

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

of the House of Representatives. The President of the United States, James K. Polk, has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, dated the 10th inst., in relation to the public debt, and to inform you that the same has been forwarded to the proper authorities for their consideration.

It is a matter of course that the public debt of the United States is a subject of great importance to the Government, and one which has attracted the attention of the public mind. The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in relation to the public debt, is a valuable document, and one which will be read with interest by the people of the United States.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in relation to the public debt, is a valuable document, and one which will be read with interest by the people of the United States. It contains a full and complete statement of the public debt of the United States, and of the means by which it is being paid.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in relation to the public debt, is a valuable document, and one which will be read with interest by the people of the United States. It contains a full and complete statement of the public debt of the United States, and of the means by which it is being paid.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in relation to the public debt, is a valuable document, and one which will be read with interest by the people of the United States. It contains a full and complete statement of the public debt of the United States, and of the means by which it is being paid.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in relation to the public debt, is a valuable document, and one which will be read with interest by the people of the United States. It contains a full and complete statement of the public debt of the United States, and of the means by which it is being paid.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in relation to the public debt, is a valuable document, and one which will be read with interest by the people of the United States. It contains a full and complete statement of the public debt of the United States, and of the means by which it is being paid.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in relation to the public debt, is a valuable document, and one which will be read with interest by the people of the United States. It contains a full and complete statement of the public debt of the United States, and of the means by which it is being paid.