

Notice of counterfeit content removal from Google Search

May 8, 2023 • Removals

Sent to all relevant property users

Google has been notified that some of the material found on your site is allegedly in violation of our counterfeit web search policy. We're in the process of removing the allegedly unlawful material from Google Search results. The list of affected URLs is provided at the bottom of this email.

The notice that we received, with personally identifying information removed, may be found on Lumen, a third-party aggregator of legal complaint notices, at <http://www.chillingeffects.org/notice.cgi?SID=15710816>. Please note that it may take several weeks for the notice to be posted on this page.

What you can do next:

→ File an appeal

If you have additional information regarding the content of a page that you believe warrants a reversal, you can notify Google by submitting the counterfeit appeals form.

→ Contact the trademark owner

We can also reinstate materials into our search results should we receive an email message directly from the brand owner stating that the products at issue are not counterfeit.

→ Speak to a lawyer

If you have legal questions about this notification, you may wish to speak to your own lawyer.
