Homecoming is as much fun for students as it is for alumni, and several student groups will be taking an active part in this year's Homecoming/Parents Weekend.

The RIT Pep Band will make its RIT campus debut before the Alumni Sports Forum on Friday in the gymnasium. The 19-member group, composed of both hearing and deaf students, plays music in a variety of styles.

On Saturday at 2:30 p.m., RIT's Jazz Ensemble will play in Ingle Auditorium prior to the Alumni Awards Ceremony. The Jazz Ensemble, offering a fusion of traditional jazz, rock and Latin music, has been active on campus for more than four years. Some of the current 24 members of the ensemble also play in the Pep Band.

The Rochester Institute of Technology International Student Association (RITISA) is offering specially priced tickets to international students for the International Buffet. The International Buffet, at 6 p.m. on Saturday in the union cafeteria, will feature foods from many different countries and cultures. The grand finale will be a six-tiered all-American chocolate cake.

The Greek organizations will host open houses on Friday evening from 6 to 8 p.m. for returning alums. Each house will serve refreshments and will have its own theme for the receptions.

Students active in the athletic department will be involved with the many athletic events scheduled on Saturday. Open to students, parents, faculty, staff and alums are a threemile run at 10 a.m., a horseshoe tournament at 10:30 a.m. and a six-mile run at 4 p.m. Trophies will be awarded in all three events.

The afternoon's main event is the soccer game against St. John Fisher at 1 p.m. on the main athletic field. Sparking the Tigers will be RIT's Pep Band, which will play before and during the game.

Tickets for other Homecoming events, including the Maynard Ferguson concert at 8:30 p.m., Saturday, are on sale in the union lobby and candy counter.

Horton Stamps Albers' Ceremony

In a special ceremony last week in the lobby of the George Eastman Memorial Building, U.S. Representative Frank Horton presented RIT with a first-day cover of the U.S. Department of Education's "Learning Never Ends" stamp and an accompanying poster.

The stamp features a Josef Albers' "Homage to the Square." RIT has the only Albers' wall murals of the "Homage to the Square" in existence.

Congressman Horton was welcomed to RIT by President Rose and Jack Smith, associate vice president, Institutional Advancement.

Horton, a long-time friend of the Institute, presented the stamp and poster to Dr. Paul Bernstein, dean of Graduate Studies, on behalf of the Institute. Bernstein spoke briefly on the symbolic connections in Albers' works, the stamp's slogan, and RIT's commitment to a lifetime of learning. He then turned the stamp and poster over to Gladys Taylor, archives librarian.

'New' School in Business

The School of Food, Hotel and Tourism Management will make its official debut during Homecoming at the annual alumni luncheon. The elevation of the department to "school" status was announced this week by Walter McCanna, dean of the College of Business.

"It's a matter of clarity," explained McCanna. "The 'school' designation allows the program more autonomy within the College of Business and more recognition from the hospitality industry."

When George Alley took over as director of the Dept. of Food Administration in 1973, the department had just 85 students and two full-time instructors. "We now have 425 students and degrees in food administration, hotel and tourism management, and dietetics and nutritional care, and a travel management option is planned for next September," said Alley. "We're listed as one of the top six programs in the country by most industry experts."

He believes that "two of the biggest things going for the program now are the quality of the co-op program and the alumni." The cooperative education program has shown dynamic growth, and many students now travel throughout the country in management level positions in resorts, restaurants and major hotels.

"We recently established a new cooperative education placement with the management training program of Red Lobster and also have a new scholarship from the Marriott Corp.," added Alley.

Last spring, students in the program placed first in a national commercial recipe development competition sponsored by R.T. French Co. They also achieved first place in the menu competition at the National Restaurant Association Show in Chicago.

Memorial Service

The College of Business will honor the late professor Raymond F. Von Deben in a memorial service, Tuesday, Oct. 21. The 1 p.m. service will be held in Ingle Auditorium in the College-Alumni Union.

