becomes reconciled to the new condition. I hardly need add to the readers of the Dairyman to treat both cows and calves gently and kindly at all times and under all circumstances.—J. B. Knapp in Hoard's Dairyman.

Crossing the Merinos for a Larger Carcass.

Though the information supplied in the following is an old Australian experience, its appearance at this time may be useful, while we are desirous of increasing the carcass weight of sheep for export, while anxious to retain the Merino characteristics of cross-bred wool. The improved Leicester has proved the best for crossing with smaller-framed Merino ewes, and, though the chest is wide, the heads are smaller than Lincolns. They are more delicate than the Lincoln cross, but if properly treated yield better wool and mutton. We are very glad to note, in connection with this fine strain, that Messrs. Suttor, of Bathurst and Sydney, are introducing Border-Leicesters direct from England. The Lincoln is possibly the best cross for rich, heavy pastures. The dress of lambs is level, and the percentage good. The wool is rather heavier than the Leicester cross. Large-framed Merino ewes should be used, and they should be full-mouthed.

The Hampshire Downs proved a most valuable breed, and the best for the production of lambs, these arriving at a great weight early. A very useful cross can be made with half-bred Lincoln or Leicester ewes and Hampshire Down rams. They are hardy sheep, and will do anywhere.

The use of Romney March rams prove the best of all for sheep on land subject to foot-rot, but against that the drop of lambs is not level, and the loss of ewes in lambing is heavy owing to the size of the heads. The meat is the best of all the crosses (except from the Hampshire Downs and South-downs), being more streaky and containing a larger proportion of lean and fat than the Lincoln or Leicester crosses. South-down rams are found suitable for low downs, but do not yield such a level drop of lambs as other crosses. Wool is not so heavy or valuable, and the sheep do not mature so soon. They produce very prime mutton.

As to the Border Leicester, the weight is approximately the same as the English Leicester cross, rather lighter carcass, if anything, and wool decidedly finer and lighter also. The same value and remarks apply to this breed as to the English Leicester, with the exception that they are better suited to down land and low hills, and are also more hardy.

The Shropshire Downs make a very valuable cross, and one recommendation is that we can go deeper into them than with most others—that is to say three-quarters or seven-eighths breed sheep are good, useful mutton, and are not too fat or heavy.—Rural Australian.

The Jersey Cow a Reformer.

The Jersey cow is a dairy reformer. Her influences in this direction are apparent in the fact that since her introduction, and recognition of her claims for butter-making, the quality of that article has improved beyond comparison, its value has advanced and the demand has in a far greater ratio than the facility to furnish it. In almost every community—indeed it is pretty generally so everywhere—the product of the Jersey dairy sells to eager buyers at 25 to 33 per cent more than that from other breeds of cattle, and it is not uncommon, near large cities and centers of wealth, that the entire yield of butter from Jersey herds is engaged the year through at 40, 50 and even 75 cents per pound.

She has introduced another important measure of reform into the system of management of the dairy herd. It has been the custom of milk and butter dairymen to buy fresh cows and milk them through the season, or until their supply has decreased to an unprofitable point, when they were turned off, and others, freshly calved, substituted, in order to keep up the required quantity of milk. Many cows procured in this way dry off after a very brief milking period, and, as there is a wide difference in the selling value between fresh cows and dry ones, the plan is expensive and unprofitable to the dairymen. The fresh cow of a few months before, bought at the high price dairy animals in full flow of milk always command, must go at any sum obtainable, generally a very low one, for deals in dry cows are always favorable to the buyer.

The constitutional habit of the Jersey cow to milk in profitable quantities the year round, together with her increased value as a dairy animal, abolishes the necessity of this extravagant course, and will justify the dairyman in keeping her from year to year, combining with his dairy instincts that of a breeder. The offspring of his cows are readily sold at paying prices, if he does not care to raise them, the new supply of milk can be utilized in his business, and by judicious direction of his breeding operations, he may secure an even and continuous supply from his herd during the entire year.

Jerseys, as a rule, are not large milkers, though the breeding tendency of recent years is to increase the amount, and there are now many heavy milking cows of the breed, but they are nearly always persistent in their yields, and rarely dry off for more than a few weeks before calving, and by far the greater number never dry at all. This is a most valuable feature to the dairyman; and in connection with it, when the increased richness of milk is considered, the balance of profit in favor of the Jersey as a yearly producer of butter over the short term, thin milkers is very apparent and convincing to the mind of the practical dairyman.

Among the more popular and valued reforms brought about by the Jersey is the mission she fills as the family cow, the one animal kept to furnish milk, cream and butter for the household. This article of household economy is about as indispensable to every well-regulated home as the well of water at the door, and the kind of cow employed, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred, all over the land, in town, village and country, is a Jersey cow, and where she has not yet made her appearance she is being looked for, and it is safe to predict that when once established she will stay. Even men who give special attention to raising beef cattle, and can see nothing of value in the Jersey, except her adaptation as a family cow, seek her eagerly for this purpose.—Southern Cultivator.

