meeting of the city council last even-ing the proposed licenses by-law was in another form, not so drastic in the The discussion on the by-law last even ing proved very interesting. Ald. Yates, ing proved very interesting. Aid, Yates, who was largely responsible for the killing of the proposed by law, claimed that there is already an act governing the saleon business and by which it had been regulated for the last iwenty years. He argued, too, that if the bylaw passed in the form submitted it would simply mean that two saleons which have not front entrances on a which have not front entrances on a public highway would have to go out of business. On this point, however, there was a diversity of opinion. Ald Yates thought that things in Victoria were now very orderly compared with other cities. Ald, Fell in speaking to the motion for the second reading of the by-law said that he knew that it was being very strongly criticized. But was being very strongly criticized. But he never intended that the by-law should be passed in the shape in which it had been presented. There were clauses in it with which he did not agree, and he proposed that they should be struck out. They had been inserted simply for the purpose of discussion. Some of these objectives discussion. Some of these objectionable clauses he would mention. The aiderman pointed out that at present there were no regulations by which the saloon business might be kept in check. The committee had attempted to draft

Ald Fell said that there were a large number of men in the liquor business in the city who were reputable citizens and at present when one license holder gets into difficulty the edium falls on remedying. The question of closing was also an important one. Ald. Fell in illustrating this referred to the diffi-

The fellowing is from the Spokesman-Review, Spokane, of October IIIh: "A pretty wedding took place at high noon yesterday in the apartments, of Charles M. Oliver, Hotel Touraine, when his only daughter, Miss Grace, was married to william Tominson, chief accountant of the Le Roi Mining Company, at Rossland, British Columbia. A small party of in-limate friends witnessed the nuptials. Rev. C. Ross Baker, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist church, officiated. The bride came to Spokane a couple of months ago with her parents, Mr. Oliver being a local broker. In Rossland she was widely known for her histrionic talent, being prominent in the Rossland Dramatic Club. The bridegroom holds an exceedingly responsible post with West Kootenay's most extensive mining company, Miss Mattle Woodcock, principal of the bride, who were an imported gown of white affilient.

Toronto, Oct. 19.—Troops to the number of nearly 4,000 engaged in a sham fight between this city and Hamilton yesterday afternoon. The battle took place along the banks of the Credit river. The attacking party comprised the infantry of Toronto and a few cavalry squadrons, all of whom attempted to cross the river. By means of a brilliant flanking movement, the Queen's Own, of Toronto, forded the river and came on the defending troops at the side, Their opponents were the Dufferin rifles, of Brantford, who were greatly outnumbered and were driven back after a galiant stand. Lord Aylmer, inspector-general, was present and gave the decision.

EXAMPLES OF WASTED RESOURCES

It is denied that any large amoun of the resources of this province have been wasted. It is said that for the most part our rich natural assets have been applied to purposes from which only British Columbia, but the whole of Canada, is reaping an advantage to-day. Let us consider but instances, recent and fresh in the mind of the public, as examples of the truth of this bold challenge. The Nest, from which private capital is making some considerable amount of profit according to all accounts, what province receive in return for them? The coal deposits of the Crow's Nest are lars. What has the province received And what about the valuable provincial lands on Kalen Island—lands which have attained their present which have attained their present great prospective value as a result of the policy of the Dominion sovernment, a policy which will shortly culminate in the construction of another transcontinental railway across the Dominion of Canada? If our provincial government had seriously desired to make the most for the people out of what must before long be asset of enormous value, could it not have pursued a more reasonable. rational course than transfer ten thousand acres of valuable provincial rational course than transfer ten thousand acres of valuable provincial property for a nominal figure into the hands of a company of irresponsible men and women, literally "a band of adventurers," who forsoch undertook to procure the location of the termination of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway on the great tract of land mentioned the property of the great tract of land mentioned. That transaction will stand on record as the most extraordinary deal that thas ever been consummated for the alleged benefit of the public-because it has been, and will be, seriously argued that the bargain was made for the purpose of bringing profit into the coffers of the people of course it will be readily conceded that the Andre was a second to the confers of the people of the public-because it is the first beds.