Von Deben died suddenly Sept. 17 of a heart attack. A faculty member since 1949, Von Deben had served as assistant dean in charge of all student services since 1970.

NEWS & NEWSMAKERS

Dr. Y. Stephen Yamamoto, coordinator of Experiential Learning and associate professor of Chemistry, recently delivered a lecture to the Chemistry Department at Eastern Michigan University on "Communicating Chemistry through Cooperative Education." He also met with the staff in their Cooperative Education Department and consulted with them on their recently initiated co-op program.

Dr. Patricia Clark, visiting assistant professor in the College of Science, is this year's chairperson of the Mathematics Colloquium Series, which began Sept. 24 with a lecture on neutron stars by Dr. Hugh M. Van Horn, chairman of the Department of Physics and Astronomy, University of Rochester.

Lois Goodman, head of Public Services of Wallace Memorial Library, recently addressed the Upstate New York and Ontario Regional Group of the Medical Library Association. Her talk, "Selling Hi Tech to Humanity," was a guide to using media resources for library public relations.

A paper titled "Microprocessor Based Adaptive Posicast System," by Kenneth Arnold (General Electric, Schenectady), David Barone (AAI Corporation, Baltimore), and Dr. R. Unnikrishnan (Electrical Engineering Department, RIT) was presented at the First Annual Small Systems Conference, Oct. 9-10, at the University of Evansville, Evansville, Ind. Arnold and Barone are 1980 June graduates in Electrical Engineering from RIT, and the research work for the paper was done while they were students here.

Green Thumbs' Last Chance

Faculty, staff, students and their families are invited to the Annual Fall Planting Festival on campus Saturday, Oct. 25. Ten thousand bulbs will be transformed, come spring, into the crocuses, hyacinths, daffodils and tulips that brighten the eye and lift our winter-blighted spirits! Mid-morning coffee and doughnuts and lunch will be provided. Complete details will be provided next week, but save Oct. 25 and get some fresh air, exercise and a sense of accomplishment!

Reedy Lecture: Views of Photojournalism

Next Thursday, photojournalists John Chao and Richard C. Clarkson will present their views of photojournalism at the William A. Reedy Memorial Lecture in Photography. The lecture, at 7:30 p.m. in the NTID Theatre, is free.

Clarkson, an award-winning photojournalist, will investigate the criticism that photojournalism merely repeats itself and that no "new" pictures remain to be taken.

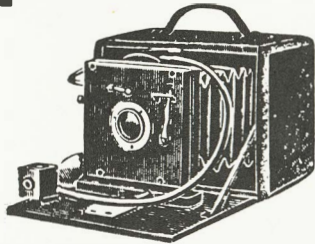

In his overview, he will also discuss the varieties and artistic merits of photojournalism, the effect of some rather startling changes he feels will inevitably lead to electronic rather than silver images, and what directions young photographers should take.

Chao will follow Clarkson's presentation with a personal view of the field.

This classic pose from the Democratic National Convention, which appeared on page one of the New York Times, was photographed by one of the October Reedy lecturers, John Chao. Says Chao, "I like to shoot things I'm not in control of; I learn about people that way. The camera takes a slice out of life and you see things that you're not aware of generally."

Commemorative Film

The School of Photographic Arts and Sciences has made a film commemorating its 50th Anniversary. Entitled "The First 50," the film was produced by Erik Timmerman, an assistant professor in the school; directed by David Carnochan, a photography graduate student; and scripted by Sam Abrams, visiting assistant professor in the College of General Studies.

The film documents the past, present, and future of the school and will be screened at the opening reception of the school's 50th anniversary faculty show, Oct. 17, 9:30 p.m. in Webb Auditorium. A reception for the show and film will run from 8 to 10 p.m. in Bevier Gallery.

The film is tentatively scheduled for showing at the annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers to be held this November in New York City.

