Troops are mightier than votes in Colorado.

According to press reports Senator Depew can now laugh at any old joke whether it is pointed or not.

Andrew Carnegie has been urged to forward an up-to-date set of works on finance to each of his libraries.

The leap year returns indicate that the girls were not as anxious to get married as the boys had been led to believe.

According to the version of Senator Depew, an optimist is a man who wins out when he thought he was licked, for sure.

The hood-wink rises to inquire why the southern planters do not allow him to dispose of their surplus cotton instead of burning it.

Venezuela is to have light for a little while longer. Perhaps she may get the way and thus be able to dodge the "big stick."

While Mrs. Chadwick could hardly hope to set up a successful plan of insanity, some of her tanker acquaintances might use it to advantage.

An eccentric Minneapolis merchant not yet forty years of age has "gone broke" twice. One time when he lost a law suit, and another time when he won one.

The fall of Port Arthur by no means induces the peace of the world as is evidenced by the news that Dr. Parkhurst is preparing to charge the New York police from Janto Herbsch.

It seems a little bit odd not to hear daily reports to the effect that Port Arthur is about to fall, but it is to be hoped that the strenuous will wear away as time progresses.

New York has discovered a Mr. Chadwick who got away with nearly $150,000. From this it appears that the resemblance between New York's Mr. Chadwick and Mrs. C. L. Chadwick is very slight.

The politicians of the country are said to be greatly puzzled as to give Misses' refusal to accept too salaries. According to the idea of the average politician one cannot draw too many salaries at one time.

Representative George L. Barnes is to be congratulated upon his committee appointments this year. Not every member of the House from this district has received such recognition from the Speaker.

Wille Stoessel was holding out against surrendering Port Arthur, St. Petersburg was lavish in its praises of him. Now however he must read the Tokio papers in order to find nice things that are being said of him.

The inaugural committee in Washington is said to have another serious dilemma on its hands. It is finding considerable difficulty in securing hotel accommodations for the state of Governor Douglas of Massachusetts.

An English authority is of the opinion that vests are dangerous articles of clothing and that they expose the wearer to influenza. Some of the vesters in our own country are damaging to the visionary organs.

During the past twenty-three years 340 wrecks of ships have gone to the bottom at Cape Cod. The average value of such wrecks as have been lost has been placed at not less than $20,000, which represents a total loss of $10,800,000.

It is rather tough on the territories to insist upon their uniting into one state in order to have the honor of statehood conferred upon them. Arizona and New Mexico are each larger than Colorado and the latter thinks nothing of supporting two governors.

The following item from the Washington Post is respectfully referred to our gentlemanly friends, who after reading it will undoubtedly be glad to impart the information to their wives and daughters. A prominent actress says that the wearing of diamonds destroys the best expression of the face, the fire of the eyes and makes the teeth look like chalk.

On Monday last Theodore Roosevelt was officially elected president of the United States by the electors chosen in November of last year. The electors met in their several states on Monday and voted as they voted in all the precincts, towns and cities last November. The result was almost unanimous in both cases so the result is not at all in doubt.

After one's mind has been occupied in reading of murders, suicides, lynchings, robberies, riots, confagurations, etc., it is somewhat of a relief to read something pertaining to the other and more cheerful side of life. As such, the annual statistics of the Carnegie libraries occupy a prominent position. Mr. Carnegie has now given nearly $40,000,000 to 1,200 libraries. Of these 1,200 institutions, 779 are located in the United States and they represent nearly $30,000,000.

The Legislature is being petitioned by citizens of Boston to pass legislation providing—No citizen of this Commonwealth shall be eligible as a candidate for any elective office, whether national, state or municipal, who in the five years preceding shall have served any criminal sentence, except imprisonment for contempt of court, in any county or city jail, house of correction or state prison, unless pardoned on the express ground of innocence. There can hardly be any objection to the enactment of such a law as the above which is much better than a constitutional change that would forever brand a convict or an ex-convict as a political outcast.

Representatives of the Census Bureau, who have been in town during the past two weeks, making a preliminary study of the field, preparatory to the taking of the decennial census of 1905, have expressed gratification in obtaining all the Information and detail desired, because of the absence of official records and data.

The experience of these officials has led them to think that the town of Weymouth is just a little behind the times in not having a town of its own for convenient reference to an official survey of the town. It is, they say, an unusual occurrence that has not been officially surveyed at some time within the memory of its oldest inhabitant. We hope the census of the town will not be so much, because it is "never too late to mend" and a survey may yet be made.

