Magyar Guards Cut to Pieces by Cossacks in Furious Fight

London, Sept. 28.—3.50 p. m.—A dispatch to the Telegraph from Petrograd says that on Sunday a spirited account of the destruction of the Hungarian guard, cavalry division, in the battle of Gorkov, appeared in the Russko Slovo. It follows:

"A considerable force of Austrians fell on the advance guard of General Broussiloff, composed of infantry, Cossacks and light artillery. The plan of the enemy was clear; he hoped to shatter our advance guard and then break through our centre. Our infantry and artillery had strongly entrenched themselves and in reserve were several Cossack detachments.

"At first the Austrian infantry moved out for the attack. It was met with a deadly fire of cannon and machine guns and wavered and fell back.

"Then the cavalry was sent out. The flower of the Austro-Hungarian army, the Budapest Guard division, formed of Magyars, bright-jacketed Hungarians, galloped furiously down in close order. It appeared as if nothing could arrest their impetuous course, not even the awful shrapnel fire of the artillery, which brought death and destruction to their ranks, nor even the rain of bullets from machine guns.

"The commander of the division, General Frohreich, could not stand the disgrace of defeat and shot himself on the battlefield. As was afterwards explained, he had promised to bring to the Austrian emperor, on the latter's birthday, news of the complete destruction of the Russian army. By throwing his division upon the Russians the Austrian general was fully convinced that next day he would be able to announce to the emperor the promised victory.

"Before the battle the Magyars were ordered to don their parade uniforms."

"The Magyars did not hesitate for a moment, but continued to charge at our trenches. One more minute and it seemed as if nothing could be left of our infantry."

"All at once the thud of hoofs and the clatter of steel were heard and the Magyars were met by a whirlwind of Cossacks. For two hours the Austrian and Russian infantry watched with beating hearts the scene of terrible carnage.

"At the end of this time of the fine Budapest Guard division not one man was left and the whole field was strewn with the enemy's corpses, severed heads, hands and legs and dead horses.

STEAMSHIP OWNERS TAKING NO CHANCES

Norwegian Ships Tied Up in Delaware, Charterers Victualled for Germans

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 28.—Captains of the Norwegian steamers Sommerstad and Fram, whose ships are reported to have been held here because they had aboard coal and foodstuffs to put aboard German warships at sea, to-day refused to discuss the rumor.

The Sommerstad filed clearance papers on September 12 for Cadiz, Spain, and the Fram on September 19 for Pernambuco, Brazil. Neither vessel returned. Last week the Sommerstad returned her papers to the customs house. The captain of the Fram still has his papers. Both ships are lying in the Delaware river with cargoes aboard.

The fact that one ship carries wines for Spain, and the other has coffee for Brazil, caused shipping men to speculate as to the ultimate destination of the cargoes of the two steamers.

It is reported that the owners of the ships objected to the vessels being used for any purpose that would lay them open to seizure by warships of nations at war with Germany. Representatives of the company which chartered the ships deny that the cargoes are to be turned over to German warships, but agents of the owners say they have evidence to the contrary.

EXCLUSION ORDER IS AGAIN EXTENDED

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—The government has decided to extend the order-in-council prohibiting the entrance of all laborers and of Chinese into British Columbia for another six months.

The previous order-in-council runs out on September 30. The new order will likely be signed by the governor-general to-morrow.

Owing to the war situation and the surplus of laborers in Canada at the present time, it was felt advisable to extend the order for six months more.

THE AERSCHOT AFFAIR.

If the German government has any regard whatever for the opinion of other civilized countries it will be at great pains to investigate thoroughly the latest account of the shooting of the Burgomaster of Aerschot, in Belgium, and, if possible, disprove it. The story is told by a correspondent of the London Standard in Antwerp. General Von Boehn, commander of the German troops who occupied Aerschot, admitted to F. A. Powell, a correspondent of the New York World, that the Burgomaster and his son had been shot by German soldiers, but explained that the son had previously entered a room, drawn a revolver, and shot the general's chief of staff.

According to the correspondent of the Standard, who could not have seen Mr. Powell's account when he wrote his despatch, the general and some of his officers were quartered on the burgomaster, by whom they were courteously received. The soldiers dined heartily and drank a great deal, and in the night the household was aroused by screams in the daughter's room. The burgomaster's son hurried to the room and found his sister in the arms of the chief of staff. After a struggle with the officer the young Belgian shot him. The other soldiers were stupefied with wine and the shot did not awaken them, but in the morning when the body of the chief of staff was found, the burgomaster, his son and two men servants were placed against a wall and shot. Slaughter in the streets and the burning of the town followed.

