one of the most successful business men of this valley, established many years, and controlling of all kinds large properties, which have been subdivided, and home-saukers plural thirson, who are all prosperous and satisfied.

Mr. Crossman is now making a special presentation of "Crossman's Emulsion No. 2," where lands suitable and the best to be secured for apples, pears, berries, onions and general farming was offered in ten-acre lots at from $25 to $50 per acre. These lands are "irrigated" and are well adapted for richness and productiveness in the Santa Clara Valley.

Planted immediately, these lands will give a splendid income in a very few years, and meantime for the growing of onions and other products between the young trees, they will yield annually enough to pay for the first cost of the lands themselves and all outlay for till, hoeing or manuring.

The location of this tract is near to the city of San Jose, and on the line of the Alameda and San Jose Electric Railway.

California Wines

Are known throughout the world for purity and superior quality. They have taken gold medals at the leading expositions of the world and are commanding in foreign markets higher prices than foreign wines. No trip through California is complete without a visit to some one of the leading wholesale and retail wine houses of the State, and many people take advantage of these visits and have a case or more of the best goods sent to Eastern friends or to themselves at their Eastern homes. Santa Clara County holds one of the two gold medals awarded to wines at the Paris International Exposition and this is proof positive of the fact that we produce in this valley the best wines in the world. A visit to the warehouses of the undersigned will be of interest to all tourists, and he will be pleased to offer you every courtesy possible.

Then Why Not Dwell in San Jose

SURELY SAN JOSE is as pleasant a place to dwell as any other city in California, and much better than many places we know. One can live in this beautiful valley either in simplicity or grandeur, or one can buy an orchard home and besides the pleasure of living amid these beautiful gifts of nature, can make the home not only support itself, but put money in the bank. We can offer a perfect orchard for sale just now on fine soil, ten acres, for $4,000, that will pay $1,000 per year income. Of course there are many others, notably eighty acres for $16,000, on the edge of the Los Gatos foothills, with grand old oaks covering the buildings, fifty acres of paying orchard, and a most sightly place and enjoyable temperature the whole year round. Would be pleased to show you these and others.

Points of Interest in and About San Jose.

The San Jose Woolen Mills is another point of interest to many when informed of the value of their output. These mills are located near the Hotel Vendome, on Hobson street, one block from North First. They manufacture all the high-grade blankets used by John Wanamaker in his great stores in Philadelphia and New York, and make some of the finest cloth of various kinds known to the world.

The Packing Houses located in various parts of the city are of interest to every visitor, and it must be remembered are among the greatest in the world. Among them may be named several located along the Broad Gauge tracks of the Southern Pacific on North First street: H. E. Losse & Co., J. K. Armsby & Co., Castle Brothers, J. B. Inderrieden & Co., the Phoenix Dried Fruit Company, and others. Near the Narrow Gauge depot of the Southern Pacific Company, on the Alameda, is the great plant of the Santa Clara County Fruit Exchange, Griffin, Skelley & Co., and others, and the canning establishment of the California Fruit Canners' Association. At Fourth and Julian streets is the plant of the Golden Gate Fruit Packing Company, and at Fifth and Julian the packing house of R. W. Hersey.

At Berryessa is the great packing house and cannery of the J. H. Flickinger Company, whose tin and glass fruits are known the world over.

At Campbell there are several large fruit drying, canning and packing concerns, among them being the Campbell Fruit Growers' Association and the Ainsley Packing Company.

Alviso and the Alviso Channel, leading directly into San Francisco Bay, is another point worth visiting. An electric line is soon to be operated to this point and from Alviso rapid passenger steamers will run between that port and San Francisco.

Santa Clara Valley and Its Resources.

Area of Santa Clara County 1,200,000 acres, 1,750 square miles.

Length of the valley, sixty miles; width, twenty miles.

Of this area 350,000 acres is under cultivation in fruit farms, fields and vineyards; the remaining area is devoted to stock ranches, etc.

The Population of the valley is between sixty and seventy-five thousand. The tax rate of the county, with the State rate added, is 1.44.

The Principal Product of the county is prunes, that crop ranging from 75,000,000 to 90,000,000 pounds, dried, annually.

Of Other Products the variety is almost too numerous to mention, ranging through all things mineral, vegetable and metal known to California.

