When it is considered how much of a man's time is taken up with the arduous duties of life, it is not surprising that he finds recreation in breeding superior horses. Such I presume is the recreation which Mr. Knight enjoys. The history of Marysville in a great measure is this pioneer's history. He arrived there in the early days. In 1858 he built the gas works. From that time on till now at seventy-four years of age he has been a leader in all the principal enterprises in the City. The Woolen Mills, which burned to the ground in March last, was one of the enterprises which he established, and of which he was president and manager. It was built by him in 1867, and under his supervision the concern was the only one of the kind in California which was successful. It paid nine dividends of eighteen per cent. in succession, or $105,000 on the original capital of $75,000 besides adding $125,000 to capital account making the latter $200,000 at the time of the fire. It was a seven-set mill employing over one hundred hands. The other enterprises which he either owns or controls are: the Marysville Electric Light Company; the Yuba City Street Railway Company; the Marysville Laundry Company; the Evening Democrat; Director and Stockholder of Empire Foundry Company and Machine Works; the Decker, Jewett & Co. Bank, and minor institutions; the Race Track of sixty acres, and several farms of alfalfa, etc. He is also Levee Commissioner, which he has held for many years. Since '52, when he arrived in California, he has earned what he possesses by honest dealing, hard work and an enterprising public spirit, and the prosperity of the clean and go-ahead City of Marysville is in no small measure due to his astuteness.

OAKWOOD PARK.

AN IDEAL CALIFORNIA STOCK FARM.

It is universally acknowledged by those who have visited the most prominent stock farms in the United States, that none can compare with the Oakwood Park stock farm, which is so pleasantly situated at the foot of Mt. Diablo. From the moment the visitor leaves the narrow defile in the foothills (about two miles from Danville), and gets a glimpse of the beautiful driveway, shaded by rows of massive oak trees which extend from the race track to the head of the valley, there is but one word which expresses its praise, and that is "beautiful." The park-like driveways and rustic bridges which cross the creeks on both sides of the valley, losing themselves in a labyrinth of trees and vines, add to the rural charm, and contrast most vividly with the modern-built residence and buildings which beautify the grounds. On every prominent hill between the base of the mountain and the valley are immense barns stored with hundreds of tons of hay for the cattle and horses during the winter. Stacks of hay and grain, ready to be stored, dot every level place on the farm. The paddocks and quarter section fields furnish feed for some of the greatest trotting-bred matrons on this Coast, while herds of pedigreed Durhams and Devons seem to be enjoying their ease in the feed beneath the oaks and sycamores. From the adjacent hills the scene is unsurpassed. Towards the north, the residence, carriage houses, granaries and other buildings, which are painted white (their gabled roofs being of a bright red color), present a very pleasing effect, almost surrounded as they are by the heavy foliage of trees and vines.

The gardens, lawn and conservatories are almost hidden from view by this heavy growth, while the orchard, which extends from the main driveway across the valley and up their veins. His dam Abbess was one of the greatest brood mares recorded, and her daughter Soprano (full sister to Steinway) was the dam of the racehorse C. F. Clay, 2:18, that sired the great pacers, Coleridge, 2:05½; Choral, 2:08; Cling, 2:11½; Connor, 2:11½; Claybourne, 2:11½; Lee, 2:12; and forty-one other fast performers. Soprano was also the dam of Ambyron, 2:18½; Eminence, 2:18½; Strathbridge, 2:28, and Vidette (dam of Stoner Boy, 2:26½). When we see what Steinway has sired, and then see what his sire Strathmore and his dam Abbess have contributed to swell the list of famous campaigners, it is useless to look for any weak places in the progeny of the "Hero of Oakwood Park Farm." Klatawah, 2:05½; W. Wood, 2:07; Agitato, 2:09; Cricket, 2:10; Sylvanway, 2:10½; Free Coinage, 2:11½; and Chas. Derby, 2:20, were all champions in their day, and with very limited opportunities twenty-four others obtained low records. But his sons and daughters are carrying on the good work. Chas. Derby, 2:20, is a very young horse to have such champions to his credit as Much Better, 2:07½; Diablo, 2:09½—both four year olds, besides Jay-Eff-Bee, 2:26½, as a yearling, and Derby Princess, 2:08½; Derby Lass, 2:11½; Owyhee, 2:11; Cibolo, 2:13½; Flare Up, 2:14; Ed. Lafferty, 2:16½; Dolly Machutz, 2:19½. Every one of his progeny that have been trained being inside the 2:20 list, three in the 2:10 list, and seven in the 2:15 list.

Chas. Derby is acknowledged to be the handsomest stallion in California, and when he raced, he was the gamest; this latter qualification he honestly inherited. Chas. Derby got his record of 2:20 in the sixth heat of one of the hardest fought races ever witnessed. The late B. C. Holly drove him on that occasion, and until the day of his death claimed that if Derby had been handled right, at first, he would be one of the fastest horses ever bred.

Let us look at this horse's breeding. We know he had a great sire, but what about his dam? Katy G. by Electioneer; second dam, Fanny Malone (grandam of Maud C., 2:14½) by Niagara, a trotting horse that was said to be by Mambrino Chief 11; third dam, Fanny Wickham, a great twenty-mile trotter by imported Herald; fourth dam by that good old thoroughbred imported Trustee, whose blood should, without exception, be most valuable. Steinette, one of them, is the dam of Feliciana, 2:15; Bourbon Russell, 2:30 (sire of Mary Russell, 2:09½); Baron de Stein (sire of Henry Barrett, 2:10½); and Baronstein (sire of two in 2:30). Mr. Boyd has bred many of his Steinway mares to such horses as Directum, 2:05½; McKinney, 2:11, and Jas. Madison, 2:17½, and El Benton, 2:23½ (a son of Electioneer), and the produce is fully up to the estimation of all horsemen who have seen them. Owing to the fact that all the two year olds were sold in the East last season, it was deemed advisable not to prepare those remaining on the farm for the California circuit of 1899, although we notice that he has made entries at a number of meetings in order to "help the cause along."

The two and three year olds that were handled a little this spring included brothers and sisters to Agitato, 2:09½; Derby Lass, 2:11½; Owyhee, 2:11; Algregor, 2:11; Diablo, 2:09½; Derby Princess, 2:08½, have all been turned out, and, in their places in the box stalls, Ben Chaboya showed us the following lot of yearlings and two year olds, which are receiving their first lessons in the way to go:

A colt by Chas. Derby, 2:20, out of Allie Sloper, 2:28. This is a two year old trotter.

A yearling by Don L. (son of Fieldmont) dam Economy, 2:30 (dam of Extravagant, 2:28½), by Echo. This is a handsome fellow and every inch a trotter.

El Benton, 2:23½ (sire of Nellie Emmett, 2:21½) has a few representatives here, the one out of Chittywee, by Chas. Derby, is a heavy limbed, well-bred youngster, that seems happy when standing besides his neighbor, another El Benton out of Muriel Wiley, by Steinway. Both are yearling trotters.

One that we know will be a second Searchlight is in the next stall, a black colt by Steinway out of Lunado, by Electioneer, consequently a brother to the great three year old Sylvanway, 2:10½.

There are colts and fillies here out of mares by Mambrino Boy, Yosemite, Director, Del Sur, Administrator, Chas. Derby, Red Wilkes, Electioneer and Guy Wilkes that are so good it would be difficult to select the best ones. When from two hundred it becomes necessary to select a few that should be trained a task is imposed that would tax the patience and judgment of any horsemen. These colts will all be prepared for the circuit next season, and nearly all are entered in California and Eastern stakes.

During the past five years considerable attention has been paid to the breeding, developing and training of horses for park use. The cross of Cleveland Boy, thoroughbred and trotting stock has been a success, and as fast as a team is ready it finds plenty of buyers. There is a large number of roadsters here, also, which are sold every month, and many of the best horses driven in Golden Gate Park first saw the light on this farm. Notwithstanding the "hard times," Mr. Boyd has continued to keep his horses up to the high standard of excellence established when the breeding on this farm began. His superintendent, Fred Booth, is a student of blood lines and is up to date in all matters pertaining to the business. That the work which has been so well founded will continue, and that the name, as well as the fame of this place will always be heralded everywhere, is the wish of everyone who has visited the farm or interviewed its genial owner.

WM. G. LAYNE.

A Scarcity of Stallions.

From all that can be learned just now, there is every prospect that the supply of breeding horses will be very short next season. Last spring a large number of well off farmers and others interested decided to purchase stallions to stand for public service in the vicinities of their homes, but refrained from so doing when they found that they could not for a few hundred dollars pick up a good horse such as had been going begging in the dark days of the dull times. Finding that for such a horse as they wanted they would have to pay from a thousand dollars upwards, these intending purchasers went home, having decided to wait for another spring and then they could buy at a lower price. It was the general impression that the spurt values had taken would induce so many men to go to Europe to import stallions that in 1900 the supply would be far greater than the demand, prices, accordingly, being much lower. Alas, for such carefully laid plans. The importation of stallions this year has been disappointingly small. Those who went to France found that the supply was so light and prices so very high that it was impossible to get together any sort of a large lot with the prospect of making even a fair profit on them. The Oaklewn importation, which consisted of seventy head, was fully fifty short of what it was intended to buy when Mr. Fletcher left for France. So with other importers of French horses. With those interested in British horses it was even worse. The prices paid for good geldings have risen so much of late years in Britain that the knife has been very freely used, with the inevitable result that only the tops were kept entire. There is a shortage of horses in Britain and a good demand for all high class stallions. This point the good ones away up above the point at which they could be imported safely, hence only a very few have been brought over. One would-be importer priced a good looking, ton weight, four-year-old horse, owned by a prominent English breeder of Shires. This was a whole colored brown horse of weight, quality and symmetry, and a prizetaker at one of the important shows of England. The importer was fairly staggered when the owner asked him twelve hundred guineas—six thousand dollars—and decided there and then to charge the expenses of his trip up to health account and let it go at that. Another gentleman tells us that one hundred and twenty pounds was the very lowest price asked him for horses it would have paid him to import and that nothing big, sound and right could be bought for any less price, while the most he got values on were higher. This has restricted importation very seriously, and the result is that there must be a scarcity of stallions next spring—not enough of them in the country to go around. Those who have to buy would best do so soon.—Chicago Horseman.

CRESCENT 2:07½ has suddenly become an interesting horse to the owners of the other fast trotting stallions. Only three other trotting stallions hold faster records than he now has.

SABIN HARRIS, one of California's old time horsemen, who resided in Oakland for twenty-five years, died in the Klondike region last month, where despite his eighty years he had gone to seek a fortune.

CHARLES DERBY, 2:20.

to the line of chepparel which continues to the top of Mt. Diablo, is noted for the quantity, excellence and variety of the fruit produced. Apples, olives, pears, oranges, peaches, plums, apricots, etc., are to be found in profusion, and this year the entire crop of pears has been purchased for shipment to England. On the opposite side of the valley the hills are reserved for pasturage, and every little "bench" in the valleys between them has its crop of alfalfa, wheat and barley hay. Over four tons to the acre have been cut this season in these hay fields, and no better quality can be found anywhere. Oak trees thrive on all the hills and furnish shelter for the herds that seek the shade.

When it is considered that this farm includes 6,000 acres, divided and sub-divided into large fields and paddocks, and that over $600,000 has been expended in beautifying it, a person can form a faint idea of its present value. The water supply is furnished by numerous springs which arise thousands of feet above the valley. The water is carried in six inch pipes to a large reservoir which has a capacity of 30,000,000 gallons, and from here it is piped to the farthest portions of the farm. The reservoir has been stocked with black bass, and Mr. Boyd anticipates having a rare treat for his guests two years hence.

The State Fair number of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN would not be complete without a sketch of the horses that have made this farm a household word throughout America. Among the first horses purchased to form the nucleus of the grand array of trotters and pacers here, was the bay horse Steinway, who, at that time, held the world's record for three year olds, 2:25½. He was foaled in 1876, and although nearly twenty-four years of age is remarkably vigorous. The only sign of old age is his swayed back. He walks as gamely as ever, and in his large five-acre paddock is taking all the comfort which his owner can give him. Steinway is the sire of champions, and many horsemen who have never given the subject of his breeding a thought will, no doubt, be surprised to learn that he had but one cross to Hambletonian 10, and consequently was an outcross to all mares having the blood of Cassius M. Clay in has fortified that of many colder strains in the pedigrees of some of the greatest trotters on the turf; then on to imported Aldeman, through such crosses as Imp, Barefoot, Sir Archy and Florizel—the blood lines of Old Boston. Katy G. is one of the greatest, if not the greatest, daughter of Electioneer. She is the dam of Klatawah (champion three year old), 2:05½; Chas. Derby, 2:20; H. K. Covey, 2:25; Sunlight, 2:25, and Steiner, 2:29½—Warner Wiley, another son, trotted in 2:31, and a brother to Chas. Derby will be as fast, if not faster, than any of her other descendants. With such connections is it any wonder that the Derbys are first class in every respect? Color, disposition, size, conformation, style, speed and gameness are all embodied in his descendants.

Chas. Derby has had but one son placed in the breeding ranks, and the records for 1899 show that he leads all stallions in the United States so far this season. The horse was bred here and is named Diablo; his record is 2:09½, won in the fourth heat. He is the sire of Clipper, 2:09½; Daedalion, 2:11; Hijo del Diablo, 2:11½; Diawood, 2:14½; Inferno, 2:15; El Diablo, 2:16½; Gaff Topsail, 2:17½; N. L. B. (2), 2:21½; Rey del Diablo (2), 2:23½, and Elsie (st b), 2:26.

The broodmares on this farm are unexcelled, in proportion to their numbers, on any farm in California. Their breeding is unsurpassed, combining as it does the most fashionable strains in the East with that of the West, and so handsome and promising have been the descendants that many have been purchased for use exclusively on the road and in the harem. A hasty glance in the paddocks reveals the presence of Katie G. (dam of five), by Electioneer; Bertha (dam of four), by Alcantara; Flash (dam of four), by Egmont; Calypso, by Steinway; Inex, by Sweepstakes; Algerditta, by Allendorf; Addie Ash, by Indianapolis; Maggie McGregor, by Robt. McGregor; Princess, by Administrator; Steinola, by Steinway—all in the great broodmare table, and nearly all the other mares have representatives in the 2:30 list or have earned records on the California racetracks. The daughters of Steinway

IRRIGATION AND ENTERPRISE AND THE RESULTS THEREFROM.

What is the largest enterprise in California? Where is the greatest irrigated farm in the world? And where is the place where the most light and heavy harness horses are bred and raised in California? There is but one answer to these questions and that is: The Kern County Land Company's farm near Bakersfield. Here is an almost level body of land comprising over 300,000 acres, through which a canal 50 feet wide on top and 20 on the bottom and 50 miles in length has been made and from it other canals or ditches are connected in which water is carried for irrigation purposes. The company owns and controls a total water appropriation of 489,900 miners' inches, or 8,198 cubic feet, so that its water supply is more than ample for the irrigation of its fertile lands. Over $4,000,000 have been expended on this system of irrigation and the results attest the far-seeing policy and confidence the owners, the late Lloyd Tevis, and J. B. Haggin of San Francisco, had in the future of this immense tract of land.

The desert has been made to blossom and the emerald green of the alfalfa fields has replaced the yellow aspect of the sands and the grayish green of the sage bushes, which grew so sparsely on this barren waste. Through the

and the south fork at the base of another peak in the same range. These streams join forces near the eastern line of Kern county, and together they drain a catchment area of 3,445 square miles. The precipitation, largely in the shape of snow, amounts to one hundred inches a year in a portion of this area. The 300,000 acres in this farm is so situated, topographically, that they are irrigated without raising the river above its natural level by the construction of dams, and it is claimed that 600,000 acres may be covered at the point where the first water is taken out. The whole irrigation system consists of over 300 miles of main canals and 1,100 miles of large laterals, and is so constructed that the visitor is at once lost in admiration of its simplicity and completeness. There are twenty-seven canals in all; the largest is the Calloway, which is one of the famous canals of the west. The diversion weir is 400 feet long, constructed entirely of wood upon a foundation of anchor piles driven deep into the sand, sheet pilings of two inch plank are placed on the upper and lower sides of the structure and this weir has stood all the high floods of the past eighteen years without damage. The Calloway is eighty feet on the bottom, 120 feet on top, has banks seven feet high and usually flows six feet of water over a grade of eight-tenths of a foot to the mile. This canal alone waters 200,000 acres and sixty-five large distributaries are taken from it. The other important canal is the one which flows through the thriving city of Bakersfield. It is forty-eight feet wide and has a drop of twenty feet in the city. Artesian wells are to in alfalfa. As a matter of fact alfalfa pays a net profit of $25.00 per ton when cultivated in this way.

With this immense crop of alfalfa the readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will wonder where the market for its sale is; but the company does not need a market. It is feeding between 20,000 and 45,000 head of cattle, 10,000 head of sheep and over 4,000 head of hogs, besides thousands of hogs.

There is so much to be seen on this immense farm that one feels lost in the wilderness of resources which surrounds us on every side. The colonization of a portion of this farm by purchasers from the east who have made beautiful homes here is in itself worthy an article, but, as space is limited, we can only incidentally refer to it.

An experimental farm having a famous scientific and practical farmer to superintend it was started years ago and the marvelous results which followed have encouraged the owners to start four others, and at these places every kind of vegetable, tree, fruit, vine and flower that could be thought of, is cultivated in order to determine its value. The work is progressing most favorably at these farms and it is a difficult matter to find anything that thrives in the temperate zone which will not flourish here. Particular attention has been paid to grasses and forage plants, and in the course of a few years the seeds from these will form an important article of export.

Mr. Wm. I. Tevis, the superintendent of this vast farm, is one of the most enterprising, thoughtful and progressive agency of irrigation and cultivation, orchards, vineyards and grain fields dot the prairie; cosy homes around which lofty palms, semi-tropic trees and beautiful flowers grow in profusion; level roads, bordered by stately poplars, pines and cypress trees furnish object lessons in adornment to many who live in other sections of California and who have never considered how much their farms would enhance in value were they improved as this place is. The visitor is amazed at the marvelous growth of the trees and vines during the past six years, and a closer study in the methods employed to bring about the results so visible on every hand in horticulture, viticulture and agriculture is still more mystifying, for a greater monument to the educated skill and enterprise of its founders is not to be found in any other portion of the globe.

This is only the beginning, we might say, of what is destined to be an empire in itself, in which all that man can wish for is to be found within its borders. When the work of reclaiming this desert and these lowlands was undertaken every thing was new, so skilled orchardists and vineyardists experimented on the virgin soil, and as a result of their labors the books of the company show that almost "everything under the sun" thrives here as in no other place in California, for nature has done a great deal for it.

The valley lies at a point where the Coast Range on the west and the Sierra Nevada mountains on the east form an immense horseshoe. The primary source from which the water supply is drawn is Mount Whitney, about eighty miles distant as the crow flies. The Kern river rises at its base be found on this delta which would make this place famous if it were not for the great system of canals introduced.

The 300,000 acres is divided into fourteen large ranches, and there is under cultivation to-day by the superb system of irrigation over 97,000 acres devoted exclusively to alfalfa, vegetables and fruit. There are over 60,000 acres of alfalfa in cultivation now. There used to be 125,000 acres but the area is gradually lessening as land is sold and put to other uses. A writer in the Irrigation Age in speaking of this says: "The best system of irrigation on a large scale that I have ever seen in operation is that followed at the Poso ranch (a subdivision of the big farm). This ranch lies under the main line of the big Calloway canal, from which sixteen-foot laterals are taken out at intervals of a quarter of a mile. The land is laid out into checks, the low embankments of which are made on contour lines. The three or four checks lying nearest to the big canal are watered directly from that source by means of a side gate. While this operation is going on the lower checks are being filled from the laterals and the water passes from check to check until the whole field lying between the two laterals is irrigated. By this system 1,000 acres per day can be irrigated by the use of eight ditches and eight men. The expense is only five cents per acre, or fifteen cents for the three irrigations necessary during the season. The hay is cut and put into stacks by contract for $1.50 per ton. When it is stated that hay is worth $5.00 per ton in the stacks, and that the five or six crops that can be cut in the course of a year yield from eight to twelve tons per acre, it is plain there is money practical and scientific farmers we have ever had the pleasure of meeting. His methods are so systematic that everything on the farm shows that his mastery of each detail is complete and comprehensive. Where there are so many different industries to supervise, it is necessary that large forces of men must be employed. Each of these have a foreman whose duties are outlined for him and who is held responsible for the work of his employees. The farm houses scattered over this vast area are all connected by telephone with the main office and daily reports are received by Mr. Tevis there.

The cattle industry alone is an immense one. All the paddocks and corrals and fields are well fenced and the greatest care is taken of the stock. Nowhere in California is such fine large, sleek-looking cattle to be seen. Durham seems to be the fashionable breed and finer specimens cannot be found anywhere. Thousands are slaughtered and shipped from this farm every year and command the highest price in the market. Hogs are also slaughtered by the thousands. The rich bottom lands affording feed for them, while the acres of corn and barley harvested give that firmness to the texture of the meat so eagerly sought after by the butchers and packers in our large cities. When the 10,000 sheep are sheared the stacks of wool seem to have no limit in size and weight, and the income therefrom pays good interest on the investment.

To the lover of fine horses this farm, known to our readers as the Stockdale ranch, furnishes a spectacle worth going miles to see. The large bands of pure bred Shetland and Welsh ponies which thrive and multiply far better here than on their native heath contrast strangely with the numbers of heavy draft horses seen standing knee deep in the pasture fields. These ponies have always found a ready sale in the San Francisco markets and when a call was made for them in Chicago, trainloads were shipped there and sold at good prices. No pet has a greater claim in the affections of a child than one of these docile, little, faithful ponies. The craze for them never dies out, not even when the bicycle was threatening to drive all other horses out of existence. Great care is taken of these ponies. In the distance they resemble a flock of dark colored sheep, and like their woolly neighbors, never engage in hattle among themselves.

The principal market for the draft horses raised on this farm is San Francisco, and as only thoroughbred representative Clydes, Shires, Percherons and Normans are used to cross on the large American mares the produce is eagerly sought after by draymen and teamsters. They are all large and heavy bodied, and so easily broken to work that if a few carloads of "halter broke" four and five-year olds are sold, in less than ten days they are all working single and double as if they had been driven for months. The fact that these horses are so tractable and serviceable has caused the enterprising owners of this farm to increase their number of stallions and mares until to-day it stands as the only, as well as the largest, stock farm whereon large horses are bred in vast numbers in California. The Hawaiian Islands is another outlet for these horses, and buyers from these far off islands of the sea always find what they are seeking for at this place.

The fame of the trotting or light harness horses raised by Messrs. Haggin and Tevis is world wide. For years choice representatives of the best trotting families were shipped from this place to New York City and disposed of at high prices. The reason for this was apparent to all horsemen who visited the auction mart. Horses from this farm were not only splendidly bred but they had all the other requisites, size, color, dispositions, breeding, conformation and speed. Many fillies bred here were used as roadsters and are now occupying exalted positions on stock farms in the eastern states. Bred to the famous stallions there they have proven to be matrons of fast track performers and why shouldn't they? They were sired by the best bred sons of Electioneer, Echo, Almont, Geo. Wilkes, Dictator, Whipple's, Hambletonian, Geo. M. Patchen, Jr., out of well bred mares whose ancestors had crossed the plains and who had inherited all the stamina and nervous energy which horsemen are so anxious to find in mares as well as horses.

In these large fields, it will not take a practiced eye to notice that, as individuals, the horses compare most favorably with the handsome ones that are termed prize winners in the Horse Show. Fed from colthood in the richest pastures, exercised daily over the vast expanses of level land, watered regularly and living in a climate that is winterless, their opportunities for development are unrestricted. An eminent writer has said of the climate here: "One knows of the existence of winter only by the dispatches in his morning newspaper, and these seem like fairy tales in a land where alfalfa fields are putting forth their leaves and roses and violets are blooming in the dooryards. Every day in the year belongs to the tiller of the soil because there is no day when he cannot cultivate the ground. Spring and autumn are delightful, while the average winter day is like May in New England and the Middle States. The summer weather is warm, but the dryness of the air is a mitigating circumstance of the first importance and one hears no complaint about the summer heat even among the newest settlers. The climate the year round is essentially like that of Italy, Spain and Asia."

Another important fact, which must not be overlooked, is that the yearling colts and fillies raised in this section of California and in this climate are larger and more evenly developed than in any other place where they are not stabled or cared for from the date of foaling. This is well known to horsemen, and some of the best and gamest race horses that ever faced the flag were bred in this portion of California.

To seekers after places where the finest horses and cattle can be raised at the smallest cost, where every variety of pasturage may be obtained and feed harvested at a lower price than anywhere else in the United States, the Kern County Land Company has tracts of land for sale on which fortunes can easily and quickly be made, for the breeding of fine horses has been on the decline for years in California, and whoever starts in at the present time will surely reap a handsome reward.

The nearest town is Bakerfield, about a ten hours ride in the cars from San Francisco. It is one of the prettiest and most prosperous cities of its size on the Pacific Coast, and its importance as a shipping point for fruit, grain, hay, vegetables, cattle, sheep, and asphaltum is increasing every year. It is an attractive city, its well kept streets, substantial looking business houses and handsome residences make it one of the most charming of all our inland cities. Not a vacant house is to be seen, and the hundreds of families settling here every year so as to be near their friends on the big farm, who are building up homes there, will soon give it a foremost place among our leading commercial cities.

An offer which was not accepted during the Readville meeting was that of C. W. Marks of $25,000 for the pacing stallion Searchlight. Only a few weeks ago Merks was the owner of Joe Patchen, and was asked to put a price on him. Marks did not want to sell, and when he replied that it would take $20,000, he felt sure that the offer would not be accepted. When the check was immediately produced, he felt in honor bound not to go back on his word. In looking about for a suitable successor for the great pacer, he felt that Searchlight would fill the bill, but J. H. Bronson, of New Haven, who only last July came into possession of the son of Dirk Night, refused to entertain the offer. Bronson paid $15,000 for Searchlight, and it is said that he has already won the horse out.

LADY OF THE MANOR 2:04½ justified the faith her breeder has had in her, when she took her record at Glens Falls. She is now holder of the world's record for pacing mares and it would not be surprising if she paces to a still lower record. It is worth while noting that while several pacing stallions and geldings have beaten 2:05, Lady of the Manor is the first pacing mare to get into this select list. For a long time the trotting championship has been held by a mare, but among the pacers the stallions seem to be the faster. Just why this difference should be is one of the things there seems to be no explanation for.

M'KINNEY, THE CHAMPION.

From the time he took a record of 2:12½ at Stockton as a four-year-old, no stellation in California has been more in the public eye than McKinney, the great son of Alcyone, who was in turn the greatest son of George Wilkes, as he was, in the minds of the majority of horsemen the greatest son of Hambletonian 10. As a five-year-old he reduced his mark to 2:11½, winning at the same time the fastest eight heat race ever trotted up to that date, and then entered the stud where he won still further championship honors.

At the close of 1898 he was the sire of nine 2:15 performers, all race records and all race winners. This year he is keeping up the championship feat and is to-day the only stellation in America whose two-year old produce has won a beat faster than 2:30 in a trotting race, while his son Coney 2:07½ is the fastest four-year-old pacing gelding of the year as well as the fastest pacer that started the year without a record.

McKinley was foaled June 12, 1887, at Cynthiana, Kentucky, and was purchased from his breeder, W. H. Wilson, as a two-year-old, by Ches. A. Durfee, who still owns him and who this year refused the sum of $15,000 for the great race horse and sire. He was campaigned in his three, four and five year old forms, winning 25 races out of 28 starts, meeting the very flower of California's trotting brigade in the palm years of the business. McKinney is a rich seal brown in color, and in conformation one of the grandest looking stallions in America. The accompanying photograph taken last week at Oakland gives some idea of his magnificent proportions. He stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs about 1200 pounds. He has one of the most intelligent heads ever put on a horse, his neck is long and clean, shoulders sloping and wonderfully muscular, while his back end loins are marvels of development. A well rounded body, the very best of legs and feet, without a spot or a pimple. In short, there is not a weak spot in McKinney, and he has strength wherever it is needed. His disposition is perfect. A careful perusal of his pedigree herewith will show that he is a perfect outcross for nearly all our California mares. He transmits speed with wonderful uniformity, and no stellation in America, at 12 years of age, ever had as many representatives in the exclusive 2:15 list. McKinney is, in short, the champion sire of speed and race horses on the Pacific Coast.

Alert.

In former years it was the custom at all the District and State Fair meetings to have gate keepers, watchers and patrol men hired from the particular locality in which the fair was held—good fellows generally they were and as they saw their duty it was generally performed, but with the advent of long race meetings it has been found necessary to employ men with a special training for this purpose. Men who by constant attendance are familiar with the regular attendants and are thoroughly versed in the various duties assigned them. The Harry N. Morse Detective Agency men, under the alert and incorruptible (though always genial and accommodating) Capt. Jul. J. Callundan, are now familiar figures at both our local tracks, at the State Fair, and all the meetings given by the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association and Fairs generally throughout the State. Capt. Callundan has picked a body of men thoroughly efficient in every essential, and the entire grounds of the fair are all under their watchful supervision. Protection to all whether in the swirl at the entrance, in the crush and excitement of the betting ring, or in the seclusion of the grand stand watching with breathless interest the winner as he rushes under the wire, the visitors inspecting the prize winning cattle, sheep, swine and poultry, the happy groups promeneing the pavilion at night, the huclic farmer and busy citizen are all alike under the care of "Morse's Patrol" and woe to pick-pocket, thief or obtrusive tout who attempts to ply his "graft." So thoroughly have the men under Capt. Callundan been schooled that few thieves are unknown to them, and so much of a terror be the name of Henry N. Morse become to them that few have the temerity to brave the patrol presence, consequently crime is happily more frequently prevented than punished. To the Directors of the District Fairs throughout the State we unhesitatingly recommend the "Morse Men" as they are generally called. They are trustworthy in every detail, and to the entire business community of all the coast we recommend for skill, tenacity and incorruptible integrity the Harry N. Morse Detective Agency and Patrol System.

The "Special Commissioner" of the London Sportsman says the American stock will not prove the English breed, as so far from being better stayers, they are uniformly worse while in America young ones are far worse treated early in their careers than in England. He continues as follows: "There is, I verily believe, only one good long-distance horse in America, and that is Ben Holladay. With all Mr. Lorillard's and Lord William Beresford's recent successes they have yet shown us a horse that could stay; nor have any of the other American runners, such as St. Cloud, displayed any long distance form. In this respect they differ absolutely from the Australians, who stay well in almost every instance, besides having clean pedigrees throughout. I am very far from desiring to depreciate the American race horse when you find a good sample of him, but I should like breeders in the States to distinctly understand that they can very easily over-supply any demand there is here for even their very best yearlings, while should they send stock over by hundreds, as I see is contemplated, they will be lucky if the youngsters realize enough to pay expenses. English and Irish-bred ones will always command the first attention of buyers."

The Duke of Westminster's great colt Flying Fox has once more demonstrated his superiority to the three-year-olds in England and shows, by doing all that is asked of him, that he is well entitled to stand with the other winners of the triple crown, chief amongst whom is his grandsire, the peerless Ormonde, and amongst whom also would doubtless have been numbered, but for the mysterious melody, presumably poisoning, which prevented his taking part in the 2000 Guinees and Derby, his sire, Orme. Flying Fox, by his victory in the St. Legr last Wednesday, has a second time avenged his defeat by the American horse Ceiman in the Middle Park Plate, the latter running second to him in the Doncaster event as he did at Newmarket last spring. Flying Fox makes the second winner of the three classic races that the Duke Westminster has won and that the veteran John Porter has trained.

LILLIPUTIAN BEAUTIES.

A. W. FOSTER'S HUNGARIAN PONIES.

About ten years ago there was an importation of Hungarian ponies from Australia to this city. Their beautiful color, dark dappled chestnut, contrasting so strongly with their light, silvery manes, attracted the attention of horsemen as soon as they were landed. It did not take long to convince lovers of the equine form that these Hungarian ponies possessed qualities not found in any others of their size in the world. They had wonderful trotting action and were "game to the core;" they had marvelous strength for their size. Mr. A. W. Foster, President of the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway, purchased the best of them, and shipped them to his 2200 acre farm near Hopland. When the youngsters became of age, about three years, they were handled and their superior intelligence was at once demonstrated, for, after being ridden two days, they were ridden and driven wherever guided and never made an attempt to balk or kick.

When the Horse Show was being talked of five years ago, Mr. Foster was interviewed regarding it, and finally consented to do all in his power to make that memorable exhibition a success. The surprise he had in store for the managers proved a most agreeable one, for his herd of Hungarian ponies was at once pronounced the leading feature of the exhibition. When the judging was in progress speculation was rife among the native sons and daughters as to which should win the blue, the white, or the red ribbon, and when the exhibition ended many a child felt that it was like losing a dear friend to see the little prize winners depart from the pavilion for their beautiful home across the bay. Mr. Foster keeps the majority at his Hopland farm, and only a few are kept for use at his home place. His residence is a beautiful building, surrounded by every variety of flowers, trees, vines, lawns and the rest of exotic palms and plants, occupies one of the most commanding sites in far-famed San Rafael. The carriage house and barns where these little ponies and rigs are kept are hid from view in a forest of pines and eucalyptus, and when representative of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN I rode through the thriving little city of San Rafael and up the winding slope I little thought of the treet in store for me, for a handsomer or better matched team than the stallions Mars and Emperor I never rode behind. Around the curves, up the hills and into the valleys their speed did not diminish, and portions of the journey were made at a 3:10 clip.

Hiawatha is a "grebe," a chestnut, with a thin mane and tail; a perfect model of symmetry and so useful and gentle that $1000 would not buy him. His strength for his size is nothing short of marvelous and no road is too steep for him to carry a 185 pound man to the top with ease, while in descending no mountain goat is more sure-footed. Hiawatha is one of the diamonds in this parland of equine gems.

Fair Hills is "black as a sloe," Thoroughbred Hungarian, too. His dam is a chestnut in color, but no doubt her produce traces back to some remote ancestor who was ebony in hue. Fair Hills is about nine hands high and is more like a playful, well trained dog than anything else. He can climb upstairs, run after the children, carry them wherever they wish to ride, and do almost everything asked of him by the little throng of happy children who pass many hours at his side.

Prince is another one that I took a fancy to. He is one of the team that formed the six-in-hand which created such a sensation at the Santa Rosa Rose Carnival, May 1, 1898. The leaders are Emperor and Mars, Prince and Tack are in the ewing, and Bill and Ben are the wheelers. The appearance of this unique carriage team was the signal for loud and prolonged applause.

The rising generation is indebted to Mr. Foster for his large expenditure of money and the devotion of so much of his valuable time to the breeding and development of this useful, as well as ornamental, breed of horses. He is the only breeder of Hungarian ponies in the United States, and orders for ponies from his herd are coming from all parts of America.

The accompanying pictures are reproduced from photographs made by Messrs. Lorillard & Pratt of San Rafael, and it is owing to the fine work they do that we are enabled to reproduce them so well. These ponies are indeed a group of lilliputian beauties.

EMPEROR.

THE BAYWOOD STUD.

Of the numerous stud farms in California the Baywood Stud, located on Mr. John Parrott's estate adjoining the town of San Mateo, is the only one of its kind. The object with which it was established was the breeding and developing of high class saddle and harness horses. A point in its career has now been reached where its proprietor has the gratification of showing the visitor that after years of steady, intelligent work and study he has begun to accomplish what he originally had in mind. The practical meaning of this is that those who are in search of finished horses for carriage work have now a place at hand where they may expect to find them. Hitherto this has not been the case in California and as a consequence many who would have been glad to keep well-appointed turnouts have been obliged to forego the luxury.

When Mr. Parrott first joined the ranks of the breeders, he provided himself with the imported German coach-horse Socrates, a fair animal of his kind. This horse he deposed from the head of his stud six years ago when he purchased the hackney stallion, imported Green's Rufus (E. H. S. B. 4291, A. H. S. B. 63). In the interval he has collected and bred to the latter a large number of mares, with a few exceptions, trotting-bred. These now supply about half a hundred foals each season. Amongst the dams are a certain number with hackney strains of blood, so that the Baywood output comprises pure, three-quarters and half-bred hackneys. In perhaps the most important qualification which a stud-horse can possess, Mr. Parrott's fine young sire is pre-eminent. Anyone acquainted with the hackney breed is aware that its strong point is sire prepotency. In this respect Green's Rufus is high'y distinguished and shows himself fully endowed with the virtue of transmitting his own good qualities and characteristics to his offspring. His get are noticeable for their fine constitutions, ample bone and bold, free action in the trot. In the last mentioned respect the stallion himself takes high rank, as those who saw him at the several horse-shows held in this city up to three years ago will acknowledge. Nothing on exhibition created a greater sensation than when Green's Rufus stepped round the ring. As a son of the great champion Rufus his remarkably fine style of going comes to him naturally and, had he been limited to pure-bred hackney mares, in all probability he would have made a reputation that in his present sphere he can never acquire. But if all goes well his life's work, while not so distinguished as it might otherwise have been, will be fully as productive of good to the cause of horse-breeding. In the American trotter, bred and developed for speed, the action of knees and hocks is the very reverse of the methods which the hackney uses in progression. In the carriage horse ten miles an hour is as fast a pace as is called for and it is essential that his action should exhibit a certain grandeur and elevation that the horse driven for speed alone is not capable of showing, except in very isolated cases. It is occasionally found to exist in trotting-bred animals, but such is the almost invariable prepotency of the hackney sire that he may be depended upon to reproduce the quality in more or less excellence in nearly every animal he begets. This, then, is the mission in life of Green's Rufus and he may be said to be fulfilling his calling. A conspicuous instance of his success is the four-year-old gelding Bravo, illustrated by the Breeder & Sportsman in this number. This horse has, if anything, still finer action than his sire. The dam of Bravo is a half-bred hackney by the celebrated hackney stallion, imported Matchless of Londesborough, so that Bravo is a three-quarter bred hackney. So far as action is concerned the shortfall of hackney blood has in his case placed him at no disadvantage and though such a gratifying result as he represents cannot always be counted upon in crossing the hackney with the trotting-bred, it justifies the belief that Green's Rufus may be relied upon to do all and even more than was expected of him.

But this quality of action, the paramount virtue of the hackney, while born in the youngster as a rule, must be developed, or set and conserved. And here is where the proprietor of the Baywood Stud shows the intelligence, patience and judgment necessary to bring any undertaking to a successful issue. He is not satisfied merely to raise the colt, but he has him handled by educated, skilled and responsible employees and so rendered fit to occupy the exact place in the horse firmament, for which he is intended by nature. However earnestly and carefully the stud master may strive to breed a particular size or type all sorts of variations will result. Sometimes he will be favored with an animal having sufficient size and power to draw a heavy brougham, and at other times he will have something that is only equal to a small trap of some kind. Both these extreme specimens and their intermediate congeners have their uses, and according to the discrimination with which they are appointed to their several spheres, will best represent the usefulness of their breeder's work. Then again, the most promising young horse in the world may be utterly spoiled by improper biting and injudicious driving, which, harmful and abominable at all times, are less disastrous to the thoroughly made horse than to one in course of education.

Under the system adopted at the Baywood Stud the perfectly made horse can be shown to an intending buyer, so that when he sees anything that takes his fancy he can feel assured that, with a continuance of anything like proper management, any animal that he may be shown will not disappoint his expectations. How different is likely to be the result, if he venture on buying the article, as a rule, on offer elsewhere, that totally lacks the finishing touches which make a carriage horse a pleasure to sit behind or see moving down the road or in the park.

Only one who has had the opportunity of seeing what Mr. Parrott has been doing year by year since he entered the ranks of hackney breeders can realize the amount of time, money and pains he must have expended in bringing his stud up to its present pitch of successful working. The sweets of rewarded labor have already been tasted and satisfactory sales, together with an increasing number of enquiries that prove the need of his enterprise, afford an encouraging outlook for the future. While he has no one in the State competing with his stud at the present time, it would be a mistake to suppose this is to his benefit. He would be better off if he could now get outstudies for some of his stock and by indenting upon other studs facilitate his own plans for matching and otherwise meeting the demands of a market that, still very young, will grow as the taste for well-formed and finished carriage horses develops.

The photographic sketches shown in this issue, all made during a morning's visit, will serve to give an idea of the sort of horses the Baywood Stud is turning out and also of the different stamp of horse required for different kinds of vehicles. This latter is a matter that has long been settled by experience and one upon which the management of the stud is well able to advise. As a striking instance of the various shapes in which the trotting-bred horse may be found a picture is included of Mr. Parrott's admirable little prize-winning saddle pony, Black Beauty, a full sister to the trotting mare, She, 2.12 1/2, by Abbotsford. The photograph, unfortunately, does not do the little mare justice.

THE FOUR CORNER-POSTS

OF

MODERN THOROUGHBRED BREEDING

BY HIDALGO.

Last winter I was "barking" at a sale of thoroughbred yearlings for Mr. A. B. Spreckels, in San Francisco. One of the yearlings had a cross of Woodburn, brought to this State by John Hall, of Alameda, in 1864. I went on to speak of Woodburn as the best bred son of Lexington ever brought here and said "his third dam was Eleanor, one of the only two mares that ever won both the Derby and the Oaks. This was in 1801. She beat the great Orville and won 29 races out of 46." The late Charles M. Chase, who sat behind me, and whose shrewdness and sagacity cannot be called in question at this late day, said to me, "Never mind what horses did a hundred years ago. Tell them something about horses that are running now." The point was well taken.

It seems to me that we ought to follow some such line in breeding now. We know that Waxy was the great sire of the first fifteen years of the current century now of but a few weeks' duration. The male line of Waxy, so well exploited through Whalebone in England and America and through his other son Whisker (great grand sire of Yatterdon) in Australia, is still good enough, so we do not care to disturb that, for Touchstone and Birdcatcher, the two greatest founders of families since 1840, were male line great grandsons of Waxy. But let us come down to the quarter century between 1815 and 1840. And what do we find? Three good male lines, then all-powerful but now virtually extinct. The three great stallions of that period, outside of Camel and Sir Hercules, sires of Touchstone and Birdcatcher, respectively, were Catton, Tramp and Emilius, the first two being Doncaster Cup winners, while the latter won the Derby and got two winners of the same race. The first and last of these are virtually extinct and the middle one would be likewise but for Rosicrucian in England and Goldsborough in Australia. And this too in spite of the fact that the United States imported seven sons of Emilius and four of Catton, while Australia imported two sons of Catton and four of Emilius, in all. There is an old horse somewhere up in the pretty Owyhee meadows of Idaho, called Warnick, by Hubbard out of Joe Hooker's dam. When that horse dies, the male line of Catton will be extinct in America, as it already is in England. The only exponent of Emilius' male line that I know of is Villard, a little black horse owned in Oregon and sire of the sprinter I Don't Know. The line of Emilius, when he dies, will exist only in New Zealand, through a very inferior horse called Hippocampus.

It is therefore apparent to me that we have four lines that have never failed to produce racers of high class when properly blended, with a view to conformation. I think conformation is something too often overlooked by breeders. The French breed entirely in that way and pay little or no attention to blood lines. They breed a rangy mare to a compact horse and vice versa; and it goes without saying that they have, in the past forty years, produced some great horses. They have produced the only horse (Gladiator) that ever won the Two Thousand Guineas, the Derby, the Grand Prix de Paris and the St. Leger, all in the same season. They bred the only horse (Verneuil) that ever won the Ascot Cup, Queen's Vase and Alexandra Plate, all in one week. And they bred the first two mares that ever won both the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire handicaps in the same year—Tenebreuse and Plaisanterie. So it will not do to underrate French breeding.

To modernize the breeding of thoroughbreds, therefore, I say, the proper way is to take the four most successful lines of the past sixty years and breed direct from them—three Eclipse and one Herod-line horse. The records of the Derby, St. Leger, Oaks, and Two Thousand Guineas show this to be about a fair proportion, for no Herod line horse has won a Derby in twenty-three years (Kisber being the last) while the same line has won the St. Leger just four times in the past sixty years. The Matchem male line, since 1840, shows just three winners of the Derby, six of the Oaks, and five of the St. Leger. I therefore say, use the Matchem line (say through Nomad, Kingston or imported Odd Fellow—a horse that is being sadly overlooked, by the way), simply as the Australians used old Fisherman—for an outcross. When you find you have been breeding too often to one line and need new blood, take care that the horse you select as your outcross is one of good bone, excellent conformation and a perfect temper. Hence I say the Melbourne male line is valuable simply as an outcross on the four corner-posts, which are Touchstone, Birdcatcher, Blacklock and Sweetmeat, the latter being the greatest Herod horse of the past sixty years, to my notice, and giving the Macaroni branch of Sweetmeat blood the preference over Parmesan, Saccharometer and Carnival. For while Parmesan got two winners of the Derby and Macaroni none at all, yet Macaroni bred more class than ever did Parmesan, outside of Cremorne. Macaroni got Lily Agnes, who won more races than any two daughters of Parmesan; and he also got two Oaks winners, conclusively showing that his mares were stouter than his horses. If a cross of Sweetmeat cannot be obtained, then try the other Gladiator line, through Mortimer, Exile and Apache. But a review of the great winners of the past thirty years will show that these four lines—Touchstone, Birdcatcher, Sweetmeat and Blacklock—are their chief component factors. Coming down to the most modern winners, of which Ormonde is the most striking example, we find the following crosses of the four corner posts:

I think the above investigation could be pursued yet further, but space will not admit of it. The best Sweetmeat horse in the United States is Mr. Boots' horse Brutus; and the best Blacklock horse, by a head and shoulders is Sir Dixon. Now, if you have a mare that has Blacklock, Touchstone and Birdcatcher, but no Sweetmeat in her, breed her to Brutus; and if she has Sweetmeat and no Touchstone (for Sweetmeat was inbred to Blacklock) breed her to any one of a dozen Touchstone horses that are now in this State, St. Carlo and his son Ruinart being very prominent. Among the Birdcatcher horses, I like Amigo as well as any, for Ormonde is not accessible to the public. Just why the Santa Anita folks keep on sacrificing those fine Grinstead mares to the Emperor of Norfolk (who is not bred right for a sire, to begin with), and neglecting Amigo, is one of the things I shall never understand correctly. I have a picture of Stockwell in my possession and I candidly believe that Amigo looks more like him than any horse Stockwell ever got. In this I mean no disrespect to the Emperor as a racehorse, but experience has shown us that great performers are often worthless as sires, witness Charles XII, Favonius and Melton, for instance. Amigo has three of the four corner-posts in his composition, while the Emperor has none of them. It would do some people a great deal of good if they would occasionally sit down and do a little reading. They would realize the deep wisdom of the Teutonic philosopher who declared "Der more I lif, der longer I find it py Shoopider oud."

So I say that I believe in a modern system of breeding, with just four lines as the main track—Birdcatcher, Touchstone, Blacklock and Sweetmeat—and Melbourne for an outcross. Should any further outcross be needed, they can import a son of Fisherman, Yatterdon or Neekersgot, from the Antipodes. All this time you must never lose sight of the two main lines of Eclipse-Waxy, from whom we get Birdcatcher and St. Simon; and King Fergus from whom we get Galopin and St. Simon, the final descendants of Blacklock who was King Fergus' great grandson. No stallion foaled since 1890 can be worth much with less than twelve crosses of Waxy. Abercorn was foaled in 1884 and yet he had nineteen crosses of Waxy which is about equivalent to thirty-six in a horse foaled since 1895. The two best Herod line horses in America to-day, if not in the world, are Brutus and Sir Modred, each of whom have over 50 per cent of the Eclipse blood, but the latter horse has none of the blood of Birdcatcher.

The table above quoted by me is a small one compared with what I might have cited but for lack of space. It is enough to show you that of 38 stallions of note in England there are just four which have no crosses of Birdcatcher, one that has none of Touchstone, but every one has a cross of Blacklock, who was at one time so despised in England. His line has been discarded repeatedly and yet came to the front again, through nothing but sheer merit. Up to 1870 the branch that came through Brutandorf was considered the best, but it has long been displaced by the Voltaire branch, as exemplified through Galopin and St. Simon. And what an old hero Galopin was to be sure, heading the list of winning sires at twenty-six years, the nearest approach to him being Hermit who headed the list in 1886, being then 22 years old. People used to object to Blacklock because he had an ugly head, although he was otherwise one of the most perfect horses ever foaled. It has taken them over eighty years to find out that a horse don't run with his head.

Only three stallions—Stockwell, Hermit and St. Simon—have headed the winning sires lists, since 1800 for a period of seven years in England. Stockwell was by far the best of the lot, for his get amassed £241,482 in seven seasons, while neither Hermit nor St. Simon came within £25,000 of those figures, although racing prizes are nearly double in value what they were in Stockwell's time. There was no Eclipse Stake, no Lancashire Plate nor Jubilee Stakes (each of these being worth £10,000 to the winner) in Stockwell's time; and that is why he is so justly styled the "Emperor of Stallions," and another reason is that on four occasions when he fell back to second place the lead was held by his own son, Blair Athol. Stockwell was second in 1865 to Buccaneer, while Buccaneer, in other years, was never as good as third to Stockwell. The latter was the greatest of all the Birdcatcher horses, and we shall go a long time before we see another stallion get all three placed horses, as Stockwell did in the Two Thousand Guineas of 1862 and the Derby of 1866. Blair Athol headed the list four times, being second to Adventurer in 1874 and to Lord Clifden in 1876, the latter two horses being from Touchstone's male line, as well as Hermit, who was also on top for seven seasons. Add to this the fact that Orlando, another son of Touchstone, headed the list in 1851, 1854 and 1858; and that Touchstone himself headed it for six seasons and was second three times, and you will concede that I have picked out four great stallions as the corner posts of thoroughbred breeding in modern times.

A QUARTET FROM SALINAS.

J. B. Iverson's String of Trotters and Pacers Now on the Circuit.

The light harness horse industry of this State is highly honored and very fortunate in having among those most prominently engaged in the breeding and racing of trotting and pacing horses a class of men who are the bone and sinew of the community and who stand in the very front rank of California's best citizens. Among the many who engage in this pursuit for the pleasure to be gotten out of it, and as a relaxation from business cares, there is none with more genuine enthusiasm and love for honest contests and high class sport than Mr. J. B. Iverson, one of the leading farmers and business men of Salinas, Monterey county. Mr. Iverson is quite an extensive breeder of live stock and raises a few standard bred colts each year, and by mating his mares to the best stallions to be found has gradually improved his stock until he now has some of the handsomest and speediest horses that are seen on the California Circuit.

Four of Mr. Iverson's horses now taking part in the races at the State Fair are pictured on this page and surely they are a grand looking quartet.

Prince Gift, the big brown gelding that trotted to a record of 2:12 last year at Sacramento, is by Good Gift, a son of Electioneer that the late Senator Stanford presented to the Czar of Russia. Prince Gift's first dam is Belle (grandam of Stambell 2:29½), by Kentucky record being eleven starts, out of which he won eight first mousys, one second, one third and one fourth.

Prince Neer is another large horse in Mr. Iverson's stable and is by Eugeneer 20,450, a son of Electioneer. Prince Neer is from the same dam as Prince Gift. He has no record, but has shown ability to trot below 2:20.

The pride of Mr. Iverson's heart is the handsome four-year-old filly Dictatress 2:16½. This little filly is four years old. She took a record of 2:13½ last year as a three-year-old and reduced it two seconds last week at Oakland. She is one of the gemiest pieces of horse flesh in America. Dictatress was sired by Dictatus 2:19½ and is out of the great broodmare Salinas Belle (dam of Ivolo 2:20½), by Vermont 322, grandam Mary, by the thoroughbred horse Owen Dale, son of Williamson's Belmont. She is a dappled chestnut and for her speed is one of the most persistent pacers ever seen. She does all she can possibly do at the finish of the mile or at its commencement.

A promising two-year-old filly is Dagmar, a daughter of McKinney 2:11½, out of Steinway Maid, by Steinway Jr. She is a racing conformation, her picture reminding one very much of the old prints of Snool 2:08½. She has not yet earned winning brackets, but in her only start up to this time was third to that other fast daughter of McKinney, Eula Mac, in 2:27½ and has trotted a mile better than 2:30 more than once in her work.

Mr. Iverson is fortunate in having as his trainer Mr. S. E. Kent, who as a conditioner and trainer has few equals on this coast. He is quiet and industrious and possesses in a

Prince; second dam Belle of Richmond (dam of Bergen 2:26½), by Hembletonian 10. Prince Gift is one of the speediest horses on this Coast, as the official time of the races wherein he got his record shows that he trotted the second and third quarters of the second heat in that race in 31½ seconds each, or 1:03 for the middle half. He has not yet reached the limit of his speed and under the careful guidance of S. E. Kent, Mr. Iverson's very efficient trainer, may be able to lower his record this year. Prince Gift was foaled in 1893, and started first as a two-year-old, winning his only start that year in straight heats and showing that he was then a great young trotter by getting a mark of 2:27½. He started but once the next year, and again he was a winner. The race was a stake for three-year-olds at the State Fair, and his record was reduced to 2:24. In his four-year-old form he scored for the word in two races, the first time in the 2:21 class at Sacramento. He won the first heat in 2:17½, but was beaten in the race, which was a hard contest of six heats, Osito getting first money, Our Jack second money, Clandine third money and Prince Gift fourth. The slowest heat was in 2:22, and the fastest 2:16½. At Salinas the next month he won 2 heats in 2:17½ and 2:20, but was compelled to take second position in the others to the best mare Lady O. Last year his career was a triumphant one, and barring stake winners was the largest winner on the circuit. He started seven times, won six races and was third once, and though, as is well known, the purses last year were hardly worth mentioning, he won over sixteen hundred dollars. Up to this writing he has not started this year, none of the races to which he was eligible at the earlier meetings having filled. In all his career he has never been outside the money, his remarkable degree the faculty of teaching colts how to trot and how to race. Mr. Iverson's string is trained at the Salinas track, and the citizens of that community are always genuinely enthusiastic over the winning of any of the horses owned by him. Mr. Iverson is one of the Directors of the Monterey Fair Association and does not begrudge the time devoted to it. With his old time friend and neighbor, the Hon. Jesse D. Carr, as a co-worker, the Monterey Fair has been made a success in spite of many drawbacks and always winds up the affairs of the year with a balance in the treasury.

How to Lay Out a Race Track.

A HALF-MILE TRACK.—For a half-mile track draw two parallel lines 600 feet long and 452 feet and 5 inches apart. Half way between the extreme ends of the parallel lines drive a stake; then loop a wire around the stake long enough to reach to either side. Then make a true curve with the wire putting down a stake as often as a fence post is needed. When this operation is finished at both ends of the 600-foot parallel lines, the track is laid out. The inside fence will rest exactly on the line drawn from the fence. The turns should be thrown up an inch, or an inch and an eighth to the foot. The stretches may be anywhere from 45 to 60 feet wide.

ONE MILE TRACK.—For a mile track draw a line through an oblong centre 440 yards in length, setting a stake at each end. Then draw a line on either side of the first line, exactly parallel with and 417 feet and two inches from it, setting a stake at either end of them. You will then have an oblong square 440 yards long and 834 feet and four inches wide. At each end of these three lines set stakes. Now fasten a cord or wire 417 feet and two inches long to the centre stake of your parallelogram and describe a half circle, driving stakes as often as you wish to set a fence post. When the circle is made at both ends of your parallelogram you will have two straight sides and two half circles, which, measured three feet from the fence, will be exactly a mile. The turns should be thrown up an inch or an inch and an eighth to the foot.

Two Good Ones From the South.

Down in that portion of California which lies south of the Tehachapi, where the orange grow to perfection and the real estate people sell climate and throw in the acreage, there has been raised some of the best horses that ever saw the light of day. Whether it is the climate that does it, or whether the breeders there have discovered some of Dame Nature's secrets we do not know, but the fact remains that many of the best thoroughbreds and harness horses that have gained honors on California and Eastern tracks have been bred or trained in what is known as Southern California. The accompanying handsome engravings picture two, a sire and his daughter, now being campaigned on the California Circuit, and owned by one of the most enterprising of Orange county's business men, the well known nurseryman and orchardist of Santa Ana. Mr. Geo. W. Ford. Neernut, the stallion, was not bred by Mr. Ford, but was purchased as a colt by him. Neeretta is of his own breeding and she is an animal that anyone should be proud to own. Neernut is comparatively young horse, having been foaled in 1891, and is by Albert W. 2:20, son of Electioneer and Sister by John

Nelson. His dam is Clytie II. by Nutwood, second dam Clytie by Hambltonian 725. He was bred by C. S. Sargent of Stockton, Cal. Mr. Ford purchased him at auction, paying something over $600 for him. Neernut's first start was at Santa Ana, October 9, 1894, when he won a three-year-old stake, heating Daisywood by Silkwood and Kitty Mc by McKinney, and getting a record of 2:27 1/2 in the second heat. Daisywood won the first heat in 2:27, with Neernut second, but he captured the next three easily enough. At Los Angeles a week later Galette 2:12 1/2 beat him in straight heats, the best time being 2:25 1/2. Those were his only starts as a three-year-old. The next year he started three times, winning several heats and getting a second, a third and a fourth money, meeting such crackerjacks as Zombro 2:11, Eva T. 2:18 1/2 and other high class horses, and closing the season with a four-year-old record of 2:21. In 1896 he had to meet in the 2:20 class a lot of high class horses like Mamie Griffin, Clay S., Stamboulette and others, but was generally inside the money end at the end of the season, after six starts, had lowered his mark a quarter of a second. The following year he was again campaigned on the California Circuit, starting six times, winning three races, and defeating such horses as Osito 2:14 1/2, Margeret Worth 2:15, Onr Jack 2:13 1/2, Iran Alto 2:13 1/2 and others. That year he reduced his record to 2:12 1/2 in a six heat race at Los Angeles, which was one of the most closely contested and hardest fought races of the circuit. Last year he was campaigned in the East, but went wrong like many other California horses shipped East, and was unsteady in his races, where he had to meet a class of horses that were trotting from 2:09 to 2:12 in every heat. This year he is on the California Circuit and has shown more speed probably in his work than any stallion out this year and a mark below 2:10 is not considered beyond his reach.

The only one of Neernut's produce ever trained is Neeretta 2:12 1/2, four years old this spring and one of the greatest prospects in California. She won her races at Santa Rosa and Oakland in a manner that showed her ability to lower her present mark materially before the close of the present year. Her dam is Besa, by Nutford 2:15, her second dam Fanny, by Sierra Nevada, not the standard trotter as previously stated, but a large horse by Red Rover (he the son of Black Warrior), out of a mare by imported Leviathan.

NUTWOOD WILKES 2:16 1-2.

One of America's Greatest Producers of Early and Extreme Speed.

An observing and well posted California horseman was asked a few days since: "What stallion now standing for service in this State is producing with the greatest regularity early end extreme speed at both trotting and pacing gait?" and he unhesitatingly answered: "Martin Carter's stallion, Nutwood Wilkes. If there are any of his get that do not show speed as soon as they know what it is to be harness and bridle wise, they are freaks and exceptions to the general run of his progeny." This is a pretty strong statement, but it is backed up by plenty of proof. Last year the two champion three-year-olds of America were Who Is It 2:12, and John A. McKerron 2:12½, both sired by this handsome son of the great Guy Wilkes 2:14½, and Lida W. 2:18½ by Nutwood. To put two young sons into the champion class in one year, is indeed a great performance for a stallion whose progeny are so few. For it must be remembered that Nutwood Wilkes was not a largely advertised horse, and did not have the high class mares sent to him that many other California horses had the fortune to be mated with. He was trained good ones in the race. At Nepe the next week he was again second to Helena, the slowest heat being 2:15½. At Petelme he met Mamie Griffin, Cley S., 2:14, Myrtle Thorne, 2:13, Stella, 2:15½, and several other fast and game trotters end, though lame from an accident, defeated them in straight heats, reducing his record to 2:16½. At Willows he started against the same horses, though so lame that he could hardly keep his feet. He was second the first heat in 2:18½, but his lame leg made him act so badly in the next heat that he finished behind the flag, and was withdrawn from the race and never started again, but retired permanently to the stud. Though badly handled in nearly all his races and often dog lame, he never showed the white feather, and on many occasions showed that he possessed as much speed as any horse that ever wore a harness.

Nutwood Wilkes has not more than seventy five living foals, and of these probably twenty-five have been trained and the following are in the 2:30 list: Who Is It (3) 2:12, (4) 2:10½; John A. McKerron (3) 2:12½; Clandius (4) 2:13½; Irvington Belle (2) 2:24½, (3) 2:18½; Echora Wilkes 2:15½; Central Girl (4) 2:22½; Who Is She (4) 2:25; Alix B. (5) 2:24½; Fred Wilkes (4) 2:26½.

This has been Nutwood Wilkes star year in the breeding line. He had sent to his embrace Lassic Jean, the dam of Who Is It 2:10½, Belle Median, the dam of Stam B. 2:11

A Handsome Son of Diablo.

Mr. James Stanton, the well known capitalist of this city, owns a four-year-old gelding by Diablo 2:09½, that is considered to be one of the handsomest as well as the most promising young trotters driven over the road in San Francisco. He is being handled for a while by that veteran of the turf Pat Farrell, who is very much in love with him, and would like nothing better than to train him for the race. The colt's dam was a mare by Richards Elector, son of Electioneer, and his second dam was Tramp 308. He is a square trotter and has shown starters better than 35 seconds on several occasions. Many think he would be a 2:15 representative for his illustrious sire were he trained for the races. The above engraving gives some idea of the youngsters size and style, though it hardly does him justice.

TANFORAN PARK.

The Western Turf Association Will Open its Handsome Grounds November 4th.

Twelve miles from San Francisco, twenty minutes ride by the steam cars, there is now building one of the most beautiful race tracks in the West. Tanforan Park it is called, and the name is both euphonious and reminiscent, being that of one of the early Spanish families who lived on and owned the land long before it was ever dreamed that this western slope of the northern continent would be the brightest gem in the constellation of the United States. Tanforan Park is the property of the Western Turf Association, an organization of leading gentlemen and capitalists of San Francisco, of which W. J. Martin is President, Charles F. Gardner Vice-President and F. H. Green Secretary. The property on which this track and buildings are being constructed is close to San Bruno station in San Mateo County, and consists of 150 acres of level land. Along the south and west sides of the tract are a line of beautiful and tall eucalypti, which by a strange coincidence were partly planted by the hands of the Secretary of this association when a youth, his father at that time owning the property.

The track, which is now nearly completed, will be a regulation mile, but there will also be added a new feature in the way of a straight-away course of three-quarters of a mile, extending direct from the grand stand for the use of two-year-olds. Paddocks will be set apart and stables, carriage-houses and the other ordinary appurtenances of the race track will be built, while as a special feature of Tanforan Park the judges' and the timers' stands will be movable, so that they may be put one side when desired to give a clear field from the grand stand on the occasion of polo, baseball, football and other athletic sports taking place.

After all, however, the main feature will be the grand stand, which will be located close to the railroad track and be on plans prepared by Bliss & Faville of this city. Only 120 feet will separate it from the station, and this distance will be traversed by those arriving by the cars by means of a covered way to the stairways leading to tiers of seats, which will be built to accommodate 4000 spectators.

The structure will be 254 feet in length and 108 feet in width. The large openings will be treated in segmental arches following the style of the Italian renaissance, carried on slender wrought-iron columns in front so as not to obstruct the view of the races. As at other tracks, the betting ring will afford an unobstructed view of the events and give a full sight of the finishes. The great feature of the building will be the entrance staircase, which will be seventy feet in width, leading first to the intermediary story and then to the main floor of the grand stand. Immediately in front of the entrance at a slightly raised elevation will be the betting ring. The stairs will then divide to right and left, giving access to the other parts of the grand stand and notably to the seats either by the intermediary or the main floor. On the main floor will be a small dining-room, a lunch-room, a kitchen, barber shop, check-room and other conveniences. A ladies' gallery, giving a full view of the betting ring, retiring rooms for the ladies, parlors, etc., will be the principal arrangement of the intermediary floor. Directly in the rear of the seats on the second story will be a magnificent promenade 210 feet in length and 40 feet in width, enclosed on all sides by glass, for use between the races, while from the rear of the promenade will be a balcony permitting those already arrived to watch the approach of the later comers. On that floor there will also be a dining and a wine room. Finally, projecting from the roof will be two ornamental dormers, with plate-glass windows for the use of the turf reporters, who, in addition, will be furnished with a room for the reception of their friends, and telegraphic and telephonic conveniences.

November 4th is the date set for the opening of this magnificent track, a number of very generous stakes being already advertised to be run during the months of November and December.

David Snell, 73 years of age, of New Bedford, Mass., drove his stallion Juno, by Allia Wilkes, dam by Mambrino Patchen, a mile in 2:07½ at Hartford on Friday, September 1st. This is a great performance for both man and horse. Mr. Soell will try to lower Directum's record with his stallion at New York this week.

and raced, part of the time being leased to others, and when everything is taken into consideration it will have to be admitted that Nutwood Wilkes has forced his own way to the very front rank of sires.

Lida W., the dam of Nutwood Wilkes, raised five colts and while carrying one of them got a record of 2:26. Her foal of 1891 died, and she was then put into training and that fall paced to her record of 2:18½ at San Jose. Nutwood Wilkes was foaled in 1888, at the Nutwood Stock Farm at Irvington, the property of the well known car builder, Martin Carter. He was not broke to harness until the spring he was three years old, and on June 10th of that year was taken to San Jose for work on the track. He had all the fat on his ribs that a three-year-old whose life has been spent in rich pastures usually carries and was too heavy to be given fast work, but five days after reaching San Jose trotted two miles, the first in 2:54, repeating in 2:53. Two months later he was started in a race for stallions, meeting Billy Thornhill, Delmas and Bay Rum. He trotted a great race for a three-year-old that had only been broken a few months, winning the second and third heats and being three times a close second and one third. He trotted the fastest mile of the race, 2:27½, in the third heat. The young man that drove Nutwood Wilkes in this race sent him for every heat and the wonderful showing of gameness and endurance made by the colt led the late John Goldsmith to offer a big price for him which, being declined, he then wanted him to campaign. At the record meeting at Stockton during October of the same year Nutwood Wilkes trotted to a time record of 2:20½. The following year the colt went into the stud and earned $5,500 for his owner, being bred to fifty-five mares outside those of the Nutwood farm.

In 1894 he was trained again and made his first start at the Bay District track at the Breeders meeting. He started in the 2:19 class against such horses as Wayland W., Boodle, Fallacy, Bruno, Bay Rum and a half dozen others. He won the first two heats, and in the third was only beaten a nose by the favorite, Wayland W. in 2:17. In the fourth heat his sulky was smashed by a collision and he was placed last. In the fifth heat he got off very badly and those who saw him go round the field as he went the first quarter say that he trotted a two minute clip. He threw a shoe at the half mile pole, however, and a portion of his hoof was torn off. It stopped his speed some but he finished fifth, won second money in the race, and reduced his record to 2:19. This was the season he was leased to Myers & Myers, whose stable met with so many misfortunes. He was handled by Dan Lawrence, whose sobriquet of Hard Luck Dan was earned by the record he made that year with his horses.

In 1896 he was again leased, and started first at San Francisco on July 4th in the race for 2:19 class trotters. He was beaten by the fast mare Helena, 2:11½, but was a close second in each heat, beating Memie Griffin, 2:12½, and several other

He has served 65 mares this year and from the results of these matings, mark the prediction, will come more than one 2:10 trotter. fornia, and at least a dozen of them are knocking at the door of the exclusive 2:20 list. The picture of this great young horse shown here with gives some idea of his grand appearance and shows him to be worthy of his reputation for good looks as well as being one of the greatest of young sires.

The photo-engraving of his dam Lida W., taken at the age of 19, shows what a grand old matron she is. There is no evidence of age in that short, well muscled back and those straight, perfect legs. She is now in foal to the great McKinney 2:11½ and the produce is confidently expected to be something extra good. Few mares of her age are as well preserved as this daughter of Nutwood.

SOME REMARKS ON A HORSE'S MOUTH.

BY I. B. DALZIEL

The most important and interesting part of a horse's anatomy may not improperly be said to be the mouth, and yet it is strange how little is known about it by those who are classed as horsemen—men who not only keep horses for pleasure and leave their handling to servants, but men who make a living out of them by their use or by dealing in them. It may seem, perhaps, somewhat a childish charge to make, but it is doubtful if one in a hundred can tell you how many teeth there are in a horse's mouth, but their ignorance in that simple particular is only indicative of what they fail to know in much more important matters. It is not too much to say that the average horseman pays less attention to the condition of his horse's mouth than any other part of the animal.

But while mentioning this lack of necessary knowledge in the average horseman, one may be pardoned for a little digression calling attention to the bad example set the general public by some members of the veterinary profession. It is not an uncommon thing to see in San Francisco a veterinary surgeon driving a poor looking, jaded horse, badly groomed and improperly hitched, forcing him to a run by plying the whip, while the lines lying loose are being jerked first one and then the other. No wonder that accidents occur and that women, children and old men are knocked down at crossings, when the very man who should be an example shows that he has no conception of the noble animal and the relationship he bears to him in his professional capacity.

It is with the hope that the views the writer ventures to express, founded on twenty years' practical experience in the business of treating the teeth and mouths of horses during that period, may prove of benefit to the readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, that he has yielded to the request of the editor and ventured to put them into print.

In a brief article of this character it would be impossible to give any detailed account of the growth, development and structure of the teeth. All that will be done will be to touch on certain points omitted in most if not all the text books dealing with the subject, and to advance such views and give such advice as should be of practical benefit.

The hardest time in a colt's existence is from the age of two and a half to three and a half years, for that is when he is cutting most of his teeth, getting in that period sixteen new teeth of the forty that is the full complement. Careful examination of a horse's mouth should at all times be the duty of those who are caring for them but more especially at that time, when slight surgical interference in the way of lancing and removing the "caps" may restore to perfect health a colt that has been off his feed, is falling away and is generally run down.

Among the most common forms of injury to a horse's mouth is that produced by the use of improper bits—curb bits with a heavy bar as a mouth piece—and the damage resulting is too frequently overlooked while the surgeon pays all his attention to the teeth. The seat of this injury is in the lower jaw, in the spaces between the first of the grinders and the tushes, in what is called the diastema (the place for the bit). The bar of the bit continually pressing down on the soft tissues, which cover that portion of the lower jaw, injures the bone, with the result that pieces of it are broken off and slough away. This lowering of the resting place of the bar of the bit brings it up against the teeth, where it is held in so firm a position that in a puller it would be next to impossible for any one to hold him. The expression one frequently sees in newspapers and even novels written by men who are supposed to have some acquaintance with the handling of horses, of "a horse taking the bit between his teeth and running away" is a self evident absurdity. Once get the bar of the bit between a horse's teeth and a driver would soon have him under control. A good way to prevent this firm purchase of the bit against the first of the lower grinders is to reduce the height of these grinders by cutting them upwards and backwards, so that the bar of the bit would more readily slip between the teeth when you pull on your reins for the purpose of stopping.

The cutting, trimming, filing, e'c., of horses' teeth is by no means as difficult and dangerous a job by one who understands the business as might be supposed. Out of twenty horses there will be found perhaps only one that will not stand perfectly quiet while the operator is clipping off with heavy cutting forceps projecting and irregular pieces of teeth that in the upper jaw are cutting into the cheek or in the lower jaw are cutting into and lacerating the tongue.

It must not be overlooked that changes in the shape of a horse's teeth are continually taking place by the growth that goes on after full development, which is up to seven years. That growth which is one-eighth inch in the teeth of each jaw in the course of a year, is essential for the wear that goes on. The wear depends to a great extent on the kind of food a horse is fed on, but the change in shape varies according to the character of the substance of each individual tooth, a hard upper grinder wearing away more of the lower grinder with which it is brought in apposition, if the structure of the latter consists, for example, of an excess of chalk, and vice versa.

A curious fact to note is the absence of feeling in a horse's teeth. You can stick a probe into the soft pulp of a tooth and apparently he does not feel it, or show that he has been touched as he would if you were to stick a pin into his cheek or any of his muscular tissue. And it is the same when using the cutting forceps on the teeth. He seems to feel no pain. All of which seems to go to prove that a horse's tooth has no sensitive nerve in the sense in which the human tooth has. It may be said that a horse shows in the process of grinding his food that his teeth hurt him, but it will always be found that the pain proceeds from the soft tissues—inflammation of the mucous membrane from decayed teeth or an abscess at the root of the tooth and consequent pain from pressure. Another important point to lay stress upon is the fact that the cutting and breaking of the teeth in no way injures them, and this is proof of the theory of the absence of the sensitive nerve.

As regards the kind of bit to use, a soft, flexible one is far the best and a young horse so bitten when being broken will never get fractious and will have as nearly a perfect mouth as his driver permits, for, as Robert Bonner truly said, it does not matter so much what kind of a bridle or bit you use in controlling a fractious horse as it does who holds the lines attached to the bit.

A Popular Veterinary Surgeon.

Those who know Dr. C. Masoero, the well known veterinary surgeon of San Francisco, are aware that he is the most modest of men, more especially if publicity is to be given to the fact that he is a master in his profession. The Doctor has been successful in his line and deservedly so, because he can be depended upon to fill engagements promptly.

Dr. Masoero is an Italian by birth and was born in Turin in 1857, which makes him just in the very prime of life, full of energy and with a long practical experience in his profession his services are in constant demand.

After he graduated from the leading college of Turin he entered the Veterinary College in that city, and was afterwards successful in passing a creditable examination.

After receiving his diploma he received the appointment of Veterinary Surgeon in the Italian Army. While in this position he had over 2000 horses under his supervision.

In 1881 he came to this city, but unfortunately was not familiar with one word of the English language. On the day he arrived in San Francisco it was a general holiday end much to his disappointment no business or other horses were to be seen on the streets. He, of course, wondered how the business traffic of the city could be carried on without the horse, but he ultimately ascertained from a countryman of his that it was Thanksgiving Day and that all public offices and business houses were closed.

He was here but a short time when he purchased the infirmary formerly owned by Dr. De Tavel at 809 to 811 Howard street. From that time on his success has been phenomenal.

He was one of the founders of the State Veterinary Medical Association and one of its best supporters.

His infirmary at the above address on Howard street contains all the modern paraphernalia used in the profession of a first class Veterinary.

Mr. James Boden has determined to permanently retire that sterling race horse Don de Oro, who at the Gravesend meeting this spring sustained a severe injury to his foot and since then has never been himself. It is understood he goes back to Mr. August Belmont who bred him. As a two-year-old he won the Eclipse and Tremont stakes. In his three-year-old form he won the Carlton, Boulevard and Kenner stakes and the Morris Park Handicap, but as a four-year-old, while a frequent winner of overnight events, he did not win a single stake. This year he has captured the Parkway and Brookdale Handicaps and the Saratoga Grand Prize. He ran a wonderful race for the Brooklyn Handicap getting off last and finishing fourth and but for the accident, looked to have a roysl chance to place the Suburban to his credit.

Sulky Notes.

- Salinas meeting is off.
- Stockton will have a good meeting.
- San Jose ought to have one of the best.
- Eula Mec by McKinney is a great two-year-old.
- There are nearly forty new 2:15 performers this year.
- Owyhee, 2:11½, is one of the great race horses of the year.

Trotting end running on the same day is not the proper order.

Venus II got second money in the 2:25 trot at Empire City Park last Thursday. She was beaten by the great Kingmond in 2:10.

Santa Rose Stock Farm's stallion Beau Brummel is starting in well. At seven years of age he is the sire of a two-year-old with a record—Velita 2:24.

Psyche, Mr. A. B. Spreckel's mare by Cupid, is getting into good racing shape now. She won in straight heats at Sacramento and trotted like a race mare.

Gov. Pacheco, the brother of Palo Alto 2:08½, bought by J. J. McDonald, of Cuthbert, Ga., at Hon. W. J. White's recent sale, is to stand in Kentucky next year.

Los Angeles has secured Joe Patchen, John R. Gentry and Anaconda for a big special to come off at the District Fair race meeting. It will be a great drawing card.

Soon after The Abbot had won the free-for-all trot at Readville, in which he stepped the final quarter of the second heat in 30 seconds, the Hamlins were offered $25,000 by Lemuel Hitchcock, of Boston for him, which offer was refused. They also declined to put a price on the horse, saying he was not for sale.

Who Is It was beaten for the first time Thursday in the $5,000 stake for 2:12 trotters at the Empire City trotting park. It was an honorable defeat, and Peter the Great was the only horse that finished ahead of him. The time was 2:07½ and 2:08½. Lord Vincent, 2:03½, the winner of the Charter Oak was behind Who Is It.

Mendocino, sire of the great colt Idolita 2:15½, at three years old, is one of the most distinguished horses on earth. As a colt he had distemper, which left many blotches and enlargements on his limbs, yet he is a perfect gaited trotter and sires true gaited trotters. He was not very highly thought of at first at Palo Alto, and was leased for a year to the late John Boggs of Colma.

By naming the dam of the winner of the New England Futurity the Palo Alto Farm got $300, while last year they secured $100 for doing the same in the two-year-old division. The $400 so received more than paid for the whole number of nominations they originally made in the stake. Then when the Farm got $2,000 for naming the winner in the Horse Review Futurity, it was a big winner.

A press dispatch from Sioux City, Ia., dated Aug. 22d says: Everything is in black and white now to guarantee that the three big pacing kings, Joe Patchen, John R. Gentry and Searchlight, will come to the Woodland Park race meeting in Sioux City, Sept. 12-17, to race for the big $3,000 purse that has been hung up for them. The race promises to be one of the features of the racing in this western country this year, and the track at Woodland Park will be put in the best condition for fast time. Patchen made 2:02 in a race with Gentry on this track several years ago.

R. H. Plant's bay mare Valpa, which gained a record of 2:09½ in the 2:30 race at Hartford, started in the 3:00 class at the beginning of the campaign. She started four times in 1898, but failed to win a heat, and was without a record as late as two months ago. Her Hartford performance makes her the fastest green trotter of 1899 thus far. Valpa is a bay mare by Searchlight's sire, Darknight, son of Alcione, and her dam was Sadie, by Hambletonian Mambrino, 2:21½. Darknight was sold to European horsemen three or four years ago, and is now in the stud in Austria. So many of his colts are pacers, however, that the Austrians now want to sell him back to the Americans, pacers having little or no value in Europe.

Captain Hackett, the handsome, big bay gelding by Steinway, that has been campaigned in California for the past four or five years without winning a heat or a record, is for sale. Here is an opportunity for some one to get the best road horse in San Francisco. Captain Hackett is big enough to pull a surrey with four people in it, is gentle as a kitten and carries his speed with him continually. He can pace a mile in 2:20 any time, but that is not fast enough to win on the Grand Circuit. If some horsemen would take this fellow East and campaign him over the smaller circuits he could win money with him, as Captain Hackett can step three heats in 2:20 or better week after week. He is as sound as a bullet and there is no easier driver.

Preparing for Fall Sales.

The success which has attended the efforts of Wm. G. Layng in the past in conducting his magnificent horse exchange in this city is to be repeated again this year. At a heavy expense he erected the finest pavilion and box stalls for the exclusive sale of thoroughbreds and trotters west of New York city, and the reputation he achieved for conducting sales has made his name a household word throughout the United States. He is making preparations to hold a series of sales of high class horses next month besides his annual sales of thoroughbreds. No doubt he will have as many buyers present at these sales as he attracted during the past two years. His method of conducting sales is unique, original and instructive; his catalogues surpass any issued, while the care he gives all horses consigned him stamps him as a man worthy of the patronage of all horsemen. Mr. Layng was for many years editor of this journal, and as a student of pedigrees and performances he stands without a peer. The Occidental Horse Exchange is at 721 Howard street and is well known to all our readers.

THE STATE FAIR EDITION of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is sent to its readers to-day in a form which we believe will meet with their appreciation. It is before them, and they are the best judges as to its merits. We have but one apology to make and that is that owing to the rush of advertising matter which crowded in at the last moment we were compelled to omit several interesting reports of Eastern meetings and tables of records. These, however, will appear next week. We desire to call the especial attention of horsemen to the many beautiful photo-engravings of horses in this issue and as they are all new and made from original photographs taken especially for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN they will be of especial interest to those who have any regard for a good horse. It is the renewed confidence in the future of the light harness horse that has enabled us to present this handsome illustrated number to our patrons, and we believe it will help to advance the equine interests of California, which are already showing signs of renewed activity and life in the way of a better demand for horses and higher prices for them. To our friends who have favored us with their patronage for this issue we extend our thanks, and promise that in the future the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will strive to merit whatever approbation and good will that may be bestowed upon it.

"DECLARED THE MEETING OFF," is the news that came this week from Secretary Kelly of the Monterey Agricultural Association at Salinas. In his letter to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, under date of September 5th, the Secretary says: "Our Board of Directors met yesterday to pass upon the entries offered for our proposed race meeting. The entries were not sufficient to justify us in declaring any of the races filled. There were two races, the free for all pace and the 2:15 trot, that had enough entries to fill them but the other races only had from two to four entries, so after deliberating the Directors came to the conclusion that the best thing to do was to declare our fair and race meeting for this year off. We will start in earlier next year and try and have a successful Fair." We hate to see Salinas miss a date. It has always held a very successful fair, but this year there were many circumstances that tended to prevent the horsemen from going to Salinas. In the first place the circuit was so arranged, owing to the few meetings held, that there are long and expensive hauls on the railway between the towns giving them. It is a big jump from Salinas to Fresno, so the trainers could hardly afford to go to the former place from San Jose for small purses and then make the trip from there to the Salinas county, and many of them left Salinas out of their circuit this year. The Salinas folk always give a good fair or none at all, so very wisely declared this year's meeting off rather than to run any chances.

THE HANDSOME PICTURES which adorn the pages of this issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN were nearly all made from photographs taken by two well known artists of this city, Mr. J. R. Hodson, of 416 Geary, and Mr. Chas. Weidner, of 22 1/2 Geary street. Both gentlemen are thorough artists and we do not believe there are any better in America when it comes to horse pictures. Mr. Hodson has a large contract with the U. S. Government at present and has erected a gallery at the Presidio that he may the better be able to handle the work.

A GREAT ATTRACTION has been secured for the Los Angeles meeting by Lewis Thorne, the indefatigable secretary of the thriving and enterprising district fair association of Los Angeles county. Mr. Thorne has been in New York for the past month, and telegraphed the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN Thursday that he had secured the presence of those great champion pacers, Joe Patchen, 2:01 1/2, John R. Gentry, 2:00 1/2, and Anaconda, 2:04 1/2, for the meeting which will be held in Los Angeles during October next. John R. Gentry holds the record of the fastest mile ever paced by any stallion except Star Pointer. Joe Patchen, who defeated both Gentry and Star Pointer at Empire City track last Wednesday stands without a peer as a light harness race horse. Others have gone more heats in standard time, to be sure, but no other light harness race horse has traveled over such a wide range of territory, been in so many different trainers' hands, gone so many fast miles in contested races in such high class company, always raced so consistently and come through the ordeal as sound and clean and with such a faultless career as a race horse. He is a big horse, the kind that we have been in the habit of thinking could not "stand the racket" of repeated bruising campaigns, yet he is as clean and sound of limb and constitution to day as an unbroken two-year-old. Aside from his extreme speed and courage he is yet a most remarkable harness race horse. Physically and mentally he is most characteristic. He has the lordly bearing of a conquering hero and the mental ponderousness of a true philosopher. In front of the grand stand he clearly knows that he is the object of admiration, and while he is the embodiment of equine courage, he makes not an unnecessary exertion, and in disposition is as even tempered as a tropical spring time. No other harness horse has probably ever been so universally admired. Anaconda is a California production, and it may be that upon his native heath he will show the others the way around a California track. It is within the range of possibilities. However, these three great pacers will be at Los Angeles in October and will start in a race for a big purse. Secretary Thorne and the Los Angeles Association are to be commended for their enterprise in providing such an attraction for the people of California, and they should be rewarded by an attendance that will make all former gala days at the Los Angeles track sink into insignificance by comparison.

THE CALIFORNIA JOCKEY CLUB will open its beautiful grounds at Oakland, on Saturday, September 23d. The Club has announced for this occasion a guaranteed purse of $1000 for a race for two-year-olds to be called the Opening Handicap. The distance is one mile, the entrance $10, with $25 additional to start. It is also given out that a liberal lot of stakes for the winter meeting will be announced in the near future. During the early weeks of the meeting the purses will range from $250 to $300, with handicaps three times a week, for which from $400 to $500 will be hung up. Thos. H. Williams, President of the Club, will give his personal attention to the races, and will act as President of the Board of Stewards during the meeting. J. W. Brooks, the well known handicapper, will be the presiding judge, with that popular turf journalist Fred E. Mulholland as assistant. As the class of horses improves as the season progresses, the purses will be raised and every effort made to make the racing as high class as possible.

THERE IS no true Californian but feels a thrill of pride over the news from Sacramento to the effect that the State Fair is a magnificent success this year. Not only are the exhibits at both park and pavilion more numerous than ever, but the crowds that daily and nightly flock to see them are largely in excess of any attendance of former years. The California State Agricultural Society is one of the institutions that her citizens are proud of, and they are giving evidence of that fact by flocking to its great annual exposition this year. President Spreckels, Secretary Shields and the entire Board of Directors have the sincere and hearty congratulations of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN on the successful consummation of their efforts.

TWO GREAT STAKES, the National Stallion Race of 1901 with $4000 added and The Matron of 1902 with $6000 added are announced by the Westchester Racing Association in our columns to-day, to be run at its magnificent race course at Morris Park, Westchester, New York. The conditions are published in full in this issue, and as they will close Friday next, September 15th, we advise all owners who have stallions and mares in the breeding ranks to read these conditions carefully and make entries in time.

Well Earned.

There is a Spanish proverb which says "Make a name and go to sleep." Our townsman Mr. Martin O'Dea has his version of the same adapted to these bustling times, which will appeal to the American ideas as being much more practicable. "Make a Name and Maintain It." For the past thirty years Mr. O'Dea has been constantly at work in St. Julien Farriery, 126 Geary street, during which time he has done the shoeing for Hickok, Dohla, Marvln and most of the other noted trainers and drivers whose names have become of national fame. When one reads over the names of the famed horses whose shoeing has been exclusively his business in the past, one is convinced that demonstrated skill alone would inspire confidence in conservative owners and drivers sufficient to warrant such valuable horses to be attended to by a farrier. The conscientious work of Mr. O'Dea supplemented by absolute and unquestioned ability, his observation and scientific knowledge of the horses foot have given him a state wide reputation. He is still to be found at his old stand, not only giving his personal inspection to all work done, but doing his share of the work himself. No universal rule prevails in his shop. No making the foot to fit the shoe. The individuality of each particular horse—habits and styles of gait, shape and conformation of hoof is carefully studied and few indeed are the faulty gaits that this skilled mechanic and artisan can not rectify. Mr. O'Dea has now associated with himself in his business, his son Mr. Martin O'Dea, Jr., a young man well known to all patrons of the St. Julien shop where he has served years of attentive apprenticeship and who by his obliging and genial disposition has won hosts of friends and future patrons. Mr. Martin O'Dea, Sr., is a man, aside from his vocation as farrier, who is well and favorably known in business circles and deservedly enjoys the confidence and respect of all who know him. We mention a few names of some of the famous horses he has under his care, whose names will excite many pleasant memories of exciting days in the past. Read the list and then say whether a man capable of preparing the feet of such horses is not indeed entitled to wear the laurel: Flying Jib, Stamboul, St. Julien, Adonis, Rarus, Lucy, Goldsmith Maid, Hulda, Sweetzar, Occident, Arab, Fullerton, Nutwood, Graves, Bodine, Overman, Sem Parly, Abbotsford, Oakleud Meid, Volney and Psyche.

The sale of the entire racing stables of the firm of C. Fleischmann & Sons and those of George E. Smith, better known as Pittsburg Phil, took place last Friday in the Easton sala peddocks at Sheephead. The Fleischmanns are not retiring from racing, their object being to get rid of their older horses and start afresh with a stock of two-year-olds next season. Pittsburg Phil on the other hand has tired of racing horses. Colonel Roosevelt, a two-year-old by Falsetto—Pearl Thorn, that cost him $7,600, and Lotario, a three-year-old, by Longstreet—Brunetta, that cost $10,000 at the Rogers and Rosa sala last spring were sold respectively for $5,800 and $3,800 to W. Midgley and W. C. Daly. Sidney Paget bought Ahom for $3,500. The pick of the Fleischmann lot was Maribart, who had the Bromley crack, Messmerist, in the second part of the Grand Union Hotel Stakes at Saretoga. He is a two-year-old by Albert—Miss Mary, and was bought by Pierre Lorillard for $1,200.

The New York Spirit of the Times thus speaks of Budd Dohla's latest venture: "Budd Dohla has returned to his first love. He has extensive stables at the Gilroy track, California, and is training a big string of twenty-eight three, four and five-year-olds, principally the get of Cupid, Aptos Wilkes and Dexter Prince. Mr. Dohla does not propose to race his stable, but to get them into perfect condition for the market and then consign them to one of the Madison Square Garden winter sales. This is a grand move in the right direction. The Spirit has for many years pointed out the fact that consignors lose thousands of dollars every season by sending good stock to this market only partially broken and in bad condition, but Dohla is the first man to take the idea and put it to practical use. The experiment must be a success."

At present writing the weights for the Cambridgeshire and Cesarewitch due to be published in England on August 31st, are not to hand. Much interest is naturally manifested in the first named race at the shorter distance of one mile and a furlong, run October 25th, as out of 123 entries no less than ten are American bred. Trainer John Huggins, whose success this year in the home of the thoroughbred has been nothing short of phenomenal, nominates no less than eight, all but one being American bred, viz., Lord W. Baresford's Berzak, Sandia, Dominia II, Carman, Sihola and Jolly Tar, and Mr. C. F. Dwyar's Sly Fox. Mr. J. S. Curtis has entered Method, a three-year-old brother to Ornament, Mr. Croker has in Bowling Greau, and Mr. H. B. Blgrave, a former resident of San Francisco, has entered Bloozen.

THE SANTA ROSA RACE TRACK.

One of the Fastest Courses in California—An Adjunct of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm.

The fame of California trotters and pacers is world-wide. Wherever they have been reared against those bred in other portions of the United States the betting has often shown they were favorites, and the results usually proved they were winners. Some people ascribe this money-winning or money-earning capacity to their excellent breeding, others to the climate, while many claim they are trained better; but to the deep student of the question there is another fact underlying all these contributory agencies and that is, the superiority of certain tracks in California upon which our horses are trained. The one at San Jose was once considered the best; Stockton had its era of wonderful records over its circular and kite shaped tracks; Santa Ana had another course which was like velvet; Chico was made famous through the record made by Goldsmith Maid over the race track there; the famous Bay District Track will go down into turf history as one of the "fastest," and Pleasanton is another, on which the hoofs of more champions played a merry tattoo while beating time than on any in the world; but Santa Rosa's track, from the day that Guy Wilkes trotted that memorable race and got his record of 2:15 1/2 up to the present, has been considered the best, the safest, and the fastest of all. The records made there prove this, and too much credit cannot be accorded the genial proprietors, Messrs Henry and Ira Pierce, for the care bestowed upon it.

Situated on the outskirts of the "City of Roses," in one of the prettiest portions of the beautiful valley, surrounded by orchards and grainfields, made on a soil that is sprightly—yet not too yielding—the track is one of the best constructed so far as the stretches and turns are concerned in the United States, hence it is no wonder its owners take pride in having it carefully watered, rolled and harrowed. The box stalls are large and commodious and the places for cooling out are so arranged that no danger is incurred from colds during this process. The climate, both winter and summer, is unsurpassed, and as all kinds of grasses grow in that vicinity there is no scarcity of green feed while the horses are in training.

With all these natural and acquired advantages is it surprising that all the leading California trainers engaged stalls at this track early in the season and began preparing their horses for the campaign? For months before the celebrated meeting of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders Association was held, the people from Santa Rosa made daily trips to the track to see the "work outs," and the points of every pacer and trotter were dilated upon in a manner that proved that these visitors had not forgotten their love for the light harness horse. They had not overlooked the races they witnessed at this course during the Breeders meeting the previous August, at which every heat in every regularly advertised race was trotted or paced in less than 2:20. I Direct's victory in 2:14, 2:13; Much Better's 2:10 1/2, 2:10 1/2; Monterey's 2:11, 2:11; Who Is It, and his wonderful race in 2:16 1/2 and 2:12, Thos. H., getting a mark of 2:15 1/2 after being the first in 2:17; Chas. David's two miles in 2:15, 2:15 1/2, closely followed by Nutway in 2:17 1/2, Our Jack's race in 2:16 1/2 and 2:13 1/2. Much Better repeated her victory again the third day in 2:10 and 2:14 1/2 after losing one heat which was won by Rex Alto in 2:07 1/2; Mamie Riley, Neerata and Phoebe Childers all made a grand debut in a race, the former winning the last two heats and race in 2:17 and 2:19, Neerata the second in 2:16 1/2, and Phoebe Childers the first in 2:16 1/2. Bean Brummel, a handsome horse bred in the purple, captured his race in 2:16 1/2 and 2:24 1/2. Mia Louise entered the list with winning brackets in 2:15 1/2 and 2:16, Lady Margaret getting a mark of 2:18 in the same event. Iran Alto's game race will not be forgotten, best time 2:16 1/2; then Rex Alto's win in 2:11 1/2 and 2:12 1/2; Bousaline, one of the Pierce Bros.' mares, trotted and won in 2:17 and 2:16 1/2; then came Much Better, who won the most sensational race of the year and set a championship mark of 2:07 1/2 and came on and won the next heat in 2:09. The last race of this memorable meeting was won by Pete Williams' mare Silver Ring in 2:16 and 2:14 1/2.

Then the wind which blew among the foliage of the long row of cypress trees sheltering this track carried a wireless telegraphic message to the people of Santa Rosa and all surrounding cities singing the praises of that meeting. The responsive "coherers" who wear silken jackets, ride like sulkies and talk sweet and encouraging words to their horses heard it and hastened to the fastest track in California when the news was heralded that the first meeting on the circuit would be held there this year.

That meeting was equally as successful as the one of 1898, but the attendance was much larger, the crowds more enthusiastic, and the speculating fever stronger. The reason was plain, for the racing was of the highest order and the records made approached the marvelous. The limited space prevents us giving summaries of the various events in detail, so the following table of new 2:30 performers who made their records there this year will suffice:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Time. Includes Trotters like Lottie (2:16 1/2), Eleanor Ann (2:19), and Pacers like Clipper (2:09 1/2), Echora Wilkes (2:18 1/2).

The following reduced their records at the Santa Rosa track during the meeting:

Table with 2 columns: Name and Time. Includes Trotters like Addison (2:18 1/2 to 2:11 1/2) and Pacers like Don (3:15 to 2:10 1/2).

As this will show what the track is, it is only one of the many properties owned by Messrs. Pierce Bros. They have over 100 acres at this place, and on it have a stock farm which contains some of the choicest bred matrons in the United States. Money was never spared in their purchase and all the colts and fillies are living and beautiful evidences of the good judgment exercised by the owners in meeting these mares with such sires as Sidney Dillon (full brother to Cupid, 2:18; Adonis, 2:11; and Lea, 2:18 1/2). Sidney Dillon is the youngest son of Sidney, 2:19 1/2, and the great two-mile mare Venus, and yet his daughter, Dolly D., won the Occident Stake at the State Fair last year, getting a mark of 2:21. Many horsemen claim that Sidney Dillon is the handsomest of the family. His progeny can hardly be improved upon. His brother, Cupid, 2:18, has, as everyone knows, already made a name for himself as a sire.

Bean Brummel, 2:16 1/2, is another greedily bred horse. He is by Wildnut, out of Nettie Benton, and is a horse of size, color, conformation and speed. Many mares were mated with him as well as to Diablo, 2:09 1/2, and McKinney, 2:11 1/2, during the past three years. His two-year-old daughter Velita won the two-year-old pacing stake at Sacramento this week, and a record of 2:24.

The list of mares includes Bye Bye, by Nutwood, 2:18 1/2; full sister to Lockheart, 2:03 1/2, the fastest son of Nutwood where with an electric storage battery. They will have to resort to an engine and use naphtha, gasoline, or some of those explosive products for their power. Besides, the machinery to operate than is very heavy, the battery alone weighing from 600 to 1500 lbs., so that one must have the vehicle very heavy and clumsy because he has on a good big load before he puts on his own load.

A great many people forget that a good, well broken horse does more than half the driving. When riding in an automobile and guiding it yourself you have to keep your eye right ahead of you. If you don't you are going to get into trouble. When you have a well broken horse, and when he comes to a bad place in the road, he slows up; and when he comes to cross roads or a curve in the road, or in turning a corner, he knows just how to get around. And another thing, a horse can exert two or three horse power momentarily to help you out of a mud hole or a steep pinch in the road.

A great many people think that if they had a horseless

These mares are in excellent condition and the Eastern sales of the trotting stock from this farm have always been very successful, because the greatest attention is paid to the care and development of everyone consigned.

The Messrs. Pierce Bros own stock farms in Alameda and Santa Barbara counties, and, notwithstanding the "hard times" of the past five years have continued purchasing the very best horses and mares, until to-day their possessions embrace some of the choicest strains of trotting blood in the United States. To their enthusiasm and enterprise are all lovers of the light harness horse indebted for the work so quietly accomplished by these gentlemen in encouraging our California breeders to breed to the best, and to find them a place on which they could train their horses knowing that so far as they were concerned, the opinion expressed about their Santa Rosa Stock Farm and track would be: "It is second to none in America!"

Automobile Veruee the Hores.

The following communication on the relative merits of the new fangled traveling machine as against the horse will be read with interest. It is from the president of the Columbus Buggy Co. to his representative here, Mr. A. G. Glenn.

"Yours of the 8th inst. in regard to automobiles received. The manufacturers have not gotten a perfect automobile yet. When they do get one that is a practical vehicle for general use the Columbus Buggy Company will make the best one on the market. Thus far they are impractical and only a plaything for some of those fellows who do not have enough money to buy a steam or sailing yacht but who will buy automobiles and spend their idle lives in riding in them instead of doing nothing in some other way.

The only way that they can be utilized and he at all practical is for some company in a large city to own and operate them in large numbers for street purposes, only sending them out under the care of a practical man, and at night, when they come into the stalls or roundhouse, they should be thoroughly overhauled, valves and packing looked after, oiled up, and put in the best possible shape to make the trip out the next morning. John Q. will understand this language probably better than you, he having been a locomotive engineer himself.

I had quite a talk with Edison at Chataqua last week and he said that they would never be operated successfully every-

CLOSE OF GOLDEN GATE FAIR.

Grand Conteete and Large Attendance on the Last Daye of the Meeting.

The last two days of the Golden Gate Fair at Oakland were well attended and the racing program on both days were first class. The Directors of the Association deserve great credit for their excellent management of this meeting and the horsemen are loud in their praises of the cordial treatment received from the officials and the prompt manner in which the purses were paid.

Old Klamath 2:07 1/2, on the strength of his record made three years ago, and his reputation as a stretch trotter, was made the favorite in the free for all trot on Friday, but he was beaten to the wire both heats of the race by Toggles 2:09 1/2, and Iora 2:11, and it looked as if they both simply out trotted him. Klamath is no colt and his fourteen years do not sit so lightly on his shoulders as to permit his being driven from start to finish in a race where he meets horses that can trot in 2:10 or better on a good track.

There were seven starters in this race Friday and they were a grand looking lot of horses. Toggles, who won, is one of the nicest driving horses ever hitched to a sulky. He can handle easily, does nothing but trot, and has bursts of speed when called on that are close to a two-minute clip. Iora, the daughter of Ira, catches the eye of every admirer of a trotting horse, and holds it while she is on the track. She has great speed and is one of the best prospects in California. If she were taken East there would be competition in the auction ring for possession of her for a matinee trotter. She is as handsome as a picture and very speedy. The big stallion Clay S. 2:13 1/2, seventeen hands high and long in proportion, is a horse that always attracts attention. His great speed and tremendous stride will land him in the 2:10 list some day when he gets off well and has clear sailing. Claudius 2:13 1/2, is a son of Nutwood Wilkes that has been on the road for two years and has had but little preparation this season. He is fully as fast as ever and should improve with a few more races. Neerant 2:12 1/2, was very rank in this race, but his speed was marvelous and when he has a little more work will have a very hard one to beat in any company.

Mr. Ford, his owner, confidently expects to see him a 2:10 trotter before long. Galetta 2:12 1/2, jumping and skiving, but fast as ever, seemed to have more speed than ever. There was considerable scoring the first heat before the word was given, and when they finally got away Iora went to the lead with Claudius close to her. Neerant was breaking badly when the word was given, and many thought he would be distanced, but his great speed saved him. At the half-mile pole Iora was first, Claudius second, Toggles third, and Klamath, who was a few lengths back, began closing the gap. There was a hot drive around the turn, and when half way down the stretch Klamath got in front, but here Clark called on Toggles for one of those speed bursts and he responded. He passed Klamath and Iora, and in the rush the old horse broke and Clark and Donathan made a drive that was of the thrilling kind. Clark's horse had the most speed and he won by half a length. The second heat was much like the first, Toggles having the most speed and being as steady as a clock all the time. His win was a popular one, though it is probably Old Klamath carried the most money.

A field of twelve horses tried to line up for the 2:15 pace, but it was hard work, and the starts were pretty ragged. In the first heat of this race J. B. Iverson's little chestnut mare Dictatrix marched out in front and took the heat in 2:16 1/2, thus reducing her record two seconds. The speed shown by Arthur W. at the finish made the big stallion favorite for the next heat and the race, however, and he landed easily enough. Summaries:

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 2.

The largest attendance of the Golden Gate meeting was on the closing day, Saturday. Seven races were on the card, two for trotters, one for pacers, and four for the running brigads. Five horses started in the 2:30 trot, with El Moro, the black son of Longworth that trotted to a record of 2:20 the Monday previous, selling as favorite, with Monros Salishny's Aliz B. sharing that honor with him part of the time. When the start was made, Joe Edga's big horse Hank, by Vasto, went to the front and apprised everyone but his owner and driver by winning the heat in 2:23. El Moro had no speed and finished last. Aliz B. made such a good showing in finishing second that she was then made favorite for the race, and justified the faith put in her by winning the next three heats handily, getting a record of 2:24 1/2 and thus giving Nutwood Wilkes another standard performer. Her win was a most popular one, as she is the first of the string being campaigned on the circuit this year by the veteran Monros Salishny.

The 2:19 trot had a field of six to contest for the money, with the handsome black stallion Addison, by James Madison, as favorite. Theron, a big handsome bay gelding by Albion, was pretty heavily played to win the first heat as he is known to be a very fast for a short distance and it was thought he might last long enough to lead his field to the wire. He got to the half all right, but had about all he could do to finish second, the little mare Twilight giving him a race through the stretch, and in the next heat she beat him. Addison won both heats and the race handily, never having to extend himself during the race. He was admirably handled by that popular and excellent driver, Ed Lafferty.

Myrtha Whips won the 2:25 pace in straight heats. There were but three starters in this race. Valeria and Wild Ntling divided second and third money. The running races were well contested and there were several upsets for the talent during the day. The summaries follow:

The Palace Hotel.

Travelers who have visited the principal cities of the old and the new worlds say that the big caravansary in San Francisco excels in equipment, cuisine and service any hotel in either hemisphere.

Last year the Grand Hotel, which with the Palace is the property of the Sharon estate, was placed under the latter's general management. Mr. J. C. Kirkpatrick, a gentleman of well known executive ability, is in control of both institutions.

The Grand Hotel, owing to its central position, has for many years been the favorite stopping place of the country merchant, miner and farmer and not a few horse owners.

One of the advantages to the Palace, brought about by the assignment of both establishments under one management, is that it makes available a large number of rooms which in the event of an overflow of patronage would come in very useful, while on the other hand it provides for the guests of the Grand Hotel many advantages in service and accommodation which are provided at the Palace for its own patrons.

In the grill rooms of the Palace may be seen daily the clever 'uns of the metropolis of the west, discussing finance and the affairs generally of the business world. In other words it's cafe and grill are the centers of life in San Francisco. Then there is the ladies' grill room where the fashionables from the city and suburban towns meet.

The careful attention given by the management to the want of its guests, the princely furnishings met with in every apartment and the hospitality shown to all render the Palace a favorite with travelers from every clime. The leading turf men of the east and west put up at either place.

For all Purposes.

Do you wish for "A Lake and a Fairy Boat to sail in the moonlight clear. And merrily to sail away from the demons that watch you here?"

If so get a cabinet launch fitted with a Union Gas Engine. Do you wish to crush barley, saw wood, bore for oil or water, run a threshing machine, draw the plow by traction, or hoist ore or in fact perform two-thirds of all work usually done in mine or on the ranch and all without the necessity of employing a skilled engineer? If so investigate the merits of the Union Gas Engine. You may be surprised at the variety of uses to which it may be put and the question you will ask yourself is not whether you can afford one, but whether you can afford to do without one.

THE FORTY-SIXTH STATE FAIR.

The Grandest of State Expositions Now On at Sacramento.

The 46th annual exhibition of the products of California opened at Sacramento last Monday in a regular blaze of enthusiasm. The work of President Spreckels, Secretary Shields, the Directors of the State Agricultural Society and the Citizens Committee of Sacramento was rewarded with the largest crowds ever seen at track and pavilion on an opening day.

The Exposition building never looked better for a first night. Nearly every exhibit was in place. The decorations are simply grand, and as for the exhibits they are of the first order. The local merchants via with each other in this respect and have spent thousands of dollars to make a great show. The building is full of electric lights of various colors, which show off the exhibits in superb style.

Everybody prizes the Citizens' State Fair Club and the State Fair Directors admit that without their assistance the fair would have been a fizzle. The club raised over $3,000 to help the fair along, and the good to which it has put the money is shown by the exhibits and the excellent programme of attractions arranged for every day of the fair.

Governor Gage, who arrived from San Francisco for this purpose, formally opened the fair. Thomas W. Enright, the President of the Citizens' State Fair Club, started the ball by introducing Banker Fred Cox, the Vice-President of the State Board of Agriculture, who highly complimented the Citizens' Club for the labor it performed in bringing about the fair's success.

Governor Gage, who followed, speaking from the band stand in the center of the pavilion, also complimented the club. He enlazed California for being in the position to furnish the Philippines and the Orient with such products and articles as they require.

The attraction of the night was the baby show. Over 112 babies, including five sets of twins, were entered, and it was a sight to behold. There was a parade of the infants in gorgeously decorated carriages, after which the judging began. This proved to be an awful task to the three women judges, on account of the persistence of the mothers in demanding recognition for their respective offspring. After a great deal, however, Ruth Higgins was declared to be the prettiest girl baby, and Eugene Kleegs the prettiest boy baby. Both were awarded a State championship gold medal.

The State Fair Club offered prizes for the ladies' organizations, fraternal or otherwise, having the largest representation at the Pavilion. Over twenty organizations participated in the contest, with a representation of about 500 members.

Seldom has an opening day at the State Fair seen such a crowd as passed through the turnstiles at the Agricultural Park. The weather was perfection itself for racing purposes but the track was fully three seconds slow for the harness horse.

In the judges' stand J. W. Wilson of Sacramento presided with Directors A. W. Barrett and Joe Terry as associates. Frank Covey, of Palo Alto Stock Farm, acted as starting judge, and his splendid start-offs were pleasant features of the harness sport. Dick Havey sent the running fields nicely aligned, and Galen Brown and F. Delong were the timers.

The wants of the betting public were attended to by four books, a combination book, an auction book and two Paris mutual machines. The racing was clean and interesting throughout, resulting in four favorites getting home in front, Lena A., Daedalion, Midlove, Princess Ziska and Nilgar were the money winners.

Shortly before 2 o'clock the bell tapped out the five starters for the rich Occident stake, worth $1825 to the winner, for three-year-old trotters. Lena A., over which W. Hogaboom held the ribbons, was the pick of the talent and she 1 to 2 laid against her before the first heat seemed a liberal quotation. She proved worthy of the trust for she won in three straight heats, the fastest mile being covered in 2:21 1/2.

Quite another tale was the 2:30 class pace, in which the winner was announced only after a desperately contested six-heat struggle. The race finally went to Daedalion, which, on his impressive showing at the Santa Rosa meet was installed as favorite.

Second choice in betting, the strongly touted Princess Ziska, ridden by Jaka Ward, placed the Shafter selling stakes at six furlongs to her credit. San Thomas, with ninety-nine pounds and Tommy Butler in the saddle, was the pick of the talent, going to the post at 7 to 10.

Away first, Snello, the Storm entry, led the small field to the stretch, with the Princess and San Thomas close up. Here the latter had enough, and in a long, hard drive Ward landed his mount a winner by over a length in 1:15 1/2. Parmayah and Mandams were outclassed.

Midlove, ridden by Entler, made short work of the big field in the six-furlong scramble. An even money favorite, she took the lead soon after the start, leading out Madafa, a 20-to-one shot, with pounds to spare. Manzanilla ran third.

On the strength of reported fast work-outs, the old mare Monrovia, with Charley Thorpe on her hack, opened up a 3-to-5 favorite for the final mile selling run. Later a play came in on Nilgar, sending him to the post equal choice with Monrovia.

At the turn Thorpe, on the latter, was nearly thrown, and was never after dangerous. Driving hard for over a furlong Ward on Nilgar, reached the wire half a length before Donator in 1:41. Summaries:

TUESDAY, SEPT. 5.

The big crowd at Agricultural Park to-day witnessed some great sport and many close and exciting finishes, but the speculative element was badly worsted in the battle with the books. Beginning with Dakan D, the top-heavy choice for the two-year-old pacing stake, every favorite right down the line contributed toward separating the talent from its coin. Nearatta was looked upon in the nature of a cinch for the 2:16 trot, but drawing the pole enabled H. Hogaboom to land honest-going Our Lucky winner in two straight heats.

Then followed in the running events the crushing defeat of Mt. McGregor II, favorite for his Flash stake; The Scott and Libertine. On the latter horse the books were besieged with coin, until they finally turned their slates toward the wall.

The weather was warm and balmy and the track somewhat faster for the harness horses than on the opening day. There were no perceptible changes in the program, the crowd leaving for home before 6 o'clock.

Promptly at 1:30 the judges' bell tapped out the three starters in the baby pacing event. In Dakan D, a shapely bay youngster by Athadon, Owen of Fresno was supposed to possess another Joa Wheeler and 3 to 5 was laid against the two-year-old. Valita, the Santa Rosa Stock Farm's candidate, was well supported at even money, with Waldstein Jr. the rank outsider. They shot away to a perfect start and Owen led the way with the favorite until well into the stretch, where the pace told and the little fellow left his feet. Ables, bahin Valita, then had a lazy drive of it home, winning by nearly three lengths in 2:24. Waldstein was not a contender.

The odds now shifted about, Valita enjoying the place of honor in the books. Onca mora Owens led to the turn but Dakan D broke at the stretch turn, and, taking the lead, Valita won about as she pleased in 2:28 1/2. In this heat Waldstein Jr. graw vary lag wsary, getting the distance flag.

The downfall of the crack black mare Nseretta in the 2:16 trot, two in thraas, was wholly unexpected. The field was a large one, and as the favorite draw an outside position the wise ones concluded to play Our Lucky, the pola horse, for the "opener." The latter closed favorite, while the price against Nseretta drifted from evens to 3 to 2. The move was a wise one, for after Saba Francis had led the procession to the band for home, Hogaboom called on Our Lucky, and the stocky bay won the heat comfortably by a length from Addison, driven by Lefferty, in 2:15 1/2. Brooks, sitting behind Nearatta, laid away among the tail enders until striking the stretch, where the mare came fast, finishing a close third. Daimont and Sue were distanced.

With her improved position in the heat to follow, and her recent victories at Oakland and Santa Rosa fresh in mind, the talent now unloaded on Nearatta at odds of 3 to 5. Our Lucky's price remained at 6 to 5. In this heat Driver Hogaboom showed himself to be a "teamster" above the average. Rushing Our Lucky along, he was first at the quarter by nearly a length, trailed by Bonsalina, Neeretta and Marnia Rilay. When the half was reached Saba Francis had dropped out and the favorite moved up a peg. Turning into the stretch, Hogaboom went wide with Lucky, carrying Nearatta out into the deep going. It cupped out under the latter and Our Lucky again won cleverly by a length in 2:14 1/2. Marnia Rilay was a fair third.

The track was now given up to the runners. The Flash Staka at six furlongs attracted a varied assortment of speed to the post, with the Burns & Waterhouse entry Mt. McGregor II, carrying 107 pounds a 3 to 4 favorite. Of the other starters, Novia and February were intrusted with the most coin. To the stretch it was a two-horse race, the favorite and Bamboulla setting a heart-breaking clip. The latter snapped first, and a furlong from home Jones on Novia tried to pass McGregor next the rail. He was cut off, and while extricating himself from the dilemma, Q. Morse came along on the 8 to 1 chance Hohenzollern, winning hands down. The first choice lasted long enough to beat Novia a neck for the place. February was well played, but Tullatt managed to get almost led at the post, not an infrequent trick of his. The winner was but slightly backed.

In the two-year-old scramble at five and one-half furlongs, the past clever performances of Bathos were overlooked, the big money going into the books on The Scot, with little Walsh up, at odds of 3 to 5. If The Scot was possessed of any speed, Walsh was utterly unable to make him show it, for he was near among the leaders. Duffy, astride Bathos, hustled the Montana colt away in front, and, stalling off the challenge of Midity in the run to the stand, earned the verdict by a neck. The last named filly, a daughter of Verdlothian, will evidently bear watching. Eddia Jones, on The Buffoon, took show honors.

The concluding number on the card, a seven furlong run, was a fierce battling affair. In the overnight betting, Alaria was quoted at 3 to 1, but the tip on her proved so contagious that at the track this afternoon 6 to 5 was about the best laid. After opening up at even money, the price against Libertina touched 8 to 5, when a plunge compelled the ring to swipe to 4 to 5. Meadow Lark and Mika Rica also had many friends. At the start Tommy Butler on Alaria was unfortunate in getting away poorly, which ultimately contributed to the filly's downfall. Sullivan, with the leg up on Mike Rice, sifted away in the lead, trailed by Snider on Libertine. This was the order into the stretch, the two leaders being there joined by Alaria and Meadow Lark. Sullivan put up a superb ride on Rice, holding his mount wall together, and in a gruelling drive, led Libertina over the wire a scant half-length, with Meadow Lark at their saddle skirts. It was an "agla bird" for the books. Sommarias:

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6.

It is safe to say that the attendance at the Fair will be a record breaker this year. Every day's receipts have been way above the corresponding days of previous years, and it is said that the gate receipts for the first three days already exceed that of any previous week. The park was crowded Wednesday, and there was scarcely promenade room at the Pavilion that evening.

The racing program opened with a walkover by the good three-year-old John A, owned by P. H. Quinn of Eureka. He was the only starter for the pacing stake for horses of his age, and jogged around the track for the money paid it, which amounted to $185.

There were eight starters for the 2:22 trot. Lottie, the brown daughter of San Diego that has shown such improvement since coming into the hands of Trainer Spencer, was made the favorite and won in straight heats. Dora Do, a daughter of Don Lowell, got record money, and trotted a good race.

A special trot for a purse of $300 was a hotly contested race, and enabled Hi Hogaboom to get up behind D. E. Knight's handsome horse Daimont, and show his brother Will how to win with him. Dr. Frassa won the first heat of this race, incidentally knocking three-fourths of a second from his record and putting it at 2:18. Marnia Rilay captured a heat, but as she had raced the day before could hardly be expected to make an extra good showing, though she was game throughout and always a contender for first place.

Only three runners started for the Dawey selling stake one mile, Midlova closing favorite over Nilgar and Jennia Raid. Midlova sailed away in the lead, opening up several lengths of daylight, with Ward on Nilgar taking matters easy. At the stretch the leader was all out and Nilgar, assuming command, disposed of Jennia Raid with little to spare.

Cromwell had been passed around all day as the real thing for the mile-and-a-sixteenth selling run, which caused him to be set up an even-money chance. The chestnut ran a good race after his long rest, but was headed from start to finish by the 8-to-1 shot New Moon, well rated by young Monnce.

Nine platers went to the post in the final number, a six-furlong sprint, decided under selling conditions. After being cut off on the back stretch Thorne, astride Panamint, hooked up with Mafada and Manzanilla the last furlong, and in a very exciting drive was first by a neck. Summaries:

Huntsman and His Owner.

Among the many well bred horses owned by the leading clubmen of San Francisco there is probably no more distinguished individual so far as looks, breeding and relationship to great horses is concerned than Huntsman, owned by the well known shipping commissioner, Mr. J. J. Moore of this city. Mr. Moore takes great interest in all outdoor sports and has been one of the leading spirits in the organization of the Menlo Park Amateur Racing Association. Huntsman is a magnificent bay, by Prince of Norfolk, out of Haidee, by King Alfonso, therefore full brother to those good performers, Rey Alfonso and Rey del Tiarra. Prior to his purchase by Mr. Moore a few weeks ago, Huntsman has been raced yearly since his first appearance as a two-year-old, and has shown that he possessed speed and weight carrying ability on the flat and over the sticks. His best performance on the flat was five-eighths in 1:01, won in a romp. Huntsman during his career has beaten all the best timber toppers that have raced here at the local tracks.

The Best Inheritance.

Hanry Spencer one of the world's greatest thinkers and philosophers says that to enable one to help himself is one of the noblest missions in life. To fit young men and women to be able to help themselves in the battle of life, to equip them with the mental training and to sow the seeds of emulation and ambition is most laudible. Whether delving deep in the recesses of mother earth for precious metals to assay and analyze them, or threading the electric wire to flash intelligence over the land, or to apply the subtle fluid to its many mechanical powers, to contend in the busy marts of trade or to handle the large affairs of commerce, the intricacies of banking and insurance, the expeditious and exact art of book-keeping, the rapid choniching of words by steno-graphy, the manipulation of the time saving typewriter, the ability to speak, write, spell and compute correctly, are indeed the chief factors in the strife. Heald's Business College is an institution whose aim is to do all this. Watchful interest, careful training and skillful teaching are its chief characteristics. No institution in the land is more thoroughly equipped and better able to give to its pupils a complete practical education than is Heald's Business College. The negligent and laggards are spurred on in the strife, emulation is provoked and one and all lured on to those inspiring toils by which man masters man. Parents and guardians can give no richer legacy to their charges than a course in this admirable institution.

The "Occidental," Santa Rosa.

In the thriving and pretty little city of Santa Rosa the commercial traveler, horse owner and general public find a hotel—the Occidental—which has the advantage of being centrally located. To the former class it offers the only simple rooms in the place, and naturally the commercial man finds it his temporary home during his brief stay there.

It is the headquarters for horse owners and breeders during fair seasons, and where the classes above referred to gather is a sufficient guarantee that the table and apartments are first class.

The Occidental, which is situated at the corner of Fourth and B streets, has a frontage of 130 feet on the city's principal thoroughfare, Fourth street, by 200 feet on B. The father, the late D. G. Bane, and sons conducted the hotel for some twenty-four years, and in his lifetime no host was better liked than Mr. Bane. Now the management devolves upon Frank P. Bane, who fills his late father's place admirably.

During the recent Fair, Frank was ably assisted by his brother, Charles H. Bane, the well-known attorney of San Francisco, and by their mother, Mrs. Bane, who is most active in looking after the comfort of guests. Charles is the legal as well as general adviser of the estate, and the three brothers and their mother appear to work in perfect harmony as regards the management of the hotel, realty and other vast properties of the estate.

FREDERICK BONNEB says the published report that all of the trotters belonging to Robert Bonner's estate are to be sold at auction next fall is without foundation. Nothing definite has been decided upon concerning the horses at Mr. Bonnar's Tarrytown farm and city stables, but it is almost certain that not all of them will be sold. Maud S. 2:08 and Snel 2:08 1/2, as well as others that were particular favorites of the noted horseman, will be reserved from the expected sale. Mr. Bonnar's last catalogue, issued in 1897, contained the pedigrees of 74 animals, but he sent several of them to the auction ring.

THERE is horse talk galore at Kapp & Streets, 1200 Market street every evening. It is headquarters for those who drive on the Speedway, and is rapidly becoming the harness horse centre of San Francisco.

Saddle Notes.

Garland Barr's entry is now refused at Harlem.

Foul Spot's progeny in New Zealand during the racing season of 1898-9 won $8,860.

Joe Ullman, ridden by Lester Reiff, won the FitzWilliam Stakes at Doncaster last Tuesday.

Arhaces, full brother to Diggs, won a mile race at Sheepshead Bay on September 5th, winning in 1:42 3-5.

James Givens has purchased Elbe from Barney Schreiber who has also disposed of three Kingston yearlings for $10,000.

Loving Cup and Sen Sen, the latter a winner at St. Louis at odds of 100 to 1, are among the recent arrivals at the Oakland track.

Cyrenian, by St. Simon from the Springfield mare Daisy Chain, is the latest importation from England to New Zealand, where he will take up stud duties.

Judge Joseph Murphy is taking a vacation from his duties in the stud, which have lasted continuously for ten months, at Lake Villa in the neighborhood of Chicago.

Tod Sloan rode Golden Rule to victory at Doncaster, Eng., on Tuesday, strange to say, the same day that the Golden Garter gelding of the same name won in America.

Colonel Jack Chinn was a purchaser at the sale of the Kingston Stud yearlings, paying $1,450 for Jilsen's half brother, a brown colt by imp. St. George out of Marie Jensen.

Another track record went glimmering at Hawthorne on Tuesday last when Carnero won a mile and a sixteenth in 1:45, one and three quarters seconds better than the previous mark.

King's Highway, who broke out of the maiden class at Harlem last week after having raced two years, is a grandly bred horse, being by imp. Meddler out of imp. Little Lady II.

Up to July 31st Orme, by Ormonde—Angelica, headed the list of winning sires in England with $164,075 to his credit. Flying Fox, of course, being his chief winner with $130,875.

The Bechelor with 120 lbs. up and ridden by Clawson, won a two mile handicap on the turf at Sheepshead Bay on August 30th and incidentally reduced the official course record to 3:31 2-5.

The Hawthorne track must be lightning fast just now to judge from the utmost daily equalling or smashing of records. Wednesday last Mr. Nebate in a mile for three-year-olds negotiated it in 1:39 1/4.

Two track records were reduced at Hawthorne on Monday last, Flamora winning a five and a half furlong race in 1:07 1/4 and Algerette, with Montgomery second, taking the six and a half furlong event in 1:20.

Accidents are common in the steeplechases East. N. Roy, who rode My Valentine at Hawthorne on Monday, was dangerously hurt and not expected to live, and Welsh and Stewart sustained broken collarbones.

The American-bred Democrat, with Tod Sloan up, won the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster. "Skeets" Martin rode the third horse, Betty Field, the Duke of Portland's crack St. Simon colt, Simondale, being second.

Pat Dunne's Bennockburn could not do better than third to Previons and Bangle in the Twin City Handicap at Sheepshead Bay, Sept. 4th, in which Imp was started to make the running. The time was slow, 2:10.

Henry (better known as "Skeets") Martin recently established a new record for American jockeys in England. During the three months ending August 28th, he had secured places in thirty races, being outside the money in only one race.

Trainer James Rowe has prepared three winners of the Futurity, Potomac and L'Alonette being the predecessors of Chacornac. This ties the enviable record of J. J. Hyland, who had scored with His Highness, Requit and the Butterflies.

The latest accounts from England, omitting the last two weeks racing, give "Skeets" Martin a better average than Tod Sloan, he having won fourteen out of thirty-eight mounts, while Tod had sixty-seven out of a hundred and eighty-four.

Big Bill Jackman has been reported to have been a big winner in the East to the tune of $20,000, but recent arrivals in the bookmaking line put it down at about one-fourth of that sum. Johnny Coleman has done exceedingly well, as also Charlie Quinn.

The Turf Handicap, one mile and a quarter, at Sheepshead on Sept. 1st fell to the black wonder Imp, who, with 128 lbs up, made all her own running and own fighting for her head in the fast time of 2:07 1/5, Decanter second and Bon Ivo third.

Ceserion, a two to five favorite in a three cornered affair at five and a half furlongs at Sheepshead Bay, August 30th, seemed to have left all his speed in the stable, and finished a poor second to Lady Lindsey, a filly by Sir Modred out of Momarso.

Ed Corrigan's two-year-old colt, Golden Rule, seems to have rounded into form again. He made his debut at Hawthorne, on Tuesday this week, in a five and a half furlong race and won easily in 1:07, lowering the track record by a quarter of a second. Tar Hill finished third.

David Garrick, who by good judges was at one time looked upon as a likely candidate for honors in the Futurity, was made favorite for the Flatbush Stakes, seven furlongs for two-year-olds at Sheepshead last Saturday and was about the only horse backed but he finished nowhere to Lieutenant Gibson, McMeekin and Sarmatian, the time, 1:30, being good for the track.

Seddnee was made a warm first choice for the Seppire Stakes, five and a half furlongs for two-year-olds, last Friday at Sheepshead, but after leading three parts of the way he failed to maintain his position, the race being won by Gulden with Coburg second and Hindns third in 1:08 2-5.

The Belle Stekes and the Russet Handicap were the features at Sheepshead last Wednesday, the former for two-year-old fillies over the Futurity Course being won by Musette in 1:10 3-5, and the latter by Prince McClurg, the distance, one and a half miles being made in 2:33 1-5. The Bechelor was third.

W. B. Jennings' crack sprinter Bendoren seems to have all his phenomenal speed with him just now. He won a five and a half furlong race at Sheepshead last week, beating St. Calletine and Jinks by five lengths in 1:07 1-5, and on September 5th he speeded his field in the Flight Stakes, seven furlongs, in 1:26 4-5.

Barney Schreiber's speedy filly, Jinks, scored a clever and well-earned victory at Sheepshead Bay on August 31st, beating Satin Clipper and Pecee in a six furlong race in 1:14 4-5. Mr. Schreiber, whose turf luck for the last year has not been of the best, had a comfortable bet on his filly at odds of 3 to 1. Spencer rode end put up a well-judged race.

Those who have claimed for Seddnee all through the racing season that he was the best two-year-old of the year, simply because he had run through an unbroken string of victories, had their claims somewhat damaged on August 30th at Sheepshead Bay, when, in the Dash Stakes, a five furlong spin over the Futurity Course, he ran nowhere to Mesmerist, Musette and Gulden in a field of eleven. Mesmerist too carried stoke weight, 127 lbs., while Seddnee was in at 109 lbs.

Grandmaster, who has just died in Australia at the age of 31 years, was purchased in England as a yearling by the Hon. James White. He was by the French horse Gladiator from Colerims, by Stockwell and was bred by Mr. Blenkirou at the Middle Park Stud. As a potent sire who got them good at all kinds of racing, on the flat or over timber it would be hard to find a better. His best were Gibraltar and Gipsy.

Jolly Roger reduced the track record at Harlem last week for a mile and a quarter to 2:06 1/4, besting very easily Harry Nutter, to whom he had run third in a seven furlong race the previous week in 1:26 1/4. S lvers, a stable boy, rode Jolly Roger on that occasion, while Beachamp had the mount in his recent victory, sufficient reason in addition to the different distance to account for the apparent reversal of form.

Opinions as to the merit of Chacornac, the winner of this year's Futurity, differ widely. Indeed such totally divergent opinions have very rarely been entertained by horsemen in regard to the winner of so important an event. Mr. W. H. Rowe, the brilliant defender of the Bruce Lowe theory, is not very much in love with him as an individual, though Chacornac's pedigree shows that he comes by his racing qualities honestly enough.

In winning the Woodcote Stakes at Epsom, a two-year-old named Bonarose was credited with running six furlongs in 1:11 2-5, which, as the youngster carried 124 lbs, suggests that the full distance was not covered, or else the official timekeeper was not looking when the race started, and the watch was consequently started a bit late. At the same meeting another two-year-old, O'Donovan Bossa (121), won the Great Surrey Breeders' Foal Plate, five furlongs, in 57 3-5 seconds.

A meeting of the stewards of the Jockey Club was held at the office of the Jockey Club, 173 Fifth avenue, New York, August 25th, at 5 o'clock. The stewards present were James R. Keene, J. H. Bradford, James Galway, F. R. Hitchcock, Andrew Miller and F. K. Sturgis. The report of the stewards of the Saratoga Association in regard to Jockeys W. Martin and H. Turner was received and confirmed, and it was ordered that the license granted to Jockey W. Martin be revoked, and that the suspension of Jockey W. Turner be continued indefinitely.

The Omulium handicap, one and one-eighth miles, which was run at Sheepshead Bay on Sept. 2d over a track deep in mud, was a good race from start to finish, and fell to the California mare Maxine in 1:58. Marimas made the running closely followed by Maxine, the pair being joined by Kuley Mack at the upper turn, and the three running locked to the stretch where Marimas quit. Kuley Mack then led for a few jumps but could not stall off the game daughter of the dead Maxine who finally won easily with Prince McClurg second and Swiftmas third.

Germaine (St. Germain—Galopade), who won the Prix de Diane (French Oaks), value about $15,000, at the Chantilly meeting, is another instance of the luck attaching to the purchasing of yearlings. Germaine's sire, St. Germain, a grandson of Hermit and Blair Athol, was sold for $160, and her dam, Galopade (by Nongat), made at auction the sum of $2750. Germaine was sold as a yearling to the Merquis de Montesquieu at the Tattersall Yearlings for $82, and he was so little pleased with his bargain that he sent her up a few months afterwards to the Tattersall Francais, where she was knocked down to her present owner for $315. Last year she won close on to $4000, which, when taken into account with the stakes in the Prix de Diane, shows a very handsome dividend for the original outlay.

The way of the transgressor is hard, sometimes in racing circles. You may see trainers and owners and booksellers who have been ruled off for life, "bob up again serenely," be reinstated with the aid of a pull, and be living as comfortably as the prosperous tont who can hob nob with the highest of racing officials, but the unfortunate rider, some little ignorant half-educated stable boy with fair hands and feet and the possibility of a future as a jockey, who yielding to the glittering temptations held out by the ever-present manipulator, is caught dead to rights, he can starve and work out his own damnation. McNicholl, to judge from a recent story from Chicago, is now paying the penalty of his accommodativeness. But what of the men he accommodated? It is not the question of preaching mercy for the juvenile thieves, it is only inviting the authorities to mete out justice to the Pegins of the turf.

According to Eastern papers there is to be a revival of winter racing on that side of the continent and a track will be ready by the middle of November or first of December, in Prince George county, Md., on Curtis Bay, an inlet of Chesapeake Bay, about thirty miles from Washington, D. C. There is to be, its promoters claim, amongst whom are Otto Mears, the Colorado millionaire, a United States Senator and some New York politicians, high class racing and high-class gaming, similar to that which redounds to the prosperity of Seretoge in the summer season.

Arthur Bowers is writing just as strong as ever on the existence of turf abuses and the necessity for reform, and incidentally takes a fall out of the powers that be in the East. Here is what he recently said: "At this juncture the betting ring dictates its own terms. What bookmaker has been ruled off in 1899? Yet it is commonly suspected that certain bookmakers control certain jockeys. The proof of this may not lie on the surface. Will the turf rulers try to get at the truth? Probably not. They comport themselves in such a fashion as to inspire conjectures that they are in deadly terror of the betting ring."

Vampire, the dam of Flying Fox, winner this year of the 2000 Guinees, Derby, St. Leger, Prince of Wales' Stakes and the Eclipse Stakes, is by Galopin, sire of Angelica, who was the dam of Orme, Vampire's own sire. Vampire's dam, Irony, was by Rosebery, winner of the Cambridgeshire and Caesarewitch, out of Sarcasm, a grand daughter of Stockwell end Blink Bonny. Vampire was a failure on the turf. She ran during two seasons, winning a couple of important races as a two-year-old, another instance, if any were required, that it is the mares lightly trained, or not trained at all, that produce the great winners.

Marty Bergen, the idol of Gttenburg & Gloucester, is once more in California and will ride at the local tracks during the coming winter season. He is now in Sacramento and will get together a small stable of horses. Marty's honesty, his English seat, and his dry humor are proverbial. His best races here were his wins on Rainart in the Burns and Pelace Hotel Handicaps, and on Gileed in the four mile race. He was a pupil of old man Hayward, but the best rider of the trio, Marty, Mike and Joe, was undoubtedly the last named, who was a crackerjack when he met with the unfortunate accident that resulted in his death.

Bnsybody, the dem of imp. Meddler, died recently at Sir J. B. Maple's stud in England. She was bred by Lord Falmonth, being by Petrarch out of Spineway by Macaroni. As a two-year-old she won the Middle Park Plate and in 1884 was purchased by Mr. "Abington" Baird for $22,000, winning for him in that year the One Thousand Guinees to the Oaks. Meddler was her best son. After an unbeaten two-year-old career, end deprived of his admitted certainties for the three great classic races by the death of his owner and nominator, he was purchased by Mr. W. H. Forbes for $72,500, but is now at the head of Mr. Whitney's stud, having been bought by that gentleman last year.

After winning the Ocean Handicap, one mile, value $1,200, at Sheepshead Bay on August 30th, carrying 123 lbs, and running the distance in 1:40 1-5, in which she beat Charectns, Batten, Voter, Swiftmes, Previons and others, the noted Suburban winner, Imp, came out two days later and shouldering the top weight of 128 lbs. in the Turf Handicap, one mile end a quarter, won easily in the smart time of 2:07 1-5, which missed the course record by nearly a second but tied the best mark for the race. Considering the weight carried Imp's performance overshadows the 2:06 2-5 made by Central Trust as a four-year-old with 113 lbs. on June 29th last, and the 2:07 1-5 made by Illume, 4 years, 112 lbs., in 1894.

St Simon, now eighteen years old, is third on the list of winning sires in England, and looks as if he was once more beginning to assert himself. For seven consecutive seasons he headed the list of winning stallions, viz, from 1890 to 1896 inclusive. 1890 was the year when his earliest stock were three year olds, and even the previous year when he had only his first two year olds to represent him he came out third in the list with $111,400 won. In 1897 St. Simon was second to Kendal, and last year he was fifth to Galopin, but the evil days are past, and it will not surprise one to see him at the top again next year, though nothing can displace Orme for the current season. Orme will next year sniffer from a panicky of two year olds, but of course if Flying Fox is kept on his legs he may pile up a big winning total.

Song of the Alpine Traveller.

St. Bernard is a mountain grand
As any there is in Switzerland;
And many a legend of its told,
How Hannibal with his legions bold
Came over its pass in the days of old.
But what care we for that hygone age,
For better subjects our hearts engage
In the noble monks of St. Bernard,
Who o'er the snow region keep watch and ward.

Then hurrah! hurrah for the noble monks,
And the dogs of St. Bernard,
Who over the regions of ice and snow
Keep vigilant watch and ward.

St. Bernard owns a convent old,
Its prior and monks are as good as gold,
Nine hundred years or more it has stood,
And noble the deeds of its brotherhood,
And noble the deeds of its servants good—
Its servants, the grand old dogs whose name
All over the world is known to fame,
Whose service asks no greater reward
Than the love of the monks of St. Bernard.

Then hurrah! hurrah for the noble monks,
And the dogs of St. Bernard,
Who over the regions of ice and snow
Keep vigilant watch and ward.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Mr. G. J. M. E. d'Aquin has entered his fox terrier Victoria Gem (Aldon Swagger—Aldon Radiance) in the Produce Stake of the Pacific Fox Terrier Club.

The litter of Great Dane puppies recently whelped by Mr. J. M. Fairfield's Ynkon are a strikingly handsome lot of youngsters. It is hardly probable that they will remain with Mr. Fairfield very long as there has been a good demand for Blinker Murphy puppies.

Mr. Al. Waddell writes that he would leave Columbus on August 28th for this city. He expected to arrive here on the 5th inst. He brings out a couple of fine pointers, Tick's Sport and Lady Tick by Tick Boy—Dooley, a couple of good cocker spaniels will also arrive here with him.

Alex. C. was shipped to Mr. W. C. Lee, secretary of the Manhattan Field Trials Club at Winnipeg, on August 5th and arrived at his destination in good trim. Alex will be handled in the coming trials at that point by D. E. Rose. The gallant pointer has many friends on the Coast who are hopefully awaiting favorable results.

John Lucas recently received from Alex. C. Colvin, who is at present in Alaska, a photograph of an English setter puppy hitch seven months old, making a heavy point on some Alaskan grouse. The puppy is by Ch. Connt Gladstone out of Frank Maskey's Lady Rod's Chaff. The picture is a strikingly realistic one, if it is any criterion to go by the indications are that Mr. Colvin has a grand young puppy.

Geo. Richards will shortly take a string of the Verona Kennels' setter puppies to Mississippi where he will devote his time and attention to preparing the dogs, some twenty-five in number, for Eastern field trial work. He will take his string north next spring and run them through the entire circuit of Eastern field trials. Mr. de Ruyter argues that it will cost no more to send his dogs on East and run them there than it would to keep them out here. There is also a strong probability of getting some of the Eastern purses, which are of sufficient size to attract competition from the Coast. J. B. Stoddard will arrive about the 15th inst., and will take charge of affairs at Verona Kennels during Richards' Eastern trip. We give in this issue an exterior view of the Verona Kennels and also of a cosy corner in one of the exercising yards of the kennels. The photographs show how happily one can combine utility and appropriate elegance in a place built for a dog's permanent and the owner's temporary home when the latter has a refined taste and the means to gratify it.

Some Fallacies and Fads Concerning Dogs.

Although the dog is very much legislated for nowadays and is generally kept under surroundings far different to those of a hundred years ago, he is undoubtedly better for the care bestowed upon him and the interest taken in his behalf. He is seldom treated badly these times though our police court reports every now and then go to prove that cases of cruelty to dogs are not entirely unknown. In most cases however the punishment dealt out to the offender is sufficiently stern to prevent a repetition of the offense. All our tendencies towards the dog have of recent years been to behave to him more kindly than was our wont. An old wooden cask or empty box turned on end and placed in the back yard was once good enough for his shiding place, now he must have a properly constructed kennel with wooden floors and benching and all other appliances for his comfort. That is, if he is not more cosily kept in the house or in the empty stall next the pony in the stable.

With the increased and still increasing value of the dog more is known about him in every way; his health is a matter of much consideration, and when he seems to be out of sorts the services of a veterinary surgeon are called upon, or his owner will in other ways seek to have his favorite made well. Furthermore most of the idiotic fallacies with regard to dogs have gradually been removed. The man of average intelligence does not now believe that the shortening of his dog's tail gives increased strength to the loins and back; nor does he consider that a similar operation for the purpose of drawing a sinew from the tail and which is called "worming" is a specific against rabies and distemper. Such ideas however have been quite recently prevalent amongst numbers of people. Others again believed that the tail of the male pug was curled over the right or left side of the back, as the case might be, while the caudal appendage of the female was always carried on the opposite side, and so the sex might be determined by the carriage of the stern. The pick of the litter could always be ascertained by holding the little creature up by the tail. The best puppy was supposed to stretch its legs in a peculiar way, and not to cry out; whilst the worst of the lot would just yell, and do nothing else.

Then the other clever dog fanciers would select as the most valuable puppy that which the mother was fondest of. To prove this the youngsters were taken from their hed and placed in another part of the room or yard; then the dam was let go, and her favorite, and, therefore, the best (?) puppy was that which she first took up in her month and returned to its old had. Other fallacious ideas were that the puppy earliest born of the litter was the best, and that the one which first opened its eyes would surely be the champion and so on and so on. Not so many years ago it was believed that the terrier which had not a black roof in its mouth was of plebian parentage and ill-bred, whilst a similar slur was cast upon that which had dew claws upon its hind legs. A truly pedigreed water spaniel was thought only to be perfect when its toes were joined by a web like that of a duck or other water fowl. "The hair of the dog is good for the bite," the practical application of which was a halum in Gilead religiously believed by many whose shins were not proof against sheep teeth.

A much more modern fad was that all St. Bernards should have double dew claws on both hind legs, it being considered by some persons that these deformities or excrescences—they are both—prevented the great dog from sinking in the snow when searching for travelers on the mountains of Switzerland. This idea, to a certain extent, is even still in vogue, and it will be seen that in the earlier tabulated descriptions of the St. Bernard from five to ten points were allowed for dew claws on the hind legs. Instead of being useful to these dogs when engaged in their errands of mercy, a more common sense idea is that they are much in the way. In the earlier days of the popularity of the St. Bernard it was always interesting to observe the judge "looking for dew claws," and it need scarcely be said here that the exhibitor who had a dog which possessed them considered they were much in the dog's favor, while the owner whose dog did not bear the excrescences, believed they were deformities and his opponent should be handicapped accordingly. Wiser counsels now prevail and St. Bernard clubs of to-day do not allow points for dew claws. And why at a time when such things were believed to be a sign of bad breeding in other dogs it should have been considered consistent with purity and blue blood in the St. Bernard is more than anyone can understand.

