User:Artatra

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

My interests are: literary translation & addressing the underrepresentation of international women authors and women translators on Wikipedia. I'm a literary translator from Spanish to English based in the USA.

This user makes women blue.

The 5 Pillars of Wikipedia

The fundamental principles by which Wikipedia operates can be summarized in five "pillars":

1 Wikipedia is an encyclopedia

2 Wikipedia is written from a neutral point of view

3 Wikipedia is free content that anyone can edit, use, modify, and distribute

4 Editors should treat each other with respect and civility

5 Wikipedia does not have firm rules

Maja Haderlap

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Maja Haderlap (born 8 March 1961 in Eisenkappel-Vellach (Slovene: Železna Kapla-Bela, Carinthia) is a bilingual Slovenian-German Austrian writer, best known for her award-winning novel Angel of Forgetting, highlighting Austria's only militarily organized resistance against National Socialism - the Carinthian minority of Carinthian Slovenes as one of the non-Jewish Holocaust's victims.[1]

She studied German language and literature at the University of Vienna and holds a PhD in Theatre Studies.

Life and work [edit | edit source]

After her graduation she worked as assistant dramaturg, as a program editor and a lecturer at the Institute for Comparative Literary Studies at the Alpen-Adria-Universität in Klagenfurt. From 1992 to 2007, she worked as drama supervisor at the Klagenfurt City Theatre under the direction of Dietmar Pflegerl.

Maja Haderlap is considered the most lyrical voice among Slovenian Austrians since her first book of poems 'Zalik pesmi' (1983).

She was editor for many years of the Carinthian Slovene minority literary magazine 'Mladje'. She writes poetry, prose, and essays in both Slovenian and German. Her work has been published in numerous German and international literary journals and anthologies. Maja Haderlap is a member of the Graz's Guild of writers and lives in Klagenfurt.
