ERIK MÖLLER
WIKIMANIA – JULY 12, 2012
Although there is a growing collection of Labour articles, there is a need to improve and widen the scope of Labour in general on Wikipedia. As well, currently there is very limited information on specific union organizations, and their representation within individual business/government bodies.

This project would seek to gather articles together, and organize efforts.

1. To expand, and globalize, articles related to Organized Labour.
2. To create and expand articles for individual Labour Organizations.
3. To establish fair and consistent representation of Labour in business, government, and organizational articles.

Why doesn't YouTube allow users to license their video uploads CC-BY-ND?

Pete Forsyth, Heavy user of Creative Commons I...

A minor, but perhaps interesting point: it's not quite accurate to say that YouTube doesn't allow this license. As a copyright holder, you can choose to attach any license ... (more)

★ Design: Is there a science to picking the colors that work well together in a design, or is it just subjective?

Colm Tuite, UI/Visual Designer & Developer

There is definitely a science. However, there are usually many correct options, so there is also a subjective element too, which is what makes design so awesome. Different ... (more)

As a member of the Aviation WikiProject or one of its subprojects, you may be interested in testing your skills in the Aviation Contest! I created this contest, not to pit editor against editor, but to promote article improvement and project participation and camaraderie. Hopefully you will agree with its usefulness. Sign up here, read up on the rules here, and discuss the contest here. The first round of the contest may not start until September 1st-unless a large number of editors signup and are ready to compete immediately! Since this contest is just beginning, please give feedback here, or let me know what you think on my talkpage. - Trevor MacInnis contribs 05:44, 21 August 2009 (UTC)
