Curator Barker Not Yet Ready to Make Definite Statement

Toronto, Aug. 18.—The following statement was issued by the Home Bank of Canada this afternoon, over the signature of the Curator, A. B. Barker:

WILLIAM H. LUNEY DIED THIS MORNING

Well-Known Contractor is Called at Ripe Age

William Henry Luney, pioneer resident and founder of the contracting business which ultimately branched out into the lumber trade, died this morning at the ripe age of seventy-six years. He had been in failing health for a year past and the end was not unexpected.

FOURTH VICTORY FOR AUSTRALIA

Anderson Defeats French Star at Brookline

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 18.—James O. Anderson, veteran leader of Australia's Davis Cup team, to-day outplayed Henri Hirsch, left-handed French star, and won the match in straight sets, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

VICTIMS OF KEMMERER DISASTER ARE BURIED

Kemmerer, W. Va., Aug. 18.—Yesterday held the last and rites for the ninety-nine miners whose lives were snuffed out in the explosion in Frontier Mine No. 1, of the Kemmerer Coal Company, at this place, at almost the same time. A coroner's jury to-day returned a verdict finding that the blast was the result of an attempt by the fire boss, in room 7, off the thirtieth entry to re-light his safety lamp.

FINANCE OFFICIALS ARE INVESTIGATING

Department Has No Comment to Make Concerning Home Bank

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press)—Hon. J. A. Robb, acting Minister of Finance, when spoken to this morning in regard to the suspension of payment by the Home Bank, stated that the Finance Department would make no comment at the present time. Meanwhile, it is understood an investigation by officials of the Department is proceeding.

QUET PREVAILS AT SANTO DOMINGO

Report of Uprising Proved to be Unfounded

Santo Domingo, Aug. 18.—There is no foundation for the report that there has been an uprising in Santo Domingo and that seventeen American marines were killed. The American authorities here stated that complete quiet prevails in the country.

CRUISER RESPONSIBLE

Panama, Aug. 18.—The sudden departure of the United States cruiser Rochester, flagship of the special service squadron, was said here to be the result of a reported uprising in Santo Domingo. The cruiser Galveston is expected to follow. It was reported that several American marines had been killed in Santo Domingo. There is no confirmation, however, from any source.

SECURITY DEPOSIT

The total deposit with the Minister of Finance for the security of bank notes on that date was $5,577,732. Of this $100,000 was the contribution of the Home Bank, but the entire fund contributed by all the banks is available to meet the notes of the Home Bank.

Payment Is Suspended by Home Bank

Depositors Will Early Be In- formed of Position By Curator Barker

Toronto, Aug. 18.—Bank closed—Payment suspended—was the only information available to depositors and others who essayed to enter the Home Bank head office here this morning. A policeman guarded the doors and the porter inside opened them to no one except officers. A. D. Barker, manager of the local clearing house, who yesterday appointed Barker to be the official curator, stated that the Home Bank had already had conferences with A. E. Calvert, assistant general manager of the bank, with a view to an immediate preliminary inspection of the books.

IRISH ELECTIONS MAY DEVELOP INTO DONNYBROOK FAIR

Nominations For Free State Parliament Take Place To-day and Electioneering Campaign Will Com- mence In Earnest Next Week; Republican Candi- dates Numerous

Dublin, Aug. 18.—Nominations for the Parliament of the Irish Free State are being made to-day. There are between 400 and 500 candidates in the field for the 153 seats, but it is unlikely that all of these will be able or willing to furnish the required deposit of £2,150 and it is therefore expected that several will retire.

The pre-Government party has put forward 111 candidates, but it is possible that this number will be increased before the end of the day. Republican aspirants number 85. However, there may be more before the balloting is over. In addition, there are many representatives of the farmer and labor parties to be nominated and perhaps independents as well.

FRANCE WILL NOT REPUDIATE DEBTS

Attitude Explained in Poin- care's Note to Britain

Paris, Aug. 18.—While Premier Poincare's summary of the French position in the note which will be delivered to the British Government Monday, treats of the inter-Ally debts at some length, he does not, as expected in some quarters, make payment of France's debt to the United States dependent upon recovery of a similar amount on the Class C reparations bonds from Germany. It was said, at the Foreign Office to-day.

GRIFFS DENY ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP BERGDOLL

Mosbach, Germany, Aug. 18.—(As- sociated Press)—Hooven Griffis and Victor Neilsen in their preliminary hearing in connection with the recent attempt to kidnap Grover Bergdoll, the American draft evader, denied any knowledge of such an attempt. One man brought out by Griffis was that at the time of his arrest the gasoline tank of his automobile was nearly empty, which statement was verified by the police, when the car was confiscated. The authorities contend that the plan was to carry off Bergdoll to Paris, but Griffis maintained there was scarcely enough gasoline in the tank to carry him to Heidelberg, where he intended to spend the night.

DEBT IN ABBEYANCE

The war debts are considered in French official circles as less pressing than the question of reparations and of smoothing out the troubles of the Entente as final solution of the reparations problem. It is held that the war debt to the United States is in abeyance for the moment.

FURTHER PARLEYS ON COAL MINE WAGES

Union Officials and Operators Look for Agreement By September

New York, Aug. 18.—John I. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and his assistant in the anthracite mine wage negotiations will leave for Atlantic City today to continue conference with hard coal operators. The resumption of negotiations will start Monday. In a joint letter replying to the United States Coal Commission's demand for further parleys, union officials and representatives of the operators have agreed to "earnestly endeavor to reach an agreement by September."

Meanwhile members of the Commission of which John E. Hammond is chairman, refused to express over optimism as to the prospects of keeping the mines operating after that date. President Coolidge, it was said, would be apprised of the results of the conferences here.

The bank will cash by check, pay out no deposits, but will make all collections possible due to depositors.

Home Bank stock is not listed on any stock exchange. There are no broker's quotations for the stock today, but it was stated that bids were offered on Thursday at $1. The par value of stock is $100.

Other bank stocks were not affected at the opening of the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Bids were on a par with yesterday's closing sales.

Anxious Inquiries

Toronto, Aug. 18.—Many anxious depositors made inquiries at the head office and thirteen branches of the Home Bank in this city long before the regular hour of opening, following the announcement of last night that the bank had suspended its operations and closed its doors to enable the curator yesterday to go over the affairs of the bank and define the standing of the shareholders and depositors in relation to the available assets. There are sixty branches of the bank in various parts of Canada, and also in the province of Ontario, and a similar situation existed this morning at all points in the country where the Home Bank has been doing business.

Deposits On Books

Deposits remaining on the bank's books are said to total about $17,000,000. While it is understood that various institutions, of the Roman Catholic Church were heavy depositors, it is known that depositors with small accounts, chiefly savings accounts, have the bulk of the business, particularly in the smaller towns in Ontario, Quebec and the West.

Pending the curators' official examination of the books and the reports from branches in all parts of the country, the situation is very indefinite, both in regard to depositors and shareholders, and being automatically accountable for double liability to make up any deficiencies accruing to depositors and other liabilities.

Steadiness Counseled

Meaning the newspapers and banking officials are counselling steadiness among the depositors. The suspension will in any event last ninety days and it is expected it will take nearly that long to clear up the affairs of the institution.

Blow to West

Winnipeg, Aug. 18.—The suspension of the Home Bank of Canada will be a severe blow to Western Canada. The Manitoba Free Press today says: "Although the head office of the bank is in Toronto and it was generally looked upon as an Eastern institution, there was a great deal of stock held in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, small blocks scattered over Alberta and British Columbia."

"Several years ago the organization took over its share of the management sought entry to the prairie provinces and in 1909, John Kennedy, vice-president of the Grain Growers' Grain Company, was elected to the board of directors. The following year Hon. T. A. Crerar was made a director and three years later, in 1912, Winnipeg was constituted the Western representation of the newspaper will say.

Grain Growers Interested

About the time the Western directors were placed on the board an active stock selling campaign was carried on in the Western provinces, with particular attention being given to Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Various officers and members of the Grain Growers' Grain Company at that time held 1,000 shares of the bank's stock.

Mr. Crerar retired from the board in 1917 and Mr. E. W. Brown, president in 1915. Owing to absence from the city of the principal officer of the grain growers, it could not be ascertained whether the company still held their stock. The most recent list of shareholders available in Winnipeg is that contained in the Government statement as at December 31, 1915. The par value of the stock is $100 a share, but when the stock selling campaign was on in the West, many shares were sold at $115. The stock is not listed on the Exchange, but trading in the unlisted department failed to forecast any such drastic action as that taken by the directors Friday. The late sales were in the vicinity of $95 a share.

Winnipeg, Aug. 18.—The failure of the Home Bank of Canada will not mean a loss to the farmers' organizations of Manitoba, according to an official announcement made here this morning. Shares owned by the United Grain Growers, Limited, were sold in 1917, and the organization had no money on deposit in the bank, while the United Farmers of Manitoba had a small overdraft at the bank.

All deposits of the United Grain Growers, Limited, were withdrawn in 1917, and shortly after the company sold its 1,000 shares, valued at par at $100,000, and obtained a good profit price. Hon. T. A. Crerar, president, stated today.

Mr. Crerar held sixty-six shares personally at that time valued at par at $6,600 and also has sold them. The United Farmers of Manitoba continued to do its banking with the Home Bank and at various periods in the last few years has had large deposits in its credit. Owing to heavy financial organization its current account was overdrawn and was being carried by the bank.

News Spread Rapidly

Montreal, Aug. 18.—News of the failure of the Home Bank of Canada spread rapidly if Montreal, but the knowledge was mainly confined to business people. There are three other branches in this city. Two of the bank's directors reside here, and one of them, Colonel Clarence Smith, is prominent in Knights of Columbus circles. Reports were received here on deposit with the Home Bank, but John Cullen, Grand Knight of the Montreal Council, stated that none of the council's funds in this district were in the bank and he did not think that any outside council's funds were deposited with the Home Bank.

There was no direct interest on the Montreal Stock Exchange in the collapse of the Home Bank. The shares of the bank have never been dealt in locally, there being few shareholders

UNCONVENTIONAL

At a London dinner party was an unconventional young fellow, from an out-of-the-way village in America. His hostess, who knew his brother well, tried to make him feel at home. "I hope," she said, as they sat at the dining-room table, "I do hope this room isn't too cold for you."

"Lordy," he answered, "I might have been in hell for 37 years for all the heat there are on me."

TIED DOWN

In the middle of a stupid party, one of the guests spoke of a young man who was yawning.

"Inferribly boring, isn't it?" it wasn't an embarrassing question, was it?

"Yes, when I could too, but dang it all, I live here."

Heavy Losses

It is understood the bank has suffered heavy losses through several serious commercial failures and its assets have been otherwise impaired.

The comparative statement of the bank's operations summarized in Houston's Annual Financial Review, averaging the years from 1907 to 1922 shows fairly steady if not spectacular growth.

There was a slight shrinkage in the bank's circulation shown in the 1920, 1921 and 1922 figures from the high mark of $1,980,175 in 1919 to $1,559,135, but deposits gained steadily up to 1921 when they touched $23,875,713, dropping some $68,000 in the succeeding year. Leading items for the five-year period from 1914 to 1922 inclusive are:

Dr. Bell is the Registrar of Winnipeg Medical College and a retary to the Faculty of Medicine of the Manitoba University.

Dr. Fred C. Bell, B.A., M.D., C.M.O., is at present visiting relatives in Victoria, being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Nairn, of Rossland Avenue, and formerly of Edinburgh, Scotland, parents of his wife.

Dr. Bell is forty years of age and was born in Winnipeg. He was educated in 1909 from the Manitoba University Medical College and in 1911 was appointed Medical Superintendent of the Winnipeg General Hospital, an office he held for one year. Dr. Bell was one of the first medical men in Canada to volunteer. He remained in Canada to volunteer.

But he has two cities on the run!

They came in no kind of a hurry. But Portland and Seattle folks are sitting on their hands. The earliest of a number of cockney sayings of "destroying all vegetation" science calls him "supercilious."

A few weeks ago he reached Seattle in a shipment of plants from Holland. They didn't take him seriously then, but two years ago his decorations in Seattle caused consternation there and management here. But there's no laughing now that the war has entered the Rose City.

City, state and federal authorities are consulting a firm to check the man's "vegetable" organizations, raising special funds and appointing college experts are co-operating with the horticulturists.

For a few weeks after landing the boy sat in a chair at night and at 2 o'clock of soft foods. Being "Wick" a strong poison is being distributed freely by special crews. All efforts are being centered in one thing, that is, to stop the war from spreading. The war is imperious to potent. But no laughing now that the war has entered the Rose City.

Aggressive Advertiser Wins

Aggressive advertisers usually encounter the commission of their over-conservative competitor who confides to mutual friends that the merchants in question are making a foolish blunder.

The truth is the aggressive advertiser has already learned the lesson of real prudence. In advertising it is true that the man who does "more than he can afford" comes to be able to advertise more and more aggressively. His audacity wins.

People have a way of sitting up and taking notice of the aggressive man. He compels attention, and if his aggressiveness seems to be in the interests of all concerned why his personal aggressiveness means real service to the people, as is always the case when a store takes the offensive, the attention he compels turns to profits.

In store-making, as in all lines of endeavor, the brave spirit conquers. Assuming, of course, that the merchant's "audacity" is based upon the sound principle of a wise expenditure of his money.

It's a pretty safe policy to spend more for newspaper advertising than your competitor thinks you can afford to spend.

Want a Piano? Make One; This Man Did It in 3 Years

A music lover in West Haven, Conn., makes his own pianos. "It's the only way to give them a soul," he says.

It took him more than three years to make his first instrument, but Joseph Himpel kept at it until he was finished.

Now he can make one in three or four months.

A piano tuner by trade, he wanted to become a musician. He had no time or money for lessons, so he began teaching himself.

After four years of desultory practice, at noon hours and in the evenings, says Himpel, "I found that I could play the most difficult compositions with ease and accuracy."

So he had no piano of his own. So he gradually started to collect old parts of discarded instruments. At his leisure he repaired them, and started "re-voicing."

"Without the help or guidance of anyone," he says, "I drew my piano, made my model and built every bit of my piano by hand."

And now he plays it happily and contentedly.

At one of the dormitories of a college for women two young housemaids were comparing notes on academic life.

"What?" said Nora, dimpling, "the faculty has the brains and the college girls have the clothes, but believe me, the maids has the looks!"

SIDNEY NOTES

Sidney, Aug. 18.—At the monthly meeting of St. Andrew's W.A., senior branch, held at the home of Mrs. Jeffrey, Experimental Farm, the president, Mrs. Critchley, was in the chair. Owing to the absence of the secretary no minutes were read. The financial report was read by the treasurer, Mrs. Philp, and adopted. The Dorcas secretary, Mrs. Harvey, reported that she had sent away a parcel of clothes for the Indian mission. Other business was discussed, after which Mrs. Jeffrey served tea. Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cochran went on the ferry Motor Princesses to Bellingham, and from there will motor to Vancouver to visit the fair. The second annual picnic of the Sidney branch of G.A.U.V. is to be held on Hill Island on Sunday, August 25, under the patronage of Colonel C. W. Peck, V.C. D.S.O. The customs motor launch put in at the pier here this week.

Rookline, Mass., Aug. 17.—The Australian Davis cup team to-day won the doubles match with the French team, and thereby gained the right to meet the American holders of the Davis cup in the final round for the trophy to be played next month. The Australians won the two singles matches yesterday.

TRADE OF CANADA CONTINUES TO GROW

Increase of $140,000,000 in Total Business for Period

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—There was an increase of $140,000,000 in the total trade of Canada during the four months of the current fiscal year ended with July, according to figures just made public by the Department of Customs and Excise. For the month of July alone the increase over the previous July was $23,000,000.

The increase in the trade for the four months was pretty well divided between imports and exports, but the increase in imports was about $18,000,000 greater than in exports. The total trade for the four months ended July last was $524,000,000, as compared with $484,000,000 for the corresponding period of last year. The imports for the four months of this year were $314,000,000, as compared with $236,000,000, while the domestic exports for the current year were $210,000,000, as against $248,000,000 in 1922.

For the month of July this year the total trade was $161,000,000, while for the same month last year it was $132,000,000. The imports for the month of July were $100,000,000, as against a little less than $61,000,000 in July, 1922; while the exports were nearly $82,000,000, as compared with something more than $70,000,000 in July last year.

The largest increase in imports for the four months' period ended July is found in the group of non-metallic minerals and their products, although iron and its products run them a close second. Among exports, the largest increase was found, as has occurred several times previously, among pulpwood and paper. The exports of Canadian wood products and paper during the last four months were valued at more than $66,000,000, as against more than $66,000,000 for the corresponding period of 1922.

CREDIT MEN'S TRADE REPORT

Winnipeg, Aug. 18.—(By Canadian Press)—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, Ltd., states: Halifax, wholesale business practically unchanged. Retail business, fair. Collections, fair.

St. John, wholesale business, fairly satisfactory. Retail trade, not quite as well maintained as hoped for. Collections, fairly good. Montreal, general wholesale conditions practically unchanged with better business anticipated. Retailers report conditions only fair, but feel benefit of good weather. Collections with wholesalers practically unchanged.

Toronto, in manufacturing trades, textile mills are fairly busy, but business of hand to mouth nature. Mining active. Wholesale business generally fair. There is some falling off in new projects in building trade. Retailers report fair amount of business moving under stimulus of sales and close prices. Collections only fair.

Winnipeg, wholesale business inclined to be quiet with early improvement expected. Retail business only fairly satisfactory. Collections only fair. New crop money not started to move yet.

Regina, wholesale business fairly satisfactory. Retail business quiet. Collections slow.

Saskatoon, wholesalers report conditions unchanged. Retail trade poor, collections slow.

Calgary, wholesalers report better feeling in view of splendid Alberta crop prospects. Retail business fair. Collections slow.

Vancouver, wholesale hardware picking up a little. Drygoods fair. Groceries, boots and shoes inclined to be quiet. Retail hardware, drygoods and groceries fair. Boots and shoes slightly improved. Collections out of the city improving, otherwise no change.

San Francisco to Perpetuate Memory of President Harding

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—San Francisco, the city in which the late President Harding died, fixed upon its citizenry to raise by popular subscription $500,000 to be used in erecting a monument to perpetuate the memory of the late Chief Executive. This action was taken by the Harding Memorial Committee, appointed by Mayor Rolph, Jr., a few days after the President's death.

New York, Aug. 17.—General Alexander Lokomusky, once chief of staff of the Russian army and military aid to Czar Nicholas, yesterday was detained with his family aboard the President Wilson on arrival from Naples, because the Russian immigration quota for August was exhausted.

BY-ELECTIONS TO FOLLOW FEDERAL CABINET CHANGES

Hon. J. A. Robb New Minister of Immigration; Hon. T. A. Low Becomes Minister of Trade and Commerce

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Trade and Commerce, has been appointed Minister of Immigration and Colonization in the King Government, and will be succeeded by Hon. T. A. Low, Minister without portfolio, according to important Cabinet changes announced here last night.

Minister of Defence

Hon. E. M. Macdonald, who has been acting Minister of National Defence, becomes Minister of National Defence. The changes entail two by-elections.

Mr. Low, on becoming Minister of Trade and Commerce, will have to seek re-election in South Renfrew, and Mr. Macdonald will seek re-election in Pictou.

Until the present appointment of Mr. Robb, the Immigration Department has been in the hands of Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior.

Mr. Robb, it is announced, will give full attention to developing the immigration plans already worked out by Mr. Stewart and the Government for an energetic and carefully considered campaign of immigration and settlement.

Mr. Low, the new Minister of Trade and Commerce, has made himself thoroughly conversant with all matters of Government policy and administration relating to his new department.

Mr. Macdonald was elevated to the Cabinet last April, and his further promotion to the Ministry of Defence has been generally expected.

By-Election Writes

Writes for the by-election in Pictou and South Renfrew will be issued immediately. In both cases nominations are fixed for September 5, and polling for September 20. In the last general election, Mr. Macdonald had a majority in Pictou of 3,558, although in 1917 the constituency returned a supporter of the Union Government by a majority of 157. In 1921, Mr. Macdonald's majority was 264. In South Renfrew, Mr. Low, in 1921, had a majority of 1,551.

Mr. Macdonald will be sworn in at Halifax by the Governor-General, who is now there. Mr. Low will be sworn in within a few days.

GERMAN EX-CROWN PRINCE SUES FOR RETURN OF LANDS

Breslau, Aug. 18.—Oels, the former principality which the exiled Crown Prince is attempting to recover from the Prussian Government, is a property near this city and consists of about 20,000 acres of land and two ancient castles.

Oels was formerly ruled as a principality by the Duke of Braunschweig and was for a time under the British. When the last Duke of Braunschweig died in 1884 the principality was given to the crown prince of Prussia. It contains the remains of the Hohenzollerns, which has about 10,000 inhabitants.

The property was confiscated after the Hohenzollerns abdicated, and the special commission named to effect a settlement between the state and the former Imperial house worked out a treaty whereby Oels was to go back to the Crown Prince as his personal property. But the Prussian diet failed to approve this arrangement, and the Crown Prince has begun action in the courts against the Prussian state. This action is apparently inspired by renewed attempts in the Reichstag to get through legislation expropriating all the property which belonged to the Hohenzollerns and other prominent families.

WITHDRAWAL WOULD HIT AMERICAN PORTS

Grain Carrying Boycott Is by No Means a Settled Question

Ottawa, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press)—Leslie H. Boyd, K.C., chairman of the Board of Grain Commissioners for Canada, arrived in the city yesterday from Cleveland, Ohio, where he had been conferring with the managers of steamship companies operating on the Great Lakes. He will report to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Hon. J. A. Robb, this afternoon on the results of his visit.

According to information given out by the American shipping men, Mr. Boyd was informed that the United States grain carriers were unwilling to operate under the new law, requiring the register of grain rates and space contracts with the Grain Board. The opinion has been expressed in official circles here, however, that withdrawal of the American carriers is by no means a settled question.

It is pointed out that withdrawal would mean a loss of a great deal of business to American ports, Buffalo in particular, and it is regarded as not at all unlikely that the interests of those ports will bring pressure on the United States grain carriers to reconsider their decision.

Methods of supplying the place of the United States vessels, should they withdraw, have already been under consideration by the Federal government, and it has been announced that some ten ships owned by the Canadian Government Merchant Marine are likely to be placed in the grain carrying trade.

REPORT SHOWS CITY BABIES HAVE BEST CHANCE TO SURVIVE

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Some urban communities, in spite of the crowding, are healthier places for babies than many rural districts, according to the Infant Welfare Society of Chicago.

A study of the mortality charts for cities and for the country shows that babies born in crowded cities have a better start in life than children in the country, the society reports. "This, of course, is not because of the crowds, but in spite of them," says the report, "and is a condition, made possible through the education of the mothers, even before the babies are born."

It is owing to the fact that we find organizations such as the Infant Welfare Society fighting a battle against ignorance, which has cost a heavy toll in infant lives in cities such as Chicago, and that we find health departments carrying on the work of instruction, that in spite of tenements, crowds and hot waves, through education, lives are being saved each year. We must replace the old idea that the country is a healthier place with the idea that education may make almost any community a healthy place.

REIL REBELLION VETERAN DIES

Winnipeg, Aug. 17.—The death of William Mills, of Sprague, Man., a veteran of the Red River expedition of 1870, when he served under Lord Wolseley as a member of the First Ontario Rifles, is reported. He was present at the capture of Fort Garry from Louis Riel, August 23, 1870.

Mr. Mills was identified with the Federal Customs Department at Emerson, Man., for many years, being superannuated in 1901.

PRICES FOR CATTLE SHIPPED OVERSEAS ARE NOT UNIFORM

Investigation By Department Reveals Varying Figures

Ottawa, Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press)—An investigation into the shipping of beef cattle to Great Britain undertaken by the Federal Department of Agriculture, has revealed a difference of nearly $25 in steers sold as store cattle compared with similar steers sold for immediate slaughter; it was announced last night.