HEOP Anniversary Events

RIT's Higher Education Opportunity Program (HEOP) will host a professional conference for 10 western New York colleges, Oct. 23, as part of its three-day 10th anniversary celebration. The day-long series of workshops will concentrate on strategies for operating more effective programs for disadvantaged students.

Represented will be: Niagara University, Canisius College, Daemon College, Medaille College, Nazareth College, St. John Fisher College, the University of Rochester and the Consortium of Niagara Frontier. RIT's Eisenhower campus HEOP staff will also participate.

That evening, HEOP will sponsor a free symposium at 7 p.m. in Webb Auditorium, "Is Educational Opportunity Enough?" Dr. Katherine Webb, former professor of education and current New York State Commissioner of Corrections, will lead the discussion. A panel of community experts will also share comments: Dr. John Walker, Office of Black Ministries; Jeanette Morales, Ibero-American League, Inc.; Paul Brule, instructor in RIT's Criminal Justice Department; and Warren Crichlow, assistant director of RIT's HEOP. The symposium is open to the public.

Friday night HEOP celebrates with the award-winning stage production of "Black Images/Black Reflections." The Howard University Theatre Company will present its drama in the NTID Theatre, Oct. 24, at 7 p.m. Tickets are $2. Everyone is welcome.

RIT officials, faculty and staff are also encouraged to show their support of HEOP at the President's Unity Banquet, sponsored by President Rose, Saturday, Oct. 25.

Prominent community supporters of HEOP will also attend. Keynote speaker for the banquet is Arthur Eve, highest ranking Black official in the state legislature and recent candidate for the mayor's seat in Buffalo.

The banquet will be held at 6 p.m. in NTID's Hettie L. Shumway Dining Commons. Tickets are $7. Call HEOP (ext. 2221) for reservations.

General Studies Curriculum Changes Proposed

More than 300 copies of a proposal to change the General Studies curriculum are circulating on campus, according to Dean Mary Sullivan. The result of two years of study and evaluation by the General Education Models Task Force, the curriculum proposal is undergoing a comprehensive review within the Institute.

The proposal was developed by the task force in conjunction with the faculty of the College of General Studies. In addition, the task force met with the president, the vice president for Academic Affairs, all academic deans, some faculty of RIT colleges and outside consultants and surveyed a sampling of students and alumni.

The result is a proposal that would bring the General Studies curriculum into closer harmony with the goals of the college and the Institute and would strengthen the education of RIT students in the liberal arts in accord with the standards for baccalaureate and associate degrees as outlined by the N.Y. State Board of Regents.

"I think the proposal can accomplish changes that have been needed for some time," commented Dr. Roy Satre, vice president for Academic Affairs, "and I commend the General Studies faculty, the dean and their consultant, Dr. Francis Broderick, for the formulation of this proposal. It sets a high standard for the Institute."

RTS Adds Bus

In an effort to ease the campus parking situation, RIT has requested and received an extra bus run from Regional Transit Service, Inc. The new RTS bus will leave the administration loop at 4:10 p.m. each weekday, bound for downtown Rochester. This is in addition to the regular 4:30 p.m. bus.

The new bus is being added also because of the volume of use the 4:35 bus receives. "We want the faculty, staff and students to know there is transportation available if they don't want to drive to and from work or school," said H. Donald Scott, assistant vice president for Finance and Administration.

Under the proposed curriculum the number of required introductory areas of study will increase from six to seven: English Composition plus the core curriculum containing three required courses in the humanities, one distribution requirement in the humanities and two distribution requirements in the social sciences. In the upper division, the current six electives would be replaced by the requirement of a concentration of three courses and the required Senior Seminar and Project, leaving the student with three electives.

