Birds of the Swiss Alps

Extract of letter of August 30, 1945, from Gordon Bolander

While on a seven day furlough in Switzerland he speaks of the marvelous scenery and the joy of being "in some real mountains again. Just to stand with closed eyes and listen to the nutcrackers was to be back in our Sierra once more. The dress of the bird is different (they wear 'salt and pepper' suits here) but the voice is identical. The voices of golden-crowned kinglets, creepers, and the smaller Panuridae also sounded like home. We even had golden eagles overhead to add to the illusion, but with wall creepers to be seen along with wagtails, black redstarts, wheatears, and redbreasts it was all too apparent that it was not the Sierra country. . . ."

In connection with a description of the "splendor" of the Alps, mention is made of the crows—"the flocks that wheel about the mountain tops are possessed of really musical voices and are saved from the somber monotony of their less fortunate brothers by a brilliant yellow bill and bright red legs and feet. Quite a bird! The little wall creeper is another to catch the eye. As he clings to the side of a canyon rock he presents a pearly gray back to an observer, but, like a kinglet, he constantly flits his wings with a sidewise motion, and it is then that his appearance undergoes a sudden, dazzling change. Jet black primaries with large white spots serve to set off the totally unexpected brilliance of the magenta-scarlet coverts. It is really a spot of brilliance amid the shaded monotonies of the canyon's depths. The bird certainly fits the country. . . ."

November Field Trip

The November field trip of the Association was taken to Golden Gate Park on the 11th, with Mr. Charles Bryant as our leader. Despite predictions of inclement weather the day passed clear and cold.

The chief objectives were the park lakes and while little of great rarity was observed several hours were profitably spent viewing the multitude of ducks. Mallard, Pintail, Baldpate and Ruddies were in abundance. In with them Scoup, Ringnecks, and two male Shovellers were observed. As usual fine close-ups were obtained. Size and plumage comparisons could be easily noted such as those between female Lesser Scaup and female Ringneck, etc.

At the Chain of Lakes the Florida Gallinule was sought. Presumably the same adult individual occupies the middle lake, usually on or near the round island. It was found on the island. With it was an immature, slightly slimmer, lighter bird with dull greenish bill. It followed the adult off into the water. Later on the gallinules were again sought. The party was led right to them by hearing the markedly different notes among those of the many coots.

At the close of the trip a bird was seen by the remaining members of the group, which in everyone's opinion followed closely the descriptions of the Western and Cassin Kingbird. It was not, however, positively identified.

The following thirty-nine species of birds were noted:

Pied-billed Grebe	Killdeer	Myrtle Warbler
Anthony Green Heron	California Gull	Audubon Warbler
Mallard	Anna Hummingbird	Yellow-throat
Baldpate	Downy Woodpecker	Brewer Blackbird
Shoveller	Red-shafted Flicker	Purple Finch
Pintail	Kingbird (Species?)	Linnet
Scaup	Black Phoebe	Pine Siskin
Ring-necked Duck	Chickadee	Spotted Towhee
Ruddy Duck	Red-breasted Nuthatch	Fox Sparrow
Sharp-skinned Hawk	Hermit Thrush	Junco
Red-tailed Hawk	Western Robin	Nuttall Sparrow
Florida Gallinule	Ruby-crowned Kinglet	Golden-crowned Sparrow
Coot	Pipit	Song Sparrow

October Meeting

The 337th meeting of the Association was held on October 11, 1945, with president, Arthur H. Myer, in the chair. The resignation of Mrs. Sadie Bozant from the program committee was accepted, and Mrs. D. M. Curtis was appointed to fill the vacancy, while Miss Mary E. Sterne was appointed to replace Mrs. Curtis on the Publicity Committee.

Field observations were given by Mr. Walter W. Bradley, Donald Berger, and Mr. Myer.

Mr. Bradley, our vice-president, presented the program of the evening on "The Art of John James Audubon." The hand-colored slides reproduced from Audubon's paintings were greatly enjoyed.

Conservation of Wild Life

An interesting article appears in the October, 1945, "California Federation News" of the California Women's Clubs on the above subject. It was the first article sent to Mrs. Edwin S. Fuller, State Chairman of Nature Study and Wild Life, who had asked her district chairmen to present this subject from the various locations of the state. Mrs. Sidney Foy, representing the San Francisco District, sent an article which was written by our own member, Mr. C. A. Harwell. It describes the Tomales Bay Beaches Project acquired by Marin County this past summer, telling about the many birds to be found there, their various kinds of habitats, the unusual tree forms, and the rich sea-life awaiting further study.

December Meeting

The 339th meeting of the Audubon Association of the Pacific will take place on Thursday, December 13, at 7:30 P.M. in the Assembly Room of the San Francisco Library at Larkin and McAllister Streets, San Francisco.