For what reason the ears of pug and Dalmatian dogs were cropped in the old days is not quite apparent, though, with regard to the former, it has been said that the operation was performed for appearance alone, viz., to make the head seem more like a clenched fist than would be the case when the ears were on. The operation was conducive to deafness, and certainly did not add to the heauty of the creatures. Possibly the Dalmatian was originally deprived of his ears to make him match certain of his master's carriage horses, which at one period were, by the edicts of cruel fashion, treated in a similar manner. The barbarity of either custom need scarcely be dilated upon here, and in the case of the dog cannot have led to anything but mischievous results, for, running at the horse's heels under his master's carriage, he could not avoid having mud and filth splashed or kicked into his ears, which would engender disease and deafness. Possibly the latter may account for the fallacy that the Dalmatian was one of the most stupid of the canine race—he was very often hard of hearing. That these dogs were originally cropped to prevent them having canker in the ear, as has been suggested, is one of the most grievous fallacies. Canker is internal, and more likely to appear in a dog with cropped ears than not, but, of course, the ears being cropped there can be no outer sores, which are produced by shaking the head and so flapping the ears and by scratching with the hind feet.

The fashion of cropping the ears of hull terriers doubtless grew out of the belief that it would be a signal advantage for a fighting dog, which hull terriers originally were, to have the ears removed so that an antagonist would be prevented from seizing them and thereby attacking a vulnerable part. The fallacy of this early belief is shown by the invariable custom of fanciers of the present day who do not crop the ears of fighting dogs; when dogs are fighting a hold on the leather of the ear is easily broken, not so when the thick butt of the cropped ear offers opportunity for a good hold and a leverage that is e telling point against the dog in chancery.

When the show dog was made distinct from the fighting dog, a so-called "fashionable crop" was introduced to the former, the ears being in part cut off and treated "artistically and skilfully" to make them stand smartly erect—almost like a blunted needle at the points. A similar operation was performed on hleck and tan, or Manchester terriers, upon English terriers, and to less extent upon Yorkshire terriers and upon Irish terriers.

The custom of cropping continued in operation in England until March, 1895, when, following a conviction, after proceedings taken against a dog owner for cropping, the Kennel Club suddenly came to the conclusion—which the Irish Terrier Club had, to its credit, done some years previously—that the operation was useless and cruel, and they framed a rule which has led to its discontinuance, although dogs cropped prior to the adoption of this rule are still eligible for exhibition at hench shows under the English Kennel Club auspices. Action in respect to a discontinuance of cropping has not yet been taken by the American Kennel Club but it is believed that the day is not far distant when the practice will be discouraged.

No greater fallacy ever existed than the belief that cropping the ears of dogs was to their advantage, either as a beauty mark or as a preventive of disease. The poor shepherd or farmer, generations ago, had some excuse for shortening the tail of the dog which assisted him with his flocks and herds, for by so doing he became exempt from taxation, so far as that identical animal was concerned. Hence we have a reason for the once common name of "cur" as applied to the sheepdog—a corruption of the word curtail, which, in this connection, "is a dog lawed or mutilated according to the English Forest Laws, and is, therefore, prevented from coursing." Maybe therefrom we have the origin of the still existent docking of our terriers—not to keep them from coursing, for, when used for this purpose, their tails are left entire but the countryman tried to escape the stringent tax by operating upon the dog which he kept to keep down vermin in a similar manner to that he employed upon his shepherd's dog. Perhaps, some day, our humanitarians will succeed in causing a general discontinuance even of this custom, which, though comparatively painless when performed in the right way and at the proper time, has been rled to be illegal.

Taking an Airing.

St. Bernard Notes.

Much is owing to the St. Bernard Club of California, one of the largest and principal specialty organizations on the Coast, for the present high standing and rapid advance to the front on the Pacific Slope in recent years of the saintly breed. The club has been in existence for about five years and has now made the breed it fancies generally the leading feature at our hench shows, both in quality and in numbers. It will be remembered that at the hench shows of the California Kennel Club the entries of St. Bernards were but two or three, later on at the hench shows of the Pacific Kennel Club the entries gradually increased until a hench exhibit of fifty St. Bernards was reached. At the last May hench show, the St. Bernards hench nearly doubled in numbers those of any other breed, there being ninety-three entries of this noble type of the dog. The formation of strong specialty clubs is a potent factor in the advancement of a breed and in the bringing out of a large entry at a hench show.

Among the many magnificent specimens of St. Bernards we have had here we will enumerate a few.—Mr. F. H. Allen's California Alton and Tomah, who each have produced some good young stock. Alton was a hench winner several times. W. Collins' good hitch Lady Bente. Reglow, owned by Dr. Regensberger, though he, unfortunately, was always set back in competition by reason of the loss of an eye. Hector, a grand smooth coat, the property of Franz Frey, who also owned the fine old smooth coat bitch Bianca, who was the dam of A. J. Salazar's bitch Bianca II., a counterpart of the old matron, her son Rbyn taking many honors here this year but now dead, much to the chagrin of Leon Greenebanm, his owner. Champion California Bernardo, by Duke Wellington—Tomah, a splendid young dog who was undefeated until the famous Champion Grand Master won the laurels from him in this city in 1896. Thomas H. Browne brought Grand Mester out here and benched him at every show held in California for two years and never failed to annex a blue ribbon. He was by Champion Hesper, out of Princess Gilda.

This famous dog died two years ago; but he has left a progeny surviving him which will always carry his good name Grand Master II., a son, at our last bench show won everything in rough coats and bids fair to rival his sire. Fred H. Bushnell is the owner of the great smooth coat Champion Le Prince Jr., who won a special for best here this year. This dog won champion honors by going against the best on the Eastern circuit of 1899 at New York, Boston, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, St. Louis and Minneapolis. Mr. Bushnell has another nice one in that sweet little bitch Melro Sylvia, who has a good Eastern bench record. Onas R. Harker, of San Jose, imported Champion Melrose. Alta Millo was brought out here by Joseph Cutten, he is one of the best headed and largest St. Bernards, we believe, that has yet come to the Coast, in condition his weight is 225 pounds. H. H. White, of Oakland, imported Eboracum, who was a great dog in his day, but was never seen on the bench after his arrival in California. Joseph Cutten also brought out Florence, an excellent bitch, who unfortunately lost her life at the hands of a sentinel in the Presidio reservation, she was a winner at Oakland in 1897. Victor Watch, a familiar figure on the Eastern bench and a winner of first every time shown here. This dog was brought to this city by Thos. H. Browne and was of the best strain, being by old Champion Watch out of Sunrise. Mr. Browne also brought out Harold of Navarre, a blue ribbon winner every time he was shown.

The dogs above mentioned were all brought forward under the auspices of the St. Bernard Club, which institution is still thriving financially and otherwise; that its influence in doggy circles has been a predominant one the past history of kennel shows in this city will testify. The officers of the club are Thos. H. Browne, President; Jos. Cutten, Secretary, and Dr. W. R. Cluness Jr., Treasurer.

Mongolian Pheasants.

Many sportsmen are of the sanguine opinion that this variety of pheasant will in a few years succeed the quail as the popular American game bird, that is outside of favored quail localities in this State. The Mongolian or "Denny" pheasant has not only its game and tootsome qualities to recommend it, but also its beauty, in waving plumage of vanishing hues, and therefore will prove a prize that every sportsman will endeavor to secure when the season is once open for its shooting. The successful introduction of the bird in Oregon has attracted the attention of our sportsmen and for the past two years many pairs of the birds have been liberated in this State, and from the reports received from various districts the indications are that, if given a chance, the birds will breed and increase, excepting possibly in the sections bordering on the coast, in the same degree that they have up north.

The Mongolian pheasant was first introduced into this country by Judge O. N. Denny, who was our consular general at Shanghai. He, while there, became deeply interested in the large variety of exquisitely plumaged food birds of that section of the globe, and determined to introduce the hardiest, the most toothsome, and the most prolific bird into the United States. His first experiment in 1881 was a failure, but in 1882 he selected from nine varieties the Chinese ring-necked pheasant, the Mongolian, which is now called in Oregon, in compliment to the introducer, the Denny pheasant.

There were but twenty-eight of these, and they all arrived safely at Portland, Ore. They were immediately liberated among the grain fields and semi-brush-covered and wooded prairie at Judge Denny's brother's ranch in Linn county, there to adapt themselves or go out of existence.

Nothing was seen of the new birds for a year or two, and then here and there in different portions of the county shy little coveys made their appearance, and before five years had elapsed the cucketing of the brilliant-plumaged male birds was far more commonly heard than that of their own native grouse. It should be said that through Judge Denny's instrumentality the Legislature passed a law protecting the new pheasant for a period of five years, and at the expiration of this time, again at his suggestion, the time was extended for another interval of equal length.

At the end of ten years Oregon was literally alive with the Mongolian pheasant, which delights the heart of every sportsman with its swift and rapid flight and tempts the most epicurean palate by its delicate white flesh. The male bird has the cheeks naked and of the brightest scarlet, minutely speckled with black; the crown of the head is bronze green; on each side of the occiput a tuft of dark golden-green feathers capable of being erected at pleasure, and very conspicuous in the pairing season; upper part of the neck dark green, glossed with purple and violet blue; lower part of the neck, breast, and flanks deep reddish orange, showing in some positions beautiful reflections of light purple; each feather bordered and terminated with pansy purple; center of the belly and thighs blackish brown; center of the back and scapular feathers black or brownish black, surrounded with a yellowish white band and bordered with deep reddish orange; lower part of the back and upper tail covert green, intermingled with brownish orange and purplish red; tail feathers brown, crossed by bands of black and, fringed with reddish brown; bill pale yellow; legs and toes grayish black. The female has cheeks covered with small, closely set feathers, and the whole of the plumage yellowish brown, mingled with different shades of gray, brown, and black. Mongolian pheasants are well worth all the expense and care that may be expended upon them.

Canvasback.

Delicious morsel, fit for king or peasant!
For peasants' stomachs are as good as kings';
Sweet canvasback! What memories strangely pleasant
From out the past thy fattened beauty brings!
The odor of good times about these clings,
And in thy presence I recall the days
Of my prosperity. A song it sings
When all my lines were cast in pleasant ways,
And feast and frolic kept the hoisterous night ablaze.
My rule-land I thus hast no clearer claim
To man's respect than that thou dost produce
The canvasback, in form that puts to shame
The other low of epicurean use.
The meaty turkey and far-flying goose,
Though they belong to one generic class,
Lack the fine flavor and abundant juice
Of those proud birds that winter hrigins en masse
In countless thousands to the ponds fringed with tule grass.
Blest be the sportsman when such feathered beauty
Falls tribute to his gun's unerring aim
But cursed he who, thoughtless of his duty,
Neglects to keep the fowl till highly game,
Or eats it while its flavor still is tame.
Ten days must pass before the insoules bird
Is it to satisfy the gourmand's claim.
And then, as all good eaters have averred,
No dancier dish the human palate ever stirred.
Split your fat duck in twain; its equal parts,
Back down ward, place above a quack hot fire;
Press, not too hard, less the rich juice that starts
From all its pores doth in the west fame expire.
Twelve minutes hroll it, but if you desire
It may be longer left to hrown the meat,
Then as the time for serving it draws nigher,
Expose the breast one minute to the h at.
And being thus prepared invite your guests to eat.
With celery salad, dressed in mayonnaise,
Your canvasback is served. And dry champagne
Will quench your thirst and lend a sparkling grace,
'E'en to the faculties of the dulllest brain;
While those that eat will never more complain
That our gastronomy doth something lack,
Or sigh for France's culinary reign.
But will endure, if need be, stake or rack
To hold aloft the fame of native canvasback
No wonder that men liken girls to ducks.
But only girls when young and deobonaire;
For he who captures one such bird and plucks
Its downy feathers sees so much that's fair.
Such fine suggestions of the feast he'll share,
That after that his charmer's modest sweetness,
Her graceful form, her shy coquetteish air,
Her full, plump lips, her beauty and completeness,
Remind him of a duck, in all its lovely sweetness.

Trap Shooting Notes.

In making a comparison between the sport of trap shooting in the United States and England it is surprising to note the small amount of target shooting across the water where the class with time and money to devote to the sport is proportionately much larger. A careful study of the difference in methods and conditions made by a well known sportsman and trap expert this year soon shows why the sport is a success in this country and only just starting in England. Here a club can be organized composed of from twenty to twenty-five congenial members who can fit up a fully equipped ground with a suitable pavilion or house for shelter, etc., set of traps and other appurtenances for from $150 to $500, or it is not always necessary to go even to this expense. In cities where there is a number of organized and well equipped gun clubs who shoot once or twice regularly during the month, the odd days have been used by another club for their shooting meetings upon payment of a comparatively small rental. Blue rocks can be trapped, as is done by many Eastern clubs, for one cent each to the profit of the club treasury. Annual dues are small or in some cases nothing at all. Blue rocks are purchased by the club and trapped by the club, and no one is allowed to make any money out of the same except the club. Dealers generally are glad to buy from jobbers and sell to gun clubs at cost for cash, to encourage the shooting, depending on increased sale of ammunition and guns for their profits. Members buy loaded shells or load the shells themselves, and no restrictions of any kind are made, except as to the quantity of shot, 1 1/2 oz. being the limit. Targets are thrown from the traps a distance of forty-five to fifty-five yards, so as to encourage the beginner, and the principal and good shooting is generally restricted to certain days, with the result that the poorer shots do not pay for the shooting of the better ones. Various systems of directing pools and the distribution of the purses are now used that tend to discourage the winning or losing of much money. Thousands now indulge in the sport for sport's sake, pure and simple, who seldom or never shoot in the field. The increase during the past ten years in the consumption of blue rocks from 2,000,000 to 30,000,000 annually is a strong showing in favor of the growing popularity of the sport. Those who shoot expect it will cost them a reasonable amount of money. All sports cost money, but when so conducted that a few have the sport and make others pay for it, it does not thrive. The observation abroad of the sportsmen above referred to has led to the belief that a change in methods to those in vogue in this country would lead to the same success abroad, in the sport of trap shooting, as holds good here. These reasons are not inapt at present and will undoubtedly prove interesting to shooters. Fitting up grounds properly with the trench, three sets of five traps, etc., is too expensive for any but large and prosperous clubs. Clubs should be run by themselves and not for the benefit of any individual member of the club, and all restrictions as to the kind of cartridge, or by whom sold or loaded, should be removed, except the restriction as to only 1 1/2 oz. of shot. The compulsory use of any certain make of powder or shell or of a particular load, so binds the would-be blue rock shooter up in distasteful restrictions that he drops the whole thing and seeks sport and diversion in another direction. A shooter generally is a "crank" it has been affirmed, and he generally wants to shoot a certain powder in a certain shell, loaded and wadded in a certain way, and if he cannot do it he will not shoot at all. Such "cranks" should by all means be encouraged, as they are always changing loads and guns, and spending their money, if allowed to do so in their own way. Attempt to compel them to spend it another way and the result is that they will not spend it at all. Successful clubs, says Paul North, are like the messes—they are catching. They spread rapidly. Men who never shot a gun in their lives get the disease, buy a gun, and that settles it. They are an asset on the books of all in the trade. An encouragement to the sport is that the game should be made as wide open as possible, reduce the expense to the lowest cost per target, throw the birds so that an ordinary shot can make a respectable score, and shoot for the love of the sport and the recreation that goes with it. Any beginner will learn to become a blue rock shot much quicker if he will shoot 100 shells at 100 targets one at a time than if he shoots both barrels at sixty or seventy. Shooters who have learned to make a fair score with one barrel will make a better one with both. To a beginner the second barrel is a waste of ammunition, and takes one's mind off the reason why the bird was missed with the first barrel. No one can ever learn to be a good trap shot unless he knows just why he missed each bird and corrects the mistake on the next one.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

To clean a dozen quail in six minutes and to do it without even soiling your fingers, you need a pair of scissors. The long-handled, short-bladed scissors used by taxidermists are best, as they cut bones with less exertion of strength. One morning my friend had a bunch of birds before him. Taking up one of them he removed the head, wings and feet in five brief clips, cutting off the wings pretty close to the body, and the legs above the knuckle joint, just where the feathers begin. Then he tore the skin of the breast, rolled it back from the sides, and stripped it down along the back almost in one piece. A few plucks at the remaining feathers left the bird bare except the tuft of feathers on the tail. Again taking up the scissors the artist inserted a sharp point through the flank of the bird up near the shoulder, and made a clean cut back through the ribs to the thin part of the belly, under the end of the breastbone. This was repeated for the opposite side. Of course the bird then fell nearly apart, the viscera being all exposed. The artist did not now reach in with his fingers to eviscerate the bird, but placing the points of the scissors well up in the cavity of the body, just above where the heart lay exposed, he made one neat clip and cut the ligaments which bind the upper viscera to the backbone. Then still using the scissors and not his fingers, he easily and in one movement raked back all the viscera, which hung quite free of the abdominal cavity and attached to the tail, or "Pope's nose." One more clip close up the body severed the "Pope's nose" and viscera and tail feathers all fell at a stroke, the bird remaining in the hand clean and free from blood. The fingers of the artist were not soiled. He could have worn kid gloves and not have soiled them. The bird was as clean as any I ever saw, and the whole operation was performed in one half less time than I ever saw used in doing it before.—Forest and Stream.

At the Traps.

The tournament of the Empire Gun Club today and tomorrow will practically wind up the local blue rock season for this year, the last shoot of which will take place on the Lincoln grounds on the 24th inst, when the Union Gun Club will hold a trap shoot.

The final shoot of the California Wing Club took place at Ingleside last Sunday. In the concluding club race at twenty-five birds interest was centered in the leaders Feudner and Nauman. Feudner was in the lead by one bird. Nauman missed an easy bird from No. 3 trap and Feudner lost his seventh bird, a corker, missing with his first and not holding on long enough with the second barrel. In this race the club added $100 for the shooters, which was distributed as follows: Feudner and Nauman divided first class money, $25, Golcher took $15 and Slade $10 in the second class, Barker $15 and Shields $10 in the third class, and Roos $15 and Donohoe $10 in the fourth class. For the season's prizes, which were three elegant match boxes having an enameled pigeon on one side and the club's inscription on the other, Feudner took first, Nauman the second and Harry Golcher the third. Out of ninety-seven birds shot at during the season, Feudner scored ninety-five, Nauman one less and Golcher ninety-three.

The scores in the club race at twenty-five pigeons and also five back scores at twelve birds each which were shot off before the regular event was started were as follows:

* Dead out of bounds. † Back scores.

The meeting on the Lincoln Gun Club grounds last Sunday was quite a social affair as well as a well conducted trap shoot, many ladies being in attendance, as were other guests of the members. In the first race, W. B. Murdock won first money, and Edg. Forster and F. Feudner divided second. John Karney won first and A. J. Webb and Edg. Forster divided second money in the next race at six pair of doubles. In the third race, Fred Feudner, W. Price and Edg. Forster were the winners in the order named. In the merchandise shoot Ed Schultz took first prize, the shooters who scored seventeen breaks divided the second class prizes, Johnson and Webb divided for third class, Karney won the fourth class prize, and Fischer, Kerrierson and Murdock took the remaining awards in the last class. The handicap race for the medal was a tie between five shooters and will be decided at the Empire shoot today.

A Game Warden's Report.

Humboldt county can still be classed as a sportsman's paradise according to a recent report of Game Warden McDowell. At one time it seemed as though the game for which the county had always been noted, especially deer, would be completely exterminated by the ruthless slaughter of these animals for their hides by a class of hunters that came to be known as "pelt pullers." The rigid enforcement of the game laws, and the watchfulness of the officers entrusted with their execution seem to have bettered the conditions and according to the Game Warden's report deer are now rapidly increasing. The report is as follows:

"I have made no arrests during the last three months. The violation of the game laws seems to have been reduced to a minimum. Deer are increasing in numbers quite rapidly and in places where deer were almost extinct three years ago they now show up quite plentifully, especially in the Kings Peak and Wilder Ridge countries. Deer are now more plentiful in Humboldt county than they have been in ten years. I have not been able to locate that flock of wild turkeys this spring, but from the best information I can get they are in the vicinity of Diamond prairie, not far from Kneeland prairie. The Mongolian pheasants that were turned loose are doing all right. The pair at Kneeland prairie raised a brood last season, but they have not been seen lately. I think they have changed their locality."

J. A. R. Elliott, the present holder of the Cast Iron medal, emblematic of the live bird championship of America, has been challenged by Chas Zwerlein.

THE DETECTION OF LAMENESS IN HORSES.

Among the many things which the intelligent horseman ought to know is, not only when a horse is in good health and condition or when it is sick or unfit for work, but also when it is lame and, if possible, where it is lame, as well as the cause of the lameness. This is indeed expecting a great deal from him, and in truth there are not many amateur horsemen who are privileged to possess this knowledge to such an extent as to meet every requirement; but the more he knows the more likely is he to keep his horses in health, to avoid being imposed upon or misleading others, and to be in a position to apply the stitch in time when anything amiss and expert assistance not immediately available. These remarks are more particularly applicable to cases of lameness, as the ability to distinguish unrhythmical from rhythmical movement of the limbs is often of great moment to those who employ horses, and, in only a less degree, is the faculty of being able to fix upon the ailing leg or legs, and to detect the seat and cause of imperfect movement.

It is more important for the rider to know when a horse is lame than to be absolutely certain as to the part affected or the cause, for an expert can generally be trusted to discover this; whereas, if an animal suddenly becomes crippled and continues to be worked without this being perceived, great, and sometimes even irreparable, mischief may be the result.

Lameness has been defined as the manifestation, in the act of progression, and by one or more of the limbs, of pain or weakness, inability or impediment in movement. Though pain is usually a cause of lameness, yet a horse may manifest irregular or halting movement of the limbs during motion without experiencing pain. There may be stiffness of a joint or malformation of a limb impeding movement, and yet no evidence present of any pain being suffered. For instance, the nervous affection of the limbs popularly known as "stringhalt" is a kind of lameness, and yet there is no sign that it is in any way productive of pain. It is most important to remember this, as very often people who are not acquainted with horses or their diseases, imagine that an animal must be suffering if they see it limp or move unevenly, and very often unfortunate drivers or owners of horses are unjustly punished for cruelty to them because of this mistake—some deformity of a limb preventing its being used so freely as the other legs, but causing no more pain than a club foot or a stiff knee does in man.

Lameness may be only temporary, and be due to local causes, without disease being present. A wound or bruise of the leg or foot, or even a stone lodged between the shoe and sole or about the frog, may induce limping; or lameness may be permanent from chronic disease. Even weakness of muscle may cause lameness in one or more limbs, and the opposite of this condition, such as cramp of the muscles, will produce the same results, as will also partial or complete dislocation of a joint—that of the stifle, for example—in which there is complete inability to draw the hind leg forward.

In some cases lameness is so marked that the veriest tyro can scarcely fail to notice it, especially if only one limb is involved, and to determine in which leg it is. In other instances, however, it is so slight that it may escape casual observation, and even among experts it may chance to be of such a peculiar or trifling character that there will not only be a diversity of opinion as to the limb affected, but whether the horse is at all lame. Therefore it is that a horse will be passed as sound by some experts, and pronounced lame by others, though these again may differ not only as to the seat of lameness, but even as to the lame leg.

Skill in the detection of lameness would almost appear to be a special faculty in some people. Doubtless long experience and close observation among lame horses will tend to render this detection easier and more certain, but there are people whom no amount of practice will thoroughly teach, and whose eyesight and hearing do not enable them to detect if a horse is lame or on which leg it limps. Many even of those who have successfully passed through the veterinary schools have had their professional reputation seriously marred in the early days of their career through failing to detect lameness, or mistaking the limb, the location of the ailment, or the cause. Other men, again, are quick at detecting lameness, and not only in deciding on the lame leg, but in fixing upon the part where the cause of the lameness exists; some of these men can do this in certain cases before the horse has moved many yards.

Of course nothing but practice and careful observation can ensure the acquirement of this knowledge, but a few simple directions may render it easier of attainment.

Lameness is generally detected when the horse is in movement, this being either walking or trotting, or both, though it is generally necessary to make the animal trot in every case, unless the lameness is so marked, or progression causes so much pain, that the faster pace can be dispensed with.

But even when the horse is at rest the existence of lameness may in some cases be suspected from the attitude of the animal and the position of the limb or limbs. One or more of these, if pain is present in them, may be placed forward, backward or outward, and they may be extended or flexed. Indeed, to those who understand the anatomy of the limbs and the physiology of movement, the attitude of the horse and the position of the legs when at rest are in many cases of great diagnostic value. For it is to be observed that a limb in which there is pain is "rested"—that is, relieved from the animal's weight—as much as possible, and the manner in which this relief is effected is an indication not only as to the limb involved, but also, in numerous instances, of the seat of pain or infirmity.

For example, when a horse is experiencing pain in a fore or hind foot, the limb is usually extended forward. If it is in the back part of the fore foot, this "pointing" as it is termed, will be accompanied by raising of the heels from the ground, the symptom so characteristic in cases of corn and navicular diseases; but if the pain is in the front part of the foot, then the heels are placed on the ground more firmly than usual and the toe is relieved as much as possible, this attitude being very characteristic of laminitis. Lameness from injury or disease in the knee or its vicinity is generally marked by the horse standing with that joint bent forward, but when the elbow is the cause of lameness the knee will also be bent in the same direction, but the forearm is carried forward and the foot backward. When the shoulder is the seat of pain, the knee and foot are generally in the same position as in elbow lameness, but the entire limb droops in a very significant manner.

When the pain in the limb is severe, there is frequent, if not incessant movement of it; it is continually being raised from and gently placed on the ground, and if it be a fore limb the litter may be pawed back by it, while the animal's countenance and other signs will betray the agony experienced. Should the lameness be in a hind limb, there are similar indications of great value, and here "knuckling over" of the fetlock is more marked in many of the lamenesses of the hind than of the fore leg. In the majority of these cases the lame leg is advanced, and especially if the pain is below the hock; if the foot is rested on the toe it generally indicates pain in the back part of the limb, tendons, ligaments or heels, while a bent hock is usually seen in disease or injury of that joint. Pain in the hip is manifested by an apparent shortening and resting of the entire limb; stifle trouble is indicated by a peculiar straightening of the leg, which can be drawn backward, but cannot so readily be carried forward. When the pain is in both hind feet, the attitude is very noteworthy; these are brought forward under the body, and they are lifted alternately in an evidently uncomfortable manner, the movement being often accompanied by groaning, hurried breathing, perspiration, and other signs of suffering, while the fore legs are carried back in order to sustain a greater share of weight-bearing. In some cases of this description it has been observed that the pain in the hind feet prevents urination being properly performed. The animal cannot extend itself as it must do in that act, though it may raise the tail and make efforts to carry the hind legs back, but the horse quickly resumes its former attitude with a groan and agonizingly raises the feet in a spasmodic manner. The inability to extend has not infrequently led the attendants to imagine that the urinary organs were at fault.

The position the lame horse assumes when stationary is that in which the infirm or injured parts find most relief, and this indication is of the greatest service in arriving at a knowledge of the cause when the crippled limb has been detected. Sometimes it is necessary slightly to move, or attempt to move, the horse, in order to accentuate the evidence as to the degree and nature of the ailment. In laminitis, for instance, though the attitude is very striking and characteristic when the animal is not disturbed, it is more particularly significant when an attempt is made to make him move a step backward or forward. If the inflammation is at all severe, it is almost impossible to compel the horse to lift the feet from the ground; the body may sway to and fro, but the feet remain fixed as if rooted in the earth, the weight being thrown altogether on the heels, where the inflammation is not so severe.

It is the same with some other forms of lameness, the attitude in the stable often furnishing a valuable guide in ascertaining the leg that is at fault, and even the nature of the damage. It is therefore very necessary to see the horse when at rest in the stable, and the attitude should be observed for a few minutes, and the horse then moved backward and forward, as well as sidewise in his stall. For it is to be remarked that horses affected with certain infirmities of the limbs will exhibit symptoms of lameness in the stable which they quickly lose when exercised out of doors; but when they return and stand still again for a short time, they limp even more than before. Of course, the converse is also true of other kinds of lameness, which may appear to be absent when the horse is in the stable, but become very apparent during movement.

An examination of the limb by eye and hand after movement will in all probability confirm and complete the information acquired by observing the horse during progression. It must be stated, however, that a knowledge of the anatomy of the limbs is of great value in the diagnosis of lameness. It is always advisable to have slight cases of lameness, about which there is any doubt, tested at a trot upon hard ground; a horse which will then show inequality in movement may go apparently sound on a soft surface.

A lame horse in walking or trotting always endeavors to avoid increasing the pain by throwing as little weight as possible on the affected limb. Therefore, if a fore leg is amiss when the foot comes to the ground the head is thrown upwards; if it be a hind leg the quarter of that side is raised when the weight falls on it. It is wrong to say that a horse "drops" on the lame leg. Lamenesses are best detected when standing behind or before the animals in motion; in front of them if the fore limbs are to be observed, behind them if the hind ones are to be scrutinized. Then, having ascertained the lame leg, careful observation of the manner in which the leg is moved, the observer standing on that side, will give an idea as to the region where the cause of lameness is located, and a manual examination will generally complete the diagnosis.

We will now briefly take notice of the accidents and diseases which occasion lameness, in addition to those already mentioned incidentally when dealing with wounds and fractures.

Lameness from navicular disease is less frequent, perhaps, than it was half a century ago, thanks to the better knowledge of the horse's foot and how it should be managed, especially in the matter of shoeing. The causes of this troublesome malady are somewhat numerous. It may appear suddenly or gradually—suddenly when it is the effect of an accident, such as sprain of the perforans tendon where it passes over the navicular bone; or gradually when due to mismanagement of the fore feet, in which alone it is seen. The symptoms are resting the affected foot when the horse is at rest, which is done by advancing the foot and raising the heel, and "pointing," as in this way the tendon is relieved from strain. The step is short and the toe comes sooner to the ground than the heel, hence the toe of the shoe is almost worn out; the temperature of the affected foot is increased, and in the stable the litter is often pawed away from before and raised behind the foot to give it a better resting place.

Little can be done to cure the disease, though certain measures may palliate it and keep the horse serviceable. The foot should be kept cool, the toe of the hoof shortened as much as can be done with safety, and the frog allowed to come into contact with the ground, or, if this cannot be contrived, an artificial frog of india rubber may be placed over it.

Lameness from congestion of the laminae of the feet is not infrequently a result of over-exertion in traveling, especially on hard ground in warm weather; it may also come from long continued standing in the stable or on board ship, and in some cases it may be a sequel of disease. There is intense lameness, and the horse can scarcely move the fore feet, which usually suffer most. The tendency is to rest on the heels. The temperature of the feet is increased and there may be fever present, with impaired appetite. Gentle exercise and cold applications to the hoofs will frequently dispel the symptoms in a short time. It is judicious treatment, after a long or a fast journey in the saddle during hot weather, to walk the horse about for some time after the rider has dismounted, so as to allow the circulation in the laminae to acquire its normal condition.

Laminitis is the stage beyond congestion of the laminae, and is much more serious, for here we have inflammation of these delicate and highly sensitive structures. The pain is much more intense, and movement is more distressing; there is fever and loss of appetite; the pastern arteries throb, and the agony is so intense that the body is often covered with perspiration. If the horse is standing, he will not attempt to lie down, and if recumbent he makes no effort to get up, but lies and groans, with the fore limb thrust out in front of him. If the horse is standing, he must be put in a slug or compelled to lie down, so that the feet may be relieved by taking the weight off them; then cold water swabs must be wrapped around them, or cold bran poultices applied. Morphia should be injected under the skin to diminish the pain, and the diet must be laxative and sparingly given until the inflammation subsides. Then gentle exercise in a loose-box or on soft ground may be permitted for a short time, and gradually increased until all danger of a relapse has disappeared.

It should be noted that in all cases of disease or accident in which the animal is compelled to lie for some days on the hard ground, or on hard litter such as wheat straw, there is danger of severe bruises to the prominent parts of the body, and these "bed sores" have sometimes worse results than the disease or accident itself. To prevent or retard their appearance, the horse should rest on a thick bed of some soft material, such as dried moss, moss litter, or old but dry oat straw which has already served as bedding.

Corns are often a cause of lameness, especially when shoeing is not carefully attended to. What is termed a "corn" in a horse's foot is really a bruise of the sensitive sole, this bruise being the result of undue pressure, usually made by the shoe. The ordinary situation of the bruise is the angle formed by the wall and bar of the inside heel of the fore foot; corns may be said to be unknown in the hind feet. In some cases the lameness is considerable, and the bruise may run on to suppuration if neglected. The signs are those which are induced by pain in the back part of the foot, and tapping with a hammer upon the wall of the hoof in that situation will at once reveal the cause. Removal of the shoe is necessary, and paring away some of the corn at the bruised part—which will be bloodstained—is also required in order to discover the extent of the injury. If this is slight, nothing more may be necessary than lowering the wall at the heel so that it will not touch the shoe when this is nailed on, and, still further to ensure this, it is advisable to leave out the nail nearest the damaged heel. When the bruise is more severe, the pain and inflammation will be lessened by immersing the foot in a bucket of warm water for an hour, or in a poultice for twelve hours. After this the shoe is to be put on and the bruised part smeared with Stockholm tar, care being taken that the shoe does not touch the heel when the horse's weight is on it.

In some cases of chronic corn much benefit is derived from the horse wearing a shoe with the part chopped off that would rest on the bruised heel.

Thrush is an unhealthy condition of the horny frog, brought about by the shoe prying it, by standing on foul litter, or by the frog not coming into contact with the ground, and sometimes it is an accompaniment of navicular disease. The horn is softened and ragged, and usually there is a very offensive discharge from the cleft in the middle of the frog. The treatment is simple. Clean out the frog well, remove all shreds of horn, dress the cleft and other parts with calomel, covering this by pledgets of fine tow pushed firmly into the recess, and keep the horse on dry, clean litter. In a day or two remove the tow and insert other pledgets smeared with Stockholm tar. After a few of these dressings the morbid condition disappears.

Sandcrack is not very common among light horses, but it is occasionally met with, and when it is suddenly produced generally causes severe lameness. It is a vertical split in the wall of the hoof extending, when it causes lameness, to the sensitive tissue within, from which blood sometimes escapes. In the fore foot the split is generally on the inside, rarely at the toe or outside; in the hind foot it is nearly always in front. It is usually produced during severe exertion, as when jumping, and commences at the top of the wall of the hoof. When the lameness is considerable, the foot should be kept in a bucket of warm water to soften the horn and reduce the pain. This may have to be frequently repeated. When the lameness has gone, and if the horn is sufficiently thick, a fine horseshoe nail may be driven through the edge of the crack and the ends brought together by pliers so as to form a clamp to hold the sides of the fissure together; or the roof may be firmly bound round with many strands of fine tar twine. A little Stockholm tar may be rubbed into the coronet, above the crack, in order to stimulate the growth of sound, strong horn. The shoe should not be allowed to rest on the part of the hoof corresponding to the crack.

"Seedy-toe," another disease of the foot, is sometimes accompanied by lameness. It is a separation between the wall of the hoof and the horny laminae on its inner surface, and this separation may be only to a very limited extent, or it may involve a large portion of the wall, and extend from the lower border to near the coronet. There is little or nothing to denote its existence until the shoe is taken off, when the cavity is readily seen. This contains some loose crumbling horn, to which the disease probably owes its name. The cause is usually severe pressure on the wall of the hoof, produced by the shoe driving the clip of the shoe too close against it, and, as the clip is in front of the fore shoe, so we find the separation there. The hind feet are largely exempt from this defect. To make a radical cure, it is the best course to take away all the separated wall as far as the sound hoof, carefully removing all the discolored horn beneath and cutting out all cracks and fissures in it. The gap left in the hoof can be filled up with gutta percha or covered with pitch. The shoe must not have a clip at the toe, but one on each side if necessary, the coronet should be stimulated to increased secretion by rubbing a little Stockholm tar into it at intervals of a few days.

The secretion of hoof horn is sometimes so very defective in quantity and quality that the shoer has great difficulty in attaching the shoes. This may arise from mismanagement of the feet, and especially to the mutilation of the hoofs undergo when being shod, such as overparing the sole and frog and rasping the front of the wall or rubbing oil and certain compositious on this part; or it may be due to natural weakness. The face of the wall should not be rasped, and the sole and frog never ought to have more than the loose portions removed from them, while nothing but water should be applied to the wall by means of a sponge. To promote a healthy secretion of hoof wall, the coronet should have an application of Stockholm tar at intervals of a few days.

Sprains of the knee and hock are to be treated by fomentations with warm water, succeeded after a few days by lead lotion or tincture of arnica, applied by means of swabs round the joint. A frequent cause of lameness, especially in light horses, is a sprain of an important ligament at the back of the hock, producing a convex swelling more or less marked, and known as "curb." Sudden severe exertion, jumping, bucking, the hind legs slipping forward, etc., are the immediate exciting causes but in very many instances the defective shape of the hock predisposes to the sprain. At first, in many cases, there may be considerable lameness with swelling of the part; in other cases the lameness is not very perceptible, though the curb may be distinctly observed. Even when the lameness does pass off, it is rare indeed for the swelling to subside. The treatment is limited to wrapping round the part fine tow or lint, and applying a bandage firmly over this, pouring in at the top, and frequently, tincture of arnica lotion, or one composed of sal ammoniac and nitre in the proportion of two ounces of each to a pint of water. The horse should be kept tied up in a stall. When the inflammation and lameness have subsided, the swelling should be frequently painted over with tincture of iodine, or, better, a small portion of biniodide of mercury ointment may be rubbed in at intervals of a week. This may be continued when the horse is at work.

In speaking of curb, mention may here be made of what is called "capped hock," which is usually due to contusion, but may in some instances arise from sprain; in the latter the swelling is on each side of the joint of the hock, in the former it is immediately on this part, and projecting backward. Unless the injury or strain is very severe, the lameness at first is but slightly, if at all, noticeable, though there may be swelling, heat and pain. If this is the case a cooling lotion should be applied—such as an ounce each of arnica and Goulard's extract in a pint of water, and by means of lint maintained by a bandage. If the lameness is marked, a high-heeled shoe will relieve it. In the course of a few days a stimulant may be used on the part, such as the tincture of iodine or the biniodide of mercury ointment. If the enlargement becomes chronic it is most difficult to reduce it. It has been recommended to plaster it over, while the horse is in the stable, with pipe-clay or whiting mixed into a paste with vinegar, and this is to be rubbed off when the animal goes out to work.

Sprain of the back tendons occurs in either the fore or hind limb, and is due to a sudden and severe effort. These tendons are below and behind the knee and hock, and are two in number, one in front of the other—the posterior is the flexor of the pastern, the other, in front of it, is the flexor of the foot. It is rare that both are sprained, the one in front being most frequently involved in the accident, when the swelling is most marked at the inside and outside. If the posterior one is sprained, the swelling is noticeable immediately behind and forms a convexity. There is swelling, heat and pain on handling the part, and lameness commensurate with the degree of injury. The limb at the seat of sprain should be thickly enveloped in tow, cotton, wool or lint, and bandaged firmly, then the arnica and Goulard's extract is poured in between the padding and the skin, which is to be kept continually moist with it. Or, if the weather is not cold, water may be applied by means of a hose from the water tap. A high-heeled shoe should be put on the foot if the horse is afraid to place his weight on the limb; indeed, in all cases this kind of shoe expedites recovery, but it should not be kept on longer than a fortnight. Instead of employing the lotion or cold water, it has been recommended to pad the sprained part firmly by first wrapping a moderately tight bandage round it, then on top of this at each side, a thick pledget of cotton wool evenly laid on and another long bandage tightly wound over all. The bandages must be removed morning and evening and re-applied, the leg being rubbed gently each time they are taken off, and bent up and down. When the pain and lameness have disappeared, and thickening of the tendon remains, it will be advisable to blister it, perhaps repeatedly, with biniodide of mercury or cantharides ointment. Sprain of the check ligament below the knee, or of the suspensory ligament, is indicated by similar symptoms to sprain of the back tendon, the horse manifesting signs of pain on pressure of these parts. The treatment must be the same as first indicated, though it has usually to be longer continued.

JUDGING IN THE SHOW RING.

The awarding of premiums at fairs and other live stock exhibitions is always attended with more or less trouble, and no matter how expert and honest a judge may be, it is impossible for him to satisfy everybody. Every owner believes his animal is a good enough specimen to win a prize in any company or he would not enter him. The following articles on judging are from the pen of experts in their respective lines and are opportune at this time:

JUDGING HARNESS HORSES.

"A place for everything and everything in its place." A light buggy horse hitched to a heavy vehicle looks just as absurd as a heavy-harness horse hitched to a buggy. To judge these two distinct types of harness horses in anything like an intelligent manner one should have each in its proper class and appropriately hitched, and not indiscriminately mixed, as is often the case. Here in the West we are apt to be a little careless in this particular and possibly less discriminate than our Eastern brethren, who have the lines clearly and sharply defined. The man who goes to horse shows often hears the remark, "He is out of his class," and the person who has made the entry in the wrong class generally finds out to his cost that he should have studied the conditions and qualifications named at the head of the class before making his entries. Many disappointments can be avoided by close attention to conditions of entry.

A judge should be in the ring when the horses come in, so that he may have an opportunity of seeing them parade around him and form some opinion of the comparative merits of the animals. First impressions are often lasting ones, but cannot always be relied upon, especially at a horse show, where there is many a slip 'twixt cup and lip.

The first cardinal principle in all harness horses should be absolute soundness. A judge is often relieved of responsibility in this respect by the presence of a qualified veterinarian who officially examines the animals in the ring and reports to the judges, and while this system may have its advantages I have always taken the ground that the examination should take place before the animals come into the show-ring.

Supposing the animals before the judge are light-harness horses and have received their certificate of soundness from the veterinarian it behooves the judge to look carefully over each animal to see whether there are any defects or weak points in the animal which would not come under the heading of unsoundness, but might at the same time considerably damage his chances of winning a prize; also to determine whether the animal be of good general conformation or not and adapted for the class in which he is entered. The horses should then be paraded collectively at the walk and then at the trot, brought into line, and then each one separately show his gait with a burst of speed to finish with, the judge placing himself in such a position, both in front of and behind the animal, so as to enable him to see whether he has a pure and frictionless-gaited horse before him or one that throws his legs about in all kinds of ways as if they did not belong to him. When the "short leet" has been selected it may be necessary (if competition is very close and no outstanding animal is to the fore) again to turn out two or three of the best together, giving them a chance to show again both their style and speed before the final decision is made. When this is accomplished it is well to place the animals in the order in which the ribbons are to be awarded, the first prize horse being at the extreme right or left, as may be convenient, and so on down, thus minimizing the chances of annoying mistakes.

In heavy-harness horse judging particular attention should be given to conformation, substance and adaptability to work required. A horse of this type because he has substance need not necessarily be a thick-necked bull. He must have quality and the more action the better. This must be straight and true, and when looked at before and behind one leg should cover the other. "Dishing" or "plaiting" in front or "spreading" behind is very objectionable, although in a light-harness horse the last named is deemed necessary when it comes to the speeding qualifications of the animal.

High action in front is essential in a heavy-harness horse and this ought to be followed by free play of the hock from behind. I would rather give a prize to a good "all-round" mover than to one going excessively high in front and badly behind.

In a heavy-harness horse conformation should always receive careful consideration at the hands of a judge. Good legs and feet, a long, lean, arched neck, coming well out of oblique shoulders, short back and long quarters, with high-set dock greatly enhance the appearance of a horse in front of a handsome equipage.

A judge is often confronted with two evils and it sometimes bothers him "like the mischief" to determine which is the lesser; for instance, he has before him an animal of superb conformation, but absolutely no action, and on the other hand he has a wonderful mover with no conformation; which is the more desirable? He has quickly to strike a balance in his own mind and decide which quality or defect outweighs or is inferior to the other, and this is sometimes not an easy matter to decide in a hurry. A horse of nice smooth conformation appeals to everyone's eye, but an otherwise ordinary horse with extra good all round action seems to electrify everybody when he starts around the ring, and calls forth bursts of applause that the most beautiful conformation fails to do. I believe I would have to climb into the band wagon and go with the crowd on this point and declare for action. It is action that sells a horse; it was action that brought Sundown, Leader the Scotchman, Coxey, Starlight and others to the front, and while I do not wish to be misunderstood as undervaluing the value of good conformation, I say above all things we must have action in a heavy-harness horse and as good conformation as is possible to get.

It is a combination of the two that goes far toward the making of a perfect heavy-harness horse, and from such the prize winners should wherever possible be taken, getting as near to perfection as possible. Although we cannot ever hope to obtain absolute perfection we can keep on trying. Set the standard high and work to it all the time. We have made wonderful strides in the right direction during the last six or seven years and we may yet get nearer the desired end than the most sanguine can at present predict.—R. P. Stericke.

JUDGING SADDLE HORSES.

The same general principle of awards applies equally in respect to all classes of live stock. A schedule of points or the equivalent is as essential in one class as in another, if justice be done. One's opinion of general merit in comparative competition cannot be correct if competition be close. The trouble is that in most of the catalogues the specifications are lacking or are defective. In other words the fair or show publishes a so-called prize list for different classes without defining what shall constitute these classes and what considerations shall determine the award. This is neither just to the exhibitor or the judge, for the exhibitor goes to the show yard not quite certain as to the requisites, and the judge acts upon his idea of what shall constitute the class and without notice to the exhibitor. This makes the exhibition distinctly a lottery and causes most of the dissatisfaction that arises.

For certain breeds of livestock the prevailing use of scales of points gives previous notice for the information of the exhibitor and of the judge, and the equivalent of the scale of points should apply to all classes. If left promiscuously for each fair association to determine each association will in turn leave it to some director, many of whom are inexperienced and will sometimes make a farce of the specifications. The only proper way, therefore, to determine such matters is to arrange for a congress of fair associations with a representative or representatives from each State and let such congress determine upon the requisites and scale of points that shall be used for judging each and every recognized class. Then the exhibitors and the judges will know what they are doing, uniformity will prevail all over the land, and the horses, whether harness, road, coupé, rock-away, light carriage or coach horses, rough saddle horses or gaited saddle horses, will have definite recognized requisites.

For the American saddle horse most of the fair associations specify that he shall conform to the requirements of the American Saddle-Horse Breeders' Association. This is very good as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. The American Saddle-Horse Breeders' Association requires that the horse they breed shall when gaited go five distinct gaits, to-wit: a plain walk, fast walk, trot, rack and canter. They do not make a scale of points for the show list or they should add: "Quality, substance and manners." Thus there should be eight points, and the horse that scores five of these eight points should win, and the only way to determine this is by memorandum record after examination by comparison on each point. The basis of marks, whether eight or more, is immaterial.

All judging should be done either by one judge or else by three judges who should be permitted unrestrictedly to consult upon any point they may choose, otherwise the three judges, so-called, become really one judge with the very serious disadvantage of having an umpire called in where the judges' opinion lodges upon different animals to decide as between these animals without an opportunity of detailed scrutiny which the two acting judges have had in the exhibition. The custom, therefore, of requiring awards without conference is without good reason.

All judges ought to be previously announced. Thus the exhibitor has full notice of the conditions and an opportunity to determine for himself whether or not the men elected to make the awards are such men as are in his opinion capable. Selecting judges on the spot is an injustice and is often directed by unfair means.

The horse should be sound, with good though not extreme all-round action; the gaits should all be clear and distinct and free from friction. The plain walk should be flat-footed and smooth; the fast walk (running walk or fox trot) should be easy and without constraint; the trot should be a direct line trot; the rack should be steady and free from force and without a pacing motion; the canter should be slow and clear, with an absence of shuffle, and be performed with either foot in the lead. The quality should present a fine horse, the substance reasonable weight and evidencing endurance, and the manners shown by perfect breaking and easy handling.—John B. Castleman.

JUDGING DAIRY CATTLE.

The judging of dairy cattle is attended with the gravest perplexities. It is comparatively simple and easy to allot positions among beef cattle. Form, quality, and bloom are the points on which to hang a decision. If the model beef form is approximated, if breed type is present, if quality is marked and bloom apparent the judge confidently approaches a decision. That the form is adapted to function is proved by the condition of the animal; that is, the outward manifestations fix the animal's value for beef purposes. However difficult it may be to balance the contending claims of animals of this class the judge is much more certain of his ground than when attempting to estimate the respective merits of dairy animals. Of course we have made a close study of form as related to function; we have deduced therefrom a distinct type which we call dairy form. We have even reduced this type to a scale of measurements in the hope of getting aid from mathematics—but what man among us is there who will venture to say how much milk or butter a cow will make simply by looking at her? What man is there who will pretend accurately to estimate performance by form? Can you tell how far a frog will jump by looking at him? Can you estimate the speed and stamina of a horse in the show ring?

With all our standards in very truth we work much in the dark when we come to estimate the ability to render a certain performance, such as milk-giving or running or trotting, merely by an examination of the form of the animal. We can but guess at best. Of course there are those cocksure individuals to whom a much vaster wisdom (in their own estimation) has been revealed than to the common herd, and some of them have no difficulty in persuading themselves that they possess well nigh infallible powers of discernment; but the man who milks and uses the tester knows that he cannot know without the testimony of the scales and the test-tube.

But our lack of positive knowledge derived from a physical examination of a dairy cow is no reason why the exhibition of such cattle should be abandoned, nor does the fact that the decisions of the judges frequently vary widely from the evidence of the churn warrant us in abandoning show-ring judging and resorting solely to tests. Types related to food consumption is pretty well defined and our show-yard awards have been valuable as tending to weed out types that are unprofitable at the feed trough and produce uniformity of physical characteristics; moreover, enough is known of form as related to function to remove our show-yard adjudications from the plane of a farce. But every possible aid in arriving at a correct decision in a ring of milk cows should be invoked by the judge. One of the chief aids in this direction is an examination of the cows with empty udders. This of course involves milking the cows in the ring, as they should be first inspected with full udders—not painfully tense and hard, but in a state of full distension. It is remarkable therefore that the Council of the Royal Agricultural Society should have adopted the following rule: "That no animal in any cow class be milked in connection with the judging."

The Rev. A. Baillie-Hamilton, judge of Jerseys at the recent Royal Show, ordered the cows milked and was taken to task for it. He then directed—the men to cease milking and milked the cattle himself. Afterward he suggested to the Council that they allow the judges of dairy breeds the privilege of having cows milked in the ring. To this request for bread the Council gave the stone of the resolution quoted. We are wholly at a loss to account for such action, especially as it appears that Mr. Baillie-Hamilton was the spokesman of the exhibitors of dairy cattle in proffering this request. We regret that the published accounts of this incident do not indicate in any way the ground on which the Council rested its denial of this most reasonable and necessary request. From our point of view its refusal to permit a judge such opportunity for reaching a decision is nothing less than amazing. Certain it is that fair managers on this side are always ready to aid their judges in this way and the practice of milking out the leading candidates for honors is rapidly growing. It shall be the rule rather than the exception.—The Breeder's Gazette.

Waning of the Tuberculin Craze.

We are fast emerging from the scientific craze stage of the tuberculin era into the common-sense period. It is odd to what extrames this scientific specialization will drive men. Laying their premises on a basis of germ determination they drive their logic inexorably up to the very brink. They found the germ of tuberculosis; germ diseases are communicable, and hence they jumped to the conclusion that tuberculosis was as "catching" as diphtheria or smallpox, and raised a mighty hue and cry, going so far as to demand isolation hospitals for consumptives and the destruction of every animal suspected of harboring the disease. And the tuberculin test fitted so nicely into this great scheme. All that was necessary was to shoot the stuff into the animal and if its temperature rose kill it. It was very simple; it was likewise very wicked.

A saner view now begins to assert itself. It has finally been beaten into the heads of these extremists that tuberculosis is not a communicable disease in the sense that smallpox or diphtheria or even typhoid are communicable diseases, but that the germs of the disease may be introduced into the respiratory or the digestive system with impunity so long as they do not find a diseased condition that furnishes a suitable habitat for their development. These germs are readily thrown off by the healthy mucous membranes, and depend on a weakened or diseased condition for lodgement and growth. If it were not so the whole human race would have long since been wiped off the face of the earth by this disease.

Tuberculin was found to give reaction—that is, rise of temperature—in tuberculin animals. The logic of the scientist was instantly applied. Kill all animals that react was his dictum. It mattered not that sometimes microscopic examinations were necessary to detect the disease in the animals that reacted; it mattered not that reactions were given by animals suffering from any sort of internal irritation; it mattered not that in a vast majority of the cases slaughtered under the test the animals by reasonable isolation and sanitation could have been maintained for years as valuable breeders; it mattered not that the claim of transmission of disease through milk and meat was distinctly not proved and palpably impossible to prove, except when milk was drawn from an udder in which the disease had progressed so far as to break down the cells. All these things mattered not. "Kill! kill! kill!" shrieked the scientist, and some States were weak and foolish enough to listen to their ravings.

But the katabasis has come. The retreat has commenced. We repeatedly pointed out the wicked folly of this indiscriminate destruction of valuable breeding stocks based merely on the tuberculin tests, and finally had the satisfaction of seeing the Department of Agriculture assume a most conservative attitude on the subject, going so far as to declare that valuable animals that had reacted might safely be kept in the breeding ranks under isolation. But notwithstanding this the work of destruction went on. Slaughter was the order of the day, especially in Massachusetts and Connecticut and a few other States, the fever mounting to its highest point in the old Bay State. New Hampshire has now spoken on the subject, and its pronouncement is well calculated to produce a subsidence of the conditions of acute tuberculin-phobia with which some cattle commissions and veterinarians and sanitary officials have been afflicted. A careful test with ten animals was conducted by the New Hampshire Cattle Commissioners and their conclusions are the most significant note that has yet been sounded by those in charge of such work. The cows were tested in June of 1897 and all reacted. On September 12th only five reacted. One was killed and the condition of disease found was—

'so infinitesimal as to require no consideration upon any health basis and was strong proof of the extravagance in destroying animals by the test alone.'

Again on December 1st only three reacted, one of which has shown manifest physical signs of the disease, and the same result was obtained again in February. The two which showed no sign of the trouble but which had reacted, were killed and examined, and the commissioners found—

"slight evidence of disease, but in such condition as to lead to the conclusion that it had not only been arrested but was on the way to ultimate recovery. How much this result was due to the treatment of the animals and how much to the alleged curative qualities of tuberculin is a matter of conjecture only. There are no developments of science in regard to the nature and characteristics of bovine tuberculosis that warrant the destruction of such animals.

The five cows which first reacted were discharged from quarantine as "healthy and vigorous." Like sensible men who were hunting for the truth and not searching for facts to sustain fine-spun theories the commissioners land a few body blows on the "kill-everything" crowd as follows:

"The policy outlined at the outset and resolutely followed has been sustained by the result of this experiment and is being adopted in the States around us where a more radical policy has prevailed. In Massachusetts, where more than $750,000 have been spent during the past four years and where every animal reacting to the tuberculin test was destroyed, the whole matter has been abandoned. In Connecticut, where the same extravagant policy prevailed, the authorities are now working upon practically the same line as in New Hampshire. This means the destroying of tuberculous animals detected by a physical examination, and the advocacy of sanitary measures for the prevention of the disease. We have faith in tuberculin as a diagnostic agent and depend upon it for certain purposes, but not as authority for destroying animals."

Verily, a saner day has dawned. The time will soon come when the "vet" with his squirt-gun and pole-ax will no longer run amuck through valuable breeding herds that represent the result of years of skillful and costly breeding. All plainly diseased animals will be killed, but an increased tamperatura or an injection of tuberculin will no longer necessarily seal the death warrant of animals that cannot be replaced except through years of painstaking labor of patient breeders.—Chicago Breeders' Gazette.

A Sensible Way of Breaking Colts.

A farmer who knows the right way to break colts to harness tells how he does it in the Michigan Farmer as follows: The value of any horse is increased or lessened by his education or training. Many colts are ruined in "breaking." Many are never broken at all. There are three classes of men who "break" colts. One is the good, kind, patient fellow, who lets the colt do about as he pleases. It can go, stop, turn, etc., without remonstrance. Such colts make headstrong, deceitful, unreliable horses. Then there is the man who goes at the colt to break or kill—jerkng, jsmming, whipping, swearing. Colts broken by such men sometimes get over their fright, by proper handling, but are most likely to be natural fools like their breakers. They are always nervous, always ready to scare and run.

The right man stands between these two extremes. He is kind and patient, but firm. His effort is to convince the colt that he is "boss." He has the horse under control, always, and to accomplish this it is not necessary to knock the horse down every time you approach him.

As we usually have from 10 to 15 head of draft bred horses I will try to tell how they are broken. We always halter-break when young and handle frequently until three years old, when their harness education commences. First, the colt is quietly harnessed in the stall and left a while to view himself. Then a strap is fastened on the end of the harness and the breaker stands behind the colt far enough to be out of reach of his heels, and rubs him with the tug, as he would be rubbed when hitched. We have found this a good thing. If the colt is going to kick in harness we thus find it out before hitching. When he will stand around and behave nicely in the stall, he is bridled, leaving the halter under the bridle.

Next is the leading. This is beside a well-broken horse also harnessed, the colt always on the right, or off, side. The halter is securely tied in the hama ring on the older horse so the colt cannot break away. The breaker mounts the older horse and leads the colt by a strap on his bridle. Always keep the colt up even and he will not try to hang back when driven. If he is led a couple of miles he will usually stand still and behave until hitched. We mostly hitch to a sled; the colt is still tied to the lead horse and the breaker dismounts. One takes the lines, another leads the colt until he gets well started. We seldom have any trouble and soon have the colt driving nicely. It is the careful handling before hitching that makes breaking easy. It never pays to hurry at first.

It is believed by some who don't know that draft horses are all sluggish and slow. While there are some such, as in all breeds, there are also some as high-spirited as thoroughbreds. We will remember one mottled, rather nervous colt, that at first harnessing could not be induced to leave the stable until a quick move rattled the harness; then his conclusion to go was so sudden that no one went with him. Finding himself loose, his first gesture was to jump over a 20-foot bank, then canvass an acre lot at a gait that was wonderful. He was soon captured and seemed to forget his caper, and made a work horse of high order. On the other extreme, a 1600-pound three-year-old paid no attention to harness, whip or anything except feed. So much confidence had we in his sluggishness that his first trip was made to the land roller, to which he paid no more attention than had it not been there. There can be no iron-clad rule for colt breaking. Their dispositions are like people's—no two exactly alike.

From a Dairy Point of View.

A good dairy region exists where there are good dairymen. Well fed cows do not have to show up pedigree to establish a milk record.

Dehorning is just as good now as ten years ago, even if we don't hear so much about it.

There is more money for the average dairyman in keeping his pastures in repair than in looking after political fences.

Talking about farm wages, how much does the average dairyman's wife usually receive?

A "practical dairyman" is one who makes a profit out of his cows.

If your cows shrink in milk yield during stormy weather it shows that you have not given them sufficient protection from the elements.

A cow, like a man, is known by the company she keeps. Don't let her get poor by allowing sheep to eat the grass from under her nose.

You cannot parpatuate good meadows and let cows graze on the rowen.

The maker who uses his or her finger for a thermometer was never yet known to produce regular supplies of good butter or cheese.

There are other and better ways of encouraging a cow to give down her milk besides kicking her in the ribs.

The most nutritious grass grows on the best prepared soil.

The man with a well filled silo usually takes precedence when it comes to a profitable farm and neat, substantial buildings.

The hardest cow to milk is usually left to the hired man.

Carelessness and sour milk go hand in hand. Greasy, soiled clothing marks a poor butter maker.

Every year is a good dairy season for some. Why is it not so for all?

The dairyman with the longest head is apt to carry the longest pocketbook.

I never yet saw a profitable cow that was not docile and gentle, and in order to be such she had to have a docile and gentle owner.

A man does not necessarily have to become gray in acquiring the right sort of dairy experience. Some of the best dairymen I have ever seen were vigorous, alert, progressive young men.

Don't Confound Plow With Harrow.

All departure from the established way and any innovation from the customary is always looked on with distrust. "No class so conservative as the farmer" is an axiom trite and true. Yet when a new and improved way of doing old things has by actual parsaving demonstration established itself as the proper appliance, or way, then its universal adoption follows. On another page will be found a large advertisement of the Spalding Robbins Disc Plow, which should cause one at all interested in the expeditions and economical preparation of the land for the reception of crops to ask himself whether there is not something worthy of investigation. That it has been tried and adopted by the Hearst Estate, the Kern Valley Land Co. (20 in use there), M. Diggs of Woodland, Miller & Lux, Grangers' Union, Hollister, Tres Pinos and San Juan and some fifty other of the best agriculturists in the State shows that it is long past the experimental stage and it is destined to be the universally used Plow of the future.

Dairymen who have the third cutting of alfalfa to put up and who may fortunately have access to a straw pile on the place or near by ought to make the most of a good opportunity by providing a sardwich of the two materials in the stack. A layer of green alfalfa will soon transform a layer of straw into the same color and as the straw absorbs much of the substance of the lucerna the cows eat the sandwich with great relish and do not seem to understand that there is any difference in the bill of fare. Alfalfa put up in this way will keep much better and the straw is fully utilized.

In certain parts of Yorkshire, Leicester sheep are largely crossed with the more massive Lincolns in order to obtain an increase in the size of the progeny.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

The study and work in this department covers all the modern applications of electricity. Each student has to manufacture in the workshop a large portion of the apparatus. The course is so divested of superfluities as to bring it within the time limit and means of the average student, who, while desiring a thorough instruction in the subject is unable to give the four years required by the universities. The Department is provided with all necessary instruments, machinery and laboratories.

The Department of Civil and Mining Engineering, Surveying, Assaying, and Metallurgy is as complete as any in the West.

During the past three years a great many mining men and prospectors have entered for technical and practical instruction in assaying, blow-pipe analysis, mineralogy, mill construction, cyanide process, etc., and in every instance they have expressed themselves as pleased with the methods. The Department is thoroughly equipped in every respect, and is in charge of a mining engineer of large experience. A special pamphlet containing full information will be mailed on request.

THE BUSINESS COURSE

Includes Business Arithmetic, Business Peumanship, Bookkeeping, Business Forms, Rapid Calculations, Commercial Law, Commercial Correspondence, Practice in Wholesale Merchandising, Banking, Brokerage, Commission, Real Estate, Conveyancing, Insurance, Partnership, Incorporated Companies, Railroad, Importing, Forwarding, Telegraphy, French, German and Spanish, the English branches and everything pertaining to a Business Education.

THE DEPARTMENT OF SHORTHAND AND TYPEWRITING

Employs five teachers and has fifty writing machines in use. Upward of 1000 stenographic graduates have been provided with positions by it during the last ten years and they are now engaged in every variety of stenographic work from court reporting to the ordinary duties of the amanuensis.

The instruction in every department is based on the principle of actual work, and is practical and demonstrative, thus fitting students for actual duties by requiring them to do exactly what will be expected in the shop, the mine, and the office. Students can enter for any Course at any time. Ladies are admitted to all Departments. Pupils receive individual instruction. Twenty-five Teachers are employed.

17,000 Graduates. 200 Students annually placed in positions.

New illustrated catalogue and Heald's College Journal mailed to any part of the world on application.

HARTFORD'S GREAT MEETING.

Lord Vincent Wine the Charter Oak Stake and Gets a Record.

The annual meeting given at Charter Oak Park at Hartford, Connecticut, is one of the great meetings of the Grand Circuit. This year Dubuqua's big meeting was held on the same dates, which caused many of the horsemen to go west but their absence was hardly noticeable from the splendid program of trotting and pacing events which were given at Hartford.

The principal race of the Hartford meeting was the Charter Oak $10,000 Stake for trotters of the 2:16 class. This stake was inaugurated in 1893, when Director won it in 2:18, and although it has been one of the coveted prizes of the trotting turf, it has three times been won in slower time. This year, however, Lord Vincent, driven by Chas. Dohle, reduced the record to 2:09 1/2, which will be a low mark for the 2:16 to shoot at hereafter. Lord Vincent was the favorite before the race. In the first heat he acted rank and made a bad break on getting the word, which ruined his chances for the heat. This was a gift to Hon. C. M. Reed's Rubber, as all save Shillinglaw appeared to be waiting for Dohle to come on with the hay stallion, which at the Glens Falls meeting found a mile in 2:08 1/2 well within his ability.

After going a fast quarter in the second heat, Lord Vincent laid along a comfortable fourth till Rubber made a break, and then he moved up and chased Lecco well into the turn, when he finished an easy second. Getting a hit the best of the send-off in the third heat, Lord Vincent took a lead of a length by the time the quarter was reached.

At the upper turn Etheridge commenced a strong drive with Lecco, but the stallion's check came off and a couple of breaks lost him his chances for the heat. After this Lord Vincent secured such a commanding lead in the early miles that Lecco could not get near him, and the last two heats were processions.

George H. Todd, of Youngstown, O., owns the winning stallion and he was last season raced on the half mile tracks.

He is by St. Vincent 5443, a son of Wilkes Boy 3308, and Wilkes Boy was by Geo. Wilkes, out of Betty Brown, by Mambrino Patchen. St. Vincent's dam was Aileen, by Mambrino Boy, and his second dam was Betty Brown, the dam of his sira. Thus a son and a daughter of Billy Brown were mated to produce St. Vincent. Lord Vincent's dam was Gold Lee, by Gold Leaf 6070, he by Nngget 1398, he by Wedgewood, son of Belmont 64. The second dam of Lord Vincent was Rosalie by Reveilla 1472, son of New York 524, son of Hambletonian 10. Lord Vincent is considered one of the stallions that show the speed necessary to place him among the candidates for the championship honors now held by Directum 2:05 1/2. The summaries of the Charter Oak meeting are as follows:

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 2

The Law and Order League of Hartford swore out warrants for the arrest of the managers of the track on Saturday. The races were declared off, but that did not prevent a raid at the last minute and the arrest of six men on the charge of violating the law of 1893 by selling pools.

The officers who participated in the raid were Secretary Thrasher and Agent McClair of the leagues and several West Hartford constables, armed with clubs. Six counts were preferred against the offenders, one for each day of the races.

STATE FAIR RACES.

Hot Weather at Sacramento Has No Effect on the Attendance.

The opening days of the California State Fair, as announced in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN last week, were ushered in with cool weather and large crowds at park and pavilion.

On Thursday there was a big gathering at the track, one of the special attractions being William J. Bryan, the Nebraska orator, who interested the crowd for an hour after the trotting events were finished and while the track was being made ready for the runners.

The two-year-old trotting stake which opened the day's program went to D. E. Knight's McKinney filly essily, in 2:38 and 2:34 1/2. The other starters Dagmar and Vendome would have been shut out the first heat had not distance been waived and this was also true of the second heat.

Psyche added another victory to her list in the 2:40 trot, winning in three straight heats, the time of the last heat 2:19, being the fastest of the race. Psyche is simply too fast for the majority of horses she is entered against this year, and when she is steady can out trot them. She seems to be improving right along in her actions.

The Ladies Stake, one mile and a sixteenth, for mares and fillies, had but three starters, Jennie Reid, 3 to 5; Reolia 6 to 5; Monrovia, 2 1/2 to 1.

Modrovia was first passing the stand, but at the quarter Jennie Reid led by a length, Reolia a length behind Monrovia. In this order they ran to the half, where Reolia moved up and on the turn took second place, coming into the stretch two lengths behind Jennie Reid. The latter held her advantage, however, and won in 1:47 1/2. Reolia second, three lengths ahead of Monrovia.

For the seven furlong race for three-year-olds and upward the starters were McFarlane, 40 to 1; Novia, even money; Mount McGregor II, 4 to 3, and the same for Hohenzollern. McFarlane was first away, but soon after the passing the quarter McGregor passed him and was never in danger, winning by three lengths under a pull from Novia, the latter four lengths ahead of Hohenzollern. Time, 1:27 1/2.

Druidess was the talents' choice in the last race, a two-year-old, five furlong event. Fairfax was second choice at 2 to 1, the others ranging from 5 to 20 to 1. Fourteen youngsters went to the post. Druidess won with El Arte second and Rose of Hilo third. Time 1:03 1/2. Summaries:

Time-1:03 1/2.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 8.

This was Drummer's Day, and it attracted the biggest crowd of the week. At least three hundred commercial travelers were present. Ten horses started in the 2:15 pace, with Arthur W. the favorite, but he had to lower his colors to Don, Col. Crawford's handsome son of Falrose. Don got away well in the first heat, and getting to the front at the quarter was never headed. He paced the mile in 2:13 1/2. Arthur W.'s driver got him away steady in the second heat and he won in 2:2 1/2. There was an accident in the third heat, owing to Diawood's hobbles breaking. The horse fell and his driver, Holmes, was thrown. Reidy, Don's driver, was also unseated in the collision which followed and Don ran away but was nearly caught by Marshal Crawford Cox. Ont of the scramble, Monticito Boy managed to get to the front and won in 2:15 1/2. Non-winners of a heat now went to the stable, and Don was permitted to start again. Arthur W. led at the half, with Don second and Monticito Boy at his wheel. On the turn Don went to the front and heat Arthur W. out two lengths in 2:15 1/2.

The second race was for drummers' horses for a purse of $150. The horses that lined up were Gumdrop (W. F. Peterson), Farmer's Girl (H. A. Bell), Tooland (D. McCarty), and Kinney (L. S. Upson). The latter was favorite at 3 to 5. As the drivers appeared on the track to warm up their steeds they were subjected to storms of applause.

The horses were all driven to huggies. There was more enthusiasm displayed over the race than at any time during the fair. Some great jockeying was done in the first heat, which was won by several lengths by Farmer's Girl in 2:35. Gumdrop, driven by Peterson, which did about as much running as trotting, got second place. Tooland came in third, but running, so he was set back, and Upson's Kinney placed third. Farmer's Girl won the next heat and the race handily. A protest was made against the mare to the effect that she was a ringer, that her right name is Pansy and that she was under suspension on several counts. An investigation proved this to be true and the mare and her driver were ruled off for life, first money going to Kinney.

For the Sonny Slops Stake for two-year-old fillies, value $510, five-eighths of a mile, the starters were Flush of Gold 3 to 1, Enjoyment 10, Flamote 8, Midity 3 to 2, and Bee Bee 3 to 5. Bee Bee soon went to the front, Flamote following around the turn. At the head of the stretch Midity was second and got the place. Flush of Gold and Flamote ran nearly a dead heat for third, but the former got it. The time was 1:02.

Petal 8 to 1, Alaria even money, Watossa 8 to 1, Bastile 20, Alturas 25 and Panamint 4 to 5, were the starters in the three-year-old selling race, seven furlongs. The start was straggling, Petal showing in front, Panamint and Alaria following. At the quarter-pole Panamint was leading by a length, Petal second and Alaria third. In this order they passed the half, where Watossa was fourth and Alturas bringing up the rear. Only the first three were in it, and they finished in that order, Panamint winning by a length and a half from Petal in 1:28, the latter two lengths in front of Alaria.

The last race on the card was for three-year-olds and upward, selling, six furlongs. The horses facing the flag were Major Cook 7 to 10, Yarnha 8 to 1, Stromo 7, Colonel Dan 8, Nonchalance 10, Amasa 25, Smyle 15, Jennie Gibb 8, Tenrica 10 and Hemsra 5. Amasa, 25 to 1, hot, cut out the pnce from the start, ran like the proverbial scared wolf, and won the race handily in 1:15 1/2, Stromo second and Nonchalance third. Summaries:

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9.

Native Son's day at the track brought another immense throng of people to Agricultural Park. The weather was piping hot. The great free-for-all trot and the historic Victor stake were the stellar attractions of the grand card offered. Toggles, driven by Charles C. Clark, settled once for all who is entitled to be termed the champion of his class, for the little bay gelding downed a high class field in straight heats and in doing so set a new track race record of 2:10. Azote in 1894 stepped a faster mile, but not in an actual contest.

The 2:25 pnce was first called, with Wild Ntling selling favorite over the field. Gaff Topsail drew the pole but Valeria headed the bunch soon after the start with the favorite in close attendance. Straightened for home, Donathane called on Wild Ntling and at the wire won easily, with Myrtha Whips second and Gaff Topsail third.

In the heat following Dick Havey sprung a surprise with Rohlet, going to the front and heating Ntling out very handily at the wire. The same mare repeated the trick in the third heat, Wild Ntling stopping to a walk. Then came another change. The Myrtha Whips party hacked the odds against the mare from 5 to 2 to 2 to 1, and she took the next three heats in impressive fashion. In the fourth heat Wild Ntling pulled up badly distressed and was drawn.

When the free-for-all was called friends of the past did not forsake the old campaigner Klamath, for in the auction pool he brought 8 against 10 for Toggles and 3 for the field, consisting of Clay S, Hszel Kinney, Boodle, Prince Gift and Neernut. Boodle, driven by Bunch, had the pole position in the opening heat, and to a perfect start showed first until nearing the end for home, where Toggles strode into first position, winning from the deposed leader without being pressed in 2:11 1/2.

Klamath made a couple of breaks during the trip, hot managed to finish third. The next heat was a repetition almost of the first, only that Toggles led from the word, passing the judges five lengths ahead of Klamath. Neernut, of which great things were expected, was third in this heat.

Of the four starters for the Victor stake, over a mile, the Sacramento contingent sent Nilgar with Jack Ward up to the post a slight choice over Jennie Reid. Libertine and Hohenzollern were both 2 to 1 chances in the betting. Havey made a perfect start and Libertine and Hohenzollern at once made for the lead, fighting it out for nearly six furlongs. Well into the stretch Loullier made his move with Jennie Reid, disposing of Hohenzollern at the wire somewhat easily by a length in 1:41 1/2. The favorite ran last.

A six-furlong dash for two year-olds, which followed, was responsible for the downfall of Bamboula. The big colt was sent to the post a pronounced choice, but Thorpe, who had the mount, was pocketed the first part and at the end did not figure among the first three. With the race well in hand Morse, astride Constellation, fell asleep during the final stages of the game and was hsten out a neck by Snello, the Storn entry, which came fast from the rear. Show honors went to The Buffon.

Cromwell, a 4 to 5 favorite, with Macklin in the saddle, managed to heat the barrier in the closing seven-furlong event and was never headed. New Moon closed up a vast amount of lost ground, taking the place in a drive from Manzanilla. Summaries:

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11.

The second week of the State Fair opened with hot sultry weather, but a pretty fair attendance for Monday, which is always an off day. The first race was the Stanford Stake for three year-old trotters with five starters. Vendome Stock Farm's filly Dr. Frasse's Sister was the favorite. She is fast, but wants to pace, so the hoppers were put on. They were so tight that they tired her a good deal, but she went out in front in each heat, leading to the half by from ten to twenty lengths. She got very tired coming home, and Bunch had to use the whip freely to keep her going, but she landed safely in front of Direct Her each time, the others strung out to beyond the distance flag, the distance having been waived.

The 2:30 trot was easy for Psyche, and she made it three straight. Theron, the big bay gelding in Monroe Salisbury's stable, was thought to have a chance for at least the first heat. He was known to be very fast, and in this class should have made a good showing had he acted right. He wanted to pace however, and Webster could not get him to strike a trot. He got no farther than the quarter pole and was distanced the first heat.

Of the original entries to the California Annual stake for two-year-olds at six furlongs but four started. The Montana bred colt Bathos, with Doffy in the saddle, was played down to 9 to 10 favoritism, with Snello next in demand. To a perfect start Thorpe almost immediately showed first with San Tomas. As the stretch was neared the favorite and Bamboula gave it up, leaving the leader to finish as he pleased. Sunello came from behind and made a game effort, but could not extend the winner. Bathos was a tired third and Bamboula last under the whip in a fruitless endeavor to get the show.

Monrovia placed the six furlong scramble for all ages to the credit of the Spreckels stable. Opening an even money choice, the odds drifted to 2 to 1, after which she won gal-

A BRILLIANT CLOSING of the California circuit is being arranged by the Sixth District Association at Los Angeles. Secretary Lewis Thorne, who has been East during the past month, will return in a day or two, and has already telegraphed the good news that he has secured that great trio of pacing champions, John R. Gentry 2:00 1/2, Joe Patchen 2:01 1/2, and Anaconda 2:03 1/2, for two races during the meeting, and as the track will be made as perfect as possible for them, it would not be surprising if the fastest mile of the year were paced here in October over the Los Angeles course. The program of harness races will accommodate all classes of horses now in training in California. A free-for-all trot for $2,000, and seven purses of $1,000 each for trotters and pacers are already closed with large entry lists. Other purses will be provided and announced by next week. The sum of $6,000 has been set aside for the runners to compete for during the seven days racing. A majority of these purses will be $300 each, and will be overnight events made to suit the horses now in California or that are at Los Angeles during the meeting. Two jumping races, one at a mile and a quarter, the other at a mile and a half, will be given. There will also be a cup race at two or two and a quarter miles for which in addition to the purse, a handsome cup will be given. The Los Angeles Derby at a mile and a half is always a feature of the week, and for this at least $500 will be given. There will be races for horses owned in Southern California and as there is considerable rivalry among the horse owners there in regard to the merits of their thoroughbreds, these races will no doubt be exciting, but will also attract very large crowds on the days when they are decided. The Los Angeles Association proposes to make this meeting the best ever held in California if it is possible to do so by the aid of sensational features and the hardest kind of work. Every horseman who is now racing in California should make arrangements forthwith to be at Los Angeles from the 21st to the 28th of October, as there will be more opportunities of racing for good purses there than ever before known in the history of the association. Reduced rates can be had on the railroad to and from the meeting. To miss Los Angeles this year is to miss the best week of the circuit.

QUE ALLEN won the championship of Europe Prize at Baden, Austria, August 15th. It was a five heat race and the best time 2:08 2-5 was made in the last heat. Athanio won the fourth heat in 2:11 7-10 and got second money. The first four heats of the race were trotted August 13th, so a day intervened before the final heat was trotted. Que Allen has now the fastest record in Europe.

R. S. BROWN, the well known horseman and farmer of Petaluma, is constructing near that city a large creamery which will have the capacity for handling the milk from 1000 cows. It will be known as the Hicks Valley Creamery from its location, and will be an enterprise of great value to that section.

AN EXAMPLE has been set by the citizens of Sacramento this year that can be emulated with profit by the residents of other cities where fairs are held. Realizing the fact that the annual fair was an immense benefit to the capital city and that it deserved their hearty support, a number of leading business men organized themselves into a State Fair Club, and began an energetic and concerted movement to hoon the State's exposition, and show the visitors from abroad that Sacramentans were alive to its value and appreciated the benefits derived from having it located permanently in their city. Knowing that the racing end of the fair would take care of itself, the State Fair Club centered its energies on the Pavilion exhibit, and raised a fund which was expended in decorating the building, aiding exhibitors, providing amusements, and attracting visitors. The result has exceeded the expectations of the most enthusiastic among them, and has not only filled the pavilion nightly with the largest crowds ever seen within its walls, but has attracted the attention of the State to the fair, and brought to Sacramento people from all parts of the Pacific Coast. What has been done by the State Fair Club of Sacramento can be accomplished by similar organizations in the towns where district fairs are held. It only needs concerted action on the part of the citizens of each district to make the California circuit of fairs a great feature of the States summer season, and attract not only the attendance of thousands of visitors, but result in an actual financial benefit to the towns where the fairs are held. Nothing that the citizens of any California community can do will bring their locality into notice more generally than the organization of a District Fair Club that will have for its object the securing of a first class exhibit of all products of the district at a fair to be held next year. The State Fair Club has furnished an object lesson of what organization and energy will accomplish. It can be studied with profit by the citizens of every district in California.

THE BEST FAIR IN YEARS will be the one which opens Monday next at Stockton. Fully 90 per cent of the horses now at the State Fair will be taken to Stockton to-morrow and the outlook at present is that every stall of the many on the large and spacious grounds will be occupied. The purses already closed have good lists of entries, and there will be a half dozen purses of $500 each offered for classes that will be most likely to fill with horses that are at the track. Among these will be a free-for-all trot with Toggles barred, a 2:12 trot, a 2:17 pace and a race for trotters of the 2:18 class. For the running brigade a liberal lot of purses ranging from $200 to $300 have been arranged, and the outlook is very encouraging for large fields in nearly every event. The pavilion this year will hold a splendid display. All the space is taken and applications are still coming in. In the mechanical department the exhibits will be very numerous, some of them elaborate and expensive. The Stockton Driving Club, under whose auspices the fair is to be given are a body of hard workers, who have resolved to out-do all former efforts at both park and pavilion. They are putting their time and money into the enterprise and as the citizens of Stockton are giving them moral and financial support, there is no reason why their ambition to make it the best fair ever held in Stockton should not be reached.

A GREAT PROJECT has been inaugurated by some of the wealthiest citizens of Sacramento, which will, if carried out give to California's capital one of the finest racing parks on the Pacific Coast. The plan of the projectors is to purchase a great tract of land near the city, put up modern clubhouses and grandstands, construct a track and stables, pay off the indebtedness of the State Agricultural Society and turn the new park over to the society in exchange for the present grounds. The indebtedness is about $29,000. The citizens who are working upon this scheme are not in it for selfish motives. They have the interests of the city at heart. They intend, in the event of the success of their plans, to convert the present racing grounds into a beautiful driving park. Old fences and buildings will be torn down and trees, flowers and shrubs will be planted. A mile track will be maintained for pleasure driving and there will be roadways where parties may turn out or drive out at quarter or half mile points. The scheme is meeting with great encouragement and will no doubt be carried out.

TOGGLES' MILE in 2:10 at Sacramento is as good as 2:08 over a good track.

THE PLEASANTON TRACK will soon present a new aspect to those who visit it. On Monday next the Pleasanton Training Track Association, the corporation which recently purchased the historic property will let the contract for 300 new box stalls, together with a grandstand and buildings for restaurant, etc, all of which are to be completed by November 1st. The corporation intends to make the Pleasanton track the great training center of California and to that end will widen the track, keep it constantly in first-class condition and in short do everything to make it a desirable place for training trotters and pacers. Large barns will be erected and filled with the best hay and grain to be procured, which will be sold to patrons of the track at the regular market prices. The stalls will be built in blocks, on the same plan as those at the Ingleside track, with awnings extending around each building. Mr. C. B. Charlesworth, secretary of the corporation, will have charge of the track and grounds, and will be prepared to contract with owners to furnish feed and stabling for horses, and board and lodging for the men at rates that will be most reasonable. It is expected that eastern owners will avail themselves of this opportunity and send several strings out this winter to be trained at Pleasanton. Thos. Keeting will arrive about November 1st with his horses, besides a number from the celebrated East View Farm, New York, owned by Thos. Butler. It is likely that a grand opening of the track will be arranged at that time, with a program of races. The attention of owners is especially called to the advertisement of the association in this issue.

THROUGH the courtesy of the "Rider and Driver" of New York we are able to print on our front page this week a handsome photo-engraving of a team that President McKinley recently paid $3500 for. The horses are chestnut geldings, five years old, standing 16 hands high, and weighing 2,400 pounds. Both horses are by Damascus, a grandson of the Barb stallion Linden Tree who, with the Arah stallion Leopard, was presented to Gen. Grant by the Sultan of Turkey. Their dams are sisters, by Clay Pilot II, by old Clay Pilot. They are said to have high action, and, as may be noted in the picture, are very evenly matched in size and markings. Mr. McKinley will drive these horses in heavy harness to a Stanhope phaeton recently made for him. In speaking of the new vehicle a Washington correspondent writes to the Chicago Tribune that during Mr. McKinley's first few months in the White House he frequently went horseback riding, but was compelled to give up this sort of recreation on account of the pressure of public business. His physician has ordered him to take exercise, and it will be a common occurrence in the future to see the President driving about the suburbs of Washington.

THE SAN JOSE MEETING will be held. A report was started at Sacramento this week, that owing to the opening of the racing season at Oakland, which it was feared would cause a shortage of horses for the running events, there would be no racing at San Jose, but a telephone message from that city conveys the pleasing information that the meeting will be held. An excellent list of entries were received for the trotting and pacing events, and a good program can be provided for every day of the meeting. The San Jose Board of Trade is taking an active interest in the pavilion exhibit, where $1200 will be distributed in premiums. It is thought this exhibit will be one of the best ever made in the Garden City. San Jose's meeting follows Stockton's, and the dates are September 25th to 30th.

SIX STAKES are advertised in our columns to-day to be run during November and December at the new track of the Western Turf Association at Tanforan Park. The association will open the winter season November 1st, and its beautiful track will no doubt be popular with horse owners and the public.

The exhibit of D. M. Osborne & Co. at the State Fair at Sacramento this year is attracting great attention. They have a twine binder in operation, which is a marvel in its way, besides disc harrows, a corn harvester and other farming implements. At their place of business, 13 and 15 Main street, San Francisco, they keep in stock every description of implement needed by the farmer or fruit grower.

Que Allen is now the fastest trotter by the records in all Europe. On August 13th, he made a mile at Baden in 2:09 9-10. The race was mile heats, three in five, for a purse of $3500. Colonel Knser, Miss Sidney, Boardil, Senator A., Pastoral, George A. and Athanio also started.

Lee J., a bay gelding by Sidney, won a seven heat race August 25th, at Wellington, Ohio, getting a record of 2:26 1/2.

STATE FAIR RACES.

loping from McFarlane, the favorite. A plunge on Correct cut his odds from 8 to 2, but the best the gelding could do was to finish fourth.

Mistletoe went out in front in the mile and a sixteenth event and never left the result in doubt. Twinkle Twink, a 10 to 1 shot, was second, and Fortis, the favorite, third.

Fehrnery was favorite for the final six furlong race, and won easily. Enmeasies:

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12

Santa Rose Stock Farm's filly Dolly D, by Sidney Dillon, was the winner of the Occident Stake last year, getting a record therein of 2:21. Tuesday she captured the 2:19 trot at Sacramento and reduced her record to 2:19 1/2. Athevis got the first heat in 2:20, and won second money thereby, while Twilight was third in the race.

The 2:12 pece was a straight victory for Diablo's son, Diawood. He beat such others as Don, Arthur W., Beechwood, I Direct and others, and lowered his mark to 2:11 in the second heat.

The Futurity Stake for two-year-old runners was captured by Don Tomas, a Brutus colt belonging to Burns & Waterhouse. The stake was worth $2875, of which $1997 went to the winner.

After the Futurity had been decided, a seven furlong sprint, for which Manzanilla closed favorite, was called. Thorpe, who had the mount, rode one of his old-time finishes, getting the verdict at the wire by a short head from Meadow Lark, with Morse np.

The three-cornered owners' handicap, with Libertine, Hohenzollern and Montt McGregor as starters, was no doubt the fiercest betting feature of the day. McGregor, with Thorpe np, had the cell, and his snerph saddle work undoubtedly won. Assenning the lead almost from the jump, he was hard pressed at the wire, but the hey with roan markings hung on gemely, heating Hohenzollern out over two lengths in 1:47 1/2.

The final seven furlong dash, with a cheap bend of platers lining up, went to Snips, a 5 to 1 shot, piloted by Monnce. Megns, the 6 to 5 favorite, with Butler np, ren third beaten by Tenrice. Summaries:

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13.

Four teams started for the $500 purse at Sacramento on Wednesday, all but Memie Riley and Dr. Freese, the pair entered and driven by Geo. W. Berry, being peccers. Fanny Putnem and Margerite were made the favorites but Vet Tryon's pair of peccers, Primrose 2:14 1/2 and Regina F. won easily in straight heats. Berry's team took second money as easily end proved to be a well mated pair.

The 2:18 trot had but five starters. Lynnal, D. E. Knight's chestnut gelding, was the favorite and won, though Col. Kirkpatrick's fast but erratic mare Azelea managed to get the second heat in 2:23 1/2, the fastest of the race. Mand Newman was third.

The first run was a six and one-half furlong sprint, for which Alarie, Tommy Butler up, closed a top-heavy favorite. After indulging Shellac end Major Cook with the lead to the stretch, Butler let out his wraps and the first choice rolled in five lengths before the 40 to-1 shot Jeck McCabe, with Monnce in the saddle.

A bunch of two-year-old maidens followed in a five-furlong dash. The Boots entry, Enjoyment was a pronounced favorite, and Morse lended the filly a winner over Mandamns after Tres Jolly had cut out the pece for two-thirds of the journey.

The event following was also a five furlong spin for two-year-old maidens. At post time Flamote had a slight call over El Arte in the ring and in the race heat Togalog in a drive by three lengths, while the latter only beat Fairfax a nose. El Arte was fourth.

The six furlong dash for three-year-olds and upwards gave Chihneha an opportunity to win a hot finish by a nose from Rapido. Donator was heavily piloted for the place, but was pulled up as the word was given end did not contest in the race. The summaries:

Sulky Notes.

STOCKTON'S meeting opens Monday next.

SAN JOSE has not been declared off officially.

EARLY announcements secure large entry lists.

LAIID 2:24½, by Hummer, has five producing dams.

MATINEE RACING is becoming more popular every day.

THE ALCYONE family is making a great showing this year.

THE ABBOT has won nineteen heats this season in better than 2:10.

I DIRECT is getting back to form and will be good later in the season.

FRESNO will have a good meeting and the track will be in fine shape.

It looks as if Peter the Great is the only rival of The Abbot this year.

WHO IS IT was beaten again last Wednesday and finished outside the money.

BIDS for the new buildings at Pleasanton track will be opened next Monday.

SANTA ROSA records are hard to beat. Tracks cut up for runners don't suit the harness horses.

THE people in the interior seem to enjoy the harness races better than the running events.

NEITHER the Prodigal sons or daughters either are making as good a showing as they did last year.

MONTEREY has demonstrated to the Westerners that he is as fast as a ghost and as unreliable as a tout.

It is said that John Kelly will next season train for one of the leading breeders of the Empire State.

JOE PATCHEN, John R. Gentry and Anconada are engaged for two races at the Los Angeles meeting.

A CHICAGO BUYER paid $50 per head for a band of two hundred range horses in Wyoming recently.

THE Oregon State Fair will open today at Salem. The purses for trotters and pacers run from $150 to $400.

THERE is talk of a big gala day at Pleasanton with regular races over the track "when Tom Keating comes home."

WHEN Searchlight was beaten at Hartford, it was the first time in his life that he had ever been behind the money.

BONNER N. B. 2:17, a son of the Rosedale Stock Farm's stallion Dely, is the sire of Phil N., a one 2:30 performer.

NEW 2:10 trotters appear at nearly every meeting in the East, and 2:10 pacers are getting "too numerous to mention."

SEARCHLIGHT has trailed off and at New York was troubled with muscle soreness so that he could not be started.

PSYCHE 2:17½ is one of the gamest trotters on the circuit. Geo. Berry has kept her in perfect condition all through the season.

OWYHEE 2:11, is not only one of the best race horses in the East this year, but he is one of the best money winners of the season.

THE Lexington meeting will be held during the first week in October and then the Californians now in the East will start for Los Angeles.

HOLLISTER will hold its fair from October 3d to 7th, the dates formerly selected by the Salinas Association which has declared its meeting off.

SEARCHLIGHT 2:03½, Brightlight 2:03½, and Valpe 2:09½, make a pretty good trio to the credit of the sire Dark Night, now owned in Germany.

MYRTA WHIPS is one of the best of the green pacers that have been out on the California circuit this year. She is a sure enough race mare.

DAINTY DAFFO, black mare by Wilton, won the $5000 purse for 2:21 trotters at the Minnesota State Fair. Her best time in the race was 2:13½.

J. SUTHERLAND is training a handsome yearling colt by Falrose at the Pleasanton track. Mr. Sutherland recently sold his farm near Pleasanton for a good figure.

THE Oregon and Washington horsemen who have been racing on the California circuit left for Salem last week so as to fill their engagements on the northern circuit.

TYANNA, the Chas. Derby mare that sold for less than $200 in Fasig's sale, last November, recently stepped a mile in 2:15½. Robert Smith, of Philadelphia, owns her.

MR. D. E. KNIGHT was one of the hardest workers of the State Fair Directors. He was up early and late attending to the business of the committees of which he was a member.

SECRETARY CHARLES WORTH of the Pleasanton Training Track Association was in this city this week. He says everything will be in readiness for the horses by November 1st.

It is reported that M. E. McHenry has an option on Lord Vincent 2:08½ at $20,000. It is also said that McHenry is acting for H. W. Brown, of Salt Lake City, who owns Al-toke 2:10½.

WHEN Cresceus made his record of 2:07½ at Empire City Trotting Park he came through the stretch so easily that good judges who were present believed he could have trotted the mile in 2:06.

It will soon be time to hang up the harnesses and turn the money hunters out to roach it in winter quarters. And yet it occurs to mention that Alix and Directum still hold the records.—Trotter and Pacer.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Association will probably give a meeting in October. The association has been offered the use of Ingleside track or the new one at Tanforen Park if it is completed by that time.

TEAM races could soon be made popular were purses hung up for them at all the meetings on the circuit, with the conditions so arranged that teams could be made up and entered the night before the race.

THE silver cup, worth $500, which is always added to the first money in the Charter Oak $10,000 purse, was awarded by George Tod, owner of this year's winner, Lord Vincent 2:08½, to his driver, Charley Dohle.

AZOTE is gradually going faster and faster. He trotted a mile in 2:13½ at Cleveland the other day and will probably be ready for a matinee exhibition. His owner will probably start him against the wagon record.

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS refused for The Abbot, $25,000 refused for Searchlight, $20,000 refused for Idolita and $10,000 refused for Lecco is pretty good evidence of where the horse market was a week ago.

TRINKET, now 24 years old, and who 17 years ago when she trotted to a record of 2:14 was the most noted campaigner on the turf, was started in a race for $50 at Readville on Labor Day and won in 2:30½ and 2:20½.

THE leading sires of the year are Dieblo 2:09½ with seven new ones in the standard list, Elyria 2:25½ and Baron Wilkes 2:18 with five each, and Onimes 2:30½, McKinney 2:11½, Axtell 2:12, Simmons 2:28 and Jay Bird 2:31½, each with four.

DIAWOOD won a good race at the State Fair last Tuesday. He had some of the best pacers on the circuit pitted against him, but won in straight heats, the time 2:11½ and 2:11 showing that he is a very speedy horse, as the track was slow.

NELLY BLY 2:20½, the six-year-old bay mare by Starboul that was taken East last Spring and sold at the Cleveland sale, was resold at auction last week in New York. She brought $450, which is $125 less than she sold for at Cleveland.

ONE of the most credible performances of the season took place at the Washington C. H. meeting when M'Liss, by Simmons trotted to a record of 2:14 in the 2:22 class over a half mile track. M'Liss is now 14 years old, and as far back as 1890 took a record of 2:27½.

IN the Charter Oak $10,000 Stake, Lord Vincent was up against the "13 hoodoo," but beat the game. He drew thirteenth place, thirteen started, Dohle laid up the first heat in thirteenth place, then went on and won it in short order and established a new record for the event.

THE Sacramento track was not in very good condition for the harness horses this year. It is almost impossible to make that track fast as the soil is worn out and dead and when running races and stock parades are held every day, the harness brigade gets very much the worst of it.

IT was the general opinion among horsemen who saw Ster Pointer pull up so lame in his race at Empire City Park, that he is hopelessly broken down and will never race again. It is wonderful how McClary has kept him up the past three years, as his legs have been in very bad shape all that time.

IT is not often that there are ringers in California, but one hopped up in the Drummers' race at Sacramento last week. Farmer's Girl, the mare that won, was formerly known as Pansy and is under suspension by several associations. She is by Prompter. Her identity was established after the race was over, and she was ruled off the track with her owner and driver for life.

SEPTEMBER 8th at Empire City Park, all records for the fastest average for one day's racing, were broken, the average time of the four races being a shade below 2:07½. Every trotter that won a heat gained a record below 2:10. Anconada paced a mile in 2:03½, and The Abbot trotted a second heat in 2:06½. The summaries of the meeting published on another page of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN show that it was one of the greatest meetings ever held.

THE feature of last week in the St. Louis horse market was the sale of about 2800 Western horses, green from the range. The top price was $59.50, for a select bunch of chunks, while the lowest on matured horses was $7, for thin inferior mares, almost unmarketable. Sockling colts sold at $5.50 to $10 per head; inferior, small, plain and aged stock at $7 to $12.50 per head; fair to medium light mares and geldings from $15 to $22.50; ordinary to good drivers and chunks, 950 to 1200 pounds, at $25 to $35; choice to extra chunks, 1100 to 1300 pounds at $36 to $45, and extra chunks averaging 1840 pounds up to $35.50. About 183 head sold below $10 per head, 968 head sold from $10 to $20, 450 head from $20 to $30, 200 head from $30 to $40, and 60 head from $40 to $59.50. About 135 head of mares and colts sold between $10 to $20, 95 head from $20 to $30, and 60 head from $30 to $37. Some two-year old chunks sold at $45.50 per head. These are much better prices than have been paid for horses of similar class in many years.

ENTRIES to the standard bred trotting class were very light at the State Fair this year. The rules of the State Agricultural Society have always required that horses must be registered before they can be entered in this class. During the years of depression in the horse business many breeders of light harness horses stopped registering their animals altogether. The new rules adopted last year made the conditions of registration more stringent than formerly and the result is registered standard horses are not so numerous as they have been.

SPLAN & NEWGASS, who have made a great success of trotting horse sales in Chicago during the past two seasons, will give their first fall sale during the week of November 8th. They have established in Chicago one of the best markets in America for the trotting and pacing horses and their sales are conducted in a modern style, so ably that the best prices are realized for all horses. Owners who contemplate a sale of horses this fall should communicate with Splan & Newgass, Union Park Yards, Chicago, Ill., or John Splan, Glenville, O., for particulars regarding the coming November sale.

CONTRARY to preconceived opinions, American horses stand the climate of the Philippines first-rate. Capt. Wheeler's troop of the 4th cavalry, now at Balloos end in the vicinity of San Fernando, is mounted on horses brought from the United States. After months of hard service these horses are in excellent condition, and, strange to relate, they have stood the heat and the wet better than the native ponies. Out of the eighty-three horses brought with him Capt. Wheeler has lost only three. One died of the distemper and two were shot. Thus does the American horse, like the American soldier, prove his superiority everywhere he goes.—Manila American.

IT is proposed by several prominent horse owners to bring forward at the next meeting of the National Trotting Association an amendment making it obligatory upon the Grand Circuit members to decline entries of hopped horses. A veteran driver, in commenting upon the subject, remarked: "I've been driving race horses all my life and I'm no 'springer.' I tell you this hopped horse game is no account. Any old driver can handle a hopped horse, and it takes no knowledge to train them. Without the straps they're no good for any use. No sir, the business of hoppers makes cheap horses, and, worse yet, cheap drivers. I would not drive one of 'em for any man's money. I'd rather take no chances with my life."

C. J. HAMLIN, although in his eightieth year, takes as much active interest in the work of his horses as ever. He was at Readville and took great pleasure in showing the cracks of his stable to visitors. He and his son Harry are always very courteous to strangers and willing to show their horses when not engaged in racing. Mr. Hamlin, senior, is a great stickler for honesty in horseflesh, and although Lady of the Manor 2:04½ holds the world's record for pacing mares, he sees fit to call her an "outlaw" on account of her plain and rakish appearance. The remaining ambition of his life is to breed a pacer that will beat anything developed by the Hal family. He has a hard proposition on his hands, and in this particular affair has not the full sympathy of Geers, who is a staunch advocate of the Hells, as well he might be.

WAITING of the laying up of heats question in the "Horse Breeder" Fra arick Watson says: "There has been a pretty liberal amount of writing done regarding the laying up of heats in some of the recent races, and perhaps some of it has been reasonably correct, but I wonder what the writers of the 'don't allow laying up' plan would have done if they had been in a race or two at some of the half mile tracks where the starters filled up the track three tiers deep. The front tier men dare not try to lay up for fear the others would run over them, the middle tier men could neither lay up nor go on, as they could neither get through in front nor drop out behind, and the third tier men were forced to lay up, at least the greatest part of the time. There is only one reasonable system to compel every man to drive for the heat, and that is to limit the field of starters to the number that can score abreast on the track."

IT is a significant fact that many cities that were famous for trotting sport years ago, and which went over to the runners, are returning to the trotting field, especially the best cities of the southwest, says the "American Sportsman." For a long time the St. Louis Fair furnished one of the great staka meetings of the year, but in 1890 it dropped completely off the trotting map. The growing demand for trotting races has induced the big institution to prepare a trotting program and as a starter this year will offer 12 races for $500 purses. Cincinnati, that was one of the best trotting towns in the country at the time St. Louis flourished, has not yet returned to the trotting sport, but it comes mighty near by organizing a matinee club which will give races on the running track at Osley. The old feeling that the amateur sport will revive, should hear early fruit. Nothing can bring about interest in the trotter so quickly as first-class matinee sport. It has made Cleveland the foremost trotting city in the world, has revived the trotting interests of Pittsburg, Toledo, Detroit and in fact, every city and town where the spirit has entered.

THE widespread interest in amateur sports is looked upon by the devotees of trotting as being one of the most encouraging signs of the times in the horse world. Following the lead of the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Cleveland, which was the pioneer organization in fostering the amateur phase of the sport, similar clubs have lately been founded in a dozen or more prominent cities. Most of these associations of horse fanciers and road drivers are purely sporting and social organizations, having nothing to do with formal harness racing for money prizes open to professional reinsmen. Such are the driving clubs at Cleveland, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Detroit, Toledo, Buffalo, Cincinnati and other towns where trotting to road wagon, with amateurs op, is enjoying a boom. Nothing except the opening of the Harlem River Speedway has done so much to stimulate interest in the trotting horse and increase his market value, horsemen say. In New York the Speedway affords such a fine place for amateur sport that no such club has yet been formed here, but it is said to be the intention of W. H. Clark to organize next season an association similar to the Cleveland club, with a view to having weekly matinees at the new Empire City Park.—New York Sun.

American Horses Lead in England.

If the two-year-old question in America has not as yet reached a really definite conclusion, the situation in England is hardly less complicated. Our cousins across the water are inclined to the opinion that their youngsters are a fairly good lot, but as yet no one colt or filly has demonstrated an absolute supremacy. Our American representative, Democrat, the Ranocoes bred son of Sensation and Equality, is easily the leader in the amount of money won, his three successes having aggregated £7018, a thoroughly nice winning for a two-year-old in England, where the juvenile events do not approach in value those for the older horses. Democrat's successes comprise the Coventry Stekes, at Ascot; the Hurst Park Foal Plate, and the National Breeders' Produce Stakes at Sandown Park.

The last named is the most valuable English event for two-year-olds, corresponding somewhat to our Futurity, but like the Futurity, is often won by a juvenile who falls considerably short of being the best of the year. Democrat carried the very steady impost of 135 pounds to victory, however, and although Forfarshire, 126 pounds, had all the bad luck of the race and was only beaten a neck, Democrat certainly must have run a grand race to carry his big weight home.

Second on the two-year-old list in regard to amount of money won comes O'Donovan Rossa, Mr. Arthur James' gelding, by Donovan, out of the Barcadine—Symmetry mare. This youngster has won £3781 in four races, but, although he best Democrat at Newmarket, in May, the letter turned the tables most decidedly in the big race at Sandown, for O'Donovan Rossa, also carrying 135, was unplaced.

Emotion, by Nunthorpe, out of Ernite, has won three races worth £3741, and Lades' son, Epsom Led, secured £3614 by his deed heat with Goblet, at Ascot, and his overthrow of Diamond Jubilee, Griffon and five moderate ones in the Prince of Wales' Stakes, at Goodwood. Bettyfield, by Amphion, out of Thistlefield, has won five races worth £3142, and another Amphion filly to score well is Sonatura, out of Albertaine, whose two successes have netted £1437.

Isingless has done well in the stud from the very start, and in his first season has to his credit three nice fillies in Vein Duchess, Jennesse Doree and Remise. Vein Duchess, who is out of Sweet Duchess, was for some time considered the best two-year old in England, irrespective of sex, by reason of her smart victories in the Breeders' plate at Newmarket, and the Summer Breeders' Foal Plate at Manchester. But when it came to Ascot, Democrat defeated her cleverly by a length in the Coventry, and an extra four pounds on the American gelding in the Hurst Park Foal Plate did not prevent him from repeating his defeat of Vein Duchess by almost the same margin as before.

Vein Duchess has since won the great Lenceshire Breeders' Produce Stakes at Liverpool, and the fact that she has met her only conqueror in Democrat is certainly a strong point in favor of the Ranocoes gelding's claim to the supremacy. Juennesse Doree, out of La Croise Doree, won the Exeter Stekes (£821) at the Newmarket First July, and it must be genuine satisfaction to Mr. H. McCalmont to have bred so good a filly by his old champion. Remise, out of Reprive, has won £322 in both of her starts, namely, the March Two-year-old Stekes at Liverpool and the Tottenham Plate at Epsom, her only two appearances. The form was not much in either race, but it is something to be unbeaten, and she was bought in for 620 guinees after the Tottenham.

St. Simon has quite a band of two-year-old winners, no less than eight having brackets. There is hardly a St. Frusquin or Persimmon among the lot, but The Gorgon, who is out of Aodromeade, won the New at Ascot on the occasion of her debut, the event being worth £1928, while Winifrede, a daughter of Melody, won the Richmond Stakes (£782) on the occasion of her only public appearance. Simondele, out of Ismay, won £950 for the Duke of Portland, in the Hem Stakes at Goodwood, his only start, and Simonwood, out of Deisy Chain, has just won the Prince of Wales' Plate (£885) at York. Planudes, out of Lonely, won £480 in the Molyneux Stekes at Liverpool in March.

The stallion Trenton, one of the great sires recently imported to England from Australia, has a nice two-year-old winner to his credit in Longy, who is out of Seintly, she by St. Simon, out of Lonely. This colt although not a big one, has now four out of six starts, namely, the Westminster Plate at Epsom, the White Mere Plate at Thirk, the Weston Stekes at Bath and the Forty-seventh Triennial at Ascot. These events, while not equal in importance or value to the achievements of some of the youngsters which we have been considering, were won in a style to draw much attention to Longy, who was voted to have been very unlucky to succumb by a neck to Stealaway in the British Dominion two-year old race at Sandown Park in June, in which he was carrying 135 pounds to her 112. Late foreign exchanges bring the intelligence that Longy could only get fifth in the Futurity at Baden Baden, on the Continent, but it may prove that too much was asked of the little colt to make the long journey for a race in which he had to concede five pounds to the whole field.

The youngster, who is expected by many English judges to develop into Democrat's strongest opponent, if not conqueror, is Forfarshire, of whose ill luck in the big Sandown race with Democrat I have above written. Since then Forfarshire has won the Rous Memorial at Goodwood, worth £1095, the Kempton Park International Breeders Two-Year-Old Stake, worth £935, and the Champion Breeders' Biennial Foal Stakes at Manchester. He carried 136 pounds in grand style at Kempton, and it is a great pity that his name is absent from the Middle Park and Dewhurst list. Like Longy, he is out of a St. Simon mare, she being St. Elizabeth, a daughter of Ese, she out of Fleada, by Hermit.

Forfarshire's sire, Royal Hampton, is by Hampton, out of imp. Princess, which grand mare has done so much for the blood stock of two countries. Royal Hampton is one of the leading stallions in England, standing at 150 guinees, while in America it would be hard to find a stallion who made more excellent use of his opportunities than has his son, His Highness, who furnished us with our champion two-year-old of 1898, Jean Bereud, who amply proved his ability to go on by scoring the coveted "double" of the Withers and Belmont this year. This year His Highness has given us His Royal Highness, one of the best two-year-olds, with those two speedy fillies, Neda and Affect to complete a very nice trio to be sired in a single season by one horse in a private stud.

W. H. ROWE.

SADDLE NOTES.

STOCKTON's meeting opens Monday.

THORPE rode three winners at Sacramento, Tuesday last.

HENRY ELLRACK is training W. M. Murry's horses at Sacramento.

CALIFORNIA JOCKEY CLUB's fall and winter racing season begins next Saturday, October 23d.

LOS ANGELES will give $6000 for the runners during the meeting there. The purses will be $300 to $500.

ABOUT four hundred horses are expected to be quartered at the Oakland track by the middle of next week.

THE Western Turf Association Stakes for November and December are announced in to days BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

THERE must be considerable betting at Hawthorne as there were twenty-four regular and two field books on there last week.

HON. W. C. WHITNEY has purchased from Barney Schreiber the three-year old bay filly Jinks, by imp. Albert—Hoodoo.

WALTER HOBART recently visited Salinas and picked up a couple of likely looking ponies that will be trained for polo playing.

THEODORE WINTERS announces that he will soon retire from the ranks of thoroughbred breeders, and will dispose of all his broodmares and stallions.

WM. MURRAY is at Hawthorne with Buckwa, Cromwell, Tar Heel, Flemora and the jumper Three Forks, and will remain there until the close of the season.

SYDNEY PAGET has bought the yearling colt, by Kingston, dam Ballyhoo, knocked down to Mett Byrnes at the recent Eastern sale. The price paid was reported to be $12,000.

IT is said that Mr. Corrigan will not be in attendance at the Turf Congress meeting at Chicago next Wednesday, but that the Pacific Coast Jockey Club will be represented by Captain Rees.

MOCORITO won a race at Hawthorne last Tuesday after a rattling finish with Pacemaker, but was disqualified when his jockey was weighed in, as he had lost six pounds of lead somewhere in the contest.

J. W. LANGFORD, the well known turf correspondent, has returned from the East and is residing in Oakland. His health did not improve any on the Eastern trip, but he is feeling stronger since his arrival on the Coast.

THE green and orange stripes of E. C. Hopper, the popular Secretary of the Latonia Jockey Club, will be seen again this fall. Mr. Hopper has a three-year-old brother to Sberlock, by Eberlee, dam Blue Bonnet, in training.

MESMERIST won the Great Eastern Handicap at Sheephead Bay last Saturday and ran in his usual commanding style. Weight does not seem to bother this great two-year-old. He beat a good field the following Tuesday for the Junior Championship at the Brooklyn Jockey Club's track.

BURNS & WATERHOUSE arranged with J. W. Schorr & Son for Tommy Burns' services this winter. Burns is under contract to the Memphis turfmen for two years dating from the first of last January. Burns & Waterhouse paid a big price for first call on the jockey, and Schorr & Son, who will bring a small string to the Coast, will have second call on him.

BENDORAN is very probably the best sprinter in training and his performance when he won the Flight Stekes at Sheephead Bay last week was nothing behind that of such sprinters as Stuyvesant, Kingston and Dr. Hasbrouck, who had previously won the race. Indeed his time was considerably better than that made by any of these except the 1:26 1-5 marked up by Kingston in 1892 with 127 pounds on his back. Clifford still holds the record for the race, 1:25 2 5 made in 1894 with 127 pounds up. Bendoran will thus find his name enrolled among those of many celebrities, and he can at the least lay claim to as much class as some of his company, notably Stuyvesant, who won in 1887, and Dorian, who won in 1895.

W. P. MORTON, the well known Eastern horseman, has sold to English breeders four promising yearlings, three by imp. Albert, the other by imp. Order. It is said the price paid for the four was over twenty thousand dollars.

IT is said that at the next meeting of the Turf Congress an attempt will be made to bring racing back to its old lines, apportioning the dates out to the various clubs and the meetings in the West to follow each other, instead of clashing as they do now.

AMONG the horses that will take part in the Nevada State Fair races, to be held at Reno next week, are Kathleen, The Drummer, Sport McAllister, Durengo, Mafada, Mandamus, Skirmish, Christine, Shannnette and a number of other well known California sprinters.

WHITE CROSS, the perfectly white son of Palestine and Bleck Girl, that has been known as the snow white freak of the running turf, is gradually changing his color. Black spots have appeared on his shoulders and hind quarters, his tail has turned black and his ears a dark brown. White Cross was raced as a two-year-old but never won. He is now three.

SECRETARY ED HOPPER formally issued notice that the next annual meeting of the American Turf Congress will be held in Chicago Wednesday, September 20, at the Wellington Hotel. All the members of the Western turf governing body have been notified of the meeting, and it is expected by Secretary Hopper that every association will be represented.

CARNERO, J. M. Murphy's five-year-old son of Candlemas—Sister Geneva, lowered the world's record for a mile and a sixteenth to 1:45 flat at Hawthorne September 5th, and by so doing gave additional evidence that he is, indeed, a remarkable race horse. Except for the records at a mile and six furlongs, there is no one so often seelised as the one at a mile and a sixteenth, and as it is a favorite distance for the best horses, Carnero's performance is all the more remarkable. On June 6, 1896, Red Skin, with fifty eight pounds on his back, ran the distance in 1:45 1/2 over the old Forsythe (Ind.) track. The course is only seven furlongs in circumference, which added something to the performance that has stood ever since as the world's record. Last February, at the Oakland track, Top Mast, with 108 pounds, covered the distance in the same time, but the record remained the same. The conditions were perfect for the record-breaking performance. It was the third race, and there were but four starters, Carnero, Raffello, Cherry Leaf, and Sem Lazarus, Eq. By the time they faced the barrier the hot wind, which had been blowing up the stretch earlier in the afternoon, had ceased and the sultriness had increased correspondingly. The spectators were languishing, but the horses enjoyed it. When the field broke Carnero went to the front, and passing the judges' stand he was leading, with Sam Lazarus, Eq., second, Cherry Leaf third, and Raffello fourth. The three year old with the long name, however, was sent along by Dominick, and on the first turn took the lead. It may be said here that this same three-year-old was largely responsible for the record-breaking, although he did not get even the small end of the purse, for he set a terrific pace. The first quarter was covered in 0:23 1/2, the half in 0:48 1/2, and five furlongs in 1:00 1/2, with Sam Lazarus four lengths in the lead. The spectators expected to see him come back on the far turn, but he didn't, and he went six furlongs in 1:12 1/2. When he had gone a mile in 1:38 1/2 he began to show signs of distress, and Carnero headed him, running strong and true. Straightened out in the stretch, Raffello moved up and for an instant looked dangerous, but Carnero hed too much in reserve, and, running at about the same gait, he passed the wire competively an easy winner in 1:45. Raffello was second and Cherry Leaf just managed to nose out Sam Lazarus, Eq., for show money. The official time was verified by several horsemen, and men who timed the race from wire to wire say the last mile was run in 1:38 1/2.

It Cures the Worst Cases.

Mr. A. W. Edwards, a prominent horseman at Bluff City, Tenn., writes as follows: "Enclosed find post office order for one box of Quinn's Ointment. I used one package, and it cured the worst case of blood spavin I ever saw." This is the universal verdict of the leading breeders and horsemen throughout the United States. For Curbs, splints, spavins, windpuffs and all bunches Quinn's Ointment has no equal. Sent by mail or express prepaid, upon receipt of $1.50; smaller size 50 cents. Address W. B. An Opportunity for Sellers.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to answer some of the many inquiries we are receiving in regard to our November sale. The Chicago horse market, by facts and figures, is the largest in the world. More horses are sold there every year than any other market in this country or Europe. The increased demand for all classes of light harness horses in 1899 has improved the price very materially over 1887 and 1898. The pleasure riding public appreciate the fact that the American trotter is by far the best pleasure horse in the world. For these and other reasons I feel that we can truthfully guarantee to would be consignors of your State, thorough satisfaction for any consignments sent to our sale. There is now, and will be, an unlimited demand at first class prices for all classes of useful horses. Breeding alone does not, as formerly, commend long prices. What it takes to get the money in the sale ring are animals with good size, soundness, breeding, manner, speed and action enough to make them useful for track, road or family use. Well bred horses, with coach horse manners and style, either stallion, mare or gelding, will bring the top price with us. The California bred trotters have made such an exceptionally fine showing at the Eastern meetings that anyone having a consignment of racing prospects would be bound to attract the attention of critical and wealthy buyers. The Sale takes place November 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 1899. Entries close October 15th. Yours truly, Used With Success for Cooled Ankles, Etc.

The Lawrence-Williams Co., Cleveland, O. Wish to use "Gomhanil's Caustic Balsam" on an outside splint, and as our dealer has no printed instructions I would be thankful if you would mail me pamphlet. Have used the above remedy with success on cooled ankles, curbs and enlarged glands, but want some instructions on this splint, as the patient is one of my favorite driving mares. F. W. KINNEY.

Interfering Behind.

In a recent number of the Horsehoers' Journal, two shoers give their views of interfering behind and the way they would sho to prevent it. Ooe says: Interfering is one of the trying things the horsehoer has to contend with, especially among roadsters during the hot summer months.

I would like to say to the reader: Study the horse that interferes before shoeing him. Observe his construction, his gait, ascertain the nature of his work. This, I claim, is essential if you have never shod the animal before you attempt to overcome the fault he may have.

Now, one horse may interfere very badly behind, and as you pull the shoes off observe the way they are worn. If the horse toes out the shoes will be worn off on the outside, principally at the toe. My experience with such horses has been not to try to sever the shoe, but to stop the horse from interfering. I say this because a great many shoers will try to brace the horse up at this one particular point in order to save the shoe and make it wear longer, but if he would dress the hoof as level as possible, divide it from point of frog to outside and inside quarters equally, and if it is an extremely bad case of interfering—remember I am speaking of the horse that toes out—shoe him with as light a shoe as his weight and the nature of his work will permit. Often a horse is found that strikes wall heck with inside heel. For this fault I turn a shoe with outside heel extending about two inches wall turned out, and on inside I run shoe back, covering a little more than one-half of foot, leaving inside heel bare, or the part the horse strikes with. In some cases, when calks are necessary, as in slippery weather, I adjust a feather-edge shoe, drawing the inside heel very narrow and swell to the thickness of outside calked heel, nailing well at inside toe. Then we have the line traveler that usually strikes in center of ankle with center of foot or quarter. This horse, too, has to be shod according to the labor he performs; shoe as light as possible. I usually have good success with the horse that strikes in center by straightening inside of shoe, haval well and fit very close, leaving both heels extended back about the same length.

We also have the horse that toes in and strikes a little past the center towards the toe. This horse usually strikes the opposite at the coronet, and the habit is sometimes very hard to overcome; but by dressing the foot level I have met with success in such cases. Turn a shoe weighing from 14 to 18 ounces with as much weight on outside as possible, drawing outside web wide and thin, with inside web thick and narrow, wall hammed and hot-rasped, and punched well back to heel; fit well, not allowing shoe to extend back of heels of foot about as you would fit a plate to front foot.

We have practically three kinds of interfering behind, viz.: One that toes out and strikes with heel; one that is called the line traveler and stands almost straight, with toes pointing nearly so, and strikes with canter or quarter the opposite ankle in center; and the last and worst of all, the pigeon-toed horse, that toes in and strikes with inside point of toe and sometimes near the center of foot and hits the opposite center.

The other shoer's views are as follows: The subject is one that requires a great deal of study if you would prevent a horse from interfering by a knowledge of the different formations of the foot and leg. What I mean by this is, some shoers prevent a horse from interfering by dumb luck. This is proven in many cases, for they shoe the next horse that comes to them, interfering in just the same way as they have the previous one. Therefore, instead of preventing the trouble, the horse interferes worse than ever. We might say, then, there are two causes for interference: one, faulty conformation of the foot and leg, the other, man's ignorance of the formation of the foot which he is shoeing. Some horses toe inward; others outward, all owing to the peculiar formation of the foot and leg; while others stand perfectly straight; still they all interfere, and it is the work of the shoer to first get the foot ready, then fit the shoe to prevent interfering.

You will observe in horses that toe "inward" that they strike well forward on the ankle, and if they lack the hock action to go ankle high, they strike between the hair and hoof, properly named the coronary band. The reason for striking so far forward is the position the foot occupies when on the ground and the way the other foot is carried while in motion. The one in motion, when rising from the ground, turns outward until about to land, when it takes a natural position, which is inward; consequently striking with the foot near the toe and wall forward as the one on the ground is toed inward, with the back of the ankle slightly out. In my experience a shoe wall leveled from the inside toe to where the second nail of the ordinary shoe should be, will correct the fault. The nails should be placed further back.

In treating a horse with an outward conformation of the foot and leg you will find that one will strike well back on his ankle, some well under, and others wall up. Of course, that depends upon their hock action. Horses with this conformation strike from the second nail—in an ordinary shoe—back to the heel. Such cases, when traveling, wind their toe inward until about landing, when they give it that swing outward, causing it to come in contact with the foot on the ground which is turned outward.

In order to prevent such horses from interfering, which can be done in all cases if proper attention is given to the conformation, the outside heels of some being curled under more than others. A shoe leveled from just back of the inside to clear to the heel, and with an extended right heel, will prevent interfering. In fitting this shoe, have it as full as possible at the inside toe, gradually narrowing back to the heel. As the plate is well leveled from the inside toe nail back to the heel, keep the outside toe narrowed, gradually widening towards the heel, so much so that the point of the heel will have a shade fuller than the coronary band and the outside longer than the foot. This is to give the proper bearing, so that when the foot lands it will undoubtedly cause it to be taken up in a different manner, making it impossible for the horse to interfere.

There is a class of horse that toe neither in or out, yet interfere. Such horses interfere when going at a moderate gait; when going fast, they spread or widen their gait, and they do not interfere. These horses are narrow in the hind quarters; or, in other words, they fall in below the hip joint. In shoeing cases of this kind, weighting on the outside and feather-edge on the inside, will prevent them from interfering.

An Angler's Lament.

Dam! me! that I should other fish to fry
 When trout, like magnet, draw me to the North,
 And in my dreams I'm ever casting fly
 On limpid lake, then waking I am wroth
 To find that in some meshes I hat sonnder
 As helpless as a bird to a limed perch
 Instead of having landed a four pounder.
 For snacker from my fate I vainly search,
 My friends all carp and say I ood them,
 Yet, do they drink my bass, and in my herring
 Laugh at my pikeleer and my beer conderm.
 If I haddock-ed 'em then, without fearing
 My ale-wife's wrath, I'd had 'em on a pike,
 A grinning crowd of sardines, small minnow.
 But my wife s'had smelt a mouse, and like Mother, who'd rather see her sun-fish now,
 Has on porpote brought me to this sorry pass.
 Bot I'll get square, I'll yet whale all creation
 When once I'm free, for I'm bound to amass
 Gold, fish and fame; egad! I'm for sensation
 Not even shall a weak-fish pass me then,
 And many a blue-fish will lament its mate.
 I must show myself a man among men
 That I was born to fisherman's estate.

The Fly-Casters.

The members of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club and invited guests to the number of fifty gathered around the festive and flower-bedecked oak last Tuesday evening, the occasion being the regular monthly banquet and business meeting of the club. President Walter D. Mansfield was the guiding genius and conducted the function in his usual felicitous manner. During the evening a pleasing musical program was rendered under the supervision of Mr. Chas. F. Stone. The feature of the evening was an entertainment presented by Mr. Archie J. Treat of the Camera Club, who was assisted by Mr. H. C. Tibbets. A series of beautiful views of Lake Tahoe and adjacent lakes and streams were shown upon a screen. Mr. Treat, in a graphic and very interesting style described the various illustrations which appealed to the hearts of the anglers when nature's mirror revealed the possibilities of pool, brook, river and lake (favorite spots to many present) and then when the sublimity and grandeur of scenery in the high Sierras was depicted on the screen the audience would break forth in spontaneous and rapturous applause.

Among those in attendance were President W. D. Mansfield, Alex. T. Vogelsang, F. H. Reed, F. P. McLennan, Geo. T. Klink, W. A. Cooper, F. G. Sanborn, Judge John Hunt Jr., T. W. Brotherton, H. M. The recent work of the Fish Commissioners and their deputies in following up and arresting law breakers cannot but be of the utmost importance in breaking up these practices and will also be of incalculable future benefit. Deputy L. N. Kercheval, while investigating the reasons for the absence of salmon in the upper San Joaquin River, last Thursday, two miles below San Joaquin City, came across a wire five-inch net-trap stretched in V-shape across the stream, completely obstructing the passage of large fish except into the trap at the center. There were no men in sight when Deputy Kercheval made this discovery; but he hid himself on the bank of the river and was at length rewarded by taking into custody C. L. Poyer, H. A. White and Frank Winter, who came down and worked the trap. The prisoners were taken to Stockton and a complaint filed before Justice Parker. The minimum penalty is a fine of $200.

Deputy C. A. Vogelsang took charge of one E. Micheli this week and placed him in jail at Ukiah for dynamiting fish in Russian River. The fellow was arrested near Cloverdale by Constable Wilson, who caught him in the act. It transpired that the man was one of four who were arrested a year ago for a similar offense. Three were fined $250 each, but this one escaped. This law breaker had an accomplice in the shape of a big dog who had been trained to jump into the water and bring ashore the floating fish after a charge of dynamite had been exploded.

F. M. Haight and Mrs. Haight, G. E. Bacon and Mrs. Bacon returned to this city last week after a pleasant outing at Fowler. Mr. Haight reports that the fish in the McCloud are now just beginning to take the fly; red-bodied and peacock bodied brown hackles, California royal coachman and the professor are the favorite ones. The rainbows run from eight to ten inches in length and the Dolly Vardens average from four to six pounds in weight. The indications for plenty of good fly-fishing are excellent. The trout give the angler employment all day long but the fishing is at its best in the evening. Mrs. Fowler has the reputation of being a very expert bait angler, frequently catching 50 or 60 fish in a short time.

Eel River is now the Mecca of the local angling enthusiasts, the advance guard comprising Black Jack Lemmer, John Sammi, John Fentler, Mons. Gallagher, the champion of Oakland, Otto Feudner, Frank Maskey, Fred. Lees, Col. Kelleher and others, are now on the famous stream. Reports from there are to the effect that the fish are running in plentiful numbers none of over ten pounds have been landed however. The fishing is said to be good all the way up the river to Scotia. Fred Vencker, Fred Johnson and several other well known anglers will shortly take the steamer for Eureka to enjoy the fishing in Eel river.

The striped bass angler still frequents the waters of San Leandro bay and the Oakland estuary, nor does he come away empty-handed. Messrs. Cross, Wilson and McFarland have caught a number of fish over there recently. Two of them, six pounders, caught by McFarland, can be seen in the tanks at the Mechanics' Fair.

Salt water anglers are making the best of the most favorable fishing conditions known in the bay for the past twenty years. Reports from Sausalito state that the run of rock fish and king fish is unprecedented in the waters about there. From the flats of Richardson bay to the tide gauge of the Government reservation the water appears to be alive with fish. Local anglers are out daily and always manage to secure a good mess in a few hours. On Sunday many came from San Francisco to enjoy the sport, and the bay was covered with boats during the day. The fish bite readily at any kind of bait.

Twenty-five thousand rainbow trout have been placed in the trout streams of the Sierra Madre mountains north of Pasadena. The trout were hatched in the northern part of the State and are now doing well, says Game Warden Charles Winston. The fishing season has been closed, and three deputies have been employed to prevent poaching. By next year devotees of the rod and reel may have plenty of sport. The streams have been depopulated of fish during the past two years on account of fires and dryness.

The members of the Merchants' Rock Cod Club made one of their regular trips around the bay last Sunday in the launch Brisk. The members in the party were: Captain L. V. Merle, Lieutenant Lowenberg, Chiel Cook Reis, Steward Otto Hill and Commodore James Markland. Captain Merle was the most successful fisherman in the party, all the big fish being taken by him. The gentlemen fished in various places and generally had good luck.

Pescadero still offers good sport to the angler, the lagoon has been prolific in trout ranging in weight from one to three pounds. Small steelhead have been running for several weeks but as they do not remain long in the lagoon, fishing for them may not always be productive of good results.

Trout fishing on the Garcia is reported to be of first class quality at present. The trout are of good size and plentiful in numbers. W. R. Gaine, of the Grand Hotel at Point Arena, is ready to accommodate visiting anglers with every convenience and comfort at his command.

Calaveras sportsmen are pleased over the recent allotment of 25,000 cut-throat trout fry to their section. The little fellows were turned loose in the Italian reservoir owned by Louis Emery of the Rose Hill Gravel Mine. The anglers in that vicinity will see that the fish are protected.

A few weeks ago 40,000 trout fry from Lake Tahoe hatchery were distributed among the streams of Grass Valley, it is expected that they will do well. It is two years since the streams of the valley were stocked.

The exhibit of live fish at the Fair is one of the most interesting features of the exhibition. W. R. McFarland has charge of the tanks, much credit is due the veteran angler for the excellent collection shown.

It will be seen by reference to the Game Laws, in another column, that it is illegal to use nets or seines in any of the waters of Sonoma county, tidewaters alone excepted.

H. J. Frost, a prominent tackle manufacturer of New York, has been a familiar figure in Sportsmen's Row during the week.

Fly-fishing on the Truckee, McCloud, upper Sacramento and Webber Lake is reported to be excellent.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Two game dealers in Victoria were each recently fined $10 and costs for having a hen pheasant in their possession.

Curler are plentiful on the Alameda marshes. Dan Ross, Chas. E. Nohman and Harry Weisse hagged fifty-seven this week in less than half an hour.

Billy Wetmore, erstwhile one of the shining lights of the Pastime Gun Club called at this office Thursday and said "How'd'y." Billy has been in the Randsburg district for some time past and has accumulated an elegant brick colored Van Dyke beard and a grip sack full of hlocks of stock in some valuable copper mines.

If on wakening in the morning you find that "Dark Brown" taste in your mouth, it can be quickly changed to a cool and sweet one by a libation of JACKSON'S NAPA SODA.

Southern California sportsmen anticipate a large attendance at the semi-annual tournament of the Los Angeles Gun Club on the 23d and 24th insts.

On Wednesday evening the members of the Olympic Gun Club met at dinner the occasion being the distribution of the medals won at the club's trap shooting contest during the season of 1899.

Live birds—Champion, C. A. Haight; class A, L. D. Owens; class B, Paul Delmas.

The deer season closes on October 15th, excepting in the following counties, whose close season dates are: Alameda, October 1st; Contra Costa, September 2d; Lake, October 1st; Marin, September 15th; Monterey, September 1st; Orange, October 1st; Riverside, closed until July 15 1901; San Benito, September 15th; Santa Barbara, August 22d; San Bernardino, close season continuous during 1899; San Luis Obispo, September 1st; San Mateo, August 26th; Santa Clara, September 15th; Shasta, September 1st; Sonoma, October 1st.

Grone shooting is not as good this season as the Victoria, B. C., sportsmen could desire. Hunters who have tramped the nearest districts of the Island since the season opened, are unanimous in the declaration that the birds are unusually small this year, a fact which they ascribe to the cold summer and backward spring.

Mina host Rochefort of Point Reyes reports the killing of a fine three point buck in the marsh one evening last week. Whilst dinner was being served in the hotel the announcement was made that the deer was on the marsh in close proximity to the house; the diners arose en masse and an impromptu hunt was inaugurated, the hunter (?) who made the kill was armed with a 22 calibre rifle and approached within 20 yards of the animal, placing a ball through the buck's heart.

Deputy State Fish Commissioner E. E. Hyda reports that it is not an uncommon occurrence for Guerneville sportsmen to bag two and three bucks daily during the present season. Deer are more plentiful in Sonoma county this year than for five years past.

A story is told of a prominent Santa Rosa attorney who is a Nimrod of renowned expedients. Recently whilst trailing a big buck in the hills near the city of perennial roses he lost his hairings. Night found him many miles from camp and compelled him to spend the weary hours as best he could under the canopy of the stars.

The final club blue rock shoot for the season will be the Union Gun Club shoot at the Lincoln grounds on the 24th inst.

The two-days open-to-all tournament of the Empire Gun Club last Saturday and Sunday was practically the closing of the local trap season for 1899. On Admission Day, an excellent program was offered. W. J. P. Strechen, of this city, has purchased the blue great Dane bitch Thelma (Caesar II—imp. Fennie.) She is a grand specimen and her record upon the bench proves her to be one of our best, her wins are 2d novice, San Francisco, 1898; 1st, novice and reserve winners, San Francisco 1899.

Mr. W. G. Coulter, the mari ne artist of the Call, has had the misfortune to lose, in Sansalito, his fine St. Bernard bitch More (Ch. Grand Master—California Beauty). Mora, by her gentle and affectionate qualities, had endeared herself to Mr. Coulter's family; the fact that her death was due to the diabolical ministrations of the poison fiend makes the loss all the herabser. She was the winner of second novice at the bench show this year.

The St. Bernard fancy as well as all others who love a good dog will regret to read the announcement of Humboldt Kennels' loss in the death of Alta Milla. This grand dog had been on the Coast but a little over a year; he was never shown on the bench here, having from the time of his arrival been subject to paralysis to which ailment he finally succumbed. He was by Judith's Sir Bedivere, out of Sante Rosa. A son, Duke of Milla and daughter Princess Alte, were both winners at the bench show in May last.

The advent of a high class Irish water spaniel in this city two weeks ago has created much interest among the fanciers of this sterling breed of sporting dogs. Dr. A. T. Leozerd is the purchaser of the new comer, Dennis C., (Champion Mike C—Champion Biddy C), who was whelped June 25, 1898 and bred by T. A. Carson of Kingston, Ontario. He is reported to be one of the best looking and most promising of the breed we have yet had on the coast. Dennis is at present in the hands of John Lucas at Mount View Kennels.

The litter of fox terrier pups by Aldon Swagger, out of Aldon Redience, whelped January 4, 1899, is credited by experts as the best litter of pups whelped upon this Coast. Victoria Beauty, an all white bitch owned by Rev. J. W. Flinton, and Victorie Flesh, the dog owned by Mr. Mortimer Lamb, will make their appearance at the coming Victoria show in all classes and bid fair to capture everything they compete for. The remaining one of the litter is owned by W. R. Lewis, of Honolulu, who pronounces her the best yet in his kennel.

It would seem as if Irish setters, even on the old sod, have not any too much of that beautifully distinctive type that should divide them so clearly from the English setter in shape, for at the Belfast show, Mr. Swiney remarks, speaking generally, that the Irish setters were a high class lot; but with the different models or types to which the more extensive breeders are apparently working, it is no easy task to adjudicate. There were the big lenky dogs, long bodied, long legged and long beaded. These, though some were undeniably handsome, era faulty in type and wrong as workmen, and should from no point of view be encouraged. Greyhound heads, weak loins and hind legs characterize the greater number of them. There were also the more compact built dogs, whose light eyes, end full, dark, mahogany coats proclaimed the existence of a her eineter in their pedigree; but for work these are much more to be commended than the class first described. Lastly, there were a few of the old type, varying much both in color and texture of coat, not too long in leg, with lengthy but not lanky body, well sprung deep ribs, strongly coupled up, plenty of heart room, end legs straight when looked at from behind; the head inclined to what, no doubt, some breeders would call beaviness, with depth carried right to end of muzzle; it is a type of head that appears harder to get every year, the pointed end greyhound form being apparently the breeders' fancy.

Land and Water for August publishes a beautiful color supplement of Mr. Llewelin's setters, Dan and Droid, and in the article referring to them says: "Mr. Llewelin's setters are too well known for it to be necessary to give more than a brief notice; and to attempt everything like a detailed history of the breed, and of the various experiments which led to its establishment would require more than a newspaper article. Mr. Llewelin has ever been a setter enthusiast, end his aim to combine the highest field qualities with beauty and the exceptional success of his breed for many years is the best commentary on the system pursued. Some forty years ago Mr. Llewelin was a breeder of the black and tans, termed by some folks Gordons, which he bred and discarded in favor of the red Irish, of which breed he had at one time some excellent specimens. The pursuit of his ideal, however, gradually led him to abandon this breed also, and in process of time he was lended in the peculiar strain to which he has now adhered for many years, which has gained him all his successes, and with which his name has been identified both in Europe and America. The Llewelin setter is a combination of an old Shropshire strain with some old border county breeds, such as the Netherby Castle and the Edmond Castle, and with the original Gordon as was to be seen some years ago in the kennel of the late Lord Lovet. With these were blended selected specimens of the breed of the late Mr. Laverack, obtained from him some twenty five years ago, and before the degeneration of his breed had set in. Other crosses were from time to time experimented in, such as the Irish breed, but were rejected as not producing the results of the above named combination. In other words, they did not 'nick.' In crossing, selected specimens only of the various bloods were used, the aim being at a survival of the fittest. As may be supposed from the care taken to breed only from individuals of proved field merit, the breed possess field quality in a pre-eminent degree end also have a large share of good looks, excellent tempers and disposition. The Llewelin setter has been, end is, highly esteemed on the other side of the Atlantic as here, and has been quite as successful. The value set upon Mr. Llewelin's dogs may best be gauged by the fact that he is the only breeder who has at any time received a tempting four-figure offer for a field dog—and what is more, refused it."

Kennel Suggestions.

It is usual when giving a vermifuge for the dog to be kept without food for some time—in most cases for twenty-four hours. A writer in Our Dogs says: From experiments we have made lately we have come to the conclusion that it is better not to starve a dog for so long a period as that. The better plan is simply to let the animal go without his supper one evening and then give the worm medicine (followed by an aperient) first thing in the morning. This is needful because if the stomach be full of food when medicina is given the effect is usually merred; whereas, on the other hand, if there be no food whatever the action of the medicine is rendered insufficient. A little sweet olive oil given in lieu of supper on the preceding night seems greatly to assist the action of a vermifuge. Another reason for not keeping a dog too long without food, we think, is that in many cases it produces too great exhaustion.

Over-showing is one of the chief causes of illness, end we are bound to say that in such cases our sympathies are more with the victim than with his owner. To be sent away from home for several days under even the best of conditions is a trial to any animal, and in the case of a highly strung, nervous young dog especially, it takes a good deal of getting over. A dog to be kept in show condition for considerable time will need, moreover, a good dose of tonic treatment, which might be done without if the owner would be content to show him only now and again instead of rushing the dog about as some dogs are which happen to be extra good specimens of their breed. Many of the best judges, fortunately, will pesa over any dog that shows signs of being over-shown—in fact, the secret of success with many dog owners lies in the first-rate condition their dogs are always shown in.

Here is a good recipe for dogs when retiring from a show or after any specially hard work. It makes an excellent pill for appetite, and, moreover, being a mild laxative, is just what a dog ought to have when he comes home. Take of:

- Compound powder of colocynth 24 grains. Sulphate of iron 12 grains. Sulphate of quinine 12 grains. Powder liquorice root 48 grains. Extract of gentian. Sufficient to make into a suitable mass.

Divide into 16 pills (or 32 of half the size if desired). Give one of the larger size to a dog of not more than 20 lbs. every four or five hours until a distinctly aperient effect is produced. The smaller pills will ensue for smaller dogs, and large dogs can have two or three of the pills according to circumstances. These pills are best prepared fresh as required.

Many novices will appreciate a few lines upon the subject of how to determine the age of a dog. Fortunately, there is not [? Ed.] the amount of rognery in the canine fancy as there is "borsey" circles, but no and again no doubt the ematen gets "bitten." To a certain extent the age can be determined by examining the teeth. A dog of mature age has forty-two teeth, and these are complete in number at the age of about eight months. This clearly indicates the age so far, but after that there is no method so certain, end a good deal of judgment is needed. As a rule, the teeth of an old dog will be dark and lacking in the pearly look of a young animal's teeth—but even this must not be too much relied upon, as conning dog dealers take care to use a tooth brush freely if such be necessary, end, moreover, dogs' teeth vary a great deal, as ours do.

Generally speaking, the age of a dog can best be edjudged by a combination of appearances. Old dogs are quiet and stolid, whereas youth carries activity with it. Moreover, curious as it may sound, gray hairs will tell a tale in dogs as well as in our own case, for it is often noticeable that a dog has become gray in the face end about the ears. So we have several points to judge by, i. e., appearance of coat as regards greyness; general demeanor; condition of teeth. To these may be added the state of the claws, which in some breeds are curled round and often disposed to be sore end festering. Finally, we may suggest as good advice that the opinion of an expert be taken in any case of doubt. The novice should never purchase a dog at a show or upon any such sudden inspiration without being guided by a competent adviser.

Glenmore Kennels' Irish setter bitch Glenmore Sultane, No. 34,914 (Ch. Finglas—Lady Josie) whelped September 12, 1899, nine puppies—3 dogs, 6 bitches—to same owner's Finglas Jr., No. 31,189 (Ch. Finglas—Cb. Rnby Glenmore).

J. W. Mitchell, a leading lawyer of Los Angeles who was a prominent exhibitor of fox terriers some years back, still retains his love for the breed end has in his kennel only one representative of the old winner Lomita Winifreda; this is a bitch, Lomita Nettle, by Chempion Eblemont Volunteer. She will shortly be sent to be bred to Aldon Swagger end we hope the union will produce some winners.

W. J. McKeon, of Victoria, B. C., has been very unfortunate in his fox terrier breeding; twice Queen of Trumps has slipped a litter by Aldon Swagger.

The Horse to Breed for Profit.