In carrying out its investigation the Department last June marked some 180 steers by different methods in Great Britain. The experiment led officials to the belief that, in the case of finished cattle, it is more profitable to ship immediately, slaughter on the other side than to kill the animals in Canada and ship the carcasses as chilled beef. As a matter of fact, it is extremely doubtful that the profitable marketing of Canadian fat cattle as chilled beef is possible at all. Steers marketed by this method gave a return, after all killing, preparing, shipping and selling charges had been deducted, of only $3.23 a hundredweight live weight at Montreal, while similar steers slaughtered at Birkenhead and sold as fresh beef in London realized a price equivalent to $7.53 a hundredweight, live weight, at Montreal and still other steers of similar quality sold alive at Liverpool as short keep steers, brought at the rate of $9.35 a hundredweight, Montreal.

Unduly Depressed

At the time this shipment was made, meat prices in England had been unduly depressed owing to the fact that large quantities of Argentine chilled beef had just been dumped on the English market and furthermore, as far as the Canadian chilled beef shipment was concerned the requirements of the British market as to killing, quartering and trimming the carcasses had not been fully complied with.

Careful records were kept of all costs and it was found that the total charges against each animal from the time it left Ottawa, the point nearest Montreal, until it was put up for sale in England averaged $34.71. The charges against the animals from Lethbridge, Alberta, the point most remote from Montreal, averaged $49.79 a head. The average charges per head for the whole experiment, comprising animals from Lethbridge, Alberta, Rosthern, Saskatchewan, Indian Head, Saskatchewan, Brandon, Manitoba, Lennoxville, Quebec, and Kentville, N. S., were $42.37 a head. At the time the shipment was made steers of similar character to those used in the experiment were selling in Montreal for from $6.50 to $7.50 a hundredweight liveweight, so that the English market gave better returns for store cattle than the Canadian market would have done at this time.

NEWS AND NOTES FROM THE MINES

TRAIL SHIPMENTS

With the first week in August the custom ore receipts at the Trail smelter for the current year passed the 20,000-ton mark—the exact figure being 20,175 tons. In the same period the tonnage from the Consolidated Mining & Smelting company's own properties totaled 250,480 tons. Over half of the custom tonnage is from mines across the international boundary line.

For the week the receipts were 12,022 tons—a large weekly figure—bringing the total Trail receipts for the year, to date, to 230,497 tons. The week's receipts were made up of: Alamo Mill, Alamo, 44 tons; Black Rock, Northport, Wash., 300; Henderson group, Smithers, 40; Knob Hill, Republic, Wash., 162; Lone Pine, Surprise-Last Chance, Republic, 272; Paradise, Lake Windermere, 44; Quilp, Republic, 261; Silversmith, lead 17, zinc 18; Van Rai, Silverton, 53; company mines, 9,132.

CORK-PROVINCE MINES

That three carloads of concentrates have been shipped to Trail is one of the interesting assertions in a statement issued by the Cork-Province Mines, Limited, covering operations on the property in the Slovan district since last June. Good ore, it is asserted, was reached a few weeks ago in the disclosure of a big east ore body. There is said to be a width of 27 feet of ore from wall to wall. At the time the report was compiled, two shifts were being run at the mill, but another has since been added.

Income tax is paid by 2,250,000 persons in Great Britain, or nearly half of the population. The number is now 100,000 less.

BEER PRODUCTION LESS IN GERMANY

Munich, Aug. 18.—German beer production is less than half what it was in pre-war days. Last year there were only 33,000,000 hectoliters produced as against 70,000,000 hectoliters in the period immediately preceding the war.

The beer production for 1922 was roughly 57,000,000 gallons, or nearly fifteen gallons for each inhabitant of the German republic. Experienced barkeepers manage to get eight glasses of beer out of every gallon, so, at that rate every inhabitant of Germany might have had 120 glasses of beer last year, or, roughly, one glass every three days.

The brewers say the decline in beer consumption is due to the poverty of the public. Temperance workers say educational work as to the evil effects of alcohol is responsible for much of the decline in beer drinking, and healthy doctors say the worldwide desire of women to be slender in order to wear prevailing fashions, has made women, especially younger women, more abstemious.

In 1904, there were 442,000 persons employed in the brewing industry in Germany. The number is now 100,000 less.

OUR BIG BUSINESS

Those progressive citizens of this community who have persistently contended that our principal industry for the time being is the tourist business can perceive a striking vindication of their attitude on any street in this city at almost any hour of the day or night.

People are coming here from far and near in greater numbers every week and every month. Cars from all parts of the continent and beyond can be seen parked fairly close together at the street curbs. Several with Honolulu plate numbers are here and have been here for two or three weeks.

Add to the visitors by motor that still greater army of holidaymakers who prefer to travel by train and boat and it is quite simple to understand why there is very much more than a flimsy basis to the prophecies of coming prosperity by the tourist route.

The most important and promising feature about this significant growth of Victoria's popularity as a holiday resort is the fact that those who are coming here in increasing numbers are very substantially adding to the returns which our own publicity is obviously obtaining. The tourist who comes and sees for himself and is thoroughly satisfied with what he finds is as valuable to this community as the prosperous settler to Canada.

Apart from what is obvious to everybody there are thoroughly reliable indications that next year's tourist business will be at least three times as great as it is now. This calculation has not been made upon any superficial analysis of traffic statistics. It has been reached by prominent transportation officials who are spending very large sums of money in the all essential equipment and organization that will be required in use when the time comes.

An enterprising and courageous sailor waded to the brink of Niagara yesterday. He started ten feet from the shore and then down stream until he could overlook the American Falls. When he returned to land he was arrested on a charge of being drunk. He could at least argue that he took plenty of water with it.

Dr. Tomie assured the people of the Kamloops district the other day that he was quite satisfied with the Dominion and provincial outlook from a Conservative point of view. This country needs all the optimists it can get; Victoria's Federal member certainly belongs to the band of hope.

Half a dozen of London's largest theatres are closed for the time being because the general public is showing a decided inclination to remain in the open air as long as possible. The craze for tennis is being held partly responsible for the poor business at the box office at the moment. We presume this is another indication of the trend of the times and the insistent demand for action and more action.

Authority intoxicates. And makes mere sets of magistrates; The fumes of it invade the brain; And make men giddy, proud and vain.

So for a good old gentlemanly vice, I think I must take up with avarice.

That disease Of which all old men sicken, avarice.

companies only, while Dominion incorporated companies could operate without any regard to its provisions. In that case the only remedy would be the adoption of similar legislation by the Dominion Parliament.

CANADIANS WELL OFF

Pessimistic individuals who imagine that they can seal the fate of this young and promising country of vast resources must experience unpleasant moments when they peruse the various statistics that add still more life to the "corpse" they seem to be ready to inter.

One fairly conclusive example of the nation's condition and the financial ability of its people may be found in the recent analysis of Canadian bond sales for the year so far. Within that period it is shown that of the $189,095,631 sold by the various firms, Government bonds to the extent of $21,000,000 were bought in Canada, while the United States took $25,000,000; British investors took none. In municipal bonds Canada absorbed $39,000,000 and the United States $28,000,000, none going to Great Britain; while corporation bonds sold to the extent of $52,000,000 in Canada, $19,000,000 in United States and $1,000,000 in Britain. The totals of this year's buying are: Sold in Canada, $113,643,631; sold in United States, $73,949,000; sold in Britain, $1,000,000.

There is not much of "A Whisper of Death" about this showing. It looks as if Canada and Canadians, in spite of everything, are not at all badly off. Our dollar is worth one hundred cents in New York. German marks will soon be sold by the U.S. and yet Germany will never be in the receiver's hands unless she lies down altogether—which she will not.

SEND HIM "HOME"

Eamonn de Valera's mother, whose name is Mrs. Charles Wheelwright, declares that the captured republican leader is an American citizen and consequently "England will find she has got something on her hands now because she will have to deal with this country." The lady in question lives in New York State and is apparently somewhat out of touch with affairs in Ireland and American sentiment towards them in general and towards Eamonn de Valera in particular. Apart from the fact that our neighbor is looking after her own business and is not the least bit concerned about people who defy law and order—in fact she usually deals with them without gloves—it may be that Mrs. Wheelwright has unconsciously supplied a suggestion as to what the Irish Free State authorities should do with their troublesome charge. They might deport him as an undesirable; but we cannot imagine the Washington Government giving him a welcome home.

Note and Comment

An enterprising and courageous sailor waded to the brink of Niagara yesterday. He started ten feet from the shore and then down stream until he could overlook the American Falls. When he returned to land he was arrested on a charge of being drunk. He could at least argue that he took plenty of water with it.

Dr. Tomie assured the people of the Kamloops district the other day that he was quite satisfied with the Dominion and provincial outlook from a Conservative point of view. This country needs all the optimists it can get; Victoria's Federal member certainly belongs to the band of hope.

Half a dozen of London's largest theatres are closed for the time being because the general public is showing a decided inclination to remain in the open air as long as possible. The craze for tennis is being held partly responsible for the poor business at the box office at the moment. We presume this is another indication of the trend of the times and the insistent demand for action and more action.

Some Thoughts for To-day

Authority intoxicates. And makes mere sets of magistrates; The fumes of it invade the brain; And make men giddy, proud and vain.

So for a good old gentlemanly vice, I think I must take up with avarice.

That disease Of which all old men sicken, avarice.

FAILURE OF SINGLE TAX

To the Editor:—Re Mr. Marchant's letter published in your paper on the sixth instant. An old "saw" says, "Curiosity Killed a Cat." Mr. Marchant may consider my observations on the single-tax condition in Saanich as "curious," but nevertheless the condition is steadily assisting in doing the job of the cat. Mr. Marchant may not get the practical nature of these suggestions fully into his mind, but others are succeeding quite well. Note the agreement of these observations with the interview from Reeve H. F. Hewlett of Oak Bay, published in The Colonist of the fifteenth instant.

Since Mr. Marchant is interested in immigrants, he might explain fully why he values the city more than he derives from it. He says that "one can't make a living, and who can't, or don't, pay the costs of their presence in our municipalities. Also he might further explain to us why he values to vacant property of improvements on adjoining properties when the improvements do not cover the costs of the improvements. Why a single tax, and a very low tax on improvements these become direct liabilities on vacant property or on property that is not being improved. Why real estate booms. When this situation is fully grasped the value to the city of these seventy-seven million dollar residences may be reckoned.

Mr. Marchant suggests something practical when he states in clear print that "the V. I. B. ought to stay its proceedings." It is the V. I. B. party, then by all means kick it out at once. If, however, single tax is done by the offender, then, with it to like-wise.

The reading public will observe that Mr. Marchant has proved nothing in our local conditions that reflects any value in so-called single tax as used here. When he states that "it is indisputable that the non-taxation of improvements was highly beneficial to the city and the V. I. B. progress," he is only making a modified statement which may mean nothing at all. This was also the case with the "single tax" in the U.S. and in England. The progress and decline, Mr. Marchant has submitted no proof that single tax was an important causative factor in any progress Victoria has ever had. In fact he states that "some things other than the tax on improvements, which have seriously tended to drive people out of the city," and since there is no consideration of other things, it is not possible to get reliable information of any case on record where single tax, all by itself, has worked a rejuvenation in a district, or has for any considerable number of years been more than tolerated.

Single tax was assisting in driving Victoria to despair. Our City is planning a change, and our Mayor is ahead of Saanich. Her ratepayers have been viewing for some time an unimproved situation which must soon be ended or it will be a disaster to the present municipality. This Single Tax is the causative factor. I believe it has been equally causative in aiding Victoria's slide into her financial difficulties.

THE PARALLEL

To the Editor:—Your leading article of the fifteenth instant entitled "A Parallel" contains much truth but not all the truth on the questions of reparations and the security of France. The following facts are very generally ignored:— 1. Germany, according to Lloyd George who knows, has already paid about $200,000,000.

2. The government of Lloyd George offered France the alliance of Britain against German aggression. This was refused.

3. With few interruptions, due to weakness, France, for over two centuries in her foreign relations has been aggressive. From and including Louis XIV. onwards, royalist, republican and imperialist France has differed in this respect, but very little. Had as Germany was in 1914, and she was, been as aggressive as she was no worse than the France which supported, so long as he was successful, Napoleon I. From Madrid to Moscow continental Europe was looted, exploited, divided up, annexed and trampled under foot. Even now, Republican France, with a home area of 215,000 square miles, the best land in Europe (more than two and one-half times that of Britain) has an enormous overseas empire. Yet she is self-supporting and without the necessity which drives Britons abroad.

4. The French praise themselves and belittle the part Britain played in the war. The British praise the French and belittle the part they themselves played.

5. Most important of all—indeed overshadowing everything else—is the fact that the occupation of the Ruhr renders future world peace very difficult. The annexation of the Ruhr would be a disaster to the world and the preservation of white civilization impossible.

J. N. HATCH 182 Patricia Avenue, Oak Bay, August 16, 1923.

[Editor's Note:—The editorial dealt only with what Germany has paid to France. The $200,000,000 referred to by Mr. Lloyd George represents the total German payment to all of the Allies on reparation account.]

THE ALIENATION OF OUR RESOURCES

To the Editor:—A situation of which a great many people in British Columbia appear to be blissfully unconscious has just been diagnosed by a writer in the London Times, who in a recent issue of that journal says:— "A great proportion of the timber resources, logging enterprises, and sawmills owned in the United States, Canada and the British Empire are owned in the United States. Many areas of the best timber lands are passing to American hands."

What is said by the writer of our resources would probably apply with equal force to our mines and other resources. Unfortunately he fails to tell us what, in his opinion, is the cause of this state of things. Will you allow me, Mr. Editor, to give my own interpretation.

In the last fiscal year we purchased from the United States goods to the value of $115,258,194, and only succeeded in selling to that country Canadian goods to the value of $292,588,643, leaving a little difference of $223,369,553 which we had to make up in some way or other.

As usual, Great Britain came to our rescue by purchasing an excess of Canadian goods over and above the amount of our exports. This was done by her, thus providing us with a credit balance which helped in negotiating our debt balance with the United States. This was not entirely wise on the deficiency, and we have to remember that our excess purchases from the United States have been going on for many years past, our aggregate debt balance in that quarter for the last generation being several billions of dollars. There has apparently been a change in the method of reckoning in dealing with this huge debt, and that has been by handing over our natural resources and the control of our industrial organization to capitalists in the United States.

In this way we have been converting our great treasure-house of the West into a bank of opportunity for the American capitalist, and the Canadian who wishes to remain here and make a living rubs his eyes and wonders why the matter was not done long ago. It may be an awkward fact for our Protectionists to face, but this denial of opportunity to our own people is a very serious matter. It is our Protectionist policy. So long as we give the privileges of a high tariff to American "branch factories" in Ontario and Quebec, which do not use our coal or raw materials, and which frequently do not, to any great extent, employ our labor, our Canadian capital, we are providing a very efficient conduit through which Canadian wealth can flow out of the country. It is a very serious matter.

The longer we adhere to Protectionist policy, the more we are "paying" with the Canadian people, and of "Going! Going! Gone!" with our natural resources and our industries.

EARLY CLOSING

To the Editor:—I notice in tonight's Times two letters attacking and criticizing Lieut.-Col. Patterson for his attitude towards early closing.

In conjunction with thousands of other citizens throughout this Province, I am in accord with the Colonel in his opinion as presented in the article. I would point out to Mr. Dargatzis that the stores in every city in British Columbia were open five days a week from say 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday evenings until 9 p.m. the business done by the retailers would be greatly increased and the convenience of the public would be catered to.

Closing every city up tight at 1 p.m. one day in the week as though we had so much money as to be able to begin with, and unfair and unjust to the merchant whose rent goes on, and whose salaries have to be paid exactly the same as if he were allowed to conduct his own affairs in a common sense way. I challenge both Mr. Dargatzis and Mr. Fryie to name any city on the Pacific Coast south of the boundary line, where the whole business section is compelled by law to close up shop for a half day during the week, while the store clerks take pay-off on full pay, and the general public are inconvenienced thereby.

This enforced holiday has caused a loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars this season from tourists arriving and passing through the cities of Vancouver, Westminster and Victoria on Wednesday afternoon and on each one of them resembling a mague in the business sections, and being unable to purchase the goods they required.

The stores that the retailers have not taken a stand on this matter earlier, although they know what they are losing through the enforced holiday, because members of the Retail Clerks' Union have threatened to boycott any retailer who suggested going away with the imposition. You, Messrs. Dargatzis and Fryie, of the retail clerks, also labor representative Alderman Woodward have got to realize that you have made a laughing stock and a byword in this city long enough, besides helping to bring about the present moribund condition that exists among us. You as a body are only a small minority of the citizens, and democratic legislation (using your own argument) is not in the interests of the minority. Besides, can you not see that your employers' interests are your interests and that the more successful and prosperous the better your chances are of sharing in the results by receiving more wages? The more successful and prosperous the city and province are as a whole the happier and more contented will be each and every one of us. At present we are retrograding and drastic means are required, combined with cheerful co-operation and energetic team-work, to bring about a reformation.

It is no use this Province spending money to bring in visitors, and endeavoring to improve conditions generally, if the merchants are forbidden to do business in the middle of the week, or any other time, while their employees are loafing on salary; therefore the employees will have to abandon their selfish attitude and act like men and not like spoiled children.

If any of the retail clerks are not satisfied with their lot in this city and think they will get a better deal to the south of us, my advice to them is to go and try it out over there for themselves. They will find that no recognition is taken of us, that no demands for wages, that every man is expected to do his job and to do a day's work for a day's pay; that the man who cannot keep his end up in the volume is considered a sentimentalist and finally that after paying the higher rentals and other costs of living the balance remaining at the end of the month is less than he gets in Canada. Competition is so strong in the Pacific Coast States that unless business is conducted on strictly business lines no merchant can make both ends meet, let alone save money, and until Victoria conducts its affairs on similar lines we shall continue to founder in the slough of despond and remain where we are.

Literary Notes

During the last two years more interest has been taken in the work of Judge Haliburton (1798-1885), the Nova Scotian humorist, than during the last two centuries. He is now offering to his readers "Selections From Sam Slick," edited by Paul A. W. Wallace (The Eyre Press, Toronto). The volume is a collection of passages which will give the general reader an adequate idea of Haliburton's style. The introduction is written by Mr. Wallace, a geographical sketch of the writer who was hailed by Artemus Ward as "the father of American humor." APPLY FOR PERMIT TO BUILD SHINGLE MILL IN HARBOR

Canadian Puget Sound Lumber Company Waiting City's Findings

Officials of the Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber Company announced to The Times this morning that the action of their company in its building operations proposed for the inner harbor here, awaits the decision of the city council.

The company hopes that when they have been granted permission to build their mill, and when they have at last completed their building operations, that they will be able to manufacture into shingles, the many cedar logs which they are at present sending to the United States.

The committee appointed by the city council to look into this matter on behalf of the citizens of Victoria, is composed of the following: Mayor Hayward, chairman of the works committee, city engineer and solicitor. It is hoped and expected that the decisions of these men will be put before the milling company in a very short time. The decision will doubtless be closely bound up with the smoke nuisance by-law regulations.

TAXES TROUBLE OAK BAY MUNICIPALITY

Non-Payment Puts Council in Financially Embarrassing Position

The current taxes in a great many instances still remain unpaid, it was announced by the Oak Bay municipal authorities last night. Up to June 30 about seventy-three per cent of the total of taxes had been received, and the remainder, subject to the five per cent penalty, is not forthcoming.

Last year the authorities had collected eighty-two per cent of the taxes up to the same time last year. The total collection for the whole year amounted to 85.6 per cent. If the estimates for this year are to be attained, satisfactory financial foundations laid, the Oak Bay authorities must collect $30,514. The shortage in collections is explained by the fact that three of the biggest taxpayers in the district have not paid their dues for the year. The disbursements to date have been satisfactory from the standpoint of comparison with estimates.

Clerk Blandy has informed the council that there is a possibility of being able to cut down the expenditures of the municipality in many ways, that they will be able to save $4,700.

The total receipts to date are $175,346; disbursements, $126,841, and cash balance, $48,492. Estimates for the year are $243,452 for receipts, and $263,357 for disbursements, with the bank overdraft at December 31 unchanged from last year's figure of $17,710. Accounts due but unpaid amount to about $6,200. None of the annual instalments for sinking funds, amounting to about $2,200 at the half year, have been paid.

"Our Mr. Wrenn," Mr. Sinclair Lewis' first novel, is now for the first time published in England. It is a joyous, light and amusing story. The vivid color and characterization of many of his stories reflect that experience. On one occasion the manager's bungalow was burned down by a fire which started in another, there was a serious riot in the coolie-lines in which Snell had an altercation with an excited Chinaman who had a pistol which Snell was able to grasp before the axe descended, he might never have made

LOCAL TEACHERS WED IN VANCOUVER

Miss Huntley and C. D. Haverstock of High School Married

Vancouver, Aug. 18.—The wedding took place on Wednesday evening at the Point Grey Presbyterian Church of Miss Sylvia Grace Huntley, youngest daughter of Rev. A. H. Huntley, and Mr. Charles MacDonnell Haverstock, son of the late Rev. Haverstock, of Annapolis Valley, N. S., and Mrs. Haverstock of Victoria. Both bride and groom have for a number of years held positions on the staff of the Victoria High School. Dr. Carruthers acted as officiating clergyman assisted by the father of the bride.

The bride, who was unattended, was gowned in a navy tulle suit trimmed with opium pink and black of military pattern, with which she wore a picture hat of black tulle trimmed with a drooping feather. She carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and fern.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Haverstock left for Wigwam Inn, Indian River, where the honeymoon will be spent, and on their return they will make their home in Victoria.

Mounted Policeman Brought Insane Woman From North

Regina, Sask., Aug. 18.—At this time of year holiday seekers grow restless and in the mountains some have thrillers in the form of lake and stream, of beach flirtations, of motor trips and lonely trails, but none can tell a tale so strange as that of Constable D. J. Griswold of the Canadian Mounted Police, a Regina boy, who arrived home recently for a two months' vacation after two years at a lonely police station in the far north.

Who would care to start his vacation trip by taking charge of an insane Eskimo woman, on a journey of 2,000 miles, occupying several weeks? Very few would, but that is what Constable Griswold had to do. Perhaps, however, two years in the Arctic would engender a longing for the comparative enjoyment of one's home city. So on July 9 Griswold started on his long journey, bringing Tulik, the Eskimo woman, from the Arctic Ocean to her destined lodging place at the Ponoka, Alberta, mental hospital.

Griswold had been stationed at Aklavik, on the delta of the Mackenzie river. It is a recently established post further north than Fort Macleod, and the outpost of the R.C.M.P. Travelling first to Herschel to get the woman, he, in company with C. E. G. Baker, left Aklavik on July 9 on a Northern Trading Company river and lake journey at Waterways they took the railway to Edmonton and thence the charge was taken to hospital. The woman, who had been a violent person at times, for the first two days out she had to be kept in close confinement. Afterwards she became accustomed to the boat and quieted down. On the Eskimos are the main charge of the police.

B.C. Women Want Canadian Goods Routed in Canada

St. John, N.B., Aug. 18.—Pointing out that east and west had their own goods, and that each had their own goods, a letter received by Premier Veniot, of New Brunswick, from the Women's Institute of British Columbia offers the institute's help to the Maritime provinces in their efforts to have Canadian goods routed through Canadian ports rather than via Portland, Me. Premier Veniot has sent the letter to Mayor Fisher. The letter asked that full information in connection with the claims of the port of St. John be forwarded, and it would be used to the best advantage.

Tombola Prizewinners.—The winning numbers of the tombola held in connection with the Esquimalt Women's Institute Exhibition are as follows: 77, dishwasher, donated by Mr. J. Day; 135, five-dollar scrip, given by B.A.P. Paint Co.; 232, five-lb. pail of lard, given by Mr. J. Mesher; 281, one broom, donated by Vancouver Blind Institute; 210, broom, donated by Vancouver Blind Institute; 200, 2 1/2 lbs. of baking powder, donated by Mr. Jamison; 299, 2 1/2 lbs. of baking powder, donated by Mr. Jamison; 5, collection of pickles, donated by Holsum's; 312, 364, and 284, collections of pickles, given by A. Young.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Thursday, August 16, at St. John's Church, Quadra Street, when the Rev. F. A. P. Chadwick united Beatrice Emily, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. James, 1124 Johnson Street, Vancouver, and Mr. and Mrs. James Wylie, 1124 Johnson Street, Esquimalt. The bride was given away by her father, and looked beautiful in a gown of messaline silk and white picture hat, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Violet James, the bride's sister, attended as bridesmaid, the groom being supported by his brother, C. Wylie-Biggs, of Esquimalt. The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Wylie left on the night boat for Vancouver, where they will spend a few days before proceeding to Tacoma to make their home.