The Standard guarantees the good faith of its correspondent. It is obvious that if Germany is so anxious to preserve the good name of its army and influence the people of other civilized nations to discredit the reports of outrages against Belgian non-combatants, this clear statement of alleged facts must be investigated and disproved if it spread before the world.—New York Times.

BOMBS DROPPED NEAR THE EIFFEL TOWER

Wireless Station and Military Stores the Object of Attack; One Man Killed

Paris, Sept. 27.—12.15 p. m.—A German aeroplane dropped a bomb into Paris to-day, killing one man and seriously wounding a girl.

The bomb fell in Avenue du Trocadero, at the corner of Rue Freycinet, a short distance from the Eiffel tower and a block from the American embassy.

It is believed the missile was intended for the wireless station on the Eiffel tower. The head of the man killed was blown off and the legs of the girl wounded, his daughter, were shattered.

Many houses, including that of the Prince of Monaco, were badly damaged by the bomb. Nearby where it fell are buildings containing army stores.

The aeroplane dropped four bombs. One fell in Rue Vineuse, another in Rue de la Pompe, where many Americans reside, and a third dropped among a herd of cattle on the Auteuill race-track. Comparatively little damage was done by these three bombs.

London, Sept. 27.—Delayed dispatches from Bordeaux tell of bombs being dropped in Calais, the nearest French port to England, by the airships which dropped bombs on Boulogne on Friday. The aerial bombardment of Calais preceded the rain on Boulogne, in which a dog was killed, and was even less harmful.

A German Zeppelin made a bomb-dropping tour of several Belgian cities last night, according to a dispatch from the Reuter correspondent at Ostend.

The airships visited Alost, Ghent, Dynze, Mineldeke and Rollegem, dropping five bombs at Dynze, which mortally wounded an old man and damaged the roof of a hospital. One bomb was dropped at Rollegem, but did no damage. The Zeppelin disappeared in the direction of France.

UNION SENTIMENT IN NEW FOUNDLAND GROWS

An Increasing Majority Favor Entry of Island Into the Confederation.

St. Johns, Nfld., Sept. 26.—Not in twenty years has there been so much talk in press circles and by the fire-side of confederation with the Dominion as there is at present. A growing majority is strongly in favor of making the question a really serious political issue on the island.

Within thirty years Newfoundland's exports have grown from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000, her imports in the same proportion, and her revenue from one to four millions. The material prosperity of the people has been enhanced in a still greater degree, and it is the opinion of a large majority that entry into confederation would still further increase this.

WATER WAGON AND A SEA-SICKNESS REMEDY

Valcartier Camp, Que., Sept. 28.—A new type of water wagon will be used in the field by the Canadian contingent. The wagon has about twice the capacity of the old ones, and is covered with a material which maintains the contents at a low temperature. The wagon is the idea of the minister of militia.

The spade that has been under trial lately, built for digging trenches and to be used as a protection during skirmishing, has, it is said, been accepted by the minister. It is the invention of Miss McAdam, private secretary to the minister.

The men of the contingent ought to be free from sea sickness. The government has ordered a supply of a widely advertised remedy and preventive of this unpleasant malady.

JAPANESE POSITION OUTSIDE TSING TAU

Peking, Sept. 28.—The Japanese legation announces that Japanese troops, after fighting on Saturday and Sunday, occupied a position within seven and a half miles of Tsing Tau, the seat of government of Kiang Chau, the German leased province in China. A German report, undated, but evidently having to do with the same engagement, says that the Germans retired only from their outpost position, falling back on the first line defences of the city.

An earlier dispatch from Tokio said that the Japanese had had a successful engagement with the Germans on the outskirts of Tsing Tau, lasting fourteen hours.

PREMIER'S REMAINS RESTING IN STATE

Thousands Take Last Look at Sir James Whitney in Ontario Legislative Chamber

Toronto, Sept. 28.—Ontario to-day is doing honor to the memory of her late premier.

The lying-in-state is in the place around which so much of Sir James Whitney's activity and personality centered. The body of the late premier was brought to the parliament buildings about noon to-day, and rests beneath a specially constructed catafalque in the legislative chamber.

The parliament buildings are officially closed, but the front entrance is open to the public, who will be admitted to view the body from noon until 6 o'clock and from 8 till 10 o'clock in the evening. At 10 o'clock this evening the doors will close and a special guard will remain with the body all night.