The following is a part of an address delivered before the Illinois Farmers' Institute recently by Col. F. J. Berry, the well known horse dealer and expert of Chicago:

The road, carriage and coach horses are very high, bringing from two to three times what they sold for in 1896, and are selling for more money in our markets today than they ever brought before; at the same time all horses must be produced with good quality to be a profitable investment.

The next class in the strongest demand, which is a sure class to produce, and attended with less risk, and can be produced by any common farmer, is the heavy draught horse, for the reason he has already a fixed type of a draught horse to produce them from, like the Percheron, Norman, the Shire, Clydesdale, or Belgian, and it takes less study, experience and forethought to produce this class of horses than it does fine highbred horses, because, as I said before, we have the fixed type of a draught horse, and with the right selections and judicious crosses, we can produce draught horses with great perfection.

The harness horses of fine quality are extremely high and scarce, and the market offers great inducements for breeders to produce this class. Where will the amateur go to secure this knowledge, how will he go to work to post and educate himself as how to produce road, coach and carriage horses?

There are great diversities of opinion, even among horsemen; one man would advise you to take one course, another man apparently well posted would advise you to take another course, and the young breeder may take all the turf journals and agricultural papers and books written upon the breeding of fine horses, and most every author will differ and give different opinions, so how will farmers and breeders of fine horses obtain the required information to produce the up-to-date market horse?

It is a well-known fact that there is no class or kind of stock breeding that requires the deep study, thorough knowledge, and so much experience as the production of the road, carriage and coach horse, and if conducted with the proper knowledge there is no class of stock raising or branch in the agricultural line that will begin to return anywhere near the same profits, therefore, an education on this line is of great value.

I speak to you as a man of long experience, having studied the problems of breeding, and having had large experience in every line of breeding, and also in the commercial line of horses, and have made a close study of the different types of horses, and their market value for many years.

One man will tell you that you want to breed road, carriage and coach horses, and breed them from imported coach stock—imported from Europe, like the Cleveland Bays, Hackneys, German coach or French coach. These classes of imported coach breeds I have watched with great interest, and will say right here to all the breeders of fine horses, that I believe the American trotter today to be the highest class of horse that the world has ever produced, and we have every reason to be proud of him and his achievements, as he is strictly an American product, and that in him we have the foundation to produce the highest class of road, carriage and coach horses that the world has ever seen.

True, the American people went wild over speed in past years, and through promiscuous breeding without proper consideration, and with one idea and craze for speed, at the expense of every other quality, the American trotter has been produced in all forms, sizes and qualities, from the very highest class horse and the most valuable for road, speed, coach and carriage, all the way down the line to the most common, small and inferior, but if the production of the American trotter with size, shape and quality, combined with speed, had been the object, we should have had a great deal higher class horse today than we now have.

But our American breeders of the American trotters have had a lesson, and although a very expensive one, it has not altogether been without its benefits. It has taught breeders that they must not only have the breeding, but a serviceable animal must have all the size and all the qualities that make up a road, carriage and coach horse, and, next, all the speed that they can get, and had they been combined with all these qualities, the breeder of the American trotter would not have met with so disastrous a failure as many did.

And with the right selections of breeding stock from the American trotting family and judicious crosses, with a combination of breeding, size, shape and quality, with action, style and beauty the leading feature, if a breeder will make a study of all these qualities, a much finer and higher class road, carriage and coach horse can be produced.

With continuous breeding on this line, a fixed type of this class can be established with finer qualities and greater excellences than any coach horse that ever existed, and the breeder that will go systematically to work, and combine all these qualities in one horse, as it can be done in breeding, will have accomplished a greater achievement, and by coupling his own name with that of the American trotter, can immortalize his name, that shall be handed down through generations, the same as Christopher Columbus's name is immortalized by the discovery of America.

The way this must be done is to select breeding stock, trotting bred, of the ideal type of the carriage and road horse, keeping size in view, and select all the crosses from the American trotting family, high bred, and as near the ideal type as they can possibly be had, and in this way a fixed type of road, carriage and coach horse will be produced, that shall reproduce itself generation after generation, and with the qualities required of these classes, and that any two shall match up and make up matched pairs, the same as we would match up a pair of Short Horns, Herefords, Polled Angus from a herd bred strictly in their own line. There is where the advantage and profit would come in in breeding a fixed type of a coach horse trotting bred, that the farmer may match up pairs from his establishment, and sell them for road, carriage, and coach teams, as the market may demand, thus increasing the market value of his stock by matching up pairs, and nearly doubling the value of his stock.

I believe that the French coach horse comes nearer filling the present demand for carriage and coach horses than any other outside of the American trotter, and if crossed with the trotter will greatly improve them, and a cross between the French coach horse and the American trotter has proved very satisfactory, and in case of a scarcity in some sections of the right quality of the American trotter I would recommend the French coach horse.

Very true, since the introduction of the French coach horse in this country, there has not been time enough to give them a fair test, but I believe if they are crossed with large, fine trotting mares, the result would be favorable, or vice versa. With all the importation of the different foreign breeds of coach horses for the last 20 years, but very few of their progeny have ever been sold for high prices in our markets.

As a positive proof that the breeding of the carriage and coach horses from the American trotter is profitable, and the only family of horses that can be produced from with great success, I will call your attention to the following auction sale of April 27, 1899, in New York city, of carriage and coach horses by M. Tichenor & Co., who sold some 80 head of trotting bred carriage and coach horses, and at that sale the first 40 head (20 pairs) brought $40,080—over $1,000 per head.

Here is an object lesson, and a demonstration of what can be done producing road, carriage and coach horses from the trotting family; these horses were all trotting bred, and were selected out of the middle Western country, mostly Illinois and Iowa, from farmers, and fed and fitted up during the winter for this sale; they were from 15½ to 16 hands, and 1,000 to 1,200 pounds. This is only one of the many instances of this kind that I have ever witnessed.

I will ask the president or any of my hearers: Did you ever hear of such a sale of horses of any other breed, where the same number of harness horses were sold at anything like these prices? It is a well known fact that its equal cannot be found in history, neither can there be any record produced of any other breed of harness horses selling at anything like these prices, and furthermore, I will say right here, that 99 per cent of all the road, carriage and coach horses that have been sold at extremely high prices have been trotting bred. There is the greatest demand for this class of horses, both in all American and foreign markets, and will go farther and say that the highest prices paid for this class of horses in Europe have been American trotting bred.

And in conclusion I will say, the American trotter is the general utility horse for all uses except heavy work. The largest and most beautiful specimens comprise the best coach and carriage teams that won at the Blue Ribb National Horse Show, their intelligence and docility unsurpassed in the equine kingdom, they are the best combination saddle and harness performers ever produced, they are easily educated to pace, and take readily to all of the saddle gaits, and they are par excellence as cavalry mounts. The trotter fills all the requirements of the general utility horse, being useful in war, indispensable in peace, and peculiar as a harness performer for pleasure and sport.

The opinion among our dealers is unanimous, that the horse breeding industry is rapidly increasing from the general depression which commenced in 1893 and lasted until 1897, and that the modern market horse is entering upon a period of prosperity unparalleled in the history of the horse industry. Small, low grade and inferior animals have been eliminated from the problem, and the concentrated effort of breeders to improve the type and quality of the market horse is the result of past experience, which has been most wonderful object lesson.

So I will say to the breeders,—breed the best quality of every horse he bred strictly of his own class, and the very highest grade of that class that can possibly be bred and never mind the impression that has gone out that an automobile, motor power and electricity will displace the horse. This is a subject that I have made great study of in the past year, and have fully come to the conclusion that never our day will the use of the horse be displaced by these inventions to any extent, neither will his value or price be reduced.

While I believe that great things will be done with electricity, at the same time I believe that the demand for good horses will increase with stronger prices for many years come.

New York retail hutchers, co-operating with retailers in other larger cities, have decided to fight the beef trust to a finish. They intend to establish independent slaughter houses, independent supply stations and independent distributing systems in all parts of the country, completely severing their business relations with the Big Four. The book of this gigantic enterprise estimates that they will be able to raise at once from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, carry it out, and they are confident they can get many millions more as may be necessary. John D. Rockefeller is named as one of the many capitalists who have put large sums of money into the fight to down the beef trust. The Chicago packers assert that it will be impossible for the retailers to carry out the plan. They declare the Chicago packers have option on all available cattle in western ranges, thus completely cornering the supply. As a back of the anti-trust movement, however, hold that it would be impossible for the Chicago packers to corner the supply.

Grass cattle, as a rule, do not ship well. On the past they look well, and many a buyer has been deceived by the appearance of a drove of steers in a range with a full load. To ship such cattle is a hard task, and is invariably disappointing, but it has to be done. When convenient, it is a good plan to place such cattle in a pen and feed them for a day or two. The secret of shipping all classes of cattle is to place them on the cars full of feed, but with as little moisture as possible. If a steer is full of water it is apt to have loose bowels and shew up in the yards badly. Properly handled cattle should arrive in the pens dry behind and ready for a good fill of water.

MILLIONAIRE LAWSON, of Boston, offered $20,000 for Lord Vincent 2:08½ after that horse had made his record at Glens Falls, but the offer was declined and Mr. Todd, the owner, refused to put a price on him.

EMPIRE CITY PARK MEETING.

Speed Average for the Entire Week Was Slightly Below 2:10.

When the compiler of harness-racing statistics takes a look at the facts and figures of the meeting held at Empire City Park, New York, from September 4th to 8th inclusive, he is not long in reaching the conclusion that it was in many respects the most notable affair of the kind on record, says the New York Sun. It has been many a day since a trotting meeting anywhere attracted 45,000 in five days, yet this was the attendance. That it would have been considerably greater with better transportation facilities was plain to all who tried to reach the course on the day of the big pacing race. Many who arrived at Mount Vernon and found the single track street car line and the carriage service completely swamped returned to the city rather than walk three-quarters of a mile to the track.

Former Corporation Council W. H. Clark, who has expended about $750,000 on the Empire City track and grounds within a year, was quick to recognize the necessity of up-to-date transportation facilities. He said on Thursday that next season patrons of the sport will be able to go from the Grand Central Station into the grounds without change of cars. A spur from the Harlem railroad is said to be assured for next year.

One of the notable features of the attendance was a large number of persons who drove out to the track. The drive from the Harlem river by way of Jerome avenue is through one of the most picturesque portions of upper New York, and the road was crowded daily with light and heavy turn-outs. Nearly everybody ever seen on the speedway was there with his best road horses. That the renewed interest in road driving, created by the opening of the speedway, increased the attendance at the Grand Circuit meeting was everywhere the talk among horse fanciers.

It goes without saying that the new track and all its equipments were a revelation to visiting horsemen and the home contingent as well. Probably no meeting in the history of harness racing ever before saw five trotters gain new records below 2:10 in five days. This was done at the new track, when Louise Mac turned it in 2:09 1/2; Alves in 2:09 1/2; Gayton in 2:09 1/2; Peter the Great in 2:07 1/2; The Abbot in 2:06 1/2. Besides these performances Cresceus 2:07 1/2 equalled his record in a big jog. Owyhee lowered his mark to 2:11. Serpol and Rabher trotted up to their records of 2:10. Senator L. cut his mark from 2:15 1/2 to 2:12. Farris set at 2:12 1/2 his former record of 2:15. Excel equalled his record of 2:10 1/2. Pilot Evans got a mark of 2:13 1/2. Among the pacers Anaconda's new record of 2:03 1/2 was a notable performance, the bay gelding having been campaigned on all the fast tracks from Maine to California before he came to New York. Ex-Senator John McCarty's bay gelding Toboggan and O. M. Lawton's chestnut gelding Oscar L. also displayed remarkable speed on the new track. Neither one of the Brooklyn pacers had a record of 3:00 or better when they started at the Grand Circuit meeting. Oscar L. won his race in 2:14 1/2, while Toboggan took a maiden record of 2:08 1/2.

The meeting was watched with unusual interest by both the advocates and the critics of the two-in-three system of harness racing. It was the only meeting in the Grand Circuit at which the new plan of shortening races was put to a thorough test, all of the others having retained the old three-in-five system throughout, or else mingled three-in-five with two-in-three. Some of the old-timers who saw the week pass without a postponement on account of darkness, and with the day's card usually cleared up in time for racegoers to get back to town in time for dinner, were inclined to doubt whether they were getting their money's worth under the new system. Coming home on the race train one evening, one of them got into an argument with his neighbor across the aisle respecting the merits of the old and the new rules of racing. He had to surrender when the advocate of two-in-three said to him:

"Can you name one race during the week where the result would have been changed by going another heat? I have been looking for that kind of a race all the week and I haven't seen it. Take the big stallion race. Nobody wanted to see Cresceus trot another mile to be convinced that he was the best horse in the bunch. And the pacing stallions. If they had kept on all the afternoon, Joe Patchen would have beaten his rivals in every heat. The same way with Anaconda and Lady of the Manor, Peter the Great and Lord Vincent, and with all the rest of the races. Another thing. I didn't see anybody drop a heat during the meeting. Not one. I don't suppose such a thing has happened before in the Grand Circuit since they introduced hook betting on the heats. When two heats win a race, nobody wants to throw one of them away. This meeting has demonstrated the merits of the two-in-three system. There won't be much of anything else next year."

The speed average at the new track probably surpasses anything that has been seen in the Grand Circuit or elsewhere for a five-days' meeting. Forty heats were required to decide the eighteen races to sulky on the regular program, and these heats were trotted and paced at an average of 2:09 1/2 to the mile. The trotters covered twenty-four miles at the rate of 2:10 1/2, while the average of the pacers was 2:08 for sixteen heats. When it is remembered that 2:10 1/2 had never been made in a race by a trotter up to seven years ago, and that no pacer ever beat 2:10 in actual contest until 1891, the remarkable average can be better appreciated. Ten miles were trotted in 2:10 or better and twelve heats were paced below this limit.

Chas. Derby's Son One of the Best Winners On the Grand Circuit.

When T. E. Keating took his string of trotters and pacers East this year, there were few here in California who thought that the Oakwood Park stallion, Owyhee would be the most consistent horse in the stable, but so he has proved, as he went through the Grand Circuit from Detroit to Providence, starting at each of the nine meetings, winning seven first moneys, one second and one third. He has trotted twenty winning heats during that time, none of them slower than 2:15 and the fastest in 2:11. His winnings amount to nearly $9000 so far and he has several engagements yet to fill before coming home.

Owyhee was bred by John F. Boyd, proprietor of the Oakwood Park Stock Farm in Contra Costa county. He was foaled May 31, 1894, and is by the great young sire Caas. Derby 2:20, out of Ida Wood (the dam of Bahs Marion 2:17 1/2), by Simmons, second dam Ida W. by Mambrino Patchen. Owyhee started first as a two-year-old at the State Fair in Sacramento in 1896, winning his race in straight heats in 2:24 and 2:30. That was his only start that year. As a three-year-old he started once, again at the State Fair. He won the first heat in 2:23 1/2, but was beaten the next three by Nordeau in 2:21 1/2, 2:25 1/2 and 2:26. Owyhee was not campaigned last year, and this spring was turned over to Mr. Keating at Pleasanton, who just before starting East rather hesitated as to whether he would take him along, as his horse was out of condition and he hardly considered him fast enough for the classes in which he was entered. At Denver he improved but was not started. His first race was at Detroit where in the 2:20 class, for a $1200 purse, his summary was 10-1-1, and the time of the heats 2:15, 2:13 1/2 and 2:13. At Cleveland in the 2:24 class, also a $1200 purse, he was 1-2-1, and the time was 2:13 1/2, 2:13 and 2:15. At Columbus in the 2:24 class $3000 was the amount of the purse. The Queen won in straight heats, Owyhee being second each time. The heats were trotted in 2:10 1/2, 2:12 1/2 and 2:12 1/2. At Buffalo he had the hardest race of the circuit, but finally defeated the favorite Royal Baron. Owyhee won the first and second heats, was second to Royal Baron in the third and fourth, and then defeated the winner of the M. & M. in the fifth and final heat. The time of the heats was 2:13 1/2, 2:11 1/2, 2:10 1/2, 2:12 1/2 and 2:14. Fifteen hundred dollars was the purse at Glen Falls for the 2:24 trotters, in which race Owyhee was entered. He marched off with first money in three straight heats in 2:11 1/2, 2:13 1/2 and 2:11 1/2. The great young California gelding Who Is It defeated him at Readville, Owyhee getting third money out of the purse which was for $1000, and his positions in the heats were 2-5, and the times 2:10 1/2 and 2:12. At Hartford in the 2:19 class a stake amounting to $3375, Owyhee was again a winner after dropping the first heat to L. H. Chase. The time of these heats was 2:14 1/2, 2:12 1/2, 2:12 1/2 and 2:13 1/2. At the great Empire City Park meeting, $3000 was the purse hung up for the 2:20 class trotters. It was in this race that he trotted the fastest mile he has shown this year, the time of the heats being 2:11 and 2:11 1/2. Last week the Grand Circuit closed at Providence and Owyhee was again a straight winner, the purse being $3000 and the three heats being trotted in 2:13 1/2, 2:13 1/2 and 2:12 1/2. To recapitulate he has won seven firsts, one second and one third, and a total of $8637.50. Owyhee is a big rangy fellow, but has a short hack and is well muscled. He has considerable action in front and goes at it with his ears back when in a race as though perfectly aware of what is required of him. He was bred to several of the Oakwood Park mares last year. Should it be necessary Owyhee can come home with a record of 2:10 or better. Mr. Keating is confident that next year a mark of 2:07 or better will not be beyond the stallion's abilities.

SAYS a clever English turf writer: "It is very noticeable how well the American jockey, J. H. Martin, is riding. Even now his average is quite equal to Sloan's, and hardly a meeting passes where he is riding without his winning two or three races. It is really a matter of astonishment how, with some half-dozen exceptions, our own jockeys have apathetically gone out. Cannon, Madden, Weldon and the two Loates are almost the only winning names we meet with from day to day and week by week. These may be called the English representatives, as against Sloan, Martin, Reiff and company, the successful "foreigners." No such startling revolution in regard to our jockeys has the turf known. Since the arrival on this side the Atlantic of Sloan, whose success at once no doubt suggested the arrival on this side of the other two, a complete metamorphosis has been effected. Each of the trio is a clever exponent of his particular style of horsemanship, if so it may be called, though it should perhaps more fittingly be termed the 'art or trick of winning races'."

PLAINWELL (Mich.), Aug. 3, 1899.

MR. W. F. YOUNG, Springfield, Mass. DEAR SIR:—Having a horse which has been lame from a strained tendon for three years, I sent to Detroit for a bottle of your Absorbine, and commenced repeating him for race purposes. Since his second workout after using your medicine, he has not taken a lame step. Yours truly, U. S. WOOD.

THE STOCKTON FAIR.

An Excellent Track, Close Contests and Fast Time are Features of the Meeting.

The Stockton Fair which is in progress this week is a success. Before the opening on Monday, every inch of space in the Pavilion had been taken, and at the park all the stalls were full. The fair is being held under the auspices of the Stockton Driving Club, an organization composed of the following enterprising young business men of Stockton: W. E. Neumiller, H. E. Adams, John W. Willy, C. E. Doan and Geo. Catts. Mr. Catts is President, and Mr. Willy the Secretary of the club, and each and every one of the five gentlemen is an active and energetic worker. They have been greatly assisted by the business men of Stockton who have taken greater interest this year than ever, and have not only given their time, but a considerable sum of money to make the fair a success. The pavilion, which had fallen into quite a dilapidated condition, has been thoroughly renovated and painted until it looks like a new building.

The buildings at the track were also repaired and, in short, the work done by the club has been of inestimable value not only to the property of the San Joaquin Agricultural District Association, but has been of great benefit to the community.

The racing opened on Monday with a short program, but three races being on the card. Edwin F. Smith of Sacramento ably fills the position of presiding judge, and is being assisted during the week by different Directors of the club. The first race was the 2:30 pace, for a purse of $1000, in which there were but four starters out of seventeen original entries, and three of these were sons of Diablo. Daedalion was the favorite and won in straight heats, under a pull each time. Clipper, the fast gelding that got a mark of 2:09 1/2 in his first start at Santa Rosa, was in the race, but made a poor showing. For some reason he has not been right since the Santa Rosa meeting. The two running races were fairly well contested and considerable speculation was indulged in on the results. The summaries of the day's races are as follow:

Table with race results including Pacing, 2:30 class, Running, seven furlongs, three-year-olds, and Alaria also ran.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19.

The second day of the meeting drew a much larger attendance, and four good races, with close finishes in nearly every heat, were provided for their amusement. The track was in good shape as the time shows. The day's sport began with the 2:15 pace for a purse of $1000. Fifteen horses had been named for this event, and eight lined up for the word. It proved a warm contest, and the close finishes and split heats made it one of the memorable races of the circuit. Diawood took the first heat in 2:11 1/2, and the second in 2:11, just equaling his record made at Santa Rosa. Col. Crawford's Don now took a heat in 2:10, thus lowering his record and giving Falrose his first 2:10 performer, but was beaten back the next heat by Kelly Briggs in 2:12 1/2. By this time the contending horses were tiring and the fifth heat was slower, Don reaching the wire first in 2:15 1/2. Diawood, owing to a bad break, was behind the flag, an unfortunate occurrence for him, as he had been a contending horse in each heat and having won two of them would certainly have had second money but for his misfortune. Don won the last heat from the only other starter, Kelly Briggs, in 2:14. Second money went to Kelly Briggs and little Dictatress got third money, though she went to the stable after the fifth heat, as did also Arthur W., who got fourth money.

The 2:12 trot was for a purse of $500, and it was also a split heat affair and a great contest. There were six starters. J. B. Iverson's big gelding Prince Gift got off well the first heat and finished the mile but slightly in front of Galette in 2:12 1/2. Durfee brought the mare to the wire first the next heat in 2:12 flat, lowering her record a quarter of a second, with Claudius a good and close second, and Boodele third. Galette won the third heat in 2:12 1/2. This time Hazel Kinney was second, and in the next heat she got to the wire first in 2:14 1/2. Galette came back strong in the fifth heat and won it and the race, the time dropping to 2:15 1/2.

Two running events, one at five, the other at seven furlongs, completed the day's racing. The summaries:

DISTRICT FAIR DIRECTORS, if they will carefully study existing conditions in this State as well as in other and older communities, will find that in arranging race programs they can ignore the running horse with profit to the associations, and without arousing any serious objection from those who attend the meetings. It is in California now as it is in the Mississippi valley and on the Atlantic coast, the numerous jockey clubs have provided so much racing for the thoroughbreds that there is no need of the country fair making any provision for them. In other words, the industry of thoroughbred breeding has outgrown the necessity of encouragement on the part of country fair associations, and the small purses they are able to hang up offer no inducements to the breeders who are in the business of raising high class stock. The large stakes and the seven months of racing held in this vicinity during the fall and winter months make the small purses offered for the thoroughbreds at the district fairs look very cheap and they certainly bring together a cheap lot of horses. On the other side of the Rocky Mountains the country fair racing programs are devoted to the light harness horse, for the reason that the fair directors have found that therein lies their profit, and the California fair promoters will have to come to a realization of the same fact if they would place their meetings on a sound basis. It has been argued by some who have given the subject but little study, that the betting privilege which is now one of the principal sources of revenue at every meeting, will not bring anything like as much where the runners are ignored. This may be true, but the large sums secured in late years in California for the betting privileges at both State and district fairs has been paid by bookmakers who thereupon made syndicate or "cinch" books, and has probably done more to put racing in bad repute than any other one cause. Had the district associations in recent years made up their racing programs entirely of harness events, and insisted upon having nothing but auction and pari-mutuel betting, they would now be in much healthier condition financially and their fairs would be more popular with the masses. Modern methods have established among clubs and associations giving thoroughbred racing the rule of free entrance to purses, and a very small entrance fee to stakes. This custom being in vogue where the purses are $400 and $500 day after day for months, it must necessarily be followed by the small associations whose purses are smaller and whose meetings last but one week. The running horse owners will not visit the tracks where entrance fee is charged. The harness horse men are accustomed to paying an entrance fee of five per cent, and there have been many of the largest meetings held this year where the entrance money more than paid the purses. As there is no such thing as continuous trotting meetings, (and let us hope for the good of the cause that there never will be) the only opportunities offered for harness racing is the district and State Fairs and organizations of horse owners that hold a six day meeting once a year. As the harness horse has numerous uses outside that of racing his breeding should be encouraged. The breeding and training of horses for track, road, park and draft purposes is of great benefit to the State, and the district fair that does not provide opportunities and prizes for animals of these classes is not doing its duty. But with the thoroughbred it is different. He is simply a pleasure horse, and the immense profits to be made out of the high class ones are sufficient encouragement for their propagation. We believe the directors of the various district associations in this State can drop the running races from their programs with profit to their organizations, and without injury to any legitimate industry, so long as so much racing is provided by the jockey clubs during the winter months, and if the district boards will give the subject the careful study it deserves, they will certainly arrive at the same conclusion.

FRESNO'S MEETING will open Monday, October 9th, and present indications point to a great week of racing. There has never been a time in the history of Fresno county when there was a better outlook for a good fair and a big attendance. The Fresno people have gone about their work of holding a fair and race meeting in a proper manner. The fair is to be given by the 21st Agricultural District, which includes Fresno and Madera counties. The races are to be given by the Fresno Trotting Association, and are entirely separate from the fair in management but will be held on the same dates. The Trotting Association has the track and fair grounds rented, and the agricultural directors agreed to pay $250 rental to the association for the use of the grounds and $150 to cover half the advertising expenses, with the express understanding that the agricultural association shall have entire use of the grounds for their exhibits free of all further expense. The total amount of the appropriation for the 21st agricultural district for the year 1899 is $1200. The directors have a very good idea for an agricultural, horticultural and viticultural exhibit, which will make the Fresno fair a novel one, and for the reason that other counties have not the natural facilities for imitating. In the first place, the directors are determined to make an exhibit that will attract some attention and create some rivalry. To do this it is proposed to get up a collective exhibit from each of the colonies, and in addition to this, offer individual premiums, just as in the past. Carrying out this idea $250 will be offered as a premium for the best colony exhibit; $100 for the second best and $50 for the third. The remaining $400 will be expended for individual exhibits. It is intended to have the agricultural exhibit include stock, fruit, both green and dried, raisins, etc. In addition to the agricultural feature, horse racing will receive its full share of attention from the Trotting Association, which has offered some of the best purses "hung up" in the State. All the well-known horses now making the circuit will race in Fresno, and the races for which entries have already closed should be great drawing cards. Fresno county is very prosperous this year and everybody in that section expects to visit the district fair.

THE VALLEJO RACE TRACK, and fair grounds, comprising 77 acres of land with all the necessary stalls and buildings to accommodate several hundred horses, has been leased by its owners, the Solano County Agricultural Society, to the well known horseman Thos. Smith for a term of three years, the society reserving all rights to the grounds and track during the week on which the district fair may be held each year. Mr. Smith will keep the track in first class order for training and will rent stalls to horsemen on very reasonable terms. The Vallejo track is known as one of the best in the State for training purposes, and the climate of that locality cannot be surpassed. Mr. Smith is one of Vallejo's best known and most reliable business men, and being very popular with horse owners throughout the State, will no doubt soon have many of the stalls at the track rented and make the Navy Yard town one of the leading horse training towns of California.

AN OPPORTUNITY to get a great young mare is offered in our advertising columns to-day. She should make one of the best road mares in the United States and be fully able to hold her own among the trotters on the New York or any other speedway.

BIDS FOR PRIVILEGES of the Fresno Fair will close with the Secretary, A. J. Hudson, on Tuesday, October 3d. See advertisement.

SAN JOSE WILL HAVE NO RACING next week. "The Directors of the Santa Clara Valley and San Mateo Agricultural Association, District No. 5, at a meeting held in San Jose last Thursday, postponed the county fair until December. They will hold it the week of the semi-centennial celebration of the State, which is to be held there. It is proposed to make it on a larger and grander scale than any previously known there. It will be patterned after the old-time county fairs." The foregoing are the words of a dispatch which appeared in the daily papers of Friday, and confirmed later by a special message to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. It is unfortunate that the San Jose association could not have seen its way clear to hold the meeting which had been set for next week and for which a good list of entries had been received for the harness events. It is probable that a few days' racing may be held during the time the fair is going on in December, but it is rather late to count on many entries to harness events, and a good track is very uncertain during that month. Had the San Jose people arranged a program made up entirely of harness events, spent a little money on advertising and booming the meeting, and announced that no hookmaking would be allowed on the track, we believe they could have held a successful week of racing, both financially and otherwise, and done much to encourage the horse breeding interests of their county. While there is no doubt but the Directors have acted as they honestly believed the interests of their district demanded, and were certainly influenced by a fear that the early opening of the racing season here would be an opposition against which they could not compete with success, we cannot help but think that these fears were groundless. A good program of harness races, properly advertised and managed, with hook betting barred, would have drawn a good crowd to San Jose during the week, and incurred no loss to the association. The dropping of San Jose from the Circuit is a great disappointment to horse owners, but it will not be without its benefits. It may help to arouse a sentiment among the district boards that there is enough running racing in California without any being provided by the agricultural societies and tend to make the fair programs of next year what they should be—devoted to light harness racing entirely.

AN AUCTION SALE of trotters and roadsters bred at the celebrated Oakwood Park Stock Farm will be held at the Occidental Horse Exchange, 721 Howard street, in this city, on Thursday, October 5th. This consignment consists of handsome roadsters and well matched teams, sired by Guy Wilkes, Steinway, Chas. Derby, Woodnut, Junio and other well known stallions. Some of the best race horses ever bred at Oakwood Park Farm have been sold at auction for a small price, and who knows but another Owyhee 2:11 or a Much Better 2:07 1/2 are among this lot of thirty to be sold on the 5th of next month?

EDWARD CORRIGAN, according to a dispatch from Louisville, will remove all his horses to California within a few days. Among them will be his great stallion Riley and fifteen or twenty broodmares now in Kentucky. Mr. Corrigan last year leased the well known Monument Farm, in Yolo county, just below Sacramento on the river, and will locate his breeding farm there. He already has a number of broodmares and colts on the place.

LOS ANGELES has one of the greatest programs ever gotten up for a week of racing. $9000 for harness races already closed, $6000 hung up for the runners, and several thousand dollars set aside for special events. Two grand races in which Joe Patchen, John R. Gentry and Anaconda will contest for supremacy, besides many other attractions. Secretary Thorne will have a lot of news for the horsemen next week and they should watch these columns.

THE ABBOT, who is the trotter of the year, has won his ninth consecutive race. He has trotted twenty-three heats below 2:10 this year which is a without precedent, no other trotter ever having approached this record in one season. His record is now 2:06 1/2.

GOLDY will not race any further on the circuit. He is not doing well, and refuses to eat his oats. Goldy is a fast horse, but very nervous, and the excitement of travel and racing always puts him off his feed.

Session of the Turf Congress.

The American Turf Congress, with which the majority of racing associations in the West are affiliated, has been in session at Chicago, this week, with the following delegates in attendance:

New Louisiane Jockey Club, C. S. Bush; Harlem Jockey Club, M. Nathanson; Chicago Racing Association, C. C. Riley; Pacific Coast Jockey Club, Captain J. H. Rees; Tennessee Breeders' Association, J. W. Russwurm; Queen City Jockey Club, G. C. Bennett or F. W. Fowler; Highland Park Club, W. O. Farmer; Washington Park, James Howard; St. Louis Jockey Club, Robert Anll or Joseph Murphy; New Louisville Jockey Club, W. F. McFarleud; Arkansas Jockey Club, S. M. Apperson; Letonie Jockey Club, W. F. Applegete.

During Wednesday's session the Lakeside race track of Roby was refused admission to the Congress, practically outlawing it. The Western Turf Association track at Tenforn Park was elected to membership.

Captain J. H. Rees, of Cincinnati, introduced a resolution before the Congress that a portion of the fund at present held by the association be distributed among the fifteen clubs which are members of the association as a basis for a Turf Congress Stake. No limitations were put on this stake.

The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer of the Congress were read and filed. The sum of $500 was donated by the Congress to the John Carter Monument Fund. Carter was burned to death at the Baldwin Hotel fire in San Francisco. Licenses for jockeys were increased from $15 to $25.

The most interesting question to be taken up at Thursday's session was that of the apportioning of race dates for the members of the congress. It was decided that the best way to do would be to let the different sections of the country fight it out among themselves for the choice racing dates. Thus Chicago has its own way in this particular field and the southern tracks must decide what is best for them without attempting to interfere with Chicago or the Pacific Coast.

Captain Rees is expected to have his way about getting off the license committee. He agreed to finish his term, which will end January 1, 1900, and then President Schultz will appoint his successor. The other members of the committee—Messrs. Joseph A. Murphy and Ed Hopper—will be retained on the committee.

The resolution suggested by Captain Rees and strongly seconded by several others to expend part of the fund in the treasury of the Congress for stake races on the different tracks of the association is voted one of the best moves yet made by the body.

The horses Barrier and Ramone, whose entries were refused on Tuesday at Harlem were permanently ruled off. The mare Maxine, formerly known as Fleur de Lis, was reinstated and allowed to run in the West under the name of Maxine. Red Cross was reinstated and allowed to run under the name of Red Cross II. The letter of F. Rutter asking for reinstatement was laid on the table.

The following are changes in the rules adopted by the Congress:

No jockey, except when riding for his contract employer, shall be weighed out for any race, unless there has been deposited for him with the clerk of the scales the fee for a losing mount in that race; and the clerk of the scales shall keep the amounts for jockeys, pay over to them the money collected unless he has notice to the contrary, and for his service shall receive 2 per cent of the amount collected. The failure to deposit this fee for the jockey engaged for any horse shall declare it out of the race.

Rule 18, in which any person or horse ruled off the track by a running association for fraud, is ruled off the tracks of members of the American Turf Association, was amended to read as follows:

"Every person or horse expelled or ruled off by any reputable running association, or by the American or National Trotting Association, shall stand ruled off the courses of the members of this congress during the continuance of such expulsion.

"Any association that shall knowingly allow any ruled off person or horse to participate in its racing shall be outlawed."

Another rule adopted by the congress was that no person against whom there are errors shall be granted a license as a trainer or jockey.

A rule was adopted by the congress that hereafter no employer shall get the money won by any jockey bound to him by contract who shall win riding outside mounts.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, W. F. Schultz, Louisville; Vice-President, James Howard, Chicago; Treasurer, O. L. Bradley, Lexington, Ky.; Secretary, E. C. Hopper, Covington, Ky.

A permanent office of the congress will be opened in Louisville, and the next meeting of the congress will be held in that city.

RESIDENT and visiting horsemen are assured of courteous treatment at Kepp & Streets, 1200 Market street. The Year book is there for consultation and everything conduces to make your visit a pleasant one.

DOT MILLER, who trotted to a record of 2:15 at Rochester, N. Y., is the first descendant of Goldsmith Maid 2:14 in the male line to enter the 2:15 list.

In New Quarters.

The Golden Gate Park Driving Association has secured new quarters. A fine large room has been set apart by manager J. C. Kirkpatrick of the Pelece Hotel for the association's exclusive use, and hereafter all meetings will be held there. The room is No. 1000 on the half floor, and besides being large and roomy is very convenient and easy of access. Dr. I. B. Delziel in a few hours received something over $80 from members of the club to be used in decorating the walls with pictures, etc. Some handsome pictures have been donated by members of the organization, and the Secretary will see that all the leading harness trarf papers are kept on file. At a meeting of the association held last Tuesday evening at the Pelece Hotel, it was resolved to give an afternoon of matinee racing at Ingleside track on Saturday, October 21st, four races to be given for purses of $100 each. Entries to these races will close Tuesday evening, October 10th. An effort is to be made to have a double team race one of the features of the day's sport. It is more than probable that pari mutuel boxes will be secured for the accommodation of those who desire to speculate on the results. Admission to the track will be free. The matinees given by the Golden Gate Park Driving Association have always been very successful, and a me of the cleanest racing and closest contests ever witnessed in this locality have resulted. The association's membership is constantly increasing, new names being voted upon at nearly every meeting. Among the events to be decided at the matinee in October will be the O'Kane challenge cup race. Mr. J. C. Ohlendt now holds this valuable trophy, having won the first contest with his horse Harry B, the best time being 2:31. Horses that have no faster records are eligible to enter in the next contest, and as a liberal purse will be added there will no doubt be a lively contest for the cup in October.

Weights for the Opening Handicap.

Handicapper J. W. Brooks has announced the following weights for the opening handicap at one mile, to be run to-day at the California Jockey Club's meeting: Cromwell 117, Mount McGregor 113, Rosinante 109, Hohenzollern 103, Recreation 106, Jennie Reed 101, Socielist 101, Pet Morrievy 99, Libertine 98, Lost Girl 93, Nilgar 97, Monrovia 97, Lothien 89, The Fretter 86, Memie G 83, Oreibe 81.

The Champion of the Season.

The recent performance of Peter the Great leaves no room for doubt as to which trotter of the season of 1899 deserves the title of champion four-year-old. The son of Pilot Medium has defeated Cherley Herr, who is a host in himself; he has defeated Lord Vincent, a veritable crack himself, and his victory over the stout son of St. Vincent end the gray whirlwind Who Is It was so decisive, so overwhelming, that he seemed to outclass them both. His speed, courage and perfect action would indicate that in this superb Michigan-bred trotter the season has developed another Directum. His measure has not yet been taken, nor has he been all out in any heat, a fact that makes a possibility by which he would become a record-breaker. Who can beat him in the Transylvania? If he holds his present form he should win the classic event that is the crucial test of a horse's greatness. Peter the Great, of Kalama Zoo, Mich., must have felt elated when he read of his former pupil's races, end well he may, for the horse stands to-day as a monument to the skill, patience and care of a truly great trainer, who developed his speed, overcame his faults and made him a crack. Nor can too much be said in praise of his present trainer, Henry Titer, who has continued the good work, and by proper handling and skillful retraining given to the trotting world a race horse per excellence and one that seems likely to eventually be the stalion king. Peter the Great has equally as much speed as Bingen, end has a better temper and brain, end very likely a stouter heart. Certainly the pair make an embellishment of riches for one man to have in one year. Something may happen to this four-year-old that will disable him from other victories, but unless some accident should befall him I for one shall expect to see the Transylvania of Kentucky go to the Michigan bred four-year-old that is owned in Massachusetts. In this instance Kentucky, instead of furnishing the trotter, will have the privilege of furnishing the prize.—"Hewley" in American Stock Farm.

IROQUOIS, premier stalion of Belle Meede stud, died last Sunday, September 17th of an acute affliction of the kidneys. He was 21 years old. Iroquois was the only American horse that has ever won the English Derby. In his three-year-old form he was raced in England and won, besides the Derby, the Prince of Wales' stakes, the Great Champion, the St. Leger and Stockbridge cup. Fred Archer rode him in all his races. It was in the year of 1831 that Iroquois scored his greatest triumph, which is remembered on the English turf to this day as the "American year." It was in this year that Foxhall carried Jim Kenne's colors to the front in the Grand Prix, Cambridgeshire and Czarewitch. Iroquois and Foxhall swept every three-year-old classic in front of them. The Keene people always contended that Foxhall was a better performer than Iroquois. In all his races Foxhall carried enormous handicaps, yet won gelloping. Unluckily for the Keenes, Foxhall was not entered in the Derby or any of the events in which Iroquois was a starter. Iroquois was raced very little as a four-year-old. After winning the Stockbridge Cup he was retired to the stud. Iroquois was a brown horse, 16 hands high, with white stripes down the face and white around the coronet of the left fore foot. He was by imported Leamington, out of Maggie B. B., the dam of Pera, Herold, Panique, Jeconet (dam of Sir Dixon and Belvidere), Red and Blue (dam of Sallie McClelland) and Homeopathy. Maggie B. B. was by imp. Australian from Madeline, by Boston, from Magnolia, by imported Glencoe, from Myrtle, by Memelne, from Bobedille, by Bobedil end on to the fifteenth dam, the Leyton Barb mare. At the stud he was a success, siring among others Tammeny, Addie, Rancoes, Mohcen, Helen Nicols, Huron, Red Benner, Ceynga, Geo. W. Johnson, Geishe and many other steke winners.

TEMPER heat Azote at Cleveland on Saturday. It was the midget against the giant of the turf. The mere trotted a most remarkable mile, 2:10½. Azote was separately timed in 2:11½. A year ago he seemed hopelessly broken down. He came out of the race as good as he went in, and the mile is likely to improve him considerably. Azote did not possess the phenomenal brush he had when Salishury raced him, and his first trainer Hickok, who watched him intently, did not think the old gelding had the same way of going as characterized his phenomenal harness career.

MANY a youngster that has been sold for a song has developed into a fast trotter. A lot of good prospects from the celebrated Oakwood Park Stock Farm will be sold at auction October 5th at the Occidental Horse Exchange.

TICKETS 2:20, the aptly named son of Conductor, is a handsome horse, as is shown by the photo engraving on our front page this week. He is now on the Oregon and Washington circuit.

THE pacing mare, Fenny Putnem 2:14, was brought up on the bottle, here dam, Fanny Irvingtoo, having died when she was but a few days old. She was bred in Victoria, B. C.

TROTTING end running races on the same day end on the same track are a poor proposition.

MUCH BETTER is not taking kindly to training. She refused to score at Sacramento.

Sulky Notes.

STOCKTON'S meeting is a success.

IDOLITA has two more Futurities to trot this season.

FRESNO is preparing for a great meeting in October.

DIRECT 2:05½ will make the season of 1900 at Pleasanton.

It is said that Ed Mills has offered $15,000 for June 2:07½.

MISS LOGAN 2:06½ is all wrong and has been shipped back to California.

KLATAWAH 2:05½ will be trained at Pleasanton for next year's races.

JUPE 2:07½ is the sixth 2:10 performer to the credit of Mambrino Patchen's daughters.

ALTOKA 2:10½, by Allerton, has been shipped back to Salt Lake City, the home of his owner.

CALIFORNIA is the only State that has produced any two-year-old performers so far this year.

They have been reducing records at Stockton this week, the track being in excellent condition.

The San Benito fair will open at Hollister Tuesday, October 10th, and continue the rest of the week.

When Tommy Britton, Bingen and Cresceus meet at Louisville there should be some record breaking.

BIDS for privileges of the Fresno meeting are advertised in our columns. They will be received up to October 2d.

PILOT MEDIUM has sired two colts that went into the 2:10 list as four-year-olds. Peter the Great 2:07½ and E. B. P. 2:09½.

RYERSON stepped Derby Princess three miles recently around 2:10 and thinks she is as good as before shipping to Europe.

EDWIN F. SMITH ex-Secretary of the State Agricultural Society is officiating as presiding judge at the Stockton meeting.

JOE CUCIELLO went to the Reno fair with the Richelieu stable. Maud Newman won third money in a race there this week.

DOLLADE WILKES 2:12½, by Guy Wilkes, is out of Directress, a daughter of Director, owned by F. B. Rockefeller, of Cleveland.

The contract for the new buildings at the Pleasanton track was let on Wednesday last. They will cost about $20,000 when completed.

WHAT a trio of trotting stallions to be owned by one man—Bingan 2:06½, Arion 2:07½, Peter the Great 2:08½. Malcolm Forbes is the lucky man.

The Los Angeles meeting will be a corker. It will be worth the trip to Los Angeles to see Joe Patchen, John R. Gentry and Anaconda in a race.

THOSE two good fillies Mary Celeste 2:17½, by Ora Wilkes, and Janie T. 2:14, by Bow Bells, are lame. They will probably be bred to Directum 2:05½.

FIVE trotting stallions have beaten 2:08 this year. They are Bingen 2:06½, Cresceus 2:07½, Peter the Great 2:07½, Jupe 2:07½, and Fred Kohl, 2:07½.

LITTLE THORNE must be getting good. At Providence he was second three times to the fast pacer Hal B, who won in 2:10, 2:07½ and 2:08. McHenry drove him.

JOE PATCHEN has won 31 races, been second 21 times out of a total of 57. He has to his credit 65 heats in 2:10 or better and 50 of the number were paced in races.

UP to the close of the New York meeting Anaconda 2:03½ had won $6475, and Coney 2:07½ had put $3375 to his credit. Coney's string is the best winner on the Grand Circuit.

ORRIN HICKOK says Cresceus is the best horse he saw at the big New York meeting and would be willing to play him at $50 against $100 for the Abbott were they to meet in a race.

WHO IS IT is not reining up to expectations, and is either off or else he showed false form when he won at Radville and chased Patar the Great out at New York.—Boston Globe.

C. K. BILLINGS, the Chicago capitalist, made a new record at Terra Hauta on the 14th inst., for amateur driving to wagon, with the pacer Bumps. He drove him a mile in 2:08½.

AXTELL 2:12, who is thirteen years old and has not been trained for the past nine years, was exhibited at the Terre Haute meeting and trotted an eighth in 16½ seconds, driven by George Star.

THAT Coney 2:07½ is a game horse there is no denying. At Providence last week he won the first heat of the Rogar Williams Stakes in 2:08½, and was then taken sick. It was thought second money could be saved by keeping him in the race and he struggled through the next three heats as game as a pebble and was third in the last two. He got second money, which amounted to $750.

LOTTERY TICKET 20247, by Dexter Prince 11363, dam by Nutwood 600, secured his first standard performer in the hay gelding Lottery 2:27½, a record that was obtained at Edina, Mo., August 22d.

THIRTY well bred geldings and fillies bred at Oakwood Park Stock Farm will be sold at auction at the Occidental Horse Exchange, Friday, October 6th. There are many good prospects in this consignment.

WHEN Ledy of the Manor finished at Anaconda's throat in 2:03½, she was timed the last three quarters, by a dozen watches, in just 1:30. The effort was a killing one and she had nothing left to come back with.

THE many California friends of John Dickerson, the well known reinsman, will be glad to see him back on this Coast this winter. He will bring Joa Patchen to Los Angeles and may winter the great horse in this State.

THERE will be no fair at Tulara as was announced. The directors considered it best to postpone until next year, and then give a first class fair with the aid of the entire appropriation of $1800 which will then be available.

BROWN JUG, one of the fine sons of Nutwood in this State, is now at Hollister and must be sold for a debt. He is about nineteen years old, but strong and vigorous. Brown Jug is the sire of six trotters and two pacers with standard records.

I DIRECT 2:13 has shifted from the lateral gate and taken to trotting. He trots as squarely as though he had always been trained at that gait and his owner, Chas. F. Capp thinks strongly of starting him next year in trotting races.

GEORGE WEST, who has driven as many hopped things as anybody, says that there will not be room for any of the strapped horses in his stable after this season. Indiana pants are beginning to be looked upon as evidence of a trainer's lack of ability.

HOLLISTER will hold a fair from October 10th to 14th, and it will be well attended. The business men of the town and the farmers and stock breeders of San Benito county are all taking a great deal of interest in the fair which is a guarantee that it will be a success.

SEVERAL very fine properties suitable for stock farms are offered for sale by the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company. The Company is offering these farms on very liberal terms, and will give full particulars on application. See advertisement, and mention this paper when you write.

ELLERT won the first heat and second money in the 2:12 trot at Terra Hauta September 15th. The race was won by Sir Charles, end Eller's position in each heat was as follows: 1—6—2—3. The time of the first heat was 2:11½, and the other three were all in 2:12½. Van Bokkelen drove Ellert in the race.

THE track at Santa Maria, Santa Barbara county, has been quite lively lately. W. S. Lierly, Chas. Thornquest, Frank Trauer and several others have been getting a number of trotters and pacers ready for the fall races there. Among the horses being worked are Adjutant 2:23½ by Electro and Edna R. 2:13½ by Sidney.

WOODBURN FARM, the most famous stock farm in this country, is to retire from the breeding of trotting horses. All of the horses on the farm, including broodmares, horses in training and stallions, will be sold at auction next October during the great trotting meeting at Lexington, Ky. Among the stallions is Lord Russell, brother of Maud S.

SAYS the North Pacific Rural Spirit: Hon. Richard Williams reports the loss, by accident, of his fine McKinney colt out of Lens, by Lamont.—Mr. I. C. Mosher has charge of the Salem track which is a guarantee that it will be kept in perfect condition.—Roben Kiger's horse Hngo 2:22½, was seriously injured at the Salem track this week by rearing up and falling backwards, causing concussion of the brain. He was entered in the races there.

THE pacer Indiana raced in hoppers at Duquesne for the first time in his life, with the following result, says an exchange: His owner, T. W. Kinser, was "touched" for $500 by a pickpocket while riding to the track in a crowded car; his driver, Sam Flaming, lost $50, and the horse was distanced after winning a heat and reducing his record to 2:06½. Good judges say that Indiana will make one of the fastest hopped pacers on earth after he gets used to the straps.

ONE of the biggest horse buying firms in France recently sent an agent to Kansas City to buy 3000 horses, to be used as cab horses in Paris during the exposition. The agent had bought and shipped 120 horses when he received a telegram to buy no more. Inquiry developed the information that the French buyers are alarmed because of the excitement created by the Drayton case, which seems to have the same effect of making investors timid that a presidential election has in this country.

PETER THE GREAT was a hard horse to balance this year, and Henry Titer, his trainer, almost despaired of getting him squared away. He finally experimented on him with nine-ounce shoes forward and four and a half ounce shoes behind. A three-ounce weight was then placed on one toe, and two ounces on the other. Thus rigged he trotted to his record of 2:07½ and in his work marched up the back stretch of the Empire City track one day in 30½ seconds and seemed to be going within himself at that.

STAR POINTER arrived at the Cleveland track from New York on Tuesday. He is now almost free from lemaness, but his ankles are puffed and feverish, yet he may be seen in public again this fall. Every effort will be made to bring him back to form. The New York papers, which announced his permanent retirement from the turf, did so without authority. Mr. White is too game a turfman to retire the great horse when there is the slightest chance for Star Pointer recovering from his accident.—The American Sportsman.

THE New York Sun contains a special dispatch from London, stating that the American-bred mare Polly G trotted four miles at Blackpool, England, on the 11th inst., in nine minutes fifty-eight seconds. The best four-mile record yet made in America in ten minutes twelve seconds, or fourteen seconds slower than that of Polly C. This mare was foaled in 1891, and is by Primary (a son of Phallas) out of Nelly G., by Swigert.

AT the weekly matinee of the Gentlemen's Driving Club last Saturday, at Cleveland, Ohio, Sunland Belle, driven by Harry Devereaux, broke the record for pacing to wagon. She went against her own record of 2:08½. She made the mile in 2:07½, the last quarter being paced in 31 seconds. The fastest two heats ever trotted or paced to wagon in a race were made the same afternoon by Temper, owned by W. M. Cumber of Cleveland, and driven by him. She went the two heats in 2:10½ and 2:11, heating out Azote, driven by Will White.

TRAINER TITER says that Admiral Dewey, the yearling colt by Bingen 2:06½, out of Nancy Hanks 2:04, is the likeliest young trotter that ever came into his hands. The highest youngster knows nothing but trot, and acts as though he might some day do something worthy of his name and his parentage. Merion, the first-born of Nancy's brood, is three years old. It was the intention of her owner to work her this year, but she has been sick nearly all summer. The daughter of Arion is said to be good gaited and fairly promising, but Titer thinks she is no such prospect as Admiral Dewey.

AMERICANS are given to boasting of their country and rightly too, in many respects, but we have yet to find the man who will say a good word of the horses used to draw the United States mail wagons through the streets of our larger towns and cities. While it is true that this work is performed by contractors, the class of horses used are a disgrace to the wealthiest nation in the world. It would be more to the credit of the government to use a truly horseless vehicle than to continue the use of animals that only bear a faint resemblance to a good horse.—"Columbus" in Western Horseman.

THE directors of the State Agricultural Society have reconsidered their action in ruling off the track for life H. A. Bell, who entered and drove the mere Pansy, alias Farnar's Girl in the commercial travelers' race at the State Fair. Mr. Bell made an explanation to the board that was satisfactory, and he was reinstated. It seems he was not a party to the deception, not having any knowledge of the mare's history, and did not know that she formerly was on the turf as Pansy. The board, however, will enforce its judgment against the mare, and she will never again be rung into a race, even for a "josh."

BINGEN 2:06½ is a producer of speed, his son Bingen Jr. having taken a record recently of 2:27½ in the third heat of a three year-old race at Lewiston, Maine. Bingen Jr's dam is Vivacious, mare foaled at Palo Alto in 1891, and by Bernal 2:24, out of the thoroughbred mare Lady Viva, by Three Cheers. She is owned by C. L. Chase, Esq., of Gilmanston, N. H., and has a very speedy filly foal at foot by Directum Star, a son of Directum, which Mr. Chase owns. Both Vivacious and her foal took first premiums in their classes at the late New Hampshire Grange Fair. A yearling by Elmo Wilkes, out of Vivacious, can show a wonderful burst of speed driven by the side of a running horse.

THE New York Speedway trotter Ivendorf 2:17½ won money at Goshen, N. Y., last week because of a novel rigging of his horse. The gelding lost many a brush on the road last spring through his habit of throwing up his head and breaking when the contest waxed hot. To correct this habit Trainer Emery has rigged a sort of martingale running up over the head in a double loop just back of the ears. By this means Ivendorf's head is held down to such a point that he is not inclined to break, and he cannot toss his head. Instead of being attached to the girth of the harness there is a strong strap on either side running from the cross-bar of the sulky down to the loop in the martingale under the horse's brislet.

WHEN Lew Crellin came home from his Eastern trip he stopped off at Portland, and this is how one of the newspaper chaps up there reported a conversation had with him: "Mr. Crellin considers Searchlight the greatest pacer on the circuit to-day, and says the public must not judge him by the summeries of his races, as the parties who bought him are racing him for what there is in it, and not to please the people or for sentiment. Mr. Crellin sold Searchlight for $15,000, and the first race in which he was started netted his new owner $7,500. The next one he lost to Joe Patchen and John R. Gentry, and the pool box paid his owner twice that amount. Twenty-five thousand dollars has been offered and refused, as they consider him worth $50,000."

THE heat in which Anaconda reduced his record to 2:03½ at the Empire City track is thus described by C. M. Bixby of the New York Telegraph: The heat proved to be one of the best of the week, and thrilled the grand stand company to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Bessie Bonehill draw the pole, Roan Wilkes second, Anaconda third and Lady of the Manor on the outside. Anaconda got the best of a rather poor start, but Roan Wilkes took the pole, owing to Bonehill's getting away a length or more to the lead, and he was leading at the quarter, with Anaconda at his shoulders, in 32½ seconds. The pace to the half was a terrific one, Roan Wilkes and Anaconda being on nearly even terms, 1:01½, the second quarter in 29½ seconds. Lady of the Manor was closing, being not over a length back. Around the upper turn Anaconda showed in front by a length, and swinging into the stretch the Lady was second. The race home was a splendid one. The Lady was gaining at every stride, while Geers and McHenry were driving for dear life. The wonderful Hamlin mare got her nose to Anaconda's throat-latch, and there she stuck in spite of the most heroic efforts of Geers. From the draw bar to the wire it was a magnificent struggle, and the crowd was cheering wildly. Anaconda, perfectly driven, managed to win by a nose, but it was the closest fit the Keating horse has had this summer. Lady of the Manor went a grand mile, taking her outside position and the start into consideration, and her performance was better than that of the winner.

CAPTAIN REES will again be presiding judge at New Orleans this year.

THE California Jockey Club will begin its season of fall and winter racing to-day.

J. B. HAGGIN recently purchased a farm of 275 acres adjoining his well known Elmendorf farm in Kentucky.

"GOLDEN RULE is as good a horse as I ever owned," says Edward Corrigan, who has owned many good ones.

THE cruelty for which "Father Bill" Daly was fined $200 last week was the beating of Jockey Hothersall, who has been apprenticed to him.

HORSES are arriving from the East every day nearly, and there will soon be several hundred Eastern thoroughbreds quartered at the Oakland track.

J. B. FERGUSON will do the starting at Oakland against this season. There is a rumor that some other starting device other than the Australian gate, will be used.

WALTER HOBART while on a trip to Monterey county recently purchased a band of twenty mustangs, from which he expects to get a number of good polo ponies when they are properly trained.

AMONG the jockeys who will be on hand at the opening of the Oakland track to-day are Morse, Eddie Jones, Macklin, Frank, Duffy, Tommy Butler, Johnny Sullivan, Ruiz, Buchanan, I hope and Coburn.

THE ROMAN made his first start in eighteen months last Tuesday at Gravesend and won a mile and one-sixteenth event from Candleblack and Chappaqua. He was 4 to 1 in the betting and was ridden by a boy named Ryan.

GEN. W. H. JACKSON, Belle Meads Stud, Tenn., has purchased of Ed Corrigan the brown horse Huron, foaled 1889, by Iroquois, dam Brunetta by imp. Bonnie Scotland, out of Variella, by Vandal, etc. He was a speedy racehorse, and is a full brother of G. W. Johnson, sire of the good colt Lieut. Gibson.

THE stallion Tarcoola, winner of the Melbourne Cup, will arrive from Australia on the Mariposa. He will be placed in the stud on the Ruinat Stock Farm in Sonoma county. Tarcoola is bred on "sire lines" according to the Bruce Lowe figures. He is by Newminster (3) out of Imogena (12) and has close up the blood of Stockwall (3), The Marquis (2), and King of the Ring (3).

S. E. LARABEE of Dear Lodga is having a good run of luck with his select stable of racers on the Eastern turf. Kinley Mack and MacLeod of Dare have been scoring brackets and old Bau Holiday on Saturday repeated his 1897 performance by winning the Autumn Cup. In the Junior Champion Stakes, value $15,000, run Tuesday, his colt High Order took second money.

COL. MILTON YOUNG made two more additions to his arm, McGrathiana, last week. Tuesday he bought at public sale the Featherstona farm on the Tates Creek pike, six miles from Lexington, containing 356 acres. This is well suited for a stock farm, being abundantly watered by streams and innumerable springs and is nicely shaded. Yesterday he bought 100 acres from the Cromwell estate, adjoining McGrathiana. With the recent purchases McGrathiana now has two thousand acres of good land—Thoroughbred Record.

THE following is the preamble of the by-laws of an organization of horsemen recently formed in the East: "This organization shall be known as The Association of Breeders of Thoroughbreds. The objects of this Association are primarily to guard with zealous care the thoroughbred interests in any manner that may seem best to a constitutional majority of the members in any regular meeting assembled, with the hope and desire to be a most valuable ally to the racing associations, since the interests of both are, and ought to be, identical."

THE reinstatement of Jockey J. McDonald by the officers of the Chicago Racing Association, Thursday, was not done with the consent of Judge Rees, and it is understood that he will not allow the boy to ride at Hawthorne, and further, as a member of the license committee, he will vote against a proposition to grant him a license. Judge Rees believes the boy was guilty of pulling the horse Wilson last year, and he has said in reply to all advances made to him in behalf of the boy, that he would always vote against his ever being permitted to ride again. Judge Rees is not an officer in the Chicago Racing Association.

THE stake book of the New Orleans Jockey Club has been issued, and contains twenty-two stakes mostly of $1,000 each. The Crescent City Derby is the richest, the value being $4,000. Entries will close December 15th. The official staff of the club is regarded as the strongest in the country. Captain J. H. Rees is the presiding steward, and has for associate Henry M. Johnson. The placing judges are Colonel R. W. Simmons and Clarence McDowell, who hold similar positions under the Jockey Club in the summer season. C. J. Fitzgerald, the old newspaper man and telegraph operator, who starts on the Eastern tracks is the starter at New Orleans, and Sheridan Clark is the secretary.

SENSATION, Mr. Pierre Lorillard's great stallion, died at Rancocas stud, September 10th, of paralysis. He was a brown horse by imported Leamington out of Susan Beane by Lexington. Sensation was the champion of his year as a two-year-old. In the stud he was a success, and this year his get have won more in England than those of any other sire except Orme. He was foaled in 1877.

THE tract of seventy acres of land on Long Island, adjoining the race-track at Sheepshead Bay, which William C. Whitney purchased recently for $105,000 was not bought that a racing stable might be erected on it. Mr. Whitney, it is said, acted as the agent of the Coney Island Jockey Club in the transaction, and the track will be transferred to the club later on. It will be used for the purpose of lengthening the Futurity chute to a full three-quarters of a mile and the lessening of the abruptness of the elbow, making the course almost straight. The Coney Island Jockey Club has long desired to obtain the property, and now that it has been acquired, there will be no danger of the historic Sheepshead Bay course being cut up into town lots until the club itself agrees to such a proposition.—New York Times.

CAPTAIN THOS. B. MERRY writes us from Los Angeles under date of September 16th, enclosing a clipping from the London Sportsman showing the stallions whose get have won this year on the English turf. The figures are up to August 5th. At that time Orme headed the list with £32,315 to the credit of his progeny. The American bred horse Sensation, son of Leamington and Susan Beane by Lexington, stands second, his get having won £12,096. The Sailor Prince, a stallion imported to America from England, is eighth on the list, which comprises thirty-one stallions whose get have won £2500 or more during the year. Captain Merry adds: "I consider it a most remarkable thing that three American stallions should rank second, eighth and seventeenth in the sire list of England, with all England and France against them, especially as Locohatchia has but one representative."

MARIAN, probably the greatest broodmare in America, was chloroformed by her owner Theodore Winters at his Washoe Farm on Wednesday, September 6th, as she had become so weak from old age, and inability to masticate or digest her food that life had become a burden to her. Marian was by Malcolm, out of Maggie Mitchell, by imp. Yorkshire and was the dam of the following foals: 1877 a bay filly by Norfolk that was sold to parties in Oregon and all trace of her lost. Mr. Winters spent considerable money trying to locate this filly after Marian's produce proved such great race horses; 1878 Duke of Norfolk, 1879 Duchess of Norfolk, 1881 Prince of Norfolk, 1883 King of Norfolk, 1884 Queen of Norfolk, 1885 Emperor of Norfolk, 1886 The Czar, 1887 El Rio Rey, 1888 Rey del Reyes. All the foregoing were by Norfolk. When she died Marian was mated with Joe Hooker and by him had the following foals: 1889 Yo Tambien, 1891 Yo El Rey, 1892 Rey del Sierras, 1895, Vera Reina. Eleven of Marian's produce were staka winners. Her sons did not prove much of a success in the stud, but were without exception all grand looking horses. Mr. Winters realized from sales of Marian's produce about $100,000.

A HORSE writer with an inclination for compiling the money winners of the turf has recently prepared a table of the leading thoroughbred mares of the American turf with the number of races and amounts won, covering a period of twenty years. Geraldine, the famous California sprinter, has finished first past the post more times than any other mare, although her winnings are much less than almost a score of others. Geraldine sported colors in seventy-two races and won no less than sixty-seven times, was second thirty-four and third twenty times. Her winnings footed up $43,000. Next to Geraldine in the number of races won are Pearl Jennings and Swift with fifty-nine each to their credit. Then comes Linda with fifty-two and imp. Los Angeles and Firenzi with forty-seven each, although the former mares has scored a winning bracket since the compilation was made. Miss Pickwick won forty-four races while on the turf, Yo Tambien forty-two and Maid Marian forty-six. Miss Woodford, who died recently at Rancho del Paso, was the biggest money winner of all mares with Firenzi a very close second. The former mare captured thirty-seven firsts out of forty-eight starts and her winnings aggregated $118,970. Firenzi won $116,156, being inside the money seventy-two times out of seventy-eight starts, which was certainly a proud record. Los Angeles is third on the list, with $97,011 to her credit. She was either first or second seventy times out of 108 starts. Yo Tambien was only nine times out of the money in seventy-one starts and her winnings amounted to $93,210.

THE situation in Chicago is summed up by a recent report as follows: Racing at a mile and upward between horses of class, four-year-olds and upward, that have been a feature of the racing here this season, will be few and far between hereafter, simply because the material is not here. With Carnero in the East, Tenby on the shelf because of a sprained ankle, and Crockett off, there are not enough horses of class left to fill such a race. If Serrano and Charry Leaf were not in the same stable, a three cornered race with John Baker as the other contestant would be possible, but Cherry Leaf and Serrano coupled would make a bad betting race. The same condition exists, in so far as good three-year-olds are concerned, with Raffaello in the East and Deering laid up. Jolly Roger is so much the better, that other three-year-olds will not race against him. The only chance left is for such a race as was run at Hawthorne Saturday, an affair for three-year-olds and upward, which was won by Jolly Roger. The difficulty in arranging such a race will be the adjustment of the weights. Experienced horseman claim that on the scale the three-year-olds have a great advantage at this season of the year, and the best proof of the truth of this claim is the way Jolly Roger beat his opponents. In that race he gave the other horses five pounds on the scale, and from the way he won it would seem that he might have a good chance at equal weights. All things considered, the chances for races of this sort seem slim, indeed, unless some good horses come here later. On the other hand, there are a lot of sprinters here, and the feature races from now on will likely be at six furlongs. There are also plenty of two-year-olds here, among which are a number of fairly good ones. In fact, there ought to be one good two-year-old race every day. Of ordinary selling platars there are plenty and the races at a mile and upward will be furnished by them.

JOCKEY WILLIAM NUTT was ruled off the turf last week by Judges Rees and Kuhl of the Chicago Club, and the career of another rider is thus brought to a sudden end. As soon as the action of the judges was made known at Hawthorne there were words of commendation for the racing officials' action heard on all sides. Nutt was under suspension pending an investigation of his ride on John Brenock's gelding Uncas September 8th.

W. H. ROWE, writes as follows in the New York Telegraph of the pedigree of Flying Fox, and in endorsement of the Bruce Low theory: "Flying Fox's pedigree is nothing short of remarkable in its inbreeding and intensification, and is also a noteworthy indorsement of the principles and teachings of the figure system, concerning which I would once again remind all breeders and lovers of the thoroughbred that a sober and sensible view of the case is bound to impress all with the unmistakable merits and importance of the late Mr. Lova's main ideas Orme, sire of Flying Fox, is by Ormonde, out of Angelica, sister to St. Simon, she by Galopin out of St. Angela, she by King Tom out of Adeline, by Ion. Turning now to Flying Fox's dam, Vampire, we find that Flying Fox was produced by the most startling exposition of the 'colt nick,' for Vampire certainly brought to Orme a tremendous return of the best strains of his dam. Vampire is herself by Galopin, sire of Orme's dam. Galopin was by Vedetta, he by Voltigeur, son of Voltaire, and Galopin's dam was out of a daughter of Voltaire, to whom therefore Galopin was inbred in two free generations. But, further, Vampire's dam was out of Irony, a daughter of Roseberry, which horse was by Speculum, a son of Vedetta, the sire of Galopin. Such inbreeding and intensification is little short of phenomenal, and, while the close donning of Galopin was in itself somewhat risky in regard to the matter of temper, it is not surprising that the result, when a good tempered horse as is Flying Fox, should have been consistently phenomenal. Even if training troubles should intervene, or the severity of his previous preparations and races militate against him in the Jockey Club, Flying Fox will go on record as having already outdone all previous three-year-old records. But, should he come up to our expectations and also annex the Jockey Club, his career in 1899 will doubtless prove a beacon light for many, if not all, future generations of racehorses."

THE Empire City race track, built ostensibly for trotting races, will be made the scene of one or more running meetings next year, and will be an addition to the running course in the vicinity of New York in the makeup of the season's programs. W. H. Clark, the proprietor of the new track, is now negotiating with the New York Central Railroad, and arrangements will be made, it is thought, by which the passengers will be landed inside the track inclosure and within a few yards of the grandstand. With better transportation facilities than now exist the Empire track would become one of the most accessible. Ever since work was begun upon the new track it has been thought by horsemen that eventually it would be used for running purposes, but just when or how was not quite clear. However, the arrangements recently completed are said to make it absolutely certain that next year the Empire will take its place among the regularly established Jockey Club courses. The lease the Westchester Racing Association has upon the Morris Park property expires next year, and there is some question whether it will be renewed. Property in that section has been steadily increasing in value, until the wisdom of permitting so large an area to remain idle eleven months out of twelve is already doubted by its owners. The demand for building lots would probably make it much more profitable to divide it up than to continue its use as a race track, notwithstanding the large sums invested in sums and buildings. If it should therefore occur that Morris Park will cease to exist, then the Empire will probably take its place and assume its dates as well. Even with Morris Park in operation, it is possible to give one or more meetings at the Empire track next year without interfering with any other established track. The racing season extends from April 1st to December. By racing every day from the opening to the close of the season, instead of having one off day each week, enough spare time could be obtained to provide probably for twenty-four days at the Empire track also. Nor would the running meetings interfere with the trotting meetings, inasmuch as they would be held at different times of the year. The Empire track, it was demonstrated during the recent trotting meet, is an excellent one. It is 100 feet in width all the way, and judged by the records made by the trotters, is evidently unusually fast.—N. Y. Telegraph.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 20.

The third day of the Stockton meeting saw Geo. W. Ford's mare Neeretta defeat a combination of fast ones that seemed to have been formed to heat her. Our Lucky, driven by Hi Hogboom, was selected by the talented portion of the crowd to win, and was accordingly made favorite and well played. There were seven starters in the race which was the 2:16 trot for a purse of $1000.

A purse of $300 for pacers of the 2:18 class attracted five starters. Dave Ryan, the sluggish grandson of Antevolo, campaigned by James Sullivan two years ago, was one of them, and admirably driven by Dr. Weidoo, won in two straight heats, and reduced his record to 2:13 in the second after making a break that caused him to drop behind until he looked to be out of the race entirely.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21.

The crowds seem to be growing every day at the Stockton meeting. The grand stand was filled on Thursday, and when the races began there was a crowd in the betting ring that was ready and anxious to back their opinions with coin, but were held back by the cinch odds posted.

The program consisted of four running races and a trotting race for the 2:18 class. In this race there were six starters. It was decided in straight heats, H. Dutard's little mare Fanadma defeating Hank and Lottie Parks, both with faster records and others that were thought to outclass her.

Extending the Stride.

How often it is that we meet with men who, after driving a forging horse will come into our shops and order a toe-weight shoe on the front feet so that the forging may be stopped, writes a practical shoer in the Horsehoers' Journal.

A toe-weight shoe in its place is all right, but it must be in its place. For a slow-going, all day horse a toe-weight shoe is about as uncalled for a pattern as can well be applied yet very many cranks on the subject went them on sometimes a draught horse as well as on the one with slow and short knee action.

Unless there be an absolute necessity for such shoes, it is harmful to adjust them on the foot, rather than good for the horse. To increase the knee action, weight on the toe is demanded, not always, but generally, though it is much more common to find it placed on the outside wall of the toe rather than in the shoe.

To extend the stride, weight also acts as a good agency. It has been demonstrated that the difference in the front stride caused by a three-ounce brass weight being placed on the toe of Walter Wilkes 2:13, was three and one-half inches; in other words, every time the horse placed his foot on the ground (he was going at a high rate of speed), the front feet showed an advantage of three and one-half inches of ground over that shown when not shod with the weight.

It has no doubt that the speed was to some extent decreased, on account of having to carry the weight, but the power of the eddition is shown in the extension. There is still another artificial method of forcing the horse to extend himself, through the adjustment of the plain, ordinary shoe.

A choppy-gaited horse is well understood to be one of generally upright pasterns and somewhat short in the foot; that is, the toe is short. If a shoe of the common shape is made and toe holes punched back from their usual place for toe holes, and the shoe run ahead of the hoof at the toe about three-eighths of an inch, this simple method forces the horse to greater exertion when in the act of picking up his feet, but like the toe-weight, has the effect of carrying the foot forward, causing it to land further from the body in consequence.

If in addition to the plain plate a small calk is applied, et the toe, knee action is thereby increased, and general steadiness of movement is assisted.

ONE of the most useful rules that can be observed by the majority of breeders is to keep the brood mares and young horses at work. The expense of keeping even one mare amounts to quite a little, and if the owner does not follow this rule his bank account will be considerably less than it should be.

Fly-Casting at Stow Lake.

The fly-casting enthusiasts who assembled at Stow Lake Saturday and Sunday made the best of the opportunity offered during the last of the series of regular contests for the season. During the first day's work the weather conditions were not favorable. In the long distance event the honors fell to H. C. Golcher, who was closely followed by A. D. Mansfield and A. E. Lovett. The scores in the second event show an excellent average G. C. Edwards being the best man. In the delicacy casting H. F. Muller scored first.

On Sunday the average scores were not up to those of the preceding day. After the re-entry contests are concluded the members will cast up winning scores, the winners in Saturday casting will meet the winners in the Sunday castings and contest for final possession of the club medals for the season. The scores made in the recent contests are as follows:

Black Bass Fishing.

Angling for the toothsome and gamey black bass is a sport that has many adherents in this State. Our public waters have from time to time been stocked with bass fry by the Board of Fish Commissioners with the most satisfactory results. The waters of the Russian, Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers in particular show the possibilities of sport in this fish. Many lakes, public and private, are teeming with the two varieties of black bass; there are now but few ponds and reservoirs in the State in which the fish can be found. Increase has not been stocked with the bass and many of them during the open season furnish plenty of first class sport to many anglers. The estimation in which black bass are held by Eastern sportsmen is well illustrated in the following taken from The Sportsman's Review, which will doubtless be of great interest to the novice if it may not awaken a responsive chord in the veteran angler: Since the publication of Dr. J. A. Henshall's practical and interesting "Book of the Black Bass" there has been a steady increase of the number of bass fishermen. It is now recognized as one of the best branches of the piscatorial art, and many anglers prefer it to trout fishing. A Rochester, N. Y., angler says in a recent article descriptive of this form of sport: Ask a true angler what fish holds the highest place in his estimation as being the most gamey and affording the greatest amount of sport in its capture, and he may, perhaps without hesitation, name the black bass. The bass is truly an American fish. He is found in all waters from Maine to Texas, from the eastern coast to away out west in Kansas and Nebraska. Of course, he is known by different names in different localities, but he is always the same as regards his angling abilities.

Actually the black bass tribe is divided into two divisions, one comprising what is known as the "large mouth" variety, and the other the "small mouth." Both kinds are found all over the country, sometimes in the same waters. The small mouth is not generally as large as his brother, but he is sometimes found weighing as much as six or eight and a half pounds. He ordinarily weighs from one and a half to three and a half, while the large mouth averages a little more. Their fighting abilities, however, are about the same. The small mouth is distinguished from the large mouth by his smaller scales and smaller mouth.

Many men are deterred from trying their luck at fishing by the fact that the only fishing grounds to which they have access are already crowded with fishermen. This fact need not hinder them in the least, for it is well known that true fishermen will catch bass where tenderfeet are catching dogfish. The bass is a sly fish, and his cunning and fighting ability, when hooked, render it doubly hard for the inexperienced fishermen to land him.

The bass when hungry is voracious, and it is surprising what a list of lures and baits will bring him to the hook. He will bite at anything from an angle worm to a piece of pork rind, shaped like a minnow, including frogs, grasshoppers, minnows, artificial flies and even live mice. This democracy of taste has much to do in rendering the bass so popular.

Casting is the most scientific way to fish for bass, though some enjoy the still fishing with minnows, when the fish hide at the bottom of deep pools. To cast properly requires lots of practice and patience. It is, in truth, an art, to be acquired only by experience. The rod commonly used by fishermen is a short, flexible one. A good-sized, easy running reel, fastened either to the top or the bottom of the rod butt and a silk line, with leader and lures, complete the outfit.

The bass, especially the large-mouth variety, is found frequently around the edges of the lakes, and the bait-caster must send his bait in among the lily pads and weeds, casting from his boat, which should be at least fifty yards from shore. With a quick movement of the wrist, the fishermen lands his bait among the weeds. If there is a fish there he seizes it the moment it descends, and darts away to the bottom with the lure in his jaws.

This is the time when an experienced fisherman, seeing the line begin to run out, slowly checks it, and with a sharp jerk fastens the hook firmly in the throat of the fish. Then follows the huddle, when the fish, running hither and thither, endeavors to shake loose the hook, or to wind the line around some weed. To avoid this, the boat is turned out into the lake, away from the shore, and not an inch of slack is allowed the fish as he rushes back and forth. If the fisherman can manage to hold onto him until he is tired out, he is easily landed with a dip net.

Sometimes a fisherman casts his bait near the weeds and no fish responds. He then reels in his line evenly, causing his bait to skim along the surface of the water, on the chance that some lurking fish may snap it up. This very often happens, and is even more fun than having the fish bite the moment it lands.

The small-mouth bass are often caught by fishermen, who, clad in rubber boots, wade in up to their middle, and walk down the river casting ahead of them with minnows. Fly casting is much more difficult than bait casting and requires more skill. Probably the best bass fishing in this country is found in the Northwest. Lake Erie is well known as affording good bass fishing. Precautions should be taken in these regions to preserve the bass by restricting the time and mode of fishing, as they are being rapidly exterminated. The bass is very popular both as a food fish and as a fighter, and it would be a pity to see him lost forever by the indifference of those who have the power to prevent it.

The Nevada officials have at last shown a disposition to act in conjunction with the California State Fish Commissioners in their efforts to preserve and protect trout in the Truckee. This grand trout stream is chiefly in Nevada, and in the past the fish have not been protected in that State and the efforts of the California officials on their side of the line have been nullified. Fish and Game Commissioner Vogel-seng made a special trip there recently and held several conferences with the Nevada officials. As a result they have adopted resolutions reciting the necessity of protecting fish in the close season, the building and maintenance of fish ladders and the prevention of millmen dumping sawdust into the river. The resolution directs the District Attorney, Sheriff and Constables to exert every effort to protect the fish. A new fish ladder has been erected recently near Reno and three more are to be added. One is in course of construction near Verdi. The Fish Commissioners hope to take spawn on the Truckee next spring and will then stock it to its fullest capacity.

Recently the accidental breaking down of the barriers confining the waste material from the newly erected beet sugar works located on the Salinas river a short distance above its mouth allowed the mill refuse to escape into and contaminate the waters of the river with the result, it is estimated, that about 7000 striped bass, most of them weighing from five to twenty pounds were killed, as were also a vast number of other fish, the dead bodies of which lined the banks of the river for nearly a mile. While the accident is a deplorable one, it has been the means of showing that the striped bass have propagated and must be in great numbers in the waters of Monterey bay and its tributaries, this will be good news to many anglers. There is but little danger of a repetition of such a casualty as the mill waste is said to be a valuable fertilizer and is stored and used for that purpose.

It is sometimes desirable to make brass work black when used on rod or gun fittings, telescope mountings, etc. To make a nice dead black, dissolve in warm water to create a strong solution, nitrate of silver in one vessel and nitrate of copper in another. Mix the two together, then dip the brass work into it. Then heat the work evenly until the desired black color is obtained. This is the method used to color French opera glasses. The brass work should be clean and smooth. Powdered rottenstone and oil on a woolen cloth followed by the dry powder on the same gives a very fine, nice finish to brass work. It should be clean and smooth at the start.

News from Eel river is to the effect that the steelhead fishing is affording the many anglers on that stream fine sport. A number of five pounders and a few larger fish have been caught. The San Francisco contingent were joined by Fred Vencker who left for that point last Thursday.

The ubiquitous tom-cod is the fisherman's reward in plenty along the Marin shores these pleasant days.

Trout fishing on the Truckee is still excellent and fly-fishing on the McCloud is first class.

La Honda fishing waters have been lately stocked with a lot of young trout.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Mountain quail and grouse afford good sport in the vicinity of Webber lake at present.

O. F. Leppo, Wesley Hopper and Newton Cook of Santa Rosa killed two large hucks in the mountains near Skaggs Springs last week.

Quail shooting in almost every locality in the State promises to be first class. The birds have bred in great numbers by reason of favorable conditions and are unusually plentiful in many localities.

The Willows Lodge Shooting Club composed of Clarence A. Haight, W. J. Golcher, James Maynard Jr., Dr. F. J. Lane, Dr. E. N. Ayers and Ches. H. Shaw, have had their grounds on the Alameda bay shore placed in first class order and condition for the duck shooting season.

The open season for quail commences on October 1st and closes on the 1st of March. Many changes have been made by county authorities and the open season provided by the general statute shortened. Such changes have been noted in the Game Laws which appear in another column of this issue.

The gun clubs having preserves on the bay shores are busily engaged in getting things in order for the 1st. Arks, boats, blinds and decoys are being looked after, supplies have been forwarded to club houses, ponds baited and ammunition ordered, for the indications are most favorable for ducks galore in the marshes on the opening day of the season.

The Empire Gun Club will open the duck season on October 1st with a "hull's head" breakfast. The club members have been very active in preparing the club house, getting boats in shape and baiting the ponds on their preserve for the fall campaign on the ducks. A keeper has been in charge for a sufficient time to prevent poaching and the killing off of young ducks before the open season. Home bred birds are reported to be very numerous on the Empire preserve at present.

A number of gun clubs have leased territory on the Suisun marshes and are otherwise making preparations for the duck-hunting season, which opens October 1st. There is every assurance of an unusually successful season, as the ducks are already very plentiful, and their numbers are being daily augmented. The Suisun authorities are taking every precaution against illegal hunting, thereby protecting the interests of legitimate hunters when the season is formally opened.

The United States Smokeless Powder Company propose to establish a new plant at a point three miles east of Martinez just beyond and adjoining Bull's Head point at deep water on Suisun bay. The track of land purchased embraces 700 acres and is a first class location. The manufacture of dynamite with smokeless powder for both government and private use will be commenced as soon as the new works are completed and which will be erected in accordance with the most modern plans.

Two arrests for violating the game law by killing quail out of season were made in San Jose on last Sunday by a deputy game commissioner, under the direction of the County Sportsmen's Club. The offenders were Japanese. They were cooking the game when caught. It is to be hoped that they will be made an example of. Japs, Portuguese and Degos respect no game laws that are not accompanied by heavy fines whenever the law breaker is convicted. When their pockets are made to suffer they lose no time in spreading the bad tidings among their compatriots. In this way only a due observance of the laws can be brought about.

The Stockton Shooting Club through its president W. E. Johnson, has filed with the County Clerk a petition to the Board of Supervisors asking that the board pass an ordinance prohibiting the killing of game in the county for the market and the sending of game out of the county. The petition recites that certain persons are accustomed to locate themselves in suitable places during the game season and kill large numbers of birds for the markets and that the practice of such wholesale slaughter is detrimental to the preservation of the game birds there, and if allowed to go on will soon exterminate game of all kinds. The sportsmen throughout the State, and also the farmers and citizens are gradually awakening to the importance of local game protection.

A letter received by Prof. James Markland from the Rev. Alexander Gunn this week details briefly some happy days with the gun while he was a guest at a sportsmen's paradise in the East. He says: "I am over here for a few days' shooting—being a prominent member of the Black Jack Club of course I am 'up' in all the arts of water-fowl shooting. This marsh is at the west end of Lake Erie near the mouth of the Detroit river, the club (Point Moillee Shooting Club) owns the property—about 5000 acres—and it is one of the best preserves in the country. There are only ten members (all rich) and we live like the old kings of the Sandwich Islands. Bluewing teal and mallard are flying over every pond, we had a bag of 77 yesterday and have killed as many as 230 in a day. The marsh is thick with Sora rail and yellow-legged plover—the rail is the ortolan of the gourmets and is most delicious eating and so is well broiled bluewing teal."

The Santa Rosa Gun Club is making active preparations for the opening of the duck season. Many boats are in course of construction and so also is a spacious boat house at the club preserves near Schellville. An important meeting of the members was called for last evening to be held in the office of the president, Dr. William Finlaw. At this meeting final arrangements for an auspicious opening will be discussed. The keeper will spend the last week in September at the preserves, baiting the ponds and putting things in readiness for October 1st. The club now numbers twelve members, all enthusiastic sportsmen.

The progress of the Inter-state Park Association is spoken of by Capt. J. H. Dressel, secretary-treasurer of the organization, as follows: "Matters on the Inter-State Park grounds are progressing very favorably. Men are at work plowing, mowing and sowing, and within a week work will commence on the foundations. Subscriptions to bonds are coming in in such a satisfactory manner that there is no doubt as to the outcome and the next Grand American Handicap will see the event take place on the finest grounds in the world, especially adapted for that purpose."

At the Traps.

The Union Gnn Club shoot on the Lincoln Club grounds at Alameda to-morrow will be the last local club shoot for this season.

The ties for the handicap medal offered at the Shoot on the Lincoln grounds on the 3rd inst. were shot off on Sunday, September 10th, at the above grounds. Edg. Forster, John Karney and Jules Bruns had a handicap allowance of three targets and Ed Schultz one target. The scores were (on a possible twenty) Forster 22, Karney 20, Schultz 19 and Bruns 15. On the shoot off of the second tie, with a handicap allowance of one bird less Forster scored 21 and Karney 17, thus giving the medal to Forster.

The Los Angeles Gnn Club will hold a practice shoot to-morrow and on the 23d and 24th insts. the club will wind up the blue rock season in Southern California with their ninth semi-annual tournament. A. W. Bruner is president and Chas. Van Valkenberg secretary of the club. The card for the first day's blue rock shooting embraces ten fifteen target races, entrance $1.00, optional side pool entrance $1.00. A merchandise shoot at twenty-five birds, $1.50 entrance, optional side pool entrance $1.50 and extra events close the first day's shooting. The shooting events for the second day embrace: four fifteen bird races, $1.00 entrance in both the regular and optional side pools. A twenty-five target merchandise race. The two-men championship team race, twenty-five targets per man, for the "E. C." cup, which is now held by E. E. Mason and J. E. Vaughan. The five-men championship team race, twenty-five birds per man, for the Los Angeles Gnn Club trophy, now held by a team composed of E. E. Mason, J. Matfield, J. E. Vaughan, E. L. Blanchard and Hugh May. The individual championship medal race, at fifty targets, will close the tournament. The medal is now held by E. E. Mason. The club has made every preparation for the comfort and convenience of shooters. A large attendance of gun men is anticipated.

The return shoot between the Ferudale and Eureka gnn clubs came off at the grounds of the Eureka Gun Club last Saturday forenoon and resulted in a victory for the Eureka shooters by a score of 203 to 191. The individual scores were:

Ferudale—R. Roberts 13, F. Rasmussen 19, M. Donnelly 10, F. G. Williams 21, Ben Hart 13, E. W. Williams 15, R. Francis 12, C. A. Monroe 9, G. Crippen 17, C. Schreiner 11, W. H. Roberts 15, C. W. Hine 17, J. Pollard 13—Total 191.

Eureka—J. M. Carson 14, J. Vansant 17, W. E. Cook 17, H. H. Buhne 16, H. G. Gross 17, G. Hanson 8, H. Kelly 14, C. S. Milnes 7, J. K. Durnford 13, J. Donnelly 6, G. L. Roberts 18, E. G. Plnke 21, C. W. Young 15, J. H. Kingston 13, Ira Russ 23.—Total 203.

The first prize of $25 was awarded to Ira Russ on his score of 23. For the second prize F. G. Williams of Ferudale and E. G. Plnke shot off their score of 21 each with the result that the Cream City shooter won. F. Rasmussen of Ferudale carried off the third prize, and Guy L. Roberts of Eureka took the fourth prize. Dr. W. E. Cook and Dr. H. G. Gross of Eureka and Geo. Crippen and C. W. Hine shot off their ties of 17 for the fifth prize, which went to Dr. W. E. Cook. H. H. Buhne of Eureka took the sixth prize. J. P. Donnelly of Ferudale made the lowest score and for this obtained a box of c. gars. J. P. Donnelly of Ferudale and Geo. Hanson and C. S. Milnes of Eureka, each with a string of eight goose eggs, contested for the booby prize, which was won by Geo. Hanson.

Egret Plumes.

In the United States the "osprey" controversy has never attained to any great importance or bitterness, though the destruction of the plume-bearing birds has been a good deal discussed first and last, and has been the excuse for much eloquence, at least as vehement as it was well-intentioned. In England the egrets have long been almost a national issue, and the feminine world has been literally torn in two by the resulting animosities between those who will and those who will not wear the delicate feathers. Hitherto the general tendency has been for the friends of birds and foes of fashion to assert as an indubitable fact that the precious plumes are secured by killing the adult males at the nesting season, and that the young birds thus orphaned perish miserably of starvation. To this the answer has been a silence that said, "we don't care." Now a correspondent of the London Times comes forward to prove that slaughter is neither a necessary nor an invariable detail of "osprey" gathering, and "The Thunderer" devotes over a column of its editorial space to an apparently sympathetic consideration of his facts and arguments which we are inclined to believe is prompted by interested parties closely allied to the feather trade and who are responsible for the promulgation of a peculiar cult in this respect that is entitled to serious criticism in so far as actual facts are concerned. It seems so says the veracious correspondent that along the Orinoco, a river in Venezuela, the egrets are treated with the greatest consideration, simply because they are an important source of income, and the natives instead of killing the birds that grow the valuable plumes used in the decoration of dresses and bonnets protect them as much as possible and when the birds breed collect the feathers in the swamps when they have fallen to the ground after molting at the end of the breeding season. The writer is careful to state that if the birds were shot at upon returning to their roosts they would desert the particular spot or trees where they were molested. He also states that in the Orinoco region these birds have been domesticated and bred for their plumes as have the ostriches in Africa and Southern California.

One locality is credited with a find of forty pounds weight of feathers in a season and he further asserts that individual hunters often secure a hundred pounds of plumes in a single season, and if this were the result of shooting it would mean the death of about 320,000 birds but all these feathers are gathered without killing any birds whatever and yet the weight of each single plume is but a few grains. This, of course, is not proving or even saying that in Florida (where they are now protected) and elsewhere all the atrocities charged by the would-be reformers are not committed, but it endeavors to indicate that the "osprey" is not invariably the evidence of a cruel crime.

This Orinoco story, we are told, has been contradicted by the eminent English ornithologist, Mr. Alfred Newton. In this State it is unlawful to shoot or destroy the bird in Los Angeles county at any time.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Entries for the Victoria show closed on Thursday.

If a specialty club bench show is to be held here this fall there is no time to be lost in preparing for it.

The name "Filey" has been adopted by the Rev. J. W. Flinton as the distinguishing one for his fox terrier kennel at Victoria, B. C.

The Manitoba trials had nine previous field trial winners to start. Among other cracks Jingo's Lad did not show. Pin Mouny was not started.

W. J. McKeon of Victoria, B. C., has a very promising young fox terrier bitch by Aldon Swager—Aldon All that will make her debut at the Victoria show.

J. B. Stoddard is now in charge of affairs at the Ventu Kennels. George Richards is busily engaged in looking after the coming field trial cracks belonging to the kennel.

Rev. J. W. Flinton of Victoria, B. C., has received from A. Macdonald of Toronto, Canada, a fox terrier bitch Von Voit—Dusky Pearl. She is a half sister to J. E. Martin's Aldon Swager.

The Rev. J. W. Flinton is well pleased, we are informed with his new purchase, the fox terrier bitch Golden Spray by Blemton Keefer—Blemton Spinaway. She will be shown at Victoria next week.

Alex C's showing at the Manitoas trials may have been disappointing to his admirers here, he will be run by D. Rose at other trials on the circuit and will have the opportunity to redeem himself.

Nathan Rothstein, a prominent society young man, Ean Claire was arrested on the 9th inst for pouring ammonia on a bull terrier's head to make him let go of a other dog—his dog. The hull terrier died.

Mr. Al Waddell is enjoying with friends at Santa Cruz the salubrious resort on Monterey bay, where he proposes staying during the coming winter. He brought a couple striking young pointers (Plain Sam breeding) and several likely cockers to the Coast with him.

Mr. Alvin Magary, of this city, is a new recruit in the ranks of the St. Bernard fancy. He has just purchased fine six weeks' old dog puppy by Monk—Juno Rosemont No. 45,874. The pup is orange and white in color, well boned, big and strong, the indications are favorable to becoming a very handsome dog.

Redwood Cocker Kennels will send a string of eight cockers to the Victoria show commencing on the 28th inst. Lo Haaf will have charge of Colorado, Ch. Havoc, Toot Redwood Forrest, Redwood Virgie, La Paloma, Doffe Pastime and Banner Jake. It is within the possibilities that some of the cups offered will find their way to this city.

In reply to a communication signed "Subscriber" requesting information as to whether or not there is a kennel of English wolfhounds on the Pacific Coast we answer that we do not know of any on the Coast or elsewhere. Irish wolfhounds (a few) and Borzoi (or Russian wolfhounds) are readily to be found; but the English wolfhound is an unknown quantity to us.

W. H. McFee of Los Angeles, one of our pioneer fox terrier breeders, is about to accept a responsible position with a large drug firm in Chicago which will require him to be upon road the greater part of the time. For this reason he is unable to keep up his kennel and we regret to announce that he is compelled to retire from the fancy and is offering his terriers for sale.

It is reported that Gny Silk No. 39,163, by Bendigo—Maud S. II, a black cocker spaniel who won 1st at Minneapolis in 1897; 1st New York, 1st St. Louis; 1st Milwaukee; 2d in Grand Rapids 1899 and bred by the Nubian Kennels, Detroit, Mich., will be sent to the Coast after the Dallas bench show. Ha will be shipped by John Davidson to Miss Tompkins of San Anselmo.

The judges and those attending the Manitoba and Iowa trials were out and on the grounds during the running generally by or before six o'clock each morning, in fact, several heats were run by six o'clock. This early start program would be an innovation in our Coast trials that will be acceptable to a number of sportsmen and handlers who have been present at our trials in the past.

Champion Le Prince Jr., Fred H. Bnehnell's grand smooth coat, will probably be shipped East again by John Lucas on the first of October. His destination will be the Venlo Farm Kennels, Gutersburg, N. J. Mr. Klein will have charge of Le Prince, who will be put in again for the bench honors offered during the coming Eastern circuit. Eastern fanciers will also have the opportunity to secure a stud service to approved bitches.

The sheep dog is usually called a "collie," in reality a "collie" is an obsolete name for "such sheep as have black faces and legs," says the Agricultural Dictionary, published in 1743, where it is spelled "colley," as it is sometimes even nowadays. As a fact, there is no rule for spelling the word, and as "colley" in many parts of the old country is the name of a small fresh water fish, the loach, the spelling of "collie" for a sheep dog is taken to be the best.

The Canine Defence League of England has presented a petition to Lord Salisbury, with 100,000 signatures, asking that Mr. Long, President of the Board of Agriculture, be retired from the ministry owing to his refusal to withdraw the order to muzzle dogs. The memorialists assert the muzzling imperils the Conservative party. Last year over 22,000 dogs were seized, and over 17,000 were destroyed. The seizures caused over 10,000 lawsuits.

Our Dogs tells of an amusing incident that occurred during the opening day of the show at Ball's Bridge. While one of the stewards and his attendants were going round the benches putting up the award cards, with catalogue in hand, a countryman, whose naivete proved him a Southerner, exclaimed to a by-stander: "Well, Mick, that's the queerest way of judging terriers I've ever seen; there's the judge going round with his book, naver looking at the dogs, but awarding the prizes se fast as winking."

Two handsome and bright little fox terrier bitches made their appearance in this city last week. They were shipped from Victoria, B. C. Mr. H. G. Hemmelright is the owner of one, Filey Cricket, whelped June 17, 1899, by Aldou Artist—Victoria Judy. Filey is a little beauty with a very amiable disposition, she is prettily marked having a black and tan face and white body. Mr. G. J. M. E. d'Arquin is the purchaser of the other one, Victoria or Filey Gem, whelped June 16, 1899, by Aldou Swagger—Aldou Radianca. Gem is also a most promising young terrier, stands well and is nicely marked, being black on one side of the face and having a black spot on the left side and one at the root of the tail. The advent of these two hitches among the local fox terriers will undoubtedly have a strong influence in favor of the breed later on as they are both royally bred.

An article recently published in the Cleveland Leader, written by the eminent writer of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton, in regard to the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals taking upon itself the business of licensing dogs and of killing all those not licensed, is a vigorous and timely exposition of a state of affairs similar to which caused the organization of the Dog Owners' Protective Association in Cincinnati about a year ago and also similar organizations in other cities. She says that when the city of New York took charge of the business, only some twenty-four thousand dogs and cats were killed annually, but as soon as the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals got the fees turned over to them, fifty per cent more animals were killed the first year, and the third year about seventy thousand, about three times as many as had been killed by the city. Mrs. Bolton in closing pertinently says: "A Humane Society had better die than if it is obliged to keep itself alive by the death of dogs."

Don't undertake to use or handle a dog until you have first gained his confidence and love.

Don't keep a boy or a man a day who is not kind to the dogs, or of whom your dogs are suspicious or afraid of.

Don't expect your dog to know what you are thinking about. Dogs are not mind readers, but most faithful friends.

Don't lie to your dog, or he will very soon lose his confidence in you, and pay very little attention to your talk, actions or commands. Dogs more quickly detect lies than human beings.

Don't sit idly or indifferently by and see your dog or dogs scratch themselves sore, but investigate, and ascertain if the cause be fleas, lice or some skin disease, and apply or administer the necessary remedies.

Don't forget, if you own a pet dog, that he should not be overfed, or fed irregularly, or given hits of cake or candy, simply because he begs for them, as nearly all the ills of dogs can be traced to these sources, together with lack of exercise.

Don't forget, now that the hunting season is on, and you demand work of your dog, that he is not a piece of steel machinery, but that there is a limit to the amount of work he can do, and that he requires food, rest and a comfortable bed, the same as you do.

Don't prove conclusively to all onlookers, when trying to train or teach a young dog, that you are incapable, by losing control of yourself. It has been suggested that certain people ought to undergo some kind of an examination to prove their competence, before being allowed to keep a dog.

A statement about the death of the St. Bernard dog Alta Millo in a morning contemporary to the effect that this dog "was justly regarded as the great sire of the century in his class" and that the price paid for him, to Mrs. Lee of Toledo, was $1000, which "price was justified by the dog's ancestry as well as by his achievements on the bench" is a most astounding declaration. The price agreed upon for Alta

Millo was $250. The dog never was in good condition from the day of his arrival in this city and the purchase was a source of much dissatisfaction to the Humboldt Kennels, who brought him to the Coast. His performances on the bench were creditable and the records of his Coast progeny to date are a fairly good showing for Alta Millo as a sire, but there was nothing in his career to justify the statement that he "was claimed by the most expert judges of dogs in the country as the most perfectly formed St. Bernard in the United States, and his most severe critics could find but one point in his make-up with which they could find fault; that alleged weak point was his muzzle, which some considered too short; and yet Millo's short muzzle was considered one of his strongest points by such experts as Mrs. Lea and James Mortimer, both of whom are everywhere recognized as authorities on St. Bernards." His muzzle was short and his hind legs were bad, the dog suffered from paralysis from the day of his coming here until he died. Mr. James Mortimer, it is true, is a recognized authority on St. Bernards and other breeds as well and gave him first in puppies and special at Indianapolis in 1896, and first in novice and special at Louisville in 1897. Under H. W. Lacy he won second in novice at Grand Rapids in 1898, this ended his show career. The Eastern competition against him above mentioned was not a criterion and his defeat at Grand Rapids does not warrant the following ridiculous assertion that this "was his only defeat, and the decision of the judge, was the subject of a great deal of unfavorable comment among expert dog fanciers." He was beaten by Duke Wadsworth. Mrs. Lee, by the way, is a breeder and expert seller of St. Bernards, hence the opinion as to the lady's authority as a judge vouchsafed by the writer responsible for the careless statement referred to should be taken with a grain of salt. Local fanciers are well aware of the facts in the case, but the publication of the fulsome rubbish above referred to is liable to be taken seriously by the Eastern fancy and others who may naturally come to the conclusion that the St. Bernard fancy here are a part of the wild and woolly bric-a-brac in Pacific kennelism that has in the past often invited comment of no flattering character as well as called for criticism of a most humorous nature.

The Oakland Show.

The dates for the Oakland Show have finally been fixed for December 7th, 8th and 9th. The judges have not yet been chosen. It is announced that specialty judges will be secured for as many breeds as possible, for the reason that it is believed it is almost impossible for one man to be as good a judge of all breeds as he is of the one or two breeds which he fancies. This is a move in the right direction. The show will be held under the auspices of the California Collie Club. The California Poultry Association and the Pacific Pigeon Club will join with the Collie Club in holding a combined show. The feature offered by the poultry and pigeon exhibit will be more than usually interesting. The management of the show are bestirring themselves to bring about a successful exhibition this fall. All communications should be addressed to the Secretary, Mr. Norman J. Stewart, Aromas, Monterey, Cal.

Field Trials Are On.

The field trial season for 1899 has opened auspiciously, commencing with the recent trials in Manitoba and Iowa there is every indication favorable to an interesting and successful circuit. At least fifteen field trials, some of them of national importance, others under the auspices of State organizations are announced to take place within the next five months. Public interest in the sport has been steadily increasing, new organizations local in character have been organized in different States whilst the older field trial associations have shown a keener interest and renewed zeal. Amateur trials, it has been clearly demonstrated, may be made just as successful in their way as the greater events and each succeeding year will no doubt add new State associations to the list. Next year—if not this—a championship stake for the winners at State field trials will doubtless be established, and then with the various State events to serve as preparatory schools for promising local dogs, the widest range of competition will be open to those showing capacity for competing with all comers.

The Manitoba Field Trials.

At Morris, Man., commencing on September 6th, took place the thirteenth annual field trials of the Manitoba Field Trials Club. The trials were successfully conducted, weather and other conditions being very favorable. It is possible that for the trials next year new territory will be selected, as the Morris grounds, by reason of the rapid settling up of the country, do not now afford the amount of territory needed for the successful running of field trials. W. W. Titus officiated as judge. Among those present were: J. W. Flynn, of San Francisco; J. Lemou, H. Code and W. C. Lee, Winnipeg; W. S. Cottingham, Mr. Henderson and E. H. White, Brandon, Man.; H. Thomas Cottam, New Orleans; Dr. J. S. Brown, Russell Brown, Montclair, N. J.; Jas. L. Breeze, New York; Victor Humphray, Lexington, N. C.; John Wootton, W. F. Ellis, Manitou; S. C. Bradley, Major J. M. Taylor. The handlers present were: J. M. Avent, D. E. Rose, C. E. Buckle, S. C. Bradley, E. Hamber, R. Story, Sandy Reed and W. Pickering. Among the ladies present were Mrs. J. M. Avent, Mrs. Edwards and Miss Blancha Cottingham.

The following summaries of the events, for which we are indebted to the American Field are of particular interest to California fanciers.

Sioux, the Derby winner, was bred by Avent & Duryea Kannel, and is a small black, white and tan setter bitch by Count Gladstone IV—Hester Pryma. She is a nice goer, and handles her game well, and is well trained. Victor, winner of the second, was bought by Mr. Avent from E. McKinney, and is by Val Lit out of Maid of the Morn. He showed good bird-finding quality, but won out by a close margin. Bona, a handsome black, white and tan English setter bitch, bred by Mr. Hohart Ames, by Tony Boy—Christina, was an easy winner of third. She showed highest natural quality of any puppy in stake. The only thing that kept her from winning first was her unsteadiness on game.

Bang III, winner of first in All-Age Stake, is a large, well-made, well-muscled black and white pointer dog, bred by James Daniels of Winnipeg, Man., by Rector—Dinah, and was entered by Code & Hamber. The dog has started four times and won first each time: First in Western Canada Club's Derby, first in Manitoba Field Trial Club's Derby, 1898, first in Western Canada Club's All-Age, 1899, and first in Manitoba Field Trial Club's All-Age stake, 1899. He is a consistent hunter and searcher, staying out and working hard, and takes in all ground available. He hunts with plenty of bird sense, and with it uses a fine nose, and on game is sharp, snappy and accurate. He is deficient to some extent in style, both in point and on going, but is high headed. He won the stake handsly. Prime Minister, winner of second, was bred by Avent & Duryea, owners, and is by Count Gladstone IV—Hester Pryme. The dog is quite small, but nicely made, and a good worker. He is fast and is a wide ranger, and handles his game well and quickly. He was surely the second best dog in the stake by quite a margin. Minnie's Girl is owned by Del Monte Kennel and won third place by a close margin. Lady's Count Gladstone was easily the fourth dog in the stake. He is by Count Gladstone IV, and out of that great bitch which has thrown so many good ones, Dan's Lady. He is owned by G. G. Williamson, Muncie, Ind.

THE FARM.

When the summer sun is slowly scorching down behind the crest
Of grim and rugged woodsy hills which stands out in the west,
The artist paints the milking scene,
hut as a rule, somehow,
He gets the rustic lady on the wrong side of the cow.

A Creamery Problem.

Some time ago a series of questions touching dairy operations were sent by the dairy divisions of the United States Department of Agriculture to several heads of creameries the country over, says Prof. Joseph L. Hills, director of the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station, in Chicago Dairy Produce. One of the questions was essentially as follows: "What one thing, if it could be brought about, would, more than any other, help the dairy industry and dairy products in this country?"

The overwhelming majority of the replies not a plurality, mind you, but a majority, stated that more care in the handling of milk after it was drawn from the cow and before it reached the factory was the one thing useful. The dairyman himself is principally at fault in the matter, a fault which may be remedied by a not unreasonable amount of care. The discouraging feature of the matter, however, so far as it pertains to associate dairying, is that one had mess of milk drags down the entire lot to its low level; it leaventh the lump. And not unnaturally the dairyman says: "What avails it for me to use care, to steam my cans, to ice my milk, to dip it, to aerate it, to jacket my cans, to groom my cows, to feed my dry fodder after milking, to ventilate my barn, only to have my milk mixed at the creamery with John Doe's, who never washes his cans, whose cows lie in filth and darkness and whose milk must be well nigh sour when taken into the factory."

John Doe's milk ought to be turned back from the weigh can. The creamery taking John Doe's milk and making on that account a poorer grade of butter, ought not to get a good price for it. Unfortunately in many localities creameries are so thickly located and competition is so keen that generally John Doe can sell milk of pretty tough quality to some one. And, moreover, rivalry between commission men is some times sharp enough in certain markets to cause the paying of high prices for goods not strictly of a grade meriting them. There are ways, however, in which any creamery which is in earnest in this matter can grade up to some extent the quality of its milk so far as it relates to bacterial content. — Northwestern Agriculturist.

Breed the Horns Off

I want to give a bit of my experience with cattle which may be beneficial to some of your many readers who are starting in the cattle business, writes J. G. Souders in the Ohio Farmer.

Several years ago one of my neighbors bought a thoroughbred Red Polled bull calf, the first ever brought into this section, and contemplated introducing Polled blood among our cattle. As is usually the case, many were the remarks made concerning the new breed, both pro and con (and mostly con). But I concluded that I would try it. Having some good Durham cows I bred them to the Red Poll, and got some very fine half bloods, well marked and moneys. I liked them first rate. But now the trouble commenced, for we could not induce any one to get another thoroughbred, for the breeders wanted very high prices, as that breed of cattle was scarce, and prices of cattle generally were low. Hence some disposed of their half-bloods at the ordinary low prices of other cattle, but I had a few of my neighbors still "stuck to" our muley cows, and at last, by agreeing to pay $5 service fee, we induced a neighbor to send and get a fine thoroughbred yearling: I bred to that one as long as I could and then got the man to exchange that one for one still finer, and now I think I have as fine a little herd of three quarter and seven-eighth bloods as can be found. They are almost perfect types of the thoroughbred Red Polls. They breed no horns any more, whatever. As milkers they are hard to heat, and are cattle of the gentlest and best disposition I ever saw. Easy keepers, hardy, compactly built and in fact are the best general purpose cattle I know of, I could not think of giving up my "moneys."

Now I can turn them all in a shed or pen together without fear of any getting gored. Why, the six-month-old calf will actually push away at the old cow by the manger until she tires of it, and will let it eat with her unmolested. I have tried getting rid of the horns by the use of the saw, but don't like it. The most humane way is to breed the horns off, which can be done in a very few years. If any desire any more information concerning this breed I will give it.

To determine whether fat could be fed into milk Professor Wing of New York gave tallow to cows. When the experiment began the cows were on pasture and were being fed eight pounds of grain in addition. The feeding of tallow began with four ounces a day and was increased until after the fourth week the daily allowance was four pounds. At the end of the tenth week the tallow was dropped and the observation was continued two weeks longer. The week before the experiment began the cow gave 47.2 pounds of milk daily with 35 per cent of fat, and with an average daily yield of 166 pounds of butter fat. At the end of ten weeks of this sort of feeding the yield was only 36.9 pounds of milk a day with a per centage of three per cent of fat and a daily yield of 1.36 pounds of butter fat. The fat began to decrease from the fourth week, and Professor Wing says that in this quite extended trial there was no increase in the fat of the milk in consequence of the feeding of tallow to the cow in addition to a liberal grain ration. Professor Wood at the New Hampshire station fed cotton seed oil, palm oil, corn oil and oleo oil, and found that the fat in the milk was not permanently increased.

Cheap feeding of in-fal hoodmares after pastures have burned up and before winter sets in rarely pays. Experiments made on a large scale with silage as a food for pregnant mares from fall to spring gave disappointing results, and any other bulky, innutritious food cannot be considered satisfactory. Large quantities of food, such as green cornstalks, while apparently relished by mares are apt to prove dangerous, especially after early fall frosts, abortion having been correctly attributed to this cause, as also to heavy fall growths of grass that have been frost-bitten. The bulky food should be lessened in quantity and combined in a ration with sound hay and oats and an occasional bran mash, else the mare cannot be expected to do more than keep herself in fair condition. On general principles that method of feeding a pregnant hoodmare which is liable to produce "heaves" leads to a puny, worthless colt that is scarcely worth the service fee. On the other hand properly balanced rations preserve the vigor and condition of the dam, insure a well nourished fetus, and an abundant flow of milk at time of parturition for the foal's support.

Sheep are bound to be good property for several years to come and now that they are run independent of tariff legislation good or had, the business of following sheep holds out as much inducement as any other line of stock breeding. Some people think it is more promising than all other lines and this may be true. We know that the country at large is 10,000,000 sheep shy of its maximum number and we realize also that some of the rival countries are much shorter of sheep than our own. The high price of beef and pork just now must greatly stimulate the mutton market and all the cheap corn in the country will lead to much feeding the coming winter and this means a further curtailment of breeding flocks, especially if ewe lambs are sent to the feed lots as will probably be the case. If the range can be found and forage provided for winter the sheep industry bids fair to forge ahead as never before and this is what we hope to see.—Denver Field and Farm.

To the long list of curious and unusual occupations by which men live might be added that of the ham smeller in a packing house. His duty is to inspect meat products and judge of their soundness. The ham smeller's only tools are a long steel trier and his nose. He stands in a barrel to keep his clothes from being soiled by the dripping brine and the hams are brought to him by the workmen. A ham is laid before him, and he plunges his sharp pointed trier into it, withdraws it and passes it swiftly beneath his nose. The trier always goes down to the knuckle joint. In testing meat in that manner the man with a trier judges by the slightest shade of difference between the smell of one piece and another. The smell of the meat is almost universally sweet, and that is what he smells; the slightest taint or deviation from the sweet smells is therefore appreciable. It is not the degree of taint that he expects to find, but the slightest odor that is not sweet.

To dry up a cow, reduce the feed, take away the grain and when the milk yield drops milk first one day, then once in two days, and in one to two weeks the average cow will be dry with her udder in good condition. With persistent milkers there is seldom difficulty if alfalfa only is fed for a time. If a cow continues to give milk under this treatment, or if the udder is hard and feverish the work of drying up must stop and the ration be changed to a light milk ration with loosening feeds and the cow milked regularly. Forced drying up under these conditions injures the cow. If by oversight the drying up process has been neglected until within three or four weeks of calving do not attempt it as there is risk of injury to the health of the cow and her udder. After becoming dry the cow will need little attention before calving if she is on good pasture.

Farmers will find that true economy demands that they provide themselves with good teams. It is false economy to have a crew of hired help working wild broncos, or with ordinary cayuses. When a farmer pays a harvest hand $40 per month he should have good, steady, fast walking, twelve hundred pound animals to draw his mowers, wagons, rakes, etc., and the same rule will apply at all seasons. It is a poor outlay to pay wages to men to work with second class teams or tools. And even if the farmer does his own work and employs no hired help his own time is too valuable to be fretted away with a pokey team or a team that is too light to draw a load. The team is one of the most important items on the farm and more depends on good teams than any other one thing in all the calendar of farm furnishings.

Tom Ponting, one of the old-time cattle breeders and one of the best posted men in the country on the beef situation, says: "Every paper in the country ought to instill in the minds of the farmers of the west to produce more cattle. A few years ago I could ride a few hours and come across two or three hundred two and three-year-old steers for sale in our county. I do not believe to-day that I could buy 100 two-year-old steers in the county among the breeders. Times have been so close the past few years that men have sold their breeding stuff to the butcher. It is very difficult to convince the majority of men that now is the time to breed cattle."

Among our meat exports to Puerto Rico hog products form the chief item. The average yearly export value for 1888-1892, was $583,019, and for 1893-1897, $636,633. Beef products were exported only in small quantities, the value of the annual shipments averaging but $4432 in 1888-1892, and $4318 in 1893-1897. The exportation of meat products, other than hog or beef, amounted to $17,227 a year during the former period, and $21,625 a year during the latter.

A Montana man bought 150 fine Merino hucks recently at a cost of $15 each and dipped them in a carbolic dip in the proportion of 1 to 27. He turned them out to grass, but one by one they began to die. A veterinary surgeon made an examination of one of the dead animals and found the lungs badly inflamed and the lining of the stomach peeled off when he scraped it as though it had been cooked with some acid. The dip should have been made in the proportion of 1 to 80.

RELATING TO JUDGES.

A Few Thoughts and Suggestions by an Able Critic.

The well known writer on harness horse affairs, "Columbus," of the Western Horseman, has the following very timely and interesting article in the last number of that excellent journal:

A primary problem in reducing the light harness sport to something like a science and putting it on a permanent basis of administration is the question of presiding judges. From the opening of any race meeting to the close everything rests and depends upon their skill, integrity and fairness of dealing. The public, the association, those who participate, practically all, have to look to them for protection and for the preservation of conditions where each race partakes of the nature of a legitimate contest and not a ridiculous farce. This has been the point of colossal difficulty and the fount source of the greatest scandals that have ever come upon the racing enterprise: the failure of judges and the disaffection of interested parties, and the public as well, with their decisions. It has kept many who otherwise would have gladly entered the field from doing so, and driven many of the most respectable and desirable from it. At the very threshold the system of selecting judges has been wholly one-sided and necessarily unsatisfactory and pernicious. Nobody is consulted but one party, and often a clique at that, or even virtually one single man in control. Judges are exalted, either interested or controllable, if competent, and feeling practically no responsibility but to the appointing power, and caring little or nothing for the approval of any other. And yet from the very nature of the case, and from the provisions for governing races, at least as far as that is concerned coming under the supervision of trotting associations, there should be an equitable distribution and concurrence of action in the selection of those practically having the whole matter, for a time, in their hands.

The judges' office partakes largely of the nature of a referee, and hence judges should be chosen with special reference to the principle commonly regarded in such cases giving equal recognition to all parties interested. There are in this case three parties naturally, and very happily situated to join in, and, together, designate the three presiding officials. There is, first, the member giving the meeting, who has vital interests at stake to be looked after and carefully guarded, and oftentimes not exactly in common with the racing horsemen. Then there are the racing horsemen, whose interests not infrequently clash, not only with each other, but with the member, and are always sedulously to be protected. Then there is the parent association, interested only in protecting the public and preserving the honor and furthering the cause of honest racing, and so eminently qualified to hold the casting vote and to determine in every disputed matter on which side the balance shall fall. It is apparent, then, that each of these three should be a party in forming the bench of judges or referees. With a choice of each in the stand there will be no set of interests not guarded, and little danger that rank injustice will be done in any case.

The only question remaining is a convenient method of securing a representation of each. This should not be regarded an obstacle so great as to deter making the attempt to accomplish an object so vitally important, and, giving themselves to the task, horsemen ought readily to find a solution. A few suggestions in that direction may not be out of the way or presumptuous. First, the member proposing a meeting naturally takes the initiative. After having named a date, let the parent association be notified at once, and, if deemed best, the name of a person to represent the member as a judge be designated, or this may be done later, and with certain prescribed limitations in case so determined. Second, the parent association should proceed to nominate its representative, which might be something after this order: Let there be chosen and put in the hands of the general Secretary of the association a corps of competent men, chosen from districts contiguous to where meetings will be held, from which, when notice of a meeting at any given place and date is received by the general Secretary, he shall at once choose the association's judge, having regard to convenience in distance and expense, as well as peculiar suitability, and notify the member at once of the selection made. If it is regarded a matter of consequence, either the member or association may be given first opportunity of naming its choice. Third, the parties making entries are likewise to proceed to select their representative, which might be accomplished in this wise: In the advertising matter and entry blanks published by the member let the two judges selected be named and a list of such persons furnished by the association as are accessible and eligible to preside at such meeting be also included, from which list choice is to be made by all making entries.

To make certain of securing one not elsewhere or elsewhere engaged, each party making an entry may be requested to vote for first choice, second choice and third choice, a plurality of all votes determining in each instance the party that shall serve, and in the order of their accessibility. Entry blanks may readily be so arranged with blank space for voting, and with names supplied by the general Secretary to be voted from, as to render this comparatively simple, though the most difficult matter in the entire plan. And even if late in their selection, or not until the meeting convenes, no great harm can result, and in case of neglect or failure on the part of those making entries to name an eligible judge, the two already chosen may be authorized to agree upon one from the eligibles named.

But these are matters of detail that could certainly be satisfactorily and fairly adjusted in working out the scheme. The main thing is to secure a fair bench of referees or judges, who are not only competent and reliable, but fairly representative of all the parties that ought to be considered. There would be an advantage of this also in preventing many abuses and impositions that are of general interest to avoid and avert. The association's representative could be furnished by the general Secretary, with all necessary supplies and information to guard against the starting of ringers or expelled and suspended horses or horsemen, and prevent the suppression of time and other violations of rules, sometimes locally encouraged, and would be in a position to aid in enforcing every regulation of the association and report on the same. The public, too, would gain a new confidence and have a higher respect for the decisions of a body so appointed, and every interest of the sport would be thus sustained and fostered.

A Norwegian Story.

A very touching story is told of a horse which lived in the time of the great plague, or black death, that raged over Europe in 1349 and 1350. The plague had reached the province of Thelmarken in Norway, and attacked the little village of Hooten, on the shores of the Mijos Lake. Opposite Hooten, along the shore of the lake, stood the farm of Fornacs, the home of the noble brown horse of the story. There was no church or graveyard in the village, so the people had to be buried at Raodland, another village some miles away over the hills. As one after another of the Hooten villagers succumbed to the plague, the brown horse from Fornacs was harnessed to the sleigh, on which the dead bodies were placed, and driven across the snow to the little churchyard at Raodland. He had to make the journey so frequently that he was soon able to find his way thither without any guidance, and at last there was nobody left who had strength enough to follow him, but the faithful animal would set off for the church by himself, and after the body was buried would wend his way homewards. Day after day the plague raged, and the poor horse got so little rest between his doleful journeys to the graveyard that he had scarcely strength to struggle through the snow, but he always managed to deliver his sad burden to its destination. The time came at last when there was only one man left alive in Hooten. Nor was he to escape the fate of the rest. The plague seized him, and feeling sure that he could not recover, he harnessed the brown horse to the sleigh, then laid himself down in it and died. The horse set out all alone with his last freight for the little churchyard. But he was so exhausted with his constant work that he had not strength to pull his load through the snow, and when he reached the highest hill between Hooten and Raodland one of his snow shoes broke, and he was unable to proceed farther. His neighings for help reached the ears of some Raodland men, who came and rendered assistance which enabled the horse to stagger on to the graveyard. Here the rites of religion were performed over the remains of the last victim to the plague in Hooten. When the ceremony was over the onlookers saw the brown horse wandering round the churchyard, stopping now and then at the graves of friends he had brought to be buried there. When he had visited the last resting place of each, he slowly, and with sorrowful mien, left the enclosure; but instead of taking the road to Hooten, as he used to do, he strayed sadly down to a little hollow among the hills. There he rolled himself down amongst the snow and gently expired. The people of Raodland still point to the hollow in the hillside where the good horse died, anxious that in time to come the noble brown horse of Fornacs shall not be forgotten.

TROTTING METHODS IN RUSSIA.

Geo. J. Fuller Writes an Interesting Letter from the Land of the Czar.

George J. Fuller, the old-time trainer and driver of trotters, who is now in Russia, has written an interesting letter to a friend in this country. It will be remembered that Fuller was placed in charge of the Imperial Stud of Russia about one year ago. The Government established a school for trainers about twelve years ago, and persons desiring to become trainers and drivers must undergo a tutelage of four years. American methods appealed to the Russians and last year they commissioned Frank Caton to select a suitable man in this country for the position, with the result that he decided upon Fuller. In the letter referred to above, Fuller says:

"A century ago or more a Russian nobleman of the name of Orloff founded a horse breeding farm at Krenovoi for the purpose of breeding a distinct type of trotting horses. He met with no inconsiderable success, and at his death bequeathed the entire establishment to the Russian Government. The farm is now known as the Imperial Stud of Russia, and it was here that the native trotter of the country, the Orloff, was produced. The Government enlarged the plant from time to time, undertook the systematic breeding of the heavy draft horses as well as trotters, and to-day the barns on the place cover more than twenty acres of ground and furnish accommodations for 1000 horses.

"The Stud is under the control of military officials, including a general, whose headquarters are at St. Petersburg. At present the Stud employs 270 men to take care of the horses. The stables are built of brick, with walls three feet to four feet thick, while the windows and doors are of double thickness—an admirable and necessary arrangement to keep out the severe cold of winter. During the winter season the horses are kept stabled, but in the spring and summer they are driven out on the steppes in droves, as cattle are herded on the western plains of the United States.

The Orloffs, as a rule, are good individuals, with shapely heads and necks and very heavy tails, which latter are docked so that the ends strike below the hocks. While they do not possess the speed of the American trotter, they are equally as well gaited, and their power of endurance is something marvelous.

"At St. Petersburg I was much impressed with the fairness and system with which the racing was conducted; indeed, the promoters of racing in the United States could, with advantage to the sport, afford to copy from the Russians, as in all track contests absolute fairness is required and exacted.

"After spending two weeks in St. Petersburg, in company with the general in charge of the Imperial Stud, I proceeded to Krenovoi, which is 800 miles southwest of St. Petersburg. We were met at the railway station with the regulation winter conveyance—a low sleigh with three horses hitched abreast, a trotter in the center and a runner on each side. Then commenced the journey to the stud, and I never will forget that trip if I live to be a hundred years old.

"After we were seated in the sleigh and were comfortably wrapped in the fur robes, the driver, who does his teaming standing upright, gave a loud whoop, and we were off. The first jump completely took my breath away. The snow flew in every direction, and as we whizzed around the corners the sleigh would ride on one runner, and I expected every moment to be spilled out and have my neck broken. The driver never ceased his whooping, and, altogether, I think I rode faster on that trip than I ever did before in all my life. When I finally landed at the stud, more dead than alive, I said, 'No more Russian sleigh rides for Uncle George.'

"A Russian race track is a curious thing. It is several tracks in one. First there is a strip of track, just wide enough for one sulky; then a strip of turf, a foot and a half wide and two feet high; then another strip of track, more turf, and so on. This is done that one horse may not interfere with another. So you see fool driving is unknown in Russia. Since I have been here I have had a track built on the American plan, and my classes are instructed on the new track.

"A race meeting is given at Krenovoi every June, and it has been customary for the stud to start horses in some of the races, and for the head trainer to do all the driving, but this year I changed all that and put on the advanced students—an innovation that proved very popular, as out of five starts the Government horses won four moneys and one second. I am very well pleased here, and my employers seem to be satisfied with the way I am managing affairs."

TALK about fads and fashions! The horse market is about as full of them as a millinery store. A few years ago "high steppers" were regarded as abominations, and white-legged horses were always objected to. For a few years back "high steppers," and with as many white legs as possible, have been the "apple of the eye" with fastidious buyers. Now a howl has been raised because President McKinley has bought a pair of carriage horses with white feet! And yet the men talk about the "fuss, feathers and fashion" of the women. After all, it begins to look as if those horse breeders who are content to breed "any old thing" are as likely to hit the "fad" as those who breed "to a purpose."

Breed one Thing or Another.

[The Horseman.]

All sorts of horses are at present high in price and find ready sale. This will probably have to be the next three seasons at least—in 1900, 1901, 1902 and in a lesser degree in 1903. Thereafter the crop foaled in 1899, admittedly larger than that of any of the five preceding years, will reach the market, and a wider range of selection will be afforded buyers. Those who breed mares in 1899 and those who will do so in 1900 will be forced to market the produce when the supply will probably be ample to meet all demands. Buyers will then discriminate keenly and take advantage of everything they find ready to their hands to hammer down prices. They do this work with a will, as everyone knows, and better hands at the game do not exist, as has been proved time and time again. Therefore the wise breeder will see to it that he has no nondescript beasts to sell in the crowded markets that must come. The big, shapely drafter and the handsome carriage horse, the nice, upstanding, swift trotter and pacer will always bring remunerative prices, and of such sorts there never will be an over supply. But one thing or another. Choose one path and follow it religiously. Don't switch from one line to another—grade upward. The man who begins with one breed of horses and then suddenly interposes a violent cross, loses everything he has gained in the first cross and by his own action deliberately kicks down and to pieces all he built before. To breed drafters of weight and quality, you must mate big stallions with big mares—there is no other way that it can be done, and you cannot breed good sellers from great rough, unsound brutes, male or female. Quality sells for just as much in proportion in a drafter as it does in a coach horse. If you are going to breed speed of the road order, breed from parents that possess it—the stallion cannot do it. The mare ought to be as good as the horse. Common farm mares of nondescript character cannot produce roadsters of high quality and speed. If coaching horses are preferred, drop the speed factor as a governing consideration—get the substance, quality and high action, and then as much speed as can be added to the rest. A high acting, big horse will, if he has beauty of conformation, a good head and neck, and the proper rounded lines, sell for a paying price if he cannot do better than a mile in even or eight minutes, so long as he looks proud and well while he is at it. Of course, if he can trot the mile in three minutes and is in every other way as good, he will bring more money—but if he is inferior in conformation the increased rate of speed will not raise his value a nickel. He must have the shape, substance, quality and high action first. The day of specialism is upon us in the horse business. Never did buyers feel like discriminating more keenly than they do now. Just as soon as the supply reaches the point where there are enough horses to go around then they will pick and choose to suit themselves. Therefore the man who breeds his mares in 1900 must be careful or he will come up a loser at the finish. Never were the prospects better for good horses, but they must have special purpose animals, good for one job only. Then they will sell to advantage.

The Old Glory Horse Show Sale.

Our Annual Horse Show Sale, which is held in the great Madison Square Garden, New York, and is a continuation of the National Horse Show, commencing November 20th. The outlook is that it will be the greatest and most successful event of its kind in many years. Palo Alto Farm, in addition to a grand consignment of trotting bred animals, will close out its entire thoroughbred stud. Messrs. Budd Doble and Saml. Gamble have valuable shipments, and arrangements can be made with any of the above parties to bring over additional consignments, if the animals are of the highest class. Almost every star of the New York Speedway has been purchased at the sales of this Company at different times, and, therefore, this sale is particularly propitious for owners having speed, record horses especially. We are advertising the event in Europa more extensively than any sale has ever been, and are guaranteed a large contingent of foreign buyers. Respectfully, FASIG-TIPTON Co.

The Pedigree of Democrat.

Democrat, the American bred two-year-old considered about the best colt of his age now racing in England, is thus written about by W. H. Rowe in the New York Telegraph: Democrat is by Sensation, out of Equality, she by imp. Rayon d'Or, out of Quits. The Rayon d'Or mares are doing nicely at the stud, and their progeny seem to quite uniformly miss the characteristic Rayon d'Or "pain in the temper." Sensation represented the powerful Leamington—Lexington cross upon a Glencoe mare, while Rayon d'Or's dam was out of Glencoe's greatest daughter, the immortal Pocahontas Quits was herself out of Columbia, another daughter of Glencoe.

Democrat is very strongly intensified to Whalabona, or I should perhaps say, to the Waxy—Penelope union, which produced Whalabona and his brothers and sisters. Rayon d'Or's sire, Flageolet, was by Plutus, he by Trumpeter, he by Orlando, son of Touchstone, and Rayon d'Or's dam, Aracuria, was by Ambrose, also a son of Touchstone. Now Touchstone's sire, Camel, was by Whalebone, while Flageolet's dam, La Favorite, was by Monarca, who was himself by The Emperor, he by Defense, son of Whalebone. Sensation's sire, Leamington, was a Faugh-a-Ballagh, he by Sir Hercules, son of Whalebone.

A further study of Democrat's pedigree reveals remarkable intensification, which we can best appreciate by throwing the light of the figura system upon the matter. Quits, Democrat's grandam, was by imp. Eclipse, out of Gaze. Now Eclipse was by Orlando, son of Touchstone, and Gaze was by Bay Middleton, out of Flycatcher, both Bay Middleton and Flycatcher being out of full sisters, the grandam of these sisters being herself a full sister to Whalebone! And we also find that Glencoe's grandam was the identical Waxy (sister to Whalebone) who was the grandam of the full sisters who respectively produced the sire and dam of Gaze. This is a notable intensification of family, as is inevitably the case in close associations of imp. Eclipse, Glencoe and Whalebone, which we find to have done a great deal for the American thoroughbred.

Democrat traces in tail female to the succession of the three mares respectively by Symme's Wildair, imp. Fearnaught and imp. James. This is probably better known as the Maria West family, and this year, as usual, well in evidence with high class winners, Prince of Melbourne, David Garrick and Democrat being a particularly nice trio of youngsters to represent it in a single season. Many good and great race horses and fillies have come from it, and I am minded to, therefore, seize this opportunity to acknowledge and in some degree answer a number of inquiries which I have received in relation to my numbered list of American families. As I have before written in another journal, I do not feel at liberty to publish this list until after the work for which it was compiled is issued, nor do I place too much stress upon the results of the calculations. But I must say I have based my calculations upon the winners of twenty-one races during their history, with a total of 475 winners, and find the seven leading families to be as follows, with the total number of winners furnished by each appended:

The pertinence of my reference to this matter will now become evident when I say that the family of Democrat, David Garrick, Prince of Melbourne, etc., comes eighth on the list with a total of sixteen winners, thus leading all our other so-called "native" tap-roots, the majority of which, in my halief, trace to thoroughly English sources and are to be more correctly termed unidentifiable.

If James R and Foxhall P. Kaene and ex-Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney abandon their breeding farms in Kentucky and locate their studs in the North, there will be an opportunity before many years to test conclusively the respective merits of the North and South as breeding localities. The Keenes, it is said, are negotiating for the famous Brookdale Farm at Red Bank, N. J., which was founded by the late D. D. Withers, and if they obtain the place they will remove their entire stud from Castleton, Ky., where at present they have about 300 head of horses, including some of the most choicely bred mares in the country. Among the stallions at the farm are Kingston, Ornament, Horoscope, Choirister and St. Leonards. The turfmen, it is understood, are anxious to have their breeding establishments nearer to their other racing interests. It is for the same reason, probably, that Mr. Whitney has decided to locate his establishment at Stony Ford, Orange County, N. Y. The latter place is within easy distance of the tracks on the metropolitan circuit, and the owner would have an opportunity to see his famous band of broodmares and stallions, and each year's crop of colts and fillies, without a long tedious trip to the South. Mr. Whitney has entered upon racing in the full spirit of sportsmanship. He has built on his country place, in the Wheatley Hills, L. I., one of the handsomest and most costly racing stables in the world, and already he has about fifty horses there. For his breeding establishment he has secured the best mares and stallions he could buy, without regard to cost, and he has now about seventy-five mares besides Meddler, Plaudit, and other good stallions at La Bella Stud, Kentucky. The racing stable on Long Island is 900 feet long and 36 feet wide, and will, when completed, contain 116 box stalls, most of them 12 by 14 feet. The stable, which is a handsome piece of architectural work, cost about $75,000. Extending around the building there is a winter exercising track.

THE MAILS HAVE BROUGHT US during the past week many congratulatory letters from our readers in regard to the stand taken in these columns on the question of bookmaking at District Fairs, and the making up of district racing programs entirely of harness races. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has no fight to make against the running track or their methods. They are owned by private corporations, managed by gentlemen of ability and conducted in as fair and honest a manner as possible. They furnish during the seven months from October 1st to May 1st a season of racing for good purses and generous stakes that is not equaled in any state in the Union of like population. These tracks are open during a season the greater part of which is entirely unfit for harness contests, and therefore do not interfere with them. But we hold that this long season of continuous racing is enough for the thoroughbreds without having the district programs half given over to them. If they elect to race seven months during the fall and winter and early spring, certainly the harness horse interests, which are many times greater than those of the running horse interests in California, are entitled to the remaining five months. It can be proven by figures that are convincing to any one, that the district associations can run more profitable meetings by devoting their time to harness races than by giving mixed programs, and it will not be claimed by any person who has looked into the matter at all, but that bookmaking on harness events is unpopular with the public, unprofitable to the associations, and generally conducive to dishonest racing. These being facts which are susceptible of proof, we believe it to be for the best interests of all concerned, thoroughbred and harness horse owners alike, that the two kinds of racing be divorced in California as they are in other states. Let the metropolitan tracks be devoted to the runners and the bookmakers from October to May if they want it so, and let the summer months and district tracks be given over to the harness horses. The breeding of the light harness horse has many thousand dollars invested in it, which is seriously jeopardized unless there can be a change from the plan pursued during this and the past few years. It is too great and too noble an industry to be killed by those who have no interest in it except a gambling one. Therefore the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has begun this crusade to restore it to its former position among the great industries of the State, and we are pleased to see that our efforts are meeting with approbation from our readers, and we ask all to enlist with us in the cause, that in 1900 throughout the State of California there will not be a district fair where bookmaking is allowed, and that a grand circuit of harness racing may be held where the tracks will be specially prepared and kept in condition for fast miles at the trot and pace.

THE CHICAGO HORSE MARKET is undoubtedly one of the best in the world, and right now horses are bringing top prices there. For coach and carriage horses, high steppers and fast roadsters there is no place in this country where better prices can be obtained than at the Splan-Newgass sale, which will take place in November next. This well known firm have recently commissioned Mr. Milo Knox, the well known horseman of Haywards as their representative on this Coast, and he is already at work securing a consignment for shipment about November 1st. His consignment will not be very large, but he will endeavor to make it a choice one, and we are certain will bring satisfactory prices at the great sale. Eastern horse owners have already consigned to this sale a large number of high class trotters and pacers, besides some great carriage teams and road horses. It will be remembered that the highest price paid at auction last year in America for a pair of horses was paid at the Splan-Newgass sale, when a pair was sold for $9500. This firm has the reputation of dealing fairly with their patrons and they advertise and boom all the horses consigned to them to the very best advantage. Though they have not yet received a consignment from this State, Mr. Splan writes us that he only wants to get a carload of good horses from California to prove to the breeders here that the Chicago market is as good as any on earth, and that it is the best to sell in, inasmuch as expenses of shipping and keeping are much less than at points further east. Mr. Knox is already promised several head of extra fine ones, and as he will start East November 1st, it would be well for those desiring to ship horses to the great Chicago sale to correspond with him immediately. His address is Haywards, Cal., or word can be sent to him here in San Francisco, care of this office. The kinds of horses desired are trotters and pacers with fast records, stylish road horses with speed, and high steppers.

FAILURES ARE OFTEN MADE in the management of race meetings at District fairs because the Secretary and the Directors have no acquaintance with racing and the manner of conducting a meeting. A live Secretary should be acquainted with the rules and should possess a knowledge of horses in training that will enable him to arrange a list of purses that will fill. He should keep himself posted in regard to the horses that are getting new records or reducing old ones, and should know their whereabouts and those of their owners and trainers. Judicious advertising pays in getting up a race meeting. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN is ready at any time to answer any questions that Secretaries may send in, and will gladly furnish any information that it may possess which will aid Secretaries in making up their programs and selecting dates for next year. The California Circuit for 1900 will be a season of grand racing if the proper management is had. The time to commence getting ready for it is right now. Every district board in the State should know by January 1st whether it will give a meeting in 1900 or not, and dates should be claimed then.

RUMOR HAS IT that the Ingleside track will soon be open again and that the Pacific Coast Jockey Club will be permitted to hold racing there as before, with no interference from the authorities. The talk is that the ordinance against betting on speed contests will be repealed or amended and that in all probability an agreement will be reached by which the racing season will be shortened in California next year. There is no doubt but this could be done with profit to all concerned. Every horseman knows that seven months of racing means cheap and poor contests during the opening and closing months. For its population there is no city in the world that will support racing as well as San Francisco does, but it cannot stand seven or eight months of it. One of the peculiar conditions of affairs here is that betting on horse racing has been outlawed, while wagering and pool selling on prize fights and dog racing goes merrily on without let or hindrance. There are laws against them all, but for some reason the dogs and "pugs" get what the sports call the "overlook."

THE LATEST NEWS FROM FRESNO is to the effect that the fair and race meeting which opens there on Monday next gives every promise of being a grand success. Secretary A. J. Hudson, who is enthusiastic and energetic, two very necessary qualities in a Secretary, has succeeded in getting the people of his county imbued with the same spirit, and all are at work with the sole intent to make the Fresno meeting one of the best ever held in the State. The harness program is an excellent one, and all the best horses seen on the circuit this year are there ready to compete for the big purses offered. There will be sixteen overnight purses offered for the thoroughbreds, and a special train will convey many horses from this section down to the raisin country to-day. The agricultural and viticultural display promises to be something extra good at Fresno, and in fact, the city will be well worth a visit during the coming week.

CHAS. A. WILLIS, the well known writer on harness horse affairs and ex-Secretary of the New York Driving Club, will act as starter for the harness races at the Los Angeles meeting. "The Trotter and Pacer" recently contained the following anent Mr. Willis, departure for this Coast: "Charles A. Willis, founder of the journal of which this paper is the successor, has severed his connection with this city and determined to make a hazard of new fortunes on the far Pacific slope. For upwards of a quarter of a century Mr. Willis, as breeder, road driver, literateur, and track official, has been identified with the interests of light harness sport in this city and vicinity, and all the great generation of men and horses now gone or "lagging superfluous on the stage" were contemporaneous with the period of his activity in turf affairs. His influence has been felt in the turf legislation of the past, and uniformly for wise and beneficent reforms, and although always a positive man, with deep convictions on all things and the courage to express himself fearlessly, he leaves this community with the firm regard of a very large circle of warm friends and the hostility of an inconsiderate element. We commend him to the esteem of the brethren "over the range," as a gentleman worthy of their highest confidence, and calculated to subserve the very best ends of the sport in any community in which his lines may be cast.

THE PIPE DREAM of the reporters of the daily press, otherwise known as the Great War of the Race Tracks, is about to end before the first gun is fired. For weeks we have been regaled with stories of threats and challenges, of actual war and rumors of war, until we had come to believe that the officers of our two jockey clubs had quit speaking as they passed, and never sat down to eat without a galling gun on either side and a lookout at every door and window. But report comes as we go to press that the white winged dove of peace is about to spread her wings over the scene, that the red clay calumet is to be filled with the "Harmony" brand, and passed round the circle from Oakland to Ingleside, down to Tanforan and back again. Messrs. Rees and Schulte, the two Peace Commissioners from the American Turf Congress are in town and after a little quiet talk have, it is said, arranged matters so that there will be "no scrap." And so the tomahawk is to be buried, peace officially declared, and the three racing associations will resume cordial relations, and express to one another assurances of their most distinguished consideration. The congregation will please rise and sing:

"Blest be the tie that binds Our hearts in friendly love."

THE LAST DAY of the Louisville meeting was a pretty good one for the California horses. Monterey won his first race of the year trotting to his mark of 2:09 1/2 in the second and last heat. Phoebe Childers also won her first race on the Grand Circuit. Little Thorne was favorite in the 2:09 pace but was last in the summary. The complete record of the meeting will be found on another page.

SECRETARY LEWIS THORNE, of Los Angeles, will be at the Fresno meeting next week to see the horsemen and arrange for extra races at the Los Angeles meeting.

BORALMA WON THE FUTURITY.

Idolita Wins Two Heats, But is Distanced in the Last.

The feature of the opening day at Lexington Ky., was the $16,000 Futurity, for three-year-old trotters. It took six heats to decide the race. Boralma was the favorite in the opening, selling for $100 against the field $75. Idolita won the first two heats in easy fashion. The favorite took the third heat in a brush with The Bondsman, and was second to Extacy in a head finish in the fastest heat of the race, the filly nipping Boralma at the wire. The half was trotted in 1:04 1/2, a wonderful performance for a three-year-old. In the fifth Extacy set a hot pace for the five-eighths mile and then broke, Boralma winning easily. It was the same in the sixth, except that the filly kept pace to the distance then broke, letting Boralma in. Boralma, Extacy and Idolita were the only starters in the last heat. Idolita was distanced, leaving first and third money to Boralma. Boralma was bought the night previous by Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, for $17,000 on condition of winning the Futurity. He presented $3000 to James Macey, Boralma's driver. Dr. T. C. McCoy of Kirkwood, Del., gave Macey $1000. The summary:

LORD VINOENT THE WINNER.

