Lilies for Christmas and Easter.

As this is the period at which growers begin to receive their consignments of lily bulbs for Christmas and Easter flowering, a few remarks on these plants will not be out of place. Current report has it that this year's stock of bulbs is arriving in better condition than heretofore, owing to the fact that the growers in Bermuda are awakening to a realizing sense of the difficulties which have attended the forcing of their bulbs in recent seasons and also, I suppose, to the fact that the government has taken a hand in the matter and is assisting in checking the lily disease. That the bulb growers are exercising greater care is good news, but we shall, of course, await the flowering season before fully accepting the roseate reports. However, I am sure we shall be more than satisfied if the present predictions prove true. Some of our most extensive dealers last year guaranteed that not over five per cent of their bulbs should show disease, and while some of them were compelled to make good their guarantees, the practice has become more general this season and is certainly encouraging after the heavy percentage of loss in the past few years.

But two of the many lilies now in cultivation are grown for winter flowering, mainly because these are the ones which do best under glass and are most in demand for decorative work, white lilies being largely required for this purpose. The two alluded to are Lilium longiflorum and L. candidum. The last mentioned is sometimes called the annunciation lily. It is yet grown to some extent by certain florists, mainly for decorative work, as it is well adapted to floral designs. Home grown bulbs are much to be preferred to those which are imported, as there is always danger of their heating in transit. Then, too, vegetation in this climate is much more rapid than in Europe and consequently home grown bulbs have had a longer period of rest than those from abroad and come into bloom much sooner after being brought into heat.

The best way to handle L. candidum is to pot the bulbs as soon as they can be obtained, in 6-inch pots or larger, according to the size of the bulb. Use a rich loam but avoid fresh manures, as they are detrimental. Plunge the pots to the rims in ashes, or some material of this kind, and leave them outdoors in frames, where they will get plenty of air and light. Growth will soon commence and then the plants may be watered freely until freezing weather comes. Then cover the frames with sash or shutters, using a great deal of care to hold the plants in the proper condition for moving into the house as required. They can be brought in at any time after having a short rest, but January 1 will probably be as early as one would care to start them for succession. Grow them on in a cool house, where they can have plenty of light and air, as if overheated or crowded they will become weak, spindly and a prey to insects. They will come into bloom in about ten weeks if kept as nearly as possible in a temperature of 60° by day and 40° at night.

Lilium longiflorum eximium was first introduced to the florists of this country by Wm. K. Harris, the widely known and popular president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, by whose name it is generally known. The bulbs are grown in Bermuda and complete their growth before October. The earliness of the Bermuda lilies is very important as they will perfect their flowers in the greenhouse fully six weeks earlier than those which come from the north.

In the cultivation of L. Harrisii I find the best plan is to pot them up as soon as the bulbs are received, this being generally about August 1 or a little later. It would be a hard matter to give a formula for soil which would be available in all locations, but suffice it to say that almost any good loam will answer the purpose if enriched by liberal quantities of well decomposed cow manure or bone meal. Bulbs between four and five inches in circumference should be put in 6-inch pots. Smaller bulbs will do well in 5-inch pots. None but the extra large bulbs forced for exhibition purposes will require larger than 8-inch pots. I have found it unsatisfactory to plant more than one bulb in a pot, for they very rarely expand all at the same time and customers do not care to buy plants with many unopen buds. It is one of the peculiar characteristics of this lily that, no matter how carefully you grade the bulbs, applying the same treatment to all, there will be a marked difference in their blooming period.

Do not pot the bulbs too firmly or set them more than half an inch below the rim of the pot, which may be plunged outside in ashes or soil with a covering of one or two inches of the same material to prevent evaporation, for the bulbs must be kept moist and cool. It is also necessary to exclude light and air, else the leaf action will commence before the bulbs have formed roots and this is highly undesirable. If an active growth has commenced, the bulbs may be brought into the greenhouse at any time during September and forced for early blooming, but after having been started along they should never be allowed to receive a check and an even temperature, careful watering and a free circulation of air must be provided to obtain the best results. After growth is fairly started, a temperature of from 70° to 80° by day and 10° lower at night has proven best with me.

I have found small bulbs invariably the best to force for Christmas flowering where the stalks are to be cut for decorative uses. It does not take so long to bring these bulbs into flower as it does larger ones, and they are the only stock which can be depended on for this purpose. The temperature given plants for Christmas flowering should be at least 5° higher than is required where a longer time is allowed. Lilium longiflorum requires about the same treatment as I have outlined for L. Harrisii, but it is later in coming into bloom. The flowers are smaller but more enduring than those of L. Harrisii and will be much better if the plants are grown in a temperature about 10° below that given the latter variety. Bermuda grown longiflorums come into bloom quicker than Dutch bulbs because they are ripened earlier, but I find the Dutch stock preferable because of the low, compact character of the plants, their equal floriferousness and the fact that they will last long after Harrisii has made its exit. In fact, longiflorums may be had almost the whole year around and the writer has often had them up to August 1 as good as any lilies were at Easter.

My experience has been that if growers will only take care of lilies as they do other stock, and see to it that the potting is properly done and the plants brought in from outside at the proper time—before they become spindly—staged promptly and given the desired temperature from start to finish, that they are not overcrowded but given enough room to breathe, with a fair proportion of good fresh air, I think the large percentage of diseased lilies will be materially decreased. The writer the past season had only one hundred diseased lilies out of 5000 plants. Some others I know of had just as good success, while I know of many who had not more than 200 healthy lilies out of the same number of plants. I attribute this to overcrowding and an uneven temperature. Extra care must be taken of the lilies if one expects to make a success of them.

The Sweet Pea Conference.

This is written upon the eve of the sweet pea show and conference, when everything tends to show that this will be a most important event. There will undoubtedly be plenty of work for the judges, and for the classification committee. If this latter work is done thoroughly, which I believe will be the case, it will greatly assist all those interested in the culture of this flower, for those who have no opportunity to inspect large collections will be able to select the best and most distinct varieties without going in for a large number of sorts. That the judges will be busy may be inferred from the fact that 3600 vases will be required for the exhibits in the competitive classes. The secretary writes me that there will be an average of from ten to fifteen entries in every class and, in addition to this, a large number have applied for spaces for non-competitive exhibits. The work of classification will be left until Saturday morning, when the whole of the executive committee will work with the assistance of several other specialists. One great advantage in holding this important show at the Crystal Palace is that there will be no limit to space and all provision is being made that the exhibits may be staged in the best possible manner.

The visit to Hurst & Son's trial grounds was a great success, the sweet peas being in splendid condition. Upwards of 200 samples were on view and after going carefully through them from forty to fifty were selected as being worthy of the highest number of marks, but as this list may be revised after seeing other varieties at the show, I will not send it with these notes. In addition to the committee a number of other friends joined in the trip to the trial grounds, Sir W. P. Treolar, the president, being among them. H.

Conventions at Expositions.

WM. MURPHY, CINCINNATI, O.

I should think that an exposition would be a great inducement for the trade to attend the S. A. F. convention, if they were held in the same city; it certainly would be in my case.

GEO. E. FANCOURT, WILKESBARRE, PA.

I am decidedly in favor of holding our conventions in exposition cities. Both being educational institutions, they have an affinity and members at long distances will be more likely to respond to the double inducement. Particularly will this be the case if this year's convention decides to meet in Buffalo in 1901, as the horticultural exhibition at the Pan-American will be a special feature. I predict a large addition to the membership of the S. A. F. by going to Buffalo in 1901.

C. W. WARD, QUEENS, N. Y.

I will briefly state what, in my opinion, are the disadvantages to the S. A. F. in holding its convention in a city when an exposition is in progress. The first would be the difficulty of getting proper hotel accommodations; second, the probable advance in hotel rates which the members would have to pay; third, some distraction from the attendance of the daily meetings. The advantages would be quite large to the individual members. In the first instance, it would enable the attending members to kill two birds with one stone; that is, attending the annual convention as well as seeing the exposition, and probably quite a number of distant florists would attend under these circumstances who would not attend under ordinary conditions, and probably the society would gain some few members upon that account. I do not think that the holding of the convention in the city would prevent or destroy the interest of the local florists, and we would probably get as many additional members from the locality where the convention was held as if no exposition was held there at the same time. The members of the society would also reap another advantage, and here I would suggest that we refer to holding the S. A. F. convention in the city of Buffalo next year, when the Pan-American Exposition will be in progress. This latter advantage would be the opportunity that the different members of the society would have of visiting and observing the horticultural display which will be held in connection with the exposition. This, I think, on the whole, would be a material advantage to every member who is interested in that sort of work. Taking into consideration the advantages and disadvantages, I think that there would not be any serious disadvantage to the society itself and that the advantages to the individual members would be sufficiently large to counterbalance any slight disadvantage that might accrue to the S. A. F. as an organization.

WITH THE GROWERS.

J. A. BUDLONG, CHICAGO, ILL.

Out at Bowmanville they have just finished planting a pretty fair sized rose house; it is 175x300 and a man in one corner cannot make a man in the farther corner hear, even if he shout his loudest. Although there is no partition wall in this house, it is, of course, really seven houses, three of the structures having been put up in 1899 and four added this summer. The sash bars are twelve feet on the south side of the ridges, fourteen on the north. A. Dietsch & Co. furnished the material, principally California cedar, which would have been used throughout had it been obtainable at the moment. Mr. Budlong thinks this lumber cheaper than cypress, although it costs more. Of course Adam Schillo supplied the posts and bench material for the big house, as he is the favorite lumberman for all the big growers north of town.

All the middle benches in this big house are planted with Beauties and the outside benches with Brides and Bridesmaids. Mr. Budlong has increased his planting of each variety grown this year and has doubled on Meteor, finding that it is a most profitable crop. He keeps a careful count of cut and sales and knows just what money every bench brings him. Incidentally it may be mentioned that Bride and Bridesmaid pay him better than Beauty, although he has equal cultural success with the latter.

Mr. Budlong now has 115,000 square feet of glass and is benching quite a lot of Golden Gate and Liberty. He has always been a conservative in the matter of new sorts but has in mind the protection of his business in plants. This year's sales of young stock were just double those of a year ago, which means a tremendous increase, and he aims to be able to supply all the leading forcing roses in any desired quantity, a feature of this year's transactions being that very few of the orders were for small lots.

The Budlong establishment is heated by steam from a battery of four boilers which is shortly to undergo considerable improvement. Two new boilers of large capacity are to take the places of two which are to be withdrawn from the battery, one to go to the second-hand men, the other to be used under high pressure to run the pumps and the smoke consumer. This smoke consumer is a new thing. It is operated on what is known as the steam jet principle, a thin sheet of steam under pressure serving to drive the smoke down into the fire, with the result that the products of combustion are almost invisible as they pass out of the chimney. Of course a smoke consumer entails expense but Mr. Budlong thinks it increases the capacity of the boilers twenty-five per cent, aside from its cleanliness. One of the interesting new things about the place is the steam flue-cleaner invented by A. H. Budlong, upon which he expects to procure a patent. This is a movable apparatus operating at the back of the flues, forcing a quarter-inch stream of steam through the flues with such force that ten seconds serves to clean a row thoroughly and a minute serves to go through all the flues in the boiler.

Mr. Budlong tried a new coal last winter, with the result that he has contracted with Hull & Co. for forty carloads, which he expects to carry him through the winter. It was in zero weather in January when Mr. Budlong got in his first car of this coal, which is known as Thacker Splint, and he was running all four boilers to their limit. As soon as he began using the new supply the fireman dropped one boiler, finding that three would do the work, and this season Mr. Budlong expects the same number of tons of coal he used last season to carry him through, with 30,000 feet of glass added to the range; he thinks the Thacker coal makes just that much hotter fire. He says that its other advantages are that there are no lumps to break, that it burns up clean, with little ashes and no clinkers, and does not slack; in a word, that it is the best and strongest steam coal he has yet found. It is mined in West Virginia and laid down in Chicago costs a little more than block.

BUSINESS SHOWS DECIDED IMPROVEMENT.
—SEASHORE DEMAND INCREASING.—GOOD ROSES NOW OBTAINABLE.—THE SATURDAY SHOW AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—RAIN OF GREAT BENEFIT TO OUTDOOR MATERIAL.—BLOOMING SHRUBS AT THE ARNOLD ARBORETUM.—A VISIT TO MALDEN.

Business is decidedly better this week and it appears that the excessively dull spell that has held sway during the greater part of July has about run itself out. The summer resorts are beginning to be heard from in a timid sort of way. For the demand that may reasonably be expected from this source for a few weeks to come, there is a fair variety of flowers available and qualities are as good as could be expected at this season. Roses are greatly improved, the cut from early planted stock now beginning to assert itself; the buds are of nice color but lacking strength of stem as yet. American Beauty is obtainable in a great variety of grades, bringing good average figures in the market when of good quality. Carnations have shortened up considerably and asters are coming in heavier each day, prices tending rapidly downward. Lily of the valley is in just about sufficient supply for the demand and remains unchanged in price.

The refreshing rain of last week did an immense amount of good to the parched vegetation in this section. This season has been unusually dry and the long continued hot spells have had a very severe effect on lawns, trees, shrubs and garden plants, especially on recent plantations and where gravelly soil abounds. In the parks there is little to be seen in the way of flowers just now but the lack is compensated for in part by the berry-bearing shrubs, some of which are quite bright. A suggestion to those who would like to have continuous flower effect in their shrubberies may be had by visiting the Arnold Arboretum, where, at present, there are several species of clethras, the early flowering Hydrangea paniculata, Spiraea Douglasii, S. Menziesii and others of that type, several hypericums and potentillas, Robinia hispida and Stuartias now blooming and Gordonia Altamaha is nearly in flower, so that with this list it is possible to fill in this period "between hay and grass" with bright color if one so desires. And the "smoke tree" is always lovely at this season.

On Thursday, July 26, the committees of the horticultural society visited, on invitation, the greenhouses and grounds of the Converse estate, at Malden, where D. F. Roy reigns supreme. The grape houses, three in number, in different stages of growth, were found to be in superb condition. In the conservatory was seen a fine collection of stove plants and Rex begonias of prize quality. Especially impressive was a house full of tuberous begonias, splendid specimens in full bloom. The chrysanthemums looked promising and the outdoor departments, including the farm, were acknowledged to be fully up to the past record. A bountiful dinner was enjoyed at Mr. Roy's residence, the table being beautifully decorated with tuberous begonias and adiantums by Mrs. Roy, whose abilities in this direction were enthusiastically recognized.

The exhibition of Saturday, July 28, lacked the usual interest, there being nothing particularly striking shown, although the displays of herbaceous garden flowers, wild flowers, etc., especially phloxes, were quite full and creditable. Phloxes were shown in named varieties by Rea Bros., W. J. Clemens and George Hollis. Blue Hill Nursery was represented by an excellent collection of herbaceous perennials. Wm. J. Martin showed several flower heads of Hæmanthus Katharina, the odd looking umbels of densely packed, salmon flowers, with their long, orange-vermilion stamens, attracting much curious attention.

The news of the sad affair at Ocean City, in which Edwin Lonsdale's two daughters lost their lives, has filled us all with deepest sadness. No man is more beloved in the Boston trade than genial, big-hearted Ned, and he and Mrs. Lonsdale have sincerest sympathy of a host of sorrowing friends.

John Gilson, for many years city salesman for E. M. Wood & Co., died Thursday, August 2, at Natick.

H. H. Hunnewell, of Wellesley, Mass., was ninety years of age last Monday.

SAD AFFAIR AT THE SEASHORE.—EDWIN LONSDALE'S TWO DAUGHTERS DROWNED WHILE BATHING.—TWO COMPANIONS MEET A LIKE FATE.—TRADE UNITES IN EXTENDING SYMPATHY.—WESTCOTT BUYS A FARM.—BUSINESS FAIR.

A most distressing accident which has thrown a gloom over the entire community in and out of the trade, occurred last Tuesday at Ocean City, N. J., when Jennie Lee Lonsdale and Sarah Burton Lonsdale, the two youngest daughters of Edwin Lonsdale, were drowned in the surf while bathing. Mrs. S. Mendelson Meehan, wife of S. M. Meehan, of the firm of Thos. Meehan & Sons, nurserymen of this city, was also one of the party in danger, which consisted altogether of six persons, Mrs. Meehan, the two Misses Lonsdale, the Misses Virginia and Elsie Lowe and their brother, C. W. Lowe, a boy twelve years old. All the company were guests of Mrs. Meehan and had gone down to the beach at a point near their cottage. The entire ocean front of this resort is noted for its flat, hard surface and freedom from currents, and it was considered just as safe there as four or five blocks farther up the beach, where the majority of residents bathe. The waves were running rather strong but not at all dangerously. It is said that all the ladies were practicing floating and before they realized the danger were carried beyond their depth. They then struggled to return. The young boy and Mrs. Meehan, who could swim a little, managed to keep themselves afloat until lifeguards from up the beach, who were attracted by their cries of distress, arrived in time to save them. The guards immediately swam out to the Misses Lonsdale, who were still floating, but whose forms were now inanimate, and managed by the aid of lines and life bouys to get them to shore. Doctors who were present in the crowd gathered by this time at once tried every known method of resuscitation and for a time with promise of success, but after working for over two hours without procuring any signs of life they were reluctantly compelled to announce there was no hope and that the vital spark had fled. The bodies of the Misses Lowe were recovered about two hours afterwards. The bodies were brought home on Wednesday. Miss Annie Lonsdale, the eldest and now only remaining daughter, had decided not to bathe that day, remaining at the cottage, and by so doing probably escaped a like fate.

Mr. and Mrs. Lonsdale have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire trade in the terrible bereavement which has befallen them. The young ladies, aged, Jennie 21 and Sarah 19, were great favorites, and took an active part in social matters and in the church work of their neighborhood.

John Westcott has purchased a farm containing some 200 acres, at Waretown, N. J. It has about a half mile of frontage on Barnegat Bay. The commodious homestead, Mr. Westcott says, will make a fine club house and during the fishing and gunning season he expects next year to see many of the boys who enjoy these sports and who are willing to join the club for the time and partake of its hospitality.

Business is good for the season. Penock Bros. say that this is the most prosperous summer they have experienced for a long time. Cut flowers are scarce, that is, good ones are. Some Beauties are being sent in from houses planted for early cutting and the flowers are quite good.

Jos. Kift & Son have dissolved partnership. The business will be continued at the old stand under the old firm name by Robert Kift. K.

FIGURES FOR JULY SHOW SALES AHEAD OF LAST YEAR.—PRESENT STATE OF THE MARKET.—SUPPLY NO GREATER THAN THE DEMAND FOR STAPLES.—SMILAX GROWERS TAKE HOPE.—CARNATIONS ALREADY IN THE HOUSES AT HINSDALE.—HEFFRON GOES TO M'KELLAR & WINTERSON'S.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF PERSONAL DOINGS.

Midsummer has arrived and the dullest season of the year, but it seems to local wholesalers as though we are just at the beginning of the heated term, for July was very good all along the line. To be sure, July business was but a fraction of that of June but compared with last year it was very satisfactory. There has been very little stock in the market and no considerable over-supply of any item except sweet peas, so that prices have been fairly well maintained. This week has been the most quiet of the season and the stocks of garden flowers are very generally rather more than are required, but there are none too many roses and carnations, although supplies of both are on the increase. Asters and gladioli are the bulk of the stock in all the houses. There are a few dahlias and Rudbeckia Golden Glow is in, selling slowly at 15 cents per bunch of twenty-five.

To some of the growers it will be good news that the smilax market shows signs of stiffening up a bit. One of the big growers has been cleaning out a smilax house, preparatory to planting it with something else, and has put 10,000 strings on the market in the last few weeks, with the result that prices have gone away down. This lot is about at an end but several other growers who have been holding back their cut as much as possible will now begin shipping, so that no great improvement is to be anticipated just yet.

Bassett & Washburn have finished benching their carnations and have 54,000 plants safely housed. They say that this has been one of the best growing seasons ever known out Hinsdale way and that the carnations are now as large plants as they had in September of last year.

City Passenger Agent Vosburg, of the Lake Shore, reports that many inquiries are being received for details in regard to the New York trip, and that the prospects are bright for a big crowd. He has advices from Cleveland which indicate that a good party will board the train there.

Walter Heffron has taken charge of the cut flower department at McKellar & Winterson's. Business with this firm has been so heavy in the past few months that both partners have been under a considerable strain and greatly in need of competent assistance.

Kennicott Bros. Co. will shortly be resplendent in a new coat of white which is being applied to their premises this week. Nearly all the wholesalers have spruced up a bit.

Henry C. Rowe, who is with John C. Schubert & Co., and A. I. Simmons are planning to attend the convention.

J. B. Deamud, with his wife and family, left this week to spend a short vacation at Paw Paw Lake, Mich.

Miss Jessie Ludlow, of Vaughan's Seed Store, has gone to St. Paul, Minn., for a two week's vacation.

M. E. McCourt has purchased the business of John Peterson, corner Walton place and Rush street.

John Broad has opened a store at 616 N. Wells street, and is fitting it with the latest improvements.

John Leach, who has recently been with Mangel, is returning to the employ of C. A. Samuelson.

E. C. Amling and Albert Amling are entertaining a brother and his family from Milwaukee.

Out at Desplaines, Warren Garland is building two up-to-date houses, each 17x250.

Mrs. John P. Tonner is reported to be quite ill.

DOINGS AT THE CLUB MEETING.—ELECTION OF OFFICERS.—THE ROUTE TO THE CONVENTION.—BOWLING TEAM SELECTED.—TRADE AHEAD OF THE SUPPLY.

The annual election of our club took place Wednesday evening, resulting in the choice of the following officers: President, Geo. A. Rackham; vice-president, F. H. Beard; treasurer, B. Schroeter; secretary, Geo. W. Davis. The newly elected officers will be installed the first Wednesday in September. The committee appointed some time ago to perfect a plan of co-operative purchase of coal, reported their failure to accomplish anything of advantage, as most of the large coal dealers were slow to quote prices except to a committee fully empowered to sign contracts and become responsible for each individual consumer. This plan seemed impracticable and the matter was for the present abandoned. The route to New York was finally determined upon. The party will be fully thirty in number and will leave Detroit Sunday, August 19, at 4:25 p. m., via Michigan Central and New York Central railroads, arriving at Albany at 6:25 Monday morning, there taking the Hudson River boat at 8:30 for an all day ride down the Rhine of America, arriving at Desbrosses street, New York, at 6:30 p. m. Most of the party will stop at the Murray Hill Hotel, where accommodations will be secured in advance. The following bowlers were selected to enter the contest at New York, and though they modestly declined it, the club insisted upon defraying the expense of their trip. Philip Breitmeyer, A. Ferguson, John Dunn, Fred. Pantke, Frank Holznagle and F. H. Beard are the ones who will bring back the emblems of victory; they have practiced hard, are enthusiastic and sanguine of success.

Trade is fairly good, indeed much better than the necessary stock to supply it. Roses are very scarce and carnations are little in evidence and poor in quality. Asters are beginning to come in and the quality is good though many growers are complaining of losing plants by what is called the stem rot; the frequent rains we have had seem to have increased the damage from this cause, which is becoming more widespread year after year.

John Carey, of Mt. Clemens, is building a house 28x140, using 16x16 glass, lapped. It will be planted with carnations. J. F. S.

PLANS FOR CONVENTION TRIP.—TRADE LIGHT.—FUNERAL WORK THE SOLE RELIANCE.—DOINGS OF THE RETAILERS.

The rate secured from here to the convention in New York is the uniform fare and a third. It is thought to-day that all those who attend will travel over the Vandalia, which is only $2 more for the round trip than the Big Four. The tickets will be good for four days in New York city, with the privilege of a ten-day stop off at Philadelphia, Baltimore or Washington on the return trip. J. W. Kunz, who had the matter in charge, thinks there will be ten persons going from here.

Trade this week is rather light. Some stock is very scarce, but asters and white carnations are plentiful. Funeral work is about all there is doing. St. Louis is unfortunate in that it is not situated, like several other large cities of its class, where a seashore or other summer resort trade is available. But we get our share in many other ways, so must rest content until the fall festivities begin.

All that remains of George Waldharth's floral establishment on Grand avenue is his refrigerator. He is at present located in the Woman's Exchange, two doors south of his former place, where he will remain until August 15, when he expects to move back into his old place, with a very much improved stand in all respects.

Fred. S. Plant, with wife and father, has left for a vacation trip up the river to cover a period of two weeks or more.

He will go as far north as St. Paul on the boat.

The Eden Floral Co., on Finney avenue has closed up and the store they occupied is for rent. M.

Chicago to New York.

The Chicago Florists' Club Committee on Transportation to the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists to be held August 21, 22, 23 and 24, has arranged with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway for a special train, which will be vestibuled and will contain as many Pullman sleepers as may be necessary, a buffet smoking car, a dining car and a day coach.

The running time of this train will be as follows:

Leave Chicago - 3:00 p. m. Sunday, August 19.
Arrive Niagara Falls 7:30 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Leave Niagara Falls 9:30 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Leave Buffalo - 10:20 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Arrive New York - 9:00 p. m. Monday, August 20.

The railroad fare for the round trip will be $26 70 on the certificate plan. The sleeping-car fare will be $5 for a double berth to New York. But if sleeper accommodations are desired to Buffalo only, sleeper tickets from Chicago to Buffalo may be had for $3 and the remainder of the distance traveled in the day coach.

At Niagara Falls an hour will be devoted to a trip around the Gorge Route Electric Line, which on the American side runs for miles below the falls along the rapids, whirlpool, etc. Special trolley cars will await the arrival of our special train. Those not wishing to take the trip through the gorge can devote their time to seeing the falls in any way they desire.

Returning from New York the members of the party have the option of returning by all rail route, or of taking the boat as far as Albany. And as a daylight ride up the Hudson is an exceedingly enjoyable trip the majority will no doubt take advantage of it.

The boat leaves New York, foot of Desbrosses street, at 8:40 a. m. daily, reaching Albany at 6:10 p. m. A westbound train leaves Albany at 10 p. m., which arrives at Chicago at 9 p. m. next day. To any preferring the lake trip Buffalo to Cleveland the privilege of taking the C. & B. Transit Co.'s boat is afforded.

Berths may be reserved in the special sleepers by addressing L. F. Vosburgh, City Passenger and Ticket Agent, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway, 180 Clark street, Chicago, who will also supply any other information. Railroad tickets and certificates may be had at the above address or at the Lake Shore Station, Van Buren street.

In reserving berths be careful to state whether you wish a berth to New York or to Buffalo only, and mention that you desire to travel in the Florists' Special Train.

By vote of the Chicago Florists' Club the Committee was instructed to invite all florists in the west to travel with the Chicago party and to share the advantages secured by the committee. We shall be pleased to have your company on this trip. The New York convention promises to be a memorable one, and every florist who can possibly do so should go.

Please make your berth reservation as early as possible.

THE new varieties of Clematis coccinea are worthily gaining in favor.

MENTION is made in a recent issue of the Gardeners' Magazine of a sweet pea spike bearing seven flowers. The variety was Mrs. Fitzgerald.

W. WATSON, of the Kew Botanic Garden, London, Eng., says of Dreer's new Nymphæa William Falconer: "I call it a first-rate nymphæa."

WE join in the expressions of sympathy which come from all quarters for Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Lonsdale, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., in the recent loss of their two daughters by drowning.

A Hint to Conventionites.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I suppose the bowling boys, as well as others about starting for, and later when on the way to, the convention have given a few hours' careful thought to bringing up to date or down to date their best thoughts on improving the working methods in building, in growing and in selection of the kinds to grow. It takes deliberation and consultation to bring wisdom out of these everchanging matters, changes which take place so gradually and imperceptibly as to remain unnoticed except by the close observer or by him who keeps a daily or weekly table of results in dollars. Let us not drive all our best enthusiasm down those alley lines with the balls, but keep some for other thoughts and talk them all over freely at the business sessions. W.

Buffalo to New York.

While we are assured of a good delegation from our city to the convention it will, from various causes, be unlikely that we shall all travel by one route.
The N. Y. C. & H. R. R., the Erie, the Delaware & Lackawanna and the Lehigh Valley all have evening trains which reach New York about 7 a. m., and all give the one-third rate on return on the certificate plan. The fare and a third on the New York Central is $12 33. On the other roads it is $10.70. Obtain your tickets a few hours in advance as it takes time for the agent to fill out the certificate.

The Chicago delegation have chartered
a special train and have kindly invited
the Buffalo delegates to join them. There will be a day coach attached to the train which will leave Buffalo at 10 a. m.
Monday, August 20, arriving in New York at 9 p. m. Anyone wishing to join the Chicago party will please notify William Scott, Main and Balcom streets,
not later than Friday, August 17.

Signed, DAN'L B. LONG,
WM. SCOTT, Committee.

OBITUARY.

JOHN MITCHELL.

John Mitchell, who has been for some time engaged in the greenhouse business on Town Hill, New London, Conn., died on the morning of July 23, in the 71st year of his age. He leaves a widow, one son and a daughter.

GEORGE C. BLISS.

George C. Bliss died at New Bedford, Mass., July 22, after a brief illness, apoplexy being the cause of his demise.
Mr. Bliss was born in New Bedford, forty-six years ago and, after completing the course in the public schools, he went to work for his grandfather, the late Wm.
Howard, one of the first to engage in business as a florist in that section.
Eventually Mr. Bliss came into control of Mr. Howard's business and he has been identified with the trade all his life.
At one time he was city forester.

C. H. B. BRECK.

Charles Henry Bass Breck, the vénérable head of the Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation, of Boston, died at Newton, Mass., on August 1. Mr. Breck was an octogenarian and one of the eighth generation of Brecks in America, being directly descended from Edward Breck, who came from England in 1635. Born at Pepperell, Mass., the family some years later removed to Lancaster, where the son received his education in the academy of the town. He showed an aptitude for business early in life, and as an assistant to his father, developed steadily and rapidly. He became a partner in the New England Agricultural Warehouse and Seed Store in 1850, and has been the senior member and head of this firm since the death of his father in 1873, and during this half century of his connection with it, the business has developed into one of the most prominent in the United States. In 1893, after having absorbed several minor concerns, Joseph Breck & Sons bought the stock and business of Parker & Wood and combined the plants of the two houses, incorporating under the statutes of Massachusetts as the Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation, with Charles H. B. Breck
as president; his sons, Charles H. Breck and Joseph F. Breck, respectively treasurer and secretary; Edward O. Hatch, general manager, and Archibald Smith, manager of the seed department. Mr.
Breck's long life was filled with many activities other than those of his business. He was for several years a selectman of Brighton and a member of its school board for six terms; after annexation he was a member of the Boston board of aldermen and a member of some of its most important committees.
Mr. Breck was one of the first and firmest advocates of the Metropolitan Park

System and was a vice-president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He had been a Mason for more than half a century. Recently he had resigned some of his connections, notably a directorship in the Metropolitan National Bank, in favor of his son, C. H. Breck. Since the destruction of their homestead by fire, April 19, 1896, Mr. and Mrs. Breck had resided with their only daughter, Mrs. Willard G. Brackett, at Newton. Mr. Breck's portrait appears on page 2 of this issue.

THE PAST WEEK THE DULLEST ON RECORD.
—NO ROSES AND NOT MANY CARNATIONS.

Last week was about the quietest of the season as far as business was concerned and was exceeded in this respect by nothing in past years, even for July. But little stock of any sort is being received at the wholesale markets, roses being especially noticeable for the small shipments. Of carnations there are a few more coming in and the normal supply of lily of the valley appears daily. Asters are plentiful and very low priced and the demand for them amounts to practically nothing.

WAUSAU, Wis.—Chris. Lund reports trade good, with the call for carnations so good that he is adding a house for them.

 ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secy and Treas.

J. E. NORTHRUP, of Minneapolis, has gone to the Pacific coast with his son and daughter.

CHINESE riot complications have advanced price of tea and may affect horticultural exportations.

ADAM CURRIE, of Currie Bros., Milwaukee, and Mrs. Currie have been at The Dells of Wisconsin.

THE directors of the Wholesale Seed Merchants' League will meet at the Astor House, New York, August 8.

THE Springfield Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., has been incorporated with increased capital for the purpose of extending their business.

OUR obituary column this week contains notice of the death of Charles H. B. Breck, of the firm of Joseph Breck & Sons, of Boston, Mass., and a portrait appears on page 2.

THE pea louse is reported making havoc in the Manitowoc pea district. Newspaper reports say 1,000 pea pickers left the fields because the vermin swarm in their faces.

ERFURT.—The prospects for flower seed crops were very poor up to the middle of July on account of the continual wet and cold weather, inducing a growth of weeds which choked the plants. The weather then changed for the better and in consequence the appearance of the crops improved.

Lynn and Thereabouts.

General repairs seem to be the order of the day and there is a little building in progress. Smith & Dolanski, a new firm, Mr. Dolanski having been with Blaney at Swampscott, are putting up a carnation house 18x100; at Malden, Kaulbach & Son are building two houses 20x100 and at Saugus A Rhodes is adding a house 20x75.

J. M. Ward & Co., at Peabody, are doing a nice business. Mr. Ward has a happy faculty of having the right stock at the right moment; in other words is "Johannie on the spot." He is only one of the florists in this neighborhood upon whom it is a pleasure to call.

There is some talk of the convention but I hardly think the attendance will be very large from this section. Among those who will go are H. T. Conant, of Salem, and William and James Miller, of Lynn.

At Salem Wm. Wake has everything in apple-pie order at his new range of glass built last year and Mrs. J. M. Julyn is as busy as ever.

A recent copious rain has put outdoor stock in very fair condition.

S. M. Gould, of Lynn, is in Nova Scotia for his health. TAP.

MENOMINEE, MICH.—L. Zechetto has received another importation of palms and ferns.

RICHFIELD SPRINGS, N. Y.—The Misses Bolton have opened their flower store in the Arcade.

AUGUST 18, 1900.

The Special Issues of the AMERICAN FLORIST have become famous as much for their technical, artistic and literary excellence as for their business bringing powers. In no one of these essentials will the New York Convention Number, representative as it will be of the spirit which will make this the greatest Convention in the history of the S. A. F., fall one jot below its predecessors.

Copies of this number will be mailed throughout the United States and Canada to every person in the trade whose business is worthy of consideration, also to leading foreign houses.

Advertisements in body pages will be taken at our ordinary rates, namely $1.00 per inch, $30.00 per page of thirty inches, with the usual discount on time contracts.

Advertisements on second, third and fourth Special Cover Pages (printed on heavy toned paper), $30.00 per page, net.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

TREO J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THERE was a shortage of field grown roses in the south this year as a result of the severe freeze in February.

S. H. LINTON states that there will be more trees planted in the north half of Missouri this fall than in any previous season.

The European horsechestnut, Esculus Hippocastanum, and its variety, alba flore pleno, are rapidly gaining in popularity as lawn and street trees.

THE P. J. BERCKMANS, Co., of Augusta, Ga., reports that a law has recently been passed prohibiting the importation of nursery stock into Cape Colony from the United States. This step they understand to have resulted from the agitation of South African nurserymen, whose trade was suffering because of the competition of American firms, one of the principal shippers to South Africa being the Berckmans Company.

H. C. IRISH, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, has undertaken a study of the peach, with the view of compiling a catalogue with full descriptions of all the varieties grown in America. To this end he requests growers to send him three or four ripe specimens of each variety, together with a twig, a few leaves and a concise history and description of the tree and a statement of the success or failure of the variety for the past few years.

Kalamazoo, Mich.

The Kalamazoo Nursery and Floral Company, recently incorporated, is starting in to grow everything in the horticultural line except fruit and shade trees. The capital stock is $10,000, paid in, and the stockholders are Chas. A. Maxson, C. A. Krill, Judge J. M. Davis, E. J. Phelps and W. C. Cook. Each gentleman except Mr. Phelps, who is president of the Kalamazoo National Bank, is provided with an office in the new organization, Mr. Cook being the manager. For the past six months he has been foreman for Irvine & Sons at Bay City, before that being manager for the Dunkley Floral Company here. The company has secured twenty-eight acres of land on North West street, just inside the city limits, and has contracted for four greenhouses 10x100 for miscellaneous stock. It is the intention to shortly erect a range for cut flowers.

The Central Michigan Nursery Company held its semi-annual stockholders' meeting July 13 and its reports showed a successful season. The officers elected were J. N. Stearns, president; E. D. Foster, vice-president; C. A. Maxson, general manager; C. A. Krill, secretary, and W. B. North and Orla Richardson, directors.

LAPEER, MICH.—W. H. Watson is this season adding to his range between 30,000 and 40,000 feet of glass, doubling his facilities and making his establishment one of the largest in eastern Michigan.

IOLA, KANS.—Mrs. George Waite, from Emporia, is going into business here, building two houses 20x60. A. L. Harman is adding two houses 20x85 and one 20x70, with boiler pit and reception room.

DROUGHT ENDANGERS OUTDOOR STOCK.—MEETING OF THE CLUB—PARTY OF TWENTY FOR CONVENTION.—AN OUTING.

The long continued absence of rain has caused much uneasiness among the growers of field stock. Red spider on carnations in the field is not a desirable object. Asters have suffered very much, except on low or heavy soil. The excessive hot spell has made a scarcity in good roses as well as other stock for funeral flowers. Reports about town are that business is very quiet.

At the recent meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, a committee was chosen to secure state-rooms for the members of the club who will go to the convention. About twenty have already signified their intention of attending. President Hockey read a very interesting essay on fern spores.

By invitation of President Hockey the members of the club, their families and friends indulged in a basket picnic on the spacious grounds about his place. It was an ideal place for an outing. Games and music were provided as well as all kinds of refreshments. The fronts of the greenhouses were very prettily decorated with fancy lanterns of very unique design.

LITTLE RHODY.

Vaughan's International Mixture.

This mixture is a combination of as many separate colors, types, blendings and unique kinds as can be found in the world. It has been made up and sold by us for ten years, and has been improved upon every year, until now it cannot be beaten. Every florist knows Vaughan's International Mixture. Price, per oz., $10.00; 1/8 oz., $1.50; trade packet, 50c.

Vaughan's Giant Mixture.

This mixture is made up specially for those whose trade demands large flowers. It contains all the separate colors of Giant Trimardeau, the Giant Bugnot and Cassier and other special strains which cannot be had any other way. Price per oz., $1.00; 1/8-oz., 60c; trade packet, 25c.

GIANT TRIMARDEAU.—Mixed, per oz., $1.00; 1/8 oz., 20c; trade packet, 10c.

CHICAGO PARKS BEDDING—Mixed, per oz., $1.00. 1/4 oz., 30c; trade packet, 10c.

Send for our "BOOK FOR FLORISTS" for list of separate colors of pansies.

MIGNONETTE "BISMARCK."—Our Machel has a very good reputation, and is the best strain in existence. This new sort is an improvement on it, both in color and size of flower, and we want every florist to try it. Pkt. 15c.; 1/4 oz. 50c.

NEW CROP.

CYCLAMEN PERSICUM GIGANTEUM—This seed is grown for us by an expert in Europe. We have taken his entire crop for the past four years, and find it to be the finest strain we have ever seen.

DOINGS AT THE AMERICAN ROSE COMPANY'S PLACE.—LARGE PLANTINGS.—LEISSLER REBUILDING.—TO THE CONVENTION.

The American Rose Co. have finished planting their roses. They have planted four more houses of Ivory, and one house of the Hungarian yellow rose, also a few benches of a new pink rose for the third year's trial. Among other things they have a few hundreds of a dark sport of Mme. A. Chatenay. In all they have planted about 40,000 roses. They will plant only about 15,000 chrysanthemums this year. Their large carnation house is planted with tuberoses, which are doing well and they expect a good crop of flowers from them by the time they need the house for carnations.

George A. Leissler is rebuilding two houses 18x100, which will be used for ferns and palms. They will be heated by hot water, the other house being heated by steam. He has two houses planted with roses, Brides, Bridesmaids and Golden Gates. His Boston and other small ferns are very promising and carnations outdoors are looking fine.

As most of the growers are through planting and getting things shaped up in general, quite a number are going to New York to the convention, I think at least twelve. P. G.

Manchester, Mass.

The first sweet pea show ever held in Manchester was given last Friday evening by the North Shore Horticultural Society. The display was large and elegantly arranged and the prizes were worthily won. At the meeting on that evening eight new members were taken in and a liberal donation was received from some of the admiring shore residents: The subject for discussion at the meeting of this week is "Pine Tree Borers," a paper on that subject being promised by Secretary T. W. Head.

ELLSWORTH, ME.—Miss M. A. Clark has purchased the Dutton greenhouses and will remove them to her own establishment.

CARLINVILLE, ILL.—Browne Bros. are remodeling their range of glass and adding one house for carnations, the demand for this flower having exceeded the supply last season.

JOY & SON INCORPORATE.—MEMBERS OF THE FIRM —BUSINESS DULL AND STOCK SCARCE.—HYDRANGEAS IN FUNERAL WORK.

Joy & Son have taken out articles of incorporation under the name of the Joy & Son Company. The incorporators are Thomas S. Joy, Thomas C. Joy, Paul Sloan, Calvin B. Harrison and David P. Wrenne. Business will be conducted at the same store, 606 Church street. The parties interested are all enterprising men and will push the business for all it is worth. They have a large garden and ample greenhouse space and have been very successful in rose culture and in growing all flowers usual to a general floral business.

Business is at a standstill but growers are utilizing the time in making preparations for the next season's trade. Chrysanthemums are looking well and roses give a rare promise of excellence for the future. But few roses are being cut and when there is an extra demand, as there is occasionally for funerals, enough to supply the call are ordered in.

The hardy hydrangea is in perfection just now. A pall made by one of the florists last week was almost covered with handsome bunches of hydrangeas caught with white ribbon. The effect was very pleasing and novel.

M. C. DORRIS.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Fred. Busch is rebuilding a number of his greenhouses and mushroom sheds.

NO. ADAMS, MASS.—Growers of sweet peas in this vicinity are suffering because of the greenfly which is devouring their vines.

SABULA, IA.—W. B. Lovell, who has recently returned from a tour of old Mexico, has presented Ellisionian Institute, Maquoketa, with a set of seventy-two photographs of Mexican scenery, snapshots taken by himself on his journey.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Francis Smith, of Richmond, Ind., has purchased the property of Mrs. E. H. Poole, occupied and operated by Baur & Smith. The investment was made to permit that firm to improve and add to the range of glass as the business demands.

BEDDING AT PATTERSON PARK.—CUT FLOWER TRADE CONFINED TO FUNERAL WORK.—RAIN BREAKS THE DROUGHT.—VARIOUS NOTES.

In spite of the adverse season, some of the most beautiful bedding seen in years is on view in the squares and parks. To mention all the worthy ones would be impossible, but a large carpet bed near the mansion at Patterson Park and the croton beds at the same place are certainly gems. This being the first season in which the whole bedding of the city is under control of the park board and its officials, some confusion was to have been expected, owing to the great extent and variety of the work, but, if there was any hitch it is not apparent in the results, and Mr. Seybold and his assistants deserve high praise for their work.

The growers have been favored at last by a rainfall which was enough to put an end to the drought which has held all vegetation at a standstill. Every one is hard at it, getting his houses in shape, planting and repairing. Mr. Anderson, of the old firm of Madsen & Anderson, now in business for himself, has erected two rose houses, 12x100 and 20x100 respectively.

Trade in cut flowers continues slow but the supply is slow, too, so matters are not so unevenly balanced as is usual at this season. Funeral work continues to be the standby and those dealers whose specialty runs in this direction are the busiest people in town. White flowers are in steady demand and are a sure sale at remunerative prices.

Notice is published of the dissolution of the partnership of Fischer & Ekas, Henry Fischer continuing the business.

E. A. Seidewitz, of Annapolis, is erecting a range of houses at Arlington, near this city. MACK.

MITCHELL, S. D.—E. C. Newbury has his roses, carnations and chrysanthemums all planted and doing better than ever before. He looks for a big trade. Mitchell, and in fact the whole of South Dakota, is growing rapidly.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Hitchings & Co. are building for E. J. Berwind a fine range of houses as follows: Palm house, 25x80; rose house, plant house, carnation house, stove house and vinery, each 20x34; peach house, 25x25; propagating and fern houses, and service building 25x25.

STEAM COAL FOR FLORISTS.

HULL & COMPANY, 74 and 75 Traders' Building, Chicago, Ill.,

GENTLEMEN:—In reference to my opinion of your THACKER SPLINT COAL, will say I am v.ry well pleased with it and think it is superior to any Coal of the splint grades we have yet used. Burns free, making an intense heat with very few ashes; no clinkers, and has the lasting quality of all high-grade Coal. I certainly consider it a very economical Coal to burn.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thrasher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. This machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. A CHILD can run it.

Just the thing to fight crab grass. It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

A Ramble in the Convention City.

The chief city of the western world in population, wealth and commerce opens for the second time her hospitable doors to our great national horticultural organization. Apart from the generous welcome extended by her citizens, the lavish entertainment provided by the local representatives of our profession and the favoring wave of prosperity which has come to the S. A. F., the vast metropolis presents irresistible allurements that are certain to draw to the convention of 1900 an unprecedented number of visitors. To see New York is a laudable ambition entertained by every American and, to those to whom her busy streets are familiar from frequent visits, she still presents exclusive charms, for, be the visitor a staid Philadelphian, cultured Bostonian, hustling Chicagoan or a "dyed in the wool" exponent of the peculiar claims for precedence of any other city on the continent, yet he is forced to acknowledge that there is, and always will be, but one New York.

New York was settled by the Dutch in the year 1614. The territory now included in New York state was known as New Netherlands, and the little town located with such wise foresight on the seaward end of Manhattan Island was given the name of New Amsterdam. But the English had their eye on this promising colony and the claim of the Dutch to its ownership was soon in dispute, with the result that Charles II made a grant of it to his brother, the Duke of York, and in 1654 sent a strong force against it. The Dutch, being unprepared for resistance, submitted as gracefully as possible under the circumstances—a course strongly contrasting with that being pursued by their countrymen in South Africa at the present time under a like stress—and the name was then changed to New York. Whether the Duke of York above referred to was the particular individual who is said to have marched his men "up to the top of the hill and marched them down again" is not clear, but the time came, a century later, when the English, who had so triumphantly climbed this western hill, were forced, in their turn, to march down again. To celebrate the Declaration of Independence the statue of George III was toppled over by the people, the metal of which it was wrought was melted into bullets for use on his majesty's subjects, and, although the name of New York was still allowed to stand, many of the local appellations of streets and buildings were changed to accord better with the democratic tastes of the victors.

In its earlier days the town, now grown to a metropolis of 3,500,000 inhabitants, and exceeded in population by London alone among all the cities of the world, occupied only the southern extremity of Manhattan Island, at the union of the waters of the North or Hudson and East rivers, and it is in this "down town" district that the visitor will find most of the interesting historic spots of New York. The streets here are narrow, crooked and inconvenient, but full of excitement and interest, and, notwithstanding the wondrous growth of the city northward to the end of the island ten miles away and many miles beyond, yet this district remains still the center of commercial activity. A multitude of "sky-scrapers" look down from lofty heights upon ancient landmarks and the diminutive remnants of once-ambitious architecture, each of them harboring, during business hours, enough people to populate a goodly sized town.

At the extreme southern point, looking seaward, is the oldest park in the city, twenty-one acres in extent, known as the Battery. In former times the homes of the aristocratic inhabitants fringed this territory as they now do Fifth avenue and Central Park. In Battery Park is old Castle Garden, once the landing place in America for millions of foreigners, now an aquarium and well worth a visit. Looking out toward the ocean is seen Bedloe's Island, on which, rearing its great torch 300 feet above the water, is the gigantic statue of Liberty Enlightening the World; on the left is Castle William with the Borough of Brooklyn and Long Island shore beyond, and, on the right Staten Island and the New Jersey coast. A little distance north of the Battery is Bowling Green. Originally a treaty ground with the Indians, it was in 1732 laid out as a public square. It is now surrounded by exchanges, consulates and steamship offices and marks the beginning of Broadway, the great business artery of the American continent.

From this point Broadway takes its course northward past many spots of historic interest, lined on either side with lofty commercial buildings, its pavement a maze of moving vehicles of every description, its sidewalks trodden daily by men whose names are familiar in politics, commerce, finance and literature the world over. The cross streets westward lead to the water front of the North River, where are the piers of the ocean sound steamers and Hudson river boats and the numerous ferries that convey the traveller to and from the many railroad terminals at Jersey City, Hoboken and Weehawken, and the piers of the great ocean steamship lines across on the Jersey side. On the east of Broadway the streets lead to the Brooklyn bridge and various boat landings on the East river, to ferries to Brooklyn, the Navy Yard and Long Island City, and Blackwell's Island, where are located the city penal and pauper institutions. Others eastward lead to labyrinths of crooked ways where one may easily get lost—not geographically only, but in the strange surroundings of whole sections populated exclusively by Hebrews, Germans, Italians or Chinese, where the English language is seldom heard and little is seen that is familiar to American eyes.

Broadway does not proceed far before its history is interwoven with that of the beginnings of the flower business. In his address to the S. A. F. at the time of its former visit to New York, John N. May referred to the time when, about the year 1840, Isaac Buchanan, one of the pioneer florists, carried his stock every day in a large basket and sold it at the corner of Broadway and Wall street and considered a business of $2 or $3 a good day's work. Directly opposite this corner on Broadway stands famous Trinity church, and a little farther along, at the corner of Vesey street, is old St. Paul's, surrounded by its quaint old burial ground, and within which is shown the pew once occupied by George Washington, with his initials inscribed thereon. This corner, too, figures in the early history of our business, according to N. P. Willis, who, in his romantic "Open Air Musings in the City," published in 1849, tells of watching from his window on Broadway, opposite St. Paul's, the flower merchants about 12 o'clock daily, setting their pots of roses and geraniums along the iron fence.

The flower business has changed in many respects since then and the florist who should open up shop at noon nowadays wouldn't last long. The lapse of time has not been able to obliterate the floral prominence of Vesey street, for at stated intervals Cleary's auction room is the Mecca of the plant buyers, and there are numerous curbstone stands in that vicinity where marvelous floral novelties are displayed for the especial benefit of the prudent customer who prefers to buy bargains at the street stands rather than be "robbed" by the wicked store florists! Here he has been buying for years, and, as there is "a new fool born every minute," will probably continue to buy for all time, the "Royal Japanese Parlor Flower, thirty-six hues and colors on one stem and blooms in twenty-one days," the "Singuillum Singuillius," the "Yellow Jacq," the blue dahlia and the "English Tuba Rugosa," which may be a currant bush that will bear flowers like a gloxinia or any other old thing to suit tastes that are fastidious. If you find time during convention week go down there and see the fun.

In this neighborhood are Cortlandt, Dey, Barclay and Chambers streets, frequented by seedsmen and florists, their mention recalling to readers of the advertising columns of the AMERICAN FLORIST such names as Thorburn, Rölker, Vaughan, Berger, Suzuki & Iida and Weeber & Don. At the junction of Park Row, on the east side of Broadway, is the postoffice, and just beyond is the City Hall Park, eight acres in extent, where a few months ago the formal beginning of the excavation for the great rapid transit subway was made with appropriate ceremonies. Here are the City Hall and County Court House and adjoining is Printing House Square, where are located the offices of the big daily newspapers.

From the Battery to the convention hall is a distance of four miles. Three-quarters of this length up Broadway brings us to Twenty-third street, at the intersection of Fifth avenue, where the splendid Dewey Arch stands, and Madison Square, an open space of six acres just across which can be seen the towers of Madison Square Garden, where the New York Florists' Club held a number of successful exhibitions a few years ago. Here begins the famous "tenderloin" district, and here, too, may be said to commence the florist trade section of the city, for, while a few fine establishments are below Twenty-third street, the great majority of the retailers and all the wholesalers are located above. What becomes of all the enormous product of the vast ranges of greenhouses that cluster all about the neighboring districts, in every New Jersey town, on Long Island, away up the Hudson river and along the shores of the Sound, is something beyond the comprehension even of those handling the flowers as they come to the city daily. In no other city in the world are so many greenhouse flowers marketed, the quantity passing through the hands of the wholesale dealers during the busy season being almost incredible, and the system governing the traffic has, with the rivalry of a score of dealers and the alertness and scrutiny of hundreds of enterprising growers, been ground down to a very fine edge.

August, the convention month, is not a favorable time to see any business going on at these wholesale marts, but the visitors will make no mistake in calling, and those who do so will find that nobody understands better the science of making a brother florist feel at home than does the typical New York wholesaler. On Twenty-third street, near Sixth avenue, is the salesroom of the New York Cut Flower Company, and at the same location are Moore, Hentz & Nash. The rest of the wholesale establishments are on West Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, mainly in the blocks between Sixth avenue and Broadway. On Twenty-eighth street are Sheridan, Thos. Young, Jr., Horan, Kaynor, John Young, Ghormley, Bradshaw, J. K. Allen, Young & Nugent, Bunyard and Traendly & Schenck, also Geller's supply house. On Twenty-ninth street are Millang, Hart, Gunther and others. Among those on Thirtieth street are Lang and Ford Bros. and Dunne & Co.'s supply house. Also worthy of a call is the Exchange at East Thirty-fourth street, near the ferry to Long Island City. Frank Millang does business here, and overhead is Herrmann's supply establishment. A visitor in New York, even having but one day to spend in the city, would do well to begin the day at Thirty-fourth street market. Here he will see troops of men, women, boys and girls, all nationalities, bartering, bantering, joking, scolding and pushing with Bohemian freedom, some on urgent business, and others there only because it has become a habit with them. To see it, however, one must get there by 6 a. m., for by 8 a. m. it is all over for the day.

The American Florist Company's

Directory enumerates 230 florists in New York city proper. Adding 375 in Brooklyn, Long Island City and other annexed territory gives a total of over 600. In the city stores all classes are found, from the palatial Broadway or Fifth avenue establishment down through successive gradations to the little "hole-in-the-wall" stand. As with the wholesalers, so with the retailers, little is going on in August and little effort is made at decorative effect or display of nice stock, it being deemed sufficient to keep the place clean and cool and something green in the windows. Of street peddlers there are many hundreds, mostly Greeks. Just at present fruit peddling or sumptuous idleness is the pursuit of the majority of them. The Greek as a flower hawker is essentially a New York institution. His first appearance as a participant in the florist trade was looked upon with uneasy jealousy by the existing retailers, but long association has bred indifference and now he has access to the same markets and the same material as the most aristocratic retailer and actually consumes, in the aggregate, such a large proportion of the gross cut of flowers that no review of New York market conditions is complete without taking him into consideration. He evidently has the support of the masses, otherwise he could not dispose of the vast quantity of stock he buys. With the retailer he has come to be regarded as one of the evils that cannot be cured—hence must be endured. To the wholesaler he is at certain seasons a godsend—at other times an intolerable nuisance. To the grower he is an inspiration, and many a thousand feet of glass in the vicinity of New York is directly due to his existence and the confidence that he is capable of assimilating a surplus of any dimensions. Whether the business at large would have been better off without him, whether different methods on the part of the retailer might not have solved the surplus problem and made the street fakir superfluous—these are pertinent questions, but their consideration does not belong to this article. Grower or retailer, take a look at the Greek when you are in town; consider his ways and think whether you would like to transplant some of him to your own hailwick.

Greater New York has nearly 7,000 acres of parks. Of the many scattered reservations of varying area which are included in this total, Pelham Bay Park contains 1,756 acres, Van Cortlandt Park 1,132 acres and Bronx Park 662 acres. These are all located in the recently annexed Borough of the Bronx. In Bronx Park, in a space reserved for the New York Zoological Society, is a splendid collection of animals on exhibition and in another section are the grounds and just completed greenhouses of the New York Botanical Garden which, no doubt, will be visited by most of the S. A. F. tourists. In Van Cortlandt Park are fine links which are patronized by the golf enthusiasts of the city. Pelham Park has a water frontage of seven miles on Long Island Sound and Pelham Bay.

Best known of New York's pleasure grounds is Central Park. It contains 862 acres—thirty years ago a waste of swamps, ledges and rubbish heaps, now a paradise of beautiful drives, lakes and forests, a world-famous triumph of the landscape gardener's art, extending from Fifty-ninth street to One Hundred and Tenth street, a distance of two and one half miles, with a width of over half a mile. There are nine miles of roads, six miles of bridle paths and thirty miles of walks, and within its borders have been planted over half a million trees and shrubs. Here are located the American Museum of Natural History, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and a fine menagerie. That most interesting relic of antiquity, Cleopatra's Needle, may also be seen in Central Park. This obelisk, which was presented to the city in 1877 by the khedive of Egypt, is of granite, seventy feet high and weighs 200 tons. It is covered with hieroglyphics which, however, are being rapidly obliterated under the disintegrating influence of the rigorous climate. Its age is given as 3,500 years, it having been made during the time when the Israelites were enslaved in Egypt.

Prospect Park in the Borough of Brooklyn has an area of 526 acres and is accounted one of the finest examples of landscape gardening in this country. It is an ideal resort for the people of a great city, combining utility and beauty in the highest degree. In its plantations are many specimens of native and foreign trees.

Riverside Park extends a distance of three miles, from West Seventy-second street to West One Hundred and Thirtieth street, along a high bluff overlooking the beautiful Hudson river. Here is the tomb of General Grant, and from the broad driveway which runs the entire length of the park a grand view of the palisades on the Jersey shore is afforded. Scattered throughout the city are a great number of smaller parks and squares, and more are contemplated, especially in the overcrowded sections of the city, where a bit of greensward and trees is of inestimable comfort to the children of the poor.

New York in summer provides endless entertainment for those who from necessity or on pleasure bent, tarry within her gates. Trolley cars, ferry boats, elevated railroads and excursion steamers all are available by day or night to reach pleasure resorts of every description. Coney Island, Brighton Beach, Manhattan Beach, Far Rockaway, Long Beach, Glen Island, Long Branch and many other less noted seaside resorts are within easy and comfortable access, and in the heart of the city are theatres, roof gardens and concert halls in abundance. It is to be hoped, however, that these and numberless other attractions of the great city will be omitted from the itinerary of the S. A. F. visitors until after the sessions of the convention are concluded and then the enjoyment of them will be all the greater because of the consciousness of duty well done.

No visitor to New York should go away without taking a good look at Fifth avenue. Stage coaches run continuously from its beginning at Washington Square as far as Eighty-ninth street, and the top of one of those omnibuses is an excellent observation place. In the summer we shall miss the thousands of pleasure equipages the throngs of fashionably attired people, the beauty and life which Fifth avenue presents at other seasons, the equal of which can be seen nowhere else in America, but there are the fine clubhouses, magnificent churches and hotels and the palatial homes of multi-millionaires, merchant princes and noted families, fringing the avenue all along and presenting a wonderful panorama.

We would like to take our readers out into the surrounding country and introduce them to some of the big establishments from whence come the enormous supplies of flowers and plants and other material for the New York wholesale markets, and to their owners, many of whom are, indeed, already long and favorably known to the thousands who consult the reading and advertising pages of the AMERICAN FLORIST, to the great rose growing districts of Madison, Summit and Chatham, whose shipments daily amount to hundreds of boxes of roses; to Hoboken, New Durham and Rutherford, where may be seen acres of glass devoted to palms, roses, chrysanthemums, carnations and lilies; to Jersey City, Newark and the Oranges, where floriculture has planted its roots deeply and thrives on every side; to fertile Flatbush, long the home of a coterie of florists as hospitable as they are skillful and prosperous; to Bayside and Flushing, long famed in rose and carnation lore, and neighboring Queens with its acres of geraniums, cannas and carnations; to College Point and White-stone, the heath growers' paradise; to Long Island City, Woodside, Elmhurst, Babylon and scores of other Long Island points where greenhouses meet us at every turn; to New Rochelle, known everywhere, and away up the Hudson river to the famed violet growing districts of Poughkeepsie, Highland and Rhinebeck. Interesting, indeed, would it all be and the time devoted to such a tour of inspection would prove not only interesting but vastly profitable. Those who can possibly prolong their stay a few days beyond the convention time will find in this great community of prosperous florists a cordial welcome and the useful information acquired will be not the least of the many benefits gained through attending the memorable convention of 1900.

At the corner of Twenty-seventh street and Broadway, in Elks Hall, is the headquarters of the New York Florists' Club. The beneficent influences of a horticultural society which are enjoyed in her sister cities are lacking in New York, although the love and appreciation of horticulture is no less here than elsewhere, as is evidenced in her fine public parks and cemeteries and the countless beautiful private estates that adorn the suburban districts and in the lavish patronage bestowed upon her florists of every grade. The peculiar topography of greater New York is not favorable to concentration of sympathy or effort and is a formidable barrier to frequent meetings and effectual co-operation. Realizing the refractory conditions that have ever confronted the New York Florists' Club we are in a better position to fully appreciate the fidelity of purpose and self-sacrificing effort that have been freely drawn upon to bring about the harmony and system shown in every little detail of the preparations for this great event in New York's floricultural history. From localities remote, reaching the club room only at much inconvenience, regardless of storm or heat, these men, the names of many of whom are well known from the Atlantic to the Pacific and far beyond have come together and labored with but one end in view. Old misunderstandings have been forgotten, disturbers who have sought to excite jealousies between private and commercial men have been brushed aside and so they have stood together, shoulder to shoulder—many men in a manly effort for the honor of New York and the pleasure of their brother florists and gardeners from all over the country. If the convention is not the grandest horticultural event of the century in America, if the exhibition is not in every way unprecedentedly great, if every detail of the occasion does not go like clockwork and if every visitor to New York does not have the most enjoyable time in his or her life it will not be the fault of our friends and hosts, the officers and committees of the New York Florists' Club.

The English Sweet Pea Conference.

The promoters of the sweet pea show and conference at London, July 20 and 21, commemorating the two-hundredth anniversary of the introduction of the sweet pea into England, have every reason to be satisfied with the fruits of their labors. It was unfortunate that the weather should have been so excessively hot for the week previous to and during the show. Nevertheless, sweet peas of better quality were never seen or in anything like such quantities. There were nearly 700 entries, and these did not include the large trade exhibits, which were, perhaps, the most important feature of the show, the large number of varieties included in these affording useful material for the classification committee. The exhibits of decorations and designs made of sweet peas suffered considerably from the excessive heat, although everything possible was done to keep up moisture, and many of the light designs were hopelessly withered before the judging was done. This occurred more particularly in the light, airy arrangement known as shower bouquets, thus showing conclusively that sweet peas are not adapted for this kind of work. In the more solid arrangements the flowers kept better, and some of the funeral arrangements were very good. A broken column, an erect cross with a good base, a book, a harp, and others, being well done. In some of the baskets and vases the flowers stood up well. The light arrangements for dinner tables were very pretty when first done, but the second day they were entirely withered up.

The committee on classification met on Saturday morning, but was unable to complete its report. The gentlemen found much difficulty from the fact that some varieties were too much withered to serve their purpose. It was arranged to divide them up into groups, but it was rather difficult to come to a definite arrangement of colors. After some discussion it was decided to divide them as follows: White, blush, pink, rose, mauve, blue, purple, lavender, carmine, maroon, crimson, yellow or buff, picotee edged, white ground fancies, yellow or buff ground fancies, red or rose flakes, purple or maroon flakes, crimson flakes, red or rose bicolors and salmon or orange selfs.

It will be seen from the following list of awards made for distinct types and colors how difficult it is to decide which are actually the best, for in several instances the prizes went to three different varieties where there were several exhibitors staging the same variety as the one taking first prize. In the classes referred to the awards were as follows:

In the class for one bunch of any dark variety, maroon, deep bronze or purple, first place was given to Black Knight, second to Stanley, third to Boreatton and fourth to Shahzada.

In the class for pink varieties first place was given to Lovely, second to Katherine Tracey, third to Lovely.

In the class for any pink variety first place was given to Lord Kenyon, second to Mrs. Dugdale, third to Royal Rose and fourth to Oriental. It will be seen that the varieties shown in this class differ considerably in shades of color.

In class sixteen first went to Salopian, second to Mars and third to Firefly, but in most collections Mars was certainly the finest of the above named.

In the class for erect standard varieties first went to Mrs. Dugdale, second and third to Triumph, but ordinarily Triumph is the finest type of this class.

In the class for hooded standards first went to the Countess of Lathom, second to F. A. Hinton and third to Lady Grisel Hamilton, but the last named the committee selected as the best type of a hooded variety.

In the class for deep blue or violet first place was awarded to Duke of Westminster, second to Black Knight and third to Navy Blue.

In the class for yellow or primrose varieties first was given to Queen Victoria and second and third to Mrs. Eckford.

In the class for pale blue, mauve or lavender sorts first was given to Lady Grisel Hamilton and second and third also went to that variety.

In the class for white varieties all three prizes went to Sadie Burpee.

In the class for blush or flesh-color first went to Venus and second to Mrs. Fitzgerald.

In the class for dark striped or flaked sorts first went to America and second to Princess of Wales.

In the class for light striped or flaked varieties first was given to Pink Friar and second to Princess of Wales.

By the awards in the last two classes it will be seen how difficult it will be to divide the various types. I think the objects of the committee would have been better realized if the flesh to deep red shades, and mauve to purple colors had been classed together. Or it would have been better still if the judges had selected the best examples of the various types from the large collections, and in addition to the prize for the general collection given a separate prize for the best example of each specified type. It will be sufficient to say of the collections that in all classes there were a number of competitors, and in many very fine blooms were seen, but no varieties distinct from those noted in the trade exhibits. Although there were several entries for Burpee's Bush and Cupid varieties there was only one exhibitor who came forward, and the plants staged were hardly commendable.

In the class for American varieties the first prize collection included some good examples of Sadie Burpee, Anrora, Navy Blue, Boreatton and others. Of the trade exhibits five were considered worthy of gold medals. They were those of Messrs Hurst & Sons, who staged a very large collection of cut blooms, including all the standard varieties; H. J. Jones, whose group consisted of a large number of varieties grown in pots, and about 100 distinct varieties of cut blooms; Eckford & Sons, the chief feature of whose large collection of cut blooms were such new varieties as Jeannie Gordon, Miss Wilcott, Honorable Mrs. E. Kenyon and Coccinea; Dobbie & Co., whose collection consisted of a large number of varieties, all of superb quality, Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, Oriental and Triumph being very conspicuous; and Cannell & Sons, who had a large collection of cut blooms and some plants in pots, of the latter the Cupids being very good, and of the cut blooms Lottie Hutchins, Aurora, Blushing Beauty, Celestial and Othello were very fine. H.

Conventions at Expositions.

I am inclined to the opinion that the holding of the S. A. F. convention in an exposition city will result to the benefit of the society, secure a larger attendance, incite more interest and be productive of more general good than if the meeting were held in another locality. The degree of success with which any educational convention meets is, in a measure, indicated by the size of its membership list. If the S. A. F. meets in Buffalo in 1901, a large attendance is at once assured, and there are large numbers of florists all over the country who have never attended an S. A. F. meeting and who, if once in attendance, and seeing the great advantages such an organization offers to its members, may become permanent members. These would attend at Buffalo simply because they could, while at the exposition, at the same time take in the convention. Again, if the meeting is held elsewhere, it will fall below its usual attendance because many of the members will go to the exposition and can afford only one trip that summer. The meetings should not suffer, as a programme should be gotten up, so attractive, so entertaining as to command a full attendance. Would it not be policy for Chicago to withdraw her claim for 1901 under promise that she can have the convention in 1902?

STATE OF THE MARKET.—SUPPLY BOTH LIGHT AND OF INFERIOR QUALITY.—DEMAND FOR BEAUTIES AND FUNERAL FLOWERS.—LAST DETAILS OF CONVENTION PREPARATIONS.

Flower receipts in this market are very light, which is very fortunate for everybody interested, as there is no demand worthy of the name, and the quality of whatever rose stock comes in is of the lowest grade. Growers are beginning to cut from the new plants, and so the most of the material is short-stemmed and the warm weather has the buds fully blown out before they reach the city. The ash barrel fills up rapidly these days, in consequence, as the Greeks have practically abandoned the local flower market for the present and are doing business at Coney Island in any line that seems remunerative. American Beauties would sell well if available in good quality, but it is not possible to find many such. Even the Brooklyn hustlers, who manage to stir up some trade, as a rule, when nobody else can find it, are playing to very slow music just now. At the retail stores, and some wholesalers', house-cleaning is in order, so that everything shall look its best when the S. A. F. visitors are in town. Asters are abundant. Lily of the valley, owing to recent extra funeral work, is selling better this week.

On next Monday, August 13, will be held the last regular meeting of the Florists' Club previous to the convention. Final details of all preparations will be adjusted and it is very important that every member of the club be present on this occasion.

Manager Cleary reports a heavy demand for space in the trade exposition during the past week, over 10,000 feet of floor space having already been assigned.

Visitors in town: D. D. L. Farson and Walter Mott, Philadelphia.

ASSURANCES OF A LARGE CONVENTION REPRESENTATION.—MEMBERS WILL TRAVEL BY VARIOUS ROUTES.—ANOTHER GOOD SATURDAY EXHIBITION.—TRADE VERY QUIET.—THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY APPOINTS VARIOUS COMMITTEES.—BEGONIAS AND FERNS IN DEMAND.

It is now assured that the attendance at New York from this section will be very large. Inquiry among those who are intending to go discloses a considerable variety of preferences as to route, and there being no less than nine different boat and all-rail routes it is probable that the parties will be pretty well distributed, according to convenience or fancy. The fare from Boston, all-rail, is $5 going and $1.67 returning; on all boat lines, excepting the "cut-rate" line from Providence, it is $4 going and $1.33 returning for all passengers who get a certificate from the ticket agent at the time they purchase going ticket. Those intending to go via boat are advised to engage their staterooms immediately. Out of town members who wish may engage accommodations through their local ticket agent by purchasing a through ticket, or Secretary W. J. Stewart will be glad to attend to any commission of this kind at any Boston railroad office on request of any member of the society, the latter specifying the route preferred.

There was another showy display of garden flowers at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, August 4. The hall was comfortably filled with exhibits. It was prize day for annuals and the premiums went to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Mrs. E. M. Gill and E. C. Lewis. Fine collections of herbaceous plants, lilies, sweet peas, etc., were made by Blue Hill Nursery, Rea Bros., W. J. Clemens and E. A. Weeks. H. A. Clinkaberry was given a certificate of merit for Cypripedium Clinkaberry-anum (Curtisii × Philippinensis). Hot house grapes from Miss E. J. Clark, John Ash gardener, were superb.

At the meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, on August 4, a committee on revision of constitution and by-laws was appointed consisting of Hon. F. H. Appleton, W. J. Stewart, Prof. C. S. Sargent, Augustus P. Loring and Dr. H. P. Wolcott. A nominating committee for officers for the ensuing year was also appointed as follows: W. C. Bayliss, C. G. Jenks, C. W. Parker, Arthur Hunnewell, C. Minot Weld and W. H. Eustis. W. C. Strong, C. B. Travis and J. H. Woodford were appointed to prepare resolutions on the death of C. H. B. Breck.

Thos. Roland has proved himself a veritable wizard at growing Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. He has one house in which are many thousands of young plants, but they are nearly all ordered in advance and the demand for this beautiful winter plant seems insatiable. There is no empty or unproductive space at this thrifty Nahant establishment. Every house is made to do full time. First a crop of candytuft, then tomatoes and afterwards violets is the programme for one house this year.

A cruise through the retail florists' stores of the city discloses little doing except an occasional funeral piece, which all are glad to make for any price they can get. At the wholesalers it is likewise very dull, but the receipts are quite light and the burden of carrying the stock is consequently lessened. Country buyers are seen occasionally and they are exceedingly welcome.

L. H. Foster reports himself about 50,000 behind on orders for Boston fern and is building three large houses so as catch up. It pays to grow "the true variety."

Albert Bloom, one of the Welch Bros. hustling clerks, is blooming in the rural surroundings of New Hampshire and Maine for two weeks.

Welch Bros. are having their establishment repainted and renovated throughout.

W. W. Edgar is building a 150-foot addition to his big palm house.

HEAT TAKES THE LIFE OUT OF TRADE.—MONTHLY MEETING OF THE CLUB.—EXCELLENT PAPER ON COOL ROOMS FOR FLORISTS.—RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY.—JOHN WALKER GETS A SILVER WATER SERVICE.—SPEECHES AND SONGS.—A NEW DEPARTURE.—BUYER FOR THE TRADE.

It is red hot with us again and shirt waist men are again seen upon the streets. Things are quiet. Stock is of about the same quality as last week, but a little more plentiful; prices are about the same.

The August meeting of the Florists' Club was held last Tuesday evening and, considering the weather, was quite well attended. The essay committee were bright in this selection of a subject, "Modern Cooling Rooms for Florists' Use." It seemed that after Mr. Geiger, the essayist, had his various plans posted up, the temperature of the room fell several degrees and when he began to read his paper it became quite cool. The essay, which, with the sketches, will appear in next week's issue, is a most valuable one and should be interesting to all large growers and dealers in cut flowers. The most modern ideas are described in such a way that even he who runs may read and understand. Mr. Geiger's paper, like everything else he does, was well prepared and finished and gives a very clear idea of the various systems in vogue. In the ensuing discussion it was said that to prevent the wilting of flowers sometimes noticed in the bottom of the ice box or cool room, it is well to have shallow pans of water there, which keep more moisture in the atmosphere. Mr. Geiger mentioned an interesting fact, saying that when the box at the Floral Exchange nurseries at Edgely fell below the freezing point, as it did in the extreme cold weather once or twice last winter, they placed a lot of ice in the bunker, when the temperature at once rose several degrees. He said he was unable to account for this phenomenon. At the conclusion of the discussion Mr. Geiger was voted the thanks of the club for his very excellent paper.

Resolved, That the secretary be instructed to send a letter to Mr. Lonsdale expressing the feeling of heartfelt sympathy which animates every member of the club in the sad bereavement which he has sustained in the loss of his two daughters. The circumstances attending this sad affair were so particularly distressing, the young ladies were so often with us in our hours of relaxation at the club, that all feel a deep sense of personal loss, as if the stroke had fallen on their own family circle, and feel that a double measure of their tender regard and sympathy is due and is hereby extended to Mr. Lonsdale and his sorrowing family.

On Saturday last John Walker, who has recently purchased the Hippard place at Youngstown, Ohio, and who will take possession of the same about the first of September, was given a testimonial by his fellow employes of Robert Craig & Son, where he has held the position of foreman for so many years. All the employes, some forty-five in number, were gathered in the large potting shed, where, in a speech well suited to the occasion, Mr. Cavanaugh presented him with a magnificent silver water pitcher and cups, the whole mounted on a silver stand. Mr. Walker received the present with heartfelt thanks. Mr. Pearce, who goes with Mr. Walker, was also the recipient of a fine pipe and a very large box of tobacco. There was an abundance of refreshments, which were enjoyed by all present. Addresses were made by Mr. Craig, who also sang several songs, and W. B. Smith, an ex-mayor of the city, who was very humorous. Other speeches and songs enlivened the next two hours, and the party dispersed after many wishes to Mr. Walker and his good wife for success in their new home.

W. E. McKissick, Jr., for the past seven years with S. S. Pennock, has announced himself as "buyer for the trade." This does not necessarily imply that he has started a purchasing agency for cut flowers, as previously reported in one of the trade papers, but that during the coming season he will be the representative in this market of several large out-of-town firms. He will purchase stock, inspect packing, etc., and look out for their entire interests in this city and its suburbs. At the present time he is located on a small scale at 40 N. Seventh street, but rumor says that he will open an office in the heart of the commission district ere many moons, where he will be thoroughly equipped with telegraph and long distance telephone connections and all paraphernalia necessary in giving his patrons the best service in every particular.

The club, or as many of them as can, will go to New York on a special train leaving Broad Street Station at 4:02 Monday afternoon, August 20. The cars will be especially decorated. All delegates coming by way of this city are requested to arrive as early in the day as possible and partake of the hospitality of the Philadelphia club and join them on their special train for the balance of the way. K.

Chicago.

HIGH TEMPERATURES PLAY HAVOC WITH THE FLORIST BUSINESS.—HEAT TOO INTENSE FOR LABOR IN THE GREENHOUSES.—STOCK DETERIORATES AS TRADE FALLS OFF.—ORCHIDS COMING FROM ENGLAND.—ACTIVITY AT WIETOR'S.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Nine persons died of the heat in Chicago on Monday, six on Tuesday, and the torridity has not yet appreciably abated. Need anything further be said of trade conditions? The temperature of the greenhouses has stood at fever heat for almost a week and it has been a physical impossibility for the growers to work as usual. Stock which was beginning to show material improvement has retrograded fearfully and, moreover, the heat is forcing the buds out at a rate uncalled for by the existing demand. There were many good roses last week but Kaiserin is about the only thing which is not overcome by the heat. The condition is particularly unfortunate because of the crop of short Beauties which is just now making its appearance. Nearly all the Beauty growers are now getting a cut from young plants and the market is overloaded with short material, which will neither sell nor keep. Medium length Beauties are not so plentiful and move more freely but there is no demand for the few three-foot buds which are coming in. The cut of carnations from plants in the field is increasing and some very fair stock is coming in, as most of the local growers have had good luck with their fields this season. There are still the usual quantities of asters, gladioli and other garden flowers, and they move slowly. However, it is generally predicted that a few days of cool weather will live things up again.

H. S. Skjoldager, gardener for E. G. Uihlein, and his family are expected home in a few days from Denmark, where they attended the golden wedding of Mr. Skjoldager's parents, who are enjoying perfect health. Enroute home Mr. Skjoldager visited Sander & Co., at St. Albans, England, for the purpose of securing some rare orchids to add to Mr. Uihlein's collection.

Learning that a number of florists have misinterpreted a circular issued by a certain railroad, the Chicago Florists' Club's transportation committee wishes it stated that by whatever railroad a florist travels to New York he must leave New York on or before August 28 in order to secure the reduced rate returning.

At Wietor Brothers' they are hustling upon their big range of new houses and planting them with carnations as fast as ready. Their plants in the field have made strong growth and they are anxious to get them housed. The buildings are nearly completed.

Otto Wittbold will be one of the Chicago party at the New York convention and George Wittbold, the venerable head of the firm, whom everybody likes, is talking of surprising his friends by participating in the excursion.

George Reinberg is sending in a big cut of roses, from 8,000 to 10,000 a day, and during reasonable weather the qualities are excellent. He has three houses of old Beauties which were given a rest and transplanted and which are now giving splendid results.

Those who intend to join the Chicago party for the S. A. F. convention should, at the earliest possible moment consult Mr. Vosburgh, of the L. S. & M. S. Railway, 180 Clark street, with regard to transportation and berths.

W. E. Lynch is busy repainting the interior of his establishment and means to have his place in the best possible shape for a large trade next season.

George Reinberg was one of the reception committee appointed to attend William Jennings Bryan during his visit to Chicago on Tuesday.

Walter Retzer has been at Powers Lake, Wis., for rest and recuperation, his health not having been up to grade in the last few weeks.

E. Wienhoeber will be one of the convention party and, as usual, one meeting Wienhoeber will find Emil Buettner not far distant.

At A. L. Randall's there are still some very fair roses in spite of the heat, coming in from Bowmanville growers.

There is a fine display of gladioli at Vaughan's Seed Store, from the firm's grounds at Western Springs, Ill.

George F. Crabb and Henry Smith, of Grand Rapids, will accompany the Chicago party to the convention.

W. J. Smyth and Mrs. Smyth are enroute down the St. Lawrence to New York for the convention.

Weiland & Risch, not to be outdone by anyone, are busy redecorating their store.

Among last week's visitors was Mrs. W. T. Hempstead, of Bloomington, Ill.

Visitors: H. V. Hunkel, of Milwaukee, Wis.; W. A. Reiman, of Vincennes, Ind.; F. J. King, Ottawa, Ill.

Coal Report of Chicago Florists' Club.

The committee on purchase of coal has been offered by firms which they believe to be reliable, the following prices:

Strictly Lower-vein Brazil Block, for the season ending April 1, 1901, $2.45.

Hocking Valley Coal, for the season ending April 1, 1901: Domestic Lump, $2.80; Steam Lump, $2.70; Mine Run, $2.65; Steam Nut, $2.30.

Central Illinois Coal, mined on Illinois Central R. R., a very good grade: Domestic Lump, immediate delivery, $1.90, season contract, $2.00; Steam Lump, immediate delivery, $1.80, season contract, $1.90; Egg Coal, immediate delivery, $2.00, season contract, $2.10; Nut Coal, immediate delivery, $1.70, season contract, $1.80.

On the above Illinois coals $3 switching charges per car can be paid by the shipper at the above prices.

Streator Lump, present price at Chicago, $2.00, at mines, $1.80; cannot make season contract.

Wilmington & Spring Valley, present price at mines: Standard Lump, $2.15; Chunk, $2.25.

No season contract can be made on Wilmington coal but special prices can be made for season contracts on Spring Valley coal.

Pocahontas Coal, (smokeless), Mine Run, for present delivery, $3.35. Season contract cannot be made, but it is not probable that prices will go higher.

New River (smokeless), Mine Run, present delivery, $3.25. Cannot contract for season.

Thacker Splint, West Virginia, Steam Lump, for season ending April 1, 1901, $3.05.

Henriette Smokeless, run of mine, season ending April 1, 1901, $3.50.

The above prices are based on delivery on the cars at Chicago. Some florists may be so located that a reduction can be obtained by saving on freight charges. In other cases the conditions may be such as to increase the prices somewhat. In case the railroads lower the freight rates from mines, these prices will be lowered to correspond, but no increase will be made on the prices given on season contract. Any florist or market gardener who is interested will be placed in communication with the persons making these offers on application to W. N. Rudd, Room 1002, 185 Dearborn street, Chicago.

I feel warranted in recommending that florists using less than 1,000 tons should buy the Lower-vein Brazil Block unless freight rates and shipping charges should strongly favor some other coal. Much of the so-called Lower-vein Brazil Block in the market is mixed with Upper-vein, which is a cheaper coal. We are assured of being furnished with genuine article at the above price. Of course, those employing expert firemen day and night may be able to use the cheaper coals profitably.

Having no authority to contract or buy, the committee has been unable to deal direct with the mines, and undoubtedly has not obtained as low prices as it could have done could it have assumed the purchase of even 15,000 of the 25,000 tons listed with it. It is hoped that a beginning may be made this year and that all will buy through the committee who can, as the purchase of a large quantity this year will make it easier next year to obtain concessions.

Respectfully submitted,
W. N. RUDD, Chairman.

OSWEGO, N. Y.—D. A. Northrop has sold his establishment to Patrick Campbell, of New York.

LENOX, MASS.—Mrs. John O'Brien died on Sunday, July 29, after a short illness. Besides her husband she leaves several children.

BARNARD CROSSING, N. Y.—Ruestow & Wendt have purchased the business of the late Frank S. Payne and will conduct it along the same general lines.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—John H. Meyers, of New Brighton, Pa., was a recent visitor at the Lake View Rose Garden, investing largely in palms, ferns and other plants.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—C. A. Smith has sold his real estate, greenhouses and stock to L. S. Donaldson, proprietor of one of the largest department stores in the northwest. Mr. Donaldson's floral department has been a large buyer in the local and metropolitan markets and it is understood that he will improve and enlarge the Smith place and grow much of his supply hereafter.

SECURE your railroad berths and hotels for that New York trip.

ALL convention visitors are requested to add the letters "S. A. F." after their names on the hotel registers.

THE annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association will be held at Montreal next week, August 16 and 17. For programme see our issue of July 14, page 1506.

Twenty-five Cents on the Dollar.

The failure of W. A. McFadden, of Rosebank, Cincinnati, has been considered at two meetings of the creditors and apparently a settlement may be made on the basis of 25 cents on the dollar.

Events like this suggest more and more that the tradesman paying regularly 100 cents on the dollar should at some place and on some day get recompense.

Railroad Fares for Canadians.

Eastern delegates to the Canadian Horticultural Association's convention at Montreal, August 16 and 17, can get single fare round trip rates if there are more than ten from any station on the Intercolonial Railway. Get a certificate at the station of departure, stating that you have paid single first-class fare to Montreal, get the same signed by the secretary at the convention, present it at the Montreal ticket office before August 20, and you will be given a free ticket home. A. H. EWING, Sec'y.

Mr. Scott of Buffalo.

Our attention has just been called to the fact that in a recent number of a journal which we never read Mr. Scott has taken occasion to make some very caustic comments on the recently published expressions of opinion, in this paper, on the question of holding conventions in exposition cities.

We have always regarded the various gentlemen whose names were signed to the communications in question as earnest, honest and representative members of the trade. Mr. Scott sees fit to characterize these gentlemen as "bilious" or "warped" or "actuated by the narrow view that some other town (except Buffalo) would save them car fare."

As unprejudiced and disinterested friends we desire to state to Mr. Scott that no cause, however meritorious, was ever advanced by calling names or imputing unworthy motives to its opponents.

Society of American Florists.

"DEAR SIR:—Enclosed please find $3 for S. A. F.
dues. I wish to profit by experience gained at Detroit and save valuable time, as I think there will be a grand rush at New York on the first day of the convention."

The writer of the above is one of a large number of wise men who are paying initiation or dues and securing their badges in advance. Why do you not do likewise? Do it now and insure your own comfort on the opening day. If you paid dues for 1899, send $3; if you did not pay dues for 1899, send $5 and certificate with badge will be sent by return mail. W. J. STEWART, Sec'y, 67 Bromfield street, Boston, Mass.

Convention Tips.

Pack up for New York.

We want you with us.

Five dollars for membership in the
S. A. F. for 1900. A good investment.

The man who goes to the conventions escapes dry rot.

The exhibition will be a "corker," more valuable to an enterprising florist than two World's Fairs.

Are you still undecided? You'll make a big mistake if you stay away; you'll make no mistake if you go.

Be sure to bring your 1900 badge and membership certificate with you, and don't forget to get your railroad certificate from the ticket agent when you buy your ticket for New York.

The Convention Hall.

The building known as the Grand Central Palace or Industrial Building, where the New York convention will be held, is located on Lexington avenue and occupies the entire block between Forty-third and Forty-fourth streets. Lexington avenue cars pass the door. This line runs on Broadway all the way up to Twenty-third street, where it switches off to Lexington avenue. The Third avenue cars which start from the postoffice are convenient to reach the convention hall, as they pass within one block of it. Passengers on Sixth avenue surface cars can transfer east either at Twenty-eighth or Thirty-fourth streets and then transfer north on the Lexington avenue car. One or the other of the above mentioned routes will be available for most of the visitors arriving via down town terries. Passengers arriving at Twenty-third street ferries should take Twenty-third street cross-town car and transfer to Lexington avenue car going north, and those arriving at Forty-second street ferry are carried within one block of the convention hall by the Forty-second street cross-town cars.
Passengers on New York Central or New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. are delivered at the Grand Central station, a block and a half from the convention hall.

Buffalo to New York.

While we are assured of a good delegation from our city to the convention it will, from various causes, be unlikely
that we shall all travel by one route.
The N. Y. C. & H. R. R., the Erie, the Delaware & Lackawanna and the Lehigh Valley all have evening trains which reach New York about 7 a. m., and all
give the one-third rate on return on the certificate plan. The fare and a third on the New York Central is $12 33. On the other roads it is $10.70. Obtain your tickets a few hours in advance as it takes time for the agent to fill out the certificate.

The Chicago delegation have chartered
a special train and have kindly invited
the Buffalo delegates to join them. There will be a day coach attached to the train
which will leave Buffalo at 10 a. m.
Monday, August 20, arriving in New York at 9 p. m. Anyone wishing to join the Chicago party will please notify William Scott, Main and Balcom streets,
not later than Friday, August 17.

Signed, DAN'L B. LONG,
Wm. Scott, Committee.

Chicago to New York.

The Chicago Florists' Club Committee on Transportation to the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists to be held August 21, 22, 23 and 24, has arranged with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway for a special train, which will be vestibuled and will contain as many Pullman sleepers as may be necessary, a buffet smoking car, a dining car and a day coach.

The running time of this train will be as follows:

Leave Chicago - 3:00 p. m. Sunday, August 19.
Arrive Niagara Falls 7:30 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Leave Niagara Falls 9:30 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Leave Buffalo - 10:20 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Arrive New York - 9:00 p. m. Monday, August 20.
(Grand Central Station.)

The railroad fare for the round trip will be $26.70 on the certificate plan. The sleeping-car fare will be $5 for a double berth to New York. But if sleeper accommodations are desired to Buffalo only, sleeper tickets from Chicago to Buffalo may be had for $3 and the remainder of the distance traveled in the day coach.

At Niagara Falls an hour will be devoted to a trip around the Gorge Route Electric Line, which on the American side runs for miles below the falls along the rapids, whirlpool, etc. Special trolley cars will await the arrival of our special train.
Those not wishing to take the trip through the gorge can devote their time to seeing the falls in any way they desire.

Returning from New York the members of the party have the option of returning by all rail route, or of taking the boat as far as Albany. And as a daylight ride up the Hudson is an exceedingly enjoyable trip the majority will no doubt take advantage of it.

The boat leaves New York, foot of Des-brosses street, at 8:40 a. m. daily, reaching Albany at 6:10 p. m. A westbound train leaves Albany at 10 p. m., which arrives at Chicago at 9 p. m. next day.
To any preferring the lake trip Buffalo to Cleveland the privilege of taking the
C. & B. Transit Co.'s boat is afforded.

Berths may be reserved in the special sleepers by addressing L. F. Vosburgh, City Passenger and Ticket Agent, Lake
Shore and Michigan Southern Railway, 180 Clark street, Chicago, who will also supply any other information. Railroad tickets and certificates may be had at the above address or at the station.

By vote of the Chicago Florists' Club the Committee was instructed to invite all florists in the west to travel with the Chicago party and to share the advantages secured by the committee. We shall be pleased to have your company on this trip. The New York convention promises to be a memorable one, and every florist who can possibly do so should go.

Please make your berth reservation as early as possible.

G. L. GRANT,
W. N. RUDD,
WALTER KREITLING,
Transportation Committee.

NOTICE*STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

CHICAGO, July 21, 1900.

Stockholders of the American Florist Company:

You are hereby notified that the annual meeting of the Stockholders of the American Florist Company will be held in the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, N. Y., Wednesday, August 22, 1900, at 3 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of electing directors and officers for the ensuing term, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

F. R. PIERSON, Pres.
M. BARKER, Sec'y.

If you want to get the want you want to get your want adv. into next Saturday's great Convention Number

IT IS GOOD BUSINESS POLICY TO MENTION THE AMERICAN FLORIST WHEN YOU WRITE TO AN ADVERTISER.

New Orleans.

HORTICULTURALISTS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.—FUNERAL DESIGNS FOR POLICEMEN.

At the last meeting of the Horticultural Society the following officers were elected to serve the ensuing year: Paul Abele, president; Chas. Ehle, vice-president; John Eblin, treasurer; Dan. Newsham, secretary.

Business is very dull now. Hot weather makes flowers very scarce, hardly enough to fill up designs, for which there was quite a call last week, the majority for the funerals of the policemen who lost their lives in the recent riots.

Repairing houses and hotbeds is what keeps us busy just now. M. M. L.

AKRON, O.—In the recent hail storm S. W. Pike lost 800 lights of glass.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLOIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE large sizes of Harrisii lily bulbs are reported scarce, also longiflorums.

THE European demand for American flax seed shows some improvement of late.

BEANS in some sections have been allowed to go to seed by gardeners who preferred to do so rather than accept the market price for green beans.

ERFURT, GERMANY, July 24.—The pansy seed crop appears to turn out very short on account of the unfavorable weather last spring and the early part of summer.

HOLLAND bulbs are reported a good average crop this year. The late spring, however, has delayed maturity and delivery will be from eight to ten days later than usual in consequence.