There cannot be any question about that, it is true there has never been any satisfactory reason, or indeed any reason at all, given for the selection of the people for the benefit of the people for the be great prospective value as a result of the policy of the Dominion governdinary processes of business-like in-vestigation. The ministers concerned will not speak. They say the adven-turers contrived to "make a good bar-Government This Week. turers contrived to "make a good bar-With that cryptic but far from illummating explanation the public must perforce be content, And there is no mating explanation the public must perforce be content. And there is no doubt the statement is true in a limit of sense. The bargain was in the interests of the people principally active in its consummation, but not in the interests of the people principally concerned.

These are two instances of the careful manner in which the resources of the province have been husbanded and preserved as a revenue-producing heritage for the people of all time. Others could be instanced; but it is not necessary to enlarge upon the subject. The hero who is going to carry an appeal for better terms to the "foot of the throne" was one of the principal figures in the notorious Kalen Island steal.

"So long as political power lay securely in the East," says the Colonist, "they were not particularly concerned about the problems in the West, or whether the policy of the East was selfish or sectional. The experience of British Columbia has gone to show that in political matters it was without remarks that are both harsh that in political matters it was show that in political matters it was both." This is an absolute misrepresentation. The fact is that the old provinces, small in extent and population. provinces, small in extent and popula-tion, assumed heavy fiscal burdens to Dan. secure and build up the West, and to THE DEATH ROLL establish railway communication with it. Only within the past few years has the Dominion-and that till not long ago meant for all practical purposes the five castern provinces—became financially strong enough to bear its burdens without staggering under them. Relief has come and will come from the filling up of the West with an industrial population, but the sacrifice of the East is historical and should not be slighted or overlooked.

The Vancouver News-Advertiser is careful not to say a word in defence of Premier McBride's action in withdrawing from the conference of provincial premiers. In fact, our Vancouver contemporary practically condemns the head of the government by suggesting that now the principle of special terms has been admitted another opportunity for discussion may soon be afforded. Mr. McBride was asked to take part in further consideration of the various questions, but he scented danger to his pet scheme of dissolution and refused. While searching through the ruins of flabylon of old objects which showed the workings of the mind of early man were discovered. A conch-shell from which a section had been cut so that it formed a dish, while the valve became a groove for the wick, was the first lamp of primitive man, adopted when he learned that mutton fat would burn, and the camp-fire was no longer sufficient for his needs. Later, when the shell was not at hand, he cut his shell-shaped lamp from blocks of marble and alabaster. Thus the sea-shell is the ancestor of all lamps. It is said to have been used possibly ten thousand years ago.

"A member of the conference being told in day that Hon. Mr. Whitney denied the words, stated emphatically that he had employed them. Members of the conference during conference week freely quoted the remark as made by Hon. Mr. Whitney and the Globe by Hon, Mr. Whithey, and the Globe and other papers published the facts. The conference was private and Hon. Mr. Whitney possibly thinks he is safe in denying the statement, as members of the conference, while they know he did so, may not feel inclined to publicly contradict him. (BY A LOCAL SEALER.)

Present day fur seal hunting is carried on much the same as it was thirty with the heavens for a covering that the hunter in his small boat (20 feet long) stealthily steals up to within gunshot range, and delivers to them their last message.

The ways employed by white hunters have not changed materially. The shave not changed materially. The shave not changed materially. The shad as spear has been used more or less, since a limit around the Pribyloff islands was agreed to between the nations concerned, but the shotsum has been the pilicipal weapon used by white and Indian hunters alike to secure the valuable poits.

The vessels are dispatched on their hunting cruises generally about the first of the new year. In former times, however, they have left port in Described to the carry nineties halling from Canadian and American ports, it.

The majority of interests having been under one management for the past live years, the industry, the inder one management for the past five years, the industry is now more systematically pursued, and before making preparations for the London sales, which take place at the close of the old year are taken into consideration by the company. the company.