Charley Doble Drives Him to Victory in the Transylvania.

LExINGTON (Ky.), October 5.—The $10,000 Transylvania stakes to-day, which attracted the attention of horsemen all over the continent and in which it seemed a moral certainty that Peter the Great could not be beaten, was one of the greatest surprises ever witnessed in Kentucky.

They were sent on the fourth score with Charlie Herr in the lead. "Look at Peter," murmured the crowd as he took the lead on the first turn. At the quarter Peter still led, with Charlie Herr half a length away and Hallie Rocket third.

"Peter the Great!" yelled the crowd, and coming easily he won by a length from Charlie Herr, whose driver had used his whip from the half pole. "It's all over," said the plungers, breaking for the betting shed to hedge.

The betting did not change for the third heat, but there were few takers for the field. Peter began his old race when they were sent away the third time. At the quarter he led Charlie Herr, who was a length in front of Kingmond.

The betting shifted to $50 for Peter and $65 for the field Kingmond was away first, with Peter second, in the fourth heat, and Herr close up. Before reaching the quarter Kingmond and Herr left their feet and Peter went on two lengths before Lord Vincent.

Peter sold for $50 and the field for $100 for the next heat. The favorite was done for, however, being tired out. Herr and Peter fought to the head of the stretch. Here Tudor Chimes and Kingmond joined in. Vincent had left his feet at the half and was out of it.

Vincent sold for $50 and the field for $25 for the last heat. They were sent away with Vincent in the lead. Peter was too tired to keep the pace and the finish was a procession, with Vincent, Kingmond and Peter finishing in the order named.

The betting on the Transylvania was sensational. Two of the largest pools ever sold on trotting races were auctioned off. The first was just after the third heat, when Kingmond and Peter the Great trotted to a head finish.

EDDIE JONES is another boy who has been compelled to take an enforced rest. Boils have broken out all over his body and he has been unable to ride during the past week.

An English paper says: "It is indeed time that a commission should be instituted to inquire into the cause of the degeneracy of the English thoroughbred, for that it amounts to this is certain, even in the face of our having at this moment a Flying Fox to boast of. With upward of three thousand foals bred this year, and more than this number of race horses in training, we certainly ought to have more than one high class representative thoroughbred running. Yet now Cyllene is done with Flying Fox stands entirely alone as our one and only high type of race horse. To breed armies of Uglys, who stand still at the end of five furlongs, is to make matters worse and worse; they are mere 'gsmbling implementa' and in no way 'improve the breed,' which is the supposed object the turf has in view. Even the successful American does not help us here, as they have yet to show us the quality of stamina in their horses. They, however, heat us at the style of racing we have adopted since the introduction of enclosed meetings, inasmuch as both their horses and jockeys know how to make the best of their way home. Their horses are, moreover, a vast deal more hardy than ours, and stand much more work, being for the most part quite indifferent as to the state of the ground, which so entirely demoralizes our own frail and, for the most part, unsound lot."

CONTRA COSTA COUNTY FAIR.

A Profitable Meeting Held at the Little Town of Concord Last Week.

Concord, Contra Costa county, is a little town of not more than a hundred and fifty population, yet a fair and race meeting was held there last week which, in point of attendance and interest shown, puts many of the larger districts to the blush. The meeting began on Tuesday and lasted five days. On Friday there were at least two thousand people on the grounds, and the attendance was good throughout the week.

THE RACES ARE AS FOLLOWS:

Sulky Notes.

FRESNO meeting opens Monday.

HOLLISTER'S fair will begin Tuesday.

MISS MARGARET 2:11½ by Direct is reported dead.

ANACONDA is the eighth pacer to enter the 2:04 list.

UKIAH is holding a fair this week. It closes to-day.

SEARCHLIGHT 2:02 is good for two minutes by another year.

DIRECTLY 2:03½ goes to the Fasig-Tipton auction ring in November.

THE Oakwood Park sale shows an improvement in the price of road horses.

DIRECTUM KELLY will be in the stud next season at East View Farm, New York.

NEERETTA 2:11½ is the fastest four-year-old mare that has taken a new trotting record this year.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Club is making great preparations for its meeting October 21st.

AN effort will be made to bring Joe Patchen, John R. Gentry and Anaconda to this city for a race.

TOM MARSH will have a sister to Klatawab 2:05½, at the races next year. She is a trotter and is said to be good.

THERE will be plenty of overnight races for trotters and pacers at the Hollister Fair with purses from $125 to $200.

OLD PLUNKET won a race at the Concord Fair. His best mile was in 2:22, which is about equal to 2:17 over a good track.

J. B. STETSON has located permanently at Portland, Oregon, and will open a public training stable at the Irvington track.

THERE will be between thirty and forty district fair meetings in California next year, and at very few will book betting be allowed.

THIS is one of the poorest seasons Ed Geers ever had with the Villaga Farm horses, The Abbot alone being a high class race horse for him.

It was not Dr. Weldon but Albert Walden who drove the stallion Dava Ryan to his reduced record of 2:13 at Stockton during the meeting there.

A TURF scribe now says that the 2:20½ recently made by Trinket at Redsville is the fastest mile ever trotted by a twenty-four-year-old horse.

It is said Geers will winter again at Salme. He ought to come out to Pleasanton that he may learn what advantage a real good winter track is.

SIDNEY 2:19½ now has three in the 2:10 list, Lena N. 2:05½, Monterey 2:09½ and the gelding Dr. Leek, who last week took a record of 2:09½.

FIVE trotting stallions have beaten 2:08 this season to date, namely, Bingen 2:06½, Cresceus 2:07½, Peter the Great 2:07½, Fred Kohl 2:07½ and Jube 2:07½.

JO CUCIELLO has won several races over on the Nevada circuit this year with the Richelieu stable's horses. Mend Newman is the best winner of the string.

VENDOME STOCK FARM'S broodmare Linda Oak by Guy Wilkes is in the great broodmare list. She is the dam of Dr. Fressa 2:14 and Dr. Fressa's Sister 2:25½.

JOE PATCHEN and John R. Gentry are at Los Angeles and will start for a big purse during the meeting. Anaconda will be there in time to start in the same race.

THE new stalls at the Pleasanton track will be ready for occupancy by November 1st. Applications for the same should be addressed to C. B. Charlesworth, Secretary.

MISS EDITH, by Edgewood, dam by Mambrino King, in her first start forced a horse out three trips from 2:09 to 2:12. Her dam produced the recent winner Jersey Mac 2:09½.

THE Stockton Driving Club will probably not give the meeting there next year. The District Association will give the fair and the race meeting may be given by other parties.

TWO daughters of Eclectic, full brother to Arion 2:07½, showed their ability to beat 2:30 at the Concord Fair last week. They are the only two of his products that we ever heard of being trained.

THE Indianapolis meeting furnished two new 2:10 trotters. Dr. Leek, ch g, by Sidney, dam by Buccaneer, reduced his record from 2:10½ to 2:09½, and Bonnatella reduced her record from 2:10½ to 2:10.

SENATOR ROSE 2:18, bred at Los Angeles by the late L. J. Rose, and by Sultan, out of Georgiana (dam of La Grange 2:23½), by Overman, is siring speed. His daughter Bertha Lea is winning races on the mile tracks and now carries a record of 2:13½. Another daughter, Viola, trotted in 2:14½ as a three-year-old, and at Chillicothe there is a three-year-old filly that has paced a half in 1:03½ to a 75-pound sulky.

A HANDSOME black mare so lame that she could not put one foot to the ground from the effects of a kick from another horse, sold in the auction ring in this city last Thursday for $85. Horses are horses for fair.

DON'T miss the Los Angeles meeting. It will be the greatest racing carnival ever held in California. Joe Patchen, John R. Gentry and Anaconda will undoubtedly pace the fastest race ever seen in California.

HAL B, the pacer that was thought to have a chance at the championship, is about broken down. It's the paca that kills, and horses cannot go heat after heat below 2:10 at trot or paca without using up lots of blood, bone and tissue.

CHEHALIS 2:04½ has at last won a race this year. It was the free-for-all at the half-mile track at Tanton and the hopped stallion stepped three heats in 2:11, 2:11, 2:09. The last mile breaks the track record of 2:10½ made by Joe Patchen in 1897.

POINDEXTER, a four-year-old bay gelding, by Abbotsford 2:19½, in training at Lexington, Ky, has developed into a sensational trotter. He was worked first in May, and on September 23rd trotted the Lexington track in 2:14, last quarter in 31½ seconds.

HELENA 2:11½ will be in the great broodmare list before the close of next season's racing. She is already the dam of Wild Nutting 2:13, and her four-year-old filly Hyits, sold East last year, is very fast, but will not be started until 1900. Ayita is by Dexter Prince.

AT Allentown, Pa., the past week, the drivers drew their own positions. A basket suspended from a pulley in the judges' stand was raised and lowered when the teamsters came to weigh in and get the numbers. No time was lost and everybody was contented.

IN recognition of the good work done by W. H. Clark in building the finest track on which a trotting meeting has ever been held, Metropolitan horsemen and road riders propose giving to him a testimonial in the form of a silver dinner service to cost about $2000.

THE market for carriage horses never was in the history of the trade in North America in quite so satisfactory a condition as at this day. The supply comes very far short of meeting the demand, and week after week buyers have to remain content with half-filled orders.

EVERY driver at the Indianapolis State Fair races last week drove to win every heat, as they knew each race ended in the fifth. Every race except one was finished before the fifth, and this one was completed in the fifth. No one ever saw better racing.—Western Horsemen.

It is probable that McKinney will make the season of 1900 at Stockton. C. A. Durfee has so many mares in that vicinity already booked to his great horse that he has concluded to take him there. The excellent pasture that can be had in that vicinity is another inducement.

A VAPOUR bath for horses is the recent invention of a genius. It is a portable arrangement made of cloth, and there is an aperture through which the horse's head is kept cool during the bath. As a cure for muscular rheumatism and colds the steam bath is doubtless very efficacious.

ONE of the highest stepping fast horses owned in California is Our Jack 2:13½, by Steinway, owned by W. J. Irvine, of Sacramento. Our Jack can lift his knees like a hackney when at a 2:30 gait, and is one of the best road horses driven in the capital city. He is a very handsome horse as well.

P. S. MANN has sold to Charles Simpson of Pendleton, Oregon, the broodmare Minnie by Rockwood, dam Sally M., by Oregon Pathfinder. Minnie is the dam of Trumont 2:21½, while Sally M. is the dam of Pathmont 2:09½, and Altao 2:09½, and the grandam of Belle Frazier 2:14, Bell Air 2:14 and Atlas 2:15½.

THE Dubuque bobble has burst and there will be no meeting over that track next year. The meeting this year was probably successful in a financial way, but there was too much of the gambling flavor about it, and what with the prize fights every evening and other so-called sports, it left a bad taste in the mouths of the Iowans.

THE ABBOT won his tenth straight race for this year during the Lexington meeting this week. He acted badly in the first two heats, bolting across the track at the head of the stretch each time. These heats were won by Tommy Britton in 2:07½ and 2:09. The Abbot won the next three in 2:07½, 2:08½ and 2:10½. Cresceus was third.

ONE of the best two-year-old performances of the year is that of the brown filly Fereno, which won the two-year-old race at Evansville, Ind., in 2:23½, 2:20½. This filly is by Moko, a brother to Bumps 2:04½, dam Chestnut Belle (dam of Lady McGregor 2:24), by Red Wilkes, second dam Rosa Sprague (dam of McKinney 2:11½) by Gov. Sprague 2:20½.

THE well-known trainer and driver, John Kinney, has engaged with Penn Valley Farm, Morrisville, Pa., the home of Oakland Baron, 2:09½, and other high-class horses owned by Mr. Edward Winters. During the present year Mr. Kinney has driven Ace 2:05½ to his record; also Latah S. 2:11½, Ruby 2:11½ and Timbrel 2:11½, a very creditable showing.

THE initial meeting of the Empire City Trotting Club proved to be such a successful one that the club has decided to hold another light-harness meeting this month. The dates as arranged are October 24, 25, 26 and 27, and three races at mile heats and a dash race each day will make up the program. The meeting will follow the one at Parkway. Mr. Clark and the other members of the association will give another trial to the mile dash races, which at the initial meeting did not fill and were consequently called off.

PHILADELPHIA is one of the few large cities in the country which is without a speedway for the light harness brigade. Few cities can boast of as many fast roadsters, and yet there is absolutely no place where horsemen can go to speed their horses, unless it be to some of the race tracks. An earnest effort will be made to secure a speedway by the horsemen of that city this winter.

BYRON ECKENBRECHER bought the handsome mare Chittwee, by Charles Derby, out of Eta G., by Guy Wilkes; second dam by Almont 33, third dam by Brignoli, at the Oakwood Park sale last Thursday. Her second and third dams are both producers of speed, and the mare herself is a fine individual with a nice way of going, but has never been worked for speed. She will be bred to McKinney in February and then put in training.

A MATCH for $500 is being arranged between the pacer Dudley 2:14 and the trotter Jack W. 2:12½, to come off over the track at Enreka, Homholdt county. Dudley is the property of B. A. McNeill, of Robnerville, and Jack W. is owned by Loewenthal and O'amer of Eureka. Just when the contest will be held is not yet known, but it will be some time during the present month. Henry Haas will drive Jack W. and Will Johnson hold the lines over the pacing son of Anteros.

IN its report of the 2:20 trot at Louisville an Eastern paper says: The greatest surprise of the day was the defeat of the California stallion, Owyhee, in the 2:20 class, trotting, by Valpa. Owyhee was a favorite for this race at odds of 5 to 3 over the field. In the opening heat Owyhee broke, but in the second heat he set sail in earnest and forced Valpa down to the half in 1:05. Hera Roy Miller increased the clip, and stepped the daughter of Daiknight the third quarter in 0:31, which was too much for the Californian, who surrendered the race.

LEAD, that took a record of 2:24½ recently, is probably the first horse with five producing dams to take a standard record. She hails from Wm. Simpson's Farm, where the collection of broodmares is made up of matrons representing the greatest producers in the world. Lead is five years old and by Hammer, the sire of Bouncer 2:09, dam Nominette, the first producing daughter of Strangar's son, Nominee 2:17½; second dam Net Medium, a grand producer, by Happy Medium; third dam Net, a great producer, by Frank Patchen; fourth dam Lady Dutchman 2:40, a producer, and fifth dam Phoebe, a producer.

RICHARD CROKER, the Tammsny chief, has purchased the chestnut trotter Chanty 2:13½, and will drive the white-faced gelding on the road. Chanty was one of the best trotters in his class in the Grand Circuit of 1898, having beaten some of the fastest horses in training. He is by Guy Wilkes 2:15½, out of Chantilly, by Nutwood 2:18½, and she out of Crepon, by Princes. He was bred by William Corbett of San Mateo, and was foaled in 1894, so that he is now in his five-year-old form. His record was made as a four-year-old. James Hanley, a wealthy brewer of Providence, was the former owner of Chanty.

MCHENRY drove in fifty-eight races this year on the Grand Circuit and won $28,312. He won seventeen races. Gears drove forty-nine races, won nineteen, and secured $23,933 of the money. Marsh won five out of fourteen races and secured $18,961. Snow won eight races out of twenty-six starts, and $14,300. Spear started in thirty-four races, won three and captured $14,243. Kelly won one race and $10,056 in twenty-six starts. O-har drivers that won more than $5000 are Dickerson, McCarthy, Doble, Hudson, Birch, Ketchum and Titer. Eleven other drivers won $4000 and over, while forty-six others won between $1000 and $5000.

WHEN James Hanley's hopped pacer Prince Alert won his remarkable race at Bethlehem, Pa., a few days ago, the report came from there stating that the owner of the horse believed he could beat Anaconda 2:03½, and had offered to match him against the Californian for $5000 a side. James Butler, the well known breeder and turfman of New York, writes to The Sun that he is willing to back Anaconda against Prince Alert for $5000 a side, the horses to pace over the Lexington track during the coming meeting of the Kentucky Breeders' Association. Mr. Butler's horse and money are ready, and a race should be arranged if the admirers of Prince Alert have not changed their views.—N. Y. Sun.

THE world's record for one mile to wagon was broken September 27th, at Louisville, by Bumps, a brown gelding, by Baron Wilkes, dam Queen Ethel, by Strathmore. The new record is 2:03½, one-half second better than the previous record made one year ago at Joliet, Ill., by Joe Patchen. Bumps is owned by G. C. K. Billings, President of the Chicago Gas Company. The conditions were not especially favorable. The word was given after the first scoring and Bumps turned the first quarter in 0:30 and the half in 1:00. A runner started in at the half and another at the three-quarters, which was in 1:31. Coming down the stretch Bumps was tiring, but was not touched with the whip until nearing the wire. As the wire was passed in 2:03½ thousands were on their feet cheering wildly. Bumps was driven by W. S. Snow, of Buffalo.

THE amazing number of derelicts seen in the racing stream of 1899 would naturally make one stop and wonder whence comes the cause, if it were not for the fact that everyone knows that no animate object can stand the pace and that the number of sore trotters and crippled campaigners will have even greater in the future than it is now if the present system of long drawn out races continues, says the Stock Farm. Many trotters and pacers that were early in the season fighting out seven and eight heat races are now hors de combat, and is it strange? Is it reasonable to expect flesh and blood to stand such a strain? With halves in 1:03 or better and quarters in 30½ seconds an every day occurrence, how can it be otherwise than a collapse of tissue and a general giving out? Horses are not made of iron, and they cannot be expected to go six heats a week for twelve weeks at top speed and come out unscathed. It is equivalent to trotting or pacing seventy-two races in the short season. It is utter folly, and the pace will cause a change if nothing else does. Already this season one sees the result, and to-day races are being won by fresh horses, or else the affair becomes merely the survival of the fittest instead of a contest of speed.

path annually taken by the hawks on their way from their winter resorts, and this year Mr. White, the party in question, is reported to have killed large numbers of hawks of all kinds. If Mr. White and his kindred spirits would devote themselves solely to the sharp-shinned hawks that are so destructive to game and chickens, they would be doing some real good to the cause of game protection; but to ruthlessly destroy any hawk that is flying over, just because it is a hawk and not protected by law, is an outrage from the naturalist's and humanitarian's point of view.

The latter half of the present century has seen the game supply of the whole universe practically destroyed. Steamships have brought distant lands into close connection, and it is now possible to make a schedule by which one can girdle the earth in a given number of days. Hunting trips to India, South Africa and North America are no longer serious undertakings for the big game hunters of Eozland and other European countries. In the old days of sailing ships it was mere guess work as to when one would arrive at one's destination; now it is done according to schedule, with only a small margin in the shape of an hour or two to work upon. Rapid and economical transportation, together with the vast improvement in sporting arms and ammunition, has done its work, and no big game hunter of the future will ever find it worth his while to try and "beat the record." South Africa for the most part has been hunted to death, and now the game has to be sought in the most unhealthy parts of the most unhealthy section. Once there, the hunter is more liable to catch the fever than he is to catch an elephant or a lion. In India there are still, as in South Africa, certain parts where good tiger shooting can be had, and where buffalo, an animal widely different from our American hison, can still be found in fair numbers. But all such parts are extremely difficult of access; hence their condition to-day.

In our own country, civilization has marched forward so rapidly, that it has more than seconded the efforts of the game hunter in destroying the wild animals that roamed at will over the larger part of this continent fifty years ago. Cattle ranches and vast sheep farms now spread over the vast prairies and fertile valleys where once wandered countless herds of buffalo and lordly elk. The buffalo and the elk performed their duty in the shape of providing food for the warring tribes of Indians who quarreled among themselves and hunted whenever they were not quarreling. Cattle and sheep have taken the place of the buffalo and the elk, and perform their part in providing beefsteaks and mutton chops for the white man. Tracks of steel laid from the Atlantic to the Pacific have taken the place of the old-time trails across the continent, and it is not a week's trip from New York to San Francisco nowadays. Is there any wonder, then, with the population increased some seven or eight times, and with the marked improvement in arms and ammunition, that big game is a scarce article?

The collecting of specimens, either of birds or beasts, is an interesting pursuit, and one calculated to pass many a pleasant hour for the lover of natural history. It is not the gathering in of specimens that pleases, that is a mere matter of routine, although there is more or less excitement in the chase of some bird that is a rare visitor or that is in extra fine plumage. The making of "skins" is the real work that gives more pleasure than anything else in the collecting line, and it is no easy matter to make a good and presentable looking "skin." To mount a bird requires much time and too often, especially with amateurs, results in a distorted representation of the real thing. A "skin," that is, the skin of a bird, stuffed with cotton, and looking for all the world like a dead bird in the flesh, is the easiest method of preserving the skin. It is suitable for handling and examining, something that cannot always be said about stuffed birds. There is also another point in favor of preserving the skin in this fashion; they can always be relaxed and mounted by an artist, if so desired.

It is contrary to the law to kill any insectivorous birds in many States in the Union, but the collector seldom troubles about the law, because he does not feel that he is doing any wrong in just getting a specimen here and there. With his little collector's gun in his pocket (for such a weapon can be carried in the pocket when taken apart), he saunters through the woods and picks up a specimen when he can. He breaks the law, it is true, and therefore he has to be careful where he goes. Thus he is robbed of the chief pleasure of his pursuit, for he knows he is doing wrong, and cannot openly exhibit his game, small as it is. In one of the Eastern States recently a minister was arrested and fined for shooting game birds out of season, he pleaded in defence that he was collecting specimens. Permission was refused, and properly too, a noted collector in Oregon a few weeks ago to kill certain birds out of season. In England they have a plan to obviate this. A collector of specimens can, on making his object known to a magistrate, get a permit to secure specimens and eggs of birds to a limited amount. If he exceeds the limit he loses his permit and cannot get another. For that reason, as well as for the reason that he is not out for slaughter, the collector goes carefully, and does precisely no harm while pursuing his hobby.

The Fly-Casters.

The medal contests of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club for the season of 1899 practically closed with the re-entry casting last Saturday and Sunday, September 30th and October 1st.

The award of club medals will be as follows: Long distance—Championship medal, W. D. Mansfield. First class medal, A. E. Lovett. Second class medal, T. W. Brotherton. Accuracy—Championship medal, C. G. Young. First class medal, Ches. Huyck. (E. H. Reed with the highest score in the first class in accuracy on Saturday and Char. Huyck with the best score in the accuracy first class on Sunday, cast off last Sunday for the first class accuracy medal. A tie resulted in the first trial, in the succeeding trial Huyck was the winner by a small margin). Delicacy—Championship medal, W. D. Mansfield and C. G. Young. First class medal, H. F. Muller and A. E. Lovett. Lure casting—Championship medal, W. D. Mansfield and F. W. Brotherton.

W. D. Mansfield is the winner of the grand average medal scoring a total of 496 points over the next highest contestant.

T. W. Brotherton, on improvement in long distance, won the Smyth medal which was to be awarded to the fly-caster showing the greatest improvement in any one of the fly-casting events. The race between Brotherton and E. Everett for this trophy was a close one. At the time the classification scores were completed, it seemed almost certain that Everett would win, but the wonderful strides made by Brotherton in long distance during the last five contests raised his average improvement in long distance over twenty-four feet. Everett's average improvement was about sixteen feet.

The longest cast made during the season of 1899 is the cast of W. D. Mansfield, 133 feet, which now stands as the world's record.

H. F. Muller and A. E. Lovett will cast off for the first-class delicacy medal next Saturday.

The regular monthly meeting of the club was held at the rooms of the Fish Commission, Mills Building, Tuesday, October 3, 1899. A table, showing the complete scores of the season, and the standing of the members in the various contests, was presented and the character end value of the medals awarded were determined. W. L. Hewson and C. C. Stratton were elected to membership in the club, the limit number of names, one hundred, is now inscribed on the rolls. The club is now in a prosperous financial condition.

The results of the re-entry casting last week are as follows: SATURDAY—Re-entries. Stow Lake, September 30, 1899. Wind southwest. Weather mild.

Table with 4 columns (1, 2, 3, 4) and rows for participants: Battu, H., Everett, E., Lovett, A. E., Lovett, A. E., Mansfield, W. D., Mansfield, W. D., Young, C. G., Young, C. G., Reed, F. H.

The Capzoni Club Sunday enjoyed a pleasant outing trip on the Marin ocean shore. The fishermen left the Sausalito train at Manzanita station and were driven over the picturesque hills and along the winding road to the beach where camp was pitched and surf fishing was indulged in. A fine catch of sea trout rewarded the anglers. On their return a brief stop was made at Tamalpais lagoon for the purpose of trolling for striped bass, the fish were coy and would not respond to the efforts of the fishers.

The Capzoni's usually have a side diversion as a part of the day's program, on this occasion Ed Drake was posted on the style of "fall pants for gents" The effect was unique and striking. Mr. Drake luckily had a long ulster which he wore carefull on the return trip.

Among those present were P. B. Bekeart, T. J. Craig, Dr. E. N. Short, H. Shaw, W. McCord, G. T. McCord, Ed Drake, A. Norrene, T. Judd, Ed Burrel and Jimmy Bryan of New York.

The State Board of Fish Commissioners has received word from Superintendent Lambson of the United States Fish Commission station on the McCloud river at Baird that the collection of salmon eggs from the summer run closed last week with a total take of 6,500,000 eggs, and that he had received instructions from the department at Washington to deliver 4,000,000 of these eggs to the State Commission. One million will be hatched at the Eel river hatchery in Humboldt county and liberated in Eel river, end 3,000,000 will be hatched at the Sisson station and liberated in the Sacramento. The take of eggs at Baird is only about half as large as the take last year. This decrease is supposed to be due to the low stage of water in the Sacramento river, owing to the light snowfall in the mountains.

A southern angler's style of cooking freshly caught trout is the following: "First catch your trout, though in the meantime, have a good fire going on the bank of the stream so that you can roast a potato in the embers. Dress your trout before the life is out of it, dip in cold spring water until it is cold. Put a rasher of bacon inside it, with butter, pepper and salt, inclose in a green corn shuck; from which the roasting ear has just been taken, tie up, open the embers, deposit the shuck and fish, cover up with hot embers and live coals, and by and by you have a dish of fish that is said to be fit for a Lucullus."

Anglers at Benecia and Crockett have been catching many bass during the week. San Leandro bay and the estuary have not offered many inducements to striped bass fishermen recently. Some fish have been caught in the Throckmorton lagoon also.

Illegal fishermen are having sad experiences these days. One Salvadoro Rappo, arrested by Deputy Davis, was fined $200 by a Suisun justice on Tuesday and is now serving 100 days in jail to save paying the fine.

Eel river fishing is improving. The fish are commencing to run in numbers and are of larger size. Last Saturday John Buller caught two fish weighing twelve and twenty-one pounds respectively.

At the club house of the Petaluma Sportsmen's Club, on Petaluma creek, J. T. Studdert and Frank Zrtman recently caught a number of striped bass, one of them a four pounder.

Bay fishing is first class, many large catches of rock fish, tom cod and smelt are made along the Marin shores and at the railroad wharves.

John Siebe returned during the week from Verdi, angling in the Truckee is still good, but the fish are generally small

THE FARM.

Methods of a Mutton Maker.

Mr. H. M. Kirkpatrick of Wyandotte county, Kansas, a successful grower of mutton sheep, in an article requested by Secretary F. D. Cohn of the Kansas Board of Agriculture and published in "The Modern Sheep" makes some suggestions that should prove practically helpful to those engaged in the same line of business as to their care, etc. He says in part:

Sheep require no expensive shelter; a dry place and protection from the force of storms an open roof that will turn the rain is all that is required. Nature has provided the covering for their bodies that protects from wind and cold. Sheep will not lie down in mud, and no matter how warm and commodious your barn, unless clean and dry, they will seek a knoll or dry spot of earth, no matter how fierce the storm. So, when we say a dry place for them to stand or lie down, as nature suggests, that covers the requirements for shelter. Confining them to inclosures is less difficult than is generally supposed. I never knew a sheep to attempt jumping a barbed wire. It is a common mistake to build fences too high, and not low or close enough. I believe a flock of sheep that have never been taught to climb or creep can be successfully restrained with four barbed wires, properly strung and kept taut.

While sheep require but inexpensive winter quarters, their protection from the heat and flies in summer is a matter of great importance. This opinion may not be generally held, but I consider a cool shade, a cool dark place for them in summer, of more value than the most expensive barn. If you have a thicket of brush or wooded spot especially if well drained, save it—if you contemplate ever raising sheep.

The price of one good ewe in 200 will buy bella enough to amply protect that many ewes from the depredations of both dogs and wolves. Up to four years ago we had more or less trouble every year from both dogs and wolves, notwithstanding we live within the shades of the smoke of a great city. We belled 50 per cent. of our ewes, later 75 per cent., and have never known of any loss or an attempted attack.

Stagnant water is the best vehicle for conveying the parasites that infest the sheep. If you have not an abundant supply of clear, pure water, easy of access for sheep, we hasten to advise you not to attempt sheep raising.

Low, marshy or spongy land is an abomination to the flockmaster.

You have heard that sheep are great scavengers; that they will rid your farm of weeds—and you will probably have an abundance of this sort of feed. They are great scavengers, and will clear your farm of weeds if you give them time and opportunity, but they will not thrive and increase two-fold and pay your grocery bills four times a year on weeds, herbs and fence corners.

Sheep, as well as other livestock, love a greater variety of feed than they usually get; but sheep especially are fond of change and variety, even unto apparent fickleness. They adapt themselves quickly to a change of conditions, and no matter how luxuriant the pasture, they will leave it daily and frequently to nip the sprouts and eat the weeds; in fact, I have sometimes thought that the more good grass they eat the more noxious and bitter weeds they will consume. Thus, by changing them to different fields, by turning them, especially the lambs, into the corn fields after you have laid them by, or into the clearing when the sprouts are young and tender, they will thrive and wax fat; and, unless the size of your farm is greatly in excess of the size of your flock, two blades of grass will grow where one grew before, and you will have to mark the price of your land up in order to keep it.

The profits will be, or should be, 100 per cent., with a fighting chance for more. The fleece always has paid, and will now more than pay, the cost of keep.

Corn Ensilage for Cows.

A. P. Martin, an experienced dairyman of Sonoma county, speaking before the recent California Dairy Association, made the following pertinent comments on dairy cows and feeding corn ensilage:

"I have had a great deal of experience with cows and have realized of late years that the cow has everything to do with it. Some cows give milk for eight or nine months in the year and then go on a strike for the other three or four months. These are not the kind of cows you can afford to keep. You cannot afford to feed such cows. But get those that yield 4000 pounds of milk a year that will average 4 per cent. You will lose money if you do not get that much. When you take it into consideration the value of the cow and the feed you will find that you do not come out even on a cow that is producing less than 4000 pounds of 4 per cent. milk; and no man can afford to keep a cow and not make a profit. It is not a hard matter to get such cows. I have the cow that produced 6300 pounds of 4 per cent. milk. It is a waste of time and money to feed poor cows. Some cows are dry four or five months out of the year and during their milking season produce so little that they are not profitable. You do not find the grocers or the hankers idle four or five months in the year. Bills have to be paid, interest accumulates and mortgages become due without regard to this long vacation of dry cows. We have been feeding the cows and they have not been yielding 1 per cent. of profit—and we expect to do business in this way and get rich, but we will not. The ranchers are the only ones that do business in that way. With the silage it is possible to have feed the whole year round, and it is better than the other feed. I have fed it as late as the 10th of May. It puts your cows in splendid condition. No other feed will leave them in the shape that the silage will. They will produce more milk and the milk will be richer than when fed on other feed."

Home of Edam Cheese.

While the Edam cheese is a familiar visitor to the table, not everyone knows whence it comes nor how its cacon ball proportions and gay colorings have been achieved. The northern part of Holland is the seat of the Edam cheese industry and the consequent cleanliness of the relish is therefore doubly assured. In making it the fresh cow's milk is carefully strained and the rennet is added. As soon as the milk curdles the whey is drawn off and the curd, thoroughly kneaded, is pressed into moulds. This process is repeated until the whey has all been extracted and the curd is comparatively dry. It is then wrapped in a linen cloth and kept for ten or twelve days until quite solid. Then the cloth is removed and the cheese put into salt lye. Afterward a little more dry salt is sprinkled on the cheese, until the maker thinks it is salted enough to insure its keeping. It is next put into a vessel and washed with whey and scraped to remove the white crust. It is next carried into a cool room and laid on shelves where it is frequently turned. The ripening process lasts from two to three months; the round balls growing the fine yellow or reddish color peculiar to Edam cheese. The cheese intended to be exported to this country is rendered still more brilliant by dyeing the rind with a vegetable dye.

The Dorset.

Why is the Dorset proving such a success in the United States? Because it is a sheep that can turn great quantities of feed into milk and hahy mutton; because in the United States there is a great deal of feed available, and because the eaters of the United States are willing to pay for hahy mutton, says Joseph E. Wing in Country Gentleman. Years ago I feared that the early lamb business would be overdone. My fears were groundless, as events have proved. The season just closing has been as prosperous as any. Eaters increase faster than the lambs do. Prosperous times in cities mean larger consumption of high priced food products. And is the Dorset the only sheep fit to produce these early lambs? I think no one will deny that now. Not only is the Dorset ewe the best of all mothers for early lambs, but the Dorset ram has the ability to produce the quick-growing, early-fattening kind that the market wants, and this seems to be true no matter what class of ewes is used for crossing. There is another advantage in Dorsets, and a great one, and that is the production of lambs to be fed after weaning. Such lambs are produced on the ranges and fed in the western feed lots and marketed when about ten months old. For this purpose there is coming to be larger and larger use of Dorset sires, and there is no question that the half-blood lambs are excellent for feeders. I have no doubt that they are the best of all, although naturally the breeders of other sheep might dispute this.

After all, I think the most delightful feature of the Dorset sheep is their great intelligence, their ready common sense, their alertness, and their willingness to help you—that is, if you are co-operating with them—in an effort to produce mutton. The ewes do not rush away when I go to catch them; they don't flea, like panic-stricken deer, when a cur comes about, but use the weapons that nature gave them to teach the invader to stay on the other side of the fence. And then the way that they care for their little lambs is most interesting to the shepherd. They are never indifferent to them. In my experience they never forget where they are, although I must own they make very obstinate foster-mothers, and often refuse absolutely to care for the lamb of another ewe. Finally, some of the earliest breeders are still breeding them, and are most enthusiastic about them; and we personally are more firmly convinced of their great value than ever before; no stock that we have handled has ever been as profitable as they. They are being bred over a very wide range of latitude—from Maine to Mexico, from Texas to Minnesota—and everywhere, in the hands of capable shepherds, they are succeeding. I feel sure that the day is not far distant when the Dorset will be much better known in America than it is in England, where it has always been somewhat of a local breed.

The Reno (Nev.) Journal says that A. J. Knolin, a representative of Swift & Co., of Chicago, is in Reno for the purpose of purchasing all the lambs there are for sale in that section. Senator Flanagan is negotiating a sale of 25,000 in one bunch, representing approximately $65,000.

CAPT. BEN E. HARRIS of this city has invented and suggested many devices in the way of announcators, jockey boards, starting gates, etc., for use on race tracks, and now has a new one in the way of an announcator made especially to show the winning numbers as soon as the horses have been placed by the judges. It can be worked by electricity or otherwise, and the numbers can be read from any angle of the track, a feature no other machine possesses.

CHARLEY THORPE'S perseverance won a race for Burns & Waterhouse last Wednesday. Thorpa had the mount on Panamint, who was a heavily played favorite. At the half mile pole Panamint was badly cut off, and lost fully ten lengths, falling back to last position and looking to be hopelessly beaten, but Thorpe sat down and by hard riding gradually caught the field again, and going to the front, under the bat, when half way through the stretch, won all out. Thorpa received well deserved applause when he returned to the stand.

W. H. CLARK, the proprietor of the new, picturesquely situated and well-equipped trotting track near Yonkers, will apply to the Jockey Club for dates, and he has no doubt that his course will be treated as liberally as any on the circuit. Mr. Clark has in view a $15,000 handicap at one and a quarter miles, for three-year-olds and upwards, which would be richer than the Suburban, Brooklyn or Brighton handicaps, and which undoubtedly would attract a large entry list and prove to be a race of the first class. Mr. Clark wishes it to be known that while he will make a bid for the running horse he is not going to forsake the trotter. Trotting meetings will be given as well as running meetings.

LILLY WRIGHT, chestnut mare foaled 1880, by California (son of Monday) and out of Minnie Bell, by Norfolk, died at the home of her owner Irving P. Diggs, near Woodland, Yolo county, last week. She was bitten by a tarantula or some other poisonous insect last August and never recovered from the effects of the poison. Lilly Wright was bred by Mr. Diggs father, who in the early days of California bred and raced a number of good horses. Lilly Wright's first foal by a thoroughbred stallion was Diggs, by Red Iron. He was sold for $70 to the late John Ada S., of Yolo county, who reced and sold him for $2500. The mare was bred to Red Iron again in 1893, and every year thereafter until 1898, the produce being Sutton, Arches, Olinthus, Diomed and Lily D., a filly foaled last year. In 1898 Lilly Wright was mated with Brutus, but failed to get in foal. Olinthus, Diomed and the yearling filly are still the property of Mr. Diggs. Lilly Wright was a valuable mere for her owner, and her produce brought him a large amount of money.

SAM LGATES and O. Medden are having a lively struggle for jockey honors, says an English writer. M. Cannon's percentage beats them both, however, although all three are far and away beaten as to percentages by H. Martin and Sloan. Indeed, in the meter of total winning mounts Sloan is near enough to the leaders to render it by no means impossible that he should catch them should we have a succession of Sloan days at Newmarket, for he is almost invincible there when the wind blows down the course with any particular strength. Our trainers are learning from Huggins and our jockeys are learning from Martin and Sloan, that horses may be—yes, must be—trained and ridden to get certain specified distances at a certain average of pace, and one prominent writer declares that our jockeys will have to digest all this before "they regain the position which has been so seriously encroached on by Sloan, Martin and others." Further, he writes: "The reason why the times of our races have varied in past years to a ridiculous extent is simply that the races have seldom been truly run. It was reserved for Sloan to come and sherpman everybody up; and he has done so effectually."

MR. P. RYAN, who, by the way, is one of the cleverest horsemen in America, often springs a "good thing" on the unsuspecting public, and this meeting has been no exception, as the hookmakers could attest after the races won by Afameda on Saturday last and Cyril on the following Monday. Probably the greatest surprise Mr. Ryan has furnished to race-goers, so far this season, has been his midget jockey, J. Walsh. This boy, who hails from Canada, is smaller even than J. Reiff, who became so popular here last winter, and appears to be superior to Reiff, inasmuch as he can hold a horse together while driving him. He has a good seat, splendid hands, and above all, good common sense. On Saturday last, when riding Afameda, he buckled up in the stretch with Thorpe, who was on Pet Morrissey. The regulars settled back in their seats expecting to see Thorpe put it on the "youngster," but imagine their surprise, when instead of getting rattled, Master Walsh set down like a veteran, and hand riding Afameda, won on the post by a neck. He gave a similar performance on Monday, while riding Cyril, winning on this occasion, in a desperate drive, by a head, and at that on a horse who should not have been better than third. Many good judges claim that many a race is lost through the use of the "bat," or rather through the inability of the jockey to use a "bat." Most boys when they draw their whip let a horse's head loose, and this is particularly true of small, light boys. The fact that Walsh, instead of going to the "net," sits down and bends rides his mounts, has gained for him many admirers during the past two weeks. We predict for him a bright future, and he is indeed fortunate to serve his apprenticeship under such an estate horseman and thorough conditioner of thoroughbreds as Mr. Ryan.

PRINCESS ZEIKA is undoubtedly the best two-year old at the track.

HUGHEY JONES arrived during the week, and will probably be seen on the block next Monday.

A CARLOAD of horses belonging to Barney Schreiber will be shipped from New York Sunday en route to the Coast.

JOCKEY JOHNNY WOODS, who went to England under contract to "Alek" Covington, is expected to arrive here next week.

JOHN PORTER, the great English trainer being asked, "Is Flying Fox the best horse you ever trained?" answered: "There was only one Ormonde."

ATKINS & LOTTRIDGE have twenty-two horses in training this season. Among them is old Scarborough, who both looks and works better than ever before.

BILL MURRAY brought fourteen horse down from his ranch on Tuesday last. He has several maidens among the bunch, on one of which he is "very sweet."

MR. W. C. WHITNEY'S racing colors have been registered with the Jockey Club as "Eton blue, brown cap," with second colors of 'Eton blue, brown belt and cap."

No. 12 of Goodwin's Official Turf Guide, containing summaries of all the races run in the United States from July 1st to October 1st, including those run at Oakland and the State Fair at Sacramento, has been issued.

JOHN HUMPHREYS has been awarded the betting privilege for the Fresno meeting, which will open next Monday. Sixteen overnight purses will be offered. Free transportation will be offered all horsemen who desire to race there.

MIKE CASEY, the ex-steeple chase jockey, has been receiving congratulations this week. He was married last Saturday to Miss Helen Ward, well known as the charming member of the veuveville team Mullen & Werd. They will reside here.

JAMES McCORMICK, the popular trainer who bended the Burns & Waterhouse string with success here two years ago, is now at Sheephead Bay and is the trainer of Mr. L. V. Bell's racing stable. He has eighteen head of colts and aged horses under his care.

SPENCER was fined $200 and set down for the balance of the meeting at Gravesend Thursday of last week for a careless ride on Pink Domino in a race for maiden two-year-olds. His mount was second and the judges thought would have won but for Spencer's carelessness.

MONTANIC, son of Montane, won the Fletlands Staka for two-year-olds at New York, September 28th. The distance was five furlongs, and the race worth $1500 to the winner. Montanic beat Orsard, Native, Last Chord and other good two-year-olds, and ran the distance in 1:01 1-5.

THE streight away at the new Tanforan Park will be a decided novelty in California racing, and should enable the horses racing over it to set some new records for the State. It will be full six furlongs and Superintendent Allen thinks it will be the fastest three-quarters in the world.

NED LANNIGAN and what few big bettors that are here ere playing only small sums. They are apparently afraid to back heavily the poor class of horses that are racing, and again the jockeyship of most of the boys riding at present is so uncertain that heavy betting is out of the question.

CY MULKY returned from Alaska last week and is now at Napa. He spent some time at Cape Noma and says that the diggings there are marvelously rich, but everything is located, the district is small and there are far too many people there. He suffered from scurvy, but is quite well now, and expects to return to the North.

JIMMY COFFEY notified the Association on Wednesday last that he would not start Bernardillo again. This is as it should be, for if allowed to race this horse will some day cause a serious accident. He is afflicted with blind staggers, and when attacked by this trouble he staggers all over the track, making it dangerous for the other horses and jockeys in the race.

STROMO, who won the second race on Wednesday last, was the first long shot to win this season. He was as good as 40 to 1 in the betting, and beating the gets several lengths, managed to last long enough to win on the post by one-half length. Donator finished second and Dare II. was third. Both the latter horses were miserably ridden and should have beaten Stromo.

LITTLE MOUNCE, who rode Billy A. in the first race on Tuesday last, came back to the paddock after the race with tears running down his cheeks. He was apparently suffering considerable pain, and stated that Starier Ferguson had struck him over the arm, presumably for breaking through the barrier. After having the arm bandaged, he managed to finish his engagements for the day.

California Jockey Club Stakes.

The California Jockey Club has issued a list of ten stakes, none of which is to be run before January 1st, and entries to close which November 6th.

"We have decided to give a less number of stakes this year, as past experience has shown that a great many of the cheaper stakes have resulted in walk-overs and created very little interest among horsemen and the public."

The list of stakes is as follows: $10,000—The Burns Handicap—A handicap for two year-olds and upward. Entrance $20; $30 additional for horses not declared by 4 P. M. day after weights are announced $100 additional for starters.

Those entered not to be sold to carry five pounds extra; if for $3000, weight for age Allowances: one pound for each $250 to $2000; one pound for each $100 to $1000; two pounds for each $100 to $500

$1500—The Naglee Selling Stakes—For three-year-olds and upward. Entrance $10; $25 additional to start. $1500—The Follansbee Handicap—A high-weight handicap for two-year-olds and upward. Entrance $10; $25 additional to start. The club to add an amount necessary to make the gross value of the race $1500, of which $200 to second and $100 to third horse. Weights to be announced three days prior to race. The club to add an amount necessary to make the gross value of the race $2000, of which $350 to second and $150 to third. Weights to be announced four days prior to the race. Previous to this we will give three $500 purse races at shorter distances, of which only such as are entered in this race will be eligible. Futurity Course (170 feet less than three-quarters of a mile).

ONE of the greatest half-mile track races the world ever saw took place at Allentown, Pa, last Friday. Prince Alert, driven by Ben Walker, won the first heat in 2:10, Democracy won the second in 2:07 3/4, and Prince won the third and fourth in 2:37 and 2:06 1/4. Prince Alert is owned by J. H. Hanley, of Providence, R I, and was bred near Knightstown, Ind. Mr. Hanley has offered to race his horse against Anaconda for $5000 a side, and James Butler has accepted the deft for Keating and deposited his money with the New York Sun.

Of Value to Horsemen.

Do you turn your horses out for the winter? If so, we want to call your attention to a very important matter. Horses which have been used steadily at work, either on the farm or road, have quite likely had some straining whereby lameness or enlargements have been caused. Or perhaps new life is needed to be infused into their legs.

THAT much abused horse Crescendo is reported to have broken down. The news does not come as a surprise, for it is doubtful, if in the history of the turf, another horse of his class can be mentioned who received such treatment as did Crescendo in the old Bay District days.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Charley Newman is the latest sufferer from the dog poisoning fiend. His St. Bernard Nero was a victim last week.

A Los Angeles citizen has the proud distinction of being the owner of a bull terrier, Nipper by name, who is a confirmed drunkard. His favorite tipple is the drippings from beer kegs.

The Pacific Coast special committee of the American Kennel Club now consists of J. E. de Ruyter, chairman, M. C. Allen, H. H. Carlton, Dr. E. N. Lowry and J. P. Norman, secretary.

Some desirable English setter puppies are offered for sale this week. W. A. Jones of Burlington, Washington, is the breeder. Attention is directed to the announcement in our advertising columns.

Charles K. Harley, the genial Treasurer of the Pacific Fox Terrier Club, has a dog pup that he may well be proud of; he is by Warren Sage—Mission Idol, all white in color, with a long, well shaped head, good body and coat, splendid bone, legs and feet, very stylish and full of go. This pup should develop into one of the best fox terriers bred upon the Coast.

H. H. Carlton has resigned as secretary of the San Francisco Kennel Club. The board of directors of the club last week presented a resolution of thanks to Mr. Carlton for his past efficient and untiring efforts on behalf of the club. His successor has not yet been appointed, as Mr. Carlton has been requested to temporarily withdraw his resignation. An assistant will be chosen to aid him for the present.

A meeting of representatives of the several specialty clubs was held in the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN on Monday evening. Messrs. J. B. Martin, Phil Fay, R. H. Rountree, Jos. Cuntan and Phillip Mayers were present. The proposition of holding a fall specialty show after discussion was deemed inadvisable. An effort will be made by the various clubs to have the spring hunch show held a month earlier than has been the custom in the past.

Fred H. Bshnell's grand smooth coat Champion Le Prince Jr. was shipped to L. A. Klein, Venlo Farm Kennels, Guttenburg, N. J. this week. Mr. Klein will again handle Le Prince on the Eastern hunch show circuit. Mr. Bshnell has the courage of his convictions and it is very probable that his dog will return to the Coast crowned with additional laurels. Le Prince will also be placed in the stud for a limited time to approved nominators whils East.

Circus Clown, the well known grayhound, which ran so well for the Waterloo Cup, and which just before the Alcar meeting was purchased by Mr. Aubrey for, it is stated, over £250, was recently lost under somewhat novel circumstances. It appears that while on the journey from Belfast to Fleetwood, by vessel, during the temporary absence of the keeper, the dog disappeared. It is supposed that he must have jumped through an open port-hole of the cabin and was drowned.

A laashman has given us the following statement in respect to the term "Puss" as applied to the hare, which he claims is of ancient date. A writer in a North Country English paper says: "We must go beyond the Norman Conquest to get at the bottom of this seemingly peculiar title. From Latin we have Lepus, a hare. Later the word was corrupted into le puss, or in other words a mixture of Norman—Franch. The Franch would in the course of time fall off, and the word 'puss' be left, and thus in our day and generation the hare would have simply designated simply 'puss.' In Scotch the hare is termed 'mankin' in some districts, but I am not so sure of this word."

The Victoria Show.

The second annual hench show of the Victoria Kennel Club opened for three days at Victoria, B. C., on September 28th. The show was successfully conducted and the attendance good. There was a total of 210 entries, made up of 130 from Victoria, 25 from Seattle, 12 from this city, 6 from Vancouver and the balance from other points. The judges were Mr. Hedley Chapman for mastiffs, St. Bernards and Newfoundland, and Mr. H. T. Payne for all other classes.

English setters were the most numerous, the collies came second with 40 entries. "The English setter still continues a strong favorite, in Victoria at least," says The Daily Colonist, "there being over 50 entries in that class and a fine looking lot they were, in fact so fine that not one but received a prize or were highly commended by the judge." It is reassuring to know why so many good satters can be found! Irish satters were fairly well represented and Gordons were few but of good quality.

There were but few pointers on the benches, and the same can be said of grayhounds, Newfoundland, St. Bernards, Great Danes and mastiffs, the St. Bernards, however, showing up better than the others."

There were some splendid collies on exhibition, but the cockers and fox terriers probably showed up better than any other class, with the exception of English setters. In Cockers Mr. J. W. Craighton, of the Swan Lake Kennels, made a splendid showing against the dogs from California and the Sound, the string from the Redwood Cocker Kennels having the closest competition that they have yet met. The San Francisco dogs were in charge of Mr. L. F. Haaf, and to him the Victoria Club owe many thanks. Besides showing a fine lot of dogs and a prettily decorated kennel, he worked indefatigably to help the committee of management out.

Rev. J. W. Flinton and owners of dogs bred by him of course had it pretty much their own way in the fox terrier class, but there were enough other entries to make the competition interesting. The Colonist cup for the best fox terrier was won by Rev. J. W. Flinton's Aldon Artist, who also won the special prize offered by Mrs. Bradley-Dyne for the best terrier of any breed in the show." Warren Sage, a dog well known here, was placed second to Aldon Artist.

The Duck and Quail Season.

October first, the opening day of the season for 1890-1900 was the occasion for the usual annual pilgrimage of sportsmen; veteran, enthusiast and novice to favorite and chosen shooting places on marsh and upland. Hunters who favored ducks as affording the best sport, with but few exceptions were disappointed. The quail shooters met with the best success in Contra Costa county.

The best bags were made on the Suisun marsh. The members of the Pringle Gun Club, who shoot on the Peyton tract and whose ponds were not heited made a combined bag of 153 birds, mostly sprig. Those shooting were Otto Feudner who shot 53, W. H. Harper and J. Wilson 47, W. H. Bryan 22, Ed Whitley 15, and Ed Hilborn 16. The Olym-Gun Club members who shoot near Cordelia had a short morning flight of birds and made generally light bags, principally sprig and mallard. The Suisun and Canvashack Club members had but fair success. The shooting on the Suisun marsh was entirely over by nine o'clock, by which time the heat was oppressive and the industrious mosquito was distributing punctures in wholesale lots.

On the Sonoma and Petaluma marshes the same conditions prevailed. The Alameda Gun Club turned out twenty strong. Pa. Bolender shot the first canvashack of the season. The Petaluma Sporting Club and The Shellville Rod and Gun Club preserves did not return heavy feathered dividends to the members. The Empire Gun Club celebrated the day with a "bull's head breakfast." A brief morning shoot with scant results was had by a few members. About eighty sportsmen, including a brass band, survived the heat of the day and the mosquitoes. Those present spent a most enjoyable afternoon. At Reclamation fifteen hunters killed three ducks, it was rumored that one bird was shot at Seers Point.

The Black Jacks shot on Sherman Island, the combined bag for six guns was two dozen birds. Clarence A. Haight, W. J. Golcher, Jas. Maynerd, Dr. E. N. Ayers and Ellis Johnson begged five dozen English snipe on the Sargent tract at the head of White's slough. They went after ducks, but the market hunters started a fusillade at day-break that drove the birds away. Mr. Jacob Sargent was their host and made the visit pleasant for the hunters. Cherley Hoge and George Perry begged forty ducks near Brentwood.

Sunday morning saw about one hundred geese on the Alviso marsh. Ducks were scarce, not over thirty birds were bagged, many of the hunters, however, brought home good strings of curlew and plover, which birds were plentiful. Billy Wetmore and C. W. Debenham were at the Pastime Club house on Sunday and Monday. The shooting conditions on the second day were a shade better, the bag was twenty ducks, widgeon, sprig and teal and a string of sixteen curlew.

The present weather conditions are not conducive to good duck shooting. The season will not be fully in evidence until the winter storms in the North will start the birds down here for refuge on the bay and marshland adjoining. During the early part of the week the bay was reported to be full of ducks, frightened away from the marshes by the bombardment on Sunday.

On many of the upriver preserves, the carp had forestalled the ducks and ate up all the feed placed in various ponds.

Game Protection in San Joaquin County.

The shot gun devotees of San Joaquin county and the Stockton Shooting Club in particular are in order for congratulations (?) from sportsmen at large by reason of the adoption of a peculiar game ordinance in that particular county which went into effect on Tuesday, October 3d. Very little has been said in the Stockton papers concerning this measure since its passage, although the ordinance itself has been regularly published. Several weeks ago the "Stockton Shooting Club, through its president W. E. Johnson," so said The Mail, "filed with the County Clerk a petition to the Board of Supervisors asking that the board pass an ordinance prohibiting the killing of game in the county for the market and the sending of game out of the county. The petition recited that certain persons were accustomed to locate themselves in suitable places during the game season and kill large numbers of birds for the markets and that the practice of such wholesale slaughter was detrimental to the preservation of the game birds there, and if allowed to go on would soon exterminate game of all kinds." The apparent desire to stamp out the market hunting traffic was laudable, but the fostering of the "bristles" industry in this particular case is, to say the least, rather unsportsmanlike and savors of the spirit of the game hog. A perusal of the ordinance, which appears below in full, will show that a San Francisco or Alameda Uitlander who indulges in a hunting trip in the San Joaquin Transvaal will fall against Oom Johnson's ultimatum when he boards boat or train, bound home and out of the county, if he has in evidence the results of his shoot. Last Sunday several well known sportsmen of this city upon going aboard a steamer bound for this city were refused passage because they were bringing with them a bunch of English snipe, the host officials only relented and allowed the hunters passage and their game to be taken on board when they were apprised that the game law they had to observe as common carriers was not at that time in force and effect. If the Stockton Shooting Club really desire all the game in the county for themselves and their friends why, they, of course, are entitled to the same because they live in that county and want it (!) and also because they can induce county legislation to keep it there—after it is dead.

It is very doubtful, however, if the county ordinance is strong enough to interfere with the rights of sportsmen in the disposition of game legitimately killed. Legislation for the protection of game is necessary and proper, but in some cases the effect of such alleged legislation is a perversion of authority that is narrow minded and not within the spirit of the law.

The text of the new game ordinance is as follows:

An Ordinance Regulating the Killing of Game in San Joaquin County, and Prohibiting the Shipment Thereof Without Said County, and Fixing a Penalty for the Violation Thereof.

THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS of the county of San Joaquin, State of California, do ordain as follows:

SECTION 1. Every person who, in the county of San Joaquin, State of California, shall hunt, kill or destroy any quail, rail, Wilson or jack snipe, Bob White, grouse, dove or wild duck, with intent to ship, carry or export the same without the county of San Joaquin, or cause the same to be shipped, carried or in any way transported without the county of San Joaquin, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 2. Every person who, in the county of San Joaquin, State of California, shall offer any quail, rail Wilson or jack snipe, Bob White, grouse, dove or wild duck to any railroad company, express company or common carrier or other transportation company, their officers, agents or servants or to any other person, for the purpose of shipping, carrying or transporting the same without the county of San Joaquin, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 3. Every railroad company, express company, transportation company or other common carrier, their agents, officers or servants, and every person who shall transport, carry or take out of the county of San Joaquin any quail, rail, Wilson or jack snipe, Bob White, grouse, dove or wild duck shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 4. Every railroad company, express company, transportation company or common carrier, their officers, agents, or servants, and every other person who shall receive any quail, rail, Wilson or jack snipe, Bob White, dove or wild duck, for the purpose of transportation, carrying, shipping or taking the same without the county of San Joaquin, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 5. Every person found guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be fined in the sum of not less than $20 or more than $250, or be imprisoned in the County Jail of San Joaquin county not less than 10 days, or more than 75 days, or be punishable by both such fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 6. One-half of all the moneys collected for fines for violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be paid to the informer, and the resulting one-half into the county treasury of San Joaquin county to the general fund thereof; provided that in no case shall said one-half of said fine be paid to the duly authorized and acting Game Warden of San Joaquin county.

SEC. 7. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force fifteen days after its passage upon due publication.

The foregoing ordinance was duly and regularly passed and adopted by the Board of Supervisors of San Joaquin county, State of California, at a regular meeting of said board held Monday, September 18, 1899, by the following vote.

Ayes—Henderson, French, Newton, D. C. Shepherd and J. A. Shepherd. Nones—None.

J. A. SHEPHERD, Chairman,

[Seal] OTTO GAUNSKY, Clerk.

Sneak Boats and Night Shooting.

The Alameda and Santa Clara county authorities by prohibiting the use of sneak boats and night shooting in the marshes on the east end southern bay shores could accomplish much in the way of legitimate game protection. Such measures would meet the support and approbation of all true sportsmen, resident and non-resident in the counties mentioned. These two unsportsmanlike methods of killing game are prohibited in most other States. In the district near Alviso, Milpitas and the "Bridges" the market hunters last season secured many big bags (?) by the use of sneak boats and repeating shot guns and also by "sluicing" the birds as they were feeding in the ponds at night time. The Santa Clara Game Protective Association has the reputation of being an organization of representative and energetic sportsmen who have, we believe, been instrumental in the adoption of some radical and beneficial changes in their county game laws and who also have recently brought about some effective and, it is to be hoped lasting, results in the prosecution and conviction of violators of the game ordinance in force in Santa Clara county—it is suggested that it might not be amiss for the Santa Clara club to look into the matter. There is no regularly organized game protective body in Alameda county, but we know of many sportsmen in that county who would lend their support to the measures we here advocate. Much has been said and done of late in the interest of game and fish protection, it seems, however, rather an oversight that the matters we are now calling attention to have not been already properly looked after. The evil is of greatest magnitude in the district we have mentioned, but there is no reason why the prohibition against it should not prevail in other counties.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

The Phelan ranch near Chico has been posted against hunters.

The Santa Rosa Gun Club has appointed John Barr keeper of their preserves near Shellville.

K. Kato, a Jap, pleaded guilty to a charge of killing quail on section Oct. 4th and was fined $50 by Judge Wallace of San Jose.

The Monterey supervisors have shortened the season for shooting quail in that county one month. The season closes February 1st instead of March 1st.

The club organized at Fort Bragg, Mendocino county, for the protection of game and fish is meeting with the support of the citizens of that district and gaining in membership every week.

Eureka sportsmen are promised a plenty of duck shooting this season, Humboldt bay is swarming with many ducks of all kinds. The Shooting Club will get a large share of these for they have again leased the Gross & Sinclair's tract of reclaimed land on the bay shore and will use it as a game preserve as heretofore.

The best quail bags reported for last Sunday were made in Contra Costa county. C. F. Sinkwitz and J. Lanzer killed 62 at Rocky Ridge, and Lee Clark and Fred Drinkhouse shot four dozen at a shooting place known to themselves across the bay.

Game wardens in Sonoma and Mendocino counties have been making it very warm for violators of game and fish laws of late. In Mendocino twelve convictions for selling deer hides have taken place, and in Sonoma several men have been fined, some as high as $250, for dynamiting and other illegal fishing. These cases are passed along the line and a liberal education in respect to "what" the game laws are and also that they must be observed, is implanted in people disposed to be careless and criminally negligent.

The long continued fight between the hotel men and market men of San Jose and the members of the Game Association has finally been decided in favor of the latter. There is an ordinance on the county's law books prohibiting any one from having in their possession more than twenty quail. The market men have sought to have this law amended by the insertion of one or two words which would eliminate the restrictive clause out of the ordinance if it could be shown that the game was killed in another county. For the past three months the struggle has been incessant. The Supervisors have finally been won over to the cause of the sportsmen and will not make any changes in the ordinance. The market men are now talking of having one of their number arrested in order to test the law in the courts.

It is the testimony of the foremost naturalist in France that if the world were to become birdless men could not inhabit it after nine years' time, in spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects. Object lessons in this direction are seen summer after summer in the orchards browned or parched as by fire, the work of cankerworms and caterpillars. By a general movement for the preservation of the birds there would not only be an esthetical and moral gain, but the feces of all nature would be made beautiful and attractive in all the vernal season. It is a most worthy object for neighborhood organization and effort. The results in a single year would convert whole communities. If the county boards of supervisors would enact ordinances against netting, trapping or otherwise destroying the birds much good might be accomplished. We know of deprecations in San Joaquin county where three Italians have netted in a single day as many as 2000 small birds in the bushes along the levee.

On the opening day in San Joaquin county Stockton sportsmen were out in force; club members, casual sportsmen and gun renters, an army of men and boys. The best shooting grounds in that district are controlled by private clubs or duck trusts. The Cosmopolitan Gun Club, composed of fifteen members, are credited with using much ammunition and getting but few birds. Another club, consisting of Dr. Davenport, Frank Whale, I. N. Houser, Dr. Fitzgerald, W. H. Worthing and several other well known sportsmen, own a launch fitted out with auxiliary duck boats and various appliances that make duck shooting a perfect dream. They returned Sunday night with the launch laden with game, but report the weather as unpropitious for large returns. A number of Lodi sportsmen shot on the Kettlemen preserve and made fair bags. A number of other sportsmen from Stockton, who went after ducks, at least reports were still after them. The reason in many cases, particularly in choice localities, why results were so poor, was the presence of the tabooed market hunter, who gave the Stocktonians a "Roland for an Oliver." The market hunters were all posted in favorite spots and kept up such a racket with their ten bores and black powder that the ducks rarely got within sight of the waiting hunters in the blinds, but kept on in their course to less noisy retreats miles away in the tules.

A pleasant voiced gentleman with a riddle made his appearance on Sportsman's Row Tuesday afternoon, he made existence a burden for the time being for everybody who listened to him. He finally rounded up the Black Jack gang who were in executive session holding down several cases of Butler's original packages. The Black Jacks were killing lots of birds as usual, each hunter outtrivalling the other in drawing on a reminiscent imagination. The riddle purveyor lost no time in propounding the following: "Four hunters went duck shooting, one was blind, one had no arms, the third was without legs and the last man was naked. The blind man saw a duck, the armless hunter shot it, the legless fellow retrieved the bird and the naked man put the game in his pocket. How was it accomplished?" Trying to solve the problem, "Leather" Johnson had to go home in a cab, Black Jack Lemmer fell asleep, Jack Sammi forgot he was long on wheat and "Stump" Wyman became hysterical. Prof. Jim Markland, for once in his erratic career told the truth and broke the spell by remarking, "It's a bloomin' lie! Which it is."

The man with the riddle took the east bound train that night, he is supposed to be a Jerseyman, one Fred Quimby by name. The mysterious disappearance of two hills of fair enomination from his pocket-book is supposed to be the reason for his conduct. Phil Bekeart, however, is inclined to believe that the money, $40, was used in buying gold bricks, smuggled cigars, etc. Mr. Quimby remarked when he got on the train, that he was resigned to the loss of the money, as he would soon be out of the zone where everybody he met asked him, "How he liked the climate?"

The instinctive dislike for all kinds of snakes that is possessed by almost every human being, is just about as unreasoning as the antipathy shown by a man with a gun for any and every kind of a hawk that happens to come within range. It is a hawk, and as such it should be killed; that seems to be the idea that is predominant. As a matter of fact, there are really very few hawks that are harmful even in the smallest degree to game birds and game animals. The large majority are as useful to farmers as the housecat is to the housewife; they quarter the fields like a setter or pointer, but they are not bent on looking for a quail; the principal culprit in this respect in California is the Cooper hawk, their favorite game is field mice, and every farmer knows what field mice can do to his crops. For this reason the continuous slaughter of all kinds of hawks is something pitiful. A sportsman's journal, sometime ago, devoted a column or so to the doings of a certain Eastern gunner who resides near the Atlantic Highlands. The Highlands are right in the

The Work Under Way.

The first real step toward the remodeling of the Pleesenton rac track was begun last week when Percival Madsen began work of removing the old fences about the corral, the moving of the old grainery some distance from its present location, and the pulling down of two rows of old stalls.
 In communication with C. B. Charlesworth he stated that the present contract let to L. N. Grent of San Francisco was for 160 new stalls, a judge's stand and office. As to the other buildings spoken of such as the club house, grand stand and restaurant, they would be placed up later, as the present work was to be completed by November 1st in order to be repered for the many horsemen that wished to winter here during the coming months. After the improvements are completed such as the widening of the track and placing it in excellent condition, the construction of another large tank and frame besides the elevating of the present one some thirty feet, the other improvements would follow, and with these twenty stalls that are to be left standing and the 160 new ones there would be ample room for the present to accommodate the horses that intended coming, but should the company find it necessary to erect more stalls they will be at it up at once.—Pleesenton Bulletin.

Teaching the High School Horse.

The higher education of the horse may consist of instructions along several different lines, writes an expert in the Breeders Gazette. It is not necessary for a finished saddle horse to be proficient in what is known as high school. It is considered by many as an encroachment upon the circus ring to teach the march or the swim trot—by some called the Spanish trot and recently among stable hands known as the cake walk. These two movements constitute the foundation of high school. It does not add to the animal's usefulness, nor is it good for his temper. The best high-school horses are plain-gaited horses for the reason that when urged from the march into the swim-trot under pressure of both hands and spur, a gaited horse is more apt to go into the racking movement, which is radically wrong. A gaited horse, unless he is unusually even and quiet in disposition, goes to pieces as a result of the punishment he must have to induce him to take the unnatural steps. There are two requisites to teach successfully any tricks to a horse; these are patience and a whip. Your inquirer undoubtedly possesses one of these, but unless he has both he should never begin. If, however, he thinks he can persuade his horse that a man using his whip is his friend let him lead the animal out with a bridle and place the horse against a solid wall or side of the stable, and with his left hand on the hip, holding him back, give the horse with his right hand sharp cuts of the whip on the nearest or left front leg, back of the knee. After repeated efforts the horse will extend or throw forward this leg. When he does so, stop and rub him on the nose; do not pet, but rub. In a few minutes repeat the cuts of the whip on the right leg, stop and rub his nose again and repeat. Do not go to the other leg until he has done with one what you want him to do. Permit him to step forward each time the leg is properly extended, but not unless he does so act. After progress a slight tap of the whip on the front of the knee will be the necessary signal. Then get in the saddle and use a sulky whip that will reach to the knees and you have your horse marching.

The swim-trot is the result of pushing or urging forward out of the march by the use of the spur and stout pressure on the mouth, always easing same the instant the horse throws each leg forward in the hold, outward movement which is in the nature of a flat jump, first with one leg then the other. This forced march is never accompanied with comfort to the rider nor with grace on the part of the horse unless he gathers himself well behind by bringing up these legs under him on the order of long strides.

To make a horse lead with the right foot start him from a walk by pulling his head a little to the left, thereby throwing the right shoulder forward, and at the same time using spur or whip to urge him forward. A man uses the spur on the side he wishes the horse to lead with or a touch of the whip on the rump. To make a horse lead with the left foot reverse the use of bit and spur.

Never try to make the horse change the lead without bringing him down to the walk, otherwise you make him cross his legs and in all probability fall. The slight inclination of the body to the side you wish him to lead with helps also. In going around corners or riding in a ring make your horse lead with the right foot when going to the right end with the left when going in that direction, always remembering that to have a horse lead with the wrong foot when riding in a ring or turning corners renders one liable to a fall. Ladies always prefer a horse that will lead generally with the right foot, as otherwise they get all the motion from the leg and shoulder.

Oregon Horse Items.

[Portland Rural Spirit.]

Mr. I. C. Mosher has taken charge of the Salem race track and has moved his stable of trotters there. Mr. Mosher will have charge of the entire grounds another season.

Mrs. C. H. Thompson, of Mt. Tabor, has bought from L. J. McComick, Bonnie Belle 2:24 1/2, one of the best roadsters in the city, being speedy, gentle and a pleasant driver.

Seattle promises to give a race meeting another season, and whatever Seattle undertakes will be a success so we may look for the better meeting of 1900 to be held in the city on the Sound.

When Lute Lindsey drove Alameda to a record of 2:15, he made a new record for mares of the Northwest, but this is not Lute's best record breaker, as he drove the first horse that ever beat 2:30 in Oregon. This was a good many years ago and many is the good race that he has driven since that time, and there is no more familiar figure on the turf to-day than Lute Lindsey.

Mr. John Chalmers, who for many years was superintendent of the Witch Hazel stock farm, has bought Susie S. and her colt by McKinney. Susie S. is probably better known than any mare that ever raced in the Northwest starting as a two-year-old and for twelve or fourteen years was raced continually, getting a record of 2:18, which is the record for Oregon to day. She was bred by Capt. Julius Sorrenson, of this city, who owned her from the time she was foaled until she was sold this week. She was sired by Hambletonian Membrino, dam by Belfounder 62.

The Present Queen of the Turf.

Much has been written about the great races of the mares Modesty, Firenze, Miss Woodford, Marion C., and Yo Tembien, but the performances of none of these equal the record of Imp, the five-year-old black daughter of imp. Wagner and Fondling. With the exception of the "Black Beauty" and the Flying Dutchman, imp. Wagner, as a sire, has hardly been a success. In 1893, only two of his two-year-olds earned a bracket. They were Tete's Creek and Fleeting Rey, each of which won one small purse, and this year again only two moderate animals have won purses, a filly named Pan Jette and a colt named Stites, so it looks as if the grand mare Imp owes her grand racing mainly to the happy meeting with Fondling.

It was not until last year that Imp began her record-breaking career. She commenced her racing season at Newport, where, on April 12, she set a new mark for that track for one mile and fifty yards, making the distance in 1:43, with 106 pounds up. She then went to Chicago, where, at Westington Park, on July 9th, carrying 112 pounds, she ran one and one-eighth miles in 1:51 1/2, a new record for that track, and only a quarter of a second less than the world's record, held by Tristen, which he made June 2, 1891, at Morris Park, as a six-year-old, carrying 114 pounds. There ends Imp's record-breaking of 1898.

It was, strangely enough, on the same day, April 12th, when she made her first record at Newport, that she started her record-breaking of 1899 at Washington, D. C., on which occasion she covered one end one-sixteenth miles, carrying 126 pounds, in 1:50 3/5, or 1-5 second less than that previously held by Roundsmen since May 2, 1896. The Washington track is fully three seconds slow to the mile. At the Brooklyn Club track, Grevesend, June 14th, Imp clipped 1-5 second off the one end one-eighth mile record, held by Sir Walter, when with 126 pounds up, she ran the distance in 1:53 4-5. Again, on September 23d, she lowered the one end one-half mile record on that track one and one-half seconds, her time being 2:34, with 124 pounds up. Exile had previously held this record since May 29, 1890. At Brighton Beach she reduced the one and one-quarter mile record a little over two seconds on July 6th by running that distance in 2:05 2-5, with 115 pounds up. Menesses had been the previous holder of the one end one-quarter mile mark, having as a three-year-old, carrying 88 pounds, run the distance in 2:07 1/2, August 17, 1897. Here ends Imp's track record-breaking performances, but to her belongs the honor of being the first mare to win the Suburban handicap. In doing this she reduced the time for this race to 2:05 4-5, or one end one-sixth seconds less than the previous quickest time done by Loentaka in 1891 and Henry of Navarre in 1896, which was 2:07. Never before has the First and Second Special at Brooklyn been won by a mare until the black queen completed this feat on September 23d, when she gave Ben Holladay six pounds, The Bachelor nine pounds, and Previous six pounds and romped away from all of them.

Since April 8th last Imp has started in thirty races, or an average of six a month. Of these she has won twelve, being second twice, and five times third. When she raced on the Western tracks, sprinting was said to be her forte, but since going East, and with increased age, distance seems to be her strong suit. She has run in six races under one mile this year, and has failed to earn a bracket, her best performances all being at more than a mile. Weight has no effect on her speed and gameness. The lowest weight she carried this year was 111 pounds, when she won the Islip Stekes, and her greatest load was 128, when she won at one end one-fourth miles on the turf.

Mr. Brossman, her trainer and part owner, says Imp is as sound as a dollar, and what he and Mr. Herness have not decided whether to retire her or race her another season. She is a perfect glutton, and will eat twelve quarts of oats at a feed, and like most great race horses, she is a glutton at her work also. In her stable Imp is perfect as regards behavior, and nothing seems to disturb her rest. Remarks have been made about her in end of running. After her victory in the Second Special people pointed to her defeat by Previous in the Occidental handicap, September 16th. On that day Imp was carrying 129 pounds, and was raced into the ground by King Berleycorn, seven furlongs of the journey being run in 1:26 4-5, whereas she made her own pace on Sept. 23, traveling the seven furlongs in 1:29. She also won the Oriental handicap at Brooklyn, one and one-quarter miles, in 2:07 3/5, carrying 128 pounds.

No mare in the history of the American turf has ever approached this record made by the black whirlwind from Ohio, and at that some of the greatest thoroughbreds this country has produced have been of that race.—Inter-Ocean.

THE fast and valuable three-year-old trotter Boralma 2:11 1/2, by Borel 2:15 1/2, dam Earalma by Earl, was sold Tuesday by Dr. J. C. McCoy, of Kirkwood, Del., to Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, for $17,000. Since McCoy bought Boralma two weeks ago for $10,000 of Scott Newman, of Louisville, he has won $11,000 with him. However, the winning of the $16,000 Futurity goes on the purchase price, as was arranged the night before the sale. Mr. Lawson and his Boston friends won $25,000 on the race. When it looked like Idolita had it sure they bought every pool.

San Francisco, Saturday, October 14, 1899.

Dates Claimed.

Agricultural District No. 43, Hollister, October 10th to 14th.
Fresno Jockey Club, at Fresno, October 9th to 14th, inclusive.
Agricultural District, No. 6—Los Angeles, October 21st to 28th, inclusive.

DESERVING OF SUCCESS are the Directors of the Sixth District Agricultural Association of Los Angeles, and they certainly will achieve it at their meeting, which opens next Saturday, the 21st inst. Realizing the fact that extraordinary attractions will draw extraordinary crowds, they sent Secretary Lewis Thorne to New York with instructions to secure, if possible, some of the great champion trotters or pacers for the Los Angeles meet, and that energetic and progressive official succeeded in securing Joe Patchen 2:01 1/2, John R. Gentry 2:00 1/2 and Anaconda 2:03 1/2 to compete in a great race for the largest purse ever hung up for harness horses west of the Rocky Mountains. Our readers must not imagine for a minute that this is to be a hippodrome performance. It will be a race for blood from start to finish, just as all the races between the two great champions have been this year. At Wichita, Kansas, two weeks ago, the fastest two heats ever paced resulted from the meeting of Patchen and Gentry. The latter was in great form again and forced the conqueror of Star Pointer to go the first heat in 2:03 1/2 and the second in 2:02 1/2 to beat him. The last quarter of the first mile was paced in 30 seconds, and the last quarter of the second heat was covered in 29 1/2 seconds, according to the official time. There was no hippodrome about this. There will be none at Los Angeles. Anaconda will be a contestant against these great pacers and he has speed enough to make them go just as fast as they did at Wichita, while many horsemen are certain they will have to go faster to beat him. On the days when these horses race, there will be such a crowd as Los Angeles has never before seen at a race meeting, and from fifteen to twenty thousand people have paid admission to that track on former occasions. Besides this great attraction, there is a grand program of harness racing in which such horses will race as Foggles 2:09 1/2, Klamath 2:07 1/2, Dione 2:09 1/2, Owyhee 2:11, Neeretta 2:11 1/2, Galette 2:12, Addison 2:11 1/2, and all the fast trotters and pacers seen on the California Circuit this year. Several carloads of the best runners now at Oakland will go down this week and the running program will be an excellent one as $6000 is to be given during the seven days of the meeting for the running brigade. It is not alone in the race program that the Los Angeles Association has displayed its enterprise. It has selected as starting judge for the harness events Mr. Chas. A. Willis, the well known turf writer and speedway driver of the New York Driving Club, a gentleman who has a wide reputation as an earnest advocate of honest sport in harness racing. Mr. Edwin F. Smith, Ex-Secretary of the State Agricultural Society will be associate judge and also act as handicapper for the running events. Mr. James Caldwell, "the prince of starters," will wield the flag for the running races. The high character of these gentlemen will be an assurance that the races will be on the square and the Los Angeles Association is to be congratulated on the fact that it has secured their services. There are already at the Los Angeles track a large number of horses and during the next few days the entire strings of T. E. Keating, W. G. Durfee and others will arrive from the East and all the horses now at Fresno will be there. It will be one of the greatest meetings ever held in California, and the Los Angeles Association will deserve all the success it is certain to achieve by reason of the enterprise and energy of its officials.

THE PRICES FOR HORSES AND MULES suitable for farm work are constantly on the rise. As will be seen by an item in another portion of this paper, a breeder from Oregon recently brought to this State forty spans of average work mules, and disposed of them in a few days for the good price of $260 per span. He is confident that the demand among the farmers for good work mules cannot be supplied for two or three years, and that he will get $300 per span for those he will bring down from Oregon next year. During the past three or four years California farmers have bred but comparatively few mares and now that good prices for farm products has made an increased demand for land, the farmers find themselves short of work teams. In the Sacramento valley mules are greatly in favor for plowing and harvesting, but during the dull times of two years ago the farmers sold many of their animals for shipment to Hawaii, and the good prices paid by the U. S. Government last spring induced many more to part with their stock, so that now the farmers are in the mule market as buyers, instead of sellers as they should be. The good prices to be obtained for mules will undoubtedly induce many farmers to send their mares to jacks next spring, and unfortunately there is but a small supply of good jacks in the State. Heavy horses are in good demand, and we would advise all owners of large mares to patronize the Percheron and Clyde stallions of good individuality and size rather than inferior jacks, as poor mules are not ready sale and bring poor prices. In any event it is very unwise to put inferior mares in the breeding ranks. Their produce will not pay for service fee and keep.

THE PLEASANTON TRACK will be the great training center of California next spring and it seems to be already ascertained that more horses will be in training in California next season than for some years. Work was begun this week on 160 new stalls which are to be erected at the Pleasanton track, the contract for which requires their completion by November 1st. The Pleasanton Training Track association is sparing no pains or expense to make the accommodations for horses equal to those of any track in America, and all know that no other locality has the advantages of a track that is can be used for training in all kinds of weather. There is no mud on the Pleasanton track two hours after a heavy rain, and no matter whether the rain continues one day or a week, the condition is the same. Speed can be made in January or May as the trainer desires, while the bracing climate and the excellent feed that grows in the valley are strengtheners of muscles and lungs. We advise all who contemplate training at Pleasanton to write Mr. C. B. Charlesworth the Secretary, and engage stalls as soon as possible. While it is the intention of the corporation to erect just as many stalls as there is call for those who want to begin training early should apply early for accommodations.

The Speed Sale of 1899.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—With the welcome return of prosperity on the Pacific Coast a demand for excellent, well-broke, stylish and speedy road horses is noted. To meet this increased demand for such a class the undersigned has decided to hold a "special speed sale" at his mammoth pavilion known as the Occidental Horse Exchange on Thursday, October 26th, at 11 A. M. Already there has been consigned to him such horses as Billy McKinley 2:25, Pункett 2:13 1/2, Correct (trial 2:18), Rossy Moore (trial 2:20), Blue Bells (trial 2:18), several by Secretary (son of Director 2:17), Strathway 2:19, Steve Whipple 2:12, etc., besides several finely matched teams and horses suitable for women and children to drive.

By sending horses to this sale instead of shipping them East where the markets are overcrowded, owners save over $110 on each horse, and stand a better chance of getting a good price that they would by sending them there.

When the right class is offered and properly advertised and catalogued buyers will gather at the ringside and bid liberally. I have every facility for caring for horses consigned to me, and, as in the past, will do all in my power to get the highest price for everyone sold. I take pleasure in referring owners to all for whom I have held sales in the past, and assure them that the same care will be taken of a small consignment as of a large one. No time is to be lost, so it is important for owners to communicate with me AT ONCE regarding expenses, terms of sale. Respectfully yours,

WM. G. LAYNG.

THE GREAT RACE OCTOBER 21ST.

[Special Telegram to BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Oct. 13, 1899.

BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, San Francisco—

Joe Patchen, John R. Gentry and Anaconda will start in free for all pace at Los Angeles, on Saturday, October 21st.

LEWIS THORNE,
Secretary.

NINE CAR LOADS of horses will leave California for the Fasig-Tipton sale in New York in November. Six of these are consigned by Palo Alto and two by Budd Doble. Samuel Gamble expects to have another carload. Those wishing to consign horses to the greatest sale of the year should communicate with Mr. Gamble at once as the time for cataloguing is getting short. New York is the greatest market in the world for high class horses.

TEN GOOD STAKES to close November 6th are advertised by the California Jockey Club in this issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. These stakes range from $1500 to $10,000 and are the richest events to be decided at the California Jockey Club's meeting at Oakland after January 1st. The full conditions are stated in the advertisement.

GOLDEN GATE PARK DRIVING CLUB.

A New Plan of Racing Will be Tried at the Meeting Next Saturday.

Members of the Golden Gate Driving Association met at their rooms in the Palace Hotel last Tuesday evening and arranged the program of races to be held at Ingleside track Saturday, October 21st. There were about fifty members in attendance, and twenty-one single horses, and four teams were named to start at the matinee.

For the second race for the O'Kaoe Challenge Cup, J. C. Ohlandt enters the winner of the first race, Harvey B. 2:31 and the other contestants will be Dr. G. W. Kleiser's Alta Velo, J. W. Hamerton's Alfred H., and J. Curley's Prince C.

The entries for the team race are H. H. Dunlap's King Cadenza and I Direct; E. Stewart's Billy McKinley and Correct; Chas Newman's Roby M. and Bessie Rankin; Harry F. Patrick's Catinka and Botcher Boy.

The 2:40 class has eight entries as follows: I. B. Dalzell's Bobby J.; J. O'Kane's Sandow; F. Gomme's Pardee; E. Stewart's Poorman; A. Schwartz's Baby D; J. Foss' Lafayette; J. C. Kirkpatrick's Lullaby; Dr. R. T. Lainer's Blanche L.

In the 2:20 class are nine entries, including E. Cerciat's Bishop Hero; J. G. Chesley's Goldy; G. Lapham's Robert H; E. Cerciat's Oaknut; J. Holland's Elsie; J. C. Kirkpatrick's Azalis; F. G. O'Kane's Athavie; N. Hottus's Correct; E. Stewart's Billy McKinley. This race is already exciting a great deal of interest among members of the club inasmuch as it is to be decided on a new plan. The horses are to be divided by lot and as there happens to be an odd number of entries it will necessitate five being in the first division and four the other.

The two divisions will race separately, and the winners of the heats will then compete for first and second money, and the second horses for third money. It is a decidedly novel plan, and the members anticipate considerable amusement from the race, even though it shall not prove an improvement over the old way.

Beat the Record

It looks as though the gentleman who has the contract for building the new Dexter Park Horse Exchange would certainly beat the record. His contract stipulated that he should have the building in readiness for use in thirty days. That looked at the time almost like an impossibility. When one takes into consideration that it is to be the largest building of the kind in the world, and that it is to be finished from foundation to ceiling in thirty days, it would look to the ordinary observer like an impossible task.

It will contain comfortable stabling for five hundred horses, all of the necessary store rooms, harness rooms, restaurant, eating capacity, and the largest covered tract in the world. The manager of the stock yards has just reported to us that the contract will certainly be carried out, and that, instead of thirty days, twenty five days will be occupied in erecting this building that is expected to be a source of comfort and pleasure to very many interested in light harness horse sales.

The building will be absolutely fire proof, heated and lighted and ventilated after the very latest devices. The public, both consignors and buyers, can be assured of the fact that they will be thoroughly comfortable and safe in every way.

SPLAN & NEWGASS.

THE FRESNO FAIR.

Races are Well Attended, but Rain Interferes With the Sport.

The Agricultural Fair opened on Monday. The chief event was the race meet at the fair grounds. For the opening day the attendance came up to expectations. Everything was in fine condition for the speed contests; the track was fast, the day delightful. The officers announced for the week are: H. M. Smalley, Announcer; Lee Blasingame and M. L. Woy, Judges; Louis Heilbron, C. H. Swett and George Berry, timers.

The first race was for named horses, which was won handsily in two straight heats by Dictatress.

The 2:20 trot was won by McNally after four heats had been trotted.

The five-eighths of a mile dash for two-year-olds was won by Steel of Diamond, Cowboy second, Pidalia third. Time, 1:03 1/2.

The last race was six furlongs, three-year-olds, won by Crane & Owan's Amesse, Chappell's P. F. second, P. Enos' Bernardillo third.

The summaries of the harness events are as follows:

MONDAY, OCTOBER 9.

Table with 4 columns: Trotting and Pacing, Named horses, Purse $300. Rows include Dictatress (p) ch m, by Dictatus; Fanny Putnam (p) ch m, by Christmas; Ned Barbee (s) b, f, by Billy Thornhill; Boodie (t), brs, by stranger.

Table with 4 columns: Trotting, 2:20 class, Purse $750. Rows include McNally, br g, by McKinney-Alcazar; C. K. A., br b, by Bay Rose; Miss Barbee, br f, by McKinney; Sue, b m, by Athadon.

Running—Five furlongs. Two-year-olds. Steel of Diamonds won Cowboy second, Pecalia third. Time 1:03 1/2.

Six furlongs. Three-year-olds—Amasa won, P. F. second, Bernardillo third. Time 1:18.

The second day of the fair opened a windy one, but by the time the first race was called the breeze had died down. The attendance was better than on Monday.

Princa Neer was scratched in the first race, leaving Listerina, Psyche, El Moro and Lottia Parks to struggle for the supremacy. At the start Listerina was to bad had at even money, Psyche at 6 to 5, El Moro at 2 to 3 and Lottia Parks at 4 to 1. The start was excellent, with Listerina slightly in the lead, but she broke at the sixteenth and El Moro went by her like a shot. At the quarter El Moro led by four lengths, at the half by three and at the three-quarters by four. Listerina made a bid for place, but broke again in the stretch and would have lost second place to Psyche has not Spreckels eorral gona off her feat also. El Moro was first by two lengths, Listerina second, Psyche third and Lottia Parks fourth. Time, 2:17.

In the second heat Donathan drove Psyche in place of George Barry and the mare seemed to take kindly to the change. El Moro and Clark's mare Listerina, went off together with Psyche a head behind. The black took the lead at three-sixteenths and held it to the five-eighths, when Listerina stuck her nose by and lad all the way to the wire. Psyche broke on the back stretch but gained rapidly and heat El Moro out for second place.

The third heat of the 2:30 trot was preceded by some excitement in the betting ring, for some Psyche money came in and made her the favorite at 1 to 2 with Listerina at even money. The odds changed shortly, however, to 3 to 5 on Psyche and 4 to 5 on Listerina, at which odds they went to the post. Listerina led all the way around, Psyche was second to the three sixteenths, when she broke and El Moro took her place. Menchaca triad for first place on the stretch but it was a little too much for the black and she broke, the result being that Psyche was again second under the wire. This finished the race, Listerina taking first money, El Moro second and Psyche third.

The first heat of the 2:25 district trot brought out Lottia Lilac, C. S. W., Carma and Lucy M. Clark drove Lottia Lilac, and therefore she was the favorite. Carma led nearly all the way to the stretch, but was beaten out by Clark, who drove Lottia Lilac under the wire in 2:26 1/2, with Carma second and C. S. W. third. The second and last heat was won by Louis Heilbron's Lottia Lilac in 2:23 1/2 over several lengths, with Minturn's Cerma second. Manskia's Lucy M. took third place by a nose.

The first running race, a mile handicap, between Crane & Owens' Grady, which was the favorite, W. Chappell's Ping, M. A. Foster's San Juan and J. Harris' Himara, was an interesting event, but was Ping's race throughout. Grady had a bad start and was not ridden so well as he might have been. His chances for even second place were ruined on the home stretch by the fact that the rider kept him close to the rail, when San Juan, who was in second place, was hugging it too close to admit of Grady's going through. Had the rider of Crane & Owan's kept out a little he would probably have been second. Time, 1:43.

The five-eighths mile dash had seven starters, but as an hour elapsed between the time of going to the post and the start, all interest in it was lost. Twice the horses started fairly well, but were called back, and were finally sent off when it was nearly dark. The start was certainly ragged. Brown Princa won, The Millar second and Jack McCabe third. Time, 1:10.

The summaries of the trotting events are as follows:

Table with 4 columns: Trotting, 2:30 class, purse $1000. Rows include Listerina, b m, by Athadon; El Moro, blk h, by Longworth; Psyche, c m, by Cup d; Lottia Parks, b m, by Cupid.

Table with 4 columns: Trotting, 2:25 class, purse $ Trotting, 2:25 class, purse $ Lottia Lilac, b m, by Lottery; Carma; C. S. W.; Lucy M.

Owing to the rain the races did not amount to much on Wednesday. The most amusing feature was the gentlemen's race in mind between local horses. The five-eighths of a mile handicap was won by Senator Wilson, Castellar second, Jim Brownell third. Time, 1:03. The four and a half furlongs were won by Steel Diamond, Fedalie second, Cowboy third. Time, 0:57 1/2.

In point of attendance Thursday's races were the best of the week. The track was very sticky. Three favorites and one second choice won.

An accident occurred in the second heat of the district pace and trot, which, however, did not result in injury to men or horse. Worth Obar was leading with Oceane Belle, Clark second with Lottia Lilac and Colonel K. R. third. At the mudhole near the half Oceane Belle fell to her knees. Clark, who was behind, called out, "Look out." Obar thought he said "Pull out," and he pulled to the right Clark could not stop and he ran over Obar's ankle, breaking the wheel. Lottia Lilac was, of course, thrown off her gait and Colonel K. R. forged ahead. He finished first, trying to shut out Lottia Lilac, but the mare got under the red flag. After a consultation the judges gave the heat to Colonel K. R., Lottia Lilac second and allowed Oceane Belle to start in the next heat.

A special race, four and a half furlongs, for two-year-olds, was added to the program. Cowboy won, Steel of Diamond second, Ahawahnee third. Time, 0:57 2-5.

The starters in the six-furlong handicap were Jim Brownell, Jack McCabe, Alvero and Beaumonde. Alvero and Beaumonde sold at even money. Beaumonde won, Brownell second, Alvero third. Jack McCabe balked and refused to start. No time given.

Summaries of the harness events:

Table with 4 columns: 2:20 pace and trot. Rows include Oceana Bell, b m, by Ober; Colonel K. R., brs, by Bay Rose; Lottia Lilac, by Lottery.

Table with 4 columns: 2:15 pace, purse $1000. Rows include Don, b g, by Falrose; Dictatress, ch m, by Dictatus; Fanny Putnam, ch m, by Christmas.

*The first heat was declared off, as the judges thought Don had been pulled.

Won But Got No Money.

BODIE, Cal., Oct. 9, 1899.

ED. BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I wish to submit to you a question of some importance to race horse man. It is this: When a number of horses have been entered to compete in a trotting race under the management of a track association and there being one horse in the lot that clearly outclasses the others, making the race so one sided that the owners conclude not to run. In this case it was agreed that the horse that outclassed the field should be drawn. This was done by the agreement of the board of directors and the owners of the other horses allowing the owner of the horse drawn to draw first money. The other four in number competed as we understood it for second and third money. The first heat the judges decided that Ouhold was first, Arrow second and Princess W. third. At the end of this heat some fault was found about the way Princess was driven, and the judge put up another driver behind the Princess and the second heat terminated the same as the first except as to Princess who with the other horse was distanced. The board paid first money to the horse drawn as per agreement and Arrow second money and returned third money to the association. Ouhold was first in the two heats winning the race and yet he got nothing. Under the agreement we claim that we were contesting for second and third money only and Ouhold should have received second money and Arrow third money. The secretary had not informed the judges of the above agreement, consequently they could only decide as the horses appeared before them at the wire. In the interest of many, I remain, Yours truly, HARVEY BOONE.

[If the Directors agreed to give the owner of one horse first money to stay out, and all the other owners consented, it was undoubtedly understood by them that they should race for the balance of the purse. Consequently Ouhold should have been awarded second money and Arrow third money. —ED. BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Sulky Notes.

ANACONDA 2:03½

JOE PATCHEN 2:01½

JOHN R. GENTRY 2:00½

WILL all start at Los Angeles.

DON'T miss this great meeting.

OWYHEE 2:11 was lame after his race at Louisville.

MISS BARNABEE, by McKinney, has reduced her record to 2:20.

JOE PATCHEN'S two beats in 2:03 and 2:02½ are the fastest for a two-beat race.

ANACONDA stepped a half in a minute and a quarter in 29 seconds at Louisville.

DROPPING the distance flag by electricity worked very successfully at Lexington.

IMPROVIDENCE is the first Prodigal to win a race this year at any of the big meetings.

JESSEY MACK 2:09½ has started in nineteen races and has been behind the money only twice.

MCHEMRY says they can break him any time they produce a gelding who can beat Anaconda.

ALATUS, by Alcyone, is twelve years old, yet he reduced his record to 2:09½ in a race last month.

GOOD competent grooms that want to go East can hear of an opportunity by applying at this office.

PLANS are forming to have ice racing this winter at Ottawa and other points, "weather permitting."

THE three-year old pacing filly Twinkle, by Mercury, son Sidney, drove Riley B., out in 2:12½ at Evansville, Ind.

MCNALLY 2:19½ is a new performer for McKinney. He made his record in a winning race at Fresno last Monday.

WE want agents in every town on the Coast. Send for sample copies of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN and terms.

POINTDEXTER, a green stallion by Abbottsford, dam by Cyclone, trotted in 2:16½ and repeated in 2:15½ at Lexington.

THE ABBOTT proved that trotters can step quarters better than 30 seconds, at Louisville, by trotting a quarter in 29 seconds.

It is reported that Sidney 2:19½ will be sold at auction before long. He once fetched $28,500 when sold under the hammer.

NEEBETTA 2:11½, the champion four year filly of the year, is good enough to go East next year and meet the best in her class.

SECRETARY GOCHER, of the National Association, has bought the black gelding Guy, 2:09½ to drive on the road at Hartford.

KEEN CUTTER 2:13, a brown mare by Riley Medium, was burned to death in a stable fire at Maniton Springs, Colorado, last month.

HIRAM H., a bay pacer by Waldstein, took a record of 2:24½ over the half mile track at Fairborg, Illinois, September 22d.

MUCH BETTER 2:07½ failed to win a heat this year, and in fact could not be induced to score for the word. The boys call her "Much Worse" now.

CHARLES TANNER, the Cleveland horse, recently purchased a green trotter that showed him three miles in 2:12½, 2:12½ and 2:11½, on the day of sale.

WHEN Charles Marvin stepped Endow to the record for two-year-old trotting geldings last week, he placed his thirty-seventh world's record on the books.

SWEETHEART, bay mare by Sidney, added another name to that stallion's 2:30 list by trotting a heat in 2:26½ over one of the New York half mile tracks last month.

TOM KEATING wants to hook up Dione and Toggles when he gets back to California. He is confident that they can heat the 2:12½ of Belle Hamlin and Honest George.

THE pacers Agitato and Lolita, which Keating took East, have been turned over to their owner, A. H. Miller, of Buffalo, and they are now being driven on the road.

HOPPLES were barred at Louisville and it was supposed that Bob Fitzsimmons was too. But he won in straight beats demonstrating that he is quite a pacer with or without.

It is possible that Star Pointer has been forgotten. Several horse papers have announced that Searchlight's mile in 2:02 is the fastest of the year. How about that 2:00 at Hartford?

At the Woodard & Schanklin sale at Lexington Lord Russell sold for $375, Expedition $3200. Lord Russell sired Kremlin, a winner of the Transylvania Stake, and is a full brother to Mand S. 2:08½. He was bought by Bacon Bros., of Paris, owners of Jay Bird. Expedition is by Electioneer.

JAMES GOLDEN must have a pretty fair thing in the chestnut filly, Hvit, by Dexter Prince, out of Helena 2:11½, dam of Wild Nailing 2:13, as Mart Demarest offered $7500 for her a few days ago.

ELECTRICITY, sirs of Surpol 2:10, gets a new performer in the brown mare, Spark. She is a green mare, and in her second start defeated a field of ten at Rockport, O., in straight heats, taking a record of 2:20½.

THE ABBOT'S quarter in 29 seconds was a wonderful spur! but the feat of Peter the Great and Tommy Britton at Lexington last Tuesday, when they trotted head and head to the quarter in 29 and to the half in 1:01½, is the greatest exhibition of speed this year.

A COUPLE of automobiles are to be sent to Manila for use by the army. A description of the machines conveys the information that they are arranged so that horses may be hitched to them when occasion requires. Wise provision.

THE Prince Alert people failed to put up the money they claimed to be so anxious to bet that their horse could heat Anaconda. When James Butler deposited his check for $5000, the Prince Alerts were not so anxious as they claimed to be.

ENDOW, the two-year-old gelding by Cecilia 2:22, son of Electioneer, is out of Bon Mot, by Erin, and not out of Antella, by Ansel, as reported in some of the papers. Antella's two year old by Cecilia is also a bay gelding and is called Ender.

LADY OF THE MANOR is in slings at Louisville. The pacing queen has a broken hock in one of her hips. She will be sent home to Village Farm if she ever gets able to walk. Geers thinks that the mare's unsteadiness was caused by the trouble in her hip, which finally broke her down.

THE first horse to be named Dreyfus is a four-year-old gelding by Dexter Prince, out of Miss Valensin, by Valensin, son of Sidney, that is in the lot Budd Doble is preparing for the Fasig-Tipton sale. He can trot a quarter now as fast as any horse that ever went over the mountains to a salesring.

THE sons of old Alamot showed up as well as sires of speed at the Oregon State Fair races. His son, Del Norte 2:08, got the winner of a seven-beat race in Alta Norte 2:19½; Pathmont 2:09½, sired Patmark, who won the three-year-old pace in 2:28½, and Chehalie 2:04½, sired Starkey, who took a record of 2:18.

MR. C. L. YNIGO JR., a resident of Guaymas, Mexico, purchased last week from Jesse D. Carr of Salinas, a handsome six-year-old mare by Eros, out of Bertha, by Carr's Mambrino. The mare was shipped to Guaymas last Monday on the steamer. She is called Miss Bertha, is standard and registered and has considerable speed.

MR. CHARLES GAUNTLET, of Milan, Mich., who lost the splendid trotting stallion Hazel Ridge 2:11½, at the Cleveland meeting last summer, has recently purchased a successor to Hazel Ridge in the two-year-old colt Lee Vincent, a son of St. Vincent 2:13½, sire of Lord Vincent 2:04½; dam Grace Lee 2:29½, by Electioneer, second dam Addie Lee, dam of Adair 2:17½ and others.

BELLE J. 2:11 and Royal Baron 2:11, owned by N. W. Huhnger, of Hartford, Conn., have been sold to Captain C. O. Thihill, of New York, for $8000, the former bringing $2500 and the latter $5500. Belle J. is by Ben Johnson and out of an unknown mare, while Royal Baron is by Baron Wilkes, dam Daisy Blackford, by Blue Bull. He won the M. and M. Stake at Detroit this season.

ENDOW, that won the Preparation Stake at Louisville last week, placing the record for a two-year-old gelding at 2:17½, is an own brother to H. K. Devereux's stutnee mare Adore. Mr. Devereux purchased her last spring, and with a very short preparation won to wagon with her in 2:19 last quarter in 32 seconds. As she is only five years old, sound and coming, she should make a greater trotter next year.

THE London Sportsman says that on June 17th, a 15-hand, six years old bay mare called Glencoe Belle won a wager of $2500 by trotting 10½ miles in harness, hitched to an American hoke sulky, in 29 minutes and 35 2-5 seconds. She trotted the first half of the distance in 14.8. The American record for ten miles is held by Controller, son of Gen. Taylor, who trotted the distance in 1873 in 27 2-3.

MR. H. KERSHAW, well known horseman of Portland, Oregon, has been through the Eastern Grand Circuit and will locate permanently at Detroit, Michigan. In a letter to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, Mr. Kershaw states that he has been acting as cashier for Bride & Fitch, the official pool sellers on the Grand Circuit, and that the betting was very heavy this year. He mentions one pool that contains $11,000.

ELSIE, the trotting mare by Diablo, that took a record of 2:26 at the Golden Gate District Fair meeting this year, started last year in a race at Pleasanton under the name of Stella Marvin. The present owner of the mare gave her the name she now bears, and was unaware until recently that she ever had another. As she was only started once last year and did not win a heat, her former name has not cut much figure in the records.

THE Secretary of War Elihu Root has purchased of Shelby T. Harrison & Co., Lexington, a handsome black saddle gelding, six years old, 15.2h hands high and weighing 1,025 pounds. The horse is the pick of the whole country, selected by Major J. B. Aleshire, while having cavalry horses. The horse, with fifteen head of black cavalry horses, was shipped to Washington, D. C. last week.

THE latest Indiana sensation is a green four-year-old mare of unknown breeding, that recently trotted a quarter in 32 seconds, a half in 1:07, and a mile in 2:17, over the North Manchester track. Mr. Clarence, of Warsaw, bought her out of a painter's wagon this summer, and started her in several road races, where her true quality came to the surface and enabled him to sell her for $1450 to Mr. Joseph Lesh, proprietor of the Lesh Stock Farm, Goshen, Ind.

THE ninety-three-year-old veteran Charles Taylor is again on top. Last week at Bradford, N. H., he drove the pacer Robert B. to victory in the free-for-all in straight heats, in 2:16, 1:12½, 2:13, lowering the track record two and one-half seconds, and coming within a half second of Robert's own record, made in 1895 on a mile track.

It is current gossip among New York road riders that John Shepard, the leading roadite of Boston, will soon take his new trotter, Senators L., 2:12, to New York for a brush with Cohwets, Pilot Boy and other Speedway flyers. Senator L. will be remembered as the winner of the 2:22 trot at the New York Grand Circuit meeting. His record was made in the first heat of this contest. He trots without boots or any artificial appliances, and is fast enough to heat 2:10.

"THE campaign of The Abbott," said Ed Geers, recently, "makes me like the two-in-three idea. Practically every race that he has trotted has been ended in three heats or less; and instead of being worn out through having gone a lot of long, split up races, he ends the season in splendid order. When horses have to go as fast as they do nowadays and trot races of six or eight heats each week, it is hardly possible to keep them in order for more than a small part of the circuit."

HERBERT GRAY, of Boston, has secured an option on the yearling brother of Boralna 2:13, winner of the Matron stake at Louisville. The colt was worked at Louisville and trotted a quarter in 34 seconds, and his driver offered to go a mile in better than 2:20. Men like Marvin, Splan, Geers and Thayer say the colt is the most wonderful yearling they have ever seen. Several parties are after the colt, and Gray has been offered a good sum for his option. The colt is entered in $40,000 worth of stakes.

ABOUT the softest spot this year was struck during the New England Breeders' meeting, at Readville, by Col. John E. Thayer's black colt Baron Courageous, by Baron Wilkes, when he walked over the Readville track, and then took down the Stallion Produce Stake for foals of 1897, valued at $ 550. The time was 5:20. It was, nevertheless, a reward for keeping up the payments. It is said, however, that the youngster would have been heaten had any breeder in New England raised as fast a colt and possessed the stamina to keep up the payments.

WITH their customary promptitude the officers of the National Horse Show Association have completed the program for the next equine isplay at Madison Square Garden. The event will be the fifteenth annual exhibition and the dates selected are November 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18. The prize list announced is of generous proportions, a round sum of $30,000 being offered in premiums. Provision is made for 116 classes altogether and these include practically all the different sections of the equine family—running horses, trotters, roadsters, hackneys and ponies.

EVER since Joe Patchen was sold by C. W. Marks, of Chicago, different stories have been in circulation about the sale and subsequent transfer to Senator McCarthy. The facts of the matter are about as follows: Mr. H. Y. Haws, of Johnstown, Pa., bought Joe Patchen of Mr. Marks at the Columbus meeting for $18,500, and was immediately offered an advance of $2000 for him. He kept the horse, however, until he reached New York, when he sold him to Senator McCarthy for $22,500. Although it has been denied that Senator McCarthy owns Joe Patchen it was his check that paid for him. On reaching home from New York Mr. Haws was sorry that he had parted with "old Joe," and immediately wired Mr. McCarthy that he had changed his mind about the deal. Mr. McCarthy could not be found, however, and the next morning his check for the price of the horse was in Johnstown. During the time Mr. Haws had Joe Patchen he earned in stakes and purses, and in houses received from different associations for his appearance, about $16,000, netting Mr. Haws over $20,000.

It is the easiest thing in the world to find one fast horse that is a genuine road horse, and when you start out to get two of them near enough alike to make a pair it's a good deal like trying to find five aces in a pack of cards. They must be closely matched in size and conformation, with the same general style of make-up, even to the length and bulk of their tails, the cut of their necks, the size and shape of their heads, and all those little points that give individuality to a horse. Then they must carry themselves alike. You often see two horses that look alike when standing still, but one out-styles the other away off when they are started up, and they have altogether different ways of carrying their heads, ears and tails. They are not a team. Then, again, you may get two horses that look alike when standing or jogging, but perhaps one of them is a good deal bigger gaited than the other when driven at speed; or maybe one of them is a prompt driver, always up on the hit, while the other is something of a laggard that keeps the whip-frees always uneven. If you carry the whip in sight for his benefit the other horse is pretty certain to fret, and so, after all, your two horses are not a pair.—Rural World.

THE California mare Maud Murray by Hambletonian Wilkes, dam Annabelle 2:27½, by Dawn 2:18½, which was sent East by Col. Morehead of San Jose and sold at the Cleveland Blue Ribbon sale last May to an Austrian dealer for export, has been stirring up all kinds of excitement among the sports of the trotting turf about Berlin. It was discovered by one of them that the mare had a small patch of white on her forehead which was not mentioned on the export certificate, and he immediately jumped to the conclusion that he had discovered a ringer. A general hullabaloo was raised. Some of the turf authorities were called in, and they, after gravely examining the certificate and then the mare, also found that the white spot was not mentioned, and after some days of consideration decided that the mare was undoubtedly a ringer. The buyer was frantic and raged about, but all to no purpose. He could not start the mare in any of the races as long as she was suspected of having a first record that was suppressed. He finally tumbled to the fact that the best thing for him to do was to send over here for a correction of the certificate. This he did; but such a lot of red tape had to be reeled off that it was only the other day that the corrected certificate was accepted and the mare freed from suspicion.

JOCKEY SPENCKR will be here directly after the closing of the New York tracks.

LA GOLETA broke down during a workout last week and may never race again.

JOCKEY FROGOTT has been quite ill in New York, but expects to be in the saddle again shortly.

It is said that President Thos. H. Williams will race a small string of horses in England next year.

BARNEY SCHREIBER'S horses got in this week in charge of Dick Williams. There was a full carload, twelve head.

AL STEMLER will bring back a few yearlings with him but he recently purchased in Kentucky. Arhscis is at Chicago.

EX-JOCKEY WILLIE MARTIN is said to be trying to obtain a trainer's license. If successful he will buy a string of horses to race.

WHEN Mr. Harnes took his mare Imp home to Chillicothe, Ohio, the citizens met her with a brass band and a procession and tendered her owner's banquet.

MONTALLADE, who used to be a shifty sort of horse when owned by the late By Holly, won the last race at Oakland on Tuesday last. The bookmakers laid odds of 50 to 1 against him.

JOCKEY MOUNCE, while riding Manzanilla in the second race on Thursday, was crowded on the rail and injured his foot so badly that he was compelled to cancel his engagements for the day.

DAN DENNISON will be here soon with a string of Marcus Sly's horses. Morgan will do the riding. This jockey is not been riding since he fell at Aqueduct, but is said to be entirely recovered.

BURNS & WATERHOUSE have, in Southern Girl, the best two-year-old shown here this season. In her initial start Saturday last, she simply played with her field, winning, killed up, from Bogus Bill.

In a horse race at Gridley, Butte county, in this State, last night, there was a suspicion that a certain horse was to be killed by Jockey Norman Breedin. A bettor pulled a revolver and held it on Breedin during the race, telling him he would shoot if the race was lost. Breedin's mount won.

BIT OF FASHION, who, by the way, is the grandest looking fly we have seen in many a day, started for the first time in California, on Tuesday last. Mr. Burns bet on her, but she was short and after displaying speed for three eighths of a mile, stopped to nothing and finished last.

SEVERAL disputes have arisen at the track since the opening of the meeting as to the identity of Manzanilla, the mare running there. She is by imp. Merri-a, out of Rose-de, by Joe Hooker. The disputes arise over her being accompanied with Manzanilla, a gelding of the same age by Trent that ran at the local tracks a couple of years ago.

THE sheriff of New York last week, at Morris Park Race track, sold five racing horses belonging to Harry Unna of San Francisco, under an attachment obtained on September 1st by William K. Kerrick, for $3,432, for board of the animals. The horses brought only $220. One of them, First Maiden, went for $25. It is said that the horses cost Unna $3,000.

DR. ROWELL has bought St. Cuthbert from "Plunger" Mannus. This colt originally belonged to Mr. Macdonough and was bought when two years old by McManus, who raced him at Ingleside and Oakland. He showed himself to be a first-class colt, but went wrong, and they have never been able to get him up to a race since. It is to be hoped that Dr. Rowell will be able to bring him around.

THE race for the Jockey Club stakes of 10,000 sovereigns, the second horse to receive 1500 sovereigns and the third a 1000 sovereigns out of the stake, was run September 28th at Newmarket and was won by the Duke of Westminster's Flying Fox. Mr. R. A. Oswald's Scintillant was second and Mr. Leopold de Rothschild's Chosen third. The flying fox was 3 to 1 on Flying Fox, 100 to 7 against Scintillant and 50 to 1 against Chosen. Eight horses ran. Martin had mounted on Laddrail and Sloan rode Sweet Marjorie. None of these horses were placed.

DR. DUNNE'S good horse Salvaha won another race at the thorough track last Friday and as he polled up apparently there is no doubt that from now on he must be reckoned among the few handicaps horses in the West, and unless some accident befalls him he will earn many brackets during the next winter racing. At present L. H. Ezeli is handling the horse for Dunne, and he is running in Ezeli's colors. The race Salvaha captured Friday was the best one of a good kind which drew the largest crowd of the week. Bennevilla and Great Bend were the other contenders. Salvaha had to take a hard drive to beat Great Bend after he had twice cut off during the race Tuesday, but despite this the Dunne horse was made an odds-on favorite. It is said that he needed that race to put him on edge, and Burns in the saddle he galloped Bennevilla into submission and then went on winning off by himself, eased up, and finished a one mile and seventy yards and Salvaha in 1:44.

SOME of the formerly unfashionable jockeys have profited by the recent rulings of the Stewards of the Jockey Club in keeping unreliable jockeys on the ground. While so many good jockeys were on the ground Jenkins, Wilson, Pbelan and a number of others have been given opportunities to ride, and have taken advantage of the chances offered them to do good work. Jenkins, for instance, has grown very much in favor.

KNIGHT OF THE THISTLE arrived in New York from England last week. This horse was bought at auction by Trainer Huggins for Mr. L. O. Appleby for $3,050 and subsequently leased to Lord William Beresford. Huggins believed that he had not been properly trained, and the accuracy of this judgment is shown by the fact that Knight of the Thistle, among other good performances the past season, ran second in the Lincolnshire Handicap and won the Jubilee Stakes, worth about $12,000. Mr. Appleby has refused several big offers for Knight of the Thistle and will retire him to the stud. He is by Beauclerc, dam The Empress Maud, and is a full brother to Lady Roseberry, a high-class winner in England.

JOHN BOYD, a steeplechase rider well known in California, was killed at Hawthorne October 9th. The accident occurred in the third race, a steeplechase. As the horses swung toward the fence, Boyd swerved his mount, Globe II, with seeming intention of carrying Cheesemita out of the course. He succeeded, but Globe II crashed against the wing of the hurdle and turned a complete somersault, collided with and knocked down Three Forks and crushing Boyd so badly that he died while being conveyed to the hospital. The judges, ignorant of the extent of Boyd's injuries, investigated the action of Boyd in crowding Cheesemita out of the course and ruled him off the track before the news of the unfortunate jockey's death was received.

IMP was bred in Ohio by Mr. Harnes, who owns her dam, Founding, hr m, foaled in 1886, by Fonso, out of Kitty Huron, by Chillicothe; second dam Mollie Foster, by Asteroid; third dam Little Miss, by imp. Sovereign. She can hardly be said to be bred in the purple, so far as the female line of descent is concerned, says S. B. Weems, but her sire, imp. Wagner, by Prince Charlie, is one of the best thoroughbred stallions in Kentucky. Wagner is a horse of great individuality, and Imp inherits from him much of this individuality. She is, like him, black in color, and she has a broad, intelligent head, patterned much after that of Wagner. Imp is a big framed, rawboned mare. There is nothing flashy or sensational either in her appearance or her style of running. On the contrary, she lopez along with head down and in an easy going, matter of fact way that is very deceptive to the eye, but which at the same time carries her over the ground at racehorse speed. She is a long strider. She has shown that she can be placed in races, but her best forte is undoubtedly front running. It is said that she will stop if another horse can get to her and hang with her. The trouble seems to be that there are not many horses around these days that can get to her and stay with her long enough to make her stop. She is certainly a great thoroughbred and a popular idol, as was shown at Gravesend on Saturday, when she was liberally applauded on her way to the post to do battle with Ben Holladay.

Matron Stakes Won by Indian Fairy.

At Morris Park, New York, on Tuesday, October 3d, Indian Fairy, chestnut filly by Iroquois, out of Fairy by Argyle, won the rich Matron Stake. The start was straggling and had, a number of the horses, including Hyland's Brigadier, getting away so poorly as to have little or no chance of winning. The first to show as the field came into view was Runway Girl, but straightened for the run down the chute Modrina and Indian Fairy were also out prominently in front. After the rise out of the dip it looked as though the final contest would be between Indian Fairy, on the inside, and Runaway Girl. Indian Fairy was a length to the good and Runaway Girl was nearly half a length in front of Modrine, with Red Path coming up fast on the rail and Brigadier and Killasandra gaining rapidly on the outside.

Right at the end Slack, on Indian Fairy, appeared to pull over to the rail, thus shutting out Red Path. From the grandstand it looked as though this move had interfered somewhat with Red Path, for O'Leary had to esse his horse. Evidently the stewards did not consider it a foul, for when O'Leary went into the stand to make complaint he was promptly dismissed and the horses placed as they finished—Indian Fairy first, Red Patb second and Runaway Girl third. It was a hard drive, and although Indian Fairy got the verdict by a length she had not much to brag of. Slight variations of luck might have brought about a much different result. Red Path beat Runaway Girl half a length for the place.

Next to the Futurity, which was worth $30,630 to the winner, and the Junior Champion, which was worth $18,320 to the winner, the Matron is the richest two year-old event of the year. Its total value was $26,000, of which $17,000 went to the winner, $3300 to the second and $2200 to the third horse. Besides these divisions, Gen. W. H. Jackson, as the breeder of the winner, by Iroquois, dam Fairy, gets $1500; August Belmont, as the breeder of Red Path, gets $1000, and James R. Keene, as the breeder of Runaway Girl, gets $500. The latter is by the peerless Domino, out of Fair Vision, while Red Path is by Ravon d'O. dam Red Girl.

Horses in the Philippines.

Among the members of the First Regiment of California Volunteers who went to the front at the first call to arms, was Alvord J. Martineau, an employe of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. From a letter received by the editor from Mr. Martineau via the last transport from Manila, the following interesting chat about the horses in use there, and the sort of animal in demand, is extracted:

"Poor little insignificant horses of the Philippines! Overworked, underfed, abused, driven to death, these poor little representatives of the equine race in Manila present a pitiable aspect. They are not thirteen hands high, and with the heavy loads they are compelled to pull, are the source of much indignation and newspaper comment. The native drivers have no mercy for their animals, belaboring and abusing them whenever it suits their heightened fancy, sometimes under the stimulus of an erratic soldier, anxious to reach his quarters, and escape the guard house. Previously, the street car company compelled one of these poor little brutes to pull a heavily laden car, and at no mean rate of speed, often at a gallop. Protests became so great, at length, however, that the government took a hand in the affair and ordered them to place two, instead of one horse to each car.

But even now, the poor animals have all they can do to whirl the car along at the requisite speed, under our hissing sun. In fact, these little animals are unsuitable for anything except very light work, and, unless given a sufficient period of rest, which they are not, have no spirit or go in them.

The cause of their degeneracy is not hard to explain. Little or no attention is paid to selection in breeding. None of the foals are castrated, and stallions and mares are allowed to mingle indiscriminately in the pastures and at all seasons. It is no wonder the horses become diminutive in size, and lacking in strength, and they will never be of much value, coming as they do from such stock.

What we need are American farms, stocked with good sized, sound, healthy American horses, and there will be thousands of dollars for the lucky man who first institutes one, for the simple reason that strongly built, fleet horses are the sadly felt want here, and the demand must sooner or later be supplied.

Inquiries made of the cavalrymen here go to show that the horses brought from the States are doing splendidly, are active and full of energy, other statements to the contrary notwithstanding. The horses, however, are given a sufficient time to get acclimated, before required to work, which is but rational, as the same conditions prevail as with human beings traveling from one zone to another. If the horses were bred here, accustomed to the climate from birth, it is probable that they would be superior to those imported direct from the United States, for the reason that they would thus be accustomed to the conditions prevailing in this zone.

At the present time the only draft animal we have is the slow gaited caribao, who speeds along at the terrific rate of a mile in an hour and a half! Clumsy and ungainly to handle, falling all over themselves and everybody else who is so unfortunate as to get in their way while executing an evolution, they are the near by, but inferior representatives of the animals who brought the pioneers across the plains in '49. To think of it—using, in this busy work-a-day world of the nineteenth century, in the midst of the marts of trade, such an antiquated form of draft animal!

But draft horses are not the only breed needed here. Carriage horses, good stately built animals with some speed and plenty of endurance are wanted here and wanted badly. As to posturage there is plenty of it, though unfortunately it is now in the hands of the insurgents, which makes horse provender rather high. I believe that the Philippines are an El Dorado for pioneer breeders who will come here with stallions and mares from which to breed horses, either of the draft or carriage type.

There will, for years, be a demand for horses of these breeds, and the high freight rates and long ocean voyages will make it cheaper to breed them here than to import them.

As for cows, I am in ignorance of the existence of any milk cows in the Philippines. In Manila we are compelled to depend solely upon condensed milk brought from the United States. Caribao milk sells for twenty cents a pint, and is not altogether palatable to Americans and Europeans accustomed to good wholesome milk. It is needless to say that there is a great field open to progressive Americans in that line.

ALVORD J. MARTINEAU.

BUMPS 2:03 1/2 will again visit the New York Speedway this fall. Last spring it will be remembered that C. K. G. Billings, Chicago, took Bumps to New York, where he tackled and held his own with Cobwebs 2:12, Richert J. 2:01 1/2, Little Gem 2:15, and the like, and it was the consensus of opinion that the Chicago pacer could at least even up with any horse in the world to wagon down the road from Dyckman street to Washington bridge. While on the Speedway Bumps was timed a quarter in 29 1/2 seconds.

ONE often hears Peter the Great called "the little horse," but he is a lot larger than he looks. He stands 15 3/4, and is wonderfully deep and well and strongly made. Especially in the depth through the heart, which deceives one in guessing at his height.

A Letter From John Splan.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Dear Sir: I have been spending a couple of weeks in Kentucky attending the races and working in the interest of our November sale. I believe that the Kentucky consignments to our sale are some of the best that have ever left this horse State. Mr. Scott Newman's consignment of young Boreals are, I think, the fastest, best looking, best mannered and best bred lot of young prospects that ever I saw consigned to a sale by one man at one time. Among the lot is an extra handsome two-year-old trotting filly with a public trial of 2:20. She is entered in all the prominent stakes for next year, and bids fair to be a winner sure. The next is a three-year old pacing filly, with a public record of 2:11. Every colt in the consignment either trotter or pacer, can step in 2:30 or better.

Boralma's winning of the Futurity in the fastest and hottest contest that that race has ever been trotted in, proves without a doubt that the Boreal family will be in the first rank from now on.

In addition to this handsome and fast consignment of youngsters, Mr. Newman will send ten high class broodmares in foal to Boreal, as he has such a demand from the public for the horse's services that he is obliged to dispose of the most of his own mares.

Miller & Sibley, Mr. E. Z. Simmons, Richard Veach, are among the other breeders that will patronize the sale from this State. Mr. Richard Curtis will send a consignment from his racing stable, including good green horses and some with very low records.

The Louisville and Lexington meetings have been voted success in every way. The public and the horsemen had first class chance to compare the merits of the two in three and three in five system in trotting. At Louisville, the races were all two in three with the exception of one race. At Lexington, the races were all three in five with the exception of one race. I believe that the public and most of the horsemen are in favor of the three in five system. The Louisville races were, with one or two exceptions, won in two heats. At Lexington the races have been of the Batt Royal order. The Futurity and Transylvania were hot great contests.

In connection with them Mr. Thomas B. Lawson, of Boston, created a good deal of excitement and amusement for the spectators. In the Futurity he bet his money in large chunks on a horse that he had just bought, and, while the balance of the field gave his candidate a good argument, he finally landed the money and "done" the bookies for about $50,000. When the Transylvania came off, he and the bookies again locked horns—he with his money on Peter the Great, the favorite, the bookies playing the short end; and after another desperate struggle, he transferred the most of his winnings back to their care. It furnished fine amusement and excitement for the crowd and added a good deal to the interest of those two races. Peter the Great had been trotting in races of mile heats, two in three, and had not been prepared for the bruising race of a longer number of heats. His owner, Mr. Forbes, was an interested spectator, and would have been glad to have seen his pet get the money, in defeat, as he was the same polite and just gentleman that he would have been had he won. One heat furnished good deal of excitement from the fact that one of the drivers claimed a foul against Peter. Then, the finish was very close. It gave the judges plenty to deliberate on, and most owners would have been dissatisfied that they did not get a better. Not so with Mr. Forbes. When the judges decided against him, he acknowledged the justice of the decision, every true sportsman should, under the same conditions.

The demand for good horses seems to be greater than has in a long while. The foreign buyers are here in great numbers. They have their money with them, and all they have to do to get it is show them a good horse. Pedigree alone does not count with those good judges. Size, form, manners and speed are what gets the money every time.

The management of the Lexington meeting is the best I ever saw. With all the close finishes and hot contests, where fortunes have depended on the result, I have never failed to hear one complaint against the management, in any way, shape or manner. Every officer seems to be a gentleman in his place. The weather has been exceptionally fine on the track very fast. The hotels are full of prominent people from the North and the whole town is given over to the trotters and their friends.

I have just received a cable from Europe stating that Miss McPhee was on her way to America and will invest in American trotters. She certainly is a brave woman to cross that many thousand miles and invest her money in horse flesh, considering all the risks attendant to it. I hope to hear from the American horsemen, a hearty welcome every way. JOHN SPLAN

Lexington, Ky, Oct. 7, 1899.

RUBICON, Ned Lanigan's grand old horse, is to be bred to a few choice mares this year. Joe Harvey's Wheel Fortune is one that will be bred to him.

ED. COBRIAN's grand two-year-old colt Golden Rule won nearly $8000 for her owner in stakes and purses in his first race at Ingleside.

Nature Teachings.

At a recent gathering of ladies and gentlemen interested in educational affairs at Ukiah some interesting papers were read by A. V. La Motte, Esq., the superintendent of the California Northwestern Ry. Co.'s fish hatchery near Ukiah. In describing the "Faculties of the Trout" he says: "When out fishing, one frequently hears the caution expressed: 'Don't make any noise or the fish will hear you.' Now, as a matter of fact, the trout has no organ of hearing. You may, with impunity, fire off a gun close to him, and unless the vibrations of the water jar or move him, he will not show any indication of a knowledge of your presence, but get within the range of his vision, either by your shadow or person, and he seeks shelter instantly. The eye is the all-important factor with the trout. Having no eyelid, or organ of nictitation, as it is called, he is ever on the watch both for his food and for his enemies—ready to seize the one or evade the other. The life of the fish from his birth to his death is an incessant conflict for existence. The ties of consanguinity do not appeal to the trout's empty stomach, and he is ever ready to eat his own or any one else's relatives; hence he must be ever on the alert to avoid being the victim. We therefore see the wisdom of not furnishing him with an eyelid else he might take a nap, that would result fatally. The eye of the trout also performs other functions for his safety. Through the action of vision on the nerve system a trout is enabled to change his color to conform to his surroundings, thus causing him to be less visible to his enemies and also to his prey. This provision of nature is oftentimes misunderstood, and people are led to believe that there are several varieties of trout in the same stream; whereas there is only one, and the existent difference in color is only attributable to location and surroundings. A trout caught in a deep, dark hole will be almost black, while in an open sunny riffle he will be light and silvery. Yet both may be from the same parentage, and by changing the location of the fish the colors would reverse.

Before this faculty of changing color to conform to surroundings was thoroughly understood, it gave rise to much misunderstanding with regard to species, and one poor fish was made to do duty for several varieties—dependent entirely upon the colors he wore. This coloration also changes periodically with the development of the fish. When nearing the season of reproduction the female loses her brilliancy and pales in color. While the male brightens his hues and becomes brilliant. He also changes structurally. The under jaw will elongate and turn up at the point upon which a button will form with which he roots through the gravel to loosen it in the construction of their nest. After the spawning period the button is taken up by absorption and the jaw foreshortens to its normal length, and he again assumes his symmetrical proportions.

As the native trout of California, on account of its anomalous habit—making annual visits to the sea—attains a great size, it is often times taken for the salmon. But to the initiated the difference is readily discernable. The salmon, during the spawning period, develops an elongated and hooked nose, while the under jaw remains normal, whereas the trout reverses these conditions and develops an elongated under jaw. By these distinctions the species can never be mistaken."

None the less interesting was the paper entitled "The Scavengers of Our Waters" which presents some practical views descriptive of nature's economy in the disposition of waste matter. "In his investigation of nature man finds many forms of life, that from his limited intelligence, he is oftentimes at a loss to assign a use, but careful study will often enable him to fathom their usefulness. As an example we will take one of our commonest fishes, which is met with in nearly all of our waters—the common sucker, as it is called. Every frequenter of our streams is familiar with this fish as it moves slowly about on the bottom, congregating in the depressions or deep water holes, moving apparently aimlessly from one end of the hole to the other and refusing the lure with which the small boy delights to tempt it. On closer acquaintance with the fish we find that it has assembled there for a purpose, the fulfillment of which is of great value to mankind and without which our waters would be entirely unfit for use.

The sucker is the only scavenger fish in our streams. His food is almost wholly derived from the insect life contained in the humus and semi-digested matter which is in the waters and gravitates and settles in the depressions and holes, and by consuming and re-digesting this semi-digested animal matter left by other fish and decaying vegetable matter, that putrescent fermentation is prevented. This matter if not consumed, decomposes and becomes the harbored of all manner of insect and disease germs, which when disseminated through the water and consumed by man, becomes the source of many kinds of sickness.

It is now generally conceded by physicians that very many of our most dangerous diseases are caused by the use of impure water. The danger to mankind does not end here. The life giving properties are derived largely from the oxygen it contains. Now, if this effeta matter is not consumed and putrescent fermentation goes on, carbonic acid gas is generated, which, being heavier than oxygen, soon eliminates it and the water becomes devitalized and unhealthy. Thus, you see, the sucker becomes mankind's best friend by keeping the waters pure and invigorating for his use.

The residuum of the streams, after being put through a second course of digestion by the sucker, contains little or no animal matter, and on leaving him is in a condition to be taken up by the soil and become a constituent part thereof. Hence, by careful investigation, we find that the insignificant sucker, which we find in nearly all of our waters and have frequently abused and derided as worthless, unfit for food and bony, performs very important functions tending to further man's health and happiness.

A. E. Lovett won the first class delicacy medal on the tie contest with H. F. Muller on Saturday at Stow Lake. Lovett's score was 96 per cent in accuracy and 80 per cent in delicacy, net percentage 88. Muller's score was 92 3-12 per cent in delicacy and 80 per cent in accuracy, a total net percentage of 86 4-12. H. F. Skinner made a splendid showing, scoring 95 feet in long distance, 92 8-12 per cent in the accuracy casting, and a total percentage of 86 3-12 in delicacy.

Steelhead can be caught with hook and line in tide water at any time. The Marin county ordinance closing the season on all kinds of trout from October 15th to April 1st, is in this respect in conflict with the State law. Anglers will find that they can enjoy their usual winter steelhead fishing near Point Reyes in the tide water as in past seasons.

Striped bass anglers continue to meet with fair luck in the Oakland estuary. Reports from Eel river are to the effect that the fishing on that stream is improving. Some excellent catches of trout have been recently made at Sims. Salt water fishermen are having plenty of sport around the bay.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Duck hunters are jubilant over the favorable change in weather conditions which has taken place during the week. The storm has been a general one all over the State, this will bring down a few birds from the north, but the principal flight cannot be expected until about the middle of November. Local duck hunters had poor sport last Sunday, the weather being excessively hot and hot few birds flying. Reports from the Suisun, Sonoma and Petaluma shooting grounds and from the eastern bay shore marshes show very small results. The wind on Tuesday and Wednesday was taken advantage of by some of the enthusiasts and some fair bags were made in the districts just noted. To-day and to-morrow will no doubt see a large number of sportsmen on their favorite preserves and shooting grounds. It is reported on good authority that on the opening days of the present season more hunters were out in many States and Territories than for many years past.

The Potrero Gun Club was recently organized in Suisun, and will have its headquarters during the duck season at the Morrill ranch in the house formerly occupied by Fred Morrill. The shooting ground of the club will be the Pal Lang and Morrill tracts and notices to trespassers have already been posted on the preserves. The members of the new club are C. A. Morrill, Suisun; C. E. Parcels, Oakland; William and Fred Elliott and John Smith of San Francisco.

In answer to the queries of a number of sportsmen we will state that the season for rail in Alameda county is open until March 1st, and in San Mateo county the season closes on November 1st. A reference to the game laws published in this issue will apprise the hunter as to the law and ordinances governing rail shooting in the bay counties.

A four-prong hook called around at the Mark West Spring to say hello the other day. Like Dewey entering New York he was received with volleys, like Dewey he waved his thanks when the salute was over and moved out to pay calls elsewhere.

Quail hunters are having good sport and getting nice bags, but the distance necessary to travel (until November 1st) restricts the indulgence to the lucky few who can afford to take the time required for a quail shoot.

The season for cock pheasants and quail opened in Victoria, B. C., on the 1st inst.

Danger in the Use of Repeating Shot Guns.

The manufacturers of repeating shot guns have extolled the game destroying and other apparently favorable qualities of this style of fire-arm to such a great degree in their endeavor to make "the poor man's gun" popular that an element of danger, caused principally by defective breech action, has been overlooked by their using the guns. Some manufacturers will not guarantee the gun unless ammunition prepared by the maker is used. This may to a certain extent eliminate some of the chances for inquiry—but in this respect we are reminded of a "blow-up" which took place this season at a live bird shoot held at San Clemente, Marin county. The shooter was a "manufacturer's agent" and used a model of repeating shot gun which is sold to the trade on the Coast, the presumption was that he was using the regularly prescribed ammunition. Nevertheless it was significant that he was the recipient of many congratulations at the time from his fellow sportsmen by reason of his lucky escape from injury.

The New Haven Register of October 3d notes the following case: "John Libben, of La Carne, Ottawa County, Ohio, has brought suit through Lawyers Wright & Pardee, against the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. for $10,000 damages for injuries received because of the alleged defective construction of a shot gun known as the model of 1893, which he purchased on a representation and warranty of the company that the gun was perfect. Libben further says that while he was using it on November 20, 1895, 'said gun discharged and fired backward and bursted, causing portions of the cartridge and broken mechanism to strike him in the face, severely wounding him and lacerating his face and destroying one of his eyes.' The Winchester Company has accepted service of the complaint through Lawyer J. T. Moran. The case is returnable to the Superior Court."

The current number of Shooting and Fishing has an illustration showing a repeating shot gun with the breech action and barrel torn and twisted by reason of a "blow up." N. M. Nelson of Plainview, Neb., was the owner of the gun, a $40 grade Burgess repeater. He says: "I escaped easier than Mr. D." (referring to another case of gun burst previously mentioned in that journal), "my wrist and forearm being blown full of powder and splinters, but no bones broken or cords cut. It seems almost a miracle that I escaped as I did. There was a piece of metal about the length and width of one's finger that blew clear out of the chamber of the gun and barely missed my arm. The gun made a terrible report, but did not fly out of my hands at all. I had the stock in one hand and barrel in the other. I am at a loss to account for the explosion, as I had shot several thousands of similar loads in the same gun." The accident happened last June. Mr. Nelson was indeed lucky.

This journal has advocated in the interest of game protection, the suppression of the "pump gun" in the ordinary and sportsmanlike pursuit of game and that it is to be regarded as of the same class and style of game destroyer as are the four and eight bore guns, the use of which are declared to be illegal by our State game laws. This view has been adopted by the Marin county authorities, which have prohibited the use of repeating shot guns in killing game within the county. This subject is now under consideration in other counties also and is advocated by many sportsmen. From the incidents above referred to it would seem that the inducements held out by the different manufacturers are but a poor recompense for the loss of one or both eyes, the hand or an arm, or possibly life itself. These desperate chances being taken (principally by novices) for the purposes of slaughtering big bags of game or giving a "Wild West" exhibition at a trap shoot.

A comparison of the following trade announcements will afford great opportunity for reflection. One company offers an implement, the chief merits of which are its wonderful facilities in the line of wholesale and rapid game slaughter: "Burgess Repeating Shot Gun. Semi-automatic. Extra safety locking. Double hits in 1 8 of a second. 3 hits in less than one second. 6 hits in three seconds. Repeats without losing aim. - Strong, reliable, hard and close shooting."

This prize package sometimes attracts the attention of people who can't spare the time necessary to take a trip to one of our Eastern cities for the purpose of purchasing a bundle of Confederate money.

"Champion Elliott shoots regular Winchester Factory Loaded 'Leader' Shells and a Winchester 'Taka Down' Repeating Shotgun, which lists at only $27.00. All Winchester Factory Loaded 'Leader' Shells and Winchester Repeating Shotguns shoot just as well as those used by Champion Elliott. If you want to shoot as well as he does shoot the same make of gun and shells that he does."

Mr. Elliott is undoubtedly a great shooter, his recent record of 100 straight and 99 out of 100 live birds proves it. He has been at the game for some thirty years and will do equally good work with any reliable double barrel gun. He is employed by the company to advertise their goods the same as many other prominent trap shots are.

The candid admission of the dangerous nature of the goods and the risks run in the use of rival manufacturers' wares as shown below is refreshing. This company introduces you in a most charming manner to the Grim Reaper and then glibly admonishes you that their particular fire-iron is the real thing. The assurance here shown would no doubt be supplemented with an accident policy as a bonus if one so desired.

"In these days of smokeless powders and high pressures why take chances on filling your face with powder, losing your eyesight and possibly your life by using a repeater that opens on top and ejects into your face, when you can avoid the possibility by buying a Marlin? The Solid Top Frame and Side Ejecting principle is the most important improvement made in repeating arms for many years. Complete illustrated catalogue for 3 stamps."

In the Jaws of a Man-Eater.

[A True Tale from South Africa.]

The following luridly-realistic account of what happened in Africa to Ernest Brockman, a telegraph operator, is vouched for by the Sydney Bulletin. Mr. Brockman was employed at the time on the transcontinental Cape-to-Cairo line, and had with him another white man and fifty blacks. Brockman (who relates the narrative) and his mate, Morkel, each occupied a small hut, and the former had on this occasion been sound asleep till:—

"About 2 in the morning I became conscious of something moving backwards and forwards and up and down underneath my bed. Just as consciousness was growing clearer and stronger, a loud long, and indescribable sniff, broke the stillness of the night. Though my experience of Africa was not extensive, I instantly realized that my death was at hand, and that a man-eating lion was under my bed! No other animal, I knew perfectly well, would hold enough to come right into my hut in this manner. Every one of my faculties seemed to be paralysed with horror. Though perfectly conscious of everything that was going on, I was unable to utter a sound. My heart beat as though it would burst, and its tremendous throbbings almost suffocated me. I was almost fainting with terror at the thought of so fearful a fate.

After a moment or two I became aware that the lion had got out from under the bed, and was sniffing his way along its edge, perhaps a little puzzled by the mosquito curtains. I then seemed to realize that I must do something, and instinctively, yet as noiselessly as possible, I huddled all the pillows and bed clothes up over my head and face—actuated by the same instinct, perhaps, which prompts little boys and girls to dive under the bed clothes when afraid of the bogey man.

No sooner had I done this than the animal with a horrible purr, grabbed me by the right shoulder and dragged me out onto the floor, bed clothes and all. The brute immediately commenced to suck the blood that streamed down my neck and chest, and every time I moved he bit me more savagely. As I raised my knees to get into a crouching protective position, he gave me a little pat with his paw which nearly broke my leg and inflicted a dreadful wound. After a moment or two of this dreadful experience on the floor of the hut the monster dropped me out of his mouth, placed one proud and massive paw on my chest, and then, throwing back his noble head, he gave one, two, three, four terrible roars of triumph and defiance.

As these mighty, reverberating sounds died away in deep, hoarse growls, I could bear the devil's own uproar outside. The niggers were firing off their guns like mad—the wonder is they never killed each other. I afterwards learned that the first thing each of them did was to swarm up the nearest available tree in order to get out of harm's way. It is necessary to bear in mind that a darkness prevailed in the clearing which might, in homely language, have been "felt." It seems that Morkel was awakened at the first roar, and, without a moment's delay, he got out of bed, put on his trousers and hat, and then sailed forth with his rifle thinking that the lion must at least be very close to the camp, judging from the loudness of the roars he himself had heard. He made his way, or rather felt his way, over to my hut, doubtless wondering why I had not come out to meet him. He was guided partly by the excited cries of the Kaffirs, and partly by the loud purr of the fearful brute that had got me. When Morkel got to the door he cried out, "Brockman, where are you? Speak to me, for God's sake!" I heard him, as indeed I heard everything else, but was absolutely unable to utter a sound, though I was fully aware that my life depended upon it. Morkel must have worked round my hut and seen the hole made by the lion, who simply pushed the poles on one side, and then tore out the mat walls, and crawled in under my bed. Then, of course, poor Dan realized what had happened, and he ran round to the other side and kicked the door down.

All this time, the only thing I seemed to take an interest in was the loud sipping suck, suck, made by the lion as he drew my blood into his seeking jaws. I remembered, with a pang of regret, that I had not lived a model life recently, and I began to pray as I had never prayed before. As I prayed I thought how curious it was that I should be lying there without the slightest sense of pain, with a man-eating lion chewing my flesh and drinking my blood. I could not realize the full horror of the thing. I had been lying on my back on the floor of the hut, with my neck and head resting against the side, when Morkel kicked in the door. As he did so, the lion drove his terrible fangs into my right groin, and next moment, with another loud purr-r-r-r, he leapt out of the hut into the darkness—almost into Morkel's face. As he ran with me he seemed to be twisting and jerking me round sideways, as though striving to get me on his back. You may imagine Dan Morkel's feelings as he groped around in the inky darkness, screaming out first to one nigger and then to another to bring lighted bunches of grass, for God's sake. He found his way into my hut, and on feeling in the bed he placed his hand in a large pool of blood, which gave unmistakable information as to what had happened.

The lion ran across the clearing with me for about thirty yards, and put me down under a big baobab tree. He ran with a springy leap, purring loudly as he went, for all the world like a contented cat. Even as he ran he was sucking violently, and, as the flesh became dry in one place, he let me half-drop out of his jaws, and then bit savagely in another place, and commenced to suck again. The brute seemed to resent the slightest movement of my body. If I moved an arm he bit it viciously, and an uneasy jerk of my leg would be punished with a terrible scrape of the claws. I lay on my back at the base of the tree with the lion on top of me, occasionally gazing at me with his great, luminous, yellowish-green eyes, which seemed to fill me with unutterable loathing and horror, so expressionless and cold were they, yet so diabolical in their ruthless cruelty. I ought to tell you that, from the very first, I had ceased to wonder how it was that the lion did not kill me outright—either by biting my head or tearing me to pieces with his terrible claws. I had seen lions kill oxen by driving their heads down between their legs, and so breaking their necks, and I knew that if the monster who was drawing my blood in streams into his mouth only chose to kill me, he need only give me one tap with his all-powerful paw.