Modern Methods.

A farmer who has tried it finds a small steam engine one of the most valuable labor-saving implements in his daily operations. It is always ready and never tires. A little wood in the summer gets steam up in twenty minutes; in winter a little fine coal maintains a steady fire to keep the dairy room and the ripening cream at a proper temperature, no other fire being needed for the purpose. It permits the separating to go on simultaneously with the milking, so that the one is completed almost as soon as the other.

It also churns and pumps while turning the separator, and in addition supplies an unlimited amount of steam and hot water for scalding and cleaning the separator, churn, butter-worker and other dairy utensils, besides other services not necessary to enumerate. The engine does not require a skilled engineer to run it, and needs almost no attention, the automatic governor and injector doing most of the work.

In a Wisconsin dairy the separator is run by a sixteen-hundred-pound hull in a treading mill. The exercise thus obtained by the "father of the herd" seems to be just what he needs. Idleness—in males of all sorts—is the mother of vice. A bull needs to use his muscles in regular exercise in order to keep his temper good, says an exchange.

English live-stock breeders consider oil meal or linseed cake the basis for good prepared stock food, and it occupies the leading place for fattening beasts, growing young stock and more or less all the farm stock. It is profitably fed with cut straw, fodder or hay to make a rich, nutritious food, and so fed it is cheaper than grain. Like cotton cake, it furnishes us a food of great value on account of its high percentage of nitrogen; hence it becomes of special importance as a means of raising the albuminoid ratio of a diet, while the abundant supply of this element naturally furnishes an extremely useful manure.

Preserving Eggs.

The cold storage process takes the lead now where numbers of eggs are involved, and special arrangements can be made for holding the eggs at a uniform low temperature. Comparatively few families, however, can command the facilities for cold storage, and to this class the liming process is the most popular one, as it involves least expense and trouble. There are numerous receipts for liming eggs. Here is one that will be found convenient where small quantities are to be kept over. The following is the proportion for the lime pickle: Stone lime, two pounds; salt, one pint; water, four gallons. Slake the lime, and when cold put it and the salt with the water into some receptacle, stir and let settle twice. The clear liquid is what is wanted. Have just enough pickle when through packing to cover the eggs; then place a cloth over them and spread some of the lime sediment on it. Casks with wooden hoops afford good packages for small quantities of eggs. To insure success it is imperative that the eggs be fresh when packed down. Place the eggs into the preserving medium—liquid or dry—as fast as collected from the nest and be careful not to crack them. The question of fertility or non-fertility, says the agricultural editor of the New York World, is an important one in this connection. There is no doubt but that unfertile eggs will keep much longer than will fertile ones; hence the advice when eggs are produced for market to separate the cocks from the laying hens. A few of the methods of packing eggs dry for keeping have been tried at the New York experiment station and reported upon. With these the eggs were all wiped when fresh with a rag saturated with fat or oil, in which had been mixed some antiseptic, and were packed tightly in salt, bran, etc. Eggs packed during April and May in salt which had been wiped with cotton seed oil, to which had been added boracic acid, kept from four to five months, with a loss of nearly one-third, the quality of those saved not being good. Eggs packed after the same preliminary handling in bran were all spoiled after four months. Eggs packed in salt during March and April, after wiping with vaseline, to which salicylic acid had been added, kept four and five months without loss. The quality after four months was much superior to that of ordinary limed eggs. These packed eggs were all kept in a haru cellar, the ordinary temperature of which varied from sixty to seventy degrees Fahrenheit, and each box was turned once every two days.—Poultry Advocate.

Warts on Cattle.

This disease is caused by the growth of a fungus in the skin and is contagious. As the warts are traversed by blood vessels that feed the abnormal growth, it is necessary in treating them to stop this connection with the supply of blood, and this is done by means of a ligature, astringents or caustics.

A common remedy is to rub them with the leaves of the stoncrop or the inside part of bean pods, the mild astringent slowly wearing away the tissue without the bleeding which is sure to follow removal by the knife. If there is a thin neck the wart may be killed by tying a strong, fine thread around it to strangle it, when it will drop off in time by the death of the connecting neck.

Or some corrosive substance, as a solution of sulphate of copper or chloride of iron, may be applied to the warts to eat them away, and when they are removed to close the connecting blood vessels and thus prevent a new growth, which always occurs unless this precaution is taken.

The primary cause of these excrescences is some unhealthy condition of the system, so that to remove this by proper treatment is a part of any effective remedy. Generally poorly-fed animals are most subject to this disease. Consequently it is not good business to buy such animals for feeding for profit.—Southern Farmer.