Manual Work in the Schools.

The following paper read by Dr. John T. Prince of the Massachusetts Board of Education before the Twentieth Century Club is published at the request of one of the most prominent members of the club.

"Manual training in one form or another has been advocated as a school subject for more than a quarter of a century. Thirty or more years ago it had been tried in the schools of the United States, notably in the schools at Hampton and because of its success in these schools it was earnestly urged for adoption in the public schools. At first there were few places in which this instruction was given, for the training advocated was simply that of the trades, and on this account was strongly opposed by prominent educators. Later the educational, or disciplinary, side of the subject became prominent. Training of the hand and eye or training the brain through the hand and eye, by means of a carefully graded series of exercises of manual work, such as wood working, metal working, and other systems, this kind of manual training found ready acceptance and has been widely adopted in many towns and cities of the country.

"In 1892 there were in Massachusetts, according to the report of the Commission of Education, twenty-five towns and cities of over 800 inhabitants which had adopted some form of manual training in fifteen of grades below the high school.

"As the work proceeded it was made more practical and extended in its scope. Instead of regulation exercises for purposes of skill and dexterity chiefly, the objects of utility were increasingly made, and in many cases, as in wood, the instruction was extended so as to include work in metal, brass, etc. To this was also introduced gardening of various kinds. This change was doubtless brought about partly by the interest of the pupils in school work had visibly increased.

"Here was introduced into the treatment of manual training a new element, that of an occupation or vocation. Instead of the elements of a trade as at first attempted, occupations of many kinds were encouraged. It was found that by this extension of scope, both practical and educational ends were reached; moreover, the interest of the pupils in school work had visibly increased.

"But in all this work, as attractive and useful as it evidently was, there was wanting an underlying principle, which would give to the work a purpose and a meaning. This principle was supplied by certain educators who saw in the eagerness of the children to imitate the occupations of their elders the opportunity of bringing into the school the conditions of life under which the pupils may expect to live later. The principle of this new training, as I interpret it, is the adoption of such a variety and kind of community and home occupations as will cultivate, in a strong, practical, vocational and ethical sense, the character of the child.

"Here, then, are four phases of manual training which are somewhat distinct and evolutionary in character, viz: First, the utilitarian phase, in which the elements of a single trade are taught; second, the vocational phase, in which training of the hand and eye is primarily sought; third, the occupational phase, in which useful handicraft in a variety of ways is encouraged; and, fourth, the social and vocational phase, in which there is an affectionate remembrance by many of our residents.

"On the occasion of Mrs. Matson's funeral, her pastor, Rev. J. C. Villiers spoke in appreciation of the characteristics of mind and heart which he had learned to value in his acquaintance with her—characteristics which those who remember her parents will recognize as belonging also to them.

The following extracts from his remarks are published by request:

"I have had the pleasure of attempting a eulogy on Mrs. Matson. No one could be more opposed to eulogy than she when applied to herself, but there are three qualities in the character of Mrs. Matson to which I wish to refer very briefly.

"First, her self-control and self-reliance. Mrs. Matson was a small nature. It was devoid of all things mean. It was the determination of her soul and spirit to govern life not by feeling and changing impulse but by reason and principle.

"Such self-control, such patience, such self-reliance, Mrs. Matson manifested should be attributed to a true apprehension of the great principles which underlie the Christian religion. She was a queen over herself and so ruled her life as to make her power of calm reliance on the unseen and on invisible things of God in times of stress and sorrow, a mystery and a wonder to those who knew her.

"Her persistent self-control was never a conspicuous feature of weak natures. Mrs. Matson's nature was not weak. She was a woman of strong will, and she could will to do and usually do what she willed. In her life was deep-seated true purpose. Much in human life causes sorrow and much which misses the mark of life and has to be written in God's great book in heaven.

"It is not in vain that we are told of the inhumanity to man, but to man's weakness in will power. Sometimes the best evidence of love is firmness. Mrs. Matson seemed to know this. She could will to be and as firm as a rock.

"Third, Mrs. Matson was a benevolent woman. To be benevolent is not less but more than generous. Benevolence is not born of the calculating spirit but it acts with more deliberation than does generosity. It does not say how little can I give, but how great is the need and what duty and relation to it? Mrs. Matson gave quietly to the needy in the community, to the kingdom of God in her own land and other lands and saw to it that no trumpet blowing accompanied her giving.