But the lion seemed perfectly content and quiet with his prey. I felt his long, rough tongue scraping up my thighs and abdomen, and as it crept up higher and higher I felt little gusts of his horrible, stinking breath, which were so utterly loathsome that I thought I should faint, so intense was the disgust that filled me. I half turned my head away, but still the long, greedy tongue rose higher and higher toward my throat. Up to this time I had been reflecting, in a strangely calm manner, on the curious aspect of this frightful affair, precisely as though I were a disinterested outsider, instead of the dying victim of the man-eater. As I felt the lion's carion-soiled jaws near my face and throat, however, I was seized with terror, and instinctively I threw up both arms, and thrust them far in beneath his jaws, and, indeed, almost down his throat. As I did so the monster snapped off three fingers of my right hand, and, horrible as it may seem to the reader, I actually left my arms and hands lying idly in the lion's jaws. "Thank God," thought I, "he is satisfied with sucking the bleeding fingers he has bitten off, and as long as I can keep him at arm's length with my hands in his mouth, I will have yet a few moments of life left for earnest prayer." And I prayed—God! how I prayed. Sometimes it seemed to me it was a little hard to die in this way, and I felt I didn't want to leave my bones in that horrible place. My life, however, was fast ebbing away, and, later on, I didn't seem to mind it so much. I grew fainter and fainter, and—so I am told—I kept moaning feebly, "Dan, D. N. Oh, why can't you shoot him, or do something? Oh, Dan, Dan, Dan!"

Constantly my thoughts reverted to my people at home, and I felt bitterly sorry on their account, for I knew how horrified and shocked they would be at my terrible end. After thinking of these things for a few moments I would resign myself to death with a feeling of complacency, and then next moment, perhaps, I would have some kind of a vague idea that I should be saved after all. I could distinctly feel each bite, because, although it caused not the slightest pain, yet, as the fearful fangs were driven into a fresh place in my thighs—the monster only chose the more fleshy parts—I was conscious of a strange numbness in that part. I kept murmuring to myself, gently, "Perhaps he won't kill me after all—perhaps he will, though, the moment he has sucked that place dry. I wonder when he will commence eating me," and then I reflected, quite in a serious sort of a way, "he will find me very dry eating after all the blood-sucking he has done."

During all this time the boys kept screaming, "Nkauga, Nkauga!" (the lion, the lion) just as if they themselves were in any danger in the leafy trees up which they had swarmed. Poor Dan Morkel was simply walking around the clearing in utter bewilderment and agony of mind. The appalling blackness of the night added a horror to the thing which no pen could describe. At last my friend did induce two of the niggers to make a couple of torches of dry grass, and by the lurid and uncertain light of these, Morkel was enabled, though very indistinctly, to see the lion standing over my prostrate body. He was an enormous, gaunt brute; over 10 feet in length, and with a luxuriant, tawny mane that imparted to him a most majestic appearance. Dan told me afterwards that, as he approached with his gun, I was moaning or crooning softly to myself. Up to this time my unfortunate companion was afraid to shoot, lest he should kill me instead of the lion. He screamed out, "Keep cool, Brockman"—a funny admonition, this—"only keep cool and I will see what I can do for you." As he approached the lion took his fangs out of my groin, which was by this time a mere pulp, and he faced about, growling and snarling horribly, and with one paw on my chest. How Morkel kept his head at ten paces from the lion I don't know, but anyhow, he levelled his rifle and fired. The lion immediately staggered back a few paces, clear of my body, for he had been hit fairly in the eye, and the ball, after touching his brain, had come out through the lower jaw, which was badly broken. Morkel instantly proceeded to reload, but he was in such a desperate hurry that the lever of his rifle jammed, and he found himself practically helpless. Will it be believed that this desperate man, now fairly at his wits' end, rushed forward towards the lion and dealt him a terrific blow on the head with the stock of his rifle? This did the lion no harm, whereas Morkel's gun was literally crumpled up. My friend, however, at once implored his torch-bearer to run over to the hut and get my rifle, and with this he killed the lion in two other shots.

It may be asked, what did I do when I felt myself free? It is important to remember that when Morkel's first shot rang out in the night air, the lion had been worrying, biting and sucking me for about thirteen minutes. Well, the moment the brute retreated from me, I actually got up on my legs and ran for twenty or thirty yards! Then I fell like a stone to the earth, and I remember no more till the next day, when I found myself in a warm bath, that had been prepared by Morkel to wash my wounds—of which I had one-and-twenty! My poor friend tells me that my naked body presented so shocking, so revolting a spectacle, my hands, groins and thighs being caked and bloodless, like paper pulp, that he nearly lost his reason and became delirious. All that night, however, my heroic companion had sat by my bedside until daybreak, and well do I remember that with awakened consciousness came the first poignant shock of agony from my wounds. For many days and nights I suffered the torments of the accursed, taking not one atom of solid food, but only enormous draughts of brandy and champagne. Now comes the horrible sequel to my story. Remember, at this stage I am hundreds, if not thousands of miles from civilization, and even the nearest missionary doctor is far away from this remote spot. Without wishing to harrow you with unnecessary details I may say that every one of my wounds morified, no doubt owing to the poisonous filth that encrusted the man-eater's fangs. As I was growing more and more feverish, Morkel resolved to send me by lake steamer to Banawa, where I could be attended by Dr. Prentice, of the Livingstone Mission of that place. This steamer was due to make its monthly call the following day at Domara, only a few miles from our camp. A messenger was therefore sent to intercept the captain and ask him to make a call a little further down the lake in order that I might be put on board. I was wrapped in blankets and laid on a plank, which was in turn placed transversely on a canoe. Just after we had started for the steamer, however, quite a 'sea' arose on the lake, and the plank shifted on one side, so that if I had not been grabbed by one of the men in the boat I should have been drowned! Is it not painful?

It took a day and a half to reach Bandawe, the weather being boisterous and the water very choppy. A little hut was rigged up for me on deck, but I had a shocking time of it. When Dr. Prentice saw me at the Mission station he told me that my case was utterly hopeless. My right leg, I was told, would have to go, but owing to my condition, it was deemed inadvisable to amputate it immediately on my arrival. Then there was no chloroform at the Mission station, and the ether had gone wrong through the climate, and therefore would not act. Thus I had to lie, conscious and screaming in agony, while the doctor was cutting and carving away the mortified flesh from my tortured body. It is perfectly clear that my day had not come, for all the bites in the thigh had missed the artery by about an eighth of an inch!

And night after night I went through the whole frightful business again. Ghastly, horrible nightmares took possession of me, and I would have gone raving mad were it not for powerful opiates that were administered. A slamming door, the sudden appearance of a man before me, anything and everything, threw me into a perfect agony of terror pitiful to witness. My mind and reason were all but gone, and I, who had been a giant of strength was like a timid little child, a mere wreck of a man in mind and body.

The British South African Company have been very kind to me, for, of course, it isn't as though I had been out hunting, when, naturally, I should have to take the risks incidental to sport of that kind. I believe mine is the only case on record of a man-eater taking a white man out of his bed at night. I still hobble about on sticks, and I often wake up in a cold perspiration, thinking I can hear the soul-destroying snuff-sniff of the man-eating lion beneath my head."

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

A total of 148 dogs were henched at the recent Victoria show. The entries numbered 210.
 The Gentlemen's Kennel Club has been organized in Seattle. The new organization will affiliate with the American Kennel Club.

We are indebted to Mr. J. H. Dorian for a handsome engraving of Princess Bonnie, a nine months old rough coat St. Bernard by Alta Millo—Bonnie Doone.

It is probable that Mr. C. D. Nairn will officiate as judge at Oakland in December. Mr. Nairn has many friends in this section who appreciate his good work at past shows.

Redwood Cocker Kennels sold the cocker spaniel Banner Jake during the Victoria show to a northern fancier. Banner Jake originally came from the Swiss Mountain Kennels.

Diablo II., a likely rough coat St. Bernard, who has shown well whenever he was henched, is now in stud. He should prove a good sire, being a strong boned, well got up animal. He is in better shape and looking finer now than ever before.

W. R. Lewis, of Honolulu, H. I., writes of his eight months' old fox terrier bitch puppy, Hawaiian Victoria, by Aldon Swagger—Aldon Radiance, as follows: "She is a perfect size, long lean head, nice small ears well carried, small keen eye, excellent body, legs feet, bone and front, profuse hard coat which lays flat, splendid disposition, a charming terrier and the best I have ever seen."

W. R. Lewis of Honolulu, H. I., who has been breeding and rearing fox terriers for the past ten years, has pups from three different bitches sired by J. B. Martin's Aldon Swagger and is in a position to write intelligently upon the dog's qualities as a sire, he says, "I like Swagger's pups, they all have good legs and bone, excellent coats, nice heads, small eyes and ears and full of terrier character. I am sure that Swagger is a good sire and that he will do the breed a lot of good in your section."

Mr. N. H. Hickman has now at his kennels a choice lot of youngsters by Vigilant, out of Elmwood Grace, combining the blood of Stipendiary and a double strain of those sterling champions Venio and Dominie—England's premier terriers. Vigilant (now dead) is the sire of Santa Rosa, the sensation puppy, who carried all before her in the San Francisco Show, 1899. There is also a younger litter out of the same bitch by Coont Othmar (Blemton Reeper—Dauntless White Violet). Othmar is as game a terrier as ever stood on four feet. Othmar has the Venio cross, and is a good show dog in the ring. The sire of Elmwood Grace (Blackrock Rummager) is a litter brother to Champion Clytha Starlight, the dam of Champion Claude Duval.

The A. K. C. is continually tinkering at the rules and substituting one word for another until it is difficult to tell from year to year how the rules read unless they are continually published in revised form, but here is a little of the explicit that might well be incorporated for the benefit of novices who are continually coming into the fancy, says the American Stock-keeper. We would not for the world suggest that the old hands need reminding of the following in the rules of the English Kennel Club.

"A dog shall be disqualified from winning a first prize, or from receiving one, if awarded at any show held under Kennel Club rules save and except in such cases as are specified here, under the head of "Exceptions," if it be proved to the committee of the show:

1. That any dye, coloring, whitening or darkening matter has been used and remains on any part of the dog.
2. That any preparation, chemical or otherwise, has been used, which remains on the coat during the time of exhibition, for the purpose of altering its texture.
3. That any oily, greasy or sticky substance, water, or any other fluid, has been used and remains in the coat during the time of exhibition.

4. That any part of a dog's coat or hair has been cut, clipped, singed or rasped down by any substance
 5. That the new or fast coat has been removed by pulling or plucking, in any manner.
- Note—The coat may be brushed and combed, so that old and shedding coat and loose hairs may be removed.
6. That if any cutting, piercing, breaking by force, or any kind of operation or act which destroys the tissues of the ear, or alters their natural formation or carriage, or shortens the tail, or alters the natural formation of the dog, or any part thereof, has been practiced, or any other thing that has been done calculated in the opinion of the Committees of the Kennel Club to deceive, except in cases of necessary operation certified to the satisfaction of the Kennel Club Committee.
 7. That the lining membrane of the mouth has been cut or mutilated in any way.

EXCEPTIONS.

1. Shortening of the tails of dogs of the following breeds will not render them liable to disqualification: Spansiels (except Irish water), fox, Irish, Welsh, old English and Aire-dale terriers, old English sheepdogs, poodles, toy spaniels (except Japanese), Yorkshire terriers, Schipperkes, or such varieties of foreign dogs as the committee may from time to time determine.
2. Dogs of the following breed may have their coats clipped: Poodles
3. The long stiff, wiry hairs (known as whiskers) growing out at the sides of the lips and those similar to them on the cheek spots, may be removed in Great Danes, bull terriers, white English terriers, black and tan and toy terriers; and dogs of the aforesaid breeds which have been cropped prior to March 31, 1895 may have the hair removed from the inside of ears, and bull terriers may have the hair removed from underside of tail.
3. Dewclaws may be removed in any breed."

The New Rules.

The quarterly meeting of the American Kennel Club, as reported in the A. K. C. Gazette, was one of the longest sessions in the history of the club, but as is not infrequently the case the most protracted discussions were over points of much less import than others much more quickly passed upon. On this occasion the greatest time spent was over the motion to compel the henching of an owner's dogs of one breed together. The Rules Committee made the motion in order to permit a legal vote being taken on a rule which had been passed illegally at the annual meeting. There was no evidence to show that the committee approved of the rule; in fact, it was known that some of the committee members were opposed to it, but in order to get the matter before the club the committee decided unanimously to move its adoption without any recommendation. It was elicited in the discussion that the only club which had declined to accede to such requests was the Westminster Kennel Club, and Mr. Mortimer explained why this was so. The opponents of the motion did not object to the henching of an owner's dogs together, indeed, thought it a good thing, but they held that it was part of the management of a show which fell directly and wholly within the province of the club holding the show, and on finally reaching the vote it was seen that the opposition were in the majority by one, while it required a two-thirds vote to carry the motion. It may safely be said that it is the desire of every club giving a show to oblige its supporters, and to refuse nothing that can in reason be permitted, and it is also to be conceded that in a show of the size of that of the Westminster Kennel Club there are conditions which are not met with at smaller expositions.

It is of more importance on this occasion to draw attention to some of the leading features of the rules which will come into operation on January 1.

To Rule 2 the amendment is of great importance, especially to handlers of dogs, who generally make a settlement at the time of receiving their prize money. We are glad to note, however, that since the American Kennel Club has shown that attention is being paid to the matter of listing, a desire to protect their dogs from disqualification is manifest among those known as handlers. We have of late been in receipt of direct remittances from such for dogs about the listing of which they had no knowledge. In such cases the money is returned if the dog is on the books as being listed. The necessity to list is still further emphasized by the new rule, which makes it imperative to do so before exhibiting the dog. A deduction from prize money is not a payment, such as the new rule recognizes.

There no longer being any necessity to qualify for the higher class, such as was the case in the Challenge Class days, the necessity for naming wins does not now exist, hence the first change in Rule 5, and the second change is meant to cover a little obscurity as to whether a registered dog's name could be changed for show purposes only and not for registration. The rule, as amended, sets it clear that it cannot be done.

The committee's propositions with regard to the classification were amended in one important point. In the puppy class rule the substitution of "sire or dam" for pedigree is in the interests of clearness. The change in Limit Class is the one referred to as important. A dog will not be forced out of the Limit Class until he has won four times in that class, or has become a champion. This seems to be a very satisfactory solution to the ever increasing complaint of having one's best dogs soon competing against each other in the Open Class. In the Winners' Class rule the method of estimating old wins was simplified by amendment, and a dog that has won at all in the class as at present need only compete his quota of three wins at any show to earn the title.

Two of the new provisions to govern clubs will be welcomed by superintendents and secretaries. It will no longer be necessary to trouble themselves about dogs being marked listed on the entry form, and they may omit from the catalogue the rules and regulations which are still a necessity in the premium list.

It remains for the American Kennel Club officers to find places for the new rules passed at the instance of the Spaniel and Collie clubs. The one regarding the removal of puppies will apparently have to get a number, as it is hardly applicable as an additional section to any existing rule, but the one barring English champions from the novice class is naturally a part of Section 2 of the rule governing classes. The rules come into effect on January 1, 1900.

The following are the amended rules as finally decided upon:

Rule II. Every dog shown under these rules must either be registered or listed with the American Kennel Club previous to be exhibited.

Rule V. Striking out the words "together with a list of all prizes won by the dog," and adding a new paragraph, "The name of a registered dog cannot be changed after having been published in the Stud Book."

CLASSES.

1. Puppy Class shall be for all dogs over six months and under twelve months of age, and no entry can be made of one under six months, or whose date of birth, breeder, sire or dam is unknown.

3. The Limit Class shall be for all dogs never having won four first prizes in said class at any recognized show, but no dog having acquired the title of champion shall be eligible to this class.

5. The Winners' Class shall be open only to the winners of first prizes at any show giving at least three of the before mentioned classes, one of which must be the open class, and the winner of ten points in this class will thereby become a champion of record, be so registered by the American Kennel Club upon application, and if registered in the Stud Book will be entitled to an American Kennel Club champion medal. Before awarding "reserve" in this class the dog or dogs having been placed second to the winner on any of the regular classes must be brought before the judge for competition with the remaining dogs in said winners' class. No class winner can be withdrawn or withheld from competition in the winners' class, and no entry fee shall be charged for said competition in this class. A dog that prior to December 1, 1899, has won once in the winners' class shall qualify as a champion by two additional wins, and a dog that has won twice qualifies with one win in any winners' class. The winners' class can be divided by sex, provided the required three classes announced in the premium list are also divided by sex.

CANCELLATION OF VIOLATIONS OF RULES.

When a puppy is entered, being under six months of age, or his date of birth, breeder, sire or dam is unknown.

When a dog is entered in the Limit Class, having previously won four or more first prizes in said class or is a champion.

When a dog has been improperly transferred by the show officials.

RULES GOVERNING CLUBS.

IX. No entry shall be accepted of any puppy under six months of age, or without date of birth, breeder, sire or dam, either for competition or exhibition.

XI. Striking out the first paragraph.

XI. Striking out the words "together with a copy of the dog show rules and such other regulations as were announced in the premium list."

For accepting entries for puppy classes under six months of age, or without date of birth, breeder, sire or dam, $5.

For failure to file with the American Kennel Club a marked catalogue certified to by the secretary of superintendent, and making a return of all listings and fee for same within seven days after the closing of the show, $1.

XVII. Adding the words "governing clubs holding shows."

BY-LAWS.

Section 4, striking out the words "Executive Committee" and substituting the word "Association."

NEW RULES ADOPTED.

Puppies may be permanently removed from a show at any time after their classes have been judged, whatever their classes may be, provided, however, that puppies may be so removed only after the close of a show in any evening.

A dog which has won a championship under English Kennel Club rules cannot be exhibited in the novice class.

The following scale of points was adopted to regulate the values of winners' classes at the A. K. C. shows; all shows to be rated upon the actual number of dogs entered not including local classes: 1250 dogs or over 5 points; 750 dogs and under 1250, 4 points; 500 dogs and under 750, 3 points; 250 dogs and under 500, 2 points; under 250 dogs, 1 point.

On the Pacific Coast 400 dogs or over, 5 points; 520 dogs and under 400, 3 points; under 250 dogs, 1 point.

Specialty clubs holding shows confined to their own breed, 4 points.

Specialty clubs holding shows not confined to their own breeds will be rated as regular shows.

New clubs holding inaugural shows, having no previous record, shall be rated 1 point as a minimum.

The secretary shall publish in the Gazette for December of each year the ratings of shows for the following year.

THE FARM.

Keeping Cows for Profit.

"Keeping Cows for Profit" is the well chosen title of the newest work on practical dairying to come under our notice. We understand that a large issue of this little publication is being gratuitously circulated with the compliments of the De Laval Separator Co., 74 Cortlandt St., New York, which concern offers to send a copy to every reader of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN upon request.

The book treats of dairying as a manufacturing business and discusses its problems from the standpoint that every dairy farmer is just as much a business man as though engaged in any other manufacturing or commercial undertaking. It is compiled in terse practical manner, is easily readable, and can hardly fail to be interesting and instructive to everyone in any way concerned in dairying. It is splendidly printed, handsomely illustrated, and altogether pleasing. The front cover shows a lithographed milking scene, and the back cover a cut of the Jersey cow, Ida Marigold, which received first prize at the Chicago Exposition.

The book begins with a brief review of the history of dairying, shows the relative percentages of the various component parts of the different dairying products, takes up the production and marketing of such products in one form after another, and closes with a pertinent reference to private dairying.

In an historical and statistical way it tells much that is interesting. We learn that dairying is of most ancient beginning, going back at least 2000 years before Christ, but that in a commercial way it is most modern, being scarcely more than the development of the last generation. We learn that in 1898 the dairy products of the United States were $500,000,000; that there are some 17,000,000 milch cows in the U. S.; an annual consumption of 1,750,050,000 gallons of milk; 1,500,000,000 lbs. of butter and 300,000,000 lbs. of cheese; and that 1899 prices of all dairying products, especially butter, have been considerably higher than for several years past.

We find that the average U. S. yield of milk per cow is less than 4000 lbs. a year, and only about 130 lbs. of butter; while to be profitable the milk yield should be from 5000 to 6000 lbs.; and the butter production never under 200 lbs. In this connection it is authoritatively stated that fully one half of the butter produced in farm butter making, by the practice of the older dairying methods, is made and marketed at an actual loss to the maker.

The book fairly teems with practical facts and epigrammatical expressions appealing to the dairy farmer, as for instance:

"It should not be assumed that dairying is being overdone and soon likely to become unprofitable. The contrary is the case. The home consumption of dairy products, particularly with greater industrial prosperity, is largely increasing from year to year. The European markets for these American products are only now being fairly opened up. The exports, which are as yet small, will within a few years amount to one-third of the total production, not only affording a sufficient market, but insuring the maintenance of prices.

Farm dairying communities are everywhere among the most prosperous, intelligent and progressive in the country.

"Modern dairy farming is just as much a business as any other commercial or manufacturing undertaking. It affords the same opportunities. In a practical sense it is a manufacturing business. The land, the feed, and the degree of care used are the dairy farmer's raw materials. The cow, the cream separator, churn, butter-worker, cans, coolers and other utensils are his tools and machinery. The sale of the milk, cream or butter is the marketing of his product. The prosperity of his business is largely of his own making, just as is that of any other.

"The tremendous advance in dairying practice within the past fifteen years has so revolutionized dairying methods about every five years during such period, that it is necessary, in order to be profitable, that dairying keep pace with advanced conditions. Dairying upon the lines of fifteen years ago is now a losing occupation. Dairying upon the basis of five and ten years ago now does well to make both ends meet. Profitable dairying of to-day must be up to date and be kept so.

"The selection of the practical dairy cow of to-day is not so much a question of particular breed as of individual productiveness. This will be found to vary in every herd of every breed. In breeding it is an established maxim that 'The bull is half the herd.' The bull should always be pure-bred and selected from a family from which the cows are of established dairy excellence.

"Cheese-making in the United States has not held its own in dairying advancement, as compared with other ways of marketing dairy products. It is questionable if cheese-factory patronage has been a practical form of dairying in other than but very few localities for several years. In nearly all sections it has been relatively profitable but for a short season at most. It is seldom practical unless there is some other means available of utilizing the milk profitably during the seasons when such is not the case in its cheese-factory sale.

"The success of the creamery business, like that of any other, depends on good management. The creamery patron must understand that this concerns him, since he is not going to receive more for his milk than the creamery management makes out of it in its conversion into butter and marketing.

"It is undoubtedly a fact that any one practicing dairying to-day, on however big or little scale, by the employment of one of the older gravity methods of cream raising without the help of ice or cold water, is doing so at so great a loss in skimming at all times, and in quality of product a good part of the time, that profit is simply impossible. Still, thousands are blindly pursuing such a system.

"Hardly any point is of greater importance in successful dairy butter making than marketing the product in business-like manner. This naturally begins with the packing of it. Appearance counts for a great deal in marketing butter, as in everything else."

One of the most interesting chapters is that devoted to skim milk, of which the use of the centrifugal cream separator has made a new by-product in dairying, with a much wider field of usefulness than was either thought of or possible in the practice of gravity setting. We find many ways in which skim milk is being used profitably, and that for some purposes it is as nutritive and useful as the whole milk itself. This is mainly due to its freshness and sweetness in centrifugal separation, since in gravity setting the bacterial growth in skim milk develops rapidly and the milk sugar, which is an extremely nutritive ingredient in its natural state, changes into an acid which is harmful rather than beneficial to both the animal and human stomach.

While the purpose of its distribution is no doubt an advertising one, in a considerable degree, there is much that is commendable in the little book, and we think it bears out the introductory statement that it is dedicated to every owner of a cow in the hope that it may afford some beneficial hint or suggestion to all who may take the trouble to look over its pages.

Another of the annual big cattle deals for Lake county was consummated last Wednesday, when Heryford Bros. of Lakeview sold to W. D. Duke of Miller & Lux, about 1000 head of fat beef cattle, to be delivered at the Davis ranch in Siskiyou county between the 1st and 10th of October. Every fall this big firm turns off from $20,000 to $40,000 worth of beef.—Lakeview Examiner.

A large number of farmers and stockmen were in Colusa Monday evening, having been in attendance upon the Houx sale, where everything is reported to have brought top-notch prices, says the Colusa Herald. Joe Gibson paid $240, $260 and $280 respectively for three spans of mules. About $8000 worth of personal property was disposed of.

Good Priors for Mules.

The idea that a man can buy good work stock at a low price has for several months been prevalent among that class of people who had no such occasion for such stock, but to the farmer who needs good young mules the idea is just the reverse.

This fact was demonstrated within the past two weeks by Carroll Cecil, who brought from Silver Creek, Oregon, forty head of young, unbroken mules. Mr. Cecil took his herd of mules to Grand Island, where in a few days he disposed of the entire lot at $260 per span.

On his way home Mr. Cecil stopped in Chico last night and was interviewed by an Enterprise representative. He laughs at the idea that there is no longer any profit in raising working animals for the market and insists that the business is just as profitable as ever.

"The mules I brought to Grand Island," said he, "were all good, sound animals, but were nothing above the average. I sold them in a very few days after arriving at my place on Grand Island and could have sold twice as many more if I had brought them along. This talk about there being no market for mules is all bosh. The price is good now, but it is sure to be much better next fall, and at that time I expect to bring a very large herd of young mules into the Sacramento valley. I feel confident that next year I will get $300 a span. Farmers who need good stock are willing to pay what such stock is worth, and they, above all others, know what they are worth."—Chico Enterprise.

A new feature in cattle dealing is the purchase of feeders at the northern markets to be fattened at oil mills in the Gulf States. Last month several men representing oil mills at West Point, Miss., and Tuscaloosa, Ala., were in St. Louis looking out for feeding cattle to be fed at their mills. Owing to the short supply of cattle in their own States they were unable to buy there what they wanted, and they probably know also, that a better grade of cattle than is found there is sent from the range sections to the northern markets, and that such cattle can be handled more profitably in the feed lots than the inferior stock. There is no reason why the Southern States should not utilize in this way their enormous supply of cotton seed, as they can also produce corn and alfalfa, and make beef and mutton producing an important southern industry.

The Bakersfield Californian says that the Kern County Land Company has sold thirty-six head of horses, ten of them Shetland ponies, the remainder broodmares, mostly draft. The stock was shipped to the City of Mexico.

Individuality of the Cow.

We have known farmers to pooch-pooch the idea of studying cow individuality. They said it was not practical in a large herd and was unnecessary; and often they went on wasting grain on some cows and not getting out of others what could be got out of them. Certainly every cow's milk should be tested. There is but one side to that proposition. Whoever does not agree with it is living too far back in the darkness to afford the slightest excuse for a live man to argue with him, and a dead one cannot. But that test does not end the matter. The milk of a cow may test well, but in time that cow will be found teking on fat, and if individuality cuts no figure with her owner, she will continue to convert feed into fat, and her milk yield will become less and less. If the dairymen is watching every individual of his herd, and observing her peculiarities, when he sees this fat-making tendency, he will cut down the cow's ration, and if she still takes on fat, he will send her to the shambles, or sell her to somebody who does not regard the study of individuality as important.

Another cow may be pouring nearly all her feed and part of herself into the milk pail. It is often said that a cow will take care of herself before she will make milk out of her feed. She does not always do it. There are cows that seem intent on making milk and nothing else. They utterly neglect to feed their systems, and such cows will become thinner and thinner. If we are watching the individual and observe a cow like that, we will increase the ration and keep on increasing it as long as we can get returns. It is a little trouble—but not so much after all—to vary the rations to suit different cows. The cow that is taking on flesh should have very little, if any, fat forming food. Eliminate the corn meal, or other similar ingredient from her ration. Feed her wholly or mainly on nitrogenous foods. For the thin cow increase the fat-forming elements.

There must be a reasonable limit, however, a feeding fat-forming feed. Prof. Otis very truly says a dairy cow, fed on a ration rich in protein and light in carbohydrates, will continue to develop for years, both in ability to consume feed and to yield milk, and properly handled does not reach her highest yield until eight or ten years old, and is then good for from five to eight more years of profitable work. A cow heavily fed on a ration of average composition, greatly deficient in protein and high in carbohydrates, does burn out and will not last long.

This year's feeding increases next year's yield. A cow high fed this year will give better returns for food consumed next year than one having a light ration now; and the skillful dairyman can, by studying his cow, gradually increase from year to year the amount of feed consumed and the yield of milk produced per pound of feed eaten for a number of years. In this work of developing the poor cows will reach their limits much earlier than the good ones, and can be fattened and sold.

We fully endorse what Professor Otis has said. As has often been said, the proper feeding of a calf develops its capacity for being a heavy feeder when it becomes a cow; and a similar method of feeding will increase the capacity of the cow. If the calf is fed largely on concentrated feed, its digestive apparatus is contracted; if it is fed on fat forming food, it contracts the habit of taking on fat. To a lesser degree the cow's digestive functions may be injured by too much concentrated food and not enough roughage or milk; and it is possible to make her too fat by feeding too much of the carbohydrates.—Delaware Dairymen.

Cream Foaming.

There is a good deal of complaint about cream foaming in the churn, and many remedies are proposed. According to the old-time buttermakers if the butter did not come or the cream foamed the trouble was laid to witches getting in the churn and a horseshoe was kept on hand that was heated and put in the cream, which sometimes drove the witches out and sometimes it didn't, depending upon whether the cream was too hot or too cold. If it was too cold, the horseshoe heated up the cream and made the butter come, but it was of no use when the cream was already too hot.

Now, the correct remedy for all these troubles lies in the proper use of the thermometer. A cheap tin thermometer answers as well as a high-priced one, because you will have to experiment anyway to find at just what temperature your particular cream churns best. Mark on the face of the instrument with a lead pencil at what temperature you have the best success, and make that your rule of action.

The main point is to learn just how to use the thermometer. Say you want to start the cream at 62 degrees. First stir the cream well and put in the thermometer to see how near it is above or below zero. If it is already above this mark then if you have no ice, try the instrument in the coldest water you have or the coldest place you can put the cream to get the it down to 62 degrees. If the well water is cold enough then set the cream can in a deep vessel in this water, and hold the thermometer in the cream, stir until it comes down to 62 degrees, and take the cream out of the water instantly; do not wait a minute. A little carelessness here will make a half hour's difference in time of getting the butter to come, which is not only greater labor, but it injures the quality of the butter.

A little practice will make perfect in this matter and you will soon have no trouble with cream foaming. You should have a record of the temperature of the outside air, well and cistern water and cellar air all taken about the same hour of the same day.

By this means you can tell at any time the relative temperature of all these means of tempering the cream. By getting the outside temperature at any other time you will know how cold or how hot the cellar air and well and cistern are. The creamery manager watches his thermometers when he is at work just as carefully as the engineer watches the steam gauge on his engine.—The Farmer.

To make a good cow from a good calf two things must be guarded against, and they are a lack of food to make a proper growth, and the use of such food as will fatten instead of building up the frame and muscular system. The skim milk fed calf will usually make a better dairy cow than one that is allowed to suckle the old cow, if sufficient pains are taken to give the skim milk at the right time and of a proper temperature, for two reasons, it does not put on so much fat while young, and it does not feel the change so much when the milk is taken away, and it is made to live upon grass or hay. The latter is, however, in part due to the fact that, as the skim milk is thought of little value for other purposes, its use is generally continued until the calf is three or four months old, when it is well able to eat and digest other food, while those who let the calf continue sucking its mother, feel that it is coating too much, and want to wean it at six weeks old or sooner.

If the calf lays on fat while young, it seems to acquire in some way the peculiarity of the digestive organs changing all the food to fat, and when it becomes a cow it cannot be fed liberally for the purpose of increasing the milk without fattening up at once and giving less milk then before. In this respect at least the over fed calf is likely not to make as good a cow for milk as the one that has been underfed. But the latter is likely to be undersized, and with digestive powers weakened by the course of starvation, and it is only by a long course of judicious and careful feeding that it can be brought to the form it should have had.

This is the way Professor Robertson, the Commissioner of Agriculture for Canada, describes what he calls a good business cow. "Her power of service will be indicated by certain external points. She should have a large, long udder, of elastic fine quality; a mellow, movable skin covered with soft, silky hair; a long, large herrel, hooped with flat ribs, broad and wide apart; a broad loin, spreading out into broad, long hind quarters; an open twist with rather thin hips, and a lean neck of symmetrical length, carrying a clean cut, fine face, with prominent eyes. A cow with these points has ability to serve a man well if she gets a fair chance. That her calves may have powers equal to or rather better than her own, care should be exercised in their breeding. The best blood of the breed adapted to the farmer's purpose should be used to enlarge, and not to lessen, the working capacity to be transmitted to her calves."

Henry Haile, of Southwest Sutter, last week received eight full hooded merino hucks which he purchased in Sacramento from an exhibitor at the Fair. Mr. Haile says these bucks are the finest sires he has ever owned. Lately he has increased the Haile & Walz flock by the purchase of 4000 ewes and wethers.

A Faulty System.

["Veritas" in Trotter and Pacer.]

While the racing season is waning and the horsemen and writers are beginning to draw conclusions from its lessons, we predict that by common consent, some radical changes will be demanded by the entry makers in the early closing guaranteed purses. The plan of requiring subscribers to pay the greater part of five per cent. long before the nominated horse can be put in condition to prove his worth, works so well in the interests of the purse givers and proves so clearly for the benefit of an owner of a Kingmond, or a Hal B., that the rank and file of less lucky owners are growing tired of contributing to the costly game. Moreover, such a plan tends to dull public interest in racing, for the jog handle outcome of seeing few starters with a season's wonder first, and the others nowhere is not popular. By certain earmarks we judge the system as conducted is open to the charge of unfairness, inasmuch as some of the nominators are either too poor or too shrewd to advance a heavy tax of entrance money, on the long leap in the dark installment plan. It looks as if some nominations are carried along on the trust to luck, pay if you like your horse on fourth payment or declare out, mode of doing business. Then along comes the big stable owner with his two or three entries in one class, to be carried on a single payment, all of which is manifestly unjust to the single nominator who is required to pay promptly, and in good faith according to the published conditions of the race. We hold that special privileges should be abolished, that two easy cash payments of say one per cent. each should be collected for each horse, up to within thirty days of the race, when a third payment of one per cent. should be exacted, or horse declared out, the remaining two per cent. to be paid fifteen days before the race. An event constructed on these lines would do away with dummy and double entries, and put all nominators on an even footing. Just fancy a man being foolish enough to make a match race and name but one horse, while the other man may name three horses and start which ever one he likes, but instead of putting up three times as much money, he need only stake the same amount as the "one horse" nominator. But that is precisely the principles often worked by the influential owner of two or three good ones, and the unfair plan is sometimes carried farther, as the same two or three horses are entered in two or three events of the same meeting, but all on the one payment and probably trust plan. If such an owner was required to put up cash, dollar for dollar, with the single-entry, square going nominator, it is probable that he would name but one horse, and that one might train off, or not prove as good as his unengaged ones, thus giving the single owner an equal chance, and so that glorious uncertainty which is the life and begot of racing would be maintained.

Indeed, it is only fair that each and every owner should have the right to learn from the secretary the status of each entry within a reasonable time of the first, and subsequent payments. Now, certain phases of the fall purses which bloom in the spring present a blind pool, in which the man who has faithfully complied with the conditions, is no equally yoked with many who have pulled strings that opened the association's door of better terms.

Answers to Correspondents.

D. F. O.—1 Can you give me the address of T. C. Snider, the breeder of Recta by Director? 2. Who was the breeder of Grace by Buccaneer? 3. The breeding of Flaxtail 8132? 4. The address of Silas Skinner? 5. Who bred Fontana? 6. Who was the breeder of Fanny Williams? 7. What is the breeding of Denmark (Gains)?

Answer—1. Broderick, Yolo county, Cal. 2. The late Dr. M. W. Hicks, of Sacramento. 3. The American Trotting Register says "nothing is really known of the blood of this horse. It is probable he was got by Pruden's Blue Bull." Dr. M. W. Hicks, who brought Flaxtail to California, stated in all his catalogues that the horse was by Pruden's Blue Bull, and his dam untraced. Pruden's Blue Bull was by a horse called Merring's Blue Bull, and was the sire of Wilson's Blue Bull 75, the great sire of trotters and pacers. 4. Silas Skinoer died some years ago. His widow is at present a resident of Berkeley, Cal., and can probably furnish any information of the horses bred by her late husband. 5. Gen. W. T. Withers, Lexington, Ky, who sold her to the late Mr. Skinner. 6. Bred by Dr. Geo. H. Perrin, Cynthia, Ky., and passed to Gen. Withers. 7. Gain's Denmark was by Denmark, a thoroughbred son of imp. Hedgeford and Betsy Harrison by Aratus. His dam was by Cockspur, grandam by Richard Singleton, thoroughbred son of Bertrand.—EDITOR B. & S.

In regard to Mary, by Flaxtail, she is a great progenitor of speed. She is the dam of Apex 2:26. She is also the dam of Grace, by Buccaneer, who is the dam of Daedalion 2:11, Egle 2:19 1/2, and Creole 2:15, the sire of Javelin 2:08 1/2. Mary is the dam of Lettie, by Wayland Forest, who is the dam of Welcome 2:10 1/2, Mand Singleton 2:28 1/2 (dam of Silver Ring 2:14 1/2), and Wavland W. 2:12 1/2, who sired Arthur W. 2:11 1/2, and John A. (3) 2:14. Mary is also the dam of Sterling, the sire of Acrobat 2:13 1/2, Chsrivari 2:20 1/2, Argent 2:24 1/2, Rathbones 2:28 and Brilliant, the sire of Brilliantine 2:17 1/2.

Subscriber—Please give in your next issue the best running record for a quarter of a mile, and what horse holds it?

Answer—21 1/2 seconds made by Bob Wade at Butte, Montana, August 20, 1890.

Washington State Fair.

The Washington State Fair was held at North Yakima this year and was quite well attended, the races being especially interesting and being well patronized. The summaries of the harness events were as follows:

Harness Racing at Walla Walla.

Following are the summaries of the harness events at the meeting held at Walla Walla, Washington, during the week ending October 7th. The regular events did not fill except in one instance and special races were made for the horses that were at the track.

Shipping Horses to Manila.

The last steamer from Honolulu brought the following report of the horses shipped by the United States Government from this port on the 27th of September.

The transport Centennial arrived from San Francisco on the 5th. She brought 300 horses, sixty of them hanging in slings, and ready to die from simple exhaustion. Two of them died after reaching port. The horses had been at sea for eight days, each one fastened to a stall just wide enough and long enough for its body. For eight days the suffering animals had no sleep nor rest whatever. They stood and kept balance with the rolling of the ship. A few days more and many deaths from exhaustion could not have been avoided. The horses started as fresh spirited animals, brought from Nevada and Oregon. They arrived thin and jaded, a large proportion of them only kept alive by stimulants. About twenty gallons of alcohol were given to the horses during the Centennial's trip. The animals were unloaded here, and will be turned out to pasture until the return of the transport from San Francisco.

There must be something very faulty with the manner in which horses are handled on Government transports. It is now the custom of the officials to send the horses to the Hawaiian Islands first, there to be turned out and rested preparatory to the still longer journey from there to Manila. It is something entirely unusual for horses to suffer any great inconvenience on the trip from here to Hawaii, and consignments are sent there by local dealers every month. Instead of making the trip in eight days, the sailing vessels on which they are always taken, consume from fourteen to twenty days, and in nearly every instance the horses, cattle and mules arrive in good condition. Each horse is put in a close stall, and stands on his feet the entire trip. The stalls are on deck and the horses stand athwart the vessel. It may be that as the horses on Government transports are carried in the hold of the vessel, the foul air and heat have a bad effect on them. It is likely, however, that the army people can learn many lessons in shipping horses by sea from the local dealers who make a business of sending live stock to the islands.

Endow's Sire Cecilian.

A Lexington correspondent of the American Sportsman writes as follows: "An offer of $8000 was made and refused for Endow 2:14 1/2, the two-year-old by Cecilian. Marvin says the gelding showed him a mile in 2:28 and a quarter in 35 seconds as a yearling, but was not good this spring. Since his good showing a great deal of attention is being paid to his sire. Cecilian is now on the farm here, and it is the intention to race him next season. It is not generally known that he was trained this fall in preparation for that purpose, but Marvin has been at him and not long ago stepped Cecilian a mile in 2:18. It is not to be wondered at that Hickok has told several people that he regarded him as the best of Electioneer's colts he saw in California, for this horse possesses rare quality, and is a magnificently made horse. He is a beautifully colored horse, a golden bay, and is one of the best proportioned Electioneers that a man ever saw. His training this fall is the first he has had since he stepped in 2:22 to high wheeled sulky in 1891. The Miller & Sibley horses on the old Barney Treacy farm number 82 head, and Marvin has fifteen that he is working. The five-year-old gelding Battle Sign, that worked in 2:13 1/2 some time before the horses were named in the last M. and M., and was then taken sick, is a grand looking trotter. Marvin says he is the best trotter he has had in ten years. Battle Sign will not be priced, as he is expected to be very good next year. He is another Cecilian, and is out of a sister to Baron Rogers 2:09 1/2. There are several others by Cecilian that are very fast. One that is out of the great colt trotter Antella was as fast as a yearling as Endow, but was taken sick. Benign, a four-year-old, is expected to be good, he having shown a mile early in 2:18. A corking good youngster is Financier, a yearling out of Mac S., by Nutwood, second dam a sister to Alcycene. His five dams have 41 in the list. One of the characteristics of the Cecilian family is the uniformity of color. Nearly every one is a rich bay like the sire, and a coat like silk. There are several good yearlings by Belsire that are being worked. The foals of this son of Electioneer and Beautiful Bells are large and strong.

Follow the Path Marked Out.

["Iconoclast" in the American Stock Farm.]

New crosses of trotting blood will occasionally produce exceptional horses, just as they have done in the past, and just as similar breeding has done with the thoroughbred. There may also be improvements in tracks, in vehicles and other paraphernalia. The art of training has not reached perfection as yet, though greatly improved. But when a race of horses reach a certain degree of excellence great record-breakers are rare, because they have so many great ones to beat, and as you go down the speed line the difficulty increases wonderfully as you advance. It took a very long time to get a Star Pointer, and a long time to get a Nancy Hanks and an Alix. Phenomenal horses may arise in the future, however, that will eclipse these brightest stars in the firmament, just as Salvator has arisen in recent years. But phenomena are scarce, else they would not be phenomena. It is the hope of breeding them that encourages the breeder. No one can predict when they will come, but it is certain as anything in the future can be that they will come from good trotting lines, just as Salvator came from good running lines, just as Star Pointer came from good pacing lines, just as Nancy Hanks and Alix came from good trotting lines. The ambitious breeder has to a certain extent his pathway blazed before him. He has but to follow it, trusting to the mysterious powers of nature for results, making the wisest combinations of the materials at his hand that he can. We have already progressed so far that future progress will be relatively slow. I expect no remarkable brilliant results from the further intermingling of foreign blood. We tried that experiment for generations without reaching the highest results. Breeders manifest little disposition to repeat it, practical trainers almost none. We have painfully climbed far toward the summit. We do not desire to retrace our steps in order to take a fresh start. The true course is to continue on the path marked out by natural law and illustrated by the wonderful success of the past. Trotting horse breeders have advanced more rapidly towards the ultimate goal than the breeders of any other class of animals. There is still some ground to be won. Let us press forward to win it.

The trotting mare Lucille by Brummell, dam by Major Benton, was sold at Lexington last week by R. W. Harris to C. K. Billings of Chicago for $7000. Lucille has a record of 2:09 1/2 made in the second heat of the 2:14 trot at Lexington this year. She is the first of the get of her sire Brummell to enter the list. Brummell is by Epanlet 2:47 1/2.

Heard at the Track.

"The champion of The Abbot," said Trainer Geers, "makes me like the two in three idea. Practically every race that he has trotted has been ended in three heats or less; and instead of being worn out through having gone a lot of long, split-up races, he ends the season in splendid order. When horses have to go as fast as they do nowadays and trot races of six or eight heats each week, it is hardly possible to keep them in order for more than a small part of the circuit.

"That's exactly my experience," said a man at the other end of the bench. "My horse went five good races; he was first or second in every one of them. Then he hasn't been any earthly account since the hard races with which he began the circuit. If his races had been two in three, instead of the usual stringing out of the three in five game, he might now be in useful condition."

From the standpoint of the wearing qualities of the horses that are on the go from June to November, there is no question but that the two in three system greatly helps their lasting on the circuit. The long drawn out races are nothing less than relics of barbarism; and this year has done more towards bringing the contests into decent lengths than any previous three years. When it is well understood that horse's chances of keeping in earning condition are several times greater when he is raced on the two in three plan, there will be few long drawn out contests wanted or permitted.

"When the cotton batting is put under the handsges," said Sandy Smith, as the Keating horses were steered safely off the landing platform, "the boys don't pull the handsges so tight."

"You don't believe in tight handsging, then?"

"No; we handsges too blooming much, enyway." And many others have come to exactly the same conclusions. Handsges have their use, but the best results can never be gained by the abuse of even a good article. There is a tendency towards moderation in the amount of covering worn by horses in training. When they are worked out stiffly and are pretty well strung up, it is undoubtedly necessary to cover carefully; but on the off days one sees far more horses without even a sheet on them than could have been seen a few years ago at any track where regular training was being carried on.

Sandy came to Louisville in the car with the Keating stable, although he has not been in its employ since the New York meeting. He has served his time with many of the best trainers of the country and is as widely known as any rubber in the business.—Exchange.

Horse Show Don'ts.

[Horse Show Monthly.]

Don't hiss at the judges' decision.

Don't call a private city stable a barn. A barn is a large country building for storing hay, grain and implements.

Don't call a single harness, a single set of harness. A single set of harness is an impossibility, as it requires a double equipment for a set.

Don't call two horses a team unless hitched tandem; call them a pair. A team is more than a pair, such as a tandem, unicorn or four-in-hand.

Don't say your high school horse parks. The word park gaited should apply only to the Eastern saddle horse of the walk, trot and canter variety.

Don't say high school gait. They are movements.

Don't call your saddle horse a saddler. A saddler is one who makes saddles. Properly speaking, a saddle horse is of the English variety, of three gaits; namely, walk, trot and canter, usually docked for park usage. A gaited (or what is called the Kentucky gaited saddle horse), has five distinct gaits; namely, walk, trot, rack, canter; running walk (fox trot, or slow pece).

Don't call a coach a tellyho. The word "tellyho" is used in a perverted sense as applied to coaching. It is a hunting term pure and simple, and is the hunters' cry to his hounds. It is a common error in America to call any kind of a coach, drag or break a tellyho, which had its origin with the introduction of coaching in this country, by the owner having christened his "The Tallyho."

Don't call a drag a coach. Drag is the name applied to the letter when used privately. As soon as a four-in-hand is put into public service, and a fare is charged, it ceases to be a drag and becomes a coach. A break is similar in some respects to a coach or drag, the difference being in the weight of the latter, and the inside seats which it has.

Don't call a unicorn a spike; the arrangement of one horse in front of two, and driven from the box is a unicorn. Spike is the name applied to such teams as work in iron or heavy drays, when the near horse is ridden, and the lead horse is driven with a jerk line.

Last month Elrod 2:24, by Electrite, in a field of twelve good horses at Delles, drew eleventh position and finished a close third in the first heat in 2:13. In the next heat he was beaten a nose in 2:12, was third in the third heat in 2:13, and then went on and won the race in slower time. Elrod has been trained by John Phippen.

Stallion Stakes.

[The Horseman.]

When the stallion stakes, free-for-all trotting, were opened last spring, great contests were promised. Unfortunately these promises have not been fulfilled, the contests for the money not having been of the class hoped for. Crescens to be sure, won the second heat of the Manhattan stake at New York in 2:07, but the field that promised so much dwindled down to three at the finish of the heat, Cherley Herr and Monterey being the only ones that heat the flag when Crescens crossed the wire. At Louisville Tommy Britton won a very easy victory in, for him, slow time. There is no question that the plan of offering big purses, for races in which the prospective great sires may compete, is an excellent one; but it is also evident that these races must either be opened on the subscription plan, with nominations due late in the season, or their conditions must include a substitution clause, permitting the naming of a horse in condition, as the starter, if the one originally nominated proves a disappointment or meets with an accident. It is clear that big fields and hard fought races are the best drawing cards an association can have and therefore instead of abandoning these contests, the effort should be to so frame the conditions as to permit of every high-class trotting stallion taking part in them. The lack of substitution clauses in the conditions governing the stallion free-for-all trots already has kept more than one high-class horse out of these races and if it had been possible for them to secure the right to start, the actual races themselves would have been vastly more interesting than they were. Had Tommy Britton, for instance, been able to obtain the right to start against Crescens at New York, would not the battle between these two giants have been worth going almost any distance to see?

JAMES MADISON has another of his get in the list. The bay gelding Domino, by this horse, won the 2:21 pece at Brockton, Massachusetts, October 5th, getting the race in straight heats in 2:13, 2:16 and 2:20.

Last Week at Lexington.

The Lexington meeting closed on Saturday last after two weeks of good racing. On Monday the California horse Eliert won the Walnut Hill Farm cup and purse of $3,000, beating such good horses as Lord Vincent, Sirrol and others. The little pacing son of Hawthorne, Little Thorn, of the Keating string, got second money in the 2:10 paces, after the hottest kind of a seven heat race, in which he won two heats, was second twice and third twice. Peter the Great was beaten in The Ashland for 2:10 trotters, winning one heat and being second in all the others but one. This wonderful two-year-old Endow, by Cecilia, added two more victories to his year's record, and on Saturday trotted the second heat of his race in 2:14, the fastest mile of the year by a two-year-old. The summaries of the week are as follows:

Dates Claimed.

Agricultural District, No. 6—Los Angeles, October 21st to 25th, inclusive.

TO GET HIGH PRICES for good horses ship them to New York next month consigned to the great sale to be held by the Fasig-Tipton Company at Madison Square Garden, November 20th to 29th. This sale is attracting more attention than any ever held at the celebrated Garden where it is to come off. There will be some sensational horses sold there and sensational prices are looked for. Budd Doble, who is now at Gilroy, will have two carloads of extra good ones—horses that should sell for long prices on their looks and the style they will show in the ring. Sam Gamble is getting up a carload, among those already engaged being that grand looking, high stepping trotter Our Jack 2:13 1/2, by Steinway, that will make as grand a showing as any horse in the sale. Mr. Gamble will also take Uncle Johnny 2:19 1/4, by Benton Boy, a grand young horse and one that will not only attract attention by his good looks, but one that should show the way to the end of the road on the speedway as he is very fast. We would advise those having good horses for sale, those that are extra fine lookers or can show extreme speed, to write to Mr. Gamble immediately, as cars are hard to get and he does not expect to be able to secure more than one from the railroad company, and first come will be first served in this instance. The Fasig-Tipton Company has the reputation of getting the highest prices paid at auction sales in America, and it is well known that the New York market is the best in the world for high class road or track horses.

A GOOD IDEA is that advanced in our columns today through "An Open Letter to the Racing Associations of California." In this communication one of this State's prominent breeders of thoroughbred horses suggests the creation of Futurity Stakes, to be competed for by two year olds, and to which there will be $5000 added money. As the writer clearly sets forth in his letter, the racing associations can do much for the permanency of thoroughbred breeding in California by establishing such stakes, and we hope the officers thereof will carefully weigh the matter after reading the letter and that the gentleman's suggestion may be acted upon in the near future. The announcing of yearly programs, entirely devoid of futurity events, undoubtedly gives to racing in California a temporary look, and does not give that encouragement to breeders which every racing association should consider as one of its principal reasons for existence. The classics of the turf are nearly all "future" events, and California's claim to being a great racing point will never be properly established until she provides a few races of the classic order.

AN OPINION was handed down by Superior Judge Smith of Los Angeles last Thursday which affirms a decision previously rendered by Justice James of the same place who adjudged F. D. Black, President of a coursing club, guilty of cruelty to animals. Judge Smith holds that the rabbits are killed unnecessarily. It is admitted that rabbits in their wild state may be pursued and killed with dogs, but in this instance the rabbits are kept in confinement and released for the dogs. The League of Good Government, which hired an attorney to prosecute the coursing men, is jubilant over the result and is preparing to distribute Judge Smith's opinion all over the State. According to Mr. Black, the suit will be carried to the Supreme Court as soon as possible on a writ of habeas corpus.

THE SAD NEWS came over the wires yesterday that Leslie E. McLeod, the brilliant young writer on harness horse affairs, had died suddenly in New York, where for the past year he has been the editor of that sterling publication, the "Trotter and Pacer." Mr. McLeod some years ago visited California and sojourned for a short time at the famous Palo Alto Stock Farm, and the many articles from his pen which resulted from that visit were widely read. He was but 37 years of age at the time of his death.

THE BAYWOOD STUD, property of John Parrott, has just sold to Graham E. Babcock of Coronado, Cal., one pair of Hackney colts for $2000. They are rising four year olds—one a full bred Hackney filly No. 807 A. H. S. B., the other a half-bred gelding out of an Abbottsford trotting mare, both of course by the well known Hackney stallion, Green's Rufus. This is the second pair that has been sold at that price from the Baywood stud within six months.

"JUSTICE IS HOBBOLED," says a San Francisco morning paper in an editorial denouncing the fining of a lot of pool sellers $5 each "without alternative," that they may go free without paying a fine. There is no doubt that Justice is a little mixed gaited in all large cities and it is reasonably certain that the hobbles were put on her in this case to keep her at a gait for which she was not bred.

THE RAILROADS are so busy that all their cars are in use, and it is very hard for shippers to get them unless ordered weeks ahead. Budd Doble has a few more horses than will fill two cars, and rather than to run any risk will sell six or eight head of his string at private sale before shipping to New York. He has some grand young roadsters at Gilroy.

THE GREAT FALL MEETING at Los Angeles opens to-day and if the weather is all right, the champion pacers, Joe Patchen, John R. Gentry and Anaconda, should go a very fast race this afternoon. It is to be hoped the Clerk of the Weather will do the square thing by Los Angeles during the meeting.

Would it not be a good idea for the managers of State fairs to have an hour's time devoted to the roadster class and the same time to the class of coachers at their annual fairs, in having the horses entered in each class driven around the track, so as to give their owners a chance to show the judges what the road capacity of the several animals is, and how they compare with each other for style and action at the end of the hour, suggests the American Horse Breeder. Men could be appointed to keep count of the number of miles that each horse made during the time. The number of miles should be considered, together with conformation, action and style, in making the awards. This would give the trotting bred coachers a fair chance to compete for honors with the French Coachers. The latter would also have a chance to compete with the gentlemen's roadsters and carriage horses on terms comparatively equal. Such an exhibition would serve to show what animals have the greatest endurance, and that is an important quality in a road and carriage as well as coach horse.

J. H. Bronson, the owner of Searchlight, 2:03 1/4, publicly challenged any pacer on the Lexington track to race against the son of Dark Night for $2500 a side. He also announced that he would match Searchlight against any three pacers on the Lexington track, each one of the three to go a heat against the Dark Night pacer. Some of the horsemen at Lexington expressed the opinion that Anaconda, Bumps and Frank Bogash could do up Searchlight if their owners could be induced to let them start in such a race. Nothing came out of the challenge, however, and the son of Dark Night will probably not get another chance to race this fall.

CHAS KERR, who owns the imported stallion Reggy (Leopold II), has succeeded in getting several mares in foal to him. For years Reggy has been considered impotent, but a veterinary treated him, and last year two mares out of three bred to him on the Kerr ranch had foals by the horse, while this year six mares out of seven are safely in foal to this son of Hermit. Reggy is a grandly bred stallion being out of Nyl Gan by Musjid, second dam Bas Blne, the dam of Blne Gown by Stockwell, third dam Vexation by Tonch stona, fourth dam Vat by Langar, fifth dam Wire (sister to Woful, Whisker and Whalebone) by Waxy, and on to the 16th dam a natural Barb mare.

AT INGLESIDE TO-DAY.

Golden Gate Park Driving Association Will Hold Matinee Racing.

It is to be hoped the weather to day will permit the members of Golden Gate Park Driving Club to hold their races. The rain at this writing has put the track in excellent shape provided no further storms come to make it muddy and a shining sun will make the day an ideal one for an excellent afternoon's sport.

Seldom has more interest been taken in the events pulled off by this club than is those programed for this afternoon. The entries are quite numerous, and the O'Kane Cup race and the team race are arousing much enthusiasm among outsiders as well as members of the organization.

The entries for the cup race are J. C. Ohlandt's Harvey B. 2:31, winner of the first trial, and the other contestants will be Dr. G. W. Kleiser's Alta Velo, J. W. Hamerton's Alfred H., and J. Curley's Prince C.

The entries for the team race are I Direct and Primrose, Correct and Billy McKinley, Catinka and Butcher Boy, and Ruby M. and mate. It promises a most exciting contest.

The 2:40 class has eight entries as follows: I. B. Dalzell's Bobby J., J. O'Kane's Sandow, F. Gomett's Pardee, E. Stewart's Poorman, A. Schwartz's Baby D., J. Foss' Lafayette, J. C. Kirkpatrick's Lullaby, Dr. R. T. Lainer's Blanche L.

In the 2:20 class are nine entries, including E. Cerciat's Bishop Hero, J. G. Chesley's Goldy, G. Lapham's Robert H., E. Cerciat's Oaknut, J. Holland's Elsie, J. C. Kirkpatrick's Azalia, F. G. O'Kane's Athavis, N. Hottina's Correct, E. Stewart's Billy McKinley.

The last race, which it was intended to have decided on a new plan, will be carried out like the others on the two in three system as are all the other races given by this association.

With a good day and track, the fastest records ever made at a matinee of the Golden Gate Park Driving Club will very likely be recorded. Admission to the track will be free and the public is cordially invited to attend.

A Ringer Coming Back.

The famous mare Bertie R., 2:12 1/4, that went on a ringing tour in France during the season of 1896 under the name of Adria, and afterward in England under the name Polly G., is going to be returned to this country this Fall and will be shown at Madison Square Garden next month. The mare is now the property of Richard Stephenson, of Liverpool, and recently lowered the world's four mile record to 9:58, on a cinder half mile track, a decided disadvantage. The best previous records were made by the pacer Joe Jefferson 10:10, in 1891, and Senator L., trotting, 10:12 in 1894.

Bertie R., on account of her having been raced under such peculiar circumstances, is barred from the tracks of England and Mr. Stephenson has decided to return her to this country. She will be seen on the New York speedway before the snow flies.

Several horsemen who were made aware of the fact that the mare was going to return to the United States, have raised the question as to whether the National and American Trotting Associations would recognize the ban of the English and French Associations and allow her to race again in this country. As there is no rule in the book as between the trotting associations of the United States and those of Europe, which recognizes the penalty imposed by either, and as this will be the first case that ever came up, it was thought by many there was nothing to prevent the mare racing in this country under her proper name.

David Bonner takes another view of the matter. He is among the oldest and best known fanciers of the light harness horse, with the interest of the trotting rules very close at heart. He gives the opinion that while the mare was not penalized by the associations of this country, it would be best to recognize the ban of the European associations for the moral effect, as the European tracks and associations have recognized the expulsions and suspensions of the American associations.

Matt Dwyer, who has had a wide experience on all the tracks of Europe, says it was a lucky thing the French authorities did not catch the ringing crowd, as their rules are exceedingly severe and they are enforced to the limit. They confiscate the animal and imprison the men.

"Why," said Mr. Dwyer, "if they had caught those fellows, they'd have been sent to jail for life. Nothing on earth would have saved them. I wouldn't undertake such a job over there for the wealth of Monte Cristo"—N. Y. Telegraph.

A GOOD ROAD HORSE that can show a two minute clip is advertised in our columns.

OPEN LETTER TO THE RACING ASSOCIATIONS OF CALIFORNIA.

Futurity Races for California Two Year Olds.

The only Futurity Race for two year olds in California is run every year in Sacramento during the State Fair. It is better than nothing, but it takes place in a locality and at a time in the year which makes it impossible for the public, that is the racing public in California, to take any intense interest in it.

It is curious that neither of the Racing Associations has thus far understood what a drawing card a well organized Futurity Race for two year olds raised in California would be.

There is little doubt that the racing of two year old horses has assumed an enormous importance all over the world. Of course there is a practical side to this supremacy of two year old racing, which, perhaps, is the desire of the owners not to wait until their horses are three year olds to compete for large stakes; but there is something else in it.

In California a two year old Futurity in the first week in April would be the race of the season if its program was intelligently gotten up.

As a specimen let us suppose the following race called:

THE SAN FRANCISCO FUTURITY STAKES FOR TWO YEAR OLDS, TO BE RUN EACH YEAR DURING THE FIRST WEEK IN APRIL.

Subscriptions for mares to close January 1st of each year at $5. The progeny of such mares to be eligible at $10 for colts and $5 for fillies if left after January 1st of their yearling year.

Starters to pay $100 each regardless of sex. Colts to carry 115 pounds, geldings 112, fillies 110. Penalties—Winners of a race of any value, 3 pounds; of two or more of any value, 7 pounds.

Entrance moneys to be divided as follows: 50 per cent. to the winner, 10 per cent. to the second, 5 per cent. to the third, 20 per cent. to the nominator of the dam of the winner, 10 per cent. to the nominator of the dam of the second, and 5 per cent. to the nominator of the dam of the third.

Such a race would bring about the following results: How many entries would it meet with? To our knowledge fully 200, which would produce $1000. About 150 would take part in the second payment, of which 50 would be colts and 100 fillies, raising the fund to $2000.

We will say that out of 150, 50 would be scratched. Always admitting a third of these to be colts, this payment would raise the entry fund to $5300. It is fair to assume that at least 15 of them would finally start, raising the entry fund to $6800, with the money added of $5000, would make a total for the stake of $11,800, or about the largest stake of the season, although the Association would have to put up less than half, the breeders and purchasers willingly making the balance.

This race would bring about a great many good results: First—As far as the Racing Associations are concerned, it would establish in the eyes of the public, both in California and especially in the East, the permanency of racing in California. It is a had feature for these Racing Associations to limit their programs to yearly dates.

Second—It would, without much cost to these Associations be without doubt the drawing card of the season. The betting on such events would begin two or three weeks before the race, according to the performances of the various colts.

Third—It would bring the Racing Associations in closer touch and better relations with the breeders, who realize that in the East these races have greatly helped the price of the sales of yearlings, and that the breeding of thoroughbreds, being not only permanent but very prominent in California, the local Racing Associations have no reason not to follow here the policy adopted over there.

Now, as far as the breeding industry is concerned, it would be benefitted in two instances.

The first one would be immediate. At the time of the sale, that is, in November or December, bidders, either local or Eastern sportsmen, would be bidding in San Francisco on yearlings who three months later would be apt to win for them over $10,000. This would certainly enhance the average price of the yearlings sold every fall, as it would be a great speculative card to buy in December, a colt capable of winning such a large amount of money, or a portion of it, ninety days later.

The second result would come from the manner in which the entry moneys would be divided according to the above plan. You will see that the nominator, that is, the breeder, of the dam of the winner would be entitled to 20 per cent. of said moneys, while 10 per cent. and 5 per cent. of said moneys would go respectively to the breeders of the second and third horses. On the basis outlined hereinabove, these three amounts should be respectively $1360 to the breeder of the first, $680 to the breeder of the second and $340 to the breeder of the third.

This arrangement, although of no direct interest to the Racing Associations, should not be overlooked as it is most important that the public should be convinced that the Racing Associations are developing and enhancing the value of horse breeding in California. The development of such interests should be the only motive and is the only excuse for public racing.

It might be wise, as an exception to the first year, to decide that the first of such events will take place in 1901, the first entries to be made (I repeat it) as an exception, on January next, for foals of 1890. But these are details that should rest with the Associations themselves.

Respectfully,
A BREEDER.

$20,000 has been offered for Boreal 2:15½, sire of Borslms, but it was refused.

THIS will be quite a year for the Dexter Princes when the records are all made up.

MONTEREY, 2:09½, is to be sold at the Fasig-Tipton sale in New York in November.

HOLLISTER'S meeting was interfered with by the rain, but will be concluded to-day.

THE record made by McNally at Fresno was 2:20 instead of 2:19½ as reported last week.

OCEANIC BELLE, the mare that took a record of 2:26 at Fresno is given as by Carlana.

THE pacing stallion Bill Frazier 2:14, by Pricemont, has been added to the list of geldings.

A. T. VAN DE VANTER'S little pacer Deceivar, by Altamont, has reduced his record to 2:15.

EUROPEAN buyers are numerous about New York, and they are coming over on every steamer.

BALKAN 2:15, by Mambrino Wilkes, is now the property of M. Kirkhoven of Bangor, South Dakota.

BUYERS are plentiful in the East for horses that can race, and a rare good one will bring almost any price asked.

IF rain does not interfere with the meeting a few records ought to be reduced at Los Angeles during the coming week.

THE total auction pooling on the Transylvania was $60,000, which, at three per cent. commission, gave $1800 to the pool sellers.

THE day that John R. Gentry and Joe Patchen raced at Wichita, Kansas, 20,000 paid admissions was the box office record.

A PAPER was circulated at the Lexington meeting which pledged the signers not to make any entries next year before July 1st.

Three pacers have taken records of 2:03½ this year—Searchlight and Anaconda in races and Bumps to wagon against time.

DIONE, Toggles, Neerunt, Klamath, Ellert, Prince Gift and Booble ought to make a great race in the free for all at Los Angeles.

LITTLE THORNE is always unhooked from the sulky at the wire and led back to the cooling sheds with little or nothing on him.

KEATING arrived in Los Angeles with his string last Sunday. All the horses looked well and Mr. Keating's health is much improved.

TOMMY BRITTON 2:08 will go to the Fasig-Tipton auction sale in New York in November. He won seven races out of eight starts this year.

BILLY HOGBOOM has been on a trip to Washington and Oregon and drove several heats while attending the races at Yakima and Salem.

Greyling, a green brother of Carlyle Carne 2:11½, recently trotted second four heats at Portland, Ore., all below 2:20, the fastest being in 2:17½.

NELSON STOCKTON, the well known horseman of San Jose, has gone to Honolulu to reside, and will have charge of a string of trotters there.

KELLY BRIGGS 2:10½ and Diawood 2:11 were taken to Los Angeles this week and will start in some of the specials to be given for horses of their class.

ANITA, the gray mare by Rockwood, out of Lucy, by Vermont, owned by D. B. Stewart of Spokane, Washington, will be bred to McKinney next year.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Association will hold matinee racing at Ingleside track this afternoon. Admission will be free and the public invited.

DURING the days when the weather permitted, there was a good attendance at the Fresno meeting and it would have been a complete success but for the rain.

DIRECT 2:05½, now at Los Angeles with the Keating string is said to look well enough to race up to his mark. He will make a season in the stud at Pleasanton.

ADVERTISER 2:15½, by Electioneer, won first prize for trotting stallions at the Goshen horse show last week. Guy Kohl 2:07½, by Guy Wilkes, took second prize.

ONE of the greatest rivals of Cobwebs on the New York Speedway is the eight year old mare Creeping Flower 2:22½, by Piedmont, out of Floweret, full sister to Marzanita 2:16. This mare, like Cobwebs, was bred at Palo Alto. She can show as much speed in a brush as any horse used on the road in New York.

ARTHUR W. 2:11½ is now at the Alameda track in charge of J. M. Nelson. He is one of the best big horses that has been seen on the California tracks for some time.

DR. BOOK, 2:13½, is the eleventh of the get of McKinney to enter the 2:15 list. No horse of McKinney's age has as many in this select circle as the great son of Alcyone.

A MATCH for $1600 between the pacers Aelse, 2:12½, and Ophelis, 2:11½, came off at Denver last week. Aelse won in straight heats, the time being 2:15 for each of the three.

A REPORT is in circulation in the East that Ed Geers will train next season for J. Malcolm Forbes and that W. J. Andrews will take Mr. Geers place with the Hamlin horses.

AT Lexington last Friday Monterey won the second and third heats in the 2:10 class and then had to be withdrawn on account of lameness. The track was heavy after the rain.

IRVINGTON BELLE, 2:18½, by Nutwood Wilkes, has gone a trial mile in 2:09½ at Cleveland this summer, and has been consigned to the Fasig-Tipton sale at New York in November.

THE proposed match race between the two Humboldt county horses, Jack W. and Dudley is off, but it filled the Humboldt county papers with ecstatic verbiage for a week or two.

HOWARD W. PEEL, of Portland, Oregon, has a very promising colt, by McKinney, out of Data, full sister to Chehalis, that is the admiration of horsemen up in the web foot country.

THE most audacious case of ringing that has yet been discovered was the attempt to race the eighteen-year-old trotter Darbee 2:18½ in the three year-old class at one of the Eastern tracks this year.

Edith H. 2:10½, by Deucalion, is the fastest trotting mare, by the records, that has yet produced a 2:30 trotter, she being the dam of Fanny Rice, who recently took a record of 2:24½ at Nashua, N. H.

OF the forty-five yearlings that were broken and worked at Marcus Daly's farm this year, Joe Rea says that a filly by Allerton is the fastest. She stepped a quarter in 37 seconds early in the spring.

GRAHAM E. BABCOCK, of Coronado, owner of the champion trotter of California, Toggles 2:09½, while at Fresno last week, purchased the handsome black trotter, El Moro 2:17 by Longworth.

THERE was a regular tornado at Fresno on Thursday night of last week, accompanied by a heavy rainfall. The track and grounds were flooded, so the races for Friday and Saturday had to be declared off.

SECRETARY THORNE says there will not be syndicate betting at Los Angeles. Johnny Humphreys has the field book and the auction pools. Any other bookmakers who desire to cut in will be allowed to do so.

SEARCHLIGHT'S lameness, which prevented his starting at Lexington to heat Star Pointer's record, has entirely left him. It is thought that it was nothing more than a slight wrench or cording of the muscles.

PETER THE GREAT did not win the Transylvania but he proved himself a gamer horse than Lord Vincent who did win it. He trotted two heats faster than 2:10, and beat Lord Vincent four times in the race, while the latter's best mile was 2:11½.

At a matinee at Readville, Mass., Sept. 30th, Trinket 2:14, the famous daughter of Princeps, was started to heat her twenty-four-year-old record of 2:20½, made not long ago over the same track. She finished strong in 2:18 and was given an ovation.

WHEN Ellert won the Walnut Hill for 2:16 trotters at Lexington $1400 was placed to his credit, and in the opening pools sold for $5 in pools of $100. A handsome silver cup also went to Ellert and $100 went to his driver B. O. Van Bokkelen.

SANDY SMITH, who drove Venus II. to her record of 2:11½, and is now at Los Angeles with the Keating string, will open a training stable in California for next season and should do well with them. There are no better care takers than Sandy and he loves his horses.

LITTLE EDGAR, the fast trotting gelding, was sold at Lexington last week for road purposes. He belonged to F. D. Crocker, Nepeta, Colo., and was purchased by F. A. Campbell, Albany, N. Y., the price being $2,500. He is by Arcadian, dam Kitty H., by Jim Riley.

At a recent sale of carriage horses at East Buffalo the great bulk of the animals went at prices between $200 and $500, with a liberal sprinkling of the lot at figures between $400 and $500. The demand for good carriage horses far exceeds the supply in all parts of the country.

BOWERMAN BROS., Lexington, Ky., recently sold to Dr. J. C. McCoy, Kirkwood, Del., for $12,000, the five-year old brown stallion Delgado, full brother to Boreal, sire of Borsalma. Delgado is by Bow Bells, dam Rosy Morn, by Alcantara, and was never trained until this season.

J. E. PLEASANTS of Santa Ana had been chosen to act as one of the three judges at the great race meet which opens at Los Angeles to-day. This selection by the Board of Directors of the District Agricultural Association No. 6, will, without doubt, give general satisfaction, as Mr. Pleasants' reputation as an honest sportsman and competent judge is too well known to need comment.—Los Angeles Express.

At the District Fair held at Big Pine, Inyo county, last month, the stellation Hillsdale, 2:17½, by Antinous, started to heat the track record of 2:33½. The track is a little half mile path, not thrown up on the turns and in poor condition. Hillsdale managed to get round it twice in 2:29½, so that Big Pine track is now in the 2:30 list.

THE chestnut gelding Joa Watts, 2:28, is one of the promising horses owned in Kentucky on which no price will be put. He was timed separately in 2:13½ this year in a race, and as he is not five years old and one of the constantly improving order, is looked upon by his owners as one of the great prospects for 1900. He is given in many of the eastern papers as by Electioneer, but is by Electmoneer, a son of that horse.

WINNA S., bay mare, thirteen years old, by Electioneer—Dame Winnie, and therefore full sister to Palo Alto, 2:08½, was sold at auction at Lexington last week for $250, and Pacifica, an eleven year old daughter of Electioneer, out of Bicsra, the great dam of Pancoast and others, sold for $500. At the same sale young mares by sons of Electioneer that were good prospects for racing purposes sold up in the thousands, which goes to show that the public wants racing instead of breeding material just now.

TOM KEATING'S friends will be pleased to learn that his health is improving rapidly. The last two weeks at Louisville and Lexington seem to have braced him up very much. As evidence of this, last Saturday after John Bloe, the stable foreman, had worked Anaconda in 2:22, 2:16 and 2:12, Keating got up behind the pacer and drove him the fourth mile in 2:06½ against the strong headwind for half of the route. This opened the kangaroo up enough so that Bloss sent him the next one in 2:06, and, as will be seen by the Lexington summaries, it was not much of a day for fast work.—Chicago Horseman.

EPHAN & NEWGASS are receiving a great lot of consignments for their November sale, at Dexter Park Horse Exchange, Chicago, and the sale is bound to be a great success. It takes good horses and plenty of them to attract the best buyers, buyers being much more easily congregated than horses. This firm's standing with both foreign and domestic buyers is such that if they get the horses they can get the buyers. Consignments already received insure great offers, but the more good horses they have to offer the better it will be for all consignees. Hence those having good horses to dispose of should seriously consider the advisability of making consignments to Ephan & Newgass.

PETER C. KELLOGG writes: I had every reason to expect that on October 5th I would be able to announce the consignment to our sale of November 1-4th, all of the horses (excepting Maud S.) that belonged to the late Robert Bonner. But on that date the will of the late owner, instead of passing probate, was unexpectedly contested before the Surrogate, which fact prevents for the time being the sale of the horses; a matter which is, therefore, indefinitely postponed. Should the will stand, which I judge is altogether likely, a new date for the sale of the horses will be announced. While for obvious reasons I have never announced the consignment of these horses to our sale, rumors to that effect have been so general that I hasten to acquaint your readers with the facts.

NOT in the palmiest days of prices were such offers made for two and three-year-olds as at Lexington last week, and the reports are from reliable men, such as Charles Marvin, who reported the offer of $8000 for Endow. James Golden says he refused $8000 from Mart Demarest for his Dexter Prince filly; John Kinney reports that Mr. Winter could have sold the Directum—Lady Red filly on two occasions during the week for $7500. Borsalma did change hands for more than $15,000, while a short time ago Thayer got close to $10,000 for the Tramp, and priced The Bondsman at $10,000 on Friday. Two or three men are ready to take the seven-year-old sire Boreal for $20,000. These figures need no prophecy as to the future of the high class harness horse.—American Sportsman.

IN 1897, when the initial contest was made for the Walnut Hall Cup, that trophy went to Village Farm having been won by the good gelding The Monk driven by Ed Geers. The next year the cup was carried to New England, having been won by Nico, the great gelding from Forbes Farm, near Boston who was driven by Henry Titer. This year it crosses the Rockies to adorn a California home, having been secured by B. O. Van Bokkelen, of San Jose, with the bay gelding Ellert, son of Stamboul and Lady Escott by Arthurton. Ellert is owned by Alvinza Hayward of San Mateo. The cup is donated by Mr. L. V. Harkness, of Walnut Creek, near Lexington, who also guarantees the purse of $3000 that goes with it. It is peculiar that this classic event has always been won by a gelding. Seidom it is that a better race is seen than the contest for this trophy and pursa this year.

THE Transylvania was inaugurated ten years ago, and Peter the Great is the eleventh favorite who has failed to win first money. Not only does it seem impossible for the horse which carries the most money to win, but the horse which draws the pole is in the same fix. Jack was the first Transylvania winner, with Nelson the favorite. Allerton was the good thing in 1890, but Bodd Doble, who, by the way, is a brother to Charley, tipped him over with McDoel. Johnny Dickerson won in the next year with gama Cheyenne, the blind horse, Miss Alice getting second money. Kremlin and Ed Bither turned the talent over in 1892, when the staka record was placed below 2:12 for the first time, Hamlin's Nightingale finishing in second place. Herrietta, that good race mare, by Alcyone, pulled Crit Davis to the front the following October. A had start heat the 1894 favorite, Ralph Wilkes, who was left at the post, Azota winning, with Dan Cupid second. Bouncer was the next surprise, defeating Lyvne Bel, who came close to giving Ed Bither his second victory in the staka. Senator A, who is now in Europe, was the winner in 1896. Rilma turned the trick two years ago, winning a very lucky race. She did not class with the favorite, The Monk, who lost the race through a had drive. A year ago John Nolan won, and he came nearer to being a favorite than any other winner, as he carried within a few hundred dollars as much money as either Bingen or Esle Flansgan. The latter holds the staka record of 2:07½.

CHARLEY HERB has arrived from Bakersfield with several two year olds.

BURNS & WATERHOUSE head the list of winning owners so far this season.

THE running of the Burlingame handicap has been postponed until Oct. 28th.

ALEX SHIELDS has arrived with a carload of horses, amongst which is old Topmast.

It is reported that Salvable has broken down completely and will probably never race again.

JOCKEY SANGER who rode for Pittsburgh Phil early in the year, is here with Billy Randall's string.

JOE PIGGOTT arrived from New York on Tuesday last. He has entirely recovered from his late illness.

JOCKEY HILL is among the new arrivals from Chicago. He is a welcome addition to the talent already here.

THE field book privilege for Tanforen Park has been let to Colonel Applegate, a well known eastern turf man.

HUGH JONES' horses arrived at the track on Monday. In the same car with them was Mr. Henlon's good mare Sly.

"FRISCO" LIND has entered Meley in the Burns Handicap. He considers Meley a better horse than Count of Flanders was.

TANFOBAN will be ready for the opening on November 4th, and there will be a good track with first-class appointments all ready.

CHARLEY THORPE was forced to keep "on the ground" during the first of the week, as he was suffering from an attack of neuralgia.

"MARTY" BEEGEN won his first race this season on I Don't Know on Monday last, and was heartily applauded on his return to the stand.

JAMES ARTHUR will arrive in California soon with a big string, among them the old California favorite, Digge Bolend is the regular jockey for the stable.

JUDGE JOS. A. MURPHY arrived from St. Louis last Sunday and assumed his position of presidjng judge Monday. He reports the season at St. Louis as a very prosperous one.

JOHNNY HUMPHREYS left Wednesday night for Los Angeles with a special train on which were two carloads of horses, and thirty or forty people going down to attend the races.

It is said that Pat Durne will turn his horses out and not race this winter, and it is also said that he may be induced to take charge of Wm. C. Whitney's string that will race in England next year.

JUDGE MURPHY, who being Secretary of the St. Louis Fair Association, was forced to remain in St. Louis until the racing closed there, he arrived and took up his official position in the stand on Monday last. Fred Mulholland will officiate as associate judge until the arrival of Mr. Hopper, about Nov. 1st.

TOM HEALY writes Mr. O'B. Macdonough that his yearling by Ormonde out of imp. Santa Belle is the most promising youngster at Morris Park. He says he worked him three-eighths recently in 0:36 1/2, and he did the work easy. Mr. Macdonough has him entered in all the great classic events of this country end England.

RALPH H. TOZER, the well known writer on turf affairs, who has been acting as patrol judge at Hawthorne track, Chicago, during the racing season just closed, returned home last Wednesday and has been shaking hands with his California friends, who ere legion, this week. Mr. Tozer speaks highly of the racing season at Chicago this summer, but is glad to get back to San Francisco, "that he only place to live."

COL. W. S. BARNES, proprietor of the Melbourne Stud, has purchased the racehorse and sire Rainbow, by Look-fellow, dam Buff end Blue, bred at Ashland by Mrs. John M. Cley and sold as a yearling for $10,000. Rainbow was to have been sold with the Bowling Brook horses recently, but Wyndhem Walding, the proprietor of Bowling Brook stud, accepted a liberal offer for the private purchase of the horse. Rainbow is nine years old, and only two of his get have ever started, both of which are winners.

A HANDICAP at one and an eighth miles was the feature of Morris Park last Tuesday. Muskedine closed a slight favorite over Box end Decatur. There was a long delay at the post, caused by the breaking of Box's bridle, but they were finally sent away in good order. Box was the quickest on his feet, and although he had top weight rushed out to make the running. He was never headed, and in the end won gelling by two lengths, in 1:53 1/2, a new record over the course. Muskedine, in a herd drive, got the piece from Cernero by a head.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Coney Island Jockey Club, held last week, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Lawrence Kip; Vice-Presidents, William K. Vaoderbilt, John G. Hecksher; Treasurer, J. H. Bradford; Secretary, C. Fellows. Executive Committee—The President, the Vice-Presidents, the Treasurer, the Secretary ex-officio, Herbert C. Pell, F. Gray Griswold, George Peabody Wetmore, J. Harry Alexandre and William H. Tailer.

SCARCELY a horse appeared in the hunting classes at Dublin this year which was not bred in Ireland, but for the Irish horses the great show of hunters at Edinburgh in July would have been impossible. If England and Scotland can breed heavy horses, Ireland can give them points and yet win "hands down" when it is a question of breeding hunters. Whether the Irishman is naturally a fast individual and more partial than his fellow citizens on this side of the channel to a galloper, we cannot tell, but judging by the horse show he certainly knows how to breed that kind of animal—Scottish Farmer.

THE sale of thoroughbred stock from the stables of B. W. Walden & Son and A. H. and D. H. Morris took place October 9th at Morris Park before the races began. The star of the lot was the imported stallion Galore. When he led into the ring James E. Seagram, the Canadian turfman, began the bidding with $5000. Then Sydney Paget, William Lakeland, who was probably acting for Mercos Daly, end an agent for W. H. Hopkins of Baltimore, took a haod. The Baltimore man secured the horse for $20,000. The well known stallion Silver Fox by imp. St. Blaise was knocked down to the firm of Gideon & Daly for $5000. A bay filly by Silver Fox—Merry One brought $2200.

At one of the county fairs in California this year, the starting flag for the running races was in the hands of a novice who at his first attempt tried hard to get the half dozen starters off in perfect line. After a dozen attempts, any one of which would have been considered a fair start by Ferguson or Caldwell, one of the Directors went to the starting post and asked what the trouble was. "I want them all even—heads and tails—when I drop the flag," was the reply. "Don't you know that it is impossible, some horses being shorter than others?" said the Director. "By gom, I never thought of that!" came the rejoinder, and in the next attempt the flag dropped to a good send-off, as all the hoys wanted to get away. Our informant says he is certain that the horses would have been at the post yet if the eforesaid Director had not made the happy suggestion.

Breeders Opposed to Handicaps.

The running of the Hunter Handicap at New York last week gave the breeders, many of whom are now in the East, ample opportunity to criticize the present tendency in the racing world to handicaps rather than weight for age races, writes S. B. Weeme. This switch to the handicap theory began some eight or ten years ago, when many of the valuable fixed events at weight for age conditions proved to be virtual welkovers for the two or three best horses of the year. There was then a clamor for handicap conditions. It was argued that the weight for age conditions deprived the public oftentimes of good contests which might have been obtained through a handicap adjustment of weights which would have placed the champions on a more equable footing with the lesser lights of the turf, and so brought out good fillies and provided good racing.

The breeders end those interested in breeding advanced the counter argument that when a man bred a first class race horse it was right end proper that his horse should have an earning capacity—that he should not be weighted out of valuable races just because he happened to be a good horse. Much might be advanced in support of both sides of the controversy. There can be no doubt that a fair proportion of handicaps are necessary in order to make good racing.

But a certain percentages of weight for age races for the 3-year-olds is absolutely indispensable as a guide to successful breeding. The 3-year-old colts ere now tolerably well taken care of with the Withers, Belmont, Realization, Brooklyn Derby and a few minor fixed events, but the fillies have absolutely no genuine tests of merit at weight of age, and it is therefore a pity that an old, classic event like the Hunter, which was originally intended to give a line on breeding in the way of providing a test for the 3-year-old fillies, should have been changed to handicap conditions.

The turf needs a series of weight for age events for 3-year-old fillies, just as for the colts. The Withers, Belmont and Realization pretty well determine the best of the 3-year-old colts. There is no such test, however, for the 3-year-old fillies, and it is almost impossible at the end of a season to determine accurately which one of the three or four fillies may be the best of the year. The Jockey Club could render a service to breeding by changing some of the filly events back to their original weight for age conditions.

LINDEN, VA., Aug. 11, 1899.

MR. W. F. YOUNG, Springfield, Mass. DEAR SIR:—Some time ago I wrote you with regard to a large wind puff or thorough pin under, each the large back along on hind leg. I used Absorbine as you directed and in less than a month's time sold the horse and no sign of puff remained. Yours truly, E. K. SALISBURY.

Standard for Judging Roadsters.

The American Horse Show Association has laid down the following rules for judging trotters used for road purposes, and they have been adopted by the majority of associations giving horse shows in the United States.

1. Head.—The size should be in proportion to the size of the animal. The form should be wide between the jaws, broad between the eyes, with prominent brain development; clean and bony, with lips neat and compressed, and nostrils active and delicate. Perfection, 4.

2. Eye and Ear.—Character is shown in these organs. Not only the size and fullness of the eye, but its expression must be considered. The ear should be active and thin and generous in length. Perfection, 4.

3. Neck.—This point will include the setting on of the head, the length and shape of the neck, and the free development of the windpipe, especially at the throatle. Perfection 6.

4. Shoulders and Forearms.—This point will include the slope and strength of the shoulders, the height of the withers and the form and muscles of the forearms, both inside and out. Perfection 8.

5. Barrel, Coupling and Croup.—This embraces the length, depth and roundness of the body, with the strength and spread of the loin and the proper elevation of the croup. Perfection, 10.

6. Hips, Quarters, Stiles and Gaskins.—The symmetry of the hip, the breadth and strength of the quarters, the spread of the stiles and the muscular development of the gaskins, inside and out, are to be considered in this point. Perfection, 12.

7. Hocks, Knees, Legs and Pasterns.—This point includes the strength and clean cut articulation of all the members of the hock and knee joints, the angle of the hocks, the character and strength of the cannon bones and the angles and character of the pasterns. Perfection, 14.

8. Feet.—The general shape of the feet, their position when at rest, the width of the heels, the strength and healthy growth of the walls, as well as evidences of internal troubles, will be embraced in this point. Perfection, 10

9. Color.—According to public taste, the leading colors may be classed as follows: Bay, dark chestnut, brown, black, roan, gray. All white markings beyond ester and one or two white feet are objectionable. Perfection, 6

10. Size.—This will be determined by the class to which this scale is applied. The model perk horse is the model farm horse, and he should be 16 hands, weighing 1200 pounds; the road end trotting horse not less than 152 hands and other breeds according to their uses. Perfection, 10.

11. Symmetry and Style.—This embraces the natural and unrestrained carriage of the head and tail, and the outline of form and figure, as presented in a stage of animation. Perfection, 8.

12. Action.—This will embrace the action and use of the limbs at the walk and at the slow trot, in which the difference between a dragging motion and the quick, trappy lifting of the feet will be considered. The right use of the knee and hock is a necessity. Perfection, 8. Total perfection, 100.

13. Pedigree.—This is the most important single point in the whole scale, and yet it is the one which has received the least attention. Consider well what the sire and dam each has inherited, what each has done as a performer and what each has produced in the stud. Then consider the qualifications of the two grandsires and grandams in the same way. If the animal under judgment is running-bred, consider the running qualifications of his ancestors, but if trotting-bred look only to the trotting qualifications. The value of a pedigree is in the merit of the immediate crosses, viewed in the light of inheritance, performance and production. Perfection, 50.

(Points 14 and 15 are alternative. Exhibitors shall select one or the other, but not both.)

14. Performance.—Ability to perform well compensates for a number of shortcomings in the inheritance. Nothing but technical "records" can be considered on this point. Any record is better than no record. Every animal intended to produce trotters should have his or her speed developed to some extent. The character and precision of the gait, with freedom from all artificial appliances, must enter into the value of this point. Perfection, 50.

15. Character of Offspring.—This point applies only to aged and tried sires and dams. The credits will be awarded according to the number and class of best performers from a given animal—the age and opportunities of competitors being considered. Perfection, 50. Grand total perfection, 200.

Mr. Schorr's Plans.

If the statements alleged to have been made by J. W. Schorr to the St. Louis newspaper men are to be believed, the local horse trainer will attempt to train a trio of his three-year-olds himself during the preliminary season of 1900.

"John W. Schorr was in St. Louis Friday, and spent the afternoon at the St. Louis Fair. When asked as to his plans for the winter, he stated that his son, John W. Schorr, Jr., would take five of his horses to San Francisco. Nearly all the rest of the older horses in the string are to be sold this fall. Those retained will be wintered at Memphis with the coming two-year-olds of the stable. Jockey Tommy Burns is to accompany young Schorr to San Francisco, where he will also ride for Burns & Wetherhouse.

"My son will take Meadowthroe, Timemaker, Jecknepe, Sea Lion and the crack two-year-old F. W. Brode to Frisco this winter," declared Mr. Schorr. "If Brode rounds to his spring form I look for him to make the best colt of his age at the 'Frisco tracks during the coming season. Brode, you know, was invincible at Memphis last spring, defeating the best there, but he trined off after the stable was shipped to St. Louis, and has been on the shelf ever since. As soon as the Chicago racing season is over I intend to sell Algal, Presbyterien, Cherlie Christy, W. Overton and a number of other horses. Lieber Karl and the three-year-olds, Ordnung and Lieber Anton, will not be sold. All three went wrong this season, and were histered or fired, and turned out for the year. They would not bring much if offered for sale, and I will try and train the trio myself next spring.

"The three-year-olds Sam Phillips and Greenock will be turned out for the winter with my coming two-year-olds. I expect to make a strong bid for the Western three-year-old classics with this pair next season.

THERE may be some trouble growing out of the declaring off of the race meeting at Nashville. The purse races having failed to fill, the association was forced to some extreme action, but in cases where owners made nominations to stake events the claim is made that the association cannot brush them aside with a mere offer to return the entrance money already paid in. It is stated on high authority that should any owner appear on the course with a stake nominee on the day specified and go over the course, that he could claim the money. It is hardly probable that any extreme measures will be resorted to, but it is likely that the matter will not be dropped entirely by the venious owners who have made nominations to the various stakes in perfect good faith.

TEN books "cut in" on Thursday. Hughey Jones and the Dewey Club being the new ones.

This Passing of Woodburn.

Last week Woodburn Farm, the oldest, most femons and most historic of all establishments devoted to the industry of breeding the American light-harness horse, passed out of existence as such, and its name henceforth becomes but a memory, part and parcel of "the things that were" in breeding history. To those to whom the name of Woodburn has been for almost two generations one to conjure with, its disappearance into the past will be tinged with regret and, perhaps, melancholy. To the newer recruits to the ranks of breeders and turfmen, who have known it chiefly by tradition and during the decade which has seen its glory fade so fast, its passing will be of small amount. Still the why and how of this presents a phase of breeding experience well worth considering.

Woodburn Farm, as is well known, was established by the late Robert Aitchison Alexander in the late fifties. Its first object was the breeding of thoroughbreds, but an associate stud of trotters was soon added—as early, at least, as 1858. It would not be quite accurate to say it was the first nursery of trotters in Kentucky, but it was certainly the first one established and conducted on a systematic and intelligent plan. Mr. Alexander began by collecting the best stallions available—Pilot Jr., Normen, Edwin Forrest, Bey Chief, Alexander's Abdallah—and mares already femons through their produce, like Medem Temple, Grey Goose, Black Rose, and Medam Dudley, together with others themselves noted as trotters. Mr. Alexander died in 1867, and was succeeded by the present proprietor of the farm, Mr. A. J. Alexander. It was also about this time that Mr. Lnces Brodhead assumed the position of its superintendent, which he has ever since retained.

The history of the farm is well known. Its rise was not at first rapid. The Civil War also robbed it of Alexander's Abdallah and gave it a considerable hecset. But its owner's wealth and breeding policy gradually made themselves felt. Before the advent of Wedgewood and Maud S. upon the turf it was famous. From that day it became the premier establishment of Kentucky—indeed, of the whole country. The Woodburn strains became the height of fashion. Some of them still remain so, but during the past five or six years their vogue has steadily fallen off and the reputation of the farm has materially suffered. There are several reasons for this. One seems to have been, to many observers, a too close in-and-in breeding of the old home strains and a studious antipathy to new blood, except in the sporadic instances of King Wilkes, Eros, and the colts resulting from the breeding of several mares—Miss Russell and others—to Electioneer. Another, in the retention of fashions that failed to "take" in new times. Woodburn never possessed any but the poorest of half mile farm tracks, and in later years, when the demand for finished products, ready for the track, was steadily increasing, no effort was made to meet it. Grown enormously rich from the selling, at high prices, of generations of colts and fillies on their pedigrees alone, Woodburn was either unable or unwilling to change her policy. It was, perhaps, the very fact that Woodburn was for years the most profitable trotting breeding farm in the country that caused those in control, enriched by the pest, to lose interest in the future. When the panic of '93 came, and values—including those at Woodburn—suffered such extreme depreciation, she made no effort to stem the tide. Her support was withdrawn almost entirely from the turf press, which, seeing in the instance of Wallace's Monthly, had always done her overmuch honor, and she remained aloof with strange indifference, while the proud pre-eminence of a quarter of a century gradually disintegrated and fell to ruin. Now, in the hour of her dissolution, the list of prices which were received last week for what was left of her once priceless stud, speaks eloquently of the well-nigh entire obliteration of even the glamour that formerly hung around her name. Had she chosen to retire a half dozen years ago, following the example of Glenview and Rosemeade—of Feirlawn, even—she had almost undoubtedly been richer than she is to-day. This is, in truth, the "lesson of the sale."—Chicago Horse Review.

LORD VINCENT, by winning the Transylvania Stake, comes very close to being the leading money winner of the year. The amount now credited to him is about $14,000, and only one horse in training exceeds this sum, that being Idolite, who won $7,000 in the New England Futurity and $9,000 in the Horse Review Stake at Dubuque. Lord Vincent has been a busy campaigner since the season opened. He won his first race of the year at Highland Park, Detroit, one week before the Grand Circuit opened. He was then eligible to the 2:17 class, and took a record of 2:13 1/4. He did not start at Cleveland, and was behind the money at Columbus, but he was a racehorse at Fort Erie, and gave the talent one of their rudest jolts of the year. He was at his best when Glens Falls was reached, and went the three heats in 2:10 1/2, 2:09 1/2 and 2:08 1/2. At Hertford he won the $10,000 Charter Oak Stakes, but was beaten both in Providence and New York.

ELABORATE catalogues will soon be issued for the sales of thoroughbreds belonging to Prince Poniatowski, Estates of B. C. Holly, Chas. Kerr, J. B. Chase, H. Dutard, etc. These and other sales will be held at the sales pavilion known as the Occidental Horse Exchange, 721 Howard St., Wm. G. Layng, auctioneer.

Reports from Eel river are to the effect that the fishing is improving every day. One angler, John Gallagher, caught four fish weighing from six to ten pounds and seventy-two half pounders one day last week. Another effort was made to plant stripped bass in Eel river this week. Some 400 bass fry having been caught and sent north to be liberated in the stream. The first lot sent was not a success, all but a dozen dying en route. The Fish Commissioners have been puzzled over the fact that the fish have not sought those waters of their own accord. Soon after these fish became plentiful in the waters of San Francisco Bay the Commissioners found that the overflow had migrated to the south until now they are plentiful in all of the southern streams having a permanent opening into the ocean. To the north it has been different, none of these fish having been found north of Cape Mendocino. One theory is that upon that headland, which is the farthest west in this State, they came in contact with a cold current and turned back in search of warmer waters. It is believed that if they once got around the capes they would have done well in the more northern bays and big streams, which seem particularly adapted to their requirements.

A good story is told concerning a corporation in Reno; the Reno Reduction Works, who have recently been put to the trouble of placing a fish ladder in their dam. Through their attorney complaint was made to the authorities in Washington that the waters of a navigable stream, the Truckee, were diverted from their proper channel by a number of irrigation ditches which lowered the river and made it unnavigable above the company's location on the stream much to their damage, etc. In due time the matter was referred to the Army Department of the Pacific, an officer of engineers being detailed to make official inquiry therein. The major, following the duties prescribed by routine and red tape, interviewed Fish Commissioner Vogelsang in regard to the complaint. Vogelsang was the most astonished man in the world but proceeded to explain; he showed the natural and other obstructions (seven dams, etc.) in the stream and said that the Commission were trying their utmost to "make the river navigable for fish!" The major saw the point and departed.

Four fish dealers were arrested this week on complaint of Deputy Fish Commissioner C. A. Vogelsang for having salmon illegally in their possession and also for resisting an officer. When the deputy attempted to seize the fish at the stand of the American Union Fish Company on Merchant street on Tuesday morning he was met with forcible resistance, in which all four parties joined. The case of fish was taken from him and was afterward thrown in the bay. The accused men, A. Guisto, P. F. Sposito, M. Maggio and C. Meredith, were booked at the California street station, where they were released on $250 cash bail each.

Many of our local anglers who have for several seasons past taken a trip to Eel river for steelhead fishing are now convinced that their journey has been rather early by from four to six weeks for the best results in that stream; it seems now to be pretty well demonstrated that the run of big fish does not take place until nearly the end of October or beginning of November.

A communication from Mrs. Colby's comfortable hostelry in Sonoma county states that Salmon creek is full of striped bass. It is believed they have been in there ever since the bar closed last year. Al Cummings and Eli Merks, it will be remembered, had such fine sport with them a year ago. Ducks are also plentiful on the stream.

H. F. Fountain of Newcastle and Wm. McDonald of Boca have been in this city for a week. Both gentlemen are well known to many of our local anglers who have a fancy for that grand fishing stream, the Truckee.

Steelhead of fair size are being caught in the Pescadero lagoon. Three beautiful fish caught there were received by Henry Skinner on Wednesday.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

English snipe are reported as unusually plentiful and in excellent condition.

The clerk of the weather has behaved handsomely to the duck shooters this week.

Jules Bruns and Johnny Karney are waiting patiently for canvasback to frequent the Seare point region.

Shooting conditions on the east bay shore marshes are practically the same as they were on corresponding dates last year.

The wild geese are coming from the north, vast flights of them have been seen during the week in the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys.

Ed Houghton and Net Wilson bagged thirty-six spoonies, all in prime condition, on the Mira Monte preserve this week.

Fred Sneser, of Eden Velsy, paid $40 at Ukiah for having doe hides in his possession. Game Warden Orabeun made the arrest.

Fred Surrhyne and George Ross were credited with making the largest bag, forty widgeon and sprig, on the Olympic preserves on Sunday.

Local sportsmen are much perturbed over the rumor that the Soleno county Solons propose to put an embargo on taking game out of the county.

The best string of rails reported from the San Mateo marshes was made by Lloyd Eaton and Charles Diatz. They shot at McClellans near the railroad bridge and bagged four dozen birds.

Fred H. Bushnell, Johnny Coleman and Joe Eppinger are now at Byron, Union island, and doing some duck shooting. Dave Hearfield made a bag of twenty-five and Harry Wegner nine birds at this point on the 1st inst.

If the Santa Clara Fish and Game Association would take the proper steps to secure the prohibition of night shooting and the use of sneak-boats by duck hunters, the San Jose sportsmen would undoubtedly get more ducks on the Alviso marshes.

Paul Keller and W. L. Orser spent last Sunday duck shooting at Brentwood. The bag was three ducks. Keller explains the reason for such small returns by saying: "I would have got more birds, only I could not hit them." An honest confession truly.

Ed and Fred Schultz bagged three dozen quail on Bouldin island Sunday last. The day was warm and the weather told alike on the hunters and their dogs. Quail shooting will be good on the island this year, but the ground is posted against hunters in general.

The Willow Lodge Shooting Club, composed of Will J. Golcher, Clarence A. Haight, James Meynerd, Jr., Dr. Lane and Dr. Ayers, had only a limited amount of sport on Sunday at their preserve on the east bay shore. The birds soared high, the weather being much too nice for good duck shooting.

One clever hunter who spent Sunday on the Empire preserve took the down train at night with a nice looking string of ducks. Some fine fat sprig garnished the outside of a large bunch of wheat on investigation proved to be "wire-tails," a style of duck that seems to take an infinite delight in being shot.

The Spooney Gun Club members, Phil B. Bekeart, Lee Larzaler, John Brufind and J. Miles, were out on peep o' day Sunday morning, but there was one necessary sporting quality missing to give the boys' decent shooting—ducks. The birds flew high and the weather was warm. A mixed bag of sprig, rail and plover fell to the guns.

Recently whilst Georga Jackson was sitting in a blind one morning at Los Benos waiting for ducks, he was surprised to see a large coyote steal out of the weeds and quietly trot towards the water. It is needlessly to say that as soon as Mr. Jackson could turn his gun on the coyote he was given a reception that was effective in settling his merending career.

Hunters are killing quail in Marin county, notwithstanding the sweeping ordinances that have been recently passed by the Supervisors. Last week two violators were arrested and taken before the Justice Court at San Rafael. Antona de Souza was caught on the preserves of the Country Club shooting into a bevy of quail. He bagged six birds. Falix Selersge, who was arrested near Fairfax Station, had seven birds in his possession. The hunters were fined heavily.

The Canvasback Gun Club members bagged sixty-five sprig, widgeon and teal last Sunday. The shooting party was composed of Billy Hynes, Joe Sweeney, H. and J. Kullman, Nerry A. Wands and J. Piel Skynpe, alias Mud-in-the-Face. The last named warrior was accused by his hunting companions of scaring many birds away from their ponds. They claim that he adopted ostrich tactics in his blind, and instead of laying low for the flying ducks he hid his head carefully and telegraphed danger to ducks with the rest of his anatomy.

The Suisun ponds have given some good bags this week, the weather conditions having improved very much. Fred Webster bagged seventy birds on the Tula Belle ponds, Harry Babcock's count was ninety ducks, principally sprig. Ed. Briggs, Al Cumming, Harry Hosmer and Roy Levis were on the Olympic Club preserve Wednesday morning. The shoot promised to be a good one, but Ed. Briggs opened up on the birds just a little too soon before daybreak. Every duck within a mile apparently took alarm and made for safe quarters. A small mixed bag of sprig, teal and yellow legs was the result. Briggs will not give Hosmer a chance at anything with feathers on since they had that livra bird race two years ago at Whitney's landing.

John Lemmer and Fred Johnson were the only Black Jack shooters at Antioch on Sunday. The morning was cool and the shooting fairly good until Lemmer's gun broke down. Johnson had shooter's luck early in the day, losing several fine mallards which dropped in the tules. He retrieved three wounded birds that were at the bottom of the pond tangled in the weeds where they had drowned, other cripples instead of swimming to the edge of the tules and staying there as is usual with badly wounded birds made their escape into the recesses of the tules and were also lost. Johnson's hard luck began on Saturday, his fine Lawellyn setter Budd jumped from the Antioch bus and joined the town band of canines, this desertion spoiled a contemplated snipe shoot next morning.

Hyp Justins and W. J. McLein spent last week at Aetna Springs. It is hardly necessary to observe that both of these true knights of the hemmerless persneider took advantage of the excellent quail shooting in that vicinity. Both of the gentlemen are unstinted in praising the congenial qualities and untiring energy of mine host W. L. Mitchell to make their visit doubly enjoyable at the Springs.

J. D. Merch, John Lasbough, L. W. Brooks and Geo. Thomesson of Chico returned recently from Shell mound, Eel river with a huge load of jerked venison and many pair of horns. During the trip the party killed seventeen finades and report that had they so desired they could have killed many more. The deer seemed to be swarming in that vicinity and Mr. March says that in one bend twenty-five were counted.

H. A. Wegener is taking a two weeks' outing in the Santa Cruz mountains. Mr. Wegener is accompanied on the trip by his family. The party left the city in a comfortable double team and will undoubtedly have a most enjoyable camping trip, their outfit being an ideal one for such an excursion. Incidentally Mr. Wegener proposes to enjoy the quail shooting and trout fishing, both of which are excellent in the district the party will visit.

Arnold D. Patterson, of Routiers Station, Sacramento county, last week shot and killed a young bald eagle, of a very rare variety. The bird measured five feet five inches from tip to tip.

What the motive for killing this particular bird was can hardly be imagined, save the inherent desire of the men with the gun to blow some feathered creature into smithereens as opportunity offered.

Merysville hunters out on Sunday report that quail are somewhat scarce in that section. The Steward brothers and a friend went to Dry Creek, on the Spencerville road and by hard work and good shooting the thras secured twenty-six quail, nine doves and two rabbits. Going over the same ground two years ago ten quail were found where there is one now, and that is the condition found wherever hunters go this season. It will be well for hunters to bear in mind that it is now unwell to ship ducks or quail to market from Yuba county.

Edg Forster, Billy Mordock, Ben Beum and E. Klevesehl among others braved the hot weather and mosquitoes on the Reclamation duck grounds Sunday. The birds were not in a mood to give the hunters a chance; most of the quackers preferred staying out on the bay, detouring a few skirmishes to reconnoitre the situation from the mouth of Sonoma creek. Klavesehl covered himself with glory and coots. He took a double flock shot at a bunch of the "romen-nosed" ducks flying over him and brought down such a shower of birds that the dogs took fright and started for home.

Serious complaint is made by the Sebastopol Times that notwithstanding the fact that in Sonoma county the open season for shooting quail does not commence until November 1st, hundreds of the birds are being shot in that vicinity every day. Hunters visit that section from all directions and openly violate the law. At present quail are only about half grown, but the lawless shooters do not take this into consideration.

It is apparent that the county and township officials are somewhat apathetic in their duties, if the law violations are so flagrant, it would be a very easy matter to arrest a few of the law breakers.

Probably the most elaborate outfit which has ever left for the mountains of Colorado was that of C. W. C. Deering and bride of Chicgo, who recently started on a hunting trip which will extend over two months or more. Their guide takes with him fifteen servants. Twelve saddled horses and twenty-two pack horses accompany them, the latter well pecked with an extensive supply of groceries etc. Mr. Deering takes with him sixteen of the finest rifles and shotguns that are made and over 3000 rounds of ammunition. It is his desire to kill a silver tip bear, as well as other large game, such as deer, elk and mountain lions. The value of the outfit is placed at $5000.

The repeating shot gun as a sportsman's weapon for use in the field or at the traps is the subject of much discussion among Eastern shooters. In answer to a recent communication protesting against the use of the "pump gun" for livra bird shooting, we quote Shooting and Fishing which says: "The recent innovation in trap shooting of allowing the use of repeating shot guns in livra bird matches, with the privilege of shooting as many times as desired at a single bird, has not the approval of many sportsman. It is stated by one of our correspondants that from the time the sport of live bird shooting from traps was created the use of hut two barrels has been permitted; that it is unfair to the bird. Our correspondant's communication is conchad in too strong language for publication, but we think his points well taken."

There is trouble brewing among the sportsmen of Orange county, the present condition of affairs at Santa Ana is caused by the Bolsa Chico Gun Club dam, which has caused so much dissatisfaction among sportsmen because it enclosed all the hunting grounds, and also among the peatland farmers because it creates back water to flood their fields and does serious damage; this will probably result in a case in court. The residents of that portion of the country will first go before the Supervisors with their protests against the dam and if necessary will go to court. Supervisor Larter has been looking up the status of the case and finds that the territory held by the Bolsa Chico people was long ago deeded to the county and is still its property. The deed was made by the Stearns Ranchos company and covers a distance of 2500 feet of what is known as Freeman river. The county right extends from where the drainage ditch empties into the river to its mouth, and calls for 15 feet on the east side of the water way. This territory is now held by the gun club. Upon ascertaining this fact Mr. Larter gave permission to a number of sportsman to enter this part of the game preserve, which has been done, and the gun club will doubtless fight the intrusion. The gun club have improved their preserve at a great expensa.

A hunter who was in the Walnut creek district shooting quail recently, relates that the weather was so excessively hot that both himself and companion as well as their dogs suffered very much, in fact one of the dogs was overcome with the heat and fell down while making a point.

Hunters who venture afield while the weather is at all warm and dry should remember that their dogs need water rather more often than their masters do. Setters in particular seem to suffer for lack of water for more than pointers. Those who have owned and hunted dogs will have noticed how dearly a setter, heated with an hour or so of herd hunting on a steep hillside or in thick cover, loves to plunge into a cool stream, often lying down in small pools so that the water can run all over him. Many people, too, keen hunters, fail to rest up their dogs sufficiently, only thinking of covering as much ground and of getting as many birds as possible. Such hunters will find that they gain rather than lose by stopping for a quarter of an hour or so at intervals during the day, giving their dogs a chance to freshen up a bit; at the luncheon hour a stop of half an hour with a little more perhaps for a quiet smoke, should be taken and the dog's lunch should certainly not be overlooked. Scraps from his master's lunch are not what a dog deserves after a hard morning's work. Dogs are like human beings, and every hunter knows how refreshed he feels after a short rest at intervals, and after a half hour's loaf in the heat of the day while luncheon is being discussed. But little of the day is wasted, while the added pleasure of being rested in place of jaded, is reward enough, outside of the better shooting that can be done by a rested man than by a tired one.

Rail Shooting.

For several decades past hunters, young and old, have found rail shooting on the salt-grass covered marshes fringing the western shores of San Francisco bay a source of easy sport with pleasurable returns for the outlay of time and trouble. In the old days these marshes from Mission bay to the mouth of the Coyote creek were the favorite haunts and breeding places of countless thousands of rails. Until within only recent years this bird, commonly known as the king rail, was unprotected. The Mission bay, Islais creek and Bay View marshes have long since ceased to be the shooting ground for local hunters some of whom, veterans who are still with us, can tell of many good bags killed in this county. In course of time the rail, which had been so plentiful that they were incessantly hunted at all seasons, became scarce and were finally recognized by sportsmen and protected by general statute and subsequently by county ordinances.

The San Mateo marshes have in recent years been noted for rail shooting, the open season lasting now but three weeks. For several seasons it has been noticed that the birds are becoming scarcer each year. One reason alleged for this is the marsh rat; these rodents have been increasing rapidly and undoubtedly are responsible for the destruction of many eggs and young birds.

On the opening day of the present season, October 15th, the marshes were visited by hundreds of hunters many of whom returned with empty hags, and but few had more than fair strings of rail. Duck hunters (?) who were plentiful on the marshes on Saturday, the day preceding the opening of the rail season, were looked upon as one of the causes for the poor results achieved by the Sunday contingent of rail shooters.

On the opposite bay shores in the vicinity of Alviso the birds are reported to have bred well and are very plentiful.

The following, taken from the Luter-Ocego, is an interesting account of the rail shooting opportunities afforded Illinois sportsmen. The bird here described is, we think, the sora rail, similar specimens are found in this State, but are not much hunted.

McHenry county, Illinois, is a good gun country. The Fox river, which heads away up in Wisconsin, runs through it wide, clear and placid, gently flowing, with low green banks reaching back to the prairies beyond, and along these banks grows at this season a tangle of wild rice seven feet tall, the heads of it heavy with fat grains.

Just now the wild rice of the Fox river is populous with rails. The number of them is incalculable. They breed about the upper shores of Lake Superior, and even farther North, come by millions in a night or two, fed upon the rice grains until they are bursting fat, wait for the first frost, and are gone in twelve hours. One day the river grows resound with their cries, the next day there is not a feather of them to be seen, and there will not be until twelve months have come and passed. No man sees them arrive, no man sees them depart. They have no cry in the air. Silent and mysterious, upon tireless wings that have a slow and hat-like motion, they come out of the dark and go into the dark with never a hint of their going. They rise from the weeds and water grasses a hundred thousand at a flight, and the fishermen in his lonely hut gets not a sound from the wondrous hegira.

The beauty of the rail is that it is pre eminently the bird for poor marksmen. The man unable to make a good bag would miss a flock of belooers. It rises from the water slowly; it flies away in a perfectly straight line, as a general thing and it makes about one-fifth of the progress of the quail. It will stand a good deal of lead, but is scarcely ever more than fifteen feet away when it flushes, and before it has gone forty yards, which is the average shotgun range, a fast man will have time to repeat a stanza of the 'Rubeiyat' and then do good shooting.

The men of sportsmen's instincts who wishes to heg a couple of dozen rails takes a rifle of .38 caliber and a pocket-ful of shot shells made for this particular weapon. These shells have little more than a pinch of powder in them, and a sixteenth of an ounce of No. 10 shot. A wooden plug is placed over the shot, and this has the effect of keeping the pellets together until they leave a muzzle. It also prevents the grooves of the rifle becoming leaded. So armed, the sportsman gets into a boat pulled by a man with good shoulders, and starts up or down the river, keeping some ten feet away from the well of rice. When a rail is seen sitting on a stem an inch above the water and leisurely picking up the floating seeds it can be induced to flush generally by splashing the oars. It rises straight up for five feet, and then sails slowly towards the shore. The men with the rifle must kill it within thirty feet, as his charge is not good for any greater distance, and, as the sights of a rifle are not intended for quick work, he must be something of a marksman to make his heg. Rail shooting under these conditions is possibly as hard as quail shooting over an open country, and a sportsman is able to derive some satisfaction from it.

The rail is not so generally known as it should be, because of the sport it affords to the right-minded, and because of its manifold excellencies as a table bird. It is about the size of a well grown blackbird, but of much shorter body and plumper shape. It runs a good deal to breast, sticking out in front like a politician, and this weight so placed has a tendency to pull it forward when it is standing. To this fact is due the slow and labored manner in which it takes flight and the length of time it requires in order to get fairly on the wing. It is beautifully plumaged, having a rich brown hack and wings, with a lighter color of breast. Its eye is dark and liquid, and of a pathetic, appealing expression. A man used to birds would be liable to say on first seeing the rail that it was a song bird of some power. It has the singing bird's bill—a short, stout and not especially pointed.

Though it is aquatic, and when put to it will dive like a coveysheck, there is nothing of the fish-eating character about its make-up. It lives entirely upon seeds, wild rice if it can get them, and when it cannot, the grains of several other water plants. It has a variety of notes, all of them more or less musical, and the song with which it greets the daylight is peculiarly rich, pure and bell-like in quality. It consists in a series of short, round notes, of strange resonance to come from so little a body, and the hearer is irresistibly reminded of a chime. When a hundred thousand rails along the Fox river are emitting this song simultaneously the effect is both singular and entrancing. The morning song contains six notes, beginning deeply and running up a quarter note at a step, and it never varies. It ends abruptly; then the little warbler, much pleased with himself, tries it all over again.

For a hungry man, or for one of delicate appetite, there is nothing to heat the rail as a table delicacy. The meat is of a snowy whiteness, like the quail's, and it lacks the quail's dryness. Its flavor is its own, and not to be described. The birds, after ten days in the rice, become so fat that if by chance they fell upon the ground when shot from a height of twenty feet they crack open. Owing to this heavy layer of fat they should be skinned when being dressed, instead of plucked, unless the diner cares for exceedingly rich food. Most of the fat strips off with the skin, leaving the firm flesh exposed. There are many ways of cooking the rail, but no better way than an old-fashioned simple broil upon the coals of a wood fire, with just a little salt as dressing. A favorite method of preparation among the hunters on the Fox river is what is locally known as a brown stew. It is in reality a smother. The birds are laid in a Dutch oven, after having been peppered and salted, a little water is poured over them, the lid is replaced, coals are heaped upon it, and they are allowed to simmer until both they and the gravy are of a rich brown. A well man will account for ten rails cooked in this fashion, and a very well man will account for fifteen.

Not a great deal is known of the breeding or summer habits of the rail. It does not stay for a greater length of time than two weeks at any point in the North after its southward journey is begun and remains even a shorter time when it returns in the spring. It goes to the Canadian wilds to make its nest and it stays there, far from the thickly settled haunts of men, all through the summer. It is known that the bird is monogamous and that from four to five chicks are brought to life with each hatching. Until its full growth is attained it does not attempt flight and remains so hidden in dense weeds and marshes that it is observed only at the cost of much time and patience. Indeed, it may be said to be a bird that is never in the open. Even when feeding along the Fox river, where it leads the most public stage of its career, an individual is never in full view for more than ten seconds. It will fit back into cover and its place will be taken by another exactly like it. Though it is slaughtered by the ten thousands when it starts South, its most potent enemies are the otter, the mink, pike, muskellonge, hess, and such things which live in the water or near it. The rail in daylight is always within six inches of the water surface, unless it happens to be on the wing a second or two, and its capture by leaping fish is an easy matter. Often on the Fox the hunter sees his bird, hard hit, strike the surface of the water and instantly disappear in a swirl. Some hungry hess has risen under it and quietly taken it in. In fact, there is no better bait for still hess fishing than a half rail, cleanly plucked. The fish likes the flavor exceedingly, and smell blame to him. Owing to his habit of roosting in the wild rice and never at any great distance above the water, otters and minks are able to find the roost gorge themselves into inactivity long before daylight. Hawks do not trouble the rail at all, for the reason that the bird flies for distances only at night when the hawks are asleep, and in the daytime the hawk does not live that can get at them through the practically solid wall of rice.

It is an interesting sight along the Fox river to see hawk after hawk dashing ten feet above the rice pods, glaring with yellow eyes at the countless myriads of tid-bits below, stooping sevensely now and again only to become semientangled and break away, finally soaring over the fields in a rage of disappointment. So well aware are the rails of their utter safety that the appearance of the hawk does not disturb them in the least. They go on darting swiftly about among the roots, or pecking at the seeds, though the beating of the huge wings just over them is plain to their hearing and the flashing shadow of those pinions falls upon them as the pirate passes. A teal, feeding busily in an open space, will huzz instantly to cover if it sees a hawk far away, but its trepidation is not understood by the rails, which greet it with a melodious cackle, as much as to say that it is making a lot of fuss about nothing.

The Game Law.

The synopsis of the game laws appearing below and published in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for several years past has, from time to time been changed or the provisions of new ordinances added thereto by reason of the many and various changes in the county game and fish laws, particularly those of recent date and of application in and around the bay counties.

This synopsis has been frequently copied (in more or less garbled and incomplete form) and quoted by city and interior journals and has also been printed and distributed by business houses. While the information given at the date of issuance was substantially correct, we do not care to be held responsible for the circulation of old matter that is now incorrect in many details. Some complaint has been made in this respect and to avoid misunderstanding in the future it is suggested that for information of this character a reference be made to current numbers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for the latest and most complete data concerning the Game Laws.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, 15th July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October. DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The premium lists for the Oakland show will be ready for distribution on November 1st. Copies can be procured at the office of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.

Jos. Cutten's rough coat St. Bernard bitch Alta Mand gave birth to fifteen puppies on the 10th inst, five of them, dogs, are now alive. This whelping is the last litter that will have Alta Millo for a sire.

Mr. D. Ferguson had the misfortune to lose, on October 9th, during parturition, his rough coat St. Bernard bitch Erma (Reglov—Empress Juno). She was in whelp to Grand Master II. (Ch. Grand Master—Bonnie Doone).

Mrs. E. Pferdner, of Victoria, B. C., recently left for the North after a sojourn of several months in this city. She took to Victoria with her rough coat bitch Lanra Alton who is due to whelp to Reglov Jr. on November 2d.

The dog poisoner is making his nefarious work felt in Stockton, one of his latest victims being Max Kohm's Newfoundland dog Frank. This dog and his mate (who also was poisoned but recovered) had been Kohm's companions in the Klondyke; both of them on many occasions showed wonderful sagacity in trying situations.

W. J. P. Stretchen of this city has bought from A. S. Bleke the Great Dane dog Bran Brummel (Blinker Murphy—Una Que Amo) who won first novice and first in winners' class, at the recent show here. With this purchase Mr. Stretchen has now the strongest kennel of this breed upon the Coast, the other inmates being Thelma, winner first novice, reserve winners and Donna Juanita with puppy, San Francisco, 1899.

The California Jockey Club Kennels are well pleased with the latest addition to their kennel of fox terriers. Dauntless Sensation, formerly owned by W. H. McFee of Los Angeles, winner of second in open hitches at the Mey show this year, is the newcomer. She will be a valuable acquisition to this kennel which now contains Flirtation by Warren Sage—Dauntless Creole and two dogs and one bitch from Harry Aldon Swagger.

Every owner of a fox terrier should procure a copy of the book issued by the Cincinnati Fox Terrier Club, entitled, Rules, Standard and Stake. It is a neat and beautifully illustrated pamphlet, and contains the standard, points, etc., of the fox terrier, besides much other matter of especial interest to owners of that breed. The book sells for twenty-five cents. Orders sent to this office will be promptly forwarded.

A beautiful eight months old rough coat St. Bernard, Finstrel Boy, by Prince Sylvia out of a full sister to the celebrated Judith, arrived in this city on the 9th inst. assigned to that enterprising and progressive young fancier Mr. Philip Meyers. The uawcomer is perfectly marked, rough boned and has a typical Le Prinoa head. Mr. Meyer contemplates the location of his kennels within the confines of The Chutes whara a thoroughly up-to-date domicilia will be constructed for his dogs. The kennels will be an exemplification of the best models Mr. Meyer inspected on a recent Eastern tour combined with some improvements and innovations Mr. Meyer suggests thus making them particularly adapted to local conditions.

Kennel Suggestions.

It is not very likely that such an active agent as "P. D.," "Knock 'Em Stiff" or any of these hot headed preparations will reason about the different kinds of fleas or lousiness of a dog, but just knock them out on general principals and have such writers as "Pathologist" to tell us about the varieties. But here are some of them:

Lice, the presecua of which gives rise to the affection sometimes termed phthiriasis, are of common distribution, as parasites throughout the animal kingdom. Two varieties affect the dog, namely, the Hematopinus Piliferus and the Trichodectes Latus. The first of these, as a rule, is chiefly found about the head, ears, etc., but may wander over any part of the body; the second is found over various other parts of the body, and appears to play an important part in the life history of the tapeworm, the eggs of which it may eat, and so act as an "intermediary bearer" of the internal parasite, which finds its way into the alimentary canal through the accidental swelling, by the dog, of the external parasite.

Both species of parasite are destitute of wings, yellowish grey or yellow in color, and have their mouths specially adapted for sucking. Pediculi always cause more or less itching, consequently a tendency to scratch. This is not all but in many cases they lead to the formation of scabs.

The female is larger than the male, and deposits her eggs or nits, upon the hair, attaching each one thereto by a tough transparent sheath. The female lays about 50 eggs, which are hatched in twelve days.

It is hardly necessary to say that a Veterinary Surgeon has power (and properly so) to refuse the admission to a show of any animal affected with lousiness.

Treatment.—It is not usually a very difficult matter to get rid of lice. Thorough cleanliness is essential, with disinfection and destruction of all material with which the animal has been in contact. Sucking parts are frequently affected, in which case the treatment must be directed to both parent and offspring. After cleansing of the kennel, destruction of the heddng material, etc., the former should be washed with soft soap and warm water, afterwards dressed with the following solution: stavesacre seeds 1 ounce, water 1 quart. The seed must be boiled for about an hour in the water, and then adding sufficient water to bring it up to a quart again. With this the dog should be thoroughly dressed from head to tail, taking care not to leave one hair untouched. It is certain death to both parasite and eggs. After 24 hours it may be washed off, and, if necessary, applied again. The suckling pups must be combed before being given back to their mother. This must be repeated daily, until they are perfectly free from vermin. They may also be dressed with the same solution, but it should be diluted, five ounces of the solution being added to five ounces of camphor water. Of course washing is here inadmissible. Another remedy, which is equally effectual, is a weak solution of lime and sulphur lotion, whilst for animals of a more mature age, it may be used of the ordinary strength. Other agents are commonly used, the chief of these being chloride of ammonium (white precipitate), which is dosed into the coat; a weak decoction of tobacco; oil of stavesacre, etc.

(Whatever remedy is applied, its application must be thorough to a degree, and always sustained by proper hygienic measures.)

A parasite of less frequent occurrence is the common flea (pulex irritans) is often a source of considerable annoyance, not only to the dog itself, but also to its owner, causing varying degrees of irritation to both man and animal, though they do not come under the category of parasitic animals. In some persons (e. g. self) flea bites produce violent itching, which is followed presently by the formation of a wheel, perhaps the size of a shilling-piece. In children, etc., a recent flea bite always looks like a blood-spot of some febrile disease, but if carefully looked at the puncture made by the insect will probably be discovered.

Dogs which have dense long coats are subjects of special delight to the fleas.

The mouth of the flea is specially adapted for sucking; the wings are rudimentary, being represented by four minute scutes. The larvæ is a footless grub, which, in about twelve days, spins a "cocoon" (i. e., an outer covering of silky hairs) for itself, and becomes a chrysalis, from which the perfect flea emerges in about a fortnight more.

Perhaps the most important point to the dog owner is to know how to get rid of fleas, which is not always so simple as it would appear. Numerous preparations are advertised for the destruction of fleas and parasites, the efficacy of which it is not within my province to say.

The remedies that have proved most effectual in my experience for the destruction of fleas (and other parasites in their mature and immature stages are the following:

R. 1 part of oil of cloves to 20 parts of methylated spirit. Direction: Apply all over after washing.

K. Terereha 1 part, glycerina 1 part, methylated spirits 4 parts. Apply as before.—American Stock Keeper.

Notes for Novices

Under the above heading we gave some interesting data and valuable hints on the constructions of kennels and care of dogs about our's premises in our issue of July 8, 1899. In elaborating further on the same subject a writer in the Fauquier's Review says:

"Whilst on the subject of doors, attention should be directed to a most important feature in their construction; always have two fastenings on each door. If there is only one, it is liable to come unfastened in the night, either through the instrumentality of the traditional cat, or the carelessness of the feeder; and the result is a serious disturbance, and perhaps a free fight in the kennel. Nothing seems to exasperate dogs when in confinement more than to witness a kennel companion roaming about the premises alone, and I have suffered severely from dogs breaking loose of a night. The best description of fastening by far is a bolt for the lower half of the door, and a hook catch on the upper. It is a good plan to fix the latter in such a position that when it falls into the staples to close the door it is on a downward slant. This will prevent it from coming unfastened easily. The above system of fastening doors applies to all sorts of kennels with equal importance.

Having arranged the front of such kennel to his satisfaction the beginner has little more to do; for when a wooden bench has been erected in one corner, about eighteen inches from the ground, for the dog to sleep on, and the sides end back well lime-washed, the quondam stall is quite ready for the reception of its canine lodger. The lime-washing is essential, if the dog's health and general comfort are to be considered; when properly done, it not only renders the kennel clean and tidy in appearance, but has the effect of destroying the innumerable insects which are sure to infest the shade of every sort of dog, unless very stringent measures are taken for their extermination.

I much prefer such portable benches, such as the hack end of a side of the bench being carried up for a foot or more. This prevents the dogs from injuring their coats against the whitened wall when turning around in their beds. The bench, being quite detached from the wall, is also far less likely to harbour vermin; and finally, whoever occasion requires, it can be taken into the open air and thoroughly scrubbed with some disinfectant; which effectually disposes of any that may have gained a lodgment. Such benches are also very handy for placing about wherever required.

A gentle slope of the floor is highly desirable, as a drain-pipe can easily be run under the ground in front of the kennels, by which the water is enabled to run off, thereby increasing the salubrity of the establishment. In the case of the larger varieties of dogs, this arrangement becomes almost a matter of necessity, and the trifling outlay it involves most amply repays a breeder by the increased comfort it affords his pets, as well as by the effect it has upon the appearance of his kennel.

A good, simple form of in-door kennel having now been described, attention may be drawn to special out-door erections of a very similar character, which I have proved by experience to be admirably adapted for those varieties which are of a hardy constitution, or even for those of more delicate nature, when they are not required to be in first-class show condition.

Such a form of kennel may be erected against a garden or any other wall, and consists of a series of compartments which closely resemble the stalls of a stable, and possessing a front of wooden or iron railings. I can vouch for the many good qualities of this kind of kennel, having erected many for the accommodation of my own stock; and the dogs always seemed to do well in them, except when in delicate health, when naturally they were removed into warmer quarters. The size I built each stall in my kennels was ten feet deep by eight feet wide, and the dogs which inhabited them were bulldogs and bull terriers, of from thirty-five to fifty pounds weight. I mention this, as it is desirable to explain to inexperienced readers as nearly as possible what arrangements were made so as to enable them to judge for themselves of what size to erect their kennels; as, of course, this depends upon the variety of dogs they propose keeping as well as upon the accommodation at hand. The stalls should be covered in by a lean to roof for at least three-quarters of their depth from the wall, as wet ground is one of the worst things possible for a dog to stand on for long; and a wooden bench at the back of each must be provided. There is no occasion for this bench to be raised as high from the ground as the one alluded to in the description of the in-door kennel, for in the present instance the dog is not expected to sleep on it, at all events in cold weather. Three pieces of board each a foot wide and one yard long firmly nailed crossways on a couple of pieces of three-inch quartering forms an admirable bench of this description. The roof should be of weather boarding, covered over with best felt, well tarred and sprinkled with coarse sand or gravel. Corrugated iron roofing is most objectionable, for in the summer the extent to which it attracts the sun renders the life of the unfortunate creature underneath it simply intolerable; and most other roofings cost a considerable sum of money, which, as I have said before, it would be had policy for a beginner to expend.

Whilst upon this subject, however, I may remark that a tile roof well pointed is by far superior to all others, and in appearance it is certainly second to none. Under this description of roofing an owner may rest assured that his pets are as cool in summer and as warm in winter as they can possibly be without the aid of artificial heat, which, of course, cannot be applied to out door kennels. That is cool in summer and warm in winter also, but it affords such a welcome retreat for all sorts of vermin that its adoption cannot be recommended."

THE FARM.

That Cowy Odor.

It is frequently remarked by those who are questioned about their fondness for milk that they do not like it because it has such a cowy odor. Some seem to think this odor is inseparably connected with milk, but this is not the case. The cause of it will be found in filth dropped from the animal's udder and flanks while milking, in nine cases out of ten.

One great fault with the way some people handle milk lies in the carelessness of the milker. For them to brush or in any way clean a cow's udder before sitting down to milk would be considered altogether too much trouble.

"It will all come out when it is strained," they say, and strip away regardless of falling hairs, scurf, or particles of dirt and filth loosened from the flanks in the operation of drawing the milk.

Here is a solution to the cowy flavor which some milk possesses. As a remedy, brush the udder and flanks well before beginning to milk, passing over them a moist cloth or sponge to arrest any loose particles liable to fall after sitting down to the animal. It is best to prevent foreign substances from getting into the milk at all, but it is better if they do get in to remove them as soon as possible rather than let them remain.

"I can't bear to drink the milk we buy," said a lady one day, "there is so much dirt in the bottom of the dish when I pour it out."

There is no excuse for such a condition of things—not the slightest. If the men are not as careful as they should be, all the more is there a necessity for carefulness in straining it. Any woman who contents herself with a wire gauze strainer, no matter how fine it may be, is allowing a great deal of filth to go into the pans or milk cans. It is impossible to avoid this unless a cloth strainer is employed. Of course no one would knowingly be careless in this respect, but it is through thoughtlessness that it is done.

If it is believed that the wire strainer is sufficient, just try three or four thickness of cheese cloth secured to the bottom of the strainer with a hoop or ring. After a pailful of milk has been strained, remove and inspect it. Flannel makes a perfect strainer so far as thorough work goes, but it fills in the washing and sometimes the milk does not pass through freely.

Where the milk is set in deep cans the strainer usually furnished with them has a band or hoop to hold the cloth strainer in place over the bottom. But whatever method may be resorted to, see to it that the milk passes through several thickness of cloth after it has been put through the wire gauze strainer.

These strainer clothes are difficult to keep sweet in hot weather. They are best first rinsed in cold water, then thoroughly washed in that which is luke warm, or a little more, without soap. Borax is a good cleansing agent; so also is salsoda, but beware of soap.

It makes any kind of milk things slimy, such is its action upon anything which has not been thoroughly freed from all trace of milk. Scald the cloth at last and snap it vigorously to free the meshes entirely from any particles which may be lodged therein. Hang in the sunshine to dry whenever possible.

Bleached butter cloth or cheese cloth costs but six cents per yard, so do not try to use a strainer very long, but cut a fresh one. Anything used about milk must be kept perfectly sweet.

And, by the way, this is a good time to speak about the care of the wire gauze strainers. How few there are that are kept perfectly clean. After they have been used a while they begin to get clogged.

Shall I tell you how this comes? One cause is pouring hot water over the strainer without first washing it with cold. The hot water cooks the milk and leaves the meshes of the wire clogged as a result. Be sure to rinse with cold water first every time.

If the milk things are not washed immediately after using, rinse them at least, not allowing the milk to dry on them.

If a stiff brush is used in washing, every tiny bit of foreign matter can be removed from the wire. Never put the strainer away until it is perfectly clean, and all the meshes distinctly visible when held to the light.

A yellow deposit is sometimes seen upon the surface of the milk pails, strainers, etc. This is caused by washing in hot water before rinsing in that which is cool. The hot water cooks the milk the same as it does in the wire gauze of the strainer, thus forming the deposit noted. When this is visible it is difficult of removal. Perhaps dry selt is as good as anything to use. Scrub vigorously with this; it is an excellent cleansing agent anyway.

Any one can not be too careful in caring for milk things. Utmost cleanliness must be observed in every particular, if best results are to be expected.—Northwest Pacific Farmer.

During the first eight months of the year 225,186 cattle were exported from this country a decrease of 33,385 cattle from the number exported in like period last year. They went to buy cattle bad enough over in England, but the right kind cost too much on this side of the water. Formerly the exporters took about the best cattle on the market, but at the present time the prime beeves are so high that a medium class is being taken and shipped across the Atlantic to a limited extent. Of late exporters have been picking up a good many cattle in Kentucky and Virginia and shipping them direct to Europe.

Frank Weston and his brother have been engaged in Lassen county making a survey, says the Willows Promoter. Mr. Weston says there are many wild horses on the Madeline Plains; as many as a hundred in a band, sometimes. They are often shot for their hides, which are worth $2 or $3, and the carcasses fed to hogs. Antelopes abound there, also; and many other kinds of game.

Holstein Cowe for Profit.

The first test for butter end net profit under the rules adopted at the recent meeting of the Holstein-Friesian Association was made under the supervision of Assistant Prof. Anderson of Cornell Experiment Station, June 16-22, inclusive. The cow tested was Princess of Wayne 7th, owned by T. G. Yeomans & Sons, Walworth, N. Y. During these seven days she gave 487 7-8 lb. milk, containing 19.285 lb. fat, equivalent to 24 1-8 lb. butter at 80 per cent fat. The value of this product at prices fixed by the association (25 cents per lb. for butter fat and 15 cents per 100 lb. for skim milk) was $5.52. She ate, during this period, besides daily pasturage, 105 lb. ensilage, 28 lb. bran, 28 lb. corn meal, 14 lb. oilmeal and 14 lb. cottonseed meal. At prices also fixed by the association (pasturage 75 cents per week, ensilage $2 per ton, bran $10, corn meal $12, oilmeal $18 and cottonseed meal $20 per ton), the value of this food was $1.43. By the same rules, the difference between the value of the food and that of the products $4.09—is credited as the net profit.

Prof. Anderson tested the cow fourteen days. The total milk given during this period was 952.1 lb.; average per cent. of fat 3.94; total fat shown, 37 55 lb. The highest average per cent. of fat in the milk of one day was 4.42, and in that of a single milking 5.4. It is well known that Holstein-Friesian cows are persistent milkers. The dam of this cow Princess of Wayne, made a milk record of 29,003 1-16 lb. in a single year, the highest product of a single day being 113 13-16 lb. Her sire, Paul De Kol, probably has more daughters with official records than any other bull.

I have been particular to explain the "net profit" test of this cow to explain the rules under which it was made. They are far from being perfect, yet they approach more nearly the future crucial demands towards which the battle of the dairy breeds is tending than any others that have been formulated by a breeders' association.

The Horse Market.

Mr. Newgess, one of the leading dealers of the Chicago stockyards, which is the largest horse market in the country, has just returned from a tour through England and the continent, and says that in both England and Germany the American horse enjoys the greatest popularity. France too, has nowhere to look for a supply of reliable mounts but to America. Besides the British army buyers, he says, that agents from Germany, France and Russia are now in our markets looking for the best that can be had. Other prominent horse dealers at the yards express similar opinions, and add that the market was never so healthily prosperous as at present. Indianapolis, Louisville and St. Louis, the latter the second largest horse market in the country, send like reports. The orders exceed the supply.

Sales at Chicago are now about two thousand per week, and the total for the year so far is upwards of $3,000, an increase of about 30 per cent. over the dull times of three years ago, while prices range from 25 to 100 per cent. higher, the latter for the best coach cavalry and draft horses. As an indication of the condition of the market, one of the large dealers here was recently offered $20,000 for the pick of 20 out of a lot of 100 fine coaches shipped to New York, and another was offered $47,000 for 45 on the ground. For purposes of comparison, it is easy enough to say the exports in 1890 were but 3500 head while in 1898 we sent aboard 51,000, valued at $6,000,000.

The important thing now is for our dealers to hold on to their best blood, both in stallions and brood mares, lest by following the example of the youth who killed the hen that laid the golden egg, they lose entirely the source of the wealth and the power to take advantage of the growing demand that seems likely to exist for some years to come.

Sixteen registered Jersey dairy cows, belonging to the Sanitary Dairy company of Missouri, died one night from eating sorghum in the field. They strayed into the field during the night, and when found next morning some were down and the others were reeling scarcely able to keep on their feet. All die before they could be driven out of the field and on examination of some, large masses of fermented pulp were found in the stomach.

Profitable Pork Making.

In a discussion between some farmers, doubt was expressed as to whether seven pounds of corn would make a pound of pork. So far as much of the ordinary management is concerned, this may be so, but under the best care much better results may be obtained, says the Michigan Farmer. A successful farmer, who found pork making to be his most profitable business, and who kept constant and accurate account of all his operations has made ten pounds of pork from fifty pounds of meal. All the corn was ground and scalded, not cooked. He found the value of corn nearly doubled by grinding and scalding. His practice was to pour ninety pounds of hot water on sixteen pounds of meal, and to allow it to stand in a covered tub from 12 to 18 hours, according to the weather, before feeding. The whole swells and makes a thick mass. Cold water was not nearly so good in its effect. An easy fattening breed is found important. He deemed it important to keep young pigs well fed and constantly growing from the first, and without any check till slaughtered.

The State Quarantine Line.

The quarantine line of 1898 has been practically restored by Governor Gage and the United States Secretary of Agriculture as recognized it. The line is located as follows:

Beginning on the Pacific Coast, where the northern boundary line of Marin county connects with the Pacific Ocean thence easterly and northerly along the southern and eastern boundary lines of Marin and Sonoma counties to the intersection of Sonoma and Solano counties thence following the western, northern and eastern boundary lines of Solano county to the Sacramento river; thence westerly along the eastern boundary line of Colusa county to its intersection with the boundary line of Sutter county; thence easterly along the southern boundary lines of Sutter and Placer counties to the intersection with the western boundary line of El Dorado county; thence southerly and easterly along the southern boundary line of El Dorado county to the intersection with the western boundary line of Alpine county; thence in a westerly direction along the western boundary lines of Alpine, Mono and Inyo counties to the southwestern boundary of Inyo county; thence east along the southern boundary of Inyo county to its intersection with the eastern boundary line of the State of California.

W. H. Thomas of Reno, Nevada, reports that less than 25,000 head of sheep in his section so far this year have been contracted, whereas in previous years the number sold to buyers has seldom fallen below 300,000. Last year lambs were sold at $2.25. Now owners want $2.65.

QUINN'S OINTMENT FOR HORSES

stands at the head of all veterinary remedies. Such troubles as Spavins, Curbs, Windpuffs, Splints, Bunches have no terrors for a horse if the master keeps and applies Quinn's Ointment. All well-known horsemen speak of it in the highest terms:

Miller & Sibley, of Franklin, Pa., owners of St. Bel, brother of late Bell Boy, write, "We have used Quinn's Ointment with great success and believe it fulfills all claimed for it. We cheerfully recommend it to our friends." For Curbs, Splints, Spavins or Bunches, it has no equal.