The Value of the Products of this valley annually is between twelve and fifteen millions of dollars, and as manufacturing is practically of no moment in the income thus received, it can be seen what a naturally resourceful territory this must be when its comparatively small area is considered.

The Seed Farms of this valley are the greatest in the world, covering over nine thousand acres and producing annually the greater quantity of seeds retailed throughout this and foreign countries.

The Cherries of this section of California are absolutely the finest, largest and most splendid in flavor of any known to the world, and command the highest prices in all markets. Many of them are now being used in Marischino for cocktails, ices, etc., and are the equal in every way of foreign importations, formerly alone in the market.

Santa Clara Valley and Its Resources.

The Wines of this valley are among the finest produced in the world, they having taken gold medals at Paris and Buffalo International Expositions. Our Brandies are also famous, and the shipments of Wines and Brandies from Santa Clara County run into the hundreds of carloads.

The Asparagus, Berry and Vegetable Farms here are a source of great wealth, and each year grow in area.

The Apple Orchards of the Agnews and Alviso districts are becoming famous world wide, and the growers are making good money on their investment in apple growing. Young apple orchards in this section are paying from $150 to $250 per acre per year, and the older orchards as high as $1,000 per acre. The apples are excellent in color and flavor and in size beat the world's best.

Poultry Raising and Dairying, Stock Raising and Grain and Hay farming is also profitable in this county, and occupies the successful attention of many prosperous citizens.

Brick Manufacturing is another enterprise carried on extensively in this valley, and the demand for Santa Clara Valley brick carries the product all over the Pacific Coast and to the Hawaiian Islands.

Stone Quarries—The stone quarries of this valley are noted throughout the State, and their products are used in the construction of many of California's best public and business buildings. Among buildings constructed of this stone in this valley may be named the United States Post-office at San Jose and Leland Stanford, Jr., University, at Palo Alto.

San Jose is the greatest manufacturing city for agricultural and horticultural machinery in California. Her fruit processors, graders, orchard trucks and cultivators are shipped all over the United States, Australia and South Africa.

A firm identified with the leading business interests of San Jose for many years. Its stores are among the best in this city, located in the heart of the business section and in a handsome business block owned by the firm. Their line of Hardware, Builders' Supplies, Plumbing Supplies, Heating and Lighting Appliances and Fixtures is one of the largest and best carried on this Coast, and they are large contractors in plumbing, heating, mantel and other work. A long experience in business, coupled with industry and honest methods of dealing, have won for this house the respect and custom of the best interests in this county.

Palo Alto is growing faster than any other town in the State of California. See The J. J. Morris Real Estate Company about investments in Palo Alto Realty.

Resources of Santa Clara County.

San Jose has the largest mills in this State devoted to the manufacturing of timber, and the product of these mills is shipped throughout California and the Coast.

The Fruit Drying, canning and packing industry of this Valley is the greatest in all the fruit growing districts of the world, employing in season thousands of men and women and expending in labor, materials, etc., an immense sum of money annually.

The United States Census Report for 1900, shows that the total shipments of manufactured products, meaning fruits prepared for sale, canned goods for table use without cooking, and all other manufactured materials of whatever class, or kind, weighed six hundred millions of pounds, and was approximately 12,000 carloads.

Santa Clara Valley Without question from its climatic standpoint, its area of cheap properties and its wealth of materials for manufacturing purposes, offers to industrial undertakings most superior advantages which sooner or later will be recognized by men who appreciate the worth of such conditions to the success of industrial enterprise. In fact, already one concern has entered into the promotion of its enterprises here, and has chosen this Valley against the world as superior for successful manufacturing. This company is The Goldy Machine Company, the first preferred redemption and common stock company ever incorporated on this Coast. This Company purposes to establish here a manufacturing plant for medium, heavy and light machinery equipped second to none in the world, and it will manufacture as a specialty The Universal Polygonal Wood Working Machine which does a class of wood turning before unknown to architecture and manufacturing, and as cheaply as the poorest ordinary stock turning. This company will be in shape to begin active operation within the next year.

The Santa Clara Mission Was founded in 1777, and is one of the oldest of California's great missions. The Santa Clara College is one of the largest educational institutions in the West, and one of the most famous. It has graduated many of the most prominent statesmen, artists, actors, lawyers and physicians known to our country's history. It is well equipped, and keeps a corps of able educators of known and proven ability.