Potential Tragedies Averted by Club

Miss Robinson, Matron of Girls' Club, Tells of Its Quiet But Effective Work

"I just 'mother' them. In fact many of them call me 'mother.'"

This simple statement from the lips of Miss Robinson, the capable matron of the Girls' Club, contained in a nutshell the secret of the success which has attended this pioneering effort in social service work.

To a Times representative at the garden party at "Pentirew" a few days ago Miss Robinson chatted concerning the internal management of the club, which was to share with the Social Service League in the proceeds of the fete.

A Haven For Girls

No. 1308 Stanley Avenue, to a casual observer looks like any other well-cared for household, but within its hospitable walls many embryo tragedies have been averted. During its existence of a few short years it has housed many girls who were beginning to drift through temporary financial embarrassment, illness, unhappy home conditions or other handicaps.

The club has eight bedrooms. Each girl has her own room, bright and cheery, with its comfortable bed and clean but simple furnishings. At present there are only four boarders, but at Christmas ten were accommodated, for as Miss Robinson observed, she is always willing to give up her own bed if necessary, while beds can be made up on the couch at a pinch. No girl is ever turned away.

A Typical Case

Miss Robinson, a sweet-faced, gray-haired woman, just the type to win the confidence of a girl in trouble. A short time ago Miss Wark, the policeman's daughter, found a girl wandering about the streets at a late hour, evidently very frightened. On being questioned, the girl stated that she had run away from home because her father had beaten her. She was without money and had nowhere to go.

Realizing that the girl's plight was serious, Miss Wark communicated with the club, despite the lateness of the hour. "Had Miss Robinson room for a girl who had nowhere to go?" Of course she had, and within a short time the girl was in a comfortable bed and potential disaster was averted.

As the aim of the club is to readjust conditions for the benefit of the girl whenever possible, Miss Robinson got in touch with the girl's home and had a conference with her parents. As a result the father and his daughter were both reconciled, and after a short stay in the club the girl went home. She still keeps in touch with Miss Robinson.

Cheery Atmosphere

Frequently the club has proved a haven to a girl recovering from a long illness in the hospital. As soon as she is well enough to leave the institution, but before strong enough to take up work again, she needs careful convalescence. The club fills just this need. At present one of the inmates is recovering from an operation which necessitated the amputation of her leg. She was alone in Victoria, her people being in England, and her plight would have been pitiable but for the club. Now she is cheerfully going through the trying ordeal of getting used to an artificial limb, and Miss Robinson watches over her like a mother.

There is nothing of the cold, somewhat repellent atmosphere of the "institution" about the Girls' club. It is just a home and the girls within its hospitable walls are like a happy family. No better tribute to Miss Robinson and her conduct of the club could be given than the unconscious tribute of the girls who after leaving its shelter frequently return for a brief visit and a chat, to report as to their progress over a friendly cup of tea.

Staff of One

For all its size and its unending work, the club has a staff of only one—Miss Robinson, the matron. Although her work is never done, she modestly disclaims any praise, and says that the girls do most of the work. As in any well-ordered home, each member is given certain duties to perform, in fact, the majority of them ask for something to do.

In this way they receive a training in household duties and where a girl shows a liking for domestic service, Miss Robinson will train her thoroughly in the household arts. In several households in Victoria former inmates of the club are giving excellent service as domestics, reflecting much credit to the thorough training given by Miss Robinson.

The success of the work at the club is all the more amazing when one realizes its precarious financial support. Several church and welfare organizations make small monthly grants, which, however, are insufficient to meet the small cost of maintenance and the balance is found through donations from kindly friends acquainted with the value of this community service.

Anyone interested in the welfare of the girlhood of the city should pay a visit to the club. Miss Robinson will welcome them and will gladly show them over the club and explain its workings. It will be a revelation to the uninitiated or to the sceptic who thinks that such places are unnecessary in beautiful Victoria.

WHERE BOBBED HAIR DOOMS A GIRL TO SPINSTERHOOD

Should an Eskimo gentleman suddenly be transplanted to our country and told to find a wife, he would pass by many of our loveliest girls with disdain.

Our young men would wonder why the Eskimo was so hard to please, and would marvel at his indifference to beauty. But his brothers of the north would have no difficulty in understanding why the Eskimo of the Arctic of this land did not arouse enthusiasm in the heart of the visiting Eskimo.

They would immediately notice that the girl he passed by without a thought—although they might be fascinatingly beautiful—were girls with short hair—the bob of the latest cut.

Such a girl is simply not to be thought of as an Eskimo as a possibility for a wife.

The reason for this is not clear. Nevertheless, it is an acknowledged fact that an Eskimo girl who for any reason is obliged to shorten her locks will not be annoyed or delighted with a single proposal of marriage—until she has hair as long again to its normal length.

It is needless to say that should the present feminine fashion of wearing the hair short reach as far north as the home of the Eskimos, it would meet with an emphatic rebuff from every Eskimo girl.

For, there in the north country it is very necessary for a girl to marry. It is her only means of livelihood should her father die. For the women—although they do their share in the fight for existence by keeping house and making clothes for their husbands as well as themselves—absolutely dependent upon a husband to bring home meat. Hunting is the one industry in the Arctic.

As a result, Eskimo fathers are most anxious to marry off their daughters. And the girls are anxious to marry in order to be assured of food for the rest of their lives.

Because the hair is a requirement for marriage, a short-haired girl in the polar regions is a curiosity.

Have Changed Quarters—St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society held their regular meeting Thursday evening, when it was decided to change their quarters from the A.O.F. Hall, Government Street, to the K.O.P. Hall, North Park Street, meetings to be held on the second and fourth Wednesday of each month. The meeting was a reunion nature, several old members being present. After the business the lodge convened in social session, ice cream and cake being served. Dancing concluded a most successful and enjoyable evening.

OCEAN AND COASTWISE SHIPPING

FOUR BIG VESSELS COMING TO OPERATE IN COASTAL TRADE

Mongolia, Manchuria, Finland and Kronland Will Operate Service

International Mercantile Marine Give Details of New Service

Details of the new service of the International Mercantile Marine Company, which is to operate four huge passenger and freight liners in the intercoastal trade, have been received by the Pacific Steamship Company, which will be Pacific Coast freight agent for the company. Four vessels, the steamships Mongolia, Manchuria, Finland and Kronland, are to be withdrawn from the trans-Atlantic service for operation between the east and west coasts under the supervision of a subsidiary corporation known as the Panama-Pacific Line, as announced recently. The vessels will not come north of San Francisco but the Pacific Steamship Company will receive freight in Seattle from New York October 18 for San Francisco and Los Angeles via Havana and the Panama Canal. The vessel will be followed by the steamship Finland, sailing from New York November 1, and the steamship Manchuria, sailing from New York November 22. From San Francisco the Pacific Steamship Company will have charge of freight solicitation on the Pacific Coast for the new line.

Decision of the international Mercantile Marine Company to operate a new passenger service on such a large scale was cited by officials of the Shipping Board in Washington, D.C., as concrete evidence of the stability of the recent record of growth of intercoastal traffic. Statistics compiled by the board's bureau of research show that nearly 11,000 tons of freight was moved between the coasts in the first six months of 1923. Three-fourths of this traffic was eastbound, and of this 75 per cent comprised tank ship cargoes.

CAPT. BARLOW TO COMMAND MAKURA

Captain Barlow, formerly of the freighter Waiotapu, will take command of the Ss. Makura, of the New Zealand Union Steamship Company. Captain Crawford, of the Makura, is going to England to take command of the new motorship which is being built there for the Union Steamship Company. Captain Barlow is well known to this port and Vancouver having been a regular visitor to this coast on company ships for years.

MANY FEATURES MARK PRESIDENT MADISON'S TRIP

Record Cargo Will be Taken Out by Liner Docking Here This Afternoon

Honeymoon Party Leaving for Tour of the Orient

Outbound for the Orient the Admiral liner President Madison, Captain P. Quinn, will dock at the Ogden Point docks to-day at 6.30 o'clock, city time. The same feature which marked the vessel's inbound passage will be a feature of her outward passage. Aboard the liner is a record cargo of the most comprehensive character that a vessel has taken out for some time. Reaching quarantine at 4.30 standard time the vessel will be alongside Pier A, of the Ogden Point docks, an hour later, to take on mail, cargo and some 100 passengers and crew. Three first-class passengers are embarking here from Victoria, while a number of saloon passengers who have come from Seattle and other ports will arrive here. A few days here, will also join the ship.

Honeymoon Trip
This trip the President Madison will carry a honeymoon party. For years past the Madison has taken E. Harris, junior, on his periodic trips to the Orient on business, but this time he will be taken to the Orient on a pleasure trip combined with business. Mr. Harris arrived in Victoria on August 12 to meet his fiancée, Miss Phyllis Lucander, who was a passenger aboard the Empress of Canada. She had been touring the Orient.

Dropping into the local office of the Admiral Orient line, Mr. Harris secured Leslie Pelling to arrange the ceremony for him, and on Monday a quiet marriage was solemnized at the home of Rev. David McLaren, on Victoria Avenue, Oak Bay. In appreciation of his services Mr. Harris presented Mr. Pelling with a beautiful gold fountain pen. Mr. and Mrs. Harris are leaving on the Madison to-night to make a five months' tour of the Orient. They will return to Victoria on August 12 to meet his fiancée, Miss Phyllis Lucander, who was a passenger aboard the Empress of Canada. She had been touring the Orient.

The ship's cargo is one of the heaviest to be taken out for some time. Under the supervision of Chas. L. MacGregor, chief officer of the Madison, loading of freight was completed yesterday in Seattle. The vessel left at 1 o'clock this morning, with Capt. R. McGillivray acting as pilot in the absence of Captain Charles G. Hansen. Her cargo comprises 1,000 sacks of flour, 6,000 cases of canned salmon, ten carloads of thread, eighty-four cars of various makes, 5,420 cases of condensed milk, four carloads of cherting gum, large quantities of California grapes, and consignments of other perishables.

Big Mail Shipment
An exceptionally large consignment of mail will be taken out on the vessel. Some 11,000 bags of mail will be taken for transhipment in the Far East. This mail shipment indicates the continued growth of this service from Victoria and Seattle to the Orient, due largely to the fact that but ten days are required in the voyage between here and Japan ports.

DISASTROUS TYPHOON DESTROYS SHIPPING

Hongkong Is Visited By Another Terrific Storm; Much Damage

British Submarine L-9 Is Sunk; Other Ships and Many Lives Lost

Hongkong, Aug. 18.—One of the most disastrous typhoons in the history of Hongkong struck here to-day, causing tremendous property loss and, it is feared, the loss of many lives. The British submarine L-9 was sunk in the harbor, unable to withstand the terrific forces of the storm. Many steamers have been wrecked, the total number and damages not yet having been ascertained. The typhoon was continuing with unabated fury at 1 o'clock this afternoon. No estimate can yet be placed on the number of vessels that have gone down or the lives lost in the storm.

Shipping Endangered
Three typhoons visited Hongkong Harbor last month, the worst occurring on July 27, when all shipping was threatened by the raging storm. At that time the giant waves washed the steel piers at Kowloon, and across the channel, on the mainland. The Kowloon wall was also partly submerged. Comparatively little damage was done, owing to the fact that the Government observatory had issued early warnings.

In August last year a terrific typhoon struck the Chinese coast between Amoy and Swatow, and left a heavy trail of damage in its wake. It was estimated the death toll at Swatow was 50,000, most of the victims being natives.

Another typhoon swept the southeast coast in the early part of September, the same year, resulting in the death of approximately 3,900. This typhoon was accompanied by a tidal wave 25 feet high.

SHIP'S BOAT AWASH AND LUMBER AFLOAT MAY BE CAPE ANN'S

Position of Floating Wreckage is 100 Miles South of Acapulco, Mexico

San Pedro, Cal., Aug. 18.—Hugh G. Roberts, master of the oil tanker La Placencia, out from London, England, has reported to the local Marine Exchange, that on August 11, while in latitude 15.4 north longitude 95.50 west, he sighted a ship's boat awash floating lumber, but no signs of life. The position given by Captain Roberts is approximately 100 miles south of Acapulco, Mexico. The floating wreckage is believed to be from the steamer Cape Ann, which sailed from here for Bayonne, on July 18, and has never been heard from.

OCEANIC STEAMER MADE RADIO RECORD

Special to The Times
Sydney, Australia, Aug. 18.—The Oceanic Line steamer Sonoma made a new record in radio transmission during her last voyage to this port. She is equipped with what is known as the arc transmitter which by means of what is called a "chopper" can be used on a short wave-length.

When the Sonoma was about 400 miles south of Honolulu at night she got into touch with the Sydney, N.S.W. station, 4,000 miles distant and exchanged signals with ease. This is the longest distance record for the outward voyage though the Sonoma has on one previous occasion exchanged messages with Seattle when over 5,000 miles distant.

NEW LINE WILL GIVE VICTORIA ALASKA SERVICE

Buford Will Call Here En Route to Alaska and Siberia

Alaskan-Siberian Navigation Company Announces the New Service

A new steamship line will give Victoria a new service, it was announced to-day. The Alaskan-Siberian Navigation Company, with head offices at San Francisco, and which was organized only last April for the purpose of inaugurating a passenger and freight service to the northern ports, announced their intention of including Victoria in the itinerary of the Ss. Buford, a 10,000 ton steamer, which operates in the Alaskan and Siberian trade.

The decision was made by the company to include this port in the steamer's itinerary when it was learned that the vessel would pass close by and that there had also been applications made for sailings on the vessel.

The Buford is expected to make her first visit to Victoria about September 13 or 14. She is scheduled to leave San Francisco, on what will probably be her last trip this year, as the waters of the North will be almost closed to shipping after the month of September, on September 8. She will touch at Seattle on September 12 and will be pleased to call at Victoria for any reasonable number of passengers and amount of freight.

Next year the same regulations will apply to the vessel—schedule, if there is a reasonable number of passengers and a sufficient amount of freight the Buford will include this port in her itinerary, but if no inducement is offered then she will proceed direct to Alaska and Siberia. Included in her northern ports are Nome and Fairhaven on Kotzebue Sound. From Nome she will come to the Siberian side of the Arctic ocean and touch at various ports there. The Buford is just returning from a trip to Alaskan and Siberian ports with a delegation of San Francisco Chamber of Commerce men, who have been visiting these northern ports with the purpose of promoting business there.

The Buford is an ex-United States Army transport, which has been reconditioned for this new service. She is handsomely built and has graceful lines. Her appointments are many, while her passenger accommodation is the best that could be desired. Persons interested in the new service and prospective passengers may make their applications at the Victoria Publicity Bureau.

CHARRED BODY AND MUCH DEBRIS MUTE TESTIMONY OF FATE

Swift Star Met Disaster When Bolt of Lightning Struck, It Is Thought

New York, Aug. 18.—The scorched body of a man, apparently a seaman, picked up among wreckage on oil strewn waters in the Caribbean sea last month, apparently has explained the fate of the tanker Swift Star, which vanished as mysteriously as did the United States collier Cyclops several years ago. C. D. Mallory & Company, owners of the tanker, it was learned to-day, have decided that a bolt of lightning sank the vessel, which carried a crew of 28 men. The Swift Star left Los Angeles for Fall River, Mass., and was last spoken at the eastern end of the Panama Canal, July 33.

The mute testimony of the probable explanation of the tanker's disappearance was presented to the owners by Captain Follett, of the schooner A. H. Willis, which was hoisting up toward the island of San Andres, 200 miles north of San Cristobal, January 22. She was close to the island when wreckage was sighted. The sea was littered with splintered wood.

Two wooden lifeboats and one steel one bearing the name "Swift Star" were found. The sea thereabouts was covered with an oily film. Captain Follett's lookout discovered an eight-foot packing case amid the debris and it was hoisted aboard the schooner. Investigation revealed the body of the man who apparently had died from burns. It was buried at San Andres. Discovery of the body led Captain Follett to believe that lightning had struck the tanker amidships, disabled her wireless and exploding one of two oil tanks, the tanker quickly sinking with all hands. Captain Follett was of the opinion that the man whose body was found was killed outright by the lightning and flung into the packing case which remained afloat when the ship sank.

LAI DOWN HIS LIFE TO SAVE SHIP AND CREW

Heroism of Capt. Johannsen Told By Officers of Barquentine Trio

Melbourne, Australia, Aug. 18.—A thrilling story of how the master (Capt. Johannsen) stuck to his post in the face of certain death, and thus saved his ship, was related when the Norwegian barque Trio arrived here with the original first officer in command. The barque was bowling along before a gale south of the Leewin, with the master at the wheel when the lookout sighted and, and the crew were ordered to shorten sail. Then, with little warning, a huge sea bore down on the little vessel. The master braced his shoulders and gripped the wheel firmly, and held to his course. A mountainous sea struck the vessel on her beam, leaving a trail of wreckage across the channel, and the master lying prone. By a miracle he had been saved from going overboard through becoming entangled in the steering gear. Making light of his adventure and his heroism, and wiping the water from his eyes, he gave orders preparatory to the damage being repaired. It soon became apparent to his officers that the Viking had been injured more severely than he would admit. He was a little later persuaded to go to his cabin, and a few hours later he died, and was buried at sea.

Alaskan Salmon Pack Is Smaller Than Last Year

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—The Alaskan salmon pack is below the catch of last year, according to advices received here. It is said that the catch around Bristol Bay will be about 300,000 sacks, less this year than last season, while the catch around southeastern Alaskan ports in certain sections is said to be exceptionally good.

Bottle Returns to Australia After a Long Voyage to B.C.

Special to The Times.
Auckland, N.Z., Aug. 17.—Dropped from the Canadian-Australian steamship Niagara between Sydney and Auckland on June 15, 1922, a bottle containing the name and address of a Ballarat resident has been returned from the west coast of Vancouver Island, British Columbia, having traveled 6,500 miles or more across the Pacific in eleven months. The bottle had been picked up by an Indian girl at Estevan and sent by a Victoria newspaper editor back to Frank Herman, of Ballarat, as requested in the note inside it.

Ruth Is Finally Crowned As Real Sultan of Swat

Babe Leads All Departments of Batting Statistics; Tris Speaker, Jumps Up

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Babe Ruth is now the real king of swat, having at last established his supremacy over all major league players in all departments of batting statistics.

Ruth has taken the batting lead from Harry Heilmann, of Detroit, with 294 to Heilmann's 287, including games of last Wednesday.

Tris Speaker, veteran pilot of the Cleveland Indians, scored the greatest gain this week in points, adding six points and taking third place from Jameson, Cleveland.

Other leading batters: Jameson, Cleveland, 361; J. Sewell, Cleveland, 355; Williams, St. Louis, 346; E. Collins, Chicago, 346; Burns, Boston, 342; J. Harris, Boston, 340.

George Grantham, of Chicago, is rated as a ten-close man, but is given a close race by the veteran catcher, Max Carey, of Pittsburgh, in stolen base honors.

Other leading batters: Stronmley, St. Louis, 358; Fournier, Brooklyn, 357; Frisch, New York, 356; Young, New York, 354; Trayner, Pittsburgh, 353; Roush, Cincinnati, 349; Southworth, Boston, 341; Barnhardt, Pittsburgh, 340.

Helen and Molla Will Have Grim Struggle To-day

Tennis Critics Give Miss Wills Even Chance of Defeating Present Champion

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Helen Wills, the seventeen-year-old tennis marvel from the West, gets a chance to even the score on Mrs. Molla Mallory, national singles champion, in the final of the national singles here to-day.

There was little to choose yesterday between the effectiveness of the rival games of Miss Wills and Mrs. Mallory. The sturdy Western girl, whose play has been a dazzling feature of the tournament all week, reached even greater heights and if Miss Goss than she did on Thursday, in defeating Miss McKane, the ranking British star.

They battled on close to even terms in the first set, only to have gains in the second set, only to have gains in the second set, only to have gains in the second set.

MUST NOT OVERLOOK THIS VETERAN WHEN SPEAKING OF MIRACLE MEN OF BASEBALL

IRON MAN JOE MCGINNITY

When speaking of the miracle men of baseball, don't overlook Joe McGinnity. Who is Joe McGinnity, you ask?

Twenty years ago he was a big league star pitcher. For seven years he was a member of the New York Giants, sharing with Christy Mathewson the pitching honors of the club.

Why should Joe McGinnity be mentioned among the miracle men of baseball? Well, at the age of fifty-four, when golf, not baseball, is the favorite sport of men of that age, McGinnity is still pitching and as usual he's doing a mighty good job of it.

Not only is McGinnity pitching winning ball but he is also managing the Dubuque, (Ia.) club of the Mississippi Valley League.

Back twenty years ago McGinnity was the "Iron Man" of the majors. It was always "Iron Joe" McGinnity or "Iron Man" McGinnity, when reference was made to the great pitcher.

Joe earned that nickname because of his ability to stand all kinds of work but particularly for pitching double headers.

McGinnity richly deserves the title of "Iron Man." It is fitting that...

Veteran Shots Win Places on Bisley Squad

Canada's 1924 Team Will Comprise Old-Timers; Freeborn Wins After 21 Years

Comaught Ranges, Ont., Aug. 18.—Canada will be largely represented at next year's Bisley meeting in England and with her old Bisley shots as an outcome of yesterday's finals in the Bisley aggregate at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association here.

While the aggregate scores for the four tyro shots, mostly cadets, won high places in the aggregate and at least two of these will be eligible to take the trip to England next year.

Yesterday was the most important day of the meet. Besides unofficially deciding the Bisley team, the final stage of the Governor-General's prize match was shot and the winner, S. Sgt. J. Freeborn, Hamilton, publicly acclaimed the best shot of Canada and chaired on the special D.C. R.A. chair which is kept for the sole purpose of chairing the winner of the Governor-General's match.

Cricket Week Just Misses a Quadruple Tie

Yesterday's results in the Pacific Coast Cricket tournament were as follows: Victoria 219, Oibs 97; Incocks 29, Mushrooms 74; Up-Island 116 and 76 for 8 wickets, Innings declared; Aibions, 78 and 43 for three wickets.

When the Aibions failed to dispose of the Up-Island eleven the anticipated Victoria tie in the Pacific Coast Cricket tournament failed to materialize. However, Victoria was successful in halting the march of the Oibs to the championship and as a result three teams, Oibs, Incocks and Victoria, ended on even terms, each having won three games and lost two. The other three clubs, Aibions, Mushrooms and Up-Island, scored two wins and accepted three losses.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Many minor grass and bush fires kept the Fire Department busy yesterday afternoon, calls coming in to the department from all parts of the city in time to prevent any outbreak from becoming noteworthy.

The regular monthly meeting of the Victoria Invited members of the British Columbia Goat Breeders' Association will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday, at 8 p.m. The business to be transacted will be in connection with the approaching Fall Fair.

Miss Gulland, principal of Crosby School, invited parents and friends who are interested to inspect the new premises at 1137 Rockland Avenue, at any time between 1 and 6 o'clock on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday, August 21, 22 and 23.

Members of Columbia Lodge No. 1, I.O.O.F., and their friends are holding a basket picnic at Elk Lake this afternoon. There will be usual Summer sports during the afternoon, including swimming and other aquatic features.

For the convenience of those persons desiring to send in entries for the following order: Quebec, 690; Nova Scotia, 683; New Brunswick, 687; Manitoba, 648.

Sergeant Goodhouse of Ottawa with a total score of 157, is winner of the King's medal, the most highly prized medal shot for at the D. C. R. A. meeting. The score is made up from the aggregate Borden, Dundonald, Bankers and Grozowsky matches. Gunner F. Holm, Calgary, who has been making remarkable scores at this year's meeting, was beaten out by only two points. Sergeant W. H. Wood, Victoria, came third with a score of 154.

The Tubercular Veterans will hold an important general meeting on Monday evening at the rooms, Broad Street, in connection with the departure of the delegate for Ottawa.

The entries for the Victoria West exhibition are pouring into the secretary of the Brotherhood of that district at the present time, and it is expected that a great number of exhibits will be on hand for the judges from the Agricultural Department to inspect. The winners of the exhibition will be judged by G. A. Robinson, of Saanich. Next Friday and Saturday are the days of the exhibition. It will be held in the Victoria West school buildings.