Should favorable returns be received by the Sealing Company the work of fitting out for the ensuing season is pushed forward as rapidly as hands

The frequently remarked among sealers that the hunting seasons in the North Pacific ocean are annually changing, not nearly the number of fine days now being experienced as was formerly the case. Their continuous service in the waters frequented by the seal herds, viz.; from latitude 35 despress N. to 66 degrees N. or therefable vide and from the coast lines of the object sought, whilst the task of abouts, and from the coast lines of californie, Cregon, Washington Van couver Island, etc., west to the 180 degree meridian would be considered reliable evidence as to prevailing weather times lasts one hour or longer, which does not always event in the seal season of the coast lines of the list degree of th engaged in the early nineties halling from Canadian and American ports, it has now dwindled down to less than twenty, which are managed by Victorians exclusively. This has no reference to Cape Horn sealing.

Apart from these numbers is a con-stantly increasing fleet of twenty-five or more schooners owned by the Japanese. The yearly bonus which that country confers on, tonnage together with the cheapness of operating generally, makes shrewdly managed fur sealing a profitable business under the dag of the Rising Sun.

On foggy days, however, when the small boat sare away on hunting expeditions, the boom gun, which is fired hourly and in some cases more frequently, according to circumstances, together with the rendering of welcome notes on the mechanical fog horn to the unseen ones, necessitates the denotion of spare moments to the work described, which aids so materially to the safe returning of the venturers.

On such days as just spoken of it is ther than the other, about ten inches apart, have found the mark and will not have proven vitaily effective, does the fun commence. The line and spears become detached from the pole and a more gamey fish to land it would be hard to discover, patience taking the place of cleverness which rod and reel demand; the club instead of the net being this recommendation. On such days as just spoken of it is quite a common occurrence for boats to get astray from their own vessel, but they are usually attracted to some other one by the signals, which are put forth from all alike in thick weather. Fog. however, is not the only danger to be contended with. A fish commonly known to scalers as the "killer" being responsible for numbers of known besides unknown accidents happening to boats, as to whether the damage they inflict on the frail craft is done accidentally or not it cannot be proven.

The "killers" rarely travel singly, but go in herds of ten or more, and, the damage which is delivered to the unsuspecting boat either, with the head such days as just spoken of it is being the means of ending forever his life's pleasures. The distance at which the weapon is thrown depends upon weather conditions; if the day be fine and the water calm, sometimes the full length of the line is not sufficiently long enough for the spear to have yield.

The maxim, "once shot at," etc., predominating in the seal as well as in some of his capturers.

After a day's hunting the experiences having been met with are freely exchanged among the men engaged, and many and variety and variety and variety. of or the long fin which protrudes from the centre of the back of the attacking one, may be done as a challenge to combat feeling secure in the presence of so many of its kind.

It is said that the king of fishes sometimes fails a victim to their numbers, the tongue of the monster ensuring a dainty morsel of food for them. Now as to whether they leisusely move along, following the coast line, feeding as they go or whether they fraverse the intervening space at full speed to their southern migrating limits it cannot be convincingly proven, but sure it is that at about the same places, and if one be not superior to the other time each year the herds are discovered, at least, if not at the same places, not far from the previous season's position. Presumably the locality of the small fishes which forms their food plays an important part as to where non-travelling seals may be met with. It might be stated that if seals were continually moving twere not necessary to place any restriction upon gelagic sealing the greater majority of them would go unharmed, but they like other enimals must needs have itself and it is thoughts probably ruminating on the same way as the one previously mentioned, but unfortunately two of its occupant were drowned. ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR

Just one hundred and one years ago to morrow the battle of Trafajgar took place, giving the British such an overwhelming victory over the French and Spaniards as to place the nation in undisputed dominion of the seas. In that struggle the hero of the fight, Lord Nelson, received his death wound, But though his spirit, departed, the memory of his indomitable courage, his spiendid self-sacrifice in the country's interests, and his achievements will be always one of the most cherished among the many grand historic traditions of the British Empire.