The funeral service in St. James cathedral, which was only re-opened on Sunday after renovation, will take place to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock. The officiating clergymen will be the Bishop of Toronto, Canon Plumtree and Provost Macklem. Members of the cabinet will act as honorary pallbearers. The service will be fully choral. Time will not permit of any eulogies being pronounced.

At the conclusion of the service a procession will form to the union station and a special train bearing members of Sir James' family, cabinet ministers, members of the legislature, representatives of the city council and other prominent citizens will convey the remains to Morrisburg for interment.

Wanted Another Chance.—Caught by License Inspectors Hatcher and Taylor while handing a bottle of whiskey to an Indian, Robert Henderson was brought to the police station on Saturday night and arraigned in the police court this morning. He pleaded guilty to a charge of supplying but asked for leniency on account of his age and the fact that his being a cripple closed most avenues of earning a living to him. "I know it's wrong," he said to the magistrate, "but if you'll give me a chance I will never do it again." Magistrate Jay sentenced him to three months.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO TO-DAY

Lady Selkirk, daughter-in-law of the Earl of Selkirk, founder of the Red River colony, arrived in Victoria last evening accompanied by Lady Shrewsbury. At the meeting of the Sealers' association held last night at Capt. Warren's office, Messrs. Moss, W. Munzie and Richard Hall were appointed a committee to draft an address to his excellency the governor-general in regard to the Behring Sea trouble. The reduction on assessments made by the civic court of revision was $19,333 on land and $14,450 on improvements. The members of the Victoria Athletic club have reason to feel proud of the large gathering present at the formal opening of their new rooms last evening. A keen interest is shown in the club's welfare.

Ladies Anxious to Earn Money at home. See Female Help wanted column. Saanich Garbage.—The collection of garbage in Saanich is to be made by a contractor, who will make a charge for each collection. The arrangements are being advertised. Meet on Wednesday.—On Wednesday next at 8 p. m., at the Labor hall there will be a meeting of the central committee of the Trades and Labor council to consider the matter of unemployment and the registrations at the various bureaus.

Executive Met Saturday.—A meeting of the provincial executive was held Saturday when approval was given to the plans made by the fisheries department for the dispatch of the salmon shipment which constitutes British Columbia's gift to the motherland. The question of dealing with unemployment also received attention. Transferred Prisoners.—Several "prisoners of war" held in Victoria since shortly after the outbreak of hostilities have been transferred to Nanaimo where they will join sixteen Germans and Austrians who have been sent from Vancouver. The military authorities have arranged an intermediate base at Nanaimo for the province. The majority of those under detention are reservists who attempted to rejoin their old colors but were restrained.

Methodist Revival.—Beginning next Sunday with a two weeks' service in the Oaklands and Esquimalt Methodist churches respectively, a continuous Methodist revival programme will be carried through, which will last until early in February. The programme of the services afterwards will be as follows: Belmont and Wesley Methodist churches; Centennial and Hampshire road; James Bay and Burnside; Fairfield and Wilkinson road (beginning with a week of prayer); and a final three-weeks' rally of Methodists at the Metropolitan Methodist church. The meetings will be conducted in each instance by the pastors of the respective churches, and will last in each instance for two weeks.

Library Reference Department.—Wide use is being made of the recently re-organized reference department of the Victoria public library which is now in charge of Miss Steinberger. Students of sociology have made constant use of the available books on matters of unemployment; high school students have applied in large numbers for books supplementary to their course of study; and gardeners are making constant use of the many excellent works on their favorite subject. Two subjects of general topical interest at the present time are the war and seamanship. Excellent articles bearing on the former have been collected in current magazines, and "The Manual of Seamanship," issued by the British admiralty in 1908 and revised in 1911 has been placed on the shelves of the reference room.

Commemorating Liege.—Among the first tributes to the heroes of Liege to be published in separate form is that by G. Clifford, entitled "A Tribute to the Brave," and announced on the cover-leaf as "In Memory of the Gallant Defence of Liege." The metre chosen by the author is well suited to the solemn nature of the subject, which, opening on the theme of Germany's tyranny in invading Belgium's neutrality, concludes on a note of triumph, in which the heroism of the people of the little kingdom is extolled. Attractively designed, the pages of this desirable souvenir contain as frontispiece a copy of a famous painting of a battle scene, additional cuts showing the minister of war, Earl Kitchener; and the commander-in-chief of the British army, Field Marshal French. Brown and gold are used in the cover design. The souvenir can be obtained from nearly any of the local booksellers.