"From girlhood Mrs. Matson had acknowledged the sovereignty of Christ over her life. The covenant into which she entered with Him when she united with the church was never a dead letter to her. On her marriage with Mr. Matson she became identified with the church and its work, and every breath she drew was loyal to it.

"She has been released from her sufferings and called up higher. We bow in humble submission and say, 'Thy will be done.'—M. E. L.

"SAVED MY LIFE"
—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

PREVALENT OPINION.
The Freedom of the Press—Editor Harvey of Harper's Weekly Talks.
[From an address on the 25th Anniversary of the Chicago Press Club.]
There is no press in the world comparable to that of America in freedom from influence, political or social, from venality, from contamination of any kind, or from the control of any newspaper's opinion. It is a matter of fact; in Austria, and too often, in Germany, England, and Spain, of Imperial favor; in Russia, of absolute censorship. In America, the institutions established by the founders of the press cannot be impugned. It is faithful, but it is free. We have only to read the newspapers of the day to see how sally exaggerated headlines on the American press are, however serious the news. We have amazing productions of no less amazing variety. We have columns and columns of crime, and pages and pages of waste. Finally, not least, at any rate in numbers, we have our red and white papers, sometimes referred to as "yellow journalism."
Personally, I should be of the last to defend or make apology for this latest manifestation of commercialism, misdirected ambition and false doctrines in the American press. But, however serious the news, we cannot ignore the irresistible conclusion that this particular channel, and this alone, affords a vent for unexpressed beliefs and suspicions which can be dissipated only by the clear rays of truth. It is not the press, however serious the news, that we may regret; it is the impression in suspicious minds that it is being restricted, and you see the wind. With this general dictum few if any would have the hardihood to disagree. But it is often, and I regret to say, that the young men of the press, even the younger generation, are not so much interested in the truth as they are in the consequences of their writing. It is a fair statement to make, after the event, that it is not certain that the election would have resulted as it did. Certain of the many votes would have been different, if post-election testimony is to be taken at its face value at first hand.
Burning Cotton Shows Progress.
A report comes from the South that the farmers are burning their cotton down there with a view of raising the price of what is left. This is the hottest spot of frenzied finance we have seen so far; though it is extremely wasteful and absurdly silly. Still, burning cotton is a great improvement over burning "niggers"; and possibly by and by our southern friends may advance to an intellectual level where they will burn their foolish and reactionary "grandfather" laws.
Woe of Plebeian Washington.
[From the Washington Post.]
In the interests of the general public, we confide to the authorities a suggestion which has long been harbored in a reverent heart by the Washington Plebeian, and the importance of distinguishing them from their coaches, chauffeurs and butlers, by some conspicuous designation. Our people know, in a general way, of course, that diplomats, millionaires, and perhaps certain of the more illustrious of the uninitiated, have the right of way everywhere, unlimited discretion as regards their personal conduct, and total immunity in the case of what might otherwise come under the head of disturbance of the peace. What troubles the plebeian, however, even in the most remote and humble of them, is their inability to differentiate a licensed favorite from a plain, ordinary ruffian, and it is here that our solicitude comes in.
Naturally, no right-minded American objects to being run down and mangled upon the wheels of the Washington Plebeian. This is a privilege which he has acquired by the force of his wealth or his official position. They expect that, as part of the price they must pay for dwelling in this beautiful and blessed capital, where they can daily behold the power of the great, the cultured, and the cultured. There are some things which come high, but there are some things which do not. It is not reasonable persons do not grumble at the price. Here in Washington, we enjoy advantages not to be had at twice the money elsewhere in this happy land. We know it, and we bask accordingly. It seems to us, however, that the individual who hourly exposes life and limb in grateful tribute to the favors showered on him should have some certain knowledge in the premises. He should be assured, for instance, that the while he is being run over on the street belongs in good faith to a foreign or domestic magistrate duly chartered for purpose. He should know, by some familiar token, that the pedestrian who pushes him off the sidewalk or otherwise kicks him, is not a member of the Washington Plebeian. This much the common herd of Washington have a right to ask, and no one can deny it.
We suggest, therefore, a system of tags or decorations whereby the plebeian may recognize the classes set apart. It is not enough that the auto or the carriage be beautiful and gaudy, or that the mignon driving it be arrayed like a drum major in a courtly fair. Neither will it answer the full demands of the lower orders if the man who handles and revolves them, is not a member of the Washington Plebeian. WEYMOUTH GAZETTE.
 PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY BY THE GAZETTE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
 (INCORPORATED)
WEYMOUTH, MASS.
CHARLES H. WILLOBY,
 Manager and Editor.
 REVISED AT THE POST OFFICE AT WEYMOUTH
 MASS. AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.
FRIDAY, JAN. 27, 1905

The weather we have had for the past few days would just about a zero mark in a civil service examination.