"Nelson stands alone. There is no figure like unto his among ail those who have ploughed the weary seas," is a tribute haid the British naval idol by Lord Rosebery. And it is safe to say that these words adequately express give the English battle. They were superior in number, forty-five to our thirty-three; but what is superiority of numbers to men determined to conquer? Admiral Nelson did everything to avoid a battle; he attempted to get into the Mediterranean, but we pursued, and came up with him off Trafalgar. The French and Spanlards yied with each other who should first get into action. Admirals Villeneuve and Gravina were both anxious to lay their ships alongside the Victory, the constant always to the Emperor, did not favor either of them-the Santissima Trinidada was the fortunate ship.

In vain did the English admiral try to evade an action, the Spanish admiral, Oliva, prevented his escape, and lashed his vessel to the British admiral. The English ship was a constant.

English ship was one of 136 guns; the Santissima Trinidada was but a 74.

"Lord Nelson adopted a new system; afraid of combating us in the old way, in which he knows we have a superiority of skill, as was proved by our victory over Sir Robert Vaider, he attempted a new mode of flecting. For victory over Sir Robert Vaider, he at-tempted a new mode of fighting. For a short time they disconcerted us; but what can long disconcert his Imperial Majesty's arms? We fought yard-arm to yard-arm, gun to gun. Three hours did we fight in this manner; the Eng-lish began to be dismayed—they found. it impossible to resist us; but our brave, sallors were tired of this slow means of it impossible to resist us; but our brave, sallors were tired of this slow means of gaining a victory; they wished to board; the cry was 'a la bordage!' Their impetuosity was irresistible. At that moment two ships, one French and one Spanish, boarded the Temeraire: the English fell back in astonishment and afficient. We reshed to the aire: the English fell back in astonishment and affright. We rushed to the flagstaff—struck the colors—and all were so anxious to be the bearer of the intelligence to their own ship, that they jumped overboard; and the English ship, by this unfortunate impetuosity of our brave sailors and their allies, was able, by the assistance of two more ships that came to their assistance, to make her escape in a sinking state.

"Meanwhile Nelson still resisted us, was now who should first board, and have the honor of taking him, French or Spaniard—two admirals on each side disputed the honor—they boarded his ship at the same moment—Villen—two flew to the quarter deck—with the usual generosity of the French, he car-

Craft Sighted in Distress Off Cla-oose-Name Plank Marked Daisy Found on Beach.

The marine disasters on the stormy west coast of Vancouver Island have been augmented by another, if an account of a recent occurrence and the conclusion to which the circumstances appear to point are accurate.

E. E. Hardwick, who has been so-journing at Cla-oose for some weeks, arrived in Victoria by the last steamer and reports that last Saturday afternoon he and others sighted a small fishing schooner battling with the wind and waves some distance off the coast. There were several occupants and evidently they were trying hard to make safe shelter. After struggling for a afe shelter. After struggling for a hort time it was noticed that the at-

So concerned were they that a dispatch was sent to Cape Beale asking that a lookout be kept for the craft, but she never passed within sight of the lighthouse keeper there.

The next day D. Logan found a plank, apparently from a sail boat, upon which was painted the name "Daisy." He picked it up on the Clanawah beach, about six or seven miles from Cla-cose, and helween the latter point and Pachena bay. About the same time a new tiller, which had not been long in the water, was found at Cla-cose. These finds, in the light, of the small craft seen in distress a short time previously, had a sinister meandime previously, had a sinister meaning to Messrs. Logan and Hardwick. Both men have reached the same consulsion, namely, that the fisherman or Isherman manning the schooner Daisy same to their death by drowning in the recent heavy storm.

On Monday evening at the Victoria theatre Jane Corcoran, who has been seen the past two seasons as the star of "Pretty Peggy," will appear in a play of a totally different character. Her manager, Arthur C. Aiston, has secured from Charles Frohman the unrestricted rights for the United States and Canada for "The Freedom of Suzanne," a comedy of great merit, which scored a pronounced hit for ten weeks at the Empire theatre, New York city. Mr. Frohman had many applications for the play, but know applications for the play, but know ing that it was particularly adapted to Miss Corcoran, made a deal with Manager Aiston for its use.