Outing for October. The October issue of Outing contains valuable information for the athlete, hunter, fisherman, dog owner, automobile owner, etc. "Keeping Compression in Your Motor," an article showing what to do in order to make your motor develop full power and operate most economically. "The Story of Mike and Other Puppies," a short article on puppy habits and the ways in which dogs are spoiled in early life. "Why California Tennis Players Win," discusses the peculiarities of courts, climate, and conditions that have brought so many Californians to the top of the tennis ladder in recent years. Other articles are: "Adventures in a Cavern," "What to Carry in the Pocket," "In Back of Beyond," "A Pair of Duck Stalkings," "An Elk Tragedy," "The Trail of the Painted Woods," etc. All news-stands, 25 cents. $3.00 a year.

Anxious About Daughter.—Writing from South Wales, an ex-police officer earnestly desires to be put into communication with his daughter, Mrs. Florence A. Cameron, who when last heard of was living at 2624 Douglas street in this city. The lady in question left Great Britain twenty years ago, but for several months the ex-officer has had no replies to his letters to her. Anyone knowing anything of the whereabouts of Mrs. Cameron is asked to communicate with the detective office.

You Can Afford Canada's Best Piano at the War-Time Price

The response to the offer made by the manufacturers of Canada's Best Piano, the

Gerhard Heintzman Piano

Has been all that was expected and more. The effects of the war on the piano business were such that the manufacturers of this great instrument, famous in Canada for almost half a century, realized that something must be done or their vast organization would have to be broken up. They took action by sacrificing their own profits. This so reduces the price on Gerhard Heintzman Pianos as to place them within the reach of many who otherwise would not have bought.

RESERVES DECISION. Judge Lampman Hears Case of James Barnswell Against National Amusement Company.

Judge Lampman has reserved his decision in the action by James Barnswell against the National Amusement company for damages for breach of contract and assault. Barnswell is a colored man who was refused admission to the Empress theatre. The case was tried Saturday afternoon. The evidence showed that Barnswell bought a ticket but was refused admission at the door. An effort was made to give him back his money, but he refused to part with the ticket, which was submitted as evidence in the court. In refusing him admission the doorman interposed his hands between the man and the doorway, and this was held to constitute an assault by J. A. Aikman, who pleaded Barnswell's case. The argument of the defence was that the ticket was a revocable license, and that by giving back the money the theatre could end the bargain. Mr. Aikman contended that the ticket was a contract which the defendant refused to fulfill.

Among them is that of Mrs. Gordon Walton, wife of Provincial Constable Walton, of Ladysmith, who has lost two brothers in the disaster. One was a ship's carpenter aged 22, while the other was a young engineer.

Hunting Dogs Stolen.—Complaints have been received at the city detective department that several valuable hunting dogs have been stolen within the past few days. Now that the season is fast approaching the dogs are in great demand and the thefts seem to be the work of a band of thieves. Yesterday a valuable Irish setter was stolen from a well known Victoria resident. The police authorities announce that the culprits will be dealt with severely.

CALL-TO-ARMS SPEECH of Winston Churchill

Thee Must Be No Pause or Abatement Until the Struggle
Is Settled Decisively and Finally and Prussianism Brought to Its Knees

Mr. Churchill's call to arms speech delivered in London last night ago makes inspiring reading. We give a verbatim report of it as published in British exchanges. Mr. Churchill, who was loudly cheered, moved: That this meeting of the citizens of London, profoundly believing that we are fighting in a just cause for the vindication of the rights of small states and the public law of Europe, pledges itself unswervingly to support the prime minister's appeal to the nation and all measures necessary for the prosecution of the war to a victorious conclusion, whereby alone the lasting peace of Europe can be assured. (Cheers.)

Mr. Churchill said: Gentlemen, these are serious times, and though we are met here in an abode of diversion and of pleasure in time of peace, and although we wish and mean to arouse and encourage each other in every way, we are not here for the purpose of merriment or jollification, and I am quite sure I associate with me my two friends who are here to-night and my noble friend, your chairman, when I say that we regard the cheers with which you have received us as being offered to us only because they are meant for our soldiers in the field and our sailors on the sea. It is in that sense we accept them and thank you for them.

The Turning of the Tide in France.
We are met here together in serious times, but I come to you to-night in good heart—(cheers)—and with good confidence for the future and with the task upon which we are engaged. It is too soon to speculate on the results of the great battle which is waging in France. Everything that we have heard during four long days of anxiety seems to point to a marked and substantial turning of the tide. (Cheers.) We have seen the forces of the French and British arms strong enough not only to contain and check the devastating avalanche which had swept across the French frontier, but now, at last, not for an hour or for a day but for four long days in succession, it has been rolled steadily back. (Cheers.) When a battle takes place over a front of a hundred and fifty miles one must be very careful not to build high hopes on results which are achieved even in a short period of a field of war. We are not children looking for light and vain encouragement, but men engaged upon a task which has got to be put through. (Cheers.)