RESEMBLANCE NOTICED

Mrs. Beane was admiring Mrs. Deane's baby.

"Oh, what a darling!"

"Da-da! Goo-goo! Hoo-o! Da!" replied the baby.

"The dear," exclaimed Mrs. Beane. "He's trying so hard to talk!"

"Yes, he talks that way all day, but he can't say anything," commented Bobbie, the five-year-old brother of the baby.

"The baby is so much like his father," Mrs. Deane commented, apropos of nothing, of course.

LEAKAGE IN CITY WATER SUPPLY CUT TO NEW LOW LEVEL

Preston's Expansion Joints Make Loss in Pipe Line Only 15 Per Cent

Leakages in the Sooke Lake waterworks pipe line, which brings the city's water supply through the hills from Sooke Lake, have been cut down to 15.75 per cent. of the total volume of water that enters the pipe at the lake, it was announced at the City Hall to-day.

Last year at this time the leakage amounted to thirty per cent. This big reduction is the result of the installation of expansion joints which are the invention of City Engineer F. M. Preston and which seal up leaky joints in the big cement pipe.

During the last two years the heavy leakage in the pipe, which was causing a serious water shortage, reduced by the use of Mr. Preston's expansion joints. In April, 1922, the leakage amounted to 30 per cent. and in May, 1922, 50 per cent. In April of this year the leakage had been cut to 25 per cent. and in May to 30 per cent. The leakage in June of this year was only 15.3 per cent. against 23.2 per cent. in June, 1922. In July the new low record of 15.75 per cent. was registered.

So far 174 expansion joints have been installed in the pipe line at a cost of $10 apiece. Before the end of the year 75 more will be installed. Next year the work of repairing the whole pipe line probably will be completed.

MOTORS CRASHED ON GORGE ROAD SLOPE

A collision of motor cars took place at 11 o'clock last night on the Gorge Road just outside the city boundary, with the north-bound car sliding up against a telegraph post in a severely battered condition. The city buscar was damaged enough to make steering almost impossible. All passengers in the cars escaped injury. Apportionment of blame being disputed, Constable Brown, of the Saanich force, was called to the scene to make an official record. Neither owner has since formally reported the collision to the authorities.

FORESHORE FIGHT REPORT CLEARED UP BY MR. PATTULLO

False Creek Settlement Important for B.C.; Would Avoid Stumbling Block

Reports of a great fight starting at Vancouver between the Dominion and Provincial Governments over foreshore rights on False Creek, were cleared up to-day at the Parliament Buildings, by Hon. T. D. Pattullo, Minister of Lands, who issued the following statement:

"My attention has been drawn to press dispatches with reference to a notice which I caused to be given in respect of Provincial property in False Creek, New Westminster District.

"As is well known, the general question of foreshore ownership in British Columbia has a long history as at the time of Confederation, as between the Dominion and the Province has not yet been finally settled. The members of the Federation were greatly impressed by the words of their French-Canadian conferees.

Chicago Men Want Cougar and a Fifty-Five Pound Tye.

"I am after a cougar, and a fifty-five-pound Tye, and any other sport I can get, but the cougar and the fifty-five-pound Tye I have to take back to Chicago. Have you a good taxidermist in the city? How is the fishing? Where's the best place to fish? Where shall I go for the cougar?"

These were among the flood of questions poured out by Eugene B. Peirsel, of the People's Home Journal, and McClure's Magazine on his arrival in Victoria.

Mr. Peirsel has come all the way from Chicago, where he has heard of the opportunities Victoria offers, and has joined two other magazine men, Walter Y. Workie, managing editor of Sunset Magazine, San Francisco, and F. M. Coleman, of the Seattle office of Sunset Magazine, in a fishing and hunting trip. They registered at the Empress Hotel last night with all the paraphernalia to realize Mr. Peirsel's ambition, and were easily secured secure on their fishing gear. They plan to spend ten days in the Campbell River district after which they will return to Victoria for a short stay, and then make for the hunting grounds again.

Mr. Peirsel and Mr. Workie are no strangers to Victoria having frequently come to the island for hunting and fishing. Mr. Peirsel was chosen for the present trip, following a request from the Chicago visitor that his western friends select a spot where and when to visit. Mr. Peirsel of the chase to show to his friends in the windy city.

It will be no fault of the Publicity Bureau officials or Island sporting agencies if Mr. Peirsel does not take back his desired cougar and a fifty-five-pound Tye to display to his Chicago comrades and send their itching for a trip to Victoria.

Bad Taste for Vancouver and Other Cities to Balk at Sending Delegates North

Declares North Country Has Had Many Reasons for Complaining of Treatment

Reports that Vancouver is not to be represented at the convention of the Union of B. C. Municipalities at Prince Rupert next week, and possibly other places, resulted in immediate action to-day by Hon. T. D. Pattullo, Minister of Lands, who is a member of the Legislature for Prince Rupert.

Mr. Pattullo at once called Mayor Tinsell on the telephone to find Vancouver's reason for staying away from this meeting. Telephone operators were unable to locate the Mayor, however.

Press dispatches state that the holding of the convention at Prince Rupert has been greeted with disfavor by numerous places because of the distance to travel and the shortness of stay in the Northern part.

Mr. Pattullo said:

"It would seem to me that these reasons should have been thought out and given expression to at the time of the last meeting of the Union. It strikes me that, Prince Rupert having been selected for the Convention this year, it is now very bad taste upon the part of other municipalities to submit objections.

"Prince Rupert has had good reason to complain upon numerous occasions in the past in respect of the attitude assumed in some portions of the South towards Prince Rupert and Northern and Central British Columbia, and I feel, therefore, very much resent the present situation.

"Apart from a delightful inland sea voyage, which the trip to Prince Rupert is, delegates to the convention, especially those who have not hitherto visited the Northern portion of the Province, should receive much profit from doing so now.

"There should exist between all portions of this Province, the most cordial feelings of reciprocity, and, the Southern portion being the oldest settled and most thickly populated, should set an example of generosity."

ADVICES STATE MCKINLEY WILL DOCK ON MONDAY

President McKinley Has $9,000,000 Silk Cargo for Transhipment

Will Make William Head 11 O'clock Monday Morning

With a cargo surpassing the value of the one brought from the Orient by the President Madison, the Admiral Oriental liner President McKinley will make port on Monday morning.

Late radio advices reaching Leslie Pelling, of the Admiral Oriental Line office this morning stated that the vessel will make quarantine at 11 o'clock standard time.

The McKinley sailed from Yokohama on August 12 with over 5,000 passengers and 100,000 tons of cargo. In addition to this she has several large consignments of silk goods. The total value of the raw silk consignment is $9,000,000. Valuable shipments of vegetable oils stowed away in the vessel's tanks and in barrels will bring the total value of the cargo to an amount said to be in excess of $15,000,000.

There are 413 passengers aboard the vessel, and it is understood that the vessel will make quarantine at 11 o'clock standard time.

TWO BANDITS GET COMPANY'S PAYROLL

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—Two bandits held up two employees of the J. H. Day Company, baking and laboratory machinery manufacturers, near the plant on Harrison Avenue to-day and escaped with the company's payroll roll money, amounting to $14,500. This was the company's second payroll robbery within a year. One bandit was killed then.

GUNMAN MAY FACE TWO MURDER CHARGES

Minneapolis, Aug. 18.—William Stauffer, gunman, who voluntarily surrendered himself to the police yesterday, faced the probability of answering for two murders to-day. Louis W. Taylor, president of the Red Top Cab Company, who with Emil Engstrom, police taxicab inspector, was shot down when the officer attempted to arrest Stauffer, had a relapse yesterday and because of the setting in of pneumonia, physicians held out no hope for his recovery.

Police Officer Engstrom was buried yesterday, and because of the return of capital punishment in his service, when he asked that the last of Moses—"A life for a life"—be brought back.

STOCKTON TO HEAR OF THE IMPRESSIVE VICTORIA GATEWAY

To learn how Victoria reclaimed the land on which the Empress Hotel now stands and to obtain pictures of the proposed gateway to the city, two Stockton visitors are at present in Victoria gathering information on the site of the proposed gateway to the city. The massive auditorium which Stockton is building to honor men of the American Expeditionary Force is erected.

Stockton faces a similar problem as that which Victoria faced at the Inner Harbor. The site of the proposed auditorium has to be reclaimed from the water. On a previous visit to the city the Californians were so impressed with the gateway to the city, and having learned of its origin, returned to Stockton for more information when the question of the Stockton auditorium was mooted.

Home Bank Not in Position to Attract Prospective Purchasers

Montreal, Aug. 18.—"The Home Bank is not in a position to attract any purchaser," said Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, to-day. Sir Frederick was asked if the depositors of the institution would be taken care of by his bank or any other bank.

"I am afraid they will be taken care of very slowly," he replied.

"We purchased the Merchants Bank, which was an entirely different proposition," he said. "The assumption is that the Home Bank is not in a position to attract any prospective purchaser."

NEWS AND NOTES OF THE CHURCHES

MODERN CULTS TO BE THEME

Rev. Dr. Davies Will Speak To-morrow at Centennial on Subject

Leaders in religious thought of today believe that a form of modern idolatry is evidenced in the proneness of various denominations and religious sects to canonize their "pet" doctrines and distinctive beliefs.

The subject for the evening sermon at Centennial is "The League of Nations Possible?" The rapid changes in the British ministry and in the German government, the persistence of the French in their military government of the Ruhr as well as the ubiquitous problems of Russia and the Near East has maintained the interest of the people in the league.

ARE THEY LOST

TRIBE OF ATLANTIS?

Remarkable Tribe Holds Annual Ceremonies at Mouth of Rhone

At Saintes Maries de la Mer, in the Camargue, at the mouth of the River Rhone, in France, in the month of May each year, there gather nomad tribes, who call themselves the Gitanos, and speak a language crammed with strange words which are not connected with any other known tongue.

These nomad tribes live away from civilization, always wandering, proud and free. They never settle down and their house is the moving "roulotte." Horse dealing is their usual vocation and they are excellent judges of good stock.

At least once in their lifetime these raggle-taggle gypsies, scattered all over Europe, proceed toward this wild section of France to worship their Christian saint, their patron, St. Sara, the Egyptian.

The Gitanos take no interest in the Christian ceremonies. During the pilgrimages they remain in the crypt of the church which is specially reserved for them. There they sit, holding huge wax tapers in their hands, worshipping and singing. No stranger is allowed to be present at their mysterious ceremonies, which are followed by the coronation of the gypsy king and queen.

On May 25 in the pilgrim procession the Gitanos are accustomed to carry on their shoulders a little flowered boat containing the wooden statue of St. Sara, which they crown on the sandy beach, shouting "Vive, Sainte Sara!"

Then these nomad tribes leave, to resume their lonely wanderings. The mysterious origin of this people has ever been a fascinating problem and has also been the favorite study of many scientists and writers, but until recently not all the explanatory theories propounded are substantiated by scientific data.

ORIGIN FASCINATING PROBLEM

Some say the Gitanos may be the last survivors of a forgotten Egyptian or Assyrian civilization. Others, struck by certain similarities which they have in common with the Basque people, think they were the first Iberians. Others attribute to them an Indian origin, picturing them driven westward by Oriental intruders, and identify the Gitan with that of an Indian tribe of Singh.

But the boldest and most curious theories are those which have been advanced after careful consideration and numerous observations of their customs, language and ethnical characteristics.

Gitan legends and traditions that have been handed down from father to son and from tribe to tribe say there was a large land without a shore which was inhabited ages ago by the first Gitan people, but which disappeared one day in an overwhelming disaster.

Are these legendary lands the lost Atlantis? And did any of its inhabitants outlive the cataclysm? Was this fabulous country the birthplace of the first Basques, Gitanos and American Indians?

Marquis de Baroncelli, who has long studied the vexing question, has stated the strange likeness of the technical characteristics of the red skin and the Gitan. He has also been much surprised by some customs common to both races, such as the simple action of inspecting the teeth of a horse.

He noticed the curious answer to the question, "Whence did your people come?" "From where the sun rises," say the Indian. "From the sunset land," say the Gitanos.

These speculations are strengthened by sayings of Gitanos who take part in the pilgrimage to "Li Santo." "A snow bearded gypsy patriarch said: 'We are to the human race what the Cornacagus horse is to him; the sole survivors of a vanished world.'"

CALL TENDERS FOR LAST BRIDGE WORK

City Engineer F. M. Preston called for tenders to-day for work which will polish off the new Johnson Street Bridge project.

The tenders for which Mr. Preston is calling now cover the paving of the approach to the east end of the bridge and the paving of the eastern and western stationary spans of the viaduct. The whole work will be covered in one contract, Mr. Preston explained to-day.

The centre or bascule span of the new bridge, which lifts to permit the passage of ships, will be surfaced with wooden blocks and not paved with cement like the approaches. Mr. Preston stated Ordinary paving would be too heavy on the lifting span, he said.

Paving of Johnson Street from the new bridge westward is proceeding rapidly now.

Sandwich Suggestions New Recipes That Will Help You to Make Delicious Sandwiches

- Egg and Olive Sandwiches Chop two hard-boiled eggs fine, add twelve large stuffed olives which have been minced, season and moisten to a paste with mayonnaise. Spread between buttered slices of SHELLY'S 4X BREAD.
Pimento and Cream Cheese Sandwiches Chop two pimentos fine and add one cream cheese. Season and mix well, moistening with mayonnaise. A pleasing variety is given by using SHELLY'S 4X WHITE BREAD. For one-half the sandwich and SHELLY'S 4X WHOLE WHEAT BREAD for the other half.
Raisin and Peanut Butter Sandwiches Use equal quantities of raisins and peanut butter. Chop raisins medium fine and blend them with the peanut butter and a small amount of plain butter. Spread between slices of SHELLY'S 4X BREAD, cut very thin.
Hot Chicken Sandwiches CUT SHELLY'S 4X BREAD in slices one-quarter inch thick. Spread lightly with creamed butter and lay on thin slices of chicken. Sprinkle on a little celery salt. For the second slice of bread in place; toast on other side and, when finished, butter on toasted surfaces.

Clash With Beatty Won By Baldwin

Cabinet's Supreme Power Asserted in Argument With Sea Lords Over Air Control

ACCEPT OR QUIT. PREMIER'S RULING Compromise of Claims Hoped May Avert Resignation of Navy Heads

London, Aug. 18.—It is a singular coincidence that in the very week in which he was trying to iron out the international reparations crisis in the interest of peace, Premier Stanley Baldwin was facing a domestic near-crisis over the matter of national defence.

This came in connection with the control of the air force, which the Government recently announced it is planning to increase to six times its present strength in order to match the strength of France.

The clashing claims of the Admiralty and the Air Ministry for control of the naval section of the force have cooked threats and counter threats for the resignation of Admiral Earl Beatty, first sea lord of the Admiralty, on the one hand, and Air Marshal Sir Hugh Trenchard, on the other, but back of this there is the more fundamental question as to whether ultimate responsibility for national defence is to rest with professional experts of the civil executive.

Supreme Power Asserted Premier Baldwin announced a compromise decision on the rival claims of the two services, which although more favorable to the Air Ministry than to the Admiralty, was hoped, avert the resignations of the high officers of either force; but the outstanding feature of the incident is that it has reasserted the principle of the supreme power of the cabinet in face of the challenge thrown down by the sea lords' Board of Admiralty.

During the European war, while the use of airplanes and dirigibles for military purposes still was largely experimental, the development of the flying arm offered the promise of competing demands of the navy and army. Later it was decided that the air force was entitled to a completely independent command, and being based on the principle that aerial warfare has its own objects to attain, just as land or sea warfare, and that it is a separate matter, the Admiralty completely under the control of the Admiralty.

The Admiralty claims, however, that it agrees to this arrangement only temporarily in order to facilitate the building up of the air force, and that now the latter is established the navy should have a separate command, completely under the control of the Admiralty. The question was referred to a sub-committee of the imperial defence committee, and the experts on the fighting services are represented, and which is charged with the responsibility of advising the cabinet on all broad questions of national defence.

Navy Claim Not Upheld This committee has now recommended that the Admiralty's claim to its separate air division should be turned down, and that the control of the air forces should remain vested in the air ministry. The next development in the situation is, first, that there has been a "leakage" of this recommendation before it was even considered by the cabinet; and, second, that Earl Beatty and his naval colleagues on the admiralty board threatened to quit if the recommendation was adopted.

Injection of these elements into the controversy caused more concern of Premier Baldwin than the merits of the dispute itself. It is generally conceded that there is a good deal to be said in support of the Admiralty's claim, which is based on the fact that in naval warfare a certain number of aircraft reckoned to be five per cent of the entire air force, would work in close cooperation with warships as scouts, lookouts and spotters for naval guns.

It is asserted that this co-operation cannot be achieved unless the airmen engaged themselves in naval training and discipline, and some concession is made to this viewpoint in the decision which the cabinet has now taken. But aside from the merits of the case, Premier Baldwin saw himself faced with the situation in which the Admiralty seemed to be trying to manipulate public opinion, first, by giving out confidential information, and second, by threatening to resign if the cabinet proceeded to the "leak" of the proposed compromise.

There is reason to believe that Premier Baldwin holds the strongest view that this was an attempt to prejudice the government's decision by such means. He has, therefore, ordered a probe into the "leak" of the proposed compromise, and before announcing the cabinet's decision, he summoned Earl Beatty to Downing street. In the course of this interview, the Premier is believed to have told the Admiral bluntly that it is the duty of the government's professional advisers, while making the strongest case they wish in behalf of their own services, to accept unfavorable decisions of the cabinet. He threatened to quit before the decision has been made publicly known.

The Premier's flat reassertion of the principle that the co-ordinating of the duties and positions of the fighting services is wholly the business of the cabinet seems to have quelled the incident finally.

BISHOP WARNS ON SPIRITUALISM

London, Aug. 18.—Dr. St. Clair Donaldson, Bishop of Salisbury, in consecrating a new church yard, warned his hearers not to make investigations of spiritualism unless it was done in conjunction with scientific societies. He admitted that the strong desire to make sure that departed spirits are still loved, encouraged many to attend seances, and that God had given man reasoning faculties with which to find things out.

"But let us try to find it out merely as a matter of knowledge," continued the Bishop. "In God's name I charge you not to expect to get in touch with or know your loved ones through these channels. Don't look for it. Don't attempt it. To go beyond God's teaching is to go into danger and tread forbidden ground which may lead into trouble. 'I know Christian people who have found great joy and comfort in the things which they have found, and have had to choose between the Christian faith and spiritualism.'"

CHURCH HEADS REFUSE TO HEED PROPHECIES Flaring Posters Are Even Displayed in Underground Stations With Warnings

London, Aug. 18.—For years, from time to time there have appeared in the London newspapers mysterious advertisements to the effect that "England will never be happy until the bishops open Joanna Southcott's box of sealed writings."

More recently flaring posters have been displayed in the underground stations, warning, "Moscow's fate will be London's doom unless the bishops open Joanna Southcott's box of sealed writings."

COUNTRESS OF CLONMELL

London, Aug. 14.—Call it reaction from the war, if you will, but the fact remains that British women, bred in court atmosphere, are finding it difficult to go "back to the old way of living."

One of the nobility who "felt that way" is the beautiful Countess of Clonmell, wife of an Irish peer.

During the week, however, the air of mystery with which the whole matter has been shrouded was slightly relaxed. The name of the custodian of the famous box has not been revealed, but he is stated to be a "churchman of undoubted integrity and position."

KING GEORGE GIVES NAME TO 'GOOGLES'

London, Aug. 18.—King George, inured as he is to his daily round of tasks, which often include visits to the cottages of workmen, does not seem to have the zest of Queen Mary for exhibiting sustained interest in the domestic apparatus of some of these cottages, nor to have such a keen appreciation of what the home proletarian baby eats or wears, as does the Queen, who is now a grandmother.

LOOK FOR DIAMONDS AFTER METEOR FALL

London, Aug. 18.—Does it ever rain diamonds? That question is now troubling a resident of Hampstead, a suburb of London, who, following a recent severe thunder storm, found embedded in his garden a heavy lump of some metallic substance which was studded with glistening points, resembling precious stones.

POSTAL FLYERS SAVE 20 DAYS TO BAGDAD Long Time to Come Before Transport Can Be Developed to Handle All Mail

London, Aug. 18.—A most interesting and instructive paper was read before the International Air Congress, in London, by Brig-Gen. F. H. Williamson, director of postal services of the British Government.

Gen. Williamson predicted that the United States, Canada, the West Indies and other parts of the North American continent would soon be linked up by air with Great Britain. Connecting air lines would also run to Egypt, India, the Straits Settlements, Australia, New Zealand and Africa.

BARONET TURNS RUM-RUNNER IN GET-RICH-QUICK PLAN

London, Aug. 4 (By Mail)—"I can offer you an opportunity for making twenty per cent profit on your capital every sixty days."

These three significant words could truly be carved upon the tombstone of young Angus Patrick Bowes-Lyon who started all social London the other day by killing himself.

BACHELORDOM DIVIDED INTO THREE CLASSES Report That Women No Longer Run After Men Js Hotly Denied

London, Aug. 18.—"To the Prince of Wales" . . . "the best and most popular of bachelors," was the toast of the evening at a dinner party given and attended by bachelor members of Parliament in the House of Commons before it broke up for its long recess.

Between thirty and forty M. P.'s including Lord Hugh Cecil, Sir Robert Horne, the latter being in the chair, assembled in room D to eat, drink and boast of their celibacy—proceedings which were conducted with great secrecy while the House was actually sitting.

MARRIED MEN MOOTED

There was an exciting incident during the dinner when at Lord Cecil's Scottish whip in the House, and a married man, entered the room and delivered a message to one of the bachelors immediately after the host began to boo and hoot and shout for him to get out or they would turn him out, and before the astonished messenger had time to explain he was unceremoniously hounded out of the room.

Wonderful Mother at 98 Sends Daily Note to Son

Mother of Lord Haldane Has Face That Is "a Love-Letter to All Mankind"

It seems incredible that in England to-day there is alive a person who remembers the passage of the first reform bill, the first balloon ascent, the first railroad, the time when bodies of executed criminals were hung on chains on gibbets at crossroads, and days when sedan chairs took the place of cabs and taxis.

This woman is Mrs. Haldane, mother of Lord Haldane, who, although in her ninety-ninth year, is able to contrast very strikingly present-day England with the country in the later Georgian and early Victorian eras.

She has visited prisons where tread-mills were the favorite form of punishment, and survived attentions of doctors when bleeding was practically the only form of surgery. She followed the hounds when gentlemen hunting.

Although she remembers perfectly the times before the building of railroads in England, Mrs. Haldane recently has had the wireless telephone apparatus installed in her home, and is a keen listener-in on the latest scientific achievement.

"The education of children in those days was very strict," Mrs. Haldane recalls, "and children were threatened with 'Boney'—Napoleon Bonaparte—if they misbehaved, as there was still a strong feeling against the French. We children used to be taken from our cribs at 7 in the morning by a nurse, who plunged us in a bath of cold water.

So old, and yet so alert, is she that she still writes daily to a lord chancellor of our own time, her son, Viscount Haldane. Mrs. Haldane, indeed, is so vigorous that she can read without glasses her son's compactly-thought-out book on Relativity, which she is seen holding in this charming portrait.

Mrs. Haldane comes of two very clever families, the Scotts and the Burdon-Sandersons. Her granduncles, John and William Scott, were the great lawyers who were raised to the peerage as Lord Eldon and Lord Stowell.

Almost exactly sixty years ago Miss Mary Elizabeth Burdon-Sanderson crossed the border to marry as his second wife Robert Haldane of Cloanden, near Glasgow, a sports-loving peer who associated with golf. She was left a widow in 1877, bringing up with the most sympathetic care her brilliant family—the eldest, Lord Haldane; the second, Mr. John Burdon Sanderson Haldane, perhaps the greatest living authority on colliery explosions and the physiology of respiration; the third, Sir William Stowell Haldane, the Edinburgh lawyer; her daughter Elizabeth, educated at home, is the distinguished Hegelian, the biographer of Descartes and Ferriar; the University of St. Andrews recognized her scholarship by conferring on her its LL.D., and she was the first woman J.P. in Scotland.