ONION seed of some kinds is short in California crops, while in other fields the same sorts have done much better. On the whole there will probably be enough to go around. Onion bulbs for next year's seeding are stiff in price.

BOSTON, MASS.—A meeting of the seed trade of this city was held at the office of W. W. Rawson & Co., on August 2, to take action on the death of C. H. B. Breck. Resolutions were adopted and arrangements for a full representation of the trade at the funeral were made.

QUEDLINBURG, GERMANY, July 25.—The crop of pansy seeds is short up to the present on account of the cold, wet spring, which retarded growth. Sweet peas are very promising now, so that a good crop may safely be expected. The prospects on the whole for a good flower and vegetable seed crop are not bad. The weather from the beginning of July was very favorable. In the case of such plants as wallflowers and myosotis, the yield will be very short. The rutabaga and turnip seed crops are also likely to be short.

Pepper's Prolific Tomato.

One mile from the railroad station at Jenkintown, Pa., is the residence of John W. Pepper. Being interested in tomatoes and the forcing of fruits and vegetables in general, I took this walk, when in Jenkintown recently, to see Pepper's Prolific tomato and compare it at its home with specimens which I had seen at George C. Watson's store in Philadelphia. I was much pleased with the spacious grounds, gardens and forcing department, through which I was shown by the gardener in charge, Wm. Robertson.

In regard to the tomato in which my interest centered, I must say that it was a pleasant surprise to see the well-grown and trained plants loaded with immense bunches of bright red fruit. It is the most prolific bearer I have ever seen. The bunches each had from eight to sixteen well developed fruits, about 2x2½ inches in size, a beautiful color, excellent flavor, flesh firm and with no hard core.

In 1888 I sent out the Lorillard tomato, the best forcing seedling I had raised in six years of crossing. It is a cross of Perfection and Acme. I only wish I might have had Pepper's Prolific at that date, as I feel sure that it can be used as a parent to bring out the ideal tomato, a tomato which will set fruit under glass in December, January and February, the bad months to set fruit in owing to the poor sunlight. Pepper's Prolific will set fruit at all seasons, Mr. Robertson assures me.

The ideal tomato must set good crops, the color must be bright red, the flesh firm and with no hard core; the shape must be good, the size about 2x3 inches. I suggest using the Frogmore and Lorillard as parents to bring forth the ideal tomato. I have found, after twelve years with the Lorillard, that it will thrive under glass or out of doors.

FOREST CITY TO BE WELL REPRESENTED AT NEW YORK.—NO PARTY ARRANGEMENT.

Convention talk is all the go just now, and from present indications the Forest city will be fairly well represented in New York. The bowling team is hard at it at every opportunity, and we all hope it will be heard from when it faces the other fellows on the alleys far, far away. Judging from present indications there will be no special arrangements for the pilgrims, as the fare and a third rate seems to be the only thing attainable. Those who are going will therefore consult only their personal convenience and their private business affairs in making their arrangements. A few have already started; others will not go until the last possible moment.

There is but little business going on at present excepting funeral work, which keeps things from utter stagnation. The growers are replanting or overhauling the houses.

A. H. Graham returned lately from a short vacation in the east. A.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO. J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.;
GEORGE C. SEAVER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

W. E. WELLINGTON, of Toronto, is convinced that the usual conditions make fall planting preferable to spring planting for most items of nursery stock.

At a recent meeting of the Southern Nurserymen's Association resolutions were adopted endorsing the Federal inspection bill and urging all southern states to appoint entomologists.

DR. W. SEWARD WEBB, the millionaire railroad manager, has the credit of the largest job of tree planting on record, having set out over 200,000 trees, principally white and Scotch pines, on his farm in Vermont.

The Canadian customs officials have issued notices that nursery stock from the United States will be admitted this fall and next spring upon the same terms as early in this year. The exact dates have not yet been announced but it will be while the plants are dormant.

The Clematis Disease.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—The disputed question as to who struck Billy Patterson remains as yet unsolved; so, too, does the more vital one of the clematis disease. I do not think that the mode of procedure advocated by Mr. Koster, the cutting back each spring of all growth above the crown of the plant, would be successful in the end. My experience with this most beautiful class of climbers is that the result of the disease manifests itself, in the main, on stems two years old; shoots seldom die back the first year. Now, such being the case, the cutting back of all growth in the spring would eradicate all diseased stems and the growth of the season following would show but a small percentage of disease. Were this cutting back annually followed up for a number of years, it might have a tendency to eradicate the disease, but would it not so weaken the plant as to make it worthless? Could it stand the strain of being forced to break into new growth each recurring spring?

Mr. Koster is a grower, a man of international repute. He grows for the trade. Plants of the clematis are sent out generally when two and three years old. His main stock of marketable clematises was cut back last spring and the new growth will be in good shape this fall when the plants are taken up and packed for shipment. These plants, being young and vigorous, and having undergone but two such severe cuttings back, are in good form, but how will they be the next season and the following if not cut back? If cut back, how long will the plant stand it?

A. G. Jackman, of the famous English firm of Geo. Jackman & Son, lately delivered an address in London on the clematis. He discards all the theories regarding the disease hitherto promulgated, and says he is of the opinion that it is mainly due to loss of constitution through over-propagation. Let us hope he is right, and his opinion certainly commands respect. Novelty of various kinds in the plant line are often weak and diseased from excessive propagation, but in time become strong and healthy. There have been two departures in the hybridization of the clematis that seem to carry us away from the disease. It is probably caused by the rugged blood of one of the parents. First came C. integrifolia var. Durandi, being a cross between C. integrifolia and the Chinese C. lanuginosa. This is a cross between a non-climbing bush species and a climbing form.

Within a few years Geo. Jackman & Son have succeeded in producing a cross between the large flowered hybrids and the species C. Viorna var. coccinea, securing a robust, free flowering vine of most exquisite beauty, with many varied forms and colors. I have flowered them for three seasons and each year the plants grow stronger, flowering from the middle of July until frost sets in.

Fortunately for those Americans who dislike to import plants on account of the bother of getting them through the customs house, Jackman's coccinea hybrids may be obtained in this country of H. A. Dreer. It is a singular fact that these two classes of clematises most free from the disease have been obtained from species or varieties quite distinct in some important traits. C. Durandi is a cross between a climbing vine and a herbaceous perennial of bush form, and Jackman's hybrids are from varieties producing a woody stem and C. coccinea, which has a herbaceous stem that dies back in the fall. W. C. EGAN.

Washington.

WHAT THE GROWERS ARE PLANTING.—
MANY ROSES HAVE BEEN BENCHED.

Minder Bros. have planted one house of roses, La France, Bridesmaid, Pres. Carnot, Golden Gate, Perle, Wootton and Kaiserin; also two houses of chrysanthemums, about 8,000 in all. Their ferns and Ficus elastica are looking fine.

David Saunders is adding seventy-five feet to his violet house, making it 11x150, the length of his carnation house. His carnations and bedding plant stock are in good shape.

J. Louis Loose has ten houses of roses planted, American Beauty, Brides and Bridesmaids, and one house of Liberty. He has about 100 each of the varieties named grafted and will give them a careful test; at present they look very fine. Next week they will start housing their carnations, of which they have quite a number.

J. H. Small & Sons have two houses planted with chrysanthemums, some in solid beds, but most on benches, and a number of specimen plants in pots, in all about 14,000. Palms and ficuses are in fine condition. They have a lot of ferns, among them Lastrea Capensis, which is one of best half-hardy ferns grown.

St. Louis.

The extreme hot weather of the past few days has had a very bad effect on flowers, causing them to come into market too much open and otherwise injured in quality. There has been plenty of stock of the kind which is at present in season but the demand is nothing to speak of.

A. Ringier, representing Barnard & Co., Chicago, is a visitor in town.

The bowlers did not meet this week on account of the heat. M.

MACOMB, ILL.—S. T. Danley is increasing his establishment just fifty per cent by adding two houses 10x55. He will use the new structures for pansies and violets. Mr. Danley expects to have 100,000 pansy plants for fall sales. He will grow the Lawson carnation this year.

The fourth and last of the matches on outside alleys was played last Monday evening, the final game being bowled on the North Broad street alleys. Each match was played on a different alley and, as the prize was a place on the convention team, the entire contest was almost as nerve testing as the national tournament games. The following are the total scores of the twelve games in the order in which the men finished:

Player	Player
Moss.....1896	Baker.....1578
Anderson.....1795	Watson.....1565
Walker.....1700	Kift.....1541
Connor.....1691	Gibson (six games). 761
Harris.....1684	Westcott (six games) 755

The first eight men constitute the team and substitutes. The average of the first six men in the twelve games is 143½. This is about fifteen pins less to a game than their collective average would be on our own alleys and shows what a difference strange alleys make to some bowlers. There will now be a match or two between the convention team and a picked six from the associate members, who will try to draw them out a little.

At New York.

On Monday evening, August 6, scores were made at the bowling club as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th
Traeddy.....	111	145	128	132	113
Siebenheller.....	106	124	132	163	131

As the great event for which all have been preparing is now at hand, the following records and averages made by the New York bowlers for the months of June and July will be interesting:

To the Bowlers.

As Mr. Schenck, of the New York Florists' Club's bowling committee, is quoted in last issue of the Florists' Exchange as saying that he could not reply to the question asked him several times, apparently by would-be contestants, as to whether any entrance fee would be required for the national tournament, I think it best to again state that as far as the National Florists' Bowling League is concerned there is no fee of any kind except for the sweepstake prizes, which, of course, are only open to the clubs which contributed to this fund. It cannot be determined just how the fund is to be divided or prizes purchased with the money until the representatives of the contributing clubs get together in New York, as the league committee has not been able to get sufficient data to enable them to go ahead in the matter. ROBERT KIFT, President N. F. B. L.

A Hint to Conventionites.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—The comments of "W." in your issue of August 4 are timely. The bowling is all right when it is arranged for, as at New York, so as not to conflict with the work of the convention. No one who does not enjoy those things is compelled to attend the contests, much less to enter into them. Business and pleasure is a winning combination to play, but too much pleasure is, of course, had for business. It has seemed to me—I venture the opinion with fear and trembling—that some few of those cups and other trophies for the bowling contests, which have been mentioned so constantly in the past weeks, might well have been given for contests more strictly horticultural. It wouldn't have made any difference you know, really, if one or two of the boys didn't get a prize. W. N. RUDD.

The "hint to conventionites" is so practical that it strikes at the very heart of the work of the "conventionites," but it seems to me that the writer of a good thought should never be ashamed of his name; "W" is nothing except a letter down near the end of the alphabet. His finger, too, is directed to the bowlers and indicates that those who are developing their muscle and perfecting themselves in rolling might possibly exhaust their vital forces before they reach the convention, and then, being spent balls, as it were, have little influence in setting up wise thoughts and suggestions when they should be most needed. It is the bowlers, practically or figuratively, who are the best workers, the best thinkers, and who achieve the best results. I approve the suggestions of "W." I have always endeavored to encourage thoughts upon improvement in the methods of building, in growing and the cultivation of taste and judgment in the selection of what to grow. I have tried to study the building from the foundation, the plant from seed, and to have ideas of my own, but there is never a time when I cannot be benefited by the consensus of opinion, the accumulation of ideas, and the practical suggestions which originate with the thinkers of our organization, whether they be bowlers, delvers, experimenters or amateurs. I love the art, and I believe that there is not one, in the society or out of it, engaged in it who does not regard it with a certain amount of affection and fascination, as well for the pleasure it affords as for the profits which result from it. WM. F. GUDB.

Cold Storage for Bulbs.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please inform me of the best way to build a cold storage house for bulbs. INQUIRER.

I regret to say that I am not able to answer above query, as I have no cold storage house for my bulbs, but put them outside in the old fashioned way. I have a piece of ground convenient to the greenhouses plowed and harrowed and then make beds about six feet wide and about six feet deep by throwing the soil out on each side. The beds are then filled with flat boxes containing compost into which the bulbs are planted, and then the fine soil that was removed to make the beds is put back over the bulbs. They are then given a thorough soaking with water to keep them moist, but before they are watered the beds are also covered with a few inches of hay. Nothing more is done to the beds until the latter part of November or the fore part of December, when more covering is added, to prevent the bulbs being frosted. A. N. PIERSON.

A question, practically the same as above, was asked at the Providence, R. I., convention of the Society of American Florists, August, 1897, to which Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, N. Y., replied as follows: "I cannot by any means be considered a very large grower of bulbs. I am forcing possibly 50,000 or 60,000 tulips and hyacinths in a year. Living, as I do, in a northern climate, that of Buffalo, where it is liable to freeze as hard almost as anywhere, I have never found a better storage house than out-of-doors. Dutch hyacinths, I consider, should be in a cold frame, and I like them to be covered with glass and on a dry bottom so that they may not get soaked with the rain. Tulips I have tried in a cellar, but I have never found them as successful as those I have boxed, put on the surface of the ground in boxes. We cover them with two inches of earth, after thorough watering, and leave them in that position until severe weather is due. We then cover them with five or six inches of litter or manure from the stable, or some such material, or leaves; and with the help of the snow we do not find any difficulty in getting them in. I have found that the quality of the flowers that are forced is so much superior to those that have been in a root house or a cellar that it pays to adopt the plan, even if it is a little labor to get in the boxes. Sometimes, however, the manure in the soil that covers the bulbs is frozen, but the manure you can always get off; and if you have to take into your greenhouse for twenty-four hours the two or three inches of soil that covers them, until it is melted, it even pays then. My idea of a root house or bulb house would be a common frame building, and I thought once of constructing one. I would have the sides so that they would be perfectly open and would have the air coming in until the very last moment when hard winter set in. That would be my idea of a bulb house. But you will find that the rain we get, the natural element outside, is so beneficial to the bulbs that they are gaining strength all the time. It is a natural condition for them to be frozen. Where do you put a tulip bulb? If you plant it in November to look beautiful in the flower garden in May, where is it? Why, out in the flower garden to be frozen hard, and that is where your forcing bulbs should be. So that, to answer this question, so far as my opinion is concerned, I say I would build no root house at all, but would have half an acre of good open ground."

BOSTON FERN ...A...

L. H. FOSTER, 45 King St., Dorchester, Mass.

Water Tank and Boiler.

ED. AM. FLORIST:— Will a tank 6x8 feet, elevated twenty feet, supply water power sufficient to syringe roses? What size of pipe should be used to conduct water to faucet? We use a No. 16 Hitchings hot water boiler, and would like to know the best method of heating the water in tank from same to 50°? The tank is in a barn forty feet distant from boiler. Would also like to know whether this boiler will maintain a temperature of 50° to 60° in two houses 25x90 feet.

SUBSCRIBER.

If the bottom of the tank is twenty feet above the floor of the greenhouse, the pressure will answer for syringing, although an elevation of fifteen or twenty feet more would give a much better pressure. One-inch pipe is desirable for distributing the water, but in small houses 3/4-inch answers very well. The pipe leading from the tank should be at least 1-inch, and if more than two lines of hose are to be used at one time, it will be well to make it 1 1/4-inch. The simplest method of taking the chill from the water is to draw a small amount from the heating pipes. Use the water tank as the expansion pipe, connecting it to a return near the heater. If there is any danger that the tank or connecting pipe will freeze a vent pipe should be run from one of the flow pipes to a height above the top of the tank. Connection should then be made between the cold water pipes and one of the flow hot water pipes and, by means of valves upon both pipes, the temperature can be controlled the same as for a bath tub. Of course, heating pipes could be run to the tank or a water heater could be placed in the greenhouse. To heat the houses to 60°, a boiler should be rated for about 2400 square feet of radiation. This is about one-third more than the actual radiation.

Petosky, Mich.

The weather has been very warm for this section, 84° in shade for four days, and the resorters are complaining about the warmth. A week ago it was the reverse, but the human family is never satisfied. However, our sweet peas, which are our main summer crop, are fine these warm days. Although they were two weeks behind time in blooming on account of the rains, they cannot now be beaten; stems fourteen to sixteen inches long, three and four blooms on a stem, and our muck soil produces the most gorgeous colors in the country. The resorters are shipping boxes of them daily to friends at home in almost every state in the Union. S. J. Long has four houses now, having just finished a new one 18x90. Mr. Long is ill at present with nervous prostration, and Mrs. Long is kept busy these days.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society has been scheduled for September 18 to 20 and the chrysanthemum show for November 14 to 16. Prizes in the two exhibitions aggregate about $600.

DOINGS IN THE SECOND CITY OF ILLINOIS.
—GROWERS HAVE THINGS IN GOOD SHAPE.—RETAILERS BUNCHED.

J. C. Murray has his new houses finished and planted. There are two structures, 25x100 mostly in American Beauties, and one house, particularly, is very good. Of tea roses there are two houses 20x100, all in charge of O. M. Bourdy, formerly with the South Park Floral Co., of New Castle. Mr. Murray has 10,000 carnation plants which he is beginning to bench. Genevieve Lord is very early, the plants are full size and flowering freely.

Geo. A. Kuhl has moved across the street and Murray is now at 403 Main street, so that all the retail stores are in one block and on the same side of the street, which is not only neighborly but enlivening.

Cole Brothers have everything in excellent form about their place, but particularly Nelson Cole's race horse, which recently added a purse of $500 to his numerous winnings.

Trade is dull, as is usual in August, and the material is of the ordinary summer character. There are some lilies and a few good roses. PEORIAN.

New Haven.

TRADE CONFINED TO FUNERAL WORK.—LITTLE MATERIAL AVAILABLE.—JOTTINGS.

Trade has been rather quiet here for the last two weeks, except for a few small funeral orders, which is all that is expected for the next six weeks. Roses, both Brides and Bridesmaids, are very small and of poor color. Carnations are scarce and sweet peas were badly burned during the dry spell, so that all we are receiving is a few early asters. Pierson, of Cromwell, sent in some very fine Liberty buds during July.

Joe Hoogkirk, clerk for S. H. Moore, has returned from Litchfield, where he spent two weeks' vacation.

Everyone is talking of the S. A. F. convention and there should be a good showing from New Haven.

Fred. Horn, of Woodward avenue, is putting up a violet house 15x100.

John H. Slocombe has finished his new carnation house 28x146. G. H.

COLDWATER, MICH.—D. Vogtis making a specialty of roses and is building two houses 18x80 to accommodate increased plantings.

Buffalo.

WEATHER SATISFACTORY BUT TRADE IS SLOW.—GOOD REPRESENTATION ASSURED AT NEW YORK.—NOTES AND VISITORS.

With good weather and enough rain to make it pleasant, things are moving along slowly. The death of a prominent city official gave Palmer, Adams and others a good lot of funeral work for Sunday. Active preparations are being made for the journey to New York, and it will take all the silver-tongued orators of other cities combined to head off Buffalo in the effort for the S. A. F. meeting of 1901. The people want to come to Buffalo, and we want them.

The bowlers had their usual game last week and the scores were good. Other teams at New York will have to hustle as there is new wood in the Buffalo team.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Kasting have returned from Crystal Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Anderson are at Muskoka Lake.

Michael Bloy is again at Wm. Scott's. Recent visitors were: E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago; Mr. Meredith, of the London Floral Company, London, Ont., and Mr. Thielow, manager of the Henry A. Dreer Company, Philadelphia. W. A.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—At the last meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society C. P. Johnstone, Wm. Hyland and Albert Griswold were elected to membership and John Boschard made a fine showing of French gladioli. Wm. Scott and James Withers addressed the society.

TEWKESBURY, MASS.—The fellow-townsmen of M. A. Patten, with their ladies, surprised Mr. and Mrs. Patten on the evening of August 3, by invading their home in a body and presenting them with an elegant silver tea service. The occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Patten. The affair was a complete surprise to the recipients. Every florist who knows Mr. Patten will heartily second the kind wishes extended to him and his life partner for many years of happiness and prosperity.

STEAM COAL FOR FLORISTS.

HULL & COMPANY, 74 and 75 Traders' Building, Chicago, Ill.,

GENTLEMEN:—In reference to my opinion of your THACKER SPLINT COAL, will say I am very well pleased with it and think it is superior to any Coal of the splint grades we have yet used. Burns free, making an intense heat with very few ashes; no clinkers, and has the lasting quality of all high-grade Coal. I certainly consider it a very economical Coal to burn.

Yours very truly, J. A. BUDLONG, Wholesale Florist.

LANCASTER, PA., June 17, '99. MR. THERON PARKER, Brooklyn, N. Y.:

Dear Sir.—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way, and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best in the market, and if your other Specialties are as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900. Very Respectfully, ALBERT M. HERR.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thrasher succeeded the fall—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind. stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. A CHILD can run it. Just the thing to fight crab grass. It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

Right for Right's Sake.

According to the veracious calendar of Puddenhead Wilson it is easier to do right than make a maxim. However that may be, there's certainly great diversity in the way some maxims are applied. We say "Honesty is the best policy," but the man who is honest only because of the policy of it is but indifferent honest, and would, according to that logic, be dishonest if that were the best policy. Then, again, there's "Do as you would be done by," a very different maxim in the positive than in the negative, and many are willing to do a bad thing to others because they think others are just as likely to do a bad thing to them. The Confucian or, we may say, negative sense is "Do not do unto others what you would not like to have them do unto you." The positive or Christian philosophy goes further and says "Love thy neighbor as thyself," or, put in another way, "Do unto others as you would have them do to you, and do it first."

Thus a proper idea of what the Golden Rule is becomes necessary when we consider how deficient in logic the average human being is unless he puts himself through a course of hard thinking, which he is usually averse to doing, because, like Corporal Shiach, "it makes him sweat." I am a firm believer in the idea that most men are good at heart, and their wrong doing is mostly caused by their inability to think correctly—that is, logically.

All this leads up to the question of whether the next convention should go to Chicago or Buffalo. We should consider what it is right to do, and do it for right's sake. Do not be honest because it is good policy, but be honest because it is honest and you could not be anything else if you tried. Do right for right's sake, as you would be honest for honesty's sake. Do not say let's go to Chicago because you like Mr. Rudd. Do not, on the other hand, make up your mind to Buffalo because of your friendly feeling for Mr. Scott. To my mind the only point to be decided is whether either place has a right to the next convention.

As far as I have been able to make out, Buffalo does not care anything about the convention except as an adjunct to her world's fair. That, of course, is largely selfish and not at all a convincing reason. On the other hand Chicago seems to be sincere in desiring the convention for the convention's sake, and as it is a long time since the society met there, I think she has a right to be considered ahead of Buffalo. In other words, how would you decide if Buffalo had no world's fair, did not ask you to come, and Chicago sent you a cordial invitation?

Let us see how the rotation of localities stands according to the records:

Cincinnati.....1885	St. Louis.....1893
Philadelphia.....1886	Atlantic City.....1894
Chicago.....1887	Pittsburg.....1895
New York.....1888	Cleveland.....1896
Buffalo.....1889	Providence.....1897
Boston.....1890	Omaha.....1898
Toronto.....1891	Detroit.....1899
Washington.....1892	New York.....1900

If Chicago gets it in 1901 fourteen years will have elapsed since she had it before, which seems a reasonable wait for the second largest city in the country. To be quite fair this (1900) should have been Chicago's year if we had held strictly to rotation. As Chicago gave place gracefully to New York last year she seems, therefore, to have a double claim for just consideration this time.

The idea of giving each large horticultural center a periodical visit is a good one and has borne excellent fruit, as the present vitality of the sixteen-year-old society testifies. If some other city develops enough interest in horticulture and wishes the convention it should be added to the list, all other claims being equal. But to add merely because it has a world's fair and an eloquent advance agent, as was the case with Omaha, for instance, is, to say the least, doubtful wisdom. It sounds like the familiar soup story. The keeper of the soup shop, according to this tale, "socked" his customer a large round dollar for a plate of particularly thin and watery bouillon. On the said customer making a mild remonstrance he was told that that was the correct charge, and that although it might appear a little high he would excuse it because the house really needed the money. The world's fair "because" sounds just about as reasonable as that to an outsider.

The right of Baltimore, for instance, to a visit from the society is disputed by no one. She is important enough horticulturally, and if the trade there were to go the right way about it they could beat both Chicago and Buffalo this year. Only once, I believe, did Baltimore ask for the S. A. F. meeting, and, on the face of it, even this looked like a one-man invitation and was worded in a manner which, though well meant, offended many earnest workers for the welfare of the society, and so the ancient and beautiful city of Baltimore has never yet had a visit from the S. A. F. during the sixteen years of its existence. Whether she will ever have depends, in the first instance, on Baltimore herself. Personally I would be glad to see the trade there wake up, as, unlike the unkind critics I have often heard, I consider Baltimore well worth visiting horticulturally, and the florists there compare favorably with those of any other horticultural center of equal size. There is no doubt whatever but that they could rise to the occasion in magnificent style if they once made up their minds to that effect.

When I say this, I do not refer particularly to local entertainment in the way of eating, drinking and other recreations. That should always be given second place to horticultural interests. The best flower growing establishments, both commercial and private; the public parks and conservatories, the flower shops, the nurseries, the best landscapes, all these things are interesting to S. A. F. visitors and should not be lost sight of. The visitors can always get some good points wherever they go, and the largest possible opportunity should be set before them. Entertainment committees are prone to devote themselves too much to providing an eating and making merry, rolling ten pins, shooting and gallivanting around sort of programme. While that is all right in its place, it should not predominate. The visitors desire first of all to attend the business sessions of a convention, secondly to become familiar with local horticultural matters, and, if there be any time left, to enjoy a good dinner or a game of ten pins. Is there anything in that to scare Baltimore or any other horticultural center? I trow not.

Speaking of recreation reminds me that some one was hitting at our friend, the don't know their man. John Westcott is not only a grower, but he was a retailer, too, a quarter of a century or more, and any one who spends an hour or two in his company at conventions will find out, if he cares to, whether John has any ideas outside of recreation.

That, however, is wandering somewhat from the text. Let us return to our onions. The latest advocate of Buffalo, I observe, brings forward the plea that to have a good attendance at the convention Buffalo is the only place, because people cannot afford to go to both exposition and convention if in different cities. That is asserting a good deal without any special effort in the way of demonstration. An assertion is not a demonstration by any means. The eastern florists should not find it so very difficult to stop off at Buffalo a day or so in going to or coming from Chicago, if they wished especially to see the exhibition. The florists of the west would not be put to any inconvenience if they went to the exhibition at Buffalo after first having attended the convention in Chicago. As for the south, that section of the country is relatively unimportant from the greenhouse men's standpoint, on account of its favored climate, and would not count much in an argument for or against either place.

Again, this same advocate says the world's fair city "would secure a larger attendance and incite more interest," but why it would do so he does not state. One would naturally think that this counter attraction would detract rather than add to the interest in the convention. That was the idea that made the society go to St. Louis rather than to Chicago the Columbian Exposition year. He further says "the degree of success of a society is in a measure indicated by its basis we might elect our president and other officers for 1902 also.

I am glad Buffalo wants the convention. I would like to see every city wanting it. But I think Chicago has the best motive and the best right this year. Chicago doesn't want it as a tail to a world's fair kite, and we must not forget that we once chivvied her out of it just because she had a world's fair. I believe the convention would be a success at either place in 1901. But that is not the point. Let us do right if the heavens fall. That's what wins in the long run. Policy never had a ghost of a show with right since the world began, and never will have, and Buffalo needn't worry. Her world's fair is an assured success without the convention, and it will be a respite to her hustling citizens of the florist trade to take a week off for Chicago in 1901. G. C. WATSON.

History of the S. A. F. Medal.

At the meeting of the executive committee in Washington, D. C., January 12, 1892, the subject of a suitable medal for award by the society was discussed and Messrs. Manda, Hunt, Falconer and Hoitt were appointed a sub-committee to formulate a plan and report later. This committee reported on the afternoon of the following day, recommending the adoption of three medals, of gold, silver and bronze, to be awarded to the originators of new hybrids or varieties raised from seed, or the discovery and introduction of new species or varieties raised from seed, or the discovery and introduction of new species or varieties that are decided improvements over existing kinds, the awards to be made in accordance with the following rules:

"No award shall be made for any plant that has not been grown at least two years in this country and exhibited at least twice before some recognized horticultural society, where it shall have received a first-class endorsement in writing by said society. Further, that it have the endorsement in writing of three members of the executive committee before it shall be considered by the full executive board, and then only shall such award be made by a two-thirds vote of the committee, such species or variety to be shown in plant form and cut state where practicable. Not more than one medal shall be awarded in each class, and not more than three in all in each year."

At the meeting of the executive committee at St. Louis, Mo., on January 17, 1893, the subject was again brought before the executive committee, with the result that a special committee consisting of Messrs. Manda, Hunt, Trelease and Hoitt was constituted with full power to adopt designs and procure dies for medals as previously recommended. At the convention in St. Louis in August following, Mr. Manda reported to the society on behalf of this committee. He stated that the committee had prepared a die for the medals, but unfortunately it had been broken in the hardening process and that it would be two or three weeks before another die would be ready. Mr. Manda had proofs of the design with him, which were examined by many members and universally approved.

At the next meeting of the executive committee, held in Philadelphia, Pa., February 13, 1894, a vote was passed instructing the secretary to have one medal of gold and three each of silver and bronze struck off for the society's

Commodore, in a recent issue. Since then others have followed this up in a tone that seems to me more serious than the occasion warrants. If a close observer of events during the past ten years were to be asked what one influence outside of the officers did most to make the conventions a success I am sure a large majority would answer "John Westcott." His motto, "If you are to keep school you must have the scholars," is sound sense, his idea being to get the crowd there by all the wiles which his generous and sport-loving heart could suggest to his shrewd and practical mind. But if any one has run away with the idea that our Commodore thinks that the recreation matter is anything more than a means to an end, let him dismiss the notion forever from his thoughts. They membership list," as if quantity rather than quality should be the true measure of success. It is true, however, that the membership list indicates success if it be representative of the best men in the trade from all sections of the country, but such men do not require the inducement of a world's fair trip to make them join the S. A. F. If it had there never would have been any S. A. F.

This gentleman then winds up his unsupported assertions and assumptions with this: "Would it not be good policy for Chicago to withdraw her claim for 1901 under promise that she can have the convention in 1902?" That's a pretty good one! Hope Chicago will appreciate this naive effort to console her with a promise of last year's snow. How can 1900 legislate for 1902? On the same use. This was done, and in the programme for the convention at Atlantic City in August of that year, announcement was made of the offer of these medals by the society under the rules as previously adopted by the executive committee; but no entries were made in competition therefor. A similar announcement was made in the programme for the Pittsburg convention the following year, but also without result.

It appearing that on account of the stringency of the rules governing the competition, or for some similar reason, members were disinclined to enter into competition, the question of offering the medals under more liberal conditions was discussed at the executive committee meeting in Providence, R. I., March, 1897, with the result that six medals of silver and six of bronze were set apart to be competed for in accordance with the recommendations of the local clubs of Newport and Providence at the convention in Providence the following August. The result of this offer was the award of silver medals at Providence as follows:

To Oakes Ames, of North Easton, Mass., for display of aquatic flowers; to Swan Point Cemetery, Providence, for collection of conifers; to Swan Point Cemetery, Providence, for American grown rhododendrons and azaleas. And bronze medals to H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, for display of aquatic flowers; to Sam. W. Lewis, Olneyville, R. I., for a collection of conifers; to W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., for collection of fancy caladiums, and to Alex. McLellan, Newport, R. I., for a group of rare greenhouse plants. At the convention in Omaha the following year, the medals were again offered for special exhibits and silver medals were awarded to Geo. Gibbs, Orcas, Washington, for American grown bulbs and to D. B. Long, Buffalo, N. Y., for floral photographic designs.

By vote of the executive committee twelve silver and twelve bronze medals are in the hands of the New York Florists' Club's exhibition committee to be competed for at the horticultural exhibition in connection with the convention at the Grand Central Palace and they will, no doubt, be worthily awarded. The design for the medals was drawn by the prominent artist and flower painter, Miss Ellen Robbins, who is a cousin of H. H. Hunnewell, of Wellesley, Mass. Its artistic beauty is a subject of frequent admiring comment

Plant Life of New Zealand.

New Zealand has aptly been termed "the wonderland of the earth" and this proud title has been earned by its scenes of unrivalled grandeur. Its volcanos, hot lakes, boiling mud holes and geysers. Its fjords, which rival those of Norway, and its Alps and glaciers, which challenge comparison with those of Switzerland. These beautiful islands may also claim the title on account of the beauty and diversity of plant life, embracing the immense kauri forests and the impenetrable jungles of ferns and palms which fringe the river banks of the North Island.

Tree ferns, principally Dicksonia Antarctica, *Cyathea*s and Alsophilas, abound everywhere, sometimes attaining a height of eighty feet. The Maoris used to eat the pulp of the stems and the trunks of these ferns are often utilized by pioneer settlers to build huts, just as log cabins were built in the early days of America.

New Zealand has 130 different species of indigenous ferns and lycopods, which grow luxuriantly in the semi-dark bush. In some districts Adiantum Cunninghami covers the ground to a height of two or three feet for miles and is so dense that special scythes are manufactured for the purpose of clearing the land of it. Through the jungles, especially up the reaches of the Wanganni river, which has a world-wide reputation for the beauty of its scenery, are many fine specimens of the ringed nekan palm, Areca sapida, thirty and forty feet high, the fronds of which are used by the natives to thatch their huts. The straight stems of the aralias furnished the natives with spears, which were hardened with fire at the tip and dipped in a poisonous solution to make a wound fatal.

The bush is extremely interesting; here a lordly kauri 200 feet high and forty feet in girth, rears its stately head high above the forest, its growth unchecked by the hundreds of cupplejacks that reach and twine around the lower branches or the orchids and other parasitic plants which cling to its trunk. In the gloom beneath, dracenas, aralias, doodias, lomarias, davallias, *adiantum*s, *hibiscus*es, etc., grow in an impenetrable mass and enjoy summer weather the year around. Miles of swampy ground is covered with the New Zealand flax, Phormium tenax, which grows densely ten and twelve feet high, and the writer remembers being lost for several hours in one of these flax swamps. This flax is thrashed and exported in large quantities for making rope. The Maoris make their nets and baskets with its strands and collect the large quantities of honey contained in its flowers with calabashes.

In dryer districts the cabbage palm, Dracena Australis, is found in great numbers, many of the trees being over 100 years old, gnarled and twisted and in some cases are enveloped by the native ipomoeas and clematis. Throughout New Zealand the plains and plateaus are rendered beautiful by the plumes of the pampas grass, Arundo Australis, called by the Maoris the "Toi Toi," which grows in great profusion.

Some very fine private grounds are to be found in the neighborhood of Auckland. Camellias, hydrangeas, boronias and countless varieties of flowers and shrubs bloom in the borders in exquisite profusion and the outhouses and verandas are festooned with Bougainvilleas and Plumbago Capensis. In the orchard, oranges, lemons, citrons, bananas, etc., grow with ordinary fruits and an aquatic garden of great beauty usually adorns one corner of the grounds.

The South Island is not so rich in plant life, although the Kentia Canterburyana is found there, but for all that is beautiful, all that is impressive in the vegetable kingdom, visit the home of the plant that blooms and grows underground and the edible boiling mud spring—the North Island of New Zealand. #### Midsummer Notes on Aquatics.

August is the banner month for aquatics, for when many beds of flowers are suffering from heat and drought, water lilies are in their element, and one turns from the parched and heated ground to the verdant green of the ponds, with the dainty lilies of all hues, fragrant, cooling and refreshing. Some of the hardy nymphæas are nearing the end of their season, but as they decrease the tropical lilies increase in number, size and brilliancy of color, and will continue on until the end. The nelumbiums are admired for their gigantic foliage and flowers as they are now to be seen in all their oriental splendor. As this is the season when we can spend a few days, combining pleasure and business and attend the convention, no better time can be found to visit different grounds and make comparisons and notes.

The general work in and around a large water garden at this season of the year is to keep the grass mown, the ponds filled with water, the few dead leaves picked off, and, in natural ponds, a few perennial weeds pulled out. The hoeing, cultivating and other laborious work is outside the water garden. Ponds that are still under construction may yet be planted with such occupants as hardy nymphæas, but this work should be completed at an early date. Nymphæas planted during August will become established before fall and will start early in the spring and escape a check and delay in flowering which spring-planted stock receives more or less.

Where seed is not wanted the dead flowers should be picked from such varieties as produce seed; it saves the plants much energy and, again, if the seed is ripened and should be deposited in the pond, the result will be a host of seedlings that in most cases will be no better than weeds, in fact worse in the case of some hybrids, as the seedlings seldom come true and the young plants will be more vigorous and would soon supplant the original variety. Where seedlings are now in evidence it will be better to weed them out unless they show especially marked variation in foliage or have already shown a distinct flower. Nothing is worth saving as seedlings unless of a species, and true, or from selected flowers carefully hybridized. No better time than the present will be found to examine all plants and be positive that they are true to name, and where there has crept in a plant by accident, or otherwise, see that such is rightly named, or, better still, planted in the right place or group.

Where aquatics are grown in tubs many will now feel the benefit of frequent waterings of liquid manure; or fertilizer may be put in the tubs previous to filling up with water. Nelumbiums, especially, need it; they should not be suffered to become starved or take on a sickly yellow-green hue of foliage, or their flowering is at an end for the season. These plants will bear heavy stimulants, but begin with moderately weak applications, adding stronger doses afterward.

Where Euryale ferox has established itself, plants should not be allowed to crowd each other, but thin them out early. This also applies to Victoria Trickeri. The Euryale is very subject to attacks of Cercospora, and after two or three days of warm, humid weather look out for spot. If not checked at once it will soon spread to every plant in the pond, with serious result. Leaves so affected will shrivel up with the first bright, sunny day and the leaves soon die, badly crippling the plant, reducing the size and number of leaves and flowers. The only remedy is Bordeaux mixture in any of its forms, but use it diluted fifty per cent, that is, as per formula or directions given for most plants.

An excellent formula is five pounds of sulphate of copper and three pounds of caustic potash. Dissolve the copper and potash in separate wooden pails, then mix and add fifty gallons of water. As the caustic potash varies considerably in strength it will be necessary to test it before general application; dilute as above stated and use it on a few leaves first. The spraying should be done with a fine spray nozzle, in the afternoon after the flowers are closed, and the effect will be magical. In the test case, if the Bordeaux mixture is too strong the leaves will appear scalded in spots on the surface. As fifty gallons of Bordeaux mixture will be more than is required in most cases, unless there is need of such in other departments, a smaller quantity may be made, but it retains its strength a considerable time. The ammoniacal solution is also very effective and convenient to handle, especially where but few plants are grown. This can be purchased of dealers, ready for use; the same caution about using it too strong is necessary here; whatever the directions may say, be careful. The water should only be light blue in color. Experience alone will decide the proper proportions.

Where aphides are in evidence, either on nymphæas, nelumbiums or Victorias, the safest and surest remedy, and by no means affecting the plants, as is often the case with insecticides, is to see that a colony or two of lady bugs are in evidence. If not at hand, hunt some up and see that they settle where wanted; there will be no need to worry about the black flies; they will soon disappear and the plants will be clean and healthy.

The Classification of Sweet Peas.

As stated in a previous letter, it was the intention of the classification committee at the recent sweet pea conference to make a selection of the best types of the various shades of color on the morning of the second day of the show, but, as so many varieties had curled up, owing to the excessive heat and dry atmosphere, it was impossible to carry out this object. I believe most of the best and decided types will be found in those selected from Hurst & Sons' collection and I shall append a list of the sorts which were adjudged the most distinct. I also give a list of those which have received awards from the Royal Horticultural Society.

Eckford's Bronze Prince appears to be the first to receive distinction, a first-class certificate being awarded it on August 8, 1882. In 1883 first-class certificates were awarded for Orange Prince, Eckford; Carmin Rose, Hurst; Invincible, carmine, Laxton; Invincible, striped, Carter; and Blue-edged, Carter. It was not until 1889 that another award was made. In July of that year Mr. Eckford exhibited a collection to which an award of merit was given for the strain. Mr. Walker also received a similar award. I may here mention that between the above dates a change was made in the name of the recognition bestowed, the award of merit being the highest distinction accorded to florists' varieties, unless a distinct hybrid; consequently the award of merit is equal to the former first-class certificate. In 1890 Dorothy Tennant and Stanley received that distinction, both being from Eckford. In 1891 Lady Penzance, Mrs. Eckford and Venus, and in 1892 Lady Beaconsfield, all from Eckford, were honored, and since that date the following have been adjudged worthy of the same distinction: Aurora, Blanche Burpee, Countess Cadogan, Countess of Powes, Cupid, Eliza Eckford, Emily Henderson, Golden Gate, Lady Grisel Hamilton, Lady Mary Currie, Mars, Prince Edward of York, Queen Victoria, Salopian and The Belle.

It will be seen from the above that the floral committee of the R. H. S. does not debar the hooded varieties, Lady Grisel Hamilton being one of the most decided of that type, though in discussing this point at the conference it was decided not to recognize hooded varieties as a separate class, the hood practically being considered a deformity. The list selected by the classification committee will also be found to include some hooded varieties and they certainly should be distinguished in some way from the upright standard varieties, so that those objecting to them could avoid including them in their selections.

The list of varieties selected from the collection of Hurst & Sons is as follows:

Emily Henderson	Oriental
Blanche Burpee	Gorgeous
Sadie Burpee	Chancellor
Sensation	Lady Mary Currie
Mrs. Eckford	Prince Edward of York
Queen Victoria	Prince of Wales
Coquette	Her Majesty
Lemon Queen	Coloist
Hon. F. Bouverie	Splendor
Lady Skelmersdale	Mars
Mrs. Gladstone	Salopian
Prima Donna	Captivation
Royal Rose	Fashion
Mrs. Dugdale	Dorothy Tennant
Triumph	Black Knight
Little Dorrit	Shahzada
Blanche Ferry	Duke of Clarence
Earliest of All	Captain of the Blues
America	Countess Cadogan
Pink Friar	Emily Eckford
Coronet	Princess of Wales
Countess of Powes

It will be seen that this list, though rather a long one, does not include all that deserve notice. Lovely, which took a first prize and was very conspicuous in many collections, is one example, and of newer varieties, Snowdrift, Cream of Brockhampton and Wideawake may prove valuable. Baden Powell, by the same raiser, Foster, seems too much like America. Stanley is left out in favor of Black Knight, but I should strongly recommend Stanley for pot culture. Duchess of Westminster and Maid of Honor may have been included in the selection from Hurst & Sons' but they are not marked in my list. H.

New Rose Pink Pearl.

This latest of W. A. Manda's hybrids is a very beautiful rose and has received high honors wherever exhibited. It is a cross between Wichuraiana and Meteor. The buds are salmon pink, changing to clear pink when fully expanded, the flowers being much larger than those of either of the parents.

Summer Work in the Greenhouses.

That the early summer is a busy season in the greenhouses is a remark that has long ago lost its novelty, and, with the experience gained in successive years, many of us make good resolutions at the beginning of the season that we will so arrange and plan our work that the worst of it shall be completed by the Fourth of July, and that the remainder shall be well in hand before convention time. But then there is a certain house or range of houses that needs rebuilding, or a boiler that cannot be relied upon for another winter, and possibly some piping to be altered or added to, and then the material does not arrive on time; thus delay sometimes follows delay and that anticipated vacation period slowly vanishes into thin air.

It would be easy to accumulate material for all these repair jobs if we only knew beforehand just what would be required, but it often happens that the tearing out of an old bench discloses the fact that many of the posts that carry the side walls are rotten and must be replaced if a collapse is to be avoided when that heavy snow comes next winter. Of course such a state of affairs does not often confront those happy growers who possess brick-walled houses, with iron plates and frames, or iron gutters set upon iron posts, and iron-framed benches with slate or tile bottoms.

Such things as these are like a good suit of clothes, in being very nice to have, but there are, unfortunately, many men who are unable to have the best in clothing, and there are likewise many growers in our business who have not capital enough to build houses at the rate of $25 to $30 per running foot in length. These growers are fully capable of appreciating the beauty and utility of a first-class, modern greenhouse, but to them it is "out of sight" in more ways than one. But this state of affairs may not always exist, and sometime in the happy future the structural iron trust may be dissolved and the poor but honest grower be enabled to buy for a reasonable price some of those new iron gutters that are to be rolled out in lengths of twenty feet.

In the meantime certain repairs must be made, and for the walls of a wooden house I prefer to use good red cedar posts, those of southern growth preferably, the red cedar being much easier to work than locust, besides being more readily procured in even sizes, and also being among the most durable of woods. Plates and gutters may be made from either cypress or yellow pine, though it becomes more difficult each year to get prime yellow pine plank that is free from sap and season cracks. And when used for a plate or for the bottom of a gutter a badly seasoned, cracked yellow pine plank is liable to give trouble no matter how carefully it may be puttied and painted.

For the better preservation of the wood it is preferable to have as little of the plate exposed to the weather as possible, this being managed by keeping the larger portion or long slope of the angular plate within the house, and then carrying the glass down as far as convenient toward the eaves. After this patching of the woodwork there is more or less painting and re-glazing to be done, and in this department the very best material is likely to prove the cheapest in the end, for there is no class of work that is more trying to poor putty and poor paint than to be used on a greenhouse roof, where it is not only exposed to all the force of the elements on the exterior of the house, but inside is also tested by a continual exposure to warmth and moisture.

Wooden benches are a continual expense and source of annoyance, though a majority still use them on account of the small first cost, the framework of scantling and the flooring of hemlock or Virginia pine boards, it being a matter of doubt as to which wood is most durable. The average life or period of usefulness for a bench of this description floored with boards one inch thick, of good, sound hemlock, is three to three and a half years, when used for pot plants only, and if only used for small stock we sometimes have them last four years. These benches have a heavy coat of whitewash when built, and last rather better if the framework is also given a good coat of of the same material before the flooring is laid.

Some growers maintain that 2-inch plank is more satisfactory for flooring benches, and possibly if the benches are to be used for planting out roses, carnations or chrysanthemums this may be correct, but for growing pot plants it seems doubtful if there would be enough difference in the lasting qualities of the 2-inch stuff to cover the difference in price, and the first cost of lumber is a very considerable item now, ordinary hemlock costing nearly fifty per cent more than it did a year or two ago.

For heating pipes, of course we all use black iron, this radiating heat much more freely than is done by galvanized pipe, but for the water supply through the houses galvanized piping is superior from the fact that it is less likely to fill up with rust, and thus wears much longer. In laying water pipes, or repairing them, it is good practice to have them out in the open just as much as possible, in order that any leakage may be at once detected, and also to have gate valves in various places so that one house or range of houses may be cut off at any time it is necessary to make repairs. If it should be found necessary to bury a water pipe, do not cover it up with coal ashes, the latter material being more corrosive toward iron pipe than ordinary earth is.

While these repairs are being made to the houses the stock of pot plants particularly must be kept in order, for this is the season in which we hope to transform the half dollar plant into the dollar specimen, a process that may readily be accomplished with some species between the first of June and the first of October, providing the plants are not neglected during the repair campaign. Fortunately many of the useful foliage plants may be handled advantageously in frames outdoors at this season, though I prefer not to put such tender subjects outside before the middle of June unless they are well established in their pots.

Araucarias do better in the open air, with protection from full sunshine, a lath shelter serving the purpose best, while the ever popular Ficus elastica grows well in the full sunshine, forming tough leaves with those reddish midribs that are so attractive, these outdoor grown plants being more enduring for house decoration than those that have always been grown under glass. Many of the dracenas and crotons grow remarkably well under frame culture during the summer, though needing frequent syringing in dry, hot weather, this method of culture not being noted here as a novelty, from the fact that it was practiced with considerable success in the vicinity of Boston fully twenty years ago.

And, speaking of Boston, reminds us that the Boston nephrolepis may also be grown out in the frame, in a rich open soil and moderately shaded, but, like all other ferns that are given the same treatment during the summer months, this one must not be neglected in the matter of watering. But possibly the most of your readers have all these minor matters in good shape and properly arranged for the summer, and in that case they will be more interested in the problem of transportation as applied to trains and routes that shall land them to New York on or before the morning of August 21. W. H. TAPLIN.

Campanula Isophylla Mayii.

The accompanying illustrations show a new plant, Campanula isophylla Mayii, which is said to possess much merit for pot and hanging basket culture. It is introduced by H. B. May, of Upper Edmonton, London, England. The flowers are of a light blue shade and produced very freely. This novelty was given an award of merit by the Royal Horticultural Society of England.

Dahlia Notes.

The present season, in many sections, has been marked by extreme drought and heat, conditions which are distinctly unfavorable to the dahlia grower, and it becomes desirable to use all possible means to counteract them. The natural impulse is to resort to the use of water. To be of value, enough should be applied to saturate the ground three or four inches deep, and to do this takes time, labor and a large quantity of water. In a dry time a heavy rain of some duration will often leave the earth quite dry a little way below the surface and a few minutes' sprinkling from the hose cannot be expected to accomplish more. A mere surface application will pass into the atmosphere before it has had time to accomplish anything beyond a temporary cooling of the ground. Even when the application is thorough, it can be much more effectively employed in connection with a mulch as referred to later. When the area is extensive, the use of water becomes impracticable without a regular irrigating plant.

Two methods based upon practically the same foundation can be employed under all circumstances and will be always productive of benefit. Keeping the surface of the soil thoroughly stirred to the depth of two or three inches prevents evaporation from the lower levels and retains for the use of the plants that moisture already present. This treatment presumes that there has been regular and thorough previous cultivation. To break up and pulverize ground which had been allowed to become dry, hard and compact, might be a remedy as bad as the disease.

The other method is to cover the surface of the ground three or four inches deep with straw or similar material. Manure from the stable serves a good purpose and supplies plant food as well as protection. Such a mulch keeps the ground cool and moist, both desirable conditions. The sun's heat does not penetrate it and the persistence of moisture beneath it, even in the hottest and dryest weather, is surprising. Moreover, the soil beneath does not pack and harden but remains in fine condition without cultivation. Light showers pass through to the surface of the earth below and the moisture is retained there; if artificial watering is resorted to, half the usual amount will produce thorough saturation and there is the least possible loss from evaporation. ## CARNATIONS.

SOLID BEDS VERSUS BENCHES.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I should be pleased to read of Mr. Herr's experience with the standard and newer carnations grown on solid beds. What sorts will do best in solid beds? What sorts will do equally well in solid beds or benches? What sorts will do best on benches? It is to be understood that the houses are modern, well heated, with large glass and well ventilated. M. E.

Solid beds will not produce as many flowers as benches in most cases and sometimes the solid bed will be from five per cent to fifty per cent behind the bench, this difference in results being largely due to soil, sometimes to culture and frequently to the variety.

Where the construction of solid beds will entail considerable expense, benches might as well be built, as results are more sure. Where a solid bed can be made, the same as I make mine, by simply setting up six-inch boards on the solid ground, for sides, and filling in four inches of soil for planting, the difference in cost of benches over this system of solid beds is quite enough to make a loss of ten per cent of flowers less than the original extra cost and maintenance of the benches. With most varieties I have found that my cut will not vary more than ten per cent in favor of the benches.

My soil has naturally good drainage and this makes the watering of solid beds an easy job, whereas, with a stiff subsoil, it becomes quite an art; it also has much to do with my success with the solid bed system and if it were not for the natural advantages that I have I suppose that I would be using benches.

To a beginner I would advise the bench system for the larger part of the establishment and a thorough trial of the solid bed system under the same conditions, keeping a careful record of results and cost of production. It is of this latter item that most of us gain wrong conclusions, as we too often look only to apparent results, whereas the difference in cost often entirely reverses the general results.

Last winter I visited a grower who had a solid bed of Triumph and in the same house some on benches. The difference between them was fully seventy-five per cent in favor of the bench at that date and later on, by the look of the plants, I suppose the difference was at least fifty per cent in favor of the soil bed. Here is where many growers run against a snag. I often do it, myself, with a new variety. The habits of the variety must be well known to get good results from solid beds and it must be grown accordingly. There is so much difference in results in different soils that it would be folly to attempt to lay down any rules to be followed.

It is almost impossible to arbitrarily select certain varieties for benches and certain others for solid beds, on account of this great difference in results in different soils, but one rule can be followed with pretty sure results and that is to plant on benches all varieties that are inclined to be late in coming into full bloom and also any varieties that are inclined to run more to foliage than to flowers. Such varieties as come into bloom quickly and are pretty free with their flowers can be planted on solid beds with an assurance of pretty good results and, if everything is just right, there ought to be a few more dollars from the solid beds than from the same varieties in benches, as the flowers ought to be better in quality and stem, with much less expense in the way of feeding and petting them up, and the season of good flowers in the spring runs considerably later than with a bench.

There is another point against the solid bed, and that is the fact that you cannot force the flowers for a certain date without doing the plants serious injury, and this makes the success of a Christmas crop entirely a matter of knowledge of the variety and how to handle it. Here, again, comes the difference in soils as an obstacle to giving advice, but a little study will soon enable you to know just how to top the plants to get a big crop in for a certain date and it is in the topping that the whole secret lies.

The fact that carnations in solid beds cannot be forced to any extent without permanent injury to the plants makes them, in my estimation, better stock for propagation than plants grown in benches, as their growth is more natural and consequently more healthful.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

GULF COAST NOTES.

The chrysanthemum grower in this part of the world has had an object lesson this season. For years it has been preached to him to avoid planting in flat ground; to use raised beds as a safeguard against heavy rains. Since May 28 we have had scarcely a day without rain; some days a foot of it. The consequence is, where the plants are not dead they have that yellow, sickly look which I have found well described by calling it indigestion. They look as a man feels with that complaint. Of course some few growers have planted properly, with ample drainage, and the plants look fairly well, but they are soft and suffering terribly from the sudden change to dry and torrid days. Summing up, I should say that the outlook for choice chrysanthemums in the extreme south this fall is not promising.

Where the plants have suffered in this way I have found it beneficial to scratch the surface of the beds with a fine rake and give a good coating of soot. Where the soil seems to be very slow in drying out, equal parts of air-slaked lime and soot have given good and quick results. The treatment of the plants with us from now until flowering time is much the same as that advised by our friends farther north. I would suggest, however, to keep shy of liquid chemicals, and even liquid manures of every kind. A good mulching will give ample nourishment through the process of watering, and the strength will be sufficiently out of it not to effect the flowers when they come. Even this mulching should not be given to the reds and dark colors.

It is a common thing to hear of Fisher's Torch, Childs, Black Hawk and such colors being "scorched by the sun." Avoid too much nourishment after September 1 and the sunburn will not occur. Some of the chemicals are death to the colors of the lighter shades of pink. I have used sulphate of ammonia and nitrate of soda on Mrs. Hill, Glory of Pacific and Vivian-Moreland they came immaculate white. Of course the chemicals were assisted by shade, which is absolutely necessary to any kind of success.

It must be remembered that long after our friends north of us are warming their houses at night, our plants are burning up with tropical heat. Our average first frost is about November 15.

ROSES.

DISEASED BRIDES AND BRIDESMAIDS.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have been greatly troubled by club root in my rose houses, the Brides and Bridesmaids being the greatest sufferers. The roots thicken at the extreme ends and then the foliage assumes the sickly, yellow appearance which is familiar to most rose growers. What is the cause of club root? Has the soil of certain localities anything to do with it? What is the best method of prevention and cure?

W. J.

After all the discussion in the horticultural press it seems remarkable that there should be ignorance as to the cause of club root. Eel worms are at the bottom of the trouble. These are very small worms which under a strong glass very closely resemble the common eel. These worms are much more abundant in some soils than in others, but, judging from reports from nearly every section of the country they must have greatly increased in number in the last few years. In many sections of the country where the ordinary monthly or bedding roses would have made fine, large bushes in one season twenty years ago, they now grow hardly at all and at best are very little larger at the end of the season than when planted in the spring. Many of the plants may die and all the trouble is due to the effect these little worms have upon the root action. In bulletin No. 55 issued by the Hatch Experiment Station, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, in 1898, a very exhaustive description is given of various methods for destroying these pests, but there is one statement which seems to me a little inconsistent (see page 61) where it is stated that the nematodes and their eggs are destroyed by severe freezing. If that were the case why do they inflict such damage in the open air on plants in parts of the country where the frost penetrates four or five feet deep. During winter they are exceedingly troublesome to roses, violets, etc., when planted in the open ground which has been so frozen. That the ordinary greenhouse temperature and treatment is very conducive to the welfare of eel worms is amply demonstrated all over the country, and the only safe method of prevention is to sterilize the compost thoroughly before using any of it. W. N. Rudd gave a detailed description of how this can be done in Vol. 13, page 1483, of this paper.

A Hint to Conventionites.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—In your issue of August 4 appeared a short, sensible, well written article signed "W" and headed "A Hint to Conventionites." In it the writer expressed a hope that the bowlers about attending the convention had given a few hours' thought to improved methods in building, in growing, etc.,

PETER REINBERG.

and further said, "let us not drive all our enthusiasm down the alley lines with the balls, but keep some for other thoughts and other uses."

Being somewhat of a bowling devotee, I was struck very forcibly with our unknown friend's remarks. Having been associated with and a close observer of the men who follow the game, I know that they, as a rule, are the busy and successful ones, not the laggards. They give time, thought and care to their business, being equally as enthusiastic over it as over their play, knowing from the teachings of the game that to make many strikes in business or on the alleys it is necessary to give thought, care and attention to the same.

The great point about this bowling or other recreation at the conventions is that it brings the crowd together and furnishes a chance to meet one another and talk over just such business problems as "W" refers to. I have got many a pointer myself in these side talks, and I suppose I must have given some to the others in the same way. I do not place recreation at conventions first on the list except as a means to an end. The first thing to be considered is the regular business of the society, secondly such points of horticultural interest as the locality furnishes, and if any spare time remains a little fun or recreation when business is done will brighten everybody up.

The fact that there has never been more than one day for howling, and that held after the session was finished, is answer enough to the suggestion that perhaps we have been neglecting more serious and important affairs in our devotion to the good old game, and "pushing our best enthusiasm down the alleys with the balls."

JOHN WESTCOTT.

WITH THE GROWERS.

PETER REINBERG, CHICAGO, ILL.

It isn't often that a florist visits Chicago and doesn't go out to Reinbergs'; certainly the sights there are worth the trip. If Prof. Galloway, who is being told that his recently published estimates of the extent of commercial floriculture in the United States fall short of the mark, had recently inspected the Reinberg establishments he might have been sufficiently impressed to have doubted the accuracy of his own figures, for let it be recorded that the Reinberg brothers own far more glass than is exposed to the elements at any other one spot in America and that Peter Reinberg individually has more rose and carnation plants on his benches than are to be found in any other floricultural establishment in the world.

Those who have not enjoyed Mr. Reinberg's hospitality can hardly realize the extent of over 600,000 square feet of glass, or almost fourteen acres. It seems incredible that one man's investment just for the glass alone, at the current rates per box, amounts to over $40,000. Who, unacquainted with this one grower's range, would suppose that to keep it warm in winter thirty-two boilers would be required, twenty-four supplying hot water and eight making steam? In these thirty-two boilers Mr. Reinberg expects to next winter burn about 6,000 tons of Pocahontas coal, upon which the lowest price yet quoted is that announced by the Chicago Florists' Club's committee, $3.35 per ton. On the place there are the equivalent of eighty 300-foot houses, each twenty-six feet wide, and in the houses there are seventy-two miles of heating pipe; those who have recently bought 4-inch pipe can reckon the investment there. There are 184 of Evans' ventilators in the houses, sixteen of which are new this year and are equipped with Garland's iron gutter. There are fifty men regularly employed under foreman George Collins. Is it any wonder that such a mammoth place turns out a supply of stock which practically imposes no limit on the selling department, which is entrusted to the management of A. C. Spencer?

The figures as to the plantings give something of an idea as to what sort of a cut there will be from these houses this winter. Of Beauties 40,000 plants have been benched. There are 17,000 young plants of Bride and 6,000 which have been rested for three or four weeks and cut back for a fresh start. There are 18,000 young plants of Bridesmaid and 9,000 which will be carried another year. Of Meteor there are 15,000, of Golden Gate 14,000, of Liberty 6,000, and a few hundred plants of Mmc. Testout have been benched, Mr. Reinberg believing that there is a limited demand for this rose at prices which will make it pay, and, by the way, he says it costs twice as much to grow Testout well as it does for Bride or Bridesmaid. He also says that Meteor is an expensive rose to grow as he finds that the section of Meteor houses consumes nearly double the coal required for sections which may be kept 10° cooler. Last year Mr. Reinberg was about the only local grower of Golden Gate; he had 4,000 plants. This year he has benched 14,000, which shows what he thinks of it. All his roses are healthy and strong but the grafted plants of Liberty are quite a step in advance of the own root stock.

Mr. Reinberg's carnation field, a moist, friable soil, has contained 300,000 plants this season, and the stock is very vigorous. He has already benched a great many thousands and intends to house 140,000 altogether, as against 60,000 last year. He has dozens of varieties in the field to keep up the assortment for his trade in cuttings and plants, which is an important part of his business, but his principal varieties for cut flowers, aside from such new sorts as The Marquis, Mrs. Lawson, Genevieve Lord, Ethel Crocker and Peru, will be Mrs. Joost, Triumph, Evanston, G. H. Crane, Cerise Queen, America, Flora Hill, White Cloud, Armazindy and Mrs. Bradt. Mr. Reinberg thinks Mrs. Joost the best money maker of the lot and has benched it heavily. Last season he tried 500 of the bottomless pots for carnations and his experience was so similar to that of Fred. Dorner, published in a recent issue, that he has 6,000 of the pots on hand for this year's use.

One of the things which Mr. Reinberg shows every visitor is a new red carnation of which he expects great things. It is an unnamed sort which originated in 1897 with Leopold Ine, at the National Bohemian Cemetery. The flower somewhat resembles G. H. Crane in color and form but the size, while not small, is not large. However, Mr. Reinberg says he can cut three blooms to one from Crane or America. Mr. Ine has been sending it to a local commission house where it has sold right along with the high priced reds. The stock has now been worked up to 8,000 plants and Mr. Reinberg will grow them and put the cuttings on the market next year. In the meantime he is looking for a catchy good name for it.

The accompanying illustration of Mr. Reinberg's range of glass at Summerdale is from a photograph taken before this year's addition of 150,000 feet was built adjoining the houses in the foreground. This picture does, however, afford a partial view of George Reinberg's glass, which adjoins his brother's on the west. In the range which Mr. Reinberg put up this year he was enabled, by the use of the iron gutter, to secure four benches as against three by his former method of construction and the arrangement of gutters is such that the water is carried off with the greatest possible expedition.

Clematises for Pot Culture.

There are few hardy plants which are better adapted for early spring flowering in pots than are some of the varieties of the patens type. These flower from the previous year's growths, and when ripened off early in the autumn, they require very little forcing to have them in flower early in March. From one-year-old plants to large specimens may be grown, according to the accommodation that can be given. Where vines are started early in the year, there is no better place for starting the clematises, and as the flowers begin to open they may be removed to a cooler house. With good treatment, the same plants will last in good condition for fully a fortnight, and by starting a few plants and adding to them from time to time, a succession may be kept up throughout the spring. Greenfly is sometimes troublesome, but if fumigated before they are started there will not be much risk of further trouble before they are in flower.

The large specimens often seen at exhibitions are very beautiful, and show what can be done with these hardy plants in pots; but I think the younger plants are even more effective, and well adapted for grouping with other plants, there being few flowering plants of the same shades of color. One-year-old plants may be grown on single sticks, say about three and one-half to four feet high, and older ones should have three or four sticks tied together at the tops, and the growths wound around; the tall plants are more effective than those trained around broad, balloon-shaped trellises. The same plants may be used for several seasons but they should be well cared for after they have done flowering and should be trained as they advance in growth, for after the wood is ripened it is very brittle. If repotted after they have done flowering they will not require any further potting until the following season. After potting they may be kept under glass until we are quite free from frost and cold winds. During the summer and autumn they will make better growths in the open than they will under glass.

The clematises are easily propagated by grafting. The earlier in the year this can be done the better. When large quantities are grown, one-year-old seedlings of C. Vitalba are used as stocks; but where only a limited number of plants are wanted, roots can be taken from the plants that provide the scions (or grafts); it is the soft young wood that is used—the root may be split, and the graft cut of a wedge-shape. After grafting they should be potted, keeping the union just below the soil. If plunged where there is a good bottom heat and a rather cool surface, they will soon unite and should be removed as soon as they begin to start into growth; if left only a few days too long, they will make long, spindly growth, which it is most desirable to avoid. After removing them to a cooler house, they may require a little shade for a few days; but after they are hardened off a little, they should be fully exposed to the sun. After they have made a good start they may be potted on into 5-inch pots; using a good, rich, loamy compost. Plenty of light and air will ensure short-jointed growths, which will flower well the following season. They should remain in the open until well ripened off in the autumn but those intended for early flowering should be protected from severe frosts. It is also advisable to avoid excessive moisture at the roots.

Of the varieties belonging to the type referred to above, Albert Victor, Miss Bateman, Mrs. Quilter, Sir Garnet Wolsely, etc., are good examples.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

OWATONNA, MINN.—Lord & Johnson are erecting a new house in which they propose to grow the standard carnations and try a few novelties.

PAXTON, ILL.—Victor A. Johnson has bought an interest in the Paxton Greenhouses, and his partner, Andrew Peterson, has purchased and taken charge of the only greenhouse establishment at Hoopeston.

Cool Rooms for Florists' Use.

[A paper read before the Florists' Club, of Philadelphia, by H. C. Geiger, of the Floral Exchange, Philadelphia.]

In opening a discussion as to "the best methods of building cool rooms for florists' use," we are launching our boat upon a comparatively unknown sea; for while much space in our trade journals has been devoted to the important subject of the heating of our houses for the production of fine flowers, but little, so far, has been printed about the best mode of caring for the product. Much depends upon the cutting and packing of flowers in order that they may reach the hands of the retailer and his customer in good order, but it is equally important that the storage room, in which the cut bloom is kept until shipment, should be built in as perfect a manner as can be devised.

The subject divides itself into two departments, that of the retail store and that of the grower; and though the use of the words "cooling rooms" seems to imply that this paper should refer chiefly to what is needed by the grower, let me say a word, in passing, about the retail store. Unhappily we have not as yet in practical use any other than the one designation for "ice box"—a name that is chilling and rather repellent in many ways. The great advance in our profession and the critical taste of our customers make it quite essential that a handsome flower case shall be the chief attraction of every store. I have in mind what is, to my taste, the ideal store—one in which all the fixtures are of white marble, the walls of white tiles and the ceiling colored in pale Nile green, pink and silver. In this store the flower case is of white marble, lined with white tiles and is large enough for a salesman to walk into it. But as such a box is beyond the means of most florists, let us consider one of more modest pretensions.

"Many men, many minds," but it seems to me we can all concur in one thing, that the practical cooling box should be of plain but good design outside, should have several compartments for displaying flowers and at least one large compartment for keeping stock, not to be visible. The glass doors must be of double glass with an air space between, the glass to be hermetically set, else moisture will collect between the panes. Many fine cases are mirror-lined but to my taste white tiles are preferable, as they show the flowers to better advantage and are free from the objection to the mirrors, of clouding in time.

I cannot better illustrate my meaning than by describing a handsome case which was built in our city last summer and has given good service. It is of oak, four feet wide, sixteen feet long and about nine feet over all in height. It is divided into three show compartments separated by plates of glass, and has a fourth compartment closed from view by a mirror door. The rear wall is lined with mirrors, the ceiling and floor of white marble. Under each compartment is a deep drawer, zinc-lined, used for greens. This drawer receives its cool air from the compartment over it by means of some holes pierced in the marble floor. There are three ice chambers on the top, and the ice is put in from above. The lighting of this box is effective. The electric globe is placed in the vent for hot air along the front; and while it sheds a glow over the whole box, it also serves to make an upward draught for the warm air to the ice chamber. The temperature of this case is, in summer, 50°, with one and a half tons of ice weekly; and in winter 45°, using one ton of ice weekly.

In passing to the second part I have several plans to offer you, which have the merit of having been tried and found successful and some of which are simple enough to build from by any handy man. Though very careful in every statement made here, I am only an amateur in this line, my sole experience having been obtained in the building of the successful room at Edgely. In building a cooling case or a larger cooling room, it will be money saved if the matter is placed in the hands of an expert builder, one who has studied the subject carefully, for, if the box is not built in accordance with scientific principles, it will be a source of constant expense and annoyance.

A very effective cool room now in operation in Chicago is similar to a root house, no ice being used. The details have been kindly furnished by Kennicott Bros. Co. They are as follows: Size, thirty-four feet long, eleven and one-half feet wide and seven and one-half feet high; cost, $800. The walls are of stone, twenty-four inches thick and cemented on both sides to keep out the frost. The walls are stripped with 1x2-inch strips, and the floor and ceiling with 2x4-inch strips; the spaces filled with asbestos; two layers of strong building paper put on and then the inside boarding. The walls come twelve inches above ground and have a window on each side, six inches high and thirty inches long, so that two or more windows can be opened to allow circulation of air. The windows must not be opened on the side on which the wind is blowing, as dust will come in. By watching this room you can keep roses for from one to three weeks in winter and from four to eight days in warmer weather. The room is in service from October 1 to June 1, when recourse is had to regular ice-boxes. If this room is entered direct from outdoors, a storm door must be built and the outside door must always be shut before the inner one is opened. This plan seems to recommend itself for its simplicity. Doubtless many growers have a cellar that could be turned into such a room without much expense.

Now, we will turn our attention to the plan of a room which has been caring for the cut of some 50,000 feet of glass, devoted to roses alone, near Philadelphia, and is recommended for its simplicity. The size of the finished room is about 8x12 feet and eight feet high. The side walls have 3x4 studs, put the three-inch way, then a lining of one-inch boards, the space between filled with powdered charcoal, one ton being used. Next comes, on each side, an air space of one inch; then a lining of boards; another one-inch air space and a final lining of boards inside; then on the outside the drop siding, making a wall thirteen inches thick over all, with four air spaces, each one lined with building paper, sides as well as ceiling, and six linings of boards. The ceiling is made in a similar way except that the rafters are six inches deep, giving a six-inch space to be filled with charcoal. The ceiling is made to have a slight rise and two one-inch pipes are run through the ceiling, at the highest point, to allow escape of hot air. These pipes have a metal cap in the cool room, to control the outlet. The floor is of cement, with a link of terra cotta pipe, set upright, with the bell of the pipe flush with the floor. At the bottom of the pipe, which is three feet long, is a French drain, so that surplus water can be disposed of without carrying it out.

The ice bunker is made large enough to receive cakes of artificial ice, is lined with galvanized iron and runs the entire length of the box, where the drip runs off in an iron pipe to a small barrel, from which an overflow pipe runs outside. This bunker, into which the ice is put from outside, works well; but it seems feasible to assume that it would give off more cold air if openings were made on the sides low down, the only opening at present being all along the top, which must do duty as an escape for cold air and an intake of warmer air. This box was always quite dry when seen by me, and the flowers sold from it speak for themselves. The owner offers the suggestion that an air-loft with a shingle roof be built over it to keep off the sun and to give air circulation. The ice bill is $2 per week in summer and $1 in fall; and often there is none in winter. The room is entered from the packing shed; the door is made as thick as the walls and rebated in regular refrigerator style. I am not able to give the cost of this box, but any carpenter can supply the figures, as it is of simple construction.

A letter just to hand from the owner of the box contains the following: "While any carpenter can build this box, it is a broad question with us whether it would not be economy, in the first place, to employ a practical refrigerator builder; in other words, while the expense at the first off-start might be greater, would there not be economy, in the long run, by the saving in the consumption of ice and the consequent less expenditure on that item? It takes practical knowledge to build cooling rooms for roses as well as it does to grow roses." All of which agrees with my remark in a foregoing part of this paper.

In constructing the cooling room which we find very successful at the nurseries of the Floral Exchange, Edgely, we had at hand an icehouse 14x18 feet, adjoining our packing room, which we used as a basis. We first stripped the stone walls with 2x3-inch strips, then put on two linings of one-inch boards and four layers of heavy paper, the inside lining being of poplar. The sub-ceiling had four linings of boards and four layers of paper. It is important to let the paper lap around the corners of the box and to use a quarter-round bead to cover the joint after the lining is up. The floor had a bed of ashes, then three inches of granulated cork, in which were laid the sleepers to receive the yellow pine flooring. This plan was adopted by the builder, owing to the damp nature of our ground at that point. One small window, double glazed, opens to the north. The ice bunker, well designed for its purpose, runs across the center of the box, the ice being put in from the outside. The size of the bunker is five feet wide over all, three feet nine inches high and twelve feet long, holding two tons of artificial ice. Cold air is emitted from the lowest point and also from six openings, one and a half inches wide, running the whole length of both sides of the bunker. The warm air strikes the covered sides of the bunker and finds its way to the top. For fuller explanation see detail sketch. The drain is run off in a metal pipe covered with wood to avoid moisture. Overhead we have an air loft three feet high, with openings on three sides and a vent in the roof. The racks for the shelving are made of three-quarter-inch pipe, and the shelves are of poplar, this being the best wood to use for all inside work.

The size of the room is fourteen feet long, twelve feet wide and ten feet high. We can put in it 10,000 roses at one time if necessary. We have tested the keeping quality, with the result that roses kept for two weeks, provided they were not sprinkled before they were placed in the room. The temperature varies from 50° with an outside temperature of 97°, to 45° in winter. In extreme weather, when the thermometer was 10° above, the temperature got as low as 28°, as we were running the room without any ice at all; but upon our placing some ice in the bunker, the temperature rose to 42° and we had no further trouble. The weekly requirement is two tons in summer and one-half ton in winter, but from this same supply we get all the ice that is used in packing roses for shipment. This room is free from moisture, and one can light a match on any part of it. Its cost was $300, this being only for the interior work, as the walls and roof were already in place. Letters patent cover the design of the bunker used in this room. Any one wishing to use it will please address the Thackara Refrigerator Co., Philadelphia.

At Hinsdale, Ill., we may study what has been called "the best cooling room in the west." The details have been kindly furnished by Bassett & Washburn, who write that the house was designed for them by the general superintendent of the Armour Refrigerating Company and that he has spent much time in perfecting the plans for it. This is a large affair, being fifty feet long, twenty-four feet wide and twenty-eight feet high from basement floor to the eaves. It cost, a few years ago, $1,500, but Bassett & Washburn think it could not be duplicated now for less than $2,500. The size is larger than is needed by most of us, but the construction can be applied to smaller houses. The basement, of stone, is eight feet high, and the walls are cemented on both sides. The floor is four feet below the ground level, is made of cement and drained by two 3-inch drains. Two small double-glazed windows give light. The upper walls are built as folls. The uprights are made of 2x6 inch joists, sheathed on the outside with 1-inch boards; with then a layer of heavy wax paper, on which are nailed 1x2 inch strips, to form an air space and to take the drop siding. On the inside first comes the sheathing of 1-inch boards against the studs, then a layer of best 1-inch hair felt, fastened in place by 1x2-inch strips and covered with a layer of wax paper. Over this comes the last line of 1-inch sheathing boards, on which are nailed 2x2-inch strips to keep the ice from bruising the lining, making a wall thirteen inches thick, exclusive of the 2x2-inch strips. A sub-ceiling (details not sent) separates the ice chamber from the air loft, which has a high pitch, shingle roof with vents in the ends and two in the peak. The frame sides above the stone basement are twenty feet high to the eaves, and on one side is provided a door through which ice may be put in. The house will hold 150 tons, but ordinarily only 125 tons are put in; and when once filled the house is not re-opened until the next year's supply is secured.

The cooling of the flower room is accomplished in this way. Beams 4x12 inches, placed eight inches apart, run across the ceiling, to support the weight of ice above. A zinc floor is then laid over the beams, covering the entire space, with a "V-shaped" gutter formed between each beam. In this gutter is collected the drip from the ice-chamber, cooling by contact the air of the storage room. During warm weather moisture forms on the gutter, caused by the frequent opening of the door to bring flowers in. This has been overcome by making small gutters of wood under the zinc, to catch the drip, which is slight at any time and only occurs in hot weather. All drips are collected in closed drains and run outside. On the zinc floor of the ice-chamber are placed 2x4 inch joists, six inches apart, to receive the ice and protect the zinc floor from injury. Warm air vents run independently from the ceiling of the flower room to outdoors to remove warm air. What moisture is needed is obtained from the pots of water in which flowers are placed. Bassett & Washburn recommend that a large vestibule be built in front of the door to the cool room, to prevent the rush of hot air every time the door is opened. It is also an excellent place in which to keep carnations, lilies of the valley, sweet peas, violets and Harrisii lilies, by hanging a curtain in front of the door to keep the air off. While this house was costly to build, the owners write that they would not be without it for ten times its cost and if it gives them the same comfort that ours gives us, we can very easily believe them.

Many of us hope that the day of ice is passing away and that we may find it to our advantage to put ammonia plants in large places. I am indebted to Samuel S. Pennock for the following description of his successful plant, and beg to read his letter in full.

"The cost of plant, including compressor, electric motor, condenser, belting, shafting, piping, cooling tank, small outfit for making fifty pounds of ice daily, placing all machinery, piping, etc., in position, also including insulation of two rooms, each twenty-one feet long, ten feet wide and eleven feet high, with shelving and two patent doors, was about $2,700, not including the outside wall of the building. Each room gives us about 450 square feet of shelving area. The temperature is kept at about 50° in summer and at 40° to 45° in winter. When the thermometer outside is 40° or less, the machine does not have to run, as we open the windows and admit the cold air from outside. The windows are tripple-glazed and have an adjustment of "daylight" prisms to give service in the day and save electric light. During warm weather the machine has to be run about four to five hours a day, at a cost of 30 cents an hour. Of course if the doors are being opened and shut with unusual frequency, then the machine has to be run longer. The running of the machine requires very little time and attention, any careful, level-headed man being able to run it. Ten to fifteen dollars' worth of ammonia is needed in a year.

"Our system is the direct expansion ammonia system, which is preferable in small plants, and was installed by the Remington Machine Co., of Wilmington, Del. We have been very much pleased with the results so far, for, besides being a great help and convenience to us in our business, it is much cheaper in cooling a space of the same size than with ice, and gives a more satisfactory air. The air is drier, and for carnations there is no comparison, as it keeps them two or three times as well. The rooms are so arranged that one may walk in. They have a tier of shelves around the sides and a tier in the middle with alleyways between, access being had to every part. The pipes are all overhead, with drip pans underneath to carry off the water when the frost on the pipes melts. The cold air opening runs down the center of the room, and the warm air intakes on the sides. The cold storage people are very particular to have the room well insulated, and in ours the insulation, which was put in by the Ridgway Co., consists of the following: First, a coat of asphalt paint on the brick walls; then a 2-inch space filled with ground cork; then two 7/8-inch yellow pine boards, tongued and grooved, with layers of brown building paper between them. Next come five layers of paper with 1/2-inch air space between each; then two more 7/8-inch boards, t. and g. yellow pine, with two layers of paper. The floor rests on brick arches coated with asphalt, then a good layer of locomotive brieze, finished off with a layer of cement. The cooling apparatus is directly under the floor. The entrance door (made by Stephenson, of Chester, Pa.,) is very satisfactory, as it does not bind and the latch works easily with one hand."

The letter of Mr. Pennock is surely to the point and I recognize that we are all indebted to him for the most valuable part of this paper.

In conclusion I would like to call your attention to an article that is worth a trial by those of you who are troubled with damp air in your cool rooms. It is a preparation of the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Co., which can be had at groceries and drug stores at a cost of 25 cents a package, and is named "Humidine." My attention was called to it by one of our wholesale dealers, who had tried it for two months with the result that his box was perfectly dry and he could then keep carnations and sweet peas where formerly the drip and moisture in the box were quite detrimental to them. One package was enough for two months in a box 4x10 feet.

Celosia Pyramidalis.

Get a good strain of Celosia pyramidalis of either the crimson or yellow variety, and you will find them most useful for the conservatory, bedding, or as market plants for decorations. During the last week I have used a number of plants of the crimson variety for three successive decorations and they came home looking none the worse for their outing. Unfortunately they come in a little late for the season when such material is most in demand, but they compensate for this by the fact that they last such a long time, and when trade is intermittent this is a decided advantage, for they will brighten the store and may be depended upon for any emergency.

Now with regard to their culture; the seeds should be sown early in February, the young plants to be grown on in heat and as close to the glass as possible. They should be kept in the small pots until the flower spikes show, when they may be potted on, using good, rich compost and potting firmly. They may be kept in heat until the feathery spikes of the inflorescence are well developed, after which they may be exposed to cooler treatment or planted out. Fully exposed to all the light and sun the crimson variety will be very bright and the same plants will last in good condition well on through the autumn. Plants with the feathery portion well developed and few flowers last much longer than those upon which the real flowers are plentiful. A liberal supply of manure when the pots are filled with roots will materially aid in the development of the flower heads.

NEPHROLEPIS WITTBOLDII.

Wittbolds' Nephrolepis.

The George Wittbold Company will next month begin the distribution of plants of the fern which they have registered with the Society of American Florists as Nephrolepis Wittboldii and to which reference has been made in these columns from time to time during the past three years. It was in 1897 that the parent plant of their stock appeared in a bench of the Boston fern. It was so distinct that it was set aside, but little attention was paid to it for a year or so; then the patronymic of the firm was attached to it and its ultimate introduction to the trade decided upon. It is a rapid, robust grower and the stock now numbers more than 4,000 plants. The illustration shows the general character of the plant. The Wittbolds claim for it all the merits of the Boston fern, with added grace and fronds three times the width of those of equal length on the Boston fern. The convolutions of the pinnae are one of its distinctive characteristics.

When in Doubt—Send Flowers.

"When in doubt, lead flowers"—such would seem to be the cardinal rule in the social game. The flower, in fact, has come to be an established factor in the economy of society—an important part of its subsidiary coinage, so to speak. It congratulates, it concedes, it acknowledges; therefore its uses and misuses and abuses are well worth a moment's consideration.

In Mr. Aldrich's well-known verses three roses, plucked from the same bush (or sold over the same counter—for the blight of "business" is upon the whole floral kingdom), meet three diverse destinies. What would have been the fate of a fourth? Would it have withered in the hot, vitiated air of a ballroom, or frozen during a late November constitutional from house to office, or—worst of all—have been forced to adorn the triumph of some alderman-elect? For the flower has finally been pushed into politics; it cooperates with other flowers to compose "tributes." May the very excesses that have followed its advent into the municipal council chamber lead us back presently to the region of sense and propriety! When the chaste hands of Alderman Hooligan's supporters "bring lilies" to celebrate the return of the crime-broker-in-chief to his honored post, or when Alderman Casey's "Indians" jubilate over the success of toughness by means of a seven-foot chieftain done, tomahawk and all, in red carnations—then, surely the pathway toward reform should invite us, nor invite us in vain.

Essentially the carnation Indian is no worse than the "broken column" or the "wedding bell;" the results form the same idea pushed a little further, and denote a like perversity of thought and a like falsity of taste. Let us banish the incongruous, which is often only another word for the over-ingenious. In the case of flowers, a little right feeling is worth all the ingenuity and "appropriateness" in the world. Let us revolt from the rule of the professional florist, whose taste is usually as bad as that of the professional hairdresser, and whose virtuosity, when allowed its way unchecked, is as far-fetched and intolerable.

And along with incongruity, let us banish lavishness. Mass, bulk, mixture, pressure—all these are death to the flower. Try, with the Japanese, to consider the flower as an individual, and treat it with the sentiment that an individual may inspire; nobody can care for a mob—not even a mob done up in a flounce of lace paper. If a bouquet is really imperative, then let it follow the slow suavity of an andante; between a scramble of sound and a jumble of color there is but little choice. Avoid both. Give each note, each flower its chance. In brief, the flower asks of us only what the material employed in every art and metier may ask from the shaping and directing hand. The rules are but two—moderation and harmony. "Do not heap us up, do not join us together; such excess is vulgar. Do not wire us on toothpicks and force us into the similitude of all the 'appropriate' objects to be encountered in the heavens above or in the earth beneath; such misplaced and misjudged ingenuity is heinous—a stout negation of any claim to taste, to sentiment, to respect for nature's finest handiwork."—Saturday Evening Post.

A Simple Bench Support.

The accompanying illustration shows a simple device which John D. Twombly is using as a bench support at Winchester, Mass. It is just a rough casting made to fit down over the end of a piece of pipe; it just sits on and is not screwed. The upper part is fitted to hold up a cross pipe of the same size. This suggests a good use to which old, discarded pipe may be put, one of its best features being that it can be taken apart in a moment.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

The third annual convention of the S. A. F. of the Dominion was convened at Natural History Hall, Montreal, Can., on Thursday, August 16, the acting-mayor of the city delivering an address of welcome in the unavoidable absence of Mayor Prefontaine. The convention was a success from the moment of coming to order, the attendance being satisfactory and the interest very much alive.

The welcome to the city was responded to by F. C. Miller, of Toronto, who was followed by President James McKenna, who made his annual address. Secretary A. H. Ewing presented his annual report, in which he related the work of the Association during its brief career, and particularly since the Ottawa convention a year ago, and Treasurer John H. Dunlop reported upon the financial condition of the organization, which has $36.50 in the bank.

A resolution of condolence was adopted and ordered sent to the family of the late first vice-president of the society, H. Dale, of Brampton. A resolution was adopted requesting the federal government to have Canada represented at the Pan-American Exposition in 1901.

The evening session on Thursday was opened by the president, who introduced Dr. Campbell, who spoke a few words in favor of wild flowers. S. S. Bain, of Montreal, read his paper, "The Advantages of Organization in Our Business," and J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, discussed "Roses Up-to-Date." G. Robinson, president of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, addressed the association on the subject, "How to Make a Private Place Most Attractive." Each paper was followed by a lively discussion.

The second day's session of the society was favored by very fine weather and showed increased attendance. The essay of Prof. James Fletcher came by mail and was read by H. Simmers; it was followed by a lively discussion of insecticides and plant diseases. T. Manton, of Eglinton was then heard on the subject of "Herbaceous Plants," and made his remarks decidedly interesting. A gentleman from Nova Scotia talked on conditions in his district, and then the question of wages for greenhouse employes came up for discussion. S. S. Bain, J. H. Dunlop and others spoke and Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, contributed not a little to this and other debates.

Wm. Gammage, who is some times called the father of the Canadian Horticultural Association, invited the society to meet at London next year, and the vote in favor was unanimous.

The various recreative features of the programme were conducted as planned and the convention was pronounced by far the best in the history of the organization. G. V.

ROUSING MEETING OF THE FLORISTS' CLUB. — CONVENTION PRELIMINARIES PRONOUNCED COMPLETE.—ORATORY AND MUSIC AMID SMOKE.—BUSINESS CONTINUES AT THE USUAL SUMMER LEVEL.—NOTES.

The meeting of the Florists' Club on Monday evening, August 13, was a rouser. Nearly seventy-five members were present and if the S. A. F. convention should confer no other benefit on New York than making possible the harmonious, fraternal atmosphere that pervaded this club meeting it has in this alone paid well for all the effort and anxiety involved in the preparations. As to business, most of what was done was in connection with the final details of convention preparations, and, as by the time this meets the eye of our readers the machinery of the big event will have almost commenced to move, further account of this feature is not necessary, more than to say that there is no lack of either money or enthusiasm and no hitch of any kind in the arrangements now perfected to make this an event in every respect worthy of New York and her honored guest.

A letter was received from Superintendent Scott of the Pan-American Exposition offering to all who should apply, diagrams and complete information relative to the horticultural department of the exposition. J. N. May was appointed a committee to express in the form of a club resolution the sympathy extended by every member to Edwin Lonsdale and family in the sad bereavement that has recently overtaken them. Daly Bros. exhibited their beautiful pink sport from Geranium Contract, named 'Lounpeck,' and a favorable report on same was made by the exhibition committee.

All regular business having been attended to the meeting resolved itself into a "smoker" under the care of the entertainment committee. John Westcott, of Philadelphia, responded to a call for a speech by saying that after seeing the scores made at New York that afternoon his faith in Philadelphia's ability to capture all the convention trophies had been rudely shaken. Sam'l Henshaw, just returned from Europe, gave an entertaining account of his visit to the Crystal Palace rose show and the sweet pea exhibition at London, also a very guarded narrative of what he saw in Paris. Harry May, home from Richmond, Ind., on a visit, endorsed the advice of the late Horace Greely and told why he liked the west better than the east. Mr. Philcox, late of St. Louis, Mr. Atkins, fresh from a foreign trip, and others were drawn upon for pleasant remarks, and Messrs. Plumb, Cleary, Butterfield, Wallace, Stewart, Le Moul, Schmutz, Birnie and Herrington contributed with great success to the musical department of the affair. A talk on the Chinese question by Alderman Morris and a dance by Mr. Hogan were received with unbounded enthusiasm. Altogether it was a royal good time.

Business continues at the regulation summer notch and very little worthy of record has transpired during the week. A hail storm on Sunday afternoon took some of the Long Islanders by surprise, smashing glass more or less severely about Woodside, but that was nothing compared to the astonishment created by the tour of a certain Fifth avenue florist through Twenty-eighth street one morning this week endeavoring to get a $60 check cashed. It might as well have been $60,000, the Twenty-eighth street people say.

Dunne & Co., who have come to be strong factors in the sheep manure market, have just installed a mill at their factory with capacity for pulverizing fifty tons a day.

Lena Hart's store on Madison avenue was burned out on Friday, August 10.

Philadelphia.

TRADE CUT DOWN BY EXTREME HEAT.—SOME GOOD STOCK AVAILABLE BUT PRICES ARE LOW.—MINGEY LEAVES THE PARKS.—MICHELL'S NEW STORE.—FINE PALMS AT HARRIS'.—OTHER NOTES.

As the hot weather continues, and the glass now registers 100° or over in the shade daily, it certainly has a quieting effect on business. Things now seem to be at the lowest ebb. The peddlers who go the rounds every morning have a tired, dejected look that comes from the oft repeated remark, "No; nothing to-day." As a consequence, prices are away down. Very fine Kaisers are offered at $2 per hundred by these gentry, as good in fact, as the commission man from his ice box demands $4 to $5 for. There are more of them about now, as the summer houses all appear to be in full crop. Some very fair LaFrance are seen; the color is better and the few inches of extra stem they have attained make a great difference in their appearance; $3 to $4 per hundred is high. Adolph Fahrenwold is sending some very fair new crop Beauties to S. S. Pennock. Hydrangea paniculata is in and is a great help to the white design artists. Asters are getting scarcer, particularly white stock.

Thomas Mingey, who has had charge of Horticultural Hall and grounds in Fairmount Park for the past twenty-five years, has resigned. Mr. Mingey has displayed great ability in the management of this portion of the park grounds and conservatories. The bedding about Horticultural Hall has always been attractive and often unique. The city press has frequently commented favorably in its editorial columns on its appearance and the long, depressed flower bed or plateau at the west end of the hall has almost a world-wide reputation. All this has been kept up under his supervision and untiring attention, as the appropriations have been often, if not always, very meager for the maintenance of this portion of the work. Here is an opportunity for a public pleasure ground or large private estate to get a good superintendent, as Mr. Minge, who is just now in the prime of life, with the knowledge derived from such long experience, is open for such a position.

Henry F. Michell has the alterations to his warehouse and storerooms, 1018 Market street, well under way. When finished there will be a fine basement 20x190 and five floors each of the same dimensions. A freight elevator at the rear and an electric passenger lift in the center will make all but the top floor, which is reserved for grass seeds, available for wholesale and retail business. It is a great improvement and when finished will certainly make a grand store, which we will take pleasure in further describing.

As convention week draws near, time seems to fly and the day of departure will surely find some with work still to do before they can get away. The greater number of the delegates will go Tuesday afternoon, but there are many who say that Tuesday morning will suit them better. When they do all get away there will hardly be a corporal's guard left to make up the funeral designs and attend to the watering. It should certainly be the banner visiting delegation.