A flockmaster says he has seldom failed to arrest incipient diarrhoea with dry wheat bran, and he regards this as the sheet anchor of successful lamb husbandry. It is not desirable to arrest the scour too suddenly; it is nature's method of expelling from the intestines something which is offensive to them. If the discharge continues beyond a day or two it ought to be choked, for it will then begin to interfere seriously with nutrition, and may terminate in the much worse order, dysentery. The sheep afflicted with diarrhoea should be separated from the flock and kept in a lot with a little green feed in it, and be fed on bran until the looseness of the bowels is corrected. If the disease is persistent, and thickened mucus is voided, give a tablespoonful of castor oil (two to a grown sheep), to remove any matter which may be irritating to the bowels; then follow this up in three or four hours with two teaspoonfuls of a strong decoction of white oak bark or blackberry root, with a half teaspoonful of prepared chalk or baking soda, morning and evening. The above remedies are simple and easily prepared, and are usually all that is required. The shepherd can use the following cordial prepared by Mr. Stewart: Prepared chalk, one ounce; catechu, four drachms; ginger, two drachms; opium, one and one-half drachms; to be mixed with half a pint of peppermint water and hotted for use. When needed shake well and give a lamb a tablespoonful twice a day; a grown sheep twice as much.

Those who desire a herd of cows of one breed, yet who feel that they can not afford to pay for pure-bred stock, or do not care for, but desire the cows for their milk or butter it will produce, should remember that good grade cows and heifers, half or three quarters bred, and hardly to be distinguished from the pure-bred either in looks or in results obtained, can now be bought from almost any of the popular breeds nearly as cheaply as the veriest scrub. To get a few such animals and cross them again with a pure-bred male is not difficult. If one can not afford to purchase the pure-bred bull he can hire his services, or a few neighbors could unite in getting one, and he could be used at least two years, and many would say four years, in breeding once at least. In this way in a few years, by raising the heifer calves, a herd of grade Jerseys or Holsteins could be obtained as good as the average pure-bred animal for all purposes excepting the value of the calves as breeding stock. Some of the other breeds have not been popular enough to be easily obtained, but in these two breeds there are always likely-looking grade cows for sale, and many of them good enough to be sold as unregistered thoroughbreds.

on the morrow, and went to rest in my corner of the tent, first putting on my heavy arctic overcoat and pulling the great fur collar up about my ears and wrapping a blanket about my feet. My companions, no doubt, were surprised at this action of mine, but before any comment or questioning. Soon the camp was still and I finally dozed off, all the while thinking how it could have been possible for me to have missed that magnificent elk when so easy a still shot was afforded.

Could I do any better should another like opportunity be afforded? I could not imagine how I could, but in any event I would be ready to shoot should the band again pass by me as they did on this morning.

After a restless night I steal out at four o'clock while it is yet dark, and, securing my horse and a cold hite, set out again for the gulch, bound to solve the mystery.

As I mount my horse and glance back at the camp, I see Old Zeh standing near the door of the tent. He raises his hand in a warning gesture and shakes his head. I understand how it has been possible for men to lose their minds in such ventures when day after day only served to deepen the mystery. But with me the fascination of the strange event only served to make me more and more determined to work it out alone. I will accept nothing as being true until I am literally obliged to do so. I determine to deny the evidence furnished by my own eyes; I must touch, taste and smell, and if all these senses agree in testifying to the truth of any one fact, then and not until then will I accept it. The conditions were much the same as on the previous morning, the hand being found higher up the gulch.

I readily followed their trail to the entrance of the valley, where I again waited and listened, but no sound reached my ear other than the music of the waterfall which, with marvellous sweetness, filled the valley with its tinkling, clinging melody.

The sun arose as on the previous morning, but no elk were in sight and no sound of their presence was borne to my ears. Becoming restless I started out to explore the valley. But wonder of wonders, there was not an elk within it. The ground was hard and rocky and not a track or trace of any nature could I find.

I circled the walls of the valley, but could find no place where they could possibly leave it, only by the way in which they had entered.

Instead of solving the mystery of yesterday's presentation I had found a still more mysterious one to solve. Only a few bunches of oak and pine dotted the edge of the valley's floor where it joined the mountain's base and these were bordered by rubus-tangles, dense and impenetrable at the floor of the valley, while the mountain sides rose above them as a solid wall.

I did not go to the upper valley; there was no need of going for I could see clearly every part of it.

The day, as may well be expected, was spent in pondering over the mystery. But all was as devoid of reasonable solution as a magician's tricks, only here there was no magician, no attempt to produce aught of the miraculous.

Should I rest a day and then try it again? No! I determined to never give up the attempt until I reached a satisfactory solution of the matter.

"Better give it up, my boy," said Old Zeh, as he laid his hand on my shoulder that evening as I sat on the body of a fallen tree near the tent, pondering over the mystery.