Price $1.50. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail.

SUBSCRIPTION
THREE DOLLARS A YEAR

MULTIFORM, by HOTCHKISS.

A New Zealand bred stallion sold to England, and now said to be "the best looking horse at Newmarket."

The Dam of Kelly Briggs 2:10 1-2.

In last week's issue of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, in reply to a correspondent we made the following allusion to a noted broodmare:

"Mary, by Flaxtail, is a great progenitor of speed. She is the dam of Apex 2:26. She is also the dam of Grace, by Buccaneer, who is the dam of Daedalion 2:11, Eagle 2:19½ and Creole 2:15, the sire of Javelin 2:08½. Mary is the dam of Lettie, by Wayland Forest, who is the dam of Welcome 2:10½, Mand Singleton 2:28½ (dam of Silver Ring 2:14½) and Wayland W. 2:12½, who sired Arthur W. 2:11½ and John A. (3) 2:14. Mary is also the dam of Sterling, the sire of Acrobat 2:13½, Charivari 2:20½, Argent 2:24½, Rattibones 2:28 and Brilliant, the sire of Brilliantine 2:17½."

While looking up the records from which the above paragraph was compiled, we ran across the name of the mare Algenia, by Algona, out of Gazelle (sister to Grace), by Buccaneer, second dam Mary by Flaxtail, and as it was in a catalogue of horses sold by the late Dr. M. W. Hicks in 1892, and a pencil note stated the mare had been knocked down to H. C. Goodyear of Yolo county for $230, we surmised that this mare might be the dam of Kelly Briggs 2:10½, so we wrote to Mr. Geo. F. Morris of Winters about it, and the following is his reply:

WINTERS, (Yolo Co., Cal.), Oct. 23, 1899.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Yours in regard to the breeding, etc., of the dam of Kelly Briggs 2:10½, received, and hasten to reply.

Yes, I am the lucky possessor of this mare and I am of the opinion that she is one of the coming broodmares in this State, if not one of the greatest in the land. Following is her pedigree: Algenia by Algona first dam Gazelle (full sister to Grace the dam of Creole 2:15, Dedallion 2:11, etc.) by Buccaneer, second dam Mary, the great broodmare by Flaxtail.

This mare was bred by the late Dr. Hicks and sold by him to Mr. H. C. Goodyear, formerly of this place, who in turn sold her to Mr. Joseph Griffin, who bred Kelly Briggs, and I purchased the mare when Kelly was at her side, Mr. S. H. Hoy buying the colt at the same time.

Algenia was first bred to Designer by Director, and the produce was a beautiful chestnut filly now owned by R. T. Day of Winters. This filly was never worked only as a yearling, but could show a 2:30 clip at that age. She is now driven on the road by Mr. Day and can show the road to most anybody's road horse—she is a trotter. Her next foal was a filly by Sterling, this was a very fast mare but was never worked for the races simply because she was by Sterling; this filly is now owned by W. H. Allison of Winters, and she bids fair to be as great a broodmare as her dam, as she has a two-year-old pacer by Monroe S. 2:20, that is one of the speediest as well as handsomest colts in the State.

Algenia's next produce was twins by Alexander Button 2:26—a trotter and a pacer—the trotter, a filly, was snagged and killed when a two year old, the pacer is now owned by Mr. J. B. Griffin of this place, who worked him a little in his three year old form; this colt paced a mile in 2:25 and quarters at a two-minute clip, he is as sound as a new dollar, and if nothing happens to him he should be another Kelly Briggs next year.

Her next foal was Kelly Briggs 2:10½. Kelly was worked a while last year (1898) as a trotter, but late in the season was shifted to the pace. But it is needless for me to say anything further in regard to Kelly as the horse world already knows what he has done. Her next foal was a bay filly by Hanford Medium 2:11½, this filly is now a yearling and has never had harness on, but is a beautiful bay, a natural pacer and shows great speed to the halter; this filly is owned by Mrs. Sinclair, a widow, and can be bought very cheap.

Algenia's 1899 foal is a very large colt (standing 42 inches when foaled) by Monroe S. 2:20, and two minutes won't stop him; he is a natural pacer and he is my property.

Algenia is a dark bay mare, weighs about 1150 lbs, has a good disposition and resembles Flying Jib a great deal.

I believe I have given you about all the information in regard to this mare, but if there is anything I have not given that you may mention, I will gladly answer any question you will ask me.

Very Respectfully,

GEO. H. MORRIS

P. S.—I might mention that this mare was never trained, but I believe she would have been a good fast mare at either gait, as she can go along pretty well at either the trot or pace. I expect to breed her to Bayswater Wilkes next year, she is now in foal to a son of Waldstein.

GEO. H. MORRIS.

CHARLES STRAWN, of Lincoln, Ill., held an auction sale of colts, fillies and youngsters on October 4th, of his own breeding, and he did the talking from the auctioneer's block. Geldings, with no education except that of the road, sold at $210 to $310. Two-year old colts, right out of the pasture, sold to the halter at $137.50 to $170. Yearlings, with huffs in their tails, went at $60 to $75. The prices realized throughout the sale were highly satisfactory, and indicate not only that the market is active and on the rise, but fully justifies breeders from a fiscal standpoint in going ahead. The sale at Lincoln is not exceptional. The same conditions prevail east, west and south.—American Sportsman.

A Blighting Influence.

Read what the veteran turf correspondent, E. C. Welker (Veritas), says in Trotter and Pacer:

In the good old racing days of Longfellow and Harry Bassett, with Uncle John Harper and Col. McDaniels to the fore, at Saratoga and Jerome Park, betting was conducted under the auction pool and Paris mutual systems, and the thoroughbred interests flourished free from bribery and scandal. But the hookmakers came with their blighting influence and undermined these systems, by their spider and fly methods. They are a menace to the trotting turf, and their operations should be confined to booking on the result of the race. The running meetings are beginning to suffer by their domination. The well known turf critic Francis Trevelyan states that the Jockey Club stewards are trying to rid the turf of the harmful influence of the hookmakers, and suggest the substitution of auction pools and Paris mutual as a means of clearing the cloudy turf atmosphere. Mr. Trevelyan writes: "Of course we have a law legalizing racing. For that we should thank our lucky stars. But how much more fortunate we should be if that law forbade any kind of betting, whether personal or otherwise, and permitted the selling of auction pools and Paris mutuels. The racing associations might not make so much money, to be sure, but if these old fashioned forms of betting had been in use this season, instead of the existing system, would so many of our most prominent jockeys hearing a brand that no length of time will altogether efface. The fact seems to be that under the modern gate-money method of racing, when the hungry clamor of the stockholder drowns the public's cry for honest sport, the layer, so long as he is allowed to exist, must be a menace to the turf. He, whatever his business system, whether he be an honest man and good sportsman or some rascally graduate of the cheap gambling dive, is inevitably the man to whom the stockholders hold out the hand of welcome. The money he pays for the privilege of laying the odds is the surest earnest that his welcome will be hearty."

Monterey Had Cotton in His Ears.

Great things were expected of Monterey when he was taken East, as it was known that he was a very fast horse and miles below 2:10 within his reach. But he went down in race after race, says a writer in the New York Telegraph, and everybody who knew him felt a strong sympathy for Pete Williams; but they could not understand why the horse having such a turn of speed, could not get to the front. The slick drivers who were pitted against him, however, quickly discovered that the California crack could be rattled by yelling and other noises, and were not slow to take advantage of it. In consequence, Monterey was frequently goaded to mistakes, and he never won a heat throughout the season until the Louisville meeting. It took Williams a little time to tumble to what was going on. But he did fall in finally and determined to show the boys a trick they were not up to, and he did them in the 2:10 race.

The bunch was swinging around the turn into the homestretch with Monterey away on the outside going after Louise Mec, who was in the lead, like seventeen kinds of demons. Scott Hudson, driving for it with might and main looked about him and saw Monterey coming like a Kansas cyclone and he let out a whoop that would have made a Comanche Indian feel like scalping himself. But Monterey "kept on a comin'." Seeing that his own whoops had no effect on Williams' horse, Scott turned and shouted to the drivers who were near:

"Yell, you fellows; why don't you yell?"

And then there was some more whoops; but Monterey made neither skip nor break, and passed under the wire a winner of the heat and also landed the race.

What did Pete Williams do to best them? It was easy. He only stuffed Monterey's ears full of cotton, so tight that the horse could not have heard the loudest cannon in Uncle Sam's navy.

Perry Belmont on French Racing.

Perry Belmont, politician and turf man, saw the racing in France this summer and his impressions were given to a New York reporter recently as follows:

"The French Jockey Club absolutely controls the situation in France. The building occupied by the Jockey Club, especially the portion of it set aside for the business purposes of the club, resembles one of the Departments of Government, for the Jockey Club not only controls the racing, but also the betting, hence the number of clerks and employees is enormous.

"The jockeys are not held in such high esteem that they are permitted to swagger about in the paddocks and grounds of the racing associations, as if the sport was created solely for their benefit and amusement. They are kept in their place, an example which could be followed here with excellent results.

"Starting in France is a revelation, as there are but few delays at the post, and the jockeys obey the starter's instructions promptly, for if they display the slightest inclination to be unruly, they are given a long rest, and permitted to view the races from the ground.

"Then the race courses in the vicinity of Paris are splendidly equipped, and beautiful to look upon, and ere patronized by the very best people of France.

"There are so many race courses in the neighborhood of Paris at which meetings are held that racing is almost continuous.

"There is some pleasure in breakfasting, starting for the races at midday, witnessing six or seven races, and returning to one's apartments in ample time to dress for dinner.

The Government takes an active interest in the sport, and the manner in which it is conducted, as a percentage of commissions from the Mutuels, which is the only system of betting recognized in France, is taken by the Government and distributed among the various French charities. Thus it will be seen that the sport of racing is well cared for in France.

It would be extremely beneficial to the breeding and racing interests of America if an arrangement were made with the French Jockey Club to open all races in France to American horses, thereby enabling American turfmen and the vast number of Americans who spend the summer in Paris and the different watering places and health resorts of the country to race our horses in friendly competition for the valuable prizes offered by the many racing associations in sunny France.

When asked his opinion of the barrier, and the starting in this country, Mr. Belmont hesitated a moment, and then replied: "I cannot say that I am an admirer of the barrier or starting gate. The barrier may enable a competent starter to make a good start, but it cannot make a good starter out of an incapable man."

State Board of Agriculture.

[Sacramento Record-Union.]

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the State Agricultural Society was held last Saturday at the Secretary's office to settle up the affairs of the recent State Fair and to attend to other timely duties.

The Finance Committee approved bills in the sum of about $11,000.

A financial statement was submitted showing a satisfactory condition as a result of the fair and the year's business.

The first material result of the new life which the society has taken on was a bid of $2,000 for the rent of Agricultural Park for the year, commencing October 1, 1899; also an obligation on the part of the lessee to keep the grounds in condition ready for the next fair. The bid was from John Failey, and the Park was leased to him for one year. This latter agreement will save the society many hundreds of dollars.

The committee heretofore appointed to sell Agricultural Park and secure a new location, reported that they were unable to procure a satisfactory price for the society's present property and were equally unable to secure a new site at a proper price.

In view of these facts the committee recommended that further efforts to sell the park be discontinued, and that arrangements be made to occupy the present property for some years, or until satisfactory prices can be had for the sale of it and the purchase of a new site. So the probabilities, Secretary Shields states, are that the present park will continue to be used, and that it will probably be improved.

The board decided to provide as a substitute for the present futurity stake a great stallion nomination stake, stallions to be nominated before January 1, 1900, the produce of mares bred in 1899, colts to be named January 1, 1901, and to run at the State Fair in 1902. This is expected to be the richest stake ever run in California, and the stakes and added money are expected to amount to a great many thousands of dollars.

Death of L. M. Morse.

L. M. Morse, one of the best known horse breeders in California died very suddenly at his home near Lodi last Sunday. He had been walking around in the pasture when he suddenly complained of a severe pain in his heart. He was assisted into the barn by a man employed on the place, and his wife was immediately called. He died within twenty minutes. The circumstances would indicate death from heart disease, but it is said that the cause was apoplexy instead. He had suffered an attack before within the last two months, and a second one was expected. He became paralyzed and helpless after being taken to the barn. Mr. Morse was at one time wealthy, but the decrease in land values during the last eight or ten years left him with comparatively a small estate at his death. The deceased was 67 years old. He came to San Joaquin in 1857, and had resided there continuously ever since. He went to farming immediately after taking up his residence here, locating on a tract of land two miles from the farm where he died. He leaves a wife, a son, E. E. Morse, and a daughter, Mrs. R. E. Ryan, all residents of San Joaquin county. Mr. Morse was at one time an extensive breeder of light harness horses having purchased Dexter Prince from Senator Stanford and located him at the Lodi ranch. Some years ago Mr. Morse disposed of nearly all his trotting bred stock and at the time of his death but few representatives of his horse breeding enterprises were left on the place.

EDNA, a new trotting guideless wonder, recently stepped a mile in 2:13½ at Dayton, Ohio, all by her lonesome.

LOS ANGELES MEETING.

John R. Gentry Wins the Free for All Pace the Opening Day.

(Special Correspondence BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 21, 1899.

Evidence of the great popularity of trotting and pacing contests in California could not be stronger than that furnished by the attendance (numbers and business and social status of audience considered) at the opening day of the Los Angeles Association's meeting this date. Mr. Lewis Thoma, Secretary of the association, deservedly ranks among the very best and most progressive secretaries in the United States, and he is sustained in his efforts to place the sport on the highest and cleanest plane by a Board of Directors in perfect sympathy with those efforts. The patronage and the enthusiasm shown by the Southern Californians will find counterpart throughout the Coast wherever the best, highest-class and cleanest conduct of trotting and pacing affairs obtains.

Californians are earnest and enthusiastic supporters of sports, where such sports are first-class and conducted in a manner beyond suspicion. Per contra they drop crooked games with an alacrity that develops the fall thereof into the real "sickening thud."

The Los Angeles meeting opened under a glorious California sky, a little softened by cloud shadows in the forenoon, but breaking out near midday into the golden sunshine that is seen nowhere more "golden" than in this "Golden State."

Early in the forenoon the routes of travel to Agricultural Park were congested by the excited and hastening throngs journeying thither and before high noon, it is safe to say, more than ten thousand persons had stored themselves away in points of vantage to witness the battle of the giants on the track.

The registers of the turnstiles at the entrance to the Park showed that over 14,000 paying patrons had gone into the grounds at three o'clock in the afternoon. Add to this the number of stockholders in the association, the invited guests from far and near, and those entitled to free admission and it is within bounds to say that there were over 15,000 on the grounds. The crowd in the infield and the outfield reached nearly one-third of the distance around the track and were many tiers deep along both fences. "Society" of this section was out in force, represented in the boxes and seats in the grand stand and in swell rigs in the infield and outfield, among the rigs being several tallyhoes, natty dog carts, etc. It was the largest gathering that has ever visited the Los Angeles Agricultural Park, overtopping by several thousands the former "record" day when "Pop Willit's" stallion Silkwood was the great attraction, he defeating the pride of Ventura, Waldo J.

Every seat and every inch of available standing room in the grand stand was filled hours before the big race of the day, and the old stand near the paddock was crowded as early, as were also the balconies of the Clubhouse, and other buildings at the other end of the grounds.

Both Dickerson and Andrews were perfectly satisfied with the condition of the track and they stated that there was no faster track between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and but one (that at Glens Falls) so perfect.

Andrews freely vouchsafed the information that John R. Gentry had confidentially informed him of a real affection for the track and promised him he would acquit himself to the satisfaction of the public, his owner and Andrews when his head should be let loose during the battle with Joa Patchen and Anaconda.

The little bay stallion felt so sure of this that the groomer say Gentry said, in a quiet way, when walking under the trees by the stables the day before the race (in language understood by Joa Patchen who was then taking his exercise) that he would make Joe's head swim in all parts of the miles, on the day of their race. How Gentry kept his word is told in another part of this story.

It may be of interest to some of the readers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN to know how the three crack pacers are shod. John R. Gentry wears bar shoes on his front feet which weigh seven ounces when first put on, but which he wears down to about six ounces shoes. Joe Patchen wears six ounce bar shoes forward and five ounces behind. Anaconda is shod with a plain shoe forward weighing seven ounces and carries a nine ounce shoe on his hind feet.

I find that there are some over-suspicious persons who affect to doubt that each race between John R. Gentry and Joa Patchen is "for blood," as the saying goes. These doubting Thomases may set their minds entirely at rest on this matter and be sure that there is not money or other valuable possessions west of the Rocky Mountains or east thereof to influence the owners of these horses to consent to hippodroming a single race between them.

Mr. E. H. Harriman, owner of John R. Gentry, is a multi-millionaire, the owner of the Chicago and Alton Railroad and a large stockholder in the Union Pacific, Oregon Steam and Navigation Company and other railway lines.

Senator John McCarthy, the owner of Joa Patchen, is also a man of great wealth and would not be tempted by any possible gain through pre-arranged races. The rivalry between these two gentlemen, through their horses, is intense though entirely good-natured. Both of them have extensive farms situated in the suburbs of Goshen, Orange county, New York, one of the farms located on one side of the track at Goshen, the other on the opposite side of the track. This explanation would not be necessary to Eastern readers who know Mr. Harriman and Senator McCarthy, but may not be out of place to readers on this Coast who do not understand the situation and environment.

That the time made in the race here between Gentry, Patchen and Anaconda was not as fast as their records is to be accounted for by the fact that Joa Patchen was not "on edge" and could at no time force John R. Gentry to his limit. Anaconda showed well but could hardly be expected (difference in the records considered) to beat Gentry when the latter was at the record pitch, as he certainly was on October 21, 1899. In all parts of the two miles paced Joe Patchen plainly gave evidence that he was not in condition to go his clip when kayed up and "fit". John Dickerson told your correspondent that Joa had been habited too much since his arrival here. After the race was finished, when Joa had been cooled out, Dickerson brought him out and gave him a mile in two fifteen, finishing the last quarter under all sorts of persuasion, voice, changing of the bit and some touches of the regulation four feet, eight inch jewel, and while that quarter was in fairly good time Joa gave evidence he did not care to hurry too much.

There was just a little fealing engendered between Dickerson, Andrews and Keating because of the alleged tactics of the two last named, Dickerson averring that his competitor had pushed him around on the hacktrack in a manner not exactly fair. All three are the best of friends and as Dickerson and Andrews car Patchen and Gentry together and travel in company no open rupture resulted. However, no complaint was made to the judges and the little unpleasantness will no doubt be amicably discussed and amicably adjusted. All three of these gentlemen rank high as drivers of the most gentlemanly department.

Mr. Keating drove to-day for the first time since June last when he sat in the sulky at Denver. He states that he is stronger and better than when he arrived back to California from his Eastern journeyings this season but he is far from being entirely well as evidenced by his exhausted condition after the finish of the second heat to-day when he was scarcely able to walk from the sulky to the scale. His legion of friends on both sides of the divide, will hope that he may gain his full measure of health in the near future. He would be greatly missed if compelled to keep out of the sulky.

Two races were scheduled for the day before the champion pacers were to appear for battle. The first race was for the 2:20 class, pace, and the starters dwindled down to three, Myrtha Whips, Irvington Boy and Wopello. The story of this race is soon told and description of heats would be most uninteresting. Myrtha Whips had but a mild workout in all three heats, Irvington Boy finishing second and Wopello "also ran." The summary will show the rest of the table.

The second race was a hurdle handicap, one and an eighth mile, and the three runners that answered the call put up a good stiff fight, all of them compassing the five hurdles without an accident. P. F., a cheetnut gelding, the bay gelding Rosmore and the bay gelding Burmah faced the starter. P. F. was made the favorite at 3 to 5, Burmah was held at 2½ to 1 and Rosmore 2 to 1.

Little time was wasted at the post, Starter Caldwell sending the trio away on even terms. At the first eighth P. F. had a length the heat of it and draw away from the others to the second eighth, at that point having a lead of three or four lengths. Now comes Burmah with a full head of steam on and was soon in the lead. P. F. let out another link and collared Burmah at the last hurdle over which both sailed together, but P. F. had shot his bolt and Burmah won easily by a length, P. F. finishing second, Rosmore close up.

THE CHAMPIONS APPEAR.

And now the great pacing trio come through the gate and on the track. Intense excitement in the boxes, grandstands, infield and outfield proves that these noted harness horses are responsible for the presence of the great throng now surging towards the best points from which to view the coming battle. Handsome little John R. Gentry jogged slowly up the homestretch and was cheered as he passed the grand stand and other points.

Joa Patchen came next over the same ground and received a like welcome.

Anaconda was greeted with wild enthusiasm, the assembled multitude plainly evincing their decided preference between the contestants.

The betting before the first heat made Joa Patchen a strong favorite, and he was held at 2 to 5. John R. Gentry was slated at 2 to 1 and Anaconda 4 to 1. Overnight betting Joa Patchen $25, John R. Gentry $10 and Anaconda $4. Joa Patchen drew the pole, Anaconda second position, John R. Gentry outside. After each of the trio had scored down alone on parade, a couple of times, they turned together and made a parade score. Singly and in triplicate they were applauded warmly.

Although Anaconda is considered, when at himself, a lightning scorer, he did not come to wire with great vim the first two scores. The third score brought the trio in perfect alignment and they stepped away from the wire in flying array. Before the first turn was reached Anaconda displayed that wonderful burst of speed which carried him a quarter at Tarra Hauta in 29 seconds and he marched past John R. Gentry, taking the pole by a rather short cut. Andrews sat still and made no effort at this point, evidently feeling sure of John R. Gentry when the real pinch in the homestretch should come. Joa Patchen made a drive in the hacktrack but only succeeded in getting up to Anaconda's wheel. Andrews still was going easy but when the horses rounded the turn at the head of the homestretch he sat down and telegraphed to John R. Gentry that the time for action had come. Reining Gentry well on the outside he set full sail and driving up to and past Patchen and Anaconda he glided down the last quarter as rhythmically and gracefully as a swallow at full flight, finishing, without punishment, a good length and a half in front of Anaconda, Joa Patchen a length still further back. The time of the heat was: first quarter 31½ seconds, half 1:02½, three quarters 1:35½, mile 2:05. Silkwood, pacer, had, up to date, held the Pacific Coast record of 2:07.

The finish excited the multitude to an extreme degree and thousands of throats were strained to the utmost in wild applause. The announcement was made that the record for the Los Angeles track and for the Pacific Coast was broken and again a note of wild acclaim was voiced by thousands, and the cheering continued for some minutes.

The jubilation of the spectators who had backed John R. Gentry both singly and when sold just before the heat in the field, was an interesting spectacle. They fell over themselves and each other in a rush on the ramparts of the bookmakers, and, it is reported, corralled those givers-of-odds for about $5000.

The betting before the second heat was: John R. Gentry 4 to 5, Joe Patchen even money and Anaconda 2½ to 1.

The trio were thirteen to fifteen minutes late when they started for the second heat was due and Dickerson was fined $13, Andrews $14 and Keating $15, these amounts representing one dollar a minute (as per notice) for tardiness in appearing when due. It was explained by the gentleman in the sulky that the delay was the necessary consequence of a loss of a shoe by Joa Patchen, but the loss had not been reported to the judges as it should have been.

Notwithstanding the result of the first heat the backers of Joa Patchen refused to believe he could be defeated in the second heat and they kept him the favorite up to the moment the word go was given in the second heat.

In the first and second scores Joa Patchen did not seem to be able to get settled in his stride and he came up scrambling and mixed.

On the third score the three went away in a line and all going level. Anaconda went at John R. Gentry with a flying rush and just here was where Gentry showed his condition and speed by stalling off Anaconda's lightning rush and carrying him as fast as he could sprint, Andrews apparently feeling sure of his horse and declining to surrender the pole for even an eighth. At the eighth Keating evidently concluded to change his tactics and steadied Anaconda, Joe Patchen in the meanwhile coming up on even terms with Anaconda, but after passing the quarter Patchen fell back a little and daylight showed between the three. Dickinson again sent Patchen up to Anaconda's wheel at the three quarters, but the grand black stallion showed the lack of condition and could not stand the clip. Andrews went easy with Gentry until rounding into the homestretch, when he gave the little bay his head and finished two lengths in front of Anaconda with the greatest ease. It was evident to good judges that John R. Gentry could have gone this mile in two seconds better than he did.

The air was filled with the thunderous shouts of the on-lookers. John R. Gentry and his pilot, Andrews, received an ovation when they returned to the stand that would have pleased even a candidate for high office.

The time of the heat was first quarter 31½ seconds, half 1:01½, three quarters 1:33½, mile 2:04.

When the time was announced and it was realized that the record of the Pacific Coast was again beaten the people set up such a din as to re-echo from the surrounding foothills. John Dickerson was not satisfied with the outcome and expressed the opinion that in condition Joa Patchen could ravage this day's result.

Secretary Thoma immediately offered to hang up another purse for the trio, to be contested for next Saturday, October 28th.

All parties agreeing the announcement was made that another battle should be fought next Saturday, and, kind readers, may you all be there to see it. If Patchen is on edge at that time and Gentry does not train off it will be a battle royal. And don't forget that Anaconda is to be reckoned with also.

More than one-half of the crowd started homeward as soon as the champion pacers retired from the arena, demonstrating the fact that they came to see the great race.

It will be unfortunate for the residents of Northern California who were not able to get to Los Angeles for this race, if the harness horse devotees in and about San Francisco do not arrange a meeting between John R. Gentry, Joa Patchen and Anaconda, to take place near that city. Your correspondent is of the opinion the race would draw twenty thousand or more people to the track.

San Francisco, like New York, Chicago and other large centres will always turn out to see champions.

The next race on the program was a running race of one mile and six horses went to the post; Alaria, Ellen Ward, Correct, Hacienda, Rey del San Juan and Ping. Alaria and Hacienda did the fighting in the race, Hacienda winning handily in 1:41. The winner is owned in this section and her victory was very popular.

Twelve starters went to the post in the fifth race, running, six furlongs. Jerid was the favorite but Gihbertifibbet won with Jerid second and Petrarch third. Time 1:14. The "also rans" will show in the summary following. Three horses got mixed at the head of the stretch and came home riderless one of the jockeys being pretty badly shaken up, but no serious harm resulted.

The sixth race brought ten starters to the gate, Picton finishing first, Tagalog second and Summer third. Time 1:03. It was dark by the time the horses were unsaddled and the jockeys were weighed in. At this season of the year the day's program should begin at 1 o'clock. The air is chill, uncomfortable and not healthful to tired and hungry humanity.

SECOND DAY.

The second day of the meeting was favored by perfect atmospheric conditions and a much larger attendance than was anticipated for a Monday was the consequence. The first race of the day was the Semi Tropic Colt Stake, trotting for three year olds. Two sons of Direct were the contestants, the brown colt Derecho and the black colt Directus. It was a one-sided combat Derecho winning easily in three straight heats.

The second race of the day was the 2:15 class, trotting, and this race proved, as anticipated, a fight from start to finish. Neeretta, Ellert, Dr. Frasse, Our Lucky and Phoebe Childers, came out for the word.

The outcome of every heat was in doubt from the send-off until the wire was again reached.

To depict the kaleidoscopic changes in the four heats would be to say that every horse in the race was in front some time in the four miles necessary to finish the race. Before the first heat Neeretta and Ellert were favorites at 3 to 2, Our Lucky 2 1/2 to 1, Phoebe Childers 3 to 1 and Dr. Frasse 4 to 1. Frasse won this heat after Phoebe Childers had held the lead for over half a mile and all were close up at the finish, time 2:12 1/2.

Just after the word was given in the second heat Dr. Frasse made a bad break and the distance flag came near catching him. The betting for this heat was: Our Lucky and Neeretta even money, Dr. Frasse 2 1/2 to 1, Ellert 2 1/2 to 1 and Phoebe Childers 7 to 1. Neeretta captured the heat in a game finish with Our Lucky knocking at her wheel. For the third heat Neeretta was favorite at 3 to 5, Our Lucky and Ellert 2 to 1, Phoebe Childers 3 to 1 and Dr. Frasse 4 to 1. Neeretta marched to the front and stayed there though Ellert was driving at her wheel and Our Lucky was making a warm argument close by.

Betting for the fourth heat showed Neeretta a prohibitive favorite at 2 to 3, Ellert even money, Our Lucky 3 to 1, Dr. Frasse 6 to 1 and Phoebe Childers 12 to 1. Neeretta again drew out in front closely followed by Ellert and Phoebe Childers, while Dr. Frasse and Our Lucky were having a tussle further back. But Neeretta refused to surrender her position and finished first, landing the purse. The time of second, third and fourth heat was 2:13 1/2 each heat.

The third race was for two year olds, running, five furlongs, and brought out seven starters. The favorite, Windy Jim, landed first under the wire, Tanoka second and Alas third. Time 1:03 1/2, a creditable performance for babies.

The fourth race, running, three quarters of a mile, brought four starters to the scratch. Amassa was an odds-on favorite and went to the half in winning style but finished third, Jerid taking the cake and Ynle getting second slice. Peter Weber fell at the upper turn and it is reported broke a leg.

The fifth race on the program was, running, one mile and a sixteenth, and there were four starters. Ping and Stromo sold for even money, Correct 2 to 1 and Rey del San Juan 10 to 1.

Ping won all the way Stromo finishing second, Rey del San Juan third and Correct fourth. Time 1:44 1/2.

The last race on the program was running, three quarters of a mile, and nine starters went to the flag station. Brown Prince arrived at "wire junction" first, Jim Brownell running as second section, San Augustine third and Gracias fourth. ("Also's as per summary").

THIRD DAY.

The card for the third day was a good one and drew up attendance of about same as the second day. The races scheduled for the day were the 2:20 class trotting, 2:10 class pacing and four races for the gallopers.

Venus II, from Thos. Keating's stable, Lottie Parks and Miss Jones faced the music.

The race turned out to be very unsatisfactory, neither Lottie Parks nor Miss Jones being able to go fast enough to keep themselves warm, and Venus II waltzed easily over the circle landing in a jog each of the three heats. It was galling to the Association to see their $1,000 go for such an exhibition but there was no help for it. Had the rules compelled Venus II to be driven out, the others would have been on the backstretch when she was finishing. As the rules do not so compel, the directors and public had to take the nauseous medicine of a one-sided trotting parade.

The second race on the card, the 2:10 class pacing, in a great measure made up for the disappointment of the first. Although the race was won in "three straights," it was a hustle in each heat between every horse in the race save that in the last heat Blue took Little Thorne out well in front and stayed there, not caring to take any chances of a very close finish. Little Thorne, Jennie Mac, Dictatress, Floracita, Myrtha Whips and Diawood came out for the struggle and started in positions as mentioned. The first heat was red hot and frequent changes were made in positions. From the head of the homestretch Little Thorne and Jennie Mac had a tussle that was exciting to a degree, but the pressure was so strong that Jennie Mac made a break at the distance and Little Thorne was able to take the last twenty yards easy. Had Jennie stayed on her feet the heat would have been below 2:09. As it was Little Thorne was left in his class.

The third heat the word was given to a very even start and Myrtha Whips and Diawood made a dive for the pole and succeeded in getting it. Blue, who was driving Little Thorne was pocketed and was content to remain so until the bunch turned for home base when he pulled clear around the bunch and cutting down one after another marched under the wire a winner in 2:11. During the heat there was heaps of fun on the backstretch and every man in the sulks was lifting asking and assisting his horse to "hurry a little" and places were changed frequently as in the first heat.

When the horses turned for the third heat the "second money" proposition was in the minds of every driver except Blue, it being at this stage of the game conceded that he, having the pole, was a reasonably sure winner. As soon as go was said each and everyone of the whips set them down for a drive and Blue with Thorne was working as hard as those who were signing on second position. Blue sent Thorne a safe distance in front and kept him there. Floracita got a good send off from sixth position and paced rings around Jennie Mac, Dictatress, Myrtha Whips and Diamond and scooting in to the pole at the eighth and staying in second position to the finish landed inside the cash box. Every horse in the race was backed for second place and the odds were changed very frequently or oftener. The summary will show that it was quite a question before the third heat as to where second money would fall.

The gallopers took possession of the track, from this time forward for the afternoon. The Association give four running races each day although they promised but three. There is nothing small about the District Agricultural Association No. 6 and all visiting horsemen express warm approval of the open-handed methods that obtain here.

Three good horses went to the post for the third race of the day of a mile and a sixteenth, running. Alaria, Gihbertifibbet and Alvero started and finished as mentioned.

The betting was Alaria 3 to 5, Gihbertifibbet even money and Alvero 4 to 1. The two first named had a good stiff fight from the fall of the flag to the wire, Alaria staying off Gihbertifibbet a dozen feet from the wire, and winning in 1:47. The time will show how good a race it was.

The fourth race, six furlongs for three year olds and over, brought nine starters to the starting gate and the names of the wire and the odds against them were as follows: San Augustine 3 to 1, Igo 20 to 1, Tom Smith 2 to 3, Ahano 6 to 1, Correct even money, Weasel 15 to 1, Black Orphan 6 to 1, Lady Betty 10 to 1 and Princa 8 to 1. Correct proved to be the winner, Tom Smith second and San Augustine third.

Fifth race, five-eighths of a mile, brought out seven starters with names and odds as follows: Folligno 8 to 1, Summer 2 to 1, Ned Dennis 10 to 7, Altara 10 to 1, Frank Kuby 6 to 1, Conhoy 2 to 1 and Steel Diamond 6 to 1. Steel Diamond won in a gamma drive. Tom Smith getting place and San Augustine finishing third. Time 1:01 1/2.

Steel Diamond is a game little fellow and won a creditable race. He was recently given away as a "no-account." He will bear watching from this on.

The day's sport came to a close at five o'clock with the sixth race, running, in which the final struggle of one mile Ray de San Juan at 4 to 1, Hacienda 1 to 2, Gracias 10 to 1, Gihbertifibbet 2 to 1 and Ellen Wood 6 to 1, took part.

Ellen Wood ran away in two false breaks the lightweight African on him riding in real rough-riding, plucky way. When the flag fell to a good start they all set sail in a hunch but the rider of Gracias got rattled and pulled up losing so much ground that he landed a vary bad last. Gihbertifibbet was first at the wire, Rey del San Juan second and Ellen Wood third. Time 1:40 1/2, another good performance.

Following are the day's summaries:

Trotting, 2:20 class, purse $1000. Venus II, b m, by Cupid—Lily S, by Speculation..... Blue 1 1 1 Lottie Parks, b m, by Cupid, by Bismark..... Laferty 2 3 2 Miss Jones, gr m, untraced..... (Ceeli) 3 3 3 Time—2:26, 2:33, 2:31 1/2.

Six furlongs, purse $250—Correct 99 (Enos) even won, Tom Smith 104 second, San Augustine 99 third. Igo, Weasel, Black Orphan, Lady Betty Prince. Time 1:15.

Five furlongs, purse $250—Steel Diamond 105 (Duffy) 8 to 1 won, Cowboy 105 second, Ned Dennis 115 third. Folligno, Summer, Altara, Frank Kuby. Time 1:01 1/2.

Starter Caldwell gave notice yesterday that no recall flag would be used the balance of the meeting and the starting to-day shows his judgment is correct.

To-morrow is Ladies' Day and the harness race between home drivers is on the hill of fare. A large crowd is expected.

The judges' stand has been manned by Charles A. Willis, Jno. C. Lynch associated with J. E. Pleasant of Santa Ana the first day and A. J. Hndson of Fresno the second and third days. Jack Dinne was "chief cook and all hands" on the track and in the paddock. Secretary Thorne kept tab on the judges' cash box and record book, and "all went merry as a marriage bell."

LADIES DAY.

The fourth day of the Los Angeles meeting was ushered in with cloudless skies and throughout the day the same conditions obtained.

The card was a good one, and although the first race was "special" to fill vacancy of a "declared off" it proved to be the best contest of the meeting up to date. It was scheduled as a purse of $500, and the horses entered overnight were Dr. Frasse, Phoebe Childers, Ned Thorne, Libertine and Dollican. Six heats were necessary to decide the race and, as the summary will show, all the contestants, with one exception were there or thereabouts at some time in the race. Before the first heat the betting was 1 to 2 Dr. Frasse, 3 to 1 Phoebe Childers and 5 to 1 each Ned Thorne, Listerine and Dollican. The last named was very lame and in each heat delayed the start until her driver was told to take care of himself. Dollican drew the pole, Phoebe Childers second position, Ned Thorne third, Listerine fourth and Dr. Frasse fifth. On the third score the field was sent away in good shape and Phoebe Childers stepped to the front maintaining that position to the finish, though Ned Thorne was putting the question to her pretty strong all the way. Dr. Frasse made a break at the first turn and his driver used judgment in not asking him to do impossible things. Listerine had a nice open field to follow in and finished a fair third, Dollican in fourth place well back and Dr. Frasse just dropping inside. Time 2:15 1/2.

Before the second heat the odds changed and Dr. Frasse was slated at even money, Phoebe Childers 4 to 5, Ned Thorne 3 to 1, Listerine 5 to 1 and Dollican "make your own card." The heat was trotted for "keeps" from start to finish, Dr. Frasse going away in the ears of Phoebe Childers with Ned Thorne occasionally "right there" by the help of a few handy skips. He finished third but was set back to last for his huck-jumps. Phoebe finished first, Dr. Frasse second, Listerine third, Dollican fourth and Ned Thorne placed as noted above. Time 2:12.

In the fourth heat there was virtually no change in the betting. Just after getting the word Phoebe Childers did a hornpipe and fell back to last position. Ned Thorne went at Dr. Frasse like a gladiator and tiptoeing all the way to the wire on Dr. Frasse's wheel made a very interesting finish. In the meantime Phoebe was hustling to get in front of Listerine and was only able to do so just before reaching the wire. Dr. Frasse finished first in 2:14 flat, Ned Thorne close up.

Before the fourth heat the betting changed but Phoebe Childers was still held favorite at 2 to 3, Dr. Frasse at even money, Ned Thorne 3 to 1, Listerine 10 to 1, and Dollican 15 to 1. From a good start there was a fight between Frasse, Phoebe Childers and Ned Thorne from start to finish.

Dr. Frasse held the pole and was first at the wire with Phoebe Childers on his wheel, Ned Thorne half a length back, third, Dollican fourth and Listerine placed fifth, (though finishing second), for running. Time 2:14 1/2. Before the fifth heat the setting changed and Dr. Frasse was made favorite at 4 to 5, Phoebe Childers even money, Ned Thorne 2 to 1, Listerina 10 to 1, and Dollican 30 to 1. The gang went away to an even start and Dr. Frasse held the lead to the head of the homestretch with Phoebe Childers forcing him to the limit and Thorne still close up. Listerine and Dollican were having a race by themselves in the rear. The fight on the upper turn was fierce and the issue seemed doubtful. Ned Thorne had given up his skipping business and settled down and trotted square and fast, coming up on the outside as the last turn was negotiated.

When the party turned into the homestretch Dr. Frasse was leading, but the Dr. stepped on a leaf or something and made a staggering break. He was very tired and staggered back and forth across the track cutting off Phoebe Childers twice, but as the driver of Frasse said it was unavoidable, and as Mr. Blue the driver of Phoebe made no complaint at the time, nothing came of the change of positions in the stretch. While this was going on Ned Thorne was losing time and went to the front sliding under the wire a winner in 2:18, Phoebe getting second position, Dollican third, Dr. Frasse fourth and Listerine set back to last for running.

The bookmakers were now guessing and as there were but three starters the odds were short. Just after the word was given Phoebe Childers stepped on her toe and made a short though tangled break, and Dr. Frasse went to the pole, Ned Thorne keeping him very busy. Phoebe gradually overhauled and passed Thorne and made a drive for Dr. Frasse, but the Dr. stalled her off and won the deciding heat in 2:19. A better race is seldom seen and the ladies enjoyed it immensely.

The second race was the Los Angeles Driving Club Road Race, members to drive. Four horses came to the wire for the word and the drivers were each arrayed in coats of Josephian colors. The brown gelding Dewey was entered by Dr. W. W. Hitchcock; brown gelding Lijero, by Frank G. Schumacher, bay gelding Milo M., by Dr. L. M. Moore and black gelding Larrey, by Doctor Wm. Lemoyne Wells. Dewey, like his namesake, knocked his competitors down in one, two order. Lijero finishing second in first heat and Larrey second in second heat. As there was a second prize, a tin cup, and the two last named horses were even in the summary, the tin cup will be subject to a "crap shake" (not yet taken place).

The third race was a hurdle handicap, one and one quarter miles, five hurdles, and Burmah at 7 to 10, P. F. at even money and Rossmore at 4 to 1 went to the post. P. F. was never headed, although Burmah chesed him closely over every hurdle, rising at the one side when P. F. was lending on the other side. The bridle on Rossmore broke at the upper turn and the boy riding went over the horse's head, getting quite a serious fall, dislocating a bone in his foot. Time of the race 2:17 1/2.

Fourth race, five and a half furlongs, for maiden three year olds and over, brought out nine starters. Deisy R. 20 to 1, Deluge 4 to 1, Artesia 4 to 1, Semper Leon 2 to 1. Black Orphan 2 to 1, La Chinopas 5 to 1, Aheno 3 to 1, Shannon Berna 40 to 1 and Jennie W. 30 to 1.

After a screeble with the first six hunched most of the way Semper Leon reached the judges' stand first, Black Orphan second and Artesia third. Time 1:09.

Fifth race was four and a half furlongs, for two year olds brought six to the post, Windy Jim at 2 to 1, Ales 4 to 1, Altara 6 to 1, Picton 4 to 1, Cowboy 2 to 3 and Cue 15 to 1.

Windy Jim, Cowboy and Picton took up the white man's and black boy's hurden and finished with Windy Jim in front, Cowboy second, Altara third and Cue fourth. A foul on the part of the rider of Windy Jim, made almost at the wire, gave the race to Cowboy, second to Altara and third to Cue.

Sixth race ended the day's sport. It was a selling race of seven furlongs and Ping at even money, Yula at even money, Munsey 10 to 3, Purnieh 30 to 1, and Storm at 3 to 1 faced the starting flag. Except for Ping and Yule it was an easy parade, but Yule kept her nose in front to the wire, Ping a neck back, the others somewhere else. Time 1:28.

NOTES AND OBSERVATIONS.

The "Notice to Harness Horsemen" a large placard issued by Secretary Thorne and conspicuously posted all over the stables and grounds, contains two regulations that can be copied with advantage by any and all associations giving meetings for trotters and pacers. The proclamation is as follows:

"Rule 2. Any horse or horsemen delaying the start after being called will be fined ONE DOLLAR PER MINUTE. This rule will be rigidly enforced; the public don't like delays and we must please the public."

"Rule 4. Drawing for positions will take place in the office of the Association 227 S. Spring street at eight o'clock the evening before the race. As the horses are on the program so will their positions in the first heat be. All owners trainers or drivers are invited to be present at the drawing."

"Billy" Andrews says if the climate of California could be moved to New York there would not be standing room on Manhattan Island. This is Mr. Andrews' first visit to the Pacific Coast and this glorious climate fits him exactly.

John Dickerson has been here before but is equally charmed with the State.

Noting the innovation of trotting and running races given the same day and on same track one must conclude the environment has much to do with the decision of the question of practicability and desirability. Los Angeles is the best point in the State for trotting and pacing races. After the harness races of the day are finished the audience perceptibly grows less in numbers.

A large number of those who are devotees of the harness horse find no pleasure in running races, and the admirers of the runner take little or no interest in the trotter or pacer. It has always been thus and probably will be so always.

At the Los Angeles meeting Captain Merry says "the sport was all that had been promised and more. There was no suspicion of jobbery. The starts were satisfactory and the finishes in most of the races close enough to furnish the people that excitement which is responsible for their attendance at a race meeting." He suggested to Mr. Andrews that the condition of John R. Gentry shows how this climate agrees with the little bay stallion and advises that Gentry be wintered in California. The advice is sound.

Speaking of the condition of John R. Gentry Mr. Andrews said: "Will I cannot say how fast the other horses can go. Anaconda is hereby ashore from a long ride on the cars and has hardly had time to rely from it. He should be a better horse ten days from to-day than he is to-day. Patchen and Gentry arrived here to-day and are well rested up. But I will tell you this about Gentry, there has been no time during the present season that he has had as much extreme speed as he has to-day. He went a quarter in 29 1/2 seconds and could have gone in 28 had I urged him."

Andrews said to-day (the 24th) that Gentry kicked up his heels in his walking exercise this morning, a thing he has not done since his hard race at Goshen, N. Y., over that half mile track. Andrews says that race took more out of Gentry than any seven races this year. Andrews has his heart set on winning again next Saturday. Dickerson is giving Joe Patchen considerable hard work, and it will be a hard fight. Anaconda is getting ordinary slow work-outs.

An eye witness of the intense excitement and enthusiasm shown by the surging crowds last Saturday would conclude that this semi-tropical climate was responsible for a people of French excitability. A Parisian multitude could not be more demonstrative.

On Wednesday last, October 17th, Mr. John C. Humphrey chartered two Pullman cars and invited forty-four of his friends to accompany him from San Francisco to the Los Angeles races. So far as heard from there were none declared out. The Pullman Macorita was honored alongside on both sides with a placard reading "To the Los Angeles Races."

The Pullman car Zelinda was similarly adorned with a covering in red and white on which was printed in immense letters,

John R. Gentry 2:00 1/2, Joe Patchen 2:01 1/2, Anaconda 2:03 1/2. "The Greatest Pacing Race of the Year."

The train attracted much attention along the route.

John R. Gentry and Joe Patchen both had workouts on Wednesday and each negotiated a quarter in 29 seconds. A greater attendance and faster race is anticipated next Saturday (28th) than that of last week. Anaconda seems to be taking slower work up to this writing.

No bouquets are thrown when it is stated that no faster track ever was seen than the Los Angeles track in its present condition. Over $3,000 was spent in re-covering the track this season and both the harness horse owners and the running horse trainers and owners express delight at the condition of the track.

The Association is having the worst of the game so far as the stakes and purses go, for, though the entry list was satisfactory, so many have fallen by the wayside through inability to pay entrance money up North (thereby being hung up for suspension money) that the list of starters dwindle down when the day to race comes. But with commendable open-handedness the Association hangs up specials to give the boys who have come here a chance to get some money for winter oats and hay.

Tell all your readers to come down and see the pacing race Saturday and they will probably see the best race ever seen on this Coast.

Van Ship Won a Good Race.

Van Ship, the handsome chestnut gelding that won the champion steeplechase at Morris Park, October 7th, is by Isaac Murphy, out of Bendusia by Bend Or. The race was a very interesting one. It was a three-and-a-half-mile run. Dr. Catlett had fallen within the first mile of the rich champion steeplechase. Van Ship went on and won by a short head from the rank outsider, Philae, an added starter. The stakes were $10,000. Although Philae and Van Ship ended up close, the fact that the latter carried twenty-three pounds more than the former proves beyond a doubt that the chestnut trained at the Rose Tree club is much the superior horse, and James W. Colt may well be proud of him. The three and one-half miles over obstacles were made at express-train time. The jumps were corkers. Many trainers kicked against them. The average height of the jumps was 4 feet 9 inches, with a width of scarcely less than 4 feet 3 inches. The first jump was 4 feet 11 inches.

Philae, the mare that was beaten by a scant head, is owned by E. Craven, also of the Genesee valley. The little mare had never before been raced over a brush course, but she jumped fearlessly, and, it is thought, would have won from Van Ship in another stride.

Van Ship swerved into the fence close to the finish, but kept at it and won by a short head from Philae in 7:05. There were thirteen in the race.

Another Speed Sale.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—As will be seen by an advertisement which I send you herewith to be published on another page of your paper, I will hold my Third Annual Speed Sale on November 15th, next, at the Alameda Trotting Park. My previous sales have always been successful and are the Blue Ribbon sales of the Pacific Coast. It is my effort to secure the best class of horses which are all shown in harness. This is the only place near San Francisco where horses can be shown in harness, an advantage that both the buyer and seller appreciate. A person would be foolish to consign a horse with speed and action to be sold in a corral, where its merits cannot be shown, and who would want to buy a roedster or prospectiva track horse without seeing him step? Both buyer and seller are interested in having the horses shown in harness and where there is plenty of room to show speed and action. Each horse consigned to this sale will be properly catalogued and a full description published. Some of the very best horses ever consigned to an auction sale on this Coast have already been entered, and it is my expectation to make this the greatest sale of the year. Consignments are solicited and people with horses suitable for this sale are invited to write for terms, and particulars, without delay.

Very truly yours, J. M. NELSON, Alameda, Cal.

How to Build Up a Colt or Horse.

My best success was obtained by feeding Oats three times a day in which I mixed a measure of Manhattan Food Red Ball Brand.

The second day after feeding I noticed that their excrements were mellow, of a bright yellow color and the oats were thoroughly digested. The urine was clear and regularly voided. The appetite was increased and they eat with a relish. Ten days later I noticed that their hair began to be glossy and the animal showed signs of improvement all around. The improvement from this time on was very marked, and in six weeks some had gained as much as 125 pounds.

There is no doubt that the Manhattan Food had everything to do with the building up my stock. I have used it for years, and I will further assert that those to whom I recommended to feed it have met with equal success. It is a great stimulant, a good blood purifier, an excellent regulator, Diuretic and Tonic. I have seen so well satisfied with the Red Ball Brand Manhattan Food that I shall always keep a supply on hand for my stock. C. C. MURPHY, Piacencia, Cal.

See Testimonials of the Palo Alto Stock Farm, Hohart's Stock Farm, Wm. Corbit, Chas. Marvin and Sam Gamble, etc.

LIEUTENANT GIBSON, by G. W. Johnson—Miss McNally, is one of the good two year olds of the year. At Latonia on the 19th inst he won the Kimball Stakes, carrying 125 pounds. The track was in poor condition, heavy and holding, and the distance six furlongs. Lieutenant Gibson romped in three lengths in front of Kentucky Farmer, with Yerkes third. The time was 1:19. It is thought this colt will have many of the Western Derbys at his mercy next year.

SEARCHLIGHT has entirely recovered from his lameness and his owner believes he will advance another step toward the two minute mark next season.

ABOUT fifteen new 2:15 performers have appeared on the California tracks this year, and with a good circuit next season the number can be doubled.

SARAH MADDERN, sister to Marguerite A., 2:12½ by Axtell, dam by Kentucky Prince, has trotted a mile in 2:15, for Orrin Hickok, last half in 1:05.

O. A. LOWE, one of the leading farmers of Yolo county, will sell at auction Nov. 10th a lot of horses and mules, among them several "Button" colts and fillies.

THE four-year-old bay horse Poindexter, by Ahhottford, dam by Cyclone, trotted a mile at Lexington, Ky., recently in 2:13½, half in 1:06½, last quarter in 32½ seconds.

THE pedigree of Bumps 2:03½, which holds the world's champion record to wagon, shows two crosses of Rwydk's Hambletonian and two crosses of Vermont Black Hawk.

It is said that Moth Miller, 2:07½, by Alcantara, paced a mile at Readville, Mass., not long since in 2:05½, the last quarter in 28½ seconds and the last eighth in 13½ seconds.

MYRON McHENRY did not return to California with Keating, but if he drives the Californian's horses next year will come out a month or so before the horses are shipped.

GRATTAN 2:13, has had but three of his produce trained for racing and they are Palmyra Boy 2:07½, Grattan Boy 2:08 and Solon Brandt 2:13½, all fast and game road horses.

KENTUCKY UNION 2:07½ has two sisters which became producers this season. One produced Union Bella 2:23½, by Bellman, while another is the dam of Oaward Silver 2:24½.

LUCILLE 2:09½, for whom C. K. G. Billings of Chicago paid $7000, is a remarkable trotter. Last year she raised a colt, and until June of this year she had never seen a track.

It is said that the veterinary attending Lady of the Manor believes the great mare will completely recover. She will probably be shipped from Louisville to Village Farm next week.

2:12½ is the mark to put opposite the name of that little black hull dog trotter Dr. Frasse, by Iran Alto. He got the record in the first heat of the 2:15 trot at Los Angeles last Monday.

It is unfortunate there is no track close to San Francisco suitable for Joe Patchen, John K. Gentry and Anaconda to race over. These three pacers would draw a big crowd here.

WM. HAROLD 2:13½ is being worked at the Hayward track and paced a mile one day this week in 2:09. Mr. Meek, his owner, has five youngsters by this horse and all show speed.

FOUR stallions by Baron Wilkes have entered the 2:15 list this year. A producing son of this great horse would be a valuable addition to California trotting blood, and would be liberally patronized.

SALINAS is to have a day of racing to-day. One of the principal events of the program will be a match race for $100 a side between James Storm's pacer Muldoon and P. Jessen's trotter Juan Chico.

A MARE by Cupid out of a Cresco mare, which is in Budd Dohle's consignment to the Fasig sale, is "the fastest Cupid ever foaled," according to Sam Gamble. He says she has perfect manners and is a square trotter.

P. J. QUINN, the well known horseman of Humboldt county, and owner of Arthur W. 2:11½, is now minus host of that popular hotel "The Occidental" of Santa Rosa, having leased the same from the Bain estate.

THE managers of the old Sanguis track gave a benefit to J. J. ("Jock") Bowen October 19th, and the largest crowd of the season witnessed the races. Bowen, who is in his seventieth year, is the oldest driver in New England.

MILLARD SANDERS, the well known reinsman and trainer, arrived from the East last Wednesday. He may get a stable of horses together for the California Circuit next year. Millard says it feels good to be back in this climate again.

You can get a good price for a second horse if he can show speed and show it right. The three year old filly Lucy Ann by Norval, stepped a mile in 2:15½ over the Lexington track a few days since. $2000 in cash was offered for her and refused.

"Dreyfus, the fastest green trotter in California," is the way the four year old gelding by Dexter Prince, out of Miss Valensin is referred to in the Fasig-Tipton advertisement of their great Horse Show sale in New York next month. He is a fast one and no mistake.

THE three year old gelding Benny Moore, by Charles Derby, which Will Whita purchased last year, will develop into a fast horse. As he stands 16.2 hands, he is being lightly trained, yet Don Thomas has stepped him a mile in 2:23—American Sportsman.

MYRTHA WHIPS won the 2:30 pace at Los Angeles easily and did not have to pace faster than 2:18½ to do it. Irvington Boy, a three year old by Nutwood Wilkes, was second in every heat, and was timed privately in 2:19. This colt ought to be a pretty good one next year.

THE consignment of trotters that will go East to the Fasig-Tipton sale will be limited by reason of the scarcity of cars. Sam Gamble says he could easily get one more car load than he has figured on taking if he could get the cars. Freight traffic on the railroads is very heavy at present.

JOHN MUNSHEAD sold this week his good mare Sybil S. 2:16½, by Hambletonian Wilkes to Captain Lewis of Boston, who will take her East. She ought to hold her own on any speedway in America as she is as fast as her record and there is no gamer animal than this four year old mare.

FARMER BUNCH remarked at the opening of the season that he thought Dr. Frasse would trot as fast as his sire, Iran Alto. The latter thereupon reduced his record to 2:12½ and the stout little son has now cut his mark to 2:12½. If he gets another try at it he will make Bunch's prognostication good.

AN effort is being made to have the crack double teams of Philadelphia race at Belmont on November 2nd. Those that are expected to start are Jacksonian and Otinger, Harry and Othello, King Harry and John P. Stewart, Maryland Boy and Clovice, Jack Miller and Sam T., Paragon and Kopolina, and Red Bea and mate.

A PATHETIC incident of the Lexington, Ky., trots was the appearance of Major H. C. McDowell in the judges' stand one bright day. For years the veteran was president of the association, but is now in feeble health. He wanted to come out and sit in the judges' stand once more and he stayed a half hour, being accorded a most hearty welcome.—Horseman.

WHEN he was at Louisville Ed Geers had his three-year-old pacing colt by Direct, out of Bessie Hal, by Tom Hal added to his stable. This fellow resembles the Direct family a great deal and acts as though he would eventually make a fast pacer. He has been running out all summer, but he can trush fast enough now to make his owner regard him very highly.

NERVANA, the bay two-year-old daughter of Directum, proved herself one of the fastest of her age at the Lexington meeting. Her official time as second horse in the Lexington stake was 2:15½ in the second heat, when she foaled the champion two-year-old of the year to trot in 2:14½, the world's record for geldings of his age. Nervana's dam is by Favorite Wilkes.

NEERETTA 2:11½, the fastest four year old filly of the year, is good enough to go East and trot against any of the horses in her class next year. Her race at Los Angeles last Monday, when she beat such horses as Ellert, Oor Lucky, Dr. Frasse and Phoebe Childers showed that she has class. She is as game as they make them and as square a trotter as has been seen in California for years.

A DEATH which horsemen will regret to note is that of Judge M. W. Oliver, of Prince Hill, Cincinnati, Ohio. Judge Oliver was formerly judge of one of the Superior Courts of Cincinnati. He retired from the practice of law some years since with a handsome competency. He bred trotters somewhat extensively and owned a number of good ones. He has been a familiar figure at the Southern trotting meetings for many years. He was counsel for the prosecution in the Alix case before the Board of Appeals at Chicago. Judge Oliver was a man of vigorous intellect and fine acquirements.

M. ZARNER, the well known horseman of Rohnerville, Humboldt county, published the following definition in the Eureka Standard of last week: "I will match Dr. Hurlbut's pacer Fitz Aymon against any stallion in Humboldt county (trotter or pacer) to race mila heats, best 3 in 5, over any track in the county, for $500 a side, winner to take all gate receipts. Race to come off any time within two (2) weeks from this date."

A REGULAR meeting of the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association will be held at the Murray Hill Hotel, New York, at 10 A. M., Tuesday, December 5, 1899. All communications intended for the consideration of the Board at the December meeting must be forwarded to the Secretary not later than November 21st; and all parties who desire that their cases should be acted on at the Chicago meeting should immediately notify the Secretary to that effect.

DAVID BUNNER is driving on the New York Speedway the handsome bay trotter G. W. Archer, by Allerton, 2:09½. This chap won the blue ribbon at the National horse show as a yearling. He was bred by David S. Hammond, of the Murray Hill hotel, and named in honor of the president of the Rochester, N. Y., driving club. The gelding is out of Tot, 2:24, who was bred to Allerton, when his fee was $1,000, and her colt cost the New York horseman something like $1,500 when foaled.

AMONG the California horses sold at the Fasig-Tipton Blue Ribbon Sale at Cleveland last May was a three-year-old bay filly called Mary Kelly. She is by Direct out of Father Powers' mare Lady Dexter, by Dexter Prince, second dam Kitty Thorne, by Hambletonian 725, and was bred at Pleasanton. She was knocked down at the sale for $150, and purchased by T. W. Whitten. Mary Kelly is a pacer, and at Ravenna, Ohio, this year won the 2:30 pace in straight heats in 2:28, 2:27½ and 2:26½. She promises to develop into a fast race mare.

EXTASY, two-year-old pacing record 2:10½, three-year old trotting record 2:11½, is a great filly and a great bred one, being by Baron Wilkes, first dam Ethelwyn (dam of Impetuous 2:13, etc.), by Harold, second dam Kathleen (dam of Eger 2:14½), by Pilot Jr., third dam Little Miss, a registered thoroughbred mare by imp. Sovereign, and on through the celebrated imported Cuh mare to the Layton Barh mare, which according to the Bruce Lowe figures should make her a great broodmare when she is placed in the stud.

GOOD ones go cheap some times. At the Cleveland sale last May the two year old filly Monote, by Mendocino (sire of Idolita 2:12) out of Sallie Benton, dam of threa in 2:20, was sold to E. A. Hyde of Hartford for $170, a ridiculous price for a filly bred like that. The report in the catalogue at the time of the sale was that she had shown a quarter in 40 seconds. Probably the buyers thought that was not fast enough for a Palo Alto bred one to show and Mr. Hyde got her at the low price. Two weeks ago this filly stepped a mile in 2:22 over the Charter Oak track, the last quarter in 32 seconds. She could not be purchased for ten times the amount paid for her.

MR. E. H. HYDE of Hartford, Ct., predicts that Mamie W. (3) 2:17½, which he sold a few weeks ago through Herbert Gray to T. W. Lawson of Boston, will be able to beat Extasy 2:11½, Idolita 2:12 and Boralma 2:13 next season. Since returning from Lexington, Ky., she has been timed an eighth in 14½ seconds and is tried to train on. Mr. Hyde has a two-year-old trotter by Wildnut, sire of Mamie W., dam the dam of trainer Golden's fast Dexter Prince filly, for which he lately refused $7500. Mr. H. pronounces this two year old the best one he has ever yet handled, which is saying considerable, as he has had excellent success with the Palo Alto bred youngsters.—American Horse Breeder.

BELLA BELLS and Willetta, a pair of elegant show mares that will be seen at the New York horse show next month, were driven a mile in 2:25½ at the Illinois State Fair last week. Bella Bells, 2:21½, is by Bow Bells, dam by Red Wilkes; her dam has three in the 2:30 list. Bella Bells has been a mile in single harness in 2:14. Willetta, with a record of 2:28 to wagon, has been a mile in 2:16½; she is sired by Red Wilkes; her dam Alma 2:28, is by Wedgewood; Alma has four in the two-thirty list. Bella Bells and Willetta will have gotten in shape at once to go to New York, where they will be shown at the national horse show as a team and in single harness. Good judges say they can heat any pair of horses in America in the show ring.

ONE of the most notable performances of the season in amateur harness racing took place at Pittsburg recently, on the new mila track on Bruno's Island. J. D. Callery drove his chestnut trotting stallion Guy, by Robert Rydyk, a mile to wagon in 2:11. Then Callery hooked his chestnut mare Ferris W., by Altar, to pole with Guy and started them to beat 2:20 in double harness. It was the second time the two trotters had been driven together, Ferris W. having been purchased by the Pittsburg horseman only a few days before the trial. With the same steady band which guided Guy round the new track in 2:11, Callery sent the team from wire to wire in 2:13½, coming within a second and a half of the champion team record made by Bella Hamlin and Honest George at Providence seven years ago.

WHILE in New York early in the season Frank L. Herdic, the well known pool seller, referred to the early history of pool selling as follows: "I suppose many people do not know the origin of auction pool selling. It's of American invention, and before it was started betting on races was, perforce, between individuals, on honor between acquaintances, and by depositing the stakes with a third person, known to each, among strangers. In the winter of 1869 there was a race meeting at New Orleans, and one day several men around the gambling house kept by the late Prince McGrath wanted to bet on a certain race, but they all fancied the same horse, which, by the way, was 'Lucky' Baldwin's old stallion Ruth-erford. McGrath suggested that as this horse was a great favorite he should be sold at auction, and the other horses as well, the aggregate sum to be put in a pool for the winner's backers. This was the first auction pool, but shortly afterward this method was adopted on all the race tracks in America, the pool seller taking five per cent. of the total for expenses and compensations."

TOMMY BURNS will leave Chicago to-night for this city.

Most of the horses brought here by Den Dennison ere for sale.

The constant changing in the track conditions, keeps the "dope" students busy guessing.

THERE will be a meeting at the Roby track from October 30th to November 15th inclusive.

DEVIN and Major Cook seem to be an unlucky combination. They have been beaten a nose in each of their last two starts.

FRANK DOSS, who reced Hugh Penny and several other horses here last winter, is expected to arrive soon with a small stable.

JUDGE MURPHY is keeping a watchful eye on suspicious jockeys and owners, and already has made his vigilance felt in the suspension of Jockeys J. Brown and McCloskey.

YELLOW TAIL ran five furlongs in 59 1/2 seconds at Harlem last Monday. This is the track record. Another of Fred Foster's sprinters, Ahuse, now dead, formerly held the Harlem record for the distance, which was one minute flat.

JOCKEY J. DUGAN, who was ruled off for life for a suspicious ride on Harry Nutter at Hawthorne the last day of the meeting, was raised in this city. Traitor Blum, who was suspended with Dugan at the time, has been reinstated.

RICHARD J., son of Morello, picked up 129 pounds in the Fordham heavy weight handicap over the last seven furlongs of the Withers mile at Morris Park last week and won a rattling good race in a drive by half a length from Kinnikinic.

FOR a bad ride on Plautain, at Hawthorne Park, Chicago, Capt. Reis suspended Nate Hill for the balance of the year. Nate has been here for several days now, but owing to the afore mentioned suspension will not be seen in the saddle before January 1st next.

ONE of the most popular appointments that has been made at Tanforan Park is that of the well known turf correspondent Ed Power as Patrol Judge. Mr. Power is not only thoroughly qualified in every way for the position, but he is a gentleman whose eye is keen and his judgment unbiased.

THE old sprinter Montgomery, exhibited about as good form as he ever did in his life at Chicago last week. He was in against such fast ones as Found, Verify and others, and on a heavy track mane a runaway race of it, winning easily, being pulled up at the finish. The distance was six furlongs.

MAY BEACH ran a good race at Harlem track October 19th, conceding from thirteen to nineteen pounds to everything in the race. After a long delay at the post she ran the field to a standstill and won the five and a half furlongs in 1:03, which was remarkable time, considering the weather, weight and condition of the track.

DAN DENNISON arrived on Monday last with thirty-five head of horses from Marcus Daly's Bitter Root Stock Farm. Among the two year olds is The Gaffir, by Uncas-Laetitia. This colt is a half brother to Charconce, this year's Futurity winner, and is a good looker. Among the older horses are Afghan, Colonel Root, Duke of York, Ahralithe, Ella Boland, Mortgage, Harry Corby, Limerick, Monntehenk, Frank Duffy, Burdock and Lord Chesterfield.

THE Coney Island Jockey Club has announced the following stakes to close November 15: The Foam and Surf, each with $1,500 added, to be run at the June meeting of 1900; the Tidal of $1,500, to be run at the June meeting of 1901, and the Great Filly Stakes of $5,000, to be run at the Autumn meeting of 1901. This latter is for two-year-old fillies, at six furlongs, and while it has easy conditions of early entrance, only a nomination fee of $5, it will have a valuable event. The breeding interests need more valuable stakes for fillies. The output of the farms include as many, if not more, fillies than colts, but the fillies have hardly a third the value of the colts, because of their small earning capacity. Stakes such as this new one just announced will tend to increase the value of yearling fillies.

FLYING FOX has this year won $157,075 in his six races, and should he come out fresh and well next season such valuable stakes are apparently at his mercy that the aggregate winnings of Isinglass and Donovan hid fair to be thrown completely in the shade. Flying Fox's total winnings in 1898 and 1899 reach $200,480. Isinglass won $287,375 in his three turf seasons of 1893, 1894 and 1895, while Donovan won $275,772.50 in 1888 and 1889. Flying Fox's engagements for next year include no less than four races of $50,000 each, namely the renewals of the Princess of Wales, Eclipse and Jockey Club, each for three-year-olds and four-year-olds, together with the new event, the Century Stakes at Sandown Park, which is run in the Spring and is exclusively for four-year-olds and five-year-olds. Flying Fox is also in the Rous Memorial and Hardwick at Ascot, and has therefore to win less than one-half of his engagements in order to pass Isinglass' record.

OSCAR DUKE, of Conejo, Fresno county, writes that he has named his stock farm at that point Poverty Row Stock Farm, if that name is not already claimed by some one. He sold the other day to J. H. Walker, who formerly owned and raced the horse April Fool, a yearling colt registered as Pat Foley for the sum of $150. This colt is by Dr. Lindsay Jr., first dam Molly Smell, by imp. Thunderstorm, second dam Mattie, by imp. Knight of St. George. He is a good looking colt and Mr. Walker will probably bring him to San Francisco about the first of the year and get him ready for the two year old events next spring.

To talk of English horse racing a few years ago would have interested the American public little, but since such an immigration has been made into that country by horses of American breeding it has now become an every day topic. If one was to say that ninety-nine American bred horses started in England in 1898, the public would be incredulous. Still such was the case; and those ninety-nine thoroughbreds started 537 times, winning eighty-seven races, being second fifty-five times, and sixty-six times getting the inside money. The total amount taken down in purses was $126,020. The most money won by any one horse was $15,714, and Caiman, 2, ch c, by Locohatchee—imp. Heppy Day was the lucky recipient. This colt won the Clearwell and Middle Park plate, both at Newmarket. Golden Bridge (late Bridgroom II.) 3, ch c, by imp. Rayon d'Or—imp. St. Bridget, won $14,058, his chief efforts being the Peveril of the Peak Stakes, one mile, at Derby; the Limekiln Stakes, one mile and eleven yards, at Newmarket, and the Lancashire Handicap, one mile, at Manchester. Myekka, 2, ch f, by Sensation—Magnetic, won $13,200.

THE owner of the great Australian horse, Taroola, winner of the Melbourne Cup and many other rich stakes, writes to a friend in this city that there is still a great demand in England for race horses from the Colonies. The winter favorites for the V. R. C. Derby (Chesney and Cranberry) have been purchased by Mrs. Langtry for £2100 and £3100 respectively. "Directly a horse shows a hit of form he is soaped up," writes the owner of the celebrity now at Ruinat Stock Farm in Sonoma county. The well-known California horse Gilead, was sold to New Zealand parties, and is highly regarded there. His picture adorned one of pages of the September 14th issue of the New Zealand Sporting Review. Salvador, the Salvador colt taken over with Gilead, will be raced in New Zealand. A St. Leger mare was given in first payment for the Rancho del Paso product, and is now here. Taroola has not been leased to anyone, and is in the hands of Ralph H. Tozer, of San Francisco, to be sold. Mr. Tozer was for several years editor of the racing department of this paper. He several months ago entered into negotiations with some noted breeders of thoroughbred horses in America and it would not surprise us if Taroola passed into the hands of a famous firm of Kentucky breeders at a very early date. Taroola is the first Melbourne Cup winner ever brought to our shores, and those taken to England, including Carbine, Newhaven and The Grafter, brought fabulous sums. The runner-up in Taroola's year, Carnage, was sold less than a year ago to the Russian Government for $73,000. We understand $10,000 would secure Taroola, the wonderful son of Newminster and Imogene, by King of the Ring. This horse, if not sold soon, will make a season at Ruinat Stock Farm. Several breeders have already shown a desire to hook their best mares to the celebrity.

A New Stake for Fillies.

The Coney Island Jockey Club announces its three annual stakes The Foam, The Surf and The Tidal, in this issue, and in addition announces a new stake The Great Filly, which is for fillies, now weanlings. This stake should certainly appeal to breeders as it is the largest stake for fillies in this country. The well known turf correspondent W. H. Rowe, says "it is not going too far to say that this stake as projected fills the most 'long felt want' which American breeders have ever experienced. The original entrance fee of $5 is comparatively trifling when one considers the advantage to be derived from obtaining the right for a filly to start in a $20,000 race exclusively for her own sex at two years old, besides the chance to participate in the Nominators' Sweepstakes. Under all the circumstances, the club's addition of $5000 is thoroughly liberal. The conditions as to weight are eminently sensible. Winners of two races of $2000 or one of $5000 carry five pounds extra; winners of two races of $5000 or of one of $10,000, eight pounds extra. The breeding allowance is three or five pounds, and I am very glad to note that there is no maiden allowance. The true significance of great races is virtually nullified by any such absurdity as a maiden allowance. As a matter of fact, the designer of the Great Filly Stakes has outlined a set of conditions as to penalties and allowances which should without fail be adopted for future closings of the Futurity. The distance, six furlong, is eminently proper, and, all in all, I regard the Great Filly Stakes as a real boon to the turf, congratulating its framers upon their good sense and judgment and the breeders upon their opportunity to enter their filly foals of 1899 in such a genuinely well planned race."

San Francisco, Saturday, October 28, 1899.

THE SUGGESTION OFFERED in this journal last week by a prominent breeder of thoroughbreds, through an open letter to the racing associations of California, wherein the plan of a Futurity race for two-year-olds was set forth, is worthy of earnest consideration. The California Jockey Club, on the day following the publication of the "open letter" gave out its intention of announcing in the near future a rich futurity for two-year-olds, particulars of which are stated in another place on this page. It is a grand stake and one for which the association should receive the highest commendation and patronage by breeders, but as it is to be run in December, and will therefore attract entries from all over the United States, it will not interfere with another futurity on the lines suggested by the author of the open letter. His proposition is that one be arranged to be run in April, thus making it a "coast" stake, the entries to which would come almost entirely from California breeders. The suggested $5,000 to be added to the stake would insure a large list of entries, and do more to encourage the breeding of high class horses in this State than a long continued meeting where the purses of $300 or $400 are the rule. It would also benefit the breeder in the sales which are held in November and December, as the yearlings there offered, if entered in the stake, could be made ready to run for it three months later, thus giving the owner of the winner quick return on his investment, and certainly adding to the value of colts and fillies that have a chance to win. Now that the California Jockey Club has provided a Futurity whose conditions will attract two-year-olds from all parts of the Union to battle for supremacy during the last month of their two-year-old form, it is to be hoped that one or both of the other associations will act on the suggestion of our correspondent, and arrange a stake that will be local in its nature, and offer special inducements to California breeders to not only make entries for it, but enter more earnestly into the breeding of thoroughbred horses of the highest class.

"THE BEST LOOKING HORSE AT NEWMARKET," writes "North Yorkshireman" from England to the New York Spirit of the Times, "is the famous New Zealand, Multiform." The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN takes pleasure in furnishing its readers to-day a half tone portrait of this celebrated son of Hotchkiss. He was sold some months ago and shipped to England, and to receive the verdict of the best looking horse at Newmarket is certainly an honor, especially coming as it does from Mr. Allison, one of the best living judges of a horse. We believe our illustration is the first picture of Multiform ever published in this country. It shows the proper pose for a horse picture and can be studied with profit by photographers.

THE SAN BENITO Agricultural Association, whose meetings are held at Hollister, has already claimed the week immediately following the State Fair for its fair next year. This association held a fair this year, which would have been a success but for the weather, and does not propose being caught again by the fall rains. The Hollister Bee says: "Next year we don't propose to wait for any county on the circuit?" That's the proper caper. The association that claims its dates early and gets an energetic move on is entitled to whatever advantage there is in it. Those who wait for others to arrange a circuit and then get in after the procession has started have no claim on dates.

A FUTURITY is soon to be announced by the California Jockey Club, which will attract the attention of the racing world, and receive the endorsement of a very large list of entries from breeders. The sensational feature of this stake is that the amount of added money is to be $3750, which is the amount added by the Coney Island Jockey Club to its Futurity, at present the richest futurity stake offered in America. The first race for the California Futurity will be run in December 1901, and the conditions will be very similar to the New York classic, except that cash payments will be exacted, and consequently there will be no forfeits. The owner of the winner will thus be paid in cash the entire value of the amount won by his horse, and will be relieved of that always unpleasant duty of collecting a lot of bad debts in small amounts, whenever and wherever he can find the debtor about to race. It is thought that this stake will be worth at least $30,000, as the date of its decision will enable horses from all parts of the United States and Canada to be here after having filled all their engagements for the year. The distance will be six and a half furlongs, and the race will be decided over the straight away which the California Jockey Club will add to their track in the near future. President Williams and the Directors of the association are to be congratulated on their enterprise and liberality in arranging such a stake and offering such a large sum of added money. The stakes will be run every year, and it will without doubt be one of the great events of American racing each season and draw an immense concourse to witness the decision.

THE STATE FAIR GROUNDS at Sacramento are not to be sold right away at least, and many more meetings may be held on the historic old course. The committee in whose hands were placed the matter of selecting a new location and securing bids for the old property reported last week that a satisfactory offer for the old park had not been received, nor suitable land for a new park offered at a reasonable price. The probabilities are that the old park will be used for several fairs yet. The idea has been held that the old agricultural park, having become very valuable for building purposes could be sold for enough to purchase a tract of land a little further out and pay for all the necessary improvements. This cannot be done just now, and the Directors consider it advisable to keep the present property for a while yet rather than to make a poor trade. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN would respectfully suggest that the track be deeply and thoroughly plowed this winter, so that some life may be put into the soil if possible. A good coating of new soil would be better, but if that is not practicable under the conditions that exist, use the subsoil plow by all means.

TOGGLES has met the enemy and "they are his'n." At Los Angeles last Thursday he won the free for all in straight heats, the time being 2:11, 2:12 and 2:12 1/4. Dione 2:09 1/2 went after him the first heat, and he beat her out. Ellert 2:11 tackled him in the others, but the son of Strathway just wagged his head and kept it in front, and $1000 more went to his credit. Toggles has started three times this year and has not lowered his record of 2:09 1/2 because it wasn't necessary. His winnings this season amount to $2500, he having annexed the free for alls at Oakland and Sacramento, which were $1500 purses, and now the one at Los Angeles, which was a $2000 purse.

A NEW STAKE FOR FILLIES is announced by that sterling organization, the Coney Island Jockey Club, and $5000 is the amount of added money. This will be good news for breeders and the stake should attract a great many entries. The Coney Island Jockey Club also announces the regular renewals of The Foam, The Snr and The Tidal Stakes, all very valuable, the first two being estimated as worth $4000 each, the other to be worth $6000. The conditions and all particulars are fully given in our advertising columns. Entries close November 15th.

STAR POINTER has been retired from the track and goes to the stud at the Two Minute Stock Farm at Rockport, Ohio. D. J. McClary, the trainer who has driven the champion in all his two minute miles has been released, and it is not probable that the great horse will ever again be driven a fast mile. Star Pointer is in a class by himself. He is the harness horse of the century, and it will be a long time before his equal is seen. Star Pointer is going sound again, and McClary drove him a mile in 2:26 last week.

THE WESTERN TURF ASSOCIATION will open its gates at Tanforan Park for the first time on Saturday next, and everything will be in readiness by that time for the horsemen and the public. The new track is certain to be a popular one with horse owners and the public and can be reached in all kinds of weather from the trains without difficulty. Patrons will be landed right at the entrance to the grand stand, having but a few steps to take to reach their seats or the betting ring, and all under cover. Workmen are busy putting the last touches on the buildings and stalls—there being 250 of the later. A special train will convey horses each day from Ingleside to Tanforan, thus enabling those who train at the first named track to race at the other without any great inconvenience.

GOLDEN GATE PARK DRIVING CLUB.—Owing to the rain the meeting billed for last Saturday at Ingleside was declared off. Trophy races will be held at the Park speedway next Saturday, entries to which will close next Tuesday evening at the office of the club at the Palace Hotel.

How slight a thing may change the result of a race was shown in the Transylvania Stake at Lexington. After Peter the Great had two heats to his credit and came into the stretch in the fourth five or six lengths in advance of his nearest competitor, nearly every spectator thought that the race was as good as finished. The son of Pilot Medium, however, was tired, but still he had enough left to win handily. Just about at the short distance his driver apparently failed to keep hold of him as a tired horse should be taken hold of, and he went to a tired break. Charley Doble, who was in second place with Lord Vincent, saw the occurrence and he brought the son of St. Vincent through the stretch like a whirlwind and won the heat.

Sympathetic's Last Dies at Hilo

C. A. Durfee's son Charles, well and favorably known to California horsemen, has been a resident of the Hawaiian Islands for the past year, and a letter received from him by the last steamer conveys the information that he is now in Government employ at Hilo, being in the custom service and acting Port Surveyor. He writes that a regulation half mile track is being laid out at Hilo and some good racing is to be held when it is finished. Sympathetic's Last, the brown son of Fair Play and Sympathetic that Nick Hall used to race here five or six years ago, and was sold to Hawaiian parties, died there recently of inflammation of the bowels. For a long time after arriving at the islands the old horse was the champion there, but had to succumb to Venus, the mare imported by Mr. Cornwall. Sympathetic's Last won eight races out of eleven starts over the island courses, and was a heavy money earner for his owner.

Answers to Correspondents.

C. M. D., Bishop, Cal.—Has there ever been at Terra Haute, Ind., a half mile track? If so, have there been any fast records made over it within the past seven years.

[Answer—There is at Terra Haute a half mile track built within the mile track there. It is used for training purposes. We do not know whether any actual races were ever held over it or not. Perhaps some of our Indiana exchanges can give the information.—Ed. B. & S.]

Palace Hotel.

This hotel, aside from having the distinction of being the largest in the world, is also responsible for giving San Francisco an international reputation for its superior restaurants. The Grill rooms for ladies and gentlemen cannot be surpassed for cuisine and the service is the best and the charges are moderate.

Travelers from all over the world unhesitatingly declare this hotel presents more desirable features than can be found in the best hotels in Europe.

Striped bass anglers who went to Rodeo last Saturday and Sunday found excellent fishing from the wharf at that point.

On Sunday about twenty fishermen had out their rods, clams being the principal bait used. Among the lucky ones were Charley Precht, Chas. Breitenstein, J. Moody, G. A. Wentworth and the redoubtable "Andy."

Deputy Fish Commissioner M. L. Cross on the 21st inst. liberated fifty strong and lively young striped bass in Humboldt bay.

Striped bass have been more plentiful within the past two weeks than has ever been recorded of this prolific fish since it has been placed in the waters of San Francisco bay.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Bruno Sherock bagged nine sprig and teal at Newark on Sunday.

Ed. Schultz bagged three spoonays on the Alameda foot hills on Sunday.

The Siamese Twins still hold up Sears Point waiting for the good time coming.

An aggregate hag of over 200 ducks is credited to the guns over the Ibis club ponds last week.

The Redding trap shooting tournament was postponed from the 22d inst. to Sunday, October 29th.

Three dozen teal was the excellent result of a trip to Mowry's last Sunday by Wm. Schendel and a friend.

Canvashack in considerable numbers were seen coming in over the Suisun marshes and also on the bay last Sunday.

Many hunters were on the Alameda and Alviso marshes last Sunday; slim hags were the rule, weather conditions were wanting to cause the birds to fly in range.

Dave Thom and Pete McRea prospected their private snipe ground in the Suisun district on Sunday. A modest string of "scapers" testified to their skill and devotion to bog trotting.

Sport on the Empire grounds Sunday was not of an encouraging aspect, V. J. La Motte and a friend brought down a few ducks and curlew. J. B. Hauer bagged two mallards and a fat can.

Otto Feudner and A. M. Shields bagged two dozen ducks, principally sprig, on the Pringle ponds last Sunday.

W. D. Patterson and Varnon Sheppard who is known to the sporting fraternity as a skilled taxidermist, enjoyed a pleasant quail hunt in the vicinity of Vacaville recently.

Billy Hynes, H. F. Wagner and Narry A. Wende accounted for nearly eight dozen birds shot at the canvashack club preserve last Sunday, they were principally sprig but a few canvashack made their appearance and were gathered in.

The best duck shooting on the Petaluma marshes has been found within the bounds of the Alameda Gun Club preserve. On Friday of last week one of the members bagged seventy birds, fifty-three of the string being fine fat sprig.

A visit to the Suisun ponds on Wednesday enabled Harry Babcock to bag thirty ducks, seven of them cans, on one of the Ibis ponds. On the Tulle Belle preserve Alec Hamilton brought down forty-eight birds and Will Kittla's bag counted eighteen.

Few ducks are in the vicinity of Byron at present. The Point Reyes marshes are not yet the favorite haunt of ducks. The indications for first class quail shooting in Marin county on Novembar last are sufficient to satisfy the most enthusiastic sportsman.

Quail is reported to be very plentiful on the river bottoms between Rio Vista and Sacramento. In numberless burnt districts the young brush has sprouted up on the sandy bottoms and affords an ideal cover for the birds, tho' in many places the wild grape vines offer an almost impassable barrier to the hunter.

Among the Reclamation hunters Sunday last were Billy Mordock and E. Klavesahl, Edg. Forster, Wm. Price, Billy Williams and Brother and Dave Walton and a shooting friend. A few teal and sprig fell to the guns, general results however were rather meagre, the weather being too warm for good shooting.

The Olympic Gun Club members who fancied the Suisun ponds this week had but poor returns for their sporting zeal. On Wednesday Al Cumming, Prof. Kytk, Harry Hosmer and R. H. Delafield went out early for ducks—a foggy morning and birds that didn't work allotted the hunters but a poor hag, Hosmer being high gun with less than a dozen birds.

R. O. Pierca and P. Streichan of Vallejo, have leased from Dr. Cross about 700 acres of marsh land north of Mare Island, and will establish a hunting preserve. Their lease is bounded by Napa and South creeks and Dutchman's slough. The ponds are now being baited and a comfortable shooting lodge will be erected and everything made ready for thoroughly enjoying the winter duck shooting.

At the Black Jack arks last Sunday were a jolly party of sportsman composed of "Black Jack" Lemmer, "Leather" Johnson, Commodore Wymap, Bert Patrick and N. H. Hickman. The morning was close and exceedingly sultry. The flight of birds was not a very large one over the blinds, the combined hag consisted of forty birds including a few black jacks, two cans, the balance being made up principally of sprig-tails.

An important capture was made when Deputy Game Commissioner Kerchival arrested Ben Woodruff, T. J. Burke and Ika Kerr in Lake Co. on the 20th inst. for illegally killing deer. The culprits were taken before Justice Thompson at Upper Lake and fined $20 each upon pleading guilty to the charges preferred. Deputy Kerchival will have the game detail permanently. In similar cases Santa Clara justices have imposed a penalty of $250. Lake county should employ a game warden. An energetic officer could more than pay his expenses. Since Game Warden Ornbau was appointed for Mendocino the prosecution of game law violators has not cost the county one dollar to carry on the work of the game warden. Since Warden Ornbau has been in office the arrests and convictions have resulted in a total amount of fines to date that shows a balance on the ledger in favor of the county. Furthermore, infractions of the fish and game laws are becoming rarer, those disposed to evade the law are beginning to have a wholesome respect for it, business men and residents of the county are gradually awakening to the value of the game in their district as a means of inducing sportsmen to visit the county, every visiting hunter and angler meaning just so many extra dollars for distribution among the citizens in exchange for sport and recreation.

Suisun sportsmen have time for other things besides bagging the festiva sprig and making spasmodic efforts to suppress Bogie O'Donnell, the man who never fires a gun but walks up Market street Sundays with the biggest string of ducks. It was a happy thought that entered the minds of the Suisun Gun Club when they conceived the idea of giving a duck dinner at the club house in honor of as many teachers (who were attending the annual Teachers' Institute of Solano county) as could be comfortable entertained. It was one of the pleasantest affairs of the entire week, and those who attended could not give expression to their delight and were filled with regret when the hour arrived for their departure. Three four-horse bus loads and a number of private conveyances made up the merry party. The supper under the supervision of J. C. Murphy, Jack Wilson, H. B. Perkins, T. L. Robinson, Ed Hilburn, Dr. Downing, Jae. A. Keys and C. E. Baruhart was admirably arranged. The club house is located on the Tomasini preserves about four miles from town and the pleasant drive served as an appetizer. Following is a list of those present:

- Misses Aldana Wilson, Emma Shoemaker, Jessie McDole, Estella Farrington, Florence Cassaday, Elizabeth McCadden, Annie Pennycook, S. May Wilson, Addie M. Lucy, Marie Toland, Lucy A. Why the Game Laws are Not Enforced.

The San Mateo Leader of last Saturday, in commenting on the doings of hunters in that county on the opening day of the rail season says:

"Hundreds of hunters came from San Francisco and every man and boy in this county who possessed a gun also swelled the ranks of the hunters. Those from the city came mostly the preceding night in wagons and almost without exception each wagon brought one or more boats. The rail is a bird that at high tides with the use of a boat can be approached very closely, and because of this fact the Board of Supervisors saw fit some time ago to prohibit the use of boats in rail hunting at high tide. However, the hunters proceeded with their illegal work throughout the day without molestation."

The indifference or ignorance of the San Mateo county officials will account for the wholesale violation of their county game law without interference. Had the constables, police officers and deputy sheriffs performed their sworn duties the county treasury would have been the gain and a number of game law violators would have found out that laws were made to be observed.

In regard to the enforcement of county game ordinances there seems to be in many quarters a degree of ignorance that is a lamentable commentary on the intelligence not only of officials but also on the part of editorial writers in commenting on the acts of game law breakers—an instance in point was shown by a Sonoma county paper recently which mentioned illegal quail hunting near Sebastopol, the paragraph has been copied and recopied for the last month by other interior papers. What were the county officials doing? Law breakers laugh at newspaper paragraphs.

The Fish and Game Commissioners received an urgent request a few days ago from the sheriff of one of the counties north of this city to immediately send a deputy to follow up, arrest and suppress the many game law violators in his county—that Sheriff is indeed a model officer, he at least knows enough to draw his breath and his monthly salary, how much more is a problem we will not attempt to solve at this time.

County and township officials have been accused of winking at the delinquencies of their constituents and when violations of fish and game laws were continuous and notoriously public the Fish and Game Commission has been a convenient scapegoat to hold up as an example of official dereliction. While the Commissioners with only a small force of deputies, are willing to and do afford all the aid possible they can not cover the whole State at all times.

Happily the apathy shown by a few officers is not universal in our State, a number of our counties now are well taken care of by their game wardens and other county officers.

At the Traps.

Notwithstanding the many alluring temptations on marsh, field and upland for shot gun enthusiasts during the early days of the present game season the sport of trap shooting has not yet been abandoned but still has its faithful adherents. At Tacoma on the 18th inst. the fifth annual tournament of the Washington State Sportsmen's Association commenced and was finished last Saturday. There was a representative attendance of northern sportsman and the interest in the shoot was unabated until the end. Clarence Nauman of this city, not being eligible to shoot for the prizes, made some fine scores shooting for birds only. The events and scores during the first day's shooting were as follows:

In addition the members of the team making the highest score each received a $10 cartridge case. The Tacoma teams, two in number, won first and second money against two crack teams from Seattle and one from Spokane. The scores were as follows:

The Game Law.

The synopsis of the game laws appearing below and published in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for several years past has, from time to time been changed or the provisions of new ordinances added thereto by reason of the many and various changes in the county game and fish laws, particularly those of recent date and of application in and around the bay counties.

This synopsis has been frequently copied (in more or less garbled and incomplete form) and quoted by city and interior journals and has also been printed and distributed by business houses. While the information given at the date of issuance was substantially correct, we do not care to be held responsible for the circulation of old matter that is now in correct in many details. Some complaint has been made in this respect and to avoid misunderstanding in the future it is suggested that for information of this character a reference be made to current numbers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for the latest and most complete data concerning the Game Laws.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The Oakland bench show committee are working hard to make their combined show a successful one.

Mr. John E. de Ruyter is in the East at present. He is expected to return on or about November 10th.

Alec C. has been elected in the All Age Stake of the Eastern Field Trials Club. It will be seen by reference to the list that he is in hot company. The well wishes of his many Coast admirers are with him.

The report is current that the Victoria Kennel club will enlist under the banner of the Pacific Kennel League, this movement it is said is voluntary on the part of the northern club. The Vancouver organization is in sympathy with the new move.

A novelty in collies will be seen across the bay in December. Governor Gege will send to the Oakland show his white collie dog. This will be the first time in the history of Coast bench shows that a white collie has been benchd. These specimens of the breed are rare.

The P. K. L. northern circuit for next spring has been arranged as follows: The initial bench show will open at Portland in April, then Tacoma, Seattle followed by Victoria and Vancouver and possibly New Westminster as a finish (if the necessary enthusiasm can be worked up in the latter place).

In combination with the Oakland bench show the promoters will hold a poultry and pigeon show. An interesting feature will be an exhibition of the practical working of incubators in hatching out chickens and also brooders nursing them. It is proposed to hatch out over 2000 young broilers.

Nine sons and daughters of Verona Kennels Ch. Count Gladstone IV. are in the Eastern Field Trials All Age entries. Count Danstone and Prime Minister have already shown their field trial qualities, the others will also no doubt make a good showing in a field of thirty-five other contestants.

The Irish setter Don, owned by Charles Reams, a well known Napa sportsman, was poisoned a week ago. Don was one of the best hunting dogs in Napa county and had endeared himself to his master by many other fine qualities. The motive as well as identity of the poison fiend is unknown.

J. B. Hener informs us that his "hunting dog, a cross-bred cocker speniel and Gordon setter, black in color on the back and brown under body and legs, with a white spot on the breast, tail cut about four inches long," has been lost, strayed or stolen since October 2nd. He offers a reward for the return of the same.

The P. K. L. managers will endeavor to have three or four shows on their circuit next spring so arranged that northern fanciers will find it convenient to make entries here and then follow the circuit of the northern bench shows; or the California shows may be so fitted as to receive the northern exhibits after the close of the round of shows up north.

Another Coast dog has gone East. Recently the pointer dog Jin o' Boy (Ch. Jingo—Dot's Pearl) was sold by Mr. Burt Borrowsdale of Port Angeles, Washington, to an Indiana purchaser. His new owner intends to start him in the trials of the Independent Field Trials Club at Bicknell, Ind, on November 12th. The youngster is said to be a very promising pointer.

We were agreeably surprised during the week to notice the improved appearance of Leon Greenebaum's bull dog Harry Lacy. The pup is only nine months old and had passed through a long siege of distemper which left him in awfully poor form. The youngster is now filling out into good shape and will very shortly come up to earlier expectations of what a typical bull should be.

The Pacific Bull Terrier Club have issued a neat little booklet containing the list of officers, etc., rules and bull terrier standard. The brochure is modeled, where applicable, after the style of the one issued by the Bull Terrier Club of America. The booklet should be in the hands of every bull terrier fancier on the Pacific Coast. The address of the secretary, R. H. Ronntree, is 422 California street, San Francisco.

The cocker fancy will note the establishment of a new kennels for this charming type of sporting dog. The Pize Hill Kennels announce Champion Guy Silk No. 39,163 in stud. He is a black cocker of excellent style and appearance and was bred by A. T. Knowlton (Nubian Kennels) of Detroit, he is by Bendigo No. 25,298 out of Mand S. II. No. 25,479. Silk's winnings are 1st New York, 1st St. Louis, 1st Milwaukee, 2nd Grand Rapids, 1896; 1st Minneapolis, 1897.

The subject of our illustration this week is J. H. Dorian's handsome young St. Bernard bitch Princess Bonnie. She is by Alta Millo (Judith's Sir Bedivere—Santa Rosa) out of Bonnie Doone (Ch. California Bernardo—Nellie Bland) and was whelped 1st January. Princess is strong boned and has a good head and body, her markings are black, orange and white. She is very intelligent, has an excellent disposition and promises to make an exceptionally good brood bitch.

Toby is by Ben Ferrison out of Belle C., and Nida is W. E. Chutes well known hench winner, a litter sister to Lady Swivel, out of N. Nemo II. The puppy is a full sister to Pilot B. and Queen Bess II., who were both winners at San Francisco hounds.

It has been definitely settled that Mr. C. D. Nairn, of Bellton, Oregon, will judge all classes excepting pointers and setters at Oakland. Mr. Nairn has judged in Scotland and the United States and has a reputation for fairness and impartiality that has never been questioned. The setters and pointers will be judged by J. W. Burrel of New York who has a strong following among northern exhibitors. Mr. Burrel has officiated at the Santa Clara shows and is credited with having done good work in the ring.

The regular prizes to be offered at the Oakland show will be: For first, silver medals; second, bronze medals; third, diploma. Silver cups will be given for the best kennels (of not less than four entries each) exhibited in the following orders: St. Bernards, Great Danes, grayhounds, collies, fox terriers, Irish water spaniels, foxhounds, English setters, cocker spaniels, hull terriers and poodles. Besides several cash specials, the Collie Club awards, it is claimed, will be the largest and handsomest medals ever offered by any club in the Coast.

Mr. C. E. Buckle has had the misfortune to lose the great pointer dog Tippoo (Ch. Rip Rap—Monteey) who recently occupied to a second attack of pneumonia. Tippoo's field record is the following: divided third, All-Age Stake setters and pointers, Eastern Field Trials, 1895; first, All-Age Pointer Stake, United States Field Trials, West Point, Miss., 1896; divided third, All-Age Pointer Stake, Newton, N. C., 1896; first, All-Age Pointer Stake, West Point, Miss., 1897; absolute winner, All-Age Stake (by default) West Point, Miss., 1897. He was whelped March 4, 1893, and owned by the Charlottesville Field Trial Kennels.

In noting the recent show of the Kensington Canine Society, England, the Stock-Keeper has the following: "Miss Menley, another lady judge, first showed us the Chow Ch'u Club's new model, which is a credit to the artistic genius of the designer, Miss Cesselle. Then this busy little lady begged us off to see the handsomest black Chow ever bred, and we promptly joined in the worship of Hak-Swby, who has a mane like an African lion. If this dog belonged to us we should want no other dogs, and his owner, Mrs. Scaremenga, seemed quite of our opinion. Presently you must come along to my tea-party says Miss Menley, 'but now let us go and see Mrs. Carlo Clerk win first with her hull dog.' Now this rally was an evanful performance. The dog was fit, the lady not over anxious at the start, and the judge demurely hesitating. But the point of the scene which attracted an amused crowd was the living compliment the lady had paid the judge in the choice of a name for her pet—she called it 'Beautiful Benjamin!' Now, what was a poor judge—Mr. Benjamin—to do in the face of such a public compliment; but for all that here was not a yielding air in his judicial expression. The silly dog badly supported his mistress and would hardly move a leg in his own favor. Things looked critical so Mrs. Clerk headed the chain to a friend, and ran in front of the master-of-fact animal, calling to it sweetly and begging it to hush her, but the inappreciative dog barely followed; the verdict was in doubt; and then the fair owner went on her knees in the sawdust, and held up Beautiful Benjamin's face to the face of the other Benjamin, who found this more than he could stand, and dash went the lead pencil with a single stroke opposite No. 64, and beauty had its reward. As for this goes it will do, but how far is it to go in the direction of coaxing nomenclature. Where will it end? Shall we have a fox terrier named 'Beautiful Astley,' a Whippet called 'Graceful Raper,' an Airedale 'Lovely Mansell,' a St. Bernard 'Gracious Gresham,' a collie 'Exquisite Thomson,' a pug 'Fair Fabian,' a Dachshund 'Adorable Jerry,' and so on?"

Eastern Field Trial Entries.

Thirty setters and fourteen pointers comprise a total of forty four nominations for the All Age Stake of the Eastern Field Trial Club's twenty-first annual trials at Newton, N. C., commencing November 17, 1899.

THE PUG—The general appearance is that of a square and cobby dog, weighing about thirteen pounds. The chest is wide, ribs well sprung, legs strong, straight, of moderate length, and well under the body. The feet should be between style of cat and hare foot, well split up toes and black nails. The head is large, round, not apple-headed, with no indentation of skull. Muzzle short, square, blunt, but not upturned. Eyes dark, very large, bold and prominent, soft and solicitous in expression, lustrous, and when excited full of fire. Ears thin, soft and small, the button ear being preferable. Mask black; the more defined the better. Wrinkles deep and large. Tail curled tightly as possible over hip. The double curl is perfection. Coat fine, smooth, soft, short, glossy, neither hard nor woolly.

Color, silver or apricot fawn. Each should be very decided, so as to make a contrast between color and trace. Markings clearly defined; the muzzle, or mask, ears, moles on cheeks, thumb marks or diamond on forehead and black trace should be as black as possible.

THE FARM.

The Profitable Horse.

The chances for the continuation of good prices and for increased prices for good horses are exceedingly good.

The horses that have been supplying the demand for the past year are simply of the surplus crop of colts bred before the general cessation of breeding of the past few years; and it would seem from the market reports that the demand is now greater than can be fully supplied for good farm raised horses. This is evidenced by the fact that western horses from the ranches which had previously no place in the horse markets are now being shipped to our eastern markets in great numbers, in fact in train-load, and these horses are selling at very satisfactory prices.

This means that the horse which is really in demand cannot be found in sufficient numbers to satisfy the markets. And it also indicates that it may be some time before it can be fully satisfied by our home raised horses. While within the past two seasons there has been a revival of the industry among breeders and the farmer who breeds a few mares, yet the number of colts now being raised will certainly fall short of supplying the full demand.

The man who is breeding now will get better prices when his colts have reached a marketable age than the man who has tided his colts over the hard times and crowded markets and is getting profitable prices now.

But one thing must be borne in mind, and that is that we are living in a progressive age and what is more, a progressive country, where the man who can produce the best article will realize the best market prices, and the man who cannot compete with him will be forced to drop out.

The people generally want better horses than they have heretofore been satisfied with, and the man who can best supply this demand will be the man who tries to breed the very best. We believe that market demands can better be satisfied with the western horse than with the inferior horse that has heretofore been pretty generally raised by the farmers of the middle west. The cost of production whether a good horse or a poor one is practically the same in either case, but in the future market the inferior horse will be a curse and a drag on the market and a very general excuse for bankruptcy among their breeders.

First, select your broodmares. See to it that they are of good, symmetrical conformation of the best class of their respective breeds, being as careful as to style and appearance as to their being physically sound. Do not neglect one quality for another. Then select a stallion who is fit to mate with such a mare; take care of your foals, feed, handle and break them carefully, and the man who follows this course is the man who will reap the abundant harvest which is sure to come.

We refer here to horses in general without reference to any particular classes of horses for different special service but the facts apply equally well whether you raise the draft, the coach or the light harness horse. Try to make your horse as good as any of his kind.—Spirit of the West.

Dairyman Get their Inning.

Dairyman need not much longer cast covetous glances at the receipts of their neighbors who make best. All things come to him who waits and the swing of the pendulum toward active trade and higher prices is carrying along with it all phases of farming. Milk-makers were caught rather late in this current but none the less surely. Butter has been advancing the past few weeks at a rate and developing a strength that has surprised a number of those who keep well posted on this trade. It is the same old story—burning the candle at both ends. That is to say, in a case of diminished supply and increased demand. When these two factors enter fairly into a problem "fireworks" generally result. A few "fizzes" have already been burnt in the butter market and more pyrotechnics are apt to follow. A prolonged drought during the late summer—even worse than is ordinarily characteristic of this period—occasioned a material diminution in the make, while the demand on both domestic and foreign account has been steadily growing.

Statistically there is a world-shortage on butter and when the increased domestic consumption is considered in connection with this fact it may safely enough be concluded that we have not yet seen the end of the advance. Beginning at eighteen and a half cents the price has risen gradually without a single recession until it touched twenty-four cents, which reaches the level of prices in 1864 and ranges from one to six cents above the prices quoted during this season in the intervening years. The strength of the situation is revealed in the fact that advancing values have not curtailed consumption. Exporters are hard after butter and in the early fall the surplus stock was cleaned up. Already there have been heavy drafts on cold-storage stocks and but for the imitation goods the price of the real article might reasonably be expected to soar high this winter. However, with the increase in the manufacture of butterine which the excellent demand for butter will doubtless occasion and with the growing output of the "renovated" or "process" butter the price of prima pure goods may not advance much further. Certain it is that without the presence of the spurious goods and the country-stored "axle grass" that has undergone a "house-cleaning" the makers of butter would just now be in about as commanding a position as the feeder of prime beef. The price of dairy cows is steadily advancing.—Brederers Gazette.

The Dairy Food.

Formerly the dairyman planted the smallest amount of corn possible for food for his cows, and depended upon grass and hay whenever possible. To-day we are going gradually more to corn and less to hay. The reason is that we can get more from an acre of corn than we can get from hay, both in quantity and quality. Corn far outranks hay for the dairyman's need if it is properly fed. Whether we cut the crop for the silo before the grain is ready for harvesting, or simply raise it for the grain and feed the stalks to the stock, we get more for our labor per acre than if the land were used for raising hay.

Corn is a wonderful food plant, and is undoubtedly the finest in the world. The ignorance of feeding the grain too freely to animals as an exclusive diet, and causing sickness thereby, does not in the least injure the real value of corn as a food. It merely shows that the true way to use the crop for food was not understood. Wherever corn does its best, oats and pease thrive also, and these crops are intended by nature to supplement that of corn. They should be raised in a limited way with corn, and fed in conjunction with it. Then the danger to cattle so often threatened by injudicious feeding of corn will be averted.

With an ample supply of corn and some oats and pease we have a standard of ration that cannot be excelled. These crops should be raised so that the dairyman need buy as little by-products as possible. The fashion has become in recent years to recommend the feeding of by-products of factories, such as linseed and cottonseed meal, and to ignore the by-products of the farm. Undoubtedly this fashion has helped the large concerns operating in these by-products, and the prices for them have steadily advanced under the demand, so that to-day when a farmer pays a good round price for a ton of any of these by-products it is a question whether it would not pay him better to buy a ton of oats or corn from a neighboring farmer at the market price.

We should learn to depend upon our farm crops for feeding, so far as possible, and with a little skill in management, it is an easy matter not to be forced to buy food for the stock. In this age of science and intelligent farming, every dairyman should know something of the relative value of foods, and of the relative cost of raising them in different sections of the country, but by the way that some neglect their opportunities and drift with the tide, it would seem as if the business of dairying was crowded with many left overs from other professions, and took to this business as a last resort. Sooner or later, such people will learn that it takes skill, industry and intelligence to be a successful farmer or dairyman.

What is Good Meat.

Poisoning by alimentary substances is so frequent, and the grave symptoms following the ingestion of tainted food are often so transitory, that their causes elude detection. Recently it has been proposed to make use of the clumping reactions, made familiar by the Widal test to determine the bacillemic qualities of meat, and it would seem that the method promises much. It may be wise to recall a few of the characteristics of sound meat. Good, wholesome meat is neither of a pale pinkish nor of a deep purple tint. It has a marbled appearance, from the ramification of little veins or intercellular fat; the fat of the internal organs especially is firm, hard and snety, and is never wet; whereas that of diseased animals is often soft and wet. Good meat has but little odor, whereas diseased meat smells faint and cadaverous. Good meat bears cooking without much shrinking or losing much of its weight, but had meat shrivels up and boils to pieces—this being due to the larger proportion of watery and gelatinous material and the absence of true muscular substance. Under the microscope the fibre should be clear and well defined and free from infusorial animalcules, while that of diseased meat is sodden as if it had been soaked in water; the transversal streaks are indistinct and wide apart, and animalcules abound in it.—Sanitary Record.

A Russian consular officer in New York actually proposes that Russia shall begin the business of sending refrigerator beef to the United States for consumption in this country "Fine beef in Russia," said he, "retails at five cents a pound. Choice prime beef, second to none to be found in any part of the world, sells at nine cents, and never goes beyond ten cents in St. Petersburg and Moscow, the expensive centers. On the ground, of course, the prices run away down below the figures quoted. The freight charges are the cheapest in the world and a man can ride 900 miles for $5. There is an unlimited quantity of cattle in Russia and its provinces. In 1892 there was a total of 37,693,000, and that number has vastly increased since, as the Russians are not a beef-eating people like the Americans and English."

Asa Morrie, an enterprising farmer of Yolo county, has contrived an ingenious device for chopping and storing hay, which is not only the handiest thing seen in late years, but is also a great labor saver. The chopping machine is of modern model. To the end of this he has constructed a long wooden box, and just where the chopped hay falls into it from the machine he has placed a blower, of the kind that is in use at most any foundry. One man can operate the whole concern and the blower sends the hay up in the hay mow, where it strikes the roof, then settles in place upon the floor. In this way the otherwise indispensable man in the hay mow is not needed and three times as much hay can be packed in a given space.—Woodland Mail.

There are several methods of finding the live weight of cattle, but the following is probably the most correct: Measure the girth around the breast just behind the shoulder blade and the length of the back from the tail to the fore part of the shoulder blade. Multiply the girth by the length and if the girth is less than three feet, multiply the product by eleven and the result will be the number of pounds. If between three and five feet multiply by sixteen; if between five and seven feet multiply by twenty-three; if between seven and nine feet multiply by thirty-one; if between nine and eleven feet multiply by forty.

A number of wool buyers who have been in this locality for sometime past together with the local firm of J. R. Garrett Co., have cleared up the market almost entirely around here. The local house bought in the neighborhood of 300 hales which they will market at San Francisco. The fall clip has been an exceptionally good one and the prices have ranged from 8 cents to 12 cents a pound. Last year at this time the market stood at from 7 cents to 8 cents.—Marysville Appeal.

J. McCarthy, a Hillsboro cattle dealer, who was in Portland last week, looks for great scarcity of beef in the Northwest this winter, as farmers and stockmen have sold their cattle down so low that very little beef has been left. The demand for stock cattle, to replenish the ranges of Montana, has been so great that Oregon cattle men have left their own ranges bare of stock in many instances. The high price paid for veal, 8 cents a pound, has also tempted farmers to dispose of their heifer calves. A two-month-old calf will dress 100 pounds, and $3 is considered a high price, so farmers have sold calves as well as yearlings and two-year-old heifers, without considering the scarcity to result in the year to come. "Oregon has to feed not only Portland," he said, "but the cities on the Puget Sound and the great mining region recently developed in Alaska. I think nothing can prevent a beef famine in the Northwest this winter."—Exchange.

Daniel Streeter of Biggs told us a few days ago that he kept a memorandum of the amounts realized from his cows during the fourteen months ending with August 1st. The number of his cows would average twenty. He sold milk to the value of $724.77, besides what milk he needed for family use. He fed milk to hogs to the estimated value of $150. He raised fifty calves in the two years and these his places at $500. This would make nearly $1400, or in round numbers $100 a month, or at the rate of $5 per cow during that period. He gave no data touching the cost of caring for the cows or the cost of feed.—Oroville Register.

The supervisors of Modoc county have passed an ordinance that should encourage the sheepmen of that county. The ordinance is to the effect that any person engaged in the business of raising sheep or lambs in Modoc county who is assessed in that county for State and county taxes on said sheep, and who have paid such tax, and who shall have obtained a license and paid for the same, shall be paid a bounty of four cents per head for each and every year, said bounty to be paid out of the general fund of Modoc county.

African and Brown China geese mate more quickly than other kinds and are the most prolific and sure breeders. Toulouse ganders are sluggish, slow to mate and as breeders are the least reliable. The hens are great layers, however, and some specimens do not offer to sit. Embden geese are more inclined to sit than Toulouse and make better mothers, but have fewer eggs. Brown China and White China geese are very prolific layers. The various crossbreeds are also of promising merit.

A milk cow requires about three times her weight of water per month, either in the food or in the form of water, and during the milking season about 4½ gallons of water for every gallon of milk. Do not stint your cows of water, better go a little short of feed if she is to be short of one or the other.

Colonel Robert Holloway's sale of Clydesdale horses held at Monmouth, Illinois, last week was the largest and most successful ever held in that section; fifty one head sold at an average price of over $500. The highest figure, $1000, was paid for Princess Charming. The total aggregated $26,000.

Hereafter if you want to locate the warcloud in any quarter of the habitable globe, says the St. Louis Republic, just notice which way the Missouri miasma is headed.

A San Francisco firm of wholesale butchers recently purchased 500 head of fine cattle in Modoc county paying $40 per head for them.

TO STALLION OWNERS!

The quickest and best method of bringing the merits of your horse to the attention of owners of both standard and thoroughbred broodmares is to advertise in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. No medium for announcements of this description is in any way equal to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, as it reaches all the breeders, owners, racing men and sportsmen generally throughout the Pacific Coast.

AN ADDITIONAL INDUCEMENT.

A SPECIAL ARTICLE, together with a TABULATED PEDIGREE OF THE SIRE ADVERTISED during the coming stallion season, will be published. This is an advantage to advertisers of stallions that is too obvious to need further comment. Owners of broodmares are now seriously considering the selection of the stallion to breed to, and advertisements that appear early will make a greater impression than if held back until late in the season.

BURLINGAME STOCK FARM.

A Thoroughbred Breeding Establishment Certain to Make Additional Fame for the Golden State—Description of the Place and Its Equine Tenants.

High in the hills of San Mateo county, and within twenty minutes' easy ride of beautiful Burlingame, lies a thoroughbred breeding establishment about which little is known at present. But I predict that within three years its name, Burlingame Stock Farm, will be upon the lips of every person in this part of the world who loves a fast and game galloper and glories in the fame of California as the place par excellence for breeding and rearing the same.

The owner of Burlingame Stock Farm is a gentleman of wealth, and his ideas regarding the breeding and rearing of thoroughbreds, many thoroughly original, will be carried out, no matter what the cost, for the pleasure of having a champion racer and a lot of galloping kings and queens come from his paddocks far eclipses in his mind any monetary advantage that might accrue. His idea is that the young thoroughbreds should be given plenty of exercise at all times, even in inclement weather, and fed oats and mashed carrots, mixed with cod-liver oil, from the time they are a few days old until they are nearing the two-year-old mark. This, with the addition of the milk of the mother until weaning time, is expected to do away with any weak baby gallopers.

In May of their yearling form the colts and fillies are sent out to gallop on the ranch track, and they are gradually speeded along and hardened until September comes. At that time the trials for speed begin, so that when the baby race are led into the sales-ring in November, buyers realize they are getting seasoned thoroughbred horse-flesh. A world of weak, flabby, vealy colts and fillies does not loom up before prospective purchaser, but instead they buy a yearling about which they have secured some idea as to its speed and ability to train on, for the youngsters have been at work for fully six months—and stood the test.

As weanlings the Burlingame Stock Farm flyers are turned into eighty-acre paddocks of hill and dale, and as they scamper and play in the sunlight that bathes this delightful spot every muscle and sinew is brought into full play. Thorough development naturally follows, and so, when the racer is fully matured, it will be able to negotiate any kind of course. As they are allowed to run out in rainy weather the probabilities are they will be as much at home upon muddy track as upon the dry and dusty one. Another point about the Burlingame Stock Farm yearlings, and an important one, too, is that not one has ever been troubled with the slightest cough. Here is probably where the cod-liver oil has gotten in its good work, making healthy throats and sound lungs.

The yearlings to be sold Nov. 14th are race horses in miniature. Their muscles are not mushy, but seasoned, and they will be far "closer to a race" than any lot of yearlings that will be brought here for sale. The speed they have shown and the weight carried in the trials are to be announced, and horsemen will not be all "at sea" over their purchases. The early two-year-old stakes run in California will be at the mercy, if not the later ones. Their speed development, extending over a period of six months, is certainly not hurried and not one of the fifteen yearlings has a leg blemish which to frighten the critical horseman intending to buy.

A short drive eastward from the railroad station up a shady lane brings one to the Corbett Farm, where the Burlingame yearlings are at present doing their paces over the good three-quarter mile track where Guy and Sable Wilkes once made fame and fortune for the owner of the place. Turning to the left, we came upon two of the babies, a bay and a chestnut, all saddled and bridled and with stable boys "up," just as if ready for a race.

The bay colt was one of the prizes of a truly grand collection, and looks enough like Sam McKeever to be an own brother, instead of being only by the same sire, Sam Lucas. The dam is the stake mare by Longfellow, Lillian Russell. This colt is a beautifully turned fellow of good size, and simply defies criticism. He has done his quarter of a mile in 0:24 with ease, carrying 116 lbs. That there will be some lively bidding for this one is certain, for besides his known speed and good looks he comes from one of the truly phenomenal racing families of America—the one that gave us a Himyar, Sis Himyar, Hēgira (first mare to beat 1:46 in a race in America), Flight, Ramadam, Oliver, Mecca, Mahomet and Medina. The bay colt's grandam, Hegiaz, by Waverly, was a good winner and a half-sister to the mighty Himyar, sire of the phenomenal Domino, Correction and many other equine notabilities.

The chestnut companion of the bay Sam Lucas colt is a racy-looking colt of good size, by imp. Brutus, from Formosa (dam of Formella and Premata), by Inangoration (son of Wildidle and Miami); second dam Beauty (dam of Nabean, Nabette and Romulus, all winners), by imp. Hercules; third dam the famous race mare Mamie Hall (dam of Viola Rea, &c), by the unbeaten Norfolk; next dam Miami again (most noted stud matron of her day in California), by Williamson's Belmont. Miami was an own sister to the phenomenal race horse, Owen Dale.

A bay colt by St. Carlo out of Franchise by Hindoo was led out for inspection. He is a substantial, business-like youngster, has flawless action, and is a ghost for speed. Horsemen will not be shy with their bids when this one is led into the ring. The colt's breeding, as well as his appearance, is hard to beat. We all know what a success the St. Blaise horse, St. Carlo, has been in the stud. Well, Franchise, his dam, was a frequent winner, and has already produced a winner in the grey Sowermere, Suffrage. Franchise was sired by the turf king Hindoo, sire of the champion race horse and sire Hanover. The St. Carlo colt's granddam, Countess Gisela by Trumpington, was the mother of the winners Franchise, Clara Bell and Personne. The family is the one from which came Gemme (the famous mare that beat Wegner), Tyrant, Delta, Gammecita, Meteor, Hennie Ferrer and all her famous tribe, including Hidalgo, Fitz James, Ed Corrigan, Don Jose and Alta up to Princess Ziska, of the present day.

Then came forth the champion racing youngster of the farm, time and weight considered—Bullock, a bay gelding by imp. Loyalist from imp. Bridget (half-sister to Nero), by the phenomenal Foxhall (winner of the Grand Prix de Paris, Cambridgeshire, &c, as a three-year-old); second dam imp. Queen Bess (dam of Nero, Foremost, Berna, Bessie Hooker, &c.), by Stretchconen. This colt took up 126 pounds, and over the ranch track ripped off his quarter of a mile in 0:23 $\frac{3}{4}$. He is a race horse sure. His head is somewhat heavy but he is compact and kept more flesh than an' through his preparation. He will be a great weight-packer.

The next picture in the equine panoply was Bilitis, a bay filly by the wonderfully fleet Racine from Muster by Flood. Muster comes from the family that gave to the world a Muta, an Orthia, Princess, Mirella, the great cup horse of England (Saunterer) and the unheaten Eonni; 'y the unheaten Derby winner, Bay Middleton. Bilitis greatly resembles the game mare Sly, winner of fifteen races in 1899 up to October 15th. As she is bred considerably like Sly, we can confidently expect this bay miss to prove a more than ordinary racer.

The bright bay filly Aphrodis, by Flembean, her mother the young mare Geneva, by imp. Cyrus, will not need any careful nursing to get her to a race, for she is in excellent shape to run right now and has reeled off her quarter-mile in the trials in 0:23 4-5, carrying 118 pounds on her aristocratic heck. The first thing that will strike judges of conformation is her great length from hip to hock, her shortness and staunchness from hock to ground. Besides she is exceptionally well-developed and looks very much like a filly that would win many a stake race in 1900. Not only is she a rare good one, on looks, but a royally-bred filly, her sire being Flembean, her dam Geneva, by imp. Cyrus (half-brother to imp. Brutus); her second dam imp. Getaway (dam of Perseng, D. J. Tohin, &c.), by Balfie, next dam imp. Goneyway, by North Lincoln.

A strong looking bay gelding is the one by imp. Mariner from Phoebe, by Grinstead; second dam the stake-winner, Phoebe Anderson (dam of Thornhill and Piquante), by Monday; third dam Florence Anderson (dam of Jim Long, Full Sail and Phoebe Anderson), by Equirer (sire of Inspector B. McWhirter &c); fourth dam Selly Anderson (sister to Novice; dam of the unheaten Norfolk, of Newry, Norwich, &c.), by imp. Glencoe.

Then Superintendent Charles Davis ordered Luca led forth. She is a filly by Sam Lucas out of imp. Chiffie, by Prism. And right here let me predict that Luca will interest horse-lovers a whole lot when she is led into the sales-ring and elicit some lively bidding before she is knocked down. The filly is a low-to-the-ground piece of racing machinery, with a great shoulder, wonderful depth through the heart, grand bones and an appearance that reminds one of the fleet stake-winner Elle Boland, which, by the way, is also a daughter of Sam Lucas. Mr. Ed Corrigan, than whom there are few better judges of thoroughbred horseflesh, fences this filly more than any youngster in the lot, and she is likely to strike many others the same way. Sam Lucas, her sire, is a young horse, but he has already begotten two stake horses in Sam McKeever and Elle Boland. Imp. Chiffie, dam of Luca, was by Prism, one of the fastest horses ever foaled in England, while her dam, imp. Petticoat (dam of Tee Gown and Pettifogger), was by the Derby-winner, Doucester, sire of Bend Or, winner of the Derby, he sire of the unheaten Ormonde, he sire of Orme, leading stallion of Great Britain in 1899.

A white-faced chestnut filly by imp. Lord Esterling (sire of Lord Weir), out of Glensir, by Bishop, was the next claimant for admiration. She is of good size, has a beautiful head and neck, is deep through the heart, has a flawless set of legs setting well under her, and to cap it all is exceedingly fleet and has grand action. This filly is from the famous "Dance family," that gave us Domino, Glidie, Lucky Dog, Bolero, Kermesse, Kirkman, Belinkeel, Reel, Sterke, Wer Dance, All Hands Around, Cromwell, Al Fresco and many other phenomenal turf performers. Her dam is a young mare, her second dam threw four winners, her third dam (Hop) was the mother of no less than ten winners, including the great Kirkman (best two and three-year-old in America in his day). The fourth dam (Waltz) threw six winners, including the famous Glidie (1 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles in 3:01 in the early eighties), Bolero (sold for \$35,000 as a two-year-old) and the stake-winner Kermesse. Lord Esterling, sire of this blaze-faced miss, is one of the strongest-bred horses in the world, being by Estarling (son of Sterling and the renowned Apology by Adventurer) from Ledy Speculum.

BRUTAL.

Chestnut colt by imp. Brutus—Forma by Inauguration.

Horsemen attending the Burlingame Stock Farm Sale will in all probability pronounce the chestnut colt by imp. Bathampton, out of I Declare, by imp. Inverness, the best of this bunch of equine loveliness, and they are probably right. The colt is small, but compact, and will be what turfmen term "a little big horse." He had a hack "as broad as a barn," shoulders of the Sharkay type and big, broad bones is his legs which indicate he will go many moons without any call on the veterinarian. As to speed, he can loan a ton or two of that article and still have a surfeit. His mark on the Corbett track, 0:23 3-5 for a quarter of a mile, with 105 pounds in the saddle, the baby galloping not by any means pushed out to his limit, shows him to be a "cracker-jack" beyond the shadow of a doubt. What makes the trial all the more remarkable is the fact that the son of Bathampton was foaled May 4th. The early two-year-old stakes should be at the mercy of this fellow. Bathampton, his sire, though young, has already begotten two high-class two-year-olds in the stake colt Sadducee (winner of twelve races) and the good winner Bathos, while the dam's family is one that gave us a King Crah (winner of seventy-nine races), St. Carols, Prince of Monaco, St. Carlo, Carnot, St. Julien and Carita. I Declare, the dam, is an own sister to the turf celebrities, Clarendon and Chatham. Clara, the second dam, was a stake-winner, that won at nearly all distances, and this, the "Black Agnes family," is one of the most highly-prized in England to-day.

The bay filly by His Highness from Peerlet, by Hanover, is about as trim-built a racing creature as one will often observe, and her breeding is exceptionally grand. His Highness, the sire, was not only one of the King of American two-year-olds, but is proving as great a sire as he was a race horse. His dam, Peerlet, is by Hanover, leading sire of America for several seasons. The filly's grandam was by imp. Periwinkle, by Mr. Winkle, next dam imp. Athansie, by Blair Athol (son of Stockwell and Blink Bonny and winner of the Derby and St. Leger in England). This royal breeding, linked to a fine individual will doubtless cause a loosening of purse strings and a flourish of bank cheques.

The dark bay filly by Potomac out of Garoga looks so much like the Burns Handicap winner, Fleur de Lis (Maxine), that her attendants have given her the stable name Fleur de Lis II. It is almost unnecessary, then, to state that she looks every inch a turf queen, and being by the Futurity and Realization winner, Potomac, out of Garoga, mother of Lauretta, a winner this season that beat Golden Rule, Flamora and others at Saratoga, should prove a filly of stake caliber that will win early and often.

The chestnut filly by imp. Lord Esterling—Banemone, by Barton, is a trim built young lady of medium size that looks as if she would race very soon. Her sire, as said before, is bred on strong "sire lines," while her dam comes from the famous "Maid of the Oaks" family that gave us Onondaga, Sensation, Susquehanna, Potomac, Chesapeake, Great Bend, Marion, &c., the mighty Gleumore, Acrost, John Morgan, Hunter's Lexington, Linden and the grand mare Guenn.

Then they led out the bay brother to Fresno, Georgia Boyd, Palestine, &c. "What do you think of that fellow?" said my host, looking admiringly at the son of Falsatto and Cachuca. Looking him over carefully, I answered: "He has a nice head and neck, a great back, a strong set of legs under him, and a lot of substance. I should say he was exceedingly promising." Of course delvers in turf lore know that the sire of this colt, Falsatto, was the champion racer of his day; that he won the Kanner, Travers and other rich stakes and was beaten but once during his turf career; that Cachuca, the dam, a daughter of great King Alfonso, was the mother of six winners, three of stake class; that she was of the world renowned "Dance family," from which sprung Domino, Kirkman, Glidelia, Ballinkeel, Starke, Reel and a host of other notabilities, and, finally, that this colt, a good individual from one of our most famous families of race horses, should prove a most worthy member.

The bay colt by Long Dance (winner of the Kenner Stakes and son of Longfellow) out of Emmeline, by King Ernest, is a very well shaped fellow, and as he is nicely bred and a half-brother to the three winners, Hawk, Ed Taylor and Emmanous, there should be but little doubt about his ability to run fast enough to win.

The chestnut filly by Falsatto, from Jersey Lass (dam of Macduff, Sapphire, Jersey Pat, Ayrshire Lass, Umilta, Ellen and Jersey Lad), by King Ernest, is a sturdy little miss with the Spendthrift mark on her belly. As her grandam, Jersey Belle, is an own sister to Spendthrift, Fellowcraft, Platina, Miser and Rutherford, no wonder the "Spendthrift mark" is present. From a family of most remarkable ability in the racing line, this strong, racey-looking filly should be an exceptional racer.

Last to be shown, but in many respects the most interesting, was the chestnut filly by imp. Ornus, from Resumption II., by Gen. Rowett. To my mind she is the pick of the Burlingame Stock Farm yearlings, being large, handsome, with a great width of lion, most substantial body, steely-looking legs, an unusual sweep from hip to hock and withal possessing a racing conformation that I have seldom seen excelled. And her breeding, too, is as "teking" as her appearance.

Imp. Ornus, sire of the filly, is by Bend Or (winner of the Derby and sire of Ormonds, Kendal, &c.), dam Ashgrove, by Albert Victor (brother to George Frederick, winner of the Derby). Albert Victor is the sire of imp. Albert, the most sought after stallion in America to day. The latter negot the phenomenal two-year-olds, Mesmerist and Maribert. Resumption II., dam of this grand filly, is by Gen. Rowett (son of imp. Intruder), and her second dam was Resumption, a winner, by Uncle Vic, one of the best sons of Lexington. The third and fourth dams threw three and seven winners respectively, and so I say that if such a good individual as this Ornus filly, and from such a noted line of winners, does not race herself, it would be passing strange.

"I don't suppose I shall realize anything like the amount I have expended in rearing these colts and fillies," said my host, "but I don't sell horses to make money, and if my ideas regarding how young thoroughbreds should be developed result as I think they should I shall be more than repaid. The future will show whether my principles are right or wrong. The spirit shown by the officers of the two Golden State Jockey Clubs is very gratifying, and the institution of these Futurity races, one to be run in the fall, the other probably in April, will stimulate the breeding interests of the Coast in a wonderful way."

Our inspection of the yearlings over, we took seats in a trap pulled by a pair of grays and was whirled to the westward, our route taking us past the station again, past the property of Mr. Carolan on the right, past that of Mr. Pope on the left. Then we drove through a wide winding avenue shaded by giant eucalyptus trees and were on the Burlingame Stock Farm, which consists of 513 acres. Our journey to the home of Magnet took us along a ridge, and on either side of that ridge, which we ascended gradually, was a canyon. Along the canyon to the right a large force of workmen were engaged building a road with a very much easier grade than the one we traversed. Reaching the top of the ridge, a magnificent view of San Francisco bay and Mts. Diablo and Hamilton was presented, and the day was such a bright one that one could easily view the surrounding country for a distance of twenty five miles. To the left of the road up the ridge were two pretty lakes.

"We don't have any strong winds up this way," said the owner of the property, "for the reason that those very high mountains to the west shield us thoroughly. I will have four barns, as you see (one is about half finished), and they contain sixteen stalls each. I have several good pumps. I place a trough about half a mile from the barns for the youngsters, so that when they desire a drink they have to travel quite a distance for it. In this way they constantly develop their muscles, for as you will observe the paddocks are up hill and down dale."

We have reached the big baby barn now, and after an inspection of the fourteen good-looking weanlings, thirteen by Magnet, one a chestnut filly by Rey El Santa Anita from Calletine, they were turned out of their stalls, the bars leading to the eighty-acre paddock were put aside, and away scampered the entire lot. School was out, and they ran well hunched up the hill as if it were nothing. In a moment the entire collection were at the eastern extremity of the paddock, playing like children. It was a pretty sight and I shall not speedily forget it. Ten of the thirteen Magnets are, like their sire, chestnuts, and nearly all had the white face and white about the feet. This angurs well for Magnet as a stallion, and as the weanlings are sturdy-looking and well-developed, considering their age, it can be called a mighty good beginning for the young son of St. Bleise.

At 8 o'clock every day these youngsters are turned out to eat their oats, and this has been the rule almost ever since they were foaled.

A half-mile track is in course of construction on the place and will soon be finished. It will be of the straightaway order.

Magnet, the lord of the Burlingame Stock Farm harem, was next inspected. He has a beautiful, roomy stall, finished in hard wood, and the great attention he receives shows in his glossy chestnut coat and bright eyes. Magnet in racing shape was handsome, but he did not compare with the Magnet of to-day. He looks every inch the King of Speed he was, and his quarters (stall and large paddock) are in keeping with his royal occupant, who certainly bids fair to make as great a sire of race horses as the Pacific Coast possesses.

To the west of Magnet's home lie the paddocks for the mares, and in the first we espied four celebrities, viz., Sunlit by Monday, Lillian Russell by Longfellow, Elsie Smith by Salvator and Viola by Himyar. In the next paddock, one of sixty acres, fourteen stud matrons were mauling the grain feed, which is everywhere in profusion on Burlingame Stock Farm, amongst them Callatine, Lucrezia Borgia, Hermanita, Tigar Lily, imp. Chiffie, I Declare and others of the same order.

The Burlingame Stock Farm has as head stud groom Tum Clayburg, formerly with Burns & Waterhouse. He is a thorough man in his business and the results have been more than pleasing. Superintendent Charles Davis was for seven years connected with big breeding establishments in England, and for nearly twice that length of time has been employed at Palo Alto Stock Farm.

The 280 acres of paddocks at Burlingame Farm contain grand feed for the horses, and no gopher holes or rocks imperil the limbs of the royal racers that romp over its rolling surface.

The house at the farm is a large, square-built one, and perhaps cost more than any residence on a stock farm in America. The rooms downstairs are exceedingly large and finished in hardwood throughout. The marble stairs leading into the house and the mantels, also of marble, are the output of the owner's own quarry in the mountains of the Golden State, and the marble is nearly the equal of the finest product of Italy. The owner of Burlingame Stock Farm has one of the most extensive "horse libraries" in the State, and not only has scores of old and costly books on our equine friends, but on the walls are more than one hundred rare old engravings and paintings of the turf kings and queens of the long ago, many of them depicted in the height of their glory, winning the race that placed them on the top-most rung of the ladder of fame.

Having observed the thousand-and-one matters of moment to one that takes an interest in the breeding of the thoroughbred horse, we took seats in the trap, and were whirled down to the station in less than twenty minutes, our team being speedy and staunch sons of Silver Bow and Director, the former an exceptionally fast and level-headed trotter.

On the way to the city I could not help comparing Burlingame Stock Farm with other breeding establishments of the Golden State, and the impression formed was that the one we had just visited certainly is more complete in every detail than any establishment in a State of great breeding farms. And with the splendid ideas of young racers possessed by the owner and good man at the helm to carry them out, one can confidently predict that before many years roll around Burlingame Stock Farm, home of the magnificent Magnat, will be world-renowned for the rapid racers that were reared within its greasy paddocks.

Disastrous Fire at Holmdel.

RED BANK N. J., Oct. 24—A disastrous fire visited the stock farm of Gideon & Daly in Holmdel, a few miles from this place, early to-day. Flames broke out in the brood mare stable, and before they were discovered had gained such headway that the building was doomed.

There were twenty-two mares and six fillies quartered in the stable, and although the stablemen and stable boys made efforts to rescue the valuable horses they were unsuccessful. The building was entirely consumed, as well as the live stock. The groaning from the horses as the flames encircled them was pitiful.

Among the mares burned were Miss Fordham, Fletting, Valkyrie, Katisha, Vague, Dear Louise, Inheritance, Shining Light, Miss Longstraat, Lou, Sufficient, Squaw, Nell Gwynna, Tarantula, Esatie, and Rosa H. It was estimated to-day that the loss would probably reach $75,000, including building and horses. The amount of insurance carried on the building and mares destroyed could not be ascertained.

Sixteen horses were safely removed, among them being His Highness, Silver Fox, The Butterflies, Carrie C., Cascade, and Alvada. All the mares burned to death had records. Miss Longstreet was considered one of the most valuable of the lot, costing $5,200. Among the saved animals was the stallion Silver Spray. All but four of the burned mares were in foal.

There was no insurance on the mares. Mr. Daly came down from New York this afternoon. George Tash, manager of the stable, said to-night that he did not know whether the stable would be rebuilt. How the fire started is a mystery, but it is the general opinion that it was of incendiary origin.

Wonderful But Expensive Speed.

The Abbott's quarter in 29 seconds was a wonderful spur but the feat of Tommy Britton and Peter the Great at Lexington, when they trotted head and head to the quarter in 29½ and to the half in 1:01½, is the greatest exhibition of speed this year, and the most expensive as it undoubtedly cost them the race.—Exchange.

True enough. But supposed one of the drivers had realized that the pace was killing his horse's chances for the race and thereupon taken him back and let the other fallow do the killing. What would have been the result? He might have been fined as much as first money was worth, and it is reasonably certain that every anti-heat-laying-up crank that has access to the papers would have written him down as a scamp and made him wonder whether he should hang from the first telegraph pole or simply rulled off for life. The fact that he could have won the race that way would have made no difference to these wise critics. They would have called attention to the fact that someone of the onlookers held a two-dollar ticket on that horse for the heat, and would have argued to their own satisfaction at least that neither the horse nor his owner had any rights above those of the aforesaid ticket holder that racing associations and judges should respect.

DEAD heats between two horses are not of so frequent occurrence as to cause them to pass without comment, but one of the rarest of occurrences was recorded in the fourth race at Dallas, Texas, Thursday, October 5th. Bulgarian 109 pounds, El Mido 113 and Hohenstaffer 109 ran a dead heat in the seven furlong dash. The purse was divided and the bookmakers had quite a time settling bets.

THERE are over 700 horses stabled at the Oakland track.

CLOSING DAYS AT LOS ANGELES.

Gentry Wins Again and Reduces Coast Record to 2:03 3-4.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1899.

A perfect day, attendance only fair, one cracking harness race, the Los Angeles Derby one and one-half miles, and last but not least (in point of value of purses hung up) the "free-for-all" (for which $2000 was the goodly sum contested for), and three running sprints was the card.

The heat harness race of the meeting was the 2:15 class pacing and the outcome was in doubt until the last quarter of the last mile. Six heats were necessary to decide it. Fannie Putnam, Dictatress, Diawood and Sophia R. came out for the word. The betting before the first heat was Fannie Putnam 2 to 3, Diawood 2 to 3, Dictatress 2 to 1 and Sophia R. 6 to 1. The results of the first heat and race will show that the bookmakers were "on" and did not give the pikars a chance to walk off with all the contents of the money boxes. There has been a considerable of kicking down here because the "bookies" would not allow the "two dollar crowd" to make the hooks as the t. d. c. desired. It does not seem to occur to these desperate gamblers (the t. d. c.) that if they did not like the odds they were not compelled to play, nor the practical fact that the bookmakers paid $7000 for the privilege of betting they could guess better than the "two dollar crowd." Notwithstanding the continued "hefts" of these desperate gamblers (the t. d. c.) the bookmakers continued on in the even tenor of their way, and succeeded in saving a part of the $7000 paid for the privilege of making books. Of course it would have been more satisfactory to the "other fellers" if the hookies had contributed their bank roll to the betting public and "looked pleased." But they refused to do so, and there you are. But revenus a nous moutons, as we say in Paris.

The first heat was a hustle and hustle between Fannie Putnam and Dictatress and resulted in an eyelash finish between them, the heat being recorded as a "dead un" Diawood going rather easy as it appeared to the judges and Sophia R. in an also-ran position just inside the red banner. Time, 2:13 1/2.

Before the second heat Fannie Putnam was slated at 1 to 2, Dictatress even money, Diawood 6 to 5 and Sophia R. 8 to 1. The heat was contested in about the same manner as the first until the last eighth, when Fannie Putnam drew away from Dictatress and was first under the wire, Diawood a had third and Sophia R. in her fourth position. The judges whispered to the driver of Diawood that it would be best for him if he hurried up a little. From the outcome of this third heat it would appear that it was arranged for Diawood to hurry and the other three let him do all the hurrying. Diawood finished first with Dictatress second, Fannie a had third and Sophia R. near by. Time 2:7 6.

The judges refused to stand for that kind of a game, declared all bets on the heat off and charged Mr. Jeffries $50 for riding so far back (and fines go here and are not remitted).

The halting for the fourth heat indicated an understanding that it would be a wise move on the part of the drivers if they hastened to the goal. And they did hasten to the extent that the new "time announcer" put up in the timing stand to-day showed the heat paced in 2:12 1/2, Dictatress doing the trick with Fannie Putnam close up and Diawood in good third position, Sophia R. just inside the red.

The betting for the fifth showed but little change and the contest was made on about the same lines, Fannie finishing in the lead, Dictatress second, Diawood third and Sophia R. still inside the money.

For the sixth heat Fannie Putnam and Dictatress were scheduled at evens and Diawood at 4 to 1. Fannie walked off with the heat and race, Diawood finishing second and Dictatress third, the latter having shot her bolt in the fourth heat. This was the best betting race of the meeting thus far.

The second race of the day was the free-for-all and the following named five appeared for the fight: Toggles at 1 to 3, Dione at 2 to 1, Prince Gift at 5 to 1, Ellart at 6 to 1 and Boodle at 6 to 1. A short description of this race will do it full justice. Toggles "won in a walk" in "three straight," Dione chasing him out in the first heat and Ellart in the second and third. Boodle got the "grand honours" for a long run just after leaving the wire in the first heat when he carried Dione wide, and "the subsequent proceedings interested the Boodle horse no more." Time of first heat 2:11, of second 2:12 and third 2:12 1/2. Toggles was more than good to-day and could have put up a good free-for-all race with the top-sawyers. Dione is not at all the Dione of 1898, but may round to for the 1900 campaign. Perhaps she has missed the guiding hand of Keating this season.

The third race was a scramble of five-eighths and Ned Dennis at even money, Steel Diamond at 3 to 2, Pictou at 5 to 1, Tanoka at 6 to 1 and Leonden at 7 to 1, went to meet Mr. Caldwell at the barrier. Ned Dennis cut out the work and stayed in front all the way, Steel Diamond second and Tanoka in third position to the finish. Time, 1:01 1/2.

The Los Angeles Derby for three year olds was next on the bill-of-fare, and Alaria at 6 to 5, Fortis 6 to 5, Rey Dal San Juan 6 to 5, Deluge 12 to 1 and Ellen Wood 6 to 1 were the aspirants for fama and the long green. The race was a good one and at the home plate Fortis showed first, Rey Del San Juan second and Alaria third. Time, 2:34 1/2.

The fifth race was for all ages, five furlongs, and brought out Amasa at 1 to 5, Jim Brownell 5 to 1, Castelar 6 to 1, Tha Millar 6 to 1, Bliss Rucker 6 to 1, Somis 15 to 1 and 20 to 1 marked up against Beaumonda and Prince S.

Amasa was the whole show and after him came Tha Miller and Jim Brownell, the others somewhere, time 1:00 1/2 within a half second of the five-eighths record of the Los Angeles track.

The sport came to a close in the gloaming with a race of half-mile heats for ponies 14.2 and under, with the regular allowances. The starters were Viola at 2 to 5, Gartrude 3 to 1, Lady Batty 4 to 1, and 6 to 1 was posted against Red Jacket, Nancy Lea and Golden Slipper. Viola was the only pebble on the beach and romped all the way winning both heats easy in 51 1/2 and 53 1/2, Red Jacket second in both heats, Nancy Lea third in the first heat and Golden Slipper third in the second heat. Most of the audience in the grand stand and elsewhere hung on until the end and there was no complaint of the quantity of the attractions furnished by the association.

SIXTH DAY.