W. K. Harris has of late years been making a specialty of specimen decorative plants. The particular stars of his collection this season are some $75 arecas. They are certainly dandies and well worth the figure, and more, to anyone desiring such fine stock. Boston ferns are now favorites and divide interest with the rubbers. "Wm. K." was quite a while finding out the Boston fern but he now has it in all sizes and whole houses full of each.

The Floral Exchange trophy, the Queen of Edgely cup, together with the Detroit cup, have been displayed in Pen-nock Bros.' window the present week. They make a fine show and attract considerable attention from the passers by.

Chicago.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—COOL, RAINY WEATHER SUCCEEDS THE HEATED TERM.—STOCK GRADUALLY RECOVERING.—GOOD FLOWERS SELL WELL.—SURPLUS OF OUTDOOR MATERIAL.—WHAT GROWERS AND BUILDERS ARE DOING.—VISITORS FROM AFAR.—NOTES HERE AND THERE.

Things are a little better this week but Chicago has not yet fully recovered from the heat of the preceding period. In those eight scorching days before rain fell forty-four people died of the heat and the total death record of the city reached the unprecedented total of 577. Of course there was no trade so long as the high temperature held, not even funeral work despite the many deaths, for they were largely among the poorest class. With the first cool breath business picked up, and it has been increasing ever since, but stock has suffered so greatly under the fierce rays of the sun that there was nothing left to do business with. A few days of reasonable summer weather have served in a measure to restore normal conditions but there are now too few good roses and carnations and too many that are distinctly bad. The demand for short Beauties is more nearly up to the supply but low prices still rule. The general average of all sales is also low because of the fact that very little can be done with the indifferent material which predominates. Sweet peas are not so plentiful but asters, gladioli and other summer flowers are still too many, cheap and slow sale. Of asters, particularly, the overstock is decided. There is considerable good stock but a great deal more that is almost unsalable at any price. It is facetiously related that some of the retailers who are occasionally favored with funeral orders now procure their material by standing in the door of some wholesaler's singing "Annie Rooney" or "Two Little Girls in Blue" until they have accumulated the required number of bouquets of asters, which doesn't take long but isn't always pleasant, for frequently some of the stock is pretty old.

The Wittbold Company is in the midst of a very considerable improvement to their place. They have added a long, high show house on the Buckingham place side, to the east of the store, and have built two houses in the rear, each house equipped with five benches, one of them being elevated, over the center aisle. This elevated bench has also been put in all the old houses which would allow it, and thereby they have gained the bench room of another house. A new boiler is being put in, a 60-foot stack is in course of erection and various other improvements are under way.

B. J. Blameuser, of 718 Wells street, married Josephine Gerbel a few months ago and the sea of matrimony has been so rough of late that last week he caused Josephine to be confined in the Detention Hospital, but Dr. Hunter, of that institution, after four days of her society, decided that she was not insane and induced Mr. Blameuser to withdraw the charge, with the result that his wife is now at the home of her relatives.

As an indication of the prevalent feeling of prosperity, it may be cited that the Moninger Company has this year built more greenhouses than during any similar period in its history and is now greatly rushed, so busy, in fact, that their Mr. Rupp will miss the convention for the first time in years.

U. J. Virgin, one of the leading members of the trade in the south, came up from New Orleans on Monday, taking advantage of the merchants' excursion which brought so many southerners to Chicago. He was enroute to the convention and will be here again for a few days on his way home.

H. Schiller's new conservatory on West Madison street, will be a great improvement over the old place, being one of the best in the city, and will put him in a position to do a big business there next season.

The Art Floral Co. has rented the J. B. Seward place, Forty-seventh street and Greenwood avenue, for a term of years and the managers contemplate building a store and range of greenhouses.

Mrs. E. H. Hunt returned this week from the lake resort at which she has been resting. At the same time C. M. Dickinson resumed the cares of business.

John Brod, who bought the Schiller greenhouses at Niles Center, now has two stores in town, having opened one at 616 Wells street and purchased F. Kitzinger's place at 867 Milwaukee avenue.

C. L. Washburn's family is summering near Muskegon, Mich., with a party of Hinsdale people, and Mr. Washburn goes over nearly every week to spend Sunday and perhaps a few other days.

George M. Garland, whose iron gutters are a feature of nearly all important greenhouse establishments in the west, will attend the convention and exhibit his specialty.

A. L. Randall is still at St. Joseph, Mich., where he went early in July, and is feeling foot loose and fancy free, with C. H. Fisk assuming the cares of the business.

John Blanck, at 160 Forty-third street, has renovated his establishment and is now resplendent in a new dress of white paint. He had a good season and expects another.

S. Garland, father of the iron gutter man will attend the convention. He was a western grower long before the war, when the population of Chicago was 30,000.

Daniel Branch has two big sago palms in front of his place on Indiana avenue, a sign which he who runs may read that an up-to-date flower business is close at hand.

Out at Washington Park Fred. Kanst has the geraniums and cannas in most attractive form. The latter advanced rapidly in the recent hot weather.

Walter Retzer is busy repairing the two high pressure boilers which heat his place and getting things into shape for a cold winter.

W. L. Palinsky is building a new and modern store at 66 Palmer avenue, with a palm house 18x75.

Vaughan's Seed Store and W. W. Barnard & Co. are now showing fine lines of seasonal bulbs.

McKellar & Winterson have just received a carload of fine new designs in metal wreaths.

E. Hobbs, out on Indiana avenue, is remodeling and modernizing part of his glass.

Mrs. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn's, leaves to-day for two weeks in Colorado.

Visitors: Albert Haish, of the Memphis Floral Co., Memphis, Tenn.; Wm. N. Campbell, secretary of the Park Nursery Co., Pasadena, Cal.; Emil Glauber, of Glauber & Webb, Denver; Chas. Siegl, Joliet, Ill.; H. C. Peterson, Lake Geneva, Wis.

WESTBORO, MASS.—Arthur George has purchased the greenhouse on the Brigham estate and will remove it to his own place.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—John Mender has just installed a Furman boiler, purchased through Riemer & Radmer, who are working the greenhouse trade thoroughly.

BANGOR, ME.—Bangor's floral parade on August 9 was very successful. Many of the carriages, especially those decorated by Carl Beers, received favorable mention from the press and people. Among the many elaborate decorations the six-horse coach occupied by the Tarratine Club and decorated in yellow and white, proved very attractive. The float owned by Louis Kirstein, representing Real Estate, was very artistic.

THERE has been a slight reduction in the price of double strength glass, except on greenhouse sizes.

ALL convention visitors are requested to add the letters "S. A. F." after their names on the hotel registers.

THE price of iron pipe, which has been soaring, is again within reach of a man with a moderately long pocketbook.

THERE may be some delay in starting the glass factories September 1 because of a difficulty over the question of wages.

MICHAEL WINANDY, the veteran greenhouse builder, says that by the use of iron gutters he can save ten per cent in the cost of construction.

THERE will be a supply of New York souvenir postal cards at the AMERICAN FLORIST stand in the convention exhibition hall. Ask the man for one.

THE American Florist Company's Directory supplies the only complete list of florists, nurserymen and seedsmen of America. It is invaluable to wholesalers.

THE first session of the New York convention of the S. A. F. will be called to order at 9:30 a. m., Tuesday, August 21, instead of at 10:30 as announced in the preliminary programme.

GENISTAS plunged outside should be partially lifted two or three weeks before taking in and the overlapping roots cut about one-half, thus inducing the plants to make fibrous roots in the pot and guarding against a sudden check in taking them in.

THE next issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST will contain a complete report of what cannot fail to be the greatest convention of the S. A. F. It will be a particularly valuable advertising medium. Send copy at once.

In view of the present scarcity of large sizes of Easter lily bulbs, renewed interest attaches to the illustrated article showing what Robert Craig & Son accomplished in 1899 by planting three 5-7's in a 6-inch pot. The article appeared on page 146 of the AMERICAN FLORIST for September 2, 1899.

THE late Benjamin Cant, the famous English rose grower, who died at Colchester recently, made his first great hit with roses in 1853, when he secured Gloire de Dijon, Jules Margottin and General Jacqueminot. In the course of his life he won 2080 silver cups, pieces of plate and first prizes for roses.

Fragrant Mignonette.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please state which variety of mignonette is the most fragrant? Size of spikes is a secondary consideration. H. N.

The most fragrant mignonette, all things considered, is the true Miles' Hybrid Spiral, but there are several factors which affect the fragrance of mignonette and if it is grown under unfavorable conditions, the odor is very materially damaged. To produce the sweet, refreshing fragrance it should be grown cool, with an abundance of air in all favorable weather, and when cut and put in water it should never be allowed to stay in the same water over twelve hours, but should be changed at least twice daily, cutting a small piece off the bottom of the stem each time the water is changed. Then mignonette can be kept sweet in an ordinary dwelling room temperature for six or eight days. JOHN N. MAY.

Society of American Florists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The Geo. Wittthold Co., Chicago, Ill., registers Nephrolepis Witttholdii, originated in 1897. Fronds two and one-half to three feet long and ten to twelve inches wide; pinnae undulating or wavy in all growths; texture leathery.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

The White Fly.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I am troubled with a white fly in the greenhouses during the winter months and wish to know of a remedy. Unlike many other greenhouse pests, this one flies. It seems to favor the heliotrope, tomato and cucumber. It is very plentiful toward the latter part of spring and hard to destroy. Tobacco smoke appears to have no effect on it and I have used slug shot, tobacco dust and fir tree oil without success. About a month ago I cleaned out one house and gave it a thorough fumigation with sulphur; but now I find a few of the pests are making their appearance again. W. D. T.

There is only one sure remedy for the white fly that infests tomatoes, etc. It is the x1 all fumigating compound. This is costly apparently, but not really. Try a sample 2-ounce bottle and use according to directions. It will kill all aphides, thrips and mealy bugs. E. O. ORPET.

OBITUARY.

FATHER LANGLOIS.

Father A. B. Langlois, an authority on Louisiana botany, died at Martinsville, La., August 1, aged sixty-nine.

LOUIS MENAND.

Louis Menand, the veteran florist of Albany, N. Y., died at his home August 15, aged 93. The late Mr. Menand's name is quite familiar to our readers, more especially on account of his autobiographical notes which appeared in these columns some years ago. Mr. Menand's entire life was devoted to horticulture. He was a native of Burgundy, France, and arrived in this country September 7, 1837.

DAVID G. YATES.

David G. Yates, a prominent nurseryman of Germantown, Philadelphia, died suddenly at Holland Springs, Maine, on Saturday, August 11, in his 64th year. The nursery was formerly conducted by Miller & Yates. Charles Miller, who is landscape gardener of Fairmount Park, sold out some years ago to Mr. Yates, who has since conducted the business under the firm name of David G. Yates & Co., although he was the sole owner.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—It is estimated that the Henry Dale estate is worth $55,000, of that sum $15,000 being in personal property.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—McGregor Bros. have incorporated with $50,000 capital stock. The incorporators are Frank, David, Harold, Roy and Allan McGregor.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOIGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

TUBEROSE bulb growers report the crop looking well to date but badly in need of rain.

ARTHUR M. KIRBY, of the Peter Henderson Co., New York, has been visiting seed farms in Quedlinburg.

L. A. BUDLONG COMPANY succeeds L. A. Budlong, grower of pickle products, onion sets, etc., Winnemac Station, Chicago.

CHARLES A. HEATH, of the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, has returned from a two months' trip to Europe and the Paris Exposition.

ONION sets are being rapidly harvested around Chicago. As a rule the sets average large and quite a percentage will screen out when run through a 1-inch mesh.

Onion Sets.

There was this year an increased acreage of onion sets over that of last year in the vicinity of Chicago. The yield is fair but the quality impaired by being generally too large.

All things considered, the probabilities are that there will be less merchantable sets harvested than last year at Chicago.

In Ohio and Kentucky the same conditions exist. In the west and northwest the crop is less in quantity and rather better in quality.

Jurors at the Paris Exposition.

"Can you tell me," inquired the American, "what that company of people is doing in that flower bed?"

The speaker stood in front of the chateau de l'Eau on the Champ-de-Mars, and she waved an umbrella in the direction of the Eiffel tower as she spoke. I followed her gesture and saw a group of ten or twelve men skipping nimbly about smelling violently of this bush and that and following each spell of sniffing with a period of impetuous writing in small note books. They seemed both to smell and write at the command of a leader, distinguished in the flower bed by the unusual dexterity of his skipping.

"Madam," I said, with the awe in my voice that I felt in my heart, "that is a jury."

As I spoke the company in question darted forward, made a final plunge at an inoffensive rosebush, and, collectively, departed. The man whose flowers had just been examined bowed and scraped his visitors out of hearing. I would leave any duty at any time to see any jury walk past. The members go in martial order and if they could only be provided an accompaniment of music the warlike spirit would be complete. There is always a captain and some brother or sister for rear guard. Everything is done in a body; united action is a juror's watchword; all he waits is his captain's command to trip up to the nearest wall, peck lightly at this tapestry or that, and then to inscribe in his notebook for weal or woe that exile's fate. One peculiarity I have noticed in juries is that there is always one lame member, one whose eyes trouble him, and a third whose hearing is bad. The result is that there is always somebody behind the main body of the procession, another whose affliction necessitates his coming directly in contact with the object for award, and another who must needs call for a repetition of any orders given by his leader. Juries are international organizations. Orientals, still clad in their foreign habiliments, walk arm in arm with well-fed Englishmen, talkative Americans, studious Germans and bewhiskered Frenchmen united for the moment in a common effort to select the best from an imposing display of canned peaches.

When it comes to clocks every juror has to listen to every clock tick and wind them all, and when there are cuckoos pass judgment on the quality of the bird. The importance of a juror's task is never more fully recognized than when one sees him discourage an occasional exhibitor. A certain air of finality is the external manifestation of a juror's unspoken conclusion.

"Not on our list."

The whole jury system, as employed for exposition awards, is briefly summarized as follows: Feel always, eat if possible, look as a last resource. In the educational departments the third method is universally practiced. I am certain no more impossible subjects either for touch or taste have ever been presented to the human race than one may meet in those terrible buildings devoted to monographs on education and to the school census.—Jessie Trimble in the Chicago Record.

SHIREMANSTOWN, PA.—John F. Rupp has bought a lot on Locust street of A. Sheaffer and will enlarge his facilities.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—James Goodhue anticipates a good fall season. He has benched 2,000 chrysanthemums and the plants are unusually fine.

WABASH, IND.—Alonzo Ulsh, proprietor of the Vernon street greenhouse, has leased E. T. Overman's greenhouses and will have charge of the business of both. Mr. Overman, who is chairman of the prohibition county central committee, will devote all his time to the campaign.

Now is the Time

To make arrangements with us for your supply of cut flowers for the season of 1900-1901. A large part of our business is along the lines of just such arrangements as we should like to make with you, arrangements which call for regular, all-season shipments of such material as you require. We are able to hold trade of this character season after season because we have the stock to meet all requirements, including the cuts of such growers as the South Park Floral Co., of New Castle, Ind.; E. G. Hill & Co., and Mrs. E. T. Graves, of Richmond, Ind., and others whose stock is unexcelled in this or any other market. We not only have the right kind of stock, but we handle it right, pack it right, and bill it right. In fact, if there is anything about our methods which isn't right, we promptly make it right. We seldom fail to satisfy a customer. ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀

Just a Word to the Growers

Before making arrangements with any wholesaler to handle your cut next season, it will be to your interest to see us. We can convince you that we are the ones best equipped to make your stock pay you. Our store is the largest, best lighted, best ventilated and most centrally located in Chicago. We have an established business—have handled, are handling, shall handle, large quantities of flowers to good advantage, but we can handle more. It is not necessary to say anything about payment, for since we started, four years ago, we have paid every grower every cent we owed him every week. We have all the capital we need to keep this up. Write to us, or better yet, come to see us about what we can do for you.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO. J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.;
GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE big eastern nurserymen are finding the west and northwest profitable fields for cultivation.

THE Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., reports a prospect for an unusually heavy fall trade.

NURSERYMEN in the Rochester and other centers are booking numerous orders for fall exportation to Canada.

THIS season's abundant fruit crops and the reasonable prices generally prevailing should prove something of a stimulant to planting.

THE Smith & Powell Co., Syracuse, N. Y., have sold their greenhouses and flower business to P. R. Quinlan, but will continue the nursery business.

At the Douglas Nursery.

The name of the late Robert Douglas is probably more widely known among planters for effect than is that of any other westerner, as it is safe to say, and certainly not undeserved praise, that no other nurseryman has had such a potent influence in encouraging the planting of coniferous trees in the Mississippi and upper Missouri valleys. Robert Douglas was the pioneer in the work of educating the public to a knowledge of the beauty and desirability of conifers. Beginning, as he did, at Waukegan, Ill., in 1848 his knowledge of his subject was obtained at first hand. As a co-worker with Parry, Engelmann and Sargent he will long be remembered, but his greatest fame will doubtless rest upon the fact that he was the introducer and popularizer of the Colorado blue spruce, that gem of the Rockies.

At the Douglas nurseries pines, spruces and firs are grown by the million. Here the first thing that strikes one's eye is the amount of ground covered by the tall screens under which a man may walk with comfort and examine the myriad little seedling pines at ease. The seed beds are usually eight to ten feet wide, separated from one another only by a narrow walk in which are planted the posts supporting the cross pieces, which in turn hold up the brush and branches used for shading material. It is desirable that these screens should be situated on high ground and well drained situations, as low, damp grounds encourage the development of fungi which are fatal to the young seedlings. The little trees go from beneath the high screens to other beds in the field, where they are pricked out a few inches apart and where they are shaded by lath screens. These screens are supported by short posts which brings them only a few inches from the top of the plants. This system gives the plants partial sunlight and assists them in becoming inured to outdoor conditions. From the beds the plants go into nursery rows, and then follows a system of annual root pruning which has for its object the development of a good system of roots.

In the case of those conifers which vary considerably in color and the value of which depends upon deepness or purity of color, as, for instance, the Colorado blue spruce, Engelmann's spruce and concolor fir, the work of selecting the best specimens begins when the young plants are set out in the nursery row. It is here that their characteristic tints are shown and the profit of growing these specimens will largely depend upon the percentage of blue specimens secured. This, in turn, depends upon the type of tree from which the seed was collected. Careful collectors can insure a grower a much larger percentage of "blue" spruce than one will obtain from the ordinary commercial grade of seed.

The Douglas nurseries in the past have been almost exclusively growers of coniferous trees. The demand of recent years, however, has induced the present proprietors to extend very considerably the area devoted to ornamental shrubs and that branch of the nursery is being rapidly developed.

On the Douglas homegrounds are some noble conifers, including the original Colorado blue spruce, to bear evidence of Robert Douglas' skill. It is doubtful if at any other place are there as large, as old or as well developed specimens of the blue spruce, Douglas fir, hemlock and Norway spruce.

SAGINAW, MICH.—C. L. Roeser, principal stockholder of the Roeser Implement and Seed Co., has assumed the interests of the other stockholders and is now sole proprietor of the business.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The Rhode Island Horticultural Society has issued its schedule of prizes for its September and November exhibitions. Copies may be had by addressing the secretary, C. W. Smith, 61 Westminster street.

TORONTO, ONT.—While the recent exhibition of the Toronto Horticultural Society was largely an affair of amateurs, several well known growers were represented. W. H. Groff, of Simcoe, had a splendid display of gladioli, and the Dale Estate, Dunlop and Steele & Briggs showed roses, carnations and sweet peas.

SEASON 1900-1901.

CAPITAL . . . $10,000.00

To the Grower :

We want to call attention to our large increase in trade, and are contracting more help and building more counter surface to handle our increase. Still, with all, we want "new growers," but we want them to begin with the dull season or at the opening of the season, September 1st to October 1st.

A few facts: Shippers who expect best returns ought to SHIP US, for we have a business of long standing and trade built up. We pay all growers each week with statements, no matter how much we have to trust out. Having capital we can afford to carry accounts in the interest of the producer.

All we ask is a season's trial, and we can PROVE we can do by you as good and a little better than you have been doing, and, as above stated, the "CASH" each week. Come in and see us; have a talk, and we will convince you that if you are to change Brokers, we are open to handle all No. 1 stock we can get this season.

Yours respectfully,

IF YOU Don't Buy Cut Flowers From Us,

WE sell to the house you DO buy from, so indirectly we sell to you. If you don't want it that way, send US your orders direct and WE will save you their profit. Our Beauties, Kaiserins, Meteors, Perles and Field-Grown Carnations are the best that come to this market. We will have a large stock right along and hope you will add your name to the list of customers this season. We will serve you promptly with good stock and no "cinch" prices so prevalent on so-called shipping orders. Two shipments daily from our greenhouses: 8 a. m. and 2 p. m. We cut from 7,000 to 10,000 daily. All stock carefully selected for shipping. No charge for P. & D.

At Flatbush.

Thursday evening, August 9, was a hot one but the convention is close at hand and the heat doesn't count when half a dozen silver cups are waiting for an owner. Louis Schmutz made the record score for the evening and won a pot thereby, which he put safely away with the consoling remark that a few more like it would come in mighty handy next week when he meets his friends from Boston and the west. Scores as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th

C. Zeller	98	106	101	127
Schmutz, Jr.	131	95	120	133
Wocker	130	121	89	102

Flatbush is not given to boasting, but on Tuesday night, last, there was joy in the old town; Zeller's oranges took on a more golden hue, the rubbers at Schmutz's took another stretch and Dailedouzes' carnations seemed ready to dance—all on account of the promising scores rolled up on that occasion at the Palace alleys in Brooklyn. These are new alleys and very fine, and it was the first appearance on them of the Flatbush aggregation. The same pace kept up next week will land Flatbush on very comfortable ground. Here are the figures:

The long drawn out contest for places on the team remains undecided, as at a meeting of the bowling club George Moss was elected captain of the team and given full power to select the men whom he thought would do the best. A team of associate members, with two exceptions was selected to try out a team of convention bowlers last Friday night, with the following result:

Convention Trophies.

We take pleasure in presenting herewith the list of valuable cups and other trophies offered for competition at the grand bowling tournament to be held at New York city in connection with the convention of the S. A. F. The contest, for which not less than twelve teams are entered, will take place on Friday, August 24, at the Palace alleys, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Third avenue, beginning a 9 a. m. Teams must consist of six men each and each individual must be a member of S. A. F. in good standing for the year 1900. The Edmund M. Wood and Queen of Edgely cups are Florists' National Bowling League trophies and all clubs competing for these prizes must become members of this national association. All entries of teams for the tournament must be made not less than forty-eight hours before the hour set for the opening of the contest. Entries should be made with the chairman of the New York Florists' Club's committee on sports, Theo. Roehrs, 494 East One Hundred and Seventy-sixth street, New York city. As indicated below, the ladies will also be given an opportunity to win some pretty souvenirs of the great event.

LIST OF TEAM TROPHIES.

The Lord & Burnham cup, to the club making the highest total in three games.
The Hitchings & Co. cup, to the club making the highest score in the third game.

HOT WEATHER CONTINUES AND BUSINESS IS QUIET.—STOCK POOR.—USUAL QUANTITIES OF OUTDOOR MATERIAL.—NOTES.

Business is quiet. The hot weather is still with us and is having a bad effect on trade as well as on stock. Roses arrive in very poor shape and go to pieces almost before they get into the retailers' hands. Some few Beauties arrive, but they do not amount to much in either quantity or quality. Very few gladioli are consigned, but asters, tuberoses and carnations are in average receipt for this season.

The Koenig Floral Company filed an application for incorporation on August 8. The capital stock is $2,000, paid up. Otto C. and John L. Koenig have nine shares each, and Katie M. and Amanda Koenig have one share each.

The Vale of Cashmere Company, located in the Odeon, is often required to satisfy the curiosity of its customers as regards its name. Mr. Gibbon has selected a name that is original and a good advertisement.

Fred. S. Plant returned home Tuesday from a boat trip to St. Paul. M.

ROSSVILLE, ILL.—James Culbert is building two houses, called for by his increasing trade. The new structures will give him 3,000 additional feet of space.

KOKOMO, IND.—W. W. Coles has been entertaining his brother-in-law, J. O. Graham, of Little Falls, N. Y., another of the men who know how to grow Kaiserin to perfection.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—A young fellow named Fred. Chassis has been sentenced to ninety days in jail for defrauding Mendenhall of stock. His game was to order cut flowers by telephone in the names of Mendenhall's customers and then call for them, representing himself as a messenger. He carried it a bit too far.

The Pan-American Exposition.

On entering the grounds from Elmwood avenue the first place I visited was the service building, which is completed and occupied by the various officers of the administration. The grounds are all planted with handsome shade trees and many fine groups of hardy shrubs. Around the buildings are flower beds with all the various climbers running up on wire. The beds are filled up with hardy perennials, with a few beds of heliotropes, vincas, fuchsias, etc. The lawns are well kept up by using plenty of water. The seeded is much better than the sodded lawn.

They have the exhibitors' grounds laid out and well seeded. The many beds are all prepared, ready for planting entries this fall or early in the spring. A number of beds are planted with roses, hydrangeas and phloxes. There will be a great many more planted later, with bulbs and hardy stock. They are taking good care of the stock and it is growing finely. They are planting all the aquatic plants of all the native and cultivated sorts up and down to the canal, and it will be a great sight when they are in good growing condition. The canal will soon be ready to let the water in, as they are putting fine gravel in the bottom to keep the water clear.

At the propagating houses there is a large force of men at work. Many thousands of plants are now ready for this fall's planting, such as hardy perennials; many of these will be kept in cool frames till early in the spring and the tender plants will all be kept in the greenhouses. They also have many thousands of vines in boxes which are making a fine growth. I saw a large bed of Vinca minor, about 50,000, ready for planting as background for the beds, in the spring.

The buildings are all growing along fast and it looks as if everything will be completed in time. X.

"White Star Brand," the best selection of Grandiflora type of Narcissus offered to the trade, and florists to whom we have supplied same in past seasons will have no other. They are strong growing, free blooming and show little of the tendency to come "blind" as does the "grandiflora" usually supplied. Please order early.

Our Specialty, GROWN for us by Experienced Florists, dug only when well ripened and cured in the shade. They are as free from disease as possible. First deliveries now ready. The stock can be carried in fair shape dormant and can often supply good, sound roots until December. Write for prices and samples. We carry large stocks.

Under proper treatment these can be forced for Christmas. A valuable addition to the holiday list of cut flowers and should pay big. These have been successfully forced for two years past. Per 1000, $16.00.

This Japanese novelty is a good seller and a money maker. If you have not done so, try them. Easily grown, sell quick. The demand has exceeded the supply every season. Order 100 of our agent.

BUSINESS ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advertisements are too often used. Not only as a medium to sell our goods but the one who buys them. As I never sell those I sell to, I use this medium to induce all that I possibly can, to stop off at Philadelphia (either going to or returning from the Convention of the S. A. F. O. H. in New York), to inspect my greenhouse plant.

For up-to-date appointment, it is one of the best in America. It consists of over nine thousand feet of plate glass, and fifty-five thousand feet of the best greenhouse glass. However it is not to the structure of my place (which is interesting to many), that I invite close scrutiny, but the magnificence of the stock.

Such stock is only possible to be grown in fine houses, and nurtured with skillful hands. As we have long been noted as the best Rubber (Ficus Elastica) growers in the world, it is almost needless to say that many thousands are here, showing our noted skill. Areca Lutescens which for beauty and grace are the peer of all palms, we have them in majestic form, towering from ten to fifteen feet high, and corpulent. Boston Ferns (Nephrolepis Exaltata Bostoniensis), have captured much of our attention this year, and our three houses of them show the care of a specialist. Pandanus Veitchii and Pandanus Utilis we have in quantities in the best of condition. Dracaenas in varieties and many other decorative plants.

It was not my purpose in this letter to give a full list of what I grow, but to invite you to come and see; then you will say that, "One-half has not been told."

Take car marked 49.h and Chester Ave. on Walnut street and ride to 49th and Chester avenue.

VARIOUS CONDITIONS IN EASTERN MASSACHUSETTS.—DRY WEATHER RETARDS CARNATIONS.

After a month of unusually dry and exceedingly hot weather, we are experiencing a week of almost steady rain and the thermometer has dropped from the vicinity of 100° to 60°. Although the sudden change in temperature is almost too much of a good thing, the rain is badly needed and will be of great benefit to various crops in the field. Carnations, especially, were sadly in need of rain and are not nearly as large as at this time last year. Of the newer varieties Crocker has made the best growth, closely followed by The Marquis and Mrs. Lawson. Crane has suffered severely from stem rot in many localities and Bradt has also been affected. No one in this vicinity has begun housing carnations yet, but the houses are being repaired and gotten in condition and another week will probably see lifting in full swing. Roses are in fine condition and Liberty looks very promising. Chrysanthemums are coming along nicely and the number planted is equal to last year.

H. F. A. Lange and C. C. Lange will attend the convention and are the only delegates from here of whom I have heard. Lange is finishing a new house 27x150, cement walls and 16x16 butted glass.

H. A. Cook, of Shrewsbury, is not satisfied with his water supply and will sink an artesian well and put in a steam pump. A. H. L.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—James Souden, for the past eight years general manager of the greenhouse department of L. L. May & Co., will enter the employ of L. S. Donaldson, of Minneapolis, in a similar capacity. Mr. Donaldson having purchased the establishment of the C. A. Smith Floral Co.

Continued to Sept. 1st.

100,000 plants for sale at half price and leas to make room.

Roses—20,000 strictly A1 plants, 3½ and 4-in. (big fellows), Bride, Perle, Meteor, Maid and Golden Gate, only 4c; worth 10c. The same in 2½ and 3 in., only 3c; cheap at 6c.

Smilax—15,000 double extra, guaranteed as good as you ever planted, $1.00 per 100, $10.00 per 1000; as many as you want.

Geraniums—10,000 Bruanti (dbl. scarlet) and S. A. Nutt, the two best selling Geraniums of the age; Rose Geraniums and 10,000 other leading bedders; strong 2½ and 3-in., only $1.50 per 100. Bear in mind this is only the price of Rooted Cuttings, and you can't buy them for double that in a month.

Dbl. Fringed Petunias and Coleus—In superb collection. Ageratum Princess Pauline and White Lady, only 1c.

Fuchsias—Strong 4-in., $1.00 per doz.; 2 and 2½-in., $1.50 per 100.

LITTLE ACTIVITY EXCEPT IN THE BUILDING LINE.—EVERYBODY ADDING NEW GLASS.

It is hot as blazes and there isn't any business. The summer resorts are in full blast and so are the building operations. Nearly everyone is building or has built this season and a great many are not only adding to their glass but are remodeling old houses. The following now have constructions under way, although some of them have been previously reported as contemplated.

Henry Smith is adding a new violet house and is rebuilding two old structures into one large house. Eli Cross is adding two houses to his range for violet growing. Crabb & Hunter are adding two violet houses and are rebuilding three small houses into one large one for roses. Mulic Brothers are also converting two small structures into one modern one. Freyling & Mendalls are building a new rose house, James Schols is putting up a house for general stock and the Grand Rapids Floral Company is adding two houses. Hill & Pohlmann are building three violet houses and Charles Chadwick is putting up 40,000 feet of glass, mostly for carnations. It looks as though Grand Rapids' output would be materially increased this year, doesn't it? G. F. C.

ELKHART, IND.—A. H. DuBois, of the Elkhart Floral Co., and John Sutlif, of Hill's Greenhouses, are on a bicycle trip to the home of the former at Peoria, Ill.

About Novelties.

The love of novelty is inherent in human nature. New drinks and amusements have their vogue if a test proves satisfactory; new styles in dress may be seen and examined, but how hidden behind the insidious description in printer's ink is the true character of the plant novelty grown from seed? How true to the alluring description of the catalogue will be the product of the tiny seed that costs so much? Only time will tell. Novelties produce more disappointment and, again, more pleasure than all the balance of the catalogue. Ninety per cent of them are failures, yet the other ten per cent more than make up for the disappointment of the majority.

This year has produced three good novelties, two in the seed line and one among tuberous plants. The new "miniature double sunflower" is worthy the occupancy of any garden. In the flower the center is quite double, two inches in diameter and composed of a multitude of small, narrow, yellow petals, while the outer ray petals are broad and an inch in length. The flowers are borne on long stems, last well and are quite decorative.

Next comes the pink ostrich-feather aster, a good companion to the white form introduced a few years ago. To the lover of dahlias who has not grown the new cactus variety, Aegir, there is new pleasure ahead. It is an early bloomer and a good grower. The flowers are some four inches in diameter. It is aptly described as follows: "An entirely new and distinct form in cactus dahlias. The petals are tubular or quilled, twisted and arranged in the most fantastic yet regular form; color a rich, warm cardinal scarlet." In this case the writer could not draw upon his imagination, as the flower itself exceeds in beauty anything words could express. W. C. E.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE

LARGEST STOCK IN THE COUNTRY

... IN PERFECT HEALTH

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.

Specimen Christmas Plant from which Our Stock is Propagated.

This is one of the most striking plants that has been introduced for many years. The habit of the plant is compact and dwarf, making handsome specimens 14 inches in height and breadth. Its chief attraction is its extreme floriferousness, the entire upper part of the plant being literally covered with its brilliant, clear, pink flowers to such an extent that the foliage is usually hidden. It has been grown extensively around Boston, New York and Philadelphia, and brought in in splendid shape for Christmas sales, and the entire stock grown was sold at prices ranging from $2.50 to $4.00 each, wholesale, the same plants retailing at from $5.00 to $10.00 each. It promises to be more extensively grown than ever for that purpose and is undoubtedly one of the most useful Christmas plants now in existence.

GERANIUM JEAN VIAUD—(Bruant).

The grandest Pink Geranium of them all. Stocky growth; incessant bloomer; flowers of largest size, in immense trusses. Flowers are semi-double, on order of Beaute Poitevine; color is exquisite light rose. We have a large amount of stock planted out of doors and offer strong young plants from 2-inch pots ready October 15th. Price, per doz., $1.25; per 100, $10.00.

IMPORTED JAPANESE FERN BALLS.

Florists will find a ready sale for these either Dormant or in Leaf. The supply last year was not equal to the demand. Ready in December—Order Now. Price, each, 50c; doz., $4.00; 100, $30.00. Write for prices on large quantities.

Seeds and Temperature.

The experiments conducted by Mons. E. Schrebaux in relation to the degree of heat seeds will endure without injury to germinative power, to which reference was made last week, naturally leads to the query as to whether any severe tests have been applied to seeds for the purpose of determining in what temperature they will keep longest and best. I have been surprised this season to find wrinkled peas and dwarf French beans, kept in a very dry room and in an average temperature of 50° and simply in canvas bags for two years, gave first-rate growth; so good, indeed, as to lead to the impression that a further storage of a year would have done them no harm. Still, in the keeping of seeds so very much depends on thorough maturation, and the warm season of 1898 contributed to that end thoroughly, as also did last season. It may not be generally known that consignments of seeds sent to India, Africa and other hot climates are subjected to considerable warmth first.—Germinal in Journal of Horticulture.

PALMS.

Helpful Reminders.

Palms, dracaenas, crotons and pandanus should all be cleaned and shifted by now and should be in a shaded house. The best shading I have ever found is what is known as Aurora C sheeting, tacked up by first putting the tack through a wooden label to prevent the head of the tack tearing through the cotton cloth. The fancy-leaved caladiums should be in the same house and so should the torenias, but without the shading, for summer and fall decorations. Such plants do nicely together during summer. The house should be syringed frequently in the walks during hot weather, but, although it should be well ventilated, avoid strong, continuous draughts.

In a similar house should be the old plants of Begonia incarnata, shifted and ready to make fine specimens for Christmas. Here, also, you should have your plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and your potted cuttings of poinsettias and Euphorbia Jacquiniflora. Space the plants properly and look to the drainage of every pot. Do not allow wilting. You can make larger poinsettia heads, and with less labor, by planting in the open bench but bracts grown in this way require more care to prevent wilting when cut and storekeepers prefer the plants in pots, as they may be kept longer and are frequently sold that way.

You have probably examined the list of geraniums and determined with which to stock up for next spring. It is well to plant your propagating stock inside where it will keep growing continuously while you make cuttings. In making up your list be careful not to discard any variety merely because it is old, but because there is something better.

You should not neglect training a number of plants of Clematis paniculata on strings for cut flower trade in the autumn; they make beautiful strings and pay better than sweet peas; if cut and placed in water over night they handle well.

GOOD SHOW ASSURED FOR NOVEMBER.—WELL KNOWN FIRMS PROMISE EXHIBITS.

At the meeting of the newly formed Florists' Club on August 3 it was shown that there is every assurance of success for the big flower show to be held in the large pavillion at City Park, November 7, 8 and 9. Not only chrysanthemums, but the choicest of other flowers as well, will be there. Among the eastern firms which have already promised exhibits, are Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich.; the Chicago Carnation Company, of Joliet, Ill.; E. G. Hill & Co., of Richmond, Ind; Fred. Dorner & Sons Co., of Lafayette, Ind; Dailedouze Bros., of Flatbush, L. I.; C. W. Ward, of Queens, L. I., and J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia. The Lawson carnation will be shown for the first time in Denver and many other novelties will arouse the local interest.

BEGONIA LIGHT PINK LORRAINE

There is an honest difference of opinion as to preference in the two shades of pink in the original Lorraine and its Light Pink sport—about equally divided, I believe—the ladies generally favoring the more delicate shade, whereas the sterner sex lean towards the higher color.

But when the two varieties are sufficiently plentiful to be grown side by side in most greenhouse establishments, there can be but one opinion as to which of the two has the better or stronger constitution, and that will be without a doubt LIGHT PINK LORRAINE. This is said without a moment's hesitation, based upon my own experience with the two varieties growing side by side here.

Its most important value as a plant for the home, however, is its superior lasting qualities, which the following unsolicited letter from the well-known firm of Pennock Brothers, Philadelphia, fully verifies:

MR. EDWIN LONSDALE.

PHILADELPHIA, December 26, 1899.

DEAR SIR:

We wish to tell you how much we are pleased with the sport from Begonia Gloire de Lorraine having delicate pink flowers which you sold us. It is of value not only for the exquisite color and largeness of its flowers, but what is of even more importance than these qualifications to the retailer is its lasting qualities.

In decorating our window last week, two of these plants were put in amongst a number of the original Lorraine, and while the plants of the older Lorraine lost their flowers badly, the sport is today in as good shape as when put in, and in decorating yesterday they were again used.

Our customers seemed to like it also, for they were the first to sell, and had we known these two were in the window, they could have been sold many times over.

Thinking you would be interested in knowing how well it has done with us, we are, Yours very truly, (Signed), PENNOCK BROTHERS.

TRADE QUIET AND SUPPLY ADEQUATE.—
WHAT THE GROWERS ARE PLANTING.—
ROSES ALL BENCHED.

Trade is very quiet and the supply of stock is equal to all demands. Outdoor flowers are not so plentiful, owing to dry weather.

J. R. Freeman has four houses of roses planted. One is filled with Bridesmaid, about 1700 plants, and the other three are occupied by Beauty, Bride, Golden Gate, Perle and a few Liberty, also a bench of a white sport of Mermet. La France and Kaiserin planted in solid beds for summer blooming are doing very well. Cyclamens are coming on nicely. Carnations are held back somewhat by dry weather.

Clark Brothers have four houses planted with roses, American Beauty, La France, Kaiserin, Brides, Bridesmaid, Carnot, Sunset, Wootton, Duchess of Albany, in all about 9,000 plants. They have also benched about 4,000 chrysanthemums.

Norton Bros., Brightwood, D. C., have built a new house for carnations and violets, 18x96, heated by hot water.

A. Gude & Brother have finished planting their new range of six houses, having benched 20,000 rose plants, including all the usual sorts. P. G.

GENEVA, ILL.—C. J. Reardon, who has been with W. P. Harvey, has gone to Calumet, Mich., to take charge of the new commercial establishment of A. E. Lutey.

SANDY HILL, N. Y.—John L. Watkins & Son have their place of 5,000 feet of glass in first-class condition and are preparing for a heavy fall trade, which they confidently expect.

SANDUSKY, O.—The greenhouse and stock of J. C. Gooding, who recently filed a petition in bankruptcy, have been sold to D. J. Mackey, who will repair the place and put a competent florist in charge.

ANNUAL OUTING OF THE FLORISTS' CLUB.—ONLY DRAWBACK THE ABSENCE OF CERTAIN FACTIONS.—WINNERS OF THE CONTESTS.

On Wednesday of last week our annual outing was attended by about seventy-five, but the absence of some is unexplained. I think that at least one day in the year should be given over to all as a day together. The games were looked after by E. Bruecker and W. H. Grever. The ball game was the feature, between Scott's employes and the other florists. After an exciting five innings in which many funny things occurred, the game was won by the All Scotts, 15 to 5. The hop, skip and jump was won by D. Scott, W. Grever, second. The 100-yard race was won by W. Grever, S. Reichert, second. The fat men's race was won by Wm. Scott, the married men's race by W. F. Kasting and the three-legged race by Grever and Reichert. Joe Speidel, of Palmer's, won the delivery boys' race. The bicycle race was a good one and was won by E. Bruecker, Grever second. At the end of the contests we repaired to the Bedell House for supper, followed by dancing.

The weather has been very hot for the past week, making it almost impossible for florists to work. Sunday there was a decided change, a fall of at least 20°, but it is now very warm again.

The delegation for New York is making all preparations and a good crowd is sure now. W. A.

The Weathered Conical Boiler, Seven Sizes, THE Weathered Patent Improved Sectional Boiler

FOR WATER OR STEAM HEATING . . . . .
ABSOLUTELY SECTIONAL IN EVERY PART.

A Few Points Claimed for this Boiler :

- Simplicity of construction.
- Sectional headers.
- Smoke-box on front or back.
- Maximum vertical circulation.
- Sectional ash-pit.
- Rapidity of water circulation.
- Direct or indirect draft.
- Minimum friction.
- Easily cleaned in every part.
- Grates on level with fire-door opening.
- Greatest amount of Boiler surface exposed to radiant heat.
- Heating surfaces so arranged in fire-box that the hot gases must strike every part before entering the combustion chamber.
- Each section is complete in itself, and can, if broken, be replaced very quickly, as it is only necessary to take out the bolts in the flanges, when the damaged section can be taken out and a new one put in. Should it not be convenient to put in a new section the header can be plugged and the broken section left in place until a more convenient time, and this can be done with less trouble and expense than with any other sectional boiler in the market.

1899 MODEL. Sectional View.

STATE OF TRADE AND CONDITION OF STOCK IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST. — FIRST THOROUGH TRIAL OF NEW CARNATIONS IN WASHINGTON.

There is very little business being done in the flower trade in this city at present, except an occasional funeral order. There is a scarcity of all kinds of flowers. We are having lots of trouble without worms out here, outside stock, both flowers and vegetables, having been completely stripped of blooms and foliage. Most growers have had lots of trouble with them on the carnations outside and chrysanthemums and other plants in the greenhouse. The retail stores in this city are not kept up to the usual standard found in places of this size throughout the eastern and middle states, very little effort being made to attract custom. There seems to be a great deal of jealousy among the craft here, and some of them claim that eastern methods and cultural hints as laid down by the trade papers will not work here, but we fail to see it that way, for when we get to that state where we can not learn a little from the other fellow it is time to shut up shop. This is the first year that the new kinds of carnations will be given a trial in this part of the country. The only varieties of recent introduction grown before were Flora Hill and probably 100 plants of G. H. Crane.

The Washington Floral Company has nearly 10,000 plants of the newest kinds, including G. H. Crane, Mrs. Bradt, America, Glacier, Peru, The Marquis, Olympia, Mrs. Lawson, Cerise Queen, Genevieve Lord, Ethel Crocker and Gen. Maceo. Most of them are looking well, notably Genevieve Lord, G. H. Crane, Cerise Queen, Glacier and The Marquis. They have just completed a house 30x110 three-quarter-span.

All of the growers around this city plant tomatoes in the houses when the violets and carnations are nearly done in the spring, and reap a good harvest from them during June and July, a great number being shipped to Alaska, mostly in the green state. OLYMPIA.

PLANT CULTURE

HITHERTO ADVERTISED AS "COMMERCIAL PLANTS."

By George W. Oliver, Propagator to the U. S. Botanic Garden, Washington, D. C., and late of the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh.

A Working Hand Book of Every-day Practice for the Florist, Gardener and Nurseryman and all those who intend to grow plants and flowers, in the greenhouse or garden, as a means of obtaining a livelihood. Each and every article is written in concise, simple language, and embodies wholly and solely the experiences of the writer. The plants dealt with not only comprise all those which are commonly handled by the trade, but include numerous deserving varieties not so fully known. Chapters are given on

Stove and Greenhouse Plants, Bedding Plants, Vase and Basket Plants, Vines, Hardy and Tender, Bulbous Plants, Ornamental Grasses, Water Plants—Aquatics, Ferns and Lycopods, Hardy Perennial Plants, Hardy Shrubs;

Also a lengthy chapter of General Directions, including Propagation—Seeds, Grafting, Budding, Layering, Hybridization, Potting Plants, Soil, Mulching, and Watering. Concluded by a very complete index to all subjects mentioned. This reliable cultural book has been gotten up for use, not ornament, therefore the price has been fixed at a figure within the reach of all, while it contains more real practical information for those for whom it is intended than is to be found in much more pretentious works costing ten and twenty times as much money. Strongly bound in buckram to stand rough handling and plenty of it.

DO NOT PUT IT OFF ANY LONGER

READ WHAT SOME WELL-KNOWN FLORISTS SAY ABOUT THE KROESCHELL BOILER.

PURCELLVILLE, VA., December 5, 1899.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: I write to state that the No. 12 Boiler we bought of you last summer is taking care of 30,000 feet of glass with great ease. Last night the temperature outside stood at 20° with the wind blowing a gale, but the night fireman maintained an even temperature with but very little draught, and I believe it will give us all the heat we need in the coldest weather. The boiler is all and more than you claim for it and is entirely satisfactory in every respect.

A. B. DAVIS & SON.
W. S. DAVIS, Mgr.

BOWMANVILLE, ILL., April 10, 1900.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: The Boiler I bought of you is supplying 11,000 feet of 4-inch pipe and would easily supply 12,000 feet. It heats a section of five houses, or 35,000 feet of glass, 60° or more if needed, and I have found the boiler perfectly satisfactory in every respect.

H. BAUSKE.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 11, 1900.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: We did not get the No. 6 Boiler we ordered of you; you could not make it on account of the strike in your shop. Am very sorry we did not get it, as yours are the best Boilers made. We have one No. 5, bought almost five years ago, and we heat four houses 12x150 feet with it, or almost 3,200 feet of 4 inch pipe. When we are in need of another Boiler we shall buy yours.

AUG. BURMEISTER CO.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 13, 1900.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: I can say that the two No. 12 Boilers we purchased of you last year proved very satisfactory, indeed, heating our Rose Section of 50,000 square feet easily. What would another Boiler cost, only built two feet longer, for delivery this fall? An early reply will oblige.

WEILAND & RISCH.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 14, 1900.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: In reply to your inquiry I would say that the last Boiler you sold to us is giving the same uniform satisfaction afforded by the other three, purchased six years ago. Your Boilers seem built for the purpose of causing water to boil, with economy in the use of coal. As our Mr. Louis M. Noe, of Madison, N. J., has this week placed an order for one of your No. 11 Boilers, further comment is unnecessary.

BRANT & NOE.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 13, 1900.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: Your Greenhouse Hot Water Boiler No. 3 is beyond question the best boiler made. It is taking care of 2,250 feet of 4-inch pipe with ease and I am going to build this season another house 18x112 which I expect to heat with the same Boiler. There are a number of different kinds of boilers made and we have had some of them in use, but they will not do the work your Boiler does. Should any florists want information as to what your Boilers will do, please send them to me.

Doronicums.

For making a bright display and as cut flowers, these hardy herbaceous perennials take a high place. The several species met with in gardens bear yellow flowers, and the only distinctive characteristics are in the habit of growth and size of flowers. D. plantagineum is perhaps the most stately species. D. plantagineum excelsum is also excellent, and differs but little from the type, except in growing more robustly. The flower stems of this species attain to a height of four and one-half feet in good soil. D. Austriacum is a dwarfer species, rarely exceeding two feet in height; and D. Caucasicum belongs to this group. Doronicums may be lifted from the border, potted and forced. The potting may take place late in October or in November, and the plants placed in cold frames until put into the forcing house in January. They must be very gradually forced into growth, or the flowers will lack substance and will not last long after being removed from the plants and placed in water. Good flowers are produced in March, at which season they form a welcome addition to other forced flowers.

Doronicums will thrive in almost any kind of soil; and flowering is long continued if water be afforded plentifully in dry weather. If division of the clumps is practiced annually, the stems are fewer, and the individual blooms larger than when the plants are left in the soil undisturbed for three or four years.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

Northern Seeds.

A fact that has been fully established in recent years is that a species extending over a wide geographical range varies in hardiness. The box elder of the south winter-kills at the north; the red cedar of the south is short-lived and tender at the north; the same is true of the ash, elm and other trees. That prince of tree planters, the late Robert Douglas, proved this fact with various trees, and also that the evergreens from the Pacific slope of the Rocky Mountains were not as hardy as the same species from the east side of the mountains. The proposition has not been fully demonstrated for all species, but there are certainly instances enough to show that it is a general law. In Russia the government observes very carefully this rule in all its extended work of tree planting, as they have found the Scotch pine, Norway spruce and other trees from the moist climate of western Europe short lived and tender on the dry steppes of Russia, while the same species as found in Northern Siberia proved perfectly hardy.—*N. ### SEE WHAT

This florist says:

C. HUMFELD, Clay Center, Kansas, July 19th, 1900. I purchased a No. 70 Standard Sectional Hot Water Boiler from you in August, 1898, and I do not remember that I ever wrote you anything about it. In corresponding with me you told me that other parties that had purchased your boilers in some cases paid $50.00 more for your boiler than they could have gotten other boilers of same capacity. I wish to say that I am one of them, as I paid $50.00 more for your boiler than I would have had to pay for another make. I am not sorry for it as I now see the difference in price is more than made up by the difference in value. I can speak from experience, as I have two other good sectional boilers, but yours is a terror. I have 2000 feet of two-inch pipe, 1240 square feet of radiation hung to the 70 boiler and I have my expansion tank about forty feet away from the boiler and still it gets so hot that it wants much more radiation, so I am going to have it heat another house 20x100, or 1600 feet of 1 1/4-inch pipe, or 688 feet of radiation, so that the total radiation will be 1928 square feet, but I think the boiler can heat it easily. I know I have never crowded it and if we would it would throw all the water out of the line of pipes. That boiler is all right and anybody that wants to know about it, refer them to me.

THE NEW YORK CONVENTION.

The sixteenth annual convention of the Society of American Florists has passed into history vastly to the credit of the New York Florists' Club, without doubt far eclipsing the successes which have attended its predecessors. Not only was the attendance larger than heretofore but the interest was keen from start to finish. There presentation included the whole country, several of the most distant states sending leading men of the trade, and the arrangements for entertainment were faultless. The committee of the local club has labored long and painstakingly that the machinery of the great meeting should move without a jar and the testimony of the visitors is unanimous in approval of their work. It should be ample reward.

The trade and horticultural exhibitions were particularly valuable, being remarkable for their completeness and the superb quality of much of the stock shown. Those who sought pecuniary reward in nearly every case found it in the considerable amount of business transacted in the exhibition hall and in the acquaintances formed, which will surely result in commercial transactions in the future.

Grand Central Palace proved to be perfectly adapted to the requirements of the occasion and left little to be desired in the way of a meeting place. The sessions of the society and the exhibitions were accommodated all upon the ground floor and the arrangement afforded the committee on decoration an opportunity to display their skill, of which they took complete advantage.

President Patrick O'Mara, of the New York Florists' Club, inaugurated the convention at 9:30 a. m., Tuesday, August 21, by cordially greeting the visiting delegates and assuring them of a fulfilment of the promises of hospitable and kindly treatment on the part of the New York brethren.

An address of welcome was then delivered by the Acting Mayor of the city, Hon. Randolph B. Guggenheimer. He spoke of the florists' association as one the growth and prosperity of which had always been closely identified with that of the Empire state, and of the fact that eleven years had elapsed since its last annual meeting in the metropolis, when it exhibited the perfection of horticulture and of nature's wonderland of flowers. He said the length of this interval was the only ground of complaint against the association, and he trusted that the interval of absence following the present meeting would be materially less.

After referring to the pride of New Yorkers in the marvelous growth and prosperity of the city, to-day the gateway to the wealthiest, because the most productive, country in the world, and a city which, in a few years, will be the greatest upon earth in wealth, area and population, he continued:

"That is our manifest destiny. We face the rising sun of promise and prosperity and turn our backs upon nothing American. But our great houses of trade, our public buildings and splendid residences, in fact every home in our enlarged city, would be sordid and unlovely but for the touch of the landscape gardener in unexpected places and the unpainted loveliness of God's flowers—the sweetest things that breath on earth and which have no souls to recognize their shy but imperial beauty. Ladies and gentlemen, such art as yours is universal. It is like the air or the sunshine; it cannot be confined to the gardens and conservatories of the rich. It glorifies our public parks with such natural loveliness that the little children from the tenements, who play there in the sunshine, learn imperishable lessons of form and color from the exquisite growths of nature that exult everywhere in their spring and summer pride. It beautifies the windows and rooms of all who love the odorous handiwork of nature, and transforms many a poorly furnished home into a place of delight. Therefore I welcome you to this city because the art which you represent appeals to the heart and imagination of every man, woman and child in this community."

Edgar Sanders, of Chicago, responded on behalf of the society. He expressed appreciation of the generous reception of the visitors and of the magnificent trade exhibit in the adjoining hall.

Edmund M. Wood, of Natick, Mass., president of the S. A. F., upon taking the chair, delivered a formal address.

President Wood's Address.

After one of those tactful and graceful oratorical preludes for which he is so well known, President Wood addressed himself directly to the greatest needs of the society, speaking in part as follows:

This society has contributed much to educate the florist to more comprehensive ideas and methods, a forerunner of commercial integrity and honor. It has raised the industry from a plodding, grovelling one, to the dignity of an art and to the equal of any commercial or manufacturing interest. It will compare favorably with mercantile or banking establishments, requiring the highest skill, executive ability and knowledge of the government of men. The florist, the horticulturist of to-day, is a man who by nature is a restless, changeful being. Were this otherwise, there would be no advance in floriculture or horticulture. He is tired of much of the old and is fond of the new things, new methods with brilliant effects—consequently he wants immediate results. We can safely prophesy that, as time goes on, he will become more and more of an interrogator and do more and more of his own thinking.

How little people think! This was expressed by a prominent gentleman at a public dinner in this city, when he exclaimed: "There are not 200 people in New York city who think." This, however, is a pessimistic view. We come here, many of us or all of us, thoughtless of what we can best do to promote the welfare of the society. We come for a good time. Now, I do not object to a good time myself, and I infer from your iridescent faces that you do not. Perhaps we are not unlike the two boys who were saying their prayers together. One started to say the Lord's Prayer and when he said: "Give us this day our daily bread," the other nudged him and whispered: "We've had bread long enough—ask Him for pie."

The age is intense; it is active in all pursuits; its people are more sensitive and independent in thought, and it appears to me that some method must be devised to prevent the society from disintegrating into different organizations through devotees and lovers of special flowers by such action as shall provide all that they hope to receive from outside organizations. Unless this is done, it is not unlikely that we may address ourselves to diminished audiences, if not diminished members of the society.

What are the causes and what are the remedies? First, the society is not strong enough financially. This is the most serious cause. It can do little or nothing for its members to carry out their wishes, either by money or by exhibits or by premiums. It would be far better for the Society of American Florists, if the devoted followers of special flowers contributed such sums of money as they now contribute or deem necessary for special exhibits, to a general fund to be under the auspices and direction of this society. These could be known by such names as the Chrysanthemum fund, the Carnation fund or such fund as any particular contributor or contributors may designate for their special flower.

Every enthusiast in his love for a special flower, wants a special organization. These societies never would have been organized but for the necessity of having means to develop, improve and advance the claims of their favorite flower. It seems to have been thought a necessity, if these flowers were to be improved, at the present time. I have the honor to be a life member of one of these societies, the American Rose Society, for my heart is in the rose. Yet I do not approve of these special societies if it be possible to care for them in this organization.

The instinctive and universal taste of mankind selects flowers for the expression of its finest sympathies and the universal heart of man blesses flowers. How much more is this sentiment developed in his favorite flower, the love for which burns with increasing brilliancy and strength. How difficult to hold in check the outside action which he takes to advance and improve its beauty and its variety, when the parent society is powerless to assist.

How sad the spectacle which many of you witnessed of the hold enthusiast for his favorite flower, the rose, taking possession of this society's meeting at Detroit and appealing to its members to become subscribers for life membership, when the Society of American Florists was in need of funds itself. Not the faintest effort was made to obtain subscribers for this society at that meeting, and yet it is hard to blame the enthusiasts of rose culture. The remedy for it is to put money in thy purse and expend it freely for the general good.

There are other remedies. First, by organizing the society into an association, national, if possible, otherwise under state laws with power to hold property. Second, encourage auxiliary societies in every city and large town in the country, which shall obtain their charters from the parent society and for which they shall pay a certain sum per capita, at the time of organization and annually thereafter according to the numbers and strength of the society. By this plan the society will be continually growing financially stronger and in time will be able to co-operate with the auxiliary society. It would be advisable to have a committee to investigate this proposition and report at the next annual convention. Third, by organizing the co-operative department of purchase and distribution into a corporation, which takes nothing from you but gives you money for good fellowship. What then is, or ought to be our purpose? To co-operate in anything connected with our profession that benefits the greatest number. To co-operate for the diffusion of knowledge of floriculture and horticulture and the happiness of our members, and for the benefit and happiness of mankind. But if we cast a retrospective glance, do we not see that most that has been done has been largely for self-interest.

Has the purpose been broad enough, and if so, have we performed the duties which that purpose imposes? Of the great number of florists and horticulturists and those intimately connected with us by trade, have we as members more than a small percentage? If our society were sufficiently attractive and beneficial, as it ought to be, we should have thousands join our standard, instead of hundreds. Our membership should be more active, more energetic, take greater interest in the society and band together for the common good.

Our exchequer appears to have had hard sledding, uphill and on bare ground at that. Some process should be devised by those who have the welfare of the society at heart and who feel the responsibility which it carries with it, by which money shall flow continuously into our treasury with some assurance to those who desire to promote and advance the claims of their special flowers within the society, that it will be done. We are not facing as we ought, the problems which this purpose demands of us.

Our members should be constantly thoughtful and active for the society in obtaining new members, soliciting every one who trades with them to become a member of the society, following the example set by that distinguished horticulturist, C. M. Hovey, of Boston, when he was trying to build up and extend the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He and his superintendent and clerks solicited every person who came to his nurseries or greenhouses to become a member of that society. In this manner, I became a member at the age of 24. We ought to be more resolute, definite and not, Micawber-like, "waiting for something to turn up."

You have seen the co-operative department of purchase installed. Many of you have heard the discussions and know the object, the purpose recommended to the committee appointed by the convention in Detroit; their report was read at the convention; it was printed with the other doings and sayings upon co-operation. The purpose was stated clearly and the convention believed in the object to be obtained by co-operation. The vote at that meeting was that the executive committee of the Society of American Florists, in their individual capacity, and without involving this society in any way whatsoever, should organize the corporation, as suggested by the committee. It was the sense of that convention at Detroit, in my judgment, that the corporation should have been organized, without involving the society, but since then, at the meeting of the executive committee, it was the opinion of a majority of the committee that the society did not give sufficient sanction for the organization of a corporation, and so voted to continue the co-operative purchase department, as it then existed, until the meeting of this convention. These several suggestions and recommendations are worthy of your consideration.

As an illustration of the remarkable growth of floriculture and horticulture, we may instance the great west, where in some localities it has increased in population in twenty years, 400 per cent. The increase of glass in the same time for floriculture and horticulture, is over 1100 per cent. No one could have foreseen this enormous and phenomenal growth. We here see some food for co-operation. Should we obtain all the parties who erected the glass, as members of this society, and a profit of 25 cents a box for glass, it would net a sum of over hundreds of thousands of dollars. This for only one branch of industry. We can scarcely comprehend the magnitude of the uses of glass for floriculture and horticulture. Add to the society's members those interested in floriculture and horticulture and it is impossible to estimate the magnitude of the growth and the wonderful impetus it would give the society. It is said there is a lesson, which even co-operation should learn; it has taught us all through nature, as well as in political and commercial combinations; the race which rests, and seeks the happiness of the hermit crab, very speedily decays. It is only in conquest over difficulties as they arise day by day that the solution lies. If co-operation is not to die out, or be choked, it must spread itself wider and wider. It affords the world all the advantages of competition, while it avoids the cruelties which arise from an uncontrolled and unbridled monopoly. The achievements have been so great in the past, the morality of it so suited to the individualistic temper of the Anglo-Saxon race, that we cannot doubt the result, if only co-operators will earnestly work. With opponents so active, it is evident the assiduous propagation of co-operative principles is necessary.

I will trouble you again with a few statistics to remind you what co-operation has done in England and Wales. Up to and including 1893, total sales, $2,995,530,380; net profits, $256,080,345. To 1895 by the last report inclusive, $4,070,547,775; net profits, $360,075,120. The Leicester Co-operative Society, hosiery manufacturers, commenced in 1887 with a capital of only $150; by December, 1898, the capital had increased to $204,855.

I sincerely hope that you have examined into the merits of co-operation carried on by a corporation, so that the decision here rendered at this convention, when the subject comes up for action, may be voted upon intelligently.

Co-operation ought to be continued by the corporation, with competent officials to manage it. To-day all mankind, as never before, is interested in co-operation, to avoid being crushed body and soul by the colossal trusts. When co-operation is fully installed in the different industries it will sound the death-knell of trusts. Co-operation here will still require the parental, patient and fostering care of its friends, and of those who breathed into it the breath of life and have nursed it since its birth.

Our society had in its treasury, January 1, 1900, $855.55 and a life membership fund of $585, this amount after sixteen years of association. Does this sum seem sufficient and satisfying for all the efforts that have been made for sixteen years of labor? It pales in comparison with the association of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, organized in the year 1829, when floriculture and horticulture were in their infancy, obtaining 250 members the first year and increased to 500 members in the year 1845, with $53,000 in its treasury. This, too, when floriculture and horticulture had hardly begun to climb to the great proportions to which they have grown. They have nearly a million dollars to-day. What plausible answer can we make in our defense, that we have not accomplished more, when the country is teeming with people and wealth, to which the years from 1829 to 1845 bear no comparison? They established a home. We should have one, second to no other horticultural building in the world. Can we have it? Most assuredly, if we will it, and make it a labor of love. A home which shall bring the society an income, with an experimental station in some suburban district, where everything in floriculture and horticulture can be tested and tried, from which we all would receive a great benefit.

This home should be a place where any member can come; it should be the Mecca of the florist, where he can seek and give information; a place for the diffusion of knowledge. I believe the first home of the society should be in the city of Greater New York, it being to-day nearly the center of advanced floriculture and horticulture and which during the life of some members here will increase to 10,000,000 inhabitants. When this shall be accomplished, and is on the road to success, it will be time to consider other cities, where it may establish a home.

For sixteen years we have had uncertain existence, and until the society has a local home, a house it can call its own, its advance will be fitful and uncertain. With a local home, I believe the society will gain largely in permanency and membership. It will take upon itself a new lease of youth and vigor, and its usefulness will be felt in all parts of the country. Every department of floriculture and horticulture should here be welcomed and find here a congenial atmosphere. We should aid and encourage the science connected with our art, that we may better appreciate the elevating and purifying influence derived from a better and more advanced knowledge, which it is possible for us to obtain in no other manner.

This is the age of rapid progress and development, the accumulation of wealth with means to gratify our tastes for the beautiful. It should be our aim to lead in floriculture and horticulture and to mold public sentiment in our art. We should stimulate it so that it would further embellish and adorn our homes, our private grounds, our public parks and buildings. We have an unparalleled country, with unequaled natural advantages and we ought to be able to give those seeking information, the most advanced and particular ideas, so that each and every member of our society would be better equipped to carry forward this profession and under the most favorable methods. Such are some of the possibilities stretched out before us, and to their accomplishment, we should be inspired by a common purpose. We should allow neither discord nor difference of opinion to weaken our efforts, but work together harmoniously and unitedly, that we may be recognized in the community as a powerful influence in every branch of our profession.

The recommendation of the president in relation to a home for the society has been considered by a committee consisting of Messrs. O'Mara, Rudd and Cartledge, who will make a special report to you on the subject.

It has been suggested that the past presidents of the society be made honorary members. If you deem it wise to consider this question, it would be well to fix the status of such honorary members.

The interest developed in some of the manly sports connected with our society is encouraging. Anything which is uplifting, which brings more of us together at our convention, is welcome, and, if twenty or more clubs organized for manly sports will come to our next convention we will give them all encouragement and a hearty welcome.

The increasing demand for plants, both foliage and flowering, is no doubt due to a taste for something more permanent in homes than cut flowers. An erroneous idea has gone abroad that cut flowers at some seasons of the year are exorbitantly high, but an analysis of the prices for the year will show that the average is lower to-day than the grower ought to receive. Adverse criticism is occasionally made, which is heralded abroad by the newspapers and periodicals, that extravagant prices for flowers are charged by the growers for the holidays.

These criticisms are made by those who know little or nothing regarding the cost of cut flowers. It is the one season of the year in which the grower hopes to receive a remuneration for his efforts. He is obliged, oftentimes, to lose a crop of flowers for which he received nothing, in order that he may obtain the desired crop for the holidays, when there is a great demand for them. Did he not do this, not over half the flowers could be offered for sale in the holidays. The high prices which we hear of are only for the few flowers which are called exhibition flowers. If the grower depended for his income upon this class of his product, there would not be a foot of commercial glass in existence for the growth of cut flowers. It is to the vast volume of second, third and fourth class flowers, and that demand which comes from the middle as well as the poorer class of people, who never pay high prices for them, that the grower, and in a large measure the florist, depends for his success. Those who want, and will have, the very finest of flowers, selecting only the most perfect in form, foliage, size and coloring, and who are thoroughly conversant with these qualities, are willing, as they ought to be, to pay the price which is demanded for them.

Wild flowers, beautiful children of the woods and fields, is there not a future for them in the greenhouse? If made a specialty, would they not find a welcome and a place in every home? Here is another opportunity for youth to seize and develop.

In his peroration Mr. Wood spoke of the growth of our industry and emphasized his belief in its possibilities and in co-operation.

Judges of the Trade Exhibits.

The following were appointed to make awards on the exhibits in the trade exhibition:

Plants—Herman Lips, J. Francis Huss, Robert Hunnicks.

Bulbs and seeds—Wm. Plumb, E. Weinhoher, John Bertermann.

Report of the Secretary.

MR. PRESIDENT AND MEMBERS:—One year ago we met at Detroit under circumstances peculiarly encouraging. Confidence and stability had returned to the business interests of our land, we had the advantage of a popular city centrally located, and it was not unexpected that the convention of 1899 was most successful in all respects and the results highly gratifying to those intrusted with the management of the society's affairs. The usual full official report, a 168-page volume, was published in the fall and mailed to every member, and a detailed account of the proceedings at Detroit having also been widely disseminated throughout the trade papers at the time, it is not necessary now to make any extended report of that event. Among the strong features of the meeting were the fine trade exhibition, in which some sixty firms were represented; the interesting papers presented and discussed, especially those on rose house pests, by Edmund M. Wood on hybridizing carnations, by C. W. Ward; and on the development of public patronage, by J. F. Sullivan; the very practical report of the work of our legislative committee, the spirited discussion on the subject of co-operative purchase, the unstinted hospitality of the Detroit people, the splendid illuminations in honor of our visit and the large number of flattering invitations received for the next convention. We accepted the invitation from the New York Florists' Club, seconded by the fighting governor and Mayor Van Wyck, and here we are.

The annual meeting of the executive committee was held in New York city on January 16, 17 and 18, 1900, all the members of the committee being present except one. Besides the usual convention preliminaries many other important subjects closely connected with the society's welfare were considered with careful deliberation, among them the organization for co-operative purchase of greenhouse supplies. The committee, feeling that, in a matter involving so heavy a responsibility, the society's wishes were not indicated with sufficient clearness in the vote of instructions passed at Detroit, finally left the plan undetermined, and the subject will again be brought before the society at this convention.

It being announced that the New York Florists' Club proposed holding a horticultural exhibition in connection with this convention, the committee voted to appropriate twelve silver and twelve bronze medals for distribution thereat, under the direction of the New York Florists' Club. It was decided that the department of nomenclature supervision might now be transferred from the care of a special committee to a regular botanist, and Dr. N. L. Britton of the New York Botanical Garden was appointed accordingly to this office. Sub-committees were constituted to investigate and report to this convention on the matters of society incorporation and a permanent society home.

The department of plant registration has moved along acceptably since last report. It has been the means of adding several very influential names to our permanent membership list, its provisions are willingly complied with, it pays well and is evidently approved by those who have had occasion to avail themselves of its advantages. The registrations in this department since our last meeting were as follows:

August 25, 1899, by Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., Cattleya gigas atropurpurea and Cattleya Hardyana Robbiana.

September 18, 1899, by Peter Henderson & Co., New York, Canna Governor Roosevelt.

September 21, 1899, by W. E. Hall, Clyde, Ohio, Geranium Little Pink and Geranium Clyde.

September 21, 1899, by M. H. Walsh, Woods Holl, Mass., Rose J. S. Fay.

November 1, 1899, by D. Carmichael, Wellesley, Mass., Carnation Eleanor Ames and Carnation May Whitney.

November 13, 1899, by Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., Canna Olympia.

November 17, 1899, by Alex. MacLellan, Newport, R. I., Chrysanthemum Victoria.

December 4, 1899, by Robert Montgomery, Wellesley, Mass., Rose Mrs. Oliver Ames.

December 26, 1899, by Benj. Dorrance, Wilkesbarre, Pa., Rose Sara Nesbitt.

February 1, 1900, by Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., Rose New Century.

March 5, 1900, by C. Warburton, Fall River, Mass., Carnation Creesbrook.

A number of purchases of glass and rubber hose have been made for parties applying through the department of co-operative purchase, a trifling commission being added in each case, the profits therefrom being devoted to stationery, postage and other expenses incurred in the department.

The secretary's experience during another year strengthens the favorable opinion previously expressed regarding the system of membership assessments now in operation, and there seems no room for improvement in this department. The number of individuals who paid in 1898, but not in 1899, and have therefore been dropped from the membership roll is forty-six and the number of resignations two. The full number of members recorded as paid up for 1899 is 553, inclusive of twenty-six life members, a net gain of 119 over the previous year.

The new names added to the list of members in 1899 numbered 148; one each from California, Colorado, Connecticut, Georgia, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Montana, Tennessee and Texas; two each from Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Wisconsin; four from Canada, six from Missouri, seven from Indiana, seventeen from Michigan, nineteen from Illinois twenty-one from New York, twenty-five from Pennsylvania, and twenty-seven from Ohio. Since our last meeting three members have died: Alfred Henderson, September 5, 1899; J. M. Jordan, February 4, 1900; Harry Dale, July 15, 1900.

The list of plant introductions in America, published in the annual report for 1899, described 189 new things. This included twenty carnations, seven roses, five cannas, twenty dahlias, fifty eight chrysanthemums, eight sweet peas, twenty-five geraniums and forty-six miscellaneous. The list of canna introductions fell off very heavily from the previous year.

We had hopes of securing for this convention a lower excursion rate for our members than the usual fare and one-third, but all efforts in that direction were futile. It is gratifying, however, to know that the concession this time extends over practically the entire country, and further, that our organization enjoys the good will of the transportation authorities in the fullest sense, no instance of the misuse by our members of their special privileges having yet been recorded.

From a territory so strong horticulturally as that in which we meet this year, large additions to our membership are naturally expected. The confident spirit of the times, so well evidenced in the substantial gains made at Detroit, is still with us and early in the year it became apparent in the secretary's office that New York's convention would be a record breaker. It is our proud privilege now to rejoice that the period of reaction, the days of depression and uncertainty are, at least, behind us and that once more our honored society is on the high road of prosperity.

The continued cordial co-operation and cheerful assistance which the secretary has received during the year from the members is not the least among the factors in the society's prosperity, and he takes this opportunity to acknowledge the same with grateful appreciation.

WM. J. STEWART.

Report of the Treasurer

Treasurer H. B. Beatty, of Oil City, Pa., presented his annual report showing a balance in the society's favor of $1,247.58.

Reports of Committees.

P. O'Mara, chairman of the committee on legislation, made a report showing that nothing had been accomplished at Washington or Albany, but that an important concession had been obtained from Canada, by which greenhouse-grown roses, imported in leaf, are admitted as greenhouse stock. The committee complained of the difficulty in getting congress and the legislatures to appreciate the difference between nursery stock and florists' stock.

President Wood made a verbal report for the co-operative purchase committee. He said that, at a meeting of the executive committee, he reported a charter and by-laws for the proposed corporation, but the charter was rather too broad. He then suggested limiting it to the purchase of glass, pipe, hose, paints and oils. After a long discussion the opinion seemed to prevail that the Detroit convention had not given sufficient sanction for the organization of the corporation, and it was voted to continue the purchase department, though a number of the committee were willing to take stock in the new concern. He added that it would be unfortunate not to have a corporation, as he believed it would be a benefit to every member who availed himself of the purchase department, and that the department would have to be organized into a corporation in some form if it was to be continued. On motion the subject was made a special order for Wednesday morning.

H. B. Beatty, chairman of the committee on incorporation of the S. A. F., reported as follows:

The necessity of incorporating the Society of American Florists and giving it a legal existence is so obvious as not to require mention at this time. No progress has been made toward acquiring a national charter, and it does not appear to your committee that further effort in that direction is advisable. After investigating more or less fully the incorporation laws of the various states, your committee finds that the laws of the state of Indiana are so broad and so liberal that this society can be incorporated under them without changing materially its present constitution and by-laws or altering its present methods of work. We therefore recommend the appointment of a committee of three with power to incorporate the Society of American Florists, it being understood that before final action on their part, full details shall have been submitted to the members of the executive committee of this society, and have been approved in writing by three-fourths of the members of said committee. The thanks of your committee are due to Mr. W. J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for legal advice kindly and freely given.

The committee's recommendations were concurred in without objection.

Mr. O'Mara, for the committee to procure a home or permanent headquarters for the S. A. F., reported that, as the members had not had a chance to meet and consult upon plans or select a particular city, not having a fund for traveling expenses, they had done nothing. He stated that it was their intention, however, to hold a meeting during the present convention and try to outline some plan upon which action might be taken at the next convention. He gave notice that a further report would be made, probably on Thursday morning.

At this point, 11:30 o'clock a. m., having disposed of miscellaneous business, the convention took a recess until evening.

Florists' Hail Association.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Hail Association of America was held on Tuesday. Secretary J. G. Esler reported that on August 1, 1900, the 934 members insured an aggregate area of glass of 13,025,762 square feet. The total receipts for the year were $10,999.14; disbursements $8,510.58, of which $5,570.42 was for losses, $1,600 for investments and $1,340.16 for expenses. The cash balance on hand is $5,896.57. The total reserve fund is $7,526.87. During the year the society paid for 56,452 square feet of single thick glass and 18,104 square feet of double thick.

The choice of officers resulted in the re-election of the former staff: J. C. Vaughan, president; E. G. Hill, vice-president; J. G. Esler, secretary; A. M. Herr, treasurer; Stephen D. Horan, Wm. F. Dreer, Jos. Heacock, directors.

The President's Reception.

At the president's reception Tuesday evening the convention hall was thronged with a brilliant assemblage, composed largely of ladies in attendance upon the convention. Nearly all present availed themselves of the opportunity to shake hands with President Wood and indulge in a social chat with that courteous gentleman. The affair was under the auspices of the New York Florists' Club.

At nine p. m. a lecture on "Floral Decorations" was delivered by Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, who supplemented his discourse with a series of stereopticon views, showing the beautiful effects made by combinations of flowers and foliage in church and house decorations. Among these were reproductions of the notable displays of recent years, including the Vanderbilt-Marlborough and Vanderbilt-Belmont wedding decorations and spectacles in the White House in connection with presidential inaugurations.

A vaudeville entertainment concluded the programme for the day.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

At the second day's session, after the reading of the reports of judges on exhibits, the matter of a co-operative purchase corporation was taken up. President Wood again advocated the creation of the corporation. A brief discussion developed that no report on the matter had been made by the executive committee, to which it was referred at last year's convention, and therefore action now would be premature. The subject was then tabled.

Greenhouse construction was then considered in an illustrated paper by J. D. Carmody, which appears elsewhere in this issue, and for which a vote of thanks was tendered.

The rivalry between Chicago and Buffalo for the honor of entertaining the society next year developed a strong following for both cities. Edgar Sanders and W. N. Rudd championed the claims of Chicago, but the drift of sentiment was in favor of Buffalo, and upon Mr. Rudd's motion the choice of the latter city was made unanimous.

The proposed constitutional amendment to strike out of the title of the society the words "Ornamental Horticulturists" was defeated. The vote was fifty-nine yeas to forty-six nays, less than the required two-thirds in the affirmative.

The balloting for nomination of officers occupied the remainder of the morning.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The chrysanthemum society met on Wednesday and adopted a report by its secretary, Elmer D. Smith, enumerating the varieties certificated last year. A twenty-dollar cup was voted to be awarded for the best ten blooms of either new or old varieties shown at the Chicago exhibition this fall, also a twenty-five dollar prize for the Paris Exposition. A balance of $81 on hand was reported. Officers were elected as follows: President, A. Herrington, Madison, N. J.; vice-president, Eugene Dailedouze, Flathush, N. Y., secretary, Edwin Lonsdale, Chestnut Hill, Pa.; treasurer, John N. May, Summit, N. J.

The American Carnation Society.

The carnation society met Wednesday afternoon with Ex-president Nicholson in the chair, and arranged a programme for the Baltimore meeting of next year. This includes essays on hybridizing by Peter Fisher and John Cook, the latter of Baltimore; also a talk by Prof. Woods, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, on his recent investigations of the carnation, and one by E. G. Hill on carnations abroad, as seen by him in his recent travels. Additional papers are expected, treating of the methods of taking cuttings, how to cut and pack flowers and possibly on cool rooms for storing carnations.

Wednesday Evening's Programme.

The evening session opened with an address by Prof. B. T. Galloway, of the Department of Agriculture, which appears elsewhere in this issue.

Prof. N. L. Britton concluded the day with a lecture descriptive of the New York Botanical Garden, which was fully illustrated with a series of excellent stereopticon views.

Thursday's Proceedings.

At Thursday's session the committee that had reported in favor of securing an incorporation under the laws of Indiana withdrew its report and a new committee was created to renew the effort to get a national charter. It was stated that there was now a fair prospect that the effort would be successful.

Lawrence Cotter's proposed amendment to the by-laws requiring nominations of officers to be made orally and elections to be by a majority of all the votes cast, was adopted.

THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Patrick O'Mara, of New York, was elected president, and William F. Kastling, of Buffalo, vice-president. Secretary Stewart and Treasurer Beatty were re-elected.

A resolution proposed by Messrs. Kift and Roehrs was adopted, creating a committee on sports, to be appointed at the executive committee meeting in the convention city, to take full charge of all bowling, shooting and other contests, and to so arrange that these shall not interfere with the regular work of the convention.

Papers by William Frazer, of Buxton, Md., urging a large attendance at the Baltimore carnation meeting in 1901, and by William Weber, of Oakland, Md., on the improvement of the carnation, were read.

In connection with a paper read by Robert Craig, a discussion took place upon making some provision for experiments in sub-watering. It was intimated that a practical test would be made at Purdue University, Lalayette, Ind.

The necessity for establishing a permanent home or headquarters for the society was also urged by Messrs. Dean and May.

After the reading of a paper on the rose, by E. G. Hill, the convention adjourned.

The afternoon was devoted to an excursion to Glen Island, upon the invitation of the local club. On the return trip in the evening, President Wood was presented with a fine gold watch and chain, the gift of the S. A. F. Robert

Craig, who made the presentation, complimented the recipient and spoke in acknowledgement of the kindly attentions of the local club, which had made the visit of the florists a most delightful one. President Wood made a fitting response and all present joined in the refrain "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The Horticultural Exhibition.

The exhibition hall was made particularly attractive to members and visitors by the large display of specimen plants shown from private conservatories, through the enterprise of the New York Florists' Club. The beauty and perfection of this feature was a marvel to many and far superior to any exhibition yet given under the auspices of the S. A. F. Among them, perhaps the largest display, was that from the H. McK. Twombly estate at Madison, N. J. This collection of palms at the end of the hall was awarded first prize. In this group a pair of royal and fish-tail palms, very large, were quite conspicuous, surrounded by dracenas, crotons and kentias. A specimen kentia here took first prize; this plant has twenty-three beautiful leaves and measures twelve feet high. This gardener also took second prize for three distinct varieties of ferns, with Aspidium Capense, Asplenium nidus avis, with its beautiful, wide leaves, and Davallia Fijiensis plumosa. Other prizes to this grower were first on specimen cycas, second for six dracenas and first on six specimen palms, including one Pinanga Kuehii, something of a novelty.

James Dowlen, gardener for H. L. Tyrrell, Seabright, N. J., was awarded first for group of 100 square feet of ferns, a beautiful lot, among which was a fine Gymnogramma Peruviana agrophylea, quite silvery in appearance; a splendid Davallia Moreana and a beautiful lot of Adiantum Farleyense. A large table of fancy caladiums won second prize. A group of foliage plants of 100 square feet, containing beautiful anthuriums, crotons, dieffenbachias and dracenas drew third prize.

To H. Nichols, gardener for J. B. Travers, Yonkers, N. Y., was awarded first prize for specimen fern, an Adiantum Farleyense three feet in diameter; also first for three best specimens, three distinct varieties; first for group of 100 square feet of flowering and foliage plants, which was principally anthuriums and crotons; the group was, however, very attractive and perfect in every detail. Mr. Nichols also had a vase of Hydrangea paniculata blooms that were eight inches in diameter.

The second prize on specimen palm was awarded to Wm. Rennie, gardener for Mrs. Charles Pratt, Brooklyn, N. Y., for a large and perfect phoenix; this grower also took second prize for specimen fern.

G. H. Hale, gardener for E. D. Adams, Seabright, N. J., exhibited six specimen ferns, distinct varieties, which were superb, taking first prize. His Davallia Fijiensis plumosa took third as a single specimen, and his group of foliage plants took second prize; this was arranged in a circular form on the floor, a trifle crowded but the perfection and coloring of the individual plants was remarkable. His group of fancy caladiums was a revelation to many, winning first prize, as did his specimen croton and Acalypha Sanderi.

Wm. Duckham, gardener for D. W. James, of Madison, N. J., exhibited twelve stove and greenhouse plants which won first prize. He had a beautiful display of fancy caladiums and his six dracenas won first prize, as did his specimen dracena, his group of foliage plants and his collection of new and rare plants.

Edw. Wolz, gardener for E. W. Bliss, of Brooklyn, took second on six specimen ferns, third for six specimen dracenas, third for Rex begonias and his group of foliage plants won second prize. He also had a large show of coleus.

D. F. Roy, gardener for E. S. Converse, Malden, Mass., had some Rex begonia varieties which won a second prize.

John Bushard, gardener for G. E. Dickinson, Irvington, N. Y., was first for collection of cannas.

A specimen Asparagus Sprengerii three and one-half feet in diameter from L. Stern, Irvington, was awarded first prize.

A. K. Petit, gardener at the New York Deaf and Dumb Institute, took first on begonias.

Perhaps the most tastefully arranged exhibit was that of Samuel Thorn, a pond of aquatics with palms, ferns, hydrangeas, etc., arranged to form a setting for the pond. A large Cissus discolor was particularly noticeable.

A fine group from J. H. Trey contained the only bamboos which were exhibited.

A. L. Marshall, gardener for J. B. Dutcher, Pawling, N. Y., took first prize for six cannas.

P. Reiley, gardener for Wm. Brown, Buckley, N. Y., had twelve specimen crotons, winning first prize.

Everyone had a word of commendation for the grapes. The exhibit winning first prize contained one bunch of Barberosa weighing nine and one quarter pounds, grown by John Esch, gardener for Miss E. J. Clarke, Pomfret Center, Conn. The winner of the second prize was Wm. Scott, gardener for Jos. Eastman, Tarrytown, N. Y.

Trade Exhibit.

The special committee appointed to bestow the handsome cup offered by Sander & Co., St. Albans, England, for the most creditable exhibit, awarded it to Julius Roehrs, Carlton Hill, N. J.

The following were the trade exhibitors and their specialties:

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., complete collection of evergreens in tubs, small ferns and Eurya latifolia variegata.

Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago, Ill., display of Nephrolepis Wittboldii.

Julius Roehrs, Carlton Hill, N. J., large display including a beautiful lot of orchids in bloom, ferns and palms in variety.

Siebrecht & Son, New York, large display of palms, orchids in bloom, variegated pineapples, anthuriums, etc.

Robert Craig & Son, Philadelphia, large display of choice crotons, the neatness of the labeling of which was commendable; also Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and a good assortment of palms.

The Floral Exchange, Philadelphia, cut blooms of Queen of Edgely.

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, complete line of ferns and palms.

Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., a good display of geraniums, cannas, small ferns and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

J. M. Keller, Brooklyn, cattleyas and dracenas.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, very fine display of Pandanus Veitchii and Adiantum Farleyense.

John B. Cowell, Buffalo, hybrid dracenas.

Fredrick H. Dressell, Weehawken, N. J., Dracena Lindenii and Boston ferns.

HAND BOUQUET OF ORCHIDS, SURROUNDED BY OTHER EXHIBITS, AT THE EXHIBITION OF FLORAL ARRANGEMENTS, FRANKFORT, GERMANY, JUNE 22-24, 1900.

Hiram T. Jones, Elizabeth, N. J., evergreens in tubs.

Clucas & Boddington Co., New York, bulbs and palms in variety.

P. Ouwerkerk, Jersey City, evergreens in baskets.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., orchids and requisites.

John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., large display of cut gladioli and perennials.

John Peed & Sons, London, England, large display of caladiums.

C. H. Joosten, New York, bulbs, field grown rose plants and small palms.

Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass., Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

A. B. Howard & Son, Belchertown, Mass., attractive display of Star petunias and dwarf zinnias.

Daly Brothers, New Durham, N. J., a new pink geranium called Paunpeck.

Lemuel Ball, Philadelphia, palms, dracaenas and pandanus.

A. Rolker & Sons, New York, small ferns, palms, supplies, etc.

Arthur Cowie, Berlin, N. Y., fine display of cut gladioli; a variety most admired was White Lady, pure white.

R. Dryer, Woodside, L. I., display of mammoth cyclamens, palms, ferns, etc.

Elizabeth Nursery Co., Elizabeth, N. J., evergreens, perennials, shrubbery and trees.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Boston ferns, Dutch, French and Bermuda bulbs.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., Dutch bulbs, kentias, Boston ferns and Hasselt pottery, new and unique in color and design.

Alex. Klokner, Milwaukee, plant and flower vase.

Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, bulbs, mushroom sprawn and horticultural supplies.

Isaac Hicks & Son, Westbury Station, N. Y., collection of photographs showing their contrivances for moving large trees.

Dayton Fruit Tree Label Co., Dayton, O., display of label samples.

Schloss Bros., New York, ribbons.

W. J. Cowie, Berlin, N. Y., device for wiring flowers for designs.

Sultar Disinfectant Co., New York, insecticides.

New Jersey Moss and Peat Co., moss, etc.

B. Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y., paint, slug shot, etc.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., photographs of special plants.

Ed. Jansen, New York, baskets, etc.

Wm. J. Elliott & Sons, New York, bulbs, palms and horticultural supplies.

Peter Henderson & Co., New York, complete and attractive display of plants and horticultural supplies.

J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, excellent display of seeds, etc.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, florists' supplies of all kinds.

W. C. Krick, Brooklyn, immortelle letters, etc.

Henry Bird, Newark, recently illustrated pot.

Robert Kift, Philadelphia, vaseholders and flower tubes.

A. Herrmann, New York, florists' supplies of all kinds.

S. J. Limprecht, New York, baskets, sheaves, etc.

N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston, sheaves, metal wreaths, hose couplings and Japan vases.

Boston Florists' Letter Co., Boston, immortelle letters.

Whilldin Pottery Co., Philadelphia, pots and hose couplings.

Detroit Flower Pot Mfg., Detroit, pots.

A. H. Hews & Co., North Cambridge, Mass., pots, vases and pans.

W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, sod cutter and soil pulverizer.

Rustic Construction Co., New York, rustic work, baskets, etc.

Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich., pots.

W. C. Heller & Co., Montclair, N. J., seed cases.

Jennings Bros., Philadelphia, iron gutter, bench fittings, etc.

Gorton & Lidgerwood, New York, a side-feed boiler.

White Enamel Refrigerator Co., St. Paul, refrigerator for florists.

Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington, N. Y., model for greenhouse construction, heating apparatus, etc.

Geo. M. Garland, Des Plaines, Ill., patent iron gutter.

L. Wertheimer & Co., New York, jardineres, prepared cypas leaves and moss.

Emil Steffens, New York, wire work.

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., cut cannas.

Hilfinger Bros., Fort Edward, N. Y., pots.

Reed & Keller, New York, florists' supplies.

Quaker City Machine W'ks., Richmond, Ind., ventilators.

Sigmund Geller, New York, florists' supplies.

E. Hippard, Youngstown, O., ventilators.

Lehman Bros., New York, wagon heaters.

H. W. Gibbons, New York, sectional cast iron boilers.

John A. Scollay, Brooklyn, cast iron boilers.

The Herendeen M'fg Co., New York, the Furman boiler.

Stevens & Co., New York, sprayers.

Wm. H. Kay, New York, boilers, wind mill, pipe, etc.

Thomas W. Weathered's Sons, New York, cast iron boilers, iron gutter, etc.

Hitchings & Co., New York, cast iron boilers, greenhouse construction, etc. Wm. H. Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa., evergreens in pots.

A. C. Oelschig, Savannah, Ga., rubber plants and Araucaria Cookii.

Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., field grown roses.

Ives Kromskop Company, Philadelphia, a system of preparing colored slides of flowers or plants by a system of color photography.

Daniel B. Long, Buffalo, floral photographs and stationery.

J. G. & A. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., rubber hose.

Several publishing houses showed a variety of horticultural literature.

Between the Acts.

Follow New York's lead.

Genial Ned Lonsdale was missed.

The seedsmen's exhibits were numerous and remarkably good.

George Watson didn't like that kind of capitulation. There were others.

Lawrence Cotter received a comrade's cordial greeting from many old friends.

Visitors to Ed. Jansen's were unstinted in their praise of the hospitality shown.

Sprengeri sandwiches and smilax dances are the latest products of Chicago genius.

While some visitors rested in Little Germany, others saw the Phillipinos or the elephant, but all were well pleased.

Two successive tie votes for the office of vice-president will hardly be perpetrated again in the history of the society.

Good places for many men and all good men in those places was the rule with the committeemen of the New York Florists' Club.

The society members remain ornamental horticulturists in name as well as in fact, at least so says Ex-president Gude.

The white Indians of the Chicago bowling team chafed under the captain's restraint, but remained good boys and safe bowlers.

Hail Secretary Esler never ceases to be a hale fellow well met. Though repeatedly losing parts of his anatomy the remainder seems to improve.

The Glen Island ride and the enjoyable occasion there has buried that twelve years' old memory of Captain Lynch's pirate steamer, Long Branch, deep in oblivious wave.