The play deals with the story of an English wife who wants freedom, and finally, obtaining it, declares she would rather return to the protection of a husband. Suzanne has been married sometime when she manifests an inclination to depart from the house at uncertain intervals and roam whither her will takes her. One day, Charles Trever, the husband, waits disconse lately for the return of his spouse, and in this meantime discusses her behavior with certain members of his family. Suzanne eventually appears, and in genuously explains her absence by relating stories of a series of nocturnal adventures in which she has taken part. These include frustrated suppers at a hotel, cab drives with chance acquanitances, and, finally, a farcical estar of the country several times with various had been through this part of the country several times with various the decided success. Neither of the foregoing expressed a reason for their conclusions. Yet if lies on the surface. Life needs a noble purpose to being it to its best. The serious determination to do something for one's fellows, and to accept the Scribtural interpretation of life as a stewardship, begets the minor virtues as well as the greater. The frivolous, tide and selfish existence defeats its own aim. The only wise and the only happy are they who accept as falents entrusted to them for use the abilitiess.

While Waiting—What?

This parable of the three servants, to each of whom was committed during his master's absence a responsibility equal to his capacity, is one of several lamps set alongside of Christ's tremendous teaching of a day of judgment. The absent Lord will return again, to judge, to reward, and to punish. That return may be deferred—how often and with what Aguslish have weary lips cried, "How long!" O Lord, how long!" Colord, how long!"—but it is inevitable. The way to wait and to watch is to work. Expectation—excites energy, In-tervals are for industry and not for idleness. The grace of keeping busy should be numbered among the Christian virtues. Employment is a means. tervals are for industry, and not for idlenss. The grace of keeping busy should be numbered among the Chrischland the one-taient man. By no manner of means could the one-taient man have returning the country of the manufacture of the country of the manufacture of the world is made up largely of the world is made up largely of development; "we learn by doing," one-taient people; it is worth, remarking that the nimble penny contributes made to the world tasks for his service of the world is made up largely of the world is made u which they possess.

The manifest activities of the Chris

Lack of this moral motive is what has smitten the East with optivies of paralysis. Life does mean something; responsibility for it cannot be escaped. The deeply inwrought sense of accountability to one's highest nature, to society and to a Supreme Being is what has made the Angio-Saxon a will find her at least-busy world conqueror.

Cecil Rhodes died with the cry, "So much to do! So little done!" He was a five-talent man. So was Henry Mariyh, a cociet, where restricted in the perils of the wilderness, and the indescribable loneliness which only a man in an alien land can know, were consumed by this same passion, and sustained by the same conviction of their accountability to God, who rewards the faithful and punishes the faithless.

While Waiting—What?

This parable of the three servants, to the liftle man is a little man, wherever the little man may be the little man is a little man, wherever the little man may be the little man is a little man, wherever the little man may be the little man man may be the little man man may be the little man man man man little man man man little man man man little man man little and little man man little man man stored gold of wisdom and knowledge and yet do less to profit his fellows than the other who keeps his small handful of silver coins in circulation. God and the world honor the man with a little who makes the most of it. Society is debtor less to the brainy and equipped few, who give themselves to indolence or selfishness, than to the medicore men who are possessed by a spirit of faithful service; and who recognize their accountability for what they are able to do.

"A deal of talent is lost to the world for want of a little courage," says the wise provers which at ones sets forth the point of the familiar parable taught by Jeaus, and shows show the story has given to common speech one of its significant words—taient." This ancient picture of how faiture, defeat and disaster came upon a faint-hearted man is especially worth pondering in these, attenuous times, which more than ever cash for boddness.

The fait for boddness, initiarity and yet more boldness.

The fearful man carries in file own heart the seeds of failure, and cowards lie is the soil in which, many sins thrive. The one-talene man lacked courage first; therefore he came short in fidelity, faith and fruitfulness.

