FALL 1932

TO THE MAN BEHIND THE PLOW

The civilization of today is facing a crisis. The tremendous overhead in carrying on the various branches of industrial activities has become so heavy that every vocation is staggering under the load it has created.

This is not the first period of hard times that this country has experienced. Each time by slow process, recovery has come. The class that is the safest is the class that produces its own food. The Man Behind the Plow can grow the wherewithal to feed himself and family, he has first chance and first choice of the products of the soil which the teeming millions of the earth are fed. In those parts of the country where farming is diversified, the farmer is independent and self-dependent. Crops should be planted for self-protection.

Let us hope that we shall soon see the heralds of a brighter day looking on the horizon. Let us work to that end with a steadfast determination to rely upon the first great vocation of the human family.