There has never been a convention when visitors were so sure of the mistake made by absentees as in this one at New York. Make up your mind now to attend the next at Buffalo.

No little credit for the exhibition was due to the private gardeners and their active co operation. The last day was a good one for the many commercial men who complained of lack of business the first days.

What I Think I Know About Greenhouse Construction.

By J. D. CARMODY, EVANSVILLE, IND.

[Read before the Society of American Florists at the New York Convention.]

To attain the best results in any branch of industry the best methods must be employed. Especially is this true of plant culture under glass. Never until good houses were constructed was it possible to grow such roses and carnations as now gladden the eyes of mortals and make the business of floriculture a financial success. But it took many years to attain the perfection in plant houses which enables the florist to produce these perfect flowers.

Those of us on whom time has carved fantastic wrinkles and ornamented with silver locks can well remember the make-shifts and dugouts, heated by brick flues, that were once dignified by the name of greenhouses. They bear the same relation to the present commercial houses that the stage coaches of that day do to the present palace railroad cars. The progress of transformation was exceedingly slow from the fact that not everyone who has the requisite ability to grow good flowers possesses also the mechanical genius to plan and build a structure especially adapted to their best development. And it was only when the florist and mechanic combined their efforts, resulting in greenhouse building becoming a special industry, that perfection in floriculture under glass was approached.

Be it understood, I am not writing this article for those who are able to employ the specialist to place the house in position ready for occupancy, but rather for those of moderate means who go in the business of growing flowers for the love of them and with a desire, if successful, to make a living by their production. I desire also to assist the vegetable grower to put a roof of glass over his lettuce and cauliflower and relieve him from the inconvenience of the price too high but you may be sure as a rule the improvements you put on the ground will not reduce the value. If the ground selected is on the outskirts of the city, as it should be, in a short time the city will build out beyond the location and the price will go higher rather than lower. I know of many florists who by the sale of their greenhouse property late in life were able to retire with a competency, making more out of the rise in real estate than they saved in a' those years of labor by the sale of plants and flowers.

I would not advise anyone to build in a city, among high buildings or near smoky factories. A leaking gas main will in a few hours run a house full of plants. The writer has experienced loss in this way. In an atmosphere of dust and smoke good flowers cannot be grown. Locate your house so that it cannot be shaded by anything, and if you have several houses locate them so they no not shade each other. Nothing is so desirable in growing cut flowers as clean glass and sunshine. In drawing your ground plans study convenience in getting your fuel dropped from the wagon directly beside your heat generator. Do not have a deep cellar for your boiler or fire-place, as it makes it inconvenient to get the ashes away.

On the character of the plants intended to be cultivated largely depends the plan cold frame and hotbeds which are now rapidly giving way to plant houses.

The ordinary village carpenter has not the first correct idea as to the construction of a plant house, but if furnished a few sectional drawings and watched by the gardener who has seen or read up on such structures, a great many mistakes can be avoided, and greenhouses can be put up by home labor and out of home material, and the proprietor, by doing a share of the work, can save not a little of the expense. At the present time, thanks to machinery, the sash and sashbars can be obtained from the factories fully as cheap and in better shape and I would advise to patronize greenhouse builders to that extent.

The first thing to have in building a greenhouse is the ground to put it on, and right here let me say if possible have a deed for the ground before you commence building. You may think the of the houses, and by all means settle on a plan and have a complete drawing of same, both ground plan and sectional, before commencing the work. Most persons starting in this business expect to increase their range from time to time as occasion demands. Therefore the first house should be located so that it can be enlarged or built beside of and remain as part of the plant without remodeling. If it is desired to grow principally bedding plants at the start I would recommend the houses to stand with the length north and south.

The first thing to build in starting a greenhouse is a shed not less than fifteen feet wide and as long as the plant house is in width; this will furnish a work-shop and shelter to keep the new lumber dry and a place to paint the material before it is put up. I will now call your attention to this diagram as a ground plan of a range of houses I would build were I to embark in business to grow a general assortment of plants and cut flowers and had an open piece of ground. Here we have the first shed located along the north side of the plant, with a range of five glazed houses opening into it from the south. These houses are 11x100 feet each.

Now we will suppose the plant as you see it here laid out represents several years of moderately successful labor of the new beginner who years ago bargained for one or two acres of ground in the suburbs of the thriving city of Poseyville, Posey county, Indiana. He had worked in a grocery store for several years and handled flowers for the proprietor, who sold them for a florist on commission. By handling these he got a liking for them and finally decided to go into the business, though having little money but a good deal of good sense, the first year he built fifty feet of houses Nos. 1 and 2 and the potting shed across the end as a beginning. He bought sash and rafters ready made from the planing mill and with the help of a carpenter for a few days put the houses up, doing the glazing and most of the work himself. Not having the price of a boiler and pipe he resorted to the cheaper method of brick flues under the benches for the first year.

Having good success, the next year he builds fifty feet more on each house and gets a few sections of a cast-iron boiler and pipes to heat by water. I recommend water heating for small places, especially as it requires less attention and holds heat longer than steam. The third year he builds house No. 3 and increases the size of the boiler by adding more sections, and so on each year he adds more plant space, until, finding a greater demand for cut flowers, a different style of house is needed, also a different aspect, as good roses and carnations require more sun. A house for their growth should be so located as to get all the sun rays possible, so he changes the houses to stand east and west and No. 1, 20x100, with a shed to cover the entrance is his next labor.

Providence in the shape of industry, economy and good management favoring him, he finally has this plant complete without the loss of a single house by mistake of location or error in construction, a thing that seldom occurs with new beginners.

Having completed the plant the new beginner will proceed to explain some of the whys and wherefores of the construction. He built two fifty-foot houses at first instead of one of 100 feet because having to use flues to heat with they give better satisfaction than were they 100 feet long. The houses are eleven feet wide to allow a walk of three feet in the center, with four-foot side benches. The walks in most single houses are only two feet, which is too narrow for comfort and convenience. The shed should not be less than fifteen feet wide, the roof not high and nearly flat, with a tin or tar paper covering; sixteen-foot boards will make the roof. The shed is at the north, first, not to shade the houses and, secondly, to protect from cold northerly winds. The office is put at the corner as nearest to the thoroughfare, the cut flower room in the rear of the office for convenience.

Having laid out our ground plans we will now proceed to construct our houses. The first step after building the shed is to set the posts for the side walls. These should be set not more than six feet apart; four feet would be better, and of material least subject to decay. I have found red cedar best of all woods. I have also used catalpa, chestnut, locust and heart of white oak with good results. If the posts are charred on the lower end when they go into the ground it will add many years to their existence or if, after the posthole is half filled with earth, properly rammed, the rest is finished to the ground level with a grout of one part water lime cement and three parts sand and gravel it will save from rot for many years. The ingredients should be mixed dry and wet up in batches for each posthole; this cement will also keep the posts firm in position.

After the posts are set in a line and the cement is hardened, if cement is used, which is highly recommended, measure up from the ground-level about four feet on the middle post and from three to six inches lower at one end and the same space higher at the other, so as to give the gutter a pitch of from six to twelve inches in 100 feet, toward the end where you wish the water discharged; then stretch a line tight and tack on two horizontal lines of very straight boards to conform with this line, one on the out and one on the inside of the line of posts. Then saw the tops off the posts just at the top of these boards; these strips form a rest for the saw and are a gauge to cut by. They also stiffen the posts so they do not work loose and get out of line in the sawing. Now, on top of the posts, spike on the bottom of your gutter. The best lumber should be used here, and be sure there are no sappy places in it. Clear cypress is good, but if the red wood of California can be obtained it is more durable, though in the absence of either, white pine free from sap, if kept painted, will last many years. We will call your attention to this drawing which shows a style of gutter which gives me the best satisfaction. This is a cross section sketch with the dimensions as follows:

Full width of gutter bottom, twelve inches; thickness when dressed, one and seven-eighths inches; gutter sides, one and three-quarter inches; space between, seven inches; depth inside, three inches; bevel top edge the same as the sash bar, the lower end of which is tacked on top of gutter sides, and the space between the sash bars is filled with a block on top of which the lower light of the glass will rest. We prefer to have the sash bar lie on top of the gutter rather than be tacked to the side, as many do, from the fact that this way is stronger and the bar will last longer. Furthermore the drip water will run outside the house through the grooves in the sash bars. No, it will not let in the cold air, for when freezing this small aperture will close up with the ice. Sash bars tacked to the side of the gutter have nothing but the small nails and the narrow one-half-inch parting between the glass to hold the lower end up. Again, the water of condensation running down keeps the end of the bar wet and the nails will rust out and the bars soon get rotten. You will notice the bottom of the gutter is philistered out to receive the side pieces which are spiked on from the side and also from below, while the outside edge is left standing, which forms a gutter to catch drip and conduct same out along the main gutter. We show an outside wall and water table, also valley gutter for the latter. We deem it best to spike on cross heads of plank two inches thick by six inches or eight inches wide to better support the wide gutter. The differently constructed outside wall will not need this extra member. If desired the outer wall can be made with gutter omitting the narrow gutter shown in the other sketch.

The side walls should be constructed with two thicknesses of board lumber with tar paper between. The inside lumber may be of common rough boards while the outside should be of dressed flooring, tongue edge up, or, what is better, what is called ship-lap lumber, as shown in the sketch. Good weather-board, the same as used on frame houses, may be used when other material is not obtainable. If it is desired to make a nice finish, stamped sheet iron representing brick work may be used. This should be well painted inside and out and frequently coated outside to prevent rusting. In fact, paint is a good thing to have about a greenhouse and every joint in constructing should be painted before putting together and each year some portions, particularly the gutter, should be looked after with a view to painting if needed.

We now call your attention to the gable construction. You will observe the top of the ridgepole is just flush with the top of the sash bars or rafters and comes to a ridge in the center, conforming on both sides to the pitch of the house. The ventilating sash rests on top of the sash bars, or rafter, as the case may be, and the top rail is shaped to conform to the slope of the opposite side of the house. Now, on top of the sash is spiked or screwed a cap piece as shown, which shuts over the ridgepole, making the joint air and water tight when the sash is closed. The sash is hinged at the bottom to a tapered block shown here and elsewhere of the same thickness as the sash, and spiked or screwed on to the sashbars or rafters close up against the lower edge of sash.

The next sketch shows a full side view of a section of a well built eleven-foot house. Each member is drawn full size, but the length and space between them is half size to reduce the size of the drawing.

In a house of this size we prefer to use glass twelve or fourteen inches wide, and every fifth sash bar is of extra size. These are the same thickness as the others but two inches wide and extend from the gutter to the ridge pole. Between these sash bars or rafters is fitted in a cross piece and the lighter sash bars, one and one-quarter inches wide, extend only from the gutter to this header, leaving an open space when the sashes are lifted. In a house twenty feet wide and larger I would use a rafter 2x4 to every fifth row of glass, in the same manner as here shown. The joints between the sash will come over this rafter.

My reasons are that this plan makes a much stronger house than to have all the sashbars extend to the ridge pole, and it is no more expensive, for the material in the sashbar that in other plans is hid under the sash will more than pay for the extra size of the rafters. Again, you have the full space of the open sash for ventilation and less shadow. Where the sashbars are long, I bore an inch hole through these rafters where support to the bars is needed and run a three-quarter-inch pipe through the length of the house; this stiffens the whole structure and supports the sag of the bars better than a wooden purlin.

I advise the center posts to be of one and one-half-inch pipe, as looking neater and being more lasting. One every ten or twelve feet is sufficient, but never be without them if the house is more than eleven feet wide and even in this size it is a good plan to set up every twenty-five feet a three-quarter-inch pipe each side of the walk under the heavy sashbar; or better, bend the pipe into an arch and let the ridgepole rest on the center of the arch. If iron pipe is not obtainable use 3x3 oak or cedar posts. All posts should rest on a firm foundation like a flat stone, or a square of artificial stone made by digging a shallow excavation at the desired place in the ground and filling it with water lime cement, gravel and sand, the same as used in setting the posts. Set a spike up endways in the center of this concrete and when solid the spike will serve to hold the bottom of the post in position, be it iron or wood. If of wood bore a hole in the bottom of the post and set it over the nail.

The outward pressure of the roof on the sides of the building is very great and tion that shows poor economy in doing without the much needed apparatus.

You will observe in the ground plan of the plant I have some of the twenty-foot houses constructed with the long slope to the north. I have done so because it is the only way to avoid one house shading the other, when high houses stand east and west and are close together. This plan of building is recommended by some of the best florists in this country, who grow cut flowers of superior quality. My own experience is limited, but I am willing to be guided by such men as Fred. Dorner, C. W. Ward, George Miller and many others who give their testimony in favor of this method.

Now as to the better way to put in glass, but or lap, I have proof that it largely depends on the pitch of the roof. If steep, say for instance on the short-span-to-the-south side, but the glass and lap it on the long and flatter slope. As to details of puttying or not puttying, caps over the sash bars to hold the glass in, or no caps, we will leave everyone to decide for himself. There are some without center support the ridgepole will in time sag down, and the sides bulge out. We advocate ventilating sash about three feet deep up and down the roof, hinged at the bottom, and continuous, being bound together at the top as shown in the illustration, for several reasons: First, in union there is strength. Secondly, it gives ventilation without draft from side currents that blow in when single sash is used. Thirdly, when hinged at the bottom they are easier raised as there is less weight on the lifting appliance.

In houses running east and west the sash should be located on the south side, because when open the sun will still shine through the glass instead of directly on the plant, which is a great advantage when the house is shaded. If the house stands north and south put the sash on the west side. If the sash opens at the bottom cold winds and scorching sun rays have direct access to the plants when the sash is open. Without an appliance of some sort that will lift a number of sashes with one operation, continuous sash cannot be used, but whether sashes are single or continuous, I contend that there is nothing about a greenhouse more useful or which pays for itself quicker than a ventilating appliance. To open and close sashes by hand, one at a time, is a tiresome and vexatious labor and takes much time that could be better employed. With a machine, air will be given and taken off when needed, and not put off on account of lack of time, and at all times the sashes are secure from being blown open or off the house, resulting in expensive destrucfew things in building benches that are worth noticing. If you are putting side benches in a narrow house, with narrow center path, put together your benches as shown in this sketch. Here notice the iron post sits back about six inches from the face of the bench; the face board is nailed to the end of the bed piece and the bottom board. After bottom is on, a right angle bracket two inches thick is spiked down over every bed piece and the top of the face board is nailed thereto. This prevents the top of the face board from warping out of shape. Always make the bench frames independent of the side of the house. Some make the gutter posts answer the place of one bench post by spiking the bed piece to it. This helps to rot out the posts and damages the building. If the walk is three feet wide make the bench frames as shown in the second illustration.

The object in setting the front leg back is to give more room in the walk so a box or barrow may pass without obstruction. When there is room I deem the second plan better, as the front leg extends above the bottom boards and makes a support for the face boards. An occasional brace should be put in to stiffen a line of benches and it is generally economy to use good lumber in benches. I have found a coat of water line cement applied every season inside the bench to be a great preserver of the wood and it also keeps sow bugs away. Mix cement with water and apply with a whitewash brush. The bottom boards should never be more than six inches wide and if used for planting in, 3-inch slats one-half inch apart are better.

One of the best evidences of a thrifty gardener or successful florist is a neat, well-kept greenhouse, the walks of which are a very important part. Wet and muddy walks should not be tolerated and need not be when, by adopting the following directions, good pathways may be had at a small outlay of money and labor. First level the walk and on each side lay a line of 2x4-inch scantling; fill in between with cinders and coal ashes saved from the winter's firing; pack down until within one inch or one and one-half inches of the top of the scantling; fill the remaining space with a mixture of one part water lime cement and three parts sand or sifted coal ashes; wet up into a stiff mortar; round up in center and smooth off with a trowel, using a thin layer of dry cement on top; sprinkle with water while slicking over. This walk will last as long as the house and be a joy for a life time.

I would not advise to build houses of any width between eleven and twenty feet, say twelve, fourteen, sixteen or eighteen feet, for the reason that any size over eleven feet will require two walks to properly care for the plants. Having these two walks it is a waste of glass if all the bench room possible to reach comfortably is not provided along these walks. A four-foot bench is as wide as the average man can properly reach over and is about the proper width. Now in a twenty-foot house there should be eight feet of bench room in the center and four feet on each side and with two walks, each two feet wide, making a total of twenty feet in the clear, and less will not be economical.

Greenhouses like other buildings are each year subject to changes and different methods of construction. Some are improvements while others may not be. We now have iron frames, iron gutters, iron pipe benches, with tile or slate bottoms; all of which are good in their way if one has the money to buy them, but the poor man will always commence business in wooden structures and for this class I have penned these instructions and if they benefit or aid any fellow-being I am fully rewarded for the labor spent.

American Floriculture Retrospective and Prospective.

BY PROF. B. T. GALLOWAY, WASHINGTON, D. C.

It is sixteen years since the Society of American Florists was organized, and during this comparatively short period changes have taken place which viewed collectively have had a marked effect on the welfare of every member. The daily happenings in our lives, whether it be at home or in business, come to us in such a way as to make little conscious impression. They nevertheless mold us and direct us, and for this reason it is wise to pause once in awhile and look back on the aggregate results in order to be able to more intelligently guide our future course. With this object in view we invite your attention to some of the more important events of the past century as affecting the development of the florists' business, hoping that such a review, brief as it must necessarily be, will help toward a better understanding of what must be done in the future to keep floriculture in the front rank of horticultural pursuits.

A hundred years ago floriculture as we now understand it was practically unknown in this country. Here an there were pioneers, who in addition to following various horticultural pursuits, paid some attention to the cultivation of flowers. The early work, however, was carried on more for the purpose of gratifying a love for the beautiful than to reap pecuniary benefit. From the earliest times gardening has been a favorite pastime, and long before there was anything like a commercial tendency to the work, interest was kept up in it through an inherent desire to come into contact with nature.

Naturally the beginning of the work here was associated with the development of certain cities. The greater part of the wealth of the country was collected at such places, and better opportunities were thus afforded for the development of such an industry as the one we have under consideration. The city of Philadelphia was early favored in this respect, and for this reason and also on account of its comparatively mild climate it attracted gardeners and others interested in horticultural work from all parts of the world. Boston and New York were also early centers of floricultural work, and many of the first pioneers made their start at these places.

The rigorous climate of the New World necessarily required that special attention be given to the use of glass houses for the growth of many plants, and thus was early set in motion the forces which have had so much to do with the successful growth of the work here. The early greenhouses were necessarily crude affairs, but they served their purpose and were the links which made better work possible. In most cases only the sides and ends of the greenhouses were of glass, the glass being in very small panes set in heavy frames of wood. Heating was for the most part effected by means of hot air carried into or through the houses by bricks or other similar devices. Such were the majority of houses erected up to about 1825, when there began to appear a more marked interest in architectural effects and improvements in other directions. The demand for plants, flowers, and seeds was rapidly increasing at this time, largely owing to the more settled condition of the country, which afforded men of wealth an opportunity to turn their attention to the beautifying of home grounds and public parks.

Throughout the development of floriculture and other branches of horticulture in this country, home adornment, or amateur work, preceded the commercial. It is a fact that wherever the cultivation of flowers as a means to the adornment of a home or to public parks and other places is encouraged there soon arises a sufficient demand for flowers to warrant the investment of money in growing them for commercial purposes. Horticultural societies and other allied organizations have therefore played an important part in the development of commercial work. It is often through their efforts that interest is aroused and stimulated, until eventually a whole community feels the benefit.

The early development of floriculture is so intimately connected with other horticultural industries, such as the selling of seeds, plants and flowers, that it is difficult to separate one branch from the other and follow the development of any one alone. The selling of the seed was naturally an early-established industry, but years elapsed before the seed seller found it worth while to handle flowers. By 1840, however, there was considerable demand not only for flowers, but for plants, and to meet this numerous establishments sprang up at various places. Thus we read in one of the current horticultural journals that "Boston and vicinity is making considerable progress in floriculture. The establishment of a public garden in connection with a conservatory is having a tendency to diffuse a taste for plants." At this time (1840) there were a number of important establishments near Boston, New York and Philadelphia, and there were considerable areas of glass, devoted largely to the growing of camellias, azaleas, rhododendrons, fuchsias, pelargoniums, and to some extent roses.

The introduction at about this time of hot water into greenhouse construction gave a decided impetus to the work, and progress along many lines was rapid. For the next ten years floriculture flourished. The rose was rapidly coming into use and the cut flower business was growing. In 1852 a horticultural writer in Hovey's Magazine says: "Many establishments containing greenhouses and forcing beds, more especially for the production of flowers for bouquets, have sprung up in the upper part of New York city." Reference is made to Mr. T. Dunlap, of Harlem, and the immense quantity of flowers, particularly roses and violets, that he grew for his New York store on Broadway. In another place it is mentioned as a matter worthy of note that one store in New York had disposed of several hundred dollars' worth of plants and flowers during the holiday trade.

By 1860 the business had developed considerable importance. Stores in a number of cities were beginning to more and more make plants and cut flowers a specialty. The rose continued to grow rapidly in importance, and various bulbous plants, such as gladiolus, Japan lilies, etc., were receiving marked attention. Greenhouse construction had kept pace with other improvements, and comparatively well-lighted, well-heated, and well-ventilated structures were taking the place of sash roof houses, in which wood predominated and good light and proper heat were out of the question. By this time the rose as a flower for bouquets and other purposes was beginning to supersede the camellia. Little attention was given to growing the rose, however, as a distinct crop. As a rule it was found in houses with other plants, the varieties grown being La Marque, Bon Silene and one or two others, and these were planted about in odd places, either in the ground or in pots, the flowers being utilized whenever they were marketable.

At the breaking out of the Civil War horticultural work was in a large measure checked and matters remained pretty much at a standstill until about 1870, at which time there were several thousand florists in the United States. The carnation began to receive attention about this time, owing to several importations made into the United States from Europe. Up to this period all the work had been carried on with little reference to specialization. It was the common practice to grow many different kinds of plants in the same house, and not only were the crops grown for the plants themselves, but were also forced for cut flowers. With the increasing demand for both plants and flowers, which began to be especially noticeable between 1873 and 1875, came the necessity for giving more particular attention to individual crops. Thus commenced the first movement leading to specialization. From this time on the progress of the work was rapid, but as the events have all taken place within our memories it is unnecessary to dwell upon them in detail here. Suffice it to recall the era of plant growing, which lasted for a few years and was followed by a rush to get into the cut flower business. Many of the large plant establishments were modified so as to be able to give their entire time to the cut flower business. The rose received special attention, and there followed a rapid development in growing this crop. Solid beds gave place to benches, and special forms of houses were developed as best suited to the needs of the crop. The carnation was a close second to the rose in the matter of importance, and a history of its development would make an interesting paper in itself. The same is true of the violet, which in the early days was grown almost exclusively in frames, but owing to keen competition the frames were soon found inadequate and sunken pits were substituted. From the sunken pit was gradually evolved the modern violet house found at the present time.

Gradually the general gardener is disappearing and the specialist is taking his place. The carnationist, the rose grower and the violet grower find it necessary to devote their entire attention to their respective crops if the best results are to be attained.

With these various changes came the establishment of large retail stores and commission houses, all so organized as to be able to handle the great quantities of flowers and plants produced by the growers themselves. The importance and need for organization brought into being this society and the demand for closer union developed the trade journals—small at first, but growing and waxing strong as the years pass by.

A careful survey of the field at the present time leads us to believe that there are now in the United States between 9,000 and 10,000 establishments engaged in the growing and selling of plants and flowers in a commercial way. There are, in addition, many hundreds and perhaps thousands of individuals scattered over the country who sell small quantities of flowers and plants either at their own homes or at other places, but these can hardly be regarded as conducting commercial establishments, although the aggregate amount of glass they control is no doubt considerable. In order to get a satisfactory basis for the figures which follow, we have tried to reach every commercial florist in the United States and to obtain from them data on the amount of glass controlled, kind of crops grown, etc., as would enable us to draw reliable conclusions in regard to the present status of floriculture. This work has been supplemented by personal studies and observations in many sections, and as a result information has been secured which is believed to be reliable as far as it is possible to make it at the present time. At best, however, it must be understood that the figures given are tentative, and with the carrying out of more thorough plans, for which the present work opens the way, they may be materially changed.

The total area of glass in the United States is estimated at from 22,500,000 to 30,000,000 square feet, the largest number of square feet being found in the states of New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Ohio and New Jersey, in the order named. New York is accredited with 1,200 establishments and 4,500,000 square feet of glass; Illinois with 800 establishments and 4,250,000 square feet of glass; Pennsylvania with about 900 establishments and 4,000,000 square feet of glass. The development of the business has been more rapid in Illinois, principally in the vicinity of Chicago, than anywhere else, and if present conditions continue it will be only a few years when Illinois as a state and Chicago as a city will lead the country in the amount of stock grown and handled. On the basis of 22,500,000 square feet of glass, the following estimates have been made and published in the last Yearbook of the U. S. Department of Agriculture:

"The estimated value of the establishments in this country, including houses, boilers and all fixtures, is placed at 50 cents for each square foot of glass, or $11,250,000 in all. The income of the producer will average 50 cents per square foot annually, or $11,250,000, and double that amount when viewed from the standpoint of the retailer. Considering the matter from the retailer's standpoint, therefore, the total value of the annual output is $22,500,000, or $1 for each square foot of glass.

"It is estimated that the retail value of cut flowers sold annually is $12,500,000, the estimated apportionment of this sum being:

Roses.....	$6,000,000
Carnations.....	4,000,000
Violets.....	750,000
Chrysanthemums.....	500,000
Miscellaneous flowers, including lilies, etc.....	1,250,000

"Estimating the average retail value of roses, carnations and violets at $6, $4 and $1 per hundred, respectively, the total number of each sold annually, based on the above values, would be:

Roses.....	100,000,000
Carnations.....	100,000,000
Violets.....	75,000,000

Total..... 275,000,000

"The retail value of the plants sold is placed at $10,000,000. Taking the plant trade as a whole and the country in the aggregate, the average-sized pot used is estimated to be 3-inches, and the average retail price 10 cents per pot. This means that there are no less than 100,000,000 plants sold every year.

To handle this business in its entirety requires probably an average of not less than one man for every 1,500 square feet of glass, or 15,000 men in all. Fifteen hundred square feet of glass per man may seem like a low estimate, and such is the case when considering commercial establishments of any size. The larger the area of glass, other things being equal, the more square feet one man can handle. As a matter of fact, some of the large rose-growing establishments do not employ more than one man for each 10,000 square feet. Large carnation establishments will run about the same as roses, while violets, owing to the great amount of work involved in cleaning the plants and picking the flowers, average higher. It is the many thousand small establishments that increase the amount of labor required."

It may not be out of place now to briefly point out some of the lines along which floriculture seems likely to develop during the coming years. I think all will agree that much is yet to be accomplished in the way of improving business methods in conducting this work. We have been especially struck with this fact in our efforts to get data which would be of value in connection with the figures already quoted. The producer of plants, be he farmer, fruit grower, or florist, as a rule does not consider it necessary to apply to his work the ordinary practices followed in the world of business. The reasons for this become apparent on considering the position in which the plant grower is placed with reference to the manufacturer and storekeeper. The grower of plants is at all times required to assume great risks—in fact the risks are so great as a rule as to preclude anything in the nature of mathematical precision in the matter of calculating profit and loss. It must be said, however, that this statement does not hold true so strongly in greenhouse work as it does in outside horticultural pursuits. With the increased facilities for growing plants under glass and the specialization that is rapidly coming about, the risks are becoming less at the same time competition is becoming more keen. It behooves every man, therefore, who is looking forward to obtaining the highest success in his work to adopt every honorable means to increase production and decrease expenses. This can be done only by the closest attention to business methods, leading first of all to a thorough knowledge of every detail as to the cost of production. We have found it almost impossible to get any authentic figures upon the last-named subject. Very few men know what it actually costs to produce stock, as no systematic attempts are made to obtain facts in regard to this matter. As to the cost of houses and other equipment, there is as a rule very little available information on hand.

These statements are not made in a spirit of criticism, but are brought out simply to call attention to a matter which will undoubtedly disappear with the improvements going on in all directions in connection with this work. We have no doubt that much could be accomplished in this direction by thorough organization of the florists throughout the country, for at present only a small per cent belong to anything in the nature of an organization. It would seem of the highest importance, therefore, to put forth every effort in the matter of not only strengthening this society, but developing local and special organizations which would have for their object not only the improvement of the members, but the encouragement of all lines of horticultural work in their respective communities.

We have already pointed out the importance of horticultural societies in the early development of this work, and suggested that what was true of them at that time holds true of such organizations now. The societies can arouse an interest in floriculture by meetings, exhibitions and in other ways, which will be felt by those who are looking to the commercial aspect of the case. We believe that this society could do a vast amount of good by encouraging the organization of florists' clubs and local organizations everywhere, not with a view of making them in any way tributary, but on the other hand to have them develop as strong independent bodies along general lines, which the Society of American Florists could in its present position direct. Such organizations could do much toward the establishment of public parks and the general adornment of the home. The great work that is under way in the city of New York is a sample of what might be done on a smaller scale in other places and what will no doubt finally result in benefit not only to the people as a whole, but to the florists in particular in the matter of bringing about a greater love for flowers and an appreciation of what they stand for in everyday life. I refer to the establishment of the New York Botanical Garden and the efforts being made to bring this enterprise in touch with horticultural interests along broad lines.

In the future the tendency will undoubtedly be to specialize more and more. This will be made necessary by the growth of competition, requiring the very highest products of the soil. With greater specialization will come closer attention to every detail of the business and a higher appreciation of many little things which are now allowed to pass as a matter of course. The Society of American Florists can do much to shape this work, and we trust it may long survive to carry it on.

Gerbera Jamesonii.

Gerbera Jamesonii is a very fine composite from a certain district in South Africa, the name of which I don't recall, and is locally known as that district's daisy. The resemblance to the daisy is very striking, so far as the flowers are concerned, but the likeness ceases there, for the leaves are lyrate, or dandelion-like, somewhat coarse and sparsely produced.

We are indebted to Max Leichtlin, of Baden-Baden, Germany, for this plant, he having introduced it and four or five years ago forwarded a plant to his friend, Prof. C. S. Sargent, of Brookline, Mass., accompanying it with a letter in which he described the plant as being one of the finest composites ever introduced. He stated that it was slow to increase and extremely difficult to get it to seed, and this, I believe, is the experience of those who have had the handling and care of this plant in this country; hence its rarity.

I do not, however, believe that these conditions will always prevail; I think that with prudent perseverance it can be made to seed, at least comparatively freely. The only hope of making this plant more useful than it has hitherto been lies in raising seedlings, in order to evolve a greater freedom of bloom.

Gerbera Jamesonii must remain, for the time being, the especial pet and jewel of the enthusiastic amateur, at least until the "art which mends nature" has exerted its influence. The plant requires the protection of a cool greenhouse in winter or may be carried in a good cold frame, from which frost and dampness are excluded. Planted in the open ground in the early part of May or the later days of April, it will soon begin to send up its dazzling, vermilion flowers, exquisitely graceful and finely poised on strong stems from fourteen to twenty inches high. Only from two to three flowers are open at a time on a good-sized plant. This latter peculiarity is the chief ground for the complaints of the grumblers, but as these two or three flowers keep coming along all summer and each individual flower will remain perfect for from six to ten days under the blazing sun, the plant is almost always in flower and is a subject worthy of considerable painstaking.

KENNETH FINLAYSON.

The Rose.

BY E. G. HILL, RICHMOND, IND.

[Read in opening the discussion on the rose at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.]

My nomination to this function, I believe, is at the instance of the members of the Rose Society of America. I consider it a double honor to be thus chosen and permitted the privilege of opening this particular discussion before our national society. As time is precious what I say must necessarily be brief.

The rose as grown in American gardens, and the same flower as cultivated under our American forcing methods, are two quite distinct phases of this important subject.

In order that the rose may rise to its proper place in American gardens—a place similar to that which it holds on the continent of Europe and in England—it is absolutely necessary that it may be freed from the dread fungus disease known as "black spot," which so cripples it in America, but which is practically unknown across the water. It is to be sincerely hoped that some heroic remedy, or some preventive measure, may be found which is as yet unknown to practical rose growers. By rose growers I mean both amateurs and professionals.

The rose as seen and grown in Europe is quite different from its development in this country. Abroad you may see roses at every turn, in every dooryard, growing in the healthiest and most luxurious fashion. These same varieties growing in our northern states, in all save a few favored localities, look like mere ghosts of their prototypes in Europe. This is noted by all who have had an opportunity to compare growths as seen on the two continents.

I hold that in order to popularize the rose, and to give it the supreme place that it deserves in our gardens, a remedy must be found for the fungus growth referred to, and which has played with such destructive force upon our rose stocks. When I was a young man I well remember with what vigor and luxuriance old varieties like Malmaison, Giant of Battles, Mme. Laffay, Bourbon Queen, and a host of others, grew and flourished; but it is no longer so. Even these old varieties, at the present day, are only shadows of their former selves. If this remedy cannot be found which shall restore our outdoor roses to perfect vigor, then we must breed a new race that shall prove immune from the dread disease. This same disease was not many years since a serious menace to our indoor-grown forcing roses, but at the present time where black spot is prevalent it is generally conceded to be due to incorrect culture and improper methods.

This is the situation as now presented, whether we relish the fact or not. We may ask in all seriousness, what has caused this remarkable deterioration in the growth and vigor of our garden roses? Are our indoor-propagated roses responsible for a lack of vitality sufficient to withstand the disease? Are our underground methods of propagation responsible for the enfeebling of the rose? Your speaker waits for an answer.

What we want in this country are varieties of roses that shall flourish and bloom as do La France, Mme. Testout, Mme. Jules Grolez, L'Innocence, President Carnot and the like, in France and England.

If it is necessary to breed a distinct class of roses for our country, whither shall we turn—to what section of the family shall we look for the sturdy parents? In the rugosa section notable advance has been made by European raisers and possibly we may find varieties adapted to American climatic conditions along this line as the work progresses. In the section of rugosa hybrids we have Mme. Georges Bruant, Blanc Double du Courbet, Souv. Pierre Cochet, and I noted in the garden of Victor Lemoine, two sorts, the result of crossing tea varieties with rugosa. One of these was a beautiful bright pink in color, and M. Emile Lemoine stated that it flowered continuously; the other quite as attractive but blooming only once a year.

In the garden of Mr. P. Lambert, of Trier, of Soupert & Notting, of Luxemburg, as well as in many others of both commercial and private rosarians this work of experiment in the rugosa section progresses, and something of note in beauty, vigor and hardiness is sure to develop, and it may be that we are just on the eve of having placed in our hands a class, a set, a type which shall prove the nucleus of a new race that shall inaugurate a new era in the cultivation of roses in our gardens. In this connection we must not forget the two novel developments of M. Bruant, Fee Opal and Rosa Belle; these were obtained from crosses of the tea section with the old variety, Fortune's Yellow. I saw them in bloom and am glad to testify that they were strikingly beautiful.

Probably the most noteworthy result of these recent experiments is M. Jh. Pernet's Soleil d'Or, which was obtained by crossing the Persian Yellow and the H. P. Antoine Ducher. This variety is distinct enough to merit the type name of Pernetiana as bestowed upon it by the raiser.

While recognizing the good work of our friends across the water, we must not forget to commend also the efforts of our own hybridizers, who are also experimenting on the line of the hardier types, Messrs. Walsh, Manda, Dawson and others.

A more wide-spread effort in this particular line of work should be inaugurated over our own country; we need more ramblers, equaling the Crimson and in different tints and colors; these can certainly be had by proper and systematic effort.

To sum up: We must make an earnest effort to either free our roses used for garden purposes from the blighting effects of black fungus or we must, with intelligence and energy, seek to form and build up a new race of roses by crossing the hardier species with our present highly developed tea and hybrid tea varieties. American hybridists must keep in mind the hardy, vigorous characteristics required by varieties that are to succeed in our climate, nor stay their efforts until the new types produced; the reward will be ample.

Regarding new sorts for forcing purposes; we need new colors in forcing varieties—say like Gen. Jacq., or Rodocanachi, or a variety with the tint and fragrance of a Marechal Niel combined with the fine practical qualities of Bride or Bridesmaid; a fortune awaits the producer of such a rose, and if you will allow prophecy, I will venture to predict that within a very few years we shall have roses rivaling American Beauty, Bride and Bridesmaid, but covering a good range of color. The speaker has no knowledge of such undiscovered novelties being in existence at the present moment, but with the number of workers in the field, and the crying need of such varieties apparent to every rose-forcer, they are certainly among the probabilities.

In conclusion: I believe that the American Rose Society will prove the instrument that shall revolutionize the status of the rose, and that will make plain to the rose-grower, professional and amateur, the needs of the rose from our American standpoint, and with this hope in view, may I not ask—and urge—that you give to this young and growing society your name and your helpful encouragement and support.

WITH THE GROWERS.

CHICAGO CARNATION CO., JOLIET, ILL.

Progress is the order of the day with the Chicago Carnation Company, out at Joliet, Ill. Two new houses, each 22x200 feet, have been added this season to the range of wooden structures established about two years ago and work has been well begun on an entirely new and distinct range of modern iron houses. The old range now contains 57,200 square feet of glass.

The new range when completed will consist of eight greenhouses each 30x300 feet and a service building 39x105 feet. The plans have been furnished by Lord & Burnham. This firm will also put up the iron greenhouses, leaving the constructive work on the service building to a local contractor. The service building and one of the iron houses will be completed this season, other iron greenhouses to be added as they are needed. Lord & Burnham's expert mechanics are now on the ground and the house will be completed and planted in short order. The plans of the range herewith reproduced will afford a better idea of its character and completeness than the most elaborate description.

The greenhouses will be of the latest style in every particular, running east and west; they will be fifteen feet four inches apart. The houses will be connected with the service building by a corridor running through the middle of each. Under this corridor will be a tunnel, six feet wide and five feet deep, for the heating mains. The tunnel will be covered with a sectional board walk so that leakages and other derangements may be repaired in the least possible time with a minimum of labor and expense. Hot water will be the heating medium, the houses being fitted with 2-inch wrought iron pipe. Ventilation will be continuous on both sides of the ridge, Lord & Burnham's latest improved ventilator, lifting in fifty-foot sections, being employed. The roof will be glazed with 16x24 double thick A glass, with thirty-inch panes for the side and ventilators. Each house will contain four benches five feet wide with path around the sides.

The service building will be the finest ever constructed for similar purposes. The cellar, with walls two feet thick, of Joliet limestone, is fourteen feet deep. A partition wall eighteen inches thick divides the cellar into two parts, the smaller of which (16x39 feet) will be used for keeping cut flowers, and the larger one for coal storage and a battery of six Lord & Burnham sectional cast iron boilers. The capacity is such that an entire winter's supply of coal can be put away in this cellar. Over the cellar, and separated from it by a fire-proof floor, arrangements are made for commodious offices and workrooms. This upper part of the building will be finished in brick, with a slate roof. At one end will be a brick smoke stack sixty feet high. Railroad switches have been introduced and so contrived that coal can be shoveled from the cars direct to the cellar chutes of both the old and new plants. Another noteworthy new feature here is a liquid manure tank with concrete walls and situated at such an elevation as to readily supply both greenhouse ranges. The walls are eighteen inches thick and the tank 12x22 feet and six feet deep. The tank is divided into two compartments of equal size, one for manure and the other for the liquid, which escapes from the manure compartment through an opening in the partition wall, where it filters through straw, which leaves no sediment to accumulate in the pipes. There will be a liquid manure faucet in each house, connected with the tank by mains, and the tank will be covered with a brick shed, heated to prevent the liquid from freezing.

These and many other improvements now in progress indicate that J. D. Thompson, the manager of the concern, has a thorough belief in the future of the carnation, for it should be remembered that this entire establishment is devoted to carnations exclusively. Mr. Thompson has given the carnation only a very few years of study, but in all his planning and operations he has displayed shrewdness and judgment worthy of a veteran, and his enterprise is strictly in line with the progressive spirit of the times.

The stock has all been grown in the field this year. Some 40,000 plants, of the best up-to-date sorts, will be benched. Planting in the old range is already completed, the new iron house being reserved for seedlings. No cuttings will be taken from the flowering plants during the coming season, one house in the old plant being devoted to stock for propagation.

A very well attended meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held on August 17. It was decided to have a chrysanthemum show at Red Bank in the town hall on November 9, 10 and 11. A communication from the Pan-American Exposition was read and after a lively discussion, on motion of Robt. Murphy, seconded by Robt. Beaty, a legislative committee was appointed to attend to the matter at once. B.

Size of Return Pipes.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a house 12x32 in which there are two 2-inch flows and fourteen 1½-inch returns; another house is 30x75 and has three 2-inch flows and sixteen 1-inch returns. The returns all enter the boiler through 1¼-inch pipe. Is this pipe large enough to carry back the condensed steam? If not, what size should it be? E. C. N.

The main return should be 2-inch.

THE sixteenth annual meeting of the Society of American Florists has set such a mark for manysidedness and, withal, of such proportions on every side, that it may well be doubted if the next ten years will see its equal. The New York Florists' Club has created an expression of horticultural conditions to date that is grandly creditable to the city. New York has shown that with her greatness, she is not oblivious to the country and her distant friends. She has taken pride in showing how well and how completely she covers horticulture within her own bounds and her florists have made great sacrifice of time and labor in doing so.
Be it recorded to their lasting credit.

STATE OF THE MARKET—REASONABLE SUMMER DEMAND AND LITTLE SURPLUS STOCK.—OFF TO THE CONVENTION.—
SPECIAL TRAIN CARRIES GOODLY DELE-GATION.—NAMES OF THOSE IN THE PARTY.—MANY FROM OUT OF TOWN ACCEPT INVITATION TO JOIN CHICAGO CLUB.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

Trade has been pretty fair this week,
all things considered. At the beginning of the period stock got another setback because of the extremely hot weather, but qualities are again on the up grade.
Good roses are short of the demand but of Beauties there are a plenty except in the medium lengths. The supply of short Beauties is so great that they are being quite largely used in funeral work. The recent rains have damaged the outdoor carnations and the asters but both items are in ample supply and every day showing improvement. The smilax supply has shortened up and prices are stiffening somewhat.

The Chicago party, convention bound, started out in fine style at three o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The special train, in charge of City Passenger Agent Vosburgh, was splendidly appointed and consisted of three sleepers, a dining and a buffet car, the decoration of which was due to the skill of Messrs. Winterson, Balluff, Kreitling and Darby, the local wholesalers donating the stock. With a well stocked larder and good fellowship prevailing, the trip was most enjoyable, one of the features of the first afternoon being the musical programme participated in by Messrs. Asmus, Balluff, Kreitling and Winterson. On the train when it pulled out were: Mr. and Mrs.
Peter Reinberg, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Win-

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Deamud are spend-home at Paw Paw Lake, Mich. They will not return until the first week in September, when their son must resume his duties at school. Mrs. Deamud's mother, Mrs. H. H. Wilder, who has been at Paw Paw for a week, has returned home.

H. N. Bruns is contemplating a flying visit to Hamburg, whence he expects to receive nearly a half million lily of the valley pips this fall. He was over last year and bought 350,000 pips, which is probably more than any western grower forced. He has a brother who is accounted a good grower at Hamburg.

Bassett & Washburn report that the new rose, Liberty, has taken very well with their trade. It has turned out a good shipper, they say, and those of their customers who have tried it prefer it to Meteor. This firm has already potted up about 40,000 Harrisii and longiflorum bulbs.

The New York correspondents for the Chicago morning papers reported the election of officers for the Hail Association as being that of the Society of American Florists and the city editor of at least one influential journal seized the opportunity to run Mr. Vaughan's portrait.

George M. Garland's iron gutter business has run into hundreds of tons this year and he is planning to build a furnace at Des Plaines and do his own casting.
He has also decided to devote his whole attention to the gutter business, abandoning contracting and greenhouse building.

Calla growers made good money on the blooms they shipped to this market last season and there is a brisk demand for bulbs this fall. McKellar & Winterson got in 8,000 from California one day this week.

It is understood that John N. May and

Making a Start at Growing.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please inform me through your paper as to how many square feet of glass would be necessary for a successful start in growing carnations exclusively for the wholesale market.

SUBSCRIBER.

This matter depends almost altogether on the experience, knowledge, business ability and willingness to "hustle" of the person who proposes to start the business. If he has knowledge and experience sufficient to assure him of success, he will be a better judge than anyone else, how small a place he can make a living and a small profit from. If he has not practical knowledge, he will have to buy and pay for it, before success comes. While he is acquiring his education, the smaller the place which he conducts the less expensive will the education be.

W. N. R.

In successfully growing carnations exclusively for the wholesale market there are a number of points to be taken into consideration. The first necessity is to have the capital to put up modern houses. In growing for the wholesale market you will have to compete with carnations grown in such houses, and while a little money might be made from carnations grown in the old style, cheaper house there is more chance of your stock being unable to find a good market than there is of finding one. To build these modern houses on entirely borrowed capital makes too much of a load for the beginner to carry, as they cost considerable and unavoidable reverses may happen to the stock and both capital and labor be lost.

If the heating is arranged so as to avoid the necessity of employing a night fireman, a good start might be made with 5,000 feet of glass in one modern house, or, at the outside, two houses, but this amount of glass would leave a very small margin for profit and should be added to as rapidly as possible.

To employ a night man, and he is almost essential to success, there should not be less than 10,000 feet of glass and as much more as possible up to double that amount, as a start; the latter figure would be quite enough, and after the first season's experience the business would either expand of itself or prove quite enough of an investment if it turned out a failure.

Locate as near as possible to a market that will consume good carnations, so that they can be taken to market in a very short time and with as little handling as possible. You will find yourself at a great disadvantage if located any distance from your market and profits will be almost if not altogether cut in two.

ALBERT M. HERR.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Farquhar Macrae is preparing to add considerably to his range of glass.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secy and Treas.

S. B. DICKS, representing Cooper, Taber & Co., London, arrived at New York on the Lucania, August 18.

NAPLES, ITALY.—Seed crops in general are not satisfactory at all as regards vegetables. Cauliflower is very bad and onions very short, hardly enough to fill contract orders. Lettuces and tomatoes are very bad, the latter on account of mildew. It is yet too early to say as to the condition of leeks.

WOOD, STUBBS & Co., Louisville, write that the acreage of onion sets planted in Kentucky this year was larger than ever before, but the majority of crops of sets are very much smaller than last year on account of the sets being smaller in size. The quality generally is first-class and it is only very rarely that any of the crops have grown too large in size. Taking the crop on the whole, they believe it is the best that has been produced in years, both in quality and quantity.

S. M. PRASE, of the Cleveland Seed Co., Cape Vincent, New York, reports the yield of peas as very light, both of early and late sorts; vines short, pods short and not well filled; many glassy, lifeless peas caused by excessive hot weather, necessitating great expense in hand picking. He does not think there will be over fifty per cent to seventy per cent of an average yield. Earlies lighter than late. Beans are going to be very disappointing, the last two weeks having been very unfavorable. Scarcity of peas and beans seems to be assured for the coming season.

THE crop of Long Island cabbage seed which, in the early part of the season, promised a full yield, has in many instances partially failed. The season was favorable up to July 1, when the ground had become very dry and the fields sustained a severe attack from the cabbage aphid. As a result all fields planted on light soil have ripened up prematurely and have produced only about one-third of what might otherwise have been expected. On the whole the crop, while not a failure by any means, has been rather disappointing and is not sufficient for the demand.

Elevating Boilers.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—My greenhouses are heated by steam and are in good working order, but I wish to raise the boilers thirty inches and would like to know whether it will also be necessary to raise the pipes in the houses? M.

This depends largely upon the present height of the coils above the water level of the boiler. While a distance of three or four feet is desirable, two feet will be fairly satisfactory, and if there is a distance of four and one-half or five feet between the lower ends of the coils and the water level in the boiler as now located the change proposed could be made if there are reasons that make it desirable. CAPITAL . . . $10,000.00

To the Grower :

We want to call attention to our large increase in trade, and are contracting more help and building more counter surface to handle our increase. Still, with all, we want "new growers," but we want them to begin with the dull season or at the opening of the season, September 1st to October 1st.

A few facts: Shippers who expect best returns ought to SHIP US, for we have a business of long standing and trade built up We pay all growers each week with statements, no matter how much we have to trust out. Having capital we can afford to carry accounts in the interest of the producer.

All we ask is a season's trial, and we can PROVE we can do by you as good and a little better than you have been doing, and, as above stated, the "CASH" each week. Come in and see us; have a talk, and we will convince you that if you are to change Brokers, we are open to handle all No. 1 stock we can get this season.

the ranks of the American Association of Nurserymen. Mr. Harrison was born in Sussex county, Delaware, thirty-three years ago. In 1884 the family moved to Berlin, where the father and sons have since grown nursery stock, starting in a small way but making a speciality of peach trees, strawberry plants and asparagus roots; recently they have gone extensively into apple and pear trees. Beginning with one farm of 170 acres they now own six of the choicest tracts in the vicinity and their annual list of budded peach trees exceeds any in the country. Mr. Harrison is a student of modern conditions and, although San Jose scale has never been found in his county, he was one of the first in the country to adopt fumigation with cyanide and is one of the staunchest advocates of inspection, not political farce but real, conscientious, protective inspection by an untrammelled man who knows a scale from a tumble bug. Aside from the manifold requirements of the practice of horticulture Mr. Harrison has the time to be mayor of his city, vice-president of a bank, a director of a building and loan association, a loving husband and an indulgent father.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

The Chief of the Bowlers.

At the meeting of the Florists' National Bowling League, Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, was chosen to the presidency, succeeding Robert Kift, of Philadelphia. Mr. Scott is so well known that comment on his qualifications for the position is quite unnecessary. Most of our readers will recognize the likeness of the accompanying portrait.

The Gunners' Contest.

On Thursday afternoon the gunners' contest brought out four teams, making scores as follows: Philadelphia, 92; Buffalo, 57; Cleveland, 53; New York, 33. Following are the individual scores:

The Bowling Contest at New York.

Not only did Buffalo capture the convention of 1901, but she won in the bowling contest, taking first place in the warmest battle ever waged on the alleys at an S. A. F. convention. The arrangements for "bowling day" were as complete as were those for any other period of convention week and the fact that the Palace Bowling Alleys, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Third avenue, were thronged by wildly enthusiastic, vociferous representatives of the various cities which had entered teams did not interfere in the least with the precision with which the great match was conducted, although the bedlam of voices served to send more than one player "up in the air" at critical moments.

There were eleven teams present, girded for the fray, and out of the thunder of the rolling balls, the crashing pins, came many surprises, such, for instance as when Kasting, of Buffalo, put up 228. Chicago started out to win and made the high score in the first game, 924, but, just as in the contest for the convention of next year, but for a different reason, she was compelled to retire in favor of the city with the bison trade mark.

It was a great contest from start to finish and interest and enthusiasm ran high. The Philadelphia redoubtables upheld their record for the first game, but then it looked like as though every bit of silverware was bound Chicago-ward. It was the third game which told the story; Buffalo, 1021; Chicago, 887. Buffalo gets the Lord & Burnham, the Hitchings and the Wood cups and the Detroit trophy. Chicago must be content with the Queen of Edgely vase. Kasting gets the cream of the individual trophies.

WEATHER AND CROPS.—SOME GOOD ROSES OBTAINABLE.—THE TRADE ROSTER CUT DOWN.

As far as has been reported, no comments worthy of note can be made regarding state of business this week. The thermometer still keeps well up to 100° and we have had no rain for about four weeks. A drive through Forest Park on Sunday found the flower beds in very good condition in consideration of the weather, but the grass in many parts of the park is almost completely burned out. This is also the case with a large number of our city lawns.

An occasional lot of vincas is seen among the retailers. Roses are in very bad shape but some good Kaiserins and Meteors are obtainable. Beauties are scarce and of course, with very small stems. Gladioli are about done for. Tuberoses hold up quite well, both in receipts and demand. The bulk of the carnations seen are scarcely worthy of their name, and asters are taken in preference to them.

A. Siegel, who previously occupied a stand in the Wolff-Wilson drug store, has vacated for the summer months.

The Art Floral Company, located on Morgan street, near Taylor avenue, has gone out of business. M.

WESTERLY, R. I.—S. J. Reuter's plans include the erection of 20,000 feet of glass this season.

SPENCER, MASS.—A. W. Hoyle was held up by two highwaymen on the night of August 4. A man has been arrested in Charleston, charged with being the assailant and has been identified by Mr. Hoyle.

NEW SEEDLING ROSE WINNIE DAVIS.

This grand rose should be grown by every florist as a pot plant, or for forcing, being a cross between Kaiserin Aug. Victoria and Belle Siebrecht. Color, apricot pink, shading to a flesh tint; odor of a most delicious ripe fruit. Shape being oblong and well formed, when fully open resembling a sunburst, which is most striking and beautiful. A very free and vigorous grower and bloomer. Color never changes in dark weather like most colored roses. Magnificent light green glossy foliage. VETERAN FLORIST RETIRES IN FAVOR OF ONE WHO HAS GROWN UP IN THE BUSINESS.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Walter S. Hogg has sold his business to Theo. R. Peterson, but the stand will still be known as The Hogg Greenhouses. Mr. Hogg has been in the business on Benefit street since the year 1866, and will be missed for his genial manner and kindly feeling toward the craft. Mr. Peterson, his successor, is a gentleman well liked and follows closely in his predecessor's wake. He has been with Mr. Hogg since he was a lad and has worked his way on to the proprietorship of the business.

Many growers have begun to house their carnations that they may receive a sufficient supply of water to invite growth.

There are plenty of flowers except real good roses for funeral work. Everything is burning up for want of rain.

Mr. Butcher is rebuilding two of his houses and making a general overhauling.

The aster beetles have come to town and their annual banquet has begun.

Timothy O'Connor is about again and attending to business as usual.

LITTLE RHODY.

MERRIMAC, MASS.—L. Whittier, of Merrimacport, has purchased the greenhouse of Chas. Davis, who is soon to leave town.

DAYTON, O.—Mr. Matthews, of the Dayton Floral Co., has the prospects for fall warrant him in adding two new houses and installing another boiler.

A Saturday Show at Boston.

The exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, on Saturday, August 18, was of sufficient extent and importance to be located in the larger upper hall, lower Horticultural Hall being assigned for the exclusive use of the exhibits of fungus by the Micological Society, which, by the way, seemed to attract nearly as many admirers as did the flowers and fruits. It was the special day for aquatic flowers and the display of nymphæas, nelumbiums, sedges, papyrus, etc., from Oakes Ames, R. M. Grey, gardener, was exceedingly beautiful. Superb specimens of the lace plant, Ouvirandra fenestralis, were shown by E. S. Converse, D. F. Roy, gardener, and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener. Mr. Roy also showed a fine plant of Cabomba aquatica. Asters were also a specialty, being staged in large numbers. Those shown by Mrs. J. L. Gardner were remarkable for their variety of color and uniformity. N. F. Comley and E. S. Converse were also well represented. J. Warren Clark won first, prize as in former years, in all the gladiolus classes but was pushed pretty close by a new competitor, E. J. Shayler, who showed some decidedly novel colors, among which were several striking hybrid seedlings of G. papileo major. Paul R. Blackmur also had a number of the newest Nanceanus varieties on exhibition. John Lewis Childs filled a long table with named varieties of Gladiolus Childsii and received honorable mention for Tritoma Pfitzeri. Phloxes from Geo. Hollis and dahlias from W. C. Winter were of the usual high quality produced by these well known specialists and the Blue Hill Nursery again staged a magnificent lot of hardy herbaceous flowers. Three seedling cannas from Wm. Stone were favorably commented upon for their rich colors.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—W. T. Hempstead reports business fair since the recent great fire and thinks that the million-dollar loss will have no very disastrous effect on trade next winter.

Browallia Speciosa Major.

This plant is known to a good many gardeners. It thrives in an intermediate house during the winter months, and cuttings struck in heat in April, when they strike freely, grow best during the summer months in the greenhouse or a cold frame. The plant is liable to infestation by thrips when grown on dry stages, and at this season (July) it should be frequently syringed and the shoots topped. There are but few flowers which give us such bright blue color in the winter season, and for this reason the plant is a useful one.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

The closing session of the recent convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association was devoted to the discussion of some very interesting papers. They were: "Violets," by Wm. Fendley, Brampton; "Commercial Orchids," by J. Goodier, Toronto; "Carnations up-to-date," by Wm. Gammage, London; "Heating and Ventilating," by R. W. King, of Toronto, who described the systems in use at the H. Dale estate.

The officers for the coming year are as follows: President, J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; first vice-president, J. Bennett, Montreal; second vice-president, G. W. Rennie, London; secretary, A. H. Ewing, Berlin; treasurer, H. Simmers, Toronto; executive committee, for three years, G. Robinson, C. G. Knott, W. Gammage; two years, J. Wilshire, C. Scrim, J. Graham one year, W. Muston, H. Johnston and F. C. Miller.

Saturday's banquet was a "corker;" fine menu, good songs and the toast list endless. We enjoyed many fine speeches, all praising the association. G. V.

PROFIT IS CERTAIN...

In the prudent and thorough heating of a greenhouse as much as in large sales of stock. If a florist is burdened by an unnecessary annual tax of from

$50 TO $100

For fuel and extra labor he must work much harder in order to make up this unnecessary tax out of the profits of his business. We know from our past experience that there is no unnecessary tax for fuel and labor when our boilers are used, because they are made after careful examination of the reasons why other boilers have failed and their construction avoids the defects shown. No one has bought

OUR BOILERS

That ever regretted it and thousands have bought and look back at the cost as the best investment they ever made.

SEE WHAT

C. HUMFELD, Clay Center, Kansas, July 19th, 1900, says: "I purchased a No. 70 Standard Sectional Hot Water Boiler from you in August, 1898, and I do not remember that I ever wrote you anything about it. In corresponding with me you told me that other parties that had purchased your boilers in some cases paid $50.00 more for your boiler than they could have gotten other boilers of same capacity. I wish to say that I am one of them, as I paid $50.00 more for your boiler than I would have had to pay for another make. I am not sorry for it as I now see the difference in price is more than made up by the difference in value. I can speak from experience, as I have two other good sectional boilers, but yours is a terror. I have 2000 feet of two-inch pipe, 1240 square feet of radiation hung to the 70 boiler and I have my expansion tank about forty feet away from the boiler and still it gets so hot that it wants much more radiation, so I am going to have it heat another house 20x10, or 1600 feet of 1 1/2-inch pipe, or 688 feet of radiation, so that the total radiation will be 1928 square feet, but I think the boiler can heat it easily. I know I have never crowded it and if we would it would throw all the water out of the line of pipes. That boiler is all right and anybody that wants to know about it, refer them to me."

OUR GREENHOUSE CATALOGUE

Messrs. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
46 and 48 Marion Street, New York, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I am highly gratified with the results I have obtained from your Sectional Boiler which you put in for me last October. Although you would only guarantee the six sections to heat 1620 feet of 4-in. pipe, I attached it to over 1,800 feet. It did it so well that I put on about 300 feet more, making in all 2,100 feet, and I am positive that I can add more to it. It is the best I have ever seen and a great coal saver. I have to keep the fire door open all the time. I would be pleased to have anyone call and see it. Yours truly,

TRADE DULL AND STOCK GENERALLY RATHER POOR.—FIELD GROWN CARNATIONS IN EXCELLENT FORM.—ANNUAL OUTING.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

The intense heat of the present month has had a depressing effect on trade in all lines except funeral work. The only really choice flowers now being cut are asters, which are improving daily in quality. Some very nice bench grown flowers are being cut and the outside crop seems better than usual this season. Roses are poor owing to the heat, Carnations being the best of any. Good Beauties are a very scarce article. Carnations are scarce, though a few good Flora Hill are brought in. This seems to be an ideal summer sort. Gladioli and other outside flowers are on the wane, owing to the heat.

Filling benches with the mercury from 100° upward has been a very hot task, but most all rose stock is planted, and the growers are only waiting for cooler weather to transplant carnations. These have made an excellent growth in the field and are in tip top condition for lifting. Of the newer varieties, Crane will be planted the most extensively, while White Cloud will to a certain extent supplant Flora Hill and Evelina. Daybreak retains its prestige and is still hard to beat in its class. A few of the newest are seen here and there, such as Lawson, The Marquis, Ethel Crocker, Maceo, etc.

Our florists' picnic was held at Lake Park, a most beautiful spot on the shores of the gem of all waters, Lake Minnetonka. Minneapolis captured most of the prizes. E. Nagel, the veteran bowler, proved his fleetness of foot by winning the fat men's race. Oluf Olson easily won the fifty-yard dash. Mr. Will won the boat race handily. In base ball and the tug of war St. Paul was too many for Minneapolis and won both contests easily. A most enjoyable part of the programme was the singing of Chris. Bussjaeger.

Mr. Scott and his Boston fern are now doing the Twin Cities. A. Currie, of Milwaukee, passed through the city a few days since.

Jas. Souden and L. S. Donaldson made a flying trip to Chicago last week, looking up new stock.

GARLAND'S IRON GUTTER

AND DRIP CONDUCTOR

Saves Labor

Makes Money

...PARTIES... CONTEMPLATING USING IRON GUTTERS

Will do well to note the following extract of patent No. 616,781, issued to George M. Garland; and are hereby cautioned against making use of the same without my consent:

"At the end of each member of the gutter, a downwardly-extending flange is formed, adapted to engage with the inner or lower ends of the roof-beams, but the flanges are of sufficient width to extend below the roof-beams, and at their lower ends upwardly and outwardly extending members are produced, forming auxiliary gutters, which serve as drip-conductors and act to carry off the condensations of steam from the glass of the roof. The nails, screws, or other fastening devices are passed through the drop flanges and into the lower ends of the roof-beams, so that these fastening devices for connecting the valley-gutter to the roof structure are below the weather-faces of the valley-gutter and consequently the weather-faces of the valley-gutter need not be perforated, insuring against leakage."

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY SHOWS SIGNS OF INCREASED ACTIVITY. — DOINGS AND SIGHTS AT AUDUBON PARK.

During the hot months our horticultural society ordinarily takes a vacation but there was a good attendance and not a little interest in the August meeting. Our newly elected president, Paul Abele, is setting to work to add new life to the society and to that end has invited us to hold our next meeting at his residence. The society will remove its regular meeting place from Royal street to St. Charles street, near Canal.

The other day I called upon Edward Baker, superintendent of Audubon Park, and found him making hay. He was cutting the second crop and said he expected to get three mowings off of the same tract this season. This shows how productive our soil is. They have a splendid horticultural building in this park. It is 600 feet long and 120 feet wide; the nave is 100x186; the height is forty-six feet and to the top of the tower 186 feet. Among the things to be seen here is an Acrocomia Mexicana forty feet high, an attalea thirty-five feet high, a Latania Borbonica forty feet high and many other fine plants. The park is in good hands and the work of permanent improvement, planned by the Olmsted, of Brookline, Mass., is well under way.

HULL & COMPANY, 74 and 75 Traders' Building, Chicago, Ill.,

GENTLEMEN:—In reference to my opinion of your THACKER SPLINT COAL, will say I am v.ry well pleased with it and think it is superior to any Coal of the splint grades we have yet used. Burns free, making an intense heat with very few ashes; no clinkers, and has the lasting quality of all high-grade Coal. I certainly consider it a very economical Coal to burn.

The above cut represents the new horticultural buildings in the Botanical Gardens, Bronx Park, New York, just erected by Hitchings & Co. These great glass houses are without doubt the most elegant buildings of their kind in the world, and when completed will be among the largest. They are the best examples extant of modern greenhouse construction, the entire frame being made of iron and steel, thus permitting the use of very light wood work, producing strong and light structures with very little shade.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thrasher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. This machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. A CHILD can run it. Just the thing to fight crab grass. It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

The Welfare of the S. A. F.

[An address by Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, before the Society of American Florists at the New York Convention.]

I have been appointed to open a discussion on "The Welfare of the National Society," and, while I am fully aware that, in view of the large amount of work to be done in a very short time, such discussion must necessarily be brief, I think it well that we should hear the views of the members on this most important question. We all appreciate now that our society has been and will continue to be a great educational force; that it has stimulated and developed floriculture along many lines and it is quite proper that we should consider at this, the largest and most important meeting we have ever held, how we may improve the workings of the society itself, which has done so much for us all.

We are impressed with the fact that the society is at this time stronger than it has ever been before, and we are delighted with the evidences of the many warm and powerful friends the society has here in the metropolis of our country. On every hand we see evidences of their earnest and capable work. We have the greatest trade exhibit we have ever had, and the finest exhibition and the New York Florists' Club has given us a delightful and valuable souvenir book, particularly interesting in its history of floriculture in its earlier stages in the vicinity of New York, as well as in the forcible facts presented relative to its present status—truly a marvelous development. The editor of this work deserves our gratitude and praise, as do all those who have so ably assisted him. The book is worthy of the great city it represents and will long be treasured as a memento of this great meeting. As long as we have such workers as our New York friends have proven themselves to be, the welfare of the society is assured.

I find it difficult to suggest any new features likely to be of benefit to the society. Its management has been in the hands of many of the most capable men in the country, and their time and thought has been freely given to it. Its annual reports show that we have had at our yearly meetings valuable essays on cultural methods, on building and heating greenhouses, and on almost everything pertaining to the business, by practical men who had given these problems much study, as well as scientific papers from college professors and other specialists on plant diseases, insecticides and fertilizers, which contained information which the practical florist had neither the time nor the necessary apparatus to obtain for himself. I do not hesitate to say that these annual reports constitute the most valuable business library a florist can use.

I think, therefore, we should do well to continue working along much the same lines as heretofore, cultivating closer and more cordial relations between the government experimental stations and the botanical departments of our great colleges, both of which have shown repeatedly a disposition to aid us in every possible way. I understand there will be a proposition at this convention from Purdue University, Lafayette Ind., for this society to appropriate a small sum of money for experiments in sub-watering, the result to be reported at our next meeting. I hope this society may do this and also earnestly consider all like propositions which may come before it. It might perhaps be well for the society to hold a meeting and exhibition during Lent for the purpose of showing particularly cut flowers and novelties in plants at a more favorable time than is the month of August, which is a very unfavorable time for a meeting, having for its only advantage the fact that it is the vacation time of the year, when florists can best afford the time to attend. But an exhibition in winter or early spring would be very attractive and would undoubtedly be well attended.

Another feature already established which deserves encouragement is that of life membership. I can think of nothing which would more greatly benefit the society than an increase of the life membership list. It has been wisely determined that the money received from life members shall be invested permanently, the interest therefrom only being available to the use of the society, so that in becoming a life member one may feel that even after being removed by death his subscription will continue to benefit the society. We should have at least 1,000 members in a country like this, and could have that many if the present members would take hold of this matter in the right spirit. I hope the younger members of the society will take a greater interest. We need the vigor and enthusiasm that belongs to youth, and there is no way by which a young man can benefit himself more, as well as the society, than by taking an active part in the proceeding and by studying the problems which concern us all, and thus qualifying himself to take part in the proceedings. Every man should do what he can, on the Baconian principle that "every man is a debtor to his profession."

After the Convention.

Here we have the popular secretary of the New York Florists' Club, enjoying a well earned rest after the labors incident to the convention. Mr. Young was one of the hard workers, and the many friends who benefited by his zeal and courtesy will not begrudge him a holiday now, for when there was work to be done he was always found on the ground floor and never "up a tree."

Convention Musings.

Since arriving home from the great convention I've been meditating. They say that meditating is a lazy man's job. Perhaps it is, but the man who went to New York last week and made an effort to take in everything offered between Tuesday morning and Friday night and does not feel lazy this week must be constructed of steel. Yes, I confess, I'm glad to get home and am satisfied that my trip has furnished me food for profitable thinking for the coming twelve-month. If asked what impressed me most strongly at New York, I would unhesitatingly answer, the wonderful system, the perfect organization, the punctuality and order pervading every feature of the convention proceedings and the exhibition, every detail of the work of the New York Florists' Club, at Glen Island, at Prospect Park, everywhere and always. Equally impressive was the object lesson of the great combined exhibition. Between the two grand sections, trade and amateur, only emulation as to which should bring to New York and to American horticulture the greatest honor. And this is the very thing that we have been told, numberless times, could never be brought about in New York. Never before has the fraternal idea been so fully demonstrated; the patience and good nature of the exhibition managers in their trying duties cannot be too highly commended; the courtesy and liberality of the managers of the building will never be forgotten.

The most valuable innovation, to my mind, was the establishment of a press bureau. This feature worked so successfully that its adoption as a regular adjunct of future conventions is inevitable. Another commendable improvement over past conditions was the division of the duties of the secretary's office among several capable assistants. The bureau of information filled a long-felt want and the scheme of numbering the Glen Island dinner tickets so that the holder knew just when he would be served worked to perfection. The enterprise displayed in the make up of the beautiful souvenir book merited the highest praise.

I am told that the exhibitors in the trade exhibition were remarkably successful in disposing of their displays and in the taking of orders for future delivery. The claim of unprecedented success is freely made by all and this department of the annual meeting is today stronger than ever. The secretary's report shows that the department of plant registration has already demonstrated its indispensable value; the thoroughness of the legislative committee's report astonishes us with its suggestion of the society's power; the assurance of bright prospects for the acquirement of the long-sought national charter fills us with new aspirations, and the cordiality and recognition bestowed upon our organization by state and civic authorities, by the metropolitan press and the Agricultural Department of the national government awakens us to possibilities of future influence and usefulness far beyond our most sanguine anticipations. Truly the New York convention was an "eye opener," and if there are any grumblers they are doing their grumbling "under their breath."

As to New York itself, emotions conflict. "Closed for the summer" gave a somewhat dispiriting look to the amusement centers that, in their season, turn midnight in the metropolis into noonday. Even the Bowery was deserted. But Coney Island was very much alive and everybody had to see it and the roof garden furnished cool and refreshing recreation even if not of the highest grade of talent. For the country visitor there were some surprises and ideals were rudely shattered in many instances. To see old-fashioned horse cars preambulating the streets of the metropolis still, makes the rural cousin open his eyes in wonder. I boarded a Broadway car the first morning I was in town; had to jump for it as the conductor struck the bell to go ahead before my foot was firmly on the step. His insolent "step lively," was still rankling in my bosom when I noticed that he was chewing gum. A glance over the passengers disclosed three girls working their jaws vigorously in the same employment. I had supposed gum chewing to be confined to rustics. A young lady sitting beside me had, from all appearances, been having a fearful tussel with the mosquitoes the night before. From her conversation with a friend I learned she came from Long Island. Thus did I find out that all the mosquitoes are not quartered in Jersey. But New York street cars have one redeeming quality in the free transfer system. The rest of the country might take lessons here to advantage.

JOHN YOUNG.
Secretary New York Florists' Club.

To return to the convention; the absence of inclination to discuss the papers was noted by many and regret expressed over the change. Oh! for one day of the good old times when half a dozen eager disputants clamored "Mr. Chairman!" for prior possession of the floor and the roof shook in response to impassioned oratory. Now it is all decorous committee reporting. I observed that the state vice-presidents have not yet reached a proper appreciation of the dignity of the office they hold. Only three were on hand to report at the designated hour. The secretary told me that quite a number of them had handed in written reports, expecting somebody to read them for them, however. The vote to pass these over and merely print them in the annual proceedings was just what they deserved.

Special Awards at New York.

At the trade exhibit at the New York convention the judges bestowed a number of S. A. F. certificates of merit and accorded special mention to a number of exhibits, as follows:

N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston, compliments for method of displaying hose menders, couplings, etc.

The Exhibition and Decorations.

At no time in the history of the S. A. F. has the local club of the convention city been of such importance as at this last gathering of the century. One feature of great profit and enjoyment was the horticultural exhibition, the work of gardeners for various private estates. It was a revelation to many and a source of much pleasure to all. The engraving gives but an idea of the individual beauty of each exhibit and magnitude of the whole. The exhibition occupied the central portion of the building, while the trade exhibit extended under the gallery on each side and covered a large area at the rear. This was much more extensive than usual.

The feature which at once awakened us to the generous good will and hospitality of the New York club was the elaborate and beautiful decoration of the audience room. The engraving here shown gives but a faint idea of the magnitude of the undertaking, the entire ceiling being covered with oak branches with the foliage hanging down in its natural position, the many pillars being covered with vines and decorated, some with gladioli, some with hydrangeas and grasses, giving the effect of a forest of oak trees with the trunks covered with growths of vines and flowers. Around the walls were large palms and laurels, with several panels decorated profusely with tritomas. All the flowers were preserved by glasses of water made invisible by foliage. Only those who saw the decoration can appreciate the untiring effort and skill which the work required.

What Is a Hardy Perennial?

The decision of the judges at the horticultural exhibition in connection with the recent convention of the S. A. F. opens the way to a wide discussion on the subject, what is meant by "hardy perennial?" The points in question are these: The schedule called for a collection of hardy perennials and bulbous plants of not more than twenty-five species. Two of the exhibitors were disqualified, because one had in his collection a vase of Clematis paniculata, the other a vase of Desmodium penduliflorum. I venture to assert that there is not a single florist or gardener in this country who ever before heard that these plants were not perennials and there is no question of their hardiness in the vicinity of New York.

On my calling the attention of the manager of the exhibition to the matter I was informed that it was herbaceous perennials that were meant by the schedule, although it did not say so, and the judges gave that decision. This statement was confirmed to me later on by one of the judges, who said that on the advice of the manager as to what was meant in the schedule, they gave that decision. Now, had the judges any right to give that decision without consulting other members of the committee? Was not the manager himself a competitor of the class in question?

When I asked what these plants were, if not herbaceous, I was informed that Clematis paniculata was a climbing shrub and Desmodium penduliflorum a shrub. Who ever saw Desmodium penduliflorum not being herbaceous? True, the stems are rather hard-wooded, still not any more so than Hibiscus Crimson Eye, and I noticed a vase of this plant in the collection of the winner of the first prize.

A plant, the writer is aware, was widely distributed both in Europe and America as Desmodium penduliflorum, but this was not a desmodium at all, but Lespedeza bicolor, and, moreover, it was the true desmodium that was in the collection in question. Lespedeza bicolor is a shrub. That Clematis paniculata is not herbaceous is doubtful. It certainly is herbaceous for the first two or three years after planting.

As before stated the schedule reads "collection of hardy perennials and bulbous plants." If the manager and judges interpreted it to mean hardy herbaceous perennials why did they not also interpret it as hardy bulbous plants? Are gladioli hardy? A vase of these was in the first prize collection. It would be well for societies in getting up schedules for exhibitions to state plainly what is meant, for the good old days when a spade was a spade are of the long ago.

Floral Decoration.

BY ROBERT KIFT, OF PHILADELPHIA.

[An illustrated lecture read before the Society of American Florists at the New York Convention.]

The title of my paper covers the whole field of floral arrangement, the principal divisions of which are church, house and table decorations. Any one of these could be but touched upon in the limited time at my disposal. I shall consider them, therefore, in the broad sense, as in the views which I have collected, examples of all classes of decorative work will be found. We read of the splendors of ancient Roman and Egyptian banquets, where flowers were said to have been so lavishly used; unfortunately I have no photographic views of these to offer you, and it may be that newspaper reporters were also abroad in the land, then as now. While we may not hope to rival these celebrated fetes for some time to come, there is no doubt that the use of plants and flowers in decorations at all social functions is rapidly becoming more general. Large private entertainments or balls are now given by individuals, that for lavish display far exceed the former united efforts of the entire "four hundred." Wedding festivities are also, if possible, made greater society events, and at times tax the resources of the florist to the utmost.

THE LAVISH DECORATION OF THE AUDIENCE ROOM WAS A FEATURE OF THE NEW YORK CONVENTION.

Perhaps the greatest factor for the increasing recurrence of these elaborate displays is the occasional "carte blanche" order that, falling into good hands, is carried out with judgment and discretion, thereby producing a floral effect that delights all and encourages other patrons to even greater efforts when the occasion arises. On the other hand, money expended for flowers is too often considered wasted or of least moment. Editorials, even, have been written in the daily press, deploring the extravagant and senseless waste for such lavishment of flowers upon these occasions. The reverse is the case, however, as the delicacies and the music, considered so absolutely essential, are soon forgotten, while the decorations, greatly admired at the time, make a deep and lasting impression.

When an architect plans a house he sees in his mind's eye just how every room will look before a line is drawn. The floral decorator should be able to do the same with his work. A look over the ground and a study of the color effects of the furnishings and permanent ornamentations will show him just where the special features that he has in his mind can be displayed to the best advantage.

Every arrangement of flowers or plants, be it ever so small, should have some little touch to distinguish it, some individuality. Every room should have a point to which special attention is given so that on account of its novel or tasteful arrangement it attracts attention. It is these special features that call forth admiration; they make a lasting impression that is carried away; they are the life of the work.

Every decorator should provide himself with neat wooden and wicker pedestals of various heights. Iron stands, some adjustable and fitted with tipping devices to hold a plant securely on its side, are also useful. Pot covers in good assortment of sizes are indispensable. All the above, except a few for special occasions, should be painted a foliage green, as it is the plants that add beauty and grace; the covers and pedestals are merely accessories, and should be concealed as much as possible. Tall flower vases for chrysanthemums or American Beauty roses are almost a necessity. These can now be had in silvered wicker with zinc lining, not better than glass but much more lasting.

If the order calling for a house decoration is elaborate, have a base of operations; put your boxes in the laundry or other cool room in the basement and work from there; this confines the litter mostly to one place and keeps the stock in better form. The foliage and flowers for each room should be selected and boxed separately from a list previously made out, showing the different points where each lot is to be used, which, when ticked off, makes the order complete. This should follow with all plants, pedestals, pot covers, vases and other accessories, which when checked again, insures the safe return of all that have gone out and means a great saving in the course of a season's work.

Those of the trade who make a specialty of large decorations soon become more than mere florists and appropriate the word decorator. They also add to their force upholsterers, carpenters and electricians, and are obliged before long to hire storage room for the properties that accumulate and which, by re-arranging, can be utilized time and time again. I must also speak of the kneeling stool or Prie Dieu. Some form of this useful article should be found in every decorator's stock, it being indispensable at a house wedding and is also often an essential feature at the church.

Within the past twelve to fifteen years the decorator has called to his aid the evergreens of the woods. Laurel branches and wreathing made of their sprays were first used, then that grand southern vine, the wild smilax, was introduced by A. C. Belschig, of Savannah, Georgia, in 1888. I have an interesting letter from Caldwell, the Woodsman, who, while he does not claim to be the original smilax man, is without doubt the genius who found out its commercial value and, having faith, devoted his whole time to collecting and getting it before the public. He invented the light packing case and obtained special express rates, so that now it can be had in almost any city of the Union and Canada during its season, and he thinks the entire output of last season would probably reach over 3,500 cases. Palm leaves and crowns, as well as leucothoe sprays and galax leaves are also used extensively. Wild smilax adapts itself to almost any kind of wall or suspended form of decoration; each spray seems as if especially selected for arranging over this picture or mirror, or over that doorway, as the case may be. The only danger lies in its too promiscuous use, as then its naturally irregular and graceful form is lost in the mass of foliage.

I could describe a number of beautiful effects made by combinations of flowers and foliage, but think you will be able to get a better idea from the pictures about to be thrown upon the screen, nearly all of which have one or more features to commend them.

I will only say, try and let your individuality show in the work; do not rest satisfied with something that any one who had the material on hand could do. The mere setting a few plants about in the corners, crowding some ferns together on the mantle and hanging strings of smilax in which a few carnations have been wired, will not build up a reputation. Customers rarely know what is required, they expect the florist to have ideas, they look to him to tell them what they should have, the rest being merely a question of price.

In conclusion, I believe that one of the most important elements in a decoration is to be on time. Many an otherwise faultless job is spoiled from lack of time in which to carry out all that was promised. What should have been a brilliant victory, so to speak, was turned into defeat, the florists retreating in confusion through the rear door while the guests were entering the front. There should be time, indeed, for a final inspection and, if necessary, a touch here and there, that, while not in the contract, adds much to the work and leaves nothing to be desired. Then what a satisfaction there is in going about with the host and hostess and hearing from them that they are well pleased and that everything is exceedingly satisfactory. You may be very tired but you go away from their presence with a light heart and feeling of gratification that amply repays for all your efforts.

The Improvement of the Carnation.

BY WILLIAM WEBER, OAKLAND, MD.

When we contrast the carnation of to-day with the carnation of fifteen years ago, we behold a difference so vast that, had it been foretold at that time, the would-be prophet would have been made light of. Very naturally we all expect to advance continuously, but at that time we scarcely thought we would accomplish more in fifteen years than had been done in the preceding fifty. Yet when we look at the world in general, we are, after all, forced to admit that we have merely done what could naturally be expected. Had we not made such strides we would not deserve to be called progressive, or equal in animation with the spirit which pervades all other branches of industry.

I am charged with the mission of telling you the story of "The Improvement of the Carnation." The whole story, while very simple, would be of such length as to prove irksome did I attempt to tell it to you in detail as it occurs to me; I will, therefore, be as brief as possible, leaving the hundred and one little things which always form a part of the whole to your imagination.

Improved methods of culture stand out in bold relief as being the most important item of our subject. How different are the methods we use now when compared to those of a decade or more back. We house our plants now from six to eight weeks earlier than we used to do. Then we merely tried to get them all in before damaging frosts should arrive. The result was usually very large plants, with an abundance of shoots. Leaving out the winter culture in the greenhouse, and presuming they were to be grown in their natural way, these large plants were good subjects to winter over, and produce an abundance of flowers the following year; in other words, they were ready for their winter's sleep.

What happens when large plants are planted late in the season is this. The time left for them to become established on the benches is decidedly too short. It will take two weeks in September or October to accomplish what one week in July or August would do in the way of filling the soil with roots. When this is accomplished, the plants are ready for work, and not before.

The product of a poorly, or partially established plant cannot approach perfection. When we plant late there is no time for thorough establishment to take place and the result will, in nearly every case, be a large crop of medium grade flowers at best. And where the culture is indifferent, quantity as well as quality will be inferior.

The merits of early planting are not as fully recognized as they should be. Early planting is one of the bulwarks of the present high standard the carnation of to-day enjoys. The reason is very simple. When we plant in July and August we are giving the plants ample time to become thoroughly established before the days are so short, and there is consequently less light to help them along. Then we have our plants in good working condition and the carnationist can commence feeding his plants judiciously, and with the exactitude and nicety of one who thoroughly understands this subject.

Early planting may mean a few less flowers, but this will be more than made up in the better quality and greater length of stem than could be expected from the late planted stock.

A careful study of our soil, what it contains and what it lacks; what constitutes plant food, and how plants feed, are matters which demand the fullest consideration. We cannot hope to accomplish anything of real value unless we work along these lines.

The grower who will stop trying to do as well this year as he did last year, and instead make a systematic effort to each year eclipse last year's record, will soon be in line with the best growers in the land. What we need is to stop guessing and become so infused with our task that we will soon have all the ideas of our own we can manage and put to the test. In this manner each one working along his particular line of thought will evolve some points, perhaps, which his neighbor in the field may not, and in this way help to contribute to the store of knowledge which is being steadily collected and which will doubtless be preserved in history.

As soon as we learn to depend on ourselves, we begin forthwith to improve. What matters it if we do make a few mistakes? Is there any one here who hasn't made them? I believe not. They simply serve to guide us in our work and teach us the value of proceeding with our eyes open, to never experiment on a scale so large that the failure of the experiment would swamp us. If we manage it carefully the results will inspire us with a confidence known only to those who thoroughly understand their calling; be he florist, engineer, merchant, soldier, or what not, it is all the same.

Great as has been the improvement of the carnation in recent years, all indications point to a still greater improvement in the near future. No small factor is the modern houses which are being built. One would think that we had nearly reached the limit in perfect greenhouse construction, but each year shows some little defect and a way to overcome it. The palatial houses now used form one of the greatest contrasts to the methods of a few years back, and no small portion of the carnations' improvement is directly due to this one thing.

Everybody knows the absolute necessity of careful selection of stock, and doubly so in the selection of cuttings, and their proper care, so that I can say nothing new along this line. One of the evils of to-day is a tendency to "bite off more than we can chew;" it is poor policy and would better be abandoned, as it means only a loss of reputation and money.

I have thus far said nothing of the seedling man, the hybridist. Certainly a very large slice of the credit and the honor the carnation now enjoys is due to his efforts. We are wont to kick and to cuff him for the indifferent and poor varieties he has burdened us with, but through it all shines the fact that he is a most deserving fellow and has labored hard for the advancement of the carnation.

We have passed the era when any medium-good variety may be disseminated. We now expect some special feature in a new candidate for honor. Hybridists understand this fact very well and we are promised some sensations at our annual meeting in Baltimore next February.

There is only one real, practical standard by which we can judge a carnation, and that is its ability to make money for the grower. It would be unfair to seedling raisers did we intimate that this fact is not always kept in view. We cannot expect to scale the ladder at a single bound, and must therefore be content with a gradual ascent.

The foregoing, I believe, will cover in general the practical part of the improvement of the carnation, but there is another side to be seen, another force to be reckoned with. The various trade journals must come in for their share, and so must the different florists' clubs and societies which give exhibitions from time to time and award prizes, thereby stimulating interest as well as a friendly rivalry.

It must be admitted, however, that the greatest of these forces is that biggest and proudest baby of the S. A. F., the American Carnation Society. The mother society may well feel proud of her offspring. We are accomplishing in a systematic way things which would be impossible were not the American Carnation Society in existence. This organization brings together annually the carnation lovers from all parts of the country. That these meetings and exhibitions accomplish great things must not be doubted for an instant.

The practical fruits which resulted from the great advertising the carnation received as a result of the deal which made the Lawson carnation the property of Mr. Thos. W. Lawson, was largely brought about by the carnation society. If there had been no carnation society there would have been no Lawson fund, and likewise no Lawson medals. That interest in the society on this account has increased a hundred fold is certainly true. Mr. Lawson has been a potent factor in the advancement of the carnation and the beautiful flower which bears his wife's name is a fitting example of the up-to-date carnation.

To sum up every detail, and give due credit to each for the part played by it in bringing the carnation to its present standard, would make a long story. I will leave this for you, and believe that you agree with me that the small as well as the large items are necessary to complete the list, the whole forming one grand pyramid.

A glance at the future is always interesting. During the next ten years we may expect many great changes in the cultivation of the carnation. Perhaps even a revolution. Prof. Arthur and others have started us to experimenting with sub-watering, the ultimate success of which would be fraught with incalculable benefit to the grower, and at the same time reduce very largely the labor connected with the daily care of the plants. The principle of sub-watering is all right and out of the experimenting now going on some good must certainly come. That a good many failures are being met with in these experiments is very natural. We cannot hope to be successful to any great degree at the very outset. We must first become thoroughly familiar with the idea and the principles of sub-watering, and the effect under varying conditions it has upon the plants before we will be in a position to reap the benefits of our experiments.

A few years ago when indoor culture was first suggested for carnations the idea was received in anything but a favorable light. In spite of this, however, we have been gradually drifting towards indoor culture. Many now house their plants as early as the first week in July. Thus half the distance between outdoor and indoor culture has been traversed. Whether the remaining distance between the two systems will be covered remains to be seen.

One of the most important matters in connection with indoor culture is thorough ventilation. When we have mastered this fully we may expect good results from indoor culture. What the hybridist will bring forth in the near future is always interesting to conjecture. There must be some law or system in nature regarding color, etc., and possibly by degrees, study, work and practice, these secrets might be gradually unfolded to us. At any rate we know that these things will not come to us unless we make some effort.

Hydrangea Culture.

The hydrangeas shown in the illustrations were grown from cuttings propagated in March, 1899. When well rooted they were potted in 2½-inch pots. The tips were pinched out once before the plants were set in the field, which was about June 1. After planting out they were stopped once more. The season was very dry and no artificial watering was given and they were often wilted; the result was a short growth, thoroughly ripened. Early in October the plants were lifted into 6-inch, 7-inch and 8 inch pots. The soil was one-third well rotted manure and a considerable portion of the roots were cut off to allow as much soil as possible in the pots, into which the plants were set firmly. They were wintered in a house where the temperature was seldom higher than 40°. Early in March the plants were moved into a temperature of 55° and after they had started well they were given several applications of liquid fertilizer. They came in just right for Memorial Day and sold out clean. ALEXANDER CLARK.

Hardy Herbaceous Subjects for Late Planting.

It seems strange that more herbaceous plants are not planted during the latter half of August and the first half of September. All the spring and early summer flowering species and varieties, with very few exceptions, plant well at this time of year and make a fine show of bloom the next flowering season. If the planting is put off until spring, and it happens to be dry, the show is next to nothing in comparison.

If the place for planting happens to be where water cannot be given freely, it is better to wait until the first soaking rain after August 15. If, however, water can be given freely, any time after August 1 is good. We have town water supply and continue planting herbaceous subjects from April 1 till hard frost. It is not, however, advisable, to plant anything with evergreen foliage much after September 15, as such plants do not bear covering until the ground is frozen solid, and would not make enough root to prevent heaving if a few hard frosts should come early and be followed by mild weather.

It is safe to cover everything about the end of December, or before if the ground is frozen solid. We generally plant the most dormant plants first, such as the phloxes and pæonies, and leave those with evergreen foliage, such as Phlox subulata, Iberis correatolia and Lychnis flos-cuculi till last. When we can, we cover the last mentioned families with boards nailed together. Evergreen boughs and long straw are also good. The covering of such hardy plants as the phloxes and pæonies is only absolutely necessary with fresh-planted stock, but we find Iberis correatolia and Lychnis flos-cuculi are better covered, the latter because the roots are so brittle that freezing and thawing breaks them and the former because the foliage burns badly in February and March.

Quite a number of herbaceous plants do not bear being packed long in hot weather, so should be shipped by express. After the middle of September it is generally safe to have plants shipped by freight. After September 15 Phlox decussata and P. suffruticosa can be planted and a week or two later the helianthus, helianthus, paenias, rudbeckias, spiraeas, etc.

For August and early September planting we can recommend the following: Achilleas, alyssums, anchusas, anemones, anthesis, aquilegias, armerias, campanulas, centaureas, cerastiums, coreopsis, delphiniums, dianthus, dianthus, dicentras, gypsophilas, Helanium Boulanderii, hemerocallis, iberises, lupinus, lychnis, Mertensia Virginica, monardas, myosotises, œnotheras, papavers, pentstemons, phloxes, primulas, pyrethrums, Spiræa filipendula fl. pl., and Viola cornuta. There are many others, but those mentioned are the most in demand and will make a good show from spring until the end of June or middle of July.

Pan-American Notes.

The weather for the past month has been rather dry on the whole, yet it has been very favorable for the development of the ground. But few hours have been lost since the opening of spring on account of wet weather. Since my last notes a great deal of finishing has been done to that portion of the ground lying south, east and west of the Mirror lakes. Many acres near the Elmwood avenue entrance are now in a most complete state. Flower beds are prepared and the grass, the sowing of which has been going on every day this summer, now gives this portion of the grounds a most finished and beautiful appearance. The rapidity and luxuriance with which the grass grows has been a revelation to our citizens and all visitors. Rudolph Ulrich has a large staff of men constantly seeding, and another gang continually following with the hose, and their labor is well rewarded. People who doubted that the immense amount of work could be done and the large expanse of territory could be finished, now feel assured that there will be no difficulty in getting all of the ground in order by the opening day.

The sunken gardens in front of the Horticulture and Government buildings respectively are excavated. The fancy garden on each side of the large basin, known as the Cascades, is now surfaced and the banks will soon be green. This is in the very center of the building region. The bottoms of the canal and lakes have been covered with two inches of broken lime stone, which insures their being what their name implies, "mirror lakes," and not muddy pieces of water.

