CHOLERA.

The first case of cholers which excited much attention, if indeed it was not the very first case in this place) was Reseal at Waddill's tavern; on the 7th May; from which time to the death of Mr. Morris, on the 7th May; from which time to the death of Mr. Morris, on the 6th June, (the last well at Waddill's tavern; on the 7th May; from which time to the death of Mr. Morris, on the 6th June, (the last well at waddill's tavern; on the or operation; comprising all assa, colors, conditions, and discases. It is not believed that more than half this number died of spannedic cholers.

Bince the 6th instant, two children have died, but not of clusters; so we have been nearly two weeks without a fearly from that disease, and the Lowa is now perfectly hashity.

Bixtosn soldiers, said to have had the chelera, were placed in the United States bospital at this place, from on haard of a steam boot, a few days since, of which number towe died, and the receivered. Other troops landed at the same time and sucamped about three miles above town; and remain lessible.

Our principal object in making this statement of facts is to convert the many erroneous, not to say absurd and ride.

Ireiand, he did not think that he was making an amaggested calculation when he said that, if proper care was extended towards that country, it would relieve England manner as the Wh tafeet.—Kentigh Unserver.

To the Governo of the District:—
With respect to the men whom we take for the serv man in his power, endeavoring to arouse their ag and sinking spirits. He is now about to leave hink it will be gratifying to his family and friends arri, and every other part of our country, to know. Benton, by the firmness he has shown here, in a ma, by his general deportment, and by the urbanimaniers, we say he has endeaved to him, all those the honor of his acquaintance. Indeed, our citimes all provide to receive him, which feeling they have manifested at different times and in many ways, a urrival here—and Col- Benton must know that the with him, the best wishes of us all for the presperity with him, the best wishes of us all for the presperity.

With respect to the men whom we take for the service of our victorious war department, some draw their teeth, some blind themselves and others main thermelves on their way to us, and for this reason we send back the greater part; and also I see in the report of the war department, that there is always a deficiency. Send then, before an bour elapses, all the men wanting, provided they be able-bodied and healthy, and those whom thou dost send must be in concert with the Sheika, and when thou dost explicit them, let each know that he must not main himself, because I will take from the family of every such offender men in his place, and he who has mained himself shall be sent to the galleys all his life. I have already ordered this to the Sheiks in writing, and do thou also take care, in cancert with the Sheiks, to levy the men demanded, and send them immediately.

The Harpers could scarcely have selected a more acceptable volume for publication than the one for which we are now indebted to them; we have been at various times among the number of delighted listeners to Mr. Verplank's eloquent discourses, and we are grateful for the opportunity to senew the pleasure they afforded us. We have no need to tell our readers that Galian C. Verplank ranks a group the forement of our scholars, or that the clears here. need to tell our readers that Guitan C. Verplank ranks a mong the foremost of our echolars, or that the class'e beating of his language is worthy of the eloquent sentiment of which it is the vehicle. His style is greatly to our taste; and his discourses may well be taken as models by those who are ambitious of the honore of public speaking. The occasions on which these addresses were delivered were indeed casual, but the ideas and the application are permanent, and intimately connected with our literature.

Our Lady Ports.—Mrs. Hemans is still residing in Dublin, occupied in the education of her sone; she will abortly publish a volume of sacréd poetry. Hannah Moore is still sive, but in a state that would render death a blessing: a memoir by a "constant friend," is already prepared. Miss Landon has been staying at Oxford on a visit to her uncle, the Head of Worcester College; a new movel from her pen is nearly finished. Miss Mittord sojourne at Three-mis a Cross; her tragedies laid by until a more fitting season. Mrs. Howitt, a member of the society of friends, who resides at Nottingham, has prepared a series of tragic dramas, with the highest moral tone. Of Mrs. Jonna Bailie the world heafs nothing; she resides at Highgate, in comparative solitude, but eajoying daily intercourse with a few choses friends. Miss Bowles is unhappily not in good health; she lives in Learnington, in Hampshire. Miss Jowbury (Mrs. Fletcher,) is on the wide sea with her husband, voyaging to India. Mrs. Norton is deserting the muses, for the Coart Magazine, and a novel which we believe will appear shortly. Mrs. Opie lately disposed of her house in Norwich, and is now residing in Cornwall. It is worthy of remark by the way, that in the list we have givon, there is no lady either Irish of Scotch and but one Welch—Mrs. Hemans.