The faithless one-talent servant was punished—not that he had not already punished—not that he had not already punished himself by the atrophying of his powers. But taking him on his own reckening, and judging him out of his own mouth, he was awarded the punishment which his defiant and insolent attitude could not avert. And the keenest sting of this bitter fate was that he knew it to be just. They who will not accept the opportunity which God effers them cannot escape the obligation which he lays upon them.

A business firm was in trouble, and most of its employees left it. A few, however, stood by the ship. At considerable cost to themeshes, they seem the firm was able to weather its difficulties, To-day, in its new prosperity, that firm gives places of honor to the few faithful workers who were true to it in distress. It feels that its obligations to them is too great to be repaid. They remained loyal to it when others deserted it. Now the faithful few are being rewarded. Yet why go to the business world for an illustration of the truth which is its own best illustration? Our debt to Christ is greater than we can repay because in the day of our distress He stood by us though all others fell away. The fidelity of Jesus to us, at incalculable cost, has made us forever His debtors. Is it not reasonable that if He asked anythus made us forever His debtors. Is it not reasonable that, if He asked anything at our hands, we should freely and gladly grant it?

The colossal bronze statue of the seated Buddha at Naro, Japan, is the largest one that has ever been cast. It is 53 feet in height and is supposed to have been cast in the ninth century.

Rev. Dr. Geo. Matheson, the well known Soutch minister who recently died at Edinburgh, became blind at the age of twenty years when he was the leading student at the University of Glasgow.

BOBBY THE BAT.

Bobby the Bat lived in a barn, which is, of course, the proper place for bats to live in. It was rather allow, though because all well-bred bats sleep most of their time, and he felt quite wide awake. And when your relations are sleepy and you are very much awake it is awkward. Grandfather, Bat would remark: "It's so much more dignified to rest on one's laurels than to go gadding about."

"But where are the laurels!" said Bobby; for there was no sign of them in the barn.

"Tut', tut', child," said Grandfather Bat; and went off to sleep again, snoring like pine o'clock.

"I shall go out and see the world," cried Bobby ampatiently.

"It's a wicked place." said Grandmother Bat. But Bobby thought he should like to find out for himself, and try his lovely black wings; so off he flew when twight fell, for bats always fly by night.

"There is nothing horrible about a bat," said their mother. "They are inoffeneive little animals; and this one has flown in by mistake."
"Let's kill it," said one of the boys, seising a poker.
"You are not to do anything of the kind," said their mother; and she cap tured poor Bobby, who was trembling with fright and trying to bite her, and gently bade the children come and look at him.

COAL

A Second Crow's Nest

Coal is actually to-day the greatest commodity of the world With ceal we run our mills and factories and our great railroads; with coal we propel our ships, provide our navies, and warm our homes; with coal we generate and produce electricity, with a few exceptions, where water pool we generate and there are not very many Niagara Falls, however; with coal we produce from per, lead, silver, gold, and all other metals that we need, and must have, because all or those metals are to be found mixed in with the rock and in the ore. Without coal we could not make coke, and coke made from a certain kind of high-class bituminous coal is the only fuel yet known to man that produces a heat intense enough to met ore and hard rock into a liquid, by which process we are enabled to extract the metals we need.

England would not be the great world power she is to-day if it was not for her inexhaustible supply of coal.

Coal-mining in British Columbia has always been a great success. It is a coal-mining in British Columbia has always been a great success. It is a coal-mining in British Columbia has always been a great success. It is a great a produce of the coal-mining in British Columbia fields, excepting a small tonnage from the State of Washington of a very clumbia fields, excepting a small tonnage from the State of Washington of a very local title in fact, so poor that the United States navy of the Pacific division get all cultive in fact, so poor that the United States navy of the Pacific division get all cultive in fact, and small tonnage from the State of Washington of a very year from mining the output of the pacific division get all cultive in fact, and small romage from the State of Washington of a very year from mining coal, and died a few years ago the richest man in Canada. He made it all from coal, and his mines will be productive for generations to come, and are worth more to-day than thirty-five years ago, when first opened up.