The United States government is making a large display of ornamental and economic grasses that are useful and hardy in this latitude. Several of our leading seed houses have secured plots of ground varying from one-eighth to one-half an acre and are having them seeded and will ornament with flower beds.

At the south border of the Mirror lakes and also in the many inlets and bays on both sides of the fore court and grand approach are planted 1,400 nymphaeas, with a few groups of nelumbiums. Clay banks, or dams have been made to retain eighteen inches of water for the accommodation of these aquatics. They are the exhibit of Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, and if in one area would cover about an acre and a half of water. They must make a magnificent appearance from the banks on both sides of the lake. They are already making good growth, which assures a magnificent display for next year.

Work is progressing finely on all buildings. The Propylæa, the most northern direction of the grounds, is nearly completed. The Electricity building, Agriculture building, Graphic Arts, Forestry and Mines, United States government building, all are going up. The two largest buildings, which are the Machinery and Transportation and Manufacturers and Liberal Arts, each 350x500 feet, will soon be roofed in.

A remarkable feature of this exposition is the immense interest and confidence displayed by the leading amusement people of the world. It is a fact that the amusement, or midway features, will entail a larger outlay of money than the whole of the exposition at Omaha cost. To accommodate the many remarkable novelties that will be exhibited they will now occupy the ground to the south of the mall and extending south below the Horticulture building. Many of these attractions and features of amusement are to be on a most expensive scale, and this is at the risk of the concessionaires. It shows what confidence they have in the prospective attendance.

The half-million dollar art gallery, the gift of J. J. Albright, is going up rapidly. This is situated in the park proper, overlooking the lake. The New York state building is also in the park at the north-east corner and is also being rapidly built. A magnificent new boat house and refectory will be built in the park proper and a new bridge spanning the lake between the north bay and the large bay, at a cost of $50,000. These are permanent improvements.

Beautiful as the grounds of the Pan-American Exposition now appear, the visitor can form but little idea of what it will be, because there is at present a high board fence separating the acquired ground for the exposition proper from the park. When that is torn down and the 100 acres of the beautiful park scenery is then part of the whole, it will be seen what an immense advantage it is to have the park a part of the exposition.

ROSES.

GROWING AMERICAN BEAUTY.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I am a good grower of most varieties of roses, but have never had charge of American Beauties. Some growing here are eighteen inches high. Had I better stop them or let them go on till the buds are half grown? They are making nice plants only on stems. Do they need to be kept hotter than Brides? Should they be kept cool after they have made their growth? I want them for the holidays. J. B. R.

This grower should pinch out his American Beauty buds as soon as they are well formed, but do not cut any young foliage away; encourage them to make all the growth they can. As the main crop is wanted for the holidays, the buds can all or practically all of them be picked off till November. If any shoots show a tendency to run into long growth before setting a bud, they should be tied down to induce them to break the lower eyes. If really first quality flowers are wanted the plants should not be subjected to a temperature higher than 58° at night after the hot weather is past and all the air possible should be given on every favorable occasion. The plants should be kept growing freely and should never be checked, either from want of water or a sudden change of temperature. If black spot should appear, a very little fire heat at night, just enough to expel the dampness, should be applied and some air left on all night at the same time. This will prevent the plants becoming weak.

SHADING ROSE HOUSES.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I wish to ask you how to shade rose houses; what months in summer the shading will be of benefit? I have roses in houses running both east and west and north and south, and plants in solid beds as well as in benches.

G. S. S.

This correspondent does not state in what part of the country he is located, so that it is impossible to give a satisfactory answer to his question. If he is located south of Mason and Dixon's line it may be advisable to give a light shading to his rose houses during extreme hot weather. If he is in the north shading will do more harm than good, unless it may be to save the flowers for summer use. In that case, also, a very light shading may be serviceable. This can be put on with a syringe or with a long-handled brush. Mix whitening with half skimmed milk and half water, so that it will obscure the strong sun rays. If to be applied with a syringe the solution should be strained through a piece of very fine netting. It should be kept constantly stirred, otherwise the whitening soon settles to the bottom. If milk can not be had, a little salt added to the water will make the shading adhere to the glass for several weeks.

If a more permanent shading is required take enough white lead to make a pail of kerosene or naphtha look like thin milk and by adding a small quantity of emerald green ground in oil it will give a slightly green shade to the glass, which is not so objectionable as clear white. This mixture should be applied with a brush and will stay on the glass till frost comes, but if the roses are required for winter use only, shading is not necessary; in fact it is an evil, as it makes the plants produce weak, soft growth rather than strong, sturdy wood. JOHN N. MAY.

HANCOCK, MICH.—A. M. York is adding about 2,000 feet to his range of glass here.

SHREVEPORT, LA.—R. H. Stanley has opened a flower store in a part of the building occupied by Schlenker, the confectioner.

MATTERS HAVE QUIETED DOWN.—HOST OF VISITORS HAS DEPARTED.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—GROWERS DO BUSINESS.

Things are quieting down nicely and the convention has passed into history, the last straggler of the visiting throngs having now taken his departure. The unanimous testimony of our guests as to our success in pleasing them is exceedingly gratifying and since they are happy we are doubly so. Although the days are already upon us when the absent local people, customers and florists, are supposed to begin to "return to their knitting," there is as yet little to indicate their coming and nothing except the usual August stillness is discernible on the business horizon. Flowers are coming in to the wholesale markets in the customary quantities for the season, gradually increasing and gradually improving, also. Roses grow better as the plants gain strength and the boxes when opened in the morning will soon disclose something to admire. Asters are excellent, the Semple type predominating now and leaving no room for the common, small flowered sorts which are practically unsalable when the better classes are obtainable. Lily of the valley is very fine and entitled to a better fate than the very small and uncertain demand makes unavoidable. Of course of decorative flowers, such as sunflowers, hydrangeas and Japan lilies, there is an abundance, but unfortunately, decorative affairs of the necessary magnitude are conspicuously absent and the showy blossoms might better be left to brighten the landscape than sent to New York to overflow the rubbish carts.

Twenty-eighth street has resumed its wonted aspect. Take the wholesale florists out of the block between Broadway and Sixth avenue and there is not much left. What was left was, however, very lonely and disconsolate during convention week, when the headquarters of the talent was removed to the vicinity of the Grand Central Palace. "Carriages to meet all trains" was the rule at all the suburban establishments. Many visitors were received during and since the convention by the growers whose fame has spread far out and some profitable business was done by those who had anything good to sell.

Ehmann & Bock will open a store on September 15, at 2112 Broadway.

QUAKER CITY BOYS VASTLY PLEASSED WITH THEIR NEW YORK EXPERIENCES.—OUTING FEATURES PARTICULARLY ATTRACTIVE.—GUNNERS MORE SUCCESSFUL THAN THE BOWLERS.—PERSONAL DOINGS.

We are all at home again after having spent a most delightful week in New York. It is hard to say which feature we enjoyed the most. The first surprise was the beautifully decorated convention hall. What a happy thought; all about us a leafy bower, the intense green relieved by tritomas, gladioli and hydrangeas. Mr. Bunyard and others of the committee worked hard and produced a really beautiful and original effect. The carriage drives were delightful. That through Greenwood Cemetery and Prospect Park was a revelation to most of the participants. The cemetery is most beautiful; there is not a barren spot anywhere, the well kept drives winding about and revealing new vistas and landscapes as the party proceeded, calling forth words of commendation from everyone. The lawns were particularly well kept and the numerous lakes at the foot of the slopes added wonderfully to the beauty of the scene. There are many fine specimen trees that, standing out by themselves or grouped symmetrically, add much to the landscape. Prospect Park is an example of what a public pleasure ground should be. There were also examples of fine bedding which showed that this feature was not forgotten. The committee, Messrs. Langjahr, Sheridan, Raynor, Mellis and others, were very solicitous for the welfare of their guests and everything possible was done to make the trip successful. It was an afternoon long to be remembered.

The trip to Glen Island rounded up the pleasure outings in a fitting climax. What a beautiful place Glen Island is, how orderly and yet no one felt the least constraint. Anyone having a half day of leisure while in New York should certainly visit this lovely isle. Ed. Jansen's reception was all right. Mr. and Mrs. Jansen made everybody feel at home. This new store, stocked as it is, ranks at the head and the decorations were fine.

Our Florists' Club's shooting representatives did fairly well, winning the Lockland trophy and the prize for high individual score, that going to John Burton. The bowlers are, however, a sadly disappointed lot. They had troubles of their own and they weighed heavily enough to affect their score disastrously. It's too early to say anything about next year but we think they will recover in time to be in the line of battle at Buffalo, when the struggle is on again.

We hear that the hail storm of August 18, destroyed nearly every pane of glass in the conservatories at Wootton, the residence of Geo. W. Childs Drexel, at Bryn Mawr, Pa., and almost ruined the specimen ferns for which Mr. Long has made the place famous. The same storm played havoc with a crop of melons owned by J. G. Gardner. They were just ready for market and were beaten to a pulp. The loss is $500.

John Walker left us for good last Thursday. We were very sorry to say good bye, but as he is leaving under such bright auspices we are all glad for the prospects which lie before him and hope their promises will be fulfilled. He carried away only the very best wishes for his success in his new field.

On Wednesday, October 3, John P. Cleary will conduct a public sale of the stock of the Stoke Pogis Nurseries, Villa Nova, Pa., which the agent, George C. Watson, of this city, announces will be closed out to settle the estate. The nursery boasts some splendid stock.

A. Lincoln Brown, who has secured a good position in Cleveland, is, we understand, looking up a house there and Philadelphia is soon to lose a most charming young lady. They say Isaac Kennedy is much pleased with the west.

Robert Craig says he did splendidly at the convention and since, with returning visitors; others were also benefited, notably Bayersdorfer & Co. and M. Rice & Co., who took large orders.

Business is dull and flowers are plentiful; $3 to $5 is asked for the best teas, while $1 to $1.50 per dozen is the price for Beauties. K.

MONTREAL, CAN.—The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold its annual chrysanthemum show in Windsor Hall, November 6 to 8. W. H. Horobin, 130 Tupper street, is secretary.

PERFUMERY is now made from sweet pea flowers grown by Eckford, the English specialist.

A FEW plants of the Lawson carnation have found their way to England and are the objects of much favorable comment.

MAX LEICHTLIN speaks of Campanula rueprestris as a worthy companion to C. mirabilis and states that it does well in a sandy loam.

THIS is the day the window glass factories are scheduled to begin the season's operations but labor conditions are not favorable and seem to indicate advancing prices.

THE sixty-ninth annual fair of the American Institute will be held at the Berkeley Lyceum building, New York, September 25 to 27. Jas. W. Withers has charge of the section for flowers and plants.

EUROPEAN growers of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine are in some instances meeting with good success in propagating from leaves, the principal difficulty being in the damping off of the cuttings.

CLEMATIS PANICULATA has suffered lately by being eaten at the ground line by a little insect, the same, or at least quite similar to those which have destroyed aster plants for several years.

THE National Florists' Board of Trade has just issued its August and September supplement to the July credit and information list. This supplement contains 883 changes and 125 new names, making a total on the list of 3,062.

THE following hail storms have recently been reported: At Meyerstown, Pa.; Perry, Ia.; Strasburg, Pa.; Frankfort,
Ind.; Beardstown, Ill.; Wheatland Mills, Pa., and Pearl River, N. Y. Hail insurance is looking up in those sections.

JAMES VEITCH & SONS have been given the first-class certificate of the Royal Horticultural Society for a nepenthes, the result of crossing N. Dicksoniana and N. Mixta, which is remarkable for the size of the pitcher. They have named the variety for Sir Thiseleton Dyer.

THE usefulness of Tamarix Africanus as decorative material was demonstrated at the Glen Island dinner to the S. A. F., where it was used in the archways between two dining rooms. Its gray-green, feathery foliage with pinkish blossoms and lasting qualities were far superior to any asparagus for such work at this season.

Reward—Stolen!

A liberal reward will be paid for one hide, missing since a week ago. A bluidy Scot named Watson is known to have been in the vicinity carrying a scalping knife immediately before the aforesaid hide was missed.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—TRADE GOOD CONSIDERING ALL CONDITIONS.—GREAT PARADE INCONVENIENCES WHOLESALERS
ON TUESDAY.—CONVENTIONITES RETURN-ING.—PERSONAL DOINGS OF INTEREST.—
MANY VISITORS IN TOWN.

Trade has been very satisfactory in Chicago this week, considering all things.
The city has been so full of strangers that many lines of retail business have suffered, and on Tuesday, the day the great G. A. R. parade formed in the cut flower district, the streets were so thronged that the express companies made no effort to deliver or collect shipments between the hours of about 9 a.
m. and 4 p. m., so that things were in a very uncertain state for that day and much inconvenience resulted. Receipts continue light and in some lines barely sufficient for the demand. The Beauty growers are cutting increasing quantities of short stock; with most of them the qualities are excellent and the stems steadily lengthening. Of tea roses the supply is decidedly inadequate. The few really first-class flowers are only sufficient to whet the appetites of the buyers, but only a very small proportion of the cut is first-class. Out-door carnations are selling well and, in the cases of those growers who disbud the blooms in the field, the stock is good and brings fair prices. Even asters have ceased to be in any considerable oversupply; of course the recent rains, followed by hot suns have injured all outdoor flowers more or less. W. N. Rudd and Klehm's Nurseries are each sending in good hydrangea trusses, those of the former being particularly fine.

Nearly all of those who went to the convention are at home from New York and there is not a word other than praise spoken for that historic gathering and the hospitality of the New York Florists' Club. The exhibition is invariably pronounced unrivaled.

Michael Cullen, formerly shipping clerk at Vaughan's, who a few weeks ago was so badly burned by an accident at Moxley's butterine factory that his life was despaired of, is reported on the road to recovery.

J. D. Thompson, of the Chicago Carnation Co., has gone for ten days' hunting in the Adirondacks and they say that his new gun and khaki suit are dreams of beauty.

W. A. Peterson, the nurseryman, has returned from a six weeks' trip through the east, visiting leading nurseries and prominent private estates.

Mrs. J. C. Vaughan and Leonard Vaughan have returned from Europe, arriving August 26 at New York.

Most of the wholesalers will keep open until 6:30 p. m., beginning Monday, September 3.

J. D. Hartshorne and George Stollery have reached home from their trip to Europe.

G. E. Pieser saw what Fitzsimmons did to Sharkey the other evening in New York.

Wm. Kyle and wife are visiting at Mr.
Kyle's old home at Kalamazoo, Mich.

There have been a great many visitors in town this week, called principally by the G. A. R. encampment and the low fares offered for the occasion. Among the visitors were: S. Alfred Baur, Erie, Pa.; Chas. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kans.; Messrs.
Sonnenschmidt & Junge, Indianapolis;
W. A. Musson, Mogadore, O.; Victor
Wayman & wife, Madison, Wis.; H. A.
Schuermann, St. Louis; Alex. Newett, St.
Joseph, Mo.; Jas. Culbert, Rossville, Ill.;
R. Will and J. Hartmann, Minneapolis;
N. Bommersbach, Decatur, Ill.; J. C.
Elspeman, Evansville, Ind.; Charles Treanor, South Bend, Ind.; Lawrence Heinl, Terre Haute, Ind.; T. C. Joy and wife and C. A. Birn, Nashville; C. W.
Crouch, Knoxville; L. L. Jennings and Mrs. Wm. Dittman and children, New Castle, Ind.; W. H. Parkin, Galva, Ill.;
Joseph Molck, Jeffersonville, Ind.; Alfred W. Lempke, St. Paul; L. E. Hitz and wife, Madison, Ind.; Henry Boernhoff, with Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind.;

OBITUARY.

J. L. WILEY.

J. L. Wiley, who was for some years engaged in the florist business in Lynn,
Mass., died on August 23, aged 71 years.
From 1889 to 1890 Mr. Wiley was a member of the Pine Grove Cemetery commission.

MRS. B. F. GREGORY.

Mrs. B. F. Gregory, of Milwaukee, died Thursday, August 23, after undergoing an operation with hopes of obtaining relief from an affliction which she has braved for upwards of two years. She was one of the most energetic florists in the city and will be sadly missed by many flower lovers as well as the craft, who sympathize profoundly with Mr. Gregory in his bereavement.

JOHN LAING.

In the death of this Victorian Medalist in Horticulture, which occurred on August 8, in his seventy-eighth year, England loses one of the most enthusiastic and successful of the craft, one who has done much to improve many classes of florists' flowers. John Laing will ever be remembered as one of the pioneers of begonia culture, particularly the tuberous section. It is probably to him, more than to anyone else, we are indebted for the grand varieties we now have. But it is not to begonias alone that Mr. Laing gave his energies, for he devoted great attention to caladiums, and the Stansed Hill collection was second to none.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

AUGUST RHOTERT will return from his European trip September 2.

THE recent four weeks of hot weather has helped the corn crop everywhere.

THE Portland Seed Co., Portland, Ore., has increased its capital stock from $10,000 to $25,000.

FIRST shipments of Japan longiflorum bulbs arrived August 25, an unusually early date.

BERMUDA grown longiflorums are very scarce and large sizes of Harrisii are under the demand.

THE California nasturtium seed crop is going to be light, particularly that of the Tom Thumb sorts.

PEA crop reports in northern New York state now indicate a greater shortage than first expected.

T. W. WOOD & SONS, seedsmen, Richmond, Va., have been given an award on their exhibit in the forestry section of the Paris Exposition.

THE Northern Indiana Seed Company has been incorporated at Valparaiso, capital $2,000, by E. E. Shedd, E. B. Shedd and H. J. Schenck.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Harry McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons, Cincinnati; F. Wilson, with the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines; D. M. Hamilton, with Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis; W. H. Hartman, with Vail Seed Co., Indianapolis; A. H. Harding, secretary Portland Seed Co., Portland, Ore., enroute east.

THE demand for California grown callas and freesias this year has been larger than ever and many late orders for each remain unfilled because the stock of large bulbs is entirely exhausted. The shortage on large callas is particularly noticeable and the prices obtained are in excess of any recent years.

THE outlook of the Nebraska vine seed crop is by no means encouraging. The late varieties of cucumbers, and the early ones that were planted late, will yield almost nothing. Many of the crops will not be harvested at all, while others will yield from 50 to 100 pounds to the acre. Muskmelons will probably run from 50 to 200 pounds, the majority will not be over 100 pounds; which is less than half a crop. The seed is quite apt to be light in weight on account of the premature ripening of the melons. Although the lice have worked very hard on the vines, water melons will turn out somewhat better. Summer and winter squash, also pumpkins, promise a good harvest. At the present time the corn crop looks better than it has for many years.

Boston.

CONVENTIONITES RETURN WELL PLEASED. —MANY VISITORS IN TOWN.—STATE OF THE WHOLESALE MARKET.—SEASIDE DEMAND LIGHT AND RUNNING TO SPECIAL GRADES.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Convention pilgrims are returning as they went—in straggling detachments. It appears that about 100 were in attendance from this neighborhood—a fair representation. Nothing but the highest praise is heard in connection with the trip, for the New York people and the general arrangements for the convention, and it is admitted that when the S. A. F. visits Boston again, as it is sure to do before very long, we have a precedent in New York's highly successful affair that we shall have difficulty in equalling. A few of the convention visitors from other localities found their way to Boston, either before or after. We were glad to see W. J. Smyth, of Chicago, a former Bostonian, and his charming lady and to introduce him to the subway and other innovations in Boston's daily life since his last visit here. After the convention came W. R. Smith, of Washington, beaming with satisfaction at the prospect of another serious try at the national charter and at the opportunity to make an onslaught on the special reserved stock in the musty old bookstores of antique Cornhill. Another patriarch in the form of Chas. Cannon, of St. Louis, has been honoring us with his company and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gude, of Washington; M. Barker, of Chicago, and Miss Phoebe Headworth, of New York, made a brief stay with us. Mr. Pettigrew is scanning the horizon for a glimpse of his friend, Edgar Sanders, who is due to arrive on Friday morning. So although business is very dull, Boston had a fair share of diversions. The extremely hot weather for the past few days came most inopportunately, though, and we have been at the mercy of our Washington and St. Louis visitors on the temperature question. Can it be possible that those "bilers" that our friend Carmody sent down to the infernal regions have been located directly underneath Boston?

Business is almost at a standstill. Seaside trade is nothing as compared with past seasons and it is now so far along that it is not likely any improvement is in prospect, although much, of course, depends upon the kind of weather in store for us. The very meagre demand from the summer resorts is confined closely to fancy grades of American Beauty and a few very choice specialties and there is very little in it for anybody. In the wholesale places asters obscure the view of everything else. They are piled up high, in mounds of purple, pink and white, but the average of quality coming in is greatly improved, the small, inferior varieties being superseded this week by the large, fancy sorts, and so the prices are better.

In the will of the late Benj. H. Pierce, of Watertown, a bequest of $1000 is left to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the income therefrom to be devoted to the introduction of new fruits.

At the Colored Men's Business League convention last week, in Boston, A. F. Crawford, of Meriden, Conn., read an interesting paper on "The Negro Florist."

This week brings the early-closing period to an end and preparations for the fall campaign are actively under way, All anticipate a good season.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA.

REPORT OF SECRETARY.

On the first day of August, 1900, the 934 members comprising the Florists' Hail Association of America insured an aggregate of 13,025,762 square feet of glass, subdivided as follows: 3,130,059 square feet of single thick; 6,908,043 square feet of double thick; 137,282 square feet of single thick at extra one-half; 326,107 square feet of double thick at extra one-half; 749,917 square feet of single thick at extra whole, and 1,783,354 square feet of double thick at extra whole.

The receipts for the year ending August 1, 1900, have been: From liquidation of Du Page bonds, $1000; from tenth assessment, $7,400.53; from new business as per treasurer's report, $2,260; from interest on investments, $250.06; from re-insurance of glass broken by hail, $79.55. Total receipts for the year, $10,999.14.

Disbursements for losses for the year have been $5,570.42, for expenses, $1,340.16; investment on account of reserve fund, $1,610.00, making a total of $8,510.58.

The cash balance on hand at the close of the year is $6,823.44, of which $226.87 belongs to the reserve fund and $5,896.57 is available for use in the emergency fund. The reserve fund of the Florists' Hail Association now consists of $6,600 invested as per treasurer's report, and $226.87 cash in hand. Total reserve fund August 1, 1900, $7,526.87.

Fifty-six thousand four hundred and fifty-two square feet of single thick glass and 18,104 square feet of double thick glass belonging to insured members has been paid for during the past year.

A careful study of the appended table will prove interesting:

Table with columns: STATES, No. of hailstorms from June 1, 1897, to August 1, 1900, No. of losses paid from June 1, 1897, to August 1, 1900, No. of hailstorms for year ending August 1, 1900, No. of losses paid for year ending August 1, 1900. Lists states like Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, etc.

The secretary especially requests that members furnish him with information concerning all hail storms in their vicinity, whether they are personally interested or not, as such information will materially assist in the compilation of statistics. The Florists' Hail Association of America during its thirteen years of existence, has won an enviable reputation for prompt payment of claims and straightforward dealing, and both officials and members have reason to feel proud of its present financial and moral standing.

HORTICULTURAL CONDITIONS IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.—PRICELESS VALUE OF IRRIGATING MATERIAL.—TRADE IN A FLOURISHING CONDITION.—VARIOUS DOINGS AND MATTERS OF PERSONAL INTEREST.

Very few of the many readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST can understand the value of water for irrigating to the horticulturist of southern California. On account of shortage of water caused by the repeated bursting of a pipe line that should supply West Lake Park with water, that beautiful little garden of about forty acres is almost ruined for this season and many of the rare and valuable tropical trees are dying. One of the city fire engines has been detailed to pump water from the lake to try to save vegetation until a new pipe line can be laid. Another cause for worry is the recent fire in the Sierra Madre mountains that burned for two weeks and covered nearly 100 square miles of territory. Fears are entertained that heavy rains during the winter will cause great floods, which will do an immense amount of damage. The Southern California Forestry Association had planted some hundred of acres of mountain lands with young pines, but it will require several years' growth before these plants will be of value in the conservation of moisture.

With the stores, business is very quiet, scarcely enough being done to pay expenses. O. C. Saakes, of the Central Park Floral Co., has completely renovated his storeroom and is ready for the coming season. Miss Goodin is highly pleased with the business she has been doing in her Broadway store and is anticipating a splendid trade during the winter months. The Diamond Hill Nursery Co. has a very nicely fitted up store at 321 South Spring street, where Max Keffel is manager. John Schlaloss, who has charge of the Redondo Floral Company's store, had to run for his life during the mountain fire. He was spending the day in Santa Anita canyon when the fire broke out and it was with great difficulty his party escaped uninjured through the fire to their tally-hos.

The planting of celery in the peat lands in Orange county is nearing completion. About 2500 acres will be devoted to this crop this year. Each season shows an increased acreage. Most of the labor employed is Chinese.

An expert who has kept an account of the number of carloads of oranges and lemons shipped from California and the prices obtained for the same, estimates the gross value of the crop for the past season to be slightly in excess of $14,000,000.

The prices fixed by the wine-makers for grapes for the present is $13 for white and $14 per ton for black grapes delivered. D. R. W.

Chicago's Laurels.

Chicago's grief at the result of that third game in New York is tempered by the vision of the bright silver beauty of the Queen of Edgely Cup, won in the two first games. This is the trophy presented to the National Florists' Bowling League by the Floral Exchange, of Philadelphia, and is one of the richest of the many prizes offered. It is tall and graceful and is attracting much attention at McKellar & Winterson's, where it will remain on display for a few days; then it will be shown to the public at Vaughan's and later at the various retail stores.

New York Matters.

The final meeting of the sporting committee of the New York Florists' Club will be held next Monday afternoon, September 3, at the alleys, Fifty-seventh street and Sixth avenue, between 3 and 6 o'clock. There will also be an election of officers for the bowling club at the same time and place.

At the meeting of the committee held on Monday, August 27, the Baltimore team in the convention contest was disqualified on account of having two men bowling on the team, Messrs. Weber and Binder, whose names had not been entered. Eight names had been entered, but only four of them bowled on the team.

The matter of awarding the ladies' prizes was laid over, but will probably be decided at the next meeting, on September 3.

Overheard and Otherwise Among Returning Pilgrims.

Chicago delegates have been returning in bunches of two and three, foot sore and pocket empty but with a "glad I went" expression of countenance.

"The Chicago bowling team did us proud," said one of the pilgrims. "They carry my money every time from now on."

By unanimous vote the Lake Shore people were decided to be strictly all right and the New York Central—otherwise.

Winterson and Asmus are said to have picked more winners at Sheephead races than any of the native born.

Wheeler has developed into a most successful dreamer of dreams—and they come true.

It is "put me off at Albany," nowadays, with some of the crowd.

Walter Kreitling will have his tickets glued in his hat hereafter.

Red paint is expensive in New York, so they say.

Echoes of the New York Tournament.

Lucky "Billy" Kasting! Verily thou art a dandy, and thy team a whole bunch. Two hundred and twenty-eight for one game, 584 for three games; 1021 for one game, 2775 for three! That for Kasting and Buffalo; all records broken. Wm. Scott has no doubt swept away the cobwebs and gotten out the black velvet, together with the silver strings, and the show of silver is on. Shake again, old boy! You did yourself proud.

Whew! But wasn't it hot. Talk about wheeling soil out of the rosehouses in July; it wasn't in it with the atmosphere of the Palace alleys on that memorable day. President O'Mara said the New York club spared no expense to have full and plenty of everything, and had engaged an extra fireman so that none should get chilled. That man should not lack for recommendations when he wants to make a change. The thermometer on the wall registered 88° at 8:30 p. m., the finish; during the day when the crowd was present it must have been near the century mark. Everybody was looking for Carmody; he could have booked orders for ventilators by the dozen.

With the exception of the heat the arrangements were all that could be desired; the alleys were in perfect condition and Messrs. Roehrs, Burns and others of the committee were untiring in their efforts to see that everything went off right. On account of the Providence boys not being able to get their men together but five teams lined up at the start. Pittsburg, drawn to bowl with Providence, rolled its game off by itself, no other team seeming to want to take the place of Providence.

The struggle for honors in the first game lay between Chicago and Philadelphia, Chicago winning by seventeen pins, with 924. The teams finished the first game in the following order: Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, Buffalo, Detroit, Milwaukee, Flatbush, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Cleveland and Boston.

The results of the second game changed things considerably. Chicago held the lead with 1842, and by so doing won the Queen of Edgely cup, and thought, as did many others, that they were going to sweep the deck. They trotted out their rag time girl and for the time were strictly in it. The other teams finished as follows for the total of the two games: Baltimore, 1782; New York, 1774; Flatbush, 1764; Buffalo, 1754; Philadelphia, 1739; Pittsburg, 1707; Milwaukee, 1640; Detroit, 1631; Cleveland, 1555; Boston, 1221. Flatbush with 940, Baltimore 966 and New York 898, had improved wonderfully and it was still anybody's contest.

The third and deciding game was started under great excitement. Every pin was needed; each missed spare and every split that appeared was denounced in language more or less elegant, but always expressive. It was nip and tuck for a time, but when "Billy" Kasting got going with his strike ball and didn't stop until he had six in a row, and at the same time A. B. Scott and Webber, his team mates, had double headers working, it was seen that the prizes were bound for next year's convention city. It was hard for the Chicago boys to lose, but Buffalo beat them out just as they did last year, when they rolled off the tie for third place.

It certainly seems a mistake that all the prizes are for the team taking first place. The first three or four clubs are nearly always close together, and the prizes should be arranged so that all save the first should not go empty-handed. The prizes that have to be won twice could be classed as first, second and third, and as they are of equal value might be transposed in their order the next year, and the club winning a first, second or third and winning the same cup twice would be entitled to the same.

This may not be "according to Hoyle," but the present arrangement is not satisfactory and should be improved upon.

The individual bowling should also be commenced with the tournament, if possible, as there is always a number of good bowlers who would like to take part, but who do not care to wait about all day until the team games are over. The difficulty, of course, is that it is not many cities that can boast of more than three pairs of alleys together. The ladies, too, would like a game, as there are quite a number who bowl, but the hour should be set at a reasonable time. Take it all together, it was a great tournament and, on the form shown by the majority of the teams, there are likely to be some surprises in Buffalo in 1901.

Impressions of the Convention.

Viewed from whatever standpoint, the S. A. F. convention has proved a great and memorable event. The Florists' Club of Greater New York has achieved results of which it may well feel proud. It is the unanimous opinion of all those who, like myself, were privileged to inspect the magnificent exhibits, admire the lavish decorations and listen to the interesting and instructive papers of the gentlemen who "know whereof they speak," that nothing upon the same generous scale has ever been accomplished before. And right here I cannot refrain from expressing my sympathy for the "stay at homes." To these gentlemen I say: Brother florists, you have missed a treat. Nay, more than a mere treat, you have missed the opportunity of comparing notes, of seeing and hearing things which have a direct bearing on your own business. By all means come to Buffalo next year.

But, to return to Greater New York, I must confess having failed to maintain my equanimity in this instance. What I beheld upon entering the exhibition hall sent a thrill through my perceptibilities. Verily, I thought, floriculture has made rapid strides, a most wonderful achievement within the short space of one decade. Boston did well, remarkably well, in 1890. New York has surpassed our most sanguine expectations at the close of the century. What, then, is in store for us a decade hence? Only the most vivid imaginations can attempt an answer. As judged by the standard of the past, within the recollections of the youngest member of the craft, the possibilities of floriculture seem practically unlimited.

Floriculture is progressing at an astonishing rate, each succeeding year marking a decided advance. The S. A. F. as a body, and its most active members as individuals, have ample reasons to point with pride to the results achieved. Nor must we overlook the spirit of fraternity that has sprung up of late and is maintained between the members of the craft in various sections of our country. "In union there is strength" is a trite saying, but a true one. New York has demonstrated to us what can be accomplished by concerted effort. The progressive young florist of to-day is bound to move onward.

"Labor with what zeal we will,
Something still remains undone,
Something uncompleted still,
Awaits the rising of the sun."

St. Louis.

MARKET STIFFENS A BIT IN THE MISSOURI METROPOLIS.—DOINGS HERE AND THERE, PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

The market has stiffened up slightly. Some few roses bring 5 cents and 6 cents, but the average is only 3 cents. Asters and tuberose are of good quality, but carnations are of inferior grades. Funerals have kept some of the boys hustling the past week. One Grand avenue establishment turned out twenty designs last Sunday.

Geo. Waldbart expects to have his new quarters ready for occupancy in about ten days, and they will be fine in the strictest sense of the word. He has ordered a stock of plants for the opening decoration.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held on September 6, instead of the usual date. This is to accommodate the Belleville members, as E. W. Guy, of Belleville, the president-elect, will be installed at this meeting.

T. C. Wendell, who has been in the employ of the Plant Seed Company for thirty years, mysteriously disappeared last Saturday.

As yet no suitable place has been found in which to hold the chrysanthemum show. The pledges for outside premiums are coming in, but none too fast. M.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—Van Bochove Bros., have completed the three houses which they added to their plant this season. One is for violets, one for carnations and one for roses.

LO, THE CONQUERING HERO COMES.—PAN-AMERICAN CITY SWEEP THE DECKS AT NEW YORK.—ORATORS AND BOWLERS EQUALLY INVINCIBLE.

"Veni, vidi, vici." It is as I said. We wanted the convention, and our eloquent speakers outdid even Chicago. Everybody come to Buffalo in 1901 and we will give you a good time. "Billy" Kasting will certainly do his best to make it a success, and with the help of Scott, Cowell, Long, Palmer and others no one will leave dissatisfied. The election of Patrick O'Mara is a selection for merit, if his record with the New York club is any criterion.

Our bowling club was at the convention, as you may have heard. It was rather hard on Chicago to heat her out of the convention and in the howling contest, but the best has got to win. It will be a fine display when all the trophies are on view. Kasting was certainly in it at all times, and "Billy" Webber put up a good article. The election of Wm. Scott as president of the National Florists' Bowling League the year it meets here is quite an honor.

Trade has been only fair for the past week, but the month of August affords no reason for complaint, funeral work being heavy most of the time. Kaisersins, Bridesmaids and Beauties are very good. Gladioli are fine, asters fair and sweet peas all gone.

There have been a number of conventionites in town this week, homeward bound.

THE HORTICULTURAL PROFESSION LOSES TWO OF ITS STRONG MEN IN A FORT-NIGHT.

It is not often that anything appears in our trade journals from this extreme southwestern corner of Uncle Sam's extensive domain, but now and then events occur which are of more than passing importance and worthy of the widest dissemination. Such was the death of A. E. Phinney on the afternoon of July 11. His demise was very sudden and occurred at the Standard Fruit Company's packing establishment of which he was in charge. In connection with a son, Mr. Phinney, some twelve years ago or more, established the Sunnyside Nursery, with salesyard and greenhouse in town, diagonally across the street from the Ford Tropical Nursery, which dated back to the fall of 1886. In those days near by on F street was located the office of another firm, the Sweetwater Valley Nursery. At one time a fourth firm, Allen & Orcutt, had their salesground between those named above and on same street. In spite of competition we were all troubled to get stock to supply the demand; but what a "change came o'er the spirit of our dreams." After the bubble burst few people came to our part of the country to buy ranches, make homes and spend money for trees and flowers. For a number of years the Phinneys were mostly engaged in buying and shipping oranges and lemons to eastern markets, where the son spent much of his time in winter, looking after sales. Before coming to San Diego they were engaged in the nursery business at some place in Nebraska. The remains of our old friend and competitor were taken to his native town, Granville, Washington county, N. Y.

On July 25 C. W. Ellsworth died after a short illness, at the age of 69 years. He came to San Diego about the same time as the writer, which was in 1886. He brought a lot of trees from the northern part of the state, where, if I am not mistaken, he was in the nursery business. Only a few blocks from F street, where most nurseries were located, Mr. Ellsworth secured a vacant lot and exposed his stock for sale. A widow and a large family of children and grandchildren are left to mourn their loss, as well as the members of the G. A. R. of this city.

The Propagation of Verbenas.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will verbenas raised from cuttings bloom as freely as seedlings? When should cuttings be taken and what time should the plants be started to have them in bloom by the middle of May?

Verbenas raised from cuttings will flower as profusely and as early as seedlings. To obtain best results the old plants in the beds or field should be cut back severely about September 1, the soil around them loosened and top-dressed so as to induce vigorous young growth to propagate from. The cuttings, when rooted, are potted off singly in clean 2-inch pots and placed near the glass in a rather cool house. Cleanliness, free circulation of air and careful watering will keep them in a heathy condition during the winter months. About March 1 these stock plants should be planted out on a bench; 50° to 55° is warm enough for them; here they will grow freely and produce nice, healthy cuttings. Let this growth get good and long, cut the shoots into single eyes, insert in clean sand and give gentle bottom heat. It takes about ten days to root them. When fairly established in pots, probably about the first week in April, they should go out in a hotbed frame, and here nearly all of them will be in bloom by the middle of May. A second and third crop of cuttings, treated in the same manner, will come on a trifle later. In the gentle warmth of the hotbed the plants grow very rapidly, and if the original cuttings were free from rust and mildew no troubles of this sort need be feared. Almost everybody grows verbenas now from seed. They come true to color and it does away with the troublesome work of keeping a lot of stock plants healthy and free from rust during the dark winter months, though at times it may be advisable to propagate extra good varieties in the old way. Messrs. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS, 46 and 48 Marion Street, New York, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I am highly gratified with the results I have obtained from your Sectional Boiler which you put in for me last October. Although you would only guarantee the six sections to heat 1620 feet of 4-in. pipe, I attached it to over 1,800 feet. It did it so well that I put on about 300 feet more, making in all 2,100 feet, and I am positive that I can add more to it. It is the best I have ever seen and a great coal saver. I have to keep the fire door open all the time. I would be pleased to have anyone call and see it. Yours truly,

George Schubert

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thrasher succeeded the mill—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. A CHILD can run it. Just the thing to fight crab grass. It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

Roses Up To Date.

[Read by John H. Dunlop, of Toronto, at the convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, August 16 and 17, at Montreal.]

The subject assigned me is one that appeals to the heart of every true lover of flowers, whether he be engaged professionally, or as an amateur, or as a purchaser. How often it has been remarked that people never get tired of roses! Why, if we look backward and take a retrospective view, we will find that the rose was mentioned in the earliest writings, when at all feasts and at all great gatherings, the rose is spoken of as the flower that graced all those functions. Some writers claim that the rose has been the favorite flower for some 3,000 years; it is the flower that the people never tire of, always having new charms appealing to one's love of the beautiful. What flower has stood the test of time as has the rose? It has traveled through ages without changing its destiny or losing its character. The homage rendered and the love borne it have always been the same and it has been given the first place in the floral kingdom. There is no other flower combining so many charms, and to-day the rose holds the same supreme position it did in those early times. It is the flower most sought after, appealing to the hearts of the people of this generation more than any other and bringing the highest price in the floral market.

There are other flowers that have their season, but of short duration. They have their points of beauty, and admirers, but what flower combines so many, in fact all good points of other flowers, color, form, fragrance? None but the rose, and though people will enthuse over the others, in their season, they will come back to their first love, the rose. It has been so from the earliest ages and will be to the close of time. I can only speak of the up to date roses from a florist's standpoint; they are comparatively few and I will enumerate them as they suggest themselves to me.

To my mind there is no rose that will compare with the American Beauty, with its magnificent foliage, grand stem, flower and exquisite fragrance. We all know it. Can any person pass a vase of this rose without stopping to enjoy its beauty and odor? It was one of the sights never to be forgotten at the first exhibition of the American Rose Society, held in New York last March, when some 2,000 magnificent blooms were staged, tall, stately, perfect flowers.

The Bride, is the rose par excellence of its color, as its name suggests—purity, whiteness. It is the white rose of commerce to-day without a peer.

Bridesmaid is the pink rose which has superseded all others in popularity. We have had others but they have quickly given the place of honor to the 'Maid, of that deep, rich shade of pink so much sought after.

Meteor, up to the present, has held the place of honor of its color. Its rich, velvety crimson always appeals to the customer, but it is lacking in that very essential quality in a rose, fragrance. If we could only produce a fragrant rose with the good points of Meteor we would be loath to give it up, but there is another crimson of which I will speak later that will probably supersede it.

Perle des Jardins is the pure golden-yellow rose of the day. This we find declining in popularity through some of the caprices of fashion. It is a grand rose of its color and I think will be more largely grown than previously.

Sunset is a good rose but of a dull shade, not having the brightness of Dorothea. It is a saffron yellow, shading to rosy pink.

Madam Hoste is a good, light-colored yellow, having many good qualities. Its fine, long-pointed buds are always attractive.

Golden Gate is a fine rose, of a peculiar combination of soft pink and creamy white. It has long, pointed buds which are exquisitely sweet. It is a strong grower.

Mrs. Pierpont Morgan is of the Cusin type but of a more pleasing color. It is very popular with the flower buyer and has the advantage of showing to good advantage in artificial light.

Clara Watson is in color a combination of pink and white. It is a good, strong grower and very sweet.

I will now speak of the rose that we have heard so much about and for which many of us have paid a good price for a few plants that we may test its good points and prove some of the assertions that have been made in its favor. I refer to Liberty, that grand crimson rose that has been ushered into the floral world this season. Who will not remember the magnificent vase of Liberty roses that were exhibited in Toronto last March at the first carnation exhibition of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club? Its glowing Jacqueminot crimson and sweet perfume were the attraction of that show. I cannot speak of it from a grower's standpoint, but will give some of the figures given by Mr. Asmus in comparison with other varieties in point of productiveness. The test was made with a house of Liberty against Bride, also one of Liberty against Bridesmaid, during the past season. Each house was given equal treatment in all respects. In each of the houses of Liberty there were 800 plants, but in each house of Brides and Bridesmaids 780 plants, or twenty less than the Liberties.

These figures tell the tale and, better than any guess work, convince the skeptical of the flowering qualities of this rose, as we have here the four most severe months on the blooming qualities of any rose or plant that is treated contrary to the laws of nature. As to the color, I am given to understand that during the winter months it is much brighter than late in the season, and not guilty of producing that beautiful purple tint so often seen in crimson roses. I saw this rose growing at Mr. Asmus' place last March and could only find words of commendation for the appearance of it at that time. It was certainly producing good crops, although it had been very severely cut for propagating the enormous stock that was disseminated this spring. I have also had a letter from an esteemed rosarian, Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., whose opinion I prize very highly. Being as he himself says, prejudiced against it at the beginning, he was gradually won over by its many good points. To use his own words: "I have been to Mr. Asmus' place a good many times to see it (Liberty) during the past two seasons and would say that beginning with a prejudice against it I have been won over completely by its many good qualities. I am naturally very conservative and critical, and when I speak in favor of a new rose you may be sure I have good reasons for doing so."

Now, it remains with us to try and bring out the many good traits we have heard of this grand, new rose. We have not heard of any of its faults. We may know more of them by another season, as it is scarcely possible that all will have the success of those who have pioneered its entry into the floricultural world.

There is another new rose, but I have not been able to learn much of its history or good points. This is Sunrise. It was sent out from England as a sport, I think, from Sunset. In color it is a deep apricot yellow, almost red, very bright in summer and said to be a free bloomer. I have a few plants of this variety but for some reason it will grow a short time and then die off. The plants are grafted and I am not aware of the stock they are worked on, which may influence the growth of the plant, or, more properly speaking, the lack of growth. I hope to be able to report more favorably of this variety later.

Lady Dorothea is of Canadian origin, I think the first that has originated in the Dominion and not the least to be proud of. It is a sport from Sunset, of good habit, a free grower, profuse bloomer, losing some of the bad qualities of its parent, in that it is free from imperfect flowers in mid-winter. The color is brighter and more beautiful in the four months of dark weather, when most sought after and appreciated. The color is a soft shade of peach pink, deepening to a red at the base of the petals outside and a bright flesh pink inside; a beautiful harmony of color. This rose is becoming very popular and I feel confident it will take a leading place in the list of standard varieties from the excellent reports I have heard from sections of the continent far removed from each other.

These are the only varieties I can speak of at present, as the new varieties are very limited, but judging from the number that are hybridizing there should be no lack of meritorious new varieties in the near future, and I would here suggest that some of our own Canadian growers, if they can afford the time and patience to await results, experiment in this line.

There may be some who have already commenced that I have not heard of. It does not follow from this that some are not already making the attempt, but I would commend all who have the ability and inclination to try hybridizing the rose. The room occupied will not be great; only a few feet would be necessary and if carefully and thoughtfully worked out, who knows what the results might be and to the successful one the old adage holds good in this as in other attempts, "Nothing succeeds like success."

I feel confident that he who can produce a first-class rose in this country will add a lasting monument to his ability and keep us with roses up to date.

Rhinebeck's Violet Industry.

The fame of the Hudson river violets extends far beyond the great New York markets where they find their main outlet. If it were not for the evanescence of the fragrance which is so indispensable to the sale of the violet the entire country might well look to the Hudson river growers for their supply of this popular flower, for here it seems to find its congenial home and here it is produced in a perfection and luxuriance rarely seen elsewhere.

Prominent among the towns where violet growing has become a leading industry is Rhinebeck. Market returns for their fragrant product appear to have been remunerative, for each year sees a substantial addition to the area of glass in this section and new growers are being constantly added to the long list of violet specialists. The list of new growers added during the present season, and their capacity, is as follows:

D. Marquardt, two houses, each 20x100; capacity, 6,000 plants. Chas. Feroe, one house 20x100; 3,000 plants. Julius Lown, one house 20x130; 3,500 plants. Wm. Weckesser, one house 20x100; 3,000 plants. Traver & Stuart, two houses, 20x150 and 20x100; 7,500 plants. Lewis Rosenkranz, one house 20x100, 3,000 plants. Allen Traver, one house 20x150; 4,500 plants. Frank Asher, one house 21x110; 3,500 plants. Augustus Tremper, two houses, each 20x100; 6,000 plants. Jas. Hainor, one house, 20x150; 4,500 plants. Stanton Rockefeller, who has been running the place belonging to his father, J. C. Rockefeller, has sold out his interest there to his father and has started a new establishment with two houses, each 20x200; capacity 11,200 plants.

The older establishments doing business in Rhinebeck, with their capacity for this season, are as follows: Geo. Saltford, 19,000 plants; Judson Odell, 6,000 plants; John Hermance, 4,000 plants; Edw. Sheak, 5,000 plants; John Brown, 6,000 plants; Robt. Brown, 3,000 plants; John C. Rockefeller, 14,800 plants; P. Tremper, 12,500 plants; Wm. Burger, 8,600 plants; Murton Moore, 3,500 plants; Orison Burger, 12,600 plants; Alvah Coons, 11,500 plants; C. Laurentz, 8,000 plants; Jos. Markel, 10,000 plants; Lewis D. Burger, 3,000 plants.

This indicates that nearly 200,000 violet plants are in training for the coming winter in Rhinebeck alone. Up to date their condition is generally satisfactory. As to prospects in the market the commission men say they are all right if the quality is up to past records.

John Walker.

Hale, hearty, honest John, a man who leaves old friends everywhere in Philadelphia and who will make new ones wherever he goes. A good plantsman, a thorough grower, a wide awake, up-to-date florist of ripe experience, the past twenty years of which have been at the Craig & Son nurseries, most of the time as foreman. Congratulations to the citizens of Youngtown; success to you, John. That your greatest anticipations may be more than realized is the wish of your many friends in Philadelphia. K.

English Plant Notes.

Lemoine's new double Begonia semperflorens varieties include some very distinct improvements, Antonin Daum, bright cerise with a crimson shade, is the best of the dark varieties. Other good sorts are Emile Galle, flesh pink, and Boule de Neige, pure white. These are often grown in too much heat. When exposed to the light and air they make short jointed growths, and foliage of good substance. They are readily propagated from cuttings, but these must be taken before they begin to flower, or, if short cuttings cannot be had, plants may be cut back, for they soon branch out from the base and give good cuttings. To make well furnished flowering plants the blooms should be taken off the main shoots until the side shoots are well advanced.

King of Denmark is a fine salmon zonal pelargonium which has now become an established market plant and is grown extensively. It does not require such liberal treatment as most varieties and when first introduced some growers failed through getting too much growth. I remember seeing one houseful with leaves of enormous size but no bloom, but the same grower now does it well. The best results are obtained by potting firmly in light, sandy compost. I am a great advocate of firm potting. Many plants root and grow rapidly when potted loosely, but good, sturdy, short-jointed growth is only obtained by the other method and there is more vigor at the flowering period. It is owing to not giving sufficient attention to these small details that we see so many failures.

Double tuberous begonias seem now to have reached so near perfection that it may be impossible to go much further. And it is remarkable that seedlings may be raised which keep true to color and equal in point of form of flowers. In looking through a large batch of seedlings raised from a double yellow variety I find that though there is a little variation in color, some being of a deeper shade than others, there is hardly a rogue, or different color, among them. The flowers, too, are all more or less double and some of them may prove better than the parents, for it is not until the second year that we get the finest flowers.

Campanula isophylla Mayii is now well in flower and has been exhibited several times in fine condition. It certainly is a fine variety, being very free, and the soft, pale flowers are produced in great profusion. The white variety is now one of the most prominent plants in the market. I saw a fine batch of Trachelium cœruleum in market the other morning, grown in 5-inch pots. The plants were dwarf and bushy and well flowered. The same grower had some good double Zinnia elegans, dwarf, bushy, well-flowered plants. The bright orange-scarlet varieties were particularly attractive.

The double yellow Chrysanthemum segetum is a very useful plant for this season of the year and makes much better plants than when grown to flower early in the season. H.

Herbaceous Plant Notes.

The steadily increasing demand for hardy border plants has compelled quite a number of florists and dealers to keep a more or less complete stock of these subjects on hand; still only the common, well known species and varieties are usually grown in these places and with this limited material it would rarely be possible to plant a border which was expected to be attractive and furnish bloom throughout the season. Furthermore within the last few years the taste for rockeries and rock gardens is reviving and the inquiries for suitable plants have worried many florists. Scarcely one out of a hundred of us was prepared to furnish the plants for a rockery. There was but little difficulty about the early spring flowering species and such things as arabises, aubretias, cerastiums, epimediums, stellarias, erysimums, ajugas, alyssums, polemoniums, iberises, the various species of dwarf and creeping phlox, primulas, auriculas, erythroniums, and a few others, together with various bulbous plants, were suggested, without thinking that scarcely one of these would be in flower after the middle of June. Possibly a few campanulas, veronicas or dianthus and a few fall blooming anemones, phloxes and asters were added, but, even with these, the lack of color from July on would be the most conspicuous feature in the rockery.

A few suggestions for later flowering plants may come handy to the many who are interested in this subject, though I do not claim here to say anything new at all. Silene maritima fl. pl. keeps up a succession of bloom until fall; the single form does, too, but the double is prettier. The same may be said of Dicentra eximia and the somewhat stronger growing and darker colored D. formosa. Silene Schaftæ is a low, compact growing, free blooming species with rosy pink flowers, doing well in partial, not dense, shade. Dracocephalum Altaïense likes sun and produces a long succession of light, purplish blue flowers. Lychnis semperflorens plenissima succeeds admirably between the rocks, sending up its flower stems continuously until frost cuts them down.

Hypericum Moserianum is well known to bloom through the summer and fall months. Statice latifolia, S. incana and S. Tartarica retain their beauty for long months. The linums, when cut down after their first blooming, come out with fresh growth which will produce a lasting crop of pretty flowers; the large, golden yellow L. campanulatum does not need this treatment. Myosotis palustris semperflorens only needs an occasional thinning out to induce it to produce vigorous growth, the ends of which give us the best flowers. Lychnis vespertina, fl. pl. may be allowed to spread or droop over the edge of some larger rocks; it continues until very late fall and is not particular as to situation.

Coronilla varia may be used for the same purpose. Lychnis fulgens and L. Haageana flower in July and August, are most desirable dwarf plants but require a sheltered, half shady position. Salvia pratensis, with its long, semi-procumbent spikes of deep purplish blue flowers, keeps up a succession until fall. Campanula Garganica, a very dwarf compact growing plant is literally covered with light blue, white-eyed flowers in July and August. C. rotundifolia blooms continuously until late fall, if we take the trouble to remove the older flower stems. C. punctata produces its large white bells, beautifully marked on the inside, well into August, although it begins in June. C. glomerata and the darker variety, C. daburica, are generally good to the end of July and will furnish a second crop later on if the stems are cut down promptly after flowering. C. urticifolia alba plena is a most desirable variety of that species for July blooming.

Erodium Manescavi is good early and late in a rather sunny situation. The somewhat dwarfer and more compact E. macradenium, with white and violet flowers, will endure partial shade without injury. Veronica incana flowers during July and August. The dwarf Achillea tomentosa aurea blooms until late fall. Stokesia cyanea begins to flower in July on the older plants; young stock comes on later. Viola cornuta and V. perennis continue in good shape where it is not too dry and sunny. Heuchera sanguinea and its varieties only need an occasional removal of old stems to insure a continuous succession of bloom until autumn. Papaver alpinum and P. nudicaule will do well throughout the season if not in too moist a position. P. pilosum, with larger, pale red flowers, blooms in July and August. Several of the armerias flower finely in summer and fall months.

A New Brunswick Antirrhinum.

The accompanying illustration is that of a new pink antirrhinum originating with C. G. Knott, superintendent of the Public Garden of St. John, N. B. This is a seedling from Queen of the North and is identical with that variety in every particular except color, which, instead of being white, is a rose pink with yellow throat. The plant grows to be from fifteen to eighteen inches in height and is well covered with bloom. It originated in 1897 and Mr. Knott has since been growing it for both summer and winter use. It is not only a splendid bedder but a good pot plant, reaching two feet in height under glass. It is well adapted to florists' uses.

Helpful Reminders.

Now that the demand for quantity has subsided somewhat, the flower is sought for itself rather than to gratify the vanity of the person who seeks to win applause by making a show of extravagance. In spite of the fact that the vulgar wealthy have been an important factor in building up commercial floriculture, we should be prompt to welcome the more recent vogue, where individual perfection of flower and artistic combinations, which do not detract from or destroy the individuality, are in first demand.

As this improved state of affairs develops it will become more and more apparent that green is the basis for our successful work. The popularity of the Boston fern and the asparagus, so commonly called a fern, is but a key note of what harmonies are to be composed of ferns in the near future. The variety of form, size, texture and coloring is so great as to aid us in all our work. They are easily grown; one has only to become possessed of an earnest desire to grow ferns and good results must follow.

Just now any potted ferns should have all the old, dead roots, of which there are always many after one or more years' growth, pulled out and reset, adding fresh soil and sinking the plant a trifle lower. Be sure that the drainage is good. The soil should be light and porous, particularly where the leaves start from a running, underground stem. You can use considerable manure, well mixed in, provided it is well decomposed. The plants should be carefully cleaned and well watered. A good lot of fronds should be made before winter, as growth is quite insignificant during shorter days. The ventilation must be ample.

The atmosphere of a fern house should not be allowed to become so dry as to absorb moisture from the young, delicate fronds. It is also bad to have moisture condense on the fronds on account of their becoming cooler than the atmosphere, which is a common trouble in autumn. Although shading is usually considered necessary only in the hot summer weather, close observation proves that shaded ferns will not become covered with condensed moisture on a clear, cool evening when those under clear glass will do so. It is best, however, to prevent the temperature falling below 60° at any time by making a fire. Avoid continually wet ground, such as is occasioned by drip or leakage, but give the ground under the benches as much water as it will readily absorb; this will prevent the atmosphere from becoming excessively dry at any time. The moist mother earth is really an automatic reservoir, the exclusion of which renders so many costly conservatories with tile floor a failure.

For cutting, ferns are most profitably grown on benches. They should have a top dressing about every six months. All fronds should be cut and stand in water over night before using. While different individuals may take a particular fancy to one variety or another, an all around florist should not be without an assortment.

Divergence of Heating Directions.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I am at all times very much interested in your answers to correspondents, your writers being as a rule thoroughly practical men who can and do help your readers in many ways. Quite a number of our florist friends follow this advice without further consideration. In my travels I am often greeted with such questions as "did you see that article in the AMERICAN FLORIST?", etc. In view of this fact, answers to correspondents should be very carefully considered, and be plain and practical in every detail. In your issue of May 26, on page 1324, I find two questions about heating, one from "D. O. P.," who wishes to know the best way to heat a house 20 or 24x100 feet, part of the house to be used for roses and part for carnations. The answer is based on hot water heating and is as follows: "If the house is to be twenty-four feet wide it will require twelve 2-inch pipes for the roses, and ten for the carnations." The next question, on the same page, is asked by "New York," who wishes to know how best to heat a house 20x50 feet to a temperature of 55° or 60°, the system being hot water as before. The answer is in effect as follows: "It is not best to try to heat a house of this kind with less than three 2-inch pipes for flows and four would give better satisfaction. With four 2-inch pipes, fourteen 1½-inch returns will be necessary, but ten 2-inch returns would give a better circulation unless it is run under pressure." It strikes me that "D. O. P." and "New York" will have quite a hard time deciding what best to do, provided they read both articles. "D. O. P." is advised to put twelve 2-inch pipes in a rose house twenty-four feet wide, while "New York" is advised to put fourteen 2-inch pipes in a house only twenty feet wide, both houses to be heated to about the same temperature. Don't you think some further explanation necessary in this case?

SAMUEL BURNS.

Replying to Mr. Burns' comment on my article on heating a rose house in a previous issue of this paper, all I can say regarding the same is that as "D. O. P." asked for information as to heating his house to a temperature suitable for roses and carnations and the directions I gave him will do that in his section of the country under all ordinary circumstances, with any one of the good makes of boilers now on the market. Had I been giving an estimate for heating a house in Alaska, or even Minnesota, I should have made a totally different estimate of the amount of piping required, but I have always followed the rule of answering every question in view of the individual conditions applicable to itself. It seems to me absurd to advise men hundreds of miles apart to follow identical courses. There can be no rule applicable alike to every section of this country, as regards heating, at any rate, hence the difference in estimate.

JOHN N. MAY.

I quite agree with Mr. Burns that "answers to correspondents should be very carefully considered, and be plain and practical in every detail," and in the answers I have from time to time supplied I have tried to follow that rule. It seems to me that my answer to the question of "New York" is both plain and practical. Mr. Burns points out what he considers a discrepancy between it and the reply of Mr. May to the question of "D. O. P." It certainly seems a little strange that it will require fourteen 2-inch pipes to heat a 20x50-foot rose house when twelve will answer for one that is 2x120 feet.

I see no reason for changing my recommendation of fourteen pipes for the twenty-foot house and should use sixteen in the one that is twenty-four feet wide, under similar conditions. It will be noticed that the radiation is not increased in proportion to the size of the houses, as the fact that the heater stands on a level with the walks in the narrow house makes it especially desirable to have ample radiation. Three or four overhead flows are also recommended for the same reason.

Economical use of hot water for heating purposes can only be secured when ample radiating surface is supplied, and it is always better to recommend a slight excess rather than an insufficient radiation, as the former will prove economical in heating and satisfactory to the owner, while the latter will draw on his pocket-book as well as on his temper. This practice seems to the writer to be especially desirable in cases, like those under consideration, when no data whatever, except the width and length of the houses, is given. Had the writer stated whether one, two or none of the walls were exposed, and if there was exposed wall surface, the height of the walls and the amount of glass if any, they contained, it would have been possible to have made a closer figure. Other data, such as whether one or both ends are exposed, whether the house is new and snugly built or old and with cold walls and roof; whether in an exposed or sheltered location; and what is the usual minimum temperature for which provision must be made, should also be given. The results then will not only be more satisfactory to those immediately concerned, but it will give other readers a better opportunity to compare them with their own conditions.

In explanation of my estimate for the rose house of "New York," I would say that it is my custom in cases similar to his, where only one house is referred to, to consider it as having two five-foot walls without glass, and with one end exposed; to reckon the glass in the roof of a twenty-foot house at twenty-four feet; and to allow one foot of glass or five feet of wall to three feet of radiating surface, basing this on a minimum temperature of 10° below zero.

A Flower for the Masses.

Down at Belchertown, Mass., there is a man who is working for the common people. He is seeking the improvement of the flowers of the door yard, the verbenas, the zinnia and the petunia. This is A. B. Howard, whose display attracted no little attention in the trade exhibit at the New York convention of the S. A. F., and showed the success which has attended his labors. Many people have grown Mr. Howard's dwarf zinnias and his verbenas but his Star petunia, probably the best of his introductions, is not yet widely known; it received much favorable comment in the New York show. The illustration, from a photograph, gives a fair idea of the flower, which averages two and one-fourth inches in diameter; the length of the tube is one and one-half inches. The body color is a dark, rich, velvety maroon, which, when held up, so that the light strikes across it at a certain angle, assumes an emerald green sheen, a very peculiar transformation. Starting deep within the throat are the five rays of a star, of a pinkish white in the center, shading to a decided pink at their margin, where they blend into the maroon. Their outline, however, is sharp and decisive.

WEATHER SEVERE FOR HORTICULTURAL ACTIVITIES.—RAIN COMES TO AID OF SEED GROWERS.—ANOTHER VERY SUCCESSFUL FLOWER SHOW.—GOOD NEW SORTS OF GLADIOLI AND CANNAS.—OTHER FLORAL EXHIBITS.—THE MATTER OF APPLE PREFERENCES IN FRANCE.

Paris has had intensely hot weather. On one day, July 27, the mercury was up to a little over 100° in the shade, which was the highest mark during the century. It is, therefore, not surprising that all Parisians who could leave the city, and with them your correspondent, ran for a cooler region. My good luck brought me to the seashore in Normandy, a part of France which is famous for its dairy farming and cider mills. There I had the opportunity of chatting with the peasants, who, satisfied as they are with the apple crop, complain bitterly of the lack of grass and are at their wit's end as to how they can feed their cattle in winter. The great heat fortunately lasted but a little over a fortnight, after which the other extreme set in and we experienced about ten days of cool and somewhat wet weather. If the latter interfered to some extent with the harvesting of many things, it proved a boon to the seed growers, whom it enabled to sow beets, carrots, cabbages, etc., for next year's seed crop. But for that we might have faced from the start another poor crop of these biennials. The last few days have again been very hot, parching everything, but at the time of writing we have a very good shower, which is received with cheers.

Another flower show has just closed at the exposition. In that show the herbaceous plants, such as gladioli and cannas, and the open air fruits were strongly in evidence. Vilmorin continues to lead in the Gladiolus Gandavensis section and secured the first prize for a splendid collection of spikes. Among the most noticeable were Gargantua, of immense size; Gallieni, red; Hebe, rose; Safrano, yellow; Nelusko, violet red; Corsaire, velvety scarlet; Attila, rose shaded with slate; Hercules, brilliant scarlet streaked with orange red; Nuce d'orange, distinct slate color; LaJoconde, soft fleshy white with golden yellow blotch.

Lemoine & Sons, Nancy, had an imposing collection of Gladiolus Lemoinei and G. Nanceianus, which included over twenty-five new varieties not yet introduced to the trade. Some of them, staged under numbers, were of rare beauty. Especially fine among the older Lemoinei hybrids were Jeanne Dieulafoy, Mephistopheles, Lady Howard de Walden, Henri Leveque de Vilmorin, Leon Duval, Ch. de Bosschere, Ferdinand Kegeljan, Alsace-Lorraine, Antoinette Thiry, Edouard Andre, Colonel Klobb, Marechal Fabert and the following purplish or violet-tinted varieties: Armenien, Baron Joseph Hulot, General de Nansouty, Micromegas, Pierre Loti, Tombouctou, Senator Voland, Belle Alliance, Cronstadt, Peterhof, Ethiopie, Charles Rabot, Duc de Massa, Demi-deuil and Le Chat-noir. Lemoine also staged, under the name of hybrids of dracocephalus, a new race of gladiolus raised from crosses between the G. dracocephalus and G. Lemoinei. The leading feature of these hybrids, which are not yet in the trade, are the yellow spots which they bear on a dark ground.

Millet received a third prize for a gladiolus of a fine salmon red, distinct color, which he claims to be a new race, too. Gravereau showed some of his new gladiolus with flowers all around the spike, of which Triomphe de Paris, the original variety, is surely the finest.

Billiard & Barre, Vilmorin, and Dupanoup each had an excellent exhibit of cannas. Conspicuous varieties were Jeanne d' Arc, of a distinct creamish white, tinged with light yellow; Aurea, pure yellow; King of the Yellows, pure yellow; Hesperide, orange yellow; Hippolyte Barbereau, magenta red; Thiebaut-Legendre, distinct pinkish color with a yellow margin; Modele, chamois. Billiard & Barre also received a first prize for their new double geranium, Cousine Janie, of a pink color and very dwarf habit. Sallier sent a nice lot of his new perennial phlox, called Liervali, which has very regularly marked white stars on a bright rose ground and is very striking.

Duval, of Versailles, staged some twenty pots of Asparagus Sprengerii, which is seldom seen in such perfect specimens. They well deserved the first prize awarded to them. A. Nonin, of Chatillon, had an exquisite collection of Pelargonium peltatum crowded with flowers and so varied in color that they attracted all passers-by. Bruneau, Bourg la Reine, exhibited a choice collection of althæas, Malus microcarpa and flowering shrubs. Croux & Son, Sceaux, had one of the finest displays, a unique collection of Hibiscus Syriacus, all well trained in standard form and most freely flowered. One specimen of H. Syriacus totus albus was of immense size and the whole tree one mass of flowers.

There were most attractive groups of decorative foliage plants, staged on a grass groundwork, a very interesting collection of annual climbers and some fine beds of zinnias, of hybrids of Zinnia Mexicana and of Begonia semperflorens. Worthy of mention were the exhibits of annual and perennial plants from Ferard, Paris, of blooms of Phlox decussata and pansies from Wrede, Luneburg; of Phlox decussata plants from Millet, and the collection of cut roses from Leveque, Defresne, Boucher, Rothberg, Soupert & Notting, Lecointe, etc. Leveque alone had over 1000 sorts and the number of flowers staged by Soupert & Notting was not far behind.

Open air fruits were also a leading feature of the show. Among the best exhibits were those of Boucher, Bruneau, Croux and Defresne, comprising splendid specimens of peaches, pears, apples, plums, figs, gooseberries, hazelnuts and cherries. The apples shown in the American section continue to be in fine shape, and as many visitors have no idea of the storage system used by the Americans, they wonder how the apples can be kept so well. I had occasion to speak of these apples to a few connoisseurs, who, however, claim that most of the American varieties are somewhat "cottonous" and lack the flavor of our good, home-grown apples. The two American apples which they consider as about the best of the lot are the Esopus and Ben Davis. A fact which does not seem to be known well enough on your side is that red apples are not popular here and are usually considered as a poor and cheap class of fruit. Such apples are never served at formal dinners; the only kind then used is our White Calville, fine specimens of which find ready sale during the winter and early in spring, at from 20 to 40 American cents apiece. If your growers could send us fine white good Calvilles, they would easily find a market here. PARISIAN.

ANNUAL PLANT AND FLOWER EXHIBITION. —GREAT INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF EXHIBITS.—PLANT SECTION IS OVERCROWDED.—MUCH GOOD MATERIAL SHOWN.—LOWER HALL ABLAZE WITH COLOR.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—MANY VISITORS.

The annual plant and flower exhibition is on as these notes are written, and while a detailed account with full list of prizes awarded is not possible, because of lack of time, still a general description can be given. The plants are confined to the upper hall and the cut flowers to the lower. Some idea of the advance made in recent years is possible when we bear in mind that previous to 1890 this show and the annual fruit and vegetable exhibition were all one, and yet the halls were large enough to accommodate everything. Now both halls are badly overcrowded, the plant department especially so, there being enough material in the upper hall to fill four times the available space, if properly arranged. The great lights in decorative, stove and greenhouse plants competing for the various prizes are J. S. Bailey, Wm. Donald, gardener; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, and Dr. C. G. Weld, Kenneth Finlayson, gardener. Stately palms, luxuriant ferns, often four to five feet across; superb dracaenas, alocasias, cycads, phryniums, etc., abound, and the groups are creditable in the highest degree to these worthy successors to Harris, Atkinson, Martin and other celebrities of bygone years.

In flowering greenhouse plants J. S. Bailey's dipladenia beats Dr. Weld's allemanda; in caladiums Col. Chas. Pfaff, Geo. Melvin, gardener, wins everything with two beautiful collections; in lycopsods and dracaenas Dr. Weld has it all his own way, and in ferns J. S. Bailey has no competitors. A table basket by E. J. Mitton is greatly admired.

The display of crotons is the best, and, indeed, the first of any account we have seen for years. In the large plants, 8-inch pots or larger, W. H. Lincoln is the only competitor, but in the class for twenty-five plants in 6-inch pots the rivalry is keen, Messrs. Bailey, Mitton and Lincoln competing with groups of beautiful specimens and winning out in the order named. On Rex begonias, groups of flowering plants, fuchsias, *adiantum*s, nepenthes, coniferous trees and several other classes there is not a single entry—fortunately, for there is no place to put them should they come. A large pan of Dracæna Goldiana in Mrs. Gardner's decorative group, in which nine plants are shown, the center specimens being nearly five feet tall, exhibits the good points of this fine plant as they can never be recognized in the single-stemmed specimens usually seen. Oakes Ames received a certificate of merit for Cyrtopodium Thorntonii, a cross between C. superbium and C. insigne Chantini, and honorable mention for two seedling caladiums.

In the cut flower hall dahlias are seen by the thousands. H. F. Burt, Lothrop & Higgins, W. P. Winsor, J. S. Chase, W. C. Winter and other dahlia enthusiasts are represented by extensive displays in the various classes of show, decorative, fancy, pompon and single. The most noticeable advance is in the cactus varieties, which are seen in much larger proportion than ever before, while the singles seem to have lost popularity very decidedly. The best individual bloom in the varieties of recent introduction is Mr. Burt's Col. Wilson, a superb claret-crimson cactus. Gaiety, a large fancy variety, deep yellow, with pink striping, also in Mr. Burt's collection, is a beauty. Bowery Girl, a yellow fancy, carmine, flaked and striped, was entered by both Lothrop & Higgins and J. S. Chase as the best novelty in their displays, and W. P. Winsor staged Britannia, a salmon-pink cactus in the same class, but Col. Wilson distanced them all. Much improvement in the arrangement of the dahlia displays might be made. Fewer formal placques and scrolls of short-stemmed blooms and more tall vases of long-stemmed flowers would add greatly to the effect, and it might be added that one or two of the groups were arranged in a manner creditable neither to their owners nor to the committee on arrangements that permitted their erection.

On the tables were the nasturtiums, zinnias, marigolds, garden pinks and extensive collections of hardy herbaceous and native flowers which always make such a display of glowing color. J. W. Clark had a fine stand of gladioli, Rea Bros. an extensive collection of named phloxes and Schlegel & Fottler a group of cannas. In the zinnias the greatest perfection was shown in Howard's strain of dwarf Lilliputs, and his Star petunias also came in for a large share of attention. W. B. Thomas showed a new salvia, dull reddish purple in color, that might, in favorable locations, be effective as a contrast in garden plantations.

Business is quiet, receipts being fortunately light except in the case of asters, which are coming in heavy now and form the main standby of the street florist, who finds the wrinkled little roses that form a large part of the daily shipments, unacceptable to even his patrons. Cooler weather is hoped for to drive the flower buyers home from the seashore and mountains. The naval festivities at Bar Harbor may make a temporary ripple on the demand from that quarter but come rather late to affect the season to any great extent, which has been the dullest on record for this class of trade.

On Saturday, September 1, the nominating committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society reported for the coming year a list practically identical throughout with the list serving for the past year. No contest is in sight for any office.

J. McCormick is making extensive improvements to his greenhouses at Edgeworth, Malden.

We have had a goodly number of visitors during the past week. The list included W. R. Smith, Washington, D. C.; Edgar Sanders, Chicago; Misses Newman and Armstrong, of St. Louis; P. J. Donohue, Lenox; Wm. Appleton, Providence, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia., and Commissioner Hopkins of Cleveland parks.

VARIOUS MATTERS OF INTEREST IN THE CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—ROBERT CRAIG ARGUES FOR A WINTER MEETING OF THE NATIONAL SOCIETY.—CLEARY TELLS WHY NEW YORK WAS SO SUCCESSFUL.—BUILDING NOTES, TRADE CONDITIONS AND OTHER JOTTINGS.

The September meeting of the Florists' Club was but slimly attended, other end-of-the-season attractions, apparently, keeping the boys away. There was one gentleman elected to membership and several others proposed. The nominations of officers for the ensuing year showed no change, the old board being named throughout. Robt. Craig and Robt. Kift gave a short review of what was accomplished at the convention. Mr. Craig said he hoped soon to see the winter session of the S. A. F. an actuality instead of a possibility. He was sure that an extra meeting during the winter would be very educational, as at that time cut flowers are at their best, as are also the greenhouses where the flowers are grown, and great exhibitions could be held, that would be a revelation to many. Pot plants in flower would also prove very attractive. While the time of year would not find the majority as free to come as in the vacation season of summer, yet the time would be so profitably spent and so productive of good results that it would, if tried, become a permanent feature. He predicted a great exhibition and meeting at Buffalo in 1901.

John P. Cleary, the superintendent of the New York exhibition was present and was called on for a few remarks. He said that the success of the New York convention in its different features was due mainly to the perfect harmony in which everybody worked. As soon as it was known that the convention was coming to New York the club got together and began laying plans for its reception. By January 1 all the committees had been appointed and he said President O'Mara had been most happy in the selection of the men for the various branches of the work. The great point was that they commenced early and kept the work right up to the hour, so that when the delegates arrived there was not a hitch of any kind. He also praised the private gardeners, who did a great deal to make the horticultural part of the exhibition a success.

Mr. Cleary has been looking over the ground at Stoke Pogis Nurseries and is highly pleased with the condition of the stock which he is to sell there October 3. He says the stock of California privet for hedging is the best he ever saw, there being something like 800,000 plants of all sizes, all in the finest condition. This stock alone would guarantee a big sale but there is also a splendid variety of everything required in running a well equipped retail nursery, including shrubbery, evergreens, ornamentals, roses, pæonies, rhododendrons, herbaceous stock, etc. The entire nursery stock is to be sold out and the business discontinued. George C. Watson is distributing the catalogues.

Robert Craig is finishing up the last of five new houses built to replace others torn down. The place is now in perfect order throughout, having been practically rebuilt in the past five years. Everything would now be finished were it not that carpenters had to be taken away to make shipping boxes, the demand for plants being greater than ever before at this season.

Business has been quiet the past week and, while flowers are improving in size and color, the demand is very poor. Prices are about as last week; teas $2 to $4 per hundred and Beauties from 50 cents to $2 per dozen; asters 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Flora Hill carnations are good enough, some of them, to bring $1.50 per hundred.

Leo Niessen has put in a new ice box which might be more correctly called a cooling room on account of its immense size. Mr. Niessen says he is ready now for a big business, having facilities for handling an immense amount of stock.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Scott returned last Saturday from their European trip. A new rose or two may be looked for in a short time at the home of the Liberty, in Sharon Hill.

Albert Hoag, of 1635 Chestnut street, is erecting a greenhouse in the rear of his store. K.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—LITTLE DOING OUTSIDE OF REGULAR COMMERCIAL CHANNELS.—DEMAND VARIABLE AND SOME ITEMS ACCUMULATE.—PROSPECT FOR AUTUMN.

This has been a very quiet week, at least in so far as events worthy of publication are concerned. Most of the convention party have returned and are busy, making up for lost time, as is the way of business mankind, and almost the only subject for conversation is the handsome treatment accorded the visitors at New York and the success of the Chicago team in the bowling contest. The market has gone along at the regular summer pace, showing some spirit on one day and not a spark of life the next. Monday, Labor day, saw brisk business, particularly in shipping, but Tuesday was dull and Wednesday and Thursday were worse. The expectations are that about week after next things will begin to show that the season is really beginning. Just at the moment there is enough of everything and a little too much of some items. There is no over-supply of roses and the cut is showing gradual improvement as the plants gain strength. Of carnations there are a plenty and there was no surplus until Wednesday when a slight accumulation began. Asters are in unlimited supply. There are comparatively few really first-class ones, however, and such sell quickly and at fair prices, but the bulk of the cut is poor and much of it almost unsalable. Auratums are going well and smilax has become scarce.

The growers are taking advantage of the offers made in the Florists' Club's coal committee's report, published in these columns a few weeks ago, in a manner which shows that co-operative purchase is entirely feasible and which gives considerable encouragement for next year.

G. E. Pieser is at home from New York and is busy telling of the hospitality of the New York Florists' Club. E. E. Pieser is expected home from the east in a few days.

At E. H. Hunt's they are building a new, commodious and much needed ice box. Business is very satisfactory with them.

The first chrysanthemums of the season were sent in by one of Bentley & Co.'s growers. It was the Lady Fitzwygram variety.

Arnold Ringier, of W. W. Barnard & Co., is confined to his couch by rheumatism.

There have been a few visitors this week, among them B. Eschner, a member of the firm of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, who says that business in florists' supplies is so brisk that his house must shortly secure additional room, although they moved into a new building less than a year ago. Other visitors were August Swanson and Chas. F. Vogt, St. Paul; Chas. Wiffin, Des Plaines, Ill.; F. H. Millman, Cumberland, Md.; A. Newell, Kansas City.

HAMILTON, O.—Theo. Bock is preparing to build the handsomest store and show house in this section of Ohio.

MONTHLY MEETING OF THE STATE FLORISTS' SOCIETY.—MR. HILL TELLS OF THE GOOD THINGS HE SAW AT THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

At the meeting of our state florists' society, on September 4, it was noted with pleasure that the indifference of the members had passed away with the hot weather. The many members present seemed endowed with new vigor. H. W. Rieman suggested a trade show in November. This impressed everybody favorably and Messrs. Bauer, George Wiegand and John Heidenreich were appointed a committee to make an outline and report at next month's meeting. Mr. Huckriede's proposition to furnish a float at the October carnival to be given in this city, found many members unprepared to act but a committee consisting of Messrs. Ed. Bertermann, F. Huckriede and Axel Nelson was appointed to look into the matter and report. After all business had been transacted E. G. Hill, of Richmond, entertained the club by giving a very interesting talk upon his European trip. Mr. Hill expressed surprise at the way many American newspapers criticise the Paris Exposition. While in technical and commercial exhibits Paris may not come up to our own World's Fair, the displays made in fine arts and related lines are certainly exquisite. Mr. Hill noted with pleasure that in the latter line the United States was very much in evidence. He mentioned an instance where a Cincinnati pottery company not only scored many prizes but sold some of their exhibits to the world renowned Berlin museum of fine arts.

About the horticultural part of the Paris show Mr. Hill speaks nothing but praise. One of the most striking displays is in the nursery department, where Mr. Hill was never before so forcibly impressed with the singular beauty of coniferous trees. In the rose display Mr. Hill says that at least 25,000 plants were used. These were in full bloom when he saw them, and it was of great interest to note that our well known varieties of hybrid teas were mainly used. He mentioned Belle Siebrecht, Carnot, Kaiserin, Testout and La France. Two large buildings were erected for flower displays. In these new displays are made every ten or twelve days, and Mr. Hill expressed surprise at the great importance the French florists attach to these shows, but he was assured by prominent florists that their investments were profitable ones.

Among the displays of pot plants, groups of single geraniums exhibited by Nonin and others were very interesting to Mr. Hill. They were arranged in a most admirable way as to color, and how they ever managed to handle the plants and retain the flowers perfectly proved a puzzle. Another exhibit, consisting of cannas in 6-inch pots, with luxuriant foliage and flowers of wonderful size, was also mentioned. In regard to this exhibit Mr. Hill had an interview as to details with Messrs. Billiard & Barre, but even with the aid of an interpreter could not learn the secrets of their success. Two things worthy of special mention to which Mr. Hill calls the attention of American florists are an outdoor yellow rose named Soleil d'Or, for which he says he anticipates as great a popularity as for the Crimson Rambler; and an annual plant grown from seed, bearing the somewhat cumbersome name of Schizanthus Wetsonii. H. J.

EASTER, 1901, falls on April 7.

THE Boston fern has become as popular in England as it is in America.

IT is said that the fiber of Apocynum venetum, a textile plant found in Asia Minor, Indo-China and Japan, is superior to that of flax.

A PERUSAL of the report of the Hail Association of America shows that September is a month of many losses. There may be no time to lose.

THE preliminary schedule has been issued for the first exhibition of the New Haven Horticultural Society. Robert
Veitch, Jr., 974 Chapel street, is secretary.

THE postoffice department has instructed postmasters to accept, as having been properly admitted to the parcels post mails, packages in covers closed by means of sewing or pasting.

C. W. WARD, of the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., makes use of pipe clay in solution as a temporary shading for carnations after planting in the benches.
This material affords the necessary shade and is very easily removed from the glass.

That Hide Returned.

There's one thing about Willis N. You can get mad with him often enough but never very long at one time. So I've taken the hide down off the barn door and send it back herewith, not much the worse except for a few rusty nail holes and an occasional freckle from some mosquitoes and greenheads that came buzzing around from "heyant" the Delaware. It will be as good as new in a week or two. Never saw a better piece of leather! I hope mine will prove as good when I backslide. "All's well that ends well." I will "bemoan" no more!
Let others forgive, also.

G. C. WATSON.

The Cost of Ice.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—As we presume the publishing of the paper read by Mr. H. C.
Geiger, of the Floral Exchange, before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, on the construction of a cooling room for roses, was in the interest of the trade generally, we wish to correct a statement made in regard to the consumption of ice in the plan described as in use near Philadelphia. The total consumption of ice for eight months was about $120, or about $15 per month. As we feel we were in some way responsible for this error, we feel obligated to rectify it, that our craftsmen might not be misled.

MYERS & SAMTMAN.

[In Mr. Geiger's very practical paper he stated that the cost of ice for this cooling house was $2 per week in summer, $1 in fall and often none at all in winter.—ED.]

Heating Capacity of Boiler.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I wish to know how many square feet of glass an eight horsepower upright tubular boiler will heat if arranged for hot water, the temperature required being 50° in zero weather?

H. KADEN.

If the boiler is well up to its rating it should handle about 2,400 square feet of glass under the conditions named. To heat a house of this size economically a boiler should have a grate with a diameter of twenty-five inches. L. R. TAFT.

Size of Hot Water Main.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—How many feet of 4 inch pipe will a 4-inch main care for?
We now have 1100 feet of radiating surface supplied by a 4-inch flow and a 4-inch return. We wish to build another house and would like to know if it is necessary to replace the 4-inch main with one of 5-inches? The main is under ground.
We use hot water and the boiler is able to carry another house easily. D. B.

While a 4-inch main would carry a little more than 1100 feet of radiation, if the coils are well above the heater and but a short distance away from it, under average conditions the best results are secured when 1,000 feet is the maximum radiation carried by 4-inch mains. The size of the new house is not given, but unless the conditions are unusually favorable it will be best to increase the size or number of the mains if the radiation is to be materially increased.

L. R. TAFT.

Watering Roses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Is it a good idea to water roses in benches at 10 a. m. and at 5 p. m. during the summer months?

SUBSCRIBER.

Like people, roses need more drink on some days than others. There may be days when roses will need water in the morning and again in the afternoon, but it is not advisable to water them or even to syringe them as late as 5 p. m. Even on the hottest days, 2 to 3 o'clock is quite late enough and on cloudy days or only moderately warm days they will be better not watered after noon. A damp, stagnant atmosphere at night means mildew and many other diseases to which roses are subject when injudiciously treated. A liberal amount of good, plain, practical common sense as to how to keep oneself healthy is also the best guide for keeping plants healthy. JOHN N. MAY.

Propagation of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

There is really no difficulty in propagating this pretty plant; so easy it is, indeed, that at present I could show any one a tidy little plant which is the result of a small leaf dropping into a pan of primula, and there taking root without any attention whatever. Propagation by leaf is by all means the best, as by this method much better results can be got than by any other. Choose a strong, healthy leaf; any time from November to January is the best; simply pull it clean off the stem and lay it, not too deep, in moderate moist, heated cocoanut fibre;
do not peg the leaf down; this I think is where many growers fail through damping. It is not from the leaf, but from the base of the leaf-stalk that the young growth starts; lift up occasionally to prevent roots ramifying too much until breaks appear. As soon as these are seen put up in thumb pots, and stand in a warm house, and shade from strong sun. At present I could show a large batch in 5-inch and 6 inch pots, twelve inches to fifteen inches across, struck at various times since last November. This is the practice adopted by an expert with this plant, and whose success I can vouch for.—W. Dick in Gardening World.

CUT FLOWER PEOPLE LIVING ON HOPES.— THINK A REVIVAL OF BUSINESS AT HAND.
—STOCK COMING IN GENERALLY POOR.—
GALA MEETING OF THE CLUB IS PLANNED.

Items of interest are very scarce in this neighborhood at present. As to business, there is none and if the swell people persist in making their decorations of hop vines, golden rod and the like when they have a summer "function" it will be well for the flower growers to leave this element out of their calculations when making their plans for another season.
Still, we do not forget, in the dispiriting condition at present prevailing, that it is already well along in September and, unless the political questions now uppermost should seriously disturb the natural progress of business, we may look for greatly improved conditions in the near future. So at present the drooping spirits of the cut flower district in this city are being sustained by a glorious hope, and the various flower growing communities in the suburbs are also subsisting on the same food while they wait patiently for the time of the annual tours of inspection, wooing and solicitous attention by their dear friends, the commission men.

The stock coming in is, as a rule, poor,
the exception being special American Beauties, Kaiserins, Testouts and Liberties. Short-stemmed stock has little value, whether it be roses or carnations, and much of the material coming in is in that class. Asters are poor, generally, though some single-stemmed blooms from careful growers are fine and bring creditable prices. Lily of the valley meets with a very uncertain sale and may realize anywhere from $5 per thousand to $2 per hundred, according as the wheel of fortune revolves.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, on Monday evening, September 10, promises to be a gala affair. All the sub-committees that did such effective work for the S. A. F. convention will be on hand to present their final reports and be honorably discharged with the credit which they have won so well. The entertainment committee announces that the larder is still well stocked and able to withstand any reasonable attack on its resources. Every member of the organization should be present on this pleasant occasion.

John Scott was married Wednesday afternoon, also W. H. Siebrecht's daughter, at Astoria on Wednesday evening.

Thomas Young, Jr., and Alfred Dimmock arrived from Europe September 1 on the Campania.

John Young's head salesman, H. A. Bergmann, is lying critically ill at home.

OBITUARY.

SIR JOHN B. LAWES.

Sir John B. Lawes, the eminent agricultural experimenter, of Rothamsted, England, died August 31. He was born in 1814 and educated at Eton and Oxford. His work in agriculture has been of much value to horticulturists.

T. C. WENDELL.

T. C. Wendell, of St. Louis, died Saturday, September 1. Mr. Wendell very mysteriously disappeared on August 25 and his whereabouts were unknown until his body was found in a St. Louis hotel where he had registered under a fictitious name. Mr. Wendell had been in the employ of the Plant Seed Company for thirty years, taking service with them upon his arrival from Germany in 1869, where he had an extensive experience in the seed business and in the propagation of florists' plants.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

WM. F. DREER and Mrs. Dreer are in Europe on a holiday trip.

AMERICAN grown seed of scarce varieties of turnips is being rapidly picked up.

THE Paris letter elsewhere in this issue contains much information of interest to seedsmen.

VISITED CHICAGO: Luther Burbank, Santa Rosa, Cal.; Edw. L. Coy, West Hebron, N. Y.

GEORGE CLARK, of the Henry A. Dreer firm, has been abroad some weeks on a business journey.

HOWARD M. EARL, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., is traveling as far west as Ohio, looking after seed crops.

ROCKY FORD melons are selling on the Chicago market for nearly double the prices of other cantaloupes.

WM. HENRY MAULE will make a visit to the Nebraska and other western seed growing districts next week.

ERNST MUELLER, proprietor of the firm of J. C. Schmidt, Erfurt, Germany, died August 24, of peritonitis. His age was 44 years.

AUGUST RHOTERT and Mrs. Rhotert returned on the S. S. Columbia, arriving on August 31, in good health after a two months' visit to Europe.

THE exact outcome of the pea and bean crops is now anxiously awaited by the trade. Few will be satisfied until the stock is actually cleaned up and "on the loft."

EUGENE SCHAEFFEL will not make his accustomed American trip this year, representing Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., of Paris, his assistant, Mr. Emrich, coming in his stead.

ROLAND W. GARDNER, of the Gardner Plant and Seed Co., Freeport, Ill., has been adjudged mentally deranged and taken to the Elgin Insane Hospital for treatment. The case is a particularly sad one.

NEBRASKA growers report recent unfavorable conditions of the vine crop—hot weather and the vine louse have caused premature ripening of both melons and cucumbers. The liberal acreage planted this year will help out considerably in case of a short crop and some surplus was carried over.

RECENT American visitors to the Paris Exposition were Wm. Rennie, Toronto; W. A. Bruce, Hamilton, Ont.; Wm. Wood and H. C. Warren, Richmond, Va.; James Farquhar, Boston; Arthur M. Kirby, of Peter Henderson & Co., New York; David McClelland and Miss Nellie L. Cash, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia.

St. Louis.

TRADE SHOWS DECIDED IMPROVEMENT.—NO SURPLUS IN ANY LINE.—REGRET OF THE BOWLERS.—NEW GLASS GOING UP.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Wholesalers this week report that trade has improved. Receipts are not making surpluses, as has been the case during the last month, and orders are coming in very satisfactorily. More society people are returning home each week and funerals, of which there have been a large number of late, help to boost trade. Asters are not so good as they have been and the demand for them is decreasing. Very fine Kaisersins are seen among the retailers, but Beauties are seldom in evidence.

It is a matter of regret that St. Louis could not get a bowling team together at the convention, but they will do better at Buffalo next year. It was expected John Kunz would go along, but he changed his mind and with Mr. Beneke and a couple other bowlers at home there was not enough material in New York to make up a scrub team.

J. W. Dunford, of Central, Mo., is building several new houses. He is adding about seven thousand feet of glass to the range, under which chrysanthemums, principally, will be grown. Mr. Dunford bought the ventilating apparatus, glass, etc., from Jordan's old place and also a lot from Mr. Guy, of Kimmswick, Mo.

Shaw's Garden was open to the public Sunday, September 2, and about 15,000 visitors passed through the gates, despite the fact of a few hard showers. The Garden will not be open again on Sunday until June, 1901.

A call made at Eugene Michell's place on Maryland avenue found all hands in the midst of the busiest Sunday since late spring. This was the case also with others out in that section of the city.

Chas. Kuehn and two of the Young brothers returned Saturday from the convention. Mr. Weber and others of the party were expected back Tuesday or Wednesday.

ORION, MICH.—Dungey & Son are adding a greenhouse which will very nearly double their facilities.

STOUX CITY, IA.—J. C. Rennison is adding two houses to his range, one for violets and one 23x200 for carnations.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—Chas. Schafer, who is going into carnation growing here, has purchased an eighty horse-power boiler from the Waldron paper mill.

RACINE, WIS.—A. J. Fidler, who last fall succeeded to the business of Fidler & Sheldon, built one house at the time and is now planning the erection of a structure 25x100. He reports prospects bright.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Hills & Poehleman, doing business as the Grand Rapids Violet Company, have erected five houses 20x100 for violets and are planning to erect ten more next spring, for roses and carnations.

LANCASTER, MASS.—It is reported that Elizabeth Babcock, who has been sued by John O'Brien for defamation of character has filed an answer, stating that she is a resident of New York, thus evading a snit in Massachusetts. The case grows out of assertions said to have been made by the defendant in reference to the disposition of some plants entrusted to the care of Mr. O'Brien.