Still, when every allowance has been made for the uncertainty with which these great operations are always enshrouded, I think it is only fair and right to say that the situation to-night is better—far better—than the cold calculations of the forces available on both sides before the war could have led us to expect at this early stage. (Loud cheers.) It is quite clear that what is happening now is not what the Germans planned—laughter and cheers)—and they have yet to show that they can adapt themselves to the force of circumstances dictated by the military power of their enemies with the same efficiency that they have undoubtedly shown in regard to plans long prepared, methodically worked out, and executed with the precision of deliberation.

How We Entered Upon War.
The battle, I say, gives us every reason to meet together to-night in good heart. But, let me tell you frankly, that if this battle had been as disastrous as thank God, it appears to be triumphant, I should come before you here to-night with unabated confidence—(cheers)—and with the certainty that we have only to continue in our efforts to bring this war to the conclusion which we wish and intend. (Cheers.)

We did not enter into this war with hopes of an easy victory. We did not enter upon it with any desire to extend our position in the world, or in any romantic desire to shed our blood and spend our money in continental quarrels. We entered this war reluctantly, after we had made every effort compatible with honor to avoid being drawn in, and we entered it with a full realization of the suffering, of the loss, of the disappointment, of the vexation, of the anxiety, and of the prolonged and sustained exertion which would be entailed upon us by our action.

The Sure and Sober Hope of Victory.
The war will be long and sombre. It will have many reverses of fortune and many hopes falsified by subsequent events, and we must derive from our cause and from the strength that is in us, and from the position and history of our race, and from the support and aid of our empire all over the world, the means to make our British country plough over obstacles of all kinds and continue to the end of the furrow, whatever the toll and suffering may be. But though we entered upon this war with no illusions as to the incidents which would mark its progress, as to the ebb and flow of the fighting in this or that part of the gigantic field in which it is waged, we entered it, and entered it rightly, with the sure and sober hope and expectation of bringing it to a victorious conclusion. (Cheers.)

I am quite certain that if you choose if we the people of the British empire choose, whatever may happen in the interval we can in the end make this war finish in accordance with our interests and the interests of civilization. Let us build on a sure foundation. Let us not be the sport of fortune, looking for victories here and happy chances there. Let us take measures which are well within our power, which are practical measures, measures which we can depend upon at once and carry through from day to day with surety and effect. Let us enter upon measures which in the long run, whatever the accidents and incidents of the intervention period may be, will secure us that victory upon which our life and interests, and also the life and interests of our allies in Europe, absolutely depend.

The Navy's Achievement.
I think we are building on a safe foundation. (Cheers.) Let us look first of all at the navy. (Loud cheers.) The war has now been in progress five or six weeks. In that time we have swept German commerce from the field. We have either blockaded in neutral harbors or blockaded in their own harbors—(laughter)—or hunted down on the waters, the commerce-destroyers of which we used to hear so much and from which we anticipated such serious loss and damage. All our ships, with inconsiderable exceptions, are arriving safely and punctually at their destination, and carrying on commerce upon which the wealth and industries, and also the power of making war in this country, depend.

We are transporting easily—not without an element of danger, but still hitherto safely and successfully—great numbers of men, great numbers of soldiers, across the seas from all quarters of the world, to be directed upon the decisive theatre of the land struggle—(cheers, and a voice: "Russians," followed by more cheers)—and we have searched—(laughter)—the so-called "German Ocean"—(laughter and cheers)—without discovering the German flag.

The German Naval Theory of Attrition.
Our enemies in their carefully worked-out calculations, which they have been tolling over during a great many years when the people of this country as a whole credited them with quite different motives—(hear, hear)—have always built upon a process of attrition, upon the destruction of ships by mines and torpedoes and other methods of warfare of the weaker power, by which the numbers and strength of our fleet would be reduced to such a point that they would be able to steal their hearts and come out to fight. (Cheers.) We have been at war for five or six weeks and so far, though I would certainly not underestimate the risks and hazards attending on wartime operations and the vanity of over-confidence, the attrition has been on their side and not on ours. (Cheers.) The losses they have suffered have greatly exceeded any we have sustained.

I have made careful inquiries as to the condition of our sailors in the fleet under the strain put upon them by this continual watching and constant attention to their duty under war conditions, and I am glad to say that the health of the fleet has been much better since the declaration of war—(cheer)—than it was in times of peace. There is no reason why we should not keep up the same process of naval control and the same exercise of sea power on which we have lived and are living, for what is almost an indefinite period. (Cheers.)