Again perfect weather for racing was vouchsafed to the Angelenos and their guests from far and near. The Association furnished a good bill of fare for the day consisting of the stake race for $1000 for 2:13 class trotters, the epical for named horses and four running races. The public did not put in an appearance commensurate with the attractions offered in the program, evidently bent on saving their coin and their enthusiasm for to-morrow, when the second race between the mighty pacers is scheduled.

The 2:13 class was represented in this race by Neeretta, Our Lucky, Addison and Hazel Kinney. It was expected and proved to be a good race. Before the first heat Neeretta was slated at 2 to 5, Our Lucky 2 to 1, Addison 4 to 1 and Hazel Kinney 5 to 1. Neeretta drew the pole and all got away in line and level. Our Lucky went at Neeretta hammer and tongs and captured the pole before reaching the quarter. Addison showed several bursts of speed but was a little sore and faltered after each sprint of an eighth. Hazel Kinney made a bad break at the first turn and was out of the heat. After passing the half Neeretta set all sail and drew up close to Our Lucky but the effort was so great that she could not maintain it and Our Lucky won the heat well in hand, Neeretta finishing a length and a half back, Addison a half a length still farther in the rear, Hazel Kinney just dropping inside the red banner. Time, 2:13 1/2.

In the second heat the betting changed a little, Neeratta being held at 2 to 3, Our Lucky even money, Addison 5 to 1 and Hazel Kinney 6 to 1. The quartette got the word to an almost line start and each and all of them put on full steam and hustled for the home plate. Dickerson seemed to have concluded that Hazel Kinney was about due and the mare did act as if she could do the trick. It was a struggle between Our Lucky and Hazel Kinney all the mile, Neeratta busily marching along at the pole in front a little way only. Addison showed lots of speed in spots, but was not able to carry his clip far, though he went up and collarad Our Lucky and Hazel at the quarter, half and three-quarters. When the quartette turned into the stretch Neeratta was sailing along steadily in the lead, and Dickerson driving Hazel Kinney and Hodges driving Our Lucky sat down for a do-or-die rustle. Neeratta held her position and finished in front. The judges saw Our Lucky's eyebrow just before Hazel Kinney put her nose past the winning post and although Our Lucky left his feet four yards from the finish line, as he gained nothing by the break, he was awarded second position against the protest of Mr. Dickerson. Addison was close up and at all times loomed up as a dangerous factor in the race. Time, 2:11 1/2.

Before the third heat Neeretta went back to 2 to 5, Our Lucky 2 to 1, Hazel Kinney even money and Addison 5 to 1.

Neeretta went from an even start to two lengths in front before the eighth was reached and she stayed there to the end of the heat, Our Lucky and Addison making a strong fight for second place and were head and head on the back stretch, and close together at the finish. Hazel Kinney had shot her bolt and could only manage to stay in the "also ran" position. Our Lucky finished second and Addison third. Time 2:14 1/2.

Betting for the fourth heat was the same as for the third and the changes in the heat and positions during the mile was virtually the same until the distance stand was reached, when Addison rallied in one of his sprints and best Our Lucky for second position. Time 2:14 1/2.

Of the second race on the program not much need be said. The starters were Gaff Topsail, Irvington Boy, Ned Thorne and Iran Alto. Dr. Book was excused for alleged lameness, and a rumor was in circulation that he was sold or that a sale was about concluded. None of the starters were in condition. Iran Alto had no speed and the same can be said of Gaff Topsail. Whether or not the colored driver of Irvington Boy could have carried Thorne a little faster is a mooted point and the colored gentleman got the benefit of the doubt. The race was won in one, two, three order by Ned Thorne, Irvington Boy second in first and second heats and fourth in last heat, in which latter Iran Alto stepped fast enough to get second position and thus secure third money.

Altogether it was an unsatisfactory race and not worth the time and space I have used to record it. Time of the heats was 2:20 1/2, 2:18 1/2 and 2:22.

The third race of the day was four and a half furlongs, running, and four bang-tails came out for the coin. For Freedom at 3 to 1, Proclamation 6 to 5, Foligno 3 to 1 and Pidalia 3 to 2. It was an easy win for For Freedom. Time 55 1/2.

Fourth race, running, three-quarters of a mile, brought out Yule at 4 to 5, Gibbsridibbit 3 to 2, Jerid at 2 to 1, Stromo 5 to 1, Jim Brownell 10 to 1, and Artisia 30 to 1. They finished, Yola first, Stromo second, Jerid third. Time 1:13 1/2.

The fifth race, running, four furlongs, was between Amasa at 1 to 5, Tom Smith 4 to 1, Castelar 6 to 1, Petersch 6 to 1, P. F. 10 to 1, Purniah 20 to 1, Gypsy 40 to 1 and Jennie V 100 to 1. Amasa was the whole show, taking the track as soon as the flag fell and running like a frightened deer "won in a walk," Castelar second, P. F. third.

Sixth and closing race of the day was running, three quarters of a mile and Ned Dennis at 1 to 3, Steel Diamond 3 to 1, Summer 2 to 1, Cowhoy 4 to 1 and Leonden 8 to 1 were the starters. Steel Diamond and Ned Dennis put up a strong fight from starting post to wire but the little St. Carlo—Carric M. cast-off, Steel Diamond was first at the finish, Ned Dennis second and Summer third.

SEVENTH AND CLOSING DAY.

And still another perfect day for racing and still a perfect track furnished for the steeds that are to do battle thereon. Scarcely any air was stirring and fast time was confidently hoped for in the free for all paca. John R. Gentry had kept on edge and Dickerson had been very sweet on Joe Patchen's work on Thursday though he has not been as confident of the big black horse as Andrews has of the little bay since last Saturday. Than both men felt cock-sure that they had the winner, and the manner in which Keating then fought for the heats was proof that he thought Anaconda could do the trick. All over the city, at the cigar stands, in the cafes and in almost every business place one went, opinions were asked and given at the probahla outcome of the great pace. If it was to be a race for blood? If it was not Joe Patchen's turn to win? The opinion (grossly erroneous as it was and was proven to be by those who witnessed the race) that Joe Patchen would be allowed to win was very prevalent, annoyingly so to those who knew that the best horse would be the winner, and that none of the trio would be even laid up for a heat. The real disappointment and chagrin shown by Mr. Dickerson after the finish of the first heat and the mortification and ill-humor he gave evidence of after the finish of the second heat, would have been proof direct and determinate to any but a "doubting Thomas" of the most distrusting of that kidney.

There was a large crowd filling the grandstand and the club house verandas, overflowing into the paddock stand on the infield and the outfield.

The crowd was estimated at from 7000 to 9000 and the personnel of the assemblage was most gratifying to the directors of the association inasmuch as it seemed that all the best element of the city and surrounding country were on the ground and many prominent persons from the northern part of the State were present also.

The program for the day was a liberal one, and one likely to please the most chronic grumbler and pessimist.

Six races were listed for the day. A pacing race for the 2:10 class with five entries, viz.: Dictatress, Diawood, Jennie

Mac, Fanny Putnem and Floracita came first. The second was the free for all piece in which John R. Gentry, Joe Patchen and Anaconda were to do better, and four running races, one at a mile, one at four and a half furlongs, one at six furlongs, and the closing run of two miles.

For the first race all but Diewood came for the word, that good horse having pulled up exceedingly lame in his work this morning. Jennie Mac was favorite in the betting before the first heat at 1 to 2, Fanny Putman 3 to 2, Floracita at 2 to 1, and Dictatress 3 to 1. Jennie Mac went out from the word go and sat such a dizzy pace that the others, except Floracita, were just able to drop inside the distance. The time was 2:09, and when it was hung out the audience understood why the others were so far back when Jennie Mac passed the winning post. Fanny Putman finished second and Dictatress third.

There was little betting on the balance of the race, though the fast mile had taken so much out of Jennie that she had not much to spare in the finish of the last two heats which were paced in 2:12 1/2 and 2:12.

And now there was a bustle of excitement, a craning of fair (and other) necks in the grand stand and fields, in expectation of the appearance of the great trio of pacers. John R. Gentry first came through the gate, and natty Billy Andrews sat in the sulky looking as contented and confident as a cheroh. Some cheering came from the grand stand and field, but it was not so anxious, the public evidently preferring to see how well both John R. Gentry and Anaconda did their respective parts in the coming conflict. Joe Patchen, with John Dickerson driving, came next on the track, and driver and horse received a polite ovation.

When Anaconda, with Thomas Keating driving, came past the stand, the Californian received the warmer applause, as was the case a week since.

The betting down town Friday night was in favor of Joe Patchen, the black stallion selling for $8, while John R. Gentry and Anaconda, as "the field," sold for $10. Anaconda had a host of admirers who though he had a good chance to win, and they bought the field end.

At the track the bookmakers would offer no better odds before the first heat than 1 to 2 on Gentry, 3 to 5 on Patchen and 1 to 2 on Anaconda and quite a lot of money was bet at these figures.

After the usual parade and the first score (which was as usual considered "at will" but not a start) the drivers were all cautioned as to their conduct in the race and they were informed that no funny business like helping or pinching would be tolerated. On the second score John R. Gentry made a break just before reaching the judges' stand. This is the first break he had made since he came to the Pacific Coast.

On the next score Anaconda was too much in front and the recall was sounded. The fourth score found them all going level and the word was given. John R. Gentry held a slight lead, Anaconda laying on his wheel, all the way. Dickerson set down for a drive as soon as the word was given and Keating did likewise, but they could not rattle either Andrew or his game little bay stallion, and the three-quarters was paced by the three close together. When the head of the stretch was reached Keating went out well towards the middle and selected that position for his home coming.

Andrews sat still encouraging Gentry with word and hit. Not so Mr. Dickerson and Mr. Keating. The former made as furious a drive as is ever seen, and Mr. Keating did all his strength would permit to assist and encourage Anaconda. The son of Knight made a gallant struggle but was all out at the distance stand where Mr. Dickerson took Joe Patchen across the track, nearer to John R. Gentry and made desperate efforts to beat the little bay home. It did not avail, however, and John R. Gentry finished comfortably a length in front of Patchen, Anaconda several lengths back. The excitement was intense and the applause was loud and of long duration. When Andrews drove back to the judges' stand he received such an ovation as must have gratified him, for there was nothing stinted in it. The time of the heat was, first quarter 30 1/2 seconds, half mile 1:00 1/2, three-quarters 1:32, and mile 2:04 1/2.

After this heat Mr. Dickerson, driver of Joe Patchen, came to the judges stand and complained bitterly of the tactics of Mr. Keating averring that Mr. Keating drove Anaconda wide all the way (which Keating denied) and that he went out too far when making the last turn and selecting his position (vide Rule 29, Section 8 and 9) on the homestretch. This right to select position when getting to the head of the homestretch, is as old as the rules of the National Trotting Association and any driver is well within his rights when he takes the position he desires at this point providing, of course he does not jostle or sit down in front of or compel another horse to shorten his stride, etc. Mr. Dickerson's claim was disallowed and that gentleman was greatly incensed thereat.

The books related Gentry at 1 to 3, Patchen 3 to 2 and Anaconda 4 to 1. Gentry was backed off the books at the prohibitive odds before the slates had been up long and Patchen was quoted at 8 to 5 and Anaconda 5 to 1.

When the horses came out for the second heat Mr. Dickerson was told that a competent man would patrol the backstretch during the time consumed on that section of the track during the heat. Mr. Dickerson then demanded that he be heard and hea with John R. Gentry and Anaconda when "go" was said for the second heat. The promise was of course, cheerfully given and when the word for the second heat was given both Patchen and Anaconda had a neck the best of it. The two last named made a desperate break for the pole and both succeeded in putting Gentry behind them when the quarter was reached, Patchen going to the pole end Anaconda lying alongside. The two went flying up to the half end around to the three-quarters in this position, Andrews sending John R. Gentry along half a dozen lengths back at the half and three lengths back at the three-quarters. Just here Andrews concluded to push matters and he made such a drive as is seldom seen. Inch by inch Andrews drew up on the leaders and Dickerson and Jeffries (the latter had been substituted to drive Anaconda the second heat at Mr. Keating's request) made desperate efforts to stall Gentry off, but their efforts were unavailing and the gallant, game little bay stallion drew up and ahead step by step finishing a winner a length ahead of Joe Patchen and two and a half lengths of Anaconda. It was a grand heat and the applause was deafening and prolonged. The time of the heat was: First quarter 30 1/2 seconds, half 1:00 1/2, three-quarters in 1:32 1/2, mile 2:03 1/2, and again the record of the Pacific Coast went glimmering.

John R. Gentry paced the last quarter of the second mile, timed by competent man (not officials), in 28 1/2 seconds. There have been some close and exciting finishes in trotting and pacing races the past twenty-five years, but I doubt if any more exciting and mind thrilling than this. It was a fitting ending of the harness races at the District Agricultural Association's Park at Los Angeles, California, for 1899. The program of the day was finished before a very much smaller audience, fully two-thirds of the people, having seen the champions race, journeyed homeward. Yet the bettors and all-round devotees of racing remained and made business for the bookmakers much livelier for the balance of the day than it had been at any time during the meeting.

The third race at a mile and five horses came to the post. Stromo at even money, Jerid 2 to 1, Gihbertifibbet at 4 1/2 to 1, Brown Prince at 40 to 1 and Daluge at any old price. Stromo won all the way, Brown Prince second, Jerid third. Time 1:40.

Fourth race, four and a half furlongs, Windy Jim at 3 to 2, Tagalog at even money, Altara 3 to 1, For Freedom 4 to 1, Tanoka 4 to 1, Cue 10 to 1, Pictou 6 to 1 and Proclamation 15 to 1. The decision went to Proclamation. The backers of For Freedom (who was given second place) claimed he won, and the backers of Windy Jim, who finished third, made a like claim. People will differ over a "hoss race." However, the bets went Proclamation first, For Freedom second and Windy Jim third. Time 0:55 1/2.

Fifth race was running, six furlongs, and had nine starters. The Miller was the favorite at even money, San Augustine and Jim Brownell 3 to 1 each, Sea Spray 5 to 1, Petrarch 6 to 1, Somis and Gracias 8 to 1 each, Purniah 20 to 1, Beaumonde 15 to 1, Castelar 6 to 1 and Igo 30 to 1. Sea Spray won, Castelar second and The Miller third. Time 1:15.

The sixth and closing race was at two miles. Gihbertifibbet and Burmah at even money, Alvero at 2 to 1 and Ellen Wood at 3 to 1 started. Alvero won all the way, Ellen Wood second and Gihbertifibbet third.

Thus ended a seven days' meeting at which six races each day was given. Surely a liberal provision to the patrons of the Los Angeles Association. The judges' stand was officered during the week by Charles A. Willis starter and presiding judge, and Mr. John C. Lynch, Mr. T. Pleasant of Santa Ana and Mr. Hanson, Secretary of the Fresno Association, as associate judges on different days. Secretary Lewis Thorne was the biggest captain in the week's parade and President E. T. Wright and Vice-President C. D. De Camp handled some of the diplomatic business. Everything went off smoothly and on time. Following are the summaries:

During the seven days' trotting and pacing not a single "sponge-out" was had, showing there were no more than four real scores for any heat. Can this record be beaten?

Not a single start was objected to (so far as the judges were informed) by any owner or driver, and no horse was farther behind the pole horse than part of a length when the word was given in any heat.

Lightweight jockeys were so scarce at Los Angeles that in most races a number of horses carried from 10 to 15 pounds over the scale allotted them.

The Directors of the Association are so disgusted with the attitude of the Los Angeles press towards the conduct of the meeting just closed (referring entirely to the attack on the bookmakers' privileges), that they are more than seriously considering the proposition of cutting the park up into building lots. It is a pity that a few disgruntled snarlers should be able to cause so much ill feeling.

The accommodations (street car service) to the park are ample and comfortable, two lines of electric cars landing passengers at the entrance.

If other attractions besides harness racing were offered at a meeting here, it is reasonably certain a large crowd could be had each day. Perhaps "they do these things better east of the Rockies" where "Guideless Wonders," "Diving Elks" and dozens of other attractions are sandwiched in each day's programme.

Results at Ferndale Fair.

A fair was held at Ferndale, Humboldt county, September 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th this year, and it was one of the most successful ever held in the county. After the payment of pursas, premiums and expenses it still there remained a surplus of $1400, and this too without any State appropriation, as the district fair was held at Eureka. Ferndale will be in line again in 1900 and will try to outdo the fair held this year. The summaries of the harness and running races were sent us by W. H. Roberts, the very efficient Secretary of the Ferndale Fair Association, and are as follows:

TROTTING-BRED high steppers can get over the ground and go the distance. Mr. Albert S. Bigelow, President of the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Boston, recently drove his prize winning pair of high steppers, Prince Charming 2:26 and Mary Fisher, sister to Pearl Fisher 2:18 1/2, 15 miles in 57 minutes.

THE TICHEBOR trotting bred coach horses brought phenomenal prices in New York last week.

E. H. HARRIMAN, owner of John R. Gentry, Stamboul and other horses, has equipped an expedition for Alaska to hunt for the great Kadiak bear, the largest carnivorous animal in the world. He is about the same size of a big ox.

BATTLETON, 2:09½, is now owned at Memphis, Tenn., where he is driven on the road by Superintendent Jones of the local street railroad. The Hamlin received $1500 for the gelding, who, according to Ed Geers, is a perfect road horse.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Association will hold a few races over the speedway in the Park this afternoon. They say that James Chesley is likely to drive his horse Gody, by Brigadier, a half in about a minute if the weather is just right.

MYRON McHENRY, the famous California reinsman, is thinking very seriously of wintering in New York. In case he remains there he will open a public training stable and incidentally he may do a little business with the bulls and bears of Wall street.

PHOEBE CHILDERS got a record of 2:12 at Los Angeles, which fact was not good news to her owner as he wanted to enter her in slower classes next year. As the amount won in the race was only $60, the record was still more an unwelcome one.

THE two-year-old black colt Director Joe by Director, out of Joe Patchen's dam, Josephine Young, strongly resembles his half-brother in conformation and markings, but has a Director head. He is double-gated, and yet has had no handling. He is owned at Penn Valley Farm, Morrisville, Pa.

THE campaign made by The Abbott 2:06½ this season stands unequalled but for all that some of his friends go too far when they rate him as the greatest trotter which has as yet appeared. None of his races compare with the three heats in 2:06, 2:06½, 2:05½, trotted by Alix at Terra Haute in 1894.

THE year's statistics on the trotting track are now in course of compilation, and it looks as if that "industrious" young reinsman of Freeport, Ill., Mr. M. McHenry, driver of the Keating string, headed the list with $33,487, while T. D. Marsh is second with $30,825, and Ed Geers third with $27,495.

TUMMY MURPHY, who was all through the eastern grand circuit with the California horses, says those trotting horse owners are the gamest sports he ever saw, and that the manner in which they place their money in the auction pool box would give the average running horse owner heart disease.

THE horse market is booming. The war in the Transvaal is helping the matter along. Recently one thousand omnibus horses in London were impressed by the Government, the owners being allowed £45 per head, about $225 of American money. Horses from this country will be mainly used to re-instate the supply.

ALCANTARA 2:23, the great sire, has arrived at Northfield Minn., and is now permanently located for the balance of his life at Alcantara Farm, where comfortable quarters and a fine paddock to run in have been built. He seems vigorous and hearty, carrying his twenty-three years of usefulness with the air of a veteran.

BURALMA's six heat victory in the Kentucky Futurity recalls the similar feat of his sire, Boreal, 2:15½ when a three-year-old, at Lexington in 1895, when he beat Fred Kohl, Killona, and Oakland Baron, who had just won that year's Futurity, after a stubborn struggle of the same number of heats. It is a case of like father, like son.

DICTRESS paced a great race at Los Angeles and though she only got second money, proved herself one of the gamest of the game. She made a dead heat with Fannie Putnam the first heat in 2:13½, was second in the next two, won the fourth in 2:12½, reducing her record, and was second again in the fifth and third in the sixth. Dictress is all right.

JOHN KELLY, who has done so well with Charley Herr 2:10, this year, and who drove the Butler horse to so many well-earned victories in 1898, will next year have out a fine string owned by Alexander McLaren, Buckingham, P. Q. It is Mr. McLaren's intention to buy some good trotters and pacers to make up a full complement for the Grand Circuit.

THIS is the way Editor Shaw of the Hollister Bea talks about a misfortune that has happened him: "Last July we had one of the neatest turned fillies ever seen in Hollister. She was too pretty to brand, and right there was missed it. This animal escaped from the pasture, and some son of a gun in this vicinity that can't read, still has his hooks on her. Who wouldn't get mad?"

JOHN KELLY, whose relations with James Butler's East View Farm string were severed some weeks ago, will not be replaced by any of the drivers who, as Mr. Butler expresses it, are top notch and high priced; he expresses himself as perfectly satisfied with the work of Bert Shank, who was second trainer to Kelly, and who will hereafter have full charge of the Butler string.

ONE of the fastest pacers on the New York Speedway is Jubilee Wilkes 2:11½, that sold as an outclassed campaigner a few months ago at auction for $480. His owner, Chas. Weiland, offers to match him in a race of heats, over the new Empire City track, against any trotter or pacer that is now driven on the Speedway, Robert J. only barred. Up to date there have been no takers.

HENRY RUY is the name of a chestnut gelding by Copid out of a mare by Abbottsford, in Budd Doble's string at Gilroy, that comes as near being an ideal road horse as any animal in California. He is a perfect driver, has a free open gait, holds his head up and goes on about his business "without fear or favor." And in addition to all his other good qualities he has speed of high order.

THE race for trotting horses from Berlin to Totis, Anstria-Hungary, a distance of 466 miles, was concluded at Vienna, October 21st. The race, which was for a purse of $4000 was won by Baron Senft, who drove the eight-year-old American mare, Miss Benton. The distance was covered in 110 hours. The twenty competitors left Berlin October 16th at 7 o'clock in the morning. A number of American horses started.

AT the Dallas, Texas meeting the three-year-old pacing filly Little Squaw won the second, fourth and fifth heats in 2:11½, 2:12 and 2:13, after finishing a very close second in first and third in 2:10½ and 2:11½. She was unbeaten last year when she won three races, and has won eight consecutive times this season, and in her 11 starts has lost but seven heats. This filly is by Kewanee Boy, 2:23, son of Billy Wilkes.

JOHN MACKAY, Superintendent of Rancho del Paso, informed a representative of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN that the great pacer Anaconda 2:03½, would be shipped east this month and sold at auction in New York. It has been reported in "horse circles" here in San Francisco that Tom Keating had made an offer for Anaconda on behalf of millionaire James Butler of New York. We understand that the price offered was $8000, but as Mr. Haggin thinks the horse will bring more in New York he will be sent there and sold under the hammer.

WILD NUTTING, son of Wildnut and Helena 2:11½, by Electioneer, closed the season with a record of 2:13, but is much faster. He was not right during October, or he would have been sent to Los Angeles, with the idea of giving him a very low mark. He paced a trial mile over the San Jose track in 2:07, last quarter in 29½ seconds. Wild Nutting will make a season next Spring at Vioget Stock Farm and should be well patronized by breeders, as his breeding cannot be surpassed. With the blood of Electioneer, Nutwood and Williamson's Belmont he comes pretty near the ideal and crossed with Wilkes mares ought to produce something extra good.

CECILIAN 2:22, sire of the champion two-year-old trotting gelding Endow 2:14½, should not be confused with the other good young stallion of the same name. The sire of Endow is a son of Electioneer and Cecil by General Benton, and is owned by Miller & Sibley, of Prospect Hill Farm, Franklin, Pa. The other Cecilian (sire of Kilda 2:14) is by Gambetta Wilkes, and was formerly owned by C. & C. P. Cecil, Cecilien Park, Danville, Ky. Both stallions were foaled in 1889, and came from different sections of country, the one from California and the other from Kentucky. Cecilian, sire of Endow, is also the sire of Allude 2:23½, Carnage 2:23½ and Behave 2:28½, while Kilda is the only one to the credit of her sire so far.—Kentucky Stock Farm.

ALTA RIO, full brother to Chehalis 2:04½, is dead. It will be remembered that this horse broke the bones in one of his ankles while being exercised on the Santa Rosa track during the breeders meeting there this summer. He was put in a sling and the break healed nicely, but the horse soon after being let down, stepped on a rusty nail which penetrated the foot and lock jaw resulted. On Friday last he was shot to put him out of his misery as recovery was impossible. Alta Rio was a very fast pacer, and though he had no mark he was capable of a mile better than 2:12 and had been worked that fast not long before his first accident. He was owned by Henry Hellman of Hollister, who valued the horse very highly. Alta Rio was bred to a number of mares this year before he was placed in training.

J. HARMON BRUNSON of New Haven Conn., the owner of Searchlight and other fast horses, has returned home after a summer's tour of the trotting circuits of the country with his speedy animals. He said recently that he would winter only Searchlight and Dan Q. of the many horses he owns. The remainder he will sell. In speaking of Searchlight he said: "Searchlight was never in better form. The great pacer has not a strain. His legs are smooth and he never finished the season in as good condition. Searchlight is the fastest horse alive. He has always done all that was ever asked of him when he was fit. I started him a couple of times when I knew he was not quite right. In all he won about thirty races this season. Dan Q won nine straight races. He was hurt in the middle of the season, but is all right now. Searchlight has worked out a mile in 2:00½."

"SANDY" SMITH, who took care of Diana 2:09½ and Venus II 2:11½ for Tom Keating arrived home last Monday, and says he will train a string of trotters on his own account next year. Sandy drove Venus II to her record and insists that had she been just right she was the peer of any trotter on the grand circuit. He thinks she should beat 2:10 easily and away off, and believes he can get her to do it. Sandy is one of the best care-takers in the business and is reliable and industrious. He has attended training schools with Marvin, Hickok, Goldsmith, (alder and younger) Keating and others as teachers and ought to make a success in business for himself. "Sandy" acting for a New York gentleman, offered John Mackay, Superintendent of Rancho del Paso, $6,000 for Anaconda 2:03½, but the offer was refused. The great California pacer will probably go east to one of the big auction sales this winter.

DON 2:10, the fast pacer by Falrose, is dead. He contracted catarrhal fever at Los Angeles and died the day after the close of the meeting. Don was bred and owned by Gen. Marden, of Davisville, Yolo county, and was raced this year through the circuit, by Col. Crawford of Willows, being trained and driven by J. Reidy. Don was raced last year and though he won but one race in which he took a record of 2:15, he was a good second in much faster time. This year he won four first moneys where the purse was $1000 each time and had several seconds and thirds to his credit, winning about $2500 in all and getting a mark of 2:10, which, had he lived, he would certainly have reduced. He was sired by Falrose and a grander looking horse has never been seen on the circuit. He was raced in hobbles but Col. Crawford confidently expected to take them off next year and believed Don would increase his speed without their aid. A strange and unfortunate coincidence is that Col. Crawford lost by sickness within two or three days after Don's death, a full sister to that horse, that had shown speed and would have been trained next year.

 JENNY Mc 2:09.
 BOTH by McKinney 2:11½.
 LOS ANGELES meeting paid a profit.
 GENTRY holds the coast pacing record—2:03½.
 DIRECT 2:05½ will make the season of 1900 at Pleasanton.
 PRINCE ALERT holds the half mile track pacing record of 2:06.
 DR. LEEK 2:09½ will be sold at the Splan sale in Chicago next week.
 DISTRICT Agricultural Associations must determine to do away with hookmaking.
 NEARLY all the horses that were at Los Angeles came home with a cough.
 DIANE 2:09½, Venus II 2:11½ and Psyche 2:17½ have been sent to Aptos Farm for the winter.
 HENRY TITER thinks the handsome mare May Fern, 2:11½, can beat the two mile record.
 NEW YORK City is a good market for first-class roadsters and trotters, but inferior stock is not wanted there.
 THE Walnut Hall Cup has always been won by a gelding. The Monk, Nico and Ellert were the fortunate horses.
 LADY OF THE MANOR 2:04½ is getting along nicely, and it thought that she will entirely recover from her mishap.
 THE owner of Feren 2:17, the crack two-year-old filly of the year, recently priced her at the modest sum of $20,000.
 THE race is not always to be swift. Bingen 2:06½, the fastest stallion of the year, did not win a race during the season.
 THE dam of Kingmond 2:09, goes at auction next month. Dan Mahaney is more than likely to pick her up and breed her to Idolita.
 CECILIAN, 2:22, the sire of Endow, 2:14½, will be trained for a faster record next season. His present mark was obtained eight years ago.
 WHEN Blondy, by Electra, won the 2:18 trot at the late Dallas meeting in 2:13½, 2:13, 2:14, he stepped the three fastest heats ever trotted in Texas.
 MISS KATE, a bay mare by Direct, out of Fanny K. by Redwood won at Empire City Park, New York last week and took a trotting record of 2:15½.
 It is published in the Los Angeles papers that bookmaker John C. Humphreys cleaned up about $5000 on the meeting. He paid $7000 for the beating privilege.
 THOSE who have entries in the Stock Farm Expectation Purse $8000 for foals of 1899, should bear in mind that the second payment will be due November 15th.
 CHARLES MARVIN thinks that Battle Sign, by Cecilian will be a great horse next year. He trotted a public mile this season in 2:13½, before he was taken sick.
 W. L. SNOW thinks that after a good wintering Fanny Dillard will be able to make a campaign next year that will equal the 1899 campaign of her Brother Hal B.
 WHEN Charley Herr 2:10, was distanced at Lexington, it was in his 13th race of the year and it was on Friday the 13th day of October. How could he help being shut out?
 BILLY ANDREWS (4) 2:06½, by Bow Bells, the fastest new pacer of 1899 and one of the heaviest winners, retired to winter quarters at Empire Farm, Copake, N. Y., perfectly sound.
 GEERS will remain with the Hamlin's another year, and says that there have been no negotiations between Mr. Forbes and himself in regard to the training and racing of the New Englander's horses in 1900.
 J. HAHN, of this city, is the proud owner of a colt foaled in October this year, by McKinney out of a full sister to Thompson 2:14½. He arrived a little late, but by his looks he will make up for lost time when he is grown.

San Francisco, Saturday, November 4, 1899.

THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY has arranged a new stake to be called the Stallion Stake to be run at the State Fair in 1902. It will take the place of the Futurity and will be for two-year-olds. It will certainly be a very valuable stake as the conditions are so arranged that a very large entry list is assured. Secretary Peter J. Shields has sent out a circular letter with the announcement of the stake which reads in part as follows:

"I enclose you a statement of the conditions of a new stake offered by the State Agricultural Society to be run at the State Fair of 1902. The conditions of this stake are liberally framed and should receive the broadest support from the breeders of thoroughbred horses who own, or raise, or sell their colts in California. The value of stake engagements by racing colts is becoming more generally appreciated, and the extra value such engagements give them is yearly becoming greater. By nominating your stallion in this stake you render eligible for entry every foal sired by him as the result of his season of 1899. This gives the owner of such foals a very valuable privilege, as the colts do not have to be entered until their yearling form when their quality has commenced to show itself. The nomination fee of a stallion is placed at a very moderate figure and the payments of the colts thereafter entered are so arranged that the owner may very fairly estimate the ability of his colt before he has expended any considerable sum on account of his entry."

The conditions of the stake are as follows:

A sweepstake for then two-year-olds (foals of 1900), the progeny of stallions nominated by January 1, 1900. $50 each for stallions whose service fee in 1899 was $100 or over; $20 each for all other stallions, entrance fee to accompany the nomination. Foals of all stallions nominated as above to be eligible for entry.

Foals to be entered by January 1, 1901, at $10 each, to accompany nomination, when the stake shall close, end the sex, color, marks and breeding of the foal shall be given.

Further payments will be required of $15 on January 1, 1902; of $25 on June 1, 1902; and $50 additional from the starters—starters to be named and payment to be made the day before the race by 4 o'clock P. M. Payments not made as they become due declares entry out and releases subscriber from further liability. Death of nominator of a stallion or colt does not void entry.

The State Agricultural Society to add $1000 of which $300 to second and $200 to third.

The nominator of sire of the winner shall receive 25 per cent, of the second, 15 per cent, of the third, 10 per cent, of stallion subscriptions. Balance and all other stakes subscribed to go 85 per cent to the winner, 10 per cent to second, and 5 per cent to third.

The produce of stallions which have not sired a winner prior to January 1st, 1900, allowed 5 pounds if claimed at the time of entry. Stallions may be nominated by any one, the owner to have the prior right. If by two persons or more not his owner, priority of entry shall determine claim to his nomination.

Colts and geldings to carry 118 pounds; fillies, 115 pounds. A winner of a stake race to carry 3 pounds extra; of two stake races or five races of any value, 5 pounds extra. Maidens allowed 5 pounds; if beaten three or more times, allowed 8 pounds in addition to the stallion allowance. Six Furlongs.

TEN RICH STAKES offered by the California Jockey Club will close next Monday, November 6th. In this list of events are the Burns Handicap, one mile and a quarter, of which the guaranteed value is $10,000, the Thornton Stakes, four miles, with a value of $3000, the Palace Hotel Handicap, one mile and a furlong, the Pacific Union Handicap, for three years olds, one mile and a furlong, and the Gebhard Handicap, over the Futurity course, all of $2000 each valuation. Besides these are the Gunst Handicap, one mile and a sixteenth, the Liseek Handicap, one mile, the McLaughlin Selling Stakes, one mile and a sixteenth, the Naglee Selling Stakes, seven furlongs, and the Follansbee Handicap, seven furlongs, all of a guaranteed value of $1500 each. The winter season of racing in California this year promises to excel that of any previous year, and these stakes should meet with a very liberal list of entries. Address all nominations to R. B. Milroy, Secretary, 23 Kearney street, San Francisco.

THOROUGHBRED SALES will open at the Occidental Horse Exchange at 721 Howard street, in this city, on Tuesday evening, November 14th. The first sale is already attracting a great deal of attention as there will be offered at that time the first lot of yearlings bred on the Burlingame Stock Farm, and as will be seen by a description of them, which appears in this issue, together with several handsome half tone engravings, they are a grand looking lot of youngsters. There will also be disposed of at the same sale six young thoroughbreds from Hollywood, the farm of the late B. C. Holly, and a couple of youngsters, one by Morello and another by imp. Clieveden, raised at G. Pacheco's farm. These sales will be held in a splendid pavilion, seated with chairs and comfortable in all kinds of weather. It is lighted by electricity and is easy of access from all parts of the city. Do not forget the sale of the first date and look out for further announcements.

CONSIDERABLE HAS BEEN SAID in the newspapers about the many "roasts" given the race meeting at Los Angeles by the daily journals of that city, but the following from the Los Angeles Express of Monday shows that it was the bookmaking and not the association that came in for the roast: "The fall race meeting at Agricultural Park closed Saturday with one of the best cards ever given at the local track. The attendance was large, and the racing was good from start to finish. The feature was, of course, the great free-for-all pace, which was won by John R. Gentry, as on the Saturday before, establishing a new Pacific Coast record, 2:03 3/4. Some disappointment was felt over the showing made by Joe Patchen, but it is stated that the horse was not in condition. The other events were all above the average. The meeting was, on the whole, a success from a racing standpoint, and, but for the cinch bookmaking, would have put dollars into the pockets of the directors where it did not put cents. The general arrangements were the best ever had at the park. There was not a single arrest on the grounds during the entire meeting. The judging and starting were in every way satisfactory, and the comfort of the public was looked after. Should the directors do as well at the next meeting, with the single objectionable feature eliminated, there would be nothing to be desired."

The New Track at Pleasanton.

A visit to the Pleasanton race track at the present time will reveal a different appearance from that a few weeks ago. The old shacks of stalls that have seen many summers and stood the storms of winters and even threatened the lives of the valuable stock that they were supposed to shelter, have all been removed and in their place large and substantial buildings containing 160 stalls have been erected.

Last year the demand for stall accommodations were so many that many horsemen who had decided to winter here were obliged to seek other localities, but this year Pleasanton will have the pleasure of greeting all who can be induced to come.

Mr. Charlesworth, the secretary of the new association, has received numerous communications from horsemen all over the State and as far as the Eastern States inquiring for the room and conditions of the track, etc., while already nearly all the stalls have been spoken for, but more will be constructed as the requirements demand.—Pleasanton Bulletin,

At a sale of horses belonging to the estate of the late Geo. Woodward held in Yolo county this week, the old stallion Alexander Button, foaled 1877, and the sire of fourteen trotters and six pacers in standard list, was sold to Det Bigelow, the well-known trainer for $200. As Button is still a strong vigorous horse, and is one of the most uniform sires of size and style as well as speed in the State, Bigelow should be able to get a large patronage for him. There is no portion of the State where the farmers drive better looking horses than they do about Woodland, and one can seldom look along the main street of that town without seeing one or more of the get of Alexander Button.

JUDGE J. J. BURKE, who will preside at Tanforen, arrived from New York yesterday and will be in the stand today. Judge Burke is one of the most popular judges in America.

VITATO rode four races at Harlam and left the next day for California. He will ride for Corrigan this winter, and will be seen in the saddle to-day.

The California Futurity.

Last week the outlines of a rich futurity stake arranged by the California Jockey Club were given in these columns. To-day we present the announcement of the stake and the conditions. It is the richest stake ever offered this side of the Rocky Mountains and it would not surprise us if it amounted to $30,000 or more. The California Jockey Club has shown great enterprise and liberality in the amount of added money, no less than $8,750 being the sum. This stake should receive the endorsement and support of every breeder of thoroughbreds on this coast as well as those in the Eastern States. There is no doubt but eastern breeders will give it hearty support, but the California breeders should especially patronize it and enter their mares this year. Nothing will do more to put the thoroughbred breeding and racing interests of the country on a firm basis than the annual running of large stakes wherein the winners are awarded a large sum of money. The conditions of this stake are excellent. There will be no forfeits, all the payments being in cash. This is a feature that will meet the approval of those who stay in to the time of the race and those who drop out. The full conditions of the race are as follows:

California Jockey Club Futurity Stakes, with $8,750 added, for the December meeting of 1902, to close January 2, 1900. By subscription of $10 each, money to accompany the entry, for mares covered in 1899, and further subscription of $25 each for the produce of such mares by July 15, 1901, or such produce will be struck out, and a further subscription of $25 January 1, 1902, or such produce will be struck out, and a further subscription of $50 by July 15, 1902, or such produce will be struck out. All starters to pay $250 additional all of which shall go to the second and third horses, as further provided. California Jockey Club to add $8,750. The second to receive $1000 of the added money and two-thirds of the starting money, the third $500 of the added money and one-third of the starting money.

The breeders of the winner, of the second horse and of the third horse, namely the owner of the mare at the time of entry, to receive $2,000, $1,250 and $500, of the added money respectively, whether they be the owner of the horse when the race takes place or not.

Colts 118 pounds, fillies and geldings 115 pounds. Winners of $2,500, 3 pounds; of two races of $2,500 or one of $4,500, 7 pounds; of four of $2,500 or two of $4,500, or one of $9,000, 12 pounds extra. The produce of mares or stallions which have not produced a winner prior to January 1, 1900 allowed 3 pounds, of both (mares and stallions) 5 pounds not necessary to claim the said allowances at the time of entry. Maidens allowed 10 pounds. Mares may be entered by persons not their owners, the owner having the prior right. If a mare in this stake drops her foal before the 1st of January, or if she has a dead, or more than one foal or is barren, the entry of such mare is void, and the subscription will be returned. By filing any time with the California Jockey Club an accepted transfer of the produce, with its engagements in this stake, accompanied with receipts for all former payments, the original subscriber will be released from any liability as to the engagements of the produce. Should a subscriber or a transferee die before the race, the entry shall not be void, provided it be assumed by the transferee owner of the horse, notice in writing to that effect being given within three months after such demise.

To close January 2, 1900. To be run in the month of December, 1902, at the Oakland race course, Emeryville, California, out of the Futurity chute, about six and one-half furlongs. Each and every part of this purse shall be paid in cash. There will be no forfeits.

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT.

CONDUCTED BY

WM. F. EGAN, M. R. C. V. C., F. E. V. M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through these columns in all cases of sick or injured horses, cattle or dogs by sending a plain description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified.

Question—(1) I have a colt three years old cut across for arm, it has nearly all healed up but the skin drops down and is leaving a bunch. Can the bunch be reduced, and what the treatment? (2) Have a horse that scratches himself and the hair comes off in spots as large as a five cent piece especially on shoulders, breast and head, mane falling out. What will cure him? (3) Have a two years old colt that has something like scratches causing his legs to swell and leaving sore spots that will not heal. What will cure him?

Answer—(1) If the piece of skin be large and prominent it should be cut off and the wound treated with ordinary antiseptic treatment. If this would leave a large blemish that piece of skin may be dissected away from the flesh underneath, the original wound made fresh and the lips of the wound drawn together with suture of stitches. Then treat as an ordinary wound, using an antiseptic such as carbolic acid, in the wash used on it.

(2) Apply the following mixture every third day for two weeks: Oil of tar 2 ounces, sulphur 4 ounces, linseed oil pint. Wash the stalls and places that the horse has been rubbing against thoroughly with carbolic acid and wash one part to 500 of water.

(3) Apply the following lotion to the parts daily, and bandage the legs, using absorbent cotton over the sores. Do not wash the legs.

Lotion—Carbolic acid one dram, Goulard's Extract one pint. Mix and apply daily.

TANFORAN PARK OPENS TO-DAY.

Western Turf Association's New Track Ready for the Auspicious Event.

It is to be hoped that Old Sol will "rise to the occasion," this morning, and that the beams from his smiling face will fall upon San Francisco and San Mateo counties, that there may be nothing to mar the opening of the magnificent new race course just built by the Western Turf Association close to San Bruno station, twelve miles from this city on the Southern Pacific main line to San Jose.

The Western Turf Association is an organization of gentlemen who have the very best and highest interests of the grand sport of racing at heart, and in all their preliminary work of organization and preparing a track and grounds they have constantly had in mind the idea of a course where first-class racing could be conducted for a limited season and be patronized by the best people of the State. Organization was had in May of this year, and two hundred acres of land secured just north of San Bruno station in San Mateo county, from the South San Francisco Land Company. Work was commenced in July and though the time has been short for Burke will be the presiding judge. Mr. Burke is a well known racing authority and his selection is looked upon as being particularly fortunate for the success of the new track. With him there will be Edwin F. Smith, ex-Secretary of the State Agricultural Society, and Harry Kuhl as associate judges. J. F. Caldwell, the veteran horseman, will officiate as starter, a position in which he has served creditably in past years. E. T. Power will be patrol judge, and R. J. Havey and Ralph Tozer will be timers. The stewards will be Joseph C. Simpson, J. C. Kirkpatrick, Charles L. Fair, J. J. Moore and W. J. Martiu.

The management intends to offer only high class races, with liberal purses and stakes. A three quarter-mile straightaway course has been constructed in addition to the regular track.

The local trains of the Southern Pacific Company run to the track in thirty-five minutes and there will be special trains to make the trip in twenty five minutes.

An attractive program has been arranged for the opening day and it promises to be a program of unusual interest.

Some fast races may be looked for when the gate goes up at Tanforan Park.

The races are announced to commence each day at 1:30.

Keating Given a Reception.

The people of Pleasanton never let T. E. Keating go or come with his string of harness horses, that they do not give him some kind of a "send off" to let him know how they appreciate his many excellent qualities and the good he does the town by making it his training headquarters. The following from the Pleasanton Bulletin gives an account of their treatment of Mr. Keating last Monday:

"Monday was another day when the many friends of Tom Keating rejoiced to see him alight from the morning train and greet his old friends and acquaintances again.

Quite a crowd had gathered at the depot and as the train pulled in bringing back to Pleasanton the champions and world heaters of harness horses, every heart filled with joy at the scene and a general outlook was made for the great favorite amongst the turfmen.

As Mr. Keating alighted and walked toward the crowd a general rush was made to greet him and hand shaking for some moments was in order together with tidings of congratulations.

A large bouquet of beautiful chrysanthemums was presented him while each of his close friends wore the flower on their coat.

In the evening a grand banquet was tendered him under the supervision of D. F. Tillman and which will long be remembered upon the pages of history.

Long tables were set in the Weillhye building and were spread with every delicacy of the season, nothing being found wanting.

Over the entrance was a beautiful arbor of tules intermingled with chrysanthemums of different hue, the whole thing being ornamented with lighted Christmas candles, which presented a most beautiful and striking scene, while in the center was the large portrait of Anaconda.

On the south wall hung the portrait of Searchlight, surrounded by the wreaths of evergreens and flowers while over it was burning an electric searchlight.

On the north wall was the portrait of Klatawah surrounded with palm fan leaves and chrysanthemum blossoms hung about in clusters.

About 9 o'clock the many invited guests sat down to feast and give toasts after toasts upon the excellent showing and safe arrival home of Mr. Keating and his famous horses.

After sometime of enjoyment in feasting etc., C. L. Crellin wrapped for order and in a few remarks of welcome finally called upon each one present for a few remarks.

As each name was called the response came promptly and all were more than appropriate to the occasion.

Those present were: Tom Keating, Bob Boyer, Norman McLeod, Fred Sargmester, Wm. Murray, Johnny Blue, C. S. Graham, C. L. Crellin, D. C. McNally, John Aylward, C. B. Charlesworth, W. A. Fortescue, J. B. Hortenstine, J. H. Neal, G. W. Detjents, A. W. Feidler, Chas. Griffith and Geo. A. Davis.

The Thoroughbred Sale, November 14th.

The magnificent lot of thoroughbreds described by Mr. Ralph Tozer on another page of this issue, are to be sold at the Occidental Horse Exchange, 721 Howard street, Tuesday evening, November 14th. This promises to be one of the greatest sales ever held in California, for besides these royally bred ones are at least twelve others, six are from the estate of B. C. Holly and were bred by that successful breeder of race horses. It includes all that remains of his splendid collection. Among them are four by El Rayo, that great son of Grinstead and Sunlit (dam of Morinel, etc.). El Rayo is the sire of Horton (the only one of his progeny started). These youngsters are out of famous race mares bred in the purple and were reserved by Mr. Holly to form the nucleus of a stock farm second to none in California. There is one, a filly by that grand race horse Libertine, out of that great race mare Minnie Elkins, and another by Major Ban, out of Francesca, by Three Cheers.

They are all fine looking and "hard as nails," having the finest of feet and legs, and are bred to "go the route."

There will be the Morello three year old gelding Aditos. His dam is the dam of Masero, a frequent winner, and she is one of the best bred mares in California. The other is a filly by imp. Clieveden, out of the dam of Miss Pollard and Torhio, both winners on our tracks.

Everything will be done to make this sale a success. Catalogues are ready for distribution and on the night of the sale in the big pavilion beneath the electric lights we expect to see the energetic proprietor and well known writer, Wm. G. Layng, score another to the long list of successes which has attended his efforts in giving horse owners and buyers and their friends a splendid place wherein they can attend sales with comfort.

Fereno (2) 2:17, is not for sale. Mr. Harkness has been offered $10,000 for her, but declines to even put a price upon her.

There were a great many good performers representing Anteo 2:16 1/2, the dead son of Electioneer, on the turf this year.

GRAND STAND AT TANFORAN PARK.

such a stupendous undertaking those who visit the place to-day will find a completed track and splendid buildings all finished with perhaps a few spots where the painters have been delayed on the outside work by the weather.

The new park is situated in a favored locality between the San Mateo county hills and the bay shore. It is just across the line from South San Francisco, and is twelve miles from the city, being reached by the Southern Pacific Company's trains and the cars of the San Francisco & San Mateo Electric line. The Southern Pacific has under process of construction the bay shore line, which will run directly past the track, bringing it within a few minutes' ride from San Francisco.

Very little grading was required to complete the track which is the regulation oval with the addition of a straightaway of six furlongs for the two-year-old races to be held over. Experts say the soil is almost perfect for the use to which it has been dedicated and expect it to be very fast when the weather permits.

The grand stand, a view of which is shown herewith, is probably the most complete building of its kind ever erected in the United States, as an effort was made in its planning and construction to adopt all the good features of others and eliminate those that are bad. The architects have succeeded in their efforts and the verdict of the public will certainly be that it is the most comfortable, the most convenient and the best seated grand stand in America.

F. H. GREEN, Secretary and Manager, Western Turf Association.

The officers of the Western Turf Association are gentlemen well known in the business community. Mr. W. J. Martin is President, Chas. F. Gardner Vice-president and F. H. Green Secretary. Among the stockholders are such men as Henry J. Crocker, Daniel Meyer, E. N. Lilienthal, of this city; Julius Erkerenkoter, of Redwood City and William Rehberg, the well known capitalist of San Mateo county. At least $100,000 has already been spent on the Tanforan Park property and that much more will be expended within the next few months in a club house, additional stable room, etc.

Realizing that to have high class racing, good purses must be given to attract the best horses, and first class men must occupy the various official positions, the association will give no purse of less than $400 (and there will be one of $500 each day during the season), and has appointed the following gentlemen to fill the various offices at the track: Joseph L.

Trains will leave the Third and Townsend street depot at 10:40 and 11:30 A. M. and the special trains at 12:40, 12:50 and 2:45 P. M., returning immediately after the last race and at 5 P. M. Single round-trip tickets are to be sold for 40 cents. Holders of Association badges will be given a twenty-four-ride coupon ticket, limited to thirty days, for $3.50. Round trip tickets, including admission to the track, will be sold for $1.25. Coupons will be given out on the trains going from San Francisco to Tanforan, and for those holding complimentary tickets and living south of Tanforan will receive their coupons at the gate.

Handicapper Brough has announced the following weights for the two handicaps to be run to-day at Tanforan Park. Declarations were due yesterday after this paper had gone to press, but it looks as though the weights have been so nicely adjusted that there will be a large percentage of starters in both. The hurdle race should be particularly interesting as it is the first jumping race of the season.

Will Race on the Speedway.

Weather permitting there will be three races on the Park Speedway this afternoon between named horses belonging to members of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association. The races will begin promptly at one o'clock, and all will be three-quarter mile heats, best two in three, as there is not room for scoring at the mile distance. The entries for the races are as follows:

First Race—G. W. Kleiser's Alta Vela, J. Chesley's Goldy, N. Hottua's Correct, J. Curley's Prince C.

Second Race—E. Stewart's Billy McKinley, J. C. Ohlundt's Harvey B, J. C. Kirkpatrick's Azalia, M. Reardon's Sir Ahholt.

CHARLES P. DAWSON, of Salinas, has sold to B. Van Bokkelen a five-months-old brown horse colt by Boodle, out of Kate, by Carr's Mambrino. The youngster is a full brother to Valentine Boodle, the horse recently bought for $2500 from E. P. Jessen by Mr. Van Bokkelen for the millionaire horse fancier C. Devereaux, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Ab Stemler is due to arrive to-day and will probably bring with him several eastern horses to race during the winter.

GOLDEN RULE will not be raced until the spring and should be a hard one to heat in his three-year-old form.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Eldred Kennels announce Dash Antonio in stud.
We would like to hear from some owner or breeder who has for sale a black and tan toy terrier dog about one year old.
John Grace Jr. has been appointed judge of coursing for San Mateo Coursing Association to succeed C. J. Jerome, who resigned.

Chas. M. Fisher's English setter bitch White Wings is due to whelp to Verona Kennels' Iroquois Chief. This breeding should produce a good "nick."

Captain Charles Merry's Orpheum Lass, one of the best greyhounds that ever ran in Southern California, died last Monday, while whelping. The Lass for many months was invincible while coursing at Agricultural Park, and won as much money for her owner as any dog on the field. She was a typical greyhound, and it is to be regretted that she leaves none of her produce behind. While no price has ever been put upon the Lass, her owner has refused several offers of $500 for her, and it is doubtful whether $1000 would have bought her.

Kennel Registry.

A. C. Drayner's English setter bitch Lucy D. (Tray Spot—Hazel C.) to R. Oxnard's Merry Monarch, October 17, 1899.

Trout fishing in the various streams of Sonoma valley has afforded great sport for the local anglers the past week, says the Index Tribune. The recent rains have raised all the streams and trout in large numbers are running up Sonoma creek and its tributaries. This is the first season in many years that the early rains have set in before the close of the trout season and in consequence a treat has been in store for the past week for the local fishermen. Bert Jones of Santa Rosa, caught 110 of the speckled beauties varying in size from six to ten inches in Sonoma creek Monday. In Lower Santa Rosa creek Al Johnson caught forty-six in excellent condition, they all measured from seven to eight inches. Good catches have also been made in Geysler and Mark West creeks.

Quail Season Opens.

The opening day of the quail season last Wednesday saw many sportsmen afield with dog and gun carefully working favorite haunts of the birds in the bay counties. Marin county was by all odds the choice of the majority, although in many heretofore good shooting grounds the birds by reason of the rain had taken to the heavy cover afforded by the hills and working them was found rather difficult for both hunter and dog.

Point Reyes and vicinity was visited by Frank Maskey, Harry Golcher, Frank Vernon, Dick Itgen, "Fatty" Peterson, E. G. Rodolph and others. Several of the gentlemen devoted two and three days to the sport with fair average success. It was noticeable that the number of birds to the various parties were considerably less than the averages of last year. Many members of the Country Club and Tamalpais Gun Club were afield early and enjoyed good shooting. W. S. Kittle, Aleck Hamilton, Dr. Da Marville, Fred Butler, Frank La Coste, Billy Brown and others bagged the limit.

The Olympic and Empire Gun Club members propose to open on the quail frequenting their club grounds to-morrow. The indications are good for limit bags. Returns from San Mateo, Alameda and Santa Clara counties had not been received in time for this issue. Livermore papers report an abundance of quail near that burg.

At the Traps.

Rain clouds gathered over Redding Sunday, but the storm king was with the sportsmen and the long anticipated and once-postponed tournament was over before the showers began to fall.

The success of the shoot established the ability of the Mount Shasta Gun Club to handle big events as they should be handled, and furnished a day of royal sport to a crowd of sportsmen who revel in the crack of a gun. Sacramento, Marysville, Chico, Cottonwood, Red Bluff, Wheatland and Redding were represented by teams.

Perhaps the most important prize contested for was the championship of Northern California, a silver cup given by the Gold Dust Powder Company. The cup was won at Chico in the spring by M. E. Dittmar. The cup remains in Redding thanks to the skill of William A. Schroter.

The shoot for this cup at twenty blue rocks was the first event. Of the shooters Barham of Chico and Schellhorn and Schroter of Redding, scored highest with seventeen each. The tie was shot off at ten targets, Schroter breaking eight and each of the others seven. Two thirds of the entrance money went to M. E. Dittmar and one-third to Schroter.

The championship of Northern California medal, formerly held by Frank Rnstaller Jr. of Sacramento, was won by Editor Durst of the Wheatland Four Corners. Of the twelve live birds shot at Epperson of Red Bluff, Hotchkiss of Yuba City and Durst of Wheatland each made a full score. In the shoot-off Epperson dropped out on the fifteenth bird, Hotchkiss on the twenty-sixth and Durst won by bringing down his twenty-seventh.

The third event was at twenty blue rocks for cash prizes. Hotchkiss and Richards of Chico divided the $50 prize, with nineteen each; Durst won the $20 prize with seventeen breaks.

In the team shoot for the championship cup of Sacramento, Chico, Red Bluff, Wheatland and Redding entered teams of four men each. Sacramento won the cup for the second time with forty out of sixty targets, Red Bluff was second with thirty-eight, Chico and Redding scored thirty-seven and Wheatland thirty-four.

The pool shooting was participated in by a large number of the gunners.

The visitors were much pleased with their day in Redding.

Game Hogs at Work.

Under the above caption the regular Coronado correspondent of the Los Angeles Times in a dispatch dated the 24th inst. makes the following statement: "Another murderous raid upon the ducks at Otay dam was made last Saturday. The party left San Diego Friday evening, and spent the night at E. S. Babcock's residence at Otay. A start was made at 6 o'clock Saturday morning, and at 8 o'clock 500 dead ducks were counted as the return for two hours of gunning. A few more rounds over the reservoir followed, and at 1 o'clock there were 1835 ducks ready for the return trip to town.

"During the second round E. A. Hornbeck providentially received a full charge of shot intended for the ducks, that peppered his face and neck pretty thoroughly. Last Saturday's hunters included A. Reynolds, President of the Cuyamaca Club; A. E. Hornbeck, Superintendent of the Otay Railroad; N. Nichols of Nichols & Co. (sporting goods dealers), F. C. Ecker, of the San Diego Cycle Company, J. E. O'Brien of the Brewster, C. W. Morgan of the telephone company, Mr. Noyes of National City, C. B. Daggett, Henry Seybold and E. S. Babcock of the Coronado Hotel. The club's regular weekly slaughter is set to take place next Saturday."

The San Diego Sun in its issue of October 5th had the following: "There was some shooting at Otay reservoir yesterday, which, according to the evidence of several hunters, whose testimony was taken separately, broke the world's record, so far as known. The hunting party was composed of E. S. Babcock, Henry Seybold, George and Fred Garrettson, Nate Nicols and Dr. Barnes. The sport began at 6 A. M., when the hunters entered boats on the reservoir and pulled from one end of the lake to the other. On the first trip over the water they brought down 700 birds, the trip occupying one hour and a quarter. Each man had two repeating shotguns, and was thus able to fire twelve shots without reloading. Two more trips over the lake were made, and the total was brought up to 1500 birds."

San Diego county is rapidly making an unenvied record as the champion district for the wanton and unnecessary destruction of game. Last year the ordinance prohibiting the shipment of game was temporarily suspended and nearly 4000 dozen of quail were shipped to market from San Diego city. Many of these birds were trapped and thousands of them were kept away from the water holes for a day or two and then when the birds, almost perishing with thirst, were allowed to swarm in to the water, the hunters in ambush used their "pump guns" in literally mowing the poor creatures down.

In the light of the above experiences we will again call attention to the pernicious results created by the indiscriminate use of the repeating shot gun.

A general prohibition of the use of the game slaughtering "pump gun" and an individual limit of the day's bag seems to be an imperative necessity if wild game is to be protected and propagated in this State. Argument has been made that if a limit on the bag prevails it is a matter of indifference as to what kind of a gun is used by the hunter. This is an assertion that will not bear the light of investigation—we know of many instances where a hunter has put in shot after shot at a flying bird, the last one at a range which no real sportsman would think of firing; in this reckless style of shooting many quail and ducks are wounded only to make their escape and die miserably. Out of the total of 3335 ducks killed in the two days' slaughtering above noted the number of wounded and unretrieved birds must have been proportionately large.

We refrain from making any comment on the individual performances of the shooters mentioned in the foregoing clippings, it might be construed as "casting pearls before swine."

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Tom Lewis proposes to devote next week to duck shooting in the Reclamation district. He will make Klevesahl's comfortable ark his headquarters.

Paul Keller, H. Justins and W. J. McLean had a good day's shoot last Sunday near Brentwood, and brought home twenty ducks, mostly sprig and widgeon.

Results on the Alameda Gun Club preserve on Petalume creek last Sunday were not noticed in the shape of large bags brought down on the train by members who were out shooting.

Sprig and mallard ducks are said to be very plentiful near Knight's Landing, Yolo county. The overflow from the American river has created an abundant water supply on the tule feeding grounds.

Upper Klamath Lake, in Klamath county, Oregon, is described as a veritable sportsman's paradise. Curlew, plover, geese and ducks of all varieties make their hatching ground near by, during the open season they abound in countless numbers and afford sport royal for the man with a shot gun.

A number of the members of the Empire Gun Club went to Black Point and shot on the preserves of the club. Very good bags were made by several of the members. Among those who hunted were Dr. Parent, Frank Bowers, George Morse, Curtis Baird, W. A. Searles, J. Peltier, Dr. Cornwall H. A. Bauer and J. E. Haner.

Thbbs Island keeps up its reputation for canvashack shooting. Last Saturday and Sunday Bert Foster, Lonis Weiman and Harry Nicholls made a combined bag of 150 birds. The birds were not in the pink of condition by reason of their long flight from the north. The wild celery growing on the island is a great attraction for "cans."

Flight shooting in some localities on the eastern bay shore was fairly good last Sunday. W. Schendel and John Potter bagged a fair string of teal at Mowrvs. Dr. Lane and C. Shaw had better luck than usual at the Willow Lodge preserve, bagging together some four dozen sprig. Other hunters who shot as far south as the Bridges made fair bags of ducks now and then supplemented with a string of curlew, plover and rail.

Jules Bruns, John Karney, Pete McRee and Billy Murdoch prospected the Sears Point district for cans last Sunday with but poor luck. They worked on the big slough near Thbbs Island for the canvashack flight, but the birds were too wary, flying high on their way in to the feeding grounds from the bay. When leaving the wild celery ponds and creeks they keep out of gun range until they reach the waters of the bay and temporary safety.

One of the best shoots recorded for last Sunday fell to the lot of Jim Maynard, Dr. E. N. Ayres and Jack Kohn. They went up the San Joaquin river near Brentwood intending to shoot ducks, but finding a likely snipe spot at a point on Old river, upon investigation they discovered a numerous colony of "Englishmen" which they lost no time in naturalizing. They made the record bag of English snipe for the season, bagging just eighty birds. Dr. Ayres on one side of the patch struck an admirable place, being in fine shooting form. Jim Maynard watched him bag seven or eight birds in masterly style and in very short order. The shooters tried to mark the fallen snipe in the tules, but their two pointers Thom and Nana did the retrieving, it being impossible to mark so many snipe in so short a time, notwithstanding the crimson evidences of dead birds shown by the weeds here and there. The party also bagged a good string of ducks.

The Game Law.

The synopsis of the game laws appearing below and published in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for several years past has, from time to time been changed or the provision of new ordinances added thereto by reason of the many and various changes in the county game and fish laws, particularly those of recent date and of application in and around the bay counties.

This synopsis has been frequently copied (in more or less garbled and incomplete form) and quoted by city and interior journals and has also been printed and distributed by business houses. While the information given at the date of its issuance was substantially correct, we do not care to be held responsible for the circulation of old matter that is now incorrect in many details. Some complaint has been made in this respect and to avoid misunderstanding in the future it is suggested that for information of this character a reference be made to current numbers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for the latest and most complete data concerning the Game Laws.

THE last of the get of that great race horse and most successful sire, Hanover, ere sixty in number, of which thirty-eight colts and twenty-two fillies. Of the colts eighteen are chestnuts, twelve bays, seven browns and one hey or brown. The fillies are nine heys, nine chestnuts, two browns and two are hay or brown.

FRED FOSTER should arrive this week with what is left of his string of racers. Yellow Tail is among them, and now that he has run five furlongs in 59 1/2 seconds, he may be considered worth a part at least of that $10,000 he cost his present owner, but he will have to do more before the public will think him a full value horse.

THE judges have warned the stable of J. S. Gibson away from the track. George Howson, the trainer of the stable, has been denied the privileges of the track, and Jockey Coburn has been ruled off. The horses involved are Snips, February and Alaska. The great improvement shown by Alaska Tuesday caused the judges to act.

THE first sale of thoroughbred yearlings for the winter season will take place at the Occidental Horse Exchange, November 14th. A number from the Burlingame Stock Farm and a half dozen youngsters bred by the late B. C. Holly will be sold. Among the latter is the first of the get of the speedy Libertine, a filly out of Minnie Elkins.

NAGLEE BURKE and his trainer, Kentucky John, are to be commended for the first class condition in which they have sent their horses to the post. Festoso, El Estro, Code, and Rosemonde have all been in perfect condition when they made their first start. Rosemonde has filled out and is a grand looking mare. In her first start on Saturday last she picked up 116 lbs. and ran an impressive race, and on Thursday was only beaten a head by Chihuahua in a five furlong race in 1:01 1/2 over a slow track.

SUBSCRIPTION
THREE DOLLARS A YEAR

THE highest priced harness horse of California breeding sold this year is Anaconda 2:03 1/4, whose picture is shown above. He was purchased a few days since for $10,000 from his breeder, J. B. Haggin, of Rancho del Paso, by James Butler of New York owner of Direct 2:05 1/2, Klatawah 2:05 1/2, Directum Kelly 2:03 1/4 and many other fast ones. Anaconda was not in racing condition when this picture was taken by Hodson, the well known photographer of this city, and trains down much thinner than he shows here. He is by the Rancho del Paso stallion, Knight 10,557 by Woodford Wilkes, whose dam was China Wilkes by Adrian Wilkes and second dam Mambrino Queen by Mambrino Patchen. Anaconda's dam was the Haggin mare by Algona, sire of Flying Jib 2:04; second dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr.

Anaconda started nine times on the Eastern Circuit this year, was five times first, three times second and once third, winning $7225. At Los Angeles he started twice with the two champions, Joe Patchen 2:01 1/4 and John R. Gentry 2:00 1/2.

He was second in the first race and third in the other. He is considered one of the fastest pacers in America to day and has been to the half mile pole in less than a minute. As a prospective money winner next season Anaconda is rated among the first and it is almost certain that in Keating's hands he will reduce his record.

SAN JOSE HORSEMEN WANT TO RACE

A Big Jubilee to be Held in December at the Garden City.

The citizens of San Jose are to hold a big jubilee in December, during which they propose to celebrate the 50th anniversary of something or other, and when the Santa Clara Agricultural Society last August decided to declare off its fair and race meeting, the Directors concluded they would hold the same during this jubilee week if possible. Quite a number of California horsemen have been keeping their trotters and pacers up and in shape to enter them at this meeting should it be given, and there is no doubt but a good entry list could be arranged if a good program of races were made up and advertised. The San Jose Herald, the leading daily of that city, is taking a great interest in the matter and is doing all in its power to arouse the people of that county to a realization of the importance of holding a race meeting next month.

With the object of gleanings all the information possible as to the character of the coming meeting, a Herald reporter visited Agricultural Park last week and had an interesting talk with C. F. Bunch, the popular trainer of the Vendome Stock Farm Stables, and manager of the San Jose track. Bunch has had charge of the San Jose track for a number of years and is an enthusiastic trotting horse man. He now has a number of fine animals under training, many of which he will start at the coming meeting if suitable races are gotten up.

"We should have an excellent meeting this year," said he, "and if it is properly advertised I think we can attract here the best horses in the State. Our grounds have been neglected to some extent of late, and the track is not in first-class condition at present, but a little time and labor will put both in perfect order. The San Jose track is conceded to be a fast track, and with the class of animals that I expect would be brought here next December we should break a number of Coast records. We have an exceptional lot of high class trotters and pacers here at the track now, and I am confident that if the proper interest is taken in the arranging of the program for our races, such men as A. B. Spreckels, Frank Covey of Palo Alto Stock Farm, and other equally well known horse owners and breeders would send their horses here. In fact, I have already been informed that Mr. Spreckels has expressed his willingness to send several of his best trotters here if suitable races are arranged and the proper class of horses start."

"There should also be a big list of premiums offered for two year old colts and fillies and mares with foal. This is one of the most important features of a fair. There are dozens of two year old colts and fillies here whose breeding is second to none, and San Jose breeders and others would take great interest in the competition."

A visit to the different stables at the track discloses the fact that there are many high class horses now being worked here and San Jose owners should be at least close up at the finish in most of the events, no matter how swift a pace is set.

In the Vendome Stables' string the star performer is the celebrated trotting stallion Iran Alto 2:12½, by Palo Alto 2:08½, dam Elaine 2:20, by Messenger Duroc, out of Green Mountain Maid. Other high class performers are Dr. Frasse 2:12½, by Iran Alto, dam Lindo, by Guy Wilkes, 2:15½; Vendome, a full brother to Dr. Frasse, which has trotted a mile in a trial heat in 2:28 as a two year old; H. J. Agnews, two years old, by Iran Alto, dam Twenty Third by Director. This colt is entered in stakes to the amount of $10,000 next year.

Hostetter and Montgomery's stallion Boodle 2:12½ is also being trained by Bunch. Boodle is by Stranger, he by General Washington, out of Goldsmith Maid. His dam is Bride, by Jay Gould 2:20½. Boodle, besides possessing exceptional qualities as a trotting horse, is a very successful sire. Ethel Downs 2:10, Thompson 2:14½ and Valentine, with a record of 2:30 as a two year old, are on his list. Valentine is one of the most promising colts on the circuit to-day, and his owner, A. C. Devereaux, of Cleveland, Ohio, recently refused $15,000 for him. He was taken East last spring by B. O. Van Bokkelen and started in the Oak Hill cup race at Lexington, which was won by Alvinza Hayward's Ellert 2:11½, and after the race he was bought by Mr. Devereaux for $2500.

Mr. Van Bokkelen has at the San Jose track several horses, among which are Stamboulette 2:10½, by Stamboul 2:07½. Another is Aggregate, by Azmoor 2:20, sire of Betonice, which sold for $8700 last year. Aggregate's dam is Gabilan Maid, owned by Jesse D. Carr of Salinas.

Dr. Boucher has a very fast mare in Miss Logan 2:06½. Miss Logan was started in the East last year in a number of races and won over $10,000 in purses. She was taken East again this year, but developed a splint, which necessitated the cancelling of all of her dates for the season. Miss Logan is doing nicely here and her trouble will soon be completely removed. Boucher has a promising three year old colt out of Miss Logan, by Harry Geirs. This colt worked halves at a 2:10 clip as a two year old.

In the stable of H. H. Hellman are a number of good horses. Hellman has been all through the California circuit this year and has been very successful. He has here the mare Myrtha Whips 2:10½, by Whips 2:27, sire of Azote 2:04½, holder of the world's gelding record, and a two year old colt, called Alton, by Altamont 2:26, dam Tecora, by Cassius M. Clay. Alton is a full brother to Chehalis 2:04½, Del Norte 2:08 and Touchet 2:15. In the Hellman stable are also Myrtha Wilkes, a half sister to Myrtha Whips. She is by Hambletonian Wilkes. Her dam, Myrtha, is by Contractor. Myrtha is also the dam of Azmont 2:22. In this stable is also Antera, by Anteo 2:16, dam Debonair, by Soltan 2:24.

J. W. Gordon has in his string F. W. 2:10½, by Dorsey's Nephew, and Silver Arrow, by Silver Bow 2:16, dam Lady Weeks, by Nutwood. Silver Arrow has no record, but has shown trial heats in 2:20, and is considered a high class colt. Gordon also has Black Diamond, by C. W. S. 2:27. Black Diamond has trotted trial miles in better than 2:25.

T. W. Barstow has Claudius 2:13½, by Nutwood Wilkes 2:16½, dam Menlo 2:21; Wilkes Direct, a full brother to J. A. McKerron 2:12½, by Nutwood Wilkes, dam by Director. This colt has trotted trial heats in 2:20, but has no record. Barstow has also Prince Bismarck 2:19½, by Almont Patchen 2:15, dam by Bismarck 2:29.

George Y. Bollinger has Boodle Boy, two years old, by Boodle 2:12½, dam by Wpspy, she the dam of Our Boy 2:12½. Boodle Boy trotted a mile as a two year old last summer in 2:23, and gives promise of being the best colt ever sired by Boodle. He has also a three year old colt by Hambletonian Wilkes dam the dam of Our Boy, and a four year old filly, a pacer, by Baywood, sire of Dr. Swift 2:13. This filly is also out of the dam of Our Boy, and paced a quarter over the San Jose track last year in 33 seconds. Bollinger is thinking of sending her to Montana this year, and it is thought that if no bad luck happens to her she will beat 2:10. Carrie Benton is also in this stable. She is by Gen. Benton Jr., and got her record of 2:28 about a year or so ago when driven by Charles M. Shortridge in a road race, and her trainers have never been able to lower it.

Ed. Topham, of Milpitas, is the owner of Ned Thorne 2:15½, by Bill Thornhill 2:24, dam Lady Nutwood, by Nutwood. Lady Nutwood was purchased from Toppsm by Governor Stanford just previous to his death for $1000, and was the last horse the Governor purchased.

Topham also has the mare Blanche T., three years old, by Hambletonian Wilkes, dam Minnie B. 2:27, by Thornhill. She was entered in the Occident Stakes at Sacramento this year and won third money. Blanche T. has trotted mile heats in 2:27. Topham is also the owner of Stella F., by Billy Thornhill, dam Lady Grosvenor 2:25.

E. D. Fox has the trotting stallion Chancellor 2:16, by Bismarck 2:29, and Mt. Hope, by Sable Wilkes 2:18, out of the dam of Chancellor. He also has several other promising two and three year olds. J. W. Gordon is training Mr. Fox's horses.

Thad W. Hobson has a fast pacer in Hazel H. 2:12½, by Bismarck. Hazel H. is now in foal to the great horse Searchlight 2:03½, which recently sold for $15,000. He has also Mark H., a full brother to Hazel H., which he is using now for a road horse. Mark H. has paced trial miles as good as 2:16.

Col. Moorhead, of the Green Meadow Stock Farm, has in his stable Hambletonian Wilkes, by George Wilkes, having some time ago paid $7000 for him. This horse is a finely gaited trotter and is the sire of Phoebe Wilkes 2:08½ and a long list better than 2:30. Another good horse in this stable is Colonel Moorhead, by Hambletonian Wilkes, dam Annie Bell, by Dawn 2:18½. Annie Bell has a record of 2:18 and is the dam of La Belle 2:16. La Belle is owned by Mrs. Severance of Los Angeles.

William Vioget has the pacer Wild Nutting 2:13, by Wild Nut, dam Helena 2:11½. He also has a number of promising two year olds being prepared for next year.

Henry Scott has the pacer Diagonal, by Diablo 2:09½, dam by Sidney 2:19. Diagonal was entered through the circuit this year, but on account of an accident in which he was injured, his dates were cancelled. Scott also has the trotting horse Scott McKinney, by McKinney 2:11½, dam by Sidney, he dam of Henry Scott.

In the stable of C. H. Corey is Laura M., a pacer with a record of 2:13½. She is by Almont Patchen 2:15. Corey also has a filly out of Laura M., by Diablo 2:09½, and a three year old colt by Royal Sid 2:24, by Roy Wilkes 2:06½. These two latter horses Corey wants to enter in the premium list.

The Agnew Stock Farm has Maud 2:20, by Bertrand, dam by Ethan Allen Jr. This dam is also the dam of To Order 2:11½. The Agnew Farm has in its stable also a promising filly by Boodle.

Guy C. Vachell has Acrobat, by Sterling, dam by Blua Bull, also several youngsters.

James Boyd of Milpitas has Billy Thornhill 2:23, sire of Ned Thorne 2:15½, besides several high bred two and three year olds.

Paul Marston has Cyclone by Almont Patchen 2:15. Cyclone has paced miles better than 2:30.

Dr. Nash has a son of Red Wilkes, dam by Jim Crow. He has worked a mile in 2:25.

Rudolph Messing has Lady Thornhill 2:17, by Billy Thornhill.

Tobe Lord has several high bred horses.

T. S. Montgomery has a promising two year old colt in

Col. Carter, by Nutwood Wilkes 2:16, sire of Who Is It 2:10½, John A. McKerron 2:12½, etc., dam by Boodle 2:12½, second dam Nina B., by Electioneer. Montgomery also has a filly by Boodle, first dam Maud 2:20, dam of Thistle 2:13½, etc. With such high class youngsters as these, of which there are plenty now in training, the premium lists should fill in handsome style.

There has been much discussion among owners of fine animals, too, about arranging for a road race. It is understood that Tobe Lord, Dr. Nash, Rudolph Messing, Louis Sonnicksen and others are anxious to compete. Such a race would create a good deal of interest in this section, as all the gentlemen named are known to possess road horses of high class.

Charles Boots has upwards of twenty colts and fillies now here in training, and it is thought that gallopers would be sent here from other sections if a few running races are programmed.

With such horses as Claudius 2:13½, Iran Alto 2:12½, Dr. Frasse 2:12½, Ned Thorne 2:15½, Chancsoll 2:16, and other equally fast trotters and pacers that would doubtless be sent here, the horsemen say, several races could be arranged that would attract attention from all over the State.

In connection with the races it has also been suggested that it would be an interesting feature to reproduce some of the old time Spanish sports, such as vaquero races on wild mustangs and contests in lassoing wild cattle, picking up small objects from the ground while riding at full speed, and other difficult feats to show the prowess of the rider and his skill with the lariat. This could easily be arranged to take place at the fair grounds without interfering in any way with the speed program and would doubtless attract many visitors.

Care of the Mouth.

An essential feature in growing good harness horses is such attention to the mouth as will make it certain that it is in a condition to receive and masticate food with comfort to the animal, otherwise it may partially starve and become emaciated before one is aware of it or has a suspicion what the trouble is, says the Iowa Homesteader. This is bad enough in the mature horse, but in the young growing colt it is much worse, for the stunting of any kind of live stock during the growing period is very rarely ever fully recovered from. We do not now refer to actual diseases of the mouth but rather to those irregularities in the teeth that create pain and thereby deter the young horse from enjoying and thriving upon the food given him. Sometimes a split tooth will cause a small sliver to penetrate the gum or the side of the cheek; sometimes the displaced crown of a milk molar will cause a great deal of trouble of which the real cause is unsuspected. Some horses have teeth that are soft or soft in spots, and they wear unevenly, making a tooth that lacerates the tongue or cheek. Some have elongated molars that need the rasp. Young horses from two to four years old often suffer from the development of the permanent molars behind the temporary ones, and the difficulty can only be reached by extracting the latter. Horses suffer from decayed teeth too, and from the accumulation of food or bits of corn cob about a diseased tooth, making a fetid odor that is very repulsive and injurious to the health of animal. The lamias, which is not a disease, but a congested condition of the "bars," due to rapid development of the teeth and to the increased quantity of blood which such development calls to the mouth, often gives feeding trouble, but it can be cured by pricking the congested parts to bring the blood and then washing the mouth with slum water. Indeed, nearly all the difficulties we now have in mind are simple and easily overcome merely by giving attention from time to time to the condition of the month. The principal reason why they do the harm that often results from them is that so many owners of horses who make no pretense at being expert horse men, overlook the necessity for frequent examination of the month to see that there are no lacerations or other conditions that interfere with good feeding.

RICHARD CROKER'S horse Americas, best known to Californians as Rey del Carreres, won the Charlwood Handicap at the Gaiwick (Eng.) meeting in October. The race gave the backers of Americas a bad jolting in its earlier stages, for, just opposite to what had been anticipated, Mr. Croker's horse did no better than to run along with the front division. But, after all, it turned out all right, for Americas decided to go to the front after running three furlongs, and thereafter it was an easy task for him to canter in a three-lengths winner, while his supposedly dangerous opponents, Guisla and Perthshire, were simply run off their legs and neither of the pair was placed. The race was worth $820 to Americas.

CHAS. JEFFRIES, the well known trainer who had Fanny Putnam on the circuit this year and reduced her record to 2:13, was in the city this week and will probably leave in a few days for his home in Montana. Mr. Jeffries stated in regard to laying up a beat with Fanny Putnam at Los Angeles, that after he had driven her a dead heat in 2:13½ and won the second in 2:13, the mare was quite distressed and that he laid up the next heat so as to be certain of winning the race. The judges fined him $50, and he admitted to them that he laid the heat up. Fanny Putnam won the race, though the mare Dictatress won the fourth heat in 2:12½.

EVOLUTION OF THE SULKY.

The Bike Aided Materially in Cutting the Records.

"Yes, I've seen the trotting record lowered from 2:30 to 2:03½ in my day," said Dan Hatfield to a Telegraph reporter the other day, "and I want to tell you that the man who builds sulkies has had just as much to do with it as the man who breeds trotters or the man who trains and drives 'em. You young fellows that were huggin' a bottle and cuttin' teeth about the time Goldsmith Maid was cuttin' the record down to 2:14, don't know what it meant for a horse to trot in 2:30 back in 1845, when old Suffolk was on top. Without saying a word about the old tracks with their flat turns, or about clumsy shoes, the lack of hoots, weights and rigging to balance a horse, just let me try to tell you what a track sulky was like in those days. You didn't see any pneumatic tires and arched truss axles, braced all over with steel tubing. Not much!

"The sulky old Suffolk pulled must have weighed 125 pounds. It had a straight axle made of hichory with steel ends driven into the wood about fifteen inches. The seat was set up high from the axle, and rested on heavy springs, a good deal like one of those hackney gigs you see in Central Park nowadays. The fact is, there were no real sulkies in those days. They were only light gigs, and not very light at that. The wheels were five feet high, with spokes over an inch thick; hubs that were four inches through and nearly seven inches long, and the tires were pretty close to an inch wide. The crossbar was set away forward, and perfectly straight, and the shafts were bent only a very little. Nowadays, of course, the shafts and the cross bar are curved to fit the horse.

"I suppose a trotter had to be hooked anywhere from eighteen inches to two feet further away from the sulky in those times, to avoid hitting, on account of the straight axle and crossbar. That was a big handicap for speed, for the sulky was a whole lot lazier to pull, and then it would sway away and slip and quiver on the turns so as to throw the horse off his balance and pretty near throw the driver off his perch. The system of bracing was nothing at all in those days compared with the present time. Why, they used to raise the seat away up two feet or more above the axle with hardly anything in support it excepting for light iron rods. They didn't know the first thing about making a sulky rigid and getting it close up to the horse. Bracing is pretty near the main thing now. In fact, I have been saying for thirty years that the secret of sulky building is to distribute the bracing as an even strain on all parts just as far as possible. That enables you to take off weight without losing anything in strength and rigidity of the track sulky. It's improved bracing more than anything else that has cut down the weight of the track sulky from 125 pounds in Lady Suffolk's day to about thirty pounds or even twenty-five pounds in the time of Alix and Star Pointer.

"Pete Dubois made the first track sulky I ever saw without springs. That was somewhere about 1852, I would say at a guess. It was a big improvement on the old gigs, because it let the driver's seat down and made the vehicle much more rigid. I think that sulky had an iron axle about an inch square in place of an old hichory axle, but I won't be sure. Anyhow, wood or iron, the axle was as straight as a gun barrel and the horse had to be hooked just as far away as ever. Dubois made this sulky for Flora Temple, as I remember it. She was a very wide gaited mare—one of the kind that you could run a wheelbarrow between her legs when she was going fast. To give her plenty of room for side action, Pete bent the shafts instead of making them straight. The whole thing was well made and a good deal lighter than common. I think it weighed eighty-five or ninety pounds. After the springs had been done away with, the next great improvement was the bow ax. It's a disputed question as to who made the first one. But I think the original bow ax was sewed out of the butt of a plank by your humble servant. I tried to get it to the grain of the wood as near as I could. We had our doubts about the strength of the thing, so I put an iron rod all the way through the axle. This was about the year 1859. About the same time Charles S. Caffrey made one for Flora Temple and another for George M. Patchen. He took the Patchen sulky down to the Camden fair and it attracted a lot of attention among horsemen. Dan Mece saw the one I made, and he suggested the scheme of bending the wood instead of sawing it out as I had done before.

"By the time Dexter came out these bent axles were all the go. Either Caffrey or Dubois made one for the white faced horse early in the sixties. It weighed only about sixty pounds, and was built end braced quite a bit like the best of the old high wheel sulkies. The shafts set right down to the axle, making it a great deal more rigid than the old ones, and the axle was arched up so that the horse could be hooked quite close. Then it was braced from the axle to the shafts in several places, distributing the strain and doing away with the weight.

"It seems strange that Nancy Hanks should have pulled a heavier sulky than either Mand S. or Snool when she cut the world's record down to 2:04. But that's just what she did. It was one of the old high wheel sulkies converted into a pneumatic, and the attachment of the small wheels increased the weight to something like fifty pounds."

Charles Marvin's Success With Young Trotters.

The greatest trainer in the world cannot accomplish brilliant results on the trotting turf unless he had a horse born capable of such results. The best bred horse in the world will fail to demonstrate his true greatness unless he is handled and fitted with the utmost skill and judgment. The breeder must first provide capable material, and then he will only find his full reward in case that material falls into the hands of a past master in the art of training. We have not yet arrived at a perfect stage of breeding that a two-year-old trotter can come out, as the gelding, Endow, did recently, and win a race in straight order in 2:18 and 2:14½, without leaving an impression that something quite out of the ordinary has been done. Such a performance at once excites the interest of both the breeding and training communities. Just how many persons got out their volumes of the Register and ran out a tabulation of Endow's blood lines to see what lesson in breeding might be learned therefrom, it would be difficult to tell, but that a great many did is certain. The record itself will cause many to reread with interest that part of trainer Marvin's book which relates his methods of preparing youngsters for great stake events. As he has fitted and driven to their records every two-year-old trotter that has become a world's champion of that age within the past nineteen years, he might well be considered competent to teach the subject, were it possible to do justice in print, unassisted by object lessons. But too much of the science of training, even after being expressed in words, like the merits of Bunsby's observation, "rests in the application on it." For that application there can be no guide that does not come of experience and judgment. Doubtless Marvin put as much of himself into his book as he was able to, but when it comes to applied science his own hand can still heat all the instruction he has been able to give others. He cannot only train, but he can drive. The two-year-old trotting division is a most interesting one to breeders, because few of that age can become very great through superior training alone. They must also be bred trotters in the manor horn in order to obtain the necessary early start in speed required to develop high class racing powers so young. They must be instinctive trotters, for one thing, and, for another, must have the close fiber and training quality that finds its greatest perfection where thoroughbred blood has been assimilated.

Endow's 2:14½ is sufficiently a rare performance to be startling, though by no means the greatest that has appeared in past years. The faster ones are Janie T. 2:14, Jupe 2:13½ and Arion 2:10½. Marvin trained and drove Arion to his record, as well as Endow. He has therefore beaten his own recent achievement with two-year-olds by a matter of four seconds as in time, but the most astonishing feature about it is that Arion's record was made to the old-fashioned high-wheel sulky, which, in champion classes, is probably full six seconds slower than the modern bicycle wheel sulky, which makes him nine seconds better two-year-old than any other. Some horsemen will take issue with this estimate because Arion was trained in after years and never reduced his record but three seconds to the new sulky. But I hold that that does not prove the case, for there is nothing to show that he was as good afterwards as he was when he drew the old sulky in 2:10½, nor was he prepared and driven by Marvin in his subsequent races. Again, while the advent of the new style of sulky has so augmented the speed of horses that every other conceivable champion record to the old sulky has been utterly demolished with the new, this new record made by Arion has alone stood impervious to all attacks, and still leads for two-year-olds. My estimate of its greatness is therefore not overdrawn. To bring it to a realizing sense, just consider that Arion's record in the old wheels is fully on a par with Azote's record of 2:04½ to the new wheels, and that Arion was but a two-year-old, while Azote was fully matured, and the significance of Arion's record begins to be appreciated. While it is not always the case that a horse which stands superior to all others of his time will in the end surpass all others, yet it is a thing every breeder likes to see in the stallion he patronizes until he has a stud record by which he may be more closely judged. The great English (more strictly speaking, French) thoroughbred race horse, Gladiateur, heralded as "the greatest since Flying Childers," proved a failure in the stud, and, in trotting experience, our ex-champion of vest turf renown, Smuggler, that even defeated Goldsmith Maid at her best, and stood off all stallion records for many years, was not proportionately great as a sire. But these are exceptions and the rule is that we should expect the greatest to beget the greatest. Breeding has, after all, a hand in the matter. The critics tell us that Gladiateur's pedigree was deficient in "sire blood," and Smuggler was not a bred trotter, though, as a product of the training and driving skill of Mervin, he held the stallion championship for many years.

Arion, like most every trotter that has been great in his two-year-old form, is a bred trotter, and the chief formative of his blood is one which, of all others, has in previous generations produced the very greatest trotters of their time. Meud S. was by a son of Hambletonian, and of a daughter of Pilot Jr., backed by thoroughbred blood. Jay-Eye-See was by a son of Hambletonian, out of a daughter of Pilot Jr. backed by thoroughbred blood. Arion was by a son of Hambletonian out of a mare inbred to Pilot Jr., backed by thoroughbred blood. Probably three greater trotters never lived; certainly each was the greatest of his day and class. There are some indications that Arion is to transmit his greatness, with proper mating in the stud. There is little doubt that, barring The Abbot, Nico, by Arion, possessed last year, as a four-year-old, a greater flight of speed than any horse that has made his powers public. Nico could outstep Bingen in their work at any point he tried, and Bingen took the fastest trotting record last year, and ties The Abbot for it this year. Nico's death upset some very interesting anticipations. Not only as a trotting figure in the campaign about closing, but as an index of Arion's stud capacity, was his loss unfortunate. It is said that trotters come and go in all forms and of all blood, but there is an extreme trotting quality in which old blood formulas that have been the best in their day reappear in but slightly modified form, consequent upon added generations, and again prove the best in current use. Fortunate is the breeder who happens to have established succession of generations in his stud, each of which nicks well with its predecessors. Village Farm is a rare instance of this. Woodburn Farm, in a long period of its earlier career, was exactly the opposite.

What will Arion best cross with to bring out his greatest offspring? Nico was out of a Sultan mare, that, in turn, was out of a daughter of Jim Monroe, son of Alexander's Abdallah, third dam by American Clay. There was a good strong hit in there somewhere, perhaps several of them. Arion's sire, Electioneer, has got important early speed from the blood of The Moor, sire of Sultan. Other Hambletonian sires, notably Gny Wilkes, have hit remarkably on mares by Sultan and his sire, The Moor. A good share of this Hambletonian—Moor hit has demonstrated precocious speed, rather than so extreme a limit as Nico was evidently capable of. So it is probable that other influences (such as doubling the Hambletonian blood and the Clay blood) lent force to the result by sharpening the trotting proclivities, while the plentiful thoroughbred backing heightened the speed organism.

I look upon Arion as strongly stamped with the influence of Pilot Jr., and think that when that blood is best nicked by the crosses he encounters, his offspring of most extreme speed will appear. This was the case with Pilot Medium in getting Peter the Great and with Meander in getting Pamlico. The dams of both these sires were by Pilot Jr. Peter's dam had both Hambletonian and Pilot Jr. blood, strong nicks for Pilot Jr., as proved in celebrated instances. But this is a divergence.

Marvin's success this year with the two year old Endow and the three year old Exstasy shows that his hand has not lost its cunning. If he has not again reached as remarkable a result as he did when he gave Arion a record in old wheels of 2:10½ as a two year old it is not because his skill is less than in the old days, but because chance has not thrown into his hands another horse born with the capabilities of Arion.

HARK COMSTOCK.

It is extremely likely that St. Louis will have a new race track before long. Joseph Lucas, proprietor of a large breeding establishment near St. Louis; W. P. Magrane, the St. Louis turfman; Charles P. Greene and several other St. Louis capitalists will be interested. The same men who are negotiating for the purchase of a fine tract of land near the site of the famous old Cote Brilliente track, within thirty minutes' ride by trolley or cable of the business centre, agitated the project of building a new racetrack near the Mound City in the season of '98, but the affair fell through, as at that time no suitable ground could be purchased at a convenient distance from the city.

NEARLY 1600 trotters and pacers have entered the standard list this season.

San Francisco, Saturday, November 11, 1899.

THE GREAT FILLY STAKES for fillies, now weanlings, which is to be run at the 1901 autumn meeting of the Coney Island Jockey Club, and which was at first estimated by the organization's officials to reach a value of $20,000 may exceed that amount. The fact that $5000 is to be added to the stake has attracted the attention of breeders all over the country and entries are already going in to the Secretary of the Club. The following is a sample of the letters received:

ADELBERT STUD, Hopkinsville, Ky., Oct. 23, 1899.
"SEC'Y CONEY ISLAND JOCKEY CLUB—Please find enclosed check for entries of our entire crop of fillies in your Great Filly Stake of 1901. Think every breeder should do likewise. (Signed) Respectfully, WILLIAMS & RADFORD."

The proprietors of this well known farm have shown the proper spirit and their action should be followed by other stock breeding farms. After all it is the big stakes that makes high class racing and keeps men in the business. Who, except those who own race horses and follow the business for a livelihood, would ever try to breed a champion were there no great classics to win? The honor of breeding a great stake horse is one that every lover of the animal considers a worthy aspiration, but the breeding of selling platers is not a business that any ambitious person would spend time or money on. There has been in this country a dearth of stakes for fillies and this rich one offered by the Coney Island Jockey Club certainly fills a want that has been long felt. Our California breeding farms are certain to be well represented in this stake, and we advise every breeder who can to follow in the path marked out by Messrs. Williams & Radford above, and enter their entire crop of fillies now weanlings to the Great Filly Stake of 1901. Entries to this stake will close Wednesday next, November 15th. Read the conditions in our advertising columns.

THE OCCIDENT STAKE which is annually trotted at the State Fair at Sacramento has been increasing in value each year. This year it was worth $2775. It will probably be worth more than that next year, and the stake of 1902, entries to which will close January 1st next, should be worth anywhere from $3000 to $5000. When the history of this stake is gone over and the many times it has been won in comparatively slow time are recalled, one cannot but wonder that every owner of a trotting-bred foal in California does not make at least one entry in it. The first payment is only $10 which carries the entry along a year and none of the payments except the last (which is just previous to the race) are large, the entire sum required for all payments, including the starting fee, being but $100. The person who enters a colt in this rich stake, sees that the colt is trained, and keeps up the payments on him, is almost certain to get some part of the purse, unless the colt is utterly worthless, as so many are certain to drop out before the race comes off. Eligibility to a good stake adds a value to a colt that is many times more than the sum required to keep up the payments, as is evidenced every year by the number of buyers in the field for every good colt that is well engaged. A ten dollar bill invested in naming a foal of 1899 in the Occident Stake of 1902 is as good an investment as a California horseman can make on New Year's day.

THIS is the season to clip your horses. The Chicago Flexible Shaft Co. has something interesting to say about clipping machines in our advertising columns to-day.

THE CONDITIONS of the new Stallion Stake offered by the California State Agricultural Society, which were announced in this column last week, will be found officially stated among the advertisements this week. This stake should meet with the approval and patronage of every stallion owner in the State and many outside the State. It will be seen from the advertisement that the stake is for foals of 1900, and every stallion in service this year should be represented. Whether a stallion was used privately or kept for public service should make no difference with the owner. The value of stallions for breeding purposes or for sale are determined by the money earning abilities of his get and the stallions who stand at the head of the winning sires (and thereby command the largest fees) are the ones whose produce are engaged in the big stakes. One rich classic has enabled the sire of the winner to head the list, whereas with this race thrown out he would be near the bottom. We hope the owners of California stallions will realize the importance of entering their horses in this stake, as a large number of entries will be an assurance of its great value when run.

THE YEARLINGS from Theodore Winters' Rancho del Sierras will be sold by auction on Tuesday evening, November 28th, by the well known auctioneers, Chase & Mendenhall, at their salesyard corner Market street and Van Ness Avenue, in this city. These colts and fillies are by El Rio Rey, Rey del Sierras and the young stallion Lordlike, by Vassal, that unites in his veins the blood of Vandal and imp. Leamington, a cross that has produced many of America's best race horses. The youngsters by the two first named stallions have among them full brothers and sisters to Scarborough, Silver Bullion, Jennie Reid, Belle Boyd and other good ones. Many of the greatest celebrities of the American turf were bred by Mr. Theodore Winters and among this lot are some as promising colts as were ever seen on his farm. An extended notice of the colts will appear in these columns before the date of the sale.

THE SPEED SALE to be held at the Alameda race track next Wednesday, November 15th, will be the best one ever held there by J. M. Nelson, the well known horseman. Among the record horses to be offered are Ruby M. 2:12 1/2, Plunkett 2:13 1/2, Butcher Boy 2:17, Vidette 2:16 and many others with fast trials. There will be about forty head offered, among them a consignment from Dr. W. B. Clowe of Washington, who sends seven head of extra good young horses, all well bred. A two year old registered French coach stallion will also be put up at this sale and there should be some pretty lively bidding on him as horses of this breed will be in demand this year among breeders. If you want a good road horse, or a good prospect for the races next year, attend this sale.

The Sale of the Season

The catalogues for the first sale of the season, that of the Burlingame Stock Farm, has just been received. It is by all odds the handsomest ever issued in California and contains features that will be at once recognized as most valuable for horsemen. The introductory notice is fair and impartial yet it contains no laudatory notices regarding the breeding of those to be sold. It is an entirely new departure, inasmuch as it does not attempt to conceal any facts about the yearlings. The results of the trials are shown on every page opposite the tabulations and wherever a reserve price is set it is plainly stated below the pedigrees. It is a very different style of doing business from that usually observed and it remains to be seen if the purchasing public will heck the new policy on the part of this breeder.

In the same envelope came the catalogue of thoroughbreds, the property of the estate of E. C. Holly, and a finer lot was never bred on that farm. Four are by El Rayo, one is out of Kethlene, by Long Taw, second dam the famous mare Athlene by Pat Malloy, etc. He is called El Karn and is a half brother to Sabbath, the well known winner in Montana.

Lurayo is a handsome filly out of Lucide, a great race mare by Leinster, and traces back to the same family as Murello, Falsetto, etc. The filly out of Miss Jessie is one of the handsomest in the sale and she is also by El Rayo. She has for a dam one of the best bred mares in America. Her sire was Baden Baden and her dam was Fun, by Thunder, brother to Lightning and Lancaster. Faenza, by El Rey, is a stonily bred one, she is out of Francesco II, by Three Cheers full sister to Acclim and one of the best race mares in California. Her dam was Rosette, by Wheatley. Chestnut filly by Major Ben out of Francesca II, is a two year old but has never been worked. The Libertine—Minnie Elkins filly should bring a long price as she is bred right to make a great race mare and is by one of the greatest race horses on the American turf, out of the great stake winner Minnie Elkins by Duke of Montrose. She is of the same family as Apeche, True Blue, Bright Phœbus, Modesty, etc. The half sister to Miss Pollard and Toribio, by Cleveland is a grand individual and ready to race fast as a bullet and perfect in every way. Her companion Adios, also owned by G. Pacheco, is by the phenomenal race horse end sire Murello out of Ursula (dam of Maseoro), and is one of the most promising three year olds in California. He should command a big figure.

Dr. Fernum consigns two to this sale which are well enough bred to suit the most fastidious and they come from racing families on both sides. One is by Almont, son of Three Cheers, out of Eda by Hock Hocking, a wonderful matron, the other is by St. Carlo, out of Mother Hubbard by Rutherford; second dam a sister to Cousin Peggy, dam of Geraldine. They have never been worked. The two year old filly Centesima, by imp. Clevedon, out of Phoebe Ann, by imp. Friar Tuck, will also be offered at this sale.

Lexington's Recent Meeting.

[Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.]

The impression that the recent meeting of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association was unsuccessful seems to have become general. But it is an erroneous impression. It was, in many respects, the most remarkable of the many great ones which have been held on the historic fair grounds. Its program was the largest of the year—it paid out more money. It took more desperate chances than any other club in the country. It was forced, being at the end of the season, to take the leavings of the campaign in the shape of reced-out, broken-down, disgruntled owners and "hated" hettors. It was opposed by conflicting meetings at St. Louis and Providence, two strong cities where the people turn out from 10,000 to 30,000 strong, and yet in spite of all, the meeting was a most brilliant racing success. And, better still, I have official authority for the statement that the association has a neat balance of some $5000 on the right side of the ledger. This is a feat in management of which the members of the association feel quite proud, especially so when it is a commonly accepted report that no club holding a meeting since September 1st has made any money.

During this meeting there were twenty-nine races. It took 115 heats to decide them, and though nearly every heat was a hard-fought one, thirteen races, or nearly half of the entire program, were decided in straight heats. Nineteen of the twenty-nine races were ended in four heats or less, and of the remaining ten four were five-heat, three were six-heat and three were seven heat contests. During the two weeks' racing but seven of the 115 heats were finished as slow as 2:20, and four of these seven were in two year old races over a heavy track. The average time of each heat was 2:13 11-16. This is remarkable when it is considered that the track was so heavy three days of the ten that the horses could not race within two sulky widths of the pole. In this connection the rather pet remark of a groom who stood in the lobby of the Phœnix hotel is apropos. That morning the track was very heavy, and it looked as if it could not possibly be got into shape that day. An owner stopped Secretary Wilson as he passed through the hotel and asked if the races would not be postponed.

"No," replied Wilson; "horses called at 2:30."

"What's the matter with these people?" grumbled the owner, turning to the groom. "I'm not going to start my horse in that mud, and none of the rest will, either."

"Oh, yes, ye will, hoss," said the brawny swipec. "Dis is the damndest strongest outfit in de bunch. When dey sey we rece, we rece, else we conghs up a hundred fer not joggin' out de hoss. Better go out an' wa'm up dat goat o' yours on de grass, fer he'll git a rece ter dey if that big guy calls ye."

The New Supper Room at the Palace Hotel.

The Palace Hotel management will, on November 13th, open their new supper room for the accommodation of those who desire refreshments during the evening.

The room to be devoted to this new feature has an entrance from the main office and another from the main court. When completed, the luxurious furnishings, the artistic finish, together with the display of tropical plants, will make it one of the most beautiful rooms in the hotel. Myriads of incandescent lights will be employed to show the color-effects and the harmony of the decorations.

Each evening between 9:30 and 12 o'clock orchestral concerts will be rendered by the best musical talent under the direction of Mr. C. H. Rendell. Among the distinguished performers who will assist are Signor Pietro Mareno, Messrs. Ford and Regensberger. The concerts are to be of a high order and will be greatly appreciated by the patrons of the supper room.

The tepestry room adjoining, is being refurnished and will be converted into a cloak room, where a maid will attend to the comfort of lady patrons.

The conservatory will be fitted up as a waiting or lounging room, and smoking will be permitted there as in the supper room.

The perfection of the cuisine and service, combined with the moderate charges that have given the Grill rooms at the Palace an international reputation, are to be in evidence in the supper room, which in itself is sufficient to justify us in making the prediction that the new departure will be a success from the start.

SPURTS, SKIPS AND SKIVES.

[BY THE GREEN 'UN.]

Ninety-nine is nearly ended and the harness boss brigade is a hunting winter quarters with the records they have made. There's a lot of trotting champions, but tho' closely you inspect 'em you won't find no crowns they've won from Alix, Azote or Directum.

Venus II. 2:14, by Cupid 2:18, is at Mr. A. B. Sprckels' stable on Fell street, in this city, minus one of her hind hoofs. Sometimes during the campaign on the Grand Circuit a small piece of horsehoe nail worked its way up into her foot and remained there until it was discovered after she reached San Francisco. The mare showed a little lame at times, but it was never suspicioned that the lameness was in the foot. She started at Los Angeles and though she did not have to trot better than 2:26 to win, showed a mile in 2:15 in her work and looked to be in good shape. When she arrived in San Francisco, a slight suppurative apparar on the coronet of the foot which soon extended all round, and the veterinary who was called in to examine it discovered that the outer hoof was ready to come off. It was removed and the cause discovered. The wonder is that the mare was not dead lame from the sore or that it did not cause lockjaw. With a new hoof Venus II. will be ready to beat 2:10 next year.

Anaconda will not go East to the auction ring after all. Superintendent John Mackay of Rancho del Paso gave us the information last week that the great pacing gelding would undoubtedly be consigned to the auction block as Mr. Haggin would not accept James Butler's offer of $5000 for him, but it seems that Mr. Butler wanted the son of Knight bad enough to stand a raise, and Anaconda now belongs to the New York millionaires. Mr. Msockay says the price paid for him was $10,000. Anaconda will remain in Keating's charge and be in his string of campaigners next year. He ought to win his price out as he is probably the best horse in his class in America. Searchlight can probably best him in a race, but for a horse that can go through the Grand Circuit, be ready to pace at each and every meeting and go to his record in every race he starts in, Anaconda comes nearer filling the bill than any pacer in the country. His earnings this year were very close to $10,000, including the sum paid for the Los Angeles exhibition. Over East he won five races, was second three times and third once and won $7225. Hal B. was the only pacer that won as much as Anaconda and he had all the slow classes at his mercy.

With Klatawah 2:05½ and Anaconda 2:03½, Keating will have a pair of side wheelers that will be hard to beat next year. The Steinway colt has filled out greatly since his three year old form and as a five year old should be all the better for having had a let up this season. Keating says he has shown him enough to convince him that he has as much license to hold two minute honors as any horse that has ever tried for it.

If the two in three plan of racing is to become popular the tracks will have to be made wider at the starting point. Short races will never meet with favor from the owners and drivers who are compelled to line up on a track in two or three tiers. There are too many chances against the fellows in the back rows. The judges' stand on most race courses is placed too near the first turn, so that immediately the word is given there is a scramble and rush to get the pole which would not be the case were there straight sailing for a few hundred yards. If our tracks were made at least 100 feet wide on the last quarter, and the starting wire placed 100 yards further up the stretch, the difficult job of starting trotters and pacers would be much easier in my opinion.

Now that the running horse folks in California are doing much to encourage the breeding of thoroughbreds by offering big stakes for that class of horses, why can't the harness horse folks do something in the way of getting up a big stake for trotters and one for pacers. This state ought to have one big harness event each year, like the M. and M. at Detroit, the Charter Oak at Hartford or the Transylvania at Lexington. Every association cannot give a big stake of this kind, but the harness horse owners could arrange one and have it trotted over the track that would give the most money for it. The "California" for trotters of the 2:20 class, entrance $10 January 1, $20 May 1st, when horses must be named and eligible, and $50 to start, with $1000 added money, ought to make the great race of the year and if properly worked up and advertised would draw ten thousand people to see it. Can't the P. C. T. H. B. A. or some other association see its way clear to giving an event of this kind?

I see that Farmer Bunch and other San Jose horsemen are trying to stir up enough enthusiasm in the Garden City to have a race meeting there in December during the week of the big jubilee. I hope they can succeed in doing it. Let me whisper in your ears Mr. Bunch, Mr. Rea, and all the other San Jose horsemen who want a meeting so bad. Get together and pot up the first prize. Call it the Secretary Purse and have it a guaranteed purse of sufficient size to induce some capable, hustling young man of your own choosing to devote his entire time from now to the date of the meeting in arranging a program, securing entries and arousing such an interest among the newspapers and people of Santa Clara county that every man, woman and child therein will want to be there to see the races come off. One good man can accomplish it all if you will see that he is paid for his time. But that's the first step you will have to take.

In conversation with Secretary Green, of the Western Turf Association, the other day I suggested that Tanforan would be a great place to hold a combined horse show, cattle fair and race meeting during the summer or fall. Mr. Green remarked that the association had just such an enterprise in mind and would probably hold one next year. There is no track to my mind in California that can be made so fast for harness horses as the one at Tanforan. It would be an ideal place for an open air horse show, as it is located right in the section where the finest turnouts in the State are daily driven. As a place for an exhibit of neat cattle it cannot be surpassed and were good premiums offered for the different breeds, there would be a showing that even our State Fair could not exceed. By devoting two or three forenoons to the horse show, two or three to the cattle exhibit and the afternoons of the week to harness and pony racing, there could be attracted a crowd of five or six thousand people each day and on Saturday afternoon probably twice that many. The Western Turf Association will make a ten strike if it arranges a meeting of this kind.

San Francisco needs a track for harness racing. The Oakland track, which was made so high in the middle that the water will run from it like rain from the roof of a house, is not fit for valuable horses to trot or pace over, while the Ingleside track has so much sand on it that it is about ten seconds slow for harness horses. Tanforan would be an ideal track for trotters, but like the others it can only be used when the racing season is over, and then it is too far from the city to be patronized by the road drivers. The speedway in the park is an excellent thing in its way and has caused many a horse to be purchased for the pleasure of speeding him over it, but it is not a race track. There surely ought to be a spot to be had in San Francisco large enough and suitable for at least a half mile track. If the spot can be found the money to build the track will come soon enough. Matinee racing would soon be very popular here were there a place to hold it.

How often one hears an owner say when wishing to dispose of an outclassed trotter or pacer that he is "a perfect road horse." An eastern writer gives the following description of the ideal trotter that will bring a big price. How many such horses are owned in any community? "The horse that suits the gentleman driver on either road or speedway must be considered the ideal trotter, because of the very high requirements for such a purpose. The road horse must know what to do when either called on for a brush, or asked to come to a slow trot or walk; he must have a mouth that answers to the touch, an ear that hears demands, and a head that possesses brains enough to know what the touch or call means, and the willingness to obey. He must be good looking, sound, very speedy, easily driven, and absolutely fearless."

Major McDowell at Deaths Door.

Major H. C. McDowell, one of Kentucky's best and most enterprising citizens and father of the well known turfman, Thomas C. McDowell, lies at the point of death at his home, "Ashland," famous as the home of the great commoner Henry Clay, near Lexington.

Major McDowell has always been one of the leading members, and very often the president, of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, and no more popular man has ever been connected with that organization. In his prime he stood close to six feet two inches in height, was an athlete in form and strength, and in a day's or week's hunt could probably outwalk or outshoot any of his friends who went to the field with him. For years he was one of the leading breeders of the trotting horse in Kentucky, and started the country by his purchase when he paid $25,000 for Dictator, the brother to Dexter, which, however, proved a very fortunate investment and netted thousands and thousands of dollars for the nery purchaser.

At the same time he had King Rene, the greatest show horse and greatest sire of show horses that Kentucky ever saw, and it is more than probable that his beautiful farm and stables have been visited oftener by Eastern and Northern lovers of the horse than any place in the Blue Grass country. He was a busy man, connected with almost every enterprise of merit in central Kentucky, and a successful one. Yet he always had time to talk horse, and could see good in other people's horses as well as his own.

About two years ago his health began to break, and in 1898 he practically retired from either breeding or keeping horses, reserving only his best filly, Extasy, the sensation of two and three year old form. He sold, however, to Marcus Daly at that time his half-sister, Impetuous, that M. E. McHenry contends to-day was the greatest trotter the world ever saw. In addition to these two sensational fillies, Major McDowell raised Oratorio, Phallos, Fugue and Trinket, all sensational horses, and many others that bordered on the sensational class.

He was a man of high education, a gifted conversationalist, modest, yet a man of great firmness. When he was in the judges' stand at the trotting meetings all men knew that justice, and justice alone, would govern the decisions.

Thoroughbred Closs Up.

When the 2:30 table for 1899 was last posted, it showed that Alcantara 2:23 and Baron Wilkes 2:18 were the leading sires of new 2:30 performers for this year. Each had furnished 12 new ones that had taken records of 2:30 or better. Onward comes next with 11 to his credit, which gives him a total of 154 with records of 2:30 or better, including pacers. This places him at the head of the sons of Georgia Wilkes as a 2:30 sire. The race for supremacy between Onward and Red Wilkes has been a close and interesting one for years. Onward is now credited with 115 trotters and 31 pacers. Red Wilkes has 103 trotters and 46 pacers.

The dams of both Onward and Red Wilkes were by Mambrino Chief, but Dolly, the dam of Onward, was thought to be much the better mare of the two. She also produced Direct 2:17. Dolly had a pacing cross close up. Her dam was by a pacer known as Ben Franklin, whose sire was Hsz-rack. The dam of Ben Franklin was by Johnson's Copper-bottom, and his second dam was by Saxe Weimar, a son of Sir Archy. The second dam of Dolly was also by the same Weimar. This gave old Dolly a pretty strong dose of thoroughbred, and it was quite near the surface at that.

Queen Dido, the dam of Red Wilkes, was far from being a cold-blooded animal. Her dam was by Red Jacket, and he was inbred to Sherman Morgan, while her second dam, the Robert Patterson mare, was claimed to be thoroughbred. The claim was evidently well founded, too, for the late Gen. W. T. Withers, who was very careful to state the pedigrees of his horses correctly, and who owned Queen Dido in 1885, states in his catalogue of that year that her dam was the Robert Patterson mare, said to be thoroughbred. Mr. Wallace had then been trying for several years to prejudice breeders of trotting stock against a thoroughbred cross, and Gen. Withers must have known at the time that this statement would not add to the popularity of the descendants of Queen Dido. Red Wilkes is one year older than Onward.

Simmons 2:28 comes fourth in the list of most successful sires of new 2:30 performers for 1899. Ten of his get have entered the list this year. All four of the above are sons of George Wilkes. The dams of three were by Mambrino Patchen, and the dam of the other was by Mambrino Chief, the sire of Mambrino Patchen. Not only that, but her blood lines through her dam were quite similar to those found in the pedigree of Mambrino Patchen's dam, which was got by Gano, a thoroughbred son of American Eclipse.

Norval 2:14½ stands at the head of the Electioneer family as a sire of new performers for the year. There have been eight additions to his list, and it now numbers 54, of which 16 are pacers. Norval was got by Electioneer. His dam, Norma, was by Alexander's Norman, sire of Lolu 2:16, May Queen 2:20, etc., and his second dam was by Todhunter's Sir Wallace, out of a thoroughbred daughter of Gray Eagle. Todhunter's Sir Wallace was by Sir Albert, a thoroughbred son of Rattler, by Sir Archy. Norval's 2:30 list just equals in numbers that of St. Bel 2:24½, but there are only nine pacers in that of the latter.

Elyria 2:24½ stands at the head of the list of stallions descended in the male line from Mambrino Chief as a sire of this season's new performers. His list has been increased by eight, and now numbers 50, including 10 pacers. Elyria was got by Mambrino King, the most highly bred son of Mambrino Patchen, and his most successful one as a speed perpetuator. Elyria is head and shoulders above any other son of Mambrino King as a sire of 2:30 performers. At the close of last season he was credited with as many less two as all the other sons of Mambrino King combined.

The dam of Elyria was by Bradford's Telegraph, a son of Vermont Black Hawk, and his second dam by a thoroughbred registered in Bruce's American Stud Book as Prince Edward. It seems from the above that trotting stallions with a thoroughbred cross close up are still holding their own tolerably well.—American Horse Breeder.

Colts and Fillies at Busna Vista Ranch.

Geo. W. Trahern, owner of Buena Vista Ranch, reports the following foals on the farm this year:

John Anderson, bay colt, four white legs, blaze in face, by Rear Guard, dam Donna Juana by Prince of Norfolk, foaled February 14, 1899.

Georga W., bay colt, white hind foot, star in forehead, by Rear Guard, dam Rettie by Joe Hooker, foaled March 12, 1899.

Bay filly, no white, by Rear Guard, dam Sally Hampton by Boots, foaled March 15, 1899.

Bay filly, left hind foot white, small star in forehead, by Rear Guard, dam Blne Bonnet by Joe Hooker.

Forrest, bay colt, star and snip, left hind foot white, by Rear Guard, dam Miss Garvin by Fellowcharm, foaled April 14, 1899.

MIDITY, the much overrated two year old owned by Bookmaker Humphries, started in what was supposed to be a soft spot on Wednesday and finished last in a field of four. While a high class two year old performer can defeat aged selling platers as a rule, two year old selling platers cannot give away weight to horses of their own class.

SPECIAL inducements will be offered those who get their stallion ads in by January 1st.

ONWARD has eleven new performers to his credit this year and now has 115 standard trotters and 31 standard pacers on his roll of honor.

ONE hundred and sixty stalls are now ready for occupancy at the Pleasanton race track, and will doubtless be filled soon after the first of the new year.

THE four-year-old gelding Charmion 2:27½, by Epanlet 2:19, is out of Charm by Santa Claus, and is the sixth of that mare's get to enter the list.

THERE were nearly a dozen harness meetings at Cleveland this year. It is a great harness horse town, and they pay big prices for what suits them there.

IT is said that only three of the get of Grattan 2:13 have been trained for racing, and the trio are Palmyra Boy 2:07½, Grattan Boy 2:08 and Solon Brandt 2:13½.

DAVE McCLARY worked Star Pointer's son Sidney Pointer 2:14½ a mile recently in 2:08½ and thinks he ought to be good enough for the free for all next year.

W. B. FASIG & Co. recently won their suit against Denton Pearsall for recovery of commission on the sale of Star Pointer, and which amounted to $850. It will be remembered that after hiding Pointer off at the sale in 1897, Pearsall failed to make good the purchase price, and the horse was again put up at auction.

DIRECT 2:05½, now at Pleasanton, has already had several mares booked for the season of 1900. He looks better than he ever did in his life.

THE Golden Gate Park Driving Association might utilize the Alameda track for Saturday matinee racing. It can be had for the asking and is easily put in condition.

PRINCE ALERT 2:05½ has now fully demonstrated his claims to championship honors. His last performance was his best to date—a tight heat over a half mile track in 2:06 is not to be laughed at.

AN observer who says he has kept tabs on them claims there is as great a proportion of pacing dogs as pacing horses, and that the better bred they are the greater the proportion of pacers among them.

KING CHIMES is a lightning change artist. Early in the summer he earned a pacing record of 2:11½, while three weeks since he reduced his trotting mark from 2:14 to 2:10½. He is a brother to the Queen, 2:10½.

THE statement that the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeder's Association lost money at its fall meeting and that next year the meeting will be out in without foundation. Secretary Wilson states that the meeting made in the neighborhood of $5000.

WHAT promised to be one of the best and most exciting of team matches of the season is off. It was between the two Philadelphia teams, Cleveigh and Maryland Boy and Ottinger and Jack, for $500 a side, and the hacker of the former team has paid $250 forfeit.

SPLAN & NEWGASS, of Chicago, sold Phrase 2:12½, by Onward for $4750 at auction last Wednesday. Chicago is a good market for a good horse. Milo Knox will take a consignment of California horses to their January sale. Write to him about it. His address is Haywarde.

MILo KNOX will take a consignment of horses to Chicago in January next, when Splan & Newgass will hold a sale. John Splan says he will advertise the California horses more extensively than they have ever been advertised heretofore. This will be a good chance for California breeders.

HOMEWARD 2:13½, the son of Strathway, that was taken Esst last May and sold at the Blue Ribbon sale at Cleveland, is now owned in Boston. At a matinee held at the Readville track on the 25th of last month Homeward won a two in three race, trotting the third and last heat in 2:16½.

CHEHALIS won his third race this year and beat Rosn Wilkes in the free for all pace at Westfield, Mass., October 26th. Chehalis won the first, third and fourth heats and Rosn Wilkes took the second. The best time, 2:08½, was made in the last heat. The track is a half mile one.

THE next regular meeting of the Board of Appeals of the American Trotting Association will be held at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, Tuesday, December 5, 1899, at 10 o'clock a. m. All applications and written evidence must be received at the Chicago office not later than November 20th.

ROBERT BONNER's fortune will not be distributed without a contest. The preliminary steps for this action have been taken in the Surrogate's Court in the name of Mr. Bonner's grandchildren, Robert Allen and Lawrence Kip Bonner. They are sons of Andrew Allen Bonner, who died several years ago.

W. L. SNOW, who was so successful with Hal B this season, is now at Hornellsville, N. Y., where he will conduct a public stable. He has Hal B, 2:04½, and his sister, Fanny Dillard, 2:08½. The Buffalo pacer Agitato, 2:09½, by Steinway and the trotting mare Mamie Griffin, 2:12 by Black Bird, have also been sent to him.

NELL, the great broodmare who is the dam of Vassar 2:07, Belle Vara 2:08½, Susie T. 2:09½, Amhidexter 2:11½ and several others, is by Estell Eric, a grandson of Mambrino Chief 11, and her dam was by a thoroughbred son of Lexington. All the great ones seem to have more or less of that cursed running blood close up.

PRICES for trotting bred stock were low at the Kellogg sale in New York last week. J. Malcolm Forbes' consignment of seven head averaged but $163. Three fillies by Arion brought $100, $100 and $120 respectively. The highest priced animal of the sale was Rosamond, a bay mare by Red Wilkes that sold for $525.

ORRIN HICKOK, who is located at Lexington, Kentucky, has a mighty good filly in Sarah Maddern, by Axtell. She is a green three year old, but two weeks ago the veteran reinsman drove her a mile in 2:13½, the last quarter in 31½ seconds. She ought to be peaches and cream in the slow classes next year if she stays right.

THE fast pacing mare, Miss Maymo 2:09½, gets a great deal of her exercise at the gallop. Her trainer says she used to tire earlier when worked at the pace than she does under the present system. Before her best race this year she was galloped a couple of warming up miles in 2:17, and in the race she never lifted her head or made a break.

CHARLIE KAPP had a dandy team out on the speedway last week, I Direct and Fannie Putnam. Both have marks of 2:13 and are about the same size, and though they do not look much alike they pole together splendidly. Neither has ever been driven double more than a half a dozen times but they took to it as though "to the manor horn."

ANDREWS' way of driving John R. Gentry is different than any other ever practiced on the little stallion, and it has been very successful. In almost every race he has allowed his opponents to get a lead which at the time seemed almost too great to overcome, and then rushing Gentry from the three-quarters would nail the heat right at the wire.

M. H. TICHEBOR, the New York dealer in high class carriage horses will arrive in California within a few weeks. He is on the lookout for good ones that are fit for the sales-rings. At his sale in New York October 19th, fifty-six animals were sold at an average of $1100 each, which is evidence that good carriage horses can be bred and sold at a profit.

THE stallion J. C. Simpson 2:18½, owned by Steiner Bros., of Bluffton, O., gets his first representative in the list in Sally Simpson, a three year old filly that has a record of 2:21½, and has trotted in 2:19 on a half-mile track. This horse is the fifth son of Electioneer and Columbine to enter the list of sires, the others being Anteaio 2:16½, Anteros Antevolo 2:16½ and Conrad.

SUPERINTENDENT CLINE, of the Two-Minute Farm, says that so far as he can learn the eight mares bred to Star Pointer last spring are in foal, the owners of Lena N. 2:05½, Whisper 2:08½, Lottie Lorraine 2:05½, and Jessie R., dam of Be Sire 2:06½, having stated that those mares are surely in foal. Minetta 2:10½ and Daisy, dam of Gilman 2:11½, and Prussia Girl 2:22½, the only farm mares bred to him, are also in foal.

R. P. M. GREELEY, of Oakland, has recently purchased the fast and handsome bay pacer De Bernardi Basler 2:16½ by Robert Basler and also the bay pacer Billy McKinley 2:25 by Yosemite. He will use them as a team and as they are well matched in size and color should be a very attractive pair on the road. Either can speed a two minute clip, and it is believed they can pole together a quarter close to thirty seconds.

TOMMY MURPHY, or as the horsemen call him "Plater" Murphy from the fact that he has plated more fast race horses than any man of his age in America, will open a horse shoeing shop in this city shortly. He was all through the Eastern Grand Circuit this year with the Keating string and put the shoes on Searchlight 2:03½ and Anconda 2:03½ with which they made their records, and also shod Star Pointer when he paced a mile in 2:00, the fastest mile paced this year. Mr. Murphy's services will be in demand as soon as he gets located and puts his apron on.

MEMBERS of the Golden Gate Park Driving Association went out to the speedway last Saturday expecting to race over that track, but the rain of the previous evening had made the track so wet that the park authorities closed the gates and refused to open them, knowing that the track would be badly cut up by being driven over. The conditions of the races arranged were that if weather prevented their being pulled off Saturday, they were to be postponed until the first Saturday following when the conditions are favorable. At this writing it does not look as though the races can be held to-day.

FORTY head of trotting bred mares and geldings by Hawthorne, Moses S., Henry Thorne, California Lambert and other well known sires, and out of standard bred mares, will be sold at auction on Thursday next by Chase & Mendenhall, successors to Killip & Co., the live stock auctioneers at whose salesyard corner of Market street and Van Ness avenue, more high priced horses have been sold than in any saleyard in California. This consignment is composed of young horses all in good condition and will go to the highest bidder without reserve. Remember the date of the sale, Thursday, Nov. 16th.

SAM GAMBLE returned this week from Gilroy and reports that Budd Doble has his two carloads of horses ready to ship to the Fasig-Tipton Old Glory sale at New York, and they will start on the 15th inst., which will be Wednesday next. A few of the horses are not in condition, having had a touch of distemper, but all those to be shipped will be in first class shape or they will be left at home. Stetson, a gelding by Aptos Wilkes, one of the best lookers in the lot, will have to be left here, and it is a pity as he certainly would bring a good price in New York. Mr. Doble is so wrapped up in a dozen of the lot that he would like to pull them out of the consignment and place them in training for the races of 1900, being confident that he would win many first moneys with them. A mare by Dexter Prince, out of a mare by Steinway, is one of these that Doble says is already a fast mare and will be a real crackerjack with training. She is so nicely gaited and has shown such hursts of speed that it just about breaks Doble's heart to think of putting her up at auction.

Opening of Tanforan Park.

About five thousand people took the trains for Tanforan Park last Saturday, the day set by the Western Turf Association for the opening of its new track. The trip was made from the corner of Third and Townsend streets in this city to the track in 33 minutes and the crowd filed in to the grounds with the sound of carpenters' hammers ringing on all sides. Everything was not in readiness for opening, but there was nothing to discommodate the patrons in any way. The grand stand was unpainted in some parts but the seats were in place and the view of the beautiful new track unobstructed. The hatting ring was completed and to the agreeable surprise of all who entered it, a view of the entire course could be had from any position on the bitumen floor. Although the finishing touches had not been put on any of the buildings all were comfortable for their occupants—stands, paddocks and stalls. The new track was duly inspected by the horseman and was found to be a magnificently constructed oval, every foot of which is clearly visible from stand, betting ring and saddling paddock. It is built on a dark loam that is very slightly inclined to be of an adobe character, and this sort of soil is the very best known on which to construct a fast and safe track. It has a life and a springiness that is just suited to the race horse, he has a galloper or a trotter, and it is more than probable that when harness racing is held at Tanforan (which will in all probability occur next year), the California records will be broken there. The transportation facilities for passengers to and from the track are excellent, or will be when the railroad people, in the language of the street, "get onto their new job." Passengers are landed right at the grand stand in a half hour from the city and returned in the same time. This can be shortened probably to 25 minutes. The idea of beginning racing at 1:30 and ending at 4 o'clock is an excellent one as it enables all to reach the city before 5 o'clock, which is a great advantage in these short winter days, as all reach home before dark.

On Thursday of this week the time schedule of the trains was changed and is now very convenient. It is as follows: Local trains leave Third and Townsend street depot at 9:00, 10:40 and 11:30 a. m. Special race trains at 12:40, 12:50 and 1:25 p. m., returning immediately after the last race and at 4:45 p. m. Trains leave ten minutes later than Third street. The buildings and the track have been described in previous issues of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, and it is safe to assert that when completed Tanforan Park will be more than has been claimed for it in site, climate and appointments, by its most enthusiastic admirers. The scene of Saturday was a brilliant one. The grand stand was filled, the betting ring likewise, and in the infield were many of the smartest turnouts from Burlingame and San Mateo. The races were run in fast time and everything went like clock work after a little delay in starting caused by the railroad company failing to land a train load of horses at the track in time for some of them to start in the first race. Tanforan Park is certainly a splendid addition to the tracks in this locality.

SADDLE NOTES.

BEN HOLLADAY has been retired to the stud at Lexington, Kentucky.

Mr. W. O'B. MACDONOUGH has leased four yearlings to William Murray. Three are by St. Carlo, the other by Dr. Nava.

MARCUS DALY has been very ill at the Hotel Netherland, New York, for two or three weeks. He is unable to leave his room.

LITTLE John Walsh is improving all the time and is said to be one of the crack jockeys when he has another year's experience.

BILLY MAGRANE has a black colt by Fordham which he has named Tuttle, after the manager of the Burns and Waterhouse stables, Georgia Tuttle.

LITTLE JOHNNY REIFF won at the Liverpool autumn meeting last Wednesday on Admiral Dewey, an American horse, with odds at 100 to 1.

DAN HONIG arrived from St. Louis early in the week. He says that Lonis Ezall and J. Cochran will be here as soon as the Lakeside meeting closes.

BEN LEDI, a three year old colt by imp. Inverness out of Bonita, sold at one of Marcus Daly's weeding out sales for $150, won the last race at Tanforan Wednesday with twenty to one about him. He beat the favorite Montallada two lengths. The distance was five furlongs.

JOHN SCHORR's colors were in front the first time they were seen in California, which was on Meadowthorpe in the fourth race at Tanforan Tuesday.

INFLUENZA is very prevalent among the horses at Oakland. Sempar Leon, Galen Brown's gelding by Leonatus, died from the disease the other day.

A. M. LINNELL bought Burmah six weeks ago from "Daggie" Smith and since then the son of Bersan has won three jumping races, and been second in another.

STARTER CALDWELL has been in splendid form since the opening of Tanforan Park, and has dispatched the horses quickly and to excellent starts. He uses no recall flag.

It is generally believed that Capt. Reese will next year be appointed presiding steward at all the tracks in the East, where racing is conducted under the auspices of the Jockey Club.

1899 WILL hold the record for jockeys set down and run off on American tracks. It is not certain whether the turf officials are becoming more watchful and strict, or the jobs are getting more numerous.

"How to Make or Lose Money at the Races" is the title of a book issued by Godwin Bros. that is now in its second edition. It is one of the most valuable aids to form players ever compiled. Copies are for sale at this office.

THE Ruinart Stock Farm, the property of R. Porter Ashe, has lately received from the Burlingame Stock Farm a fine lot of broodmares, which were purchased by Mr. Ashe with the view of breeding them to Ruinart and imp. Tarcoola.

JOCKEY WM. BLOSS, a rider well known in Chicago, where he has been riding for the past two or three years, was ruled off last week at Lakeside for a bad ride on May Beach, who was beaten fifteen lengths when the judges thought she should have won.

THE stairways to the grandstand at Tanforan, being placed so that they lead up to the stand from the rear are a great improvement over those at Ingleside and Oakland, inasmuch as they afford no view of the track and are therefore always clear during a race.

CHAS. KERR has consigned twenty-seven head of thoroughbred yearlings to the auction block, and they will be sold Monday evening, November 27th, at Wm. G. Layng's Occidental Horse Exchange, 721 Howard street, this city. This is said to be the finest lot of youngsters that ever came from the Kerr farm.

THE mare Lilly Wright by California, that died a few months ago, left a great family. Every one of her products that have faced the flag are winners. Diomed, the two year old, won his first race at Tanforan on Monday last, beating a good field and running the five furlongs in 1:01 1/2. He is a full brother to Diggs, Sutton, Arabces and Olinthus, and like the last named is owned by I. P. Diggs of Woodland, who bred him.

THE mila and a quarter selling race at Tanforan last Tuesday resulted in one of the best races ever seen on a track. There were five starters and although Opposat, the odds on favorite, won by a short length, daylight could not be seen between the five when the winner's nose was at the wire. Reolia was second, a head in front of G. B. Morris, who was only a head in front of Frank Jaubert, and he a short half length in front of Castaka.

CHARLES REED, who is a shrewd observer of racing matters, has a remedy for the starting difficulty. Mr. Reed's idea is to place the harrier behind the horses instead of in front of them and make them back up to it. As proof that his theory is the correct one, he points to the starts at the short seven furlongs at Aqueduct, where the horses are backed up against the fence across the end of the chute. Most of the starts on this course are fairly good ones, and Mr. Reed says it is due to the fact that none of the horses can get far enough away for a running start.

FOXHALL KEENE, the well-known American sportsman holds the record jump at Melton Mowbray in England. The jump was made in 1896. Not knowing the ground Mr. Keene took his horse, known as Twenty-four, over a fence to take a short cut to where the hounds were casting for a fox. He saw a fence in front of him and set his horse at it just as the hounds gave tongue. The other huntsmen shouted to him in alarm, but he did not know that their cries boded danger to him. He went at the fence at full speed. Twenty-four took off and landed him safely on the other side. He had jumped a fence with furz concealing it five feet ten inches high and had crossed a ditch eighteen feet wide and fifteen feet deep. The huntsmen cheered him to the echo, and when they returned from the chase the distance from the marks of the horse's feet where he took off to where he landed measured twenty-two feet. It is pointed out to every visitor to Melton Mowbray as the record jump in that region of England.

A EUROPEAN gentleman who recently visited Mr. C. Whitney's stables at Wheatlay Hills, Long Island, says of them: "I have never seen in all my experience anything that compared with the magnificent stables erected at Westbury. There are libraries and reading rooms for the stablemen, dormitories constructed with a view to the best sanitary arrangements possible. The dining room compares favorably with many of those of the better class of hotels, and every care has been taken to secure comfort, and, I might add, luxury, for the employees. The quarters for the horses are the equal, if not the superior, of any in the world. In addition, there is an exercising track around the stable of three turns to the mila, so that on stormy days the horses can be exercised without being exposed to the inclemency of the weather. William C. Whitney is a valuable acquisition to the American turf, and should occupy a leading position, as he is a true sportsman, who aims only to give the public first class sport and to derive as much pleasure as possible from his racing stable."

Best Race Records of the Year.

New 2:30 Performers.

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT.

It is not probable that any records will be further reduced this year as the racing season is about ended except on a few of the tracks in the Southern States and on those it is not probable any very fast miles will be trotted or paced this year. Following table will therefore require no further corrections:

TROTTERS.

Table listing trotting records for various horses, including names like Gain, Ferezo, Endow, Idolita, Exstasy, Boralma, Peter the Great, Neeretta, Who Is It, etc., with their respective times.

PACERS.

Table listing pacing records for various horses, including names like Major Marshall, N. L. B., Lucie May, Kate Clay, John Harris, etc., with their respective times.

A Rattling Three Year Old.

A report comes from Lexington that the latter part of October a dozen or more Blue Grass horsemen were invited to see Dr. Galbreath's green three year old Electric Wilkes work out. She made them all look upon her as a wonder as she warmed the track to the tune of 0:33 1/2 for the first quarter, the half in 1:05 1/2, the three-quarters in 1:39 and the mile in 2:13 1/2.

PADDY RYAN'S string is made up of several very shifty performers; every animal from this stable which has started since its arrival in this State has proved a winner on one or more occasions. Afamada, especially, has shown herself to be a most useful breadwinner and is probably the best horse in the sprinting division now running on local tracks.

The following new 2:30 performers have made their records on California tracks this year:

TROTTERS.

Table listing new 2:30 trotting performers with names like Sybil S., Lotia Parks, Hazel Y., El Moro, Pysche, Listerine, Eleanor Ann, etc., and their times.

PACERS.

Table listing new 2:30 pacing performers with names like Clipper, Kelly Briggs, Myrtha Whips, Daedalion, Wild Nutting, John A., El Diablo, Sable Le Grand, etc., and their times.

Reduced Records.

The following horses have reduced their records on California tracks this year:

TROTTERS.

Table listing horses that have reduced their records, including names like Addison, Iora, Neeretta, Gallette, Pbae Childers, etc., with their previous and new times.

PACERS.

Table listing horses that have reduced their records in pacing, including names like Jennie Mc, Don, Beechwood, Diawood, etc., with their previous and new times.

DEMOCRAT'S Middle Park and Dahnst Plate victories have enabled Sensation to again wrest from St. Simon the position of second on the list of winning stallions. Sensation now is credited with thirteen winners of eighteen races; their aggregate winnings in money exceeding St. Simon's total by some $15,000.

Question—I have a mare four years old, sound as a new dollar, and perfectly healthy as far as I know. Last Thursday evening I took her from the lot in which I let her run during the day (it is a small field of alfalfa) and put her in her box stall, blanketed and fed her for the night. Friday morning when I went to the stable I saw at once that she did not move about as free as she generally does, when I came to feed, and upon examination I found that all four of her legs had swollen during the night to twice their natural size. I fed her and she ate well and seemed all right otherwise but her legs. I turned her out in the lot about 11 o'clock Friday, put her back in the stable at night as usual. Saturday morning her legs were swollen still larger and her hind legs were swollen above the hock joint. She walked out of the stable like an old stiffened up stags horse. I turned her out in the lot and she tried to run and play. Sunday the swelling had gone down considerably, and I hitched her up in my cart and drove her about six or seven miles, and the swelling went down so her legs looked quite natural. When I got home I unhitched and put her in the lot and by Sunday night the swelling had returned and up to the present time her legs are twice the natural size. There is more or less fever in them and they seem to be tender. She does not like for one to touch them. We have no veterinarians here and I have asked most of the horsemen here but none of them seem to know what is the cause. Some say she is stocked up for want of driving, but she is out in the lot every day and can take exercise. I cannot drive her as often as I wish as I am working and have not the time. Can you tell me what is the cause of the swelling, and what remedies would you apply. The swelling in front is from the hoof to the knee, and behind from hoof to hock.

Yours very truly, R. M. W.

Answer—If your mares were perfectly well, she should not stock up to that extent, merely for want of exercise, considering that she runs daily in an alfalfa paddock. If the mares still eats well and feels well, let her run out daily as you have done (weather permitting) Hand rub her legs when you take her into the stall in the evening and bandage them with cotton batting and bandages up to the knees and hocks. Give her slow exercise, in light harness, when you have time. Don't feed her grain. She may get a bran mash morning and evening, besides hay. Give her one of the following powders morning and evening in food:

- Potassium nitrate, 4 ounces
Pulverized nux vomica, 3 drams
Pulverized digitalis, 2 drams
Sodium bicarbonate, 3 ounces
Mix well and divide into 12 powders.

Report how she is doing when the powders are finished, or sooner if she gets dull and off her feed, and describe any additional symptoms that may appear. She has probably a slight attack of influenza, which could develop into something more serious if neglected.

A Great Horse Sale.

Certainly the most phenomenal sale of road horses, devoid of any particular amount of speed, was that held at the American Horse Exchange, New York, by the Chicago firm, Tichenor & Co., on the date of October 19th. The first horse sold, The Demon, a bay gelding, six years old, 15 3/4 hands high, trotting bred, brought $4500, while the first twenty-five head sold, all merely high class fancy trotting bred geldings, bought for road use, brought $36,500, an average of $1460 per head. Last year, about this time, the same firm held a special sale at the same place, of the same grade of horses, twenty-five head bringing $26,000, or nearly 30 per cent. less per head than was realized at this season's sale. With light road and carriage horses selling at these prices, and continually getting higher all the time, is it strange that we should be advocating horse breeding on a larger and more exacting scale to our readers? These high priced horses were all classed as trotting bred, yet they were not sold on their speed possessions, but on their soundness, good looks, good action and general chancy qualities. As an argument against farmers and small breeders breeding trotters it is often said, "Too few of them have speed, and, when they do, development costs too much." This argument is not only threadbare, but is illogical. Speed development is not an essential element of good value and an unusually large profit in trotting horse breeding, especially if quality is looked after, and no class of horses is profitable to raise if quality is neglected. No other breed of horses in the world possesses the hardness, density of texture, soundness, intelligence, tractability and durability of American trotters, and no other breed possesses one-half the range of usefulness. For light harness use the American trotter stands practically alone; for saddle use, if given saddle education, he stands unexcelled; for carriage purposes he stands without a peer, and for all else than heavy draft he is sublimely superior. He is the rich man's equine ornament and the poor man's obedient and everywhere useful servant. He is the twentieth century horse, the favorite and best, not only in his native land, but throughout all civilized countries in which he has been given a chance to demonstrate his superiority.—Western Horseman.

The Flying Fish of Catalina Island.

One of the many wonderful things to be seen at Catalina Island, off the coast of Los Angeles county, and politically a portion of the county, the flying fish seems to have unusual interest for the visitor. It is the ordinary fish seen in many tropical waters and scientifically a member of the Exocoetus genus, of which there are numerous species. At Catalina, and in the channel between the Island and the mainland, these fish are very numerous, and it is due to their presence and that of squid, it is believed, that the fishing for the immense leaping tuna has become such a feature. So far no bait save the flying fish, which can be naturally trolled, has been found which the tuna will strike.

The flying fish, as seen at Catalina, is usually from twelve to fifteen inches long, and will weigh between one and two pounds. It is a very dark blue, almost black in color and its meat is very compact. It is said to be excellent eating when properly cooked. Frequent specimens are caught in the fishermen's nets and have an unfailing market value during the proper season, as tuna bait.

The long wings of the fish when folded up lie close to the body. They are delicate in appearance, but wonderfully strong, and make when mounted an attractive ornament. By means of the wings (pectoral fins) the fish sails really—it does not fly. It acquires momentum by swiftly swimming, through the water, then leaps into the air at a very small angle with the water's surface, sets its wings, and thus soars over the sea. It rarely rises more than six or eight feet above the surface and is capable of making a flight of two hundred yards. So rapid is its progress through the air that it cannot leave a straight line save for a long curve and is, in consequence, unable frequently to avoid boats which are in its way. A flying fish in flight will knock a man down and might easily do him serious injury.

The flight of the fish is really a means of defense and is resorted to when it is pursued by some of the enemies that prey upon it, foremost among them being the tuna. The tuna's progress through the water is hardly less swift than that of the flying fish through the air, and he is frequently so close to his quarry at the end of the flight that before the poor flying fish can secure enough momentum for a second flight, he is gobbled.

Steelhead Fishing in Marin County.

In reply to a letter of inquiry from the State Fish and Game Commission Hon. Hugh J. McIsaac, District Attorney for Marin county, says in substance: In his opinion, under section ten of the Marin county game ordinance No. 107, fishing for steelhead trout is undoubtedly prohibited during the close season for other trout. He does not believe that the Board of Supervisors contemplated the prohibition of fishing for steelhead in tidal waters, he also intimated that action will be taken by the Board lifting this particular prohibition which is a matter of so much interest to local anglers. Nothing however was done in this respect on Monday evening when the Supervisors met. Several anglers in this city have received assurances however from both the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors and the Secretary of the Game Protection Association to the effect that anglers who fish for steelhead in tidal waters, as they have done in the past, will not be proceeded against by the authorities, which is a very sensible and magnanimous method of settling a vexed question.