"Indispensable"

This is the only word which describes the American Florist Company's Trade Directory. This book, 387 pages of facts tersely told, is issued annually and is an aid to business and money making which no wholesaler or traveling salesman can afford to be without. It contains the name of every Florist, Nurseryman and Seedsman, arranged both by states and towns and alphabetically; and new lists of Gardeners or Superintendents of private estates, Experiment Station Horticulturists, Landscape Architects and Horticultural Supply Concerns. It will save many times its cost by enabling you to cover America with your catalogue and at the same time waste no printed matter or postage on dead names.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO. J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.;
GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

MICHIGAN with her peaches and Missouri with her apples are in a fair way to break crop records this year.

MEMBERS of the Western Association of Wholesale Nurserymen assert without dissent that stock is looking better than at any time for years.

THE Northern Pacific Railroad Company last spring planted 530,000 trees along its right of way in North Dakota and is planning to plant 300,000 in 1901. The work is under the direction of Oscar H. Will, of Bismarck, who claims it to be the largest contract for tree planting on record.

Louisville.

PERSONAL JOTTINGS FROM THE KENTUCKY METROPOLIS.—WHAT THE GROWERS AND RETAILERS DO AND SAY.

Wm. Walker was the only Louisville representative at the convention at New York. He came home very enthusiastic and said he thought it was the greatest convention ever held. He was much pleased with the exhibits and the way the New York florists entertained. He says kentias were wholesaling in New York for what our florists ask at retail.

Chas. Raynor, of the Anchorage Rose Co., has been suffering severely with rheumatism this summer. Mr. Raynor grows all his roses in solid beds and ties them down in August so as to get them to send out new growth.

Victor Mathis has returned from Europe, where he visited his old home at Alsace and also the Paris Exposition. He is planting his carnations in the houses and complains of stem rot.

C. H. Kunzman has returned from Chicago. He says he is sorry he did not put Garland's iron gutters in his new carnation houses, after seeing them at Reinberg's and Wietors'.

Nanz & Neuner and Chas. W. Reimers have fine prospects for American Beauties this winter. They are practically the only ones who grow Beauties in this locality.

Jacob Schultz has about completed his new greenhouses. He did not attend the convention this year on account of wishing to oversee the building.

Geo. Schultz is cutting some good Brides and Bridesmaids. His violets are looking fine; he generally brings in a nice lot for Christmas.

Chas. W. Reimers was successful in growing a fine lot of asters this season, to single stems for cut flowers. They found ready sale.

F. Walker & Co. are building a propagating house 18x80 and a house for chrysanthemums, 20x80.

Edw. Morat is about to discontinue the florist business. H. G. W.

Syracuse, N. Y.

STATE FAIR HAS PROMINENT HORTICULTURAL FEATURES—REMARKABLE EXTENT AND QUALITY OF EXHIBITS.

The floral and fruit exhibits at the New York State Fair, just closed, far exceeded those of previous years. To give an idea of the great extent of these departments it may be said that over 12,000 plates of fruit were exhibited and 7,500 jars of cut flowers, to say nothing of the many groups of exotics, ferns and flowering plants. To S. D. Willard, of Geneva, commissioner in charge, too high a tribute could not be paid for his untiring zeal and energy in bringing this department to such a successful issue.

The genial Thomas Enright, of Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, N. Y., was on hand as usual with their famous specimens of pears and other fruits, their exhibits totaling 600 plates. Their general collection consisted of 150 varieties of pears, seventy-five varieties of apples, seventy-five varieties of grapes and seventy-five of plums. Fifty-eight first prizes were awarded this firm.

The Western New York Horticultural Society was first with 1300 plates of excellent examples, nicely arranged, the eastern society taking second prize with 600 plates. The Geneva Experimental Station also showed a most noteworthy collection of apples and plums, finely finished examples arranged splendidly by the veteran, Leyden.

In the flower department the amateurs showed up amazingly, in many instances rivalling the florists and professional gardeners, especially with asters and dahlias. A fine group of ferns was staged by Quinlan, most prominent among this collection being Cymbidium regale, Nephrolepis Washingtoniensis, Pteris Wimsettii and Lomaria gibba. His collection of cockscombs was also fine. A floral fire engine by W. H. Workman, of Oswego, attracted much attention.

Holiday Blooming NARCISSUS

FRENCH DOUBLE VON SION.

"PARIS" BRAND.

A Narcissus specialist in France has been breeding up for several years past a pure strain of Narcissus Von Sion, and owing to the careful cultivation given them they produce blooms almost as large as the Dutch Von Sion. These cultivated French grown Von Sion have been torced by a few large eastern florists the past two years and have given good results. Under proper treatment they can be bloomed easily for Christmas, and even some weeks earlier.

These cultivated Von Sion are not to be confounded with the wild Von Sion offered by French growers and sold at low figures. We want each of our customers to try at least a few thousand of these for Christmas blooming, and if cultural directions as mentioned below are followed, we believed they will give every satisfaction. Per 100, $2.00; per 1000, $16.00.

"NARCISSUS, French Grown VON SION for forcing for Christmas flowers, we would advise placing the bulbs as soon as received in August or September, in flats outside or in cold frames. They can be brought into the house for forcing about November 15th or as late as December 1st. When brought in the flower stalks should show from 3 to 5 inches in the flats. These bulbs when so started will stand damp heat which is contrary to the habit of Dutch Von Sion."

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

At New York.

The sporting committee of the New York Florists' Club met at the bowling alleys on Monday afternoon, September 3. While getting ready for serious business they rolled up the following scores:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Total
Traendly.....	112	154	120	384
Schenck.....	162	131	117	410
Burns.....	127	99	148	374
Rochrs.....	143	136	149	428
Steffens.....	103	106	103	312

The committee decided to distribute the ladies' prizes as won, to the three ladies having made highest scores.

The next meeting of the Bowling Club will be held on the afternoon of the second Monday in October, at 4 p. m., at the usual place.

Chicago Felicitates Herself.

If Buffalo is getting more pleasure out of the basketful of mugs she won at Greater Gotham than the Chicago boys are finding in the contemplation of the Queen of Edgely cup, she is, indeed, in ecstasies. Perhaps it is because winning trophies is such a novel experience for Chicago that her bowlers are prone to gather about the tall silver vase, with only now and then a word of regret when reference is made to that final, up-hill game which, had it been just a bare half dozen points better than the first one, would have swept the board in spite of Kasting, Webber and the whole Pan-American contingent. But Chicago is satisfied; she never did so well before.

The Queen of Edgely cup, by the way, is no bauble; it is a big, massive, yet graceful piece of silver. It is worth in the vicinity of $250, Captain Edgar F. Winterson being required to give his personal bond for that amount for its safe-keeping and delivery to the National Florists' Bowling League at Buffalo in August, 1901, the cup not passing into the permanent possession of any club until that club shall have won it twice. Captain Winterson finds the trophy something more than an unmixed joy, for it is too valuable to lie around and too big to lock up in any safe needed in the florist trade. It's as tall as the average coffee urn in a restaurant, and twice as heavy, and the leather case, satin-lined, is as big as many trunks.

The Chicago boys are pleased at the assurance of H. C. Geiger, of the Floral Exchange, the donor of the cup, that they are glad that the trophy is located in the "Beauty country"; it must be that Mr. Geiger expects the rose for which the cup is named, the pink American Beauty, to also find a warm welcome in Chicago.

Detroit.

PYTHIAN CONCLAVE MAKES BUSINESS BRISK.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—OFFICERS INSTALLED.—BOWLERS WERE EMBARRASSED.

The Knights of Pythias convclave held here last week brought to the city nearly 40,000 visitors and was the direct cause of an active demand for flowers all along the line. American Beauties were very much sought for and the dealers were unable to supply the required amount. It is not always easy to trace the cause of a sudden and extraordinary demand for flowers, but on this occasion there was no doubt that the reunion of the Knights was responsible for the activity in florists' circles the whole week, which would have been otherwise extremely dull.

The Florists' Club meeting was largely attended on the evening of September 5. The newly elected officers were installed as follows: President, Geo. A. Rackham; vice-president, Frank Beard; secretary, Geo. Davis; treasurer, B. Schroeter.

The convention at New York, which was so well attended from here, was the chief topic of discussion, and all were loud in their praises of the hospitality tendered them by the New York Florists' Club.

When our defeated bowlers returned they were greatly embarrassed to find the city gayly decorated and illuminated, but were later much relieved to learn that it was all for the Pythians. They were unsuccessful in their efforts to bring back some of the coveted prizes but they are not discouraged.

Recent visitors: C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; J. M. Gasser, Cleveland, and Henry Smith, Grand Rapids. J. F. S.

THE QUEEN OF EDGELY CUP, CHICAGO'S TROPHY OF CONVENTION PROWESS.

Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The prizes for the best collection of outdoor cut flowers, offered by Henry A. Dreer and Henry F. Michell for the August meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society brought out some 300 vasetuls. The winners of the Dreer prizes were: First, Joseph Hurley, gardener to J. M. Rhodes, Ardmore; second, John McCleary, gardener to W. Weightman, Germantown. The Michell prize winners were: First, W. Fowler, gardener to Mrs. Charles Wheeler, Bryn Mawr; second, W. Robertson, gardener to J. W. Pepper, Jenkintown.

Other awards were: For Magnus tomato, first, Francis Canning, gardener to Samuel T. Bodine, Villanova; second, James McGregor, gardener to Mrs. Thomas A. Scott, Lansdowne. Sugar corn, first, John McCleary; second, Francis Canning.

The H. Waterer prize for best dish of twelve tomatoes was to the Stone of R. G. Carey, gardener to Thomas C. Price, Chestnut Hill. The second best plate was that of W. H. Carey, gardener to Mrs. Allen B. Rorke, Ardmore.

Other exhibits receiving special mention were a well grown plant of Allamanda Williamsii and six vases of the Allegheny hollyhock, grown by John Hobson, gardener to Edward A. Schmidt, Radnor, and orchids in several varieties by Alphonse Pericat, gardener to Mrs. G. B. Wilson, West Philadelphia. A new hybrid in this collection, Lælio-cattleya velutina elegans, was given a silver medal.

GENEVIEVE ..LORD..

ANOTHER year's trial convinces us that it is not only a worthy successor to Wm. Scott, but far superior to that variety in every way. In short it is the finest pink Carnation to date, all things considered. We offer a limited number of field grown plants as follows: First size, $12.00 per 100; second size, $10.00 per 100. Also a few other vars. Write for prices, etc. Delivery Sept. 1.

New Haven.

TRADE SLOW BUT FUNERAL WORK TAKES CARE OF ALL SURPLUS—NEW HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY PROSPERS.

Trade here has been about as usual through August, but some very good funeral orders have served to keep the surplus moving, asters being used for a good share of the work done. The growers are very busy housing carnations and violets, which they report doing well, considering the very dry season.

There was an excellent showing at the August meeting of the New Haven Horticultural Society, there being over fifty members present. There was a short talk by the president, Eli Whitney, and several new members were elected.

J. N. Champion has just finished a new house, 12x65, for chrysanthemums and azaleas. He is also putting in a new front in his Chapel street store.

The New Haven Horticultural Society will hold a chrysanthemum exhibition in the Music Hall, November 14 to 16.

G. H.

AVONDALE, PA.—E. J. Cloud is adding a new house to his range, intending to extend his business considerably this fall.

STREATOR, ILL.—The W. C. Hill Floral Company has removed its greenhouses to a piece of land about a mile from town where it has three houses 20x100 in course of erection, one for roses, one for carnations and one for miscellaneous stock. They expect to put up three more next spring.

ROSES.

Strictly first-class stock out of 3-inch pots: Brides, Meteors, Maid, Perle and Golden Gate, $3.00 per 100.

Field-grown Crimson Rambler—Canes three and four feet, 10c.

Field Carnations—Flora Hill, Lizzie McGowan (white), Scott, Tidal Wave (in pink), Morello and Jubilee (in red), Mayor Pingree (yellow); $3.00 per 100.

Geraniums—5,000 Bruanti and Heteranthe (best scarlet), White Swan and La Favorite (best white), American Wonder (best single scarlet), strong 2½-inch, $1.50 per 100.

Asparagus Sprengerii—Strong, 2½-inch, ready for 4-inch, 5c., fine stock.

KRUGER TAKES A REST FROM LABOR.— SINGLETON COURT IN GOOD HANDS.— VARIOUS NOTES.

Carl Kruger, whose skill as a producer of carnations and hegonias has made the firm of J. H. Sievers & Co., San Francisco, known to the entire horticultural world, has been compelled to dispose of his interest in the firm on account of ill health. He is at present rusticating in Southern California and expects later in the season to visit some of the notable carnation establishments in the eastern cities. We all hope he will soon be in the horticultural harness again, fully recovered and ready to surpass all his previous successes.

John Morley, who has held a number of responsible places in England as well as in this country, has accepted the position of head gardener at Singleton Court, the residence of John Singleton, one of the principal owners of the Yellow Aster gold mines. This place, under the management of Ernest Braunton, is rapidly becoming one of the finest in the west and contains some of the best specimens of tropical trees and palms to be found in this vicinity.

W. A. Peschelt, who has charge of the elegant grounds of U. S. Senator Jones, at Santa Monica, Cal., has returned from a three months' vacation, most of which was spent in Europe. D. R. W.

LYONS, N. Y.—Jas. P. Boyle has purchased the old rectory building of St. Michael's church, has removed it to his greenhouse property and will remodel it into a handsome dwelling.

LITTLE DEMAND.—STOCK LOOKING WELL.
—CONVENTIONITES HAPPY.—CENTAUREA INDOORS.

Trade has not improved much, as the weather is still very hot. With a few good rains outdoor flowers are looking fairly well. Asters and tuberose are quite plentiful but not much in demand as yet.

All the boys who attended the convention at New York have returned in high spirits and are well pleased with their trip. The highest praise is heard for the New York people and the way they managed things.

The American Rose Co. is cutting some fine Centaurea imperialis, grown indoors. The flowers last a long time and make a good show. P. G.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Mrs. Schomburg has just completed a house 18x60 and J. B. Keller Sons are adding one 20x100 for azaleas.

The Model Extension Carnation Support.

LANCASTER, PA., June 17, '99.
MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y.:

Dear Sir.—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way, and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best in the market, and if your other Specialties are as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900. Very Respectfully,
ALBERT M. HERR.

MY PICTURE AS A "KID."
(Presenting a rear view of a stern reality)

When I was young, you will observe, I was very backward; but I have got over that, and now come to the front claiming to have the best WATER HEATER, VENTILATING APPLIANCE and SASH HINGE for greenhouse purposes, that are in the market.

Furthermore, they are so simple in construction I can afford to sell them much cheaper than other styles.

Now florists, don't be backward in sending for a catalogue. Remember, when you find you NEED a thing, the sooner you get it, the more you will have for your money, again I say "DON'T BE BACKWARD," but "keep up with the band wagon." Let me hear from you AT ONCE.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the sower; the thrasher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. This machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. A CHILD can run it. Just the thing to fight crab grass. It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

Send for Particulars.

FINLEY LAWN RAKE CO.,

PRICE $12.00. JOLIET, ILLINOIS.

CLINTON, N. Y.—A large consignment of hop vines was sent from this place last week to Newport, R. I. They were to be used in the elaborate decorations for two harvest dinners given by leading society ladies.

Inventories for Florists.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—In the past few months much has been said in regard to the poor business methods practiced by the average florist. I am one of the average kind; but if some of those who are above the average will tell me how to improve my methods I shall be most happy to make the attempt. It is said that most of us are lax in the matter of reckoning the cost of our product. If we grow a variety of plants how can we figure the cost? Where one propagates most of his young stock is there any better way than to keep a record of the year's expenses and compare it with the annual inventory, and the year's inventory with that of the year before? Then, that matter of inventory? I was brought up in a business where it was the practice for the proprietor to take an account of stock on the last day of each calendar year. How can a florist do this? If he grows a general assortment of plants or if he grows only roses and carnations for cut flowers, how is he to estimate the value of his plants? What is a rose or carnation plant worth in a bench? Is it worth what the rooted cutting costs in the market or is it worth what one hopes to receive for the blooms and cuttings which it should produce? Then, what is the annual depreciation on a greenhouse establishment? Of course it varies. If houses are well built is there any depreciation the first year or two? Or would our "business method" friends estimate the life of a house at ten, twelve or fifteen years and charge depreciation annually in accordance therewith? Is there any better period of the year than the end of December for a florist's account of stock and, if so, why? If some of those who complain of florists' lack of method will go a little farther and tell what these methods should be, not in generalities but in detail, they will accomplish something practical toward a remedy for the shortcomings which most of us admit.

W. R.

The matters "W. R." refers to are, perhaps, the most troublesome and most difficult to solve of any which confront a florist. It may as well be admitted in the beginning that, so far as a general grower of plants and cut flowers is concerned, it is absolutely impossible to ascertain accurately, the exact cost of production of any one item. It is, however, feasible to obtain approximate costs, which will be sufficiently accurate for general purposes.

The best time for taking inventory and figuring up the year's business would seem to be after the close of the spring sales and before the bulk of the planting for the next year has been done. A rose or carnation plant for inventory purposes should be worth the cost of the cutting plus what it has cost to grow it on and bench it.

The writer estimates depreciation on buildings at five per cent per annum. This is for well built houses, kept in first-class repair, all painting, repairing, etc., being charged to expense and not added to the inventory of buildings.

An experience of some fourteen years indicates in our case that the salvage, when rebuilding time comes, will make up for the amount not covered by depreciation. There are many greenhouse establishments on which ten per cent would not seem too much, while modern iron houses would depreciate much less—as to how much less, we must ask those having experience with them. Therepair bills will increase as the house grows older, but the depreciation should be charged at the same rate from the beginning.

Apparently there is no better way of finding cost than by the square foot of bench space. A rough and ready method would be to find the expense for the year and divide this by the number of square feet of benches. This, however, would spread the coal expense over the whole year and does not seem proper.

Certain expenses must, of course, be considered general, as, for instance, depreciation, rent, taxes, water, insurance, value of owner's time, pots, tools, fertilizers, bad accounts, etc. These may be distributed proportionately between the different months. Labor, fuel and similar items can be easily charged to the months in which they are used. It is, of course, possible to charge actual labor to each crop, but few general growers will follow this method long.

We then have the expense for each month in the year, from which the cost per square foot of bench for that month can be ascertained. By keeping track of the space occupied by any crop during each month, from propagating bench to sale, one can readily compute the approximate cost of that crop. Those who are large users of hot beds and frames will have an additional difficulty to confront. This method, of course, apportions the same heating cost and the same labor cost to all crops in any one month.

The writer can already bear, mentally, a host of objections raised to the above and can only state in self defense that he does not claim to be "above the average," that he does not claim the method above suggested to be perfect, that he does not claim to have covered the ground in any thorough manner, that he has simply endeavored to indicate roughly to "W.R." the general lines on which he is working and that he distinctly "disclaims all responsibility for the crop" should "W.R." attempt to adopt and follow these methods.

The Clematis.

[Read by A. G. Jackman before the Horticultural Club, of London, Eng., June 19, 1900.]

This well known genus of the order ranunculaceæ derives its name from the Greek word klema, a vine branch, and is also known in this country by the familiar name of virgin's bower. The species, according to the "Index Kewensis," number about 240, which are to be found mostly in the temperate zones of both hemispheres, so, with few exceptions, are hardy in this country. Only one species, C. Vitalba, is a native of England, which is to be seen growing freely in chalky soils, rambling over hedges, bushes and hanging cliffs, covered each autumn with its profuse tufts of grey plumose fruits, which gained it the name of old man's beard.

Several other species are, however, familiar in our gardens—notably C. Flammula, C. montana and C. Viticella, whilst we occasionally find the following: C. erecta, C. integrifolia, C. paniculata, C. graveolens, C. coccinea, C. patens, C. lanuginosa, C. Fortunei and C. Standishi. This is, however, only a small list of species which, in my opinion, deserve more attention; it would take up too much time to go thoroughly into the list, but those which strike me more particularly are the pretty early spring-blooming C. calycina, with its small, bell shaped, yellowish-white flowers, marked inside with purplish spots; C. alpina and C. Sibirica, the blue and white species from the alps and mountains in Siberia respectively, so useful for the rockery, rootery, or pillar; C. campaniflora, with its fragrant small white or purplish-tinted flowers in June and July; the small yellow-flowered C. Wilfordi, which blooms profusely in August and September; C. lathyriifolia, the herbaceous perennial which produces its small white flowers in loose corymbose panicles from June to August; and the sweet-scented Chinese species, C. Davidiana, with its tubulose or hyacinth-shaped flowers of bright blue disposed in elegant clustered heads during the month of September.

For size and beauty the species are mostly far surpassed by the hybrids, which have been mostly obtained from C. patens, C. lanuginosa, C. Fortunei and C. Standishi, the last three being sent over by Fortune from China in 1851.

The first person to commence the hybridization of the clematis in a systematic manner was Mr. Anderson-Henry, of Edinburgh, who, in 1855, crossed C. patens with C. lanuginosa, from which he obtained C. Reginae, though, I believe, the honor of raising the first hybrid must be given to the late Mr. Henderson, of Pine Apple Nursery, who sixteen years previous to the aforementioned date, raised C. Hendersoni, but whether it was an artificially produced or chance hybrid I am unable to say.

The next person to take up hybridization was my father, who, in 1858, raised the still popular C. Jackmanni, which he followed up with many other varieties still in cultivation up to 1877. We are also indebted to Charles Noble, Cripps & Son, Simon Louis, Lemoine, and many others for several fine forms, though from 1877 to 1894 successful hybridization appears to have been almost at a standstill. This, I believe, was due to two causes; firstly, the want of using fresh blood, secondly, to the insidious dying off with which the clematis has been affected for so long, rendering hybridization not only disappointing but almost useless.

I am pleased, however, to be able to now inform you, after several years close study and experiments, that I have been able to a great extent to avert this calamity, the losses at Woking being now comparatively small, and these it would be obviously unfair to attribute entirely to the so-called dying off. I have noted from time to time the different opinions that have been given as to the cause of this "dying off," some persons believing it to be caused by injury from frost, some attributing it to too much nourishment, water and heat, some considering it to be brought about by the bursting of the cells through excessive moisture, while others think it is caused by eel worms or fungus, and also to grafting. There is no doubt that frost is the cause of some deaths, and too much water and had drainage of others, but I cannot agree with them that either of these is the sole cause of all the losses. My experience is that the plants mostly succumb during the summer months when the ground is driest and the sun has most power, and in the majority of these cases I could not detect any sign of the plants having had too much nourishment or water, or that the drainage was bad.

With regard to insects and fungus, I have often noticed them in the decayed part some days after the branch failed, but not in the first stage. I have often seen eel worms in knobs formed on the roots, more especially of the common C. Viticella, but I have never seen this species go off in the same way as the hybrids, so I cannot attribute the cause to them, though they are no doubt very injurious to the plant.

I have frequently examined the roots of the hybrids which have died down, and in most cases they appeared perfectly clean and healthy, the decay having started at or above the graft, and the plant has often shot up again from the base, sometimes only to die down once more. Grafting also cannot be put down as the direct reason, as plants on their own roots go off in the same manner.

I do not think, however, that C. Vitalba, which is so generally used as a stock, is entirely suitable for some of the large flowering hybrids. The roots differ from those of the latter, being of a hard, wiry character, the hybrids appearing, after they have had sufficient time to get established on their own roots, to ignore the stock, which eventually decays.

Reverting again to the dying off, I am of the opinion that it is mainly due to loss of constitution through over propagation, which has been brought about by the great popularity of, and consequent demand for the hybrids, and being of a soft succulent nature, have responded only too freely to the treatment. My other reasons for coming to that conclusion are, as already mentioned, that the plants mostly go off on the hot, bright days of summer, and in many cases after having made several feet of growth, and are forming the flower buds, which seems to me to imply that they are wanting in vital power, and are unable to withstand the extra call upon their strength and the extreme heat. If it is not loss of constitution why was the dying off not noticed twenty-five years ago, and why has it increased of recent years, not only in this country but on the continent, and how is it we do not see the rampant, robust growths of former years? Again, it seems strange that whilst the large hybrids have been so badly affected, I have never seen C. montana, C. Flammula, C. Viticella, or C. Vitalba collapse in the same manner, unless my contention is correct that over-propagation is the cause. I might also mention I have not yet seen signs of the dying off amongst the new hybrids from C. coccinea.

As a decorative plant the clematis is almost unequalled. Few climbers can surpass it for covering a wall or porch of a house, or training over trelliswork, commencing with C. montana early in May, and followed throughout the summer and autumn by the large hybrids of the patens, florida, lanuginosa, Viticella, and Jackmanni types. To these must be now included the new coccinea hybrids, C. Countess of Onslow, C. Duchess of Albany, C. Duchess of York, C. Grace Darling, and C. Sir Trevor Lawrence, which, with those of the last type, remain in bloom till frost comes.

The clematis is also at home planted out or grown in pots, in the conservatory, cool greenhouse, or glass corridor, if the situation is not too shady or confined. Those of the patens or florida types are often more appreciated in these positions than when grown out of doors, coming into bloom as they do at a time when flowers are somewhat scarce, through escaping the May frosts which sometimes spoil those growing outside. Rambling up pillars and poles, over rootery or rockwork, they are alike elegant, and when bedded out produce a most gorgeous effect; but when this is done it is desirable that those of the Viticella and Jackmanni types should be selected on account of their profuse blooming properties. Some of the smaller flowered species, such as C. Flammula, C. graveolens, C. montana, C. Vitalba, or C. Viticella are also quite in keeping with wild scenery when scrambling over ruins, arbors, tree stumps, banks, hedges and bushes, whilst several of the herbaceous and sub-shrubby species and varieties are worthy of a place in any herbaceous or mixed border.

New Polyantha Rose Snowflake.

Here is a dainty new seedling produced by crossing Clotilde Soupert and Paquerette. It shows no trace of the Clotilde Soupert parentage excepting in floriferousness, which is almost continuous throughout the year. It is dwarfier than Paquerette and of the same pure white color. Its extreme dwarfness adapts it for growing in pots, pans or jardinières as table plants, and as such the plant shown in the illustration was greatly admired. If cut when in bud almost every flower will open perfectly. The contrast between the delicate, pale-rose center of the bud and the small, pure white flowers is very pleasing. As a bontonniere, nothing could be daintier. There has been a great demand since the introduction of the baby primrose for plants grown in 6-inch and 8-inch pans and this new dwarf rose is especially adapted for that purpose. As a dwarf edging plant for the garden, we doubt whether any other rose could be more suitable. The tallest bud or flower in the illustration is not quite seven inches above the pan. This rose originated with Albert Knapper and is being introduced by A. Blanc, of Philadelphia.

English Horticultural Auctions.

This is auction week and it has become quite an important horticultural event in London. I hear it questioned whether these sales are good for the trade generally, yet year by year they increase in importance and, whatever may be said against them, the net result must be satisfactory to the growers. There are now many provincial florists who devote their houses to tomatoes and cucumbers and depend on these sales for a stock of plants for winter use and those who grow especially for the annual sale clear an immense quantity of stock. Many of the buyers could not turn over the stock at a profit if they had to pay ordinary trade prices.

Heaths are among the most important items of these sales and the weather this season has been very trying, though I hear they are generally quite up to the usual standard. Genistas, bouvardias, hydrangeas, roses, solanums, ampelopsises, ivies, clematises and ferns are the most important classes of plants offered, though some of the auction catalogues include a great variety of other plants, among them some novelties. I have seen the competition at these sales so keen that prices have gone beyond the ordinary quoted price, but of late years it must have been something very special to create anything like competition, the buyers simply waiting for the first lot to be knocked down and then claiming the following lots at same prices.

B. Mallar & Sons, of Lee, London, S. E., were among the first to institute these annual trade sales and it may be of interest to note that at the present time theirs is still one of the most important, if not the most important, of the week. I have had the privilege of going through their nursery to-day, and I was much struck with the stock to be offered, all being of good quality and having a fresh, clean, healthy appearance. Many thousands of heaths, well set with bloom, are ready. Boronias are another great feature, elatior, megastigma and heterophylla being the sorts grown. Genistas and solanums were equally worthy of notice. A host of other subjects might be mentioned, but I ought not to pass over the zonal pelargoniums, a few of the most approved sorts being grown specially for winter flowering. I noted Madame Charratt, a fine salmon shade, and of better habit than King of Denmark. Other good sorts are Gustave Eurick, vivid scarlet; Violet Daniels, scarlet with a shade of salmon on lower petals; La Cygne and Hermine, both good whites. H.

Greenhouse Ventilation.

[An extract from a paper by Robert W. King, read at the meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Association, Montreal, July 16 and 17.]

In regard to ventilation, the requirements for greenhouse work should be better understood by the grower than by the engineer. It is the latter's duty only to incorporate into his machine, if automatic, such action, under varying conditions, as the grower may dictate. If his machine is not automatic he has simply to construct such a mechanism as will the most easily, with due regard to the expense of installing it, open and close the shutters at the will and by the effort of an operator.

When undertaking to construct an automatic ventilating apparatus for greenhouse work it was stated to the writer that the requirements of the grower are a more even regulation of the ventilating shutters than can be obtained by human attendance, the machine to be capable of maintaining any desired temperature within a variation of not more than about 4°, and to give, also, a graded movement while acting within the limit referred to. Any erratic action of shutters, such as being put up too high, to be lowered again too low when the fall in temperature occurs, that must then naturally take place, causes drafts and alternate overheating and chilling of plants.

The machine must pull down as well as hold up the shutters. In carrying out this latter point in Brampton it was found advisable to introduce a spring in each connecting rod to the shutters, so that should a piece of ice or other obstacle be in the way of any individual shutter closing, the others could close and, in the case of ice or snow being in the way, the continued pressure of the closing shutter would eventually succeed in thawing it out, when this shutter would automatically and individually close.

In principle the mechanism consists of a double action hydraulic ram operated from the water pressure, required in greenhouses for watering, to actuate the shutters controlled by a delicately constructed double acting and graduating valve which is itself operated by a powerful thermostat moving its operating finger to and fro as heat changes occur.

There are times in the season when heat may be out of houses, when it is desirable that shutters should not entirely close at night, since in such case dampness and mildew might result. Under such conditions a stop is arranged to prevent an entire closing of shutters to any desired limit.

The introduction of automatic ventilation in the Brampton plant was simply a natural following of a leading mind, and whose absence to-day is mourned as that of a brother who has departed and gone before to that rest to which we all are hastening, whose aim was in accord with advanced and ever advancing minds engaged in solving such economic problems as further the best interests of the human race. For him the best was not too good, while every detail of his business was carried out with that thoroughness of which the success that followed his efforts speaks. For him it was enough that ventilating shutters could be better and more economically operated by an automaton than by human attendance, resulting in his having installed to date some fifty-two automatic machines in the Brampton plant referred to.

The advantages of automatic ventilation are obvious. Muscles of iron grow not weary of their task. They sleep not, and never forget. Like a clock keeping track from day to day of the fleeting of time, so automatic regulation is always prepared for operation. It may apparently sleep through the winter months, but it starts into action with the first peep of spring. It bows its head to passing clouds and closes out the chilly winds, effectually relieves the grower of one more care, and asks no pay for its services other than the small amount of water under pressure required for its operation.

Hydrangeas as Pot Plants.

The hydrangea has enjoyed an extended popularity this season, particularly among florists, both as a cut flower and pot plant, but it is in the latter direction that their greatest usefulness lies, well abundantly every day. Keep the soil well cultivated, every third week drawing a little soil toward the crown of the plant to encourage root action near the surface and at the same time to protect the roots. In late September pot up with heavy, rich loam and place in partial shade until they have recovered from the lifting; then give full sun, setting the pots on bricks to ensure good drainage. After the plants lose their foliage naturally place them in a cold frame, watering only once a week. At the end of December bring into the greenhouse and place under a bench where there are no heating pipes; keep dark and syringe overhead until buds begin to swell. When two leaves are well developed bring to light and, feeling sure of good drainage, soak them well. Allow them to nearly dry out and then water moderately. In a week or so give a weak solution of lime water and soot, a 5-inch pot of soot and the same quantity of air-slaked lime to twenty-two gallons of water, which has stood for three weeks before using. Every other week give liquid cow manure and use these two fertilizers alternately until the flowers begin to show color; then cease entirely. My opinion is that liberal summer treatment in the way of abundance of water, etc., is the secret of successful hydrangea culture.

When grown in tubs the treatment must be somewhat different from that which pot plants receive, as it is customary to leave them undisturbed for several years. One grower makes it a practice to care for lawn plants for his customers, removing the tubs to his placetor winter

Joseph Meehan, of Philadelphia, states that while the opinion is quite general that pruned plants will not flower, terminal buds being required, the opinion is in error. He agrees that a terminal bud is more likely to bloom than a side one, but has some fine plants which made large trusses, every one of which were from side buds.

Cut Flower Packages.

Visiting the greenhouses of Wm. K. Harris, Philadelphia, after the convention, I was much taken with a lot of stocky, erect Boston ferns and the idea suggested itself to me that the cut flower men could utilize the sword-like fronds in decorating the lids of their cut flower boxes, say three to five leaves grouped together, and sealing the same with ribbon and wax, which would ensure first view of the contents by the recipient of the package.

The average box of cut flowers is put up with about as much care and artistic effect as a basket of potatoes from the market house. When a person pays a good price for roses, he naturally expects to have them artistically packed. Many good ideas of packing could be learned from the French artificial flower dealers, both in packing and the handsome appearance of the package, and surely unless more attention is paid to detail the advance of the business of the retail florist will be very slow. #### Flower Show in Colorado.

The second annual flower show of the El Paso County Horticultural Society was held in Colorado Springs, August 23 and 24, and was in every way a pronounced success. There were over 1,000 exhibitors, and the exhibition tent was crowded from the opening to the close. As an index to the work carried on by this society it is stated, that 2,000 collections of flower and vegetable seed were furnished by Messrs. R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Mass., for distribution among the school children, the children signing receipts for the seed and agreeing to exhibit the product at the flower show. Ten prizes were offered by the society for each variety of flower and vegetable grown from these seed, ranging from $5 to 50-cent and 25-cent California gold pieces. There were prizes for many other accomplishments.

The work for next year is already being outlined, and will be carried forward upon a much wider scope; but the first aim of the society is to interest the children in the growing of flowers, vegetables and fruits, and the care of their home surroundings. H. I. Bennett is secretary. H. C. H.

Aquatics in the District of Columbia.

There are few finer aquatic gardens than those at Twin Oaks, Woodley Lane, the country home of Mrs. G. G. Hubbard, of Washington, D. C. Peter Bisset is the gardener in charge. All the well known nymphæas are at their best there just now, such varieties as N. Devoniansis, rosy red; N. O'Marana, pink, N. dentata, largest white; N. Zanzibarensis, blue; N. Zanzibarensis roseum and N. Zanzibarensis cœrulea, much brighter than the type. The best of the hardy ones are N. candidissima, white; N. Marliacea rosea, pink; N. odorata Luciana, pink; N. Marliacea chromatella, yellow.

Mr. Bisset has some choice seedlings, the most striking of which is the result flowered specimens of all sizes finding ready sale at Easter, and for lawn decoration a little later. The plant illustrated is a fair specimen of what may easily be accomplished with this subject. E. W. Cox, the grower, gives his cultural method as follows:

When through blooming prune back to within two eyes of last year's wood and plant out in a border rich in well rotted cow manure and bone meal. Water storage and replacing them in the spring. He has several plants which have been undisturbed for six years. The plants are wintered in a cellar warm enough to necessitate withholding water, except a very little, all winter to prevent the plants sprouting. When the tubs are set in position on the lawn an inch or two of soil is raked off and replaced with fresh manure. Good drainage is provided and ample watering required.

of a cross between N. dentata and an unnamed seedling. It is an improvement on N. dentata, the petals being wider and shorter, forming a compact flower of good substance. A good pink seedling is a cross between N. dentata and N. Sturtevantii; it is an improvement on N. O'Marana, being deeper in color and without the white streak in the center of the petals. A seedling named N. gracilis purpurea is a cross between N. gracilis and N. Zanzibarensis, identical with N. gracilis in all points except color, which is deep blue.

Mr. Bisset esteems Nelumbium Shiroman as the best commercial variety thus far produced. It is large, snow white, very double and produces flowers freely on long stalks well above the foliage. It is said to be equally as hardy as the well known Nelumbium speciosum. The illustration herewith is a reproduction of a photograph, taken by Mr. Bisset, of a leaf and flower of N. Shiroman. P. #### New York.

GALA MEETING OF THE CLUB.—CONVENTION COMMITTEE REPORTS RECEIVED WITH ENTHUSIASM.—HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION AWARDS.—WELL KNOWN MEN ADDRESS THE CLUB.—REMARKS OF EUROPEAN TRAVELERS.—SOME GOOD EXHIBITS PROVOKE DISCUSSION.—WALLACE GETS A PURSE.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—PERSONAL DOINGS.

The meeting of the New York Florists' Club on the evening of Monday, September 10, was well attended and everybody was happy. Congratulations over the success that had attended the club's convention efforts were in order and as one sub-committee after another reported the completion of its duties well within the appropriation, the general report of the ways and means committee showing a safe surplus, enthusiasm ran high. President O'Mara made a brief address, recounting some of the events of the past month and drawing useful lessons and encouragement for the future. In referring to the special work of the various committees he said that all had worked so loyally that he would single out but one individual for especial commendation, Mr. Bogan, who had labored so devotedly on the unique and unparalleled decoration of the hall where the convention sessions were held. Mr. Herrington presented the report of the horticultural exhibition committee, showing that of fifty-nine classes provided for in the schedule there had been competition in forty-two. There had been twenty-five separate exhibitors besides a number of others who exhibited but did not compete. Together with the report he handed in two protests which he had received from parties interested. The settlement of these questions was promptly referred to a special committee consisting of Messrs. A. S. Burns, Theo. Roehrs, J. Bernie, D. Y. Mellis and W. B. DuRie who retired and later in the session brought in a report which was unanimously adopted, in which the protests were not sustained and the original awards by the judges were endorsed. The individual cash prize of $100 offered by the club to the exhibitor winning the greatest number of awards in the various classes goes to William Duckham and the prize of equal value offered to the society whose members should win the most honors, goes to the Morris County, N. J., Gardeners' and Florists' Society.

J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, being present, was called upon to address the meeting, which he did briefly, referring pleasantly to the recent rivalry between Chicago and Buffalo for the honor of the next convention and asserting that Chicago's lath string, once out, is never pulled back and that she is ready to receive and entertain the S. A. F. whenever that body decides to come. Mr. Campbell, of the Park Nursery Co., Pasadena, Cal. was also a visitor at the meeting and, being called upon, spoke appreciatively of the systematic and orderly methods observed in the convention management and of the courtesy and hospitality he had experienced everywhere in his eastern travels, expressing the hope that California might yet grow strong enough and enthusiastic enough to invite the national society to visit that state. Replying to an inquiry, Mr. Campbell gave some facts relative to the climate of California and the methods of irrigation practiced there because of the lack of rain at some seasons. This consists of surface irrigation mainly, so far, the cost of sub-irrigation, also the liability of the water pipes getting choked by small roots, having prevented any general adoption of sub-irrigation.

The next orator called up was Alfred Dimmock, recently returned from Europe, who told entertainingly of some of his experiences on the "other side." At the Paris Exposition, which he had visited for a few days, he noted that the stove and greenhouse department was not particularly successful although there were some good things, many of them quite new, in foliage plants that impressed him favorably. Crotons of the broad leaved type, he said, seemed to be most favored there, the reverse of what is true in this country. The outside department he characterized as very fine but of very limited extent. The great heat appeared to be a serious disadvantage to the exhibits, the trees and shrubs not having been planted long enough to get properly established.

F. L. Atkins also gave a very interesting narrative of what he had seen when abroad this season. He spoke enthusiastically of the planting in the parks and botanic garden of Liverpool. The fuchsias, geraniums, cobæas and violas particularly impressed him. Of the many hollies used he had noted Hodginsii as especially strong and vigorous. The placing of boxes containing California privet at intervals along the sidewalks on the public streets and the general use of window boxes had pleased him particularly. Hawarden Castle, with its ancient oaks, Wolverhampton Park, with its wonderful growth of young trees, the subtropical bedding at Battersea Park and the magnificent evergreens at Kew were also mentioned. At the Royal Horticultural Society's exhibition, among the most promising things were a yellow canna, Lord Bobs, some superb hybrid delphiniums, and the roses, especially the tea scented varieties. His list of roses that appeared to greatest advantage included White Lady, Clara Watson, Clemence of Caledon, Killarney, L'Innocence, Jules Grometz, Marquis of Salisbury, W. J. Grant, Comtesse de Nordillac, Empress of Alexandria, Ernst Metz, Souv. d' un Ami, Hon. Edith Gifford, Meta, Muriel Graham, Sunrise, Maman Cochet and a semi-double Rugosa fimbriata, white, pencilled with pink. In France he had seen a new bougainvillea, a hybrid between B. glabra and B. Sandariana, said to be a continuous bloomer, hence of great commercial value. In Belgium he noted the luxuriance of the orchids grown in Belgian peat, the odontoglossums being marvelously fine.

On the exhibition table were several interesting exhibits, which the judges examined and reported upon, giving honorable mention to Bobbink & Atkins for Bignonia radicans grandiflora, for Hibiscus Leopoldii, for Canna Crimson Bedder and for Ligustrum Ibo compacta and to H. Beaulieu for a seedling white cactus dahlia. A brief discussion on dahlias was had in which C. W. Ward spoke of the necessity of abundant rains and the impossibility of getting good flowers in dry weather in this section, Mr. Vaughan endorsing this from his own experience in the west, also emphasizing the need of cool weather for good results. W. J. Stewart spoke in high praise of the ligustrum, of which the plant on exhibition was a dwarf compact form, saying that if it should show the same good qualities of hardiness, floriferousness and general beauty exhibited by the type it would prove to be one of the best garden shrubs introduced in recent years, a view in which Samuel Henshaw coincided.

A committee consisting of Messrs. J. N. May, A. S. Burns, Alex. Wallace, W. J. Stewart and W. A. Manda was appointed to draw up and have suitably engrossed and framed, resolutions expressing to J. H. Starin the club's appreciation of his generosity on the occasion of the convention excursion to Glen Island. Mr. May, who shares with Mr. Henshaw the unlimited confidence and admiration of the convention ladies, presented verbally a resolution of thanks which a delegation of the fair sex on the Glen Island boat had instructed him to convey to Mr. Sheridan, the efficient chairman of the reception and entertainment committee on that delightful occasion. Mr. Sheridan accepted with characteristic modesty and was duly cheered, as was also Mr. Henshaw, who could not resist the temptation to recount the attention he had personally received from the ladies, regardless of nationality, age or other qualifications, on many recent occasions. Mr. Henshaw expressed his intention of entertaining the club, at its October meeting, with some reminiscences of his recent Porto Rican trip, with stereopticon illustrations.

A very pleasant and appropriate event was the presentation by President O'Mara to Alex. Wallace on behalf of the club of a purse containing $100 in gold as a little token of appreciation of the faithful and conscientious work done by that gentleman in compiling and editing the beautiful souvenir volume of the New York convention. Mr. Wallace responded feelingly and was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

After the secretary had read the names of nine new applicants for membership the proceedings were turned over to the musical contingent of the club and with Mr. Cleary at the piano, songs were contributed by Messrs. Dimmock, Clucas, Butterfield, Plumb, Stewart and Schmutz the latter exhibiting a phenomenal range of tone and expression and such dexterous agility in puffing his cigar between phrases that the piano could not keep up with him. During the entire evening the entertainment committee was active and kept to the letter its promise of abundant refreshment, solid, liquid and smoky.

The wholesale people are much dissatisfied with market conditions at present. With the price on roses running along at a dollar or two a thousand there is not much in it to invigorate either grower or wholesaler and when it comes to gladioli and hydrangeas one cannot get many dollars' worth of the bulky stuff into any ordinary sized store at present values. Whether to stay at his post and make love to the Greeks or to go out among the growers to look over the prospects for the coming season is the problem that vexes the daily life of the commission man at the present moment. The wooing in either case may be expensive for him. In the continuous struggle for advantage over his competitors his ingenuity is severely taxed; summer gardens as an adjunct to the wholesalers' establishments are now a back number for this season. A new dress of paint helps a little and a good looking cashier is relied upon by some as a drawing card. J. K. Allen is trying the scheme of show cards on the walls announcing the advantages of trading there and another wholesaler is seriously considering the furnishing of a special corner with complete outfit for the accommodation of Mr. Weir and his friends in their favorite game. Twenty-eighth street, which, for the past month has been almost impassible on account of relaying car tracks and repaving, is once more open for traffic and that interruption to business is over, but the buyers are still scarce. Mr. Carlin, of Thorley's is back again after a few weeks' recreation but can scarcely be called a buyer as yet. His part up to date is principally a thinking part and the responsibility of two stores for the season ahead seems to give his features a solicitous aspect that excites sympathy. Nothing of special note in flowers is seen in the daily receipts excepting cattleyas, which are beginning to appear in greater number than during the summer and are of superior quality.

Thomas Young, Jr., is making changes in the arrangement of his office that will be a decided improvement. Mr. Young's trip across the water appears to have done him good and there is a vigor and swing to his movements that point to an old-fashioned, aggressive campaign for the coming season. For the next few months the successful wholesaler will sleep with only one eye shut.

The floral department of the big industrial festival at Ridgewood last week was a great success. Messrs. Nilsson, of Woodlawn, and Marquardt, of Middle Village, were among the prize winners.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society's fifth annual exhibition will be held at Madison, N. J., on November 7 and 8. Schedules can be obtained of C. H. Atkins, secretary.

John Muller, the Thirtieth street wholesaler, has not been seen in the neighborhood for a week. His consignors are looking for him, as they did not know he was going to retire from business.

A. Schultheis is building a very fine residence at College Point. All conveniences for entertaining the boys who come to admire the heaths will be provided.

Chas. Thorley has pulled out the entire old front of his new store at Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street. When finished it will be a model establishment.

Mrs. Begbie, wife of James Begbie, formerly with Clucas & Boddington, died at the home of her mother, Mrs. Blancke, at Brooklyn, on September 9.

J. P. Cleary takes a rosy view of the immediate future for the plant auction trade. He has four outside sales already booked.

George Stumpp has returned, hale and hearty, from Narragansett Pier, where he has been summering with his family.

Cards are out for the wedding of Fred. W. Smythe to Miss Jessie Scott at Pelham Manor, September 20.

J. H. Troy has gone to Newport, where he reports having had a very satisfactory summer trade.

Jos. A. Manda is soon to open a new flower store in Summit, N. J.

Visitors in town: Miss E. Nussbaum and Miss Schoenhut, Buffalo, N. Y.; Eugene Wurst, St. Louis, Mo.; S. H. Moore and E. J. Morse, New Haven, Conn.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS, MASS.—A. H. Fewkes is adding a new and well built potting shed to his equipment.

WARREN, PA.—Daniel Offerle is planning some extensive improvements to his place, including a modern flower store. He has benched 3,500 rose plants and 11,000 carnations.

Philadelphia.

TRADE STILL VERY QUIET.—BOSTON FERNS IN LARGE SUPPLY AND VARYING QUALITY.—CRAIG'S NEW SHADING MATERIAL.—DOINGS OF THE GROWERS.—VARIOUS NOTES.

September 15 is upon us, but business has no more life than in the middle of July or August. We were thinking that a little more activity was about due, also a little cool weather, but it seems that we "have another guess," as boys say. Things are certainly very quiet, and with the exception of a funeral order now and then the boys have little to do. Most of the stores have fixed up a little and are ready when the people get back to take what little they have left. Prices are about as for the past few weeks. The best teas are $3 to $4; Beauties $1 to $2 per dozen. Asters 75 cents to $1 per hundred; carnations, 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred.

Boston ferns are to have an inning the coming season. Robert Craig & Son have an immense stock sprung as a surprise on the boys, from the "other place." They certainly are fine. W. K. Harris is also in the running, having found time the past summer, when he wasn't striking rubbers, to pot up several houses of the Bostons and these, like everything else he grows, are sure to be quick sellers. There is a little knack in growing Bostons. The best plants are not too long and have an abundance of broad fronds. There are quite a number of smaller lots about but in many of them there are not enough fronds to the pot, and what there are are too long and give the plant a straggly appearance. We know the good ones by sight, but just how it's done is beyond us.

At Craig & Son's carnation houses the newly planted stock is looking well. A new shading which is quick to put on and almost as quickly removed is made with lime and water. Whitewash is an old solution, but made in the old way it is very hard to remove. Air-slake the lime first, however, then mix with the water and apply with a syringe and you have a shading that will stand a heavy rain but will rub off with the slightest pressure.

Jacob Becker has returned from his European trip and is better satisfied with the country of his adoption than ever. He is going to open the eyes of some of the azalea growers when the new stock that he selected the past summer gets to flowering. He says he has something extra fine.

The Philadelphia Floral Store, Dunn & Co., proprietors, have removed from 614 to 618 Chestnut street, two doors above. They recently succeeded to the retail cut flower business of the Floral Exchange and report that they are well satisfied with the results of the past season.

Myers & Deserable, of Glenside, have rented the greenhouses lately occupied by Colflesh & Titlow near Chestnut Hill. This, in addition to their Glenside establishment, will give them greatly increased facilities. They make a specialty of small ferns for dinner table ferneries.

There does not seem to be as many chrysanthemums being grown for cut flowers as usual, although the over-supply will, no doubt, show up at the usual time.

Colflesh & Note have secured a permit to erect five greenhouses and a work shed at Fifty-fourth street and Kingessing avenue at a cost of $2,000. The houses will be 20x100.

Chicago.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—TRADE SHOWS MANY VARIATIONS.—GOOD ROSES ARE SCARCE.—TOO MANY OUTDOOR FLOWERS.—PROSPECTS FOR THE EARLY FALL.—A BIG LOT OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—BUDLONG GOES AWHEELING.—PERSONAL DOINGS.—VARIOUS ITEMS AND VISITORS.

Trade has pursued the uneven tenor of its way again this week. For a fortnight or so business has had its ups and downs; one day brisk, the next day slow. Some dealers report things pretty fair; others find demand inadequate to consume supplies. There are still large quantities of outdoor material on the market, asters, lilies, gladioli, hydrangeas and a few dahlias and they cut deeply into the demand for roses and carnations. Beauties are abundant and are better in quality than the teas, although the average of the latter is steadily improving and some very decent stock is now obtainable. Here and there new indoor carnations are making their appearance but as yet they are hardly up to the quality of the outdoor stock sent in by careful growers. Greens are rather short in supply but are little in demand and wild smilax is now available.

The local people who have field grown carnation plants for market say that the demand is unprecedented and that those who have a reputation for good stock are selling out rapidly. Wietor Brothers, the Chicago Carnation Company and the Reinbergs went into this branch most heavily this year but there are a dozen others who had up to 80,000 more than they needed for their own houses and the season was so favorable that nearly everybody has large, healthy plants.

Flint Kennicott, who has grown gray watching the trend of public interest, is afraid that the flower business of the next eight or nine weeks will be cut into by the excitements of the presidential campaign, but he says that thus far since the great political conventions business has been rather better than usual in the summer and a great many florists do not agree that the campaign will make any great inroads upon sales or prices.

The great Armour packing establishment recently changed its power from steam to electricity, installing the finest power plant in the world and discarding seventy-two steam boilers and miles of pipe. Bassett & Washburn bought some thousands of feet of the pipe for heating their new houses and the Chicago House Wrecking Company took all of the boilers, big and little.

W. F. Hennig, who is with B. Schroeter at Detroit, was in town this week. He was a passenger on the F. & P. M. steamer which was so severely handled crossing the lake on Tuesday night and says that it was the worst experience of his life, an opinion in which all the passengers agree.

Poehlmann Brothers have planted ten houses of chrysanthemums. The plants are looking well and most of them are being grown for two blooms. This is two houses more than this firm had last year and is probably the largest lot which will reach the Chicago market.

J. D. Thompson, of the Chicago Carnation Co., has returned from the Adirondacks where he shot a deer the first night of his hunting expedition. This is Mr. Thompson's busy season, for he is superintendent of the Will County Fair which opens at Joliet on Tuesday.

Messrs. Rudd, of Mt. Greenwood; Simonds, of Graceland; Carter, of Oak-woods; Scott, of Elmwood, and J. R. Haight and others were at Cleveland, O., this week attending the convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents.

E. R. Tauch, with Walter Retzer & Co., and L. Gregor, with E. Weinboeber, have leased the greenhouses on Berteau avenue and organized the Harms Park Floral Co. They propose to greatly enlarge the plant, growing carnations principally.

J. A. Budlong is well on the way to the east on his bicycle. He proposes to wheel to New York and there meet Mrs. Budlong, who will go down by train. They will be absent two months.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has just received a Heller mice proof case for storing its immortelle letters. Mr. Pieser saw the case at the New York convention and lost no time in placing an order.

W. J. Smyth has had plans drawn for a conservatory south of his store on Michigan avenue. It is to be a very swell affair, 25x38 feet with plate glass front and fancy cornices.

Chicago parks were never more attractive in September than they are this year; in fact old settlers say that vegetation was never before so green and fresh at this date.

Adolph H. Poehlmann, who is starting up with a fine range of new glass at Morton Grove, is planning to sell his product for himself down town.

G. H. Pieser went to Milwaukee Monday and found the boat about as badly crowded as the train was homeward bound from New York.

Edgar Sanders returned home this week, having had a highly enjoyable visit at Boston since the New York convention.

C. S. Stewart has returned from Omaha and is introducing Mrs. Stewart. They intend making their home here.

At Vaughan's Seed Store a large force is busy unpacking two carloads of Dutch bulbs received this week.

The Florists' Club will hold a preliminary meeting at McKellar & Winterson's at noon to-day.

C. L. Washburn has been journeying east on business this week, going as far as Pittsburg.

M. E. McCourt has opened a first-class flower store at the Hotel Plaza, 282 Rush street.

Arnold Ringier has been in bed two weeks with rheumatism but is now much improved.

Visitors: C. E. Mansfield and Mrs. Mansfield, Fitchburg, Mass.; Walter Mott, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia; E. W. McLellan, San Francisco; Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; T. C. Joy and Mrs. Joy, Nashville, Tenn.; the Mulick brothers, Grand Rapids; J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; Geo. Souster, Elgin, Ill.; J. A. Valentine, Denver; J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs.

St. Louis.

BUSINESS SHOWS CONSIDERABLE IMPROVEMENT.—STATE OF THE WHOLESALE MARKET.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

The situation in this city as regards trade seems to be very uncertain, but as a whole retail business has certainly experienced a decided improvement during the past ten days or so. Funeral orders have been frequent and there have been a number of small weddings and some large decorations going on. The largest funeral ever seen in St. Louis was that of Benj. Brady. Scarcely a florist in town failed to get some good orders for designs from the family and friends of the deceased. Last Saturday found the wholesale market cleaned out completely on all white stock. Asters are scarce and while there are some very fine ones the bulk of them are poor. Carnations are plentiful at from 75 cents to $1 but show no improvement in quality. Among roses Meteors and Kaiserins are the best, the latter sort bringing the top price. Tuberoses still continue to pass through the wholesalers' hands at a brisk rate, but do not go above $4 for double and $3 for single.

The attendance at the club meeting was much smaller than it should have been. Mr. Guy was installed president and after the meeting took the members around to the Michelob, on Sixth street, and gave them a little "treat." It was decided by the trustees to name two members each month who are to read essays and they appointed Messrs. Schray and Fillmore to prepare papers for the next meeting. This is a move in the right direction and should bring out members who have been in the habit of staying away of late.

F. J. Foster opened a branch establishment last Monday at 510 Olive street, occupying the west end of the Morrison Jewelry Co.'s store, which makes a very pretty and attractive stand. It is reported that he will give up the present place at Eighth and Olive streets sometime after Christmas.

A new floral establishment is being erected at 4832 Delmar avenue, by Theodore Miller, for the sale of cut flowers and potted plants. There is not much competition in this neighborhood and Mr. Miller should do a good business. He will open about October 1.

Ostertag Bros. were quite busy last week with several decorations, the largest of which was that of the Globe Shoe & Clothing Co.'s store on Monday. About a thousand strings of laurel collected in West Virginia is one of the items of material used.

S. B. Dicks, representing Cooper, Taber & Co., London, visited here Monday; also B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and C. S. Ford, of A. Herrmann, New York.

John S. Kerr, proprietor of the Sherman Commercial Nursery, is in town getting matters arranged on freight rates on nursery stock from Sherman, Texas.

Orange, N. J.

It did not take long to complete business and get down to fun at the annual smoker of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, which was held on September 5. There was plenty of music and many songs of perennial popularity, here and across the Atlantic, were rendered in an acceptable manner by the musically inclined members present. The stars and shining lights of the aggregation were George Smith in "The Tinker's Wedding O!" and "My Dad's Dinner Pail," David Rose in "Bonnie Dundee" and Peter Duff in "Twenty Years Ago." The capturing of President Duff for this much appreciated favor was largely due to the persistence of John Hayes, who is irresistible and, for cajolery, unrivalled.

QUINCY, MICH.—A. B. Cole has found business so good that he is adding another house to his establishment.

TOUGHKENAMON, PA.—Robert Bancroft is preparing to add a new house to his plant between here and Kennett Square.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

GREENHOUSE repairs should now be completed as speedily as possible.

STOCKS of field grown carnation plants are rather smaller than usual and demand is active.

CO-OPERATIVE coal buying has proven successful in Chicago although the measure of co-operation was meagre.

REPEATED effort during the week has failed to establish telegraphic communication with those of the trade at Galveston, Texas. Floricultural interests there are not small, there being some dozen firms engaged, and their loss must have been heavy in the great storm which took thousands of lives and destroyed millions of dollars of property.

ONE of our correspondents has objected to the pipe clay, mentioned in our last issue as a shading material for carnations, etc., on account of its scarcity in certain districts. This writer would therefore do well to substitute air-slaked lime, which is recommended by Robt.
Craig, of Philadelphia. Ordinary showers of rain will not remove this shading and it is easily rubbed off with a cloth when dry.

Cemetery Superintendents Convene.

The fourteenth annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents was in session at Cleveland, Ohio, September 11 to 13. The sessions were held in the assembly room of the Hollenden Hotel and there was the usual lengthy list of essays upon topics connected with cemetery work, interrupted for excursions to various neighboring points of interest. The attendance was satisfactory and the officers elected were as follows:

President, George M. Painter, West Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia; vice-president, Frank Eurick, Detroit; secretary-treasurer, H. Wilson Ross, Newton Cemetery, Newton Center, Mass. Pittsburg was selected as the place of meeting for 1901.

forcing house.

Rockland, Mass.—W. B. Arnold, one house.

Quakertown, Pa.—Elmer Rawlings, house 20x200.

Pan-American Notes.

Since my last notes great progress has been made in every department. The rains have had a very beneficial effect on grass, trees and shrubs. A large area that was, even in July, the most formidable of clay banks is now finely graded and covered with grass as green and smooth as the proverbial billiard table.
The nymphæas planted in numerous pools in July are making a fine growth and many of them are flowering. Mr.
Ulrich, the landscape gardener, is now busy placing groups of herbaceous plants on the margins of the shrubby borders.
Properly, he is not mixing up indiscriminately a great many species, but is putting groups of one species and variety here and there. This is as our hardy plants grow in the temperate zone, in colonies and not a hundred species in a few square yards, as we find in the tropics. Mr. Ulrich has over 200,000 of these herbaceous plants and they must add immensely to the appearance of the grounds next summer.

The Horticulture building is in course of erection. The two conservatories leading on the north and south to the Forestry and Mines and Graphic Arts are already completed and will be heated so that they can be utilized by New Year's. Many of the fine beds in the grand court and the sunken gardens are now assuming shape. The grading is practically done in the esplanades and the fore court and on the banks of the cascades. The United States building will soon be roofed in. This is a most beautiful and imposing structure.

At the rear of the Government building, just across the canal, the Agricultural Department, under the direction of Prof.
J. Lamson-Scribner, and executed by Mr.
Ball, of Washington, has made an exhibit of all the useful grasses of the United States. The plot covers one and one-half acres and every kind of grass used in the states and territories, even to sand binders, will be found there. This exhibit will be of great value to agriculturists and Mr. Scribner informs me that the Department has never made a similar exhibit.

The horticulturists of the country will be pleased to hear that many large entries have been received. Vaughan's Seed Store, of Chicago, has about half an acre devoted to an exhibit of lawn grass on which there are half a dozen very fine beds. Just at the north of that Peter Henderson & Co. have a similar plot.
These are finely situated, being close to the midway. By the side of the main entrance is a similar exhibit by Henry A.
Dreer, of Philadelphia, and near by a local firm, Whitney-Eckstein Co., have another plot. F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, has entered for a very large exhibit of choice trees, shrubs and plants, and numerous other firms have also entered for exhibits.

Large beds of hardy roses located in the music garden have made a most excellent growth. They were planted fully six weeks later than the proper time but with good care they are going to be a great success. This is very encouraging, as it tells us what we can expect from other exhibits when planted at the proper time. Any doubts as to the exposition being ready on time are now dispelled. Every building is nearing completion and several of them can now be seen from some of the railway lines entering Buffalo. It is pleasant to hear from visitors who were well acquainted with the progress of the World's Fair, that in preparation in all departments we are away ahead of that great institution.
Some enthusiastic horticulturists have ventured to say that we "have the World's Fair beaten already." This may sound a little boastful, but mind, we did not say it. I can only repeat that when completed, and the 150 acres of Buffalo's beautiful Delaware Park are thrown into the grounds of the exposition, it will, in point of beauty of landscape and architecture, be hard to beat.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

OBITUARY.

GEORGE W. GASKILL.

George W. Gaskill, of Warren, O., died at Lakeview hospital, Cleveland, on the night of September 7, as the result of an operation to which he submitted four days previously. For two years Mr.
Gaskill has been in failing health and from a strong man of more than 200 pounds had slowly wasted away with stomach trouble. He was born in 1853 in the house in which he has since resided.
Mr. Gaskill was a whole-souled, generous, kindly man and leaves a wide acquaintanceship among the trade, mourning with his wife, his daughter and his aged mother.

WILLIAM SAUNDERS.

In the death of William Saunders at Washington, D. C., on September 11, the Department of Agriculture lost its senior attache in point of service; the country lost a landscape gardener who planned the famed Fairmount Park, of Philadelphia, and who had spent the best years of his life in adding to the beauty of the capital city; the fruit-growing industry lost a valuable helper—the man to whom the introduction of the seedless orange into the United States in its present great commercial richness is due. Mr. Saunders had been identified with the Department of Agriculture since its organization in 1862, and his work has covered a wide range, as is shown by the numerous volumes, published by the Department, dealing with matters under his charge. His official title was superintendent of the division of experimental gardens and grounds. Mr. Saunders was born in 1822, at St. Andrews, the oldest university town in Scotland. As a boy he worked under his father, for a part of the time in India. Going to London, at Kew, he formed the life-long friendship of Thomas Meehan, and for many years they were associated at Germantown. Mr. Saunders' first great work was laying out Clifton Park, an estate of 400 acres belonging to John Hopkins, the founder of the university of that name. This is now in the center of the city of Baltimore. Fairmount Park in Philadelphia is one of his most enduring monuments, although Washington is full of them, and dozens of places throughout the country have profited by his skill. The whole people are his debtor for the seedless orange, which he evolved in the experimental gardens of the Department of Agriculture, the work beginning in 1870. The original tree still stands in the garden. Last year 1,600,000 boxes of seedless oranges were shipped eastward from Riverside, Cal. Another of Mr. Saunders' accomplishments was the organization of the Patrons of Husbandry, or Grangers, which now has a membership of 350,000 farmers. He had been in failing health for some time and leaves a large family of grown sons and daughters. See page 226.

IT IS GOOD BUSINESS POLICY TO MENTION THE AMERICAN FLORIST WHEN YOU WRITE TO AN ADVERTISER.

Peoria, Ill.

There has been quite a little funeral work here lately but otherwise there is little done in the cut flower line. All the growers have their carnations in and they are working well, although the plants are not large. Kuhl, of Pekin, has quite a lot of Ethel Crocker which are fine. Mrs. Joost is better than Scott with him.

C. Loveridge is carrying over his old plants of tea roses with a few old Beauties, also. They are showing very fine flowers and promise well.

There are quite a good many chrysanthemums in pots grown this year and most of them are very good.

PEORIAN.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Watersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE Nebraska corn crop, both field and sweet varieties, promises to be extra fine.

C. G. WEEBER, of Weeber & Don, New York, and Mrs. Weeber are off to the west on a vacation trip.

BEAN crops in northern New York are injured by drought but may be helped some by late rains if not cut by frost.

THE strike of the stevedores and dock laborers at Marseilles, France, has delayed a number of French bulb shipments for two weeks.

JOHN BUCKBEE, of H. W. Buckbee & Co., Rockford, Ill., is on his way to California, where he will sojourn for some time on account of his health.

VISITED CHICAGO: H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; Henry A. Salzer, La Crosse, Wis.; William Henry Mauls, Philadelphia; C. P. Braslan, San Francisco.

THE tomato seed crop in Michigan has been seriously damaged by the excessive rains the latter part of August. Some of the varieties will not yield more than one-quarter of an average crop.

Boston.

MARKET CONDITIONS FAR FROM ENCOURAGING — SURPLUS OF ROSES MAKES PRICES LOW.—NOTES.

The local flower market is in a very generally demoralized condition. There are superfluous quantities of asters and of nearly all roses except Beauty, which retains its normal value and sells well. Carnot also finds generous appreciation; Lawrence Cotter is cutting it of splendid quality. Red roses are selling at unprecedentedly low figures because of over-supply, Liberty conflicting with Meteor and both selling far below their real value. Bride and Bridesmaid are poor in quality because of the extremely hot weather, which is unusual for so late in the season. There is a limited demand for fancy lily of the valley at $5 per hundred.

E. P. McNulty, Jr., formerly in business at Savin Hill, died last week.

Holiday Blooming NARCISSUS

FRENCH DOUBLE VON SION. "PARIS" BRAND.

A Narcissus specialist in France has been breeding up for several years past a pure strain of Narcissus Von Sion, and owing to the careful cultivation given them they produce blooms almost as large as the Dutch Von Sion. These cultivated French grown Von Sion have been forced by a few large eastern florists the past two years and have given good results. Under proper treatment they can be bloomed easily for Christmas, and even some weeks earlier.

These cultivated Von Sion are not to be confounded with the wild Von Sion offered by French growers and sold at low figures. We want each of our customers to try at least a few thousand of these for Christmas blooming, and if cultural directions as mentioned below are followed, we believed they will give every satisfaction. Per 100, $2.00; per 1000, $16.00.

"NARCISSUS, French Grown VON SION for forcing for Christmas flowers, we would advise placing the bulbs as soon as received in August or September, in flats outside or in cold frames. They can be brought into the house for forcing about November 15th or as late as December 1st. When brought in the flower stalks should show from 3 to 5 inches in the flats. These bulbs when so started will stand damp heat which is contrary to the habit of Dutch Von Sion."

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO. J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. BEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

IRVING ROUSE, of Rochester, is president of a canning company at Geneva, N. Y., which puts up 3,000,000 cans annually.

GEORGE ELLWANGER last month gave a piece of property valued at $15,000 for a home for aged Germans at Rochester, N. Y.

SILAS WILSON says that apple seeds should not be left even over night in the pumice, as the acid in the apple juice impairs the vitality of the seeds.

N. W. HALE, Knoxville, Tenn., was recently re-elected president of the Southern Nurserymen's Association, with W. Lee Wilson, Winchester, Tenn., secretary and treasurer.

GEORGE T. RICHARDSON, president of the National Apple Association estimates the apple crop of 1900, as exceeding even that of 1896, when 60,000,000 barrels were harvested.

WESTERN nurserymen who make a specialty of moving large trees say that New York is paying for this work, of which she is doing much, prices enormously higher than is charged Chicago for similar services.

CERTAIN entomologists say that the injuries inflicted this year by the apple tree caterpillar are less than previously because of a disease or blight, similar to the "perbine" which sometimes destroys silk worms, which is attacking the caterpillars.

NEWPORT, VT.—J. R. Farrant was married last week to Miss Abbie Goodell, of Westminster West.

LOWELL, MASS.—Wm. A. Roberts has withdrawn from the firm of Patten & Roberts to go into the livery business.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 87 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

At Flatbush.

The Flatbush Florists' Bowling Club will soon have the finest alleys in the country. Eight new ones are being constructed by Schwalback in the rear of the old location and on the ground floor. A gallery will be provided for spectators and all the appointments will be strictly up-to-date.

On Thursday evening the following scores were rolled:

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION PROJECT TAKING FORM—COMMITTEES APPOINTED TO PROPOSE PLANS.

The florists and gardeners who are interested in the plan to hold a general horticultural exhibition in Baltimore next year have appointed two special committees to prepare definite plans for the undertaking.

Messrs. E. A. Seidewitz, Isaac Moss, Charles L. Seyhold and Theodore Eckhardt constitute the committee which is to report on the technical features of the exhibition, the selection of the place, the plan and programme of the show, the premium list, the expenses, etc.

Messrs. John Cook, W. Paul Binder and William B. Sands constitute the committee which is to inquire into the possibility of organizing either a permanent horticultural society or of reviving the society known as the Maryland Horticultural Society. From the interest already aroused in the undertaking it is probable that the revival of the Maryland Horticultural Society will meet with general approval.

OCONOMOWOC, Wis.—C. B. Treman has removed to Hartford, where he is building a range of houses, principally for violet growing.

FUNERAL DESIGNS STILL THE MAINSTAY OF CAPITAL CITY FLORISTS.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Trade is rather quiet on account of the continued hot weather. Several florists had some good orders for the recent memorial services for King Humbert. A. Gude & Bro. had the decoration of St. Peter's church and also made a large wreath on an easel, surmounted by a cross and crown. The ribbons were the national colors of Italy. J. H. Small & Sons had the decoration of St. Matthew's church.

A. Gude & Bro. recently built a floral trolley car four feet long, using over 500 roses, for the obsequies of a motorman who was killed in a collision. The design was at the request of his colleagues.

J. H. Small, Jr., started September 4 on a western trip in company with some friends. They will go to California.

J. Louise Loose and wife have returned from their trip to Europe. P. G.

MY TRIP FROM THE CONVENTION.

After the convention and on my homeward bound, I stopped at several places to take a look around, I visited "Harris"—for here one much can learn. He's famous for the "Rubber" and the "Boston Fern."

His new French plate glass houses gave me great concern.

In these he grows his stock of his famous Boston Fern.

He grows them short and dense, and very cool and light.

He has a Ventilator that works both day and night.

These ferns they surely show a great display of skill.

And nature grants obedience to their master's will.

His general stock's conceded to be the finest grown.

But that he's taken up the fern is not so widely known.

So to all the trade from far and near, I would tell To buy your stock from Harris; he will serve you well.

If the space would permit, I would tell the nation

All I saw at his place, and give his quotation, JOHN SMITH.

TRADE STAGNANT.—WHAT THE GROWERS AND RETAILERS ARE DOING.—PERSONAL MENTION.

The extremely hot weather of the past few weeks has had a very depressing effect on the retail florists' trade, though there is the satisfaction of knowing that it will now soon be over. Growers say their stock is looking well and promise an abundant supply for the season. Geny Brothers will soon have an early white chrysanthemum on the market, but other growers are not in a hurry to get them in as there would hardly be a very large demand just at present. Leon Geny will be married in a few days.

Mr. Joy, the elder, is enjoying an extensive trip to the lakes and Canada, of which place he is a native. They have made some additions to their greenhouses this summer and expect to do a good business this season.

Currey & Co. have painted up and improved their store, making it very attractive in appearance.

M. C. DORRIS.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—L. E. Marquisee has been very much under the weather and has been in the Adirondacks for some time.

LITTLE DOING SAVE FUNERAL WORK.—
STORE WINDOWS GAY WITH GARDEN
FLOWERS.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The weather is fair but there is little trade. The demise of State Comptroller Morgan last week caused quite a little work, designs and bouquets. Scott had an order from Albany for this funeral and made a very large and fine "rock of ages" with an unusual base. The stores are making good window displays with gladioli and asters.

Wm. Scott and several others were at Toronto last week, attending the exposition. It is said the horticultural features were about as in previous years. It is suggested that Toronto omit her fair in 1901 on account of the proximity of the Pan-American show.

Silver trophies are more plentiful than asters or fern leaves at Kasting's and all were won by our bowlers at New York. It is enough to make us feel good for a year at least.

W. A. Adams had the assistance of a few of the craft in celebrating the first anniversary of his marriage one day last week.

W. J. Palmer, Sr., suffered the loss of a son-in-law last week, an exemplary young man, and has the sympathy of the craft.

W. F. Kasting is at Saratoga. Visitors: Chas. Scrim, Ottawa, Ont.; H. J. Wise, East Aurora, N. Y.; F. B. Lewis, Lockport, N. Y. W. A.

Messrs. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS, 46 and 48 Marion Street, New York, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I am highly gratified with the results I have obtained from your Sectional Boiler which you put in for me last October. Although you would only guarantee the six sections to heat 1620 feet of 4-in. pipe, I attached it to over 1,800 feet. It did it so well that I put on about 300 feet more, making in all 2,100 feet, and I am positive that I can add more to it. It is the best I have ever seen and a great coal saver. I have to keep the fire door open all the time. I would be pleased to have anyone call and see it. Yours truly,

George Schubert

MATTERS QUIET IN GENERAL.—TRADE LIGHT AND STOCK PLENTIFUL.—CLUB OFFICERS.

Little of interest has been taking place for the last two or three weeks. Flowers have been in sufficient supply at all times, with the possible exception of carnations, which, during the recent hot weather, have been suffering greatly. Asters have been of fair quality and among the greenhouse-grown stock some really excellent flowers have been seen, with stems two to three feet in length. This stock sold at from 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Roses are slowly improving in quality but the price has not changed of late.

The annual election of officers of the Cleveland Florists' Club takes place at the next regular meeting, which occurs Monday, September 24. Following is the list of nominees: President, Wm. Brinker; first vice-president, Gordon Gray; second vice-president, Isaac Kennedy; secretary, A. H. Graham; treasurer, H. A. Hart. It is to be hoped that a larger attendance will be in evidence than has been the case of late.

Some carnation planting is still going on. The plants, so far as the writer has observed, seem to run smaller than last year, owing, probably, to the great heat of August. The stock is, however, exceptionally clean and healthy. A.

DES MOINES, IA.—I. W. Lozier has maintained his reputation by again capturing the sweepstakes prize at the Iowa State Fair. He is the only florist who has ever taken this prize. Alfred G. Lozier installed the display.

MORRIS, ILL.—A. Mitting, who has just returned from Europe, where he has been spending the summer with his family, has bought up three-fourths of the capital stock of the Morris Floral Company and assumed charge of the business.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—The Amateur Horticultural Society will omit its usual fall show this year because of the poor condition of dahlias and the lack of financial success of previous shows. The American Dahlia Society was to have held its annual show in Springfield this year, but nothing has been heard of it.

LANCASTER, PA., June 17, '99.
MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y.:

Dear Sir.—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way, and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best in the market, and if your other Specialties are as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900. Very Respectfully,

ALBERT M. HERR.

MY PICTURE AS A "KID."
(Presenting a rear view of a stern reality)

When I was young, you will observe, I was very backward; but I have got over that, and now come to the front claiming to have the best WATER HEATER, VENTILATING APPLIANCE and SASH HINGE for greenhouse purposes, that are in the market.

Furthermore, they are so simple in construction I can afford to sell them much cheaper than other styles.

Now florists, don't be backward in sending for a catalogue. Remember, when you find you NEED a thing, the sooner you get it, the more you will have for your money, again I say "DON'T BE BACKWARD," but "keep up with the band wagon." Let me hear from you AT ONCE.

A Little Talk About Dahlias.

[Read before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, at Philadelphia, September 18, 1900, by Lawrence K. Peacock.]

I will preface my remarks this evening by a few historical facts, but will be as brief as possible. When we think of the hundreds, yes, thousands of years, during which roses and some other flowers have been cultivated and improved to reach their present high standard of excellence, it seems scarcely credible that the flowers staged here this evening have been developed in a little over 100 years. Yet such is the case, and is it any wonder some of the dahlia enthusiasts predict such a glorious future for their favorite flower?

The first double dahlia dates back to only 1814, and by double, at that date, was not meant one of those magnificent specimens you see here to-night, but just a double row of petals with a yellow center. But this was sufficient and in only sixteen more years, or in 1830, double dahlias of most beautiful form and color had been developed. This was the beginning of the dahlia supremacy, and in 1840 they were universally grown. These were the good old times when our grandmothers grew them in those marvelous old flower gardens, which we sometimes stumble across even at this date.

Perhaps some of you can remember the spirited rivalry between Mr. Schmidt and the late Robt. Buist. Philadelphia was then, as it is now, headquarters for dahlias and it was here the greatest interest was centered. The late Thos Cartledge, who when a boy was employed by Mr. Schmidt, often told me amusing anecdotes in connection with Schmidt's dahlias, how Mr. Schmidt, after getting first honors in competition with Mr. Buist, would always go to Europe and secure the finest new productions in order to keep ahead of Mr. Buist's skill as a plantsman.

It was at this time that some of our finest show and fancy dahlias were introduced. At this period every flower must have a certain form, shape of petal, etc. The growers could see no beauty in long or irregular petals. Their type was a perfect ball, with the outer petals reflexed to the stem and absolutely full to the center. This was then perfection, but these types became monotonous to the younger generations and this, primarily, was the cause of the dahlia losing favor.

On a bright, cool morning in September,

1890, I was driving along a wayside or back road in a rural district of New Jersey. I saw one of those old-fashioned gardens. It was an old homestead that had been in the possession of one family for seven generations. Here and there were modern flowers in close proximity to the old fashioned ones. But what took my attention was several large bushes almost completely covered with the most exquisitely delicate pink flowers. On closer inspection these proved to be dahlias, but of an entirely new form which so much resembled a water lily as to suggest the name.

In 1893 the Nymphaea dahlia was introduced as the greatest floral novelty of the century. At once new interest was given to dahlias. Two years later one firm sold as many Nymphaeas as all other dahlias combined. Thousands of cut flowers of this variety were sold at a higher price than that ruling for roses. The rest of the story you know. You see it here to-night, in the exhibition of dahlias, in spite of the most unfavorable season we ever experienced, and I understand a dahlia exhibition will be a fixture for all time to come at the September meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

Have you noticed the marvelous advance made in the cactus and decorative types? Some are almost fantastic and yet the season has been so hot and dry that many of the finer ones could not develop flowers at all creditable out in the hot, dry fields, but you can all grow them to their highest perfection.

If you are out in the country, plant them on either side of the gutter or covered drain leading from the pump. In the cities or towns with water service, just remember that in the spring when there is plenty of water and streams are high, that the sturdy young dahlias want only thorough cultivation and little or no water. But when the streams are low and the officials tell you to be saving with water, the dahlias open their beaming faces to look for the water they want. Like the precocious youngster, they only want it when it is hard to get. Rules or no rules, give the dahlias all the water they want. Let the faucet run all night and you will be well repaid by the appearance of your dahlias next morning.

It is well to remember right here that to feed or stimulate a plant while it is young and growing is to develop it to large size. A large dahlia plant in a dry time will evaporate a large amount of water each day and will soon suffer. Therefore keep your dahlia plants as small as you can without checking them, and they will bloom when quite small. Then, when they begin to bloom, feed them and water all you like and you will get a mass of flowers instead of a mass of leaves.

Never let the soil around your dahlias become hard or baked. Nothing will stop them from blooming more than this. If the buds blast or open on one side, they lack moisture in most cases. If the plants are too full of buds at this time, disbud. The exhibition here to-night will give you all needed information as to varieties, and for a complete list I refer you to the catalogues of the various seedsmen and plant dealers.

The Bamboo.

In addition to ferns and palms, perhaps the most valuable plant a florist can grow for decorations is the Japanese bamboo, which is really a strong perennial grass. They are graceful, durable, furnished with foliage down to the pot and harmonize with any companions one may be obliged to use. The only disadvantage is that our American houses do not furnish established plants and the imported clumps require so much time in getting an American "move on."

They require a rich loam, well drained but never dry. Temperature and light suitable for palms please them. Being a grass, each season's growth starts afresh from below the ground. For this reason the annual shifting, when needed at all, should be done in early summer, when pots well filled with stems can be divided. If carefully done, with good soil, they make vigorous shoots which develop before autumn and continue to produce a few fresh leaves almost annually, but the principal development should be secured now.

There is no plant so well adapted for use with carnation blooms; the bamboo not blooming, and the carnation being marketed without foliage, has brought them into sympathetic harmony. Quite frequently a tall bamboo placed in an archway between two parlors, with four dozen fancy carnations wired on makes one of the prettiest decorations you ever saw and at a fashionable reception one-half the guests exclaim: "I never knew carnation plants were so tall." They also harmonize with the various lilies or gladioli, or monthretia as shown in the accompanying illustration. C. B. W.

A Peep At Flatbush.

Carnations are all housed at Flatbush, chrysanthemums are budding, grapes turning purple and pear trees breaking down under their load of ripening fruit. Great blazes of salvia illumine the gardens and a pleasant autumnal fragrance pervades the air. Finishing touches are being given to repairs; gutters, benches, pipes, etc., are being put in readiness for the winter's work while the luxuriant platoons of rubbers, azaleas, euphorbias and heaths out in the open frames seem to turn their heads beseechingly toward the greenhouses and set their owners to studying the annually recurring problem of how to accommodate in the same area of bench room twice as much material as was crowded in last year. It was always so and undoubtedly will be so as long as there is a floral establishment left on earth, that, no matter how large the range of glass may be, there is invariably enough stock to fill another house or two—hence it is that the profits, when there are any, all "go into sash."

Sauntering up Clarkson street, which is the principal thoroughfare of the floricultural interests of Flatbush, one has scarcely time to fully appreciate the pleasing impression made by the smooth lawns and tasteful plantations at the corner of Flatbush avenue, which are under the care of Ornamental Horticulturist P. Riley, the pride of the Flatbush bowling fraternity, before the attention is arrested by the dazzling parterre of cannas, salvias, coleuses and alternantheras backed by enormous caladiums, which adorns the entire front of the thrifty establishment where, for more than a quarter of a century, Louis Schmutz has been turning out plants, agility and wit in equal proportions.

The caller finds that industrious gentlemen ever ready to lay away the pruning shears or the digging fork and place his time and assistance at the disposal of a visiting brother florist. Everything betokens prosperity, and the marks of intelligent culture are seen in every house. There are long ranks of "branching rubbers" calculated to fill even a W. K. Harris with envy. There are cyclamens and primroses in pleasing luxuriance, poinsettias, kentias and arecas and two long benches of Mr. Schmutz's favorite Peruvia pepper plant bright with many hued berries, while 25,000 lilies are clamoring for space in the already well-filled houses. Mr. Schmutz has potted a lot of the hardy Yucca filamentosa and there seems practical wisdom in his suggestion of the usefulness of these symmetrical plants for window and hall decoration, their immunity from injury by frost giving them a distinct value as compared with dracenas.

Visitors to Dailedonze Brothers' at convention time found the carnations all housed and everything already in order for the winter campaign at this noted place. With the exception of The Marquis and Lawson, all varieties look well contented after their first month's sojourn under glass. In the case of the two varieties specified the benches disclose numerous vacant spots where the plants have died out, The Marquis suffering particularly in this respect. In an adjoining bed in the same house is seen The Marquis' rival, seedling No. 3, which captured the cup at Buffalo, looking very much at home.

Notwithstanding the disadvantages of the very dry summer, carnations have, as a rule, made an excellent growth. Beyond criticism in any point are the plants of Genevieve Lord, which are already giving a few fairly good flowers, this being one of the earliest bloomers among the novelties. Cerise Queen, always a difficult subject, shows considerable improvement over last year; Mrs. James Dean is also better than ever before and G. H. Crane immeasurably so. White Cloud, while less rank in growth than was the case last season, seems firmer and decidedly better in all respects. Of this variety Dailedouze Brothers are growing less this year than heretofore, and more of Flora Hill, their experience being that the latter is the greater favorite with the buyers and that it is also a decidedly better keeper and shipper. Plants of Flora Hill are only moderate in size this season. This and Scott are the only varieties furnishing good flowers in any quantity as yet. Lawson has not begun to throw up any stalks yet, the buds produced so far being almost stemless. Gomez and Maceo, the two new crimsons, are looking healthy. The former is throwing a good many flowers already but they are thin and really good blooms are not expected for some time. J. Whitcomb Riley, Eldorado and Bradt are all in promising condition. Nothing finer than Ethel Crocker can be imagined. In uniformity of size, in vigor and luxuriance it appears at this stage the ideal commercial carnation and is undoubtedly here to stay. Remarkably vigorous, also, is the famous 666, which is to be disseminated next March.

Chrysanthemums here are fully up to their past reputation. The abundance of asters of fine quality in the market at present removes all inducement in the direction of very early chrysanthemums, which could not be made to pay under existing conditions, so nothing earlier than Montmort is planted here, blooms of which will not be ready until the last of September. Lilies are unusually even and look remarkably promising this year. They will be in excellent shape by the time the chrysanthemums have moved out and left room for them in the houses.

Mrs. P. B. Meissner has erected four new houses this season. Under Mr. Woerner's care the stock in houses and frames is in perfect condition and he shows it with commendable pride. Two houses of Adiantum Farleyense are a tempting sight. There is one house of home-grown kentias with which imported stock cannot compare and a house of cyclamens of highest quality. Boston ferns, araucarias, ficuses, ericas, pandanus, oranges and cattleyas are all specialties here and there is, also, a fine lot of azaleas held over from last season, when their buds were lost in the early freeze, which now appear to good advantage.

Oranges were never better than they are at Zeller's this year. In foliage and fruit they are just about perfect but there are not so many very large plants as there were last year. The fruit is now coloring up fast. Handsome ardisias and a big lot of primroses that will be just right for Christmas are among the temptations soon to be set before the distinguished buyers from across the river who know where to look for choice stock of this kind.

CROTONS EXHIBITED AT BOSTON BY WM. DONALD.

Exhibition Crotons.

The plants shown in the illustration are a part of the exhibit of twenty-five varieties which won for Wm. Donald first prize in a keen competition at the recent annual exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at Boston. Mr. Donald gives us the following notes on his method of culture:

For the production of exhibition crotons limited to 6 inch pots much depends on the selection of varieties. Those with long, drooping leaves are the more suitable. The form of the plant when finished ought to resemble something like a fountain spray. Many good varieties, such as Queen Victoria or Mortii, although well suited for large specimens, lack that charming gracefulness so apparent in such varieties as Warrenii or Johannis.

In order to bring out their coloring in all its brilliancy they have to be placed close to the glass. By the middle of August their training ought to be completed so that they will stand without shading and take all the heat which it is possible to give them without setting them afire. I have tried many sorts of fertilizers and have had to go back to the old reliable Clay's.

A Chat With Craig.

Robert Craig seems to share with Louis Schmutz the secret of making "natural branched" rubber trees. W. K. Harris, who first gave this acceptable form to the horticultural trade, has apparently been quite outclassed by these later comers. "William can't get but twenty in a hundred," says Craig, "we get 'em all."

Cyclamens look well under a protection of slats. They have been there all summer and Mr. Craig says he finds that they like it, ripen up better and are more easily managed than under glass. With this method the grower gets a bigger lot of flowers at once, just when wanted, at the holidays. He waters them with the hose.

Azaleas are luxuriating in the open sun. These are a lot that had their flower buds injured last year and had to be kept over. No imported plants could look better and few look as well. They are allowed to break into a slightly irregular outline in the belief that the American public will prefer them in this form to the conventional close cropped, flat-headed Belgian style. They are plunged and covered with a mulch of old cow manure two inches in depth, and the only care they get is abundant watering to keep the spider down.

Mr. Craig says Lonsdale's evaporating pan is the best thing for the purpose ever invented. He styles it a positive insect eradicator and would not think of dispensing with it in any of his houses.

Quantities of cycas stems are planted here and Mr. Craig makes it a point to ensure good roots before allowing them to grow much at the top. This is secured by plunging them in manure, thus getting a good bottom heat while the heads are kept cool. Grown otherwise they are apt to wilt.

Amaranthus Sunshine, sent out recently by Benary, is making a grand blaze of color in the garden beds at Mr. Craig's. The effect closely resembles that of numerous poinsettia heads, the color tending somewhat more to orange, however. The plants are raised easily from seed.

Mr. Craig believes in giving Begonia Gloire de Lorraine plenty of sun and continuously. He uses a movable slat shading during the fierce heat of the mid-day sun, but that is all, and his plants give substantial evidence of the value of this treatment in their chunky, robust appearance. He finds Lonsdale's Pale Pink Lorraine an indispensable variety and much in demand by the retailers, who consider it a better keeper in the store than the common variety. A lot of pans containing four or five plants each are being prepared with a view to special adaptability to dinner table adornment. Mr. Craig sees a promising future for Rex Begonia Lady Annesley. This is a new variety with fine silvery foliage, the leaves handsomely modeled and the habit of the plant being exceedingly neat and graceful.

A house of crotons in extensive variety is one of the most interesting sights at Mr. Craig's. To this establishment mainly belongs the credit of showing the grand possibilities of the croton as a summer bedding plant. Louis Schmutz's pet Peruvian pepper plant is seen here in all its odd and striking range of fruit coloring, green, white, yellow, orange, purple and scarlet, all on one plant. They are raised from seed.

CARNATIONS.

EARLY FEEDING AND ROOT DEVELOPMENT.

When to commence feeding carnations is a question often asked and, like most other questions relative to carnation culture, it can only be answered by saying that it depends largely on the condition of the soil. With ninety-nine out of every 100 growers the soil into which the carnations are planted is rich enough to carry them for at least three months in good, healthy, growing condition. Even at the end of three months of indoor growth it requires the use of the grower's best judgment to know how much stimulant to give them or whether they rather suffer by this method of treatment. Excepting in some very sandy soils, when the plants are lifted they lose a large percentage of their fine feeding roots and the growers' first object should be to replace these roots and add to their number because naturally the carnation is a water loving plant and divested of all these roots it is not capable of taking up all the moisture necessary to the health of the top of the plant. Over-feeding retards the development of these roots and is therefore especially to be avoided at this time of the plants' growth. When the plants have filled the soil with these little feeding roots then, and then only, should the forcing process begin.

Watering is, in a measure, feeding and in order to encourage the development of roots it requires considerable study. A carnation plant should never be allowed to suffer for want of water, but at the same time the soil should not be so continually filled with water that there is no necessity for the plant to push out new roots in order to supply its wants. When watering do it thoroughly, so that the plant has an abundance and can fill its cells to their utmost capacity; then do not water again until the soil becomes comparatively dry, not actually dry, by any means, as at this stage of their growth this is especially to be avoided. As the soil loses its bulk of water the plant in order to keep up its supply will up and not lying on the ground, and have them free from all insects. There is no better time than right now to get rid of all insects by a thorough fumigation with tobacco stems twice a week. If this is done now, before the flowers come, you can have the plants so clean that the cleanlier but less effective methods will keep them clean for the balance of the season.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Begonia E. G. Hill.

This variety, which originated at Worcester, Mass., is a seedling from B. Duchartrei and was probably fertilized with the pollen of B. sanguinea, as the two plants stood side by side when in full bloom, but this is only a supposition. In its drooping character, and with leaves on the peduncles, it resembles B. Duchartrei and in the color of its leaves and flowers those of B. sanguinea. The comparative size of the flowers of these three varieties are: B. Duchartrei, two and one-half inches across; B. E. G. Hill, one and one-half inches; B. sanguinea five-eighth inches. It is a good grower and an excellent kind for hanging baskets. The plant illustrated is the original seedling and when photographed was three feet across.