"This proposal does not seek to be the ultimate curriculum for the liberal education of RIT students," said Dean Mary Sullivan, "but rather will provide a structure to serve the evolving needs of our students. Major goals of the proposal are to achieve greater coherence in the core curriculum, to convey to students the importance and relevance of the Western Heritage, and, through the Senior Seminar and Project, to aid students in understanding the relevance of liberal education to their professional careers."

While the goal of the task force is the implementation of a revised curriculum for incoming freshmen next fall, Dean Sullivan pointed out that there are numerous reviews ahead before implementation, including evaluations and decisions by the General Studies faculty, the Deans' Committee, the InterCollege Curriculum Committee and the Policy Council.

Those members of the General Studies faculty who have served on the General Education Models Task Force with Dean Sullivan are: Associate Dean Dane Gordon, Acting Associate Dean Robert Golden, Brian Barry, Kathleen Chen, Joanne Jacobs, Michael Vernarelli, Edwin Hennick, Glenn Kist, John White, Stanley McKenzie, Lakshmi Mani, Thomas O'Brien and James Philbin.

Getting a firsthand look at what goes on at a radio station are Cub Scouts from Pack 294 in Pittsford. The group of eight- and nine-year-olds toured WTR-FM and learned how staff members put programs on the air. One of the Cub Scouts read part of the news on the air, to the delight of his fellow scouts.

TO: ALL STAFF

The Personnel Office will be closed on Oct. 21 and 22. The entire staff will be attending a workshop off campus on these two days. There will be someone available to take messages at ext. 2424 should any problems arise. We hope this closing does not cause any inconveniences.

Scholarship Winners Announced

Three science students have been awarded a $400 John Wiley Jones Symposium Outstanding Student Scholarship.

Ira Hoffman, a fifth-year physics major; Mary Manton, a fourth year biology major; and Martin Schad, a fifth-year chemistry major received their award at a dinner following the annual John Wiley Jones lecture last Tuesday.

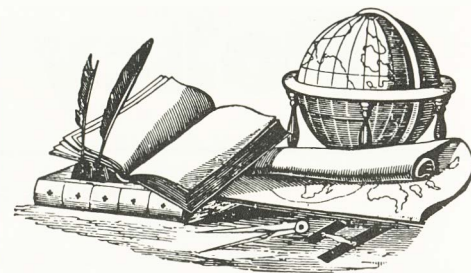

The annual symposium and student awards are funded through a gift of Jones Chemicals Inc. to RIT's 150th Anniversary Campaign.

Hoffman has been a National Merit Scholar and New York State Regents Scholar, and participated in RIT's Outstanding Freshman Award Competition in 1976. He is a member of the Society of Physics and works with RIT's admissions and alumni relations offices in contacting prospective students.

Manton is also a New York State Scholar. She won a 1977 RIT Outstanding Freshman Scholarship Award and has been on the dean's list every quarter with a 3.99 grade point average out of a possible 4.0. In 1978 she received a Phi Kappa Phi Scholastic Achievement Certificate. Manton is active in the Biology Club, the campus church music group and the intramural volleyball team. She volunteers at Strong Memorial Hospital, and takes sign language classes and is a tutor/notetaker for hearing-impaired science students.

Schad won the American Chemical Society Analytical Chemistry Award in 1977 and 1979. He is an avid reader who enjoys bicycling, hockey and racquetball.

What's Meant By Mentor

Mentoring and networking are terms often bandied about these days. To explain just what those terms mean, and how they affect us, Joyce Herman, counselor (assistant professor) in RIT's Counseling Center, will present "Mentoring" at an open meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 21. The meeting will be held in the 1829 Room, College-Alumni Union, from noon to 1:30 p.m.

Do you every wonder:

- *what kinds of services mentors/supporters perform for others?
- *what's in it for the mentor who helps a protegee? what benefits the organization receives from mentoring?
- *what potential mentors, potential proteges and the organization itself can do to increase the possibility of people developing supportive relationships?
- *what the potential pitfalls for mentors and proteges are (Mary Cunningham of the Bendix Corp. is a case in point)?
- *what the specific challenges and issues are for women as the proteges of men and as mentors for other women?