The Florida tarpon and the Catalina Island leaping tuna are not to have the monopoly it seems, of a reputation for sensational feats in the jumping line, according to the following: "Salmon have been known on more than one occasion to save anglers trouble by jumping into the boat, and cases of suicida by other sportive fish in like manner have been recorded. The palm for sensation must be awarded to a common thrasher which jumped on a boat, a three-ton yacht, off Ilfracombe, England, on September 4th. It fortunately cleared the head of the only lady who was sitting in the wall of the boat and writhed its head into the little cabin. This enabled the owner of the yacht, Mr. Knowles, and his man to prevent the fish struggling and doing more mischief than it did; as it was all the four people on board held on to his tail and managed to keep him under control till help came. The two ladies were badly bruised about the legs before the fish was secured and Mr. Knowles received a blow which blackened his eye and the side of his face. When it is said that the thrasher was 14 feet 6 inches long, including 7 feet of tail—the scythe-like upper lobe of the thrasher's tail is familiar to most people—it can well be imagined what such a visitor was on a half-decked yacht."

Col. C. G. Young and John Benn enjoyed several days fishing on the Garcia this week. They caught a large number of fish but many of them were too small and were returned to the stream. Large fish were hooked near the mouth of the stream. The fishing at the old mill dam is said to be excellent.

The fly casting club will hold their next regular meeting and annual banquet on Tuesday evening. Judge Hunt will preside as toastmaster. The medals for the season of 1899 will be presented to the winning anglers.

During the week many striped bass have been caught on the narrow gauge railroad wharf across the bay. A few steelhead and several young salmon have also been caught there.

The late "Billy" McRae was known to sportsmen and his friends as the possessor of a most happy and congenial disposition, rare qualities which won him the confidence and friend-ship of his business associates, the esteem of his shooting companions and cemented the masonic bond of good fellowship, a mellow, happy ritual known and felt by those who meet afield or afloat when in mutual search of recreation and sport with gun and rod. Some six years ago McRae, who was a keen and ardent hunter, with Jack Lemmer, Fred Johnson and Dick Brooks organized the now famous duck shooting club, the Black Jacks. Their shooting grounds were then and are now located on Sherman island, opposite Antioch. McRae not only was an adept with the shot gun, but he fully understood the habits of the many kinds of wild duck frequenting the ponds and tules of Sherman island, which territory he knew so thoroughly that he was facetiously called the "Pathfinder" and "Survayor Ganaral" by his shooting mates who many times relied upon his unerring knowledge of the lay of the land to extricate them after losing their bearings in the labyrinth of tules. A year ago Billy was the picture of robust health endowed with a rich fund of vitality and good nature, last Saturday he crossed the river. The final sad rites by relatives and friends were paid to the departed on Monday. His relatives were not alone in their grief, there was present a large number of his business associates and representatives of the local gun clubs and the sportsmen's fraternity. Among those present from a distance were Mrs. Remfree Sr., with her sons Wm. and Robt Remfree, and Henry Danken of Antioch, also a number of other friends from the San Joaquin district.

John Lemmer, F. H. Johnson, David Thom, James Gainer and Oscar Davis of Murphy, Grant and Company and Hugh Nolan of Levi Strauses and Company officiated as pall bearers. The number and profusion of beautiful floral pieces and cut flowers testified to the sincere sorrow of Billy's many friends.

William D. McRae was born in Rosshire, Scotland, twenty-seven years ago. For the past ten years he held a responsible position with the firm of Murphy, Grant and Company. Taken away in the flower of his early manhood his death is deplored by all who knew him. The illustration above is one of a series of pictures forming a group of members of the Black Jack Club.

Notes on Game Protection.

The Santa Clara County Fish and Game Protective Association will endeavor to secure the appointment of a Game Warden for that county. This is a move in the right direction. At a meeting of the organization held in San Jose last week the members present listened to several eloquent speakers who advocated the formation of a state protective association based on the lines of the body organized some six years ago. It is to be hoped that the sportsmen of Santa Clara county will not endeavor to regulate the fish and game question for the whole State, at least not until they do a little more effective work in that respect in their own domain. The use of sneak boats and night shooting are methods of hunting ducks that are prohibited in many Eastern states. Humboldt county prohibits night shooting. All true sportsmen unite in condemning those practices. Santa Clara county sportsmen have as yet made no effort to suppress or prohibit sneak boats and night shooting in their county.

In the published accounts of the meetings of the association most of the speakers harp on generalities and threadbare conventionalities, we have yet to notice the pioneer suggestions in the nature of a satisfactory and easy adjustment of a matter that under the present State law should present no difficulty whatever in the speedy and equitable disposition of it. It seems as if the good ship "Game Protection" was loaded down to the Plimsoll line with a cargo of windy game law tinkers whose continual caterwauling instead of doing good, actually does the sportsmen harm. Some of the jaw-hawking abuse and vituperation showered upon individuals and against conditions, published in the columns of journals devoted to sport, have resulted in county legislation that is alike harmful to the county and to visiting sportsmen, as for instance the recent ordinances of San Joaquin and Monterey counties which prohibit the taking of game out of the county by the hunter who has shot the same legitimately. In fact one of the speakers at the San Jose meeting openly advocates the passage of a similar ordinance by the Solano authorities.

Another speaker at San Jose last week who claims to have preached the gospel of game protection "all his life long" started a little boomlet in favor of the adoption of the game law submitted to the last legislature. He didn't want any other recognition for his good offices than the appointment of state game warden. That bill and the hopes of some of its material friends are buried in the ashes of the past.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

Market hunters are thick in Reclamation district.

The Spreckels' and Grogran ranches near Hollister have been posted against hunters.

In the San Benito hills on Sunday recently twenty Hollister sportsmen enjoyed the good quail shooting found there.

W. W. Foote and Judge Henshaw had three sacks of "cans" on the down train the beginning of the week. The birds were shot on Tubbs island and were all in prima condition.

Fifteen members of the Olympic Gun Club were out on the club's preserves near Cordelia station last Sunday. Frank Tius bagged nine birds which was the best showing for the day's shooting.

Ducks are beginning to come into the marshes at Richardson's Bay, Point San Pedro and Point Reyes marshes. A number of flocks of wild pigeons have been seen at the foot of Mount Tamalpais.

Duck shooting has been improving recently, but many hunters are not counting on a good duck shoot until the full flight of the northern ducks is on, which will not be until towards the end of the month.

The devotees of quail shooting have had fair success recently among those who were afield we note W. S. Kittla, J. La Roy Nickel and R. Oxnard of the Country Club who each bagged the limit number of birds.

The Empire Gun Club members found on going out for birds on their grounds that they had been forestalled by a number of poachers who cleaned out and scattered the quail pretty well leaving the club men but small bags.

It is reported that the annual flight of wild pigeons in thousands have made their appearance in the Santa Cruz mountains during the past two weeks. They are most numerous it is said in the vicinity of Mountain Charlay ranch.

Cornelius W. Smith of Syracuse, N. Y., President of the New York State Fish, Game and Forest League, died suddenly of heart disease, on October 23th. He did much for sportsmen's interests in New York revising and perfecting the game law.

One night last week a jolly party of duck hunters indulged in a "high luck" at Hall's hostelry Cordelia station. The feature of the evening (originio 2 P M) was the Amazonian march an roba da nuit. The final a new dance called the Pajama Passamsela was a corker.

The Los Banos region is not now offering many inducements for the attention of the duck hunter. Not enough water is the complaint of the market hunter. The San Luis field which is frequented by ducks and geese as a resting place after they leave the feeding grounds is dry.

The duck hunters at Willow Lodge shooting grounds last Sunday were Jim Maynard, Dr. E. N. Ayers, C. Shaw and Dr. Lana. The party had a better shoot than on previous visits this season and the birds, mostly sprig, were nice and plump. The combined bag counted eighty ducks.

Among the duck hunters at the Empire Club preserve last Sunday were Dr. Alden, Dr. Parent, Dr. Gare, Rod Gnyette, Wm. O. Cullen, W. A. Saaries, Curtis Baird, W. W. Lambern, F. S. Judah, W. J. La Motte, Fred Brown, J. B. Haner, C. C. Juster and Cecil Reed. Most of the hunters made fair bags composed of sprig, teal and widgeon.

A quartette of well known sportsmen, Clarence A. Haight, Johnny Coleman, Fred Bushnell and Al. Cumming had an enjoyable morning shoot on the Olympic Gun Club preserve Wednesday. The combined bag was an excellent one composed of teal, sprig and widgeon, most of the birds being in excellent condition.

The Olympic Gun Club elected the following board of directors Wednesday evening: R. H. Dalasfield, J. Homer Fritch, Marton C. Altan, L. W. Harpham, W. A. Marshall, W. D. McArthur, A. Roos, Fred Surryna and Wallace Taylor. The board will meet next Wednesday evening and complete organization by the election of permanent officers.

The Tamalpais Club turned out quite a big delegation Sunday and guns cracked merrily on their preserves all day long. Most of the members touched the limit, and the lightest bag numbered over twenty birds. Among those who shot on the club's preserves were H. F. Wagner, F. Drinkhouse, John Bergtz, F. Osborn, Albert Pisses, Fred Butler, "Billy" Burke, "Billy" Brown and A. Roos.

Quail hunters who shot through the canyons near Point Reyes and on the Mt. Tamalpais slopes found many birds, nearly every hunter bagged the limit. Frank Varon and E. G. Rodolf made limit bags at the Point on Sunday. At other places Ed McMahon and Ed Schuman bagged thirty quail near San Mateo. Joe Bickersstaff found little trouble in dropping twenty-six birds near Nicasio. Lakeville was the ground where John Zellnar found an even dozen quail. Jas. Johnson and partner shot nine dozen birds on the Fair ranch near McGills. Karney and Burns shot over the same ground Sunday but only bagged sixteen quail.

A "dead game sport" is now an apt term applied to the individual who goes to the woods, purchases his game from some smarter hunter, brings it home and proudly exhibits it as an example of his skill as a sportsman.

Half moon Bay and the country adjacent has always borne a good reputation as an inviting section for quail hunters. Last Sunday a quartette of sanguine sportsmen composed of Geo. H. T. Jackson, Paymaster Ring of the Iowa, Phil Wand and Sam Hughes enjoyed a hunt over a hospitable Italian rancher's domain. They found plenty of birds in large heaves, these quail had not yet been disturbed very much by hunters with a result that it was the hardest kind of work to scatter a bunch of birds and let the dogs work them—instead the birds made some phenomenally long flights and made the shooters earn every bird they bagged. The dogs—and they are good ones too—Jackson's pointer Scott, Phil Wand's Flora W., and Hughes Doc H. had all the leg work they could stand. This section is fairly alive with cotton tail rabbits which are at present in the very best of condition.

So many panthers seem to be roaming around Marin county at present that the dairymen and farmers living away from the vicinity of towns and villages are kept in a state of apprehension. The latest instance of a panther frightening dairymen occurred on Monday morning when two of the species, a male and a female, appeared at Ontaro's ranch near Point San Pedro and killed a yearling calf. Ontaro saw John Smith, a well known market hunter of San Rafael, passing by and besought his aid in killing the ferocious beasts. Smith discharged a shotgun at the panthers, which fed into the hills.

Last week a panther chased the ten-year-old son of Charles Orcutt in Chileo Valley and was frightened away from the intended victim by two dogs. A month ago two of the hungry beasts attacked a sea lion on Hog Island, at the entrance of Tomales bay, and succeeded in killing it after a terrific encounter, in which they were both badly injured.

Bison Range on the South Platte.

Buffalo have been seen in the South Platte forest reserve, and only forty-five miles from Denver. Colonel W. T. S. May, in charge of forest reserves for the district of Colorado and Utah, has received a letter from Supervisor S. H. Standart, who is stationed at Pine. Mr. Standart incloses a letter from Ranger W. W. Hooper, who gives all details of the bison that were on the reserve. Mr. Hooper saw them himself. In his letter he goes on to say that he found buried the hopes of what he believes was a calf, and intimates that hunters have been killing a buffalo whenever the chance presented itself. Mr. Standart says that Ranger Hooper is a perfectly reliable man and anything he says can be depended upon.

Following is a copy of the letter written to Supervisor Standart by Ranger Hooper:

"As it may interest you to know something about the game in the South Platte reserve, I will report my knowledge of it in my district. On Monday, September 11th, I went to Tarryall, north of Tarryall park. At that place I saw two bison. It is a terrible rough country and the underbrush is so thick that there might have been more. But two I saw I then went northwest along the range six miles and saw six bison and one calf lying down. I know they were not the same as those I saw first. They ran northeast and down a gulch toward Goose creek. On Sunday, September 17th, I was up on the range at the head of the gulch and saw five bison. They were not the same I saw before, as I could tell by the different feet and size. That week a man told me he saw five eight or ten miles up the range, which I believe were the same ones I saw. He said he was hunting cattle. That was what they would all say, but most of them would carry a gun and pass stock, and as a general thing they were not settlers of that country. The same day I saw six with a calf and I saw bones that had been burned. These resembled those of a calf. I could not say, but believe they were the bones of a calf. That country is swarming with mountain sheep. I have seen where there was a lot of them killed, and, as I believe, there was not one man near to protect the game. One of the rangers northwest of here saw two hands of sheep and in the two bands there were 200."

Rice Birds by the Million.

Eastern sportsmen this season found the sport of rice bird shooting as enjoyable as ever, the hunters say they noticed countless millions of the birds in lower Carolina—more than for many years, despite the great destruction of them for market and as a protection to the crops in the last few years, writes a correspondent of the Inter-Ocean.

The rice bird is the most remarkable of American game birds. An old rice planter, talking of the rice bird, said: 'The rice bird is similar to the female of the red wing or the black bird, and is of a dull black color. They travel in droves of millions, always in the advance of frosts and winter. They arrive in South Carolina in the spring, when the rice is just coming up and young sprouts are full of milk, and in the autumn, when the harvest is ready, they return. Their itinerary extends from zone to zone. The winter finds them in South America. As the warm belt begins to extend northward the rice birds begin their pilgrimage in its wake. There is method in their madness and there is a regular date on which they arrive at certain points. Three weeks ends their residence in this State, and on they go to Maryland, thence to New England, Canada and British America, where they nest.

"As the summer begins to wane, the rice birds pack up for a long trip to their South African home. They arrive in South Carolina about August 26th, and by October 20th not one can be found in the State. In New England this bird is known as the 'bobolink,' in Maryland as the 'reed bird,' and in South Carolina as the rice bird. Planters will risk a frost in spring or autumn to avoid the ravages of the pest. They come in millions and are ravenously fond of the tender young rice plants. For each sprout picked out of the ground four stalks are lost, for each seed produces four stalks. The stalk has an ear like the head of a stalk of wheat. Each ear of rice contains from 140 to 200 grains. Thus one little peck of his bill causes a destruction of over 600 grains of rice in embryo. As there are such myriads of these nomadic and peripatetic pests, the damage is enormous.

"Up to within the last few years all the birds put up on the market were killed with shot guns, but the negroes above Georgetown have adopted a new method and one more profitable to themselves. The hunter climbs the tallest cypress tree on the edge of the marsh and spots the droves of birds as they settle for the night.

"About 9 o'clock the hunter paddles his boat into the marsh and approaches as near as possible to the roost. His only armament is a bundle of pine faggots and a gunny sack. Lighting a fagot, he approaches the roost, which is always in a growth of tall weeds or reeds. The birds perching on the branches of the rushes are blinded by the light and make no attempt to fly. Beginning at the bottom of the reed, the hunter picks off the birds as he would fruit from a tree. The birds bring 15 cents per dozen and twenty-five dozen is considered an average night's work."

The Game Law.

The synopsis of the game laws appearing below and published in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for several years past has, from time to time been changed or the provisions of new ordinances added thereto by reason of the many and various changes in the county game and fish laws, particularly those of recent date and of application in and around the bay counties.

This synopsis has been frequently copied (in more or less garbled and incomplete form) and quoted by city and interior journals and has also been printed and distributed by business houses. While the information given at the date of issuance was substantially correct, we do not care to be held responsible for the circulation of old matter that is now incorrect in many details. Some complaint has been made in this respect and to avoid misunderstanding in the future it is suggested that for information of this character a reference be made to current numbers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for the latest and most complete data concerning the Game Laws.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

Fred Tallant's famed July hound Gabriel is well and in good condition again.

Mr. J. E. de Ruyter made his appearance on 'changa a few days ago, having just returned from a trip to the East.

It is rumored that Mr. W. S. Kittle will soon have a deer hound pack second to none on the Coast. He has three good dogs now as a nucleus.

Trainer George Richards of Verona Kennels will start for Tennessee on Monday with a string of twenty-five setters. These promising youngsters will be prepared for the Eastern circuit of field trials.

Henry F. Wagner purchased this week from August Drayner the English setter bitch Hazel C. Hazel is not only a very pretty looking bitch but she has a reputation as a field dog and close worker on quail that is a remarkably good one for a hunting dog and sportsman's companion.

W. T. Moore, of Woodland, had the misfortune to lose by accidental poisoning last Sunday a fine pointer bitch. He was out after quail and noticed something wrong by the actions of the dog. Suspecting that she had partaken of poison, which in that section is frequently laid out for coyotes, he immediately returned to town and had the bitch placed under treatment, but this availed nothing for death shortly followed. Mr. Moore valued her very highly as she was a grand field worker. Her sire was the renowned Champion Glenbeigh.

Entries for the All Age Stake of the Pacific Coast field trials close on December 15th. Mr. de Ruyter, the secretary of the club, was called East recently on very short notice and was unable to notify the various Derby nominators in reference to payments of second forfeit money, due on the 1st inst. Since his return Mr. de Ruyter has by proper notice extended the time for payment of the second forfeit, to those who have not paid, until November 15th. Advice from Bakersfield as to the effect that quail are plentiful in that section. It is unlikely that Verona Kennels will be represented in the Derby next January.

The dog stealer is making his presence felt in Los Angeles by the selection and theft of valuable specimens of choice breeds. So numerous have been the recent reports of dogs stolen and so infrequent the recoveries that there seems to be a well-founded belief that the dogs are shipped to other points and possibly sold.

Verone Kennels champion collie Old Hall Admiral, is now in Philadelphia in charge of James Watson. Admiral will be placed in the stud in that city. Mr. Watson also has charge of Champion Heather Mint and three of her beautiful puppies. This quietette of high class collies will be heached at the Philadelphia Pet Dog show November 22d.

The New Orleans Fox Terrier Club a short time ago decided to give a big bench show this winter. At first it was practically decided to hold this show on Thanksgiving day, but after careful consideration the members came to the conclusion that a postponement would be necessary. Now the club has named Christmas day as the one on which the show is to be held. The dogs will be heached at the Athletic Park, and the people witnessing the football game will have a chance to see the dogs on exhibition. Mr. J. J. Lynn, of Port Huron, Mich., will judge. It has not been definitely decided whether or not other breeds than terriers will be admitted to the show.

Tomelia is under the ban of the dog poisoner. On Monday last an Irish wolf hound, the property of P. Mulveyuey succumbed to a dose of strychnine. By noon the next day half the canines in the town had turned up their toes. The poison seems to have been scattered in all parts of the town, and dogs of high end low degree suffered equally. A fine Gordon setter belonging to Attorney J. W. Keyes was another of the victims. A. Focault and H. Bowman also lost valuable dogs. Constable Glover has been on the trail of offender for some days and hopes ultimately to bring him to justice. The local sportsmen are particularly incensed that they should have lost their dogs just at the commencement of the quail season.

A New York society dame, who is an ardent upholder of the Society of Cruelty to Animals, owns a little fox terrier of which she is exceedingly fond. A gentleman who had called on her one day was admiring the dog, and asked its mistress how she, with all her humane theories, could have allowed the cruel dog fancier to cut off Snap's tail end ears to the fashionable degree of brevity. The dame drew herself up and replied with some hauteur:

"My dear sir, Snap expected it. Every thoroughbred fox terrier expects to have his tail end ears shortened."

And that humble man went away saying to himself: "That's the first time I ever thought of 'noblesse oblige'" as applying to fox terriers."

"I'm in the mink tail business," said a man to me, "and it's wonderful how the business is growing."

One good tail deserves another, and I listened eagerly so as to get the story.

"Yesir. Big demand this year for teils of mink and merten. Women just crazy for them. Makes kind o' trimmings that are fashionable and that's what we want."

I pondered. Mink and marten tails for fur trimmings I thought of the number of teils for one garment. And it meant a little heast for each tell. Terrible slaugter of the innocents.

My friend noted my surprise. Nor did I conceal my sentiments.

He laughed prodigiously. "Did I say that every tail represented a mink? Not much. Nor a merten, either. No, sir. Not enough of these little animals to begin to supply the demand for teils, h'gosh. And the business is booming."

Mystified and speechless, I submitted to being taken into the mink tail factory. On the floors were dressed dogskins. Plenty of them. "But where were the minks?" I asked.

"There!" was the reply, and a long, skinny finger was pointing at the dogskins.

"You see," explained my guide, "there are not enough mink tails to supply the people at moderate price, so we take dressed dogskins and cut them into strips. We fold these in and out and when the manipulation is completed we color the lower part of the strips, and there you have as nice mink or marten teils as you ever saw. They sell at 10 cents apiece, in packages of a dozen each."

"Of course," said this fountain of truth and candor, "we don't tell our customers that we find the dogs more valuable after death than before, because the tails look very nice, and as long as they are properly christened and bought and sold as mink teils, why should we bring grief to happy hearts by destroying fond hopes?"

"Why, indeed, thought I!"—Hide and Leather.

Ch. Princeton Monarch.

It is a hard question for any one to say which is the best bull terrier in the country, but if it is to name the best two dogs, then the answer comes by the record—Princeton Monarch and Woodcote Wonder. The ups and downs of these two champions, says the American Kennel Gazette, has been a matter of enthusiasm and interest to the Eastern fancy time and again. Under the same judge at different times these two dogs are not always placed alike, but it is always one or the other as the winner, when they are shown, so that no one can find fault with another for making his own choice as to which is the better dog.

Princeton Monarch is a son of the recently deceased old Duke of Marlborough, and it is well to call attention to his being the representative dog of that sound strain. Monarch was bred by Mr. W. H. Montrey and was out of his bitch Trilby by Rookery Boy, out of that good bitch Amszement. He well upholds the excellence of his breeding, thus combining the great essentials—good looks and good pedigree. Monarch was first shown at New York last year, when, in a large class of puppies, Mr. Geo. Rapar sent him out minus a mention. It is true that he was not then well furnished, being just ten months old and leggy at the time, but others saw a future in the dog, Mr. Arden being one who tried to buy him at the time, but without success.

At the Bull Terrier Club show three months later, Mr. Jas. Mortimer gave Princeton Monarch four firsts, putting him at the front in Winners' Class. The same judge gave him first in Winners' at Breintrea in June, and in October in Denbury and Braintree, put him behind Woodcote Wonder; and in November at the Pet Dog Club, had Monarch ahead of Wouder in Open and Winners' Classes. This year Monarch won in Winners' Classes at Boston, Pittsburgh and Danbury, and his only defeat was at New York when Mr. Mayhew put him behind Woodcote Wonder and Faultless. At Boston he defeated Woodcote Wonder and Faultless and evauged his New York sat back.

It is thus seen that Princeton Monarch is fully entitled to his prefix of Champion, having won it on the strongest competition that can be produced. In his first big success the late Tommy Tickle was also among the defeated, he and Woodcote Wonder being placed equal second, behind Princeton Monarch. It is doubtful if we shall ever again have three such closely matched dogs as these. Princeton Monarch is but a little over two years of age and is lasting well in heed, so that he may be expected to hold his own for some time to come.

American Coursing Club Meeting.

The American Waterloo Cup meeting was held this year at Delles in an inclosure, the infield of the State Fair grounds, an excellent smooth and level stretch of sward of ample length and size. The coursing was handicapped by the hot weather, horse racing and a rather poor lot of hares. The dogs entered are said to have been a grand lot, although not up to those of previous years. Dr. G. Irwin Royca was judge and Joe Dodd did the slipping. May Queen, who divided the Waterloo Cup with J. H. Rossiter's Emin Pashe is a little red bitch by Van's O'Ball out of Neucy, and is owned by Erwin and Lyon of Honey Grove, Texas. She is said to have a nice turn of speed and comes around well and has the staying powers to come back. The winner of the Purse, Little Van, is a brother to May Queen and is also owned by Erwin & Lyon. The tick was very good to produce two winners; Little Van is a red with some white merks. The runner-up, Black Beauty, is a litter sister to Iowe Girl, she is a cool black, is neat and keeps coming to the front. She is by Miller's Reh, out of Lady Pembroke, and owned by Mr. John Sevin of St. Louis, Mo.

The winner of the Plate, imp. Temple, is a nicely finished few brindle dog weighing about sixty pounds. He is eighteen months old and is by Meller Moor—Thetis. He was fer from being acclimated and was brought to the meeting quite dumpy, but seemed to stand it pretty well. He is owned by John Cherlton & Son, Minneapolis.

Metellic is owned by J. H. Rossiter of San Francisco. She is a black and white bitch, weighing about thirty pounds, and has made a name for herself in the perks of California, but is getting a bit wise.

The summaries of the meeting are the following:

THE FARM.

On Mixing Feed.

Perhaps instead of talking so much about balanced rations and nutritive ratios, it might be well to talk a little about mixing feeds. First, a few facts: It is a fact that you yourself, while fond of bread and fond of butter, like them a good deal better together than you do separate. You could live on bread without butter if you had to, you could live for a little while on butter without bread, but you can live better by spreading the butter on the bread. You are fond of beans and you could eat them without pork, you are fond of pork and could eat it without beans, but long experience has taught you and your grandmother that pork and beans together are better than either pork or beans separate. You are fond of potatoes; you are also fond of beef. You could make a meal on brown potatoes without roast beef, or you could make a meal on roast beef without brown potatoes, but your grandmother taught you long ago that roast beef and brown potatoes are a very good mix for a substantial dinner. We might state facts like this much more fully, but the above will convince you that you like your food mixed.

Observation has taught you long ago that oats are good for pigs, and so is corn, but if you have kept your eyes open and notice closely you have observed that pigs make better gains on oats and corn mixed than they do on either separate. On the same line we might give a few similar facts from the stock yard. With potatoes at 10 cents per bushel, the digestible nutrients or food will cost you ninety cents per hundred pounds. With corn at thirty-five cents the digestible nutrients will cost you seventy-eight cents per hundred pounds. With middlings at $14 per ton, the digestible nutrients, or that part which the animal actually utilizes, will cost you ninety-seven cents per hundred pounds, and with skim milk at ten cents per hundred pounds, the digestible nutrients will cost you $1.12 per one hundred pounds.

This makes potatoes with corn at thirty-five cents worth for feeding purposes between eight cents and nine cents per bushel as compared with corn, and it makes one hundred pounds of corn worth about nine times as much as one hundred pounds of skim milk. Now let us try a little mixing. It has been found by the experiment stations in actual feeding, that six hundred pounds of milk fed alone will make about as much gain as one hundred pounds of corn, but that if you mix the milk and corn in the ratio of three or four pounds of milk to one of corn, that between three and four hundred pounds of skim milk will equal one hundred pounds of corn meal. Potatoes fed alone to hogs are worth very little unless they are boiled, but mix them with middlings or shorts or oil meal and note the high appreciation that the hog has for that kind of a mixture. His appreciation is scientific as well as practical. He believes in mixed feeds. If you offer him a mixture of corn and potatoes, he might probably turn up his nose, that is if he had been fed like a millionaire. He does not know anything about science or balanced rations, but he distinguishes very quickly between mixes and mixes. He will take his corn with skim milk or butter milk, if you please; he will take his potatoes with middlings, or he will take corn with middlings. While he will take middlings and skim milk, his internal consciousness would indicate after a little while that the mix was not quite right. The little pig might think differently because he is different.

Experience has taught the farmer that clover hay with corn fodder or timothy or straw or corn is a most excellent mixture, that clover and corn will do better together than separately, and that corn fodder gains in value very rapidly by being fed interchangeably with clover hay. In other words you get not only the value of each, but you get an additional value as a result of the mix.

But after all, this is only the old doctrine of balanced rations and nutritive ratios stated in a different way. The skim milk has a nutritive ratio of one to two, and potatoes one to 11.5; that is, one of flesh formers to the amount stated of fuel or heat makers. What the growing pig, calf or lamb requires is about one to five, or about the ratio of oats or middlings; hence the importance of mixing. The reason why you like bread and butter mixed is because butter is almost entirely a pure heat maker; the bread, especially brown bread, is largely muscle making. You want them mixed, and when the weather is very cold and the demand for heat greater, you would not object to some side meat with it.

The doctrine of balanced rations is founded on nature's laws. You cannot avoid them except at your own loss. Mixing feeds intelligently is simply balancing rations, and you will mix with larger intelligence and and greater profit if you will take time to study nutritive ratio. It is all right to call it mixing feeds, and the science of mixing feeds, but it is just as well to master that word nutritive ratio and get down to scientific principles. It is not after all any bigger or harder word than telegraph or telephone, or any of the new words that science is continually forcing upon us.—Wallace's Farmer.

Feeding Work Horses.

Many farmers feed far too much hay to their horses. They might very well take a few lessons in this matter from the liverymen, who find that their horses do better and keep healthier on a small allowance of hay. Race horses in large stables are fed on 6 to 8 pounds of hay and from 15 to 20 pounds of the best oats per day, and, if needed, a bran mash once a week—one-third of the hay after exercise in the morning, the balance at night and the oats fed at four feeds. For hunters more hay is given up to 10 pounds per day, 6 pounds loose and four pounds cut and mixed with his oats, 16 to 18 pounds per day. Any farmer can see how much this differs from his feeding, and yet these horses are required to do hard work and sudden exertions, taxing all their powers. In Scotland a favorite winter food when horses are only at moderate work is cut oat sheaves.

Sweet turnips (ruta bagas) are relished by horses and seem better food for them than the carrot. They do well on roots when idle or at moderate work. Cooking food for horses has not been found generally profitable. Elaborate and careful experiments made years ago showed that horses did better on raw food. Crushed or ground oats are much used. Some horses have a tendency to bolt their feed half chewed, and some of the grain is voided whole in these cases. Grinding helps any such tendency. In England some of the large companies which work a great many horses give mixed food and use considerable quantities of American corn.

In San Francisco the big drayage companies feed their horses systematically, the grain ration being usually ground barley on account of its cheapness. The horses get from 12 to 18 pounds per day, with from 10 to 20 pounds of hay. Carrots are fed once or twice a week; also bran mashes given at intervals. During the dry season two years ago when barley was high, considerable Kansas corn was shipped here and fed, but barley is the main grain ration all over the State except on the race tracks.

There are about 7000 head of cattle along the line of the railroad in Siskiyou county, awaiting shipment, the holders endeavoring to get cars for hauling without very good success. The railroad company is crowded with so much business from all quarters, that every wheel is in motion constantly, with new cars building to supply the great demand. It was supposed after the grain harvest was over that plenty of cars would be available, but the demand seems to be about the same with no chance of improvement, as the lumber men want cars also, who have to wait, as cattle and perishable freight have the preference.

Cattle buyers have been chasing around in the coast counties of Humboldt and Del Norte in California, and Coos and Curry in Oregon, expecting to get steers and calves cheaper than along the railroad, but the prices are up in all localities just the same. In Eastern Oregon and Northeastern California, stock of all kinds brings good prices, and horses and mules are also in greater demand than they have been for a long time past.

Value of California's Dairy Interests.

A large amount of data has been collected at the offices of the State Dairy Bureau on California street, from which the deduction is drawn that the total value of the various dairy products will be fully $12,500,000 for the year ending October 1, 1899. This is in excess of the value for the preceding year of $2,000,000. Coupled with several other facts in connection with the industrial and financial conditions obtaining in the State at this time, the statement cannot be otherwise than pleasing. Among the other facts are the enhanced value of the dried fruits, and especially the raisins; the fact that there are such offerings of business this year that it is impossible to get cars enough, or ships enough to move the freights out of the State promptly; also the fact, first mentioned in the Call, that the deposits in the savings and commercial banks of the State are increasing at the astonishing rate of $2,000,000 per month and that all deposits in the saving banks, city and country inclusive, average over $700 per capita for depositors.

The totals of dairy products, estimated in dollars, last year, were as follows: Value of 23,691,321 pounds of butter, $4,354,238; value of milk and cream consumed, $4,712,280; value of hogs produced at creameries and dairies, $748,895; value of 5,148,372 pounds of cheese, $535,430. The total of all items last year was $10,913,473.

William Vanderbilt, agent and secretary of the State Bureau, has received a great number of reports from creameries and individuals and dairies during the past few weeks. His conclusion is that the returns will very closely correspond with the returns for the year ending October 1, 1897. The exact total for 1897 was $12,451,363. In that year the butter produced in the State amounted to the very large total of 26,678,439 pounds, estimated to be worth $5,573,617; and the cheese was worth $569,566, the amount in pounds being 6,399,625. At the same time the milk and cream consumed were worth $4,669,480.

The forthcoming report of the bureau will show that the dairy properties in the San Joaquin Valley are still increasing. Much dairy interest has been transferred from the coast counties, where it was formerly supposed to be placed for all time. The drought last year led to the sale of a number of dairy herds to people in the San Joaquin Valley, who, with irrigation and alfalfa crops were able to find feed for all the cattle they bought. Five years ago the San Joaquin Valley bought all its dairy supplies from the coast counties. Now there are numerous creameries in the valley. The same is true of the Sacramento Valley to some extent. There is one creamery at Courtland, Sacramento county, that will show a total output of 405,500 pounds of butter for the year. There are creameries at Stockton, Lodi, Newman, Lathrop, Los Banos, Merced, Visalia and Bakersfield. Thus the line extends from one end of the valley to the other. The creamery at Fresno has twenty sub-stations already, and aims at a much larger number, the aim being to manufacture the dairy products for the country.

There are 262,000 dairy cows in the State, which, estimated at the low valuation of $30 per head, are worth nearly $8,000,000. The creameries are worth at least half of that amount, and the land used for dairying is roughly estimated to be worth four times as much as the dairy herds. Among the largest owners of dairy cows are the following: Charles Webb Howard 1350, Shafter estate 2200, Novato Land Company 900, Phebe Hearst 1000

Sheep Suggestions.

Only keep your best sheep. Fatten and market all the old ewes.

Breed from young ewes. They raise better more vigorous and healthier lambs.

In recent transactions in sheep in Montana $3 per head has been paid for yearling and two-year-old ewes.

A great deal depends on your soil and pasture as to the kind of sheep you raise. Heavy herds will not do as well as smaller ones.

It takes from three to four bushels of grain to fatten a sheep, as we figure on ten tons of roughness for 100 sheep during the average feeding season.

When on full feed grown wethers will eat from one and one half to two and one-half pounds of grain a day; lambs somewhat less. If it is possible, a mixture of oats, shelled corn, bran and oil makes a splendid ration.

Sheltering lambs from heavy, cold rain storms which occur for a month and a half before winter sets in is economy. They should be regularly housed every night. They should be taught to eat grain in early autumn. It is well to have racks of hay ready for them in their stables and they will soon learn to eat.

From a very small beginning, some 20 years ago, the business of fattening sheep for the butchers has become a gigantic enterprise. The most important point in starting to feed sheep is to buy the right kind at the right price. The three important things in feeding sheep are a dry feed lot, pure water and plenty of good feed; and, as a fourth essential I would add regularity and common sense. With these anybody can make fat sheep.

Six weeks ago farmers were selling horses at a discount. Now the same farmers are buying them back at a premium. The growing scarcity of good work horses has just dawned upon breeders. Horses are in demand for plowing and farm work, but there are none to be obtained. Horse hire is on the rise. Breeding ceased entirely in this county about six years ago, when we were overrun with horses. The surplus has gradually been worked off. As it takes from four to five years to raise a horse, the result of no breeding could easily be foreseen. Last year there was some revival in breeding, but the scarcity threatens to last for some years yet.—Hollister Advance.

The number of sheep in Argentina is estimated at about 85,000,000 in round numbers. The province of Buenos Ayres containing four-fifths of the aggregate total, and Entre Rios, Cordoba and the Rio Negro district the remainder. The season for wool shipments being in October, and from that month in 1898 to August 1, 1899, the amount received at various ports has been 210,000 tons, an average of a little less than six pounds of wool for each sheep in the country. The great bulk of the wool is shipped to the European continental markets.

A letter to McCormick Bros. of this city to their head vaquero who is trying to get a large herd of cattle out of the mountains near Strawberry, states that about 40 head have died and 100 are still missing, while the rest have been for two weeks practically without feed and are consequently in poor condition. The first snow was very heavy and covered all the feed, but the second storm was warmer and the rain melted much of the snow. Had it not been for this the loss of cattle would have been much greater.—Stockton Mail.

JOE PATCHEN 2:01 1/4

JOE PATCHEN AND JOHN DICKERSON.

[From their latest Photograph.]

THE above picture of Joe Patchen 2:01 1/4 and his driver, John Dickerson, is a faithful presentment of a great horse and a great trainer. Though they did not win at Los Angeles owing to the horse being out of condition they made the little red horse, John R. Gentry, go a great race to beat them and four heats were paced in faster time than ever before seen this side of the Rocky Mountains. Joe Patchen is indeed a wonderful horse. He is by Patchen Wilkes out of Josephine Young by Joe Young.

Shortly after the two minute mark was passed in 1897, Joe Patchen joined issue with the horse that passed it. At Milwaukee he beat Star Pointer; at Indianapolis he won a heat in 2:03 on a soft track and the next day forced his opponent to step in 2:01, at Terre Haute he stepped a splendid mile in 2:01 1/4, and at Springfield, Ill., before 60,000 people, he was officially timed as second horse in 2:00 3/4, forcing Star Pointer to place the world's race record at 2:00 1/4.

Mr. Marks then decided to send Joe Patchen after the high wheeled sulky and the wagon records. A meeting having been arranged to come off at Joliet for the exhibition of the two great pacing stars, it was found when the set day arrived that Star Pointer was not in condition to be driven to his limit; so Mr. Marks kindly consented to have Joe take his place. Accordingly, Joe was star, under-study and super all by himself. First he went a mile in 2:10 to bike, just a warm up. Then he went a mile to bike in 2:02 3/4, marvelous time considering the time of year and low range of the thermometer. He next went a mile to four-wheeled bike wagon in 2:04 3/4, smashing W. W. P.'s best previous world's record of 2:08 1/2 into pieces so small it was impossible to find them and then to round out the his sport he pulled a high-wheeled sulky around the mile course in 2:06 3/4, only half a second behind the old record set by Johnson so many years ago. Later, Joe made a wonderfully good showing at Louisville, but the track was rather soft and the old style sulky to which he was driven did not seem to be quite in line somehow or other. It looked, from his performance at Joliet that had the weather remained warm longer and the opportunity been given him on a suitable track, Joe Patchen could have lowered Johnston's mark that has proved so hard to beat.

Thus Joe Patchen holds his share of the world's records. To bicycle sulky he has a record of 2:01 1/4, and has been officially timed in a race in 2:00 3/4. He holds the world's championship to wagon at 2:04 1/4 and the half mile track harness record at 2:04 1/4.

An Oakland String.

There is quite a training stable over in Oakland on the corner of Second and Harrison streets that is so quietly situated as to attract no attention from the passer by, but contains quite a number of royally bred trotters and pacers, some of which have made their mark on the turf and others that certainly will with ordinary opportunity.

When a representative of this journal dropped in there last Sunday he found the well known trainers Ed Lafferty and Harry Brown swapping horse talk with P. Patrey, the expert horse shoer of Oakland, and when the B. & S. man worked his way into the conversation and tried to score down with them, he soon was like a three minute pacer trying to get to the wire with Jos Patchen, John R. Gentry and Anaconda. They were on "accident" stories when we came in, and Lafferty had related an incident of a mare that he was driving on a jog, having stumbled and turned a complete somersault, no injury resulting to anything but a buckle which had the tongue slightly bent, and Patrey went this one better by telling of a horse he owned that was standing motionless and suddenly fell over and striking on the top of its head broke its neck and was dead before the hind quarters touched the ground. Brown "stayed out" and proposed looking at the colts, a proposition that was gladly accepted by the scribe.

We looked at Lafferty's horse first—Addison 2:11½, by James Madison, and one of the best trotters seen on the circuit this year. When Ed took this fellow he had a mark of 2:18½, and many California trainers were of the opinion that Lafferty would be out a lot of entrance money on him, but Addison not only won two good races and got second money in another and was third three times, all out of seven starts, but he knocked seven records off his record and won $1700. He trotted two hard races in one week at Santa Rosa and went right to Oakland and trotted two more in one week. It was really more than the horse should have been asked to do, as he met different fields each time. He got his record in the second heat of a race won by Neeretta 2:11½, and during the racing season met the fastest horses on the California Circuit. He closed the season sound as a new dollar, and barring accidents will trot below 2:10 more than once next year. He is an iron horse and one of the squarest gaited trotters in the country. Addison is the only horse Mr. Lafferty has in his string at present, but will have a half dozen or so youngsters at work in a few weeks getting them ready for next year. No trainer in California has had better success with harness horses than he, and he is one of the most careful of men with a horse. Until Andrews reduced the Coast record at Los Angeles this year with Gentry Mr. Lafferty held the honor of having driven the fastest mile with W. Wood 2:07.

Harry Brown's string consists of nine youngsters, the most of them just getting to know what a harness feels like. The record colt in the string is N. B. L. 2:21½, the champion two year old pacer of 1899. This youngster looks well, though nothing is being done with him except giving him a daily jog on the road and allowing him to eat all the good feed he wants, as he is growing and will be a much larger colt next year. N. B. L. is owned by Mr. I. L. Borden of this city and is by Diablo 2:09½ out of Alice Bell Washington. He won the two year old division of the Pacific Breeders Futurity Stake this year and in that race took his record, which is not the measure of his speed by a good deal as he has worked miles better than 2:20 by several seconds.

Running out in the large lot, following us about and putting her head over our shoulders as we visited the stalls, was a very handsome brown yearling filly by McKinney 2:11½ out of the dam of N. B. L. This filly is a square trotter and can show lots of speed. Mr. Brown thinks she will get a low record whenever she is started, as though scarcely bridle wise and steps out like the real thing whenever she gets a chance.

Judge Green of Oakland is the owner of five youngsters that are under Mr. Brown and they are a fine lot. A three year old by Direct attracted attention on account of his race looks as well as his royal breeding. How is this for a pedigree? By Direct 2:05½, first dam by Sidney, second dam by Nutwood, third dam by Electioneer, and from that on strictly thoroughbred, all the dams back being registered in the American Stud Book. This colt is black and looks a good deal like all the sons of the little black rascal. He is inclined to mix his gaits but when he gets going squarely should be able to add another to the list of his sire's fast ones. Among others belonging to Judge Green are a brown mare by Richard's Elector, a two year old filly and a yearling by Diablo, all three out of Lilly Langtry by Nephew, the dam of Ed B. Young 2:11½.

Standing in a box stall and looking like a young scion of a truly royal line was a bay weanling whose stout legs and muscular appearance denoted strength and vigor when fully developed. "This fellow knows as much as a human being," said Brown as he took him by the nose and led him where the light would show him off better. He is by the stallion king, Directum 2:05½ out of a mare by Anteeo Jr., and gives every promise of looking very much like his sire in shape, though not in color as he is a bay with black points. The Judge sets great value on him and certainly should as sons of Directum are not numerous in California and this is one of the best looking of the family.

About the only aged animal in Brown's string is the pacer Doc Wilkes, that has no record but has worked miles in 2:18 and quarters at a 2:10 gait. He is looking well and will probably be raced next year.

None of the horses are receiving any work at present, but are jogged daily on the excellent roads which abound in the vicinity and all look well. There should be more than one winner come from the bunch and it is expected confidently that 2:10 will not stop one or two of the youngsters when fully grown.

Death of Dick Swiveller.

One of the familiar colored prints of noted horses, which adorn the walls of livery stables all over the United States is one of Dick Swiveller and mate, driven by Frank Work, the veteran road driver of New York. Dick Swiveller died two weeks ago last Wednesday at the palatial stable of his owner on West Fifty-sixth street, New York. He was in his thirtieth year, having been foaled at Cazenovia, N. Y., in 1870. He was a bay gelding by Walkill Chief, the son of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and his dam was Madame Swiveller, by Henry Clay Jr. James Golden campaigned him on the Grand Circuit twenty years ago and drove him to his record of 2:18 at Utica in August, 1879. Soon after this performance Golden sold him to Mr. Work for $15,000 and the horse F. B. French, valued at $2000 more. His new owner hooked him to pole with the chestnut gelding Edward 2:19, that had previously defeated Robert Bonner's Edwin Forrest in the notorious job which killed harness racing at Utica in 1878, and John Murphy drove the two geldings to a pole record of 2:16½ at Fleetwood Park in 1882. The performance was the best on record for double teams. Two years later they trotted in 2:16½. They cost the New York horse fancier about $30,000, but this amount of money would not begin to cover the pleasure derived from driving them on the road. Edward is still alive and is as well preserved and frisky as a two year old, to all appearances, although the gallant old gelding was foaled nearly twenty-seven years ago. Swiveller and his mate have lived in luxury ever since their record-breaking performance to pole. They were the special pets of their owner and would whinny for sugar every time Mr. Work entered the stable.

Driving Club Suggestions.

Driving clubs have been and are being organized all over the country lately, and no sport is taking a stronger hold on the people than road driving. As it is absolutely essential to the success of a high class club of this character that gambling and racing for money be entirely obliterated from matinee racing, it would be well if every driving club placed in its constitution and by-laws rules that prohibit betting at their meetings or racing for anything but trophies. In a communication to the New York "Trotter and Pacer," Mr. H. K. Devereux, of Cleveland, Ohio, one of the most prominent amateur drivers in America, writes as follows on subjects pertaining to driving clubs:

"It was Cleveland that first demonstrated how a driving club should be established and maintained. It is to be sincerely regretted, however, that many of these clubs that have since been organized have overlooked two things that are most vital to the continued success of such an organization. I refer to the omissions of drawing a line between amateur and professional, and to the disregard of class. There is a class in people as there is in horses, and the higher this line is put up the stronger and more lasting will be the club. A gentlemen's driving club should be all the name implies, and its environments and internal workings should be of the cleanest. Do not understand by this that a professional horseman cannot be a gentleman; far from it, but the professional should be barred simply because he is a professional, while the amateur should be fostered with every care given to his being a gentleman, and as such a true sportsman. Remove gambling, take away the money, expunge entirely the thought of gain, place the results as leading to nothing but honor and pleasure, and you have the thing started on lines that will produce nothing but success. The cleaner any sport can be made the more lasting and popular it must be, for the social element carries it along. Remove the social element from any sport and it is surely dead.

"In this connection the question as to what constitutes an amateur becomes serious. From the fact that the Driving Club of Cleveland is composed of amateurs pure and simple, and no applications for membership from other than amateurs have ever been received, the club has never had a rule clearly defining the matter. The Cleveland Club defines an amateur as a man who is in the sport for the love of it, not for the gain. Unless worked to the line and spirit this rule is inadequate. It would be manifestly unfair to determine that any man was a professional who had ever driven a public race for money, and yet the amount of driving of this kind must of necessity have some bearing on the matter. If this rule were to apply, there would be hardly a man in the country over thirty years old interested in trotting that would not be a professional, as some years ago it was quite common for an owner to get up behind his own horse now and then for the pure love of the sport, and for the recreation it afforded. With the advent of driving clubs and speedways, the opportunities for driving in contests are so enlarged that one now need not turn to the actual racing. To insure pure amateurism, a club would be safe in adopting the following: 'Any man who has ever trained or driven horses for compensation shall be regarded as a professional regardless of whatever other business he may have been engaged in, and (if you choose to make it stronger)—Any man who hereafter drives any horse in a public race given for other than amateurs.' With the forming of driving clubs throughout the country and the holding of races for plate limited to amateur drivers, by our leading associations, this question becomes a serious one, and the sooner the leading clubs adopt a uniform rule on this subject, the better for the sport."

A Few Notes from Los Angeles.

George Beckers writes from Los Angeles to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, and from his letter it looks as if the horse business were flourishing in that end of the State, though he instances more "refusals" than sales or trades. He states that $1000 was offered the other day for the mare Grace Kaiser, dam of Mr. Zos 2:13 and Coney 2:07½, but that Mr. W. R. Wynn, her owner, holds the mare at $2000. Mr. Wynn was also offered $500 for Grace Kaiser's yearling filly by Zombro 2:11, but holds her at $1000. The mare is again in foal to Zombro. Dr. Book, of Los Angeles, who owns Leonor by Dashwood, one of the greatest broodmares in this or any other country had an offer of $500 for her bay yearling colt by Zombro. Leonor is the dam of Miss Jessie 2:14, Jennie Mc 2:09, Dr. Book 2:13½ and others. Mr. Willet of Long Beach has a yearling filly by Zombro from Concha by A. W. Richmond that he will not take $500 for, and C. A. Winslip has a yearling filly by the same horse from Gazelle 2:11½ by Gossiper that it would take $5000 to purchase. She is the finest looking yearling in Southern California, and John Dickerson who looked her over while there, said she was the best one of her age he ever saw. One month ago she was shod for the first time and last Monday she trotted an eighth in 17½ seconds, and repeated in 18 seconds. She was foaled April 6, 1893, and now stands 15.2, weighs about 875 pounds, and is a handsome blood bay.

There is at the Los Angeles track a pair of bay geldings brought from Phoenix, Arizona, by Mr. Porter, who raised them. They are by Boydell, son of the great Electioneer and have been at the track but a month, yet they stepped a mile in 2:26 and a quarter in 35 seconds. They are in Mr. Vance's care, and he handles them very nicely.

Mr. Blodgett has leased the track and a number of horses are being worked there.

Mr. Vance has eight, Will Dufee seven, Fred Ward six, Walter Maben six, P. W. Hodges four (he will have more in a few days), Mr. Williams five, Bob Hackney three, and there are several runners being galloped, preparatory to going to the races at San Francisco soon.

Zombro 2:11 is looking and feeling fine. The first work he has had in thirteen months was last Saturday when he was given a mile in 2:57 and another in 2:56. He will be worked this winter and next spring and probably go East about the first of June. He will make a short season in the stud being limited to about twenty mares. Zombro should make a great horse in the 2:11 class this year.

Zebroids in Place of Mules.

Experiments now being made in various parts of the world prove that the use of the male zebra instead of the male ass results, with the common mare, in the production of a hybrid much superior in many ways to the everyday mule of American breeding. In South America one extensive planter has been making some very interesting experiments along this line and we hope to be able to present the results in our coming holiday number, with some illustrations showing the young hybrids, which from their photographs must be vastly better than the long eared mule of the present day. There are two kinds of zebra available for this work, the mountain zebra and Burchell's zebra. The latter, it is said, begets the better hybrids, getting them larger and more like the horse. The coloring of the hybrids is of course somewhat garish at times as the zebra invariably leaves his stripes more or less plainly on his progeny. Nothing in the way of a horse or mule could well be more conspicuously colored, than a white animal striped regularly, or irregularly, with dark brown, dark chestnut or black stripes—as the Burchell zebra is—and hence his hybrids from mares of various colors come of rather fanciful colors. One we have learned of is grey, striped most artistically with chocolate brown but withal it is said to be a most attractive looking beast. These hybrids, which the Brazilian experimenter has dubbed zebroids, are, of course, sterile, the same as the mule; but there seems to be little doubt that they are bound to come into general favor and possibly to supplant the ordinary mule altogether.—Chicago Horseman.

Good Trainers Make Good Horses.

Good manners come of good breeding, largely, among both horses and men, but careful education and cultivation are the great civilizers for both species. Man is prone to err, and so is the horse, and both, in the long run, are largely creatures of environments, a good man often becoming a bad man, and a bad driver—most men, as well as race horses having "drivers" in some shape or other. But it is the behavior of race horses of which we wish particularly to speak at this time, and the cause of that behavior, whether good or bad. The different methods of different trainers become an interesting study the moment one begins making observations and the observer is soon convinced that it is the good-natured, even-tempered trainers who always have the "good dispositioned" horses—disposition being as contagious as measles—while the cross, crabbed and fussy trainer is sure to always be complaining that the horses he drives are "sore-headed" and mean.—Tennessee Farmer.

The green horse Axtello, by Axtell, has trotted a mile in 2:13½, with the last quarter in thirty-one seconds.

Something About Curbs.

In a recent number of the London Live Stock Journal, an English veterinarian, considers the unsoundness known as a curb as follows:

Among the diseases and deformities of the horse's hock, perhaps the most frequent and noticeable is that known to horsemen as "curb." This is essentially an enlargement in the form of a convexity at the back of the hock, a short distance below its point and towards the head of the shank bone. When we look at one side of a well formed healthy hind limb, we see that from the point of the hock to back of the fetlock joint is a straight vertical line, unbroken by any deviation; but when curb is present this line is interrupted by the convexity that condition offers, and this convexity is more or less marked, according to the extent of the disease and the natural defect of the hock.

It is to be noted, however, that there are certain other conditions which more or less stimulate curb, and might lead the inexperienced to imagine that disease to be present when it really does not exist. For example, the skin may have been accidentally injured and thickened at this situation, as a result of kicking or other contusion or abrasion, or one or other of the two flexor tendons which pass down the leg at this part may have been sprained, or distention of the sheath in which one of them plays may be presented. And in certain horses the head of the outer splint bone is so unusually large, that its projection beyond the level somewhat resembles the prominence of curb.

True curb, as distinguished from the above or spurious curb, is in reality a sprain of an important ligament that serves in attaching the large bone that forms the point of the hock—the os calcis, corresponding to the heel bone in the foot of man—to two of the smaller hock bones, as well as to the shank and outer splint bones. In straightening the leg, as in propelling the body, there is a great strain on this bone, which serves as a powerful lever when acted upon by the strong tendons attached to it, as in sustaining weight and in movements, and this strain is transmitted to the ligament (called the calcaneo-cuboid ligament), which is therefore exposed to injury during severe or sudden exertion. This injury occurs all the more readily if the hock is imperfect or defective in shape. This is particularly the case in hocks which are designated, from their peculiar appearance, "sickle shaped" or "tied in" hocks, in which the os calcis appears to incline forward, so as to make a bend at its lower portion; or the lower bones and the head of the shank bone are too meagerly developed, and form a kind of constriction ("tied in") at the front part of the hock, so that the ligament is smaller and has less attachment than in properly shaped hocks. These sickle shaped or tied in hocks are undoubtedly predisposed to curb, and when a horse possessing them is put to severe exertion, especially if he is young, suddenly slips forward on his hind legs, or is smartly thrown on his haunches, the ligaments are very likely to be strained; the same liability is incurred in drawing heavy loads up hill, and in jumping, particularly if the muscles of the quarters and limbs are proportionately stronger than the ligament just described.

Injury to the ligaments is followed by swelling, inflammation and pain, which cause lameness if the damage is severe. When not severe, however, the swelling and inflammation are not so marked, and the lameness may be so slight as to escape notice. If the injury be repeated, however, it ultimately leads to enlargement and thickening of the ligament which render the curb very evident, though the horse's action may be very little interfered with, and lameness is rare.

In lameness from curb, which ensues when injury has been sudden or violent, the horse usually stands with the fetlock flexed, and he limps when he throws weight on the leg; while the location of the swelling, the heat felt in the swollen part, and then the pain manifested of pressure of it, are sufficient to indicate the nature of the accident.

Curb in itself is not a serious condition, except that it indicates imperfect formation of the hocks, which are not likely to wear well. In old horses, if there is no lameness, their presence is not of very much moment, though they certainly constitute unsoundness; but in young horses, and especially if the hocks are faulty in shape, they are decidedly objectionable, as the frequently recurring lameness may be anticipated, and consequently the usefulness of the animal may be largely, if not altogether, compromised.

Curb sometimes appears in conjunction with spavin, both being due to the same defect in conformation of the hock, and then of course the case is much more serious, as the lameness is continuous and permanent, and attempts at cure are negative in their result.

The prevention of curb in defective hocks, as may be perceived, is not easy, and is limited to the avoidance of severe exertion, especially when the animal is young. Sometimes firing and blistering are resorted to with this object, but it is doubtful if they really produce any beneficial effect, as they cannot remedy what is a natural malformation. What is certain is that firing in this situation produces a very disfiguring and conspicuous blemish, and draws attention to the bad shape of the hocks, which might otherwise have passed unobserved. The only safe and reliable preventive measure is not to breed from horses or mares with such faulty hocks, and not to subject animals with good hocks to severe strain when too young, to undergo it.

With regard to surgical treatment when curb has appeared and inflammation and lameness are present, little need be said, as it is generally preferable to call in the services of a veterinary surgeon, who will adopt the course which, in his judgment is most suitable to the case, for all cases should not be treated alike; each should be dealt with according to circumstances. When such professional services are not available, however, and the inflammation and lameness are very marked, the horse cannot do wrong if he enjoys rest in a stall, with warm water fomentations or cold applications, such as solution of acetate of lead, or tincture of arnica to the part. The horse should be kept tied up for a few days until the inflammation has been subdued, and then preparations of mercury, such of blue ointment or a weak solution of corrosive sublimate, or of iodine, as the compound tincture or the ointment of biniodide of mercury, may be applied with the object of diminishing the size of the swelling. In all these cases, and in many others in which injury to the back parts of the legs has occasioned pain and lameness, I have found a high-heeled or patten shoe afford immediate relief to the animal both in movement and while standing, while it assisted in promoting the success of the other measures. It should be put on the foot of the affected limb at once. The animal should not be put to work too soon, and when the effects of the stimulating applications to the curb have passed off, the swelling may be massaged with the view of still further reducing it.

Yearling Trotters.

It was in 1831 that Hinda Rose, by Electioneer, out of Beautiful Bells, reduced the yearling record for trotters to 2:36½, and this stood until Sudie D., October 15, 1887, trotted at Lexington to a record of 2:35½. November 12th of the same year, Norraine, a double Green Mountain Maid, trotted in 2:31½. October 18, 1890, at Napa, Freedom, by Sable Wilkes, crossed the 2:30 line, taking a record of 2:29½. His pre-eminence lasted but a year, Bell Bird, by Electioneer, out of Beautiful Bells, trotting October 21, 1891, to a record of 2:26½. Frou Frou, by Sidney, trotted November 28, 1891, in 2:25½, and on the kite track at Holton, Kan., Pansy McGregor, by Fergus McGregor, was timed, after repeated efforts, November 18, 1893, in 2:23½. The best yearling of 1893 was Princess Clara, by Prince George, out of Reality by Princes. At Nashville, October 16th, she won the race for yearlings in 2:26½, heating a field of five, which included Boreal, and her driver was twenty-five pounds overweight. It was the intention to start the filly for a faster record, but the weather changed and prevented. Good judges were of the opinion that she could have trotted a mile close to 2:23. Princess Clara is now a broodmare at Round Top Farm, the country home of Hon. Fred P. Olcott. Another good yearling record was that of Sweet Rose, by Electioneer, out of Rosemont, she out of Beautiful Bells 2:25½, in 1892. The champion yearling record, 2:23, made at San Jose, Sept. 27, 1894, still holds. It is placed to the credit of Adhell, son of Advertiser and Beautiful Bells. Adhell is now in the stud at Suburban Stock Farm, Glens Falls, and should transmit the early speed that he possessed. Hinda Rosa, Norraine, Bell Bird, Sweet Rose and Adhell are descendants of Electioneer; Freedom is a descendant of George Wilkes, Sudie D. a descendant of Sherman's Hambletonian, Frou Frou a descendant of Strathmore, and Pansy McGregor, a descendant of Alexander's Abdallah, all sons of Rysdyk's Hambletonian. Princess Clara is a descendant of Kentucky Prince, the grandson of Mambrino Chief, but the dam of her sire, Lady Dexter, was a daughter of Hambletonian. The severe development of yearlings has in a measure gone out of fashion, and this may account for the record not being improved. The 2:23 of Adhell, however, is a hard mark to shoot at.—Turf, Field and Farm.

Curry Talks About the Columbus Race.

"Last spring," said Jack Curry, "I needed some money, and went to young Stoner to help me out. I told him I had a great horse, and that if he would furnish the money we could win a small fortune with a small capital. He saw Surpol work, and agreed to put up the money, the understanding being that I should have half of all he won. He cleared $11,000 in cash at Seginaw and Detroit, and should have won more had he not told about everyone he met what a really good horse Surpol was. At Columbus I fully expected to win, but was amazed to find Surpol selling for $160 and the field $100. You see Stoner had been talking again, with the result that everyone had the tip. Finally when Surpol got to even money with the field, I began to play a little. Stoner came to me and said: 'What are you doing? We are not going to win here and I am playing the field.' I replied that I did not know what he was doing, but that I was going to win if I could, and that if he was playing the field he had better shift his play just as soon as possible. Just imagine the nerve of a man who did not own a hair in Surpol's tail. The upshot of the matter was the race was never finished, and the money was awarded as the horses stood in the summary. This beat us out of first money, and Stoner, having lost a little, made his famous kick and began a lawsuit to recover. I never got any of the winnings as agreed upon.

Ordinances Governing Vehicles.

Ordinances for the government of vehicles on the streets, which will be fair to all, pedestrians as well as drivers, are hard to frame. Every city governing body has had more or less trouble in arranging such ordinances, especially since bicycles and automobiles have come into use. The New York law on the case has recently been amended in many particulars and is considered to be quite effective. In brief this law provides as follows:

Vehicles going north or south have right of way over vehicles going east or west.

Ambulances and apparatus of the Fire and Police Departments have right of way over all vehicles.

A vehicle in passing another going in the same direction must pass to the left of the overtaken vehicle.

Before turning a corner the driver of a vehicle must signal with the hand or whip when the turn is to be made and in what direction.

In turning corners, vehicles going to the right must keep to the right of the center of the street, and vehicles turning to the left to the left of the center of the two intersecting streets.

Vehicles must not stop in a street except next to the curb, or start to turn without a signal from the hand or whip that can be seen from behind.

Bicycles, velocipedes, motor wagons, etc., must be equipped with an alarm bell, which is to be rung when passing another vehicle or equestrian from behind, or give timely warning to pedestrians and others.

Bicycles, &c., are limited to a speed of not exceeding eight miles per hour, and must keep to the right of the road.

Coasting on bicycles, &c., is prohibited below One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street.

Lamps must be attached to all vehicles, except licensed trucks, for use one hour after sunset until one hour before sunrise. The lamps must be strong enough to illuminate a distance of 200 feet, and must show white in front. The sides may be colored.

Vehicles of every description, used for business purposes, must have a driver sixteen years of age or over.

Vehicles other than passenger vehicles are limited to a speed not exceeding eight miles per hour.

All vehicles must keep to the right of the road at all times, except within 100 feet of the starting or stopping point.

Any person riding a bicycle in the City of New York shall not be allowed to carry thereon any child under five years of age.

Horses and wheeled vehicles of any kind are prohibited from using footpaths or sidewalks.

DURING the passing year the ranks of thoroughbred sires have been considerably depleted by death. Among the stallions that have died are Fiddesticks by Lexington, dam imp. Filagree by Stockwell; Tramont by Virgil, dam Ann Fleff by Alarm; Hanovar by Hindoo, dam Bouthon Belle by imp. Bonnie Scotland; Kinglike by imp. King Ernest, dam Mimi by imp. Eclipse; imp. Eric by Pretender dam Bell Heather by Stockwell; Sensation by imp. Leamington, dam Susan Beane by Lexington, and Iroquois by imp. Leamington, dam Maggie B. by imp. Australian.

J. M. HILL, President of the Great Northern Railroad system, is breeding a few thoroughbreds and threatens Marcus Daly with sore defeat when he sends horses of his own breeding to the post. Mr. Hill dislikes what is commonly known as jollying. In a burst of confidence he informed a friend that when he had completed some business transactions that require his attention he would start in and show Mr. Daly and others how to raise and train horses and win races with them. As Mr. Hill is one of the wealthiest men in America his presence on the turf would give a decided impetus to the sport.

San Francisco, Saturday, November 18, 1899

QUITE A REVOLT has broken out in the ranks of the harness horse trainers and owners in the East against the early closing of purses and stakes, and a large number have pledged themselves not to make an entry next year earlier than July 1st. At Lexington, Kentucky, last October an agreement to this effect was drawn up and signed by a majority of the horsemen present at the meeting. It contains the names of Messrs. Hamlin, Dr. McCoy, Chas. Dohle, James Golden, T. E. Keating, M. H. McHenry, Henry Titer, Ed Geers, George West, Mr. Mahaney representing Frank Jones, both the Hubingers and nearly all those who were prominent on the Eastern circuits this year. The signers claim that the entrance money they have paid annually on horses that were unable to start in the races has been too great a drain on their resources and they will not make themselves liable for such large amounts in the future. They will train as many or perhaps more horses than usual next spring, but by July 1st they will know what are worth entering in the races. It is not likely that this action on the part of trainers will make the entry lists in the big purses and stakes much smaller, as the list of horses weeded out as unfit to race will be nearly if not quite equalled by those that are taken up late and consequently developed speed late. The big stakes have not drawn large lists of entries solely because they have closed early but because they have been advertised early. When trainers know several months ahead that a big stake of money is to be hung up for a certain class of horses, they strive to have a horse ready for it and if entries close early their work, as far as that race is concerned, is confined to the one entered, but if the entries close late they can work two or a dozen for that one stake and enter the one that is the most likely to win it. The only fact they require to know early is that the stake will be offered and how much it will amount to. It will not do for the associations to hold back their announcements until a few weeks prior to their meetings, thinking the entries will be numerous enough anyway. Trainers do not keep horses at work in the hope that something good may turn up. There are probably as many "Micawbers" in the horse business as in any other, but that class will never make an M. & M. or a Transylvania filly, nor pay a very great percentage of entrance money in any stake or purse. Let any responsible organization announce in January or February that it will give $5000 for a race to be trotted in August, entries to close in July, and horses will be in training for it all over the country within three weeks after the announcement is made. It is not necessary to keep an advertisement of such a race standing in the turf papers. Under the plan of early closing four or five weeks is the time usually devoted to advertising the stakes and conditions. No greater amount of insertions is necessary under the system of late closing. Let there be an early announcement of the proposed race, giving full particulars and date of closing. Then for a few weeks immediately previous to the closing date have it appear again. The cost will not be increased and the same results will be obtained. This is a subject to which Secretaries and Directors can give serious consideration and it is to be hoped they will not delay the announcement of their events for 1900. Horse owners will not spend money for meetings that might occur. They desire to know when and where the races are to come off, and want to know it in time to get ready.

CATALOGUES FOR THE SALE of yearlings and horses in training bred by Theodore Winters at his Rancho del Sierras have been issued by Chase & Mendenhall, and contain the extended pedigrees of seventeen head, fifteen of which are yearlings, the others Reina Juanita (a half sister to Dolly McCone) and Silver Bullion, a winner, both by Rey del Sierras, and both two year olds. It is, perhaps, entirely within bounds to say that this consignment of colts and fillies is the best looking and the best bred lot that the veteran breeder has ever sent to the auction ring from his Nevada ranch. Nearly every yearling of the fifteen is from a producing dam and the sires represented are the unbeaten El Rio Rey, Rey del Sierras and Lordlike. The first two stallions are known to all horsemen as sons of the greatest American broodmare, Marion by Malcolm, one by Norfolk, the other by Joe Hooker, both were race horses and both are sires of winners. Lordlike is a young stallion of great promise. He was a good race horse, and is a fine individual. His sire was Vassal, a good son of the great Vandal, his dam Ladylike, by imported Leamington, second dam Lady Duke by Lexington, third dam Magdalen by Medoc, fourth dam by Sumpter, fifth dam by Lewis' Eclipse. Lordlike represents the best strains of Vandal and imp Leamington in his pedigree and his first crop of foals give great promise of his being a most successful sire. No breeder in the West has paid more attention to racing families than Mr. Winters and probably there is no breeding farm in America that has turned out as great a proportion of winners. Mr. Winters has no use for mares when they fail to produce a winner after one or two fair trials, and eliminates them from his stud. Probably the fact that he owned Marion who never failed to produce one, led him to form his idea of a broodmare from her. At any rate the colts and fillies from Rancho del Sierras win races and that is the sort purchasers look for at sales. The yearlings from this ranch will arrive at the salesyard corner of Van Ness avenue and Market street, this city, several days previous to the sale, which will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 28th, in the evening under the canvas and by electric light.

SCIENTIFIC HORSESHOEING by Prof. William Russell is in its fourth edition, just published in an improved and enlarged form, with 450 illustrations. This book is of value to every man that owns a horse inasmuch as it is practical and reliable. The author has been a practicing farrier for more than fifty years and is recognized by the horsemen of the country as the foremost shoeing smith of the age. The object of the present work is not only to confirm and justify what was said in former editions, but to further present and discuss newer features of a pursuit that is steadily developing with the age, while as a topic for inquiry it is receiving more popular attention and is obtaining a stronger hold on those interested in the welfare of the horse than in former days. This book gives the practical details of the most approved and rational plans and principles of scientific horseshoeing in the plainest and most complete manner possible. Every chapter contains much new matter of added value, covering every branch of the subject, all arranged under heads easy to find, remember and utilize. After defining the proper method of shoeing for the normal conditions of the perfect horse, the author proceeds to discuss the treatment of imperfect feet, faults of conformation, defects of action, etc. A large portion of the work is devoted to "Lameness and Diseases of the Foot and Leg," and in this connection the subject of "Pathological Shoeing" is fully treated. Nearly 250 different patterns of shoes, to serve every purpose and meet every exigency, are represented and described.

PALO ALTO'S entire lot of thoroughbreds were shipped east last Monday in charge of Superintendent F. W. Covey. There were fifty-six head, including the stallions Racine and Flambean, and a grand lot of broodmares, among them imp. Fairy Rose, the dam of Racine, Charm, Flint, Rosoromonde and others. Fairy Rose was foaled in 1880 and is by Kisher. The lot are consigned to the Fasig-Tipton sale at New York and will go under the hammer November 24th. Hereafter Palo Alto Farm will be entirely devoted to the breeding of trotters. There were six carloads of horses from Palo Alto in the consignment, twenty-six head of young trotters being among them. These are an extra fine lot and should bring good prices in New York. All have been worked for speed and have shown quarters in from 35 to 42 seconds. They are by Altivo, Advertiser, Azmoor, Dexter Prince, Mendocino and Wildnut.

EVERY DISTRICT ASSOCIATION in California should determine by the first of January 1900, whether or no it will give a fair or race meeting during the coming year. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN last spring agitated the question of holding meetings and we believe that but for its efforts in that direction the small circuit of harness racing held in the State last summer would have been allowed to go by default. There is no reason why the circuit of fairs of 1900 should not be the best ever given in the State, and with the present outlook for good crops and good times, every district should be able to give a meeting that will leave a good sized balance in the treasury. It is during the winter months that the first preliminary work of organization can be best accomplished and dates claimed and announced. In the East where race meetings and fairs are so successfully conducted, the dates of next years meetings are already known, and purses and stakes will be announced in January. It is very important that the exhibit of live stock and agricultural products be made as complete and high class as possible at the District Fairs this year, and to accomplish this the Directors should place themselves in touch with the breeders and farmers of their District and secure their co-operation in arousing an interest among all the people of the locality. The year 1900 promises to be a boom year for California, and there will probably be more visitors and land seekers here than have visited us for some time. By showing what it is capable of producing, a county can attract a desirable class of settlers, and more population means better schools, better transportation facilities, better markets and more advantages in all that pertains to civilization and progress. The District Fair can do much to secure these benefits if properly managed. The races are only the amusement feature of the fair, but they are necessary and help draw the crowd. See that a good fair is assured first, and that sufficient inducements are offered in the way of premiums to bring out a good display of live stock and other products of the district. There will not be much trouble about getting up the races if the fair is held. Make announcements of dates as early as possible and put all the life and energy possible into the work and then there need be no fear of failure.

THE ADVICE WAS GOOD that was given by the stockbroker when he said "Buy 'em when they're low and sell 'em when they're high." It applies to the horse breeding business as well as to anything else in life, and now is the time to "buy 'em low" in the broodmare line. At nearly every sale held in the United States during the past six months broodmares have not brought anything like their real value. There is a great demand for high class road and race horses, but young stock and mares for breeding purposes go at very low prices. The farmer or horse breeder who attends the sales of mares this winter and buys a few well bred and good individuals cannot lose on the investment.

THE SPLAN-NEGWASS SALE, which will take place January next at Chicago, will be one of the best sales of the year. The California consignment will be the first from this State to be sold by the well known Chicago firm, and will attract a great deal of attention. It will be a good opportunity to get a good price for a good horse.

THIRTY THOROUGHbred YEARLINGS from Chas. Kerr's Antrim Farm in Kern county will be sold at the Occidental Horse Exchange, Tuesday evening, November 27th. This is a splendid lot of colts by tried sires from producing dams, and should attract a good crowd of buyers. Catalogues will be sent out in a few days.

THE STALLION STAKE to be run at the State Fair in 1902 is meeting with the endorsement of all breeders who have read its conditions. The entries to this stake will close January 1st and every owner should be ready on that date to make out his list and mail it to Secretary Shields at Sacramento.

FROM an official French source it is learned that at the horse show to be held under the auspices of the French general government, in connection with the Paris exposition next year, six classes in the foreign section will be devoted to the English sorts. Sixteen prizes, value 13,900 francs, will go to the Hackneys; 11 prizes and 9200 francs to the Cleveland Bays and Yorkshire Coachers; German, Anstro-Hungarian, American and Russian horses will each have 12 prizes worth 8600. For the purposes of easy calculation five francs make an American dollar, which basis give us a total of $15,760 to be distributed in prizes to foreign breeds and of that sum total $2300 will be won by American horses.

The Swipe on Balancing.

[Chicago Horse Review.]

"Where's Bud?" (the trainer's stable name was Bud) asked the owner as he walked into the stable one morning last week with a horse paper in his hand. "He ain't come around yet," replied the swipe.

"I am sorry he is not here," said the owner as he sat on himself on the trunk, "because I have found something in this horse paper that I want to talk over with him. It's the best thing I ever read—tells just how long to keep a horse's toes an' heels after you know his height and weight and there's some valuable charts showing—"

"Just how to cure pink eye an' crossfirin', an' colic, and kneehargin' an' scelpin' an' stopatus, an' a lot of other things, with side weights," interrupted the swipe. "Don't say another word. I'm next. You're the nine hundred and sixty-seventh owner that I've seen charge on a trainer with one of them hot-housa balancin' stories in his mit. I was thinkin' the other day when I seen you pick up this racer's foot an' look at it, that you was about due. You've got the R. Boylston-Hall-Chicago Horseman Enla 13-Chart 45 11.44-side-weight-knee roll-easy-case balancin' fever, an' it's a dangerous thing. You can't help it, though, an' you couldn't have kept from havin' it if you'd gona to West Baden or took a hundred kinds of patent dope or got vaccinated.

All owners has got to have that fever same as a kid has got to have the measles. Sometimes a dead wise owner gets over it in one season, but once or twice in a while an owner what never learns nothin' about a horse don't get over it at all, an' I'm thinkin' you're down for a pretty long spell of it. It never huckles on to a fresh green owner right on the start, causa all fresh green owners thinks hosses trot causa they're bred to trot an' can't help it. But about the time they hlow in a fat roll or two on pedigrees an' don't get no speed for their money, they take a tumble. Their eyes begin to open an' they see that most trotters is made by shoes an' hoo's, an' long toes, an' trainers, an' swipes, an' gaitin' polas, an' a lot of other things. Then they begin to look at horses' feet, an' it ain't long 'till the R. Boylston-Hall-Chicago Horseman Rule 13 Chart 4-11.43-side-weight-knee roll-easy casa balancin' fever sets in its work. I'm tellin' you this so's you'll know what's ailin' you an' you won't be likely to do so much damage as if you was in the dark. The first thing the fever does to an owner like you is to make him think all hosses can be balanced by rules, an' that the only guy in the country who knows the rules is a hot-house clerk who earns six hucks par week writin' for the hoss papers.

"That's why you've got that paper in your mit. You're goin' to spring rule 55 an' chart 608 on Bud, an' ask him if he don't think this racer of yours would fade The Abbot if he was shod that way an' had a set of side weights tacked on him. Mr. Bud is goin' to rear up a little an' he's goin' to show you that this hoss is balanced good enough, an' he's goin' to tall you that a regiment of constables with a ton of search warrants couldn't find a side weight down the grand circuit in five years, an' that Geers, an' McHenry, an' Titer, an' West, an' Snow, an' Marsh, an' Keating, an' Andrews, an' all the other teamstars that get the money don't show none of their hosses accordin' to them rules, but you've got the fever an' you're goin' to chew the rag until Bud gets sore an' quits or let's you have your way. I can call the torn because I've been there before. I've seen hundreds of racers knocked out for the season by them same sick owners. It's a funny thing that Swipes an' teamsters don't catch the fever, but they never do, an'—"

"Well, I know one or two that are afflicted with worse maladies," interrupted the owner, laughing, "and whether I got it from the fever or the horse papers, or something else, I have a theory of my own about shoeing this horse. I think he will have a fast horse if he wears side weights a while."

"Sure thing," said the swipe, "it's a cinch he'll be fast if the weights is the right size." "You can get a pair of side weights the proper size an' tack em' on right he'll be so fast to this floor that he won't need no halter."

"Well, as I was saying," said the owner, "I have a theory—"

"You think you've got a theory, but you're down on a dead one," interrupted the swipe again. "You are just like an owner that walked up to Splan one day when I was clerking for him back in '81, an' he says to Splan, 'Splan,' he says 'I've got a theory about shoein' this horse.' 'No you haven't' Splan says, 'you think you've got a theory, but what you've got is a notion. A theory is the outgrowth of thought, study and experience, and a notion comes from a had liver or stomach. You have not had any experience an' you haven't given this matter any thought or study, but, like many other men that have got money to buy race horses an' csnvas hack lock, you have got a had liver an' a head full of notions.' That's what Splan says, an' I'm thinkin' it hits you right where you live. Them theories of yours is notions, an' heir diepepticky notions, come on from the fever I've been ellin' you about. You ain't going to discover no livin' baories 'till you get rid of that fever, an' you ain't going to get rid of that fever until you learn that the system of balancing that mada Dexter, an' Golds, ith Maid, an' Maud S, an' Nancy Hanks, an' Alix, an' Azote get the money is the only one to have around a trottin' horse stable. See?"

Whitney's Son to Manage His Racing Interests.

Turfmen will be interested in knowing that William C. Whitney's immanas racing interests will be managed next season by his son, Harry Payne Whitney. During the past season young Mr. Whitney was a frequent visitor to the race track and was a shrewd observer of his father's horses. He is a practical horseman himself, a good amateur rider and is fond of the sport. He is a modest, unassuming young man, and made a favorable impression on the racing men with whom he came in contact. Like his father, he paid no attention to the betting ring.

The relations existing between Sidney Paget, in whose colors the horses are now raced, and William C. Whitney will be altered by the new arrangement.

The Whitney horses will be handled by three trainers next season instead of by one, an arrangement Harry Payne Whitney is said to have made. Samuel Hildreth, the present trainer, will have charge of one division of the stable, Thomas Welch of another and Peter Wimmer of a third.

Welch trained the Fleischmann horses during the past season and was unusually successful with them. He is an extremely competent man, shrewd, conservative and experienced. The Fleischman stable will have a small one next year and Welch will handle the Whitney horses as well as his old employe's.

Wimmer is one of the old school Kentucky horsemen. His successful preparation of Ben Holladay, an unsound horse, for the many long distance races the old campaigner has won during the past two years was a revelation to the younger men in his business.

There is a general impression that Mr. Whitney's horses were not successful during the past season. It will surprise most people to know that he is second on the list of winning owners, with $61,550 to his credit. Of course, this is a small part of what the stable cost, but as it was not managed with any profit-making ideas, the result must be gratifying. Mr. Whitney's horses in his first year on the turf have earned more money than those of such veterans as James R. Keene, the Belmonts, Daly & Gidaon, the Dwyers and Marcus Daly.

With Harry Payne Whitney in active control, with George Odum, who is under a three years' contract to ride and with men like Hildreth, Wimmer and Welch to train, the Whitney horses ought to head the winners next season.

Thoroughbred Sale.

There was a large crowd at the Occidental Horse Exchange last Tuesday evening when a number of thoroughbreds from the Burlingame, Flotsden and other stock farms were offered. Wm. G. Layng, proprietor of this well known auction establishment, did the announcing, and Louis Schaffer, the popular horseman and ex-Sheriff of Alameda county, was the auctioneer. The first horses sold was the consignment from the Flotsden Farm, property of the estate of the late B. C. Holly, and this sale was followed by that of the Burlingame Farm yearlings. The prices at which the horses were knocked down were as follows:

Bit of Fashion Breaks Down.

Bit of Fashion, the filly that Burns & Waterhouse purchased in St. Louis last summer, broke down in the Stanford Stakes Wednesday. The daughter of Forest closed favorite in the hating and rounding the turn for home it looked as if she would overhaul Bathos. From there on she did not gain any ground and was beaten two lengths by Bathos. On the way back to the stand Thorpe dismounted from Bit of Fashion and Dr. Rowell made an examination of the filly. He found that the suspensory ligament of the front leg was ruptured and it is thought that Bit of Fashion is hopelessly broken down. It is believed that the filly stepped in a hole. The filly showed good form at St. Louis and it was expected that she would develop into a high class performer. She is a chestnut filly out of Welcome, a mare by imp. Mortimer and was bred by J. B. Malona of Gallatin, Tennessee.

If you do not own a brood mare lease or buy one and enter her in the Futurity Stakes.

Another Mile Track at Pleasanton.

The well known horseman and farmer, J. Sutherland, recently sold his place near Pleasanton for a good round sum, and from the following from the Pleasanton Bulletin it looks as though he would go in the horse training business quite extensively. Few men are able to get more early speed out of colts than he. The Bulletin says:

"Another land deal has been closed here, and one which will perhaps add more advantages to Pleasanton.

It has often been said and is a common expression that opposition is the life of trade, and it is just so in the deal just closed.

Pleasanton is to have another mile race track. They are to be close to one another and within a stone's throw.

J. Sutherland, who will be the new proprietor and owner, has purchased fifty acres of land from A. H. Bernal opposite the Schweer property west of Pleasanton and close to the Pleasanton Training Association's track.

In conversation with Mr. Sutherland upon the new deal and improvements, he said:

"Yes, I have purchased fifty acres of fine land from Tony Bernal near the old track and will begin at once to improve it.

The first thing I will do will be to erect a large barn and some forty good substantial stalls that will stand the weather and be an ornament to the property as well. I will then proceed to build a house and as rapidly as possible my mile track. The track, of course, will be for my own private use, although I do not bar any of the boys who may wish to come in, as they will always find my gates open.

This track, of course, will not be in opposition to the present track, but I always like to have things of my own and I believe I will have as good a track as any in the State when I get it completed and in shape."

Palace Hotel Supper Room.

No institution in San Francisco is so fertile in developing improvements that minister to the convenience and pleasure of the public as the Palace Hotel. Not satisfied with its beautiful ladies' cafe and its finely appointed grill room, a new supper room is to be inaugurated which far surpasses anything of the kind existing here.

The beautiful and lofty apartment known as the American dining-room, with the entrances from the main office and the grand court, will be formally opened to-night (Saturday).

The decorations and furnishings are on such a lavish scale that it is safe to venture the prediction that this room will rival any in the hotel for its beauty and magnificence.

For the entertainment of patrons, orchestral concerts will be rendered each evening from 9:30 to 12 o'clock. The musical talent engaged is under the direction of Mr. C. H. Randall, who will be assisted by such well known artists as Signor Pietro Mareno, Mr. Ford, Mr. Regensburger and other distinguished performers.

It is the intention of the Palace Hotel management to make the supper room a feature that will be in keeping with the general excellence of the house, and it goes without saying that it will receive generous patronage from those who appreciate perfection in cuisine and luxurious surroundings.

With moderate charges and polite service, it will undoubtedly be the favorite place for after-theatre supper parties and for the large contingent who enjoy dining during the evening.

MR. E. P. MYERSON of New York, who has just returned from Havana, whither he went in the interest of theatrical enterprises, reports some pleasant experiences in more or less successful efforts in picking the winners at the races of the Havana Jockey Club. The races are held on Sunday, and Mr. Myerson says that when he visited the track 25,000 people were present. Nine events were decided, about half of them for cavalry horses. These latter were ridden by members of the various cavalry troops in and about Havana. The official program is in pamphlet form and is a rather imposing affair. Major General Brooks is president of the Jockey Club, and in the list of ten vice-presidents are the names of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, Gen. Chaffee and Gen. Ludlow. Lient. Commandar Lucien Young, Gen. Randall and Gen. Baldwin are the judges. Mr. Myerson says that the betting on the contests is fast and furious and that quite a lot of money changes hands in the course of an afternoon. The sport is decidedly popular in Havana and Mr. Myerson thinks it is only a question of very short time until quite important race meetings are held there.

CHARLES LITTLEFIELD JR., of New York, has several youngsters by Goldfinch that experts claim are the grandest specimens of yearlings ever bred in California. These youngsters are owned by James B. Haggin. Marcus Daly's stable is not likely to be an extensive one next year. As Mr. Daly intends to make his permanent residence in New York, it is probable that he will be a frequent visitor to the race tracks next year.

The Best Remedy We Ever Used.

WESTOVER, MD., July 31, 1897. The Lawrence-Williams Co., Cleveland, O.: I have recently bought a bottle of "Gombault's Castile Balsam" and have misplaced the directions for its use. BUDD DOBLE and Samuel Gamble started East last Wednesday with their consignment to the Fasig-Tipton sale. They had two carloads of good ones and we hope they will strike the market just right.

It seems that the statement sent out from Cleveland to the effect that Sar Pointer had been permanently retired from the track was wit out foundation in fact. It is possible that he may be trained another year.

A CONSIGNMENT of trotting bred horses from the Butte county farm of W. A. Shippee, were sold at Chase & Mendenhall's stock yard last Tuesday. Many of the lot were unbroken and no pains had been taken by Mr. Shippee to shape them up for market and they presented anything but a good appearance, though fairly well bred. They went at low prices and were picked up by dealers in nearly every instance who will realize well on their investments.

C. W. WILLIAMS has sold in the past ten years more 2:10 trotters than any other breeder, and in his consignment to the Fasig-Tipton sale it is said there are several more.

It looks as though every harness horse owner and trainer in California has enlisted in the fight against hookmaking on trotting tracks. Many go so far as to say they will not enter their horses at meetings where hook betting is permitted.

HALF the roed horses in San Francisco would be in pasture were it not for the speedway in the park, and the number now in use would be doubled if there were a good trotting race track within a half hour's drive of the business center.

MR. KELLY BRIGGS, of Winters, owns a colt by Henford Medium 2:11½, out of the dam of Kelly Briggs 2:10½, that is a natural peccer and gives promise of being another surprise from Yolo county when the two year old reces come off next year.

J. M. NELSON's sale of trotting stock on Wednesday of this week was greatly interfered with by the rain—a heavy shower coming down for a couple of hours during the night. Several roadsters were sold at fair prices, however, ranging from $75 to $175.

GEORGE CROSVY has sent his three year old colt Don Derby, full brother to Diablo 2:09½, up to the Oakwood Park stock farm, where Ben Chehoya will unidle him for speed. Don Derby is a handsome chestnut colt and gives promise of being a fast one.

It is proposed in France to set aside five per cent. of every trotting purse of $200 and over, to be given to the breeder of the winner's dam, or in case of his death, to the widow or legal heirs who owned the dam of the winning horse when it was foaled.

BERTHA R and Diens, two handsome bay mares, both by Daly 2:15, are among the good green prospects in California. They can trot in 2:16 or better and are large and stylish. They belong to Dr. Finlaw of Santa Rosa who may campaign them next year.

DR LEEK 2:09½, by Sidney, was sold at the Splaw-Newgass sale in Chicago last Friday for $2900. He was purchased by M. H. Tichenor, of the well known firm of Tichenor & Co., of New York, and will very likely be seen on the speedway in that city.

MR. HOLFEN, of the Papinte Stock Farm, Concord, Cal., has purchased a five year old gelding by Altamont out of the standard and registered mare Maggie Arnold by Almont Membrino, second dam by Pilot Jr., that is a very promising trotter and as handsome a picture.

NATHAN A. COLE, who started the publication of Men and Horses, which was practically a year book published in monthly installments, has merged it into Outing, and will hereafter conduct a thorough light harness horse department in that magazine. The new arrangement will begin with the December number.

TOM BONNER, of Santa Rosa, who was for many years Superintendent of the Santa Rosa Stock Farm, has been engaged in a new business this summer. He has been the Sonoma county representative of a big wine manufacturing firm and has purchased more than a hundred carloads of wine grapes during the season.

VIOGET STOCK FARM, at Lawrence, Santa Clara county, has a three year old grey filly by Wild Boy, out of a mare by Abbotford that is one of the fastest young trotters ever seen in Santa Clara valley. She is hardly bridle wise yet, but is expected to be one of the sensational trotters next year if trained and started in the races.

THERE will be two or three days of racing at Porterville, Tulare county, on Thanksgiving and following days. Purses of from $25 to $50 will be hung up for runners, trotters and pacers which will be divided, 75 per cent to first horse and 25 per cent to second. The reces will be held on the Boucher track. James Howell is acting as Secretary.

KENIG, the well known Kearney street shoe dealer, is now the owner of Sidenia, a bay mare by the great Sidsey, out of Lena Bowes by Ethan Allen Jr. Sidenia is a handsome bay mare, a fast trotter and as nice an animal on the road as one would wish to drive, and her new owner is becoming a regular patron of the speedway during good weather.

MRS GEO. SHAW, of Hollister, is the possessor of a handsome bay filly, two years old, sired by Benton Boy, dam Nellie Nutwood. At the age of 23 months, with only two months handling, this filly paced quaters in 35 seconds. She is a full sister to the trotting gelding Uncle Johnny, with a three year old record of 2:19½. The lady expects to win the Breeders' Futurity with her next year.

MR. M. McMAHAN, of this city, who owned and drove the old champion Tom Rider on the road for several years, was in Los Angeles during the recent meeting held there and speaks with enthusiasm of the race between the great peccers. He says the finish of the heats was worth going the distance to see and that the excitement was intense. It is unfortunate San Francisco did not see these great horses.

THE greatest winner among the peccers this year, in point of reces, is the Cleveland gelding Tom Nolan 2:16½, says the American Sportsman. He opened the campaign at Newburg in June and closed it at Columbus last week. He started 19 times and was never behind the money, winning 14 reces, three second moneys, a third money and a fourth money. Once he was beaten by an accident, and once he started while sick. His winnings for the year aggregate $2945. What is the most remarkable feature of his record is the fact that he never started in a race previous to this year, and from June to October he contested 70 heats, and never made a break. The set of shoes that were put on him in Merch were worn all season. Tom Nolan is by Gen. Hancock, dam by Belmont, second dam Nig, dam of Tom Sherlock 2:16½, and Millatto 2:21, by Mambrino Patchen.

THE mare Alverde Akin has made the most wonderful record ever established by a trotter. Through almost the entire season she started in two races a week and now has to her credit 19 victories out of 20 starts. She started the season green and at Wichita, Kan., she won the third, fourth and fifth heats in 2:14½, 2:15 and 2:16. She is five years old and cost her present owner in the neighborhood of $500 twelve months ago.

AT the Sacramento track Chas. Burgess is working Stenford R., O. J. Holmes has Diawood 2:11 and several others, Hi Hogboom has several young Walsteins in training, N. McDonald is jogging Arthur Holt and several colts, and Mrs. E. W. Callendine is having Abidine 2:17½, the handsome filly Ledv Keating, by Stem B. 2:11½, Diawood Jr., by Diawood 2:11, and several others kept up and got in shape for next season.

DURING the meeting at Lexington, a yearling gray filly attracted about as much attention as any horse at the track, she having worked a quarter in 34 seconds. The filly belonged to George W. Leevitt, of Boston, he having purchased her before the meeting. Last week this filly was sold to a member of the Boston Driving Club for $3000 cash. The filly is by Clav King 2:27½, dam by Strong Boy 2:12, and is in about $38,000 worth of stakes.

JAMES GOLDEN, Boston, thinks now that his Dexter Prince filly is sweeter than ever. Last week Ed Avery drove her a mile in 2:24, with the last quarter in 31 seconds and the last eighth in 15 seconds. This was pretty good proof that the three year old has the speed she has been credited with. Golden has refused an offer of $7000, made by John Shepard, and another of $8000, made by Mart Demarest, in behalf of A. E. Alford of Syracuse, N. Y. It is probable that Mr. Golden will save the filly until her five year old form, as she is a very growthy youngster.

THE best touted horse in the Fasig-Tipton sale is Sagwe, "the horse from Missouri" as they dub him. Chas. Tanner saw him work four heats in 2:24, 2:12½, 2:12½ and 2:11½ and bought him and was then induced to put him in the sale. Sagwe was taken to Cleveland and worked a mile in 2:10½, last quarter in 31½ seconds. He is claimed to be the fastest green trotter living. He is by Saywa, a son of Onward, and though five years old was never even broke until nine months ago. He is 15.3 and a fine individual, perfectly sound, good gaited and good headed according to the write ups he has been getting. What will he bring at the sale?

BISHOP HERO 2:21, holder of the world's five mile trotting record of 12:30½, is now being driven on the road in this city by Gen. Shafer. Bishop Hero is sixteen years old and has probably been engaged in as many hard fought battles on the turf, as the hero of Santiago has in actual warfare. The old roen is thin and gaunt with age and campaigning, but his new master has flesh enough for both. Bishop Hero can probably trot a mile to his record any day on a good track, and has all the fire of his youth when General Shefter calls on him for a brush down the road. He is not often driven single however, but used as a mate to another good roadster owned by the General.

CHAS. FERGUSON, of Pinewood Stock Farm, Bentonville, Ind., is entitled to the belt as the champion breeder and developer of early speed. A few years ago he drove the then five months old pacing colt Winwood to an official record of 2:58. He now has a colt less than six months old, by Winwood, that he offers to match against all comers. Here is what he writes in the American Sportsman under date of October 25th: "I have a colt by Winwood, less than six months old, that I will race against any colt foaled in 1899, mile heats, heat two in three, to sulky, for any reasonable amount. This colt paced a mile to-day in 2:57½, last quarter in 42 seconds. He drew a bike cart weighing seventy-five pounds and myself, weighing 167 pounds."

CAPT. HENRY FLEISCHMANN created quite a diversion when Derby Princess was put up for sale at New York last Saturday. He had just returned from Europe in time to see the mere sold. He had taken her to Austria and returned her to this country last June. The statement made by Mr. Fleischmann was not only unique, but gave a lot of inside information on horses taken to Europe. He says she could not trot in 2:40 on the tracks in Austria, and that seven weeks of training by Ira Ryerson, after her return, she showed a mile in 2:10½. "She didn't like the tracks in Europe, she didn't like the feed or water," he said, "and denied if I know what she did like." She was knocked down to Ira Ryerson, who trained her, for $800.

WHILE on the circuit this year, Sam Hoy of Winters, was working a three year old trotter which all the horsemen kept their eyes on whenever he appeared on the track. He was a green colt that Mr. Hoy took along with him to give a few lessons, but will not start until next year. He is by Bayswater Wilkes, sire of Kelly Briggs 2:10½, out of Claribel by Privateer, a mare bred by the late Dr. Hicks. For the very limited amount of work he had he has shown some remarkable bursts of speed and his owner believes he will surely be a money winner and a record holder within a twelve-month. Kelly Briggs 2:10½, is the only one of the produce of Bayswater Wilkes that ever started, and there are hot three others that were ever trained at all. Everyone can show speed at the trot or pece.

In a letter to the press, J. Malcolm Forbes says: "As a horse owner I entirely approve of the two in three heat reces, but as a stockholder in a trotting association I do not believe that associations can afford to go over entirely to the two in three heat plan. It would require too many prizes to be offered in order to have enough races to give an afternoon's entertainment. I think it works very well to saddle with in two in three and a three in five race each day. To have races that will encourage racing in every heat, we must change the distance flag. I have watched very carefully the reces for the past three years with the view of doing away with the laying up of heats by drivers. I am perfectly sure that no rule will prevent its being done. By far the simplest and best plan is to put the distance flag at 100 yards when eight or more start, and at 80 yards when less than eight horses start. I hope that this will be carefully tried next season."

Rich Stakes for Two Year Olds.

The Western Turf Association is out with a stake to be called the Western Produce Stake for two year olds, to be run in the spring of 1902, and to which the generous sum of $5000 is to be added. In addition to this stake the association has also opened a couple of two year old stakes, one for foals of 1898, to which $1500 is added, and one for foals of 1899 which will have $2000 added money. The Western Turf Association is certainly doing a great deal for the breeding interests of California by offering such liberal stakes and they should be patronized by the breeders of the Pacific Coast most liberally. The conditions of these stakes are as follows:

The Western Produce Stakes, $5000 added—The Western Produce Stakes for two year olds (foals of 1900). A sweepstake of $5 to accompany the nomination for mares covered in 1899; $25 each for the produce of such mares unless declared out by January 1, 1901, or $75 unless declared out by January 1, 1902; starters to pay $125 additional; the Western Turf Association to add $5000, of which $1500 to the second and $750 to the third horse. The breeder of the winner, namely, the owner of the mare at time of entry, to receive $750, of the second $500, of the third $200 of the added money. Colts, 118 pounds; fillies and geldings, 115 pounds; winners of three races of $600 each or one of $1000, to carry 5 pounds penalty; of two of $1000 or one of $1500, 8 pounds penalty. Maidens beaten two or more times allowed 7 pounds. The produce of mares or stallions that have not produced a winner prior to January 1, 1900; allowed 3 pounds; of both mares and stallions, 5 pounds, allowance to be claimed at time of entry. By filing with the association an accepted transfer of the foal's entry the original nominator shall be released from further liability. The entry of a mare having a dead or more than one foal or barren shall be void and entrance money refunded. Five furlongs. Entries close January 1, 1900. To be decided spring meeting, 1902.

The Western Stakes—A sweepstake for two year olds (foals of 1898). Entrance $10 to accompany the nomination; $75 additional for starters; the Western Turf Association to add $1500, of which $400 to second and $250 to third horse. Colts, 118 pounds; fillies and geldings, 115 pounds; winners of five races of any value or of three races of $300 each or one of $1000 to carry 5 pounds penalty; of two of $1000 or one of $1500, 8 pounds penalty; maidens beaten two or more times allowed 7 pounds. Five furlongs. Entries close December 30, 1899. To be decided spring meeting 1900.

The Western Foal Stakes—A sweepstake for two year olds (foals of 1899). Entrance $5 to accompany the nomination, $20 additional for horses not declared by December 1900; $75 additional for starters; the Western Turf Association to add $2000, of which $500 to second and $400 to third horse. Colts, 118 pounds; fillies and geldings, $115 pounds; winners of five races of any value, or of three of $600 each, or one of $1000, to carry 5 pounds penalty; of two of $1000 or one of $1500, 8 pounds penalty; maidens beaten two or more times allowed 7 pounds. Five furlongs. Entries close December 30, 1899. To be decided spring meeting 1901.

Handsome Goes Back to Kentucky.

S. J. Jones, of Portland, Oregon, has sold his Hanover stallion Handsome to J. D. Neet of Versailles, Kentucky, for $2000. Handsome is a bay stallion, sired by Hanover out of imp. Cinderella, dam of Ferrier, Plaudit and Hastings, by Tomahawk or Bloo Ruin, end was bred and raised by Mr. Neet, his present owner, who also owns his dam. Handsome was quite a race horse before going wrong. He won the Hyde Park Stake for two year olds, valued at $12,875, over a distance of three-quarters of a mile in 1:14 1/2 with 118 pounds up, but his best record at that distance is 1:13 1/2 with 111 pounds. He was brought to San Francisco by Ed Corrigan, who had hoped to get him in condition but his had leg went wrong again and Mr. Corrigan sold him to Jones for a song, in the spring of 1897. Mr. Jones has fifteen yearlings by him and bred ten mares to him this season. This horse is a great loss to the thoroughbred breeders of Oregon, for there are but few better horses anywhere than Handsome. Hanover, his sire, is dead, and there are but thirty-eight of his get of colts, which enhance the value of a horse bred like Handsome.—Portland Rural Spirit.

BURLINGAME STOCK FARM has purchased from Marcus Daly the stallion Sam Lucas, son of imp. Ill Used and McHallah by Kingfisher. Sam Lucas is the sire of Sam McKeever and Ella Boland, and is one of the most promising young stallions in the United States.

SADDLE NOTES.

TANFORAN'S opening was a success.

The scene shifts to Oakland Monday.

MUD horses will probably be the big money winners this season.

P. RYAN had entries in three races at Tanforan Park last Monday and won all of them.

TOD SLOAN contemplates visiting California this winter. "Skeets" Martin will come with him.

The jockies, Bullman and Phelan, have arrived and are under engagement to Barney Schreiber.

JOCKEY BILL MARTIN arrived from New York this week. He is under suspension however and cannot ride.

The Melhorne Cup was run November 7th and was won by Merriewe 95 lbs.; Vovon 112 lbs. was second and Dewey 92 lbs. third.

MR. CORRIGAN has Geyser in training and thinks he will stand up and be ready for racing at the next meeting at Tanforan Park.

The New York papers say that the hegrira for the coast has not started yet, and will not be on in earnest until after Thanksgiving.

HENRY SPENCER arrived last Monday from New York. He had 102 winning mounts at the New York tracks during the season just closed.

The train that leaves Third and Townsend at 1:25 for Tanforan Park has been well patronized since it was put on. Those who go by it arrive in time to witness the second race.

The California Jockey Club will offer a purse of $600 for a handicap on Thanksgiving Day at Oakland. The distance is a mile and an eighth. On the same day there will be a selling handicap for $500 at the cup distance, two miles and a quarter.

TANFORAN closes its two weeks meeting to-day with a good card in which is a stake race. The racing has been fairly good during the first meeting of the new association, and that the track is one of the best in the country has been fully demonstrated.

A TURF scribe on a local daily reports a well known hook-maker as having handled twenty million dollars during the New York season. He says he handled as high as $17,000 in one day. According to these figures it would take about four years, not counting Sundays, to pass twenty millions through the box.

JAMES ROWE is at Brookdale, where he looks after the destinies of the horses owned by James R. and F. P. Keene. Chacornac, the Futurity winner, has almost recovered from the sprain that developed after the Futurity and prevented him taking part in the closing battles for supremacy of the two-year-old division.

The California Jockey Club has in preparation a great card for Thanksgiving Day. In addition to a $600 handicap, at one mile and a furlong, there will also be a selling handicap, decided over the cup distance two and a quarter miles, for a $500 purse.

AMONG the horses W. J. Spiers brought here are two two year olds belonging to J. V. Carter. One is a full brother to Dr. Sharp and the other a sister to the good race mare Reolia. J. Carter, the diminutive jockey, and a promising lightweight, is here with the Spiers stable. Mr. Carter will be here soon from Newport.

A MATCH race at five furlongs between Southern Girl, belonging to Burns & Waterhouse, and Yellow Tail, the property of Fred Foster, will come off at Oakland in the near future when the track is fast. If the E. & W. mare heats the chestnut son of Watercress that was formerly in the same stable, she will probably run the distance in a minute or better.

LILY DALE is the name that has been chosen for a chestnut filly foaled last March by Magnet out of Hszal D. by George Kinney, second dam Flitaway (full sister to Carrie C.) by Sensation. It will be seen that this young miss is bred something like Jean Beraud as that horse is out of Carrie C., and his sire by imp. Ill Used, the sire of Magnet's dam. Lily Dale is now at Chas. Boots' Stock Farm near San Jose, looking and doing well. She is the property of A. Wright & Co. of this city.

THE stewards of the California Jockey Club have indefinitely suspended Trainer Dick Williams of the Schreiber stable and Jockey Jack Ward. They will also recommend to the Turf Congress that their licenses be revoked. The Schreiber stable was reinstated. The rulings in the cases of Williams and Ward were made because the officials were not satisfied with the races of Forte. Trainer George Howson was reinstated and told that the horses of the Gibson stable must run to form in future.

"Curly" Brown, the well-known starter and horse owner, his brother-in-law, Charles and George Keating and Ted Walker, were ruled off the turf for life November 10, by the Queen City (Newport) Jockey Club judges for assaulting Dan T. Murray, the form writer and turf correspondent, at the track the day previous. Colonel R. W. Nelson of Newport, chairman of the executive committee of the club, acted with the judges in making the ruling. The ruling bars the men from all turf congress tracks, and from all legitimate tracks of the country. Brown and his brothers-in-law were arraigned the same day in the Newport police court on a charge of assault and battery, but owing to the serious condition of Murray, the case was continued the bonds of the three being placed at $500.

THE recent race meeting at Atlanta, Georgia, was a most brilliant success. It was held in connection with the State Fair, and although the track is a half mile affair, smoother better racing has not been seen in the West in years. On Saturday, the closing day, fully 20,000 people saw the race, and every day during the meeting the attendance was from 8000 to 10,000. The association earned over $30,000 above expenses and the success of the affair has terminated the management to build a full mile track, to be in readiness for the meeting next Fall. J. W. Russwurm, of Nashville, managed the racing end of the enterprise and Fred Gerhardy of St. Louis, was the starter.

THE CESAREWITCH.

[A TALE OF THE TURF.]

AM—or rather, was—a jockey. There! now I have lost prestige in the eyes of the many thousands of people who hate "the turf" and all connected with it; yet I am proud of the fact that I have been a jockey, and prouder still to know that I was respected by my fellow-professionals. Had I the inclination and the shilly I could fill a book with facts gained from personal experience and observation—facts which might possibly induce readers to suspect that jockeys, as a class, are as honorable as any other set of professional men; aye, perhaps even more honorable, for the path of no other professional man is so thickly studded with gayly-gilded temptations; and, after all, the successful resistance of subtle temptation is the best proof of honor.

On the other hand, I most candidly confess that I could find more than enough material to fill a book disclosing the dark side of the turf. The public knows all about that phase of turf life, however, and unfortunately a certain section of the public—the uninitiated and therefore one-sided section—can not discern the difference, so far as respectability is concerned, between the jockey and the sharper.

But enough of this. Everybody has heard of Tom Kenyon, the once-famous jockey, but everybody has not heard a certain little story about him.

Early one evening, many years ago, Tom Kenyon was informed that Lord Clanmore wished to have a word with him in private. Tom had just retired to rest, for he was in strict training for the Cesarewitch at the time, but he hurriedly rose and dressed.

His hurry was due to the fact that his visitor was a peer of the realm, for jockeys often receive visits from the aristocracy; but Lord Clanmore's father the late Lord Clanmore—had been Tom's patron. The turf never knew a more straightforward and honorable sportsman than the late lord, and no jockey ever had a better master.

No wonder, then, that Tom Kenyon hastened to meet the son of his old master. He wondered what could be the object of the visit, for it was generally understood that the young lord had forsaken the turf.

"Good evening, Tom," was Lord Clanmore's greeting as he shook the jockey warmly by the hand. "Are you well?"

"Quite well, my lord, thank you," replied Tom; and then, observing his visitor's careworn appearance, he added, "I'm sorry to see you are not in the best of health."

"I'm well enough," said Lord Clanmore; "but I came to see you on a matter of business."

In an instant Tom was all attention.

"Tom, I think I can trust you. You know that my father trusted you with many an important secret."

Tom bowed.

"You will remember that I sold my father's stable and every every one of his much-prized horses, when I came into possession of the estate?"

"Perfectly, my lord. That is why I am with Sir Eric Marsden now."

"By the bye, how do you get on with the honorable member for West Bankleigh?"

"Excellently, my lord—almost as well as with the late Lord Clanmore."

"I am glad, but, of course, I expected as much. But I must get on with my confession—for such it is. Do you know why I severed my connection with the turf?"

"Because you were disgusted with it, I understand."

"That was one reason, but not the only one. The fact is, my father left me practically penniless."

Tom stared at the speaker in undisguised astonishment.

"It is a fact, Tom. I gave up my horses but I did not give up hacking others. The result is that I am now on the very verge of bankruptcy; and in a short time I am to marry Lady Florence Garthwaite. Consequently, within the next few months, I must, by some means or other, raise at least—"

"Excuse me, my lord," interrupted Tom. "I—er—what—is—well, of course, you are aware that I owe my present position and my little private fortune entirely to your father. I have about £20,000 invested in consols. I can soon realize it, and if you don't mind, it's yours, and nobody shall know anything about it."

"Your generosity does credit to your heart, Tom, but, of course, I cannot accept your charity—your offer, I mean."

"I beg your pardon, my lord—most humbly. I forgot."

"Besides, I must raise at least £100,000. I can get a final mortgage of £10,000 on the estate, and if I lose that the mortgagee will foreclose, and I am ruined. I have explained this much, Tom, because you have a right to know it, as you are the one man who can help me to win the hundred thousand. I want you to—why, what's the matter?"

Tom Kenyon had fainted. He had heard such yarns before, and the conclusion was always a suggestion to "pull" a horse and deliberately lose a race, so that the pleader might retrieve his fortunes by foul means. The thought that the son of his old master—the old Lord Clanmore, the very son of integrity—could stoop so low was too much for the jockey. Under ordinary circumstances, perhaps, Tom would not have broken down so completely, but he had had a hard day, and for some time he had been compelled to trifle with Nature in order to reduce his weight so that he might ride the "dark" horse, Sir Eric Marsden's Alpha, in the Cesarewitch.

"What's the matter, Tom?" repeated Lord Clanmore, when Tom revived.

"Nothing—nothing," was the reply. "I've been over-training, I expect. Go on, my lord."

"Well, as I was saying, I want you to do me a favor. You know a good horse when you see one. When next you get news of a good thing at long odds, I want you to let me know. My estate has been dishonored on the turf; I want the turf to pay a little back. I will back your selection for all I am worth—or, rather, for all I can raise; and if I win I shall never back another horse as long as I live."

Tom Kenyon could scarcely believe his ears. Lord Clanmore had not come to bribe him to go wrong, after all. It was only a "tip" he wanted—an honest tip. The feeling of relief which passed over Tom, to use the jockey's own words, simply indescribable.

"My lord, you have asked me just at the right moment. I am to ride Alpha in the Cesarewitch next week. Beta and Omega are the first favorites, and, according to the betting world, I have practically no chance with Alpha, whose price at present, is 15 to 1."

"Do you advise me to go back Alpha, then?"

"Not yet, my lord. The only horse I am afraid of is Beta. Twenty-four hours before the race I shall have a pretty good idea as to the probable winner. If you do not hear from me on the morning of the race, back Alpha. If I fancy any other horse is likely to beat me, you shall know its name by the first post on the race day."

"Thanks, Tom. I understand. If I hear nothing I put my money on Alpha; if Alpha is very likely to lose I receive a letter. Very good."

On the night before the great race Tom Kenyon wrote and posted the following brief letter to Lord Clanmore:

"—, Newmarket.—Alpha has been out of sorts for two days. Impossible for him to win. Advise you to support Beta. Short odds, but sure. TOM KENYON."

The news of Alpha's indisposition was already widely known. On the day of the race scarcely any backers supported it, and it started at 20 to 1 against.

The man who was most concerned and puzzled about the condition of Alpha was Alpha's jockey, for, to Tom's surprise, the animal seemed to recover suddenly, and at the starting post Tom felt assured that the spirited horse would make a good bid for victory.

And Alpha did make a good bid for victory. Slowly, but surely, Alpha and Beta gained on their rivals until they were really the only two horses left in the race. The vast crowd cheered lustily for Beta. A hundred yards from the winning post the pair ran neck and neck, and Tom felt that, her accidents, he would win.

Then, and not till then, was Tom seized with that indefinable species of torture which one experiences when one's inclination and duty point in directly opposite directions. If Alpha lost no one would be surprised. Scarcely anybody, except the "bookies," would be sorry, for very few of the thousands of spectators had heeded Tom's mount. Above all, Lord Clanmore would be saved from ruin and disgrace—and had not he himself strongly urged the young lord to back Beta?

Only for a few brief moments did Tom hesitate. He thought of his master, Sir Eric Marsden, who had long ago set his mind on carrying off this event, and he thought of his honor, which, up to that moment, had remained unscathed.

That settled the matter. His mind was made up. With only one object in view—that of winning at all hazards—he urged Alpha on with the whip and spur, and Alpha nobly responded, like the game horse he was.

The winning post was neared—reached—passed. A hoarse roar of disappointment, a confused hubbub, and a solitary cheer here and there told Tom plainly enough that Alpha had beaten Beta and won the Cesarewitch. And such was the case, Alpha had won by a short head. Tom Kenyon's honor was saved, Lord Clanmore was irretrievably ruined.

"I congratulate you, old man," said the jockey who rode Beta. "I thought I should have beaten you this time, but—why what's the matter? You don't look over well pleased at your victory."

"Hearty congratulations!" exclaimed Sir Eric Marsden, his face beaming with smiles. "You never rode better in your life, Tom—never."

And then, to add to Tom's discomfort, Lord Clanmore—the ruined Lord Clanmore—loomed in sight. The winning jockey, feeling sick at heart, tried to avoid him; but Lord Clanmore was not the man to be avoided.

"Tom," excitedly whispered the young lord in his unwilling ear; "Tom, you have saved me!"

The jockey started.

"I put $10,000 on Alpha at 20 to 1," continued Lord Clanmore, "and I have cleared $200,000. I shall never forget you, Tom."

Tom Kenyon could scarcely believe his ears. Yet the excited peer was evidently speaking the truth. What did it all mean?

He found out shortly afterward. An envelope marked "On Her Majesty's Service," reached him, and on opening it Tom found, to his intense astonishment, that it contained the letter he had written to Lord Clanmore advising him to back Beta instead of Alpha.

The letter had never reached Lord Clanmore, for the very good reason that Tom Kenyon had, in a moment of forgetfulness, posted it without any name or address on the envelope. It had, of course, journeyed to the "dead letter" department of the general post office, where it was opened. Then, like thousands of similarly addressed, or, rather, unaddressed, missives which are dropped into pillar boxes every year, it was returned to the writer.—LORD TIT-BITS.

Heat Betting Should Go.

The general verdict seems to be that after only one season's pretty general trial the two in three heat system has come to stay, and that hereafter many more races will be made with this condition, says Western Horseman. While the old three in five condition in harness racing seems doomed, there is just one other leading feature of the trotting turf that should go, and that is heat betting. Sport is one thing, gambling and jockeyery quite another, and if the trotting turf is worthy to endure, it is es a sport. A sportsman, strictly within his sphere as a sportsman and a gentleman, is privileged to back his opinion with his money on the outcome of a sporting event only when that event is decided strictly on merit. Heat betting, on trotting events, too often results in heats being decided otherwise than "on the square," and heat betting is not sportsmanlike, and is not, strictly speaking, a privileged diversion of a true sportsman and gentleman. As a popular sport trotting turf operations of every sort should come within the bounds of aesthetic and refined diversion.

The following from the London Sportsman of October 23d will interest racing men here: "We lost a well known character in Newmarket during the week, when poor Williams, better known as 'Old Buck,' a colored man, passed away at the Rcus Memorial Hospital. Deceased, who was about 57 years of age, was well known here for about a quarter of a century in connection with the American horses. He was for years attached to Huggins' stables, and nothing could exceed the respect which the Health House establishment paid the faithful old servant when he was laid to rest in the cemetery here yesterday. His coffin, which was of polished oak with massive brass mountings, was covered with wreaths sent by many admirers and friends. One which deserves more than passing notice was sent by some sixty or seventy children of the town, who subscribed their pennies to pay that last mark of respect to poor 'old Buck,' who was justly a great favorite with them. Following the funeral cortege were several carriages, containing, among others, Mr. and Mrs. Huggins, Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbert, Mr. Jacob Pincus and many other sympathizers. All the lads attached to the Health establishment, with whom the deceased was such a great favorite, followed his remains to the grave." Buck was well known to all of the old time racing men. He took to England for Mr. Lorillard Parole, Ircqnois and all the horses that ran for Mr. L. in the early 80's.

MISS KATE, by Direct that cut her record to 2:15½ at New York, is the same mare that Monroe Salisbury to k East in 1894 and gave a two-year-old record of 2:24. She is out of Fanny K, by Redwood, son of Nutwood, and is a sister of Miss Beatrice 2:13.

FIVE hundred entries were made at the annual horse show in Kansas City on the 23d. Horse and stock men were present from twenty different states.

ANOTHER honor has fallen to Stamboul 2:07½. He was harrd from the New York horse show as it was feared no others would be entered in his class were he permitted to come in.

To Stallion Owners.

The quickest and best method of bringing the merits of your horse to the attention of owners of both standard and thoroughbred broodmares is to advertise in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN. No medium for announcements of this description is in any way equal to the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, as it reaches all the breeders, owners, racing men and sportsmen generally throughout the Pacific Coast.

An Additional Inducement

A special article, together with a tabulated pedigree of the sire advertised during the coming stallion season will be published. This is an advantage to advertisers of stallions that is too obvious to need further comment. Owners of broodmares are now seriously considering the selection of the stallion to breed to, and advertisements that appear early will make a greater impression than if held back until late in the season.

Muekrat Joe.

Tail Antoine loved a French-four dace—
That's a handsome fellow's choice;
Big Pierre Latorc can show them how
Through forest land to hold the plough,
And Old Mao Gado's log digout
Comes home at night half full of trout;
But Muskrat Joe, round-backed and small,
You think he is no good at all.

At him no browo girl snps her eye;
When strong men work he's sitting by,
Bad as fireweeds in the oats—
Till muskrats get their wioter coats;
Theo, when inlet backs are white
With mist that's froze overnight,
The teal docks fly before the bow
Of Muskrat Joe's light trapping scow,
And in his shanty, tier on tier,
Are peltz to keep him through the year,
So Joe the trapper, small and bent,
Is a man of weight in the settlement.

CARTRIDGE AND SHELL.

The opinion of the District Attorney of Los Angeles has been submitted to interested parties to the effect that quail killed in Los Angeles county cannot be sold at any time, and quail killed outside the county can only be sold during the month of December.

The Hollister Gun Club held their annual meeting last week at the office of Dr. B. F. Bonnell of Hollister, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, T. W. Hawkins; Secretary, Thos. Murphy; Treasurer, Fred Hamilton; Captain, N. D. Hall; Directors, J. R. Grubb, Wm. Highy and Dr. Bonnell. The club has leased the grounds of E. A. Sawyer in San Felipe as a shooting preserve. To-morrow the members propose to have a mud hen contest for supper.

The supervisors of Santa Barbara county have adopted an ordinance protecting eagles and several varieties of sea birds. We are pleased to note that the pioneer county movement in this State has been inaugurated for the protection of a royal bird which is rapidly becoming rarer each year. Many individuals when opportunity offers ruthlessly kill eagles, hawks, owls and other varieties of so called birds of prey which have been under the ban of superstition and ignorance from time immemorial. The few quail and chickens killed are paid for a hundred fold in the destruction of field vermin. As a "ratter" an owl will discount any cat that ever existed.

One of the best heps of ducks recorded for some time past was made in this city by Prof. James Markland and President John Lemmer on Thursday morning at the Chutes. The large pond in the resort enclosure had been generously baited for several weeks past and has been resorted to as a feeding ground by the flocks of ducks who make Stow lake their resting place. Eliza's husband was sent out to the Park before daylight Thursday morning and started the birds away a little before the usual breakfast flight. One hunter was escooned in Weyler's glass house, which made a very comfortable blind, the other shooter was posted opposite. The first lot of birds were unmolested, particularly the mallards—then they commenced to pitch in cens, sprig, widgeon, mallards and teal. The gnos commenced to pop, frequently the shooters had to plunge their guns in the water up to the breach to cool them. When they retrieved the birds after an hour's shooting, three and one-half large sacks of ducks was the result. A couple of policemen came to the entrance gate shortly after the fusilade commenced, they were satisfied that everything was proper when the gate tender informed them that the aomial tamer was rehearsing a military act with the lions and getting them accustomed to the discharge of fire arms.

Further Notes on Game Protection.

The following communication from the President of the Santa Clara County Fish and Game Protective Association we are pleased to publish as per request:

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 13, 1899.
EDITOR OF BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.—Dear Sir: In your last issue I note with surprise and regret your criticism upon the work of the Santa Clara County Fish and Game Protective Association. Surely not one of our five hundred members would expect those words from one who is the editor of a sporting journal, for who can better understand the many obstacles in the way of attaining a goal for which sportsmen would seem to me to predicate the possibilities of anything but praise and good words for the work of any and all game protective associations. You will remember that our Association is not a year old yet and that Santa Clara County has been patrolled since last March continually and paid for out of the pockets of our members. We have successfully prosecuted no less than 8 different persons in that time and paid $20 rewards for information leading to the arrest in every case brought to the notice of our Prosecuting Board. We have shown by our deeds that we are believers in game protection by shortening the open seasons, by prohibiting the sale and the shipping of quail, by prohibiting the sale of ducks killed in this county, etc. etc. Now I wish to ask the editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN if it is fair to say that because we have not included in our ordinances one to prohibit night shooting and one to do away with sneak boats that we should not feel that we were eligible to take the initiative in starting on foot a way of securing a State Game Protective Association?

Probably night shooting and hunting in sneak boats should be stopped but in all honesty, can you ask for everything in one season? The organization of a State Association would assist very materially in bettering the present game restrictions.

I would most respectfully ask to correct the writer of "Notes on Game Protection" where he insinuates that Santa Clara county wishes to regulate the fish and game questions of the State by declaring that we only wish to get the whole State to do the work and hence we have simply done what some county should do and that is, to attempt to get concerted action from all quarters. Is this not praiseworthy rather than deserving of criticism calculated to belittle the work?

Again you are misinformed when you say that a speaker at our last meeting advocated that Solano county ought to prohibit the taking of game out of the county. You will notice that newspaper reports are not always reliable, as your issue above referred to plainly demonstrates.

You are not quoting facts when you say that one gentleman started a little boomlet in favor of the adoption of the game law submitted to the last Legislature. What was said was by way of suggesting that we proceed the same as was done a few years ago in calling a meeting of delegates from the different county protective associations at which meeting the proper appeal might be formulated, to present to the Governor asking him to appoint a certain number delegates at large, also ask him to request the Board of Supervisors of each county to appoint so many more as delegates to a convention to be called in the future, at which time and place these would be the proper persons to organize a State Game Protective Association. Can the editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN suggest anything more business like than this plan?

I am morally certain that the editor of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will be welcome at this called meeting. I am equally as certain that any suggestions from him would be received in the proper spirit. On behalf of Santa Clara county sportsmen I would ask that the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN be just with all organizations of this kind, remembering that we are the friends of sporting publications and look to them for encouragement as they look to us for patronage.

Truly yours,
A. M. BARKER.
P. S.—If you will kindly publish this in your next issue, it will set us right, and I hope after reading this you will not feel called upon to criticize us for what we haven't done. The subject of night shooting was overlooked and will be included in our next. We most not ask the Supervisors to make new ordinances every month. E.

The writer of the foregoing evidently did not carefully read the article he takes exception to. The criticism referred to in the first paragraph was, it is believed, a deserved one and also an admonition that was of more value than our correspondent seems to realize. The practice of night shooting is one of the most potent elements in decreasing the supply of ducks and of driving them away from a shooting district. The use of sneak boats is equally reprehensible. The statutes of many of our sister states, communities where in the question of game protection has resolved itself into satisfactory and reasonable conditions that meet the approbation of the majority of sportsmen, are especially prohibitive and severe on individuals indulging in these styles of pursuing and taking wild fowl. Night shooting and the use of sneak boats has been practiced for many seasons past in Santa Clara and Alameda counties, particularly in the vicinity of the Bridges and Alviso and has been condemned and complained of repeatedly by many hunters in those districts. The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN has time and again called attention to it, particularly so since the organization of the Santa Clara county association; which we cheerfully accord the credit of having done much good work in the interests of game protection. It can hardly be possible that this state of affairs has not been known to some of the members of an organization five hundred strong, many of whom are known to us to be well versed in all matters pertaining to sportsmen and sports field. The fact that a patrol had been established in the county since last March lays the foundation for a belief in the incompetence, indifference or ignorance on the part of the representative of the association. If the Santa Clara Association takes the initiative in the formation of a State Game Protective Association, it seems to be a reasonable conclusion that they should be in an invulnerable position whilst formulating a plan for and advocating a better system of game protection. We have done the association a signal service in directing their attention to a matter that has been overlooked for so long a period.

The first sentence of the second paragraph is a most astonishing assertion to come from the presiding officer of the organization in Santa Clara county. It undoubtedly justifies the position taken by this journal.

Dr. Barker is not relevant in his reference to alleged misinformation and "not quoting facts." We positively reiterate the statements already made, but do not connect them with the proceedings before the recent meeting in San Jose.

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN will always be the friend and champion of sportsmen and sportsmen's organizations but will never hesitate to point out error or mistake to the individual or association when by so doing error and mistake may be corrected. The work already done by the Santa Clara County Fish and Game Protective Association has been very effective and the objects of its existence are not only for the sportsmen's benefit but for the welfare of the community at large. It is to be hoped that its career may be one of cumulative success.

The Sacramento Record-Union notes the recent change in the game law of that county as follows:

"All the counties but one that border on this have adopted similar ordinances, and some time ago the San Joaquin Supervisors, after adopting one, sent a copy of it to this board, with a request that, for the better enforcement of it and the preservation of game, this county pass a similar one. The matter was referred to the Sacramento County Game Protective Association some time ago, but it has not met since, so nothing has been done.

The effect of the laws in surrounding counties has driven the market hunters into this county, where there was no restriction, and sportsmen began to complain of the rapid depletion of the game.

By the passage of this ordinance, which does not forbid the shooting of game for local markets, but only the shipment of it outside the county, the markets of this city will be well supplied this winter, instead of the game being shipped away so that it will be eaten by San Franciscans, and game here should be within the reach of all who care for it. At present there is scarcely a pair of ducks or a brace of quail to be found in the local markets, as they are fetching a good price in San Francisco."

The Stockton Mail publishes some pertinent information relative to the effects of the new game ordinance in San Joaquin county:

Game is scarce in the Stockton markets, and the prediction is made by A. E. Cook, a local produce dealer, that it will be high before long.

"Market hunters tell me they are not going to hunt in San Joaquin county at all, nor sell any game here. The reason is that the new game law, which prohibits the shipping of game outside the county, will put them at the mercy of the local dealers. If a hunter operates in this county he must ship his game to Stockton and sell it for whatever the dealers are willing to give, or let it spoil. They will shoot outside, where they will be free. The consequence will be a scarcity of game in the Stockton market. There is nothing to prevent the hunters from shipping their game into Stockton from outside points, but there are several reasons why they won't do it. In the first place, they entertain animosity on account of the passage of that law. In the second place, market hunters usually ship their game in single consignments and to different places, and they get into the habit of dealing with certain buyers, just as people become accustomed to trading at one store. The result will be the shipment of all the game to San Francisco, that being the main market, and if Stockton wants any ducks she will have to import them from the metropolis.

"The local markets are not supplied by our home hunters. The pot-hunter does not sell his game any more than the sportsman does. He kills it for his family, and if there is any left over there are always plenty of friends to divide it among. It is the market hunter, who makes a business of shooting, who supplies the market. As I have already said, he isn't going to supply it now, and game will be scarce here in Stockton. That means high prices. Just at the present time prices are low because there is no demand, but the demand and the high prices will come as the season advances."

This view of the operation of the new law is unique, it was generally supposed, at the time of its passage, that it would act in directly the opposite way.

A comparison of the two different statements shown above is interesting. Neither county ordinance prevents local shooters from killing as much game as the opportunity offers. The hunter from an outside county is under the ban—and for what reasonable cause in the interest of game protection it is hard to divine. These laws were supposed to have been passed for the purpose of curtailing the rapacity of the professional market hunter. One paper invites the aid of the market hunter and the other complains because he is coy and shy.

The condition of affairs promises to grow and on the same lines too. Much of the feeling in the interior is caused by incendiary and abusive articles from the pens of so called apostles of game protection in this city who in their mistaken zeal do not hesitate to go forth proselyting in other fields, braying loudly and at length whenever they find audience. This row's egg promises to hatch out a bird built on the lines of a crow.

At the next meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Yolo county an ordinance will be introduced the purpose of which is to prevent market hunters from killing ducks in the Yolo marshes and shipping them to the San Francisco market.

It is rumored that Calaveras county will soon pass an ordinance forbidding the deportation of game from the county.

Shipment of game from Fresno county was prohibited Thursday by county ordinance.

Sacramento Game Law Changed.

The Sacramento county board of Supervisors passed the following game ordinance on November 10th:

SECTION 1.—Every person who shall at any time take or ship or cause to be shipped from the said county of Sacramento into any other county more than ten quail, ducks, doves or pheasants, in any one day, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC 2.—Every person who at any time, in the said county of Sacramento, State of California, shall hunt, pursue, take or kill any quail, ducks, doves or pheasants, for the purpose of selling or offering for sale the same at any place out of the county of Sacramento, or shall cause the same to be sold or offered for sale outside of the said county, or shall cause the same to be sent out of the said county for sale or offer of sale shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC 3.—All ordinances and parts of ordinances, in so far as they conflict with this ordinance, are hereby repealed.

SEC 4.—This ordinance shall take effect immediately.

The Game Law.

The synopsis of the game laws appearing below and published in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for several years past has, from time to time been changed or the provisions of new ordinances added thereto by reason of the many and various changes in the county game and fish laws, particularly those of recent date and of application in and around the bay counties.

This synopsis has been frequently copied (in more or less garbled and incomplete form) and quoted by city and interior journals and has also been printed and distributed by business houses. While the information given at the date of issuance was substantially correct, we do not care to be held responsible for the circulation of old matter that is now incorrect in many details. Some complaint has been made in this respect and to avoid misunderstanding in the future it is suggested that for information of this character a reference be made to current numbers of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN for the latest and most complete data concerning the Game Laws.

The open season for shooting quail, doves, deer and wild duck as fixed by the State law is as follows: Doves, July to 15th February. Mountain quail and grouse, 1st September to 15th February. Valley quail, wild duck and rail, 1st October to 1st March. Male deer, 15th July to 15th October. Pheasants, the taking, killing, selling or having in possession at any time is prohibited; robbing or destruction of nests or having pheasant eggs in possession is a misdemeanor in the following counties: Butte, Trinity, Marin, Lake, Merced, Riverside, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, Kings, Ventura, Santa Clara, Monterey, San Joaquin, Yuba.

The clerks of nearly all the Boards of Supervisors have advised us no changes have been made this year, but the ordinances passed last year hold good if they do not conflict with the State law. The following counties have not passed any ordinances that alter the open season as provided by State law: Amador, Butte, Inyo, Modoc, Mono, Mendocino, Mariposa, Nevada, Napa, Plumas, San Diego, Solano, Santa Cruz, Siskiyou, Tehama, and Yolo.

The changes are as follows:

 Alameda—Quail, Nov. 1 to Feb. 1. Male deer, July 15 to Oct. 1. Pheasants protected until February, 1904. Hunting, killing or having in possession for purpose of sale or shipment out of county: quail, bob white, partridge, wild duck, rail, mountain quail, grouse, dove, does or deer, antelope, elk or mountain sheep prohibited.
 Colusa—Deer, Aug. 15 to Oct. 15.
 Calaveras—Deer, Sept. 1 to Oct. 15.

I'll wonder if the feathered fly, or if the loathsome bait,
 The spinner or the angle worm, will prove most up to date,
 Shall I sport a fine fly hook,
 While in a hidden nook
 Of my basket, there is home,
 Salt shrimp and mushy spawn,
 Mushy spawn.

On the Calaveras Creek, where the fishing makes you sick,
 With my Leonard in my grasp and the milk shake in my flask,
 I will test from time to time
 My old cotton twisted line:
 And I'll cast and cast with glee
 Till I'm anchored up a tree,
 Up a tree.

But if I catch no trout, tho' I tramp and tramp about,
 Shall I lie in language fit, ament my catch of "Nit"?
 Shall I claim that day and night
 Men are using dynamite
 Till with neither worm nor grub
 Can you even catch a chub,
 Catch a chub.

True Anglers, so 'tis told, be they young or be they old,
 When mistime dogs their head, ament my catch of "Nit"?
 That they'll triumph in the hour
 That next time they will catch a trout,
 For within their spirits lies,
 The bright hope that never dies,
 Never dies.

[When ere you list you may go a' fishing;
 And good luck, too! But all of us are wishing
 That when beside life's stream,
 You may never, never dream
 Whilst peddling old Charon's punt,
 That you've been unloved and forgotten, Judge Hunt,
 Superior Jobu Hunt!—Ed.]

The Fly-Casters' Banquet.

The annual dinner of the San Francisco Fly-Casting Club was held last Tuesday evening. The presentation of the medals won during the past season was the feature of the evening. Judge John Hunt Jr. was toast-master. He prefaced a series of apt and witty presentation speeches with the verses above given. The true spirit of congeniality and camaraderie prevailed the gathering of sportsmen from the beginning to the end of the function. Judge Hunt seemed to be at his best and his remarks from the opening presentation to W. D. Mansfield down to the epilogue to leather called forth by the medal built expressly for Alex. T. Vogelsang received the attention and applause due a happy facility in a high degree to entertain. The medal winners in their turn each responded with appropriate remarks. W. D. Mansfield in an eloquent and feeling manner eulogized the late Anstin Tubbs who was a member of the club and a thorough gentleman sportsman. The company present drank a standing toast to his memory.

The anglers who were the medal winners are the following: Long distance—Championship medal, W. D. Mansfield (133 feet, the world's record to date); first class medal, A. E. First class medal, A. E. Lovett. Special medals were presented to F. H. Reed and Jes. S. Turner.

During the evening Welter D. Mansfield gave some comparative statistics enent the records of long distance work and Col. C. G. Edwards briefly gave the history of fly-casting in America and an account of the organization and growth of the fly-casting club in this city.

The Care of Fishing Tackle.

With regard to the durability of fishing tackle, very much depends upon the care taken of it. The neglect of a single winter will cost hundreds of dollars if a sportsman's stock be as large as that of most professional anglers. Rods to be laid aside for the winter should first be carefully examined, all defects and damages repaired, the ferrules and wrappings thoroughly cleaned, new plugs fitted to the joints, rings supplied where missing and re-wrapping done where required. Where a joint has been fractured or broken entirely, it is not good economy to patch or splice, replace with a new one. Negligence in this matter will be found a poor winter's investment when the rod is used again next season. After the proper cleaning and overhauling a new coat of varnish is in order after a thorough drying, wipe the joints carefully and lay them away in their case in some apartment where the temperature will be uniformly as near to about fifty degrees as possible. By no means let the rod stand near a chimney or furnace flue; and the other extreme of cold in a garret or outbuilding should be avoided. Changes of temperature destroy the pliancy and stiffness of the rod. Where the rod has no leather-case, but is kept in a bag, never tie the parts together tightly, as it subjects some portions to an extra strain, thereby impeding the equal distribution of strength throughout its entire length. For the same reason the rod should be laid flat, on a shelf if possible, instead of being stood on end in a corner, and under no circumstances, either when in use or in ordinary, should it be left jointed or hung on pegs. Really, the best way to keep rods perfect is to put them in a shallow box, wide enough to hold them when laid side by side and two or three inches longer than the longest. There is always some spare room in the house where this case could be laid along the surbase and not be in the way or seem unsightly.

As regards tackle, all lines should be reeled off and stretched from one end of the yard or garden on some bright and sunny morning, and left an hour in the air to dry. They should then be overrun lightly with a bit of woolen cloth or chamois, to remove any taint of mildew, sand, sea salt, or other extraneous matter, and then be wound upon the reel not too tightly and put away. The reel should be thoroughly cleaned and placed in order previously. If frayed portions of the line are discovered they should be condemned, and the good parts kept for miscellaneous uses, which will be found easily enough. With respect to leaders, flies, spoons, ground tackle, etc., it is admissible to defer immediate attention until some fine evening when a cheerful breeze and indoor comforts ere heightened by the blustering weather without, and then with the stock spread out upon the sitting-room table, one can summon the aid of the little folks to assort the several varieties. As in the case of lines, all worn and imperfect flies, all frayed leaders, and half-broken gut lengths, should be rejected as pest service, for the great desideratum with a careful angler is to keep his gear in as perfect a condition as possible, that at no time he may be aggravated through negligence by an untoward loss. Be it boxes and creels should be thoroughly cleansed with warm soda water, and when dried up it is well to sprinkle them with a little cercholic acid, or a wash of cercholic soap can be used. Never keep your fishing end shooting gear in the same drawer or chest. Above all else guard against the ravages of moths.

When the spring comes round, look again to your tackle with careful inspection and see that all are in perfect order. Test your lines foot by foot for freys and weak spots. See that the ferrules, wrappings, rings and tips of your rods are tight, and no fractures in the joints. Give your flies an overhauling, rejecting all specimens that have been injured by use and also all frayed gut lengths. It is better to throw away a handful now, than to lose flies and heavy fish together the first time you hook to a rise. If your outfit is not complete, nor your assortment of flies full, replenish at the tackle stores.

The Fishermen's Club of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, at Santa Barbara, has elected the following officers: President, Frank S. Den Bergh; Secretary, Herry L. Stoddard; Treasurer, Alfred M. Hayward.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

English mastiffs are said to be a most popular breed in Texas. The greyhound bitch Sometime, recently purchased by F. W. Worthington, is in whelp to Whiskey Hill (Firm Friend—Valley Queen). The Interstate Coursing Club held their annual meeting in the vicinity of Merced this week. A large number of leashmen were present, the coursing being of a high order of sport.

The Lay of the Angler.

To-morrow I'll go fishing at early break of day
 When the dew is on the meadow, and the bloom is on the hay;
 And I'll stroll adown the creek—
 While the finny prize I'll seek,
 And I'll try to make each cast
 More successful than the last,
 Than the last.

What companion shall I take when accoutred I start out?
 Shall I ask bold Alex. Vogelsang, the lusty and the stout?
 Will he ever hie away
 From his desk across the way?
 Where here worketh like a bee,
 Taking in ye big fat fee,
 Big fat fee.

Shall I invite the wealthy Sanhorn, the gay and genial Fred?
 But will a ram hydraulic ever squirt hlm out his bed?
 Would he like to seek the nook
 And quit selling the law book?
 Will he go with me afar,
 And stop dunning up the Bar,
 Up the Bar.

If none will venture with me—tho' sad I will feel,
 I then will sally forth alone, with basket and with reel.
 And I'll saunter up the stream,
 In the early morning's beam,
 And I'll fish the fish away,
 Where the speckled beauties lay,
 Beauties lay,

Mr. Williamson's English setter bitch Dan's Lady arrived at Verona Kennels last week. She will again be bred to Ch. Count Gladstone IV.

Indications for a successful bench show in Oakland in connection with the poultry and pigeon show are more than favorable. A large number of entries are promised from this city.

Mac Hamber (Croxeth Ned—Miami) the noted field trial winning pointer died on October 26th last. This grandson of the famous King of Kent has the following field trial record: First, Western Canada Derby 1897; second Western Canada All Age, 1898 and 1899; second, Manitoba Trials 1898. His bench show winnings were two firsts and two seconds. He is said to have been a grand, bold dog, with phenomenal range and speed and a wonderful bird finder.

Bull dog fanciers in England have created quite a boom in favor of this breed. In the United States the fad is coming to the front in quite a pronounced style. In this city the admirers of the bull dog are not a few. The idol of the fancy's eye in England just now is the young bull dog Rodney Stone, the property of Mr. W. F. Jelleries, in whose kennels he first saw the light on September 1, 1897. The Kennel Gazette mentions him as follows:

Rodney Stone is a black brindle, very heavy, and square in skull, with good fore-face and broad well turned up under jaw, beautiful shoulders, and a body which leaves little to be desired. He was first shown, when fourteen months old, at the South London Bull Dog Society's 1898 Show, when he was beaten in the Open Class by Ch. Bromley Crib, but was successful in each of the other classes—Limit, Junior, Novice and Breeders—and took the South London Breeders' Cup, the Ross Cup, the Berrie Cup, the Novice Bowl, and other trophies. At his next appearance, at Brighton, Mr. H. C. Brooke awarded Rodney Stone the championship certificate over Ch. Boez, and he further distinguished himself by being placed first in the Open and Limit. At the Bull Dog Club's Show, in May of this year, Bromley Crib again beat him in the Open Class; but he was first in the Limit and Breeders' Classes, and gained nine specials, including once more the Berrie Cup, the South London Breeders' Cup, and the Bull Dog Club's Silver Trophy. At Bristol, in September, he was even more successful, for he not only turned the tables on Bromley Crib, but won over two other champions—Katerfelto and Bevon Sedgemere; and besides gaining the special for the best hull dog or bitch in the show, obtained other specials and prizes.