JOHN COULSON.

Sweet Peas in Pots.

The plants shown in pots at the sweet pea conference in late July were a sorry looking lot after their return from the Crystal Palace. However, they were cut back and given a little manure, and within a month were well in flower again. Many of the plants are flowering for the third time, those which were exhibited at the Royal Horticultural Society's meeting on June 19. This will give some idea of what may be done with sweet peas in pots. We find that after being used for exhibition all the buds drop and it is better to cut the plants back at once; they soon branch out and in less than three weeks many of them will be in flower again. It is important to look carefully after watering, for the roots soon suffer if they get very dry, and an excess of moisture is equally damaging.

Plants for early flowering may be kept under glass, but I find they do better grown in the open, where they are well exposed to the sun. The pots may be plunged into the ground but should not be left long enough for the roots to get through into the ground. A twist around occasionally will prevent this. The sorts that do not stand the sun well may be taken under glass or put in the shade for a day or two before they are required for use and this will ensure flowers of a brighter hue. I may mention that the week after the show the collection growing in the open ground seemed hopelessly dried up and had scarcely a good flower on them. The rain which came a few days later revived them, and those which had all the seed taken off made quite a fresh start and are now quite gay with bloom again. There are not so many flowers on a stem, but the individual flowers are equally good and the colors appear even brighter than the earlier ones.

BEGONIA E. G. HILL.

they had better be left without any for a while longer.

If the plants were housed in the early part of August, the three months' rule would bring the extra feeding into use early in November. If planted the early part of September it would throw the extra feeding into early December. Carnations are not such rank feeders that they must be fed from the day they are put into the houses. On the contrary, throw out little rootlets in order to increase its power of absorption and, if this increase is carefully nurtured by the study of their water requirements, by the end of three months the soil will be full of roots ready and eager to carry food to the tops of the plants.

At the same time it is well to see to it that the tops of the plants are in condition to do their share toward the formation of these roots. Have them staked

SHOW ROOM AT ED. JANSEN'S, NEW YORK, DURING THE S. A. F. CONVENTION.

Pansy Culture in the Northern States.

The proper time to sow pansy seed is in the first two weeks of August. To be successful with them, the seed should be sown rather thinly in rows five inches apart. A frame well prepared for the purpose is the best place and shaded sash for covering is the most convenient. Plenty of air and water will soon bring them up, after which the sash should be removed to prevent drawing.

In the meantime frames should be gotten in readiness for transplanting. A good, rich soil is the best for them, with a little sand, to keep the ground loose, and a little well-rotted cow manure will not hurt. The frames should be well drained so that no water can stand in them. The walks should be a foot lower than the soil in the frames and, where one has cinders left over, it is a good plan to fill up the walks with them; they make a nice walk and are excellent for drainage.

After the plants have made their second pair of leaves and the weather is cool enough, they should be transplanted four inches apart each way. This may seem little room, but it is plenty, for they will make splendid plants for May sales. During the transplanting, if it is hot, they should be covered until they have taken root nicely; then remove the sash and keep watered as long as is necessary, although the fall rains are usually enough.

There is really no proper time set for covering them for the winter, because it all depends on the weather. Sometimes they grow until the middle of December and as long as they are growing the larger and stronger they will be to stand the hard winter. It is sometimes necessary to cover with shaded sash before covering them for good, as the continual thawing and freezing will lift them; but after the ground is frozen solid and the winter sets in thoroughly, then is the time to cover them.

I find good, dry hauled straw as nice as anything, with the chaff shaken out, so it will not pack too tightly around the plants, for in the spring when the ground starts to thaw it is more apt to rot them than the clear straw, and then it is easier to shake it out of the straw than to pick it out of the frame. About six inches of the straw scattered rather loosely in the frame ought to be enough, with shaded sash placed over them, to keep out the snow and rains. The main thing is to keep them dry, and after covering them in this way, there is nothing more to do.

Keep them dark, so that the ground will not thaw out, and keep the sash down tight all the time until there is a sign of a general thaw, which does not usually occur until about the last of March. Then, if the ground is thawed out naturally, the straw can be taken out and the sash left on until the little plants get accustomed to the light and begin to grow. Then, some cloudy day, the sash can be removed entirely; but if the nights are still freezing they had better be covered.

After the weather has become mild and the plants begin to grow, keep them rather dry or they will get too large. Some of our plants last May had from twenty to thirty blooms on them and were really too large. JOHN ROGERS.

Show Room at Jansen's.

Our illustration gives a view of the show room at Ed. Jansen's new basket warehouse in New York city, decorated in honor of the visit of the S. A. F. On Wednesday afternoon, the second day of the convention, Mr. and Mrs. Jansen entertained the visitors in the most delightful manner. Music and refreshments were a part of the programme and the affair being purely social and complimentary, no goods were sold or orders taken.

CUT FLOWER MARKET TAKES A BRACE BUT MONEY IS TIGHT—GROWERS WORRYING OVER COAL SUPPLY.—THE SALE AT DREYER'S.—STEM ROT OF CARNATIONS.—SEEN AT DORVAL'S.—VARIOUS NOTES.

With the shortening up of cut flower crops consequent upon the advance of the season and cooler weather, values have advanced materially and the receipts are marketed to better advantage than has been the case for many weeks. Wholesalers are correspondingly elated and growers are also feeling much better. First quality American Beauty roses are in demand. Even asters bring the dollars out of buyers' pockets as they have not done before this season. The principal complaint heard in the wholesale section is as to the difficulty in collecting accounts, money being apparently very scarce with florists at present. The bugaboo of the growers in the prospect of a coal famine and sky scraping prices. Very many of the growers hereabouts are unfortunate enough not to have laid in a single pound of coal yet and it is natural that they should be much disturbed at the prospects as affected by the big strike.

The sale at Dreyer's Woodside establishment was well attended and Auctioneer Cleary had the satisfaction of turning over a good quantity of useful plants at fair prices. Mr. Dreyer is very well pleased with his experiments in growing palms from seed and predicts the early demise of the palm importing business as soon as growers realize how much better plants can be grown at home. Livistona Chinensis, of which he has a good stock now, bids fair to supplant Latania Borbonica as a house palm. These two names are given as synonyms by various authorities but the form here referred to as Livistona Chinensis is quite distinct from the common form of Latania Borbonica. The foliage is darker colored and more leathery in texture and the plants more compact and stocky than in the old sort. Cycads, Japanese fern balls and araucarias are still outside, protected from the full sun and wind by a framework of laths.

Adjacent to Mr. Dreyer's place is Victor Dorval, whose establishment is devoted exclusively to the production of flowers. A sheet of white seen from a long distance is a plantation of tuberose, the value of which in the market to-day is not at all to Mr. Dorval's liking. A number of houses are filled with chrysanthemums and the sheds are piled high with cases of forcing bulbs to follow the chrysanthemums as soon as cut.

Chas. Lenker, who is a prosperous carnation grower at Freeport, insists that stem rot in carnations is due entirely to mismanagement and abuse of the plants when in the cutting stage. The absence of any trace of this prevalent trouble in his houses furnishes him with a potent argument in support of his views. He has 18,000 plants and they are exceptionally fine, Ethel Crocker being perhaps the finest of all. Lady Emma is still a favorite here and at the top of the list as a money maker, in Mr. Lenker's experience.

Lewis Collins, secretary of the Tree Planting and Fountain Society of Brooklyn, has issued a statement to the public to the effect that the San Jose scale has been found in over 200 gardens in Brooklyn alone and urging the dissemination of facts relative to the danger from this most destructive of all garden pests and the means of successfully holding it in check.

TRADE SHOWS NO SIGNS OF AWAKENING FROM THE SUMMER SOLSTICE.—DECIDED CHANGE IN WEATHER FAILS TO AFFECT THE FLOWER TRADE.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—GOOD SATURDAY SHOW AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—VARIOUS NOTES OF PERSONAL AND OTHER DOINGS.

There was a splendid exhibition at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, September 15. Hardy asters were glorious, a number of exhibitors contributing. Another superb collection of hardy herbaceous flowers was shown by the Blue Hill Nursery, to which exhibitor every first prize for garden perennials has been awarded this season. They report a large advance demand for fall delivery from customers who have followed up the exhibitions. Carl Blomberg had an interesting collection of native flowers. Rea Brothers staged 150 vases of garden phloxes and very large displays of dahlias were made by W. G. Winsor and H. F. Burt. The fruits and vegetables shown were unusually good.

Heavy rains and chilly winds have superseded the scorching dry weather which was the cause of so much grumbling. The beach resorts are deserted, swamp maples are already dressed in scarlet and straw hats have been called in for the season, but, up to date, the flower trade hasn't budged from its summer doze. All are eagerly watching for premonitions of the revival which is now overdue, and various are the reasons advanced for the unwelcome delay. The impression seems well rooted, generally, that very little in the way of business activity may be expected until after election and that patience will be a good plant to cultivate for the next six weeks. There is a great abundance of roses of varied quality. Funeral work helps out on the white ones somewhat, but the other colors go very hard. Carnations are improving, especially Scott, for which no successful rival as an early fall bloomer yet appears. Asters are still with us, tuberose are entering on their innings and there are plenty of Japan lilies. Dahlias, which hold so prominent a place in the exhibitions, are conspicuously absent from the florists' stock.

The foundations of the new horticultural hall are being rapidly completed and the noble building will soon begin to rise. There are anticipations of unprecedented triumphs in the line of exhibitions when the hall shall have been completed, and already talk is in the air of another S. A. F. convention at Boston; and New York can guess what that means.

Benjamin Dorrance, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., illumined Boston with his presence for a few hours on September 14, on his way home from the Quebec hunting grounds. A big bull moose fell a victim to his prowess in the woods. Nobody can blame the moose, after once hearing the distinguished president of the rose society do the decoy call.

The annual sale of choice of stalls at the Co-operative Growers' Association was held on Saturday, September 15. Auctioneer Carroll wielded the hammer. The prices paid were, on the average, higher than last year and the amount realized was considerably larger than ever before. A large crowd was in attendance.

We had a call the other day from A. W. McIntosh, formerly of Baltimore, now of Portland, Me. Can't see that five years' sojourn in the peculiar atmosphere of Maine has made any difference in him, and he appears the same "Mac" as when his friend Pentland used to have an occasional "go" at him in Dixie Land.

Jackson Dawson and J. J. Cunningham have gone to the Maine woods on a hunting expedition—not with guns, but with spades and seed bags—and the contents of their hampers when they return is likely to show that there is something else to be found in Maine besides moose heads, trout and doughnuts.

N. F. McCarthy & Co. had a splendid lot of palms at this week's auction sales and those who were fortunate enough to be on hand to bid got some good bargains. Every Tuesday and Friday till the end of October the red flag will be out at 84 Hawley street.

A. Leuthy arrived home from Paris and elsewhere on Wednesday last, per steamer Kensington. He admits having had a good time and he looks it. They're solid men, these plant growers.

P. Welch has returned from his Old Orchard breathing spell and is shaking hands with growers and retailers alternately.

Geo. A. Sutherland has laid away his yachting cap and things will soon begin to hum in Bromfield street.

COOLER WEATHER FAILS TO ENLIVEN THE CUT FLOWER MARKET.—SEPTEMBER MEETING OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—MATTERS OF MUCH INTEREST.—HERE AND THERE AMONG THE TRADE.

The echo of the cannon, together with a cool wave, reached us from some far off place last Monday and the straw hat man and the gentleman of the shirt waist are seen no more for this season. New sun-browned faces appear upon the streets every day and the shatters are coming down and giving life to the houses of the residence districts. Business, however, has shown little improvement over last week. Prices are about the same, although the quality of the stock is improving; $3 to $4 per hundred is asked for teas, while Beauties are in fair demand at from 75 cents to $2 per dozen. They must be double extras to command the latter figure, however, the $1 size being the most popular. Carnations are becoming more shapely; 75 cents to $1 is the price.

The monthly meetings of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society are becoming of more importance each year. The private gardeners of the large estates about the city are becoming interested in a way that is bound to add prestige to the society. They not only attend the sessions regularly, but they bring anything interesting that they happen to have in flower along with them. These one night shows are very interesting to the lover of plants and, if the displays are kept up, will be of great benefit in building up the membership. The September meeting, held last Tuesday evening, was well attended and the exhibits were very creditable. L. H. Peacock's dahlias were a show of themselves. Although the season has been very unfavorable to their growth, no one would have thought so by the appearance of the very large collection of perfect flowers staged by Mr. Peacock, and for which he was awarded the silver medal of the society. His paper on dahlias was timely, and will, no doubt, make many friends for the flower. His method of culture, given in answer to a question, is as follows: A trench six inches deep is ploughed out and the plants set out in the bottom and covered at first with two inches of soil, the balance being gradually filled in as the plants grow. They are pinched back frequently and kept as dwarf as possible. With this method Mr. Peacock's acres of dahlias are in continual flower during August and September. There were several large collections of herbaceous flowers, also some asters and several entries of orchids. Several tables of vegetables showing great perfection were also to be seen. The cream of the bulbs for outside planting was given in a paper by Mr. Parsons, in charge of this department at H. A. Dreer's. It was a very complete list.

Mr. Lonsdale has named his Lorraine sport the Light Pink Lorraine and has prepared a nice batch of young plants, part of which he is offering to the trade in 2½ inch pots. It is a sterling improvement on a grand plant for winter decoration, which will ensure its wide dissemination. In addition to its improved color and habit one of its strong features is its lasting qualities; in this it greatly excels its prototype and will displace it largely as soon as that fact becomes generally known.

"This talk of a presidential year being bad for business is all rot," says Harry Bayersdorfer. "We never were busier than now for the time of year. We have all the force on until 10 o'clock every night, and even then can hardly get our orders out as we would like to."

A number of the craft from New York have been in town the past week looking over the large palm stocks, and as a consequence some car-load lots have been shipped to the metropolis. Julius Roehrs and President O'Mara were among the number, also Mr. Thorley's buyer and M. B. Bunker, of Boston. K.

STATE OF TRADE AND THE MARKET.—LOCAL BUSINESS LIGHT BUT SHIPPING INCREASES.—LITTLE REALLY GOOD STOCK AND MANY VERY CHEAP SALES.—WHOLESALE RETURNS FROM THE EAST.—GROWERS TO TRY SMOKE BURNER.—CHRYSANTHEMUM AND VIOLET PROSPECTS.—VARIOUS ITEMS, PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

In so far as city trade goes there are few signs of awakening life in the local wholesale markets. Shipping trade is showing a considerable revival but it isn't enough to strengthen the market to any great degree in the face of the fact that nine tenths of the receipts are not acceptable to the out of town buyers. It is a matter of considerable difficulty to give satisfactory service to those who require first-class stock these days, for very few, either roses or carnations come within that description, although the qualities of each are showing steady if not rapid improvement. The fakirs, who have been dealing in peaches for the past month, are again on the street but they insist on paying almost nothing at all, comparatively, for the baskets of low grade stuff which they handle. The storm of this week has injured outdoor material and gives the man who is exclusively an indoor grower a few days of brighter prospects. Just at present white carnations are hanging badly. If there is no demand for funeral purposes this stock always accumulates, for the street salesmen will not touch them unless they can have a fair proportion of bright colors to mix in.

E. E. Pieser is at home from a two months' trip through the east, during which he visited most of the floricultural establishments of note and studied the various phases of the wholesale handling of cut flowers, something of perennial interest to the Kennicott Bros. Co. While he saw and learned very many things worth the trip, Mr. Pieser says that what most impressed him was the activity of the demand for decorative plants and the grace with which Robert Craig hooks orders for this class of material.

Bassett & Washburn are installing another new and money saving invention in their boiler room, a smoke consumer, what is known as the under feed stoker. This process necessitates the use of low grade coals and effects several other economies but the installation requires quite an investment, the equipment of their eleven boilers costing something like $7,000. At present only two boilers are being fitted with this stoker, pending a test, which will be followed by the equipment of the rest of them if everything proves as satisfactory as the results are elsewhere.

Chrysanthemums will be coming along steadily pretty soon now. E. G. Hill, who was in town a few days ago, says that he will begin cutting before the end of September. He reports his stock exceptionally good this year. One commission man has booked an order for 200 extra blooms for shipment about ten days hence and his source of supply assures him that the flowers will be ready.

C. M. Dickinson is breathing easier now that he has E. H. Hunt's new fall catalogue in the mails. They have put a great deal of time and money on this year's book, illustrating it largely with original halftones. It is on good paper and is a very creditable piece of printing.

D. F. Hawkes, of Wheaton, who has a reputation of being first in the market with violets, has been shipping fair flowers to A. L. Randall for a couple of weeks; they have sold at sight at from 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred.

C. S. Stewart will sell Adolph Poehlmann's product down town but their location has not yet been selected. As Mr. Poehlmann is starting in with about 50,000 feet of glass he will require all the facilities.

There was a slight touch of frost in some sections of the city one night this week, but not enough to cut down anything. The inroads upon the coal piles have, however, begun with the careful growers.

The first meeting of the Florists' Club after the summer vacation was held at Handel Hall last evening. The special business was the discussion of the season's programme.

E. C. Amling has been journeying about the neighborhood, looking in upon the growers, and says that he thinks this market will have better stock and more of it than ever this season.

A. L. Randall is at home from St. Joe, Michigan, where he spent the summer, feeling fine and as brown as any of his growers.

At Wittbolds' Clark street store they report retail trade as showing evidence of the awakening of the season.

J. B. Deamud is now receiving some very fine wild smilax from Caldwell the Woodsman Co.

Walter Retzer has been spending the week in St. Louis, his old stamping ground.

W. W. Barnard & Co. report fall trade picking up in a very satisfactory manner. Visitors: E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; B. Simanton, Falls City, Neb.

MARKET SHOWS NO IMPROVEMENT.—DECORATIVE MATERIAL IN DEMAND FOR DEPARTMENT STORES.—NOTES.

Trade this week shows no change from last report, unless it be not so good. It has been a big week for the rental of decorative plants, but there has not been so much funeral work. The weather took a sudden change to cold last Saturday and at this writing we are in the midst of the usual equinoctial storms. From now on we should give reports of busier times, as the Exposition opened on Monday and the town will have a large number of visitors for the next six weeks, which, together with the return of residents to their homes from various summer resorts, will influence trade for the better. Roses are getting longer stems, but are not yet full size. The only asters that are really fine are those from Michigan. Single tuberose are in fair demand but only an occasional lot of doubles is called for. The latter are gradually losing favor. Carnations, those that are really good, we regret to say, are not homegrown. Department store fall openings made good orders for Michel, Chas. Beyer and others.

Geo. Waldbart moved into his new quarters Monday. Although the place is yet to be completed in a few details Mr. Waldbart is to be congratulated for both its outside appearance, inside completeness and richness in finish.

Mrs. Ayers has not yet returned from the east. She sent on a nice lot of ferns and other house plants last week, purchased in Philadelphia.

Visitors this week are Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Walter Mott, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia. F. W. MAAS.

STATE OF TRADE.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—A PERIOD OF ACTIVITY IN SIGHT.—RACKHAM'S AMBITION.—BUILDING NOTES.

The excessive heat of the past three weeks has brought out an over abundance of roses, the best of them finding rather slow sale. Beauties are most sought for but the supply is very meagre. A few growers are fortunate in having some very fine asters, which find ready sale. Trade is beginning to improve slowly.

The rain of Wednesday evening prevented a large attendance at our club meeting. A. M. York, of Hancock Mich., who was present, gave a very interesting account of greenhouse operations in that snow bound country, where he says severe winter lasts from early in November until the first of May. B. Eschner, of Philadelphia, who is returning from an extended business trip through several of the central and western states, was also present and reported a condition of general prosperity in the trade. President Rackham is determined to make the coming season one of great activity in club matters. At the next meeting there will be a debate upon the theory that it is better for florists to grow finer flowers and fewer of them than a greater quantity of only fair quality. The affirmative is assigned to Robert Flowerday and E. A. Scribner and the negative to Robert Watson and J. F. Sullivan. There seems to be no limit to the energy and ambition of Mr. Rackham; he is now an aspirant for aldermanic honors from the seventeenth ward and the chances of his success are very bright.

The genial Charles B. Weathered, of New York, is again with us and is dividing his time between Orion Lake and Grosse Pointe. At the latter place his firm is building a palm house 30x50 and a stove house 30x22 for Mrs. John S. Newberry.

Lord & Burnham secured the contract for building a service house and three greenhouses on Belle Isle Park, to be completed by February 1 next.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

KILLING frosts are to be anticipated in many sections within the month.

LABOR troubles promise to prevent any reduction in the price of glass for next season.

WESTERN growers are going into Christmas flowering plants more extensively than usual.

THE drought in many sections where dahlias are grown extensively has resulted in a most disheartening lack of bloom.

THE pink carnation is President Mc-Kinley's favorite flower and has been adopted as an emblem of party fealty for the campaign.

PROF. B. T. GALLOWAY has been appointed superintendent of the grounds and gardens of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., the position occupied by the late William Saunders.

THE labor difficulties in the anthracite coal fields are having a tendency to cause increased demands for high grade bituminous coals and a consequent advance all along the line. Greenhouse men who have strong contracts in force seem to be fortunate.

THE supreme court of Rhode Island has ruled that flowers are a legitimate item of funeral expense. It was so decided in the case of a florist who sued the administrators of an estate, they having refused to pay a reasonable charge for flowers furnished for the obsequies of the deceased.

A MOST beautiful and effective demonstration of the value of the geranium as a bedding plant is seen this season in the garland shaped beds that border the slopes of the celebrated sunken parterre at Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. White is the color used, with just a sprinkling of red. The vista as seen from one end of the garden is very striking. A bed of Acalypha Sanderi near by is another very showy feature and sets off conclusively the usefulness of this plant in summer garden work.

Notice to Plant Introducers.

All firms having offered for sale for the first time in this country any species or variety of plants or ornamental trees or shrubs are requested to send notification, giving origin and brief description, to be included in the list of plant introductions in America for the year 1900, which is to be published in the annual proceedings of the S. A. F. Please forward immediately. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Hardiness of Pink Pearl.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Will the new Wichuraiana rose, Pink Pearl, recently illustrated in your journal live in the rigorous climate of northern Vermont?

M. B. B.

I beg to state that the new hybrid Wichuraiana rose, Pink Pearl, would be hardy in any part of Vermont. This rose has had a trial of six years and has proven to be one of the hardiest roses in cultivation. One-year-old pot plants which were left standing on a bleak hill without any protection to the pots, stood 10° below zero without any protection, as stated before. Of course the frost broke the pots to pieces but it did not injure the plants. It is not only one of the hardiest roses but has most beautiful foliage and flowers.

SEVEN OF THOSE IN THE TRADE REPORTED
AMONG THE LOST.—GREENHOUSE ESTAB-LISHMENTS ARE WRECKED.—THANKS THAT OTHER LIVES ARE SAVED.

The whole world knows the awful calamity which has befallen Galveston.
Everyone knows that in a night, the night of September 8, our fair city was overcome by wind and sea; that the loss of life and property is greater than in any catastrophe in the history of America; that the dead are unnumbered and that the loss in money cannot be estimated within the millions of dollars. I will not attempt to narrate any of the heart-sickening details.

Several of those in the trade are numbered among the drowned. Their places were in that part of the city which was entirely swept away. So far as known, after the publication of to-day's official list of deaths, the dead among those of our trade are:

THOMAS KEATS AND MRS. KEATS.

THOMAS KEMP AND MRS. KEMP.

MR. STEDING, WIFE AND CHILD.

The Keats family were retailers at Thirty-eighth street and Avenue T.
Thomas Kemp owned a small range of glass in the same vicinity. The identity of the Mr. Steding, who was lost with his entire family, is not yet known. There are three men of that name in the trade here, Charles Steding, who had a small range of glass on Avenue L, near Twelfth street, and Steding Brothers, who were in the nursery business.

As for the rest of us, our places are wrecked but we are thankful to have escaped the loss of those who are dearest to us.

OTTO FEHRLIN.

MEETING OF THE NEWLY FORMED FLO-RISTS' CLUB—A DISPLAY FROM CITY GREENHOUSES.

A fine exhibition of flowers now in session formed a special feature at the September meeting of the Denver Florists' club. The display was made by E. W.
Davis and the flowers were from the City Park greenhouses. The club decided to hold a special meeting in two weeks to outline plans for the flower show which will be held here this fall. The committee having this work in charge announced that satisfactory progress is being made.
It was also decided to organize a bowling club among the florists to contest for the bowling prizes at the Buffalo convention next year and a meeting for that purpose was held at the offices of the Park Floral Company in the afternoon.

E. W. Davis was requested to re-read his paper on the interests of the florists of Colorado at another meeting.

Mrs. R. Mauff is building a range of houses on Logan avenue, consisting of six houses 25x65 feet. She is also building an office and salesroom 36x39 feet of brick. When completed, with her Harman street place, she will have about 50,000 square feet of glass. The Logan avenue place will be used for retailing and there she will grow pot plants, palms, ferns and bulbous stock.

Helpful Reminders.

This is the time of the year at which we should bear in mind that damaged stock is more profitably thrown out than kept. You are wasting the opportunity of a year by starting the winter with damaged stock in your houses, for the daily expense is as great as if the stock were perfection. Moreover, the amount of good stock damaged in early autumn each year to save a small amount of fuel is enough to endow a home for old florists.

Nature's arrangement of temperature and light is for the purpose of putting all vegetation in a dormant condition, setting buds for spring growth and storing material for the winter support. Therefore all stock which is to do service next spring can be allowed to co-operate with nature, such as flowering shrubbery, cannas, gladioli, hydrangeas, fuchsias, Rambler and hybrid perpetual roses, oleanders, laurels, etc.; also bulbous stock, which simply develops roots now, will not suffer from a chilly night, a cold wind with a few hours' hot sun and a cold rain. Such weather is absolutely necessary for a large percentage of stock, but there is a distinct class of indispensable stock that should be watched most carefully just now.

Do not wait until there is danger of killing plants outright, but beware of the little chills, burns or bruises that make a pleasure ground for mildew, fungus diseases and flavor the sap to suit the palates of various insects. I refer to such stock as roses, begonias, euphorbias, jasmine, tropical ferns, palms, stevia, carnations, etc. They must keep growing; every leaf that is allowed to form should develop perfectly, and it is just now, when nature's customs and our artificial treatment begin to diverge that our greatest damage is done. One ton of coal judiciously burned in September will frequently do more good than ten tons in January.

There are hardly three nights in succession in early autumn when a fire is not necessary for the proper care of winter blooming stock. A shrewd manager knows when to throw out stock and leave a house empty for awhile, thereby cutting down expense until good stock is ready. Do not crowd your houses with a lot of indifferent material; quantity cuts no figure, it is quality that counts. Your houses will probably cost you 30 cents a square foot of bench room to maintain from now to June 1. See that every plant that is given room is reasonably certain of yielding that much before you accept it. C. B. W.

TRADE BRISK FOR THE SEASON.—CLUB ELECTION.—STATE FAIR PRIZE WINNERS.—A WEDDING AND VARIOUS NOTES.

A sudden change of temperature has made stock very scarce. The mercury dropped as low as 38° one night, followed by cold, disagreeable rain which necessitated starting the boilers. Business has been good, considering the time of year, and the outlook is very bright for a good fall and winter trade.

September 13 the Nebraska and Iowa Florists' Association held its annual election of officers. The meeting was well attended and all of the old officers were unanimously re-elected as follows: President, J. J. Hess; vice-president, S. Faulkner; secretary, L. Henderson; treasurer, S. B. Stewart.

September 4 to 7 the Nebraska State Fair was held at Lincoln, where the florists made a magnificent show in the horticultural building. P. Floth, of Omaha, took sweepstakes on the best grown greenhouse plants in pots; Chapin Bros., of Lincoln, second; L. Henderson, of Omaha, third. Hess & Swoboda, of Omaha, were first on best floral design; Chapin Bros., second; Keller, third; Henderson, fourth.

C. S. Stewart, brother of S. B. Stewart, of Omaha, was recently married to Miss N. Saline, a popular young lady of this city and a daughter of one of Omaha's pioneers. Our best wishes go to Chicago with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox are back from their convention trip. Mr. Valentine, of Denver, called on us on his way home and spoke highly of the great work in New York. GRIPPE.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—The work of razing the greenhouses formerly occupied by the West End Floral Co., Fairfield and Clinton avenues, is under way. The property will be cut up into building lots.

SOUTH MANCHESTER, CONN.—The Connecticut Horticultural Society opened a very pretty flower exhibition at Cheney Hall on September 11. Dahlias from H. F. Burt and Lothrop & Higgings were very fine. Other flowers were in some cases not up to the average, the dry season having been very severe on garden blooms.

THEO J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

Down in North Carolina they say that the Greensboro peach has proven a valuable commercial variety.

J. H. HALE has 200,000 bearing peach trees on his Georgia farm and during the height of the season shipped from twelve to twenty carloads daily to northern markets.

BROWN BROS. Co. had a $2,000 fire at their packing sheds at Brighton, N. Y., on the afternoon of September 13. They were fully insured. The blaze originated in the excelsior stacked outdoors.

EXOCHORDA GRANDIFLORA is an early flowering shrub of large growth which is steadily gaining in favor. It transplants with difficulty and should be moved in autumn or very early in spring as it starts growth very early.

At the recent annual meeting of the Georgia Horticultural Society P. J. Berckmans was given a handsomely inscribed gold watch as a token of appreciation for his services as president of the society continuously since its organization twenty-five years ago.

Dunlop's Employes' Cycle Races.

The second annual bicycle races between the employes of J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, were run on September 8. The trophies were valuable articles contributed by Mr. Dunlop and others and the contests were spirited. After the races the employes and friends repaired to the home of J. Milligan to partake of refreshments and spend a social evening. The results of the races were as follows:

Three mile scratch, first, J. Mortimer; second, A. Thornton.

Ten mile handicap, first, M. Atkinson with 4½ minutes handicap; second, F. Saunders, 2 minutes; third, G. Hager, 1 minute. First time, 29:42, J. Milne, scratch. A. F.

At Denver.

The Denver Florists' Bowling Club was reorganized on September 8 for the season of 1900 and 1901. The officers elected were: President, Phil. Scott; secretary and treasurer, C. J. Thiess. We had a very large attendance and the members were very enthusiastic. Phil. Scott was not able to be with us at our initial games Tuesday, September 11, as he has gone after bigger game in the mountains. Phil. thinks that buffalo are still at large in this country and wants one to take down to the convention next year. The following is the score, which shows that some of the boys are still in trim:

ANNUAL SHOW OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—MANY GOOD EXHIBITS.—THE PRIZE WINNERS.

The annual exhibition of fruits and flowers rather exceeded the usual success achieved by the Montreal Horticultural Society. Drummond Hall was well filled, the exhibits proving rather more numerous than usual and of very high quality. In the plant and flower department W. J. Wilshire, gardener to R. B. Angus, had things very much his own way, exhibiting some very fine material and winning first premium in twenty classes. C. A. Smith, gardener for T. A. Dawes, won nine firsts and seven seconds; Geo. Trussell, gardener to Mrs. J. H. R. Malson, eight firsts and two seconds; H. W. Mayor, gardener to R. Mackay, four firsts and nine seconds, and R. W. Whiting gardener to H. S. Mussen, four firsts and one second.

In the section for fruits and vegetables the same growers were largely in evidence, but in the classes for apples R. Jack & Son won most of the first premiums, with Malcolm Smith close at their heels.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST CO.

MY TRIP FROM THE CONVENTION.

After the convention and on my homeward bound, I stopped at several places to take a look around, I visited "Harris"—for here one much can learn. He's famous for the "Rubber" and the "Boston Fern."

His new French plate glass houses gave me great concern.

In these he grows his stock of his famous Boston Fern.

He grows them short and dense, and very cool and light.

He has a Ventilator that works both day and night.

These ferns they surely show a great display of skill,

And nature grants obedience to their master's will.

His general stock's conceded to be the finest grown,

But that he's taken up the fern is not so widely known.

So to all the trade from far and near, I would tell To buy your stock from Harris; he will serve you well.

If the space would permit, I would tell the nation

All I saw at his place, and give his quotation.

JOHN SMITH.

AS Mr. John Smith is so well and favorably known the world over for veracity, therefore in justice to Mr. Smith for the philanthropic interest he has taken in imparting horticultural knowledge to the public, and for the convenience of the same, I will give quotations on a few of my specialties as follows:

ANOTHER BABY ROSE, "Snowflake"

GENUINE SNOW IN SUMMER. THE LATEST FAD IN ROSES.

Blooms very freely in 2-inch pots—plants in 6-inch pans show 50 to 100 flowers open at one time. Dainty little pink bud and very double white flowers in large clusters. Perfectly hardy and grows only about 8 inches high; fine for cutting, excellent for the garden. Every visitor falls in love with it. The high praise bestowed on it by every florist who has seen it—all of whom predict a steady demand—has induced us to introduce it for the originator.

Price for delivery December 1st, when not more than 5000 plants will be ready—send for photos: From 2-in. pots, $15 per 100, $2.50 per 12. Rooted Cuttings, $10 per 100. From 3-in. pots, $25 per 100, $4 per 12. 25 at 100 rate, by express.

Asparagus Sprengerii—Fine plants in 2 1/2-in. pots, ready for 3 1/2-in., $4 per 100, $35 per 1000. Fine plants in 3 1/2-in. pots. Plants in 5's, $20; in 6's, $30 per 100.

The New Lace Fern—Excellent Fern for cutting; fronds last 3 to 4 weeks in water, bring $1 to $2 per 12; very hardy, grows well under benches; 2 1/2-in., $5; 3 1/2-in., $8 per 100.

Edelweiss, or Snowflower—The coming fad, $1 per 12, $6 per 100.

New Buddleia Variabilis or Glory of the Butterflies—Grand hardy plant. Might be called a hardy Lilac Mignonette, spike 1 foot long, $2 per 12, $12 per 100, strong.

Lincoln.

FLORISTS MAKE GOOD SHOWINGS AT THE NEBRASKA STATE FAIR.—SOME OF THE PREMIUM WINNERS.

While Lincoln was holding the Nebraska State Fair, the florists of Omaha and Lincoln made a brilliant display of palms, ferns, cut flowers and floral designs. Hess & Swoboda, of Omaha, carried away first premium on floral design, which was a broken wheel, made of red, yellow and pink roses and auratum and rubrum lilies, which gave it a very striking effect. Chapin Bros., of Lincoln, were first on cut flowers. Their American Beauties were fine. C. B. Keller, of Lincoln, was first on floral wreath. There were many other premiums on plant stock, of which Louis Henderson, of Omaha, carried away the greater part. C. W. S.

MEETING OF THE CLUB.—DISCOURSE ON SAN JOSE SCALE.—A DAMAGING STORM.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was an interesting one. Much time was consumed relating pleasant experiences while at the S. A. F. convention and many signified their intention of booking for Buffalo. James M. Southwick, Curator of the Natural History Museum at Roger Williams Park, gave a very instructive talk on the San Jose scale, showing specimens of fruit and twigs of trees that were living examples of the ravages of this pest.

On September 12 a young cyclone with a long appendage, lasting all day and well into the night, visited us. The gale and temperature at 90° made sad havoc with herbaceous stock as well as other things in exposed situations.

Messrs. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
46 and 48 Marion Street, New York, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I am highly gratified with the results I have obtained from your Sectional Boiler which you put in for me last October. Although you would only guarantee the six sections to heat 1620 feet of 4-in. pipe, I attached it to over 1,800 feet. It did it so well that I put on about 300 feet more, making in all 2,100 feet, and I am positive that I can add more to it. It is the best I have ever seen and a great coal saver. I have to keep the fire door open all the time. I would be pleased to have anyone call and see it. Yours truly,

George Schubert

RETAIL TRADE STILL AT THE EARLY AUTUMN LEVEL.—VARIOUS NOTES.

There has been no noticeable change in retail trade for the past two weeks. Growers are commencing to cut from new stock, and roses are looking much better than at last writing. Most of the growers are housing their violets and carnations, which are in good shape considering the very dry summer.

S. H. Moore has just finished making some noticeable improvements in his store. A very handsome ice box has been put in, also new fixtures.

W. F. Joost, of East Haven, is sending some very fine Simple asters to New York daily. His violets, planted in recently, are doing very well.

Recent visitors: R. Dreyer, Woodside, L. I.; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia. G. H.

MERRILL, Wis.—Nick Grievelding is rebuilding and thoroughly modernizing his establishment.

Inventories for Florists.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—In the issue of your journal for September 15 I notice an article on the business methods of florists. It seems to me that there is no way of estimating the value of stock in a greenhouse, that is, rose and carnation plants. At the end of each season one can figure out what each variety has brought in, if careful records are kept, but at the beginning of the season no one can tell what will be the result of the winter, as much depends on the weather, because of its bearing on quantity, quality and prices. Of course this does not apply to all branches of the florist business with the same force with which it attaches to cut flower growing. A grower of palms and ferns finds his stock salable at all times and he can inventory it any day at a market value; young stock with them, I understand, is supposed to treble in value in one year's time.

With regard to finding the cost of growing per foot of bench space, it seems to me that with the cut flower grower the whole year's expense can be lumped. While it is true that coal is burned only from September to April, both inclusive, a large amount of coal is hauled in August when none is burned. But hauling is an expense to be considered. It costs some Chicago growers 40 cents a ton for hauling coal and, in one case I know of, this item amounted to a little over $600. Should this be charged to August or apportioned among the winter months? Furthermore, if we don't heat our rose and carnation houses in the winter we don't have roses and carnations in the summer.

Another item of expense in our line of business is procuring clay and soil, the bulk of which is hauled in May, June and July; to us this is an item running into the thousands of dollars. Then comes repairing, which is done in summer, and extra labor for wheeling soil and planting benches. Taking it all in all, the expenses of the summer months will more than even up for the coal burned in winter, so why not average up the cost and say that the expenses are so much a day? Then at the end of your business year look at your check book, see what your balance is in the bank, deduct five per cent of the cost of your houses for depreciation and what is left is a percentage on your investment, profit, or whatever else it may please you to call it. This is the way the matter appears to the writer.

N. J. W.

Being an "average florist" myself I do not feel qualified to answer an inquiry like that propounded by "W. R." in a recent issue, but being one of the guilty ones in making the accusation that some of us, not most of us, are lax in the matter of reckoning the cost of our product, I will speak my little piece from a carnation grower's point of view.

An inventory is the first point in question and is, in our business, rather a difficult feat and an error can easily be made on the too high or too low side, but the average florist can estimate his stock closely enough to make the error a small one.

The carnation grower can have no better time for taking an inventory than as soon as all of the houses are planted in the fall. My own idea as to the value to be placed on the stock is to inventory the carnation plants at their market value as field grown plants. Tools and machinery should be valued according to the wear and tear they may have had. The average life of the houses will range from fifteen to twenty years and allowing full value for the glass in the roof they should be inventoried each year at from one-fifteenth to one-twentieth less than their original cost of construction.

I allow full value for the glass as the roof is usually kept in good repair and the glass part of it is always worth pretty nearly its original cost. For piping, boilers and sheds a deduction will have to be made in proportion to the quality of material used at the start. In some cases as little as one-fortieth would cover the depreciation in value, while in others it would have to be as much as one-tenth. Some of the modern houses would naturally be supposed to outlast the ordinary structure at least two to one and should be inventoried accordingly.

In conjunction with a fairly accurate inventory a careful account of all expense must be kept, keeping personal expenses and business expenses entirely separate. Keep your account of returns as much in detail as possible, crediting up the money received from both flowers and cuttings from each variety. It is only by following up this method that you can even approximately tell which varieties are paying a profit and which are entailing a loss, as sometimes the difference is so slight as not to be noticeable excepting by accurate accounts.

Against this account of results must be charged coal, labor, wear and tear on the place, manures and all expenses for new plants, the total of this to be divided by the number of varieties grown and charged up to each in proportion, presuming that about an equal number are grown of each variety. Where there is a difference in the quantities of the varieties this will have to be taken into account in apportioning the expense account of the variety.

I said before, and believe yet, in spite of the sitting on that I received, that an illustrated lecture on practical business methods given before the S. A. F. would be as valuable as anything else presented before the society. It could be followed up by blackboard illustration on similar lines to our friend Carmody's paper on greenhouse construction. It is not any of the systems of bookkeeping in vogue that we need. It is some distinctive system that will be practical to the average florist and I, for one, confess to an inability to devise any such system, but some of the brighter intellects surely could give us some practical system if they were asked to do it.

ALBERT M. HERR.

The Clematis and Its Failings.

I have read with interest the paper of Mr. A. G. Jackman, on the clematis, which was published September 15. The observations of this widely known grower are surely interesting to many, for who is there who does not admire this plant or who has not met with numerous failures with it? I do feel, however, that Mr. Jackman, in concluding that the dying off is mainly due to loss of constitution, has given us no more than a portion of his reasons for such a determination. I say this because I feel the large-flowered hybrids have fewer roots and that they are almost entirely of the thick, fleshy kind, almost tubers. The finer rootlets are extremely few as compared with C. Flammula and its class. I think it is generally understood that all plants with an abundance of fibrous roots are better adapted for transplanting than those with few. I have often noticed clematises that were received from the nursery with the main shoot started an inch and, although the roots were firm and clean, there was not a single rootlet which would at once take hold of the earth; but the thick, fleshy roots contained sufficient nutriment to maintain the growth for some time.

In cool, moist weather, when the soil absorbs heat, rootlets are most readily formed and a proper growth may be started, the same as in starting hyacinths, lilies, etc., but if the weather is warm they stretch out like a piece of rubber and, as Mr. Jackman says, when the days are hot and dry, after obtaining a height they suddenly die off. Still, as he says, the root may not be entirely exhausted and, with demand cut off entirely from the top, a few rootlets may form and finally send up a shoot which, having root action to back it, will finally develop. I have no statistics to bear me out, but I am of the opinion that no greater percentage of the large-flowered type die after once becoming established than do of the Flammula class. The difficulty is chiefly in moving.

I have found that plants grown in pots move without so much injury to the fibrous roots and fare much better. Mr. Jackman speaks of not seeing the rampant, robust growth of years ago;

smaller, fibrous roots. The plant "B" is one of the large-flowered varieties and the picture shows that it has but few large roots and almost none of the small, fibrous kind so necessary to the successful moving of almost any plant; moreover, the heavy roots are very brittle and are easily broken if the plants are dug from open ground.

The larger illustration shows a plant of C. Jackmanii which has bloomed profusely in this way for twelve years. As soon as new roots are developed after moving the stem forms a woody center with a round external instead of the earlier, square form so easily broken, after which there is no more danger of failure than with the small-flowered class.

Dahlias at Boston.

About four thousand blooms were staged at the recent show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, contributed by W. C. Winter, C. S. Pratt, Lothrop & Higgins, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence, Wm. H. Symonds, W. G. Winsor, J. H. Flint, Joseph S. Chase and H. F. Burt. A season of severe drought had its necessary effect upon the character of the blooms. While they were very fine considering the conditions to which they have been subjected, they failed to reach the uniformly high standard of excellence which is to be seen in more favorable seasons. The attendance of visitors was noticeably less than a year ago, undoubtedly due to the more extensive advertising last year. The prizes were awarded as follows:

For eighteen blooms, show, first, W. C. Winter; second, Lothrop & Higgins.

For eighteen blooms, fancy, first, H. F. Burt; second, Lothrop & Higgins.

For twelve blooms, cactus, first, H. F. Burt; second, H. F. Burt; third, W. G. Winsor.

For twelve blooms, decorative, first, W. G. Winsor; second, H. F. Burt; third, Lothrop & Higgins.

For six blooms, show, first, H. F. Burt; second, W. G. Winsor.

For six blooms, fancy, first, H. F. Burt; second, H. F. Burt.

For best individual bloom, introduction of 1898 or later, first, H. F. Burt.

For twelve vases pompons, three blooms each, first, W. C. Winter; second, Wm. H. Symonds; third, Lothrop & Higgins.

For twelve vases singles, three blooms each, first, W. C. Winter.

For general display, first, W. C. Winter; second, Lothrop & Higgins; third, C. S. Pratt; fourth, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence; fifth, Wm. H. Symonds.

In the prize stands the following varieties were staged:

Show—Geo. Rawlings, James Stephens, Purity, Prism, Harrison Weir, Mme. TWO CLEMATIS PLANTS OF SAME AGE AFTER ONE SEASON'S GROWTH IN POTS.

that there are two facts which he has not mentioned which should be taken into consideration before such a conclusion is reached. Mr. Jackman approached one of these facts when he said that C. Vitalba is not a suitable stock. I should be pleased to know how these facts, which I shall attempt to give briefly, dovetail with his theory.

His observation that dying off is confined to the large-flowering hybrids, and is not a fault of such as C. Flammula, I think calls for an examination of their differences. To begin with, we find that this is a matter worth careful research. In Wisconsin I am sure they do as well as ever, although that is not well enough to be entirely satisfactory. Of all the clematises sold years ago, most of them went into the hands of those who procured them for their own use; they surely were not weakened by over propagation, and yet, where are they to-day?

The first of the accompanying illustrations shows two clematis plants of the same age, grown one season in pots. The plant "A" is C. paniculata; it has a great many large roots and a perfect mat of

Helpful Reminders.

Forget-me-nots and mignonette should be benched in a cool house, not far from the light and in good soil. They should be almost ready to set buds. The long wait from seed to this stage should be over before firing begins, so that the income will begin almost as soon as firing does. Always contrive to have the sun do as much preparatory work for you as possible.

All your bulbs for winter or spring bloom should be in the ground now, either pots, boxes or open ground, covered from sun. Water and keep from drying but they should never be soaked if you can help it. Whether you bring them into bloom at one time or various times, get them all into the ground, pushing out root as early as possible.

The cutting bench should be thoroughly cleaned and filled with fresh, clean sand. Old sand is sure to contain more or less decayed matter which breeds the numerous diseases that prey upon unprotected stems before the fresh cuts have time to heal.

If you are growing the Boston fern, bear in mind that it is the pot full of shoots that strikes the fancy of a customer rather than fewer plants with very long fronds. Favor the growth on the outer edge by tying up the long fronds for awhile.

Stevia should be under cover now, with eight to twelve branches, strong and stocky. If set on benches, have them covered with something that will retain moisture. Do not crowd them; they should bloom down low on strong, stiff stems.

Your azaleas that have been kept over and which have set buds are the ones to bring in for Christmas or early bloom; those which are fresh imported keep cooler and hold for Easter.

There may be something of a scarcity of Begonia Rex, as some large growers have been obliged to discontinue raising them on account of a disease.

If you have tuberose growing outside, any that have set buds may be moved on to a bench in a warm house and flowered.

Herbaceous Plants for Florists.

[Read by Thomas Manton, of Eglinton, before the Montreal convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association.]

The increasing demand year by year, for hardy plants from all parts of our country, makes it necessary for the general florist who is at all up-to-date to have a stock of the most popular varieties on hand. Nearly all the herbaceous plants offered the flower-loving public by the trade are really good subjects and when the planter has once been induced to try a few good hardy species he soon becomes a regular customer, ready to pay a good price for choice stock, and there is no doubt in my mind that there is many a dollar for the florist, who has the ground to spare, in a well selected collection of hardy plants.

Practical gardeners from the old countries all know something about this class of plants, but as there are hardly any really good collections in this country, outside of the experimental stations, it is a difficult matter for many of the younger members of the profession to learn anything about them, so when asked by the committee to prepare this paper I felt that I might say something about some of the most popular varieties, thereby creating an interest in the subject among our members, and in the criticisms of the members present, learning more on a subject which I really know little about, for, although my firm has a fair collection, when I take up a really first-class list of hardy plants there are so many varieties named that I know nothing about, that I feel I have only touched the fringe of the subject.

In most of our towns this class of plants has been much neglected, and there is a splendid chance for the local florist to "pick up the needful," to take him to future conventions from a few hardy plants. I will name a few that we have found to be money makers, either as plants or cut flowers or both, and I will only mention varieties that we have found to be generally hardy in Ontario, and I will ask you to remember that the warmer parts of Ontario are about the hardest places in our country for herbaceous plants to live through the winter.

I will take the varieties alphabetically and start with Achillea Ptarmica and its varieties. The best variety is The Pearl. It will grow almost anywhere and if kept cut will flower all summer. Alyssum saxatile compactum is a good yellow spring flowering plant. Anemone Japonica and its varieties are very useful. They need a little protection from early frost in the fall and if given that will well repay for the trouble with their beautiful flowers. Aquilegias are all fine summer blooming plants, but the most useful I have found to be A. vulgaris alba plena and the light colored hybrids of A. cœrulea. Armeria, red and white thrift, are very pretty and useful plants for the fronts of borders and when in bloom generally sell well.

The green and white foliaged varieties of artemesia known as "old man" and "old woman" generally sell well and are very easy to handle. Asclepias tuberosa, a native plant, is a handsome variety, the flowers of which are very useful about July 12, when it is in full bloom. In campanulas there are so many beautiful and distinct varieties, any of which will give satisfaction to the growers, that even a small collection of hardy plants should have several varieties in it. Centaurea montana and its varieties are beautiful flowers and by no means well known here at present. Clematis Davidiana flowers very freely in the early summer and generally sells well as a cut flower. Delphiniums in variety make splendid, showy plants and always sell well. In dianthus the pinks and sweet williams are easily raised from seed and sell well, for they are well known. Dielytra spectabilis is another well-known plant that sells very well and is easily grown. The roots should be divided in August into small pieces and planted and then you will have nice plants ready for spring sales. Plants divided up in spring do not look nearly so salable.

Several varieties of doronicum make fine spring flowering plants. Eryngium Oliverianum is a curious and attractive plant, as also are several varieties of funkias, particularly the variegated ones; they are so striking that they sell at sight. Gaillardia grandiflora and its varieties are about the most profitable plants you can grow if you have demand for bright, cheap flowers. They start to bloom early in the summer and if kept cut continue right along until the hard frost. It requires rich dry soil to winter well. Gypsophila paniculata should be in every collection. Heleniums, heliopsis and helianthus in their many varieties are splendid subjects for cutting and for large decorations can be used very effectively. Several varieties of hemerocallis sell well as plants but are useless as cut flowers.

Lathyrus latifolius and its varieties are very useful, but plants for sale should be grown in pots as they do not move very well. Monarda didyma is a native plant that is handsome and easily grown. Pæonies in varieties are handsome and useful plants and will repay for good cultivation. Papaver nudicaule is a profitable plant in rich dry soils, but in wet or heavy soil it will not live over the winter. The varieties of Pyrethrum roseum are both beautiful and profitable and are easily grown. They prefer a deep, rich and moist border with plenty of sun.

Polygonum cuspidatum is a very effective plant for lawns or places where its roots can be confined in a given place. Rudbeckia Newmanii and R. Golden Glow are all right but their flowers should be cut with long stems and placed in deep water at least twenty-four hours before using for decorations. Scabiosa Caucasica is a very pretty hardy blue form and, though not generally known, is a good grower. All the varieties of spiræa we use for forcing are fine hardy plants and plants left over in the spring should be planted out. Thalictrum aquilegifolium is a very useful plant for its foliage.

With this somewhat short list I will leave the subject, feeling that it is impossible for me to do it justice, but hoping to have aroused some interest among our members about herbaceous plants.

A Simple Wreath.

We illustrate herewith a very simple yet attractive floral design, a wreath upon an easel. The particular feature of this piece is the remarkably pleasing effect gained with the use of a very few cut flowers. There are a few choice nymphaea blooms at the base, the stems resting in bottles of water concealed at the bottom. Above are two perfect blooms of the cape jasmine; these are all the flowers used. Aside from the cycas leaves there are the fronds of cybotium, aspidistras, Asparagus tenuissimus, two varieties of bamboo, the foliage of fancy dracenas and some bits of other material.

SEPTEMBER MEETING OF THE ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY BRINGS OUT SOME SPLENDID EXHIBITS.—AUTUMN FLOWERS MUCH IN EVIDENCE.—AWARDS OF MERIT GIVEN.—CHRYSANTHEMUM SEASON ON.—BEGONIA PRICES LOWER.

Upon the occasion of the Royal Horticultural Society's meeting, September 10, the exhibition hall was filled to overflowing. Orchids were not quite so numerous as usual. The most conspicuous exhibit was that of Burrell & Co., which consisted of gladioli and cactus dahlias. The gladioli were acknowledged to be as grand a lot as has ever been staged. The dahlias, though not so numerous, were remarkably fine, chiefly new varieties. Eight varieties were adjudged worthy of an award of merit and two of the gladioli gained the same distinction.

They were: Althea, rosy salmon flaked with crimson and white; Delicata, soft flesh color with a creamy mark through the center of the petals. The dahlias were: Artus, bronze; Rosieue, rosy purple with a light shading on under side of petals; Imperator, crimson; Lyric, scarlet, with a yellow base to petals; J. W. Wilkinson, cerise crimson; Vesta, flesh pink; Galliard, crimson scarlet; Dinorah, amber. The society's gold medal was awarded for this exhibit.

There were several other good exhibits of dahlias. Cheal & Son's single cactus varieties showed a great improvement in form and color. Cannell & Sons made a grand exhibit of cannas and cockscombs, the latter remarkably well grown and showing a great variety of color, from greenish white and yellow to deep crimson.

We have rarely seen roses shown so well at this season. Messrs. Turner made a fine display, each variety being shown in a large flat bunch, about eighteen blooms of the larger flowering sorts and more of smaller. The bunches were well backed up with buds and foliage. Wm. Paul & Son made a fine display of varieties of their own raising or introduction. Corallina was most conspicuous. Piper & Sons had a fine stand of their Sunrise, which is evidently destined to become a leading variety.

G. Paul & Son exhibited a fine variety of Salvia splendens, named Rukm von Stuttgart, the color being a vivid scarlet with a considerable orangeshade. A. Perry made a fine display of hardy flowers. Barr & Sons also had a large exhibit of hardy bulbous and herbaceous flowers.

H. J. Jones contributed a group of winter flowering begonias and heliotropiums. Among the begonias Gloire de Lorraine, Moonlight and the new double varieties of B. semperflorens were conspicuous. Harrison & Son had a collection of about fifty sorts of sweet peas which were very good for this season of the year. Messrs. Brown also showed a good collection. T. S. Ware had a large collection of cut flowers, herbaceous phloxes being very prominent and including a good selection of distinct varieties.

In addition to the dahlias referred to above the following received awards of merit: Eclipse, pale yellow with a green shade, very regular fluted petals; Jealousy, a deeper shade of yellow and broader petals, both cactus varieties from J. Strudwick. C. Turner had awards for three pompon varieties, Sybil, yellow with red margin on petals; Galatea, maroon, and Zerlina, deep crimson, with an almost black shade. The only other awards were to W. Paul & Son for Anemone Japonica Mont Rose, large semi-double flesh pink, a very distinct variety, and to H. J. Jones for Heliotrope Docteur Juelin, blue with a mauve shade, large compact trusses and good foliage.

The chrysanthemum season has commenced and both pot plants and cut blooms seem to be plentiful. Of plants there is some very clean, healthy stock on the market. Lady Fitzwygram is undoubtedly the leading early white but Queen of Earlies is also valuable. Mme. Desgranges and Mrs. Hawkins still find much favor. The crimson variety of Mme. Marie Masse is a good early but the color varies; it has been more of a bronze than crimson with us this season.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is now well in bloom and appears to be very plentiful, prices being one-third lower than last season. With regard to root versus stem cuttings, I find very little difference, either in time of flowering or habit of plants. It is only those labeled that we can identify with certainty, but stem cuttings are always selected from the new shoots which do not show flower.

CHANGES IN TEMPERATURE BRING MARKED VARIATIONS IN SUPPLY.—CATTLEYS ARE THE PRIDE OF THE STOCK.—JOTTINGS OF VARIOUS IMPORT HERE AND THERE AMONG THE TRADE.—DOINGS PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

It is remarkable the improvement shown in the quality of roses as received at the markets in this city after a couple of cool days. Last week we had a brief period of low temperature and the response was evident at once in Brides and Bridesmaids of double size and much better substance. A return to warmer weather was marked by an immediate reversion of quality and declining values. Among the choicest contents of the Broadway windows at present are cattleyas of superb quality. There is a radiant splendor about these flowers that stamps them unmistakably as the patricians of the floral world. Roses suffer in their company by comparison, but Dendrobium Phalaenopsis harmonizes beautifully and adiantums of any sort add grace to the arrangement.

Each year sees a recurrence of the rivalry between violet growers ambitious for the somewhat barren honor of having sent in the first blooms, but New York is no place for the first blooms until some ingenious grower discovers a method of producing them early in acceptable shape. And the public are in no hurry for them, either.

"Love me, love my carnation." He is a rare carnation grower who can judge unprejudiced his own creations and rarer still is the one who can listen cheerfully to anything but unstinted praise, especially if he has but one or two seedlings to pet. You find one or two such pets in about every carnation place but how few there are that emerge into fame.

Asparagus plumosus, put up in bunches of short pieces, has come to be about as indispensable in the florists, every day stock as smilax or adiantums. Every box of cut flowers of any pretensions now contains a few pieces and it is used freely in all kinds of made up work. It will pay growers to go into it much more generally for such uses and high houses are not essential.

Dummett, of Mt. Vernon, has just had one of his employes sent to Sing Sing for forging checks and one of Dressel's men has been given six months for stealing plants. In Brooklyn a party who leased a floral establishment sold all the top soil and then skipped, leaving rent unpaid. Eternal vigilance is a good attribute to cultivate nowadays.

Much complaint is heard regarding the difficulty in collecting money this fall. One retailer in a central location asserts that from a large batch of accounts sent out on September 1, the entire harvest in a period of twenty days was a check for $2. The prevalent long-credit system is the most mischievous feature of the flower trade as conducted to-day.

The quantity of Boston ferns and ficuses seen in every plant growing establishment is simply amazing. That the public is given a good opportunity to possess these well-established favorites is evidenced by the quantities displayed by florists of every class, and the full prices paid for them at auction show that the market is still able to move the output, enormous as it is.

The price of coal is a burning question these days. One large grower who bought his supply when prices were at the lowest is seriously considering whether he cannot make more on it by selling it than by burning it. The laugh is on a certain man who replenished his fuel bin with a load of fire-proofed wood which he carried home from a building undergoing repairs.

Last Saturday and Sunday were counted upon to furnish a spurt in the local cut flower market, it being the time of the Jewish New Year's celebration, but it made very little impression. Tuberoses seemed to move more freely but at an average price of from $1 to $1.50 per hundred spikes, less commission and express, the grower will not get rich.

In Brooklyn there have been a number of changes lately. The Exotic Floral Company has sold out to Mrs. Hall and Mr. Frazer has gone to take a private place at Morristown, N. J. D. C. Van Valkenburg has also sold out his place on Sixth street.

Mr. Scollay says that business is excellent with him this fall. Invincible heaters have been installed for John Coombs and A. Whiting, both of Hartford, Conn., and Ulrich Bros., East New York have put in two of the same type.

Ehmann & Bock is the title of a new firm that has opened a retail store at 2112 Broadway, between Seventy-third and Seventy-fourth streets.

Ford Bros., on West Thirtieth street, are receiving fine Harrisii lilies every day from a Flatbush grower.

Visiting New York: W. C. Barry, Rochester, N. Y.

BROCKTON, MASS.—The Brockton Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold no exhibition this fall because of the lack of financial success a year ago.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Charles R. Miller has been missing for several days and one of his creditors has attached his store fixtures and stripped the place.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—TROUBLE IN FILLING SHIPPING ORDERS.—GRADE OF ROSES NOW IMPROVING.—SOME VERY GOOD CARNATIONS.—FLORISTS' CLUB OUTLINES WINTER PROGRAMME.—WITTBOLDS ARE FIXED.—KENNICOTTS PREDICT BIG BUSINESS THIS WINTER.—MUSHROOMS SEPARATED FROM ROSES.—VARI- OUS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The last couple of weeks have been decidedly unpleasant for the commission men in this market. Conditions have been very peculiar and, as usual, the commission dealer has been ground between the millstones, the grower on one hand and the buyer, especially out-of-town customers, on the other. Shipping trade has been steadily increasing and would have been very satisfactory had it not been for the difficulty of finding satisfactory material to meet the demand. In view of this fact the growers have expected to get something for their roses, but there is where they have met disappointment. There have been pot after pot of Brides and Bridesmaids which sold for a song, and were well sold at that. If an average grower sent in a thousand flowers the commission man would be lucky if he could sort out a hundred of them that would bring from $3 to $5 and the rest went to the Greeks for next to nothing. A feature of the demand was that the call was for good stock or nothing, and out of very heavy receipts little was salable to the storemen at any price. Fortunately the qualities are now showing marked improvement and averages will undoubtedly keep pace. Beauties are good with all the growers, are in heavy supply and selling pretty well. Meteor and Liberty are scarce. Carnations are decidedly better than they were and the deterioration of the asters and other outdoor stock leaves them a good market at from 75 cents to $1.50; some of the best have been selling at $2. City trade is still quiet but it is beginning to show signs of returning life. The call for chrysanthemums is beyond the ordinary at this season. The early flowers are not yet numerous nor are they particularly attractive except as a novelty for a store window, but a few days will see a great improvement in quality and a rapid increase in supply.

At the last Florists' Club meeting the principal work was in connection with outlining a programme of papers and discussions for the winter meeting. As a result of the deliberations, we have the following order of exercises:

October 5.—J. S. Wilson will speak on how to grow the Boston fern successfully. Andrew McAdams on the best ferns for pans and baskets. Anton Then and August Jurgens on the best tulips and hyacinths for forcing and pot culture.

October 19.—Election of officers. Ernest Weber on the culture of violets.

November 2.—Messrs. Wittbold on the best methods of growing Ficus elastica. E. E. Pieser on the best way to send cut flowers to market.

November 16.—W. N. Rudd and J. S. Wilson on chrysanthemums. W. N. Rudd on soils, fertilizers and feeding.

December 7.—George Collins, Luke Collins and Paul Kopauka on forcing roses.

December 21.—Walter Kreitling on the trials and tribulations of the legitimate retail florist.

January 4, 1901.—John Rardon on the succession of plants to keep greenhouse benches full.

January 18.—James Hartshorne on carnations.

February 1.—W. N. Rudd on iron construction vs. wood. George M. Garland on the advantages of the iron gutter.

February 15.—Emil Buettner on mignonette. Edwin A. Kanst on geraniums.

March 1.—August Dressel on the florists' business of to-day as compared with twenty years ago.

March 15.—H. N. Bruns and August Jurgens on lily of the valley.

April 5.—D. F. Hawkes and G. Swenson on hardy herbaceous flowers for wholesale market.

C. J. Stromback on hardy herbaceous plants for bedding.

April 11.—Flint Kennicott, Charles Klehm and Wm. A. Peterson on the pony, its uses and varieties.

The club will meet at the Sherman House club room at 11 o'clock to-day to take action toward assisting the florists of Galveston.

The George Wittbold Company never had its place in so good shape as at present. The summer's task of renovating, remodeling and extending has put the establishment in the best of order without impairing the business of working up stock and there was never so much fine, salable material on hand as at present. The boys are fixed for big business this fall and say that demand is excellent. They have been selling a great many small lots of their new fern, Nephrolepis Wittboldii and say that pretty nearly all the good growers are planting a dozen or two of it.

J. B. Deamud and Mrs. Deamud celebrated the tenth anniversary of their wedding at Fraternity Hall, 225 Sixty-fourth street, September 22. More than a hundred friends participated in the enjoyable event. The hall was profusely decorated with southern smilax and of the jewelry characteristic of the occasion the happy couple received sufficient to last them a lifetime.

At Kennicott Bros. Co.'s they are making preparations to do a very big business this season. Mr. Pieser says that the last year was far and away the biggest on record with them but that he expects it to be thrown entirely in the shade by the business which will only be slightly interrupted while we settle our pending political argument.

At Klehms' Nurseries they have put up a new mushroom house 20x100 and have abandoned the practice of growing this esculent under the benches in the greenhouses, having been told by some widely experienced men that they could never get good roses and good mushrooms in the same house.

The flower beds at stations along the Northwestern railroad are to give place to shrubby plantations. The railroad's greenhouses at Waukegan will be used for raising cut flowers, principally carnations, for the dining car tables.

Walter Retzer & Company have 70,000 bulbs on hand for winter and early spring forcing. While they have a considerable number of Harrisii, they are going in strong on tulips and hyacinths.

Bassett & Washburn are telling their customers that because of the large amount of new glass put up this summer, they expect prices of carnations to be very moderate in this market this season.

McKellar & Winterson have added a line of Wotherspoon's watering pots and fumigators to their list of supplies. This firm is also showing the first leucothea sprays of the season.

It is announced that Alfred B. Everett has retired from the partnership of Walter Retzer & Co., Mr. Retzer continuing the business without change in the firm name.

Walter Kreitling suggests that all the local florists combine in the management of a grand booth at the forthcoming flower show in aid of the Galveston sufferers.

Adolph H. Poehlmann, of Morton Grove, will open a wholesale store at 53-55 Wabash avenue in about three weeks, with Chas. S. Stewart as manager.

Arthur Bather and Miss Jessie Bather, of Clinton, Ia., passed through the city this week, returning from the convention.

Jersey Bock, formerly of this city, is now in business, under the firm name of Ehmann & Bock, at 2112 Broadway, New York.

Reports of a scarcity of ferns in Massachusetts have reached this market and the jobbers have put the price up a notch or two.

W. E. Lynch is receiving some fine single violets which sell on sight. Chas. Ernie will enter his employ October 1.

Visitors: Messrs. Currie, Milwaukee; John Bertermann, Indianapolis; W. L. Morris, Des Moines; Miss Mame Lewis, with F. C. Smith, Ashland, Wis.; J. T. Anthony, Geneva, Ill.

HEAVY RECEIPTS OF ROSES—MORE THAN CAN BE MOVED AT QUOTED PRICES.—MEDAL FOR CYPRIPEDIUM.—PERSONAL DOINGS AND OTHER MATTERS OF INTEREST.

There is a little tidal wave of roses coming into this town at present and it is not easy to realize steady figures on them. The street men carry away great burdens of them from the wholesalers' every night or the market every morning and the prices paid by these gentlemen are, as always, unquotable. Only American Beauties of top grade are scarce enough to hold stiff values and they appear to be still shortening up in quantity. Carnations move more freely than has been the case for some weeks, asters being on the wane and carnations, themselves, being greatly reduced in cut. We see no violets here as yet.

Jackson Dawson has returned from his first visit to Mt. Desert much pleased with what he saw there. Among the trophies of his trip are a lot of nice red spruces, Picea rubens, which are very abundant in that section although but little known in this state, being generally confounded with the black spruce, Picea nigra, which is not nearly so valuable or ornamental as the red spruce.

At Horticultural Hall on Saturday, September 22, Oakes Ames, R. M. Grey, gardener, showed a rich group of orchids, one of which was Cypripedium Oakes Ames, a Sander cross between C. ciliolare and C. Rothschildianum. It is the finest of the Rothschildianum type and received a silver medal. Epidendrum Godseffianum and E. Stella Rodriguezii were each rewarded with a certificate of merit. C. L. Pratt brought a large collection of dahlias.

The Waban Rose Conservatories, with E. M. Wood, president, and F. O. Baston, treasurer, have been incorporated with a capital of $250,000.

Fred. and Walter Dawson have just returned from their European trip much benefited and with a splendid collection of photographic views.

George A. Sutherland has secured a commodious floor at 14 Bosworth street for the accommodation of his florists' supply department.

Sidney Hoffman, formerly of New York, has become associated with Marshall & Co., at the Thorndike flower store on Boylston street.

The annual fruit and vegetable show was held at Horticultural Hall on September 27 and 28 and was of the usual high excellence.

The annual election of officers for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will take place on Saturday, October 6, at 11 a. m.

McCarthy's plant auctions are prospering. Carnations, palms and Boston ferns are specialties this week.

David Lumston, formerly with Galvin, has leased the McDermott greenhouses at Jamaica Plain.

STATE OF THE CUT FLOWER MARKET.—DEMAND BEGINS TO IMPROVE—A DIFFERENCE IN WHOLESALE METHODS.—QUAKER CITY BEHIND THE HUB.—PENNOCK SEES BRIGHT PROSPECTS.—ITEMS OF VARYING IMPORT.

Hot weather is with us once again, the last heat wave, we hope, of the season. Business is picking up but shows but little improvement over last season at this time. Flowers are plentiful. Good Beauties are most in demand, as customers prefer them to the smaller teas while they remain at their present prices. They bring 75 cents to $1.25 per dozen for the good, average stock, with $1.50 to $2 for the extras. Teas are $3 to $4 per hundred, carnations 50 cents to $1 per hundred. Peacock, of Atco, is sending in some nice dahlias which differ in price according to variety and excellence from $1 to $5 per hundred. He says he has large shipping orders and finds the outlook for his specialty very encouraging. The local demand for plants is just enough to be perceptible, that is all. The growers are busy, however, shipping to out of town points and say they were never busier at this season of the year.

The Boston Market Association had a sale for the choice of stalls the other day that netted them almost enough to pay their rent. Think of it! Will Philadelphia ever come to this? Just imagine any one of our growers paying $50, $100 or $200 just for the privilege of selecting a spot on which to stack his boxes and open them up for inspection. Not that they are not liberal enough; their hearts are so big and they are so obliging that they would not think of asking the dear storekeepers and fakirs to come to them; they say, stay where you are, gentlemen, and we will get to you some time during the morning. Poor, sleepy Philadelphia! Let us snore again.

S. S. Pennock has returned from his vacation much benefited. He says his growers' stocks look well nearly everywhere. He will handle the best grade of flowers he has ever had the coming season and thinks the general cut flower business will be a record breaker. He has added a new department, having laid in a large stock of fancy and staple ribbons, which is under the charge of an expert. From all appearances it will be a little business of itself.

The sale of the Stoke Pogis nursery stock, which takes place next week, is attracting considerable attention. This is the first sale of the kind, that I remember, to be under the charge of an imported auctioneer, but Mr. Cleary has become so famous that his was the only name mentioned from the first and we are confident that the company did the right thing in securing his services.

W. J. Moore, of 30 South Sixteenth street, has changed his ice box around and otherwise altered his place. He has been in business just a year on October 1 and is very well pleased with his venture. He says business this fall exceeds his expectations and he predicts a great season the coming winter.

Robert Kift will deliver his illustrated lecture on floral decoration before the Florists' Club on Tuesday evening, October 2. The lecture room of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will be used on this occasion, to which the general public is also invited.

George McLean, whose bright smile so illuminates the George Craig establishment at Eleventh and Walnut streets, is going on a visit to John Walker, of Youngstown, in a few days. George says he wants to try the western air and if he likes it, why— K.

THE STATE OF TRADE.—CHRYSANTHEMUM TROUBLES.—SEEN HERE AND THERE AMONG THE GROWERS.—MUCH GOOD STOCK IN SIGHT.—PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Nothing of unusual interest as regards trade conditions can be reported this week. The wholesalers report only a slight increase in business, but many retailers say they are rushed. There will be the regular call for some high-priced flowers Tuesday for the Veiled Prophet's ball that evening. C. Young & Sons report business with them about twenty per cent better than last year at this season.

Chas. Beyer is potting up his field grown chrysanthemums, which are very nice, large, clean plants. His single-stemmed plants on the benches are of a second planting and, like the first planting, are infested with a worm or maggot that gets under the epidermis and devours the inner portion of the leaf, making them turn black. His only remedy is to cut off the leaves, but as this almost destroys the plants he is going to tear them all out. Michel reports the same trouble, although it is not so prevalent as at Beyer's.

F. J. Fillmore's roses are fine, especially the Perles, with which Mr. Fillmore expects to beat the "Perle King of Edwardsville" at the November show. His Liberty roses are good and the carnations extra. Flora Hill is simply grand except that they are somewhat short of stem.

F. J. Foster has leased the store now occupied by Wright's cigar company at the southeast corner of Eighth and Olive streets, which he expects to occupy November 1, after having some alterations made.

The Engelmann Botanical Club met September 19 and discussed the botanical experiences of the past summer and prepared plans for the fall work. About twenty-five members were present.

Emil Schray says trade is picking up. His stock looks very well. Carnations are getting along all right, but the ground has been too dry and hard to allow lifting those in the field.

R. J. Mohr, of the Botanical Garden, made the rounds of several establishments last week in company with Walter Retzer, of Chicago, who has been in town several days.

Mrs. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has been spending several days with Mrs. Meinhardt in this city.

Arthur Ellison has been visiting at Springfield, Ill. F. W. MAAS.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Heitman & Bierman are installing a Furman brick set steam boiler. Riemer & Radmer are doing the work. This firm also has the contract for the heating apparatus for H. G. Selridge's range of private glass at Lake Geneva.

PREMIUM WINNERS IN FLORAL DEPARTMENT AT THE STATE FAIR.—PERSONAL AND TRADE DOINGS.

The floral exhibit at the Indiana State Fair was larger than that of last year, but there was plenty of room and premium money for more exhibits. Mr. Beach, of Richmond, who was judge, awarded prizes as follows: A. Wiegand & Son, first on palms, on ferns and lycopodiums, crotons, variety of show plants, geraniums in bloom and two vases of cut flowers; Baur & Smith, first on blooming begonias and foliage begonias and second on display and arrangements of show plants; John Riemann, first on floral arrangements, baskets, bouquets and wedding arrangement, and second on original show arrangement; W. W. Coles, first on cut roses, collection of cut flowers, dahlias and gladioli; Wm. Billingsley took first for original show arrangement.

The Indianapolis Flower and Plant Company has finished repairs after its fire. A most convenient shed, packing room and office, as well as a flower cellar and an excellent heating apparatus are the improvements made in connection with the work. Their stock, especially roses and carnations, is in excellent condition.

A. Pahud has returned from his trip to France and is full of enthusiasm for his native country. H. J.

VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST OF DOINGS HERE AND THERE AMONG THE TRADE.

Z. D. Blackstone has leased Wm. H. King's place at Pathfinder, D. C., where he will grow roses, carnations and plants for his store. He has taken the vacant store adjoining his corner, Fourteenth and H streets, and made extensive improvements. The show window will be illuminated by over 100 electric lights.

A. Gude & Brother's new range of rose houses are making a good showing and they are cutting quite a number of fair sized American Beauties. They have had their store renovated and it looks fine.

F. H. Kramer has finished his new house and planted it with roses and carnations. His stock in general is looking good.

Trade is still quiet and many of the retail florists are having their stores renovated and put in shape for business.

C. Schellhorn has finished and planted his new rose house and is building another house 20x100 for carnations. P. G.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—L. J. Stuppy will move into larger and better quarters October 1.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—Chas. Schafer's new smoke stack, which he had just completed, was blown down during the recent storm. Peter Schafer, his father, is now residing with him.

READING, MASS.—The fourth annual exhibition of the Amateur Gardeners' Society was held on the evening of September 10. The exhibits were up to the record and the attendance satisfactory.

TUCKAHOE, N. Y.—Mrs. John P. Shelly, wife of the proprietor of the Waverly Greenhouses, died recently after an illness of a year. She was 38 years of age and leaves her husband with six small children.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST has been awarded a Grand Prize at the Paris Exposition.

PLUMBAGO CAPENSIS, says the Gardening World (English), pinched when about eighteen inches high, makes a fine, spreading pot plant.

SUPERINTENDENT ROBERT SHORE, of the botanical gardens at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., states that if he were confined to one canna, he would select Egandale.

FLORISTS and others who visited Philadelphia during the recent convention period say that Kift's water melon parties are unique. Ask him about them next time you call that way.

THE Black Prince canna colors best in a rather poor, light soil. In rich, heavy loam the growth is more vigorous but the foliage loses much of its pleasing deep maroon shade, giving way to green.

CRACKS and leaks, whether through sash or sides, affect the result of growth and modify the effect of heating. So says Benjamin Hammond, the wizard of Fishkill-on-Hudson, and we agree with him.

SOME of our eastern growers have been adroitly propagating Begonia Gloire de Lorraine from the leaves for a considerable time past. In removing the leaves from the parent plant for this purpose, says Robert Craig, be careful to take with each the bulb-like base of the petiole.

GEORGE M. GARLAND says that the present is the time for those who do their own work to begin building for next season, as new houses can be completed as opportunity arises in season for use in the preparation of stock for spring, thereby avoiding throwing out plants sometimes in the height of their productiveness.

The Galveston Tragedy.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please give a little space in your valuable paper to how the florists suffered in Galveston in the most terrible disaster that ever visited any community. No doubt all of our brethren have heard of the terrible calamity that befell our city on September 8. During the afternoon and night there were 8,000 people killed and the damage to property will far exceed $20,000,000. The scenes are horrible to behold; the dead are everywhere and are being cremated at the places where they are found by building a fire over them.

No house has escaped injury. Many people are bruised and injured, whole families destroyed and drowned. Of the florists, at last reports, the following were dead and their property washed away:

THOMAS KEATS, WIFE AND ADOPTED DAUGHTER.

CHAS. STEDING, WIFE AND TWO CHILD-REN.

THOMAS KEMP AND WIFE.

JOSEPH ROSENKRANZ, WIFE AND CHILD.

There may be more gone but this is all I have been able to find out. The remaining ones have lost all they had, their greenhouses being wrecked. Plants are lying under the debris in salt mud and are gone beyond redemption.

Thanks to the great and sympathetic American people, no one has to go hungry; all have something to eat by this time, and shelter. Provisions are coming in daily from all directions and each package is a token of sympathy and brotherhood and we return thanks from the bottom of our hearts.

But what next? How will we rebuild our homes? How will the florists rebuild their greenhouses and stock them? They need money first to rebuild their houses and then stock to fill them.
No doubt the American florists are also American people and they will do the right thing. Probably the AMERICAN FLORIST will receive and forward any money or pledge for stock that anyone may be willing to donate to repair the loss of the Galveston florists. Greenhouse material, plants, bulbs, and requisites we must have and cannot buy.
All such contributions will be received with gratitude. J. D. PRUESSNER.

[THE AMERICAN FLORIST will cheerfully comply with above and other similar requests.—ED ]

Census Statistics of Floriculture.

Uncle Sam does some things exceedingly well, especially when he puts a Dewey in charge and the cables are cut.
In an end of the census office, however, it is evident there is no Dewey or else the cables and underground wires are in first-class working order.

After confessing inability to answer certain of the wonderful questions prop-ounded, certain growers have been advised that a good guess would be all right!! However, that is consistent enough, for there is no other way that the average florist can answer a large number of the questions, except by guessing. The Yankees are good guessers, but how about us Germans?

In all seriousness, the results to be obtained from one-half the items inquired for will be about as reliable as a guess at the number of hairs on a yellow dog afflicted with the mange, with specifications as to the dog's size withheld.

An inspection of the schedule sent out will confirm one in the impression that it must be the production of a Kansas farmer. Surely no practical florist ever had a hand in its make-up, or was ever consulted in regard to it. If it is statistics of the glass trade which is wanted, perhaps the measurements of glass in ends, sides and roof may be all right but if it is a showing of the capacity of the greenhouses to hold and grow plants, then only the ground space covered would be of value, which is not asked for.

The amount paid for manures and fertilizers is called for, but nothing is asked about the coal consumed. Again the horny hand of the farmer appears.

Among general growers, turning out two and three crops from the same house, how many can specify accurately the amount of glass devoted to "Rose Plants, including Stock," "Carnation Plants, including Stock," and so on through the whole list? And how many can give the separate amounts received from sales of each ("including stock?")

The whole blundering mess reminds one of the company which had been operating a large car works for some years, with numerous changes of superintendents, and not making a brilliant success of it, financially. Upon appealing to one of the stockholders for advice the following was given: "You have tried a carpenter as superintendent of your car works, you have had a ship-builder, a thread manufacturer and an iron master. What is the matter with trying a car builder?"

One would like to have Uncle Sam try a florist when it comes to framing a schedule for statistics of the florist business. W. N. R.

Rudbeckia Golden Glow.

We had two large blocks of this grand plant, one in a moist spot, the other in a very dry place. The first lot commenced blooming very early and was pretty well over by August 1, on which day we cut all the plants to within a foot of the ground. The plants immediately sent out new growth which is now (first week in September) about eighteen inches high and have been in full bloom for more than ten days with every indication of continuing for a long time to come. The flowers are in better demand now than in July and August. We have just cut down our second block and hope that it may bloom in October, when we will report results. A. BLANC.

Louisville.

A BENEVOLENT AND PATRIOTIC ORDER PARADES THE CITY WITH FLOWERS.—VARIOUS PERSONAL ITEMS OF INTEREST.

On Monday, September 17, Louisville witnessed a great floral parade, given by the Elks. Prizes were offered for the best floats and best decorated carriages. Mrs. C. W. Reimers received first prize on a float, also a prize on a carriage. Nanz & Neuner won second prize on float. Their float had a life sized elk, made of cape flowers, high in the center surrounded by plants and pretty girls. The carriage of J. E. Marret, which won a prize, was decorated with white chrysanthemums and Asparagus plumosus.

Jacob Schultz has completed his improvements and added two steam boilers to his heating plant, taking out all the hot water boilers. He is now cutting some fine Beauties.

F. I. Walker, of F. Walker & Co., has returned from a tour of Europe, visiting nine countries and taking in the Paris Exposition.

The Society of Kentucky Florists has decided to have a chrysanthemum show in November and has made out a premium list.

J. E. Marret has benched some of the finest and healthiest carnation plants I have seen this year.

More pot chrysanthemums are being grown around Louisville than for several years.

Wood, Stubbs & Co. report a fine fall trade in field and grass seeds.

E. G. Reimers has added one small house to his establishment. H. G. W.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

LEM. W. BOWEN, of D. M. Ferry & Co., visited New York recently.

THE Michigan seed bean crop is estimated at sixty per cent of an average one.

VISITED CHICAGO: Frank P. Sperry, representing the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, Ohio.

LATEST London reports indicate a strong demand for red clover seed and good rates for blue peas.

THE liabilities of the Dickmann Seed Company, of St. Louis, are not so large as was at first reported by the mercantile agencies. Instead of $29,162.50, they are $7,132.50.

JACQUES HASSLACH, the well known seed grower, of Nimes, France, has published an interesting account of the insect pest which has been devastating the bean crop in the south of France during the past two years.

JAMES McHUTCHISON, representing August Rhotert, of New York, and J. H. Wentholt, director of the General Bulb Co., Vogelenzang, Holland, who has been traveling in this country, will sail to-day for Europe.

The Vine Seed and Corn Crops Around Waterloo, Neb.

At Waterloo, Neb., September 22, the cucumber crop on the whole is very disappointing, even with the low estimates put on the vines after the lice had ceased working. The crops that have been threshed and washed so far have turned out a great deal of light seed, which in a number of cases does not show the usual brightness on account of premature ripening. Some of the fields do not yield more than fifty pounds per acre, while quite an acreage was not gathered at all.

The muskmelon crops have for the most part been harvested and, while the yield is not an average crop, there will be enough of most kinds to fill contract orders. The water melon crops, quite a proportion of which are already on the drying racks, show fair yields of good plump seed and orders for most kinds will be filled in full, with some surpluses on standard kinds.

The pumpkin and squash crops, which have not yet been harvested, promise an average yield. The squash bugs have made their appearance but have not done any great harm. Orders will most likely be filled in full.

The sweet corn crop was injured a little by late rains and the worm is doing some damage to the ears, especially the late planted crops, but there seems to be sufficient to fill most contract orders.

ANGOLA, IND.—R. F. Carpenter is adding a house 12x60 to his glass, planting it with carnations.

THOMPSONVILLE, CONN.—Charles A. Lord who for some years was employed at D. William Brainard's, died September 19 after a year's illness. He was 53 years of age and leaves a large family.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—An increase in the business of Armand Kerlec & Son has caused them to remove from 512 Ursulines street, near the French Market, to much larger quarters at 1107 Decatur street.

SOUTHERN NATURAL PEACH PITS

For several years past we have given special attention to the procuring of Southern Natural Peach Pits, selected from original seedling trees in the mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina, which are entirely free from yellows or disease, guaranteed to give good stands and make much stronger and healthier trees than those from any other section. These pits being very small in size, contain more than double the number to the bushel. We have for many years annually supplied a majority of the best Nurserymen and Peach Growers in the United States. Samples and prices on application.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYRMEN.
 THEO. J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.;
 GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE apple growers lost thousands of barrels of fruit in the recent wind storm which swept the central states.

PROF. N. E. HANSON speaks in high praise of the Siberian larch for use on the cold, arid lands of the northwest.

C. L. WATROUS, president of the American Pomological Society, has added his voice to the chorus of approval of the McPike grape.

AT SCIOTOVILLE, O., John and Wilbur Stout and Mr. Conkling have organized the Ohio Valley Plant Company, to do a general nursery business.

FRED. WELLHOUSE, president of the Kansas State Horticultural Society, has 1,200 acres of apple orchards planted between 1892 and 1894. He says that Jonathan has been his best money maker, Missouri Pippin second and Ben Davis third.

Plants Subject to Attacks of San Jose Scale.

The latest list of plants on which San Jose scale has been found, as published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is as follows:

Orchard fruits—Pear, peach, apple, plum, cherry, Rocky Mountain dwarf cherry, persimmon, quince, flowering quince. Small fruit—Strawberry. Bush fruits—Raspberry, gooseberry, grape, currant, flowering currant, black currant. Nut plants—Almond, chestnut, pecan, black walnut, English walnut, Japan walnut.

Miscellaneous ornamental plants, forest and shade trees—Rose, hawthorn, spiræa, cotoneaster, euonymus, English huckleberry, linden, acacia, elm, osage orange, alder, sumac, weeping willow, English willow, golden willow, laurel leaved willow, milkweed, Catalpa speciosa, Lombardy poplar, Carolina poplar, golden leaved poplar, silver maple, cut leaved birch, mountain ash, Japanese quince, actinidia, Citrus trifoliata, red dogwood, snowball, juneberry, loquat, laurel, akebia.

WICHITA, KANS.—F. Kuechenmeister has removed his greenhouses from their old location on Harry street to a new site right in the city. He has greatly enlarged the range, now having two houses 20x100, one 16x100 and one 16x58, the material coming from Chicago greenhouse builders.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—On September 18, 19 and 20 the annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held in Tillinghast's Hall. Considering the serious damage to fruits and flowers by the dry weather and recent hurricane, the exhibition was surprisingly good. Dahlias were shown very extensively by H. F. Burt and others.

NEWARK, N. J.—The horticultural society had a fine exhibition here on the afternoon and evening of September 16. W. A. Manda, who was the largest contributor, won first prize and a gold medal with a handsome display of palms and orchids. J. F. McDonough won second prize and a silver medal in the same class. The Japanese Nursery Company made a fine show with their miniature Japanese plants.

BUSINESS MADE BRISK BY A REVIVAL IN FUNERAL WORK.—THE CONDITIONS OF SUPPLY.—ELECTION AND OTHER NOTES.

Business has been somewhat brisker of late, although arising from an increase in funeral work, it is not necessarily to be taken as the usual fall awakening, for which the season is hardly sufficiently advanced. Flowers do not seem to be over plentiful. Asters, which have been the mainstay of the supply for the past month or more, are very nearly gone. Most of those that are now seen are either the last pickings or come from out of town, excepting some that are coming from A. Schmitt's establishment in Glenville. Mr. Schmitt has several benches of nice, clean, fresh inside-grown stock of Semple's asters in good colors that are just now in their prime. This stock sells at a good figure. Carnations are streaky in supply. Several growers are cutting quantities of flowers, largely Scott and similar shades, and running from very poor to fair in quality. Other growers are cutting practically nothing. The top price seems to be $1 per hundred. Dahlias are commencing to come in fair quantity and quality. Should the weather hold good, doubtless there will be quantities of them shortly. Chrysanthemums seem to be somewhat late. Lady Fitzwygram promises to be the earliest, but does not look at all profitable. Very few sorts are grown here earlier than Glory of Pacific, Mme. Bergmann and Marion Henderson.

The Florists' Club election took place September 24. The officers chosen were: President, Wm. Brinker; vice-presidents, Gordon Gray and Isaac Kennedy; secretary, A. H. Graham; treasurer, Herman Hart.

Recent visitors: W. N. Rudd, J. B. Keller and J. N. May. Mr. May was called here by the serious illness of his son, who has been with the Storrs & Harrison Co., of Painesville.

FLINT, MICH.—D. P. Smith has opened a handsome new store at 428 Saginaw street.

CONSHOHOCKEN, PA.—W. S. Harry has been remodeling his flower store and now has one of the most attractive places in town.

CANAAN, CONN.—"The Maples" greenhouses, Mary E. Adams and Louise H. Bragg, is being enlarged by the addition of a house 16x36 for carnations.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—Van Bochove & Bro. have added to their establishment until they now have 60,000 feet of glass. They are growing roses, carnations, violets and chrysanthemums. Everything on the place is in very healthy condition and they should cut a large amount of fancy stock.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.—Bobbink & Atkins have just completed substantial additions to their greenhouses and storage cellars. They report an extraordinary demand for fancy, named, perennial phloxes. A field of roses including Agrippina, Clotilde Soupert, Pink Soupert and Hermosa is in full flower now and presents a beautiful picture.

CARNATIONS AND VIOLETS.

We have field-grown Meteor, Flora Hill Mrs. Jas. Dean, Bon Ton, White Cloud and Scott Carnations at 4c and 1000 Marie Louise Violets, field-grown, at 2½c.

AZALEAS.

Our Mr. Eisele, who has just left Belgium, reports that the Azaleas grown for us are in an unusually healthy and fine condition this season. Our shipments are expected to arrive here beginning of October. We handle only the leading sorts which are best adapted to the American trade; all plants are carefully sorted over and packed at our nursery, thus enabling us to guarantee satisfaction. If you have not yet placed your order, we can still book same for fine bushy crowns, well set with buds, as follows:

TRADE IS GOOD AND EVERYONE ANTICIPATES A BUSY SEASON.—NEWELL HAS A LARGE DECORATION.

Business in general is good. Albert Barbe has increased his range of glass about 10,000 feet and reports trade prospects excellent. Samuel Murray is at the same old stand and a hard florist to beat. He is putting in a new boiler and getting things ready for winter. Paul Ducret reports business good and he has some very fine stock.

Arthur Newell recently put up a fine decoration at the Hotel Baltimore for a banquet to W. J. Bryan. His apartments were handsomely decorated with American Beauties, Asparagus Sprengeri and flags. The banquet hall decorations were very excellent and much good material was used.

Alfred Broman has added two houses each 20x100 to his range at Independence, giving him a total of 25,000 feet of glass. He wholesales most of his output in Kansas City and is doing so well that he expects to build further additions next year. C. W. S.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Louis Haury is adding eight houses to his range, giving him increased capacity of 12,000 feet of glass.

Meteors and Perles.

We can make particularly good use of regular consignments of these Roses, and invite correspondence or a personal visit from growers who are looking for good returns on these items.

MUCH INTEREST IN THE MEETINGS OF THE NEWLY FORMED FLORISTS' CLUB.

There is a great deal of interest in the Denver Florists' Club. Not only is there much enthusiasm over the big flower show planned for November, but the bi-weekly meetings attract a good attendance and result in lively and beneficial discussions. At the last meeting, aside from show preparations, which are moving apace, discussion turned upon a flower market similar to those conducted in Cincinnati and other cities and upon the question of wages paid to employes. It was the consensus of opinion that a flower market would prove a great stimulant to trade and it was voted as the will of the society that its influence be thrown into the matter of instituting such an enterprise. It was the opinion of all those present that florists are paid less than men of equal capability charged with equal responsibility in other lines of work and various causes and remedies were suggested.