Interested in everything going on round her, not least in politics, both at home and abroad, she still reads and writes French with the greatest ease. Her character is so strong that someone once said she would have made a splendid judge. Indeed, people who come to her to be nice to her, end by telling her all their troubles and getting her advice. She is full of courage, why her room has been post-fifty called the Chamber of Peace. She bore the war, which came home very poignantly to her circle in more ways than one, with a high heart. Of this beautiful old lady, with white hair and wonderful eyes, it has been finely said that "her face is a thanksgiving for a former life and a love-letter to all mankind."

The bachelor-author, George Ade, must have his fling at marriage, and at a wedding the other day he said: "We bachelors on an occasion like this are thought very little of, but permit me to say that, were I editor of a newspaper, I should insert all marriages in a column headed 'News of the Week.'"

GLOOMY IKEY

With one terrific spilt the rolling ship sank slowly beneath the waves. All the passengers were thrown into the sea, and among these were two Jewish gentlemen, who happened to be clinging to the same spar.

After floating about for some time they both felt very exhausted. Toward the end of the second day, however, one of them sighted a small boat, with renewed hope, he cried to his companion:

"I see a sail!"

"Vat good does that do us?" replied Ikey. "We ain't got no samples!"

Record for Silence is Held by President Coolidge

The new president and Mrs. Coolidge snatched this year in walking attire. A gold medal in competition with boys from all the colleges in the country. "Well, this is pretty important. Where is the medal?" The medal was reluctantly produced. "I suppose your folks were very proud of you?" "Well—er—I don't think they know." "What! Haven't you told them?" "No, but I guess I'd better tell father." This taciturnity is, perhaps, his most noticeable outer characteristic, although, as he once said: "I've usually been able to make noise enough to get what I wanted."

His room-mate at Amherst once remarked, in an after-dinner speech: "Calvin Coolidge came to Amherst in September, 1891. Wait a minute—I can't prove it; the first sound I heard from him was in the following May." Another former classmate made a bet that he would engage the governor in five minutes' conversation. It ran something like this: "Cal, I understand they're going to knock the tax out of you this election." "Maybe." "I hear that a spellbinder is up against you." "Yes." "Perhaps that may help you. You may shine by contrast." "Perhaps so." The classmate went away and paid that bet.

Hamilton Astronomer Once Answer to Prayer

Starving Woman Sees Miracle in Two Lone Fish Wm. Bruce Left at Her Door

Mr. William Bruce, of Hamilton, well-known astronomer, has not only made a life-long study of the heavens, but—as an ardent disciple of Isaac Walton—of the waters under the heavens and all that dwells therein.

Some years ago, on a hot Summer's day, he threw himself down in a cool sequestered spot on Hamilton Bay, and with hook and line awaited a nibble. As his motto through life has been, "Prove all things and hold fast that which is good," he sat back reading the rhapsodies of that quaint and world-renowned angler, while in due time "That which was good" was held fast to a stout stake driven into the ground, from which dangled into the water a beautiful catch of shining black bass. Sitting back dreamily watching his cork float, he was suddenly brought to earth by a tug at the stake, and a huge snapping turtle sailed serenely upstream, holding fast that which he knew was good—a generous portion of Mr. Bruce's delectable catch, this being the only occasion on record when the astronomer had not strictly adhered to his motto by failure to hold it sufficiently fast.

Shortly thereafter, when the fishing was not so good, he was proceeding home with two lone fish, when an inspiration seized him to hang them on the door of a poor, needy woman who lived alone in a small cabin. The following morning the Bruce household was startled by the appearance of the over-wrought woman, who stated that a miracle had been wrought in the night. She told how she had not had a bite in the house, and had consequently kept the night's vigil by fasting and praying. And that in the morning upon opening the door, there was—ye gods and little fishes—an answer to her prayer.

Mr. Bruce, while a doubting Thomas as to the authenticity of the miracle performed, yet bore silent witness to the scriptural verse, "According to your faith be it unto you."

Veterans Toast Memory of Foe Who Sank With German U-Boat

Mme. Schumann-Heink Sobs as Men Who Bear Scars of War Pay Tribute to Her Fallen Son—Denies She Ever Was a German Spy

While his mother sat at the head of the table weeping, with her face buried in her hands, thirty men who bear lasting scars of their service for the allies in the world war a few nights ago in Minneapolis silently drank a toast to a man who went down on a German U-boat in 1918.

He was the son of Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, in whose honor, as "the most distinguished delegate" to the convention of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, a dinner was given.

"I have two things to ask of you," Mme. Schumann-Heink said. "Will you promise me these two things?" "First, that you will never believe any false stories you may hear about me, stories that I was a German spy, that I was untrue to this, my country, and to you." "The second promise I ask of you is that when I am dead, and it won't be many more years now, you will see to it that I am buried in America, in my country. And, boys, maybe I could have, in a way, the burial of a soldier. Not any fuss. Have them play 'Taps' over my grave, as I have sung it to you. Will you promise?"

Each one of the thirty veterans solemnly stood up as she finished, raised his right hand and gave his solemn pledge. "I had a son in the German army. He was mistaken, but he did what he believed was right. I will not apologize for him. I never have. Remember, boy, I was his mother, the same as I was the mother of four sons serving with my country's forces," said Mme. Schumann-Heink. "And now," Col. George E. Leach, mayor of Minneapolis, said, "I propose a toast to that man who went down on the German U-boat in 1918. Silently, the thirty men arose and raised their glasses. Mme. Schumann-Heink sank

Another time Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were invited to spend a few days with one of Mrs. Coolidge's friends on Cape Cod. Mr. Coolidge appeared at seven meals and made three remarks—two "No, I have some butter, please" and two "No, thank you's."

Another instance of his "power of silence" occurred upon a far more important occasion. In 1905, he was practicing law in the city of Northampton, Mass., having retired from the city solicitorship. Miss Grace Goodhue, teacher of the school for the deaf and dumb in that city, went to Burlington, Vt., to visit her parents. Immediately after, Coolidge appeared on the scene. He industriously said nothing until, finally, Goodhue, pere, extracted the following:

"I just came over to be married to Grace."

"Have you spoken to her yet?"

"No, but I think I will in a couple of days."

Coolidge had been going with his future wife for almost a year when he broke into this supreme burst of communicativeness. He had never once even hinted at sentimentality. Two afternoons afterwards, according to Mrs. Coolidge, he appeared at her house, and, without a word of greeting, remarked: "We are going to get married." They were married that afternoon, and they set about housekeeping in half a small two-family house, which remained their home during the governor's terms of office.

This little home, and the simple, happy life of the governor, his wife, and two sons, became quite celebrated after a time. One day a friend of his family said that when away from why on earth he did not ask the landlord at least to paint it.

"Might raise the rent on me," said the frugal Calvin.

The president's coldness has been almost as well advertised as his taciturnity, but personal friends of his family say that when away from Plymouth, Mr. Coolidge has never failed to write to his father at least twice a week.

That he does not lack aesthetic tastes, however, Mr. Coolidge testifies. One day a particularly becoming dress of hers was much admired.

"He chooses every dress I wear," she said. "On his walks the governor sees something in a shop window that he likes; then, in the evening, I am advised, 'I saw something very fetching in the line of a gown in such a shop. Guess you'd better go and get it.'"

She added that they went hat-hunting together.

The source of this sort of domestic happiness is not hard to discover when we remember that Coolidge carries with him everywhere a thin gunmetal case, containing an old-fashioned daguerotype of his mother, taken when she was a girl. He once said:

"There can be no proper observation of a birthday that forgets the mother." Like many silent men, he is an adept at the production of pithy-epigrams.

"Men do not make laws. They do but discover them."

"The suspension of one man's dividends is the suspension of another man's pay envelope."

"The assertion of human rights is naught but a call to human sacrifice."

It is often said that the vice-presidency is a convenient shell for inconvenient politicians. As with Roosevelt, that shell has become, to Coolidge, a spring-board to supreme power. This much seems sure, that which he conceives to be his duty he will do, without fear or favor.

"When Calvin was a boy on a farm," says his father, "if I was going away and there was anything I wanted him to do, I would tell him, but when I came back, I never thought of going to see if he had done it—I knew it was done."

"A Lucid Explanation"

A good story was told recently by Sir Frederick Bridge, the famous musician.

It concerned a sailor who, having been to the Albert Hall, was descending upon an oratorio which had given him great pleasure.

A listening shipmate asked: "I say, Bill, what's a horatorio?"

"What?" exclaimed Bill. Do you mean to say you don't know what a horatorio is?"

"Not me."

"Well, then, I'll tell you. If I was to say to you, 'Ere, Bill, give me that 'andspike,' that wouldn't be a horatorio. But if I was to say, 'Bill, Bill, Bill, give, give, give me that, Bill give me, give me, give me that 'and, give me that 'and, 'andspike, spike, spike, Bill, give me that, that 'and, 'andspike, and, 'andspike, and, 'andspike, spike, spike, spike, spike, Bill, give-methatanspike, why, that would be a horatorio.'"

Balfour's Dry Comment

Anecdotes are of three kinds. There is the story about no famous person, the story about a famous person, and the story about a famous person told by another famous person. The following belongs to the third category, being told by Sir Robert Home about the Earl of Balfour.

It is a conversation which took place between Lord Balfour and an American on the other side of the Atlantic. Said the American, pointing grandly to the Metropolitan Tower: "It is eight hundred feet high!"

Lord Balfour: "Really?"

The American: "And it could not possibly be burned down!"

Lord Balfour: "What a pity!"

"When M. Taderewski will answer no more questions," says a Daily News reporter, "he just shakes you warmly 'by the hand,' by the hand." Not by the neck, you will note.—Punch.

Fairy Story Fortune For Two Ottawa Lovers

Strangers Bring Word to Drug Clerk That She Shares in Estate of $1,500,000.

The sudden arrival of a fortune, as from a guardian fairy, made the marriage of Miss Monica Mousseau and Mr. Eudore Guilford one of the most romantic celebrated in Canada's capital for many decades.

Miss Mousseau, who was twenty-four years of age last September, was a clerk in Mr. J. S. Brown's drug store for the last five years. Mr. Guilford, who is twenty-six years old, is a fully qualified pharmacist, and has been employed in the drug store of Mr. R. Harrison, which is only a few blocks away from the store where Mrs. Guilford was employed.

The couple met and kept company for four years. They intended to be married. They decided to wait until Mr. Guilford qualified at the Ontario College of Pharmacy, Toronto. The young man passed his examinations with high honors last Fall.

Like all love affairs things did not go smoothly with them. On the night that Mr. Guilford would be free from duty, his sweetheart would have to work, which resulted in their meetings being very infrequent. This, however, like the old maxim, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder," proved to be of value, with the consequence that Miss Mousseau had other beaux, but none that she cared for like the man she married.

During the courtship, a startling event occurred. By a stroke of fortune such as only occurs in few individuals in the world except the people in fiction, Miss Mousseau became very wealthy.

Two strangers appeared in Brown's drug store one cold day last November.

It was the season for colds, and Miss Mousseau, who was on duty, bustled out to attend to them. However, they did not ask for the usual medicated pills, liniment, or soothing powders. They asked for Miss Mousseau. After asking her several questions, the answers which quite satisfied them, they told the beautiful young drug clerk that she, along with her three brothers and three sisters, had become the heirs and heiresses of an estate worth approximately $1,500,000. Needless to say Miss Mousseau was dazed. She could scarcely believe it.

But it was true!

She received abundant evidence a few weeks ago when the first instalment of the money arrived.

It was for $60,000.

The inheritance came about this way. Miss Mousseau's grand-uncle, Mrs. Irene Barnhart Wilson, at one time lived in Annapolis. She left the family home to go on the stage. This was not regarded as unusual in those days. The result was that she was promptly disowned by her family.

After playing in many stock companies, she finally appeared in a huge production in New York city, where she captured the heart of a millionaire cattle king, George Wilson, of Mexico. They were married. Some years later, Mr. Wilson died and left everything to his wife. The Wilson family, who strenuously opposed the marriage, contested the will but lost out in the courts. In the meantime, Mrs. Wilson, who was childless, was getting old. She wanted to write to her family but did not know whether they were living or dead. She was always very fond of one niece. The lonely old woman often recalled happy days of her girlhood in Annapolis. She died lately. Her will left everything to this favorite niece, the late Mrs. T. H. Mousseau, who was always kind and good to her.

Alas! The niece had died! The lawyers for Mrs. Wilson had instructions to see that the children of her niece got the estate if their mother had predeceased her aunt. With this end in view they came to Ottawa, and, after several weeks of anxious tracing, finally located the right heirs and heiresses.

The welcome brought to Miss Mousseau on Friday, November 24, 1922, by the solicitors for the Wilson estate, Messrs. Hill and Scott, of San Antonio, Texas.

Has Miss Mousseau changed?

Not at all. Even up to two nights before her marriage, she could be seen every day faithfully at work at the little corner drug store. She tells some amusing stories of inquisitive "Johnnies" who wanted to see her. They found something to look at that was not hard on the eyes. She is blue eyed, dark bobbed hair, a dainty figure, and very pretty. Her three brothers and three sisters, who shared in the estate with her, were more excited than she was. One of the boys got married recently. The other two are too young to get married. The three girls are all under 17 years and attend the Gloucester Street Convent, Ottawa. Their father is a well-to-do contractor.

Miss Monica Mousseau, or rather Mrs. Guilford will try her examinations shortly for the Ph.B. degree. She wants to be a real help-mate to her husband, who intends to purchase a drug store in Ford City and to operate it there.

Discovery By Dictionary

Talking about books the other night, Mr. Ben Tillett, the popular English Labor leader, said: "The dictionary is my favorite. You have only to open a page casually and a word will set up a train of thoughts and memories. And the dictionary is like a mine that never gives out. It is a perpetual source of discovery; for even fairly well educated people use only about a thousand words in ordinary talk. The non-reader jogs along on from 400 to 500."

Just Fancy This!

Suppose G. K. Chesterton, the celebrated English author, had Harry Lauder's legs. London Opinion pictures him like this.

Mary Pickford's Double

"Mary Pickford's double" is a title that has been applied to beautiful Mme. Karina, the world-famous Danish dancer, who is at present on tour in England in "Fisherfolk," a ballet written by her husband, Captain Janssen, the well-known playwright and sportsman, whom she first met through knocking him down with her motor car.

Once, on a previous tour, Mme. Karina put up at a station hotel and gave instructions that she was to be wakened to catch the 7.40 train, but that if the train was late she was to be allowed to sleep.

Early next morning there was a knock at the door and a voice said: "Did you want to be wakened for the 7.40 train?" "Yes," was the reply.

"Well," said the voice, "you can sleep on, because the train's late."

Egyptian Funeral Furnishers Supplied Every Corpse With a Guide-Book to the World of the Dead; Curious Information in Drinkwater's New "Outline of Literature," a Masterly Review of Best Thought of the Ages

By PROFESSOR W. T. ALLISON

When Sir Walter Raleigh lay in the tower, a victim of the suspicious nature of James the First, he begged his enforced leisure by writing "A History of the World." He was a pioneer in outline literature, anticipating H. G. Wells by three hundred years. But Wells has had more imitators than Raleigh, for we have had following hard upon his "Outline of History," Professor Van Loon's "Story of Mankind," Professor Thomson's "Outline of Science" and "Outline of Literature," and now, "The Outline of Literature," by John Drinkwater. This work will eclipse its predecessors in bulk, for it will consist of five volumes. The first volume, published next year, will be devoted to art, and will be edited by Sir William Orpen. The first volume of "The Outline of Literature" is now to hand, being published in this country by the Ryerson Press of Toronto. It is printed on good paper and is handsomely and lavishly illustrated, including many two-page plates in color. In its clear and concise style and helpful studies of the field it covers, ancient, medieval, and renaissance literature, it is an ideal book to put into the hands of boys and girls of high school age and, in fact, can be read with interest and profit even by scholars who for years have been familiar with the masterpieces of song and story of which it treats. Mr. Drinkwater has not attempted to do all the writing himself. He has associated with himself in this undertaking such eminent English men-of-letters as Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, Mr. G. B. Charlton, Mr. Granville Barker, Canon Barnes Dr. Neil Munroe, Mr. Wilfred Whitten, and Mr. Sidney Dark.

WHAT HELPS APPEAL OF LITERATURE

In his introduction Mr. Drinkwater states that this review of the world's literature is a representative summary of the work that has been accomplished by the great creative minds in the world of letters. His second aim is to place that work in historical perspective, showing that from the beginning to the present day, from the earliest scriptures down to Robert Browning, the spirit of the artist in words is one and abiding. He wishes to show us that each generation of writers, whether of Italy or England, is carrying on a noble tradition and has its roots in the work of the men who have gone before. The only way in which we can appreciate or fully understand the literature of one age is by knowing something of that from which it springs. He says in his preface, "I say Dr. Drinkwater, to know what was the relation of eighteenth to seventeenth century poetry," and what was that line of descent by which Meredith came from Fielding. Such knowledge makes us remember always that however great the hero of our worship, he is but one of the many in an organic whole which is yet greater than he. We may, for example, put Shakespeare with justice above all our own writers, but we remember that he stands so proudly at the head of a story so wonderful.

FIRST BOOKSELLERS WERE UNDERTAKERS

The first chapter of this Outline is entitled "The First Books in the World," and contains some curious information. The earliest writing was scratched on rocks or engraved on stone tablets. The Chaldeans learned to write with a stylus on clay tablets. One of these is now in the British Museum and is an account of the Flood. It is probably the oldest existing example of writing now to be seen in the world. This ancient clay tablet literature deals with war records, prayers, agriculture, astrology and politics. Egyptian literature is almost as old as that of Chaldaea. The scribes of the Nile valley wrote on papyrus with reed pens. The oldest work of theirs which has come down to us is the Book of the Dead, a copy of which

TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS

A Letter from Mrs. Smith Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her
Trenton, Ont.—"I am writing to you in regard to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not be without it. I have taken it before each of my children were born and afterwards, and find it a great help. Before my first baby was born I had shortness of breath and ringing in my ears. I felt as if I would never pull through. One day a friend of my husband told him that the Vegetable Compound had done for her. My wife and I advised him to take a bottle home for me. After the fourth bottle I was a different woman. I have four children now, and I always find the Vegetable Compound a great help as it seems to make confinement easier. I recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. FRED H. SMITH, John St., Trenton, Ont.
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system, so that it may work in every respect effectually as nature intended. Thousands of women testify to this fact.

that the patient smiled under the operation." Of all the Roman poets Mr. Drinkwater thinks that Horace must have been the most reasonable. "He is the best fellow to go a walk with, unfurling in hours and vacance or discomfort, always ready to give you a felicitous phrase, or a flash of tender wit to carry off your mood. Horace died just eight years before the Christian era. He was sprung from the people. His father, indeed, had been a slave, and as a freedman he rose no higher than to be a kind of commission agent at auctions. Yet to him we owe our most reasonable of poets. In his "Satires" and "Epistles," in his Sabine retreat—the little farm thirty miles from Rome, his own to enjoy—Horace fulfilled his dream of poetic retirement. Here he lived the simple life, watched the Roman world go by, invoked the Muse, cultivated the fields, and had his friends to spend a few days with him as often as he could persuade them to turn their backs on the smoke, noise, and vices of Rome. He was the "boy" and "girl" of today who can avail themselves of such pleasant storehouses of knowledge as "The Outline of Science" and "The Outline of Literature."

STORIES SHORTER STILL

Carrying On With the Condensation Craze in Fiction

(Among the latest follies in fiction is the perpetual demand for stories shorter and shorter still. The only thing to do is to meet this demand at the source and check it. Any of the stories below, if left to soak overnight in a barrel of rainwater, will swell to the dimensions of a two-dollar novel.)
I. AN IRREDUCIBLE DETECTIVE STORY HANGED BY A HAIR OR A MURDER MYSTERY MINIMIZED
The mystery had now reached its climax. First, the man had been undoubtedly murdered. Secondly, it was absolute certain that no conceivable person had done it. It was therefore time to call in the great detective.
He gave one searching glance at the corpse. In a moment he whipped out a microscope.
"Ha! ha!" he said, as he picked up a hair of the dead man's coat. "The mystery is now solved."
He held up the hair.
"Listen," he said, "we have only to find the man who lost this hair and the criminal is in our hands."
Pictures began to appeal to him. Statures beckoned to him. Music maddened him, and any form of Recitation or Elocution drove him beside himself.
III
Then, one day, he married Margaret Jones.
"As soon as he had married her he was disillusioned."
Then he eloped with Elizabeth Smith.
"He had no sooner set down with her, than—"
Half mad, he took his things over to Arabella Thompson's flat to elope with her.
The moment she opened the door of the apartment, he loathed her.
"I've seen her as she was. Driven sane with despair, he then—"
"Our staff here cut the story off. There are hundreds and hundreds of pages after this. They show Edward Endless grappling in the fight for clean politics. The last hundred pages deal with religion. Edward finds it after a big fight. But no one reads these pages. There are no women in them. Our staff cut them out and merely show at the end—"
Edward Purified.
Up lifted.
The whole story is perhaps the biggest thing ever done on this continent. Perhaps?
(Copyright, 1923, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service. Arrangement with Dodd, Mead & Co.)
"More fiction!" is the usual exclamation, even by those who have all the time there is. They should be thinking themselves about "more method," or else waste less time.

"Listen," said the Great Detective "we have only to find the man who lost this hair and the criminal is in our hands."

During all this time women were calling to him. He knew and came to be friends with—
Margaret Jones,
Elizabeth Smith,
Arabella Thompson,
Jane Williams,
Maud Taylor.
And he also got to know, pretty well,
Louise Quelquechose,
Antoinette Alphabette, and Estelle Ectetera.
And during this same time Art began to call him.

II. A CONDENSED INTERMINABLE NOVEL FROM THE GRAVE TO THE GRAVE OR A THOUSAND PAGES FOR A DOLLAR
NOTE: (This story originally contained two hundred and fifty thousand words. But by a marvelous feat of condensation it is reduced, without the slightest loss, to a hundred and six words.)
Edward Endless lived during his youth in Maine.
In New Hampshire, in Vermont,
in Massachusetts,
in Rhode Island,
in Connecticut.
III
His fate took him to New York, to Chicago, and to Philadelphia.
In Chicago he lived in a tenement house on LaSalle Street.
In a tenement house on LaSalle Street he lived in a living house on Michigan Street.
In New York he had a room in a eating house on Forty-first Street.
and then, in a rooming house on Forty-second Street.
In Philadelphia he used to sleep on Chestnut Street.
and then, he slept on Maple Street.

Historic Characters

Indian Chiefs Piloting Ancient War Vessels and Monstrous Oil Steamers.

By THOMAS DEASY

It is a long stretch of the imagination that from the year 1852 to the present day, in which to record the deeds performed by a race, with no records or traditions other than those spoken by the boys and girls of today, who can avail themselves of such pleasant storehouses of knowledge as "The Outline of Science" and "The Outline of Literature."

It has been asserted that Chief Edensaw and Chief Weah had a mutual understanding whereby Edensaw would receive ransom for saving the lives of the captain, his wife, and the crew, while Weah would benefit through the loot obtained. In many of the accounts of the capture of the vessel, published, and otherwise, this statement has been made, which is denied by all concerned, including the captain, who handed Edensaw the following:

Clears Edensaw.
The bearer of this, Edensaw, chief of the tribe of Indians residing on North Island, at northern end of Queen Charlotte Islands, I have reason to know that he is a good man, for he has been the means of saving the lives of me and my crew who were seized and taken prisoners by the Masquet Indians of the harbor of the Skidegate. On the 26th September we were surprised by some canoe alongside. We were so overpowered by numbers of them and so sudden the attack on us that our power was quite impossible for us to do anything. We were seized in the cabin this man and his wife and two or three of his men who happened to come off in a small canoe protected us for seven hours till he made some terms with them for our safety. He saved my chronometer and several things which he brought to Fort Simpson and gave to us without asking any reward for it, and I hope that if this should be shown to any master of a ship that he will reward him well. He is every white man. (Sd.) Matthew Rooney, former Master of schooner Susan Sturgis.

Recognized Slave.
He had not been long in the position of chief when he had a narrow escape in an encounter with a party of Taimpeans, on the Naas river, where he had gone to dispose of slaves, and also to trade a copper, which was then desired by those striving to hold potatoes. The Naas people recognized one of the slaves as a member of their tribe, and claimed him. This led to an angry dispute, during which two of the chiefs engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle. A bystander raised a gun to shoot the young Haida chief, who secretly snatched the bullet and made him receive the charge which instantly killed him. The Haida chief then rushed to his canoe, several shots were fired at him, but he managed to reach his canoe and escaped. He carried the bullets in his body during the remainder of his life.

