INTERMENTS IN THIS CITY: Oat. 11, Catholic Cemetery 10 Protestant Cem. 4 19, 13, No news by the three last mails.

A morning paper of Saturday states that we do not write all our editorials. We have before met this feolish charge and as we thought, demonstrated to it that it was necessar ry to show that its nominal editor had not recourse to the t entant others in filling his editorial column, before he made such an accountion. The maxim that those who live it see should not throw stones," is pecaliarly appliefore it is too late. We know of a goodly list of contribe tors whose abilities have served to make his regulation as a writer which we have once had decasion to expose to public awantion in soil defence. We do not wish to burt the emor srepre of any one, much less that of the gentleman to when we have allusion, and therefore desire to desist from its re miliation, and the fault, if any door. We again repeat that , and that we are responsible for

For example, we will take the requii the above ordinance, which is dictated on the recessity of preserving the public health, as evidence that matters that require even but little attention soldom or hardly ever put into force, and that if ins a dead letter among other statutes equally ficts. ted by reason and sound policy. If Mr. Prieur exercised the boasted surveillance over the city administration which his flatterers assert he does, would the commissary of the market, or may other officer, dare to neglect the aties imposed upon him by positive law? The matter is clear; the dread of incurring the displeasure of the mayor, and the fear of heine deprived of his office would induce him to be faithful in the discharge of his duties. The truth nothing is required, by Mr. Priesr, of those who are employed in the service of the city, but a fulliful attachment to his person and his interests, and a disposition to aid him in his apparently unconscious, he is to be seen for ers and hours at a time, at the exchange, or some other mable cast, with an air of impertable nonchal Paffed up by false notions, he seems to believe, that, like a crowned head, he can do no wrong, and that he can have popularity without the trouble and bother of strictly attending to the duties of his office. The opinion of a few partial friends must be sufficient to outweigh all the complaints, murmurings and dissatisfaction which is daily ared, or he could never appear so unmoved.

It has over and over been repeated that the re-election of Mr. Priour to the mayorality is an avidence of his popularity among our citizens. We think that that nce should be attributed to sectional interests rather than any popularity intrinsically possessed by Mr Prices and that even admitting it was owing exclusively to the latter circumstance, still the popularity he then enjoyed caunot be referred to the present period -It is well known that the opposition to Mr. Prieur. after some of the prominent acts of his administration were developed was highly respectable, and it is but reasonable to believe that it has since been increased by his manifes official rejeconduct, and his evident descrition from the party which he once professed to belong to.

The party to which Mr. Pricer has now attached himsel to, never can pessess the confidence of the people of this state. They are deemed to be in a minority always; the two just presidential elections should be conclusive evidence on the point,

Now his hackeliding and his incension with the revilers of president has become so plain, it cannot be possible he will get the same influence: No true Jackson man the found attended with Mr. Pricer's new friends.

The annonciation of Mr. Hollend as a candidate for the manufacture of president popular among our citizens. We accordly conversed with an individual who has not reased gratification at the announcement, and who has declared his intention to give it his hearty support.— It susmet be denied that at the last election for mayor most of the Jackson vates were dest for Mr. Pricar. Now that his backeliding and his constains with the revilers of the president has bestme so plain, it cannot be possible that he will get the same influence: No free Jacksonman will be found assessated with Mr. Prious's non friends.

The antiqueistion of Mr. Hellend as a candidate for the mayorality is decidedly popular among our citizens. We bot declared his intention to give it his hearty support.—

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

It is a fact cortainly pleasing to republicans, that nearly all the periodicals that now support the Gosseral Administration, see he favor of nominating candidates to be supported for the next Presidency and Vice-Presidency, throthe means of a National Convention. In our opinion, this fact rose to prove negatives that whetever medications in the second convention.

the means of a National Convention. In our opinion, the fact goes to prove positively, that whatever predilection any of us may have for men, we will be perfectly willing to give support to those gentlemen who may thus be brought flavard, through a National Convention by the people at larga. Who these candidates will be, cannot be forefold. Many distinguished individuals have already been named in various parts of the United States, who will be proud to submit their claims to a National Convention. There is one thing, however, that may be forefold, and that is, that whoever shall receive the nomination of the Convention, will be elected. There is but very little of the spirit of prophecy in the forefelling of this. The times themselves denote it.

We capy the following from the Richmond Enquirer:

We have seed an anendote stated by a gentleman in Washington, which we take the liberty ofgiting, in his own woods: "The dicesson and promptitude whe resident's character were never exhibited in a stronger manner than in relation to his proclamation. Mr. — was the first person who received, by later, one of the copies of the endinance. He brought it to me about 10 o'clock in the morning—and after reading it, I desired him to carry it to the president. He tight so—and after dinner I went to the president of the control of the control of the president. He tight so—and after dinner I went to the president's office. I found the eld chief with the Ordinance it fore him, and writing his proclamation as a rejoiner. He had written several sheets which he read to me. As far as he had then progressed, it was a strong and vigorous outline of the origin of the government—and I confess to you, I did not think that this part was much improved by subsequent refinements. It is remarkable, however, that he had resolved on his course on this highly critical occasion, without conjusting his cabinet or friends." The day may come, perhaps, when this original draft may see the light.

That our venerable president is anxious to support the in the service of the city, but a fulfaful attachment to research and his interests, and a disposition to aid him in his issue, is evidently manifested in the following correspondence—which accounts for the return of Mr. Leslies.