The Bulldog's Grip.
By one of those dispensations of Providence, which appeal so strongly to the German emperor—(laughter)—the nose of the bulldog has been slanted backward so that he can breathe in comfort without letting go. If we have been successful in maintaining naval control thus far in the struggle, there are also sound reasons for believing that as it progresses the changes in our favor will not diminish but increase. In the next twelve months the number of great ships which will be completed for this country is more than double the number which will be completed for Germany—(cheers)—and the number of cruisers three or four times as great. (Cheers.) Therefore, I think I am on solid ground when I came here to-night and say that you may count upon the naval supremacy of this country being effectively maintained against the German power for as long as we wish. (Cheers.)

And now we must look at the army. (Cheers.) The navy has been under every government and during all periods of modern history the darling of the British nation. On it has been lavished whatever public funds were necessary, and to its efficiency has been devoted the measuring care and thought of successive administrations. The result is that when the need came the navy was absolutely ready and, as far as we can see from what has happened, adequate for the task which we require from it.

Creating a Great Army.
But we have not been in times of peace a military nation. The army has not had the facility to obtain the lavish supplies of men and money for its needs which have in times of peace and in the past through our good fortune been so freely given to the navy. What you have to do now is to make a great army. (Cheers.) You have to make an army under the cover of a shield of the navy strong enough to enable our country to play its full part in the decision of this terrible struggle. The sure way, the only sure way, to bring this war to an end is for the British empire to put on the continent, and keep on the continent, an army of at least one million men. (Cheers.) I take that figure because it is one well within the compass of the arrangements which are now in force, and because it is one which is well within the scope of the measures which Lord Kitchener has already taken. I was reading in the newspapers the other day that the German emperor made a speech to some of his regiments in which he urged them to concentrate their attention upon what he was pleased to call "French's contemptible little army." (Cries of "Oh.") They are concentrating their attention on it. (Loud cheers.)

The Million Aimed At.
Gentlemen, that army, which has been fighting with such extraordinary prowess and which has revived in a fortnight of adverse actions the ancient fame and glory of our armies upon the continent—(cheers)—and which to-night, after long, protracted, harassed, but unbroken and undaunted rearguard actions—the hardest trial to which troops can be exposed—is advancing, in spite of a loss of one-fifth of its numbers, and driving its enemies before it. (Loud cheers.) That army must be reinforced, and backed and supported, and increased and enlarged in numbers and in power by every means and every method that everyone of us can take.

There is no reason why, if you set yourselves to it, the army which is now fighting so valiantly on our behalf and on that of our allies should not be raised successfully from its present figure of 250,000 of the finest professional soldiers in the world, and from that in the new year to something like 500,000 men, and from that again, when the summer begins in 1915, to the full figure of 750,000 men fighting in the line together. The vast population of these islands and of the empire is pressing forward to serve. The wealth of Britain and her colonies is available. The navy opens the sea routes to you and every commodity needed for the preparation of war material and equipment can be drawn from the uttermost ends of the earth. Why should we hesitate when here is the sure and certain path of ending this war in the way we mean it to end? (Cheers.)

Exceeding in Merit Any Army in the World.
There is little doubt that an army so formed in quality and character, in native energy, with the comprehension of each individual of it as to the causes for which he is fighting, will exceed in merit any army in the world, and that it has only to have a chance with even numbers, or anything approaching even numbers, to demonstrate the superiority of free-thinking, active citizens over the docile slaves of despotic kings. Our enemies are now fully extended, on every front of the enormous field of conflict the pressure upon them is such that all their reserves are depleting—(cheers)—with every addition to the growing weight of the Russian attack—(cheers)—with every addition to the forces at the disposal of Sir John French, the balance must sag down increasingly against them. (Cheers.) You have only to create steadily week by week and month by month the great military instrument of which we have been speaking to throw into the scales a weight and a sword which must be decisive. There will be no corresponding reserve of manhood upon which Germany can draw. There will be no corresponding force of soldiers and of equipment and of war material which can be brought into the line to face the forces which we in these islands and in our empire can undoubtedly create. The war will turn the scale that will certainly decide the issue.

If Victory Comes Sooner.
Of course, if victory comes sooner so much the better—but let us let us not count on fortune and good luck. Let us assume at every point that things will go on less well than we hope and wish. Let us make arrangements which will override that. We have it in our power to make such arrangements, and it is only common prudence and common humanity to take the steps which at any rate will fix some certain term to this devastating struggle.