It is stated by her physician that Mrs. Chadwick is very ill. However, she may be fooling her doctor as she did her bankers.

The report of the Patent Office shows that New England has more inventors than any section of not only this country, but of the world.

Judging from the manner in which Mrs. Chadwick and Hannah Elias handled their victims, the words "weaker sex" in the future will be applicable only to gentlemen.

A South Dakota man recently lost his seventh wife and not through the divorce courts either. If such carelessness on his part continues, the genre sex will be apt to shun him in the future.

The defense is being interposed in behalf of the mormons that they practice polygamy out of sympathy for the women. It is well for them that they are three thousand miles from home when they make this startling assertion.

In order to obtain a little notoriety, a man in a town in New York, wore the same hat for fifteen years, went without a hair cut for twenty years and refused to patronize trouser cars. After going to all this trouble, he died, before he had a chance to enjoy his hard-earned fame.

A burglar suspect captured in New York declares he hoodlooded. He is right, his left eye looks to the right and his feet are so shaped that he wears "left" shoes. Obviously it is well impossible for him to follow the "straight and narrow way."

As far as the United States is concerned, it would seem that war in Manchuria is preferable to undisputed Russian occupancy. During the months of July, August and September of 1904, the United States shipped to that country 17,000,000 yards of cotton cloth. During the corresponding three months of 1904 our shipments amounted to $2,000,000 yards.

A man in Utah, N. Y., saved $200,000 on a salary of $14 a per week, and never made a mistake until he was 71 years of age. That was a mistake that could not be rectified however, for last week he walked in front of a railway train with fatal results. As may be supposed, the accumulation of his fortune resulted not so much from economy as from a judicious investment of a constantly increasing surplus.

Statistics show that consumption is losing its fatal hold on the people of Massachusetts. In 1875 the death rate from consumption was 34.7 per 1000 of population, and in 1900 the rate was 18.5. The statistics for the last four years are not known, but it is estimated that the rate is lower. The death rate from all causes in 1903 was only 16.34 per 1000. The death rate from pneumonia is also decreasing but that of cancer is increasing.

The United States navy is given credit for having the most thoroughly equipped school in wireless telegraphy in the world. Young men are there taught to use the wireless outfit of land stations and ships to the best advantage. The school is located at the Brooklyn navy yard and in classes under instruction take terms in the occupied by the training ship Hancock near the shore, where the practicing is carried on. When the young men are thoroughly competent, they are graduated and sent to land stations in the United States so far as they are to be sent to ships in this or any other part of the world where ships of the navy are stationed. They go to the stations assigned them, fully equipped to look after the operations of the art of telegraphy as now executed by the air instead of the wire as heretofore. These operators receive more pay than they did when they were ordinary seamen, before the government took up wireless telegraphy and made it practical. The United States navy is making rapid advancement than any other country in this direction. The ordinary seaman receives $16 a month while the wireless operator receives from $30 to $70 a month.

THE WORLD'S COMMERCE.
 Our Internal Commerce Twice the International Commerce of the World.
 The International Commerce of the World.
 The International Commerce of the World, as stated in the annual report of O. P. Austin, chief of the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor just published. According to Mr. Austin's statement this report shows that the commerce of the world amounts to $22,324,000,000 made up as follows:
 Imports $11,869,000,000
 Exports 10,455,000,000
 This world's commerce of $22,324,000,000 annually is a gigantic thing, but Uncle Sam's internal commerce, among his own family alone, equals it. This conclusion is based on the census valuation of our manufactures, agricultural products, products of the fisheries, forests, mines, etc., and adding the cost of transportation between producer and consumer. This method of figuring is conservative; in fact, it is ultra conservative, because it includes not only transportation but also the cost of the goods themselves. It is a double transaction, it follows that the internal commerce of $22,324,000,000 of the United States is really twice the value of the international commerce of the world, which is only $11,165,000,000 of the world's total.