Herman will present information on these topics based on her own research and search of available literature. For those who can stay, she will lead a discussion following her presentation.

Using these same materials, Herman recently delivered the keynote address at a joint meeting in Albany, sponsored by the American Council on Education, the National Identification Program for Women in Higher Education and Cornell's Institute for Education and Research on Women and Work. Conference participants included 50 of the top-ranking women in New York State government and 50 of the top-ranking women in New York State higher education.

All faculty and staff are welcome to attend. There is no charge for the session, which is sponsored by the RIT Women's Concerns Group.

Support Asked for Fast Day

On Oct. 23, the Human Development Committee of RIT's Catholic Campus Parish will sponsor a Fast Day for world hunger. The student committee is asking faculty, staff and students for both monetary and sympathetic support.

"Approximately 15 to 20 million people die each year as a result of inequitable distribution of food on this earth," says Mary T. Newell, a second-year student and committee member.

Food Services has agreed to donate $.75 per meal given up by resident students. This figure is Food Services's actual cost for food minus such fixed costs as labor, utilities and rent. This means approximately half of each student's expense per meal will be donated to the World Hunger campaign.

The Residence Halls Association will sponsor a contest with cash prizes for dorm floors with the greatest percentage of students participating in the fast.

To balance the responsibility that Food Services has assumed, Newell hopes that everyone on campus will participate in the fast by heightening their awareness of what they eat and what they waste.

Commuters, faculty and staff may make financial contributions at the donation table in the College-Alumni Union or through the Department of Campus Ministry.

Proceeds of Fast Day will be contributed to Melita House, a Rochester home for pregnant women, and to Oxfam-America's current project of helping Nicaragua rebuild its country destroyed by recent internal conflict. Oxfam is an international organization which sponsors a worldwide fast day in November.

Programming Lecture

"Computer Programming and the Human Thought Process" is the title of a special lecture at 10 a.m., Wednesday, Oct. 22. Visiting professor William J. Tracz will deliver the lecture in the on-line laboratory in the Ross Memorial Building. Tracz is a staff programmer at IBM's Federal Systems Division in Owego, N.Y. The lecture will explore the human limitations that affect the writing of good computer programs, according to Jack Hollingsworth, director of the School of Computer Science and Technology.

PROFILE

Travis and Co-op: Students Are 'Fantastic' Goodwill Ambassadors

There is an oak tree on a hillside overlooking the southern tier community of Canisteo. For the past 50 years a set of initials and the date have been religiously carved in that tree each year. Those initials belong to Arden Travis, director of Experiential Learning for the College of Business.

"It became a yearly event that I looked forward to and kept up, even while in the navy," says Travis. This past spring, he made the trek with family and friends to observe the half-century mark.

It's been only half that long since he joined RIT, teaching marketing in the College of Business. Currently Travis coordinates many of the cooperative education placements in business for the Career Education Department.