Let me also say this. Let us concentrate all our warlike feeling upon fighting the enemy in the field, upon creating the great military weapon with which to carry out the purposes of the war. There is a certain class of person who likes to work his warlike feelings off upon the unfortunate alien enemy within our gates. Of course, all necessary measures must be taken for the security of the country and for the proper carrying out of military needs. But let us always have this feeling in our hearts—that so the war is over, let them who are not only admit victory, but they shall say "they fought like gentlemen." (Loud cheers.) Let all those who feel under the provocations of the struggle their hearts diffused with anger and wrath turn that feeling into a practical channel by going to the front, or, if circumstances prevent that, helping others to go, keeping them maintained in the highest state of efficiency, giving them the supplies of weapons they require, and looking after those they have left behind. (Cheers.)

German Ruthlessness and Outrage.
I have not spoken to you much about the justice of our cause, because it has been most eloquently set out by the prime minister and Sir Edward Grey—(loud cheers)—as well as by Mr. Bonar Law and other leaders of the opposition, and much more eloquently than by any speakers in this or in any other country has the justice of our cause been set out by the incidents which have occurred and by the facts which are crowding upon us from day to day. (Cheers.) Some thought there would be a German war, and some did not, but no one supposed that a military nation would exhibit all the vices of a military organization without those redeeming virtues which, God knows, are needed to redeem warlike organizations from the taint of shame. (Cheers.)

We have been confronted with an exhibition of ruthlessness and outrage enforced upon the weak, upon women and children. (Cries of "Shame.") We have been confronted with repeated breaches of the laws of honorable warfare, with practices analogous to those which in private life are regarded as cheating, and which deprive the persons adopting them or condoning them of the credit and respect due to honorable soldiers. We have been confronted with all this. Let us not imitate it. (Cheers.) Let us not try to make small retaliations and reprisals here and there, and think that because they have cast away the treasures, not only of civilization but of military honor, our responsibility for maintaining them has become less real or less effective. (Cheers.) Let us concentrate on the simple and obvious task of creating a military force so powerful that the war, in default of any other good fortune, can certainly be ended and brought to a satisfactory end.

Hugh Lehman Slated to Handle Portland Club; War Talk in East

That Portland is to receive a P. C. H. A. franchise, eliminating Westminster, is the latest hockey dope on the cards. The Rose City arena management have made application for admission to the coast circuit and a dispatch from Vancouver states that they will be given the Westminster franchise and most of the Royal city players.

Britain in War Time-- Present Lessons From Past

By Right Honorable G. W. E. Russell, in London News and Leader.

When I was young I sedulously cultivated the old society. Thus it comes to me that I, who was born in 1853, have talked to people who vividly remembered the French war of 1793-1815, Clapham Common is a place of peaceful associations, but Marianne Thornton, the last survivor of the "Clapham sect," remembered Hannah More, as they walked together across the common, exclaiming: "Thank God, the times have changed, and it will be dead in twenty years when his follia tries to cross." Miss Thornton lived till 1887, and in the same year died Mrs. Hoare (mother of the late Sir Henry Hoare), who remembered dancing at a children's party which was abruptly broken up because the hostess heard that the King of France had been beheaded. My uncle, Lord Russell, died in 1878, and had talked in Elba to Napoleon, who made the truly characteristic observation about the war: "It was a grand jeu, un bel occupation," and my father's cousin, the sixth Lord Albemarle, fought at Waterloo and lived till 1891.

This long-continued strain of defensive operations, Britain never lost sight of her high prerogative of teaching the nations how to live. "The very stress of the time forced her to new activities, quite outside the sphere of life immediately affected by the war. The last years of the eighteenth and the first years of the nineteenth century were marked by the strong revival of religion. Robert Southey writes: "I have a de- vout myself, the state of religion, these kingdoms is better at this time than it has been at any other since the first fervor of the Reformation. Knowledge is reviving as well as zeal, and zeal is taking the best direction." Religion and Politics.

Bad Complexions Peeled Off at Home

The girl with the poor complexion complains, "I have to touch up my cheeks, am sallow and a sight, and only my makeup saves me."

Now, as a matter of fact, more women spoil their good looks than improve them with cosmetics. The practice is entirely unnecessary, now that the virtues of ordinary mercerized wax as a beautifier have become known.

When I was young I sedulously cultivated the old society. Thus it comes to me that I, who was born in 1853, have talked to people who vividly remembered the French war of 1793-1815, Clapham Common is a place of peaceful associations, but Marianne Thornton, the last survivor of the "Clapham sect," remembered Hannah More, as they walked together across the common, exclaiming: "Thank God, the times have changed, and it will be dead in twenty years when his follia tries to cross."