A Monument.
Standing on the Masset Reserve alongside the two-storey frame residence of the Edensaw family, is a marble monument, ten feet in height, on which is inscribed: "In honor of Chief Edensaw, erected by Captain Matthew Rooney, of the Schooner Susan Sturgis." Also on the same monument is the date of the birth and death of the late chief. Alongside is a sleeping brown bear, carved in a round-topped pole, the crest of the clan, of which the former chief and pilot was the supreme head. No longer will scattered clans raid on the vessels frequenting the narrow waters, or war with one another, for ownership over the lands and waters of the vast Province. Town councils elected annually represent the family, in the form of a council of chiefs, and on the reserves where the clans and tribes now live in harmony, brought together for purposes of Christianizing and educating. Frames of buildings have replaced the former lodges. Each family owns a gasoline launch in place of the war canoes of former days. Well-attended schools are held in Haida of our day recite the following lines:
In Haida Land,
By Thomas Deasy
Gone are the braves from Haida Land,
Our warriors of old are dead,
No more their tales unfold,
Our chiefs no longer sing their songs
On mountain top and shore;
Silence reigns on every hand,
Their glorious days are o'er.
Chorus
In Haida Land, in Haida Land,
Beside the deep blue sea,
In Haida Land, in Haida Land,
No more our braves we see.
What cared they for the busy world
Where all was strange and new?
What cared they for the glittering gold,
Held by the rich and few?
Each door was open to a friend,
None sin or sorrow truly may
They loved their home—their native land,
Where the giant spruce tree grew.
Chorus
In Haida Land, in Haida Land,
Beside the deep blue sea,
In Haida Land, in Haida Land,
No more our braves we see.
Sleep on, our braves of Haida Land,
Where the giant tree now waves
Best where the silent waters flow,
To mark your homes and graves.
Fond memory now is all we have,
Of many unrecorded deeds,
Of many unrecorded deeds,
Before the whiteman came.
Chorus
In Haida Land, in Haida Land,
Beside the deep blue sea,
In Haida Land, in Haida Land,
No more our braves we see.

Vessel Was Boarded.
Captain Rooney was on a fishing expedition, and loaded his vessel at the mouth of the Skeena. The vessel was boarded by another chief, named Weah, who had a number of Indians under his command, then living at a place called Attawa, called after a white sand bank, which lay on the shore at a place now known as Masset.

Three bands of Indians lived at the entrance to Masset Inlet, while other bands lived at Yan, across the harbor, at Seven Mile Point, and Jalun river. All were Haida Indians but were under separate chiefs. The Haidas also controlled the remainder of the islands of the Queen Charlotte group, and were also on Prince of Wales and other islands in Alaska. At that time they numbered many thousands, and combined, for warfare, when the bands were not at war with each other. Edensaw had a great deal of influence with all of the Haidas, and was also related, by marriage, and otherwise, with the large tribe of Tinnetas, another tribe living along the shores of the Alaskan archipelago.
He was well acquainted with the waters in the northern country, hence his engagement on the ill-fated schooner "Susan Sturgis" was a wise and bold one. The vessel, carrying the crew, was threatened by the lives of the captain, his wife, and the white crew. Edensaw advised those on board to take refuge in the cabin, and perleyed with Chief Weah just north of Mt. Etna off the coast of Sicily, which has given its name to the structures of which it is the type, was bought years ago by a Scottish firm for the volcanic products, and I believe worked until 1874. In spite of their dark color the basaltic lavas have been much used in Europe for building purposes, as well as the paler and more siliceous worked tuffs. Many of the fine Roman buildings were made of this rock. In our own vicinity we have seen the basalt of Albert Head, and the andesite of Esquimalt Harbor used for the filling of the breakwater base, while the coarser diorite is our commonest roadbuilding material.

Volcanoes—Living, Sleeping, Dead

By ROBERT CONNELL

No. II
Every schoolboy knows the island of Sicily, so delicately placed just at the toe of Italy. Its hot Summers and warm moist Winters early attracted the attention of the romans. Above their heads rose the volcanic products, and I believe worked until 1874. In spite of their dark color the basaltic lavas have been much used in Europe for building purposes, as well as the paler and more siliceous worked tuffs. GARDENS AND WILD FLOWERS

By Robert Connell

The Heath family reminds me of one time included in it, but is now generally put by itself under the name of the Mistletoe or Indian Pipe family. The type, Monotropa, Indian Pipe, is represented here by Utricularia. When met with in the woods it hardly ever fails to excite attention and interest by its form and color. When fresh the stems and flowers are silvery white, the little bractlike leaves being tipped with black, the flowers being to one side, and the stem cream colored. There is nothing green about the plant, as there is not about any of the members of the family. The reason for this is that the plant does not utilize the sun's energy by the presence of chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of ordinary plants, since it draws its nourishment from organic matter in the soil. A fungus-like growth covers the rock tips and thus enables it to absorb its food. It can only live when there is a plentiful supply of decaying matter. It will be seen that both in color and mode of life it has affinities with the fungi. It is a plant which has found an easy way of making a living, by eating its decayed relatives.

Parasitic Plants

There are three other plants of the family from Vancouver Island, Allotropa, Pterospora, and Newberrya. They are all reddish or pinkish in color and without green leaves, and are either saprophytes, or rotten plant eaters like Indian Pipe, or parasites, that is, plants growing upon other living plants and sucking their juices. A very attractive little parasitic plant is a common sight on the grassy slopes of our rocks in the early Summer months. It is called Utricularia. It is a little ship's ventilator, about four or five inches high, of a pleasing dark-purplish blue with yellow in the throat. The flowers are white. Root, Orobanchaceae, Utricularia, is a parasite on butternuts, grasses, etc., on whose roots it attaches itself. It grows singly but generally in little colonies. A member of the same family is Boschniakia strobilifera, or Poque, which lives on the roots of the salal and is valued by the Coast Indians as an article of food. It is in color like a spike of flowers. There is another Orobanchaceae, which is a parasite of Grindelia, the gumweed so familiar to us in little colonies. Mistletoe

Of course, in speaking of parasites, one must not forget the Mistletoe, the plant of the ancient Druids. One species, Arceuthobium douglasii, grows on the Hemlock. The Mistletoe is not a through-going parasite, as witness its green leaves and stems. It draws from its host the salts it requires for its growth. The Mistletoe needs the host's food requirements. Our native plant lacks the whiteness of the berries which makes the British one so pleasing. Attempts have been made to naturalize it here, but I do not know what success. The late Mr. Henry King, of Mount Talmie, an indefatigable experimenter with plants, I know made some attempts, but if I remember aright, his efforts were not rewarded. Another fortunately not very common parasite is the Dodder, Cuscuta salina, which, as its name shows, is essentially a salt plant and is found in salt marshes. Occasionally it attacks the Yarrow. It is a very troublesome pest in some parts of the world, and has been introduced in great profusion near Mt. Hamilton, in the Diablo Range, California. Its long yellow threadlike stems cover the vegetation, attacking its green leaves. It is a degenerate member of the Convolvulus family, which, with many beautiful flowers has also been introduced to this country.

Economic Uses of Volcanoes

The destruction of life and property by volcanic eruptions is the aspect of them which most readily presents itself to us. It must be remembered, however, that there is at least some offset to this in the uses which volcanoes serve by their distribution of the most valuable samples, which result from the weathering of lavas rich in iron such as are the basaltic or from the fine ashes of the volcanic eruptions. These are required by vegetation. In districts where the soil is composed of distillate-gradings lavas are to be found the iron lavas for the olive groves and citron fruits. Not only along the Mediterranean and in Central Europe but in California and Oregon this is true. The first visitors to Katala after a great storm, which had recently ago saw nothing but the desolating blight of a covering of white ash many feet thick. A year or two later it was seen that this had resulted in an added fertility leading to a more accelerated vegetable growth. That there are the direct economic products such as sulphur, pumice and borax, volcanic, an island volcano

SEATTLE WELCOMES TOURISTS ROYALLY

Victorians Say Mainland City Has Right System to Please Visitors

Motor tourists returning from Seattle to this city, have good reports of the courtesy and welcome extended to them by the mainland authorities. In the American city the first thing that greets the tourist is a policeman, but he does not take the stranger's number, he gives him, very politely, a little card with directions to the information bureau, and the motor camp, and all sorts of other useful information. The policeman will then enquire where the motorist is headed, and if possible, will give him directions and aid in finding his location.

In the traffic jams along the avenues, the police on duty are particularly careful to help any car with a foreign number plate, out of a difficult situation. Very often the drivers from out the less crowded parts of the world have some little difficulty in keeping away from the wrong ends of street cars, and the like. But on these occasions the police and passers-by, as well as all others who are driving vehicles in the city streets, are careful to aid and sympathize with the stranger in every way.

This spirit of good-fellowship and welcome which pervades Seattle is something that is making that place a popular tourist town. Victoria people returning from that city speak of the great difference between it and others on the coast.

JASPER HIGHWAY NAME DISCUSSED

Hon. J. H. King Memorialized By Nelson Publicity Body

A resolution to Hon. J. H. King, Minister of Public Works for the Dominion, strongly protesting against the naming of the Jasper Highway as the Trans-Canada route, has been sent the minister by the Tourist Association of South-Eastern British Columbia and Southern Alberta, and has received the backing of the Nelson Board of Trade.

The Federal government are at present outlining the route of the trans-Canada highway as follows: Through Regina to Medicine Hat, where it divides into two routes, one through Calgary, Banff and along the Windermere highway to British Columbia and the other to divert through Saskatoon, Vermilion, Vegreville, Edmonton, Edson and Jasper Park over the Yellow Head Pass and Hope Mountain to the coast.

The Associated tourist body in its resolution states that the federal government years ago stated that the trans-Canada highway went over what is now known as the All Red Route, this was established as the Southeastern route, and ran direct through the Crow's Nest from Medicine Hat to Nelson. Maps for the past four years had shown it so.

There was no objection to the building of the Jasper Park highway, but the southern route was established through a well populated

NEW DODGE MODELS HERE

Local Agents Show Touring Types of Latest Designs

The arrival of the advance guard of the 1924 Dodge models is reported by A. E. Humphries, Limited, who are in receipt of the latest design in the well known car turned out by the Dodge Brothers at their plant at Windsor, Ont. The first of the 1924 product is of the touring type and represents the very latest in beauty, riding ease and mechanical perfection on which the firm's reputation as builders has been founded. Other models in the roadster, sedan and coupe types are on order and are to be expected within the next week or so, stated a member of the firm, who reports difficulty in securing these owing to the steady and consistent demand which has been made throughout the entire Dominion from dealers who are anxious to be first on the ground.

The identity of the product in this 1924 model remains the same. The same sturdy engine is under the hood, the same dependable chassis, improved in numberless details, underlies the body.

The improvement to the riding qualities of the car lies in the rear springs—now underslung—which have been materially lengthened, while the wheelbase is longer. Improved appearance and greater comfort have been attended to, the bodies being lower and longer, while there is more leg room both in the front and rear compartments.

The improvements contained in this latest car are so numerous that only a visit to their showrooms located at corner of View and Vancouver Streets, can outline them all.

BETTER HIGHWAYS IN UNITED STATES

In 1923 They Will Absorb $288,000,000

Washington, Aug. 18.—The 1923 road construction season is expected to add many hundreds of miles to the country's system of improved highways. Figures compiled by the Bureau of Good Roads of the Department of Agriculture from 21 scattered states show they will have available $288,000,000 for this purpose, compared to $272,000,000 spent by them last year. On federal aid work, which constitutes something like one-half the total mileage, there was under construction March 31 work estimated to cost $258,000,000, as compared with $232,000,000 on the same date a year ago.

The general outlook is regarded as considerably better than a year ago, when the railroad and coal strikes were disturbing factors. The designation of federal-aid highways is now completed in 33 states, and is almost complete in the others. Thirty states now tax gasoline, as compared with only four at the beginning of 1921, and most of this revenue goes for road purposes.

CHEVROLET MOTOR TESTS SUCCESSFUL

Demonstrate Economy in Use of Car

For some time past Chevrolet Motor Company of Canada, Limited, and Chevrolet owners generally have been making the claim that the Chevrolet was the most economical car in the world in cost of operation and that gasoline mileage to be obtained from it was higher than that of any other car in the world.

Naturally there were skeptics among non-owners, so the company decided to hold a contest amongst its owners and let the owners themselves decide the question. Any owner of any Chevrolet car was eligible for the contest so long as he lived in Canada and drove a Canadian-built Chevrolet car, and was not connected in any way with the company or any of its dealers.

Very strict regulations were drawn up to ensure that the competing cars would be strictly stock cars with no special attachments whatever to motor or carburetor. J. L. Stewart, manager Canadian Automobile Trade, and Warren Hastings, Editor of Canadian Motorist, consented to act as judges.

To ensure a run long enough to make it necessary to cover all kinds of roads, contestants were required, after thoroughly draining their gas tank and vacuum feed, to put in three gallons of gasoline and drive the three gallons into the tank. In addition, each contestant was required to have two witnesses with him from the time he started to drain his tank till the run was completed. Three witnesses signed the sworn affidavit which the contestant was also required to sign, giving particulars of the run and the condition of his car.

The results obtained have been most gratifying to the company and to owners and have more than substantiated the claims made as to the car's economy of operation.

Four prizes were given for each province with a grand prize for the highest mileage in the whole Dominion. This was done on account of the great difference in road and climatic conditions in the different provinces.

The winner of the grand prize was Mr. J. B. Starkey, 11541 87th Street, Edmonton, with a mileage of 166.4, or an average of 55.4 miles to the gallon. Mr. Starkey is the manager of the Penn Coal Mine Co., Ltd., and was one of the ten contestants from Edmonton. Previous to this remarkable record, Mr. Starkey had made 49.5 miles on one gallon of gas but many people being skeptical, the Chevrolet dealers in Edmonton, the Nor'West Motors, Limited asked Mr. Starkey to enter the contest and to allow them to advertise the event. This was done and a good crowd turned out to see the tests. Mr. Starkey carried three passengers during the test, one of them being Mr. F. H. Needham, Automobile Editor of the Edmonton Journal. Other good scores turned in from Alberta were one of 44.6 miles to the gallon, one at 39.8 miles, and another at 38.2 miles to the gallon.

The other Provincial winners were: British Columbia—C. E. Bowlsby, South Wellington, 44.7 miles to the gallon; Saskatchewan—W. A. Reid, Aulier, 30.7 miles; Manitoba—W. J. Noble, Fort Rouge, 34.9 miles; Ontario—J. M. Sandler, Beachville, 45.1 miles; Quebec—Jos. Pelland, Coaticook, 45 miles; New Brunswick—H. M. Johnston, St. John, 31.5 miles; Nova Scotia—E. V. McLennan, Truro, 37.3 miles.

The average obtained by all contestants from all parts of Canada was 34.4 miles to the gallon.

These tests have proven beyond all doubt that if a Chevrolet car is reasonably well cared for and the engine kept clean, the cost of operating can be kept remarkably low. All these cars were privately owned, had no special devices installed, were fully equipped, and were in no way different from the thousands of Chevrolet cars being turned out from the Oshawa factories each month.

RATE JUMPS ON ACCOUNT OF MANY FATAL ACCIDENTS

Three Hundred Thousand Accidents Have Been Investigated

New York, Aug. 18.—Lax supervision of motor vehicle drivers and the resultant increase of forty-two per cent. in the automobile death rate during the past three years, is due to the fact that the majority of state legislators are from rural districts where strict examination and registration of drivers is not a vital matter, according to a report submitted by William J. Cox, traffic accident research engineer, to the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. There were 14,900 deaths from motor accidents last year, he said.

After a thorough investigation of the problem, and a careful examination of the records of some 300,000 accidents, Mr. Cox has prepared a table showing that registration and examination of all drivers is the only method of stopping the rising number of traffic casualties.

In Maryland, Massachusetts and Connecticut, where strict supervision of drivers is maintained, casualties have fallen off two per cent, while increasing forty-two per cent. over the country. According to Mr. Cox's figures, there would have been 4,300 fewer deaths from automobiles in 1922 had the percentage of these three states been universal.

"Only seven states require the examination of all motor vehicle operators," said the report, "while thirty-five state require only chauffeurs to be licensed, and many of these are never examined. An automobile driver's license must be something to be acquired through merit, and not through the payment of half a dollar."

MAKING COAL BURN TWICE

Test to be Made at Canadian Plant of Henry Ford

According to recent articles of the progress of experiments at Ford, Ont., Henry Ford's promise to "burn coal twice" may soon be an accomplished fact when the new $500,000 distillation plant now under construction at Ford, Ont., is completed in October. The Financial Post learns from officials of the plant at Ford, that shortly Canada will have in operation the first commercial realization of the research and development work which was carried on by B. Z. Caracristi, consulting engineer, and Emil Piron, chemical physicist, for the past two years. The technical resources of the Ford Motor Company were placed at the disposal of the inventors. A similar plant to the one at Ford, Ont., is being installed at the River Rouge plant of the Ford Company, of Detroit, but the Canadian plant is receiving preference and will be in operation several months before the River Rouge plant.

The Canadian plant will handle 400 tons of coal per day, but provision has been made to handle 2,400 tons of coal daily, so that additional units installed in this capacity can be quickly installed to keep pace with the plant's requirements.

The number of chemical combinations recoverable from the products of coal distillation is practically limitless. There are commercial limitations, however, and only those elements which are most useful from an economic standpoint will be recovered in the Ford plant. Briefly, they consist of the following: The coke, which is burned in pulverized form under the power plant boilers. Surplus gas, of which about 4,000 cubic feet will be produced per ton of coal. This will be used in the forging and heat-treating operations required in the preparation of high-grade steel for Ford cars. Sulphate of ammonia, which is one of the cheapest and most valuable forms of fertilizer known. Cresosote, a chemical in great demand as a timber preservative, especially for railway ties. Gasoline and kerosene, of which a maximum of twelve gallons will be recovered per ton of coal, and which contains all the properties of true gasoline and kerosene. Lubricating oils and grease, which will be taken from the oils remaining after the recovery of gasoline, kerosene and cresosote, at this time, but which may be utilized later for burning as ordinary fuel oil.

WINS MEDAL FOR ACHIEVEMENT

Young Inventor Discovers Valuable Auxiliary to Reduce Detonation

Are all your cylinders firing properly? If not, you are wasting gasoline and filling the dead cylinder with oil which will carbonize when you get it firing again. Give the engine a little more gas while idling and open the pet cocks to look for flame. If no flame spurts out the cylinder is dead. If you have no compression cocks learn how to use a screwdriver to short-circuit the spark plugs. If the engine slows down it is a live cylinder. If it does not affect the running of the engine it is a dead cylinder. Don't make the mistake of taking it for granted that it makes little difference whether or not a cap is used on the tire valve and when a cap is lost to use the tire without one. This idea is entirely erroneous, says the United States Tire Company, and motorists who do not use the valve cap may expect valve trouble.

When the cap is not used there is every probability that sand and dirt will work down into the valve and ultimately produce a leak.

For his discovery in applying chemical compounds to reduce the gaseous detonation, or "knocks," in automobile engines, Thomas Midgley, of Dayton, O., received the Nichols medal of the New York Society. Midgley, who is thirty-two years old, is the youngest recipient of the medal, established by William H. Nichols in 1903, and since awarded to fifteen men for achievements in various branches of chemistry.

Auto polo promises to get away to the best season it has ever known in the Northwest, according to Geo. W. Lott, owner of the Seattle team, who has been deluged with requests for exhibition games at the various state and sectional fairs in Idaho, Oregon, Washington and in British Columbia as well.

As most of the fairs are held in the Fall on conflicting dates, it is quite evident now, Lott says, that some of the communities that are planning to furnish the thrills at the coming fairs are to be disappointed.

Practice games with the new and rebuilt cars will be started soon, he says, and drivers and mallet men who have had all Winter to mend broken bones and bruised shins and knuckles will get a chance to get their eyes and muscles in tune for some more fast work this Summer and Fall.

MOTOR MEN TAKE INTEREST IN WEST

Ford Company Wants Information of Victoria and Vancouver Island

H. E. Hollowell, sales manager of the Ford Motor Company, has shown that his concern is interested in the possibilities of these Western lands, and Vancouver Island and Victoria in particular, through a letter to the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau asking for information regarding the conditions of this country. The letter shows the sales manager's undoubted interest in Victoria, reading in part, "we are interested in Victoria, Vancouver Island and Vancouver from an industrial standpoint."

The Publicity Bureau, with all its vast fund of knowledge on Vancouver Island's industrial conditions, is immediately taking this matter in hand, and will enlighten the Ford Motor Company as soon as possible. The folder which Mr. Hollowell has reference to is that known as "Industrial Victoria." This is a most attractive little bit of literature, having been compiled some time ago by the Publicity Bureau's writer, and is illustrated with some photographic gems of this city. It is to the attractiveness of the folder that praise and thanks is due, for thus bringing the interest of such concerns as these to be centred in this city.

Ten Commandments Out For Motorists

Believing that the careful observation of a few simple traffic rules will materially help the safer travel on the highways, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has issued "Ten Commandments of Safety for Motorists."

The "N. A. C. C. Ten Commandments" are as follows:

1. Always remember you are an engineer, fully responsible.
2. Always test your brakes when starting, and have them inspected frequently.
3. Never pass a street car when it is stopping, or if the law permits, proceed very slowly past it at the legal distance.
4. Exercise special care in front of a street car or in passing it, as you cannot tell what may be coming on the other side.
5. Always signal with hand when slowing down, turning or stopping, even though you have an automatic or mechanical warning device.
6. Look before you back and sound the horn three times.
7. Try to drive with using the horn as little as possible. A sudden noise may start pedestrians in their own path, or worse than that.
8. Don't count too much on the common sense of the other fellow. No one is 100 per cent. alert all the time.
9. Drive slowly in streets where children are playing. Remember your own childhood.
10. Cross crossings cautiously. Warning bells may be out of order, watchmen or gate operators may be off duty. Trains may stop as quickly as you can. Shift into second to avoid stalling on tracks.

For Economical Transportation

The Lowest-Priced Quality Truck for Heavy Duty Service Is the

CHEVROLET UTILITY EXPRESS

HERE is a Chassis at the low price of $745.00 (f.o.b. Oshawa), which fills every need for a heavy truck combining speed, power, capacity, and economy. It hauls heavy loads quickly and economically. It is thoroughly reliable and enables you to deliver more per day, at the same time reducing your trucking overhead.

Long grades and deep mud are mastered by the Chevrolet Utility Express, without racing the engine or boiling the water, because the 3-speed transmission provides correct gear ratios for every condition of load or road.

Ample power for all your work is supplied by the famous Chevrolet valve-in-head engine. Full motor power always reaches the transmission through the positive cone clutch.

You can get fast heavy duty service at the lowest operating and maintenance cost with this truck. It leads on high mileage on gasoline, oil, and tires, living up fully to the Chevrolet reputation for economical transportation.

Last, but not least, the sturdy 5-inch channel frame is designed to take standard truck bodies. Any good commercial body builder can supply you with the exact type of body to suit your work.

No matter what your trucking needs, it will pay you to investigate the unequalled value of the Chevrolet Utility Express.

TOURISTS TRAVEL LONG DISTANCES TO AUTO CAMP

Visitors From Honolulu Are Warm in Their Praise of Victoria

Lady Tourists Find Shopping a Pleasure and Prices Low

All the way from Honolulu, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Clark reached the Curtis Point auto camp this week and found it a restful haven after their long journey. For two days they pitched their tents on the banks of the Gorge, but both are energetic sightseers, with a programme that called for action, and after an early breakfast their compact little camp equipment was stowed away and they were off sight-seeing.

During the two days they spent in Victoria they toured the business district, and the scenic drives carefully mapped out for tourists by Cartaker S. A. Veale, and Victoria enchanted the Honolulu visitors so much that, following a tour of Vancouver Island, they will return to the city to spend a few more days with the auto camp as their headquarters.

Praise from tourists coming from such a distance and from Honolulu, a name synonymous with vacation, is particularly worthy of note. As their well-labeled windshields testify, they have visited many camps of the Pacific, but the Victoria auto camp, said Mr. Clark, "has the best setting of any camp we have seen anywhere."