There were exhibits of roses from the Mauff greenhouses, old-fashioned flowers from Mr. McGregor and of cockscombs from the parks.

BAY CITY, MICH.—John Irvine & Sons will build a range of ten modern houses on their new property on the M. C. R. R., one mile southeast of this city the coming season. A switch from the main track to the boiler house will make coal-ing easy.

COOLER WEATHER BRINGS A REVIVAL OF TRADE.—DECORATIONS IN DEMAND.—PERSONAL JOTTINGS.

A fall in temperature has made trade a little better than it had been but stock has not improved to any considerable degree. Beauties and Kaisers are the best. Carnations are only fair and scarce. Gladioli and asters are filling the void. Several department and other stores have been using pretty fair decorations and there are a number of weddings in sight.

At a recent meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club committees were appointed to take hold of the preliminary convention work. The trophies won at New York are to be displayed in a large case at Kasting's.

The office of Wm. Scott was burglarized a few evenings ago. Postage stamps and a few dollars in change were missed.

Palmer & Son have had a very attractive window, orchids and Liberty roses predominating.

Flushing, N. Y.

A. L. Thorne has recently completed another sidehill house, 40x150, and it is now planted with Bride roses. Like the older corresponding house, it contains ten benches and its addition to the range, already large, brings the establishment into the front line among the up-to-date places, the influence of which is felt in the daily existence of the flower trade of New York. A bench of Liberty shows this new rose in a very favorable light, the buds being very rich colored and the growths vigorous. No finer house of American Beauty can be found anywhere than that of Mr. Thorne. It is absolutely without a flaw and beyond criticism. Carnations are being grown to some extent this year, for the first time. An adiantum, a sport from A. cuneatum, of much larger growth than the type, is being watched with interest as is also a thornless sport from the Bride rose, with slender, willow-like foliage. Watch out for Thorne's Thornless Bride. That name should be a winner.

RHINELANDER, Wis — Peter Philipp, who is a cousin of Nick Grievelding, the successful florist at Merrill, has purchased property here upon which he proposes to at once erect a greenhouse establishment.

KENNETT SQUARE, PA.—There is little surplus carnation stock in Chester county this year. Some growers are short and will use up whatever spare material their neighbors may have, so that distribution from this locality will be mainly local this season. Nothing particularly new is offered.

MY PICTURE AS A "KID."
(Presenting a rear view of a stern reality)

When I was young, you will observe, I was very backward; but I have got over that, and now come to the front claiming to have the best WATER HEATER, VENTILATING APPLIANCE and SASH HINGE for greenhouse purposes, that are in the market.

Furthermore, they are so simple in construction I can afford to sell them much cheaper than other styles.

Now florists, don't be backward in sending for a catalogue. Remember, when you find you NEED a thing, the sooner you get it, the more you will have for your money, again I say "DON'T BE BACKWARD," but "keep up with the band wagon." Let me hear from you AT ONCE.

The Finley Rotary Lawn Rake in Operation.

It picks them up and holds them until you are ready to deliver them to your burn heap or compost pile.

The wind can't blow them about after once raked. It does the work much better than the hand rake, and does it three times as fast. It takes up grass, either long or short, twigs and loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a hand rake would not touch. It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn. Price, $12.00. It was given a Certificate of Merit by the Society of American Florists at the New York Convention, the judges reporting that they "Believe it to be far superior to anything else in the market."

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

TREATMENT FOR SPECIMEN PLANTS.

Chrysanthemums intended for exhibition specimen plants are all housed and we are getting them into shape as rapidly as possible. Staking is tediously slow work. To finish a specimen in perfect shape requires the skill of an artist. If no staking has been done, we shall find, no matter how even in outline the plant may appear, that there are a number of shoots on the outside which will be too long to be trained where they lie. We have to make a full survey before we commence, taking into account, also, whether the plant be one-sided or whether the shoots are longer on one side than the other. All the strong shoots must be worked towards the center and evenly balanced, and the shorter ones drawn to the outside. Occasionally there are shoots in the center which we cannot dispose of, and these we cut out rather than do any crowding.

Disbudding must be attended to. Surplus buds weaken the rest and we must therefore decide on those we need as soon as they are large enough to handle. Then, too, fungoid diseases are often bothersome. The liability to these depends much upon our management of the airing, with regard to draughts especially. We never open the side ventilators at this season unless the weather be genial, and then only on the off side. We still spray the plants on all bright days, morning and afternoon. This is necessary on account of insects, especially thrip and red spider. These latter are much more troublesome, and the results of their work more serious, than green or black fly. We fumigate on an average of once a week. In this connection, it is remarkable how late we can fumigate without injury. We have had blossoms open when it has been necessary to fumigate and no more harm has been done than to tarnish—take the lustre off—some of the darker shades.

For spider and thrip there is nothing so good as spraying vigorously. For fungoid diseases we have tried one or two formulas, but we cannot say with entire success. When mildew once gets a good hold it is hard to dispose of it. Sulphide of potassium, one ounce to two gallons of water, is as good as anything, and cuprum may be used with safety. This is four ounces carbonate of copper dissolved in one-half gallon strong 4 F ammonia to forty-five gallons water. In using these copper compounds we must be careful not to spatter the paint work as it spots badly and will not wash off.

As to feeding, liquid manure may be continued until the buds show color.
T. D. HATFIELD.

OUR CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Chrysanthemum time is with us again. Is it a coincidence, or is it the importance of the flower that is accountable for more flower shows being held in chrysanthemum time than at any other period of the year? To my mind the fact is clearly demonstrated that the queen of autumn is so thoroughly ingratiated in popular favor that she is in no danger of being deposited. In short, the flower that was thought to be a popular fad is now an accepted entity. Now that it is again coming in season appears an opportune moment to say something on behalf of the society that is devoted to this special flower and to bespeak for the Chrysanthemum Society of America such a full measure of support that the good work it has so far done may be amplified and extended for the general good of all.

Special societies devoted to particular flowers have passed beyond the experimental stage, have proved by earnest, conscientious work that they exist for something more than mutual admiration purposes and the sum aggregate of work accomplished shows the material advancement of the subject. Can anyone deny that the American Carnation Society has justified its creation? Has not the resuscitated rose society a fruitful field wherein to labor? Its initial effort this year is but an earnest of great future efforts. The chrysanthemum society, too, is in the field and the sum total of its accomplishments will be in an enlarging ratio with the support that is given to it.

For several years committees have met weekly during the chrysanthemum season in five leading cities and have passed judgment upon such new varieties as were submitted to them. This, surely, is work of an important character in a flower so prolific in variety, and work of positive value to chrysanthemum growers. It has saved them money, time and wasted effort in fruitless trials of varieties that they might have been tempted to try if there had been no C. S. A. standard of merit and no committees to judge in accordance therewith. For two years a substantial prize was offered at an early date to encourage production of early flowering varieties of merit but, as these were not forthcoming, the prize was last year offered for and awarded to the seedling scoring the highest average of points before the committees. This year a similar prize is offered for competition at Chicago in connection with the Chicago Horticultural Society's show under conditions appealing to all growers; namely, for ten blooms of any one variety, new or old. The society is working in harmony with the national chrysanthemum societies of England and France and is offering a prize this year to be competed for at the forthcoming show of the French society in Paris this fall.

But is this enough? We have a society capable of greater things and it is the opinion of many that each recurring chrysanthemum season should see an exhibition held under the auspices of the national society in one of our prominent cities. Let this become an accomplished fact and in this enlarged sphere of activity the society will grow in membership and in influence, with large resultant benefits accruing to those most interested.

There is plenty of work in the chrysanthemum field. We should take up the flower and develop it along other lines. There are other important points of view from which to regard it besides commercial adaptability, which is the dominating factor of our present work. We have an immense territory where chrysanthemums in the open air are not in danger of succumbing to early frosts. A national society should do something in this direction. Our first great need, however, is for more workers, and who loving the flower or having ought to do with it would remain outside the ranks of the society when membership in it costs but $1 a year? Join now, while the flower is in season and a year hence you may be participating in the consummation of present hopes. Applications for membership with the accompanying fee may be sent to the secretary, Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Philadelphia, Pa., at any time.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Sec'y.
Wyndmoor, near Philadelphia, Pa.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—On September 29 Carl Kruger fell from the second balcony of the City Hall rotunda, never regaining consciousness. He had recently retired from the firm of John H. Sievers & Co., in which he held a partnership for some time.

From First to Last.

Away back in the days before the Civil war floriculture in Chicago was conducted along very narrow lines and afforded a livelihood to a mere half dozen men. The history of the trade in the days when Chicago was yet a struggling village is clouded in the obscurities of the past, but it is undoubted that Samuel Brooks was the first of the commercial florists by some years. Then came Edgar Sanders and Williams & Wittbold. Of these George Wittbold, president of the company which bears his name, is the only one who is still in business. This dean of the profession was born in 1832 at Hanover, in Germany, and in his youth acquired a knowledge of plant life in the Royal Botanical Garden at that place. Coming to America and Chicago when 25 years of age, Mr. Wittbold soon became engaged in the business which has been continued to the present day. The firm was Williams & Wittbold, the former having a greenhouse on what is now Fullerton avenue. Mr. Wittbold's glass was at another location, about where Clark street and North avenue intersect. Mr. Wittbold says that at that time his only competitors were Mr. Brooks, away out on the South Side, south of what is now Kenwood, and Mr. Sanders, at the spot which is now the northwest corner of Belmont and Evanston avenues. It was just after the war that Mr. Wittbold left the partnership of Mr. Williams and in 1869 he bought the land on which he has lived and done business for the past thirty-one years. At that time it was largely a slough; there were four acres of it and people said it was not worth the $2,000 which he paid. There were no streets, not even roads, and all there was on it was water, pond lilies, grass and a few rattlesnakes. But about the time Mr. Wittbold had his slough filled in he was offered seven acres for his four, seven acres of pretty high land just south of his and consequently nearer the city. Now he wishes he had that seven acres, but then he thought that four acres was all his greenhouses could earn the taxes on; as a matter of fact, when it came to building streets and other public improvements, he couldn't pay the taxes out of his business and sold nearly an acre of his land, but out of that acre he got not only enough for the improvements but enough to give him his other three acres clear of cost, and they are worth probably $30,000 an acre to-day. All through the time that Chicago was growing to be great, Mr. Wittbold's business was keeping pace. He brought up a family of five such boys as are a comfort to a man's declining years, and with their aid the business was not only pushed into the front rank but Mr. Wittbold was enabled to entirely throw off its burden and go back under the three acres of glass and potter about at will among the palms and ferns, the friends of his youth, the reliance of his manhood and the pleasure of his ripened years.

GEORGE WITTBOLD.

Some Unusual and Effective Wreaths.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs of two rather unusual but very attractive floral designs, made of such material as the average greenhouse man has at hand, without recourse to the wholesale cut flower markets. The right side of the first wreath is made of the long, slender blooms of that beautiful herbaceous perennial, the ophiopogon, both the white and lavender flowered varieties being employed, with their long, narrow, variegated leaves. The opposite side was of the lavender and the pure white varieties of torenia, the lower part was of lilies and the ribbon was lavender, the whole effect being of lavender and white, the green, of course, being in several shades, adiantums and several sorts of ferns being used. The second wreath was of somewhat similar character but the effect was quite different, the material being more varied. There were, in addition to the factors which were incorporated in the first wreath, such flowers as jasmines and auratum and the foliage of begonias added not a little to the ensemble.

Classification of Sweet Peas.

[Read by Walter P. Wright at the English Sweet Pea Conference, London, July 20 and 21, 1900.]

That the time has come for reducing chaos to order in the sweet pea will probably be gainsaid by very few cultivators. The remarkable development in this plant has lifted it to the position of a florists' flower, and as such it demands to be defined and classified.

There is no branch of industry in which the gospel of muddle is not preached by a few irresponsible reactionaries, but so far as horticulture is concerned there has always been a sufficient majority of thoughtful men to ensure the victory of system. The florists of past times were a noble body of men, having sufficient courage to set up a lofty ideal of merit, and sufficient determination to refuse to accept anything which fell short of it. The florists of to-day must follow the example of their forefathers by setting up a high standard of excellence, and declining to hodge by the fraction of an inch from it. Only thus can they be faithful to the great traditions of British floriculture.

The formal adoption of the sweet pea as a florists' flower is not yet an accomplished fact, but the time is surely ripe for it. If the auricula, the carnation and the pansy are worthy of this exalted rank, the sweet pea must rise, too, for alike in interest, beauty and value it is equal to any of them. It is a garden flower of the highest charm and merit. It is not a creature of soil or climate, thriving in one district, sulking in another. It is generous and free, giving of its store to all who love it, and the poor man can afford to grow it equally with the rich.

FORM OF FLOWER.

When we consider the parts of the sweet pea flower we survey magnificent raw material for floricultural excellence. In the first place, we have the standard, the principal part of the bloom. What clay is there for the moulder's hand! He can fill it with substance and perfect its outline. Teaching himself beforehand what perfection is, he can set himself to approach it with all the tenacity of his race. And when he has his ideal flower he can paint it with a score of lovely hues. Many of the flowers which we have to-day are pleasing to the eye, but not satisfying to the mind. At a distance the gay, fluttering blossom is as winsome and enchanting as a butterfly, but a near inspection often reveals unevenness of outline, raggedness, notching and kindred abominations, all of which must be swept away.

With respect to hooding, I must speak in almost equally uncompromising terms. While freely granting that some of the varieties which hood persistently are pleasing and pretty, I cannot but regard them as imperfect. Hooding is inherently an imperfection, because most varieties hood while immature, and again when past their best. In a complete state of development certain varieties have enough substance to stiffen up the folding segment, while others, more flimsy, fail to do so. The hooded flower is a flag at half-mast.

As the hooders are a fairly numerous race, and include some of our prettiest peas, we must make a section of them, but in my humble judgment they are floriculturally on a lower grade than the erect flowers.

It is doubtful whether posterity will find itself burdened with others than these two sections. It is true that there are numerous varieties at the present time which only hood slightly, and give many erect flowers, such, for example, as the beautiful whites, Blanche Burpee and Sadie Burpee, and these might be termed half-hooders or intermediates; but I think that once we decide to set up erectness as a standard of excellence, we shall soon find ourselves getting closer to it by selection. Slightly altering an old tulip phrase, we shall get erectified flowers, not only of these whites, but of many other exquisite peas.

Then there is recurvation or reflexing, but this is almost bound to go. It is characteristic of the old Invincibles and bicolors.

There is also notching. This is a serious disfigurement. It is a feature of the old sorts—a relic of the black, barbaric days when there was no Eckford. Let us get away from it. Some person has suggested that in the future we shall get fringed flowers. When I survey a variety like the fluted form of Primrose I can well believe it. But it is not, to me, an agreeable prospect. What person, having in his veins one drop of the blue blood of the old aristocracy of florists, can ever wish to see a fringed sweet pea?

To sum up, we want in the ideal standard a large, bold, erect segment, firm, substantial and leathery, smooth at the edge, even in outline and symmetrically rounded. We will be fairly satisfied if it is the size of a half-crown, so long as the shape is right, but we shall get it bigger, and with the quality, too. Such varieties as Senator, America and Stanley are noteworthy for excellence of standard, but there are many more.

Let us turn to the next pair of petals—the wings. These should not be erect, like the standard, or the tip of the keel would become unduly prominent. In the variety Golden Gate, which is not a yellow, the wings are vertical and open, giving a resemblance to a pair of half-open gates; but this we must suppress with the strong hand. We will pass through the gates and away. The wings should be closed at the top, and slightly folded or hooded, so as to hide the tip of the keel. This likewise gives full exposure to the standard. Well set, well formed wings are a great adornment to a flower, and in the bicolors give us many choice harmonies of color. The wings of Stanley cover the keel well; those of Senator do not.

In the keel we have another pair of segments, cohering so as to form a small pouch. We need not worry after form here. If the wings do their duty only the front of the keel will show. The amateur hybridizer will not fail to note that by the time the flower is expanded the pollen is shed and the flower self-fertilized. To secure cross-fertilization the anthers must be removed while the flower is still in the bud stage.

POINTS OF A PERFECT SWEET PEA.

The standard of erect flowers must be quite flat, well rounded, smooth at the edge, free from notch or serrature, and not less than one and one-fourth inches across.

The standard of hooded varieties must be well rounded and smooth.

The wings must be about half the size of the standard, spreading at the base, but slightly folded and hooded at the top, so as to hide the tip of the keel.

The colors, whether self or parti, should be clear and well defined.

There should be at least two perfect flowers on a stem.

The plant should be of a strong, free habit.

COLOR.

Color must play an important part in a system of sweet pea classification; indeed, I should not be surprised if the future allots to it the leading position in view of the variations that there are likely to be in form. By the exercise of a very little ingenuity we can get nearly all the leading varieties into one of several well defined groups. We have:

(1) SELFS. This is a large, important, and beautiful class, and perhaps no better example of a pure self could be found than Salopian. Many of the bright red selfs have a distinct tint of magenta in the wings, but Salopian has not. In this section natural subdivisions occur to the mind. Thus we have Countess of Radnor as the type of lavender selfs, Navy Blue of blue selfs, Dorothy Tennant of mauve selfs, and so on.

(2) FLAKES. A fairly large class, and one likely to increase in popularity. We have crimson flakes such as America, mauve flakes like Gaiety, rose flakes like Aurora, blue flakes like Grey Friar, and maroon flakes like Senator.

(3) BICOLORS. In one sense flakes are bicolors, but it would be logical to adopt a system of classifying as bicolors those varieties which have one well defined color in the standard and another in the wings. Sub-sections come naturally if we take as the distinguishing color that of the standard. For instance, in Little Dorrit and Empress of India (rose standards with white wings) we have rose bicolors; in Orange Prince, Countess of Powis, etc. (salmon standards and pink wings), we have salmon bicolors.

(4) FANCIES. There are, and must be, no inconsiderable number of varieties which refuse to be disposed of so easily as the rest. Take, for example, the lovely Lottie Hutchins; which is lightly splashed with pink on an ivory ground. It is not a true self, nor is it a true flake. Such varieties might be classified as fancies, with the subdivisions white fancy, yellow fancy, etc., taking the ground color as the distinguishing feature.

(5) PICOTEE EDGES. A very small class at present, but one that may increase.

LIST OF SWEET PEAS.

It now remains to prove the systems here suggested by taking a large number of varieties and classifying them. Being myself the owner of a fair collection, and having had the privilege of inspecting the splendid collections of Carter & Co., Hurst & Sons and Sutton & Sons, I have been enabled to take notes of some of the best varieties grown. I first of all give an alphabetical list of these and their colors as nearly as I can describe them:

Admiration, mauve.
 Adonis, rosy magenta.
 Alba magnifica, white.
 Alice Eckford, white, tinted blush.
 America, crimson flaked; a very good pea.
 American Belle, rose standard, bluish wings.
 Apple Blossom, rose standard, bluish wings.
 Aurora, light rose stripe large.
 Black Knight, burnished purple; very fine.
 Black Purple, purple, lighter wings.
 Blanche Burpee, white, occasionally tinted; one of the best.
 Blanche Ferry, red standard, white wings; an improved Painted Lady.
 Blanche Ferry, Early, same colors.
 Blushing Beauty, bluish; inferior to Katherine Tracy.
 Boreatton, purple.
 Brilliant, scarlet or carmine self.
 Bronze King, bronzy red standard, white wings.
 Butterfly, white, mauve edge.
 California, bluish; no better than Mrs. Gladstone.
 Calypso, carmine, shaded magenta.
 Captain Clarke, white, shaded blue.
 Captain of the Blues, purplish blue.
 Captivation, magenta mauve standard, mauve wings; distinct and good.
 Cardinal, crimson scarlet self.
 Celestial, this appears to be the same as Countess of Radnor.

Chancellor, magenta rose.
 Colonist, carmine.
 Columbia, mauve flake, white wings.
 Coquette, rosy lavender standard, cream wings; very fine.
 Coronet, salmon red flake, large.
 Countess of Aberdeen, bluish self.
 Countess Cadogan, bluish mauve; like Imperial Blue, but a trifle larger.
 Countess Fitzwilliam, rose standard, lemon wings.
 Countess of Lathom, buff pink self.
 Countess of Powis, salmon standard, pink wings; a large and improved Orange Prince; very fine.
 Countess of Radnor, lavender.
 Countess of Shrewsbury, rose standard, lemon wings.
 Countess of Skelmersdale, rose, white wings.
 Croule, lavender, faint red tint.
 Crown Jewel, rose standard, cream wings, very fine.
 Crown Princess of Prussia, rosy buff; not wanted.
 Daybreak, red flake, light wing; not wanted.
 Delight, cream, shaded pink; poor.
 Distinction, almost, if not quite, identical with Duke of Clarence.
 Dorothy Tennant, mauve; still one of the best.
 Dorothy Vick, carmine self.
 Duchess of Edinburgh, carmine self; not wanted.
 Duchess of Sutherland, bluish self; rather larger standard than Modesty; one of the best.
 Duchess of Westminster, bluish self.
 Duchess of York, white, pencilled with pink; like Ramona.
 Duke of Clarence, claret purple; very fine.
 Duke of Sutherland, very similar to above.
 Duke of Westminster, purplish mauve, deeper than Dorothy Tennant; desirable.
 Duke of York, rose standard, lighter wing; poor.
 Earliest of All, red standard, white wing, very early, dwarf and free; valuable.
 Eliza Eckford, light rose; large.
 Emily Eckford, a pale Dorothy Tennant.
 Emily Lynch, rose standard, cream wings; not wanted.
 Emily Henderson, white; three flowers on a stem; nearly, if not quite, the best white.
 Empress of India, rose.
 Etna, flaked mauve; not wanted.
 Fairy Queen, bluish self; poor.
 Fascination, much the same as Dorothy Tennant.
 Fashion, carmine self; not wanted.
 Firefly, fine crimson self.
 Gaiety, mauve or magenta flake on white ground.
 Golden Gate, lavender.
 Golden Gleam, buff.
 Gorgeous, salmon standard, pink wings; some people think it an improvement on Orange Prince.
 Grand Blue, bluish mauve.
 Grey Friar, blue flakes on grey ground.
 Her Majesty, carmine self, large and good.
 Hon. F. Bouverie, rose standard, cream wing; a bigger Venus.
 Ignea, scarlet, shaded magenta; not wanted.
 Imperial Blue, bluish mauve.
 Indigo King, indigo.
 Invincible Carmine, like scarlet.
 Invincible Red, red flake.
 Invincible Scarlet, crimson.
 Invincible Striped, red flake.
 Isa Eckford, pink self.
 Juanita, flaked blue on white.
 Katherine Tracy, deep bluish; an improved Mrs. Gladstone, and one of the best.
 Lady Beaconsfield, rose standard, lemon wings; poor.
 Lady Grisel Hamilton, lavender, red tint.
 Lady Mary Currie, bright rose self; one of the best.
 Lady Nina Balfour, lavender, red tint.
 Lady Penzance, rose self.
 Lemon Queen, bluish standards, white or buff wings.
 Little Dorrit, red standard, white wings.
 Lord Kenyon, carmine self.
 Lottie Eckford, shaded blue, Picotee edge.
 Lottie Eckford, Yellow Budded.
 Lottie Hutchins, cream, pink pencillings; a lovely pea.
 Lovely, bluish pink self; rather overrated.
 Maid of Honor, like Butterfly, Picotee edge.
 Mrs. crimson self; one of the best.
 Meteor, salmon standard, pink wings, like Orange Prince, but burished.
 Mikado, mottled carmine rose.
 Minnehaha, red flake.
 Miss Hunt, carmine or magenta.
 Modesty, bluish self.
 Monarch, claret; not wanted.
 Mont Blanc, early dwarf white.
 Mrs. J. Chamberlain, heavy rose flake; large and fine.
 Mrs. Dugdale, carmine rose; very fine.
 Mrs. Eckford, buff; one of the best of the "yellows."
 Mrs. Fitzgerald, buff self.
 Mrs. Gladstone, bluish self.
 Mrs. Sanky, white, small, short stem.
 Navy Blue, far the finest dark blue.
 New Countess, same as the old Countess.
 New White, white, large wings.
 Novelty, carmine or magenta.
 Odd ty, magenta self.
 Old Dark Red.
 Old Double White.
 Old Red and White.
 Old Single White.
 Orange Prince, salmon standard, pink wings.

Oriental, like above, but rather richer color.
 Othello, purple.
 Ovid, rose; poor.
 Painted Lady, red standard, white wings.
 Pauline, much the same as Lemon Queen.
 Peach Blossom, pink, flushed mauve.
 Pink Friar, light red flake.
 Prima Donna, pure rose self, deeper than Katherine Tracy and Mrs. Gladstone; a good pea.
 Primrose, small, buff; not wanted.
 Primrose Fluted, buff, fringed edges.
 Prince Edward of York, carmine; a fine pea.
 Prince of Wales, carmine.
 Princess Beatrice, pink, the favorite market sort.
 Princess May, like Countess of Radnor.
 Princess of Wales, maroon flake; a very good pea.
 Princess Victoria, carmine.
 Purple Striped.
 Queen of England, white.
 Queen of the Isles, rosy mauve flake.
 Queen Victoria, buff, pink tint, large and good.
 Ramona, white, pencilled pink; like Duchess of York, and a sort of pale Lottie Hutchins.
 Red Riding Hood, pink, very badly hooded; of no use now.
 Rising Sun, rosy buff, carmine flake; poor.
 Royal Robe, pink self; a good pea.
 Royal Rose, a rose self with magenta suffusion; one of the best.
 Sadie Burpee, white, flowers from black seeds, often tinted.
 Salopian, true carmine self; about the best red.
 Senator, maroon flake; a good pea.
 Sensat on, white, pencilled pink.
 Shahzada, purple on blue ground; one of the best.
 Splendour, carmine, fine color.
 Stanley, fine purple.
 Stella Morse, cream, shaded pink, three on a stem.
 Striped Celestial, like Wawona.
 Sutton's New Pink, a fine pink.
 The Bride, dwarf white.
 The Queen, rosy lavender.
 Triumph, red standard, white wings; a good pea.
 True Blue, purplish magenta.
 Venus, pinkish buff self.
 Vesuvius, flushed mauve, poor.
 Violet Queen, dingy mauve; not wanted.
 Waverley, reddish mauve.
 Wawona, blue flaked.
 White Engl., white.

NINTH FLOWER SHOW ONE OF THE MOST SUCCESSFUL DURING THE EXPOSITION.—ASTERS, DAHLIAS AND BEGONIAS LEADING FEATURES.—MERITORIOUS VARIETIES EXHIBITED.—CUT ROSES AGAIN IN EVIDENCE.—SANDER SHOWS SPECIALTIES.—OLEANDERS IN VARIETY.—GOOD FRUITS SHOWN.—VEGETABLES.

The ninth flower, fruit and vegetable show, opening, September 12, was surely one of the best which we have had during the Exposition. It is well to remark that it took place in the most favorable weather and the flowers looked much fresher and brighter. The prominent features of that show were the asters, dahlias, begonias and foliage plants. In the contest with asters the chief position was taken by Vilmorin, closely followed by Ferard, Giavereau and Valtier. The displays were all of excellent quality and included the leading kinds of asters. The most admired, however, were the Giant Comet, Japanese and Ostrich Plume varieties, which are all very bright and attractive in appearance and to which every year new colors are added. The Ostrich Plume, like the Comet and Japanese, is to be recommended to the florists who grow asters for the market. One of our market growers planted a number of pots, as a trial, last season and found such a ready market for them that he will go more into them next year. The new sorts offer a pleasing variety of color, from golden yellow to La Negresse, darkest of all.

AN EFFECTIVE WREATH OF PROMISCUOUS MATERIAL.

In the section for dahlias the most noteworthy displays were made by Vilmorin, Molin, Nonin and Danjoux. The finest cactus dahlias shown by Vilmorin were Duc D' Orleans, of a most unique, pinkish white color, spotted and streaked with red; Matchless, dark brown; Papa Charmet, velvety coral red; Ruby, ruby red; Starfish, deep scarlet shaded with brown; Bridesmaid, pink and yellow; Mrs. Kinsburg Forster, apricot salmon; Octopus, white ground with lilac points; Beatrice, rose and violet; Keyne's White, white with cream center; African, dark brown; Lady Leopold Seymour, bright scarlet shaded brown; Exquisite, salmon and carmine; Domino, orange; Harmony, yellow and carmine rose; Mrs. Charles Turner, brilliant yellow; Austin Cannell, red and violet; Chancellor Swayne, light violet; Mrs. Thornton, dark rose shaded magenta red towards the center; Kaiserin, canary yellow; Cycle, carmine red, shaded brown, and Wallace, yellow.

Among the finest double, large flowering dahlias are to be mentioned Mme. Hoste, white ground, striped violet and lavender; Prince de Danemark, dark brown, almost black; E. Mezard, golden yellow, often bordered carmine; Mlle. Alice Grevy, white ground, dotted with lavender towards the center; Souvenir de Mme. Gagne, violet; Alcide Georgel, bluish violet, spotted dark brown; Imperatrice d' Australie, bright yellow; Gold Medal, golden yellow with bright red stripes; Buffalo Bill, dark golden yellow, dotted and striped with crimson; Junon, lilac rose; Mandarin Chinois, sulphur yellow striped pink; Miss Lilly Large, golden yellow, striped bright red; Sir Richard Wallace, dark violet; Mr. Lefebvre, yellow, striped white and red; Sam. Blet, magenta red, tinged with white; Emperor of Germany, bright yellow, slightly dotted with red; Gloire de Paris, garnet red, tinged with dark violet, the largest of all dahlias; Seraph, fleshy rose and Gloire de Lyon, pure white.

Among the finest single, large flowering dahlias were Ginevra, violet on white ground; Chrysanthemiflora, lilac, tinged white; Attraction, bright red with white points; Grandiflora alba, pure white; Merveille, yellow striped carmine; Etoile de Lyon, white bordered red; Egle, white ground, striped and tinged with red; Eclat, dark red with pure white points; Eldorado, yellow ground striped violet red; Papillon, cream ground, bordered and striped with red; Calypso, white ground, tinged red; Lutea grandiflora, pale yellow; Lamartine, canary yellow, slightly tinged with rose; Rossini, bright scarlet; Agathe, white ground striped with velvety brown; Pasteur, chamois, tinged with purple and yellow edge; Van Dyck, yellow ground, striped purplish brown; Mr. De Vilmorin, yellow ground striped red; Wm. Bullingford, canary yellow, and Jean Gazeau, brilliant scarlet.

The group of tuberous rooted begonias, double flowered, sent in by Urbain, attracted considerable attention. The sorts exhibited in pots were Mont d'Or, a new brilliant yellow sort, and King of the Dwarfs, a new compact double rose, both of which were purchased by Vilmorin & Co.; Paul Dallongeville, a new double red; Petit Henry, bright crimson, small flower; Mme. A. Courtois, creamy white; Avenir, brilliant cherry red; Mme. Louis Urbain, dark rose; Souvenir de Russie, light yellow; Lucie Moury, rose; Soleil d'Austerlitz, firey red; Aurora, salmon; Surpasse Davisii, dark red; Eugene Verdier, bright red, and Coquette de Clamart, deep rose. These begonias make splendid pot plants and deserve to be more extensively grown.

Valleand had a grand exhibit of tuberous rooted single and of crested begonias with some fine plants of his new B. picta marmorata, which is red with white spots. Lemoine also won a first prize for his small flowered begonias, Boule de Neige, Antonin Daum, Emile Friant, Aime Morot, Triomphe de Lorraine, Victor Prouve, Gloire du Montet, Emile Galle and half a dozen new seedlings not yet named. He also showed some flowers of new Anemone Japonica raised from seed and of his new Clematis Davidiana-stans, with blue flower heads, of which the single florets somewhat resemble the wood hyacinth.

Neubronner, of Neu-Ulm, sent in a good lot of Begonia Rex in pots, for which he received a first prize. Boivin secured a second prize for his new single rose begonia, Mme. Mandrot, which originated from Begonia Bertini and which he claims remains in flower from May to frost and can stand the full sun. Pfitzer, of Stuttgart, showed some fine flowers of his curly begonias, of his large flowered salvia, Ruhn von Stuttgart, of Tritoma uvaria and of gladioli.

One of the most conspicuous exhibits was the display of crotons made by the Society of Sea Baths, at Monte Carlo, Monaco. The plants staged were all magnificently trained in tall pyramidal form and the gorgeous color of their foliage commended itself to the attention of all visitors. They reflected great credit on the gardener, who, it must be admitted, has at his disposal one of the best climates in Europe. Another fine feature of the same glass house, or palace, were the decorative dracenas, crotons, marantas and ferns exhibited by L. J. Draps-Dom, Laeken-Brussel, to whom several first prizes were awarded. A group of his fine red, white and green striped Dracena Desmetiana was particularly conspicuous.

Large collections of cut roses were again contributed by Soupert & Notting, Ketten Freres and Gemen & Bourg, all from Luxembourg, and by our French growers, Leveque & Sons, Boucher, Defresne and Rothberg. Of the hundreds of sorts shown Van Houtte, Mme. Cochet, Mrs. John Laing and Souvenir de Pierre Notting were prominent.

Sander won a first prize for a pretty group of a dozen pots of the small Retinospora Sanderi, from Thibet, which the introducer claims is hardy in France. He took the same honor for a dozen pretty plants of Pandanus Sanderi. There were only a couple of entries for chrysanthemums and the first prize fell to Lemaire, with fine plants of Mlle. Lucie Faure, Vulcan, Paul Hariot and Andre Hariot.

The competition in cannas was again very keen between Vilmorin, Billiard & Barre and Dupanloup, each firm securing a first prize. Boutreux staged an interesting collection of oleanders. He grows over thirty varieties, prominent among them being Luteum plenum, double yellow; Mme. Planchon, double pink, large flower; Splendens giganteum, double, rose, very large flower; Madoni grandiflorum, half double, white, large flower; Adeline, single, white, large flower; Atrypureum, single, scarlet; Mme. Dubois, single, white, large flower; Felix Bourguet and Maguelone, single, salmon, and Professor Martin, single, dark rose.

The fruits shown this time were of rare quality. There was capital competition between the growers and the judges must have had hard work. The Horticultural School of Zawada, at Czenstochowa, Russia, sent some peaches grown on trees which are claimed to endure in the open Fahrenheit temperature 22° below zero. This may interest some of your peach growers. Speaking of peaches, I must also say a word of the splendid fruits which were sent from the famous gardens of Montreuil, near Paris. It may astonish many of your readers, who can buy a basketful for a trifle, to learn that the good Montreuil peaches are always readily sold at from 25 to 50 American cents apiece. Many of the trees are venerable and often more than 100 years old. When they die the young shoot which springs up from the old stump is well cared for and continues the tree.

A good deal of attention was also centered on the big apples, Grand Alexander, bearing the portraits of our president, of the czar, zarina, etc. The scheme met with great success at the dinner given in Paris to the Russian emperor and empress two or three years ago and has been continued since for exhibition apples. To accomplish it, it is only necessary to stick the portrait, printed on cloth on the apple and to enclose the latter in a bag, as is the custom with grapes or apples for exhibition. The apple takes its natural color except on the space given to the portrait, which takes a lighter shade.

Before concluding I must also mention the splendid collection of vegetables sent by Vilmorin, which included a splendid lot of pumpkins, squashes, peppers, egg plants and excellent specimens of the leading other vegetables. Noteworthy were two new egg plants, one called Black Snake, sent out last season by a German firm, which is about ten inches long, often bent and twisted, and the other called Brynial, which is pear-shaped, first of a purplish color turning later to an interesting yellow.

Wholesaling Cut Flowers in Chicago.

It is not so very many years ago that the wholesale cut flower business of Chicago was insignificant in comparison with that of the east, but the recent development has been so rapid that those who are not frequent visitors to this market can have little idea of the present status of the trade in the second city of the country. Prof. B. T. Galloway recently told the S. A. F. that the government statistics of floriculture showed the business in Illinois developing with a celerity quite outclassing the other sections of the country. And along with the increase in glass and the mastery of the art of producing quality with quantity, the methods of marketing the product have been ground down to as fine a point as has been reached in any city. Naturally the increase in glass has bred wholesalers and commission men and the exigencies of competition have resulted in every one of them surrounding himself with the most approved facilities within his means. We reproduce herewith a photograph of one of the representative places, that of E. C. Amling. Mr. Amling started in business in a small way about five years ago and last winter had attained a development which warranted him in moving into the room shown in the illustration. During the summer he has been busy adding to and improving his facilities for the proper handling of cut flowers until he has his place thoroughly up to-the-minute. He has marble floors, zinc covered counters, an ice box built by a man who knows his business, long distance telephones and all the et ceteras which most florists, either wholesale or retail, have learned to regard as profitable investments.

HEAT PLAYS HAVOC IN THE CUT FLOWER MARKETS.—SEPTEMBER THE DULLEST IN YEARS.—EXCELLENT FALL EXHIBITION AT THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE.—NOTES OF THE MANY EXHIBITS.—JOTTINGS OF INTEREST.

The warm weather of last week gave the cut flower trade a setback from which it has not yet recovered. The quality of roses has not improved and they are, on the contrary, now very poor again, particularly the Bridesmaids. American Beauty sells as well as anything but it has suffered with the rest. Carnations get better in stem and size of flower and of these, at least, there is no surplus. Violets are now coming in faster than they can be sold, although this is not saying much. They are not shapely yet and there is little about them, so far, to awaken enthusiasm. Last week brought to a close probably the dullest September the flower business has seen for years. It is a month that never amounts to a great deal anyway, but it may reasonably be expected to show some evidences of what is to follow. If this year's record for that particular time has any such meaning, then the prospects are not over-encouraging, but we hope differently.

The fall exhibition of the American Institute, on September 25, 26 and 27, was a more ambitious one than some of its predecessors, in plants and flowers particularly. Handsome groups of decorative plants, orchids, etc., were contributed by Julius Roehrs, Lager & Hurrell, W. Rockefeller, Wm. Turner, gardener; E. D. Adams, G. H. Hale, gardener, and the State Hospital, W. Thompson, gardener. The latter named exhibitor introduced vegetables, fruit, etc., in his group with good effect. C. G. Roebing, H. T. Clinkaberry, gardener, was awarded a certificate of merit for Cattleya gigas var. Roebingiana. Mrs. J. Hood Wright, Jas. Bell, gardener, showed some handsome caladiums. In the cut flower section dahlias predominated, the principal exhibitors being H. F. Burt and Lothrop & Higgins, the two big Massachusetts' growers who made so fine a showing last year. Other exhibitors of dahlias were Rowehl & Granz, Henri Beaulien, E. D. Adams and Rev. W. C. Bolton. A new scarlet gladiolus named Princes was shown by the Rural New Yorker and received a certificate of merit. John Lewis Childs and N. Hallock were large contributors of gladiolus blooms.

A number of growers are looking for a party named Wm. Miller who represented himself as having been in business in Columbia, Pa., and a few months ago leased a place in Astoria. He is now among the missing, having paid no rent, and left many other accounts unpaid. He is described as from 30 to 35 years of age, about five feet seven inches in height and roughly dressed.

Two Jersey City florists, Emil Bonnot and Daniel Cole, the latter also an alderman, are having a wrangle over the proposed erection of a high fence between their respective properties by Mr. Bonnot, which the alderman claims is a "spite fence" and an illegal infringement on his rights.

Smith & Hammen have opened a new store at 860 Sixth avenue, formerly occupied by C. L. Doran and later by Richard Warner.

Fred. Stewig, for the last few years with Herman Kuhn, has bought out and opened the store formerly occupied by Fred. Donahue, 960 Sixth avenue.

Jos. Cowles, of Newport, R. I., sailed on the S. S. Oceanic on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. William Plumb also sailed on the same steamer with the intention of remaining in England.

Henry Butler is seriously ill and confined to his home.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Chas. F. McCaffrey, 27 years of age, employed by A. Baylis, committed suicide by jumping into the river on the morning of September 25.

BEAUTIFUL AUTUMN WEATHER NOT APPRECIATED IN THE TRADE—SHARP FREEZE WANTED TO ENLIVEN THE MARKET.—CARNATIONS AT PATTEN'S.—PLANT PREPARATIONS AT EDGAR'S.—FRUIT AND VEGETABLE EXHIBITION.—GOOD EXHIBITS BUT NOTHING NEW IN SIGHT.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

We are enjoying a season of beautiful autumn weather now, with nothing particular to find fault with excepting the effects of the dry season, which it will take many days of steady rain to fully obliterate. The greenhouse flower dealer naturally objects, for business reasons, to any weather that prolongs the period of outdoor bloom and will not be sorry to see the gardens' beauty finish in a good sharp freeze, and the retail store keeper, also, is willing to see the suburban and rural attractions brought to an end in the same fashion if only this will send his customers trooping back into town, but nobody seriously looks for any steady business activity until after election day and whatever comes in the meantime is just so much found. Roses are still in excess of the demand and many of them are coming in rather soft and languid because of the warm weather. American Beauty, which for a time seemed to be exempt from the prevailing dullness, is getting it this week and, while the dealers are not inclined to lower quotations on any desirable grades, Beauties are beginning to accumulate in wholesalers' hands in a rather discouraging manner and with prospects of more or less loss while present conditions exist. Carnations are, fortunately, growing shorter in cut, with quality below the average and demand fairly brisk. As to other staples of the market there is nothing special to be said at present.

Carnations hereabouts made a good growth in the field the past summer notwithstanding the unusually dry and hot season. Patten & Co., at Tewkesbury, had 40,000 planted out and there never was a lot of carnations freer from disease than these were, although a portion of the field had been planted to carnations eight consecutive years. Mr. Patten is one of the most enthusiastic carnationists in this section and gives every new aspirant a chance to show what it will do in the light, thin New England soil. Especially large and strong this season are Morning Glory, Olympia, The Marquis, Lawson, Brown, Crocker, Bradt, Walter, Melba and Mangold. Joost, Adams, Roslyn, Chicago, John Young, Crane and Genevieve Lord are also good and with exceptionally fine, tufted roots. White Cloud, Glacier and Gomez are rather light. Peru gives evidence of being an early variety, just what is needed in whites. Apart from a very little stem rot on Joost no disease of any kind is to be seen. For outside summer flowering Mr. Patten has been growing Crane, Joost, Fisher, Walter, Bon Ton and Edith Foster. The latter is decidedly the best white for this summer, making good flowers and requiring little budding. Most of the other varieties named were inclined to be very stubby this year.

The fact that Easter is coming is forcibly impressed upon the visitor to Wm. Edgar's Waverly establishment, even at this date. Acacias, ericas, genistas, azaleas and other specialties for that still remote event occupy a large share of the available room. Boston ferns, Adiantum Farleyense, ficuses, asparagus baskets and fern pans attest the fact that the plant business in the interim will not be neglected. One of the best novelties seen here is the crested Nephrodium molle corymbosum that is bound to take its place as a basket fern alongside the now indispensable Aspidium tensesense. Mr. Edgar is extending his big plant house another hundred feet, but even with this roomy addition it is difficult to see how he will house the large stock on hand. The early chrysanthemum, Fitzwygram, has been in bloom for some weeks. Adiantum tenebrum is grown largely here for cutting and is in steady demand for baskets and large work for which the common A. cuneatum is too frail and light.

The annual fruit and vegetable exhibition which was held at Horticultural Hall last week was remarkable for the superb quality of the exhibits. Pears and apples were unsurpassed. Only one regret comes up in contemplating such a magnificent demonstration of Massachusetts' possibilities in fruit raising, and that is the absence, for years, of anything new. In the strawberry line, earlier in the season, there is always something to be seen to indicate advancement, but progress in the development of fall fruits seems to have nearly ceased. Whether because the limit of quality has been reached or because, as some assert, the young, progressive element in horticulture finds landscape gardening and similar lines more remunerative and attractive than the pomological field, is a question. If there is a Hovey or a Wilder in the present generation he is keeping himself assiduously hidden.

In the vegetable department, which occupied the entire lower hall, nothing was more interesting than the grand collection displayed on the stage by E. C. Lewis, for which he received a silver medal. It was a most impressive and striking example of what can be accomplished by one apt man. There were enough plants and flowers distributed through the halls to give the necessary decorative effect to the exhibition. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. Thatcher, gardener, won first prize for show plants and E. S. Converse, D. F. Roy, gardener, was second. A beautiful showing of choice herbaceous flowers was made by the Blue Hill Nursery and H. F. Burt was on hand with another fine collection of dahlias including sixty named varieties of the cactus type and seventy-five of the show and decorative sorts. F. A. Blake's display of fifty-six named geraniums, including the "Cottage Gardens collection," was greatly admired.

Mrs. Lynes, wife of J. W. Lynes, of Ingram & Lynes, of Reading, died suddenly in New York, on September 23. She leaves a six-months-old baby. Much sympathy is expressed among the trade. The body will be taken to England for interment.

F. R. Mathison has just returned from a trip to the White Mountains in company with friends. Next best to actually going there is to listen to Fred's entertaining account of his experiences in that "Switzerland of America."

It is announced that Superintendent Doogue has made arrangements to have the plants in the public gardens next summer numbered to correspond with a complete descriptive catalogue which is to be distributed free.

Michael Coffey, aged 70 years, who for some years conducted a greenhouse in Dorchester, of late employed as a janitor, was found dead in a field near his home on October 1. The cause was heart disease.

Edmund M. Wood is a candidate for the nomination on the democratic ticket at Natick, as representative to the Massachusetts legislature.

Boston has been favored with a big influx of visitors this week, some bent on selling, others on buying. Among them were C. B. Knickman, representing Bobbink & Atkins; John Barclay, representing Vaughan's Seed Store; J. Austin Shaw, representing Jackson & Perkins Co.; F. O. Willard, Taunton; Jos. Fuller, Leominster; G. H. Hill, Haverhill; E. L. Hoxie, Cotuit; E. Jacobson, Montpelier, Vt.; H. F. A. Lange, Worcester.

BUSINESS SHOWS A VERY CONSIDERABLE IMPROVEMENT.—PRICES ARE VERY REASONABLE.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS ARE IN DEMAND.—OCTOBER MEETING OF THE CLUB.—A WEDDING AND VARIOUS ITEMS.

There is quite an improvement in the business situation at this writing. That the people have returned from their summer journeys is more evident every day in the increased demand for plants and cut flowers. The stores have commenced to stock up with plants and the growers are feeling the local demand which usually follows their shipping trade. Roses are improving but it will be some time before they can be called at all finished. Beauties are first in demand and range in price from $1 to $1.25 per dozen. Brides and Bridesmaids are $3 per hundred, while $4 is asked for a few of the extras. Kaisersins and Meteors range about the same. Carnations are not gaining very fast and are rather small and short stemmed; $1 is asked for the best medium and $1.50 for the extras. A few single violets are coming in but they scarcely last the day out. No doubles are obtainable as yet. There are quite a number of orchid displays being made in the windows of the swell shops. Orchids are so cheap now that it pays to carry them for the show they make. Asters are done but there are dahlias coming in to take their place. No chrysanthemums are in sight as yet. We hope to see them soon, as the people are hungering and thirsting after novelties and seem always in advance of the season. Cosmos is frequently called for but only the dwarf kind is in the market, and little of that.

At the October meeting of the Florists' Club last Tuesday evening, the annual election for officers was held and resulted in the election of the old board, president, W. K. Harris; vice-president, John Westcott; secretary, Edwin Lonsdale; treasurer, J. W. Cofresh. Robert Kift repeated his illustrated lecture given before the convention. There were quite a number of visitors present, as a general invitation had been extended to the public. The meeting was held in the lecture room of the horticultural society, the business of the meeting being transacted after the lecture. The subject for the next meeting is hard at work looking up a talented speaker. L. K. Peacock made an exhibit of single and new dahlias which was admired. He received a vote of thanks for the same.

Arthur Burton, John Burton's eldest son, was married last Tuesday evening to Miss Edith D. Harper, at Grace Methodist Church, Broad and Master streets. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, which was attended by many of the craft.

Charles Fox, Jr., of Twenty-first street and Columbia avenue, has rented a store temporarily on Chestnut street, under the old Girard House, and is advertising bargains in plants.

Mrs. Wolf, of Broad and Columbia streets, is soon to place a new wagon on the street, which is about all a florists' delivery wagon should be.

Jacob D. Eisele arrived from Europe last Tuesday. He looks well and says he had a most pleasant summer.

Thomas Minge has resigned his position at Fairmount Park after many years of service.

John Burton and John Westcott have been down on Barnegat Bay, trying the fish again. K.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—BUSINESS ON THE UP GRADE.—ROSES IMPROVING.—CARNATIONS IN VERY GOOD DEMAND.—CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN ACTIVE CALL.—DOINGS AT WESTERN SPRINGS.—BUILDINGS.—CANNAS MAKE FINE SHOWING.—A NEW FRENCH SORT.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF INTEREST IN THE TRADE.

While trade has improved considerably in the period since last report, it is by no means what it should be, nor what it would be with the frost which should have been here ere this. Frost to kill off the outdoor flowers, which are now very poor at best, would not only put some life into the demand, but it would cut down the production of soft tea roses, improve qualities in general and stiffen prices. The only loss would be on carnations in the field. Carnations are not over-plentiful now; in fact, sometimes it requires a good deal of effort to locate necessary blooms, particularly when some particular shade of color is required, and a great many of the best flowers are cut out of doors. This has been an exceptionally favorable season for field culture of carnations and the growers who have disbudded and cared for their stock are at present reaping their reward in very fair average returns. Of roses Beauties are in strongest demand and of best quality. Nice, clean stock is the rule with nearly all the growers, and perfect buds are obtainable on all kinds of stems. The Brides and Bridesmaids are improving in quality and demand and Meteor is giving slightly increased cuts, but such rose specialties as Golden Gate, Liberty and La France are not yet obtainable in quantity if there is a stipulation as to quality. There seems to be an active demand for chrysanthemums, but inquiry among the growers elicits the very general response that crops will be somewhat late. The aster crop has virtually all been harvested before frost this year. There are a few dahlias in sight but not enough to make any impression on the market.

There is a large number of men now at work at Vaughan's greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., setting the place in order for the coming season's trade. New packing sheds and office buildings have taken the place of the old ones and are nearly completed. The structure is 36x300 feet and fully equipped with every modern appliance for expeditious work. In the extensive canna plantations many hands are engaged taking up the plants. So far the frost has scarce touched these plants here, and the great blocks of color still impress one with the splendid utility of the canna for decorative purposes. It is only the well proved standard sorts that are grown in quantity, but the manager, James S. Wilson, has a few meritorious seedlings, particularly a yellow with faint orange markings. Egandale, Leonard Vaughan, Alphonse Bouvier, Charles Henderson and Dwarf Florence Vaughan loom up in fine shape. L. Patry is probably the best of the recent French sorts. It attains to a height of five feet and has good green foliage. The salmon red flowers are of fair size and produced very freely in large, many-branched heads. The newer phloxes are also grown in considerable quantity and they are now exceedingly showy. Dahlias look well, also field plants of carnations, especially The Marquis.

At the Florists' Club's special meeting at the Sherman House, Saturday, September 29, committees were appointed to solicit subscriptions for the Galveston florists. The committees were to report at the regular meeting last night, but any of the wholesale houses will still receive and forward donations.

"Cash" Bickford, who is well known for the size of his operations, after a summer lay-off, has opened a store at 84 Jackson boulevard. "Cash" says that the money is not made in selling but in buying, and that location cuts little figure, the trade going where there is stock to choose from.

The violet growers, are, in general, felicitating themselves this year. Their plants are in good health and promise large yields. Cuts are pretty heavy already, one commission house receiving

2,600 on October 2; the best ones sold readily at $1.25 a hundred.

George Reinberg has been shipping carnation plants by the two-horse wagon-load this week and the other growers are doing a great deal in that line. Many varieties are now very scarce.

The State street stores have required some good decorations this week and the florists themselves have awakened to the extent of putting some life into their window displays.

Wietor Brothers, who formerly sent in all their cut early in the morning, now have a shipment reaching the store at 2 p. m., the same as the other large growers.

McKellar & Winterson shipped out 550 doves on a single order the other day. They were for a street fair in a provincial city.

At Kennicott's the other day they had a pot of auratum lilies, many of which were double, having two complete rows of petals.

Bentley & Co. are receiving some Flora Hill, Triumph and White Cloud carnations which are very fine for the season.

The George Wittbold Company reports plant trade picking up at a wonderful rate in the past week.

Jacob Meyer, of Niles Center, celebrated his forty-third birthday anniversary September 4.

Mrs. E. H. Hunt has gone to Seattle to visit in the family of her daughter-in-law.

Visitors: W. H. Drake, Kenosha; George Faber, Kankakee; A. Anderson, Batavia; J. W. Miller, Freeport.

NOTES OF THE DOINGS AT THE OLD DEUSTER RANGE.—PROBABILITY OF A CONSIDERABLE INCREASE THERE NEXT SEASON.—JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE AMONG GROWERS AND WHOLESALEERS.

Albert Hoga has the houses of C. C. Pollworth Co. in excellent condition. Kentias and Boston ferns are particularly good. W. A. Kennedy, who occupies the balance of the Deuster houses, has been hard at work and certainly has the promise of some choice stock this winter. House after house of carnations are clean and disbudded. As they show up to-day Ethel Crocker is the prettiest flower. Mrs. Lawson will doubtless forge to the front later on. Mary Wood is very good, also Flora Hill, Evanston, and others. Roses are in prosperous condition. Mr. Kennedy likes Golden Gate and is making a success of it. His 1000 plants of Liberty look like business but it is too early to judge of its paying qualities. He has a sport of the Perle des Jardins, pink, somewhat darker than Golden Gate, foliage and habit of growth the same as Perle. He has the true Asparagus plumosus nanus, a plant very much advertised but hard to get. Mr. Kennedy has purchased land a short distance west of where he now is and is arranging plans for a range of glass which will, in all probability, be built next summer. The C. C. Pollworth Co. will no doubt increase their plant business to occupy the whole of the Deuster place.

Heitman & Bierman have a beautiful piece of ground out on North avenue, where they have just glazed four houses, each eighty feet long, three for carnations and one for violets. The boiler room and work shop have been calculated for a large plant, to be added later. They have everything required for success. Mr. Bierman has been with Currie Bros. for some years.

The first fine box of violets arrived October 3, from Loeffler and received a hearty welcome. Choice flowers are exceedingly scarce just now, but carnations are quite sure to be plentiful in another week and roses have picked up nicely during the last ten days. Smilax and asparagus are plentiful.

Mr. Zipnick, who has made a specialty of mignonette, complains of smoke from the rolling mills damaging his crop. He thinks he will have to grow something else or move to another location.

Alabama smilax has been used quite extensively in the last three weeks. It seems to be of better quality than last season and is now kept on hand by our wholesale dealers.

Miss Anna Poehlmann, the popular bookkeeper for Holton & Hunkel Co., has returned from her European trip and is hard at work again.

Holton & Hunkel Co. have just finished a large cool room that will hold a car-load of flowers. C. B. W.

BUSINESS SHOWS DECIDED IMPROVEMENT.—CARNATIONS SCARCE.—FLORISTS' CLUB TO MEET.—NOTES AND VISITORS.

Business is decidedly better than it has been for some time. Two large funerals and the hall Tuesday are no doubt responsible to a large extent for the improved condition. Prices have stiffened up a shade and stock is fairly plentiful, with the exception of good carnations. These would have brought $2 Tuesday. Roses are in right supply to meet the demand, and there are Beauties galore, but a very small percentage of them have the desired length of stem.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club occurs Thursday, October 11, and as this will be most interesting and instructive it is hoped that there may be a full attendance. Essays will be read by Emil Schray entitled "Profitable Winter Blooming Plants," and by F. J. Fillmore, "The Best Method of Growing and the Best Varieties of Roses for Present Demand."

About 1,500 persons attended the wild flower show last Saturday, given by the Engelmann Botanical Club. The club met last Thursday and viewed some lantern slides illustrating the yuccas and some of their allies.

Visitors in town: C. W. Scott, of Vaughan's Seed Store; A. J. Pieters, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington; T. J. Wright, Pittsburg, Kan.

KING CORN TO HOLD SWAY.—ANTICIPATIONS OF INCREASED TRADE.

Peoria is gay with preparations for the corn carnival and florists are looking for an increase in trade. There are plenty of good roses and carnations are increasing; they have been rather scarce. Jewish New Year brought quite a brisk demand for cut flowers; otherwise trade has been rather quiet. A few good Princess of Wales violets are seen at Murray's.

Geo. A. Kuhl, of Pekin, is looking very much benefited by his rest in Dakota this summer. His Boston ferns are very fine and his stock large.

Cole Bros. will increase their place by 25,000 feet shortly, principally for roses.

PEORIAN.

MARION, IA.—George Hutton has started a florist business here with two houses 15x100 and one 8x30.

At C. W. Ward's, Queens, N. Y., they call Kate Gray the "high gear" canna.

It will soon be time for the palm swindler to commence operations again.

The indications are that the chrysanthemum is at the threshold of a very good season

MENTION is made in the Garden of Kniphofia (Tritoma) Tucki, a new species which is said to flower unusually early.

THE adjustment of labor difficulties in the anthracite coal fields restores to many growers profits which were thought to be vanishing.

TRITOMA PFITZERII is a very desirable subject with which to fill a large bed, placing the strongest plants in the center and the smaller ones by the margin.

SURPLUSES of field grown carnation plants are being rapidly taken up and those who provided wholesale stocks of the right varieties have done a large business.

Treatment of Carnation Blooms.

In a recent issue of another paper it is recommended to place carnation blooms in a temperature of 40° after cutting.
This is wrong. The temperature should never be allowed to go below 50°, and two or three degrees above that point is better than a like number below.

Absolute cleanliness in the storage room, a good circulation of dry, pure air, a half light instead of darkness during the daytime and the above temperature will greatly improve the size, appearance and keeping qualities of blooms if stored under these conditions for twelve to fifteen hours. We find that some varieties continue to improve up to thirty hours of storage.

Ice is poison to carnations and should never be used when it is possible to avoid it. When compelled to choose between a 60° temperature and the ordinary ice-box we prefer the 60°. Damp floors or walls, a close, confined atmosphere, dirt or filth in the room, especially decaying vegetable matter, are to be avoided. The proper cutting, storage, sorting and packing of carnations has almost as much to do with the placing of first-class flowers on the market as the grower's skill in producing the flowers. One sees daily in our large markets thousands of blooms which could, by proper handling after cutting, have been increased one-half in value.

Society of American Florists.*DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

M. H. Walsh, of Woods Holl, Mass., registers a new rose, Flush o' Dawn, a hybrid tea; flowers light pink changing to white, fragrant, five to six inches in diameter when open; vigorous grower;
stems two and one-half to three feet;
foliage dark and glossy; continuous bloomer.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia,
Pa., register the following new dahlias:
Salmon Queen (Peacock). Decorative; height three and one-half feet; bushy grower; flowers large, salmon, deepening to orange salmon towards center;
petals long-pointed. Harlequin (Bassett).
Fancy; dwarf, branching, with long slender stems; height two feet; flowers small to medium, crimson with white stripe through each petal; stripe sometimes suffused with pink; flowers occasionally solid crimson.

Gastav Obermeyer, Parkersburg, W.

Memorial Day Flowering Plants.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please give a list of the most desirable flowering plants for sales around Memorial day.

Illinois.—The following are the plants mostly in evidence at Memorial day:
Alyssum, bellis, begonias, carnations, fuchsias, feverfew, geraniums, heliotrope, hydrangeas, lantanas, myrtle, myosotis, pansies, petunias, roses, salvias, etc.

THOMAS WALLIS.

Massachusetts.—I would mention among hardy shrubs the lilacs, rhododendrons, Azalea mollis and Ghent azaleas, Spiraea Thunbergi and S. Van Houttei. Among more tender plants which require but little heat are Hydrangea hortensis, pansies, forget-me-nots, English daisies and Silene pendula compacta.

H. WILSON ROSS.

Pennsylvania.—We find the most desirable flowering plants for sales at Memorial day to be, first, geraniums, they being used more freely, both in and out of pots, than any other plant; next comes roses, after them hydrangeas, astilbes, Deutzia gracilis and Lilium longiflorum. We also find 10-inch or 12-inch pans of pansies, myosotis or button daisies to sell readily.

JOHN WESTCOTT.

Adhesive Whitewash.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please inform me through the columns of your paper what can be mixed with air slaked lime and water to make it stick to wood without peeling off after a couple of weeks, and oblige.

E. A.

Replying to the inquiry of "E. A." I would advise not to use air slaked lime.
Use fresh lump lime. For each fifty gallons of whitewash add two quarts of linseed oil and one pint of salt. The oil and salt should be put on the lime before slaking and the mixture boiled up together. Another easy method of making whitewash adhesive is to add to each fifty gallons of whitewash, two quarts of ordinary calciminer's sizing.

TRADE FAIR BUT CONFINED TO WEDDING WORK.—STOCK EQUAL TO ALL DEMANDS.
—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

With weather like summer, trade is very quiet, at least in so far as counter sales are concerned. There are quite a number of weddings requiring the use of large numbers of flowers, the orders being well distributed. Stock is in fair supply and constantly improving in quality. Beauties, Kaisersins and Meteors are fine. Chrysanthemums are obtainable but their size is nothing to brag about. W. C. Stroh, of Attica, was first in with them. Jerry Brookins, of Orchard Park, has the best carnations at present in sight.

S. A. Anderson is to have a fine new delivery wagon. Better wait a little while and get an automobile.

W. A. Adams has his fine new ice box in full show now.

Prof. Cowell contemplates a trip east next week.

W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., was a recent visitor.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting September 27 and the F. R. Pierson Company made a grand display of dahlias, exhibiting seventeen varieties, which was awarded a certificate of merit. They also showed three vases of cannas, Rosemawr, Kate Grey and Tarrytown; the two first named varieties were awarded certificates. Wm. Turner showed seven varieties of dahlias, the colors being excellent. John Egan was awarded a certificate of merit for his new seedling canna; the color of the flower is orange scarlet, the foliage a dark bronze. Mr. Egan showed a vase of Dahlia camelliaeflora. The exhibits created considerable discussion on dahlia culture. The following were elected to membership: Alex. Hoag, E. Hansen, F. S. Pammer, Chas. Briggs, Wm. P. Ross and C. Robinson.

Trade is showing signs of revival but we can stand a very considerable increase before we reach a point at which any of us will be rushed; yet, the outlook is good. The supply of stock is adequate and qualities are fair, much better than a few weeks ago. Carnations are doing as well as could be expected.

Our park commissioners are planning numerous important improvements in the spring and have had a Boston landscape architect out here for consultation.

The floral display at the state fair was not all that it is "cracked up" to have been.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

THE sympathy of the trade is extended to Peter Hollenback, of Chicago, because of the death of his wife.

ALFRED EMERICH, representing Vilmoren-Andrieux & Co., is now in this country, having arrived on the S. S. Aquitaine.

THE Michigan tomato seed crop has turned out worse than was anticipated in August, most varieties yielding less than half of an average crop.

VISITED PARIS: James Farquhar, of Boston, Mass.; O. W. Clark, of Buffalo, N. Y.; J. D. Eisele and George Clark, of the firm of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.

SAN JOSE, CAL.—Chas. P. Braslan, who has returned from his summer trip to Cape Nome, will make his usual contracting trip east as soon as the present season's shipments are closed.

MRS. MULLER will carry on the business of the late Ernst Muller, at Erfurt, Germany, under the old title of J. S. Schmidt. Fritz Gartner, Fritz Luder and Lorez Zopes have been admitted to the firm.

CHAUNCEY P. COY the veteran vine seed grower of Waterloo, Neb., is employing his spare moments watching the water rise, pumped by a gasoline engine into a newly laid out fish pond behind his house. This pond will also serve as a bathing place in summer and a skating rink in winter for his family and numerous friends.

French Seed Crops.

Reports on the growing crops continue to be discouraging. The estimates made by the growers some weeks ago must be considerably reduced at this date. This is especially the case with all radishes, which are almost a total failure, and with some celeries. The carrots, too, have not only suffered by the withering heat of July and August, but the crop has been sadly attacked by several kinds of depressaries which almost completely destroyed it in the western part of France.

Mangels and some of the beets will come in much more sparingly than was at first expected and the samples from some of the growing districts contain a good deal more small seeds than usual. The seedsmen will have to be lenient about the appearance of the seeds this season, if they do not wish their orders to be cut down to a very large extent.

The growers have now had two or three poor years and they are reluctant to accept orders at the old quotations. Are they to blame? I think not. It is an unpleasant thing to bestow a year of care and of expensive labor on a crop, all for nothing. And what anxiety all the time! If a crop escapes one mischief, it is only to fall into another ill.

On the other hand the prospects in western France for next season are not very bright. The cabbages could not all be planted out in due time, on account of the drought, and sowing of the beets, mangels and turnips had to be delayed for the same reason. The month of September has been very dry and it is desirable that we get some good showers to improve things for next season.

PARISIAN.

SEVERAL very large shipments of JAPAN LONGIFLORUM have arrived in very bad condition—more than half of the bulbs having been lost by heating. This large loss will make a scarcity in this article, and probably many dealers will be unable to fill their orders in full. If you do not succeed in getting your full supplies, we have still to offer a fine lot of

BERMUDA-GROWN LONGIFLORUM

These Bulbs are in splendid shape. We can supply them at $14 PER CASE; 350 Bulbs to the case. We also have a fine stock of

LILIUM HARRISII

7-9 inch size is generally scarce, but we have a very fine stock of this size still on hand—a lot of bulbs that were left in the ground and dug late, and in consequence they are in grand shape. Bulbs are plump, bright and clean, and as fine a lot of Harrisii as anyone would want to handle. We can supply these, as long as unsold, as follows:

5-7's, 400 bulbs to the case, only $16 per case. 7-9's, 200 bulbs to the case, only $18 per case.

Order at once before we are sold out.

We also offer a very fine stock of

WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS

Extra quality bulbs, 12-15 cm., in case lots, 2100 bulbs to the case, $16.00 per 1000.

Paper White Narcissus Grandiflora

Case lots, about 1300 bulbs to the case, $7.50 per 1000.

5% discount from above-named prices when cash is remitted with order.

SOUTHERN NATURAL PEACH PITS

being very small in size, contain more than double the number to the bushel. We have for many years annually supplied a majority of the best Nurserymen and Peach Growers in the United States. Samples and prices on application.

For several years past we have given special attention to the procuring of Southern Natural Peach Pits, selected from original seedling trees in the mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina, which are entirely free from yellows or disease, guaranteed to give good stands and make much stronger and healthier trees than those from any other section. These pits

WE are proud of the high grade of the American Beauties which we handle. Our Brides, Bridesmaids, Perles and Meteors, too, are par excellence. As to Carnations, our growers' stocks were never finer at this season. Besides the every-day, standard sorts, we have such fancy varieties as Dorothy, Ethel Crocker, G. H. Crane, The Marquis, Mrs. Lawson, Genevieve Lord, Mrs. Bradt, White Cloud, Jubilee, Triumph, America and Mary Wood. While we make every effort to supply this grade of stock when called for on shipping orders, these fancy varieties sell at sight and at present we ought to have orders at least one day in advance.

We are shipping Chrysanthemums, but they will not be plentiful for some time, as all growers report late crops.

We are making every effort to take care of the buyers who want regular supplies of strictly high-grade stock and as our capacity is very large we shall be pleased to add you to our list of customers. We can at all times supply everything which is to be had in Chicago.

At the State Fair at Grand Rapids the Monroe Nursery Co., of Monroe, Mich., and N. P. Husted & Co., of Lowell, made very creditable displays of trees and fruits.

FIRE on the morning of September 26 destroyed the barns, shops, workrooms and packing cellar at Nelson Bogue's nursery near Batavia, N. Y. The loss was $4000.

The collective exhibit of American fruit trees and fruits has been awarded a grand prize at the Paris Exposition and silver medals for collections of photographs of horticultural subjects have been awarded to the Albaugh Nursery Co., Fort Valley, Ga.; the California Nursery Co., Niles, Cal., and G. C. Roeding, Fresno, Cal.

The Cutting Back of the Clematis.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We have read to-day the comments which Mr. Egan has to make upon our plan of preserving the clematis by cutting the young plants back in spring and think it necessary to say, in behalf of this beautiful species, that it is not our meaning to cut back the plants every year. We agree with Mr. Egan that the plants would not stand it many seasons. We cut the clematis back to have strong, healthy shoots on which the plant may make its top and we are convinced that if these shoots are properly taken care of and protected against breakage at the level of the ground, the plant will do well, not only the first year but for the years following. If Mr. Egan makes any experiments along this line we should be pleased to learn of the results.

Boskoop. KOSTER & Co.

Borers in Trees and Shrubs.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Our lilacs and hickories are infested with a worm which causes great injury. I am sending a lilac branch which shows their ravages. Please give me the name of the pest and a method of combating it. K.

The branch of lilac which you send is infested by the so-called lilac borer, Podotesia syringæ. This is the larva of one of the clear-winged moths and it has the habit of boring into the wood of lilac, as well as ash, making in its exit from the trees, round holes which often remain for some time without healing. When trees are discovered to be injured beyond recovery they should be promptly cut down and destroyed by fire, that neighboring healthy growth may be protected from insects that might breed from the injured trees. If the presence of borers is detected while the larvæ are still young, it may be possible to save the trees by injecting bisulphide of carbon into the openings of the burrows and then plugging them tightly with coal tar, grafting wax, or some similar material. Chief reliance in the protection of trees against borers is in the early application of preventatives during the time of the appearance of the parent insects. In circular No. 24, Second Series, of the Division of Entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture, will be found a full consideration of protective measures. L. O. HOWARD.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—There is no prospect of the Baur-Buckbee case coming to trial at this term of court, the authorities having failed to summon one of the parties to the suit.

STAMFORD, - CONN.

OUR PASTIMES.

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Now the Chicago florists are talking of a gunning team for the next convention. The trade of that city can boast of some pretty good shots.

At St. Louis.

The following is the record of games rolled Monday night, October 1:

Table with 9 columns: Player, 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th Av. Rows include Kuehn, Beneke, Weber, Young, Scott.

At Chicago.

The following is the score made Friday evening, September 28:

Table with 6 columns: Player, 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, Av. Rows include John Dezoan, Phil. Hauswirth, E. F. Winterson, Chas. Balluff, W. Kreithing, A. Frank, E. J. Hauswirth, Walter Heffron.

At Flatbush.

The last game, probably, on the old alleys was rolled by the Flatbush Florists' Bowling Club on Thursday, September 27, and the scores as given below were recorded. It was announced that the new alleys had been promised for the next meeting, that of October 4:

Table with 5 columns: Player, 1st, 2d, 3d, Av. Rows include Mellis, A. Zeller, Riley, Wocker, P. Dailledouze, E. Dailledouze, H. Dailledouze, Schmutz, C. Zeller.

At Denver.

The following is the score at Denver, September 25:

Table with 6 columns: Player, 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, Av. Rows include Phil. Scott, Neil Jakobson, Ben Boldt, Jno. Berry, Geo. Zimmer, Chas. Fraoz, C. J. Thiess, J. A. Valentine, N. A. Benson, C. A. Benson.

On October 2 the Denver Florists' Bowling Club played a match game with the Boomarang Bowling Club, the latter winning by but sixteen pins in a total score for the three games as follows:

Table with 5 columns: Florists, 1st, 2d, 3d, Tl. Rows include Geo. Zimmer, Phil. Scott, Al. Mauff, Jno. Berry, Chas. Fraoz, Total, Boomaraugs.

At Philadelphia.

There is not much doing; that is no matches, the boys having gone out to grass, as it were, to recuperate since the tussle in August. Of course there are a good many social games, just to see the color of the other fellow's ticket, but they are not the genuine, nerve straining contests in which it is an honor to win. However, something like the real stuff is to be seen in the near future, so says Captain Moss. The following list contains the averages of the bowlers for the month of September:

Table with 2 columns: Name, Average. Rows include Johnson, Hamilton, Moore, Westcott, Kift, Kuester, Allen, Baker, Harris, Moss, Anderson, Craig, Archer, Gibson, Eisenbrey, Watson, Baroes, Stoneham, Connor, Eimmerman, Brown, Haupt, Barrett, Fletcher, Bonsall, Hallowell, Shields, Kirk.

Paying Dinner Wagers at Boston.

Friday, September 28, witnessed the payment of a wager due since the memorable Columbia-Shamrock yacht race, which, for various causes, had been deferred from time to time. Lawrence Cotter was the winner and E. M. Wood Tenstrike—"Any cash I win from the boys at this sort of thing I give to my wife." Spare—"Just so--pla mosey, I suppose." —Chicago Daily News.

and Edward Hatch the losers of a good dinner for twenty of Mr. Cotter's friends. The burden of entertaining could not have fallen on a better equipped pair and there was joy within a score of waistcoats when the invitations were received by the lucky owners. These documents were unique in their way. A comical cartoon on the outside showed why the Shamrock had been "out-winded" and "out-footed." Inside it was announced that the knowledge of marine architecture, navigation, seamanship, etc., of the subscribers having been set at naught through the combined influence of Providence (not R. I.), John B. and N. G. Herreshoff, Capt. Chas. Barr and a few others, they desired to say that their compasses had been readjusted and that on the afternoon of Friday, September 28, they would go over several "courses" at the Point Shirley Club House in which their friends were cordially invited to join. A few of the literary gems in the announcement were as follows:

"There will be no 'reaching,' as everything will be passed to you, and there will be no 'beating,' because everything will be paid for in advance by the undersigned."

"Draft" and "beam" will, of course, be to the advantage of those having the largest."

"No time limit is fixed for the finish." To give an adequate idea of the kind of dinner a Boston man has to put up when he loses a bet we give the menu in full:

- "God Helps Those Who Help Themselves." Clam Broth in Cups. (Not the America's) Olives and Celery. (The colors of the Shamrock.) Steamed Clams. (Dumb as Wood.) Clam Chowder. (A little of everything that's good except "tacks" and "stays") Baked Turbot, a la Taft. (No "gybing.") Cucumbers. (But no sunbeams.) Tomato Salad. ("You fat and greasy citizens.") Clam Fritters. ("Fresh from the 'reefs.") Baked Lobster. (For the "doldrums.") Tom and Jerry Frappe. (Not from the "hatchway," but a la Maryland.) Chicken. (Not from the "hatchway," but a la Maryland.) Baked Sweet Potatoes. (From "Columbia's happy land.") Freoch Fried Potatoes. (From the land of the Shamrock.) Green Corn. (Give every man thy ear.) Baked Indian Pudding. (All sailors eat "plum duff.") Frozen Pudding. ("With spirits from the vasty deep.") Fruit. (Picked up "along the shore.") Crackers. ("Water" biscuit and "pilot" bread.) Cheese. ("When the good man yields his breath.") Coffee. (For an "even keel.") "Sublime tobacco! which from east and west Cheers the tar's labor * * * * * Give me a cigar!

The manipulation of the above feast and the subsequent oratory used up the entire afternoon and evening, but the participants, being principally the members of the famed "Old Guard," were equal to the occasion and wound up as fresh as when they started, and looking ahead joyously to the coming election season, hoping that Messrs. Hatch, Wood, Cotter and other good providers will still continue to make dinner wagers.

"Indispensable"

EDITION OF 1900,
POSTPAID, $2.00

This is the only word which describes the American Florist Company's Trade Directory. This book, 387 pages of facts tersely told, is issued annually and is an aid to business and money making which no wholesaler or traveling salesman can afford to be without. It contains the name of every Florist, Nurseryman and Seedsman, arranged both by states and towns and alphabetically; and new lists of Gardeners or Superintendents of private estates, Experiment Station Horticulturists, Landscape Architects and Horticultural Supply Concerns. It will save many times its cost by enabling you to cover America with your catalogue and at the same time waste no printed matter or postage on dead names.

A VISIT TO THE BUSY ESTABLISHMENT OF THE EVENDEN BROTHERS.—GOOD STOCK THE RULE.

The consensus of opinion is that despite the adverse conditions, generally conceded to have a detrimental effect on business, namely the presidential campaign and the strike in the Pennsylvania coal regions, business will go on undisturbed. This is most gratifying, indeed, and goes to prove that the florists as a body are optimists. If further proof be required as to the roseate views held by the florists, one need only point to the numerous improvements and additional buildings to be seen almost everywhere.

Evenden Bros. have just completed an additional house covering 50x155, two of the same dimensions having been built last summer. It is needless to add that with improved facilities their carnations, of which they make a specialty, will be of an improved order. Their field plants are all that could possibly be desired, clean, vigorous and healthy. It is noteworthy that none of the novelties, such as Mrs. Lawson, The Marquis, Ethel Crocker or Peru has suffered a setback of any kind. They seem to have taken hold of the Williamsport soil from the start and made the most of it.

Evenden Bros. are having good success with roses, their Brides, Bridesmaids, Perles and Meteors showing up splendidly even at this early season. Nor do they take second place in violets, while their bulbous stock, as a rule, compares most favorably with the best grown anywhere.

W. J. Evenden, who left on August 8 for Paris, gives glowing descriptions of the great fair, and especially of the horticultural and floricultural departments. He intends visiting England, Germany and Belgium before his return home.

SOUTH PARK FLORAL CO.

.....NEW CASTLE, INDIANA.....

With our new addition, completed this summer, we now have 100,000 feet of glass devoted exclusively to ROSE CULTURE. Our houses are all new, and of the most approved and up-to-date design. Our boilers are all heated with natural gas from wells on our own grounds. Our soil is ideal for Roses. With such facilities, and with growers of extraordinary ability, we can produce the best Roses in the west.

Our output is sold by E. C. Amling, Chicago, although we can ship direct from the greenhouses if so desired.

We are now cutting 3000 to 5000 Roses daily, about one-half of which are American Beauty.

We are pleased to show visiting florists through our model plant.

BUSINESS BEGINS WITH THE OPENING DAY AT YALE.—VARIOUS DOINGS OF PERSONAL INTEREST.

Trade seems to be alive again. Flower buyers have returned from the country and seashore and Yale has opened her fall term, which makes business better. Palms and ferns are selling well and funeral work is very brisk at present.

Chas. Munro brought out a very attractive wagon last week, the swellest thing in town, the color being red. Mr. Munro reports business as being very good.

Wm. H. Long returned from Europe last week, having had a delightful trip. While abroad he visited the Paris Exposition, also places of interest in Holland. Alex J. Guttman, the New York commission, dealer, was a guest of J. N. Champion a few days ago.

Fred. Horn has just completed two new houses, one 20x100, for violets, and one 15x30 for bedding plants. G. H.

TRADE VERY QUIET BUT THE SUPPLY OF STOCK IS NOT LARGE.—BOWLERS AND CARNATION MEETING COMMITTEES ARE ACTIVE.

Practically all that is being done in a retail way is funeral work, and that is not very plentiful, for the health of the city is excellent. Growers are busy finishing up fall work about the greenhouses, but are not overworked in cutting or shipping flowers, everything being in rather short supply, even for the limited demand. There are a good many outdoor roses, and some of them are really fine, comparing favorably with indoor stock. Anders Anderson from his little place cuts over 200 Mme. Cochet and Kaiserin daily, of quality and size first-class.

The bowling team is getting together and doing some good work. A member wants to know why the scores made on home alleys are always better than those made abroad, and why the relative scores of members change so greatly when on strange alleys.

The various committees on the carnation meeting are hard at work and Lehman's Hall will, from present indications, boast a really well arranged exhibition. MACK.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.—Robert Capstick, who has been officiating as foreman for the M. E. Hutchinson place for a number of years, has bought out the establishment and will run it on his own account hereafter.

LYNN, MASS.—The annual exhibition of the Houghton Horticultural Society was opened September 27 at Odd Fellows' Hall, continuing three days. It was successful, as usual, and concluded with a banquet on Thursday evening.

ENJOYABLE MEETING OF FLORISTS AT A COLLEAGUE'S.—FALL SHOW IS PLANNED.

The florists' meeting which was held at A. Wiegand & Sons' place, October 2, was one of the most enjoyable we have had. Refreshments had been provided and the Messrs. Wiegand devoted their time to seeing that everybody was well served. Some of those members, even, who have thought of nothing but eel worm and red spider for the last ten years forgot themselves and joined in the amusements. It was the first opportunity of many members to view Mr. Wiegand's store since it has been remodelled. The store, which is furnished richly and tastefully, is joined in the back by a work-room, which can be taken as a model of convenience. The second story contains two rooms, one a billiard room, the other a store-room.

At the meeting it was decided to hold a fall show in connection with the state society's meeting November the 14th. Exhibits are to be in place at the agricultural rooms of the State House at 11 a. m. Premium lists can be obtained of the secretary, Robt. McKeand. H. J.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—The Lakeview Rose Gardens are at work upon a range of new glass which will increase their capacity 53,000 square feet. This is one of the most rapidly developing concerns in the country. With this addition they will have more than 350,000 feet of glass.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The annual exhibition of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society will take place at the armory, from November 6 to 8. W. G. Salford has been appointed manager. The usual preponderance of violets is looked for and a special inducement this year is a prize of $25 which Mayor Shirrell has offered for the best bunch of 200 blooms.

MATTERS OF INTEREST IN AND ABOUT THE CAPITAL CITY.—AN ACCIDENT.—TRADE IMPROVING.

F. H. Kramer and wife met with an accident one night last week. They had been visiting some friends in Virginia and, returning home, their horse took fright while crossing the long bridge. They were both thrown from the buggy and painfully injured. They were taken to the Emergency Hospital, but, while they were badly bruised and shaken up, their injuries were not serious.

Trade is showing some signs of life again. Some of the florists are having a few small decorations for some of the fall openings; it gives them something to do if it does not pay very well.

J. H. Small & Sons are having extensive changes made and are renovating their store throughout. P. G.

MY PICTURE AS A "KID." (Presenting a rear view of a stern reality)

When I was young, you will observe, I was very backward; but I have got over that, and now come to the front claiming to have the best WATER HEATER, VENTILATING APPLIANCE and SASH HINGE for greenhouse purposes, that are in the market.

Furthermore, they are so simple in construction I can afford to sell them much cheaper than other styles.

Now florists, don't be backward in sending for a catalogue. Remember, when you find you NEED a thing, the sooner you get it, the more you will have for your money, again I say "DON'T BE BACKWARD," but "keep up with the band wagon." Let me hear from you AT ONCE. J. D. CARMODY, Evansville, Ind.

THOSE FALLEN LEAVES

CAN BE KEPT OFF THE LAWN WITH LITTLE EFFORT IF YOU HAVE A

FINLEY ROTARY LAWN RAKE.

The Finley Rotary Lawn rake in operation.

It picks them up and holds them until you are ready to deliver them to your burn heap or compost pile.

The wind can't blow them about after once raked. It does the work much better than the hand rake, and does it three times as fast. It takes up grass, either long or short, twigs and loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a hand rake would not touch. It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn. Price, $12.00. It was given a Certificate of Merit by the Society of American Florists at the New York Convention, the judges reporting that they "Believe it to be far superior to anything else in the market."

Send for Illustrated Circular.

FINLEY LAWN RAKE CO., Joliet, Ill.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—The boilers, piping and glass in the greenhouses erected by O. H. Nye have been sold to J. N. Champion, of New Haven, Conn., by the Milford Savings Bank. The greenhouses will be entirely removed.

Autumn Work of the Plantsman.

At this busy season of the year much work has to be crowded into a short time, for though this fall has been a very favorable one in regard to the mildness of the weather, yet we cannot expect to escape frost much longer, and therefore all tender stock should be speedily housed. The extended use of cold frames for the summer culture of decorative stock provides temporary space for a much larger quantity of plants, and in many instances produces a more sturdy growth than is found in those grown in the greenhouses all summer, but unless an early outlet can be found for a considerable amount of these plants there is bound to be a very congested condition in the houses when the outdoor stock is brought in.

Among the plants quite susceptible to injury from over-crowding at this season are cyclamens, Chinese primroses and ericas, all of which are very valuable winter blooming plants when properly grown, and this crowding is especially likely to do harm during the humid days that often occur in October and November. A well grown cyclamen should not only produce an abundance of flowers—I have seen a 6 inch pot plant with eighty perfect flowers open at one time—but the foliage should also be perfect, thick, heavy and well colored, and such a plant cannot be had if unduly crowded. Cyclamens are frequently among the plants that are grown in frames during the summer and during the early portion of the season may need some protection from full sunshine, but as the growth becomes stronger less shading is needed, and ultimately it may be dispensed with altogether unless the weather continues to be extremely hot and dry. But it is wiser to get the cyclamens under cover before the nights become too cold and also to protect them from the heavy fall rains.

Chinese primroses may also be grown in frames but should have heavier shading than cyclamens, for primulas in general are shade-loving subjects and are also somewhat impatient of extremes of moisture and require careful watering during dull weather. And speaking of primroses reminds me of the fact that the Abyssinian primrose, P. verticillata, is but seldom seen of late years. This species might be worth considering as a comparative novelty by some of our enterprising growers, its yellow flowers being of good size and produced in two or three whorls on erect spikes. The long and rather narrow leaves of P.

verticillata are quite thickly covered with a white, mealy powder, especially on the under surface, this feature adding considerably to the oddity and attractiveness of the plant.

Primula Japonica may also find a place among the spring flowering plants for retail selling. Though various plants of this species vary greatly in color of bloom, yet some of the dark red and crimson forms are very attractive and the plant is quite a strong grower, needing only the same low temperature required for the English primrose to make a satisfactory growth. Both the cyclamens and the primulas should be protected from the attacks of aphid by the use of tobacco, the most convenient method of using this insecticide being by means of the chopped stems spread among the pots on the benches.

Longiflorum lilies for Easter are usually kept in frames for some time after being potted up, this practice usually resulting in a better root action before the top growth is very pronounced. It also gives the tops a more sturdy and short jointed growth. But, while the lilies may remain outdoors in safety later in the season than cyclamens and primulas, yet it is wise to get them under cover before sharp frosts occur, and it is also good practice to adopt the same preventative measures in regard to aphid that have been suggested for the preceding plants. Full exposure to the light will be given to the lilies at all times from now forward, and comparatively light watering and but little syringing will be needed during the winter, over-watering being a contributing cause in many cases of failure with Easter lilies.

English ivy is a very salable plant in many parts of the country and seldom goes begging in the retail store, the chief difficulty in many places being to find nicely grown and well trained specimens; carelessly tied and dirty-looking plants that have just been lifted from the field often fail to attract attention. Though hardy, it is just as well to get the ivies under cover before severe frosts come, or the foliage may be somewhat discolored.

Then there are the early shipments of lily of the valley and Dutch bulbs to be attended to, all of which should be gotten into the earth just as soon as possible after they are received. In the case of lily of the valley, if the ordinary method of forcing by planting the pips on the bench of the forcing house be used, it will only be necessary at this time to bury the bunches of pips out in the frame, covering them with two or three inches of soil, allowing frost full access to the frame. If the method of forcing in flats is the one adopted, it is best to plant the pips in the flats at once, give them a good watering, place the flats in the open frame and first cover them with a thin covering of straw litter, this to be followed with about two inches of soil. The only object in using the covering of litter over the pips is to facilitate the removal of the soil at the time the pips are to be brought into heat.

Tulips, narcissi and hyacinths should also be kept outdoors until they are needed for forcing, thus securing the root growth that should precede the forcing process in the case of these bulbous plants. But these remarks as to bulb forcing will doubtless be taken as simply being a reminder rather than an instruction, for these facts are already familiar to almost every grower.

Azaleas should also be under cover, else the buds may suffer from a sudden frost, but very free ventilation and an abundance of light should be given to these plants after they are brought in. A night temperature of 45° is quite high enough for azaleas until such time as they may be required to flower, and even a few degrees lower than this will not hurt them. Newly imported azaleas should be potted up at once on their arrival, care being taken that none be potted while dry at the root, for it is difficult to get them moistened through afterwards. These newly arrived azaleas should have some little protection from the sun for a few days after potting, and also be given frequent syringing, the foliage being rather tender after having been boxed up so long.

Still another matter that needs careful attention at this season is the heating of the greenhouses, and in company with this may also be mentioned the matter of ventilation. A little heat is required in most of the houses now, not always on account of the outdoor temperature but to dry up the superfluous moisture due to condensation, and also to give a better circulation of air in the houses. But so long as the weather will permit it is a good practice to keep the ventilators open to some extent, both at night and through the day, and especially so in those houses that have recently been filled with stock brought in from the open air.

A Noted French Rosarian.

Joseph Pernet, the well known rose grower, was born in the vicinity of Lyons in 1853, his father before him having been a noted raiser of some of the best varieties in commerce. Mr. Pernet commenced the raising of seedling roses in 1882, and if one will look over the lists of roses now grown and cultivated, the name of Pernet will be found to shine particularly bright. Mr. Pernet, like all sensible rosarians, fell in love, and won the daughter of Mr. Ducher, who, in his day, stood with Lacharme, Levat and the elder Guillot at the head of the list of successful producers of new roses. Mrs. Pernet is imbued with the same spirit and love for the rose that permeates the mind and heart of her distinguished husband. In France where there is a marriage that brings together two parties from the same line of trade, or business, the new firm generally perpetuates the family name of groom and bride, hence the trade title of Pernet-Ducher. This firm has several little Pernet-Duchers, among them a young man who inherits his father's love for the rose. A visit to this noted establishment during the past summer was of more than passing interest, for nowhere in Europe are to be seen so many beautiful and interesting novelties in roses.

Stopping at Paris I had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Pernet's new roses displayed at the exposition. The fact that his Soleil d'Or was awarded the first premium on mere sight—the jury was only a few minutes in deciding—led me to wonder what had caused such accelerated haste in such a deliberative body. It was that the candidate was new in color, distinct in character, and withal had such claim on the jury on account of its parentage and the radical composition of its character. Soleil d'Or was very distinct as seen growing at Lyons; and, if I do not miss my prediction, it will prove a valuable and unique garden rose for our country. It is a cross between Persian Yellow and the hybrid perpetual, Antoine Ducher. When in its young growth it had foliage similar in color to the popular Crimson Rambler, but with no tendency to climb. Mr. Pernet writes that the demand has been so great that he has sold his entire stock of plants. To the credit of this firm, out of the six premium prizes awarded at the rose exhibition, held about the middle of June last, four were bestowed on the varieties of Pernet-Ducher. The other sorts were Joseph Hill, a creamy white with deep apricot shading; Prince of Bulgaria, a distinct hybrid tea of a most peculiar and pleasing shade, silvery flesh shaded with glowing salmon; and Mme. Geo. Didier, in the style and general make-up of President Carnot but with shadings of yellow. Mr. Pernet seems to lean towards the hybrid teas for all, or nearly all, of his finest seedlings are of that race. Joseph Hill and Mme. G. Didier will not be disseminated until 1901 or 1902.

The firm of Pernet-Ducher have only recently moved to a new location, just adjacent but to the east of Lyons proper. The soil is a reddish clay full of small stones, and at first sight one wonders how a rose could grow in a soil that looks only fit to make bricks. But the healthy, sturdy growth attests its suitability for rose growing. Some of the pleasantest hours of my life were spent in the garden and under the roof of the genial, serious minded gentleman whose kindness is here reproduced. When one recounts the many noted varieties of roses which have emanated from this noted raiser's hand one can use with truth the words of Dean Hole in the opening sentence of his book on roses: "He who would have beautiful roses in his garden must first have beautiful roses in his heart." Surely Joseph Pernet must have had the image of beautiful roses in his mind to have given to the rose world so many beautiful varieties. E. G. H.

The Cultivation of Sweet Peas.

[Read before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society by Wm. Robertson, gardener for Jno. W. Pepper, Jenkintown, Pa.]

In accordance with the recent resolution adopted by this society, that winners of prizes should give an account of their methods of growing the exhibits, I have prepared a short paper on sweet peas.