Europe leads in the international commerce, both as regards exports and imports. The figures as prepared by Mr. Ballard are:
 Total
 All Europe $6,498,746,000
 North America 417,206,000
 South America 557,439,000

 WORKING FOR ONE'S SELF.
 The boy of success or the successful man always works for himself, whether he be a wage earner on a large or a small scale or the manager, superintendent or salaried or the wage earner who does not work for himself never rises from the ranks. Yet the man who thinks only of his employer's interest is seldom worth much to himself or his employer. He is a simple minded, fanatical, weakling, morbid with mis-directed conscientiousness. And the man who serves his own interests at the expense of his employer is dishonest to himself as well as the man who works for the man most faithful to his employer is the man who joins his employer's interest to his own self-interest in faithful partnership.

DISCIPLINE.
 The man who cannot be ordered will never rise to order either. He who is restless under discipline is never likely to stand out from the ranks. The man who is constantly finding fault with the rules and other regulations that are deemed necessary to the proper conduct of the business may be employed in, but will probably never attain more than a subordinate position. Success is never attained or achieved by an undisciplined man. Discipline and obedience are essential to the successful management of everything.

LITTLE THINGS.
 He who is careless in little things is successful at nothing. Success never comes in a sudden flash, but is the result of many small things, but demands constant attention and constant care. Neither will success allow one to be inconsistent with the things not of his field. Inattention to little things has in the past, is today, and will continue in the future, to eat out the life of our greatest structures, ashore or afloat. In business life or in private life.

RESPONSIBILITY.
 Responsibility requires experience and the ability to assume responsibility is worth more in the mart of labor than the mere work itself. The editor of a great paper may not write and perhaps has no real set duties and may seldom visit the printing office. The only real success he really receives much more than is given to any one of his assistants who really do all or nearly all of the active work. The editor is not paid for what he can do, but for his ability to accept responsibility and to gracefully assume it.

HONESTY.
 Mere money-making and honesty are incompatible. Success in making money may not require honesty, but success of the permanent kind—the kind worth having—has never been made and never will be made, in a dishonest manner. The thief can make money, but surely he is not a success, even if he becomes a millionaire. The only real success is the success of honesty. Honesty and honor, with material gain or without it, always pays.

ECONOMY AND SAVING.
 Extravagance is the worst enemy of business and is directly opposed to proper and profitable action of any kind. Extravagance and real success can never live together. The spendthrift has neither sense nor earning capacity and he never permanently succeeds. I can cite a case of a large corporation well on the way toward success. It was deemed advisable to have a new office manager, a man with many years of experience in many large concerns. It is true that he had not remained with one long, yet he had the appearance of a successful man. His first duties were to spend large sums of money in expensive office furniture and fixtures, handsome Persian rugs, swing chairs, electric bells, gas, and a diary printed stationery was not good enough; he could not use anything but hand stamped, embossed expensive paper. The course he pursued in the office was also followed in his private life. For he represented a certain number of stockholders and must be catered to accordingly. The result was a feeling of dissatisfaction on the parts of the men who were practical workmen, yet they had to put up with this ever increasing wild waste of money. But the time did come when the man had to go and for a year or two he was out of employment and finally fell into another similar "snare" but history repeated itself again. Of what use is it to live the fat of the land for awhile and then to lose all and have to grub with one's nose close to the ground for another length of time? A man gains neither honor nor respect. He is a city-by-night.

Did You Ever Think?
 That we live only one day at a time? That only one man can be called rich? That the five who can get it this week, may be one of the four who cannot get it next week?
 That your breath and your liabilities do not end at the same time?
 If that would become of your wife and little ones if you should die suddenly? That an Annuity Benefit Certificate is a will that no Court can set aside?
 That neighborly sympathy for the widow is good; but that the Annuity is the best protection in this Country for those who do the most toward protecting their families?
 That the most worthless assets ever found in any man's estate are his good intentions?
 That an Annuity's widow and children will not have to go into the shop to work for bread after he dies?
 That it is not a question whether you can afford to buy the Royal Annuity, but whether you can afford to not buy it?
 That you don't mean that YOU will take the risk but that YOU will let your family take the chances?
 That if it is up and luck for YOU to support your family, luck will have the best of it when your wife comes to die?
 That you will be a long time in getting your family well provided for and clothing just the same?
 That your cigar bill will carry $3,000.00 protection in the Royal Annuity and protect your family from want?
 When you have read the above THINK and THINK HARD!
 Then send to Arcanum, Box 112, Weymouth, for particulars.