There are many other registrations from distant points. The register at the camp shows visitors from Wichita, Kansas; Kellon, Idaho; Tulsa, Oklahoma; Port Wayne, Indiana; Washington, D.C.; and Kansas City, Mo.

Many of the cars arrive with windshields well labeled with the signs of the different cities at which they have stayed, some of the cars displaying twenty labels. All go away with the oval Victoria sign "Follow the Birds to Victoria."

The courtesy shown to tourists in their trips around Victoria is the subject of comment by many of the visitors. "In our tour around the city," said R. D. Clerk, of Montreal, "we have always been greeted with a smile when we have asked information about seeing the sights of the city. In the stores, irrespective of how long we have been doing our shopping, or to what trouble we have put the store clerks, we have always been well treated. "The climate is ideal here," said the same camper, "and the calm and peaceful atmosphere at the camp and the life by the sea are conducive to peace and rest."

Price Comparison A tribute to the stores of Victoria and the city of Victoria was also paid by Mrs. F. J. Cole, of Seattle. "Prices in Victoria, I believe, average about the same as those of Seattle," she said. "Many of the tourists were under the impression that they would find the cost of living higher in Canada than in the United States. A few things are dearer and some are cheaper, but on the whole prices seem to break even. "Vegetables and fruit, I believe, are a little dearer," said Mrs. Cole. "Dry goods are about the same cost as in Seattle, with the exception that woollen goods cost less." Mr. Cole is an artist and landscape gardener.

THE HOUSE I LIKE I like a house that's getting old. A country cottage that has told its hundred years, or even more, in the board planks in the floor. The windows with their panes so small. One cannot stop to count them all. The simple mantels painted white. With pillars set at left and right. And mellowed reddish bricks below. I like the narrow stairs that go up steeply to rooms above. Low studded chambers; and I love The dormers where the ceiling slants. Whose casements frame the still expanse. Of cloud and sky; the cupboards placed in odd, dark nooks; the attic, braced with sturdy hand-hewn maple beams. The gable where the fanlight gleams. That bears the marks of other days. Where sober age unshamed appears. A house that's getting on in years. —MARGARET ASHMAN

DIAGNOSIS An old Irishman went into a doctor's office, shut the door carefully behind him, and at once began a long and confidential consultation about his mother. After the symptoms had been dealt with exhaustively, the doctor said: "Well, you know, I can't tell you anything about the case until I see your mother. Bring her in to-morrow or next day and I'll look her over."

"But, doctor," said the old man, "she's in Ireland."

ONLY ONE The motor car, traveling at a tremendous speed, was just about to turn a very dangerous corner. "Do people lose their lives here frequently?" asked the nervous passenger. "Not more than once!" yelled the intrepid driver, as he took a firmer grip on the wheel.

EMPEROR'S MEMOIRS TELL STATE SECRET

They Were Written By the Morganatic Wife of Alexander II of Russia

Paris, Aug. 18. — A quarter of a million francs is the price demanded for withholding from the public the memoirs of Czar Alexander II. of Russia, written by his morganatic wife, the late Princess Catherine Yourievskia, who was Princess Dolgorouka.

According to the present holder, a Russian journalist named Markoff, the memoirs are worth much more, as they are likely to reveal serious complicity on the part of the old Russian regime in events leading up to the revolution.

A Monaco court is soon to decide whether Markoff is asking too much of the daughter of the late Princess, who is known as Princess Yourievskia in London, where she has attracted the attention of the English aristocracy and even royalty by her vocal concert.

Many pretty stories have been related lately along the Riviera of incidents in one of the most celebrated princely idylls, recalled by the present case.

Was Maid of Honor to Czarina Alexander II. never neglected his Czarina until Princess Catherine Dolgorouka made her debut at the court of St. Petersburg as maid of honor to the Empress Marie. His headlong infatuation for the beautiful Princess was such that he brazenly conducted an affair with her and lived with her openly. Their liaison lasted the ten remaining years of the Czar's life, bringing them frequently to the Riviera and Switzerland, and greatly embarrassing the Czarina, whose death in southern France it undoubtedly hastened.

Alexander and Catherine had three children before he married her only six weeks after his legal consort died. The ceremony in which the Czar took Catherine as his morganatic wife was performed by the court priests with all the rites usually accorded a legitimate marriage. Soon after the Czar made Princess Dolgorouka Princess Yourievskia, authorizing her children also to bear the royal title. One of these was Prince George Yourievsky, who at one time was mentioned as the successor to Alexander III.

Princess Yourievsky with the aid of Loris Melikoff drew up a national constitution which Alexander II. was to have signed on the very day a nihilist bomb blew him to pieces. This ended the few months of happiness as man and wife, and the Princess fearing a like fate, fled to the Riviera. Purchasing a villa, where subsequently she died, Catherine refrained for years from mingling with society, but frequently she received American and British visitors at tea.

Later, however, she became one of the most prominent characters on the Riviera, noted for her philanthropy and the tenderness that marked her generosity. She was trying to alleviate the poverty of the mountaineers, whose families had played a watcher's role in the early days of her romance with the Czar of All the Russians, when they used to stop overnight in their ramblings through the Alps, to put up with the hospitality of a rustic villager's hut, whose occupants the Czar had never failed to reward with largesse of Russian gold, while he sang Muscovite love lyrics to his Catherine.

When the Princess was only twenty her love, even more impetuous than his, induced him to give up gambling at Monte Carlo and spend virtually all his time at her side along the Riviera. When he neglected his duties too long on one occasion, he took leave of the Princess at the railway station, fondly embracing her and proclaiming through his tears before the assembled peasants and distinguished hosts of Monaco, that he would be eternally faithful. His return to his capital was not for long, as the Princess prevailed upon him to give up his Russian home and live with her and their children in an Alpine chalet, free from the cares of state.

Came Near Being Czarina There is little doubt in the minds of persons here familiar with Russian court affairs that Catherine would have become Czarina had Alexander lived longer. For the mother of the present Princess Yourievskia came of a family far more Russian than any of the legitimate members of the old reigning house. Their blood was tinged with German for generations, whereas throughout Russian history, ranking with Romanoff in point of ancestral lustre, the Dolgorouks claim descent not alone from Rurik, founder of the Romanoff dynasty, but even from St. Vladimir, Russia's patron saint.

The name Dolgorouk was borne first in the twelfth century by George, the eighth son of Vladimir Monomach, a lineal descendant of St. Vladimir. The Dolgorouks were princes before the Romanoffs were czars. Czar Michael married a Dolgorouka, and Peter II. died on the day he was wed to another princess of the illustrious line.

Among the most illustrious were James Dolgorouk, chief of the first embassy sent to France by Russia; the Prince Vasil Dolgorouk, the famous general and lover of Catherine the Great, to whom Russia owes her conquest in the Crimea; and Prince Ivan, one of the most widely known poets of Russian literature.

INEVITABLE A hotel keeper at an old-fashioned croserhouse in Arkansas had a clerk who suddenly developed kleptomania, systematically stealing from the guests until complaints became general.

The proprietor was at his wits' end, but because of the scarcity of available help and because his clerk was a model one except for this slight failing, he hesitated to part with him. Finally he solved the problem. Over the desk in the office he placed this sign:

"Leave your valuables with the clerk. He'll get them anyhow."

Many landseekers go out every year to look at this land, but the majority of those who drive in location stakes are men who have a great deal to learn about farming. Possibly this accounts for the existence of an easy-going type of homesteader, found more particularly in the cattle districts, and known among his fellows as a "Chawbeef."

He may be of any age, but usually is comparatively young. His principal occupation seems to be riding the grub line.

RIDING THE GRUB LINE

By P. W. LUCE

Gone are the days when the Government used to bet 160 acres of land against a settler's time that he couldn't stay on the place three years without starving to death. Homesteads are still to be had in the west, to be sure, but in the majority of cases these are patches of land at which the old-timer would have turned up a supercilious nose.

There are great splashes marked "open" on government maps, and government publications print photographs of fine studs of timothy or wonderful breeds of wheat grown in these available districts.

Why the Chawbeef takes up a homestead is one of those mysteries which makes the genus homo such an interesting study. He has no money with which to procure the nucleus of a cattle herd; he has no hay with which to feed cattle if he did get a bunch together; his homestead, quite frequently, does not yield more than enough feed to support a saddle horse and a couple of cows, but that is enough, as the saddle horse is all he has.

It takes three years to prove up on a homestead. In that time one is supposed to put up a house, spend six months of every year on the place, and plow and seed a few acres. The regulations are seldom strictly enforced; so long as there is any kind of a shack on the land, that is held to be prima facie evidence of occupation.

Away in the back of his head the Chawbeef has an idea that some who are not hungry for news. The few meals given in exchange are never missed to antagonize settlers, least of all the man who spends a great deal of his time in the saddle. Cattle sometimes roam considerable distances, and it is worth real money to the owner if the Chawbeef is able to say:

"I saw about thirty head of your stock over by the North Bend last week. It seemed to me they were looking kind of thin."

Quite likely the informant will be given a few days' work helping to drive in this little bunch. Casual jobs of this kind are always welcome; a man must have some pocket money, even though most of his grub comes from other people's larders.

At other times the Chawbeef will repay the kindness of an occasional host by pulling a cow out of a mud-hole, thereby saving the animal's life. He makes no secret of his good deeds, and, though no rancher would insult him by offering a monetary reward for this simple act of neighborliness, the goodwill it creates is almost as tangible an asset as dollars and cents.

In time, as the country gets more thickly settled, the Chawbeef finds riding the grub line harder and harder, and so strikes for fresh fields farther north. Here he homesteads another 160 acres, works a little, rides a lot, and in ten or twelve years he may possibly have the good fortune to get a couple of hundred dollars for the land to which he has acquired title. Then he stars all over again.

Attention, automobile owners (including flyovers). Remember the last time you had a disgusting blowout, and you had to get out and change the confounded tire all by yourself? How long did it take you? How many minutes—or hours!—of plain and fancy cursing? Look at Charles Paine, of Philadelphia. Changing a tire is child's play to him. He claims he's the world's champion tire changer. His record, prying off the old shoe and slipping on the new, is thirteen seconds flat! Seconds—not minutes! Thirteen seconds—flat. A flat thirteen seconds, to get rid of a flat tire. If you can juggle tires in anything like such speedy time as that you can qualify for a contest to take the championship away from Paine. Can Victoria produce a champion who can beat Charles Paine's record?

CLOUDS HURRY ON MISSION FOR SUN

At the close of a day when the cool breezes of evening fan your cheeks have you stopped, Little Reader to consider from whence comes the wind. What urges the air to hurry on in one direction rather than another? First of all let us examine a room that has all its doors and windows shut. Such a room would get very stuffy, would it not? Now open one window at the top and at the bottom. What happens? Why the cool air from outside flows in through the bottom aperture. Out from the top of the window escapes the heated, stale air of the room. This is what we mean by ventilation. Even though it cannot all take place within sight of our eyes we know the earth to be ventilated in a very similar manner. The wind you feel at eventide indeed is just a minute part of the huge ventilatory system by means of which the air of the earth is kept fresh and pure.

You know from your geography that the sun beats down on the centre of the earth's crust at the equator in almost vertical rays. At such a direct angle the rays of the sun carry greater heat than when they touch the earth on a slant, as in this climate. Now it follows that the sun will heat the earth's surface at the equator much more than it does towards the two poles. Thus from the equatorial regions rise vertical columns of heated air. This is the first step in the ventilation of the earth, so consider it closely.

The rising air, climbing away from the surface of the scorched land, leaves a void behind. As a vacuum cannot exist in space for long air must come from some place to fill in the gap. It does. Cool air flows in from the poles and colder parts of the earth's crust, underneath the heated air which is rising.

Now the air which the sun heated at the equator has risen many thousands of feet. Clear of the ground at that altitude it is cooled very rapidly and is soon freezing again. Then it flows towards the poles to take the place of the air that has been drawn from there to the hotter parts of the earth's crust. In this manner air is circling in giant streams all the time.

Though the general motion of the air is from the equator to the poles at high altitudes and back again at lower levels much occurs to change this condition in various localities. In fact the motion of the earth in revolving changes the immediate direction of this great air current movement away from North and South to slightly other directions.

Thus we have two great trade winds which blow steadily for long periods in one direction. These are beset and conquered in parts of the Orient by monsoons, or cross winds of equal steadiness and force. At times these and other circumstances create a war between winds, and then we have cyclones, tornados and typhoons. These are circular storms which revolve around a centre of disturbance. In one half of the globe they turn clockwise, and the reverse holds through on the other half of the earth's envelope.

Then the face of the land has a great deal to do with what winds will affect it. High mountains, forests and other considerations cause local currents of air, the most noticeable of which we know as sea and off-shore breezes.

The movement of air in winds has one object that is quite as important as ventilation and that is the carriage of water. Without oceans we could not exist on this earth for a single day. You could not sit at the mouth of a large river long and wonder why it was that the sea did not rise year after year as all that water was pouring into it, unless there was a leak in the bed of the ocean or something else happened to reduce its level.

There is no leak in the bed of the ocean, that we have been able to discover, but the something else that does happen is evaporation. The sun, boiling over with good intentions, smiles in the face of the waters all over the world and draws a portion of that moisture up into the clouds. The hotter the air the more water vapor it will hold. Thus evaporation takes place everywhere but again more rapidly at the equator.

Let us follow a drop of water from the ocean. It is heated and turned into water vapor by the sun. It is borne aloft in the folds of a cloud. This cloud is sucked in over the land underneath air still warmer than itself. Once over the land the cloud passes until something occurs to cool it so that it can no longer hold the water. This might be the meeting of the cloud with a chill wind from the North, the passage of a snow-covered mountain range, the presence of trees or in several other ways.

Presently however this cooling takes place and down falls the drop of water we have been watching, along with many hundreds of thousands of its fellows. The water falls on the face of the land and runs down hill, forced by its weight to seek a lower level. It gathers into depressions which we call lakes or ponds according to their size, and from these streams and rivers. In a very short time our drop of water is back again in the ocean.

What then is the gain? This, the water in passing over the face of the land has been used in part to foster and nourish all things growing there. This care will be continued by the next drop and so on. Thus the sun is responsible for irrigation as well as ventilation. Indeed if you made a study of the subject you would find that without the sun we could not exist. The air is the medium through which the sun brings such blessings to the face of the earth, and therefore when you see a cloud know that it too, has a mission. The very rain cloud which we dislike seeing on picnic days is nevertheless carrying a blessing for our land, and helping directly to give us the very food we eat. Thus when you see clouds drifting across the face of the sky be sure they are very busy, for are they not the messengers of the sun?

Camera "Shots" Singe No Hairs

Ever since the Tower of Babel fell upon its builders a common language that would be understood by all has been sought by mankind. There is one "common tongue," however, that is granted to us that was not known a few hundred years ago—photography. Today, by means of motion pictures and illustrated newspapers, citizens of every country in the world can understand better how each lives than if they spoke a common language.

It is peculiar to think that the world of yesterday had only the painter's word for its conception of Napoleon. As Napoleon caused himself to be painted more as he would have liked to have been rather than as he was, the world has only the conventional view of his appearance. Today the president of the great Republic of France is known to citizens of the world in perhaps hundreds of different photographs, each expressive of some phase of his life. Thus it is the man as he is and not as he would like to be that we see by means of the camera.

The camera, in taking lasting records through the microscope has added to man's knowledge of science. Astronomy has benefited by the photographer's plate, even to the finding of bodies in the heavens that were formerly not known to have existed. Though the painter to-day still holds the palm for portraiture in color and other fields, it is by means of the camera that the world at large gets its knowledge of all that it cannot see with its own eyes.

A few hundred years ago the camera was unknown. To-day for a modest sum a camera may be purchased which brings to the home the ability to take lasting records of everything. It is because we in this age have been used to that privilege always that we are slow to take advantage of it. While there are many useful hobbies in the world there are few more pleasurable or instructive than photography. From the taking of snapshots to the development of the film and the filing of the print in an album, the hobby is one of interest at all stages.

Then it is a means of recording to-day what will be lost and forgotten to-morrow. Friends and scenes of this day will not last forever. Time changes everything. The camera then serves as a link with the past, not as we remember it, but as it actually was.

A very few years ago photography was a difficult science that could be practiced only by the expert few. Now it has been so simplified that all may practice it without difficulty. There is one phase of the hobby that is yearly receiving more attention, and that is the portrayal of life in the forest and jungle.

The camera fills to-day what the zoo performers of a few years ago, did in a much more complete manner. Children used to be taken to the zoo to see the lions there. They saw the great monarchs of the wild, caged and fretful from their isolation from all natural life. To-day the camera will show us what the lion does when he is free in his native jungle, how he lives and under the very conditions. We can follow him from morning until night and see all but the "roar," and we must go to the zoo to hear that.

Camera hunting is growing in vogue, and is a branch of the great hobby that is yearly explaining to us more about the wild creatures of nature. Camera "shots" singe no hairs, and take no lives. The camera leaves the woods as undisturbed as if none had been there. It "takes" the mother bird on the nest and all the eggs without disturbing that parent in her life.

If, Little Reader, you take up camera work as a hobby, remember that it is a little of an art and a science too. The art comes in choosing the right subjects for your pictures, and the science in adding to the knowledge of the world those things yet unknown. In every way the camera lover has a hobby that has boundless possibilities, and one which, with a little patience and care, will keep you interested from the days of school until many, many years have rolled away.

"Do Unto Others"

Dick was proud of his new air gun. He thought it would be fun to break an insulator glass on a telephone post. He did. Two seconds later his dad's home caught fire. They tried to ring for the fire-brigade, but the line was down. The house burned down.

A group of boys were playing in the street. One rushed across the road in front of a delivery motor. He reached the other side, but his little brother who was following didn't. The doctors say that little brother may be able to walk again in six months.

Dorothy placed a tack on her mother's chair. Her sister was called away on an errand. Her mother sat on the chair. Well, Dorothy wishes now she had sat on the chair herself. It would have hurt less, in the end.

Arthur threw stones at the neighbor's dog and hit him. That night the dog sank his teeth in Arthur's legs. The dog was shot by order, as a "wild" dog.

Mary jumped from behind a door to frighten her sister. Her sister fainted. Mary was the more frightened of the two.

Violet Cook, seven, pupil of the Colorado School for Deaf and Blind at Colorado Springs, Col., can't hear a word. But she doesn't have any trouble listening to speakers hundreds of miles away. It is another radio wonder. By means of ear-phones and amplifiers, Violet gets the radio sound waves perfectly.

The Sandman Story For To-night

GRANNY REDDY'S STORY

I know where there is the richest hiding place for any Winter's stores," said Reddy Squirrel, running where his Granny, a very old red squirrel, was busy knitting the Winter supply of mittens for her many grandchildren. "It is in the hollow of an old tree where no one will ever think of looking, and I have made a tunnel under it so I can run in and out and no one can see me if they happen to be around there."

"Don't be too sure of that, grandson," said Granny Red. "It may be like the place where my mother and father thought they and their family, and stores as well, were safe for the Winter. And they were carried off, house and all."

Granny commenced to make a ball of yarn

"Oh, Granny, do tell me about it," said little Reddy, sitting down on the floor at his Granny's feet. "Did they carry you off, too?"

"Yes, I was one of the children that year, and a fine scare the choppers gave us. I almost stopped breathing when the tree fell."

"Tell me all about it, do, Granny," begged little Reddy. "I won't ask a question. I'll keep as still as the mice you tell me about."

"Well, you get me a skein of yarn and hold it while I wind it into a ball, and I will tell you," said Granny.

As Granny Red commenced to make the ball of yarn she began her story. "It was my first year, and mother and father had found the nicest tree to make our home in, with an underground hole beneath the roots.

"Moss and strips of bark and bits of grass made our home nice and warm and we were all snug and fixed for the Winter, with plenty of nuts stored in and under our home, when one morning we were awakened by a terrible noise and our home began to shake.

"Father, who was very brave, ran to a place where he could see without being seen, and pretty soon he came back and told us the wood-choppers had come and were chopping trees all around us, though he could not tell if they were chopping ours.

"But while we were all trembling and mother was trying to think what to do a terrible crash came. And bump we went, huddled together in our bed. It's down, said father. Now keep still, all of you, and we may have a chance to escape."

Then everything was still for awhile, and we children fell asleep, and so did father and mother, for after awhile they ran out, and there were no choppers to be seen, so they came back and went to sleep again.

Here is a nest of red squirrels and I was just about to throw that chunk of wood in the fireplace."

"You see my father was a very wise squirrel," said Granny, looking at little Reddy, who was staring with wide-open eyes. "He knew it was time to let it be known we were inside that chunk of wood. We would all have been burned if he hadn't."

"Isn't there any more to the story?" inquired Reddy, as his Granny stopped talking.

"Not much, only that we were taken care of all Winter by the man who found us, and in the Spring we ran back to the woods. I was quite grown up by that time."

"I guess I had better not be too sure about my hiding place," said Reddy. "Somebody might come along and carry it off and all my stores, but they won't get me, Granny, because I am going to live right here with the family another Winter."

Would You Get Five Marks Here?

It is often said that residents of a city know least about their own town. It is the visitor who exclaims over St. Paul's, in London; and climbs the Eiffel Tower, in Paris. What do you, Little Reader, know of this city? Supposing you awarded yourself a point for every question in the following you answer with a "yes," how many points would you have?

1. Have you seen the Indian craft section of the Provincial Museum?
2. Have you visited the Provincial Library or the children's section of the public library?
3. Do you know how earthquakes are recorded in the Meteorological Observatory at Gonzales Hill?
4. Have you looked through the telescope at Little Saanich Hill, where the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory is stationed?
5. Do you know that one of the finest collections of stuffed birds and animals to be found in this Province is in the Provincial Museum?

"Please, sir, father wants to know if it is true that there is such a thing as a tobacco trust?"

"Yes, my lad, there is," replied the tobaccoist.

"Well, father would like to be trusted with two ounces."

QUILLS STILL GROW

"Polly Alex" hasn't shouted for his cracker in thirty years. But his feathers keep on growing so fast they must be trimmed semi-annually. If they weren't, he wouldn't be able to sleep in peace in his present home—a glass case.

Alex died in 1892. Mrs. George Spellman, New Orleans, who was his mistress, has a large box full of clippings from his tall and wings. Louisiana state ornithologist say it is the only instance on record where nutriment in the quills has remained so long after death.

WHEN CURIOSITY KILLED THE 'COON

REAKING free from a blanket of clouds the moon entered upon its nocturnal mission with a will. The misty edges of the silver rays were illuminated for a space until even that silver lining disappeared, and the cloud dropped from sight to leave the moon in full possession of a tranquil sky. The stars like diamonds glittered from the heavenly ceiling surrounding the moon as courtiers their queen.

On the ground the darkness of night was pierced by the rays of the moon until all stood revealed in a half light, which neither dusk nor day, was still bright enough to reach the inner circles of the forest through the tops of the trees. Here and there a clearing was lighted up, surrounded by tall sentinels, whose waving branches made witchery with the light and shadow on the ground below.

It was a night when those who walk by day slept with one eye open, and the night prowlers stepped warily in their wanderings. It was too dark to encourage the prolongation of the day and too light to render the prowlers quite happy in their nocturnal adventures. In this half light the woods seemed peopled with a thousand fairies. Hbbgoblins peeped from every tree, and every rustle in the underbrush might well be a Puck in search of mischief. Now and then a bird would call sleepily from its roost in the pine trees. The hushed rustling of little feet would cease as if jarred into silence by that ill-timed cry in the night. Then the woods would spring to life again, and a myriad of little feet would patter here and there on their respective errands.

Out in the lake a vagrant trout, quickening to a hunger that remained insatiated after a too-hot day, would seek a passing meal. The flop of the fish as they rose at wandering moths alternated with the tinkle made by the creek where it spilled over the lip of the pool, and ran down hill with merry chuckles at being free.

Illumined in the rays of the moon as if a searchlight played upon it, a large silver-winged moth hovered over a lily pad. There was a rush from the water under the leaf as a trout jumped at the tasty morsel. The moth winged its way to freedom clearing the jaws of the trout by a fraction of an inch. Then an extraordinary thing happened.

