CONGRESS.—
The Tariff bill from the House of Representatives has been read in the Senate and referred to the Committee on Manufactures. It was opposed on its first reading, and on the question of reading it a second time there were only 26 votes in the affirmative. Its passage is altogether doubtful.

The President's message relative to the assault upon his Secretary, has been laid upon the table in the Senate. In the House it has been referred to a strong Jackson committee. Mr. Jarvis, the Jackson man, has addressed a letter to the House, furnishing the Committee with a white-washing argument. He alleges, that he accompanied his wife and other ladies to the President's house, and the President's Secretary insulted them.

The nomination of General Macomb as Commander in Chief of the Army has not yet been confirmed by the Senate. A resolution to enquire into the expediency of abolishing the office has been adopted in the House.

The question of adjournment has been agitated in the House, which resulted in the adoption of a resolution to refer the subject to a joint committee of the Senate and House. A day between the 20th of May and 1st of June, will probably be designed.

To the Editor.

WASHINGTON, April 22.
Dear Sir,—The Tariff bill finally passed the House of Representatives to-day—Ayes 105—Noes 94. The previous question was moved by Silas Wright of New-York, and sustained by the House, which put an end to all further debate, and the bill passed in its engrossed form. When the Speaker put the question on agreeing to its title, which is "an act to amend the several acts laying duties on imports"—Mr. W. of Georgia said he liked to call things by their right names, and moved to amend the title by making it read, "an act for the encouragement of Domestic Manufactures." Mr. RANDOLPH rose under much excitement, and said, he would agree to no such title—it had better be called "an act to tax the industry of one half of the Union for the benefit of the other, or in other words to rob and plunder the pockets of the people to put money into the pockets of certain Manufacturers." After he had down he continued speaking aloud, apparently in a great passion, dashing his papers about his table, explaining, "that this bill was designed for the Manufacture of a President, for," said he, "there are twenty or thirty members who voted for the bill, at heart against it." This may be called "letting the cat out of the bag"—for it was evident and plainly to be seen during the debate, that most of the Jackson men who supported the bill, were at heart against it, but were whipped into its support by the people who sent them to Congress. The Senate will have the bill to near the first of June. Its fate in that branch is considered here as extremely doubtful.

The House had it under the hammer 50 days.

Your, &c.

The gag law.—We now and then hear a good deal said by the Jackson men against a gag law; and a call for the previous question, with a view to stop debate in Congress, has been so dominated by them. During the debate on the Tariff, the Jackson men, being the majority, have resorted to this gag law, half a dozen times. During the session they have called for the previous question, expressly to stop the mouths of the Administration members, oftener we believe, than it was ever resorted to before the establishment of the Government. Here is evidence of their respect for the freedom of debate and the liberty of speech.

The Press is Italy.—An Italian translation of Sir Walter Scott's Life of Napoleon has just appeared at Florence; in which translation, we learn, "Whatever appears favorable to Napoleon is left out, and whatever may be considered as against the Pope, Pius the VIth and VIIth, and all that bears the least against Austria, has been most studiously omitted," thus are the Tuscan and Italiane indulged with a history so interesting to them.

Absurdities of the English Code.—If a man has his leg broken by a carriage, the law allows a deodand to his wife and children; but if he be killed, they have no compensation. If a man grows cabbage or potatoes, the horses employed in cultivating the fields are taxed; but, if he grows wheat or barley, his horses are not liable to the highest taxation; because, says the law, cultivating a field for the growth of cabbages or potatoes, is not agriculture. If a journeyman butcher happens to be employed on any occasion in serving his master's shop, the master is liable to pay the tax for a shop man; but if a journeyman baker be so employed, his master is not so liable; because, says the law, the baker is a manufacturer, and the butcher is not.

TURKEY.

Hassel, a German statistical writer, names Turkey, in Europe, on the best and most recent authorities, to contain a population of 9,482,000. Of this population, the Turks do not amount to one third part, and the Greeks alone amount to about five millions. For instance, the Bulgarians, about 1,800,000, a Slavonic people, are partly of the Greek, and partly of the Mahomedan religion. The Bosnians, about 850,000, are also of the Greek religion. The Albanians speak Slavonic, and the old Illyrian language, and are partly of the Greek, and partly of the Mahomedan religion. The Walachians and Moldavians, 1,250,000 according to Hassel, but about a million and a half in number, according to Mr. Wilkinson's account, are only Greeks too by religion.

INDIAN TORNADO.

The shades of evening approached as we reached the ground, and just as the encampment was completed, the atmosphere grew suddenly dark, the heat became oppressive, and the unusual stillness presaged the immediate setting of the monsoon. The whole appearance of nature resembled those solemn preludes to earthquakes and hurricanes in the West Indies, from which the East is provisionally free. We were allowed very little time for conjecture; in a few minutes the heavy clouds burst over us. I witnessed seventeen monsoons in the Indies, but this exceeded them all, in its awful appearance and dreadful effects. Encamped in a low situation, on the borders of the lake, formed to collect the surrounding water, we found ourselves in a few hours in a liquid plain. The tent-pins giving way, in loose soil, the tents fell down, and left the whole army to the contending elements. It requires a lively imagination to conceive the situation of a hundred thousand human beings of every description, with more than two hundred thousand elephants, camels, horses and oxen, suddenly overwhelmed by this dreadful storm in a strange country, without any knowledge of high or low ground; the whole being covered by an immense lake, and surrounded by thick darkness, which prevented our distinguishing a single object, except what the vivid glare of lightning displayed in horrible forms. No language can describe the wreck of the large encampment thus instantaneously destroyed, and covered with water, amid cries of old men and helpless women, terrified by the piercing shrieks of their expiring children, unable to afford them relief.—During this dreadful night more than two hundred persons and three thousand cattle perished, and the morning dawn exhibited a shocking spectacle.

Anecdote of Dr. Young.

As the doctor was walking in his garden at Welwyn in company with two ladies, one of whom he afterwards married, a servant came to tell him a gentleman wished to speak with him.—"Tell him," says the doctor, "I am to be engaged to change my situation." The ladies insisted that he should go, as his visitor was a man of rank, his patron, and his friend. As persuasions, however, had no effect, one took him by the right arm the other by the left, and led him to the garden gate, when finding resistance was vain, he bowed laid his hand on his heart, and in that respectful manner for which he was so remarkable, spoke the following lines:—

Thus Adam took'd, when from the garden driven,
And thus disputed orders sent from heaven:
Like him I go; but yet to go am loath;
Like him I go, for angels drove us both.
Hand was his fate; but mine still more unjust,
His Eve went with him, but mine stays behind.

A letter-writer in Leguira inculpates the British Government, as being in league with Bolivar, to overthrow the liberties of Columbia. If liberty meant licentiousness there might be some reason for the charge—the former, in a legitimate shape, we are apprehensive, is yet a stranger among our Southern Brethren.

Lacrima.—The eye is never to be mistaken. A person may discipline the muscles of the face and voice, but there is a something in the eye beyond the will, and we thus frequently find it giving the tongue the lie direct. "I never knew a truly estimable man offer a finger, it is ever a sign of a gentleman; and he who is hearty, is positively worthless, though he may be negatively harmless. "Cut the acquaintance of any lady who signs a letter with "yours obediently." Always act in the presence of children with the utmost circumspection. They mark all you do, and most of them are more wise than you imagine.

A jury who were directed to bring a prisoner in guilty upon his own confession, returned with a verdict of not guilty. The astonished judges demanded the reason. "May it please your honours," said the foreman, "the man is so great a liar we cannot believe him."