FORMER RESIDENT SPOKE IN SYDNEY

Dr. H. B. Gray Gave British Association His Views on Public School Preparation

Dr. H. B. Gray, former head of Bradfield College, England, and well known in British Columbia, having resided in Victoria during his occupancy of the post of secretary of the provincial tax commission, 1911-12, was one of the speakers at the recent meeting in Australia, of the educational science section of the British association for the advancement of science. He read a paper at the session at Sydney, N.
S. W.

Dr. Gray showed how educational methods and practice had been up to the last 25 years empirical in the British Isles. The science of pedagogy had only recently come on the horizon, and was still in its infancy. Traditional subjects had occupied the attention of schoolmasters, even on the highest rungs of the educational ladder, and had been accepted as the groundwork of educational faith, notwithstanding the conclusions of thinkers like Pestallozzi, Rousseau and Froebel abroad.

"Education which in Germany and the United States has long been welcomed as a great national asset, has in the British Isles been regarded as little less than a bore.
"Success and value in public life pre-suppose a well-balanced and ordered education. Such an education can only be gained by a due balance between the study of the works of nature and the works of man, between linguistic and literary subjects on the one hand,
and mathematical and natural scientific subjects on the other. The adolescent, who has been trained in the one to the exclusion of the other, emerges
as a narrow man.

"This pedagogic principle has been but slowly recognized in our ancient universities and historic public schools,
which have derived their curriculums
by long tradition from the ecclesiastical seminaries of four centuries ago,
although the Humanists were regarded originally as the foes of the church.
The persistence of class interests and class prejudices in the British Isles has kept this tradition alive long after a philosophic pedagogy recognized its inherent unwisdom. A long race of schoolmasters, also trained on the narrow ancient methods, has perpetuated
the superstition, and has not yet by any means shaken off the trammels.

Their want of intellectual equipment in other subjects has been a collateral drawback—and this notwithstanding calls, more or less intelligent, from the progressive classes, and from the more progressive ideals of other nations."
Dealing with the imperial aims of education in the United Kingdom, he added: "The youthful aspirant to public life ought to spend far less time in the study of the two ancient languages which, until the past 25 years, occupied more than three-quarters of the educational periods of the young among the governing classes. He ought to devote not more than one-quarter or one-sixth of his student-life to such subjects. Political and commercial geography, a thorough knowledge of one modern language, of English literature and European and British history, ought to be part of his intellectual equipment. Civics and political economy ought to be carefully studied; while on the scientific side he should be taught at least the elements of physics and chemistry, and electricity, with a certain amount of general applied mathematics. The connection between mind and hand in manual training should also be a part of each student's equipment. It is indeed these deficiencies that our brethren overseas, and those of us who have divided our lives between our island home and our wide-flung dominions, consider should be taken in hand and remedied in our schools and colleges if our vast and complex empire is to serve as an organic whole."

LETTER FROM SEA-BOTTOM

Douglas Fletcher Receives Letter
Which Went Down With Em-
press of Ireland.
A letter which went to the bottom of the sea in the Empress of Ireland is in the possession of Douglas Fletcher, the doorman at the Empress Hotel. The missive is one he addressed to his father and mother in Leicester, England, about a week prior to that notable catastrophe. It was returned to him by the dead letter office in a large envelope. On the face of his own letter was stamped with an ordinary rubber stamp:
"Recovered by divers from the wreck of the S. S. Empress of Ireland."

The letter was not damaged by water. The extreme edges were soaked, but no portion of the envelope or letter paper within it was dampened where it could mar the writing. It appeared that the letter had been in the middle of a bundle tightly tied together with cord. The stamp had been soaked off, but the stamped corner was the wettest portion of the letter. "he dampened edges had made it easy for the dead letter office to open the envelope without cutting it and the sender's address was discovered within.

Evidently the practice of returning letters recovered by divers is being followed rather than the plan of forwarding them to the addresses called for. It is probably assumed by the postal authorities that letters written in May might do harm if they arrived at this late date, and that it is better to let the original senders decide whether or not they wish the epistles
to go forward to their intended destinations.
If all recipients of letters with the above stamp on them feel as Douglas Fletcher feels about his very few will ever be entrusted to the mails again.
This particular envelope is going to be framed under glass as a relic.

Crippled With Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism.
Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes: "I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism.
He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth.
Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty.
Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this place, and we think there is no medicine like them."

pill a dose, 25 cents a box, 5 for $1.00;