OPPORTUNITY

To see it, and grasp it in time, makes a man the master of his destiny. Do YOU WANT TO MAKE MONEY HONESTLY, AND LOTS OF IT? are now building into the Nicola Valley, the Canadian Pacific and the V. V. and E. (Great Northern), and the C. P. R. has already constructed and completed a line from Spence's Bridge, on Thompson River, to Nicola Lake, a distance of about fifty miles, whereas the V. V. and E. are roushing the work as fast somesy and allow, can do it, and it is expected to reach Nicola by Christmas.

This is certainly a varie opportunity for the small investors. For ES.00 you can now buy 1,000 shares of the Amaigamated Coal Stock, which in a few years may pay you a yearly revenue or income of $16,000. faruring the dividend at $10.00 a share (the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. paid a dividend last year of $10.00 a share (the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. paid a dividend last year of $10.00 a share). THOROUGHBREDS A FOOD AND A TONIC

What the leading Medical Journal of the world has to say about FERROL.

After making a thorough test of FERROL in its own laboratory the London (England) Lancet published an article from which the following is taken:

The preparation is a good one and of distinct therapeutic value. it with him.

David Cass, the unsuspected, was the thief. Mortimer, condemned, having restored the money—having taken upon himself with almost silent resignation the disgrace—was innocent. And all this knowledge was in Crane's possession alone, to use as he wished. The fate of his rival was given into his hands; and if he turned down his thumb, so, better for Mortimer titat he had been torn of wild beasts in a Roman arna than to be cast, good name and all, to the wolves of righteous humanity.

As a dog carries home a bone too large for immediate—consumption. Crane took back this new finding to his den of solitude in New York. At eight o'clock he turned the key in his door, and arm in arm with his now constant companion waiked fifully up and down, up and down, the floor. Sometimes he sat in a big chair that beckoned to him to rest; sometimes he raced with swift speed; once he threw himself upon his bed, and lay staring wide-eyed at the eiling for hours. What mockery—hours! on the mantelplece the clock told him that he had ceased his strides for a bare five minutes.

Then he thrust himself back into a chair, and across the table opposite sat Wrong, huge—grinning with a devillsh temptation; not gold, but a perfume of iliacs, and the music of soft laughter like the clock told him that he had ceased his strides for a bare five minutes.

Then he thrust himself back into a chair, and across the table opposite sat Wrong, huge—grinning with a devillsh temptation; not gold, but a perfume of iliacs, and the music of soft laughter like the tinkle of silver bells, the bejeweld light of sweet eyes that were gray, and all the temptation that Wrong held in itself was the possession of Allis Porter.

And Crane need commit no crime, unless inaction were a crime—just leave things as they were. In the eyes of the world Mortimer was a thief; he

PROPERTY AND LOCATION.

The most notable facts of the Company are that it owns proven gold and silver bearing land; not only is the ore—there, but it is there in quantities, an apparently inexhaustible supply of pay ore. The Company owns the Gregory Group of Five Claims, situated in the Famous MANHATTAN DISTRICT, and also has several Claims in the LONE MOUNTAIN DISTRICT; both these districts are the richest in the WORLD. The tunnels have been opened up on the Lone Mountain Claims and indications point to striking large bodies of high-grade ore carrying values in Gold and Silver.

MINING HAS BUILT MANY GREAT FORTUNES.

Nothing so surely offers large returns as a good Mining Stock. Probably you do not realize how many people there are who are enjoying a regular income as a result from investing in Mining Stocks. There are thousands of them, and they are largely those who bought their stock when the opportunity was first offered to secure shares at share in value, and besides have paid back to the investors in dividends many hundred times what they first invested. Many of the companies are paying from $100 to $1,500 a 1,000 per cent in dividends on the first price of the stock. To grasp this opportunity and purchase stock in the PITTSBURG-MANHATTAN MINING COMPANY at 10 secure a good share of wealth you are likely to be classed as a failure. The proposition is in the hands of men whose ability and integrity cannot be questioned, and these men opinion that it has a wonderful future.