Santa Clara Is a goodly city of the valley, set in orchards and fields whose riches of harvest never fail, her homes are comfortable and pleasant, her business houses prosperous and well stocked, her schools and churches a credit to her enterprise and her thrift. Here are located some of California's greatest tanneries, and one of the greatest lumber manufacturing mills in the State; also many other industries, including fruit-packing houses, seed warehouses, etc. Santa Clara has a municipal water and lighting system, her pride and the envy of other towns about her. She has a live Commercial League, and her citizens can always be depended upon to welcome the stranger and show one what life is in Santa Clara. The town is but 3 miles from San Jose, is reached by electric cars and by both the broad gauge and narrow gauge lines of the Southern Pacific. The elevation at the station is 71 feet; population, 3,500, it being the second largest city in Santa Clara County.

Any Inquiry concerning this thriving city and section, sent to The Commercial League, Santa Clara, California, will receive prompt attention.

Los Gatos—Is best described more fully by this extract from "Facts About the Great Santa Clara Valley:" "A little city, clean, modern and goodly, picturesquely situated like a village of the Switzerland Alps, nestling at the foot of the greater mountains of the Santa Cruz range. Los Gatos climate is unsurpassed. It is a popular resort for summer outing parties and for summer residences of wealthy San Franciscans. Los Gatos and her surrounding foothills will in time be devoted extensively to citrus fruit growing, as her soil and climate are fully equal to famous Redlands, Southern California. Los Gatos, Gem City of the Santa Cruz Foothills.

Location In the western portion of the far-famed Santa Clara Valley, in the County of Santa Clara, about midway between its northern and southern boundaries, nestling in picturesque beauty amid the foothills of the verdure covered Santa Cruz Mountains, is the matchless little town of Los Gatos, which, owing to its favored scenic surroundings, magnificent panoramic views and equable climate, has gained for itself the applicable sobriquet of the "Gem City of the Foothills." It is situated in the mouth of the Los Gatos Canyon, through which flow the pure, cool waters of the Los Gatos Creek. The town is built up about equally on either side of the creek, and is connected at Main Street by a picturesque arched bridge crossing the stream.

Name The name, "Los Gatos," is Spanish, and being interpreted means "The Cats." In the early days, before there was any settlement whatsoever, the mountains, canyons and foothills in the vicinity were thickly inhabited by wildcats; and even now, in the more remote places, they are still quite numerous.

Schools Los Gatos has one of the very best high schools in the State, and is accredited in more studies by the University of California than any other school in the county. The grammar schools, too, are the equal of any in the Golden West. There are three public school buildings in Los Gatos. The Novitiate of the Sacred Heart is a Catholic college wherein young men receive preparatory education for the priesthood; it has some of the best and most learned instructors in the church at its head, and is well known far and wide. Over one hundred students can be accommodated.

Palo Alto and Leland Stanford, Jr., University.

Seventeen Miles from San Jose, reached via the Southern Pacific; fare round trip, $1. Commutation tickets to students, $5 per month.

Elevation—25 feet to 400; population, between four and five thousand.

This Place is one of the most phenomenal little cities in the West, and is the growth of five years. The site of the town proper is level, ranging upward to the foothills behind the great Stanford University.

The Climate of Palo Alto is very much similar to that of San Jose. To the south of the town, and toward San Jose, there is one solid stretch of rich orcharding and farming country.

It Is Chiefly a college town, and its business interests depend upon the student element principally for maintenance. No town in this county or State has grown faster, or has greater promise as a place for a desirable home. The deeds to property prevent the establishment of saloons, or the sale of liquor of any kind for drinking purposes.

Reached by carriage. Only one mile from Palo Alto Station. Established and endowed by Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford in memory of their son, Leland Stanford, Jr., is the most richly endowed institution of its kind in the world. The University buildings are of massive architecture, built of stone, a product of Santa Clara Valley, and are so splendidly constructed, with all that modern art and expensive outlay can command, as to defy the ages. The memorial church within the quadrangle is pronounced by world travelers to be the equal of anything in old Europe. No traveler to the Coast can afford to miss a visit to Stanford with its rank as one of the world's most famous educational institutions.