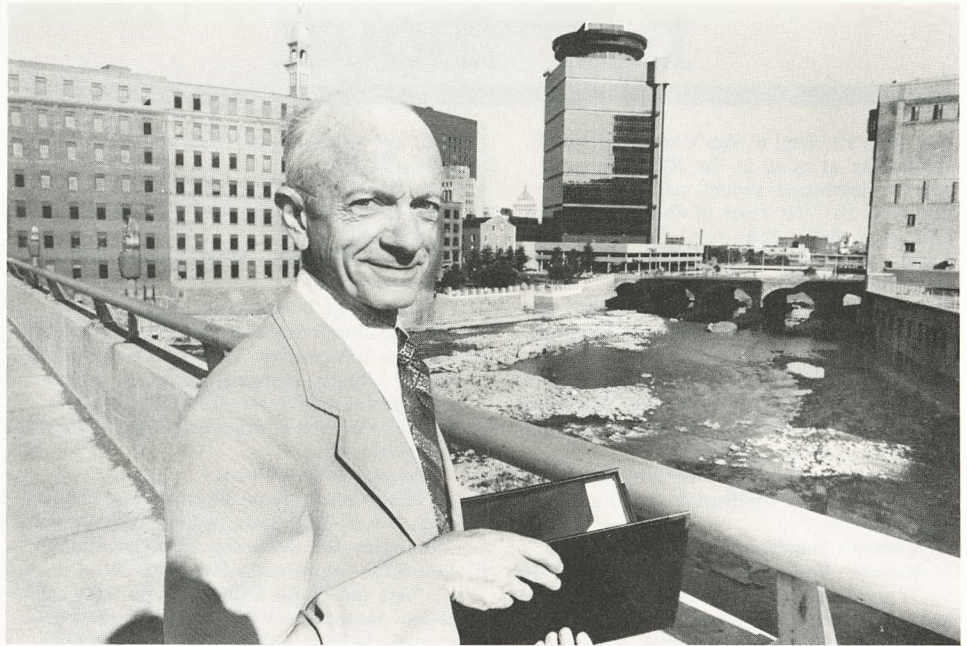

"The biggest part of the job, and probably the part I enjoy most, is working with students," he says. But Travis also spends a great deal of time lining up those openings with businesses from throughout the northeast and farther. In fact, one of his latest projects may lead to co-op positions in London.

He may be one of the few people who really misses the old downtown campus. "I could call on our co-op students by just walking through downtown—it was very handy," he explains.

RIT's experiential learning program is one of the oldest and largest in the country. But every department has to grow, and Travis remembers an earlier time: "When I first got here, it was a relatively small program, but RIT in general and co-op in particular have just grown tremendously."

According to Travis, one of the significant results of that growth has been visibility. "We have nearly 2,500 students out on co-op at any one time, and that is a fantastic group of goodwill ambassadors spread throughout the country," he explains.

One of the changes for which Travis and the other members of Career Education have worked hard is student placement in roles other than training positions. Students now play major roles while on co-op assignments, jobs such as assistant buyer in a major retail outlet or processing and reviewing Farmers Home Administration loans and projects.

Students are required to write a report about their co-op experiences, but Travis says he doesn't want a job description. "I'm not so interested in what you saw or did, I want to know what you learned by everything that hit you, what attitudes you developed from all that input." And he adds, "My concern is what is the student experiencing in a new atmosphere."

His 26 years at RIT are not taken lightly by other professionals in the career education field. Travis is president-elect of the New York State Cooperative/Experiential Education Association (NYSCEEA). The state group has been working at standardizing experiential learning programs since 1913 to create a long-term, viable program. In fact, Travis and Mary Dean Gridley of Career Education are coordinating and moderating this year's state convention.

"American Leaders in Cooperative Education: An Oral History" is a major project that bears the Arden Travis initials. Travis has been compiling the material for several years for the NYSCEEA. He is also a charter member of the Cooperative Education Association.

On the personal side of the ledger, Travis has always been one for adventure. "While in the navy during World War II, I traveled the island of Sicily by rail and even spent some time touring in an ox-cart," he laughs. And he believes most of the fun and excitement in life come from the willingness to explore.

Travis continues to explore figuratively; he's a long-time cub-scout leader and is very active in church and Little League. He and his wife Jean live in Spencerport, where he also finds time for a little woodworking and piano playing.

New RIT Ties Catch All Eyes

Do you ever wonder why people don't look you in the eye these days? It's because of those eye-catching new RIT ties you wear: the navy one you bought at Homecoming; the brown one that the folks in the office gave you to wear to that convention; and the maroon one that your wife always borrows. The next time someone is avoiding eye contact, casually toss into the conversation, "The RIT Bookstore, naturally, and only $8.50 in a gift box."