ORGANIZATION.

The Company is organized under the laws of the State of Nevada. Capital stock of $1,000,000, divided into shares of the par value of $1 00 each; 400,000 shares are in the treasury which will be sold as required for developments from time to time.

AN OUTLAW FOR DUTY - - SHAM BATTLE FOR CUPID

ways be reasonably certain of a fight.

From his mother, Murphy had inherited the courtliness of his Castilian forebears. From his father he had received the wit and daring of the Celt. Irish daring united to Spanish diplomacy had made him a real power south of the gulf, and Clemford was proud to be his friend. From letters from Elna Hubbard he had gained an idea of Mrs. Hubbard's fearest social enemy had married her daughter to a duke. Mrs. Hubbard's dearest social enemy had married her daughter to a duke. Mrs. Hubbard had determined to smarry Elna to nothing less than a prince, and she was hurrying the girl away from town in the height of the season to avoid complications.

Half an hour later, Clemford, complete the name of the president sat in the billiard room.

"You have destroyed that letter?" anxiously inquired Murphy. "It would never do to let the senora guess that you knew."

"That is one secret I shall keep who did you happen to become who cannot be aware of the responsibilities we have to carry."

"I think you are afraid," she said bluntly.

He was about to reply when the shooting broke forth afresh and this time about the house. With one look of anguish he bade farewell to shooting broke for an alliance, and rushed of the season to avoid complications it is hopes of an alliance, and rushed of the season to avoid complications its hopes of an alliance, and rushed of the season to avoid complications its hopes of an alliance, and rushed of the season to avoid complications its hopes of an alliance, and rushed of the season to avoid complications its norm.

Half an hour later, Clemford, com-of the heart with Goskins, whose father had made sausages.

The following week was an uneasy time for him, but when at last the signal flag on fort Murphy fluttered out the announcement that a steamer not the mail carrier had been sighted, he went down to the dock with a lighter heart. It would at least be good to see Elna again after his two years exife; if only to realize how far from him she was.

Orders had already been given that the yacht was to be permitted to tie up at the custom house dock, and after the most perfunctory examination at quarantine, Clemford bearded the yacht from the revenue cutter and gave directions to the salling master.

To his surprise, in addition to Elna and her mother, there was present a handsome if somewhat vapid young man, to whom he was presently introduced.

Emil, prince of Percardy, did not impress him favorably, but Mrs.

Combat, he felt sure of his ground, and a dozen times a day Clemford would have willingly given up his place for the privilege of kicking him overboard. Only Elna's pleading glances restrained him, and after they reached the plantation he was kept busy showing Mrs. Hubbard over the place.

Then came a letter from Murphy "You marry her?" gasped the prince. "I thought you were after Miss Hubbard."

Then came a letter from Murphy which seemed to pour oil on the troubled waters, and for a day or so all was well. Clemford was positively genial under the prince's insults, and Mrs. Hubbard smiled. At last, she concluded, Clemford had learned his place.

She was gloating over her triumph in her room one evening when, with-out warning, there came the sharp crack of musketry. She sprang to erack of musketry. She sprang to her feet and peered out of the win-Over by the laborers' barracks she could see the flash through the trees, and presently there came an answer from the barracks. She rushed into the hall in her dressing gown. Elna was already there, and so was the prince in a pink silk lounging robe beneath the edge of which showed blue silk pajamas.

"It is one of the revolutions," he cried in alarm. "We shall be killed."
"Nonsense," was the sharp response. "No one ever is killed in these revolutions. Where is Mr. Clemford?" she added, turning to He has gone to take charge of

Why Not Try?

There's no use getting mad if that For Sale sign you stuck on the front of your vacant house has not brought you a tenant or purchaser. Your sign has been read and re-read by practically the same people; who pass by it every day and who are too intent on other things to stop and look over the property. New if you would advertise in the real estate columns of the Times it would come before the eyes of all the people looking for real estate. This is because they are accustomed to have the Times tell them what property in Victoria may be had