The Leland Stanford Jr. University was founded in 1885 by Senator Stanford and his wife, in memory of their son, who died in March, 1884. The corner stone was laid May 14, 1887, and the University was opened to students October 1, 1891. The original endowment consisted of the Palo Alto estate, comprising 8,400 acres; the Vina ranch in Tehama county, of 55,000 acres; and the Gridley ranch, in Butte county, of 22,000. Since the death of her husband, in 1893, Mrs. Stanford has, from time to time, transferred other large and valuable properties to the trustees, but on June 1, 1899, the great endowment was completed by her with the gift of the entire residue of the Stanford estate, consisting of money, stocks, bonds and real estate, valued at more than $25,000,000. A full development of these great properties will give the entire estate a value of perhaps $40,000,000, an endowment greater than that of any other university in the world.

The principal feature of the architecture is the inner quadrangle, an open court 586 feet long by 246 feet wide, surrounded by a continuous arcade joining twelve buildings and the great memorial chapel. The material used for the buildings is buff sandstone, in rough hewn broken ashlar, with cylindrical columns supporting the arcade arches, and the whole is roofed with red tiles. The general architectural effect is that of the Old Mission style. Fronting this group on the north and forming the principal facade of the outer quadrangle is the massive memorial arch, flanked on the east by the assembly hall, the library and the history building, and on the west by the natural sciences and the geology buildings. On the northwest and southwest corners of the outer quadrangle are the engineering buildings. A quarter of a mile distant on either side is Encina hall and Roble hall, which are respectively the men's and women's dormitories. About the same distance north stands the museum, a concrete building of classical architecture, 313x156 feet in size. Midway stands the new chemistry building. Facing these two structures are soon to be erected the gymnasium and a second library building, each of which is to equal in size and equipment any similar building in America.

The beautiful and imposing Memorial Church is one of the finest churches in America. It is built of buff sandstone, like the other buildings, with cathedral-like interior, great arches and allegorical windows, and cost $500,000. It contains a $16,000 organ, having 3,015 pipes. This church is the most complete work of artistic architecture erected in modern times, and is greatly admired by visitors. It is indeed well worthy of inspection.

The present library building has an interior finish of polished marble, is most conveniently arranged and finely equipped and contains accommodations for a quarter-million volumes.

Back of the central group are the shops, the foundry and the power-houses. Southeast of these is the University settlement, with handsome houses and well-kept grounds.

The mausoleum is built of granite and marble, and is a beautiful specimen of modified Greek architecture.

A short distance west is the Stanford mansion, with its elaborate grounds.

One mile from the University is the famous Palo Alto stock farm. It is well worth a visit from every tourist.

Gilroy, and Gilroy Hot Springs.

The City of Gilroy Is to the south of San Jose on the Coast line of the Southern Pacific Company; its distance from San Jose is 30 miles, fare, round trip, $1.90. Elevation, 192 feet. Population, between 3,000 and 4,000. Center of one of the richest portions of Santa Clara Valley. Around Gilroy stretches an immense acreage of orchard, alfalfa land, seed farms, dairying and stock ranches, vegetable farms, berry farms, hog ranches, grain and hay ranches.

The town is incorporated and is one of the oldest in California. Its banks and business houses rank with those of other cities of its size, and its citizenship is wealthy and progressive.

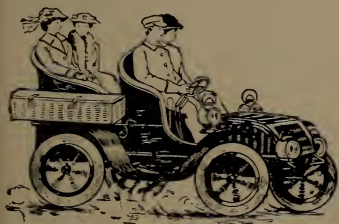

Canneries For fruit, driers, and packing houses, some manufacturing, and the handling of the immense variety and quantity of products of its surrounding districts, makes Gilroy one of the best cities of this part of the State. The climatic conditions of the place are on a par with those of other Santa Clara Valley cities. No section of the Santa Clara Valley is richer than that found around Gilroy. Thousands of acres near the town are devoted to seed growing, which, it is well known, requires the very richest and most tillable soil.

The Gilroy Board of Trade will be pleased to answer inquiries about the place and section.

Gilroy Hot Springs Reached by stage from Gilroy—fare fifty cents. Noted as a place of resort, and having some of the largest and best mineral springs in California. The Gilroy Hot Springs Hotel is well appointed and furnishes comfortable, and pleasant accommodations to all its guests.