From the shore of the pool came a rustle of stones as if something had leaped into the air from the loose shale. It had. A raccoon sighting the moth had jumped two feet into the air and caught it between its forepaws. Bringing down its prey the animal turned it over and examined it in the moonlight. Then holding the moth firmly in the cleft of a forepaw it scoured it in the water. When it appeared quite clean the drenched morsel was thrust into the cat-like jaws and crunched with avid relish.

This delicate operation over, the coon wiped its mouth with forepaws shaped not unlike those of a monkey and quite as flexible. It had just awakened from an all-day sleep and was seeking food. The moth served as an entre for the heavier repast to follow. Hunting was easy for the raccoon for it brought agility, cunning and considerable daring to bear on an appetite that was not at all particular. Fish, flesh or fowl were all alike to the grayish red prowler whose black circled eyes gave him the appearance of a savant with horn-rimmed spectacles.

The flash of the trout after the moth he had just caught and eaten was not lost on the prowler. A trout which leaped once would leap again, it decided. Presently it proved so and the trout darted for the second time from under the lily pad to bring down an insect that strayed too close to the water.

Now these lily pads were alongside a log that ran for some distance out into the water. The coon crawled along the log until it was directly opposite the lilies. Then it crouched and waited. It had not long to wait.

Winging its way from the shade a mosquito came in zigzag flight over the lily leaves. The trout jumped clear of the water between the log and the lily pad to rise at the insect. It did not get back. Two hairy paws darted out from the log with the speed of light, and the wriggling fish was gathered in a tight embrace.

This was worth-while prey evidently, for the raccoon retraced its way over the log to the shore. Deliberately it bit into the neck of the trout behind the head until the fish ceased to struggle. Then it, too, was washed up and down in the water, as if it had not been clean enough. The washing of its food seemed a habit with the coon. Then followed a leisurely repast.

The moon, clearing the edge of the trees looked down a few minutes later on a neat pile of fresh fish bones. The coon was not in sight. The keen edge taken off its appetite, the prowler sauntered slowly up a path into the woods. Once it stopped when a bird awoke to protest at the moon shining into its retreat. The bird called no more. Climbing up the tree without even disturbing a twig the coon plucked the bird from its perch with the ease that comes only from long practice. This finished the repast for the present. Though it did not wash the bird before eating it, the coon scraped it over carefully with its forepaws and this seemed to ease its conscience in the matter of cleanliness.

Satisfied with its early breakfast the prowler left the pile of feathers on the ground to stroll up the path. It was headed now towards a settlement in the valley over the top of the hill. One hour later a watch dog bayed at the sound of chickens fidgeting nervously on their roost. The dog was chained, however, and could not investigate for itself. The fidgeting was caused by the sight of a slinking shadow which poked an inquisitive snout into the nests on the ground below.

Presently the prowler made out the form of an egg in one nest. The egg was in the centre of the nest, a long box covered on the bottom with straw. The coon tried to reach the egg with a paw, but the distance was too great. Abandoning all caution it climbed boldly into the nest. Then the unexpected happened.

With a bang that awakened the watch dog to great efforts the door of the trap nest dropped into place. The prowler was a prisoner. The watch dog sent up peal after peal of barks, and the chickens clucked and chattered noisily.

Presently a door opened in the house nearby and the moon gleamed on the barrel of a shot gun. Dog and man skirted the hen house quietly for a moment and then the man entered. A few minutes later the night was disturbed by a loud report. The prowler had paid for his curiosity. From underneath the body of the raccoon the man took an egg—it had been sucked quite dry. Even while imprisoned the grey prowler had not overlooked an opportunity.

A HAPPY QUARTETTE

What a Treeless Land Would Mean

One month longer and the first rains of the season will come to drench the woods and relieve them of the dangers of a forest fire. Throughout the hot weather forest rangers have been at work day and night in every part of the Province patrolling the woods. They have fought fires in the bush for days on end, and often risked their lives to save other people's property. These fires spring up rapidly in the hot weather, partly from natural causes and also from the carelessness of those who use the woods once in a long time.

The man who spends his life among the trees of Nature's garden is too careful with that blessing to be guilty of permitting his camp fire to turn into the raging inferno of a forest fire. It is the isolated camper who enjoys an infrequent outing or picnic in the forest who does the damage. Then, too, Nature adds to this damage in divers ways. Fires spring up suddenly from natural causes. It may be in the robbing of two dead trees together in the wind, or the spark from a boulder falling down the hillside from natural causes.

Valuable for the timber wealth alone, the woods have an even greater mission—they bring for us the rains which water our crops. Without trees this country would be dry and desolate in a very few years. The mountains would still cause rain, but if the land were not protected by trees the snows from the hillsides would sweep away all the soil from the face of the land and leave the barren rock. Then vegetation would cease to thrive and the country would dry up.

So in keeping our timbers free from fire we are helping to keep the country a paradise of farm lands and a grazing place for stock of all kinds. In other countries if a tree is cut down another one has to be planted in its stead and within a few years would replace the loss that occurs from a crop of forest fires.

Timber is one of our chief natural resources. It is cut in great quantities year by year. This cut is taken care of in the reseedling of the forest as far as possible, but no amount of reseedling would replace the loss that occurs from a crop of forest fires.

The blackened desolation of burnt-over land is a sight that is neither pretty to look at nor pleasant to think about. It is a reflection of the citizens of to-day of wasting the heritage of those of to-morrow. Nature burns in many ways that which she herself creates, so we should be careful not to add to the toll by hand-made forest fires caused by neglect.

AT THE MUSEUM

It was their first trip to London, and they were trying to see all the sights. While they knew little of pictures and cared less, they thought it their duty to visit the British Museum.

Among the treasures they looked at was a mummy, over which hung a placard on which was printed "B. C. 97." This completely mystified them.

"What do you make out of that, Henry?" demanded Maria.

"I hardly know," said Henry, "but I have a suspicion that it was then the number of the cat that killed him."

DOMINION
Florencia Vidor and Monte Blue lead the cast of players in "Main Street," which will be shown at Columbia Theatre, the actors returned from the mountains of northern Oregon tanned and weather beaten.
The production is based on James Oliver Curwood's famous story of the same name, and is a splendid example of the combination of the great factors necessary to a successful motion picture play: a capable cast headed by distinguished stars; a gripping, worthwhile story by a world famous author and a skilful, experienced director.
The super-excellent cast is headed by Henry B. Wallhall, who was the hero in "The Birth of a Nation," and who has since headed his own company, and Pauline Starke, whose work in "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," another Curwood production by Mr. Curwood, has gained her wide recognition and immense popularity.
James Oliver Curwood has a world-wide fame for his virile stories of the great Canadian Northwest and has done for the land "North of 49" what Kipling has done for India. The director is David Smith, who directed "The Courage of Marge O'Doone" and "Black Beauty" for Vitaphone—one of the foremost motion picture directors in the country.

CAPITOL
Thirteen hundred and eighty-four continuous performances. This is the record which Claude Gillingwater made for himself in his creation of one of the popular stage success by Austin Strong which—John Golden and Winchell Smith produced with such great success on the stage.
And so it was when King Vidor decided to translate this very human story to the screen in a Golden picture, the most natural consequence was that the title roles in "Three Wise Fools" should be had on the stage. In adapting the play Vidor has retained all of the delightful humor which surrounds the three old men and the role of Findley Gillingwater plays, is especially interesting.
"Three Wise Fools" is now showing at the Capitol.

ROYAL VICTORIA
Norma Talmadge, whose latest starring picture for Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is showing at the Royal for the last time to-day, is a strong believer in comedy through a series of productions. As evidence of this she points to the fact that many of those associated with her in her present venture have had similar duties in Harrison Ford, the debonair leading man, appears with Miss Talmadge in "The Wonderful Thing" and will have similar roles in pictures that she will make in the near future. Albert Parker, the director, will continue to direct more of Miss Talmadge's pictures. It has been announced.
"Familiar faces are seen among the other members of the cast, which includes, in addition to those already mentioned, Montagu Love, Cooper Cliffe, Ida Waterman, Michael M. Barnes, E. Fernandez and Fraser Coulter.

Franz Peter Schubert was born near Vienna in 1797. He was the son of a schoolmaster and commenced studying the violin when very young. He also took vocal lessons from a local choirmaster. He wrote his first symphony when sixteen only, and a year later he began writing with remarkable facility those immortal songs found on present-day programmes. Between the ages of 17 and 18 he wrote 144 songs, including the masterpiece "Erlking." He died in 1828, and his many M.S.S. was only valued at $12.50 (?), which time fortunes have been made by music publishers from his unexploited compositions.
THE POLITE NEGATIVE
Newly Rich and family were invited to dinner.
The daughter gave her mother a lecture before they set out, and told her what to say when asked by her hostess if she required any more.
"You must say: 'I have had to my entire satisfaction, and if I had any more it would be superfluous,'" instructed the daughter.
When the time for the second helping came along at the dinner and the hostess put the polite question, Mrs. Newly Rich replied:
"No, thank you, I have had to my entire satisfaction, and were I to have more it would be flipperty-flipperty."

"That is where the Democrats come in," Tallente pointed out. "They have none of the narrower outlook of the Labor Party as you understand it—of any of the late factions of the Labor Party, perhaps I should say. The Democrats possess an international outlook. When they legislate, every class will receive its proper consideration. No class will be privileged. A man will be ranked according to his production."
Williams smiled with the faint cynicism of clairvoyant youth.
"Sounds a little Utopian, sir," he ventured. "What about Miller?"
"Are you going to serve with him?"
"Really," Tallente protested, "for a political opponent you're a trifle on the inquisitive side."
"It's a matter that you'll have to face sometime or other," the young man asserted. "I happen to know that Darryl is committed to Miller."
"I don't see how you can happen to know anything of the sort," Tallente declared, a little bluntly. "In any case, Spencer, my political association on non-association with Miller is entirely my own affair. I can hook it. Remember me to all your people, and give my love to Muriel."
"Nothing doing, eh?" Williams observed, rising reluctantly to his feet. "You have perception," Tallente replied.
"The Chief was afraid of an interview. Those pressmen are an infernal nuisance anyway. What about sneaking into Downing Street at about midnight, in a cloak and slouch hat, eh?"
"Too much of the cinema about you, young fellow," Tallente scoffed. "Run along now. I have to dress. You're frank if I may. My intention is to visit you at about midnight, in a cloak and slouch hat, eh?"
"There was just one thing more I was asked to mention, sir," he said. "I will be quite frank if I may. My instructions were not to allude to it if your attitude were in the least conciliatory."
"Go on," Tallente bade him curtly.
"There has been a rumor going about that some years ago—while the war was on, in fact—you wrote a very wonderful frank if I may, my instructions were not to allude to it if your attitude were in the least conciliatory."
"There has been a rumor going about that some years ago—while the war was on, in fact—you wrote a very wonderful frank if I may, my instructions were not to allude to it if your attitude were in the least conciliatory."
"There has been a rumor going about that some years ago—while the war was on, in fact—you wrote a very wonderful frank if I may, my instructions were not to allude to it if your attitude were in the least conciliatory."

"I am speaking on behalf of the Prime Minister, sir. He desired me to inform you that the signed copy of that article has been offered to him within the last few days."
Tallente was silent for several moments, and in the meantime the attitude of the trades unions towards certain phases of the war was modified, and the collapse of Germany followed soon afterwards. Consequently that article was never published.
"You are exceedingly well informed," Tallente admitted. "Pray proceed."
"There is in existence," the young man continued, "a signed copy of that article. Its publication at the present moment would probably make your position with the Democratic Party untenable."
"Is this a matter of blackmail?" Tallente asked.

THREE-CENT GAS LEVY COUNCIL'S REVENUE SCHEME

Would Be Split Evenly Between Cities and Provincial Government

Want No Increase in Present Income Tax; Ask Share of Amusement Tax

Gasoline would be taxed at the rate of three cents a gallon, and half the gross revenue would go to the cities of British Columbia and half to the Provincial Government under plans formulated by the City Council yesterday for presentation to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities in Prince Rupert next week.

As announced in The Times early this week, the Council also will ask the Union to demand a share of the present provincial income tax for the cities of the province. The Council decided, however, to eliminate a clause in this proposal which would have asked for an increase in the present tax if the Government found this necessary in order to give some income revenue to the municipalities.

The Council will reiterate its demand for a share of the provincial amusement tax; will ask for amendments to the Hospital Act so as to reduce its responsibility in connection with hospital patients; will ask for changes in present succession duty regulations so as to free property from old succession duties; and will urge the early construction of a trans-provincial highway.

The Municipal Union will be asked by Victoria delegates to hold its next convention here in 1924.

SAANICH WILL FAVOR COLLECTION OF GASOLINE TAX

Reeve Watson Will Urge Lower Motor License Accompany New Levy

Asking the Saanich Council for instruction as to the views to be urged on behalf of Saanich at the forthcoming convention of the Good Roads League at Vancouver and the Union of B.C. Municipalities at Prince Rupert, Reeve Watson declared himself as opposed to imposition of a gasoline tax unless such a levy should be initiated in company with a reduction in the present scale of annual motor license charges.

Councillor Kirkham suggested the need of attention to the system of distribution of the revenues accruing from a gasoline tax, and Reeve Watson proposed a scheme by which the same should be established as the ratio in use.

Earmark For Roads

"Personally, I favor a gasoline tax, provided the money is earmarked for the roads," said Councillor Kirkham.

Councillor Vantreigh remarked, "If we and the other municipalities get our equal share, I think such a tax would be good."

Councillor Kirkham urged that, as Canada imported motor fuel, the tax should be collected at the source rather than at the retail end, and a prevention of leakage between payers and the Government.

A resolution embodying these views was unanimously adopted. Reeve Watson being also asked to press for consideration by rebate to farmers using farm or irrigation engines.

Councillors Kirkham, Vantreigh, Lehman and Brooks attended the session. Councillor Macnicol being unable to be present, he wrote a statement of his views on many routine matters and questions of policy, while Councillors Robershaw and Simpson were absent, the latter in which case he was attending to his farm interests on the prairies.

Object to Levy

The annual fee of $50 which Saanich has been accustomed to paying the Union of B. C. Municipalities, will be again paid, the Council decided yesterday afternoon, on receiving an appeal for payment of the 1923 account, inflated to $220 to provide a legislative fund. The Council considered the question of such increased levies should be fought out on the floor of the forthcoming convention, and meantime will continue to pay the amount demanded over normal dues.

Much Money Spent

Hospital Management

When it came to a discussion of paying the hospitals, Alderman Sangster proposed that the Provincial Government take over the hospitals of the Province, manage them and levy a service tax to pay for their upkeep.

Alderman Woodward voted alone against the resolution on hospital financing, because he did not want to shut out hospital directors with the duty of finding money to pay for the treatment of indigent or of finding out whether a patient was indigent before giving him treatment.

Alderman Sangster strongly advocated that all the cities of British Columbia be given the power now exercised by Vancouver to license beer clubs. Many clubs operated here, he said, and the city should get revenue from them. Every other city in the Province collected club licenses, he said.

This proposal received no support. Alderman Woodward apparently expressed the sentiment of the Council when he said that licensing of clubs would be tacit recognition of illegal beer selling.

Sewer By-Law Again

The Council instructed Clerk Sewell to prepare a by-law to authorize payment of the sewer debt to Victoria, for submission to the ratepayers at a date to be fixed later. This action was taken after receipt of a request from Victoria City Council for submission of a by-law at or before the annual elections.

VETERANS COMPLAIN THEY WERE NOT GIVEN JOBS ON RACE TRACK

The Canadian Legion wrote to the City Council yesterday to protest against failure of those in charge of the recent race meet here to employ Victoria ex-service men around the Willows track. A well-paid position was filled by a person from outside Victoria, it was asserted.

Alderman George Sangster, secretary of the B. C. Agricultural Association, denied the legion's charge, and his statement was accepted by the Council.

"Ninety per cent. of the men employed were returned men," Alderman Sangster declared, "and they all got from $4 to $5 a day."

All men working on Pari-Mutuel machines at high-wages were returned soldiers, he stated.

EMPLOYEES PROTEST SCRAPPING OF CITY PENSION SCHEME

Ask Council to Go Ahead With Expenditure of Superannuation Vote

Representatives of the City Hall employees appeared before the City Council yesterday afternoon and protested emphatically against the council's plan to scrap its pension scheme by spending superannuation money for other purposes.

The Council, the employee's delegates urged, should carry through its superannuation plan and spend the money voted for this purpose as was originally intended. They suggested that the $5,000 voted for superannuation be used this year for pensions for City Hall officials and the Public Library staff, but not for outside workers.

Emphatic protest was voiced against the proposal of the City Council of Revision, now before the Council, that $1,700 out of the $5,000 superannuation money be spent on maps for the City Assessor's Department.

City Treasurer E. C. Smith, City Clerk E. W. Bradley, City Electrician M. Hutchison, City Sanitary Inspector Thomas Lancaster and Assistant Assessor George Okell addressed the Council.

The Council promised full consideration of the employees' representations, but emphasized the city's financial needs.

SAANICH HOSPITAL FINISHED BY NEXT JANUARY

George McGregor Announces End of Work Now in Sight

It is expected, according to George McGregor, chairman of the Provincial Royal Jubilee Hospital Board, that the new hospital building will be finished during the first few weeks of the new year.

The work of the contractors will be held up until that time, since plasterers are apparently getting through the work more slowly than was expected, he said. A reason for the delay in plastering operations has been suggested, that skilled labor being scarce the contractors at the hospital are short-handed. However, whatever the cause may be the operations in every detail are being pushed ahead, and they show every sign of speedy completion.

Hospital directors met last night, and discussed the appointment of "matron," given to Miss Jessie Mackenzie, and decided to change it to that of "director of nurses," and ask the public to take up the change. S. J. Drake stated that in all the large cities of Canada, this was the case, and that he believed Miss Mackenzie should not be called "matron," as she has been done for so many years.

Members of the Women's Auxiliary to the hospital were thanked by the board last night for the manner in which they had taken up the matter left in the hands of the grounds committee to take whatever action thought necessary to safeguard unwittingly necessary arrangements for the care of maintaining the hospital for the month of July, was $3.27 per patient per day, the board was told.

George McGregor, chairman of the board, presided.

NEW TEACHERS FOR HIGH SCHOOL STAFF

Four British University Men Named to Strengthen Faculty

The City School Board rounded out the Victoria High School staff yesterday with the appointment of four new teachers, all graduates of British universities.

The High School appointments were as follows: To teach Latin, Charles Kemp, Bourne, M.A. of Oxford; to teach science, Hugh Alexander Kennedy, M.A. and T. C. D. of Dublin University, with teaching experience in England and Montevideo; to teach English, Bernard Rouse, B.A. of Birmingham University, with teaching experience in England and British Columbia; and L. Cecil S. Kennedy, B.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, with teaching experience in Manitoba and Armstrong, B.C.

Miss Florence Martin was appointed domestic science teacher. She attended Macdonald College, Quebec and has just completed four years of teaching at Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, P.E.I. Miss J. Muriel Steele, who also was appointed to the domestic science staff, attended Toronto University, teaching in Toronto public schools before going into domestic science work.

The board yesterday decided to charge Saanich municipality $5 a year for every Saanich pupil attending the Victoria High School. This is the same fee as that imposed last year.

SAANICH RECALLS PROMISE TO GIVE AID TO INTERURBAN

Royal Oak Bus License Deferred; Council Appreciates B. C. E. R. Betterments

Transportation facilities for residents between Royal Oak and Burnside Road, affected by the recent cessation of J. Paine to operate the Tyneside Bus from Victoria via Willoughby Road, were yesterday discussed at length by the Saanich Council.

J. McWilliam and H. L. White each made application for license to operate the route, the former proposing to take over the equipment hitherto running, the latter offering to place a new car in the service.

Interurban a Factor

The Council considered the residents were greatly benefited by the improved service now being given by the Interurban line of the B.C.E. Railway. Several members were requested to authorize the council to a bus service which for a considerable portion of the distance was a competitor with the railway, recalling the recently managed Gowanus had been promised by the Council that anything which could be done to assist in supporting the revenues of the line would be done.

One or Two Cars?

Another point debated was the fact that Mr. White is now operating a service on Burnside Road a short distance beyond the Wilkinson Road turn-off of the route under debate. Some of the Councillors understood that the intention of the applicant was to operate both services, with a time schedule of frequent cars to the Burnside residents, others believed that the intention was to abandon the Holland Road service if the new license were granted.

In view of the points, and also because Councillors Robershaw and Simpson were absent, and Wards Four and Seven were the most interested in the service offered, the Council deferred action.

POTATO GROWERS LAUNCH NEW BODY

Hope Eventually to Organize Whole of Island

Victoria Co-operative Potato Growers' Association has been launched as the forerunner of an association which it is hoped will soon embrace the southern part of Vancouver Island. Provisional officers who will act for the next three months were appointed by-laws of the association were adopted and the membership fee was set at $5 per year. The new body is a non-profit organization incorporated under the society's act. It is intended to handle certified seed this year and most of the certified seed growers of the southern end of the island have made application for membership.

At an early date as possible a special meeting will be called, when a marketing agreement will be ready for signature, and it is hoped to combine Cowichan and Comox districts. The latter is already organized. Future plans are for the organization of the whole of Vancouver Island as soon as possible. Victoria being the first unit. At a special meeting held at Comox last week for the Courtenay district a delegate from Duncan addressed the growers, and pointed out the necessity of forming a strong Island-wide organization by the Fall.

It is the intention of the association to handle all potatoes. Certified seed will be handled this year, and it is hoped also to have an organization strong enough to deal with crops.

The new organization embarks on its career with a strong executive. W. D. Mitchell, Keatings, president of the South Saanich Farmers' Institute, is president, T. W. Harrop, president of the Victoria Farmers' Institute, is vice-president, G. Bowman (Sidney), G. Stewart (Stagguts), W. W. Duncan (Stagguts), A. E. Wade (Langford), and C. E. Walker-Greig (Langford) are the directors.

Plans for the Provincial Potato Fair in Victoria in November were discussed at a dinner meeting held last night at the Chamber of Commerce cafe. Owing to the fact that most of the farmers are at present busy with crops there was only a small attendance. It was decided to call a further meeting in a few weeks.

SANITATION SCHEME AT MOTOR CAMP IS CRITICIZED

Sharply criticizing the sanitary arrangements at the George Motor Camp, a number of residents of that district yesterday petitioned the Saanich Council for speedy termination of the practice of burning off the lavatory pits with straw and oil. Reeve Watson stated that he had made personal inspection of the buildings, and found nothing to be complained of. He praised the entire camp, as being in every detail superior to anything he had seen anywhere else in the course of his recent tour in the United States.

Medical Health Officer Dr. J. P. Vye will be instructed to investigate and report, and the members of the Council will also visit the camp in a body at the time incineration takes place, to acquaint themselves with the actual conditions.

LIBRARIANS' CLASS TO OPEN SHORTLY

Miss Helen Stewart Announces Opportunity for Those Interested in Books

The authorities at the Victoria Library announce the opening of their student apprenticeship class for September. This class is made up of not more than twelve or fourteen persons, students of at least matriculation standing, and who are more or less well-read and studiously inclined. At present, library work is becoming a profession, and the special technique which is required in the work amongst the books. For the knowledge of these books, equivalent to training is necessary. The course of study which the Victoria Public Library is offering, is merely preliminary, lasting for six months, and aims to give students an idea of the scope of the work as a whole; secondly, and chiefly, to prepare them to fill junior positions in the library.

Applicants for this class must not be over 30 years of age, and although they are usually taken into the class at a younger age than this, there is no objection to other persons interesting themselves in the work sufficiently to make application for membership in this class. Anyone interested in the class may get full particulars on an application blank from Miss Helen Stewart, Librarian. All applications must be into the library by August 25.

This training, as Miss Stewart who is preparing a list of books for use in public and high schools at the present time, is particularly essential at a time when education is becoming so closely bound up with books in general. Schools are using different systems of education now. They are using more books, and these books are chosen and picked up by experienced and trained librarians. Thus it is that the position of a librarian is rapidly becoming one of greater import and responsibility, and upon the shoulders of those people will eventually rest the task of educating the young people of the nation to a great extent.

Trained librarians are being used in almost every high school of the United States, in fact these institutions are not considered as having a full and complete staff until they have a capable librarian, who suggests reading matter and chooses lists for the school boards to purchase or for the government to supply. In this way the children are given a broader and a more general education. It is more liberal in every way.
